Aug. 23rd:—Bro Charnock preached for us last Saturday and Sunday at Burton's Grove, two good sermons. His sermon on Sunday was based on the principles of the Christian church. He will preach at Ivor next Sunday and give a lecture there the following Monday, when the young ladies and friends of the church will give a tea party, for the benefit of the church fund. Rev. W. J. Laine was at Burton's Grove Sunday and took a part in the exercises. His mother, a most excellent Christian woman and Miss Annie, his sister, the organist of Burton's Grove church, are both ill at their home. The Lord's blessings be upon them. Last Sunday night I conducted a prayer and praise service at the home of Bro. J. H. Barrett for the benefit of his wife who has been for months past denied church privileges because of her health. Sister Barrett seemed to be enjoying the Lord's spirit and rejoices in the love of her Saviour. The infant child of Bro. C. N. Bradshaw was buried by the side of its mother in the family Cemetery a few days ago. The dear little one lived only about three months after the death of its mother. The young husband and father is left alone with a bright girl of three summers, but has cause to believe that mother and child live together in realms of light and peace with the redeemed of the Lord. I am indebted to Bro. A. S. Parsons and J. W. Barker of Burton's Grove and Bro. Duke Brand of the Baptist church for their services and efforts yesterday for my entertainment and enjoyment.

Yours truly,

M. W. BUTLER.

A Visit to Southampton.

Most of the week and 2nd Sunday in August was spent with Bro. Demarest in his protracted meeting at Union. He commenced on Sunday, and was moving on well when I went to his assistance. I served this church as pastor for seven years having a most pleasant and delightful association with it all the time. It has been about seven years since I had preached there, and of course many changes had taken place during that time. The visit was a pleasant one—mingled with some sadness. Extremely glad was I to meet so many I met in former years but sad to miss many who were absent by death. As I recounted the past I felt the Lord has blessed me greatly, and that during the twenty years I have been preaching I have not missed but two appointments caused by sickness. I bless the Lord that He has blessed me so gloriously and abundantly. The meeting closed on Friday with good results. More than thirty souls professed conversion. After its close we had a happy time as we took the parting hand, and said "fare well" to many of our dear friends. There were so many who said, "Pray for me." There were a great many more who said "I will pray for you." How can we fail to be happy, and receive the blessings of the Lord when there are so many earnest prayers going up to God in our behalf?

The first visit was with Bro James Butler. There I had the pleasure of visiting my only sister. My short stay with them was exceedingly pleasant. Then the following night I visited Bro. Henry Rrawls and his excellent wife. They will be lovingly remember for their great kindness to me in former years. A night was spent with Bro. Henry Daughtery and his kind family. They too will be fondly remembered for special favors. Saturday noon I dined with Bro Allen Brantly and his good wife, where I met with Dr. Royall, pastor of the Methodist church at Franklin, who also dined with us, making our association delightfully pleasant. This family will receive our profound thanks for their kindness. Saturday night following I went to the beautiful and comfortable home of Bro. and sister Thomas Joyner. These dear friends entertained me in a splendid way, so much so, I shall be under lasting obligations to them. To every one of the dear friends about Union, Southampton, who entertained me so nicely and who may see this notice of my visit to the meeting, I extend to each of you my sincere thanks for the large amount of interest you showed for me while at the meeting, and while many of your names cannot be mentioned here for want of space I shall fondly think of each of you, and pray that it may be well with you.

Sunday morning and night I filled my appointments at Franklin. Had a pleasant services—and delightful association with the people. The work there has put on new strength and activity, and we are expecting good results from it.

Married.

Aug. 23, 1893, at the Pleasant Grove Christian church, Va., in the presence of a large assembly of friends and relatives Mr. D. M. Cook and Miss Minnie Farmer were united in marriage, Revs. P. T. Klapp, W. W. Staley, D. D., and Sol Apple officiating. The ceremony was very imposing, decoration beautiful and altogether a happy occasion. The bridal couple immediately boarded the train for the World's Fair. Their wedding occasion was elegant, and we bespeak for them a happy future. May angels encamp round about them and make a way for their escape, when tempted and tried is the prayer and wish of their friend.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Brethren, we need your help on our subscription list.

Prof. J. M. Pugh of Morrisville is visiting the World's Fair.

Brethren, please do not forget to use your pens for the SUN.

Rev. J. W. Wellons shows great energy in the work of the Master.

Rev. N. G. Newman left Suffolk last week for the World's Fair. The SUN wishes him a pleasant trip.

The income of the World's Fair is now reported at $95,000 a day, expenses $15,000, which leaves a net revenue of $80,000.

Rev. M. L. Hurley has some timely remarks to make. Read his article on 'Take Care of the Enterprises of the Church.'

We have sent out a number of letters to brethren on a business matter, which we hope they will not treat lightly, but give prayerful attention.

Here are two good letters. One from Bro. T. L. Daughtrey of Roanoke, Va., and one from Bro. D. Gardner of Ala. They renew their subscriptions to the SUN, and write us encouraging letters.

Poor health caused the editor's return to the office sooner than was expected. We are very sorry the Holland people were disappointed, but under the circumstances it was impossible to do otherwise.

Rev. O. Rowland of Texas is now in N. C., his native state, holding revival meetings. He is a great power for good. He is this week in a meeting at Holly Springs, will be at Wake Chapel the week following the first Sunday in Sept., at Holland's the week following the second Sunday, at Youngsville the week following the third Sunday, and at Mt. Hermon the week following the fourth Sunday.

Whilst in Eastern Va. we visited the new Christian churches at Suffolk and Norfolk. The one at Suffolk is nearly completed, and is quiet a temple. The one at Norfolk has the roof on, and presents quite an imposing appearance.

It is said that Edwin Booth, the great tragedian, attempted to reform the stage and that in his latter years he admitted that the effort had been a failure. This is worth remembering by some of the church members who persist in going to the theater.

Our Washington Letter this week contains a premonition of the terrible calamity that is imminent if the Christian people of our country remain as indifferent to their duty politically as in the past. Rum seems to rule at the capital city to a great extent and there is no doubt that without a check of some sort upon it the near future will witness a widespread epidemic of its intolerable arrogance. Christian people, will you remain inactive or will you vote as you pray?

Bro. T. L. Daughtrey of Roanoke, Va., says: "We have about twelve members of our church here, and I had hoped to see an organization of our church here, but it seems as if we cannot get them to make any effort to do anything. Bro. Barrett and I did organize a missionary society here, but I could not get the members to come up and do anything and so I have no hopes now unless our general Christian Convention will take hold of the work up here. I think there is a No. 1 field for us."

An exchange remarks: Say what you may upon the subject, close investigation will reveal the fact that the idea is dominant in the Catholic mind that America is the property of the Pope. No effort is being spared to bring this fair country under papal domination. The Catholics are working steadily, artfully and we fear in many cases successfully. Who knows when the day will come when the headquarters of Romanism shall be removed from Rome to America!

He is a model church treasurer who sympathizes with his pastor's wants, and sees that he is paid promptly. The minister is to be congratulated who is blessed with an official of this character. There are many of them, but their number needs multiplication at a growingly rapid rate. One of these worthies recently came to our notice. Compelled to be away for months, he did not forget his minister's needs, nor make his absence an excuse for keeping him out of his monthly remittance, but arranged to have his check on time. He belongs to that order of treasurers who, if the funds are not exactly on hand, will advance the amount needed, and see that the church makes it good to him in due season. A thoughtful, prompt and energetic treasurer is worthy of all honor and commendation.—Ea.

To the Preachers.

DEAR BRETHREN:—We feel sure that you are interested in every good word and work, and desire the highest degree of prosperity for all the enterprises of the church of your choice. Among these enterprises, your church paper, the CHRISTIAN SUN, is by no means the smallest. And it now calls in tones that must not be misunderstood for your help.

The money pressure is felt every where in our land, and falls as heavily upon your church paper as anything else, and must sooner or later, bring upon our cause disastrous results, unless the subscribers can be induced to renew their subscriptions. Hence we make this request:

Let every pastor in the Southern Convention appoint in every church an active local agent for the CHRISTIAN SUN. Then let the pastor, in connection with the agent, take the names of every one in said local church and congregation, who is a subscriber sending to us the name of the church with the list of subscribers and their post office address. In this way, whenever the time of a subscriber expires, we can send the name to the pastor or local agent, and he can see the subscriber about the renewal. Thus the editor will be relieved of the annoyance of running over the country all the time, looking after the subscription list. In this way the work can be done, and the editor remain in the office, thereby giving the readers a much better paper.

Now, brethren, we have made a request that you can comply with, and render your church paper a valuable service. Will you do it? Who says I will?

Obedience.

No one is so independent as to be entirely relieved of responsibility. There is some power some where that calls for obedience. And there is no escape. Men may want to find a place where no calls of obedience are upon them; but it is an ideal desire unattainable, longed for without a hope of realization.

This chain, linking things together by the calls of obedience, is a law of God recorded in His arrangements of eternal mercy of goodness to the human family. Annihilate this chain of connection, and one of the great elements upon which the well being of society rests, is obliterated. Let a man believe that he owes obedience to nothing, and he must reach the conclusion that he is free from all responsibilities. And thus cut loose from all thought of anything higher or better than the plain, in which he is living, he is left to float on sin's tide in any direction.

Obedience is a kind of evolution, beginning in the laws of nature in the inanimate world, passing through the lower animals, changing somewhat in the human family and reaching its final culmination in God. No one, however, must understand this thought of evolution as advanced here to carry with it the idea that obedience in one form ever rises into that of another; for those in nature are predestined by God's fixed laws; those in the wills of men are of the nature of free agents. Since the world began, it has been a law of nature that fire melts ice, and this law will be obeyed as long as fire and ice exists; but it depends upon the free will of man whether the fire and ice comes in contact with each other or not.

Should the laws of nature rebel, could the rocks, hills, mountains and seas retain their quiet positions? Could vegetation come forth, bloom and mature? Unpleasant indeed will be this world, should the time come when the lower animals refuse obedience to the laws of instinct which God has given them.

No home is so happy as when all the members of the family are entirely obedient to the Christian laws of society. Disobedient children, wives and husbands are a source of terror to homes and neighborhoods. What a pity that disobedience should be a guest of so many homes.

God has given to man the best code of laws that ever found their way upon tables of stone, rolls of hides or leaves of books. Obedience to them brings health to the body, often drives the lawyer in to some other occupation for a living, elevates society and sends the soul to heaven. And yet men are disobedient to God's laws. How strange it is to see the disobedience towards God's laws! Dear reader, will you longer be disobedient to God's laws? You must either be obedient to God in this world or to the enemy of souls in the eternal world. Which will it be? Now is the time to decide the question.

God was so good as to give His dear Son who was obedient to his fathers' laws, keeping every jot and tittle of them, to redeem us from under the curse of the law, that we may be saved by believing in Jesus. And yet there are thousands, and thousands who refuse to believe on him. Readers, are you among the number who refuse obedience to the blessed Savior? Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved."

Running Around.

After the meeting closed at Oakland, another night was spent in the kind home of Bro. M. W. Crumpler. Sunday came, and with it a pleasant service at the church; after which, dinner was taken in the excellent Christian home of Capt. E. C. Ramsay. An hour or so was pleasantly spent; and then in company with Bro. J. H. Parker, one of Oakland's best members, our faces were turned toward Suffolk. A pleasant home was found with Rev. H. H. Butler for the night. He escaped, narrowly, a serious accident that evening on his return home, in an effort of his horse to run away.

On Monday many friends were seen in Suffolk; and that night spent in the family of Sister Beale. She is the widow of the sainted E. W. Beale. She loves her church, and is always glad to see the preachers. She keeps a first class boarding house, and has a good patronage.

On Tuesday, dinner was taken with Sister Wells, the only living sister of Rev. J. W. Wellons. She is always kind and obliging, and a great lover of the church. That night was spent with Dr. J. P. Barrett in Norfolk. He is always ready to talk over the church work, and sympathize with those who are trying to keep up the church paper; for he knows as but few others what the burden is. It was quite a pleasure to spend a night with him, Sister Barrett and their little baby, Ethel.

In the afternoon, Wednesday, we left on the steamer Virginia Dare, for Bro. T. R. Gaskins. On the way we had a little gale, so one preacher lost his hat; but when he reached Bro. Gaskins, he did not go hatless much longer. At Capt. Gaskins we were nicely cared for during the night. The SUN has no better friends than Capt. Gaskins and his wife.

Here we are at Suffolk again meeting brethren here and there, and finally spending the night with Hon. E. E. Holland. His is an excellent home and he and his wife are great lovers of the church.

It was our intention to spend the fourth Sunday with the dear people at Holland's, but an illness makes us think that home will be a better place for a few days, so the fast train puts us in Raleigh in a little more than four hours, where the night is pleasantly spent with the family of our esteemed friend Deacon J. A. Mills.

A Matter of Grave Importance.

We hope the readers of the SUN will give the following, taken from the Nashville Christian Advocate, prayerful consideration:

That the times are hard, is a trite remark. Everybody knows the fact to be so. But it is not worth while to whine about it, or to wear a long face. There will be an improvement by and by. Nothing is more important in the midst of untoward circumstances than the cultivation of a cheerful and hopeful spirit. The country is full of food, and nobody need starve or suffer. We are more afraid than of anything else that the people will allow the financial pressure to arrest the flow of their benevolent feelings, and cause them to curtail their contributions to religious and charitable enterprises. In particular we are concerned about the income of our Board of Missions. A diminution of ten dollars in the gifts of each pastoral charge throughout the Connection means embarrassment if not disaster. The matter is one of supreme moment. We put it on the hearts and consciences of the preachers and the people. Now is the time to give more than usual. Practice self-denial; cut off useless expenses; stop unchristian hoarding; and show your faith by your works. The following story, told by Bishop Haygood in last week's Wesleyan, is in point here:

A pastor of the long ago was in Augusta, Ga. Conference was coming on, and the burden of collections was upon his heart. He made personal solicitations as well as public appeals. He called on one brother who had been in the habit of giving about $25 to the collection for superannuated preachers and for the widows and orphans of preachers. So many had reduced that the pastor was anxious as to the result of the interview. When the brother began by talking of the hard times, the pastor's heart sank; but the brother's conclusion lifted him up. Said he: "The times are very hard; money is very scarce, and this year I must give more. Make it $50 this time."

Is It Gambling?

Every few days we see from the secular press something said about trotting or racing in different states, and nearly always stated that the purse was one, two or three hundred dollars or some other amount.

Frequently we see in these statements the names of members of the various churches. We do not want to be harsh in our criticisms. But would it not be well for these brethren to pray over, and search for the correct answer to the question, "Is it gambling?" If it is, members of the church can't afford to have anything to do with it. If it is not, and there is no sin connected with it, why not let all the preachers join in the business?

Elon College.

Elon College opens today. And many are the anxieties; for notwithstanding the outlook is flattering, we can never tell until the week of enrollment. Many times through the day will the question go up; I wonder how many students are at Elon today. Business matters will keep some of the students of last year away, and new ones will take their places. And then, all the classes will be both old and new. The junior class of last year will be the senior of this. Of the students present, some are interested about their entrance examinations. And thus some are anxious about one thing and some about another. Many hearts back at home are saying, God bless Elon College. May her numbers be many, intelligent and good.

The Congress.

Never in the history of this great country of ours, were the doings in the United States Congress, more closely read than at the present. Many conclusions are being reached. Among the many things that has been said, we think the following, from the Biblical Recorder, timely:

It strikes us that the machinery of government at Washington, proverbially slow and ponderous, if not always conservative, is slower and more ponderous than ever in this extraordinary session, when the maxim quoted by the president, "He gives twice who gives quickly," is so forcibly appropriate. Not many days since it became apparent that whatever bills one faction may introduce one of the others is going to use all its powers to delay and obstruct its enactment. There are as many plans as there are Congressmen, but none meet the approval of a majority. One wants an amendment, and another expends his oratorical powers to strike out a provision. They have agreed on but one thing so far: to pay themselves mileage. The representatives should know that they were placed where they are to relieve the people, not to consider their personal interests. This is no time for dilly-dallying with personal interests. The country calls loudly for relief, and must have it.

The Book Will Tell.

A real Christian will be a true lover of the Bible. There is scarcely a better test. If the novel or the newspaper take the place of the Bible on his table or in his mind, then it is clear that the world has taken the place of God in his heart. If a man's Bible be clean and bright, and unsullied by use, undefiled by contact with daily life, his soul is not. There is no better spiritual barometer to test the true condition of the soul's atmosphere. He to whom the Bible seems wearisome, monotonous, uninteresting, his good cause for alarm. The neglect of it springs from coldness of affection towards it, and dislike of his rebukes. Whoever wants to grow in grace simply must study the Bible. It is the way to gain stability of doctrine, so as not to be carried about with every wind of opinion. It is the way to commune with the noblest spirits that ever lived and be stimulated by their example. It is the way to become familiar with the loftiest precepts, receive the truest counsels, and come under the power of the holiest motives. Only he who studies the word can be strong.—Christian Standard.

Holland Items.

The writer received a postal from the editor of the SUN, dated Aug. 24, saying he expected to be at Holland on Sunday—would be at the depot Friday evening or Saturday morning. We went out to meet the editor, but for some cause he did not reach the place. We then fully expected that he would come up Sunday morning 11 o'clock in time to preach for us. Quite a number of us were at the depot and whilst several friends from Berkley got off the cars no Bro. Clements' was there. We were much disappointed and cannot imagine the cause of his failure to come. I am sure, if he had known what a nice time was in store for him he would not have let any trival cause keep him away. Our congregation was so large we had to put three extra benches in the aisles of the church. We will of course have to make our house larger to hold our monthly congregations.

After services the doors of the church were opened for the reception of members. Three came forward two of whom were quite prominent persons, and will no doubt make valuable members, making 32 added to the church since our protracted meeting—others expected to follow.

Several of the brethren and sisters carried out dinner and quite a number of friends from a distance remained and took refreshments on the ground. We did not however have time to remain on the ground long as we had an appointment to baptize at Holland's pond one or two miles away at 3 o'clock.

Long before the appointed time for the administration of the solemn rite, a very large assemblage of people had gathered to witness the scene. Eleven young men and boys and about ten ladies received the ordinance of baptism by immersion. Others wish to be baptized next 4th fourth Sunday by effusion and immersion, some of whom were so sick they could not attend, yesterday.

Our prayer-meeting last night was well attended, and a young brother who gave us a talk, said it was inspiring. Singing excellent and two young brethren took part in the meeting that had not done so before.

Much sickness and Dr. Holland, the resident physician, keeps very busy. R. H. HOLLAND.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER.

MY DEAR CHILDREN:—

Again we greet you merrily, and expect more letters sometime, for of course you don't expect to go along this way always. I expect some letters from you soon. Margaret writes this week. She tells about a visit to some of the cousins.

Of course you all know that Pattie Newman is now Mrs. W. C. Wicker and wish for her and her husband unlimited happiness.

It has been a long time since the Corner has had a word from Uncle Barry. I know all would enjoy a letter from him or Aunt Minnie. I understand his health is fair and that Aunt Minnie and Cousin Ethel are in good health. And by the way, Ethel is a sweet little girl and as smart as can be. It would do you good to see her. She is nearly two years old now and I think Aunt Minnie and Uncle Barry are justly proud of their little girl.

I was glad to see in a letter from Rev. E. T. Iseley that Cousin Alfred Andes had been baptized. Now what good news will come to us next?

Thursday of this week Elon College will open and no doubt many, many of the cousins will be there. I hope so.

No doubt all enjoyed Uncle Milard's letter last week. He is so kind to write such nice poetry for us, don't you think so children? He lives far away in Michigan, his eyes are sore and yet he remembers the little bright eyed Band here in our sunny Southland. Now I wonder if that won't spur up some of the negligent little folks and make them hunt up their pen and paper and ink and give the Corner the benefit of their bright thoughts

Cordially yours,
UNCLE TANGLE

SELMA, N. C., Aug. 26, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I thought I would write to the Corner this morning as my last letter was lost when the office was moved. We all went up the country a few weeks ago, we stayed in Wake a few days then went to Oak Level to the protracted meeting but it closed the day we got there. Mr. Wicker was there and after dinner he took me down to his father's to see his wife, Pattie Newman, as the cousins know her. I visited Ora Winston and Bessie and Annie Staley, but was sorry I could not see Bessie she had gone to the "Worlds Fair." I will answer Uncle Tangle's puzzle "Charging them that they strive not about words to no profit," etc. It is found in 2 Timothy 2:14. I will send twenty cents to the Band. I will close hoping to see many letters from the cousins. I remain,

Your devoted niece,

MARGARET ETHERDEGE.

Margaret, it is kind of you to write again so soon when your last letter was lost. You have answered the puzzle correctly. I think it would have been nice if you had called to see your Uncle Tangle while in Wake

The New Boy.

"A new boy came into our office to-day," said a wholesale grocery merchant to his wife at the supper-table. "He was hired by the firm at the request of the senior member, who thought the boy gave promise of good things. But I feel sure that boy will be out of the office in less than a week."

"What makes you think so?"

"Because the first thing he wanted to know was just exactly how much he was expected to do."

"Perhaps you will change your mind about him."

"Perhaps I shall," replied the merchant, "but I don't think so."

Three days later the business man said to his wife, "About that boy you remember I mentioned three or four days ago. Well, he is the best boy that ever entered the store."

"How did you find that out?"

"In the easiest way in the world. The first morning after the boy began work he performed very faithfully and systematically the exact duties assigned, which he had been so careful to have explained to him. When he had finished, he came to me, and said, 'Mr. H., I have finished all that work. Now what can I do?'"

"I was greatly surprised, but I gave him a little job of work, and forgot all about him, until he came into my room with the question, 'What next?' That settled it for me. He was the first boy that ever entered our office who was willing, and volunteered to do more than was assigned him. I predict a successful career for that boy, as a business man."—Ex.

A Happy Coffin Maker.

Making coffins is usually rather sad business; but sometimes even a coffin maker has a pleasant job.

"What are you making Rob?" asked the little girls as they sat on a bench watching the carpenter's son at work.

"A coffin."

"It is a very short one," said Nell.

"Long enough for what it will hold, and I never liked work better in my life," said Rob. "Let me tell you: Matt Payne has taken to drink; and father thought of this way to stop him. He called to him yesterday morning:

"Matt, sell me that parlor organ of Kate's, will you? All your things are going to Flynn's grog shop, and I might as well have my share. I'll give you a note for four coffins—one for Kate, who looks as if she'd need it soon enough, poor soul; and one for each of the twins,—for they won't outlast their mother long, little dears; and one for you, so your good mother's son can be buried decent, and not by the poormaster. You will need the coffins before long at the rate you are drinking, and here's the only way I see that will keep you from being hurried in rough boxes like other paupers."

"Well, Matt Payne just stared, and went on without one word. After awhile father saw him going across to the thick woods by the pond. Late in the evening he came here, all pale, but quiet, and said to father:

"Howe, I heard what you said this morning, and it went home. It was all true: I couldn't work, and I went yonder to the woods to think, and then I got to praying to my mother's God. Well, Howe, He has helped me;—I'm done drinking. If good care and love and plenty will keep my Kate and the kids, I'll keep 'em. But make me a coffin and a headboard. Here is a rum bottle; make a coffin for that, and I'll bury it right in my front yard, and make a headboard and put on it:

"HERE LIES THE HOME DESTROYER, RUM."

"So girls, that's what I'm making, and you better believe I like the job fine." Selected.

The Editor of a Religious Paper.

"The editor of a religious journal—what must he be?" is a question that has been started, and we will pass it along. The Observer has this comment: "He must be as serious as a parson, but as scintillant as the best of diners-out. He must be as confident as a cyclopedia, but as cautious as a table of logarithms. He must not be altogether a philosopher, but he certainly must not be a buffoon; for in the one case he will sink his ship with his own weight, in the other his paper will, like a toy balloon, explode with its own gas."

The Congregationalist makes the following comparison: "In welcoming contributions, he must be as omnivorous as an ostrich, and in publishing them as fastidious as an epicure; in dealing with his visitors as patient as Job; in enlarging his subscription list as peripatetic as Ishmael; in responding to appeals for aid as ready as Paul, and in receiving reward as 'other worldly' as Abraham's bosom."

The Living Church respectfully adds: "He must be a leader of public opinion, yet never express any opinion; he must receive with meekness the criticism of everybody who pleases to take him to task, yet never presume to criticise anybody or anything; he must grind all the axes of his denomination, and all the little hatchets of his brethren, but be counted mean if he charges enough to pay for oiling his wheel; he must correct and condense almost every contribution that he publishes, though he is ordered to print it 'exactly as it is'; he must be held responsible for all errors, mistakes, unwisdoms, infelicities, bad-taste, and bad temper of contributors, though he may protest that he is not; he must publish everything that he receives, even if he had to enlarge his paper."—Western Recorder.

Ballast.

I have read that society may be likened unto a ship, in which each individual fulfils his special part. I presume the prow typifies those who go ahead; the stern, those who stay behind and steer; the engines, those who puff, and fret, and supply the power; the masts, those who carry the flag; and the galley, those who prepare the provisions for the voyage.

But there are some who have not energy enough to lead, or wisdom enough to guide, or force enough to propel, or altitude enough to display the colors, or homely practicality enough to look after the larder. What shall we do with them? They have but a single place. The ship needs steady; throw them in as ballast.

As the stevedore lowers and stows away the common-looking stones in the hold, passengers are apt to moralize on the lowly and insignificant position they are to occupy in the vessel. But wait till the cyclone stands the ship on her beam ends, and the quarter is stove in, and the masts are shivered, and the engines stopped, and the only hope seems to be that the craft may be able to ride out the gale,—then the ballast, lying securely in its appointed place, can congratulate itself that but for its superior steadying power all would certainly be lost.

Dear reader, you may not think that you count for much in this world, but please remember that you are accomplishing a great deal if you can only succeed in keeping things straight. There are times when it is worth everything to be able to keep the decks above water. There are plenty of smart people who can stir up a breeze, and kick up a sea, and jeopardize everybody's interests by their rash methods of thought and action. We need a counterbalancing number of ordinary people, who know how to be faithful, and can stick by the ship when things look blue and the leaders quail.

But there is one fault that has been found even with ballast: sometimes it shifts. Then the loss of the vessel is attributed directly to this fickleness of disposition. The virtue of a general may be in his seeming to be in all parts of the field at once; but the virtue of a private is always in keeping his place in the ranks until ordered to charge.

Fidelity will, in the end, pay better than flashiness. Stick to your post, young man, young woman, no matter how humble it may be. The time may come in this life when your value will be tested. In the other life your name will be changed. The voyage will then be over. There will be no more need of ballast. You will be hailed as a living stone and used for the adornment of the King's palace.

Our Children's Welfare.

Parents seek the welfare of their children, and are their truest and most unselfish friends. But there is one fact worthy to be remembered, very few parents are anxious to have their children follow the same occupation which they themselves have pursued. The farmer often looks for something better than farming for his son; the blacksmith does not wish to have his sons work as he has in the dingy smithy; the physician knows enough about the medical practice to be quite willing that his sons should pursue some other calling; and so many persons, becoming acquainted with the discomforts and disadvantages of their own occupations, counsel their children to follow other callings, with the disadvantages of which they are not so well acquainted.

But no man ever saw a faithful, God-fearing Christian, who was not anxious that every one of his children should follow in his footsteps, and be faithful servants of the Lord. Said the beloved disciple, "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in the truth" (3John4); and this is the universal feeling of all true children of God. Could there be a stronger proof that the religion of Christ is a reality, and a blessed reality to those who in heart and life obey and serve the Lord? Many of them have proved the religion of Christ for many, many years, and they not only hold fast the faith to the end, but strive to induce others to share with them the blessings of the Gospel; and their strongest desire is that their children should be faithful Christians.

—Selected.

Restlessness.

This seems to be one very prominent characteristic of the present age. In every condition of life, in every sphere of business, and in almost every land, there is an indisposition to rest, and to quietly pursue the even tenor of one's way. While activity is commendable, and even necessary, for the accomplishment of any useful or laudable purpose, there must be limits to this activity in every department of life. The restlessness of the present age indicates a want of internal rest. A mental unsettledness seems to have taken possession of vast numbers of people, which shows they have no clearly-defined views of what is true or false, right or wrong, and which leaves them to be easily influenced by any designing leader who has his own purposes to serve or those of some visionary schemer. The first requisite to a good and useful life is a clear comprehension of what is "everlastingly right"—of a principle that imbeds itself in the mind and heart, and that holds both, and controls both, whatever may be the external agitations or the mental quietude, that are prevalent. If anyone would be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord," he must not be giving place to every whim of opinion, or to every breeze of speculation, or to every wind of doctrine; he must have fixed principles based on the word of God.

No more complete or beautiful souvenir of the world's fair can be had than the September number of Demorest's Family Magazine—the Exposition number—which contains over 300 illustrations, showing as much as one could see in a week's visit, and accompanied by vivid descriptions of all points and objects of interest. It is a collection of photographic souvenirs that would cost lots of money, and yet you may possess it for 20 cents. The various departments of the magazine are all up to the usual standard of excellence. $2.00 per year. W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th street, New York.

To the Bashful Christian.

GOLDEN RULE.

MY DEAR TIMID:—I know just how you feel, because I have felt that way myself. Indeed, after all these years of work in prayer meetings, I often feel so still. My face twitches nervously at the very thought of saying anything, or offering prayer. Every bit of strength goes out of my body. My heart begins to beat loudly enough for my neighbor to hear. My hands are clasped and unclasped. My face flushes in anticipation. Now I make up my mind to. Now I take it back, and don't. You can't have felt any worse than I have about this taking part in prayer meeting, or any worse than I still feel sometimes, old hand at it though I am.

"That is, discouraging," you say. Well, what of it? Who promised us that we should do the Lord's work with no discouragements? Who promised us that it would be all easy? Who ensured us against blushing faces and throbbing pulses and nervousness and awkwardness? We are hidden to endure hardness, as good soldiers of Jesus Christ, and this is hardness; not so terribly hard, either; not so hard as chains and stonings and shipwrecks and lashings and crucifixion. No, not a tenth part as hard, though we may feel ourselves regular martyrs.

My dear Timid, I propose that we simply acquiesce in our bashfulness, and go ahead doing our duty just the same. Carry it as our cross, and thank God our cross is no heavier. Possibly after a while our bashfulness will wear away; but even if it stays right with us let us forge ahead and never give up to it. Don't you think that is what Christ would like to have us do?

Yours in brotherly sympathy,
THE GOLDEN RULE.

Self-Discontent.

Christian Register: We need a good fit of discontent with self once in awhile to break through our habitual trend of thought feeling, and show us fresh prospects and possibilities of spiritual growth. Habit and mental routine are like a stiff coat of mail to which the body habituates itself by degrees, until unimpeded freedom of motion is no longer desired. It is discontent that helps us to peck our way out of this hard shell, and to come into new and more sensitive conditions. Dissatisfaction, not with our mortal conditions, but with the progress we are making in the higher life, is the sign that aspiration is not dead within us. Nearly all growth comes with pain and upward striving. The moral nature especially requires constant effort to reach new levels. It is through self-discontent that the greatest things are wrought. This is the spur in the side of our lagging energy. It comes with the vision of what we are, and what we might be, through the cultivation of the highest motives, the determination to always occupy the noblest point of view. Constant striving toward the ideal is accompanied with an aching in the breast; but who is without it? Who tries to live for unseen things, and not by the senses? It is the best evidence of the soul—that something that cannot be appeased by flatterers or drugged by delusions; that, after every excess of worldly delirium, brings us back to sanity, to self-knowledge.

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original samples as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well! that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original.

"I'M A DAISY."

which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Lia Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1898. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (11x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1898, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Fancies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1898 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the facts and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 16 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Respect the Burden.

A worthy motto is that said to have been called forth from a famous man on what seemed to be a trifling occasion. He had come face to face with a toiler under a heavy load; and some one, mindful of the great man's importance, bade the laden one stand aside to let the other pass, only to be met with the reproof, "Respect the burden."

It would be well if we had this admonition ever in mind when we are on the point of ceaselessly demanding hard things of those that may be for the time under our orders. Our work may look so large in our own eyes as to hide from view the consideration due to those that are bearing a heavy load. Because they are burdenbearers is a reason for waiving rights in their favor, not for laying on them a greater weight. It may seem to us a very little thing that we ask of a servant. It does not take long to give the order, why need it take long to execute it? Our own ignorance and the servant's skill unite to make us thoughtless. We have never, perhaps, had the other's task to do; if we had found what bungling work we should make of it, we should have more respect for the burden; we should be less disposed to add to it, and more ready to praise the practised hand whose deftness had hidden from us the greatness of the labor that it wrought.

The caution has its place, too, with regard to our bearing toward those above us. Into their their we may be even less fitted to enter than into that of those below us. The perplexities, the countless annoyances, the ceaseless worries, that wear upon them are of a class that are strangers to us; and these persons may seem to be living a life of luxurious ease at the very time when they are on the point of breaking down from overwork. The cares of parents, the anxieties of an employer, the severe strain upon a teacher, the innumerable demands upon a pastor, are matters in which we may have had no experience. To a load already heavy we are quick to add by our heedlessness, unfaithfulness, or cruel criticisms, which are bad enough when they spring from thoughtlessness, heartless when they are wilful.

To respect the burden of those weighed down by want and woe, by the oppression and greed of others; to respect the burden of those worn with care about many things, may be more than we are doing. But there is something better than standing aside that the burden-bearer may pass, and giving him our sympathy. "Respect the burden" is a good motto. "Bear ye one another's burden" is a better. — Golden Rule.

By able, conservative management, safe investments, big rate of interest, low death rate, the Northwestern has won the love and applause of its policyholders and the respect and admiration of all who are acquainted with it.

Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24, '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. McAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N. C., says: "I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. I now hold three policies in this company. My dividends are much larger than in other companies in which I carry insurance. The affairs of the company are safely and conservatively managed; they pay promptly and are exceedingly fair and liberal in their dealings with their policy-holders."

Mr. R. B. Roney, Raleigh, N. C., under date of April 1, '93, says: "I have held a policy in the Northwestern for a number of years, and am satisfied it has no superior."

Another member of Damascus church has passed over the river of death. Bro. Matthew W. McCauley, — age 33 years, 3mo., and 16 days, — died Sunday morning at seven o'clock. Bro. McCauley passed away trusting in Jesus. He leaves words of encouragement and consolation to all. He leaves a mother and three sisters to mourn their loss. We extend our sympathy to the bereaved. Burial services conducted by Rev. Neal Watson of the M. E. church South, and the writer.

A Budget of News.

BRO. CLEMENTS:—I have just closed the last series of meetings with my churches with the following results: Our meeting at Salem Chapel resulted in the addition of 29 members to the church. On Wednesday of this meeting I was called away to preach the funeral of Hezekiah Rudd and did not get back to the meeting, but good workmen were left in charge. Revs. W. T. Herndon, W. G. Clements, P. W. Allen and H. C. Fulton worked in this meeting. Rev. W. T. Herndon continuing the meeting until Monday night after the second Sunday in August with grand results as above given.

The second Sunday I commenced a meeting at Happy Home and was assisted by Rev. C. C. Peel after Sunday. Six valuable accessions at this point and the church greatly revived. The outlook for our cause this point is very hopeful. More will join us there at my next appointment.

The third Sunday in Aug. I began a meeting at Hines Chapel. Bro. Peel again came to my assistance on Monday. Here we had a gracious meeting which resulted in eleven additions to the church. This church is in a good community and brings together one of the largest country congregations I know of anywhere. The communion on the first day of the meeting was celebrated by a densely packed congregation nearly all partaking of the holy sacrament. I began a meeting at Pleasant Ridge the fourth Sunday in Aug. Bro. Peel coming in again on Monday, but the storm and rains forced us to close the meeting Wednesday night. In these meetings Bro. Peel greatly endeared himself to the people by his fine sermons and faithful work and they will be glad to have him come again. Revs. H. L. Hines and W. T. Walker each preached once for me at Hines Chapel.

Last Saturday Sept. 2nd I was at White Road near Belews Creek station on the O. F. & Y. V. Railroad and addressed the people who were holding a Sunday school picnic. This is a mission point where a few friends have conducted a Sunday school during the past spring and summer and I commenced preaching there the first Sunday evening in July, coming over from Salem Chapel about six miles distant. About ten of the converts at Salem Chapel were members of this school. We had a nice, quiet, orderly picnic. After dinner was over I requested those interested in establishing a Christian church at that point to meet me in the grove to talk the matter over. The result was a building committee of nine good citizens to take the matter in charge and proceed to secure a suitable location, raise the means, etc., for the proposed church. The people say they intend to have the church built, and they are well able to build, and seem willing to rise up and do it.

From the picnic I went to the home of Bro. J. R. T. Caffey a member of Salem Chapel church. About two miles from his home I met him returning from the post office with the CHRISTIAN SUN. His brother-in-law, Isaac Dalton, who was riding with me, both on horse back, dismounted and told brother Caffey to ride on home with me and he would be on soon. Bro. Caffey and I rode on towards his home engaged in the most pleasant conversation about the meeting at Salem Chapel and its gracious results. Reaching his home we dismounted and while he was trying to get his horse's foot out of the bridle rein the animal that I had ridden kicked at his horse but his animal jumped forward just in time to clear the blow leaving Bro. Caffey in a stooping position and the blow struck him just over the forehead with a terrible thud prostrating him backward unconscious and apparently lifeless. I sprang to him and raised him up, the blood gushing from a cut nearly three inches long, and as we found later, an ugly fracture in his skull. Consciousness was regained after a while and I left him Sunday morning resting quietly. It was a terrible shock to his family as well as to myself. May I never have to witness such a scene again. I cannot here give the details. May God spare the dear brother's life.

After preaching at Salem Chapel I baptized 19 persons in Dr. E. Fulps fish pond in the presence of a very large congregation and at four o'clock p. m. I preached again at White Road mission point to a large and attentive congregation. About sunset Monday evening I reached home having been absent ten days.

JEREMIAH W. HOLT.

Burlington, Sept 5, 1893.

The latest attack on the Lords Day is made by the New York dailies that publish Sunday editions. They are now seeking to persuade the postal authorities to run special Sunday newspaper trains to aid in the distribution of their wares. Of course, it is enormously expensive to scatter these Sunday papers over the immense area they attempt to cover. Private carriers are utilized, as well as the Sunday trains, and undoubtedly the running of special newspaper trains would greatly benefit the newspapers. The government, however, is run for the good of the people not of the newspapers, and a large and increasing number of the people are persuaded that the use of Sunday trains to distribute Sunday papers would merely establish one evil for the purpose of promoting another. —Golden Rule.

A writer in the Forum asserts that there are 400,000 more pensioners on the Government pension rolls than there were soldiers in the Confederate service. A second curious fact, derived from another source, is, that while our pension list has grown enormously in numbers in recent years, the list of pensioners on the State of Georgia (which pays a certain amount to men wounded in the Confederate service) has steadily and regularly decreased. The pension rolls are being examined into, and they no doubt will be "decimated." But it speaks well for the Confederate soldiers, making such a fight with such terrible odds against them. —Southern Churchman.

Jude's Ascription of Praise.

BY REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of His glory, with exceeding joy,—to the only wise God, our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever, Amen. Jude 24-25.

This benediction is a most beautiful burst of poetic grandeur, and is full of inspiration to the Christian. Jude understood the danger to which his brethren were exposed through the influence of evil teachers, and the temptations of the world. He was anxious for them, and knew that their only safety was in God. Deeply moved by these considerations he earnestly commended them to the divine protection.

As it was in the days of Jude so it is still. We are exposed to danger, and our only refuge is in God. One source of danger is in our own passions and desires. Paul learned this fact from experience; hence he said: "I find then a law, that when I would do good evil is present with me. I delight in the law of God after the inward man: but I see not her law in my members, warning against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." This is true of all men, and this struggle is going on in every soul. All have their besetting sin. This is not the same in every man. With some it is pride, and with others anger, or covetousness, or envy, or lust after gold, or love of rum. Each one of these passions is an enemy lurking in our nature, and we are in danger of being led astray.

Another source of danger is in temptations that come from our surroundings. Evil is not only present in man, but all about him. Temptations come from the social customs of society, from the manner of doing business, and from corrupt books and papers. These things address themselves to the passions and sinful desires of man, and quicken them into life. If there were no evil desires and passions in man he would be in no danger from outward temptations.

Every man when he commences a Christian life he soon learns his weakness, and need of divine help. This is a humiliating fact, and it humbles the pride of the heart. David felt this deeply, and said: "I am counted with them that go down into the pit: I am as a man that hath no strength."

Our only safety is in "Him that is able to keep us from falling" into sin. The word "falling" as used here means properly not stumbling, as a horse; then without falling into sin. God has given us his spirit to "help our infirmities" "David realized this in his own experience, and said: "Thou has girded me with strength. The spirit quickens and renews the heart, prompts to duty, brings the truth to remembrance, and applies it to the conscience. In God we are safe. "For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."

The faithful Christian shall be brought faultless into the glorious presence of God. Faultless means unblamable, but this does not mean that the Christian will be without blame. It means that he shall be cleansed from all sin. It shall all be washed away in the blood of Christ, and in heaven there will be no more conflicts with evil. What a glorious state that will be.

"The presence of his glory" here means his glorious presence. "Exceeding joy" means abounding joy. This joy grows out of the sweet consciousness that they are redeemed, that sin will never trouble them again, that all tears are wiped away, that there shall be no more death, that they are reunited with their lost friends, that they are in the presence of God.

The honor and praise for this redemption belongs to God. The plan of salvation originated in his wisdom and love. His wisdom is revealed in his adaptation of the scheme of salvation to the wants of man, to the regeneration of his moral nature, and his preparation for usefulness here and happiness in heaven.

The glory and majesty of God is seen in the redemption of man. It reveals his infinite wisdom, and boundless benevolence. We cannot now comprehend and realize all that is due to him, but will in heaven.

Dominion and power belong to God. His government embraces all the universe, and his power is irresistible. Many do not realize this tremendous fact. They live as though there were no power to call them to an account for their conduct. They defy the power of God, and despise his goodness. How reckless.

The infinite power of God is a source of strength and joy to the Christian.

"The soul, reposing on assured belief, Feels herself happy amidst all her grief; Forgets her labors, as she toils along, Weeps tears of joy, and bursts into song."

What a blessing that there is one who can and will keep us from falling into sin if we only trust in him. If we had no such friend we might well give up in despair; but with God for our refuge we can sing:

"Father, to us, Thy children, humbly kneeling,
Conscious of weakness, ignorance, sin and shame;
Give such a force of holy thought and feeling,
That we may live to glorify Thy holy name;

That we may conquer base desire and passion,
That we may rise from selfish thoughts and passions,
Overcome the world's allurements, threat and fashion, Walk humbly, gently, leaning on thee still."

Darkness sometimes gathers around our path here, but we have a safe refuge in God; and can sing:

'Abide with me! Fast falls the evening tide;
The darkness deepens; Lord, with me abide!
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, oh, abide with me!"

A glorious future awaits the child of God. He shall stand purified from all sin in the presence of the divine glory. Some rays of light from that bright world glimmer on our path even now through the promises of God; but we cannot now comprehend its sublime glory.

"Not from the flowers of earth, not from the stars,
Not from voicing sea may we
The secret wrest which bars our knowledge here
Of all we hope and all that we may fear hereafter.

We watch beside our graves, yet meet no sign
Of where our dear ones dwell Ah! well,
Even now, your dead and mine may long to speak
Of raptures it were wiser we should seek hereafter.

O hearts we fondly love! O pallid lips,
That bore our farwell kiss from this
To yonder world's eclipse! Do ye, safe home, Smile at your earthly doubts of what would come—hereafter?

Grand birth right of the soul, naught may despoil!
O precious, healing balm, to calm
Our lines in pain and toil! God's boon that Or soon or late shall know what it is to be—hereafter."

This "hereafter" is ours, but what shall it be to us? This we must and will settle ourselves

What a consolation this hope is, I saw a young mother with the dead body of her child in her arms, and with deep emotion she said: "Farwell little angel, for you are an angel now. I will meet you after a while in heaven. Farwell my babe."

Our supreme object in life should be to seek to stand perfect in the presence of God. This life with all its pleasures and honors will soon pass away.

"Tis not for man to trifle! Life is brief,
And sin is here.
Our age is but the falling of a leaf,
A dropping tea:
We have no time to sport away the hours,
All must be earnest in a world like ours,
Not many lives, but only one have we,
One, only one;
How sacred should that one life ever be,
That narrow spar!
Day after day fill up with blessed toil,
Hour after hour still lingering in new spoil."

Songs in the Night.

There are many bright days given us by our Heavenly Father, but as He sees it is best that we should have alternate day and night in the natural world; so we all have our night times of sorrow and care. Yet we are told that in the darkest hours "He giveth songs." Did you ever think what this means, or better yet did you ever feel what it means? If you are a disciple of Jesus, a true child of God you have no doubt felt it and your weary soul has been soothed and cheered by this heavenly minstrelsy, and you have realized that its melody was sweeter far than the notes of the Eolian harp, coming as it does from the great kind heart of Him, "who never weary, watches where his people be." To all of His sorrowful children, have these sweet songs come sometimes as sweet as echoes of things heard and learned in His house at some brighter period of our lives. Was it in the night of bereavement? Did death come with its icy hand and touch one near and dear to you? Did he take your darling child and did you see on the precious little body as you laid it in the casket, dark spots already around the little throat from the inflammation which had taken the dear little life away, and as you looked on these evidences of corruption and decay in that dear little body "bone of your bone" and "flesh of your flesh," how came it that instead of these signs filling your heart with horror, a voice whispered to you of the time to come, and reminded you that "this mortality shall put on immortality, this corruption must put on incorruption" till in anticipation and confident expectation of that blessed day, your spirit was lifted up and your aching heart soothed and cheered as by Heavenly minstrelsy. Have you been rich in this world's goods and have you been stripped of all in these latter days and forced to depend on daily work for your bread, or daily effort and daily trust in God, which should go together if you are a true disciple? How is it that when you read that our Saviour, though rich for our sake became poor, you seem to be able to realize to the fullness of His love, that it comes to you as a sweet, sweet song in your night of poverty and toil. It may be that other dark hours come to you, for there are some more grievous to be borne than those which come from bereavement or poverty. It may be that you see one near and dear to you falling into sin, deeper and deeper into sin. You pray fervently and constantly that God would stop him in his mad career. You know that He is all powerful, that He rules in the armies of Heaven and it seems a small thing that He should rule and reign over one wicked heart. You try to have faith and you feel that in the arms of faith and prayer you would take him and bear him to the Master as did the women their suffering loved ones when the blessed Saviour was here among men. You love this erring one so dearly, it seems that you could hardly rest yourself, "in the Heavenly fold with this precious lamb astray in the Mountains cold." In such a night as this, these words, "what I do ye know not now, but ye shall know hereafter" come to the soul all weary and distracted, and bring sweet visions of that bright hereafter until refreshed and settled, established and strengthened, it can trust all into His hands and cast all care upon Him who careth for us saying humbly and sincerely,

"I know the hand that is guiding me,
Through the darkness into the light,
And I know that all befitting me
Is meted out aright.
For I know, though hid from my mortal sight,

God's plans are all complete,
Though the darkness at present be not light
And the bitter be not sweet.

My First Gray Hairs.

There they are—in each of my temples. They are not so very noticeable as yet, but the beginning has come and every beginning has an end—I mean every earthly beginning—and the end will come all too soon. It will either be that very soon, one by one, my hair will all be gray, or that this side of that the Master will call me to rest in heaven.

I shall never forget when mother's hair began to turn gray. The first gray hairs came into her temples just as they have in mine. It must be almost twenty years ago now (how fast the time goes by!) that one Sunday afternoon when she stroked my hair she said, "You see your mother's hair is turning gray. That means she will not be with you long. For gray hairs mean old age and old age means that I shall leave you." I was not a Christian then, but I loved my mother with all my heart, and something came up into my throat that Lord's day evening just as it does now and something wet my face and fell on mother's hand. As I looked into her sweet face (I seem to see it now) I wondered in my heart of hearts if I had made her raven locks turn gray before their wonted time. I remember well how fast the gray hairs came until seventeen years had gone, and her hair down in her temples, where the first gray streaks had come, was almost white, we laid her in the grave, where she sleeps to-day beside our darling little boy, who went before her to the better land. There they are, those two graves, where lie buried the baby and his loving grandmother—there out in the graveyard side by side, 'till the resurrection morning. Some day I will write some words about those graves, unless all too soon I sleep beside them, but I cannot do it now, because the tears are coming so fast that they blur the pages as I write.

And then it was my own gray hairs that I started to write about.

As I said in the beginning, they are there, unmistakably. It may not have made you feel serious when your first gray hairs came—if you have gray hairs—and it may not make you feel serious when they do come—if you have them not—but to me it is a solemn hour. Am I good enough in God's field to begin to ripen? Or is this but the scorching of life's tropic sun instead of the coming of life's first half of summer? Have you never seen the tasseling corn, as laughed in the early summer breezes and shed its fragrance on the luscious melon that was hidden 'neath its foliage? Have you seen the little ears that clustered at its side and sent out the corn silks as fair as any silks e'er worn by youth and beauty? I have. And then I have seen the blades wither and the tassels die and the stalk turn gray and the ear that promised so well, fall limp and juiceless to the ground. That withering was the blasting of drouth—not the ripening of a golden harvest.

As I look anon at these gray hairs I wonder how much drouth has come into my poor life to blight the fruit that might have been so fair, had not the corroding touch of sin been on my head. I have not done the best I could. I confess it here and now to God and men. I could have wrought more nobly if I had always been true and loyal and brave. Some days I have idled all the hours away. I have touched some lives and sent not a single thrill of joy nor shed a ray of hope into their fainting hearts.

God forgive me.

These gray hairs urge me to a better life. They warn me that my youth is gone. They teach me that what I do must be done quickly, for opportunities will not abide, but fly more swiftly by than the eagles, as they cleave the bending heavens.

Sad it is to see gray hairs coming to the head that thinks not of God or heaven or a better life on earth. There are some of my comrades just about my age, whose hair is also turning gray. They are not saved. Poor, gray-haired followers of evil. May God make them think—as he has made me think to-day—of the old childhood home; of the orchard that nestled on the old hillside; of the old well out in the yard, where father stood on that Sunday evening in the long ago; of the old Bible that lingered on the little table in mother's room, and of the dear mother whose hand rested tenderly on our heads before we thought our locks would ever feel the silvery touch of passing years. And as they go back to that old home may they ask God's pardon for their many sins and find peace in believing in our dead and risen Lord.

As for me, it is a solemn hour. As I write I am alone with God. Not a sound greets my ears but the tracing of the pencil on the paper and the throbbings of my fast beating heart. And here in this silence I have vowed a vow to God that, come what will, I will be a better man. I will honor these gray hairs and will consecrate anew all my energy and talents, and the remaining years to his service, wholly and unreservedly. May he give me grace to keep this vow and, as you read these thoughts that I have written down, may you, too, renew your covenant with God Gray Hairs! Yes they are blossoming for the grave. The fruitage will be here by and by.—J. B. Cranfill in Baptist Standard.

Keep Adjusted.

You have undoubtedly noticed in telegraph offices, with each set of instruments, one with cylinders or coils a little larger than the others, and an armature which is constantly moving, but gives forth little or no sound. That is the "relay," which, when properly adjusted in the wire circuit, transmits the Morse characters to the little "sounder," from which the operator reads them; and no matter what is being transmitted on the wire, unless the relay is properly adjusted the receiving operator cannot read it, for he is what is termed "out of adjustment."

Now is it not just possible that the reason some Christians are constantly fault-finding, and never in a happy and contented mood, is that they are out of adjustment? and, although their wires are loaded with blessings, they are losing the benefit of them, because the relay is turned down so that they cannot appreciate them,—they are not adjusted for the divine will; consequently nothing comes clear.

The pastor prepares a discourse at great expense of thought and labor that he may transmit the message in a clear and intelligible manner, but it seems dull and monotonous to you, and "all jumbled up," as the telegrapher would express it. But just get into adjustment by touching the spring of prayer, and see how differently the message will come, just as clear as a bell. Yet it is, the same message and in the same hands. You were simply out of adjustment. When trials and misfortunes come, don't switch out your instruments and leave the wire. Then is the time to remain at your post. It may be difficult to adjust, and you feel discouraged, but persevere, and you will soon find that you have not lost communication, but can make out enough to know that it is all right, although you may not be able to get the message very clear at the time.

The telegraph operator, with his instruments properly adjusted, hears not only messages and calls for his own station, but all others on the same "circuit." And so the Christian, by proper adjustment, may receive the blessings intended for him, and at the same time enjoy the many blessings all around him, for God's wires are teeming with messages of joy and happiness if we will but keep adjusted so that we may receive them. Then, too, by so doing we shall not miss that final message which will mean so much to those who persevere,—"Well done, good and faithful servant."—Austin, in Golden Rule.

How to Meet Infidelity.

The infidelity of the day is not to be met by exclamation or declamation. What the skeptic of to-day needs is facts—plain, simple, definite, fundamental facts. He has been misinformed—misled—and has imbibed serious errors. He does not wish to be exhorted or warned or patronized. What he needs is to be told the truth, and to learn the facts of the case.

Of course there may be men professing infidelity, who are hypocritical and entirely insincere, but it is not wise to presume upon fact, though we may have our own opinion about it in certain cases. But whatever we may think of opposers, so long as arguments are presented, arguments are to be met. When difficulties are stated those difficulties are to be considered. And if we undertake to evade the issue by rhapsody or pathos, we shall find that we provoke scoffing and contempt. We need to deal in facts—stern, solemn, definite and incontrovertible facts—and before these, infidelity is speedily trodden in the dust. And now the question is, "Do we know the facts?" If not are we willing to study them and learn them? Are we ready to spend time strength and money that we may be able to save souls? Are we willing to place those facts in the hands of persons who need to know them, and so stop the mouths of gainsayers and unbelievers?

But these objections have been answered a hundred times. Perhaps so, but can you answer them now? The alphabet has been taught millions of times, and yet if we stop teaching it to-day, we shall rear a race of dunces. The way of salvation has been expounded millions of times, is that any reason why it should not be expounded again to every doubting, inquiring soul? Have we passed beyond the reach of the admonition to be always ready to give to every "man that asketh" us a reason of the hope that is within us, with meekness and with fear? Is not our duty as Christians to meet arguments with arguments, questions with fact, and difficulties with the fresh light which is pouring in upon us from every quarter? If we can do it, why should we not do it? If we cannot do it is it not quite time we should learn how to use our armor; and thus take unto us the Sword of the Spirit which is the word of God, and fight the good fight of faith, and lay hold on eternal life?—Armory.

Christian Endeavor Visitors.

"We were riding out this way, and it looked so cool and pleasant there that we thought we'd just stop a minute and get a drink of water, it's so hot and dusty in the sun."

"Drink o' water? Why, sakes alive, o' course I'll get you one. Take some chairs."

"How are all the children? Come here, you little darling."

"Well, the baby ain't gittin' along very well with his teeth this summer; and there's Eliza, she seem kinder tired out all the while. Guess it's too fur for her to walk to school and back every day, with the lot she has to help me besides."

"How many of them go to Sunday school?"

"Land sakes! There don't none of 'em go. He won't hitch up the team on Sunday if he can help it, and we can't get to go nowhere."

"Well, I know a lady who has a class of boys down at the church just like those two boys, and she would be delighted to see two more in her class."

It was two girls calling. The talkative one was a member of the Sunday-school committee of the Christian Endeavor society of a little country church, and the quiet one had a buggy she could take. The Sunday-school and lookout committees had offered themselves to the pastor. The boys were all busy in the fields, so he had paired off the girls from fourteen to twenty five years old, some of whom were not on the committee, and assigned a road to each pair, to call at every house and see that every one possible was brought into the Sunday school and to church.

The girls had a note-book in which, after they left the house, they wrote down all the names of the children, and other facts about the family. They made rough maps of their district for the pastor, giving the names and location of the families.

One couple of the young ladies persevered over nine miles, and drew a family to the church.

As a consequence, the Sunday school grew rapidly; two new schools were organized which became preaching stations; a quiet revival went through that section, and one Sunday school grew to a good, earnest church.

Why should not Endeavorers do more of this kind of work? No one can resist the happy faces of two young ladies. One of the most successful of those workers I have mentioned was fourteen years old. This district canvassing is easier work in a town or a city. Young men can work in the evening. A young carpenter, exceedingly bashful, but happy in his work, said, "It's just as our pastor told us,—not nearly so hard as we think if we only get started."

Would not this be a good specialty for Christian Endeavor societies to practice on for next year?—Hood, in Golden Rule.

Godliness Profitable.

The eminently conservative London Times has been investigating missions in India in their economic aspect.

The editor notes the evidence furnished by the recent census of India, that the native Christian community is "better looked after in childhood, better educated in growth, better treated in sickness, more promptly aided during scarcity, more continually cared for and disciplined through life than any other of the laboring castes. Among the Christians 61 per cent of the boys are receiving instruction, as against 34 per cent of the non-Christian population."

After noticing other indications of the growth of Christians, the editor concludes:

"This is a state of things, we repeat, simply inconceivable in an Indian presidency half a century ago. When Englishmen and Englishwomen feel inclined to doubt whether their aid to Indian mission is productive of results, they can comfort themselves with the reflection that although the results may not exactly be what they had in their minds, they are more solid and have a wider reach than the first Indian missionaries of the last generation could have ventured to anticipate. After such unique testimony as this we need not attempt to show any more of the progress of the divine drama of missionary work in India. The latest act of this wonderful drama, unfolded as it is to our view by the revelations of the recent census, ought to be enough to convince the most bigoted unbeliever in Christian missions that in India, at any rate, the faithful preaching of the gospel is slowly but surely effecting a complete transformation in the life of humanity there."

The Role of Woman.

The original intention, says an exchange, in regard to women seems that they should be creatures of ornament and consolation. This has not been wholly carried out; they have had many other things to do beside being pretty and consoling. But for both of these they have had large opportunities. In times like the present, when men are harassed and troubled over their affairs, women can do much that no one else can do. They can refrain from troubling on their own part; they can put aside their own annoyances; they can see that the house is cool and comfortable, that the table is well and not extravagantly served; they can present a cheerful front and soothe or divert as the indications may be read on the page which it should have been the business of their lives to understand at a glance. They may speak or be silent, as the case seems to require. She who will do this will do more. She will cheerfully make her expenditures meet the situation. If she has an extravagance she will lay it off; she will look well to the ways of her household and take a cheerful interest in practicing wise economies. But there comes a place where men's and women's ways may part. A glance over the newspapers shows that when men are troubled in their affairs the mill is shut down, the works are closed, the employe is discharged. The interests of women are not so involved. The wise woman will not swell ranks of the unemployed. She will not discharge the faithful nurse, the cook, the waitress; she will turn her dress for a new fall costume and put a new bow on her bonnet; she will gather her household about her and biding low all will in time weather the storm.

Washington Letter.

No other topic than finance has occupied any considerable portion of the attention of the Washington public this week. One hears the votes of the House of Representatives on the silver propositions discussed everywhere. While the result—the passing of the bill for the unconditional repeal of the purchasing clause of the silver law—surprised no one, there were several surprising things in connection therewith. For instance, the smallness of the highest vote cast for free coinage of silver at the present ratio, and only 119 for free coinage at a ratio of 20 to 1. A tabulation of the first vote by sections shows that the New England States cast 27 votes—all they had—against free coinage; the Middle States 77 against and only one for free coinage; the Southern States 70 for and 33 against; the Central States 40 for and 86 against, and the Pacific coast States 13 for and 4 against.

The question of the continued purchase of silver bullion by the Government having been negatively decided by one house of Congress by a more than two-thirds vote—240 to 110 being the vote on the repeal of the purchasing clause of the Sherman silver law—has now been transferred to the Senate, where the silver men are much stronger—strong enough they still claim to attach conditions favorable to silver to the bill in the shape of an amendment. On the other hand, those who favor unconditional repeal claim to be strong enough to pass the bill without amendment. So far all attempts to reach an agreement in the Senate as to the length of time the bill shall be debated have failed. Unless an agreement is reached it will be but guessing to attempt to say when or how the Senate will dispose of the question. Senator Vorhees, chairman of the Finance committee, gave notice yesterday that his bill, which was reported from that committee as a substitute for the Wilson repeal bill which was passed by the House, would be kept before the Senate until a vote was reached.

A bill has been introduced in the Senate prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in the District of Columbia, and Representative Morse, of Massachusetts, will introduce a similar bill in the House as soon as that body adopts its new code of rules which is now being discussed while it would unquestionably be the greatest possible blessing that could possibly be bestowed upon the District of Columbia to have either of these bills become a law, there isn't the slightest probability that either of them will be even seriously considered by the committees to which they will be referred. I have long been under the impression that the friends of moral reform in Congress, with intentions the best, make mistakes in introducing such bills. They should, in my opinion, be more politic, and introduce only such reform bills as would at least have a chance to become laws, instead of wasting time that might be put to a better purpose on impossibilities. Such, for instance, as one putting an absolute stop to the sale of liquors in the restaurants in the basements of the Capitol building. The time will come—it is bound to come—when there will be a Congress which will not only consider, but will pass a prohibition bill, but it hasn't come yet.

President and Mrs. Cleveland are expected to return to Washington this week. Members of the administration deny the truthfulness of the sensational report, widely published, that Mr. Cleveland had recently been operated upon for a cancerous trouble.

The decision of the Senate by the close vote of 31 to 28 to refuse the applications for seats made by Mr. Lee Mantle and Mr. John B. Allen, who were appointed Senators respectively by the Governors of Montana and Washington, was a surprise, as it had been generally supposed from opinions expressed by Senators that the decision would have been in their favor. The decision also affects the vacancy from Wyoming. These three States will be only half represented in the Senate until their legislatures meet and fill the vacancies.

Comparatively few people knew until this week that a small congregation of Dunkards existed in Washington. The first baptism of Dunkard in Washington took place last Sunday, in the Eastern Branch of the Potomac river, the immersion being performed by Bishop Stoner, of Maryland, who also presided at three services of song and praise held by the little congregation on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, and attended by a number of people who had never before witnessed the quaint and interesting services of this sect, the foundation of which is a literal acceptance of the language of the Bible.

CORRESPONDENT.

Aug. 30.

The Parliament of Religions.

This will be the chief of the Congresses held in connection with the World's Fair. We have given it our hearty support from the first because we believe the idea a good one. In the first place it is original. There have been great Christian conclaves, Catholic and Protestant; but there has never been an assemblage representing all religions. Here not only all shades of Christianity, but all other great beliefs are to meet, so to speak, on the same platform, and each will be permitted to speak for itself. It will be a matter of intense interest to see the representatives of the great cults of the world and hear them expound the principles of those cults.

Secondly, in accordance with the the root idea of all religions that men should be brotherly. They have had a common origin, they have common aspirations, and common destinies are before them. Christian and Jew, Buddhist and Mohammedan, tho' widely separated in points of belief, will sit down together as men and compare and contrast their systems of faith, in a kindly, rational and human way. The Parliament of Religions will be a demonstration of race brotherhood, not in absolute agreement in the great fundamentals of faith, but in personal contact and free discussion.

Again, it will be a Congress for the study of Comparative Religion. This is almost a new study with the majority of our scholars. It is being pursued, with interest and profit, by a few ministers and professors among us. Missionaries have furnished most valuable materials for it. The Congress at Chicago will give thousands a coveted opportunity to hear such a series of lectures as no university in the world could furnish, and these lectures will be accessible to many other thousands in the published results. We need to know what there is to be known about other faiths than our own. Such knowledge is indispensable to the missionary who goes to present the truths of Christianity to the disciples of Mohammed, Confucius, Buddha and Zoroaster. It were better that it should be a part of his training here than that he should go into the foreign field entirely ignorant of the beliefs with which he will have to contend. One important result of the Parliament will be an impulse to the systematic study of Comparative Religion.

There are those who fear that Christianity will be compromised by the association of its representatives on even terms with the representatives of other religions. They say that the program makes no distinction between the one true, divine religion and the many false and human religions; that such equality implies that one religion is as good as another, and dishonors the gospel of Christ. This goes on the assumption that any recognition of other faiths is equivalent to approval of them. There was a time when a Catholic could not sit on the same platform with a Protestant, or Methodist with a Unitarian without losing something of his own orthodoxy and compromising his own faith; but more sensible views have come to prevail. We remember that Christ did not pray that his disciples should be taken out of this world, but that they should be kept in the world. He does not require us not to associate with those who do not believe what we believe; but, on the contrary, to let our light shine into their darkness. That is what our Lord did. He held colloquies and conferences with men who did not believe in him or the Gospel he preached. This is what is to be done at Chicago. The program of the Parliament assumes what no man would deny, that there are other religions besides Christianity. We simply quarrel with words if we refuse to recognize them as such. We do not approve them by giving them a chance to be heard. Christianity will be held up with equal fidelity. It will be made to appear as the one divine among diverse human systems. Its superiority will be only the more manifest by comparison.—N. Y. Independent.

A Drummer and a Minister.

Rev. A. E. Dunning, D. D., the manager of the Congregationists publishing house and Sabbath work, is one of the busiest men in town.

Dr. Dunning is an off-hand, approachable man with a bright, winning face, easy manner and personal magnetism, that contribute much to his success. He has none of the outward signs of the clerical calling, but looks more like a business man. He travels nearly all the time, and he says that in the cars he generally passes as a drummer and is recognized by the faternity as one of their number. On going into Minneapolis one Saturday evening a smart young fellow approached him in a free and easy way:

"Going to stop over Sunday?"

"Yes," replied the doctor.

"Stop at the Blank hotel, I suppose?"

"No, I am going to stop with a friend."

"Come round to the hotel tomorrow and we'll have a racket. Quite a number of the boys will be there."

"But tomorrow is Sunday."

"I know it, and that's why we can have such a devil of a good time."

"Oh, I think we fellows who are traveling all the time ought to keep Sunday," said the doctor.

"Yes," assented the drummer good-naturedly, "but I bet you won't!"

"I'll tell you what I'll do; I'll go to church tomorrow if you will?"

"I'll do it! Where shall we go?"

"To the First Congregational. It's the best church in town."

"All right. I'll be there, but I'll bet you won't."

The drummer was there according to his promise, and could hardly believe his eyes when he saw his friend of the night before ascend the pulpit. Dr. Dunning tried to find him after the service, but he fled.—Louistown Journal.

Prepared for Darkness.

Some years ago, says a writer, I had occasion to travel on one of the great American railroads. While seated in the waiting room, waiting for the starting of the train, I observed a party consisting of a gentleman and lady, two little girls and a nurse. They were evidently a family, well-dressed, and of such appearance and manners as denoted cultured, well-to-do people. I wondered who they were, but never found out.

When we had taken our places in the car, the nurse and the children were seated directly behind the parents. Very soon after starting, the mother turned round, took hold of the younger child and gently lifted her on her lap, with her face to her own, raised the little girl's arms and brought them round her neck, and placed her own around the child's body, holding her close in her embrace. Not knowing what was before us, I was kept in wonder as to what these movements all meant; but as soon as we entered the tunnel, darkness covered us, and the light flashed out of darkness, and I understood. The dear mother feared that the child would be frightened, and so she took her in her arms; nor did the child by a sound or a movement show that she felt alarm. That warm, protecting embrace killed all fear of evil; how could any harm reach her?

How could the thought of God hiling some beloved soul, in time of trouble, in his pavilion, in the secret of his presence, be kept from one's reflections? Has not one old writer said that "when God foresees great trials for the believer, he takes care to prepare that one by gracious manifestations?"

Points to Ponder.

A ticket to a charity ball is a poor passport to heaven.

Does "Brief Biblical" describe your prayer-meeting talks?

Christ is not visible to a self-centered Christian.

To many the "Suffer little children" means only the children in their own "set."

The devil's best work is done when he is in his Sunday clothes.

Satan has a warm spot in his heart and home for the man who leads young people astray.

The brook babbles because it is shallow; likewise some people.

Many appear to forget that "the brotherhood of mankind" includes women.

Although willing to become "door-keepers" in God's house, some men want to wear a gorgeous uniform while on duty.

Is your life so good an imitation of Christ's that men desire a better knowledge of the original?

Few Christians would groan under their crosses if they should get more glimpses of Christ on the road to Calvary.—Ellis in Golden Rule.

The Presence of Christ.

How the loving presence of the blessed Redeemer soothes, and cheers the drooping heart, when torn and bruised by the cruel tossings of the world. As a gentle breeze that stirs among the trees of a summer eve. So is the gentle moving of our loving Saviour in the hearts of his own children. How pleasant after a day of toil and heat to sit out among the great shady oaks, as the sun is sinking behind the western hills, and twilight gathers and deepens, and feel the gentle zephyr breezes coming so softly and sweetly, refreshing the body and cooling the hot brow, bringing sweet and hallowed thoughts to us of heaven and our precious ones who have crossed over the dark river. How cheering and beautiful the Christian's evening is a twilight when he has been toiling in the Lords vineyard gathering and harvesting his Master's fruits for the final great day, and now as he is nearing his day's rest and is just ready to lay the burden down, he is resting so quietly, he feels the dear presence of the Lord within his heart, and his dear arm is supporting his tottering footsteps over the dark river. What a sweet and charming rest his must be, he knows his sun is fast sinking behind the hills of his life, that soon, very soon, even now, the twilight is coming on, but notice how peaceful and calm he is, not a single sigh escapes his lips unless it be a wish to have done more for his Master. Oh! what a reward awaits such an one. This life is full of storms and troubles sometimes they come and almost bear us down as the great winds that blow in our forest, uprooting the trees and breaking the boughs; so it is with the human heart, it is often broken up and cast about on the great billows of disaster and disappointment, how hard it seems for us to be so tried; but when the quiet evening comes how ready are our hearts for the beautiful opening, and so willingly will we lay our heads on the dear Saviour's breast and say all our sadness over here was a blessing unto us. It will be the opening of a new and beautiful life into the child of God, ending in a home of eternal bliss and joy. When the silent shades of evening come and all of our trouble lies behind a glorious day opening before us, then can we rise our drooping hearts and say: It is well, I am ready to go, I would not stay here always. I ask not to stay.

Ten Years Progress.

Laziness, and indifference to system have ever been the great barriers in the progress of the Christian church. We make no criticism on the piety of our ministers. We believe they compare favorably with those of the sister denominations. But indifference to a systematic effort or co operation has been the prime cause of failure in the lives of so many of our preachers, and from this cause we have seen too many of our churches mere skeletons—but little flesh and less life!

You ask the question, "Have we such preachers and such churches today?" For my answer, I refer you to the church Annual of any year since 1883 to the annual reports of churches and ministers. Listen at your next Conference, and see there the cause of so many skeletons, and the effect of such indifference in all departments of our progressive work?

But notwithstanding the laziness of some workmen and the indifference of many others, there has been and is a gradual strong growth in the Christian church (Southern Convention).

Let us follow a line drawn through two conferences and briefly notice ten years' progress: Starting at Norfolk on the northern boundary of the Convention passing southward, via. Suffolk, Weldon, Raleigh, Durham, and Greensboro. Through the Eastern Va. Conference and the North Carolina, along this line in 1883 (at the principal points) we see only two churches.

Suffolk church (the oldest on the line) with 136 members and church property worth $3000; Berkley with 46 members and property valued at $600. How is it now as 1893 closes? Suffolk with 325 members and property valued at $22,000; Berkley with 145 members and property worth $7000; In addition to this the ten years' record shows Franklin church with 30 members and property valued at $3000; And Norfolk Mission with 250 members and property when completed worth $25,000. Now as we touch the North Carolina Conference in 1883 we find no Christian churches in the leading towns. In 1893 we see at Youngs ville a Christian church with 65 members and property valued at $1500; Raleigh church with 45 members and property valued at $7000; Durham church 75 members and property worth $2000; At Burlington 75 members with property worth $4000; High Point church 60 members and property at $1500; at Lexington a church has been organized and has 40 members but as yet has no house, last but not least, 1893 witnesses the greatest success yet achieved—Elon College! We may well feel proud of our College, while those of other denominations, and still others who are outside of any church, look with admiration upon its marvelous growth and most gratifying success. With the two large buildings for a beginning—and it is a beginning, for Elon is yet but an infant, but an infant with such a strong and pure physical constitution that its life and light is already seen and felt in two states—with this beginning who can estimate the power of Elon College when a large endowment is secured and well equipped departments are made for the specialists?

Elon College is now a factor in the education of North Carolina and Virginia. The college has now been open 3 years. Her graduates rank high. Those who have gone out from Elon College are now filling honorable places in the vocations of life and step by step they are mounting upward.

The college has been built and equipped to its present condition at a cost of about $65,000.

Elon church has 40 or more members and uses the college chapel for services.

Where is the section of country that can say more than this ten years' record has shown?

In 1883 there were only 2 churches along this line of railroads in the large towns, with a membership of 202 and property valued at $3600. Today there are 11 churches with 1150 members; with church and college property worth $138,000. Is this not enough to encourage? Can you find a greater success in any department of work, within the past ten years?

Take these figures as a basis and calculate for yourself what the next ten years shall reveal in the history of the Christian church?

This is not all of the progress made by these two conferences. All through the country adjacent to this line new churches have been built, till our church roll stands today 46 per cent larger than in 1883.

It seems to me that we all should thank God, take fresh courage, and go forward.

Died.

Departed this life August 27th 1893 Sister Elizabeth B. Hatch wife of Rev. J. W. Hatch, Treasurer of the N. C. & Va. Christian conference. Sister Hatch was 73 years, 1 month and 6 days old. She had lived as brother Hatch's devoted wife nearly 54 years and had been a model and untiring member of the church at Hank's Chapel for about 55 years. She lingered some time before her death but was as she had lived in health calm and quiet and resigned to the will of the Lord. She leaves five daughters and one son and several grand children. She had been a neighbor in the Bible service to a host of us and in all these spheres she let her light to shine that it may well be said of her: She rests from her labor and her works do and will follow her. May the good Lord comfort, sustain and uphold Bro. Hatch and all the bereaved ones and may we all strive the more to meet Sister Hatch in the land of eternal deliverance.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, It hath pleased God in his wise providence to call from labor to reward, our aged brother in Christ, Wiley S. Holmes, therefore be it—

RESOLVED, That the church at Popes has lost one of its oldest and most faithful members.

That we bow in submission to the will of our Heavenly Father knowing with what readiness he awaited his call and with what strong faith he met death.

That we cherish his memory and may well profit by his example in being always in readiness so that like him we will prove as a ripe shock ready for the garner.

Resolution.

At a regular meeting of Popes Chapel Christian church the following tribute, in memory of our beloved sister, Amanda Holmes, was unanimously adopted.

WHEREAS, It has pleased God, in his wisdom and goodness to remove from our midst our esteemed sister, who has been, for many years a faithful and active member of our church, a kind mother, a devoted wife, and a good neighbor, therefore be it—

RESOLVED, 1st. That, though our church, the bereft family, and community have sustained a great loss, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, sincerely believing our loss to be her eternal gain.

2nd. That we strive to emulate her Christian virtues, especially her zealous work in the church, her amiable disposition, her unshaken faith, and her habitual piety, that we, like her, may be prepared, when the final summons shall come, to bid the messenger of death a hearty welcome.

3rd. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family, and earnestly pray God's blessings upon them, that they may follow in her footsteps and eventually meet her on the other shore.

4th. That a copy of the above be spread upon our church record, a copy sent to the CHRISTIAN SUN and also one to the Christian Advocate for publication, and one to the family.

Respectfully submitted,

The wonderful cures of thousands of people—they tell the story of the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Hood's Cures.

Union, N. C.

MR. EDITOR:—Allow me to say through the columns of the SUN that since June 1st Union has donated to me near $10.00 because of my loss at commencement. Soon after Dr. Watson, Sr., presented me with nearly forty dollars' worth of books bearing directly on my line of work. Since the protracted meeting Bro. William McCauly brought a two-horse wagon load of presents donated by the good people of Union.

Among what was given were 1½ bushel of wheat, a sack of flour, a dozen chickens, a large ham, a dozen jars of fruit and preserves, a sack of potatoes, a bed quilt, set of cups, and saucers, apples, peaches and pears for canning and several other small articles for all of which my wife and I are truly thankful.

These acts of kindness are substantial evidences of the love that this people bears its pastor even though our connections as church and pastor has been so short. It is my purpose to locate in the neighborhood of the church as soon as possible and do all that I possibly can for the advancement of the cause at this place. I am more thoroughly convinced that what our churches need is more pastoral visitation. Heretofore I have been trying to keep up my collegiate course in connection with church work, but now I am prepared to give my entire time to the work of the ministry. I hope soon that the pastorate system may be adopted so that ministers can spend more of their time among their people and less on the road.

We were blessed abundantly in our protracted meeting at Union. Bro. P. T. Klapp did the preaching from Tuesday morning until Friday noon and his clear, logical, forcible, practical sermons had telling effects. The result was a gracious revival of religion in the church and about 25 conversions at O'Kelley's Chapel. We were assisted by Bro. A. P. Barbee. The meeting was very good, about 13 conversions.

Fraternally,
W. C. WICKER.

DEAR SUN:—Although the broken words of the writer have not appeared in your columns for quite a while, he is by no means forgotten your existence. After an illness of seven weeks it is a pleasure to say that at no time in the past have I enjoyed reading over your pages more than at the present, and never before have I felt such an interest in the success of the SUN. Since it is the duty of the church organ it is the duty of the church to heartily co-operate with the Editor and give to the readers anything that will tend to build them up in the faith and cause them to remember that their first obligation is to God and now is the time to begin the fulfillment of that obligation. If we have any words of encouragement send them to the SUN and do not wait for the Editor to ask you personally, for he has something else to do.

Bro. P. T. Klapp was with us the 5th Sunday in July and preached to a large congregation at the M. P. church both in the morning and at night. His words were to the point and did not fail to make an impression for good upon the minds of many who were present.

On Aug. 10th the same brother filled the pulpit for Rev. Mr. Holmes of the M. E. church at this place. On this occasion the Holy Spirit was present and the people were blessed.

We expect to have with us next week Evangelist, Rev. Mr. Lee who will hold a meeting here. We ask the prayers of God's people especially in behalf of the young men of the town.

We are glad to hear that Elon College began its fourth year's work with such a large number of students. Perhaps, there are none who rejoice more in the prosperity of the College than does the class of 1893. And I feel safe in saying that at no previous time were the members of that class so anxious to return to Elon as at the present.

Class of 1893, make good use of your time in all departments.

By no means should you neglect your devotional services and your literary work, for it makes no difference how much you do, when you leave college, you will regret that you did not do more.

May the College grow and prosper in all its departments.

Respectfully,
E. MOFFIT.

Holland Towns.

Mrs. E. M. Porter, the writer's daughter of Elon College, who has been on a visit to her parents, returned to Elon last Wednesday in company with a number of students to that school. They took the train at Holland for Suffolk, purposing to travel on the Norfolk and Carolina road.

Among the above number was Myrtle Dugltry the organist of Holland Christian church and one of the best workers in the church. We greatly miss her, but our prayers and best wishes go with her that her desires may be realized in her preparation for greater usefulness, and a bright and happy future.

We failed to mention in our last, that Miss Demarest, sister to our pastor at Holland, Sister India Wright and Bro. Winborne from Berkley Christian church, were at our meeting at Holland last 4th, Sunday. We are always glad to see them, and hope it will be their pleasure and convenience to come often.

We had a large attendance at our prayer meeting last night. It was led by a young brother who united with the church and was baptized last 4th Sunday.

R. H. HOLLAND.

Good Meetings.

DEAR BRO CLEMENTS:—My church is in good condition and congregation above the average. My last revival meeting was at New Hope where I had no ministerial help. There were nine conversions. Have raised nearly all the assessments for conference and will be ready by conference. My meeting at Bulah was good. Twenty-five converts, church revived, and back sliders reclaimed. Brethren J. D and W. C. Wicker assisted me. Think we will come up to conference with all the assessments this fall. To God be all the praise. Pray for us.

A Very Sad Death.

But few times in the history of this community has a heavier gloom of sadness, gathered over its people, than that caused by the death of Miss Alma Atkinson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Atkinson. Notwithstanding her death had been expected for several days, her physician, relatives and friends did all they could to restore her. But no, her life was too pure and good for this world. Her bright intellect and Christian spirit had made her a host of friends wherever she went. Alma dead! Only seventeen. So young, so bright, so full of hope. She made a profession of religion only one year ago, and connected herself with Catawba Springs church. She was true to her church and dutiful in all her Christian relations. She was a kind and obedient daughter and a fond and affectionate sister. She was much loved and admired by all who knew her. On the 31st ult. we laid her in the church yard to rest—to sleep the silent sleep of death. On the day of her burial, the rain fell in torrents, but still the crowds gathered to pay the last tribute of respect to her memory. Her funeral was preached by Rev. C. H. Rowland, which was very touching and impressive. The floral offerings were profuse and beautiful. It was a scene never to be forgotten. As the bereaved ones gathered around to pay their last sad tribute of respect it seemed as though their hearts would break and as though their eyes were fountains of tears. But the departed one lay there like an angel asleep with the repose of death upon her brow. She was perfectly resigned to God's will. And her last words were, "She wanted to go home and be with Jesus."

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled;
Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

People who can talk about themselves to the satisfaction of others are very scarce.

If talk were walk, what great multitudes would be headed straight for heaven.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Dr. W. W. Staley gave us a pleasant call last week. We hope he will come often.

Notwithstanding the hard times Elon College opened with flattering prospects last Thursday.

Prof. J. O. Atkinson and quite a number of students passed Raleigh last week for Elon College.

Rev. W. T. Herndon attended the Virginia Valley Conference last week. We expect him to bring back good news.

How much more sensible it would be for certain correspondents to send their names with the communication, for we cannot use a communication of any sort if the writer is unknown to us.

The SUN sympathizes with Rev. J. W. Hatch in the death of his wife. She was an excellent lady, and will be greatly missed in her church and community. May the Lord bless our dear brother and the children that are left behind on the shores of time.

Sister A. F. Hill, and Dr. J. P. Barrett's wife both of Norfolk, Va., and Sister Ives of Berkley, Va., are visiting at Elon College, N. C. We hope they may have a pleasant time in the old North State. We do not remember the name of the gentleman from Berkley Va., who accompanied Sister Ives to the College, but hope he will be pleased with his trip.

We have just received a beautifully bound copy of a sermon by Rev. H. M. Eaton, on the 80th anniversary of his birth, and 54th anniversary of his ministry. We guess that Bro. Eaton does as much or more work than any other living minister of his age. May the Lord continue His blessings to this good man of God.

Because of the hard times the church will suffer no little, and, consequently, let each and every pastor bring up the full amount of conference assessments and a little over so as to sort 'o even things up a bit. Now last year, according to the financial statistical table, there was the snug little sum of $400 less than the assessment on the one item of missions (home and foreign) which the churches did not send up, and this in only one conference. Pastors, arise and do your duty like men. Upon you rest the responsibility of raising the assessments and if you do not raise them there is something wrong about you.

Texas Advocate:—The most beastly and inhuman act we ever observed in a man who pretended to care anything for his wife, is that of making her sit for hours in an open wagon in the hot sun surrounded by her thirsty little ones crying for water, while the husband and father passed the same time in a saloon cracking jokes, telling yarns and tanking up on liquor. To note the anxious and tired expression on the poor woman's face during all this suspense, and then observe the evidences of a sinking heart when the beast finally reels out the dive thick-tongued and slobbering, is enough to make an angel weep, a devil laugh and a Christian vote for prohibition!

It is confidently reported that the end of the money panic is at hand. We earnestly hope such is the case. Despatches of Tuesday night are to the effect that the panic is over at New York. The banks there have now resumed business. All indications for ten days have pointed to this speedy ending of the trouble there. The effects, however, remain in other sections, and will remain until confidence is restored among the local banks and they resume business, and cease hoarding cash. Let each bank now be liberal and generous in helping those institutions that have been suffering for a want of currency, and the money stringency all over the country will at once cease.

For What am I Living?

Reader, this question concerns you; it concerns every body. Can you answer it? Will you study it prayerfully?

You are living for something or God would not let you live. Do you ever ask yourself, why is it that God lets me live? These questions are full of thought, and are for you readers.

"In God we live, move and have our continual being. It is that lengthens out the silvery cord of life, and holds the golden pitcher in its place.

And whenever God has no use for any one the silvery cord snaps, the golden pitcher breaks, and the individual goes to his long home. Often we see individuals who seem to do no good any where. But this is not true. They may be very bad people; and yet some where, some how, in an unseen way by us, they are doing some good. We often see their wicked deeds, but do not recognize any good acts in them. And yet God has some use for them. Though we may not be able to see it.

The pious man or woman full of energy, and in every good act and word, is readily recognized as a benefactor of the country. Many of those who have lived since the days of Luther, or those of Newton and a host of others, look back through the line of history, and see in these the great object of living. Are you striving like these and many others of less brains to make the world better, by an active life of good? This should be the true aim of every one. This is Christianity in motives. What kind of Christianity is yours? Is it active or dormant?

We see an invalid, pale and weak, sitting or reclining in the room year after year, too feeble to take the invigorating air or the rays of the health giving sun shine, and we ask the question, Why does God keep this one here suffering so long? Why is it? We ask again and again. This one, we say, is of no use to any one. But, readers, do you not know that this is often God's way of exemplifying patience by means of object lessons? Every sick room should be a hall of object lessons, and every patient in them a teacher. Reader, have you ever been in the hall of object lessons? Have you ever been a teacher in them? If so, did you possess your Soul in patience, and do you work well?

There is another class of people with large minds, full of energy and have wicked hearts moved by selfish motives, that are useful to the world, by their efforts of both mind and flesh, they often move the great industries of life, thereby giving employment to those who might not otherwise find it. And, in this way, many mouths are fed, and bodies clothed, to the delight of hundreds of families. This class of people bring blessings to the world of flesh, but none to their naked souls. Dear friends of brains, energy and worldly minds, we beg you look well to your souls, and prepare for the future state.

A fourth class is composed of those of dissipation, and all manner of sin, and seem to be of no use to any one. But sometimes poverty drives these to the plow to make corn for the hungry, or the tool chest to make wagons for the land, or to the wash tub to make clean the clothing for the sick. We must not be understood as saying that all who go to the plow, tool, chest or to the wash tub belong to this miserable class; for some of the best people that ever walked on God's green earth, work at these useful occupations. But we mention these to show how God makes the worst people sometimes do the world good. This class also leaves, what little good it does, in this world, and in the future state reaps an everlasting reward of punishment.

The good that any and all classes of the wicked do for the world, is the result of surrounding circumstances, and will be destroyed with the world. The good done for the world from the stand point of the religion of Jesus, is the result of a desire to serve God, and make the world better. This kind of work is conceived in a heavenly thought and will fully materialize in Glory. Reader, where does your work gather the thought, from the world or heaven?

Now dear friends, remember the great object of this life, should be to get ready for the next. In this we cannot stay long, in the next we must spend eternity. Where will you spend it; in the delightful presence of God? For what are you living, to serve God and be blessed forever more; or to obey the dictates of the world, and sink down into the dark pit in endless woe? As you read these lines stop, and think, and sin no more. Live for a purpose, have heaven in view. To God and right always be true. And at last when your work on earth is done. Angels will sing you a welcome.

Don't Have the Big-Head.

The above caption is not intended to be used in any offensive sense whatever, but simply to call attention to a subject worthy of careful consideration.

Most people of riper years are fond of bright intelligent young folks, and especially those who are putting forth earnest efforts to prepare themselves for usefulness in life. And with every effort which puts them on a higher plain of knowledge, some one speaks forth praises of admiration. Often these laudations are used to the injury of their recipients.

That which was intended for good often prepares the way for an evil thought. The praises which came from honest hearts, have frequently brought forth a crop of vanity. And this is not very strange, when we take in to consideration the natural inexperience and ambitiousness of most young people. They do not know how to weigh matters like older heads. And their desire to take a high position, in connection with the compliments of their friends naturally enough touches the spring of vanity.

We often praise the young people until finally we see in them the strong symptoms of the "big-head," and then, behind their backs, condemn in them the thing we have helped to develop. Is this right? We think not. Let us be careful how we start the growth of the "big-head" in our young friends.

It is perfectly natural for literary young men to think that they know more than they do; for their knowledge is largely drawn from books; and, unfortunately books often furnish their knowledge very imperfectly. Especially is this true of history. And the young people seeing that the older people do not act according to the book standard, must have less knowledge than themselves. But remember dear young friends that your father and your mother have learned many things by actual experience, that you can not acquire from any book. Yet we appreciate books, and say learn all you can from good books.

We know young men have many things to lead them towards "big-headism." Therefore they have a hard task to keep heart and head right. Keep there right and all will be right.

A great many young men have a slight touch of "big-head" in early life, which they outgrow in after years. But whenever a young man has natural big-head, it nearly always proves fatal. Keep your hearts pure, and your heads in proper shape, and all will be well.

Look at Yourself.

People who are good looking like to look at themselves. But the glasses, in which they like to look presents to them only the external appearances. They see only a part of themselves. But there is a glass, into which, if you will look earnestly, you will see yourselves as you are. It is the looking glass that God has given us, it is the Bible. Men don't love to look into it much, because it shows them the ugly spots, the spots of sin. Better look in it, see the ugly places, and have Jesus to wipe them off. A man does not see any need of medicine as long as he does not know he is sick. But as soon as he ascertains that he is dreadfully diseased, he sees a use for the medicine. So a man does not see how he needs the beauties of the religion of Jesus until he sees how ugly he is by reason of sin. Then he longs for the garments of righteousness.

Dear readers, look into your Bible often, so you may see yourselves as God sees you. Then you will want to put on the beautiful garments of righteousness.

Saved by Immersion.

We have at last come upon a case where a man was actually saved by having his body immersed in water. It happened last Sunday morning next door to the residence of the editor of the Standard. During a violent thunder storm the residence of our near neighbor was struck by lightning. He was immersed in his bath tub at the time and this saved him—that is, it saved him from temporal death. This is the first case of water salvation of which we have any account, and we are willing for our Campbellite friends to make all they can out of it. Let it be remembered, however, that there is no record as yet that any soul was ever saved by immersion or any other ceremony.—Baptist Standard.

We would like to know, if his head was under the water too. And, if not, did it represent the idea of immersion?

Sin is Looking for You.

The Ram's Horn says: "Sin is the surest detective any man ever had on his track." And the Ram's Horn is right.

The criminal dreads the detective, not because he expects injury directly from him, but because he does not want the crime which he has committed to come to light.

The sinner violates God's laws. This he may do in the darkness of the night, but sooner or later it will come to light. There is a detective that will be sure to find you; and that detective is sin. God's word says; "Be sure thy sin will find thee out." Remember the detective is after you, and will finally stand as a witness against you.

Liberty, N. C.

We reached Liberty last Saturday at about 11:30. The afternoon and night were spent with Bro. H. K. Trogdon. His wife is a daughter of Rev. J. W. Hatch, we always enjoy a visit to this excellent Christian home. His daughter, Miss Estelle is now a student at Elon College.

Dinner and supper were taken Sunday with Bro. R. E. Paterson. His wife is a cousin of Rev. P. H.

Fleming. We found this a pleasant home for a preacher, and were much pleased with our visit. Bro. T. A. Moffitt, the polite depot agent boards at Bro. Paterson. We feel very thankful to Miss Lizzie Paterson for the interest she took in the music at church.

Sunday night was spent with Bro. E. A. Griffin. He is partner in the firm of Griffin and Trogton. They have a good trade and are doing a good business. It is a pleasure to spend a night with this dear Christian family. And in fact all these families are first class.

May the Lord bless the people of Liberty. The services Sunday and Sunday night were very good.

Mr. Brown of the Lutheran Church preached a good sermon in the afternoon Sunday.

"Where is Iola?"

In response to the call of Prof. A. P. Fuquay of Alabama, permit me to say that Iola, or Facing the Truth is out of print and can not be bought at any price (new) till another edition is printed. I am willing to print a new edition if there is a sufficient demand for it. It is more than seven years since it was first printed, and of course there are many of our young people, to say nothing of others, who have not read it. If the brethren generally think a new edition is needed, let them say so on a postal card either to the SUN or to myself and I will then consider the matter further.

Norfolk, Va.

Alabama Letter.

DEAR BRO. CLEMETS:—After a long silence I write you in regard to the Ala. field. The most of our churches have held their protracted meetings, but the additions have not been commensurate with the effort put forth with some of the churches while some of the churches have grown admirably, viz., Phoenix City and Lungsdale of my charge, 34 additions at the former and 45 at the later. Brother Hunt has had a wonderful meeting at Pleasant Grove also good meetings at Antioch and Beulah but few additions at the last named churches. H. W. Elder my son has held meetings at Red Hill, Ga., Christianna, McGuire's Chapel, Forest Home and Union Grove with good success also Bro. Knight has been very successful in his churches. Bro. Smith of Ga. has been with us six weeks preaching and his preaching has been of the highest type. He is certainly a grand man and a giant in the pulpit. We have elected Prof. Fuquay to teach our high school another year and we are now building him a good house in one hundred yards of the school room to live in. Our school has been a success. This year we have 3 ministerial students in school now, and licensed 2 others at our District meeting, we have four new church houses in the central portion of the conference, one completed all to painting, the others progressing nicely; they are a credit to the conference. New Harmony expects to have their house ready by conference. We would like for Bro. Kitchen to come to conference, and if he cannot, some one come in his place—Holt, Hurley, Barrett, Staley, Klapp, Clements, any representative man.

Well I must tell the readers of the SUN about my baptizing at Lungsdale the 2nd Sabbath in last month. I had led sixteen young ladies into the water just below the foot bridge all in a straight line and just as I baptized the fourteenth one the banisters gave way and some ten or fifteen fell in without any ceremony, but fortunately no one got seriously hurt.

I forgot to say the church houses of Phoenix City and McGuire's Chapel are undergoing thorough repairs.

Your in hope of eternal life,
J. D. ELDER.

Blessing of Contentment.

There is, nowadays, too much of this unmanly whining of Ahah! We are too hard to please. We are too covetous and dissatisfied. This thing has crept into our Christian homes and turned our social life into a struggle for riches and display. For much of this we are responsible. Christian people should set an example of simplicity. If God gives you riches, it is that you may set the example of sobriety to your poorer brethren. Lavish expenditure, display of every kind, is at war with the spirit of the gospel, and you who indulge in it are doing incalculable harm. And if you are poor, learn that "man shall not live by bread alone." Oh, for contentment! Do you know what it is? Let me tell you. Contentment is a blessed angel out of heaven. It comes into your front door and waves its magic wand and the hall looks higher and wider; it touches the pictures on your parlor wall, and they look brighter than anybody else's pictures. It touches your roses, and they look better than your neighbor's roses. It come into your evening meal, and somehow your children look better, and the lamp has a softer glow, and heaven seems to have come down to pity you an evening call.—Dr. Briggs.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER.

MY DEAR CHILDREN:—

A merry greeting to you. I think that we have so much to make us glad, for we are all so pleasantly situated when we might be much worse off. We read the papers every day about so many, many poor people who are without homes, without money, without work and nearly starving to death, and if the present hard times do not change for the better many people will starve and freeze to death during the winter. I am quite sure more of the cousins are in such a sad condition. It is well for us to thank and praise God for his mercy and love toward us.

I am glad to get so many nice letters from you. Now a bunch of letters each week like the one that came in this week would keep the Corner as bright as the smiling faces of the little friends.

The many interesting letter this week make me feel as tho you are still my friends and want to keep up the Corner.

Cordially yours,
UNCLE TANGLE.

CORAPEAKE, N. C., Sept. 1, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I have written two or three times to you and the cousins but have failed to send them, but will send this one if nothing prevents, I know you think I have forgotten you and the cousins but have not. My brothers have been sick, and I have been busy helping papa. We had protracted meeting at Cypress Chapel in July and I was of the number that joined the church. I hope that you and the cousins will pray for me that I may be a better girl. I know I am lively and run on with my fun but I don't mean any harm by it, I think it is better to be lively than to be sad and have nothing to say. Sister is at grandma's and will not be able to write this time, but as there are so many of us I don't guess it makes any difference this time. I attended the marriage of one of my dear Annts last week, it was a beautiful marriage, she stood under and arch of evergreens and white roses and pond lillies and in the center was a lovely marriage bell. I will have to close as I want to send this to the office. Enclosed find half dime. I am as ever,

Your loving niece,
MINNIE H. BRINKLEY.

CORAPEAKE, N. C., Sept. 1, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I have been sick the past week and have not been able to do much work, the Dr. came to see me twice, he said I had the bilious fever. I know one thing I was bad off. I hated to give up s papa was so busy with his fodder but we are nearly through now. One of our Sunday schools had a picnic last Friday evening but I was not able to go, I was very sorry but our good Superintendent sent me a nice piece of office. I enjoyed it lots. I could not go to Sunday school Sunday, I hated it so much. I hope it won't be so any more soon. I love to go to S. S. I guess all the cousins have been busy was the reason they have not written oftener. I feel ashamed it has been so long since I wrote but I hope it won't be so again. We are having rain now, which was greatly needed. I guess I had better close as Buddie wants to write also. Enclosed find five cents for the B. and M. much love to you and all the cousins I am as ever,

Your little nephew,
ALEX BRINKLEY.

HAW RIVER, N. C., Aug. 30, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—As I have not written in sometime I thought I would write again. I am sorry to see so few letter in the Corner; can it be that the cousins have become tired and are going to quit writing? I think Uncle Tangle is very kind to us to allow us space in the paper and I think we should treat him more kindly and write oftener. Let us see if we cannot do better in the future. In second Timothy second chapter and the 14th verse I find the missing words "that they strive not after words to no profit." Am I correct? I will ask the cousins a question: How much was the widow's mite, how much money did she give? Enclosed please find five cents. Love to all.
BETHEL KING.

CORAPEAKE, N. C., Sept 15, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I will try to write again after so long a time but if you know how busy I have been you will excuse me, papa has been nearly all the summer and I had to work all the time. I was sick a week but am nearly well now. There was three of us down at once last week but all of us had the bilious fever. It made me feel so bad I could not go to the picnic. Sisters went and had a nice time, I wanted to go so bad but was not able. I hope our school will have one sometime in this month so I can go. It is in a flourishing condition and I think we ought to have a little something to encourage us children. I had to stay at home last Sunday on account of sickness, I wanted to go so bad. I had the pleasure of hearing some of Elon College young ministers; Messrs Rawls and Peel and Harrell were all at our meeting, they are very smart. Every body spoke well of them. I will have to close hoping you and the cousins are well. Enclosed find five cents. With love to all I remain,
Your nephew,
SAMMIE BRINKLEY

EXHIBIT OF THE OVERMAN WHEEL CO.'S IN THE TRANSPORTATION BUILDING.

[From Illustrated American.]

In Transportation Building.

EXHIBIT OF THE OVERMAN WHEEL COMPANY'S BICYCLES.

In the Transportation Building, devoted to all the devices that save the legs and arms of man from labor and fatigue, there is no department more interesting in its way than the exhibits of the manufacturers of bicycles. The bicycle is as yet largely devoted to the pleasure that induces health by keeping its devotees out of doors, breathing the sweet airs of the country, and gaining vigor of body and strength of limb in the pursuit of pure physical enjoyment. As there are bicycles and bicycles, so there are varying degrees of excellence in the displays made by the various makers of the wheels. The exhibit of the Overman Wheel Company, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., is the most attractive and artistic in this department, combining as it does simplicity, taste, and solid worth.

Its pavilion is a structure in the style of the Italian Renaissance, the pillars and fittings being a rich, solid mahogany, adorned on capital, cornice and frieze with a chaste design in gold. The furnishings are in mahogany and Spanish leather, and the rugs and draperies harmonize in tone with the rich artistic red of the tropic wood. In all there is richness and taste and a severe avoidance of ostentation. The narrow space fitted with plate glass cases that overlooks the hall below follows the same scheme of color and decoration.

But this beautiful pavilion is only the husk; the kernel is the bicycle; and the display of bicycles is ample without being bewildering, and without those aids and arts that serve to make the wheels secondary and subordinate to their decorations.

The Overman Wheel Company, with New England honesty that is the acme of business foresight, exhibits the same machine here that it offers for sale every where. The machine must sell upon its intrinsic merits, upon its strength and durability upon its latent superiority to other wheels, and not upon any special additions that a Fair exhibit may show.

The Overman Company makes only a high grade bicycle, the "Victor" and the "Victoria," and is the only company in the country that makes every detail that enters into the wheel within its own factory, it can guarantee its work as being the very best that American skill, knowledge, and ingenuity have so far produced. Its wheels are made for work and not for exhibition; they are designed to give speed, pleasure, and comfort to the men and women who ride them, and not for the professional expert who rides for records, and for gain. Hence, the Overman Company's wheels are acknowledged to be the best as they are the highest priced in the market; and it is an old saying, and a true one, that the best is always the cheapest. This concern devotes all its money and attention to the constant improvement of its product; and while others are spending money on making records and hiring professional racers, they are putting their cash into the best product and hiring the most skillful hands and heads in the mechanical world.

The pneumatic tire is essential to all wheels to-day, and the tire most durable, most inexpensively and that is most readily repaired, is the one the rider desires to have.

The Overman Company's "Victor" pneumatic tire is a two-inch vulcanized tire, made in two parts. The outer covering, reinforced by canvas, resist pressure and is unharmed by punctures; the inner tube is pure rubber inflated with air. If the inner tube is punctured it can be removed instantly; a duplicate, carried in the saddle bag, can be substituted at once and inflated in a few seconds with the little hand pump in the Overman tool bag, and the wheel is ready for action again in a few minutes after the accident. The duplicate is inserted in the inner portion of the tire, obviating the necessity for removing the rubber perimeter that touches the earth. The whole device is simplicity itself; any rider can manage it, and the mortifying sight of a dismounted rider pushing a disabled wheel over the roads to town is unknown when the wheel used is a "Victor."

And throughout the machine this attention to little details, making a perfect whole, is observed. Fine steel hollow construction, stiffness, solidity, easy running, a nice balancing of parts, a perfect equipoise, the narrow tread of the sprocket axle, avoiding spread, saddle stretch, and fatigue—all combine to produce an ideal wheel.

In a handsome case in the center of the pavilion is a "Victor" bicycle, the Overman machine, beautifully gold plated to show the decorative possibilities of the wheel. Yet this magnificent wheel, for practical purposes, is the same as the simple "Victor" on the ground. Its ivory handles and white enameled saddle and tool bag make this "Flyer" no more serviceable than its more modest looking brother. Here is the "New Racer," a machine weighing only nineteen pounds, with its high built diamond frame and its low saddle post that is built for those who love racing and speed. It bears the same relation to the reliable, serviceable road wheel that the thoroughbred horse does to the steady roadster; it is faster, but it is not more durable than the superb "Victor Flyer" that weighs perhaps ten pounds more.

In the handsome cases next the gallery edge we are shown the integral parts of the machine in all their many processes of manufacture, from the crude metal to the highly polished, nickel plated, completed article. Here we see the steel, back wheel hub in its twenty-three processes; the front wheel hubs, the sprockets, steel spokes, the rims, the saddles and posts and every detail down even to the cute monkeywrench the company turns out. And there is the India rubber from the rude haun made in the primeval forest of the Upper Amazon and marketed in Para, to the smooth, vulcanized pneumatic tire. While one is convinced of the supreme excellence of the "Victor" wheel, he is also impressed with the honesty of the work and the sober earnestness of the makers, to rely upon good work and superior results for public approval, rather than upon things that are outside of the true merits of the wheel. A man knows that he is getting the best of its kind from this sterling New England company and leaves resolved to buy none but the "Victor" wheel, when he goes in for a machine. It is interesting to watch the initiated wheelmen as they stop and examine every detail critically and hear their admiring comments upon it. It does not take them long to recognize and applaud its merits.

The wheels are made in different models for different classes of work. For instance, the "Victor Flyer" is designed for a light, speedy, road wheel and for track work ought to be a favorite in Chicago with its splendid highway. The "Victor D" is a road wheel for all-round work and is fitted with every required detail. The "Victoria" is a handsome bicycle of the "Victor" model, fitted with certain necessary adjuncts, designed for the use of ladies and is a nice piece of work.

We can commend this handsome exhibit to all visitors to the World's Fair, as the bicycle is one of the newest and greatest of modern inventions affecting transportation. It is the largest bicycle exhibit made by any concern that has a display at the Fair.

Turn the Baby Over.

It is not well to lie too long on one side,—especially on the back or the left side. Lying on the right side enables the contents of the stomach to pass out and on. Babies are not always able to turn themselves and need some help.

"It is very easy to turn babies over without waking them, and it tends to prolong their naps. Take a firm hold of the clothing near the waist and a little below, and roll the baby gently over. It will not waken the lightest of the little sleepers if properly done, and then it is delightful to see them stretch a little and cuddle down in the new position as though appreciating the change. When they are unable to turn themselves, they get cramped after sleeping an hour in one position, and that wakens them and makes them irritable. If mothers of cross babies will try this plan they will find it helps." Then if you let the baby sleep with its head to the north it may rest more quietly than in another position.—Selected.

"Gentlemen, you do not use your faculties of observation," said an old professor, addressing his class. Here he pushed forward a gallipot containing a chemical of exceedingly offensive smell. "When I was a student," he continued, "I used my sense of taste;" and, with that, he dipped his finger into the gallipot, and then put his finger into his mouth. "Taste it, gentlemen, taste it," said the professor; "and exercise your perceptive faculties." The gallipot was pushed toward the reluctant class. One by one, the students resolutely dipped their fingers into the concoction, and with many a wry face sucked the abomination from their fingers. "Gentlemen, gentlemen," said the professor, "I must repeat that you do not use your faculties of observation; for, if you had looked more closely at what I was doing, you would have seen that the finger which I put in my mouth was not the finger I dipped in the gallipot."—Traveler's Record.

Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24, '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. MeAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N. C., says: "I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. I now hold three policies in this company. My dividends are much larger than in other companies in which I carry insurance. The affairs of the company are safely and conservatively managed; they pay promptly and are exceedingly fair and liberal in their dealings with their policy-holders."

Mr. R. B. Raney, Raleigh, N. C., under date of April 1, '93, says: "I have held a policy in the Northwestern for a number of years, and am satisfied it has no superior."

A Good Degree.

The next degree established for reachers should be the degree of B. B.—back bone. Baptist preachers, of all others, need it to aid them in stemming the great and increasing tide that is flowing back toward Rome; and all preachers need it to strengthen them for the conflict with the liquor traffic which hangs crape on more doors this year of our Lord than in any year of the history of the human race. God help us all to be men—sure enough men.—Baptist Standard.

The Effect of Alcohol on the System.

The immediate effect of a moderate amount of alcohol is a feeling of increased vigor. Ideas are increased in quickness, but lose in concentration. The system soon demands the stimulant more frequently. Abstinence is followed by suffering. The hand loses its steadiness, the brain its clearness. Insomnia adds to the drain on nervous forces, and the patient instinctively resorts for relief to the poison which is the direct cause of his condition. In time these symptoms become intensified, and evidences of chronic degenerations manifest themselves. Scarcely an organ in the body is exempt. Alcohol in the stomach retards digestion by paralyzing terminal nerves and by a chemical action on the pepsin of the gastric juice, produces changes in the secretions of the liver, and vitiates the processes throughout the whole alimentary tract, by causing a perverted action of the sympathetic nervous system. Partially-digested food passing from the stomach to the intestines becomes subjected to abnormal fermentations. As a result, poisonous products designated by modern chemists as ptomaines and leucocaines are formed. Elimination is retarded by alcohol; consequently these products are absorbed into the system and an auto-poisoning results. The lungs and skin undertake to assist in relieving the system of effete material, as shown by the peculiarly disagreeable odor of breath and perspiration persisting for days after cessation from the use of alcohol. These patients will be found to suffer from chronic catarrh of most of the mucous membranes, notably the stomach, and chronic liver and kidney changes leading to cirrhosis and Bright's disease. Degeneration and resultant weakening of the walls of blood vessels predispose to rupture (usually in the brain,) producing apoplexy.—Dr. E. F. Arnold, in North American Review.

The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Degechamp, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Parasols" and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Berkley News.

DEAR SUN:—I am glad to write you this time, because I am always glad to tell good news. I have just passed through two revival services. One at Holland and one at Union, and am glad to report success at both points. Bro. R. H. Holland has informed you about the success at Holland when 52 souls were made to rejoice. We had a glorious meeting.

At Union I labored alone until Thursday, when dear Bro. Kitchen came to the rescue and preached for me. We had a good meeting there. The church was revived, and the Lord blessed our efforts with 31 precious souls.

At Holland, Bro. H. H. Butler did the preaching and gave us some grand sermons. Bros. Rawls, Newman and J. H. Jones assisted in the work.

I spent three weeks among the people of that section the last week being spent in visiting. I enjoyed my stay very much indeed.

After my arrival home Bro. Eli Daughtry kindly remembered me and my fondness for fruit and sent me a barrel of fruit and vegetables. This is the second time this dear brother has so kindly remembered me, and I appreciate his kindness, and trust God will abundantly bless him.

We had the pleasure of several visitors at Holland on Sunday. Bro. Joseph Daughtry from Roanoke was on a visit home and we were glad to grasp his hand again. Miss India Wright and my sister Viola Demarest were up from Berkley to spend a few hours with Miss Myrtie Daughtry before her absence to Elon College.

We were rejoiced to see so many baptized and among them six strong young men. It causes rejoicing to see young men coming out on the Lord's side.

We have a great deal to be thankful for and rejoice to know the Lord is our helper.

From Southern Churchman,

The exhibit of the official statistics of the German Empire shows that there are 56,563 schools, pupils 7,025,688, teachers 120,032, of whom 13,750 are women. The figures for Prussia are, schools 34,742, pupils 4,916,476 and teachers 70,767, 8,484 being women. In the entire Empire the scholars are 16 03 per cent of the population; in Prussia 16 54. In Germany outside of Prussia there is one teacher to every 61 pupils; in Prussia one to every 70. These teachers receive from $150 to $500 a year. The annual cost of educating a child is in Prussia $7.14; throughout the rest of the Empire $7.68.

A remarkable fact is given in the papers in connection with the universities of Germany. They turn out so many highly educated men that there is no place for them; so that some eminent professors in Germany have sent out a circular to Germans in all parts of the world asking the recipients whether employment in their places of residence can be found for educated German teacher, physicians, engineers, lawyers, ministers and druggists. This circular is a confession that the German universities are graduating far more educated young men than the country's professions can absorb.

Bishop Turner, of the African M. E. Church, has published an announcement preparatory to a call which he will make for a national convention of colored to be held at Cincinnati with a view to general emigration to Africa. His people, he says, are as a race "being decimated in this country by mobs, lynchers and fire-fiends." Here, he says, the negroes are daily put to death "in the most fiendish manner known in the history of the world, and we are being disgraced by quietly and cowardly submitting to it." The Bishop adds:

"I do not believe there is any manhood future in this country for the negro, and that his future existence, to say nothing of his future happiness, will depend upon his nationalization. The negro cannot remain here in his present condition and be a man. Nor will it be possible to remain here a great while, for with the present state of things his extermination is only a question of time."

As the census reports show the negro race in the United States is increasing rapidly possibly he is mistaken in saying they are being "decimated." As we have said before, we fear Africa is no place for the negroes of this country.

Father Green, a Roman Catholic priest, in the Church Advocate takes upon him to deny some of Bishop Penick's statistics which he gathered from the last census reports. The Bishop remarked:

"On June 1, 1890, were in prison charged with homicide in the entire country 7,386 people, of these 2,739 were negroes. Here we see that about one-ninth of the population are negroes, and they furnish one-third of the homicides of the entire country."

"I deny the 'one third,'" says Father Green, "and affirm that the whole sentence of which it is a part is misleading, a calamity on our negro population and a misquotation from the census of 1890. True, the opening sentence is properly quoted from 'Bulletin No. 182,' but does it justify the sweeping conclusion of the other? The Bulletin is a book of seventy-five pages dealing only with persons charged with crime and actually under arrest. What about the unarrested? What about the villains at large? What about the lynchers who go in squadrons to string up one poor wretch and then riddle his carcass with bullets? Not a syllable!"

But this is not to deny; Bishop Penick could not tell the number of villains in the United States; only those under arrest; and of those in this condition he gives the census statistics—which are very sad; one-third of the arrested homicides are negroes."

After Breakfast.

To purify, vitalize and enrich the blood, and give nerve, bodily and digestive strength, take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Continue the medicine after every meal for a month or two and you will feel "like a new man." The merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla is proven by its thousands of wonderful cures. Why don't you try it?

Suffolk Letter.

It is an open question as to whether "clergymen" should have vacations or be absent from their work. My congregation believes in it and went so far this year as to present me with a purse of $76 60 with a request to attend the "World's Fair" which I did in August remaining there eleven days. My own opinion is, "That all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and we want no "dull boys" in the pulpit. If the minister really works, he needs the rest. If he teaches truly he needs to refresh himself by larger observations, by travel, by a deeper study of human society in new fields, by attending religious meetings beyond the sphere of his own neighborhood. Chicago this year furnishes scope for all these at a minimum cost. I think every minister who can ought to attend. I think a visit there is equivalent to a year's travel in foreign lands. The history of the human race, their progress in sciences and the mechanic and fine arts, the natural products and life of many nations, their languages and religions, all appear in classified groups for comparative study. The architecture of the fair buildings and the landscape gardening of the grounds are on such a magnificent scale as to amuse and please. No age or nation has put so much within observation and study of the common people and for so little cost. Foreign life is represented in German, Irish, Japanese, etc., villages as well as by national buildings containing the products and art and people of those lands. You may go to Egypt in the streets of Cairo or to Labrador in the Esquimaux village. Farms and mines and mills and factories and stores and art galleries all come before you full of instruction and delight. The Electricity building is a vast exhibition of indescribable wonders, while in the building of "Fine Arts" Italy and Germany, France and Russia, England and the United States, Sweden and Spain, Mexico and Japan, and many other nations furnish statuary and paintings from the best artists and the best times. A pleasing feature in this great gallery of sculpture and painting is to see so many pictures in marble or in color of Christ. You may see Him in the garden, on the cross, after the Crucifixion, at the well saving the world, blessing little children, in all those attitudes that show His love and compassion for us. What struck me was the unity of the art conceptions which different nations have had of Christ. I wish there could be a similar unity in the creeds of Christendom.

I want to say before closing that the behavior of the great multitudes at the Fair deserves praise. I have never seen so good. I saw only one man drunk while there and he was on his feet. The order, the safety, the freedom from fakirs, etc., surpasses a county or State Fair. I saw no place within the grounds where any lady might not go alone with propriety, and no place where you did not get the worth of the prices for which you paid. I several times let my little daughter, Bessie, go into places, where there was charge, while I remained outside.

I attended four preaching services while there and at one of these heard John McNeil, D. D., who used to be at Regent Square, London. The impressions of my trip are a keener sense of my own littleness, a larger respect for mankind, a deeper faith in Christianity, and wider hope that the nations are getting closer, and that the banner of Christ will one day be followed by them all.

Leaves from My Note Book.

"That is what we will call them—these notes I am about to undertake to write each week I mean.

Just why we will call them that well for liberty's sake I suppose. In other words Mr. Editor, in place of "Harvard Note" of former days, your correspondent will endeavor from week to week to send in a few items of some kind which may have impressed him as being of sufficient importance to be jotted down in his note book. And just here (by way of parenthesis) I hope it will not be counted out of place to remark that to that vast host of the Sun's readers who may deem these "Leaves" out of place here and not worth the reading I would most humbly and beseechingly say: Do not read them, don't even notice or think about them—just pass them by without a glance or thought. If on the other hand there be those who from time to time may peruse these "leaves", we shall hope that these will either find something in them to approve or excuse them in their defects because of profession of piety and purity of purpose that underlie and prompt the writings and publishings of these leaves. And even now as I begin once more my weekly notes to the Sun, I am reminded that the summer vacation is over and the year's work is again upon us. Many, varied and lasting have been the changes of events and vicissitudes of fortune and, may I say, fate which have taken place since the summer vacation came upon us. All of course feel rested, full of life and vigorous for the tasks that now lie before us. Many have been the scenes of pleasure and "gleeful gayety" through which some and may be all have past during these weeks of rest and pleasure seeking. But even in the midst of these, messages of sorrow and tidings of sadness have come to some of us almost unawares and without expectation or preparation for the shock. It was only the other day and the writer's half sister and a good sweet and lovely sister was she, a strong, healthy girl of seventeen, was cut down in the very bloom of maidenhood and the spirit called home to the God who gave it. Alma was an amiable and loving sister, an obedient and affectionate daughter and a faithful and devout member of the church. Before her death she expressed herself as being willing to go and perfectly resigned to Christ and His keeping. Thus one by one we see our relations and friends and loved ones cut down by our side. Frequently with but little warning some are called from time to eternity. Whose time it will be next—well kind reader you do not know, nor I. God helps us to be ready when that summons shall come.

God's Cure for Worrying.

On every side we meet overloaded people, and each one thinks his burden is the biggest. One is worrying about his health, and another about his diminishing income, and another about her sick child, another about her children yet unconverted; and so each man or woman that has a worry of some sort goes staggering along under it. In the mean time a loving and omnipotent Father says to every one of them, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord and he shall sustain thee." As if this one offer were not enough, the Holy Spirit repeats it again in the New Testament: "Casting all your anxieties upon him, for he careth for you." This is the more accurate rendering in the Revised Version; because the word "care" does not signify here wise forethought for the future, but that soul-harassing thing called "worry." The reason given for rolling our worries over upon God is very tender and touching. "He careth for you" means that he takes an interest in you—he has you on his heart! Beautiful and wonderful thought! It is the same idea which the Psalmist had in his mind when he declares that the Lord telleth the number of the stars, and yet he healeth the broken in heart and biudeth up their wounds.

He is the one who says, "My child, don't carry that burden." The infinite ruler of the universe, who is wise counsel and wonderful in working; the God who guarded the infant Moses in his basket of rushes; who sent his messenger birds to Elijah by the brook Cherith; who quieted Daniel among the ravenous beast and calmed Paul in the raging tempest,—he it is who says to us, "Roll your anxieties over on me, for I have you on my heart." Yet how many of us there are who hug our troubles and say to God, "No we won't let anybody carry these troubles but ourselves." What fools we are! Just imagine a weary, foot-sore traveler tugging along with his pack in a hot July day. A wagon comes up, and the kind-hearted owner calls out, "Friend, you look tired. Toss that pack into my wagon." But the wayfarer, eyeing him suspiciously, mutters to himself, "Perhaps he wants to steal it," or else he sullenly replies, "I am obliged to you, sir, but I can carry my own luggage." The folly of such conduct is equal to that of the man who should check his trunk through to Chicago and then run into the baggage car every hour to see if his trunk is safe. We do not hesitate to trust our own valuable property to railway officials and expressmen, and laugh at the folly of those who refuse to do it; and yet we repeat a worse folly towards our all-wise and loving God. Ob, fools, and slow of heart to believe!

From beginning to end a Christian life is a life of faith. The word "trust" is the key-word of the Old Testament theology, and the word "believe" is the key-word in the New. They both mean the same thing. Jesus Christ never agrees to bear the sinner's sins until the sinner is penitent and has willingly accepted him as his substitute and burden-bearer. When your heavenly Father says to us, "Give me your load, trust me; what you cannot do, I will do for you," he expects us to take him at his word. He never consents to carry our burdens unless we entrust them to him. Worry is blind, but God sees the coming relief just ahead. Worry is impatient; but the patient God bids us wait and see. Worry complains of the loads; but God's offer is to lighten them by putting himself, as it were, into our souls and under the loads. He then becomes our strength—a strength equal to the day. This is a supernatural work. This is what is meant by "My grace is sufficient for you." This is the result of having Jesus Christ dwelling in our souls as a light to cheer and a power to sustain. "Follow me" implies that Christ leads us at every step, and he never means to lead us over a precipice or leave us in the lurch.

Such an actual and constant trust is the only real antidote to worry. The more entirely and simply and implicitly we trust, the quieter we become. As the baby drops over upon mother's bosom into sweet repose, so God giveth his beloved sleep. Not sleep from work, but sleep from worry. I have always found that legitimate work is strengthening to body, brain and heart; our devotions. Nearly the whole magnificent thirty-seventh Psalm is aimed against the sin of fretting. Paul, the giant worker who laid the foundations of Christ's kingdom from Jerusalem to Rome, and who had the oversight "of all the churches," never seems to have chafed himself with a moment's worry. He warned sinners "with tears," but they were such tender tears as Jesus shed over a guilty city. "Be anxious for the nothing, brethren!" was his calm counsel to his comrades, for he knew whom he believed.

And now if our blessed Master has our work under his charge, our parishes, our mission enterprises, our S. S. classes upon his divine heart, why should we worry? The most fervent desire to save souls must be tempered with trust in him who alone can save a soul. Don't begin the year's work with loading a ton of anxieties on your back. If God permits you and me to labor for him in vain, it is his loss more than ours. If Jesus Christ is one board of our little boats why should we be running about in distress lest the vessel sink? Duties belong to us; results belong to him. Many an one who reads these lines has plenty of loads to bear. Don't be surprised; they belong to human life; some of them are put on you to make your sinews strong. It is the weak and wicked worry over the future that cuts your sinews. Remember that God never promises anything more than grace sufficient for the hour and strength equal to the day. God's love will outlast all your to-morrows; roll your anxieties over on that love; it will cure all your worry.—Dr. Cuyler, in the New York Evangelist.

"Conscience-Struck."

BY REV. J. K. WILSON.

We saw a weather-vane the other day that seemed to have a mind of its own in regard to the direction from which the wind was blowing, or, at least, ought to blow. While its neighbors were swinging merrily in the shifting breezes, pointing generally toward the west, this one stretched its finger out obstinately and inflexibly toward the east. There it remained, day and night, in storm and calm, always pointing in the same direction.

Well, was the wind always east in that particular spot? Not a bit of it. It blew west, and east, and north, and south, and other vanes felt it, and swung around, and told the truth about it. This recalcitrant vane was stuck, that was all. It had got rusty, or out of balance in some way, until it had become almost impossible for it to move. Nothing short of a cyclone would have effected it. It was good for nothing as a weather-vane until it had been taken down, and made over, and carefully put in place again.

Now, on general principles we concede at once that a weather-vane is one of the poorest possible symbols of conscience; and yet, as we looked at this particular vane, somehow it suggested the manner of the working—or, rather, the not working—of what some men call conscience. You know there are lots of people whose consciences give them no trouble at all. They can do a great many things that most of us are a little shy of; and when remonstrated with, they reply, "Why, I don't think there is any harm in these things. I am very careful to go by my conscience, and my conscience doesn't condemn me." Or, again, there is the persistent neglect of what appears to others very manifest duty. Still is conscience urged; "When my conscience tells me that I ought to do this or that, I'll do it; but my conscience hasn't spoken on the subject yet."

And so it goes, until the question arises, Isn't it just possible for one's conscience to get stuck, like that unruly weather vane? May it not so long record the blowing of the winds of inclination as to be absolutely untrustworthy in regard to those which come from any other quarter? May not what we sometimes pride ourselves upon as steadfastness be more truthfully defined as stuckfastness? And isn't it a good thing for young Christians, and for older Christians, too, for that matter, to take care to see that conscience is in good working order before they venture to trust simplicity in its decisions?—Golden Rule.

"Bad Copy."

"I've read," said an editor to a writer in the New York Times, "hundreds of rolled manuscripts, and I never yet have found one I cared to print. I have decided that the stupidity which rolls a manuscript cannot produce anything worth reading." A rolled manuscript is a desperate thing, but there is another that is almost worse—the one that comes to you with the last page on top and the first at the bottom. A manuscript was once sent to me arranged in this careless manner. There were five or six hundred pages of it. Do you know what I did with it? I sent it back to the author with a note in which I advised him before he sent that manuscript farther on its travels to show sufficient interest in it to arrange the pages properly. I hope for his sake that he acted upon my advice. If he did not I doubt that his tale ever got a hearing. Life is too short for the important thing to be done as they should be, and it never could be long enough for one not only to do his own work properly, but to rectify the careless work of others. A rolled manuscript shows a thoughtless writer, but a manuscript arranged backwards a carelessness that is insulting to the person to whom it is sent, and argues ill for the intelligence of the writer. An attractive looking manuscript goes along way towards winning the favor of the reader. Even if refused it is refused with genuine regret; but a reader is only too glad to find the carelessly prepared manuscript as worthless as st looks.—The Critic.

REV. J. MAPLE, D.D.

And Jesus answering said, were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine? Luke 17:17.

Christ was on his way to Jerusalem, and in a part of the country where he had but few friends; but his fame, as a great healer of disease, had preceded him. This attracted many to hear him, and others who were diseased came to him hoping to be healed. He was traveling in an unusual road to Jerusalem, and he may have went this way just to meet and heal these ten lepers persons; for he came from heaven to earth to seek and to save the lost.

There is much more in the incidents that occurred in the history of Christ than appears on the surface. There is a deep spiritual meaning in them, and they illustrate the work of Christ as the Saviour of sinners.

I. These men stood afar off.

Leprosy was regarded in the law as the outward symbol of sin in its deepest malignity—of sin as involving separation from God; not of spiritual sickness only, but of spiritual death, since separation from the fountain of life involves death. Hence those who had it were required to keep aloof from the healthy. This represents the separation of the sinner from God. He is far from God in thought, feeling, desire, purpose, and life. As Isaiah said to Israel, "your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins have hid his face from you, that he will not hear." Nations are separated by seas, rivers, mountains, but most of all, by languages, and these are an evidence of sin. Churches are separated by forms, ceremonies, and wrangles. These are all born of sin. Individuals are separated by hatred, and fear of each other. This is the fruit of sin.

Though these lepers stood afar off they were within hearing distance of Christ. "They lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us." They were not without hope. Thus it is with us. There is the most incurable of diseases, yet they had hope in Christ, and looked to him for deliverance. Thus may we however sinful we may be. Christ came to save sinners, and he is always in hearing distance.

II. This was a mixed company of men. There were nine Jews and one Samaritan, and between the Jews and Samaritans there was the bitterest of religious animosity. They had no dealings with each other. What caused these men to forget these bitter feelings, and dwell together in peace? Common misery. Illwill, pride, exclusiveness, old controversies were all forgotten in their common danger and sorrow. Men are made to forget in judgment what they will not forget in love. A consciousness of common danger buries all disputes. When the delegates from America were returning from the world's first Christian convention held in London England they encountered a terrible storm, and the captain of their vessel informed them that the probabilities were they would all go to the bottom of the ocean. There were on board the ship Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Lutherans, and other different denominations. What did they do? Go to discussing their differences on doctrine and forms and ceremonies? No, a sense of common danger banished all these things from their minds, and they thought only of the common salvation that is in Christ. Lifted above all narrow prejudices they united in observing the Lord's supper.

It is a sad thing that there is a feeling among Christians that requires judgments to remove it.

III. The prayers of these lepers.

"Jesus, master, have mercy on us." There is no distance from which sin can separate us from God but what prayer can span it. What a blessing this is. —

The prayer of these men shows that they realized their danger. No man prays for deliverance unless he feels that he is in danger. A man does not call a physician until he is conscious of his need of help.

The worse the bodily disease the more a man feels it, but the worse the spiritual disease the less he feels it. The worst spiritual condition is when a man says, "I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that he is wretched, and miserable and poor, and blind, and naked."

These men acknowledged the authority of Christ. "Jesus, Master." Those who would receive help from Christ must accept him not only as a Saviour, but also as Lord and Master; and must bow to his authority. "All men should honor the Son, even as they honor the Father." "At the name of Jesus every knee should bow." If we receive him as Master then he will be Jesus to us; and not otherwise.

These men did not specify in what particular way they should be cured, but left this with Christ. We can safely commit all to his mercy. This will never fail, and he knows what is best for us. One cause of trouble with many is that they have laid down the way in which God must come to them, and if he does not save them in this way they think that he has not come to them at all. This was the trouble with Naaman. 2 Kings 5:10-14. Men can be persuaded to do some great thing, go on a long journey, sleep on spikes or nettles, or whip themselves, and fast long, rather than give up some cherished lust.

IV. Christ's Command. "He said unto them, go shew yourselves unto the priests." Leperous persons went to the priest not to be cured, but for them to determine whether they were cured or not. Thus Christ sending those men to the priest implied that he would heal them, and their going showed considerable faith in him. They took his simple word, and so must we. When the individual leper came to Christ he cured him first, and then sent him to the priest; but here he sends the men first to the priest. He did not cure all in the same way, nor give all the same command. He adopted his methods and direction to the condition of the patient. He does not awaken all men to a consciousness of their sinfulness and need of salvation in the same way, and by the same means. One is awakened by the preaching of the gospel, another by silent meditation, sickness, reading the Scriptures, or the death of a friend. God deals with the individual as his condition requires. Here is where many make a mistake. One judges all by his own experience, and they must be converted just as he was or the work is not genuine. Another judges his experience by some one else's experience, and if it is not the same he thinks he has not experienced religion. Both are wrong. We should be guided by the teaching of the Scriptures on this question, and not by any one's experience.

These men obeyed at once. They did not wait for more light, or until they were healed, or to enquire what use there was in starting off in that way; but went at once. They found the cure by obeying. We should follow their example. The commands of Christ are two-thirds promises. This command embraced the promise of a cure.

The experience of these men was marvelous. Christ commanded them to go to the priest, and immediately they started. They did not know just what it meant, nor how it would work; but they trusted in the wisdom, love and power of Christ. As they were walking all at once they became conscious that they were cured. Their sores were all gone, the sores were healed, their flesh was healthy, their nerves had regained, their elasticity, their muscles, their strength, their steps were firm, the blood flowed free through their veins, and every nerve in them tingled with new life. They were new men physically. It was wonderful.

From this narrative we learn two things. 1. The marvellous power of Christ. He simply said, "go shew yourselves unto the priest," and as they went he regenerated their physical nature by the exercise of his mighty power. They saw and heard nothing, but experienced a complete cure. This was wrought by the silent exercise of his power. He is the same Saviour still. 2. We may expect God to meet us with blessings when walking in the path of duty. These men found the blessing in obeying Christ. "Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the word, this man shall be blessed in his deed." Daniel walked in the path of obedience, and it led him into the lion's den; but there he met the angel of the Lord. The three Hebrew young men obeyed God, and obedience led them into the furnace of fire; but there they met the Son of God.

V. The conduct of these men after they were healed. The nine Jews went about their business, and paid no attention to Christ who had healed them. They thought not of the great obligations that they were under to him. He had saved them from a terrible death, and made life a blessing to them instead of an awful curse; but they thought only of self and the pleasures of this life, and there was not enough manliness about them to return and thank him. These men are representative characters. How often men in danger pray for deliverance, and when saved go right on in their old sinful life. How shameful.

The Samaritan came back to Christ as soon as he was conscious that he was healed. "He turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God. And fell down on his face at his feet, giving thanks." He realized that his wonderful cure was from God. "He glorified God." He told all what God had done for him, for his heart was full of gratitude and glowed with love. Thus it is with the saved soul. David said, "Come and hear all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul."

This Samaritan recognized Christ as the divine agent through whom he had been so richly blessed. "He fell on his face at his feet, giving him thanks." Thus it is with the converted man. He realizes that it is through Christ that he has been saved, and his heart goes out in gratitude to him. Rejoicing in his victory over the powers of darkness and the fear of death he exclaims with Paul. "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

This man was a gentile, and the last one of the ten we would have expected to return and thank Christ, we would naturally expect the nine Jews to do this, for they had the law and prophets; and were the professed servants of God, but they did not come back. How often is this the case! Those from whom we have the right to expect the most because of their superior advantages we often receive the least, and those from whom we expect the least often do the best.

Christ noticed this man, and distinguished him with a new blessing "He said unto him, Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole." Now he could return to his family, and enjoy the blessings of his home. He could show them that he was cured. So must the converted man go into society, and show by his life that he has been cured of his spiritual leprosy.

REMARKS.

1. It is possible to receive temporal blessings, and not spiritual. These nine Jews were greatly blessed in their bodies, but not in their souls. Their bodies were healed, but the spiritual leprosy remained unhealed. This was their own fault. Thus a man may have good physical health, enjoy great temporal blessings; and yet be cursed with the spiritual leprosy.

2. Whatever reason and conscience tell you is right you must not hesitate to do even if many do oppose it. Nine of the ten leperous persons who were healed turned their backs on Christ, and went on in their old sinful life; but this had no effect on the noble hearted Samaritan. He obeyed his conviction of duty, and manfully acknowledged his obligations to Christ. He was a manly Christian man.

3. Only one of the ten met the approbation of Christ. Why? Sinner, let your own reason, judgment, and conscience answer this question.

A Safe Religion.

There is nothing indefinite about the teaching of Jesus of Nazareth as to a safe religion. It is all comprehended in the words purity and love, and all is essentially love. A love of God to do his whole will in action and thought, comprises the whole duty of man. To love God means to keep his commandments, and the safe and sure religion, which offereth and giveth us eternal life is based on that. It is very significant that Christ never spoke of religion apart from the daily life, from the ordinary actions of man. The sacred and the secular are combined without difference. To render unto Caesar his dues does not demand a separation of the things of God from the things of man. A daily application of spiritual laws is in obedience to the divine command, while a blind following of creeds and ceremonies, and a worship of church discipline and dogmas is a following after man. When Christ spoke of the "Kingdom of Heaven," he had no reference to a separation of the temporal from the spiritual, but only to the spirit and quality of the blessed truths in the general life of man. Motive, not appearance is the demand of the law. To those who come to the master for advice about eternal life, He gave advice not about repairing to the temple for worship or going through long and imposing ceremonies, but to "love God and keep his commandments," "This do, love God; this do and thou shalt live."

Christ taught no theology, he spent his time in giving plain instructions. The articles of confession, the Trinity, he stopped not to discuss, but taught the great doctrine of repentance and faith. The theologians place little stress upon the things that are to be done toward God and man, but rather upon the duties relative to self.

The church often opens the doors to a belief in creeds and dogmas, the form of which Christ proclaim against. It is not a belief in church, a dependence upon baptism and Communion that should give us assurance, but "to do the will of our Father which is in heaven." In these days when ritualism and formalism, when show and display, when machinery and custom are becoming masters of the church there is a great need for the simple story of the cross, which is the basis of the only safe religion. Into Baptist churches the cold and chilly form of ceremony is stalking, whose wings are soared to overshadow the true worship of God. Loyalty to creed, to denomination, to church, to pastor, to people, availeth nothing with God, without it be the direct result of the love of God. Loyalty to God demands a worship pleasing unto God rather than men.

The safe religion must grapple successfully with the low and vicious, it must soften the outcast and call back the wanderer. It was to sinners, open sinners, that Jesus addressed himself chiefly. Ministering unto the saints is secondary to the conversion of souls. Purity and love at the centre of life is the safe religion. Have you it? Repentance and righteousness! Toward God repentance, toward man righteousness. To be safe in religion we must have love as to motive for all things, and what are the fruits of love: charity, meekness, joy, temperance, longsuffering, gentleness, faith. Have you them? If so do you not feel the all pervading safety of your religion? "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren."

When we have passed from death unto life our religion is safe and we will in eternity be "Safe in the arms of Jesus, Safe on his gentle breast."

What a comfort to feel our safety; when storms rage about us and the tempests are high we take refuge in places builded for protection, and when the stormy winds of temptation beat upon our craft let us take refuge in the care of God wherein we are safe through faith in Him. Make safe your boat; anchor on the promises of God and do his will in all things pleasing Him rather than man, and safety shall attend your step. The safe religion is in the love of God.—North Carolina Baptist.

INDEPENDENT.

In times of financial stress the prominent thought with almost every one is how to keep money, not how to use it. In truth, these are the very times when it is most important that whatever money people possess should be used rightly. At present the difficulty is not so much the absolute lack of money as the fear that people have with regard to its use. The tendency is to hoard rather than to spend, on the part of those who have not, there is an increasing desire to seize by force, if necessary, what agitators have been in the habit of telling them is their own. The trouble, undoubtedly, goes back. During past years had employers and employed been wiser in the use of their money they would not now be so anxious, the first about keeping it, the others about getting it. Still the past is past, and we have to do with the present condition.

The need that naturally comes to the front is that of charity. We find calls on every hand for assistance to the poor. Is this assistance wise? It is the fashion with many to decry almsgiving as really doing more harm than good by encouraging pauperism. It is really sacrificing suffering individuals to a general theory of the public good. We suspect that the French communist, had he been in actual want, would have been only too glad of his host's charity. It is undoubtedly true that much apparent poverty is really only blatant beggary. According to the daily papers, when a few weeks since, the savings banks of this city announced their requirement of a considerable notice for the withdrawal of large sums by depositors, a number of persons who were availing themselves of a free-loup kitchen quietly left, only to reappear in the line of these same large depositors. Such instances discourage those who are really desirous of helping, yet it is at the same time true that the agent of benevolent societies, such as the Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor, and the Charity Organization Society, both of which have been recently noticed in our columns, announce that there is already much suffering and that there will be more. So long as we have well-known and trustworthy organizations, thoroughly equipped for the wise distribution of alms, no better use can be made of the money of the rich, already more than sufficient for their immediate needs, than to see that these are enabled to succor the sick and starving. But it is not charitable organizations alone that call for help. Our home and foreign missionary societies are urgent.

But it is not only the rich to whom this question comes home very closely. The poor, and especially that great class of people who, hitherto comfortable, now find want if not poverty staring them in the face, find it most pertinent. We are tempted sometimes to think that with our talk about independence there is less real independence of character in this country than in many others. How many there are who actually lack the courage to say, in regard to some proposed expense, "I cannot afford it!" One family must make as much of a show as their neighbors, notwithstanding the fact of an income less than half as large. Those who have met with financial losses cannot bring themselves to acknowledge it by a change in their manner of life, but will scrimp in secret and deny themselves needed food for body, mind and soul, in order that they may appear to live as well as formerly. There is no disgrace in economy. Disgrace is rather with those who with false pride seek to deceive their fellow-men. The subject is naturally capable of infinite applications.

Generating Fools.

'Tis said: "It takes a smart man to act the fool." There is a man going here and there through the country who, by his example, is generating fools. But it takes more than example to make a first-class fool. There must be some native talent. This man's fools are none of them first-class; very few are even second or third-class. Most of them will barely measure up to fourth-class. No reputable circus would employ them. They could scarcely get positions in even one-horse sideshows.

"It takes a smart man to act the fool." Yes, and a smarter one to know where and when not to act the fool. Not long since I heard a preacher attempt "the fool" in his pulpit. Now, I am aware that there are some first-class pulpit fools who could at any time get a job in the leading shows of our country. But this brother did a poor job. He was evidently not more than a fourth-rate fool. Besides he lacked—what all pulpit fools lack—sense enough to know that the pulpit is not the place for such things.

I know a sensible young preacher who was growing in power and usefulness. A pressure was brought to bear upon him to attempt the "fool." He was not a "natural-born fool," nor was he able to acquire the faculty for acting the fool. Hence his efforts appeared silly. But his friends and his Church continue to pat him on the back and urge him on.

If I am any judge he will never make a fool. He would have made a solid, sensible preacher of the gospel; but I fear attempting the fool has ruined him as a preacher of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ.

I would that the next General Conference would hire all our fools out to the circuses until their foolishness is all spent. For when we want our families—our children—to hear such things it would be far better to take them to the circus than to the church to hear them.

I am not an advocate of the circus, but my judgment is that the clownish pulpit is as demoralizing as the circus.—Writer in Nash. Christian Advocate

Is it Loose or Christ-Like?

HERALD OF GOSPEL LIBERTY.

It is often said against a broad fellowship, such as that of the Christians, that it is loose and tends to encourage laxity of opinion. It is frequently asked, with a lift of the eyebrow that betokens entire assurance and a part of the interlocutor: "What sort of a church would that be in which all kinds of opinions were tolerated—Baptists' and Pedobaptist', Friends' and Swedenborgians', Methodists' and Episcopalians', Arminians' and Calvinists', Unitarians' and Trinitarians?" The question is always put as if it carried some irrefutable logic in it.

One might reply by saying that kind of a church would be very similar in its fellowship to the heaven where all these various theorists must meet by and by. We do not suppose that any denomination is vain glorious enough to imagine that it has an exclusive privilege in the good and beauty of paradise. Baptists must meet Pedobaptist there, and the Arminian must be neighborly to the Calvinist.

Or one might reply by saying that if the Friend is good enough company for the Master, we fail to see why the Baptist and the Presbyterian should exclude him from their fellowship. Are they wiser and better than their Lord? Or do they hold that the Friend is not within the pale of Christ's sympathetic companionship?

This whole subject resolves itself into the question. How wide and inclusive is the Church of Christ? If it includes all that love the Lord, whether they are in this or that denomination, then no one can be accused of looseness who proposes for himself and for every other Christian a basis of church affiliation that shall embrace all of these. How wide is the kingdom of heaven? That is the question. Whoever stands on a foundation narrower than it must explain by whose authority he shuts out any of the children of God. If he admits that Christ includes the Friend, then he must explain why he is not on a foundation as broad as Christ's is.

It may be said that those that are similar in thought and practice have a right to band themselves together as a church and to protect themselves from innovations which might destroy the unity of their purpose and disintegrate them. But there is precisely the point at issue. That idea justifies sectarianism, and, logically carried out, would divide the Church, till no two in it would be found in the same organization. It means individualism run to the extreme. The union of the Church, for which the Master prayed, becomes, in view of such a theory, as phantasmagoric as a midsummer night's dream.

No one has a right to be narrower than the Master was. No one has a right to cast upon other Christians the odium of a suspicion of their credentials Christ-ward. The only logical escape for the sectarian is for him to deny that those outside of his sect are Christians. He who does this will find himself some day as lonely as the ghost of Ishmael.

Forgiveness.

A street boy was run over several weeks ago by a heavy wagon in New York city. He was in the gutter in the act of stooping, and did not see the approaching team. Another game, who had been taunting him, ran away when the accident happened. The injured boy was taken to the nearest hospital, where he was found to be fatally hurt.

After he had been in the hospital a few days a small boy, as ragged and friendless as himself, called to ask about him and to leave an orange for the injured lad. The visitor was shy and embarrassed, and would answer no questions.

He soon came again with an apple, to be used for the same purpose. After that almost every day he appeared at the hospital, bringing some small gift.

One day the nurse told the little visitor that his friend could not get well. The boy lingered in the receiving-room and then with some hesitation asked if he could see John. He had been invited before, but had refused.

The little patient was lying on his cot very pale and weak. His eyes opened in dull surprise when he was told he had a visitor. Before he knew it two little arms were about his neck, and a familiar, grimy face bent over his and sobbed,

"I say, Johnny, can yer forgive a feller? We was always fightin', an' I know I hurt yer, an' I'm sorry. Won't ye tell me, Johnny, that ye hain't got no grudge agin me?"

The boy reached up his thin arms and locked them about his little mate's neck and said, "Don't cry, Bobby! Don't feel bad. I was firin' a rock at yer when the wagon hit me. You forgive me? Yes, you forgive me an' I'll forgive you, an' then we'll be square. The folks here have learned me a prayer. How does it go, nurse?"

"Forgive us our trespasses," said the white robed nurse, softly.

The next morning Bob was a little late. The kind nurse met him with a grave face. Johnny, she said, had just died. She led the boy to the place where his little friend lay shrouded from sight. He looked at the dead face a moment, and turned away with streaming eyes.

"Didn't say—nothin'—about me?"

"He spoke about you before he died, and asked if you were here," replied the nurse.

"Are you sure he forgiv' me?" pleaded the trembling voice.

"I am quite sure."

"Then—may I—may I go to the funeral?"

"Indeed you may," said the nurse, tenderly. "Poor Johnny hasn't any friends."

He was the only mourner; his little heart the only one that ached, and his the only tears shed over the pauper sod. But Bob has exchanged forgiveness with his friend before he died, and felt his conscience clear with his small world.

If such nobility of feeling can be found in the midst of ignorance and vice, what excuse can there be for us if we fail to exhibit it? His teaching, "Who spake as never man spake," is emphatic: "Forgive if ye have ought against any, that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses."—Youth's Companion.

How Christian Endeavor Bounds It.

From a Recent Address by S. L. Merslon.

I have before me here a class in geography, and I ask the one at the head of the class to bound for us the plan of salvation. He says it is bounded on the north by our back fence, on the east by our neighbor's line, on the south by the public highway, and on the west by our other neighbor's fence. He thinks the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is a good thing to have in his family, and stops right there. Next.

It is bounded on the north by our town limits, on the east by the railway, on the south by the river, and on the west by the other town limits. Not right; next, please bound the plan of salvation.

Bounded by Canada, the Atlantic, the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific. Not right; next, Christian Endeavor, bound it for us. Though the youngest scholar in the class, she goes off with a bound.

It is bounded on the north by the throne of God, on the east by the star that hung o'er Bethlehem, on the south by the verge of the bottomless pit, and on the west by the uttermost parts of the earth. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature."

There's a wideness in God's mercy like the wideness of the sea. Don't undertake to run the surveyor's line through the "great commission," or attempt to hedge it in by geographical limitations, else it becomes treason against the government of God.

Washington Letter.

If I were called upon to name the the professions which accomplish the most beneficial results for mankind I should unhesitatingly choose the clergymen, who devote their lives to preserving immortal souls, and the physicians, who strive to preserve mortal bodies. Therefore I consider the gathering of physicians from all parts of the American continent, which, under the name of the Pan-American Medical Congress, is now in session here, as second in importance only to a similar gathering of the Christian ministers of the continent. The object of this congress is a noble one—the dissemination of information gained by its members in successfully alleviating human suffering and preventing the spread of contagious diseases, and, as President Cleveland fittingly said in a short address opening the Congress, "the protection of the public health and the prevention of contagious diseases are objects properly brought under consideration at the capital of a nation which appreciates fully the serious importance of everything which aids in making intercourse between civilized countries and commerce between them safe and easy."

The address of welcome to the Congress on behalf of our municipal government, made by Commissioner Ross, contained some very happily-chosen language, a portion of which is quoted: "And I cannot but believe that this extraordinary spectacle, this assemblage of physicians from all the great powers of the Western hemisphere, has a deeper significance than even that most laudable purpose of the extension of medical knowledge among its constituents. Does it not indicate that benevolence and philanthropy are no longer limited by national boundaries, but that they are becoming as broad and universal as humanity itself? There will never be a time when there will be no clashing of interests among the nations of the earth. But when the poor of Ireland were suffering for the want of bread; when Chicago was desolated by fire; when Charleston and Johnstown were helpless; and when the peasantry of Russia were starving, the world's sympathy in the form of material aid ignored the ocean's barrier and the boundaries of States, directed only by the thought that the stricken and the suffering belonged to the same great human family. These bonds of human sympathy and the new swift means of intercommunication are bringing the nations into closer relationship. May we not be encouraged to believe that this Pan-American convention is a forerunner of successive congresses of all civilized states, whereby the common-interests of the race may be fostered and maintained? The enthusiastic applause which greeted the address of Mr. Ross was proof the positive, to me, that the physicians in attendance realized importance of the Congress, not only to the physical welfare of the people of this continent, but also as a powerful factor in the great work of moral reform which is going on all the time, notwithstanding the belief of the uninitiated that it sometimes stops for a time. The opening of the Congress was preceded by a prayer and invocation for divine blessing, by Bishop Paret, of Maryland.

So much has of late been said in the newspapers about the condition of President Cleveland's health that a word or two about his appearance as he stood up to address the Congress may not be amiss. He was dressed in black, as he usually is upon all public occasions, and if one can judge anything by appearances was feeling particularly well. He walked easily and erect, his eyes were clear and bright, while his voice certainly sounded like that of a man in good physical condition. Unless the coat he wore was unusually tight, I think he has lost some flesh since I saw him last—late in June. But he still has more, probably, than he desires to keep. I have been told, but cannot vouch for the statement, that he has been, and is dieting himself for the purpose of reducing his flesh

Many of the physicians are accompanied by their families, who are having social attentions showered upon them by the Washington people. Particularly noticeable among the foreign Ladies are the wives and daughters of a number of Mexican physicians.

It pleased many that in the speech made by the new Chinese minister when he was formally presented to the President by Secretary Gresham, no reference whatever was made to retaliation on the part of his government because of the Geary act. The fact that he has leased a large double building for himself and legislation for a term of years, with privilege of at any time purchasing it, is also regarded as an indication that he has no knowledge of any intention on the part of his government to break its diplomatic relations with the United States.

Being and Seeming

BY MILDRED MCNEAL.

"Strive to be what you wish to appear,"—what a little nugget of gold this saying is for every one who wishes—and who does not?—to appear well in the eyes of others. There would be no progress in character-building if it were not for this desire for another's good opinion; but our structures will only be so many block houses, that will tumble down and roll away to the four winds at the first jar, unless we use as a mortar the little word be.

Strive to be what you wish to appear. A little pond of water often looks clear and radiant and attractive until it is stirred up, and then what depths of darkness we find in it! Just so your appearances, however they may shine, as long as they are only appearances, will in some stir or excitement break up and reveal the cloudy, murky depths below.

Plating wears off. You need never hope to be credited with being pure silver unless you are pure through and through. You may wish to appear unselfish, and do a thousand little generous things, but if your deeds are only plating, and deep down in your heart is a bit of false metal that says, "I do not want to do that one bit," then woe to your generosity. There will come a time when the false metal will be too strong for the true.

If you want to appear sweet-tempered with a little grumbling growl down in your heart, beware. The growl may not get into words, but the full, round tone of sweet temper will suffer a little, and the white, smooth brow will have writing upon it,—or printing, rather,—and the clear eyes will be shadowed.

To be genuine, you must be genuine through and through. There is no half-way work about it; for what you are will surely be written on your face and in your eyes,—especially in your eyes. They are indeed windows of the soul, and though what is written there may not be legible to some, it is still there, and whoever is able to read it may do so. Let me look into a man's eyes and hear his voice, and I will tell you whether I want to trust him.

It has been my good fortune to have had several true, genuine, whole-souled friends, who gave, in voice and face and life, the ring of the true metal. They were born so, you say. Perhaps they were. I admit that it is easier to have a sweet, round nature given us than to cultivate it; but it can be cultivated. It may be hard to be genuine silver, when so many of us, either by nature or degeneration, are genuine pewter. But there is an alchemy that will transmute the growlings and grudgingness and unlovelinesses in our natures into generosity and sunny-heartedness. The alchemist is God. The alchemy is prayer.—Golden Rule

A Frequent Question.

"Are not Abana and Parpar better than all the waters of Israel?" (2 Kings 5:12) In every revival meeting there are people who take just the same stand in their hearts that Naaman took before Elijah's house. They would like to become Christians if it could only be done in a way that would not humble their pride. They want to get to heaven, but they want to do it in their own way. They want to throw away God's plan of salvation and substitute one of their own make. Instead of trusting in their atonement made by the blood of Christ, they prefer to trust in their own morality and self-righteous works. They would like to have the reward of Abel, but they are not willing to give up the murderous spirit of Cain in their hearts. No matter what they are asked to do they stubbornly decide that they will not. If the preacher asks all to stand up who have a desire to be saved, they say in their hearts that they can be converted just as well by keeping their seats. If they are asked to go to an altar they are up in arms at once, and defiantly say that they can be religious without going to a mourner's bench. Self struggles hard for its life, and refuses to be led to the place of sacrifice. They want to be somebody, and prefer to keep their deadly leprosy rather than leave their chariots. They fail to see that the thing God wants is for them to make an unconditional surrender;

give up their own way and submit to his, and that the things which the preacher proposes are simply means for that purpose. It was God's power that cleansed Naaman, and not the Jordan's water, but he had to give up all his own preconceived notions by going to it and bathing as the prophet required before the divine power could act. Only by doing as God tells him to do can the sinner find peace and rest.—Ram's Horn.

Virginia Valley.

The Virginia Valley Conference met the 31st of Aug. and all the churches were represented. After the organization the business was taken up and attended to, to the delight of all. While there was not as much money raised for missions as we would have been glad to see, yet we think that the churches of this conference are becoming more and more awakened to a sense of their duty along the line of missions. There is a fine field here for the Home mission work and in a number of places they are calling for the Christian church. Will Dr. Barrett tell us if the Christian Missionary Association can help us any in putting a man in the field to do mission work? Dr. Herndon and Rev. A. F. Iseley of the N. C. & Va. Conference was with us and rendered valuable help. Owing to the very heavy rain fall on Friday the second day of conference the attendance was small but Saturday the clouds had blown away and we had a beautiful day and a large attendance. Sunday we had two services Dr. Herndon, preached in the morning and Rev. A. F. Iseley, in the evening to attentive congregations. Dr. Herndon is here in the interest of Eloy College and is, we are glad to say meeting with some success though the people of this country like they are elsewhere, feel the effect of the money panic and cannot do as much in helping the college as they would be glad to do.

Our meeting commenced at Antioch last night, which we purpose to continue for ten days or more. Rev. A. F. Iseley came to assist us and purposes staying till the last of Sept. Dr. Herndon will be with us for several days, while he is looking after the college interest. We are very glad to have Bros Herndon and Iseley with us for it is not often we get to hear our Bro ministers preach and when we do it is a treat. I have agreed to serve the conference another year the Lord willing, and our prayer is that it may be a year of work as well as joy. We will commence a series of meetings at Bethlehem, the third Sunday of Sept. and hope to have a good meeting.

From Ga. & Ala.

DEAR SUN:—I will give to the readers of the SUN an account of my summer's work. My first work was to assist my father in a revival effort at Longdale, Ala. Here we had a glorious meeting—it lasted from Saturday night till Thursday night embracing the 2nd. Sunday in July. Visible results, 27 accessions. On Friday, accompanied by Rev. C. C. Heard, we reached Phoenix City, where we held two interesting services. This church is in a prosperous condition. Both of the above places are under the care the Home Missionary. On Saturday 4 p. m. I boarded the Columbus Southern and soon landed at Red Hill, 40 miles from Columbus. Here found a good congregation awaiting my arrival. This church is under the care of Rev. Jubilee Smith and has been for near 40 years. Bro. Smith has done some of his best work at this point. Yet for the past few years his health has been very bad, and some other difficulties had rendered the church in a cold stupor. I preached here for five days during this time a good interest was awakened. I received six into the church the last night of meeting. I promised to meet with them the fourth Sunday in Aug. Thursday morning I boarded the train for home at which point I reached at 10 p. m. I had been away from home two weeks. I found all well.

I remained at home Friday and on Saturday morning I left for Christiana at which place I reached for 11 o'clock service. We had a good meeting at this point and received 4 into the church. From this point I went to the D. M. at McGuire's Chapel, after the D. M. was over Rev. Jubilee Smith remained with me and we continued the meeting for several days; but the weather was so gloomy and creeks up and bridges down we could not be successful. We received one member.

On Saturday before the first Sunday in Aug. I began a meeting at Forest Home, where we continued 7 days here. Bro. Smith was with me a part of the time. We had a good meeting, 13 additions. From this point we went to Union Grove where we run a meeting for some days. Here the weather interfered very much with our services. Yet we had a good meeting, and trust great good was accomplished. We received two members. Bro. Smith did good preaching at all these points. The brother is old yet he is full of the gospel. I next went to McGuire's Chapel and held my regular appointment. We had a very pleasant meeting.

On Friday before the 4th Sunday in Aug. I started back to Red Hill according to promise. I arrived at this point at six p. m. and began a meeting that night, and continued till Thursday night following.

We had a glorious meeting, 19 additions and more to follow.

I reached home Friday night before the 1st Sunday in Sept. Saturday morning I started for Forest Home. Here I had a good meeting, 1 addition.

The good Lord has wonderfully blessed me in all my labors. I preached seventy-two sermons and received 73 members. May God bless our Zion and prosper us in all good works. Let every church in the Conference be ready with their dues and delegates where the time comes.

Yours fraternally,
H. W. ELDER.

Elon College Notes.

It is with a feeling of responsibility that we, J. H. Jones and Wm. H. Boone, will attempt to interest the patrons of the SUN, after the pleasant pen of our esteemed Mr. E. Moffitt, has reported to them the notes of the College during the past session. But we, will alternately endeavor to let those interested in this institution know something of the interest and work that exists.

All "old students" were glad indeed, to welcome Prof.'s Atkinson and Moffitt back to their recitation rooms we miss, however, the faces of Prof.'s Kendrick and Scholz, and are sorry they can't be with us.

Prof. Bandy adds much to the faculty force, and the impressions he is making upon the student body are good.

Students and faculty both seem very deeply enthused in work, and the indications are that much will be accomplished this year.

One Sunday school, Y. M. C. A., and prayer-meeting work has begun again. In these, we trust, many souls may be shaped perfectly for Christ's kingdom and make models for others.

The rain and mud at the opening keeping the new students in their room so closely caused a little home sickness; a few tears shed for "mamma," but now the sun shines as brightly here as at home.

The "new boys" think that there never was, in any college, two such Societies as the Phi and Clio, since these are the only subjects the "old boys" will talk to them about. On account of the bad weather the annual reception was postponed from the first until the 8th, at this time, faculty student and friends assembled, enjoyed themselves very much for a few hours. We were glad to have with us on this occasion Miss Annie Graham a member of the College Alumni also Misses Bettie Graham, Ida Kernodle, Lydia Micheal and Mr. W. J. Graham former students Mr. W. H. Albright, also of the Alumni, came for the reception the first. He remedied his disappointment by "calling."

Mrs. A. L. Hill of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. J. P. Barrett are in town. they seemed to enjoy the reception, A pleasant reminder of younger days.

Bro.'s Clements and Wellons came up the 8th on business. Those who subscribed toward ceiling the chapel last commencement, when they come again will be elated to find the seats so nice and well arranged. These are the greatest comfort that has yet been added to the institution.

Rev. M. L. Hurley's nice residence is nearing completion, the town will be glad to welcome himself and family soon.

Prof. Atkinson preached to the people at Pleasant Hill on Sunday 3rd ult., and last evening conducted the prayer meeting in the Chapel, his subject was—Selfishness vs. Unselfishness, his logical ideas were forcibly produced. It is a grand thing for the development of young men to be here and in discussing Biblical topics.

Mr. I. W. Johnson was elected yesterday by the Sunday School to fill the vacancy, caused by Mr. I. F. Pierce's absence, as leader of choir.

The friends of the college, who wish "The Elon College Monthly" to visit their homes during this scholastic year will send one dollar and name to Miss Irene Clements, manager of the subscription department. Let me urge that this be noticed. The "Monthly" with Prof. Moffitt as Alumni editor will be interesting and well worth its price, besides you will aid greatly in its publication.

Holland Items.

Our Sabbath school yesterday was well attended and exercises interesting, notwithstanding it meets at the same hour of the Baptist school of this place. We formerly met in the evening, so as not to conflict with the Baptist school; but a majority for several reasons, favored a change to morning.

On account of a heavy rain fall, we had no prayer meeting last night, this is about the first time we have failed to meet since our meeting began.

Bro. Etheldred Holland a faithful member of Holy Neck Christian church, and one of the SUN's warmest friends, has been suffering very much several days with a carbuncle. Next 4th Sunday and Saturday before, will be the time for our quarterly and communion meeting at Holland. Brethren and sisters of other churches are invited to be with us. Our Missionary meeting will take place at about 2 o'clock Sunday evening. Our conference, the last one for the year, will be an important one.

R. H. Holland.

Notes and Notions.

The man who has no trials has no fellowship with Christ.

There is no sin that drags men down against which the Bible is not filled with warnings.

Human philosophy has never done anything to make anybody better.

The only place where a sinner can ever see God is in a Christian's life.

The devil would rather get one child by the hand than to make a dozen drunkards.

One of the hardest people to get along with is the man whose religion is all in his head.

It won't help your own garden any to sit on the fence and count the weeds in your neighbor's truck patch.

No man has as much religion as God wants him to have until he can get down on his knees and earnestly pray for people he don't like.

Every man who knows God knows that a work has been done in his heart that only God could do.

There is plenty of room in this world for people who have the same kind of religion at home they have at camp meeting.

Too many of us expect others to be better than we are willing to be ourselves.

God's best helpers are those who are faithful in little things.

The man who deliberately wrongs God will have but small regard for the rights of his fellow men.

If you have no joy in your religion it may be because you do not give enough.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Service were conducted at the Norfolk church Sunday night by Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D.

September number of Historia is replete with historical events related in a very entertaining manner.

Rev. C. V. Strickland author of Evangelists songs of Praise Children's Day Programs, etc, is now conducting a religious department in the Farmer's Guide, a monthly periodical of large circulation issued at Huntington, Ind.

Rev. W. T. Herndon expects to attend the Ga. & Ala. Conference. We hope that Rev. J. D. Elder and the other brethren will treat the Dr. kindly while he is with them. But we know they will do that; for that is their way of doing business.

Every sign now points to a steady revival of business trust, and that means a steady appreciation of values. The reaction will not be rapid, but each day should now make the general business outlook brighter. Let us have faith in our country and in ourselves and all will be well.

"If the yoke of Christ is not easy, you are wearing it with a stiff neck." "The angels are God's servants, but redeemed men are His sons." These are samples of excellent short sermons which are being published by that unique and original religious weekly known as THE RAM'S HORN. This paper has new rooms in the Woman's Temple Chicago. If 10 cents in stamps are sent to this address, a trial of the paper may be had for the three weeks. See their advertisement in another column.

With the issue of Sept. 6, Rev. J. A. Speight, D. D., retires from the editorship of the Asheville Baptist. The Dr. has made a strong and manful struggle, and deserves great credit for his success. Broken health is a cause for this action. The paper will be continued with a fine list of talented men on its staff.

The SUN readers can congratulate themselves on that we have promises from such men as Dr. Barrett, Rev. Foster, Prof. Atkinson, Dr. Staley, J. H. Jones and W. H. Boone, and others, for frequent articles from their pens. That their efforts and the efforts of others who continually befriend us will elevate the general tone of the SUN there is no doubt.

The World's Fair commission are as anxious now to have the gates closed on Sunday as they at first were to have them opened, but fate seems to be against them. In a recent effort to have the injunction set aside compelling them to keep the gates open the case came up before a drunken judge who postponed it for sixty days. Now they are compelled to keep open gates at a continual loss to themselves.

The New Hope Institute at Milltown, Ala., has thus far enrolled 130 pupils; twelve in music and four ministerial students, two of whom expect to enter Elon College soon. The stockholders are now building a commodious residence for their teacher. Prof. A. P. Fuquay has been elected for another year. Next session opens the first Monday in November. The school and surrounding country are in good spirits for future success.

We often hear people say they have given their "mite" to the cause of God, and it is said with a conviction and earnestness that denotes their desire to have it believed. Now it is the opinion of this writer that the widow's mite was all she had, and for a person to give a small sum more or less and claim it is their mite is a deed like Ananias and Sapphira Committed in the early age of Christianity. The widow's mite was her all. The mite you give—is it all you have?

Our politics need reforming. Is not the best way to reform them to enlist in the work of reform the fear of God, the love for Christ, and the religious sentiments of the people? A little monthly paper published at Morristown, Tenn., called the Christian Patriot, believes that the Bible is the best book for earth as well as for heaven, for the courts and congresses as well as for the church. It treats the question: "What does the Bible say about politics?" A sample copy will be sent to any address, or it will be sent on trial for six months for ten one cent stamps.

The Revival Season.

For several weeks now our "Field Letters," have brought most encouraging news from the various sections of our country. Hundreds and thousand of the churches have recently held their annual revival meetings and gracious and grand are the results reported therefrom.

Here a church has been wonderfully revived, many souls have been reconsecrated to Christ and the entire membership promises better life and more work for the cause. There a church has added twenty-five, fifty or an hundred to its list of membership, many of the worst sinners of the community have given their hearts to God and are determined to live better lives, while many old feuds, dislikes and hates among the members themselves have been broken down, laid aside and the promise has been given that they shall be and are forgiven and forgotten. Thus one and all sinners and Christians, are going to live better lives and "do more in the future than they have done in the past" for the up-building of Christ's kingdom here on earth.

These we say are the reports and these the promises and vows made by thousands of souls within the last few weeks. God be praised for this gracious out-pouring of His Holy Spirit. And God grant that these pledges, so recently and so determinedly made with heart all aglow with rejoicing and with lips aflame with praise and thanks-giving, may one and all be kept without blemish and without breach throughout the year and life.

But even in time of this heated and impassioned vowing and promising is it not well to throw over it all one or two cool, calm considerations.

1. The general sentiment and spirit of fellow feeling and brotherly love that prevails in your neighborhood will not prevail everywhere and all the time during the next and the coming month and year. Temptations, trials and difficulties will come. These must needs be. The "divine order of human society" is of such nature that man shall and must have more or less of temptations. This is a probationary life. We are all human and mortal. Have you fully made up your mind to rejoice, be glad and love the brethren and treat your neighbor as yourself even when these days of temptations and trials are come over you? God grant that you have

2. The religion that helps one to forgive his brother today and will not help one live peaceably, honestly and brotherly with that brother tomorrow, next day and all the year is not the religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. His was a live, active, ever present religion. And that is the kind and the only kind. He gave to the world and lived and taught amongst men whereby they might be saved.

3. It is the little drops of water that make up the vast ocean. It is the little wrongs gradually accumulated and heaped up in the heart that made that life a life of sin and estrange that soul from God. An unkind word today, a prevarication tomorrow, a slightly dishonest deal with my fellow, the worldly amusement today which seems it itself no harm—begin with these and soon that spirit now rejoicing in a gracious Father's love will be steeped again in indifference, neglect, sin. If we would have our hearts rejoice, if we would live better and nobler lives, if we would carry out the promise and vows recently made, we must keep those hearts day by day consecrated and aglow with the Heavenly Father's love,—we must live Christianity now and not do the doubtful deed today, sin openly tomorrow or forget God next day. The Christianity that does not help one live will certainly be void, vain, empty and useless at death.

The University of N. C.

Last week when the press announced the successful opening of the University at Chapel Hill, N. C., many hearts were made both glad and sad. They were made glad at large number of students present, and sad to see that base ball, foot ball and general athletics seem to be made the central thought.

Few persons, if any will object to such exercises on the college grounds as may be necessary for the good health of the young men. But there are many hard working farmers in the state, when they are forced to pay tax to pay for hot and cold water baths for the athletics, will not look as pleasant as an angel. Many of them are not willing to work hard in the field for their money, and then be forced to pay it to an institution which encourages young men in running around from state to state with a foot ball or base ball team.

We had hoped that the time had come when men were to be held in esteem, more for heart and head culture than for physical force, but it begins to look as tho that happy day has not come yet; for in nearly all that we have read about the student body at the university, the praise is given to physical weight and height with as much emphasis as to mental power.

We want the university to do well; but we are sure it is not best for the country for the young men to be running around from state to state.

The Evang list Moody.

Our readers will remember that last March the Raleigh pastors, with two exceptions, rejected the idea of inviting Mr. Moody to this city, saying that his efforts were calculated to do the cause of Christianity more harm than good. And the Advocate came out in what it intended to be a very conciliating manner and endeavored to smooth over the action of said pastors but all intelligent persons continued of the opinion that selfishness and avarice were at the bottom of the unchristian proceeding. Mr. Moody is now, and has been since the opening of the great Fair, doing more good in Chicago than all the denominations working individually or in concert. O shame upon the narrowness of denominationalism which will not allow of the recognition of real merit or further the cause of Christ just because it is not done by its own preachers and evangelists in its own churches and in such a way as to bring all the benefit upon itself. Of Mr. Moody's work in Chicago the Presbyterian Observer says:

Chicago is a centre of interest at any time, but just now it possesses more than a local interest. The World's Fair is bringing to it thousands of temporary residents. Under these conditions it is cheering to know that Christian workers are awake to their opportunities, and are, even during the heated term, working with the greatest earnestness, enthusiasm and persistence in behalf of souls. Not only are the ordinary agencies employed, but extraordinary ones have been set in motion with tact and energy. For over three months the religious campaign, inaugurated and engineered by Mr. Moody, has been skillfully and faithfully pushed, and it reached, August 20, a notable degree of interest and impressiveness. On that day no less than sixty-five different meetings were held by the forces at his command, at thirty-five places, in four languages, with an aggregate attendance of about forty thousand hearers. Churches and the ares were utilized for the purpose, and thousands were turned away for want of room. It is said by those who ought to know that among all classes much interest is shown both in the preaching and in the singing. Not even the Fair and the worldly attractions of the city can keep multitudes from the places where the pure Gospel is presented in simple and impressive form. This is the day of evangelistic effort. God is favoring it; not that he would dispense with his regular ordinances and church services, but that he would have the masses more fully reached. His blessing is resting upon the labors of those who seek to counteract the merely wordly and materialistic influences of the times. He would let the world know that there is a Gospel of grace and salvation, as well as a nation of liberty and progress, to be loved and honored during our Columbian celebration. He would show the representative of all lands that it is still a living power. It is to be hoped that the good work of Evangelism will not stop at Chicago, but will extend far and near, and bear the richest fruits to the glory of the Lord.

It Hits Many.

The Ram's Horn puts it this way about the Sunday Christian: "Get thee behind me, satan, I'll see you again on Monday."

It does look like satan ought to let the member of the church, who had served him all the week, have a little rest when Sunday came. But he who makes satan his companion six days, will not easily exclude him on the seventh. It is hard to chew to bacco six days and not on the seventh. So six days service for satan will open the way for the seventh.

If you want a happy Sabbath day, serve God the six preceding ones. As oil lubricates machinery, so service to God in the week, oils our hearts for Sunday worship.

Meeting at Wake Chapel.

Rev. C. Rowland of Texas commenced a meeting at Wake Chapel, N. C., the first Sunday in this month, and preached two sermons a day during seven successive days. The preaching was in great power, and was carried to the hearts of the hearers by the spirit. We never heard a better gospel preacher than Bro. Rowland. The crowds were large every day. There were about 30 converts and 17 accessions to the church.

Quite a number of preachers of various denominations were present to listen to the man of God, catch the Holy Ghost fire and lend a helping hand in the good work.

We shall long remember this great meeting. No one can tell the good that was done. Only eternity can tell the full results of the work.

Another Good Writer Added.

MR. EDITOR: -I am very glad to know that some of our brethren are becoming more interested in the Correspondence for the CHRISTIAN SUN. There are many people who will be delighted to read a letter or letters from Dr. Barrett every week. With Bro. Barrett filling his promise in SUN of Ang. 17, your readers will certainly be obliged.

The most interesting part of a religious news paper is the Editorials and Correspondence i. e. original matter. Not necessarily local news, but fresh articles on practical, everyday religious subjects. Now, Mr. Editor, with Bro. Barrett and Prof. Atkinson to write say, for the first week in each month and Dr. Jones and Prof. Moffitt the second week and Drs. Long, Staley Newman, with many other ministers and laymen who can write, and write well too, if they will, to contribute regularly on the plan suggested above and then the field votes as they come in, from time to time, I do believe we will have a most interesting church paper. I do most heartily endorse Bro. Barrett's proposition and promise to write, the best I can, more frequently. Brethren we ought to help our Editor in getting matter for the paper. The Editor must spend much of his time in the field looking after the subscription, and it is a difficult matter to write Editorials while on the wing.

J. L. FOSTER

[We will be glad to have you write often, Bro. Foster. Dr. Barrett will keep his promise and Prof. Atkinson will furnish us weekly Leaves from his Note Book. Hope others will be as kind. -EDITOR]

Can we Unite the Deep River and the N. C. and Va. Conferences?

This is a question that has come to my mind many times; and others have spoken about it. Let me say in the beginning; that I am a member of the Deep River Conference, and am very anxious to see the day come when we can be united with the churches of the N. C. and Va. Conference. I wish to bring the question before the people, for discussion in the columns of the SUN, with the hope that, if possible, the union may be formed at the approaching sessions of the two conferences. I have no 'axe to grind,' but feel an interest in every thing that may help to sharpen the 'sword of the spirit,' and to advance the cause of Christ.

The N. C. and Va. Conference has, for some time been discussing the question of division in its own body, because of its becoming so large as to be unwieldy. Those opposed to division take the ground that, while the conference is becoming large, it is not sufficiently large and strong to admit of division. Could not a compromise be made by taking in the Deep River conference, and then divide the combined conferences into two such parts that both of them will be strong in themselves?

The question, then is, would such a union and division be helpful to the church and to the cause of Christ? It seems to me that it would.

In the first place, I may say that, considering the conferences as two separate organizations, of course we, of the Deep River conference, would be most benefited; for, as is known to all, we are weak as to the number of churches and of members; and union with the N. C., and Va., conference would strengthen this weakness, and it would not only give us more churches, and more members, but would throw us into union with some stronger churches which would necessarily quicken us on all lines of church work. The great thing that we need is just this kind of contact; for when we see that we have within our conference sufficient strength to enable us to carry on the various church enterprises, our people will not be slow to move forward. We have the latent power, which only needs to be brought to the surface; and when it is brought out, our churches will be equal in every respect to those of the other conferences. What few churches we have have good large membership; and our people, especially in Randolph county where most of our churches are, are financially and numerically able to compete with any of the other denominations.

The union would also be beneficial to the N. C. and Va. conference; for the additional territory and membership would relieve the question of division of the most serious objections on the part of those opposed to it. Our conference being small, and the N. C. and Va. conference being large, the union would render easy a division into two bodies of such proportions as to make both strong and, at the same time, wieldy.

And, again, it would be beneficial to the N. C. and Va. conference by giving it a broader field of usefulness than is open to it now. We have the members, the churches, and the openings for churches, that, with the encouragement which the knowledge of added members and strength would give us, are capable of adding to the Christian church a degree of strength that could be excelled in very few communities.

The weak churches of both conferences could be grouped with the strong ones, and thus quicken both. The field for usefulness is broad; the seed are already sown; and it is now for the stronger churches to help us gather the harvest. Let us not allow conference lines to be a barrier as in the great common cause for which we are laboring. If union will be beneficial, if it will strengthen weak churches and not weaken strong ones; in a word, if it will further our church enterprises, and gather in a new harvest of souls for Christ, let us agitate the question, and effect the union at our next conferences. I sincerely hope that the brethren of both conferences will give us their views on this measure, for we want to see all sides of it; and then by the help of God, let us do something.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER.

MY DEAR CHILDREN:—

It is encouraging indeed to have our Corner filled with such nice letters. It makes the heart of your old Uncle glad. You don't know how much he does like to get these nice letters. He loves you very much and prays for you every day.

And now you are giving Annt Myrtle something to do too. You should see the sweet smile on her face when she gets the money; I think it would encourage you very much. She has learned to love you and takes a deep interest in you, tho you wouldn't believe it from the frequency of her letters.

Quite a number of the cousins are now at Elon College and the Band would enjoy a letter from there. The Band has an interest in the college and church and letters from there will be appreciated.

Cordially yours,
UNCLE TANGLE.

PROVIDENCE VA., AUG. 26, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—It has been so long since I have written to you I guess you have almost forgotten me, but I hope you have not. It will soon be time for me to go to school again. I love to go to school. I am glad that we have got our same good teacher that we had last season. I will close my little letter with much love to you and the consins. Enclosed you will find a half dime that I made myself; hope it will do a little good.

Your niece,
GERTRUDE GIBSON

PATMOS, N. C., Aug. 30, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—Not having sent a communication to the Corner since May last and not seeing any letters from the cousins in the two last numbers of the SUN, I thought I would try again, though feeble it be, yet I have been taught, and my experience teaches me also, that in order to succeed we must continue to try. I am now going to the public school at New Elam and while speaking of New Elam, will tell you and the cousins that the new church house there is progressing finely, and when complete will be quite a durable and commodious house of worship. Now Uncle, I will answer your puzzle in the SUN of July 14 verse the missing words are found, which are, "words to no." Hoping to soon see many letters in the Corner every week, and if you do not "lose" this, please publish it, if worthy, or consign it to the waste basket. I enclose half dime for the Band. Wishing you and the cousins much success. I remain

Your loving niece,
MAUD V. GUNTER.

MERRY OAKS, N. C., SEPT 1, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I will try to write to you and the cousins a little, as I have not written in a good while, I am sorry to see no letters in the Corner, I am going to school to Mr. Joe Goodwin, and I go to Sunday school at New Elam. We had Sunday school in the new church last Sunday. I will ask the cousins a question: how many times is the Lord mentioned in the Bible? How old was Noah when he died? Will close, I haven't any money this time, but I hope I will have some next time. I will close, much love to you and the cousins.

UNA DAVIS

MILLTOWN, Ala., Sept. 1, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I am a little 14 year old girl that wants to join the Band. I have never written to the SUN before. I am going to school now. Will soon stop and go to picking cotton. I will have plenty of help, I have 2 brothers and 5 sisters, and can love them all. We girls have organized a reading club; I think it is very nice; we have had some splendid pieces read. I go to Sabbath school whenever I can. I will ask a question. Who made the axe to swim.

ANNIE TERRELL

WEYERS CAVE, Va., Sept. 3, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—You may think I have forgotten the Band but I have been so busy that I did not have time to write but now have an opportunity and I will do so. I was received into the Christian church at Antioch last May at the quarterly conference by Rev. E. T. Iseyour our beloved pastor. He came up to see us the fifth Sunday of July and preached two excellent sermons for us. I am sorry that the cousins are taking so little interest in the Corner, hope they will not be silent as long as I have been. I will ask a question What was the metropolis of Assyria. I don't remember of the cousins asking any questions lately so I can't answer any. Come cousins, all that have time, and write oftener. Who will take an interest in the Corner if you do not? I enjoyed Uncle Millard's verses and hope he will write again soon. It is encouraging to us young Christians to see the older ones taking an interest in the Corner. I send one dime for the Band.

ALFRED W. ANDES

CORAPEAK, N. C., SEPT. 1st, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—As all of my brothers and sisters are going to write I have asked mama to write me a letter too. I would be so glad if I could see you once as I have heard so much about you. I have been very sick but have got able to go about again for which I feel so glad. I was so bad off I could not even sit up long at a time so you know, Uncle Tangle, that was bad for a little girl like me. And I must tell you that while I was sick my dear auntie was married. I hated so bad for her to get married for I think she is the sweetest thing I ever saw, nearly. I fear she will not love me as well now as she did, for I know she has always loved me devotedly. Her name is Mattie but I have always called her Patsy. It is a funny name but she likes it as I am so small I expect she will want me to call her Auntie now as she is on the old list, but it will be very hard for me to do. She went on a bridal tour and got back last Thursday just before that storm for which I was so glad, for it was awful, especially on the water. Well as my letter is so dis-interesting I had better close for fear you will not want to publish another from me. Enclosed find five cents for the BAND. With much love to you and the cousins, and a kiss for Aunt Maggie I am,
Your little niece,

MILLTOWN, Ala., Sept. 1, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I have written several letters to the SUN and have never sent one off. I am determined to send this one off we do not take the SUN now but we have a good neighbor that sends hers to us to read, you do not know how much we enjoy reading it. I am not going to school, haven't been any this summer I will be so proud when the time comes for me to go. Prof. A. P. Fuquay has been employed by New Hope school for another year. They are going to build him a house near the school house. My papa has gone to day to haul lumber to build the house. Prof. A. P. Fuquay is a good teacher. I love him as a teacher. Everybody gives him the praise for being so patient with all.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Mrs. David N. Kibler

of Shanleyton, Va., was a sufferer with stomach trouble. At times she was in severe pain and great misery. THE RAM'S HORN.

The only work God pays for is that which somebody tries to do for nothing.

The devil loves a grumbler, no matter whether he belongs to the church or not.

We are never saved by knowing our strength or lost by knowing our weakness.

We need more of the kind of reform that does not go a thousand miles from home to begin work.

There is a touch of flavor in the garden truck that is only known to the man who swings the hoe.

God has ordered that the man who will not help others may prosper only that he may rob himself.

Heaven without love would not be any more like home than an ice palace.

The man who serves Christ for gain will betray him as soon as he can get a better price.

It will not help the cause of God any for you to boast of what a big sinner you used to be.

Whoever will receive Christ as a governing power will soon know him as a saving power.

One of God's ways of helping us to help ourselves is to give us something hard to do for him.

It will not do any good to pray for ten talents if you are not improving your one talent.

The door of salvation is always open, but it is not God's purpose to drive anybody through it.

There are thousands of ways in which people can show without knowing it they do not love God.

There isn't much good in the man who tries to be good only when his head tells him that he ought to.

When the church becomes so much in earnest that there will be soul-saving stations in the neighborhood of every theatre and saloon, the world will begin to come to God in earnest.

What Mean These Stones?

God's acre is always full of solemn monuments, and all can understand what these stones show. They are stones of sorrow, for they tell of separation, and separation is one of the great features of our life. Every stone raised in memory of the dear departed bears witness to the sorrow begotten by the separation. The churchyard stones are also stones of love. Those who are gone must be remembered; their image must not fade away. Every tombstone raised marks the love for one who will never be forgotten—These also are the stones of hope. Nature tells us nothing as to what will follow the gloom of the darkness of death. But hope is built, not on nature's testimony, but on the word of Him who is the resurrection and the life. He hallowed the grave by resting there. He was the conqueror of death, and ever lives above to fill us with the strength which flows from His triumph over the grave. The stones of the churchyard point us to Him as one source of hope and ground of peace.

All the darkness of nature's difficulties is dispelled by Him who is the way, the truth and the life. Every note which seems to sound in discord now shall soon be turned in perfect and glorious harmony. Every cloud shall finish at the breaking of the great Easter morning. Creation shall be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God, and then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father.—The Quiver

Many parents cannot find words strong enough to express their gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla for its good effect upon their children. Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24, '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. McAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N. C., says: "I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. DEAR SUN:—I left here Monday a. m. for Elon College arriving between 4 and 5 a. m. and found conveyance to take me to Pleasant Hill 17 miles that we drove before breakfast. After a good breakfast and a short nap accompanied by my old friend and brother Dr. D. H. Albright I went to the church in time for the p. m. services where I met a large crowd of anxious hearers. Prof. Atkinson had preached for them the day before and Rev. Bro Barrett conducted a service for them Monday forenoon. The pastor Rev. T. B. Dawson was water bound and failed to get there at all. I conducted the services preaching twice a day until Thursday p. m. when we closed. We had a first class meeting, 12 professed and then united with the church and more to join next meeting. I have been visiting this congregation for nearly 40 years and was their pastor once and it was a very dear meeting with us all as it had been several years since I had been there I came on Friday to Elon College where I met the brethren in Executive Board meeting and to greet the students and professors again in their college work. Here I unexpectedly met Sisters Anna Hill and Mrs. J. P. Barrett from Norfolk spending a few weeks at the College, they are well and also baby Barrett very much improved.

I am again at my post of duty feeling right much fatigued having been in protracted meeting almost every week from sometime in July preaching regular twice a day having preached 50 sermons in six weeks. Nothing special in my work here but a gradual increase in congregation. A few of my members are sick Deacon Rufus Canada has been sick for several weeks, but a little better now.

Home and Love.

Home with love in it is a kind of paradise. I suppose with love out of it home is a kind of pandemonium. The sweetest hours of life are those when the heart is full of love and those hours are almost as sweet in the recollection as in the present experience. In the day and night, and in times of revery, we recall every look, every gesture, every word by which love was confessed to us, and I suppose, even in extreme old age, the heart never forgets the scenes and the memories of love's young dream. Such is the heart of man.—Dr. Stalker

Steal a chicken, and you are a thief; steal $1,000 from your employer, and you are an embezzler; steal $5,000 from the Government, and you are a defaulter; rob your competitor on the Stock Exchange of $10,000, and you are a financier; rob him of $100,000 to $500,000, and you are a wizard or a Napoleon of finance; wreck a railroad and gather it in, and are a "magnate;" wreck a great railroad system, and you are a "railroad king;" conduct a "negotiation" by which a strong nation plunders a weak nation of thousands upon thousands of square miles of territory and makes the weak nation pay milliards of money indemnity for the wrong it has suffered, and you are a diplomat. Truly, "the times are out of joint."—Religious Herald.

Modesty in prayer meeting is shown by quietly taking one of the empty front seats, instead of crowding into one of the "chief seats" in the back of the room. By this modest act on the part of one who is willing to render service, the leader is encouraged, added warmth is given to the exercises, and a good example is set by the willing hearer. Modesty in this line is a trait as commendable as it is rare.—S. S. Times

Leaves From My Note Book.

There is more than one way to perform deeds of philanthropy and the editor and proprietor of the Cosmopolitan Magazine has recently proven this too in a very unique and substantial manner. I doubt if there was such a Magazine on the market for the money, even before it was announced at the beginning of this summer that hereafter the Cosmopolitan would be reduced from its already low price of $3.00 per annum to half that sum. One of the most deservedly popular magazines of the times, always well illustrated, neatly and handsomely gotten up withal, never failing to present an interesting table of contents, subjects well chosen and always ably handled, topics covering a broad range and dealt with by some of the most astute, profound and polished thinkers of our times—these and many other such characteristics had all gone in together to make the Cosmopolitan Magazine one of the most popular periodicals of our time. It appeared prodigious and at the same time revolutionary when it was announced that this monthly could hereafter be had for $1.50 per annum. Its author was a man of considerable means. He no longer cared to accumulate wealth. What he wanted now was only to get enough out of the Magazine to pay its running expenses and he was determined to put in the hands of the poorest of men just as good reading as the richest could get. The poorer classes should not be compelled to read poor and filthy literature because all good literature was dear and hard to get." Thus the Cosmopolitan was put in reach of all. This certainly seems to me a deed of philanthropy that the American people and the world should and doubtless will appreciate.

What has been the result? Thus far I have seen no answer at all to this question, but I have watched very closely the copies of the magazine that have appeared since this announcement, to see if I could find any depreciation in grade, quality and kind of matter published each month. And so far from finding this to be the case, the September number is certainly just the other way—it is an achievement in magazine literature that I have not yet seen surpassed. The entire number is given to the write up, description and illustration of the great World's Fair. Of course no one can get a correct and definite idea of what the World's Fair really is without seeing it, but one certainly can get some idea of its greatness, and its "magnificent wonderfulness" by reading and studying well this Sept. number of the Cosmopolitan. There are several articles in the one number and I see that some of these short articles cost as much as $1600.00 each. To those who have not visited the Fair these articles will prove a revelation. And to those who have been it will afford much additional wonder and admiration and give much impress to ideas already formed or partially formed about the Fair. And while speaking of the Fair I am reminded of the leading editorial in Harper's Weekly of last week. It is both a soliloquy and an exhortation. The writer makes a strong and touching appeal to all who can to attend the Fair. Having crippled (and sent off on crutches) all of my adjectives and phrases in trying to describe the Fair since I saw it a few weeks since I know not better how to close these Leaves than by quoting the last paragraph of the article in question. In speaking of the Fair in general and the buildings in particular this writer thus concludes: There is one thought impressibly stealing over the beholder of all this magnificence—that it will be among us in its bodily existence only so short a time. Like a gorgeous dream of human genius it has arisen, and like a vision it will pass away. It will live however, as a glorious memory, and long be spoken of by this and coming generations as one of the greatest marvels of the closing nineteenth century. Every one who has seen it will cherish the remembrance of what he saw as a precious treasure which no one will be willing to part with for any price, while those who now miss this great opportunity will never cease to deplore the irreparable loss caused by their gross neglect when they hear others tell the wonderful story. Even people of small means should not recoil from the expense of a journey which in these hard times they may consider an extravagance, and they should not fail to bestow upon their children the boon of enlightening and ennobling impressions which this grand spectacle conveys, and which in all likelihood this will be the only opportunity in their lives to receive and enjoy.

 We had a good meeting at Union last Sunday, and very good attendance. I preached a sermon on water baptism by request. The congregation, (a large number being Friends,) were very attentive. At the close of our service four united with the church. Three of those being Friends. They had never heard water baptism preached about before and were convinced it was right. On account of the heavy rain that raised the branches until they were impassible, I did not get to Franklin at night. On Tuesday Bro. James Scott took me to Deacon R. H. Keen's, I found sister Keen sick in bed, but am glad to state she was able to be up about the house before I left. I had a very pleasant stay with all the dear brethren.

Sunday evening I delivered a short temperance address at Berea, Union, church. I stopped with Bro. and sister Baton Sunday night.

In my last letter to the SUN, I forgot to state, that the second Sunday in August was our communion day. Bro. R. H. Holland preached for us and administered the sacrament. May God bless His people and lead them in paths of pleasantness.

Fraternally,

Photographs of Our Missionaries.

I have a very fine cabinet size photograph of our missionaries and some of their native helpers. The group consists of Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth, the daughter Lina, and Miss Penrod; two Bible women, Mrs. Neda and Miss Ren; and six of our native preachers, to wit: Mr. Lanchi, Ohta, Kitamura, Fajiuwa, Samomiya, and Takurai, twelve in all. I will furnish this group of pictures at 25 cents single, or $2.50 per dozen, postpaid on receipt of price.

Ke Gathers Them Into a Drunkards' Hell.

FROM DEMOREST'S MAGAZINE FOR AUGUST.

All alone in his bar, counting over his gold,
Sat a licensed rum-seller, hard-hearted and cold;
Though his day's work was done still he lingered late,
Like a goblin appearing, a phantom of fate.
A worker of infamous evil was he,
With a soul that was black as night-storm at sea;
And these words of doom from a liquor-fiend fell:
"Ho! I gather them into a drunkards' hell.

"Yes, I gather them in from the Church and the State,
From the high and the low, from the rich and the great.
It is known to the pastor my pew rent is paid;
And the votes I control make the statesmen afraid;
So my crimes they condone, and with smiling they come
For a share of my gold that I make by my rum.
Yes, I've brought them securely under my spell,
And I'll gather them into a drunkards' hell.

"Yes, I gather them, in—men, women, and boys,— Scores of thousands each year my poison destroys,
Both the body and soul, the wide world around,
From the homes where the bliss of sweet joys should abound.
Dearest mother, fair daughter, kind father, and son,
How I scatter their idols and hopes one by one!
With my license to kill, it is known full well
How I gather them into a drunkards' hell.

"Yes, I gather them in from the gay festival board,
From the banqueting-hall where the red wine is poured,
From the gay social glass on the bright New Year's morn,
From the young father's home where the new babe is born;
From the glories of fame they exultingly prize,
From the chamber of death where the dearest one dies,
From the fair marriage-feast, and the funeral knell,—
All are gathered alike to the drunkards' hell.

"Yes, I gather them in from the doctor who deals
Alcohol to his patient, assuming it heals,
While the deadly nostrum benumbs the poor brain,
And brings on delusions with many a pain.
Though the poison may lull and appear to give ease,
While the 'gold enre' is proof it produces disease,
And nostrums all fail to make sick men get well,— Still I gather them into a drunkards' hell.

"Yes, I gather them in. Hear their wild shrieks and groans!
Helpless women are praying with heart-breaking tones,
While their children beg bread in pitiless cold,
Still I rule them as king and my rum scepter hold.
Though my victims are many yet hell claims them all,
Whether coming from palace, from hovel or hall.
Both by night and by day all my records do tell,
How I gather them into a drunkards' hell.

"Yes, I gather them in by extending my trade,
For my dealing near doubles each passing decade;
And Congress stands by me and fosters the sale

Of the devil's best aids, lager beer and cream ale;
But the pride of my life and the joy of my heart
Is to find Christian voters are taking my part,
And ships rum to the heathen, with Bibles to sell,
While I gather them into a drunkards' hell.

"Yes, I gather them in without hope or release, Where the pangs of their torments will ever increase."
A long line of goblins, a dark ghastly train.

Made of rum-ruined wretches all writhing in pain,
Rushing on madly, gnashing teeth as they told,
With wails of the damned how the liquor-fiend sold
Them the liquid of death he was licensed to sell,
And gathered them into a drunkards' hell.

Would you gather them in from the dram-drinker's doom
From an unending death, from a dark, living tomb?
Would you break the shackles and set captives free
From the poisoning curse of the dark upas-tree?
Would you strike down the foe that is blighting the land,
And crown our nation, most noble and grand?
Then vote as you pray, for no rum-fiend to sell
That which gathers men into a drunkards' hell

Seven Together.

BY REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

Together. Romans 8:17.

There are seven together that form the links in the golden chain that bind us indissolubly to Christ, and give us the assurance of an immortal existence in heaven. Men dread death and long for immortality; but the abiding consciousness of sin make them dread the future, and awakens an anxious desire to find some way to be saved from the guilt and consequences of sin. Human philosophy could devise no plan of salvation, but God has provided the way; and this is through Christ. "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." The seven together of the gospel of Christ cover the whole ground, and give us the steps that lead from the valley of death to "the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

The first together is a very precious one, and found in a rich connection, "God who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith he loved us, even when we were dead in sin, hath quickened us together in Christ, (by grace ye are saved;) and hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus." Man is "dead in trespasses and sins." He is spiritually dead. He is dead to holiness, to God, to hope, and to heaven. He lives as though there were no God, no future, and no judgment, "having no hope, and without God in the world." The worst feature in his case is that he does not realize his condition, and is indifferent about it. He is as it were asleep, and sees not his danger. The first thing that he needs is to be awakened out of this deadly sleep. Hence Paul says, "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

As the father raised up Christ from the dead so he quickens and raises the believer from moral death, and makes him spiritually alive. Christ said, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." This is in connection with the resurrection of Christ, for his triumph over death and the grave demonstrates his divinity, and his claims as the Saviour of the world, and the Judge of man. This is calculated to awaken man from his spiritual slumber, and make him realize his sinfulness and need of salvation. This was the fact that Paul used to awaken the Athenians to a consciousness of their lost condition. He said to them, "God now commandeth all men everywhere to repent: because he hath appointed a day, in which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man who he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

The quickening of man to consciousness of his lost condition is the first step in his salvation, and the greatest blessing that can be bestowed upon him, for without this he is lost forever. I read of a man who lay down on a large rock just in the edge of the ocean. It was a pleasant day, and the scenery around him was beautiful. The air was fragrant with the aroma of flowers, and the songs of the birds were sweet and charming. He soon fell asleep. The tide came creeping in, and rising higher every moment. In a short time every avenue of escape would be closed up, but he is all unconscious of his danger. A friend discovered him in this condition, and aroused him from his sleep. What greater favor could he have done him than this, for he saved his life.

The second together in this golden chain that binds us to Christ is still more precious than the first link. God hath "made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ." The word places is not in the original, but it is understood. It means heavenly places, or heavenly things. The word places, does not express the best sense. In the twentieth verso Paul says, God "raised Christ from the dead, and set him on his own right hand in heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come." The word places here expresses Paul's idea exactly, and it means heaven itself. Christ is on the right hand of God in heaven. "Who is gone into heaven, and is on the right hand of God." 1 Pet. 3:22. In the first passage quoted it may mean places or things, and it probably means in things pertaining to heaven; fitted to prepare us for heaven; and tending toward heaven. It refers to everything that is heavenly in nature, or that has relation to heaven, whether gifts or graces. Through Christ God bestows upon his children all the spiritual blessings fitted to prepare them for heaven such as pardon, adoption, the illumination of the Spirit, and its quickening power.

To sit together means intimate association, and to share his honors. So close is our connection with Christ, that we shall partake of his glory, we shall be like him. "As we have borne the image of the earthly, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly." He "shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body." "For if we be dead with him, we shall also live with him: if we suffer, we shall also reign with him." "And if children, then heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe," In solemn prayer Christ said, "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me, where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me." The precious promise of Christ is, "If any man serve me, let him follow me; and where I am, there shall also my servant be: if any man serve me, him will my Father honor." "The Father honors the servant of Christ now by adopting him his heir. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God." When the Danish missionaries in India appointed some of their Indian converts to translate a catechism, in which it was mentioned as the privilege of Christians to become the sons of God, one of the translators started at so broad a saying as he thought it, said: "It is too much; let me rather render it, they shall be permitted to kiss his feet." God will honor the disciples of Christ by receiving them into heaven, and to all its privileges. What greater honor could a king bestow upon a faithful subject than to adopt him into his family, and receive him into his home as his child. This opens a glorious future to the child of God, and should inspire him with an earnest purpose to live worthy of his destiny. Paul says, "Walk worthy of God, who hath called you unto his kingdom." Live as kings, commanding your spirits, judging your souls to be above ordinary pursuits. It is not for eagles to catch flies. Of old it was said, "cogito te Casareus esse,"—"Remember that thou art Cesar." Remember that thou shalt one day be a king with him in glory, and therefore walk becomingly.

The third together embraces the practical life of the Christian. Paul says, "Knowing that our old man is crucified with him, that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." The old man here means the carnal habits and dispositions that govern man in his sinful life. When he becomes a Christian this old man is crucified and put to death, and the new man governs. This is explained by Paul in his letter to the Ephesians where he says, "That ye put off concerning the former conversation the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and be renewed in the spirit of your mind; and that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." Paul tells us how it was in his own experience. He says, "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Paul had once lived a sinful life, and was governed by his passions and appetites. He still lived in the flesh, but was no longer ruled by the passions of his animal nature. This had been crucified and put to death, and now Christ ruled in his mind and heart. Hence he says, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified unto me, and I unto the world." The sinful world had lost its influence over him, and he was dead to it. This is called crucifixion which was a lingering death. The man would be several days dying. Thus the death of the old man, or of our sinful passions, is a lingering one. They do not die at once. It costs many a sharp hard struggle to put them to death. This was Paul's experience. He says, "I find them a law, that when I would do good, evil is present with me. For I delight in the law of God after the inward man, but I see another law in my members, warring against the law of my mind, and bringing me into captivity to the law of sin which is in my members." This is true of every Christian, and it is only through the help that comes from Christ that we gain the victory. In his sharp bitter struggle with his sinful passions Paul felt his weakness, and exclaimed: "O wretched man that I am! Who shall deliver me from the body of this death? I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord."

The fourth together is suffering with Christ. "If so be that we suffer with him." Paul said to the Philippians, "For unto you it is given in behalf of Christ, not only to believe in him, but also to suffer for his sake." Paul desired to "know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made comfortable unto his death." He felt that it was a privilege to suffer in the cause of Christ—a declaration which may sound strange to the man of the world. Yet this sentiment frequently obscures it in the New Testament. It is said of the apostles that "they departed from the presence of the council, rejoicing that they were counted worthy to suffer shame in his name." Peter said to his brethren, "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings." Christ came, suffered, and died to redeem the world from sin and death. This is a glorious work, and worthy of Christ himself. It is honorable and a source of joy to be engaged with him in this great work, and to even suffer with him.

Christians have been greatly persecuted because of their religion, and one design was to select such kind of punishment as would deter others by its disgraceful nature from becoming Christians. Nothing to most men would be more disgraceful than a public whipping. It is a punishment inflicted usually not so much because it gives pain, as because it is esteemed to be attended with disgrace. The Jewish rulers doubtless desired that the apostles might be so affected with the sense of disgrace as to be unwilling to appear again in public as preachers of the gospel of Christ; but they did not understand the motives that governed them. Instead of considering it a disgrace they felt it to be an honor thus to suffer for Christ. They had done nothing of which to be ashamed; and they rejoiced, therefore, in a conscience void of offence; and in the consciousness of benevolence and integrity.

In the third persecution of the Christians during the reign of the emperor Nerva A. D. 98, Ignatus bishop of Antioch suffered martyrdom for his faith in Christ. His last recorded words were, "Let the fire, the gallows, the devouring of wild beasts, the breaking of bones, the pulling assunder of my members, the bruising or pressing of my whole body, and the torments of the devil or hell itself come upon me, so that I may win Christ Jesus."

Paul says, "I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." He refers to the scars of the wounds that he had received in the service of Christ. He had been repeatedly scourged, and he bore the marks of that on his body. These were honorable scars and he was proud of them. "I prize this wound," said Lafayette, when he was struck in the foot by a ball at the battle of Germantown, "as among the most valuable of my honors." This was an evidence of his devotion to the cause of human liberty. Thus it was with Paul. His scars were more honorable and valuable to him than any ribbon or star indicating elevated rank, more valuable than ducal coronet: more valuable than the brightest jewel that ever sparkled on the brow of royalty.

The fifth together means a rich reward and a glorious future to the Christian. He is a child of God—"by faith in Christ Jesus." "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God: and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." He came "to redeem them that were under the law, that we might revive the adoption of sons. And because ye are sons, God sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, Abba, Father, Wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." It is just like this: a rich man takes a poor child into his family, adopts him as his son. In this way he becomes a joint heir with the man's own children. Thus God adopts us into his family as his children, and this makes us joint heirs with Christ. The inheritance of the child of God is incorruptible, and undefiled, and fadeeth not away." It is "reserved in heaven."

It is not possible for any one on earth to describe the riches of heaven. John had glorious visions of that country. He saw its beautiful flowers, trees, rivers, and mountains. He heard the triumphant songs of the redeemed, and saw the mighty host of the holy angels; yet he was compelled to say, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." It doubtless embraces all that is essential to our highest development and happiness.

The sixth together promises an honorable position to the disciple of Christ in heaven. There are three promises of Christ in reference to the future. 1. "Because I live, ye shall live." 2. "Where I am, there ye may be also." 3. "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I have overcome, and am set down with my Father in his throne." There is an ascending scale in these three promises of Christ. It is a grand thought that death will not end our existence, but that we shall live through all the coming ages of eternity. It is a still sublime and more inspiring thought that we shall live where Christ is, but above and beyond this is the promise of a seat with Christ on his throne.

The seventh together is the last link in the golden chain. "If so be that we suffer with him, that we may be glorified together." The sufferings of Christ were succeeded by a state of heavenly glory. The Father "set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might, and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come: and hath put all things under his feet, and given him to be head over all things to the church." It was this hope that sustained Christ in all his sufferings. "Who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is now set down at the right hand of the throne of God." All the disciples of Christ will share in his glory as joint-heirs with him. Just how this is to be, and all that it means we do not now know; but we shall learn from experience. "Now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face: Now I know in part; but then shall I know even as also I am known." Paul knew enough of the glorious that awaits the child of God to lift him above all dread of the sufferings and trials of this life; and he could say: "For I reckon that the sufferings of the present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us."

The Lions in the Way.

BY THEODORE L. CUYLER, D. D.

JOHN BUNYAN, in his immortal allegory, makes his Pilgrim to encounter, at a very early stage of his pilgrimage, "two lions in the way." He was told afterward that the ferocious-looking beasts were "placed there for trial of faith where it is, and for discovery of those that have none." The Pilgrim heard the lions roar; but he went on, keeping in the midst of the straight road, and they did him no harm, for the Lord of the road had mercifully muzzled them.

This is a parable for every one who aims to set out on a new and a better life. The road to Heaven is not a smooth, macadamized one, like the drives in a city park—well graded and well guarded. There are steep Hills of Difficulty to be climbed, valleys of sharp trial to be threaded, and lions to be faced. He that cometh after me, says the divine Saviour, must take up his cross and follow me; and the path of obedience to Jesus Christ often runs uphill. When an awakened soul—counvinced of sin by the Holy Spirit—undertakes a Christian life, he not only encounters difficulty in breaking with his old sinful self, but also oppositions from without. This evil world is not a friend to grace, and its currents do not set Godward.

One of the lions which a seeker after salvation is very apt to encounter is Ridicule. You may say that this is only an ass in a lion's skin; but it has terrors for thousands, especially for the timid, for the proud, and for the sensitive. The dread of a sneer has sent many a "Pliable" back into a life of impenitence, and I fear that the records of eternity will show that many a soul has been laughed out of Heaven. Some are timidly reluctant to have it known that they are even thoughtful about their soul's welfare. In Princeton College one of two most intimate friends was afraid to divulge to the other that he had determined to begin a new life and to serve Christ. At length he mustered courage to make the confession, and to his wondering delight he found his friend in the same state of mind. Each one had been a lion in the way to the other. A timid, shrinking wife is often afraid to expose her secret anxieties to an irreligious husband's laugh. A father who would not be afraid to face a cannon on a battlefield finds it no easy bit of bravery to call in his children and offer his first family prayer. When a certain pastor invited every anxious inquirer to retire with him to his study for conversation and prayer, one young man moved stealthily up the aisle until his eye met the eye of a companion, who gave him a look of surprise and contempt; and he slunk back again to hide his confusion and to stifle the conviction of conscience. "What a fool!" you may say. Very true; but, good reader, have you never played the coward at the bray of an ass who wore the skin of a lion?

Place an average young man in a circle of a shopmates or fellow-clerks or fellow-students with whom he desires to be on good terms, and what a strong temptation he is under to stifle his first religious convictions! How often he is laughed out of those convictions and laughed into places and practices that his conscience condemns; and bitterly does he pay for his cowardice. When a man of good intentions and small experience is exposed to the tainted atmosphere of politics, it requires no little courage to face the first sneers and stares and contemptuous flings that greet him when he stands up for the Right. The very taunt of "Sunday-school politics" has its terrors to the weakly vertebrated debutant in public life.

For twenty years William Wilberforce was the target of every graceless scoffer in the British Parliament who delighted to sneer at him as "the honorable and religious gentleman." He won his victory and had his reward. What Hadley Vicars had to encounter from his messmates in the British army—what John Wesley had to endure at Oxford for belonging to what was stigmatized as "the Holy Cluh," I need not repeat. Scoffers are Satau's guerrillas, skulking beside the pathway of Right, to aim their cowardly shots at better men than themselves. There is only one way to meet ridicule. March straight up to it and over it. Like the beasts that roared at "Christian" in the allegory, it will be found only a contemptible "chained lion" after all. Some of my readers may recall the story of the Christian soldier who knelt down to pray in the barracks and his ungodly comrade threw boots and other missiles at him. The weak-kneed chaplain suggested that he might avoid this ridicule by praying silently in bed. Meeting the chaplain soon after, the brave fellow said: "I took your advice for a night or two, but it looked like denying my Saviour. Now I kneel down and pray, and last night the whole dozen of them knelt down and I prayed for them!"

Sneers and scoffs are not the only "lions" to be encountered by the soul that seeks to lead a true life for Jesus Christ. Selfishness and worldly ambition are a pair of very ugly lions that require often the almighty grace of God to conquer. Henry Martyn, after winning the first honors at Cambridge, determined to consecrate himself to the humble toils of a foreign missionary. "Oh," he wrote in his diary, "it is an arduous thing, an awful thing to rout out every worldly ambition and every earthly affection and to live only for another world!" Jesus Christ gave him the grace to "stop the mouths of the lions," and out of the very crosses that he carried he wrought the ladder which carried him up to a glorious world-wide influence in the kingdom of God. The lions were made to draw his chariot.

Skepticism is a very noisy roaring lion in these days. March right up to it, my friend, and you will find that it begins and ends in mere denial of truth. It is a mere negation. Try the Bible for yourself as a rule of living; try Jesus Christ for yourself as Saviour and a Guide and the "lion" becomes a phantom of straw. Your simple "I know whom I believe" is the sufficient answer to all the infidelity that was ever spanned by men or devils.

Bunyan was right when he declared that God had so ordered it that Hills of Difficulty shall be found in every man's road to Heaven and that lions shall confront him in the way. They were put there not only to test faith, but to strengthen faith. Our enemies may become our helpers. Every tough climb carries you upward to a purer atmosphere. Every hard fight well fought gives you spiritual sinew. He that endureth to the end shall be saved.

Let me offer two or three practical suggestions to those who are seeking a true Christian life. The first one is: never seek easy paths or places. Peace of conscience, usefulness, spiritual growth and the joy of victory are never found there. Never choose any path in which you cannot discover the footprints of Christ and of all heroic men and women. To such a man as Paul the roar of lions became music to his ear; they proved to him that he was in the King's highway of holiness.

Every victory you win makes you the stronger. The strength of the conquered foe enters into your own soul. The vanquisher of Satan's lions becomes more lion-hearted. Faith as a mere opinion is only a straw; but faith exercised links you to Jesus Christ and becomes invincible.

Finally, when your Divine Leader commands a duty he gives you grace for that duty. For every fight he furnishes the weapons; his mastery of you will give you mastery of self and of sin. Faith will fire the last shot, and when the life-battle ends you will stand among the crowned conquerors in Heaven.—Independent.

Convicting Words.

Two of the most horrible murders in the criminal history of this country have been followed within a few months by one of the most memorable of trials. The people, not only of Massachusetts, but of other states, waited with intense interest for the verdict, that should set a young woman free from the terrible charge of killing her step-mother and her father, or that, by sustaining the charge, should convict her of the appalling crimes.

As the trial was public and widely reported, and was of national importance, a reference to it is not out of place.

As the cross-examination of the witnesses proceeded, the government's case gradually fell to pieces, and its inability to furnish convincing proof of guilt could be distinctly seen.

But one fact the lawyers who defended the young woman found it hard to overcome. It was twisted and distorted into a condemning motive. It embodied only a few thoughtless words, but upon these the attorney for the prosecution, in summing up in his closing address the testimony of the witnesses, largely depended for a verdict of "Guilty."

Some six months before the murders were committed, the accused young woman, as is common with girls, talked somewhat freely to an acquaintance about her domestic and family affairs.

"Don't say mother to me!" she is reported to have said to her dress-maker. "She is a mean, good-for-nothing thing!"

That was the whole of it; but it was the rope that came near hanging her. The hurried, impulsive words were enough to found an argument against her of sufficient motive for the crime, and to make emphatic illustration of the reflex action of hasty speech.

Many persons try to excuse the impetuous word by saying, "It's my way. I speak out openly and frankly what I feel."

Now we all know that to "call names" is one of the most common faults, especially of young people; but no one will say that this thoughtless indulgence necessarily means murder in the heart, or even deep-seated feeling. Youth is prolific in the use of intense expressions, and exaggerates pleasure or misery easily and heedlessly.

Any good that can be said about a friend or an acquaintance can never harm its subject, or do injury to the one that utters it. But if in the hurry of life, in moment of grievance, or in the snare of the temper, the temptation comes to give expression to the word that exposes human imperfections, or malign character, better bite the tongue than say it. Words are winged messengers that fly forth never to be recalled. A thoughtless expression may determine a character or ruin a life.

There are more than sixty separate warnings against talkativeness in the Bible. From Solomon to Christ it was no secret that, to the thoughtless man, his "mouth is his destruction, and his lips are the snare of his soul."—Youth's Companion.

Children for Leaders.

Under the above caption the Nashville Christian Advocate says:

"It is notorious that the young people in many places are giving direction and tone to the Church life; their societies, their leadership are conspicuous. Is this best? Can children be leaders? Is the spirit engendered by young life the spirit of sobriety, of reverence? Can there be solidity in such direction? The pastor makes a sad mistake who does not use his utmost care to save the young; the mistake is scarcely less serious and more far-reaching to turn the reins of control over to the young. The element of humility and obedience are not in leadership, but in following. The young are to be trained under the direction of those who, by reason of their age and training, have been schooled in the sober virtues of spiritual leadership.

"The spirit native to young folks is not the spirit that should form Church sentiment, or challenge Church leadership. Let the young be led by the training hand of age, experience, and wisdom.

"Rehoboam made no more fatal mistakes when he rejected the counsels of the old and tried leaders of his father for the spirit and freshness of young counsel, than the church does in making the young their leaders. Reverence is not in young hearts; experience, maturity, wisdom are not there. The prophesied woeful day to Israel would be when women and children were their leaders."

The facts stated are self-evident, but the way they are stated I am sure does not convey the right idea. It is not stated in the prophesy that the woeful day would be the result of having women and children as their leaders; but it is more probable that the indifference of the older people caused the woeful days and as God's cause must have leaders the women and children were pressed into service. Take for example a church that has come under the writers notice: It has a number of men on its roll who are apparently qualified to fill any office in the church but when it became necessary to elect a deacon they, one and all, absolutely refused to accept the position, and when a superintendent was to be elected for the Sunday school they again flatly refused to accept that office. Now what could be done? Through the indifferent and perhaps lukewarm condition of those who ought to have been appointed the church was in a quandary—it must use the women and children or let the church run down for want of Christian men to fill the offices and transact business. In this church there was a young man who had consecrated himself to God and thought that the utmost he could do would be but a small recompense for the inestimable blessing conferred upon him in the salvation of his soul. All eyes were now turned upon him. He told them he was neither qualified nor worthy for an office in the church but that he thought it was wrong to refuse to try to do the needed work and if they saw fit to elect him he would do his best with the help of his Redeemer. The result was he was elected to four offices in the church and two in the Sunday school.

Shame on such a church!

The men were not made indifferent because this youth was made a leader, but he was made a leader because of their woeful condition.

When those who should be in authority in the church neglect their privileges and plunge into worldly pursuits, or sit back in their pews expecting the pastor to tickle their ears and senses with eloquent and complimentary sermons prepared especially for them, and consider it a compliment to the church and God for them to attend divine worship once or twice a month, verily satan has a mortgage on their souls! Woeful days are upon the church of to-day!

God will have leaders and since the men have enlisted in the work of satan the ever faithful women with the children as earnest helpers nobly come to the front with their God given qualities and grandly, lovingly, heroically, push forward the Gospel of Christ, and it is little enough the rest of us do if we encourage them and help them that when these same children are grown old in the service of God and us old fossils are dead and laid up on a shelf the church will have leaders who are qualified, and the necessity will not exist for the children to be leaders. A false modesty on the part of many of our noble and well qualified women keep them in the back ground. When those who are eminently fitted for church work throw off the bondage and superstition of the dark ages and take their proper place in Christ's vineyard then, and not till then, will satan's power be broken.

The writer has heard many of those church deadheads say, with the adacity of a brass ape, that they ought not to be expected to go to church any oftener than they do, and that the church ought to be glad that they come at all.

The church will be surprised if they see such things in heaven.

It were better a thousand times that the church be led by children than that all perish for want of leaders. Prophecy tells us that in the great and perfect day "a little child shall lead." Then let us encourage the children, Bro. Advocate, and stop throwing cold water.

Holy Neck and Berea.

In this part of the vineyard things are pursuing an even tenor. No special revival service have been held yet, and therefore we have witnessed none of those great outpourings of the Holy Spirit which seem to have visited some of our sister churches. We have not heard the "rushing mighty wind," but trust we are ever hearing the "still small voice," calling Christian to a better life and the unregenerate from their sins. We are hoping and praying for those silent influences which will prepare us as churches and individuals, for the gift of the Holy Ghost, "when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." Until then, let us do our part and abide God's pleasure, knowing that "they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

Berea has had three valuable accessions during the year,—Bro. I. J. Monell from Bethlehem, and his wife from Benn's (M. E.) and Mrs. Mary Everett from Linville (Virginia Valley.) These are all active and useful members.

Special services for revival will be conducted at Holy Neck, beginning Monday after the 3rd Sunday in this month, by Rev. H. H. Butler and myself. May the hearts, and minds of both preacher and people be prepared for this great work, that God may bless our souls and strengthen his Zion at this place.

I feel much indebted to my churches for a vacation kindly granted me to attend the great "World's Fair" at Chicago. And "granting vacation" was not all. One of them (Berea) presented me with a handsome purse to help defray my expenses. This was an unexpected kindness which I greatly appreciated, and I heartily thank all who assisted in this act of benevolence assuring them it was accepted as an unmerited favor.

This leads me to note a fact, which, to my mind, has great significance. Many other churches have done the same thing. This is more than merely an expression of kindness toward pastors. It is an expression of the increased demand the church of today is making upon her ministry and an expression of her purpose to help them to meet that demand,—a demand that they be "up with the times." This is right, and it means better times for the church. Just as long as the church is satisfied with ignorance and illiteracy and superstition in the church, so long will it be there; but let the church put her veto upon it and it is bound to go.

It was my sad mission on yesterday to bury Miss Ella, daughter of Bro. Deansy Langston of Berea. Miss Ella had been greatly afflicted from childhood, and therefore deprived of those blessings and privileges so dear to most young people. But it is all over now. After a brief sickness she passed away on Saturday Sept. 9th, to be no more on earth. She was a member of the Episcopal church and died trusting in her Saviour, having expressed her desire to depart and be with Jesus which is far better. On Sunday afternoon we laid her away amid a drenching storm. How significant! The dead are shut out forever from the storms of sorrow and trouble, while the living must still endure them.

Attention.

TO MEMBERS OF THE MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION:

Notice is hereby given that the next Annual Meeting of this body will be held at Mt. Carmel church, Isle of Wight Co., Va., on Wednesday, Nov. 1, 1893—P. M.

All members are requested to send in their annual dues at once to Capt. T. R. Gaskins, Drivers, Va.—do not wait. There are more than 25 members who have not paid up the membership for the year now ending. I wish to beg each of them to pay at once, as the Association is helpless without money.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Ho for conference!

Who are your delegates?

Don't fail with you assessments!

Get ready for death; it is coming.

The Ga. & Ala. Conference next week!

Where are you going to spend eternity?

Get ready for conference; it will soon be here.

The rains last week did much damage in many places in the State.

You have no idea how much the SUN is NEEDING that $2.00 you owe it!!

Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., is this week aiding Rev. P. H. Fleming in a meeting at New Providence.

Now is the time to push conference collections. Let every church try to come up with all the collections in full.

Surely our congress does not understand the condition of the country. If it did, would it not act more promptly?

We need to give Roanoke attention, and that right early. Can we do it? Can the Missionary Association not look after this point? Let the approaching session at Mt. Carmel consider the matter and the arrangement may be made.

Don't fail to read Dr. Barrett's call to those who subscribed for the Missionary Association and then act.

BERKLEY NEWS:—Rev. S. S. Barrett is very feeble confined to his home. The new church is nearly complete. Rev. Roger Charnock has opened his academy for '93 and '94, with a good attendance.

Let the Conferences send in their minutes for the Annual as soon as the Conference adjourns. If you will do this, you will get the Annuals in about two weeks after the adjournment of the last conference. We want to make the Annual a beauty this year. The price will be as usual, ten cents.

Our thanks are due for a copy of hand book of the Centennial Celebration of Raleigh in 1892. It contains the early history of Raleigh together with the centennial address delivered by Kemp P. Battle, LL. D., and an account of the centennial celebration. It is neatly bound and the contents are exceedingly well arranged. It is a valuable book.

We need more literature—more papers taken, more tracts and books circulated and read. How can it be done? Well each one must do his part. Some one must write, some one must print and some one must sell and circulate. If we can get our brotherhood to co-operate in all these departments, we shall soon have enough literature to answer present needs.

The newspapers seem to make as much fuss over the new baby at the white house as though it were the only baby. It is right for the people to rejoice with the President of these great United States in all his prosperity. But with God, one baby is as good as another. The great men and women of the land, are not usually born in the white house nor some great mansion, but in some obscure building. This is often consolation to poor mothers whose babies receive but little notice. Jesus was born in a manger.

A letter from a brother, eminent among us, for his usefulness says: "We dwell apart." And then he gives a remedy for this sad state of our Zion, as follows! "We must get nearer to Christ and that will bring us nearer to each other and nearer to our church work." That is the key note—closer to Christ, and that will heal our wounds and mend our broken fences and restore wasted confidence, and fill our empty hearts with a real sympathy that "the world, the flesh and the devil" cannot destroy. In getting closer to Christ we must get closer to holiness and further away from sin. Let us seek the baptism of the Holy Ghost and that will lift us above the miasmatic influences of sin and make us to dwell serenely on the mount of transfiguration, that is, we shall get so near to God that we shall be changed in spirit and life—we shall put away the old man of sin and put on the new man in Christ. Oh for the baptism of the Holy Ghost for the church.

The attention of the members of the Missionary Association is called to the notice in this issue from the President of that body. We hope the forthcoming meeting of the Association may be one of real encouragement. Certainly if the CHRISTIANS, as a people, are to do God any real, active and aggressive service, they cannot afford to pass by such an opportunity as is afforded them for usefulness in the spread of the gospel, in the organization of this Missionary Association. A big door is open to the CHRISTIANS throughout the length and breadth of our country to do a grand Missionary work. Think of Georgia and Alabama, and the Deep River and the Virginia Valley Conferences, where we are weak and need to recruit our forces at once, if we are to hold the fields we now have in our possession.

Nearly all of our active denominations use the labors of the Evangelist in their efforts to spread the gospel and to build up the churches already established. Why do not the CHRISTIANS do so also? The office is a scriptural one, the work is a useful one and much needed—then why not have the evangelists in our conference? We certainly have men adapted to the work—why not look them up and call them out? The N. C. and Va. Conference and the Eastern Va. Conference each ought to have an evangelist to go from church to church and labor in the revival work, and if that is more than can be supported, certainly the two ought to afford all the work one man can do and support him well. What say the brethren. Do we need such a man? If so, who is he? Let us have an expression of opinion as to the work and the man.

What did you preach about last Sabbath? Perhaps the World's Fair, or some other current event. Very well, but would not a better subject have been found in "the old, old story of Jesus and his love"? Verily the World's Fair and other current events afford a fine field for oratory and description and speculation on the possibilities of the in-coming century, but Jesus and his love, his power to save from sin and the joy of a life hid with Christ in God, those are themes of which this poor sin-stricken world has great need to hear and to know. Brethren of the ministry of the gospel of Christ, suppose we let the secular press tell the people about the World's Fair and current events, while we give ourselves truly to the preaching of the Word of God. Doubtless the change would be helpful to many churches and to many preachers as well. The glad story of redemption through the blood of the Lamb—that is our theme—the grandest of earth. Let us confine ourselves to our work and "press with vigor on."

Scientific Preaching.

The gospel is intended to bring an alienated world to God through Christ. And this should be the object of every sermon. Preaching for any other purpose is actuated through impure motives, and will sooner or later bring the preacher evil tidings.

If the promptings in the preacher's heart are all right they are sure to send him to the proper source for his material, and it will always be found in the Bible. The gospel of the Bible, coming from a pure heart, is sure to bring souls unto Christ; "For it is the power of God unto salvation."

A preacher may draw from the source of knowledge he has to illustrate and drive the gospel truth to the heart. But he must be sure that the great vital body of the sermon is from the Bible. The history of the world shows that the preachers who have done most in leading men and women to God, have been those who have held themselves close to the Bible. It is the only kind of preaching that is adapted to all classes and conditions of people, the rich, the poor, the high, the low, all the human family. It lifts the beggar up from the dung hill, and brings the rich man down to a level plain; it points out the same path for all.

There are a few preachers in the world who draw their sermons largely from science. There please a few and disgust many. To a few of these who understand science, they are as beautiful toys without life; but to the illiterate they are as a "sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal."

Science is all right in its place, and should be studied and learned by all who are blessed with an opportunity of doing so. God intended it to bring great temporal blessings to the physical man; but

He gave the Bible to teach the ways of salvation. The Bible has God for its author, and will always vindicate its truthfulness by His power and goodness, and will make it a spiritual power, wherever it is preached, to all grades of people. Man is the author of all scientific books, and they may be studied and learned with as much accuracy by the wicked as the righteous, showing by this that they bring their thoughts from things of the world. A soul touched by the finger of God's love always finds a pleasure in the Bible which other books cannot bring. And any one who finds more pleasure in science than in the Bible, be he preacher or some one else, is a stranger to the kingdom of salvation. He is not purged from his old sins, and cannot see afar off.

Study science and all other good text books, but be sure to preach the Bible. It is the preachers great text book. It is the "sword of the spirit." It is the book that teaches the ways of God. Never give up the Bible. Hold on to it as the only God given book.

Christianity a Civilizer.

The natural tendency of man, unrestrained by Christianity either directly or indirectly is retrogradation. And this retrogradation will lead to the lowest hell. But the natural tendency of Christianity is elevation towards a higher life.

No nation, destitute of the influences of Christianity, can rise in the scale of civilization. Because, without Christianity sin like a mighty weight pulls down all the time. And as sin can rise no higher than its author, the devil, it must hold that, over which it has influence, on a level with him.

Christianity always has an elevating influence on every thing over which it has an influence. The man saturated in crime, when brought under the saving influence of Christianity, is made a good citizen, and thereby one of the small units in the sum total of civilization. A community brought under the saving influence of Christianity is a larger number in the make up of civilization. And thus, in proportion to the influence of Christianity over the citizens of a nation, civilization is advanced.

No neighbor or nation, untouched by Christianity, has ever made any progress towards a higher life either mentally or morally; for they are destitute of the force of development in these directions. A thing to move in any direction, must have some power with its tendency in that direction.

If you want to find the best forms of government and the highest types of civilization, go where Christianity has the greatest influence over the people. "Righteousness exalteth a nation."

The influence of Christianity in the heart makes a man a better husband, a better father, a better doctor, a better merchant, a better citizen, a better any thing.

The world must be lifted to heaven, or it will be pulled down to hell. Christianity is the force that pulls towards heaven; sin is the force that drags towards hell. Give Christianity its full power, and soon you will see a type of civilization imitating that of heaven.

Elon College Notes.

The esteemed and accomplished Miss Bessie Moring left our town last Tuesday to take a position as Art Teacher in female department of Rutherfordton Military Institute Rutherfordton, N. C. Miss Bessie will be greatly missed in our "Ville" and we congratulate the people of Rutherfordton or their success in procuring the services of such a young lady.

Mr. B. F. Long, Jr., one of our Alumni of '93, left here last Monday for the State University where he will take a post graduate course.

Mr. J. M. McAdams our ex-postmaster has moved his family to Siler City where he expects to go into the lumber business. We regret the loss of him and family.

We were made to rejoice the first of last week by the arrival of Mr. B. T. Hurley and Miss Annie Gardner—both students of last year. Miss Annie reports a pleasant and profitable trip to Chicago.

The "Society Fever" has not yet abated, its temperature now being about one hundred and fifty-two degrees.

Mr. W. H. Boone spent last Tuesday in Greensboro in the interest of the Elon College Monthly.

Mrs. C. O. Ives accompanied by Mrs. J. J. Otley both of Berkley, Va., came to our town last Friday and will remain with us until Monday. Mrs. Ives came to visit her daughter Miss Mary who is here in school. These ladies seem greatly pleased with all our surroundings.

Dr. Kernodle, our College Physician, has moved his family to the cottage formerly occupied by our ex-postmaster, Mr. McAdams.

Prof. Bandy carried his class in surveying out last Saturday to make a preliminary survey of a rail road from Elon to Altamahaw cotton mills. The class reports a pleasant and practical trip and is elated with this study under Prof. Bandy.

We have heard many fine compliments paid the last issue of the SUN. We trust it will continue worthy of such compliments and even greater ones.

A choir has been organized here among the faculty and students, which will meet regularly for practice. By this we think that our music will soon surpass any that may be heard at any of our churches.

Prof. Newman filled Mr. Laine's appointment at Mt. Vernon church last Sunday.

Yesterday we had regular services in the College Chapel. Preaching in the morning by Dr. Long, and an interesting prayer meeting at night conducted by Mr. W. H. Boone.

Inconsistencies and Results.

There is perhaps nothing that hinders the progress of the church more than the inconsistencies of its members. When a man comes into the church he is compelled to keep his church covenant, if he lives a Christian, God requires him to keep the whole law and not just a part. How much consistency would there be in a man who would build a fence around his garden and then let the gate stand open all the time? What would be the result? Why, his neighbors chickens would destroy all his vegetables just as entirely as if he had not put a fence around it at all. Now tell me what is to become of the man who keeps nine of God's laws and neglects the tenth, or refuses to keep it. Let us see the result. The word of God says: "For whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." James 2:10. One of the late and the great inconsistencies, of the churches of this country, was the asking of the blasphemers' drunk and illoyal men of Chicago to keep the gates of the World's Fair closed on Sunday, when the churches don't keep the Sabbath Holy themselves. Here is the humble consecrated pastor who preaches loyalty to his congregation and the benefit of keeping the law, and then steps right out of his pulpit to a car and hastens to some other town or home or if he don't do this, he goes home with some of his members and sits down and talks on general secular topics, viz., farming, merchandising, money-making, or politics, etc., etc. If I understand what God requires of me as a Christian it is as much my duty to refrain from secular talk as secular work. And now here are the laymen, who when they get on the church ground, you will find them grouped here and there, and I tell you it is a nice little treat to find one of these groups talking on a religious subject, but it is rather, what did you get for your tobacco or cotton? or grumbling of the hard times, or can't I hire you to work for me tomorrow, or help me roll logs, thresh wheat or shuck corn, etc., etc. Now these wicked men of Chicago have seen these inconsistencies of ours and hence they have contempt for our petitions. And another inconsistency is this, that we would petition congress to enact a law forbidding the World's Fair being open on Sunday, when we have a law already forbidding all secular labor. Now if we were to see a man plowing or splitting rails why we would proceed to indict him. Now this reminds me of the following incidents:

A magistrate once arrested three wagons, teams, drivers and held them over till Monday, tried and fined them for violating the law and at the same time trains run right through this village every Sunday and that same magistrate lives in this village, but does not even attempt to arrest the train, and he has as much right for this and as much law to sustain him in this as he had in the former case. And another was as follows: A steamer landed at Norfolk, Va., on Sunday and some men went to unloading this vessel on the same day and for this violation they were arrested and tried. Well this reminds me of something that is very common in our days, viz., That if a man steals a pair of shoes which he possibly needs, or a pocket knife, or he is hungry and steals a chicken he must go to the penitentiary for 2, 3, 5 years, but if some other man shall steal 5 or 10 thousand dollars and to say the least of it he is respected and more especially if he takes the advantage of the homestead law, or if he hides behind an assignmet, for instance, I know a character, who was in business, and he gave his father his house and lot, bought another and built him a very handsome house on it and made that over to his wife or it stood in her name, and then made an assignment, after the assignment took charge of the remainder of the property, he then remodeled his business house and made it large and went into business on a much larger scale, and then in less than 12 months he was made an officer in his church. The result of this is that sinners lose confidence in us, and we lose hold on them, and in many cases the sinner has contempt for our pretended righteousness. I take the following paragraph from the Winston Union-Republican, which speaks for itself. It looks like we are swallowing camels and choking at gnats:

"At a meeting of the board of Aldermen Monday night the subjoined Sunday ordinance was passed:

"Any person who shall open any shop or store on Sunday, for the purpose of buying or giving, selling, except in case necessity, shall be fined $25; and if any store shall be found open, it shall be prima facie evidence that the same was opened by the proprietor for the purpose of selling; drug stores may be kept open at all times; but no cigars, tobacco, soda-water, mineral water, or any goods except for medical purposes, shall be sold on the Sabbath, at any place within the corporation of the town. Restaurants must close Saturday night at 12 o'clock and may open from 6 to 8:30 a. m. and 12 to 2 p. m. and from 5 to 7 p. m."

This settles mercantile and drug store part of the question. However the warehouses in tobacco season, livery stables, street cars, post offices, railroads, etc., are still open.

THE CHILDREN'S CORNER.

MA DEAR CHILDREN:—

Here is a full Corner again to-day. Now this is nice. Bessie writes an interesting letter about her trip to Chicago and we want to hear more about it. She says she is afraid her money was lost with the letter when the office was moved, but it was not for I take care of the money as soon as it comes. Maud writes quite a sharp letter to me and asks me to correct a mistake in her letter of last week. She answered the question and stated where to find it but the printer made her say, "In the SUN of July 14 verse," leaving out several words between "July" and "14 verse." We are sorry it happened so Maud, and hope you will overlook this little error and write again soon.

I know the Corner has been enjoyed very much the past weeks and I hope many more cousins will write and thus keep it full.

Cordially yours,
UNCLE TANGLE.

FRANKLINTON, N. C., Sept. 9, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—Baby Staley comes to greet you and the little cousins. Hope you haven't forgotten who she is. Somebody recollects when a pretty silk handkerchief came with Baby Staley on it. I know who she is, and thank her too. Now if you lose this letter like you did my other one she will not know it. I send five cents.

WILLIE STALEY.

FRANKLINTON, N. C., Sept. 9, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I guess we little cousins have been resting long enough, as my school begins Monday I thought I would write today. I have had a very quiet vacation helping mamma in her canning and preserving fruit. There is nothing of much interest for me to write as I did not go to see the world's wonders this. I brought me a napkin ring carved by hand out of wood from Tunice.

You announced in your paper two weeks ago that I had a new Auntie she and my Uncle came home yesterday and we all were very glad to see them. I send one dime.

Your loving niece,
ANNIE STALEY.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Va., Sept. 14, '93.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—As I have never written to the Children's Corner I thought I would write a short letter. My papa takes the SUN and I run every week to get the paper before mamma gets it, to read the cousins' letters. I am a little girl twelve years old and I go to Sunday school every Sunday morning. Dr. Barrett preaches for us and I like him splendid. I must close for fear my letter finds its way to the waste basket.

MARY C. HANBURY.

FRANKLINTON, N. C., Sept. 9, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—As my last letter was lost when the office was moved I fear my dime was also, but I hope not. I will write again and send you another dime. I hope Margaret will have a letter in the Corner soon. I am very sorry I was absent when she came to see us.

I will tell you a few things I saw at the "White City," I can't describe the fair, for it is beyond description. Papa and I left home the third of Aug. for Suffolk, where we were joined by six girls. At Norfolk we went on board a Washington Steamer. We sailed up the Potomac and passed Newport News and Old Point Sunday morning about six o'clock we passed Mt. Vernon, the old and renowned home of Washington. Long before we reached Alexandria the Washington Monument appeared in the smoky distance almost as a pillar of cloud. We were elevated to the lofty height of 500 ft. in the Washington Monument, from which we could see the capital of the nation. One of the first things we saw after we came in sight of Lake Michigan was the Ferris Wheel. We went around the wheel from which we could get a splendid bird's eye view both of Chicago and the "White City." The largest building covers 44 acres. It is the manufactures and liberal arts. I can't undertake to tell many things for it will occupy too much room. I saw a little Esquimaux baby, named Christopher Columbus, and I went on the Santa Maria an exact model of Columbus' ship. We went to the stockyard in Chicago. On our route from Chicago to Niagara we went through the St. Clair river tunnel. It is the greatest sub-marine tunnel in the world and the link that binds together the two great nations, the United States and Canada. I think Niagara is the grandest sight I have ever seen. The height of the falls is so great that to stand above and look down, the people look as mere specks. We went down on the incline railway and rode on the Maid of the Mist. A man was drowned there the day we were there. As my letter is so long I will have to close with love to you and the cousins. Our school begins Monday: Uncle Duncan and Aunt Minnie returned from the Fair yesterday and we were ever so glad to see them.

Your loving niece,
BESSIE STALEY.

To be truly kind, one must be truly thoughtful. In a surface view, many words and deeds seem kind which, if followed out to the their logical conclusion, would prove to have been in the best sense, unkind. And, conversely, some things which on the surface seem unkind have in them that which is most truly kind. In a recent interview, Dr. Edward Everett Hale is reported as quoting Emerson's comment upon an acquaintance who had recently taken, at Harvard, the highest honors. Said Emerson, "I didn't know he was so fine a fellow. Now, if some misfortune could only happen to him; if he could be turned out of college, or could be unpopular in his class, or his father could fail in business, all would be well with him." It might be somewhat hazardous for most persons to be so outspoken or even to go so far in their thinking as this. But Emerson was profoundly discriminating. What he said of this man of honors he might not have said of the next man. What he said contained a principle, but enunciated no rule. We must have heart in our thoughts; we must have thought in our deeds. We must discriminate to be kind.—S. S. Times.

A Foolish Custom.

There is a disagreeable custom in some families of continually referring to the mistakes and wrong-doings of the various members. A child does wrong, repents and is forgiven, but the parents talk of the matter for weeks afterwards, and even in the presence of guests. An older boy has been unsuccessful in a little business venture or in something he has tried to make. Brothers, sisters, and even father and mother take care that he shall not forget it, and although the allusions may be good-natured, they hurt and the effect upon the character is most unpleasant. A sensitive child draws back into his shell and becomes morbid, self-conscious and given to concealment. Another is made sullen, while discouragement is the evident effect upon a third. Surely an offense forgiven should be forgotten, or else the forgiveness is of little worth. And making fun of the mistakes of children seldom does any good. To be sure, they often do foolish and laughable things, but they do them in good faith and deserve no ridicule. A reproach once given should be left to do its work. Silence and the custom of ignoring past misdemeanors have worked wonders in the character and life of more than one child.—Congregationalist.

"It Will Make You Work."

A good temperance lecture is addressed to young men, from Good Cheer:

"I drink to make me work!" said a young man. To which an old man replied: "That's right; thee drink and it will make thee work! Harken to me a moment, and I'll tell thee something that may do thee good. I was once a prosperous farmer. I had a good, loving wife and two as fine lads as ever the sun shone on. We had a comfortable home, and lived happily together. But we used to drink ale to make us work. Those two lads I have laid in drunkards' graves. My wife died broken-hearted, and she now lies by her two sons. I am seventy-two years of age. Had it not been for drink, I might have been an independent gentleman; but I used to drink to make me work, and mark, I am obliged to work now. At seventy-two years of age it makes me work for my daily bread. Drink! drink! and it surely will make you work."

Reproving Church Disturbers.

A clergyman was annoyed by people talking and giggling. He paused, looked at the disturbers and said:

"I am always afraid to reprove those who misbehave, for this reason: Some years since, as I was preaching, a young man who sat before me was constantly laughing, talking and making uncouth grimaces. I paused and administered a severe rebuke. After the close of service, a gentleman said to me: 'Sir, you have made a great mistake; that young man was an idiot!' Since then I have always been afraid to reprove those who misbehave themselves in chapel, lest I should repeat that mistake and reprove another idiot." During the rest of the service there was good order.—Etc.

ALL POLICYHOLDERS UPON AN EQUAL FOOTING.

By able, conservative management, safe investments, big rate of interest, low death rate, the Northwestern has won the love and applause of its policyholders and the respect and admiration of all who are acquainted with it.

Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24, '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. McAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N. C., says: "I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. I now hold three policies in this company. My dividends are much larger than in other companies in which I carry insurance. The affairs of the company are safely and conservatively managed; they pay promptly and are exceedingly fair and liberal in their dealings with their policy-holders."

Mr. R. B. Raney, Raleigh, N. C., under date of April 1, '93, says: "I have held a policy in the Northwestern for a number of years, and am satisfied it has no superior."

Suffolk Letter.

The fall season has brought many cases of show fever, but the death-rate is very low. This has been a year, so far, conspicuously exempt from disease in America. The thought of many in 1892 was that Asiatic Cholera would invade our shores and the "World's Fair" would send it broadcast over the states. But the millions have attended the "Fair" and returned to their homes in health without a thought of danger. You can hardly enter a car without seeing a happy group going to or from Chicago. Instead of it being a center to spread disease and death it has been the center of educational forces that will never fade till the remotest future time. By no means the least of these potencies is the charity that millions will feel and the religious impulses generated by the "Parliament of Religions" now in session. Dr. C. J. Jones of Norfolk and Rev. J. T. Kitchen of Windsor have been in attendance at these meetings and will, no doubt, tell us something of the impressions they received.

As to the "Panic" which has been felt in many other lands besides our own, the effect on society will be good. It checks the mad rush for gold. It explodes the shams and wild-cat schemes of deceivers and puts a check on reckless credit. It keeps the Christian from putting too much confidence in wealth and brings a quiet that turns thought within. When the world disappoints, let the Christian turn with a certain faith to God. I am pleased at the good reports in the SUN from so many fields telling of "times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." Meetings begin this week at Antioch and Holy Neck. Dr. Barrett is pastor at the former and Rev. N. G. Newman at the latter. Bro Newman will be assisted by Rev. H. H. Butler.

We have occupied the basement of our new church since the first Sunday in August for Sunday school and during September for preaching. Some pastors has been absent every Sunday during the month and hence our congregations have been large—filling our room.

I am now on my way to Graham, N. C., to assist brother P. H. Fleming in a meeting with the church where I preached my first sermon and where I was assistant pastor for several year. In my absence Rev. J. W. Rawls will occupy my pulpit next Sunday and I will return for the first Sunday in October.

Profs. Scholz and Cole are in place to assist Prof. P. J. Kernodle in the "Suffolk Collegate Institute" which opens tomorrow. The outlook for a good attendance is bright.

Two gentlemen have been received into the church this month.

The ladies of the church are preparing to hold a "Grand Columbian Carnival" from October 9th to the 19th the proceeds of which will be given as a contribution to the Building Fund of the new church.

W. W. STALEY.

Holland Items.

We had a fine attendance at my prayer meeting last night. Rev. N. G. Newman, the beloved pastor of Holy Neck church was with us, and gave us an excellent talk on "Spiritual Growth," the grand object of the prayer meeting. All felt that it was good to be there.

Rev. N. G. Newman held services at Holy Neck yesterday. The projected meeting proper, will begin there today. Rev. H. H. Butler, the most successful revivalist of the E. Va. C. Conference, is to assist the pastor.

Bro. Etheldred Holland spoken of in our last week's article in the SUN as being ill, is now some better. He has been a great sufferer, but is patient and resigned. His condition will gradually grow better till his recovery.

Bro. Jesse Holland, near Holland, is a great sufferer from rheumatism. He is a member of Holy Neck church, and a pious and worthy young man. He has the sympathy of his friends, generally.

Rev. R. D. H. Demarest has bought a farm near Elwood, Nansemond Co., with the view of locating his parents, for the enjoyment of country life.

Married at Comberland Gap, Tenn., Sept. 5, 1893, by Rev. Victor D. York, Rev. H. H. Watson—Presiding Elder of Little Rock District, Ark., Methodist church South—and Miss Lillie, youngest daughter of Maj. R. W. York.

An exchange says that a wagon maker who had been dumb for years picked up a hub and spoke. Yes, and a blind carpenter on the same day reached for his plane and saw; and a deaf ranchman went out with his dog and herd; a noseless fisherman caught a barrel of fish and smelt; a defunct hatter was tenderly deposited upon a pile of hair and felt; and a forty ton elephant inserted his trunk into a grate and flue. Oh, it was a great day for wondrous work! —Buchanan Banner.

The Mouth as a Catch-All.

There are a multitude of people who, in addition to the natural and proper uses of the mouth, seem to regard it as a sort of handy receptacle, into which any small object may be thrust for safe-keeping till wanted. This trait is not confined to either sex or to any age. Many a fond mother will cry out in alarm at the sight of her child running about with a plaything in its mouth, yet the chances are that if this same mother should an hour later have occasion to pay her fare on a public conveyance, she would fish out, from some ridiculous receptacle called a purse, a small coin, which she would hold between her lips till ready to make some other disposition of it—and this regardless of the fact that on an average the coin had been traveling about the country for from fifteen to twenty years, during which time it had been in all sorts of places and amid all kinds of surroundings. This observation is true of many other things than small coins, and of fathers as well as of mothers. Some of the most painful instances possible have recently illustrated the danger of this habit. The horrible death of a well-beloved clergyman, the result of swallowing a small cork which he was holding between his lips, is fresh in mind; and at this writing a man in Albany has his lungs filled with tacks which he swallowed in a similar manner. He was holding them between his lips, while putting down a carpet, and inhaled them in laughing at the remark of some one present. He now lies at the point of death, and no earthly power can aid him. Surely these illustrations, and the suggestions which they invariably call up, ought to be sufficient reason why no thinking person should ever make a temporary receptacle of the mouth for foreign substances.—Good Housekeeping.

Leaves From My Note Book.

It is certainly to be regretted that men and women in this enlightened age and "Christianized country," will allow themselves to be swept along in a flood-tide of fury and frenzy to commit such an outrage against the laws of our land and the rules of common humanity as was committed at Roanoke, Va., last week. It is true an outrage had been already committed before the lynching and burning took place. But this does not justify men in becoming fiends.

The story as it is told now stands something like this (if reported correctly which is very doubtful): An aged white lady had come into the Roanoke market with some produce for sale. When not yet two dollars worth is sold, the lady is in some way enticed into a cellar by a negro. Here the poor woman is beaten almost to death, robbed of her mite of hard earned money by the negro fiend, and left in the cellar to die. The negro is soon caught, identified and imprisoned. Soon a mob of angry citizen appeared at the prison and demand the prisoner. He is refused. Several shots are fired. Several citizen are killed, others are wounded. But the negro is finally obtained by the angry mob, hung, shot and then taken down and laid on a heap and burned. This is all done by an angry, frenzied mob, being first enraged by the atrocious crime of the negro and then driven to madness and to fury because several of their own number has been fired into and killed. Thus wrought up the horrible deed was perpetrated. This I say is very much to be regretted. Such outrages against our laws are simply deplorable, sickening and disgusting. Why will not men learn to let the just awards of crime take their course and leave the laws of the land to inflict penalties. No mob of human beings, when wrought up to the utmost tension of madness and fury, can make an intelligent and equitable law, by which rational, sane beings should be governed and by which calm justice should be meted out to all. The fact is, I doubt if there is not yet an unlearned lesson in Psychology about mobs anyway. Men in an infuriated mob will do and say things that they would even shudder to think of if away from the crowds and to themselves. I doubt if there was any one man mean and heartless enough, if left alone, in that lynching mob at Roanoke, to perform the deeds of heartlessness and atrociousness that were performed by all. In a crowd of this kind then I should say that the whole was not only the sum of its parts, but that the whole had a reflex influence on each of its parts and that the fury, frenzy and madness that—in the heart of each was the sum total of such feelings in the hearts of all. I doubt not then that the conduct of mobs yet substantiates the theory of "the blending of souls and communion of spirits" and that our feelings are not only shared by our fellows, but are added to, and reacted upon by, the feelings of others. Anyway if there is a Psychology of the conduct of mobs, as there certainly seems to be, let us hope that it will be learned and adhered to. Such conduct can but rob the law of justice, cheat the state of her dues and blunt the morals of the community.

How Can the Busy Pray?

It is just as necessary for them to pray as for those who have leisure. But the latter must not theorize too much, or lay down strict rules as binding upon all, until they appreciate the difficulty of having to work in a factory, or at a desk, or elsewhere, at least ten hours every day, during which a man's time is not his own. Nor is it much use to bid those "enter into their closet," or place of private retirement, who live under circumstances in which privacy is almost impossible to be secured.

What, then? Cannot the busy pray? Certainly; they must. It is their duty toward God, their neighbor and themselves.

How, then? General rule: Where there's a will there's a way.

Suggestions: 1. Make your morning and evening prayers a habit more difficult to dispense with than breakfast or supper. 2. Make the most of public worship, especially the Holy Communion, on God's rest day, and whensoever you can on a week day. Let this, too, be made a habit from which it will seem impossible to deviate without violence to self. 3. If you live anywhere within reach of your parish church, insist that the doors shall be left open from morning till night—at all events, in spring, in summer and autumn—and make a habit of dropping in for a few minutes either at noon or after supper; or, still better, both. So far as this is only a matter of habits, you form them easily enough in things secular, and can, if you please, form them in matters of religion.—Selected.

In a Trap.

An exchange has the following: An evangelist called upon every man in the congregation who had paid his debts to stand up. They rose en masse. He added: "Sit down; and every man in this meeting who has not paid his debts, stand up." Only one man arose. He explained that he was the "editor of a religious paper," adding, "nearly every member of this congregation owes me for my paper." This caused a sensation. A good many paid up on the spot and others settled next day. Three got angry and demanded: "Stop my paper!"—St. Louis Christian Advocate.

Prize Essays.

On the great need of better Sabbath observance by its professed friends. Jesus taught with special emphasis that many of both clergy and laity will not get to heaven. (Matt. vii, 22, 23.)

Sabbath breaking in secular thought, reading, and conversation, work, travel, amusements, etc., may yet be found to be the point where many professed Christians left the path of light. Worse still, their example in this matter may also lead others to ruin.

Sunday will not hang heavy on the hands of those doing only as much Christian work on that day as their own spiritual health demands.

The Philadelphia Sabbath Association (1224 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa) offers a first prize of $70 and a second prize of $30 for the best essays on the above not exceeding 1000 words.

All essays to be sent in by January 1, 1894, and accompanied by the writer's name and address in a sealed envelope.

Rebinding the Soul to God.

BY REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

Religion. James 1:27.

The word religion occurs five times in the Bible. (Acts 21:5; Gala. 1:13-14; James 1:26-27.) The word religious occurs twice. (Acts 13:43; James 1:26) Sometimes it means external ceremonial worship, as it was corrupted by the traditions of the Pharisees. (Acts 26:5.) Once it is used in the sense of superstition. (Colo. 2:18.) In the Greek it is, "In the religion of angels." It is usually used to mean inward piety of heart, whereby God is truly acknowledged, revered, loved, and obeyed. The primary and true meaning of the word, is, "the rebinding of the soul to God." It is derived from the Latin word "religare," "to bind fast." It denotes the obligations that we feel to love, reverence, and obey God, growing out of the relation that we sustain to him as dependent creatures. In his original state man was bound to God by reverence, love, and a consciousness of his obligations to him; but he became alienated, and is now in a state of enmity against him. "Because the carnal mind is enmity against God, for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." This is an unhappy and ruinous state, and without divine interposition man is hopelessly lost. He is "without God in the world," "having no hope."

Man is a child of God by creation, and as such God loves him notwithstanding his sinfulness. He is "not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance." "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." In the manifestation of himself to the world through Christ, God is seeking to slay the enmity of the human heart, and rebind man to himself. "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto us the word of reconciliation." God seeks through various means to awaken man to a sense of his obligation and accountability to him, and thus draw him back and rebind him to himself that he may be saved from sin and its awful consequences. Hence he said to his ancient people when they had become alienated from him, "cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart: for why will ye die. O house of Israel! For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord God: wherefore turn yourselves, and live!"

One of the great means employed by God to awaken men from the sleep of sin, and rebind them to himself is the preaching of the gospel. "The word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discernor of the thoughts and intents of the heart." It reveals man to himself, and makes him see and feel his sinfulness and need of pardon. Rev. Mr. Bradbury of England was an earnest preacher of the gospel, and a zealous advocate of civil and religious liberty. He exposed the wicked plans of the Popish faction. This angered them, and they employed a man to murder him. To make himself acquainted with Mr. Bradbury so that he would make no mistake and kill the wrong man he went to hear him preach. Mr. Bradbury's clear and forcible presentation of divine truth quickened his conscience, enlightened his judgment, and made him see and feel his great sinfulness. He went to him in humble penitence, told his affecting tale, and asked him to pray for him. He was converted, lived and died a Christian.

Another means of awakening men to a conscious realization of their sinfulness and need of salvation, and thus rebinding them to God is the solemn events of his providence. He brings them into circumstances, and subjects them to events, that compel them to think upon their personal relation and accountability to him. In this way he seeks to draw them back and rebind them to himself in loving obedience to his laws. The Rev. Mr. Cecil was in early life an avowed infidel, but his mother was a devout Christian. When she came to her death bed she was wonderfully sustained by Christ, and went down into the valley and shadow of death rejoicing in hope of heaven. Witnessing the triumphant death of his mother convinced her son of the truthfulness of the gospel of Christ, and led him to become a Christian. He entered the ministry, and became a great power in the pulpit for good. Men are sometimes awakened to a consciousness of their sinfulness and need of the hope of the gospel by sickness, loss of property, and the near approach of death.

Another means of drawing men back to God and rebinding them to him is the quickening and enlightening influence of the Holy Spirit. Christ said that he would send the divine Spirit, "and when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment."

The word rendered "reprove" means to influence one to do a thing by presenting reasons for doing it. Hence it means also to convince of any thing, and particular to convince of crime. This is its meaning in the text I have quoted, and men are made to see and realize their sinfulness by the influence of the Holy Spirit. God comes to man in this way and makes him feel his presence, holiness, justice, and his need of being a Christian. When Deguerre was working his sun-picture his great difficulty was to fix them. The light came and imprinted the image; but when the tablet was drawn from the camera the image had vanished. Thus it is with men. They hear the truth preached, and feel its force at the time; but it soon vanishes from their mind, and is forgotten. God sends his Spirit to reproach it, and fix it in their mind. This it does, and sometimes long after men have heard the work of God preached it is brought home to their hearts and consciences by the Holy Spirit, and they are led to repentance and to Christ.

A realization of his sinfulness and accountability, and the impossibility of escaping from responsibility tends to lead man back to God and rebind him. If a man knew his king could and would discover all his disobedience and punish him for it, it would tend to restrain his sinful inclinations and hold him in obedience to the laws of his government. Thus it is with man in his relation to God.

The rebuilding of the soul to God is not simply obedience to his law from fear of punishment. Such obedience does not come from loyalty to the law maker. Fear of punishment may lead a man to obey God, but it will never cause him to love God. Fear can only make a man think and see his danger. It will never inspire him with love, and the obedience that comes from love is the only service that is acceptable to God. He says, "My son, give me thine heart." "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness." It is love alone that rebinds the heart to God. Punishment may bring outward conformity to his law, but it cannot bring heart loyalty. Love alone can do this. The parent may compel his erring child to obey him by exercise of his authority and power, but he cannot win his love in this way. It is love alone that commands loyalty of heart, and rebinds the child to the parent. Thus it is with man and God. Loyalty comes only from love. Obedience from the fear of punishment is a state of slavery, and this is an unhappy condition; but the service of love is a happy one. "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear: because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love."

God seeks to win man away from the love of that which sorded and sensual, and to awaken in his heart pure desires, love for that which is holy and uplifting. He comes to him in the fullness of his sympathy and love, and entreats him to come back to him in loving obedience. He asks in all tenderness. "Why will ye die? I have no pleasure in your death." He seeks to lead men to repentance by his goodness to them. "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his goodness, and his wonderful works to the children of men!"

There is in the human heart an instinctive consciousness of spiritual need, faculty and function, that cannot be filled or satisfied by any animal or intellectual fruition. There is a moral heart hunger that demands the bread of heaven; a soul thirst to be slacked only by waters from the upper springs. Man is conscious of the need of something more than the world can give. There is the conscious need of pardon, peace with God, of spiritual strength to meet and overcome the temptations of the world, and consolation in sorrow, and hope in death. Here is where infidelity and all human philosophy fail. Infidelity leaves man without any refuge. A congregational minister conducted a weekly Bible-class. An infidel, a conceited tonguey fellow, told his chums that he would attend, and find out what sort of mettle there was in the Dominie. So one evening they all attended the class. After the meeting was opened the infidel arose and said, "I believe you allow one to ask questions on the subject of religion?" He was answered in the affirmative. "Well I am not satisfied with the Bible, nor religion, nor your preaching; and I would like to ask some questions." The minister answered. "Any honest doubts deserve thoughtful consideration, and I am willing to help any of my friends in coming to the truth. At the start let us kneel down and ask God to guide us. I will lead, and when I have prayed you follow." "No, no," said the infidel, "I did not come here to pray; I came to discuss religion." "You have come to our church, and you will submit yourself to our rules. We never talk religion here without first asking God's blessing; so kneel down." The pastor offered an earnest, touching, and affectionate prayer. At the close he said to the infidel. "Now you pray." "I cannot pray, I cannot pray; I have no God to pray to; no Saviour to call upon. Let me go, let me go;" and he rushed out of the house under great excitement. This is where infidelity leaves man without God, without a Saviour, and without hope. The future to him is as dark as the midnight of the grave.

A man may live as a warrior, as a statesman, as a philosopher, as a poet, but he must die as a man. In that hour he stands as an individual personally before God, conscious of his responsibility to him; and there is no escape from this. His philosophy, professional fame, his wealth, his power as a leader of armies, can do nothing for him then. The richest man in America when dying said: "My life has been a failure."

All human experience teaches us that unaided reason cannot furnish humanity with the hidden manna of the heart, nor appease its cravings with adequate satisfaction. Man's spiritual necessities ever outrun what human philosophy furnishes. Dr. Spencer remarks: "The example of a perfect atheist is very rare, and has seldom been the object of my own experience. One, however, I knew—a jurist and statesman, well learned and of good parts. So well read was he in theology and the Scriptures, that he might have passed for no ordinary theologian. He had, though a speculative unbeliever, maintained several theses with great success: on the other hand, he could in his opinion account for every appearance in nature, from a theory of matter and motion. Still with all his belief and unbelief he frankly confessed to me that he was unhappy. And being in a state of celibacy, further acknowledged that, should he ever change his situation, he was determined never to suffer the secrets of his heart to transpire to his wife and children, that in all externals he would strictly conform to the church; adding as one of his philosophical and political reasons, that it was better to be comforted upon a false ground than to live without any consolation."

The rebinding of the soul to God is a matter of choice with man. It is the inner life that is to be rebound to God, and not simply the outer life; hence it is of necessity a voluntary act. A man may compel one under his authority, and subject to his power, to conform to all his outer commands, but he cannot bind him to himself by cords of love in this way. To do this he must win his heart's affections. Thus God brings influences to bear upon the mind and heart of man adapted in their nature to inspire him with love. A young man in a fit of anger struck out one of Lycurgus's eyes with a club. The offender was surrendered to him for punishment. He took him to his home, and treated him with the greatest kindness. The youth told his friends that Lycurgus was not that proud and severe man he was often-taken for, but was, above all others, gentle and engaging in his behavior. This, then, was the punishment. The lesson had its desired effect. Lycurgus won the young man's heart, and bound him to himself as a loving friend. Thus it is that God wins the sinner's heart, and rebinds him to himself.

God is in earnest to win man's love and rebind him to himself. It is not a light matter with him. He expresses his feelings in the strongest possible manner. "I have called, and ye refused; I have stretched out my hand, and no man regarded. They would none of my counsel: they despised all my reproof." He longs for man's salvation as a parent for a lost child. A mother sent her picture to an abandoned daughter. As the daughter looked upon it, memory of childhood came back; the lips seemed to talk; the smile was an invitation home; every expression seemed to say: mother loves you! come home my poor wandering child." She went home, and was reclaimed and became a Christian. As the mother felt for that erring child so God feels for every wandering prodigal.

God brings every possible influence to bear on the mind of man to draw him back to himself. He proclaims the thunders of his law to awaken men and make them think; he quickens their conscience by the awakening power of his Spirit, shows them the sinfulness of sin and their need of pardon; he comes and speaks in the tenderest accents of love, opens the doors of heaven through his promises, and reveals to them the glories he has in reservation for all his children.

An Experience in the Inquiry Room.

BY L. W. MUNHALL, D. D.

While conducting a series of evangelistic meetings, some years since, in a certain Western city, we were obliged to use two rooms in order to accommodate the inquirers, they were so numerous; for God was wonderfully honoring the testimony, labors and faith of his people. One evening, while busily occupied in directing the personal work in one of these rooms, and dealing with inquirers, a messenger informed me that a gentleman named John Ewing, in very great distress of mind and agony of soul, was in the other room wanting to see me. As soon as I was through with the case I then had in hand, I hurried over to the other room.

I found Mr. Ewing in a corner of the room, behind a door, on his knees, before a chair. His hands were laid open upon the chair, palms downward. His face was turned upward, was ash-en-hued and covered with great drops of cold perspiration. He was the perfect picture of despair. I dropped upon my knees by his side and the following conversation took place:

"I understand, Mr. Ewing, you wish to see me."

"Yes, sir!" he replied,

"What is your trouble?"

"Oh, sir, I am such a great sinner."

I said: "Praise the Lord!"

I can never forget the look he gave me as he said: "I see nothing for which to praise the Lord."

"Doubtless that is so," I responded; "but that is because 'the eyes of your understanding' are not 'enlightened that ye may know what is the hope of his calling.' There is hope for the man who believes himself to be a great sinner. Jesus came not 'to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.' 'They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick.' Do you not know, Mr. Ewing, that we have a very great and gracious Savior?"

"Yes," he said; "but my sins are heinous and very black."

"But," I responded, "Jesus is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing he ever liveth to make intercession for them."

"That may all be true," he replied; "but I am the vilest sinner in this city. I have sinned knowingly and with a high hand."

I opened my Bible to the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah, and laid it upon the chair before him. I asked; "Do you believe the Bible is true?"

"I do," was the quick response. I then said: "Will you notice carefully the three things stated in the sixth verse of this chapter. First: 'All we like sheep have gone astray.' Do you believe that?" I asked.

"Yes, I know I have wandered like a lost sheep."

"Second: 'We have turned every one to his own way.' Do you believe that?"

"Oh, yes, sir. I know I have not walked in God's way."

"Third: 'And the Lord hath laid on Him (Jesus) the iniquity of us all.' Do you believe that also?"

He responded, hesitatingly and evasively: "I have been the wickedest man upon earth."

So, then," I said, "you believe the first and second statements of that verse, but not the third?"

"Oh, sir, I believe it all."

"Are you certain of it?"

"Yes, sir; but I am such a great sinner."

"Do you really believe God laid your iniquities on Jesus? It says that, does it not?"

"Yes, it says, 'And the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all.' Well, I believe it."

"With your whole heart?"

"Yes, with my whole heart."

"Well," I then asked, "where are your iniquities?"

"On me, sir; and they are very great and heavy."

"And you say, Mr. Ewing, 'I believe the Bible is true;' and yet, when God says he 'hath laid on Him the iniquities of us all,' 'who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree,' and thus hath 'put away sin by the sacrifice of himself,' you say, in effect: 'It is not so; my sins are yet on me.' In other words, God says he laid your sins on Jesus, and you say it is not so; and yet claim to believe the Bible."

"But sir, he answered. "I do believe God's Word."

"Very well," I said; "let us look at it again. God says: 'And the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all,' does he not?"

"Yes, that's how it reads."

"Well, then, where are your iniquities?"

With somewhat of hesitation, he said: "I suppose, sir, they must be upon Christ."

"You suppose so? don't you know so?"

"Well, but I am such a very great sinner."

"Very well, then, I'll read it your way, and we'll see how it sounds. Will you listen?"

"Certainly."

Again I read: "'All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all,' excepting John Ewing."

Springing to his feet, he shouted: "That's not there, sir! It doesn't say that!"

I replied: "I know it does not. But that's the way you have been reading it all the while, in spite of my every effort to get you to see what it really does say."

"I see it! I see it!" he said, vehemently and exultingly: "He did lay my sins on Jesus! He did! He did!" and he clapped his hands again and again in the ecstasy of his joy, and shouted aloud the praises of God.—Independent.

No Folly With God.

We often hear God represented by prayer and sermons, as being a God so sluggish and senseless as getting exceedingly wrathful. We believe that anger belongs to sinful man and to every living creature of this world, but not to God. We should entertain a more exalted opinion of the Divine Majesty, than to charge him with anger which belongs to silly man. Both reason and piety require a higher idea of divine perfection to be exhibited to our view. Shall we not render unto God that which belongs to him, whether it is in exact harmony with the Jewish nations of the dark ages or not? We know of no power on earth; or above the earth, that qualifies human beings at any age of the world beyond mistakes. Are not such expressions doing injustice to the Almighty? It will hardly do to say that the Jewish writers made no mistakes, as they were mistaken in believing the earth was stationary and the center of the world, so they were in some other things. When Galileo publicly made known his discovery that the earth revolved once in twenty-four hours, and the sun was the center of the system, he was condemned to prison for the reason that his theory was a contradiction to the holy scriptures, so says Dr. Dick. If God is an omniscient being, possessed of boundless intelligence, he must inevitably be supposed to act in consistency with his own works and himself. God being all-wise cannot be expected to make mistakes, therefore can have no good cause for anger. He can not be all-wise and deceived in man, or any of his works from the first human being down through endless eternity. To say the contrary would be to deny him his inherent quality. The divine being which penetrates to the very center of every object, and sees through all things as a glance should not be accused of enraged wrath, it's only a specimen of our ignorance to charge God so wrongfully of such weakness and folly. This expression certainly does not denote a very high degree of knowledge respecting the omnipotence of this divine wisdom. It can not be supposed that God is similar to a human being, who dwells in tabernacles of clay, who is chained down by the force of gravitation to the surface of one small planet, who is said to be a poor weak worm of the dust. But to this latter expression I object, for I must say that of all God's creation, man is the king of the earth and the most noble structure. We should be willing to acknowledge all truth, as every age adds knowledge to the past. In short, we should cherish that profound veneration of God and his works, which are calculated to inspire us to soar above the lethargy and morbid ideas of the past, and let true light sparkle forth with the luster of diamonds.—Word and Works.

Missionary Facts.

A BETTER SUPPORT FOR FOREIGN MISSIONS NEEDED, AND HOW TO GIVE IT.

Bro. Woodworth ought to have more help from this country, and better church buildings in his work in Japan. I honestly believe that if all the money that we have spent in the last four years in Japan had been expended on two stations, building two nice churches and giving these stations a better support, it would have resulted in more good for the Master's cause in our hands. And in the simplest way the women of our little convention south could have done more than we all, both north and south.

Now I know the dear sisters will demand of me how they could do so much work in such a short time, and too, when I know they have so little to do with. Well now just give attention and I will give you the way. We have at least six thousand women in our convention, and if they would just lay aside the eggs that their hens lay every Sunday supposing the number to be 6, to be given by each of these sisters every Sunday, would if sold at 10 cents per dozen amount to $15,600. Or you may each set apart the eggs or chickens of a hen during the year which with proper care will bring from $2.50 to $5.00 per year. Others can adopt something else in keeping with their line of work.

And of course all Christians will have some work to do. Here I think of another plan. One day in every week, and I suggest that be Sunday, deny yourself some luxury, and take the value of that sacrifice and pay over to the F. M. cause. For an illustration I know a lady who beside giving the tenth, also has given up her coffee in favor of the Foreign mission work. The Christian must practice self denial, and it will be a blessing to him and he will bless the poor heathen also. By doing your duty as indicated above, you will be an instrument in warning the heathen of the enemy in the land, and their blood will not be upon you, but if our duty is not discharged in this respect God will require their blood at your hands. But what must I say to the brethren, of course no less than I have said to the sisters. They can deny themselves of a great many of their luxuries with profit to themselves as well as to the mission cause, such as the use of tobacco in its different forms, and extravagance in various ways. We men ought to give at least one tenth of everything we make annually. What little work we have done for F. M. work when we consider its worth, looks more like play than work. Remember that "ye are the salt of the earth," and if the salt is not applied, there is no profit to be derived from it. Let us give more freely, for we can't stay here always with our possessions, and besides we owe as much to others as was done for us.

Missionary Stimulants.

In an enfeebled condition of the system—church life—stimulants are sometimes necessary.

In a missionary exchange I find a table giving the missionary record of a church in Mount Clair, New Jersey, for a period of twelve years, from 1881 to 1893. There was a gradual increase in the missionary collections of this church from $110 in 1881 to $1,993 in 1893. The missionary collections of the Sunday-school for the same period increased from $100 in 1881 to $312 in 1893, making the total increase of the church and Sunday-school from $210 in 1881 to $2,305 in 1893. Think of it, that one church alone now giving about enough to support two male and one female missionaries in Japan!

The average missionary contribution per member, which was $1.11 in 1881, increased to $6.77 in 1893; and it is said that there is not a rich man in the church.

Now what about the membership of that church. Did they become discouraged, and did others refuse to join because they were asked for so many missionary collections? The membership which was 90 in 1881, had increased to 340 in 1893.

Comments are unnecessary.

"There is that giveth and yet increaseth."

Seventy business men of New York subscribed $1,400,000, or $20,000 each, toward the Metropolitan Opera House in that city which was completed some two years ago; and this without receiving or expecting anything in return. Where are the seventy, the fifty, the twenty-five men who will give one half, or one tenth, or even one hundredth part of that amount for foreign missions? Is the love of opera a more powerful motive than the love of souls, and love of God?

Not many years since the officers of a large missionary society were surprised by a visit from a man worth perhaps three or four thousand dollars, who brought his check for one thousand dollars as his offering for missions. When the question arose whether this was not a large gift for him, he said, "It is! It is one quarter of what I own I found that as I was prospered my money engrossed more and more of my thought. I am not going to be a slave to the money God may give me." O how many would be less slaves to this world, and would have greater liberty and joy in the Lord if they would give more of their means to advance the Lord's cause!

A Utica, New York, pastor writing to The World Wide Missions says, "A factory girl, a few days ago, handed me fifty dollars for missions. Each year previous, during my pastorate, she brought me ten dollars. This year she has completely puzzled me to silence. She requests that her name be withheld, but the deed is recorded in heaven."

Where are our factory girls, our young men, even our men and women of means, who will give their ten dollars and fifty dollars for missions?

To Take The Missionary Collections—How!

First. Prepare the way by making missions a topic for prayer in two or three prayer-meetings, by preaching one or two missionary sermons a week or two in advance, and by intelligent planning for the collection.

Second. Send to the Mission Secretary's office for a supply of small subscription card-envelopes to be passed through your congregation. The contribution can be placed in the envelope, or the subscription written on the envelope. These will be sent free on application, for this purpose. State how many are needed.

Third. Secure a number of cheap lead pencils. Cut each one into three and have them well pointed.

Fourth. At the close of your appeal distribute quickly the envelopes and the pencils to those who have no pencils, after which make substantially the following statement:

(a) All who decline to give or subscribe anything, practically vote in favor of closing our mission and calling our workers home. (b) Those who give less than formerly favor reducing the force, or cutting off the supplies. (c) Those who give the same as formerly favor holding the ground, but oppose a forward movement. (d) Those who advance their offerings beyond former years, by so much favor a forward movement—favor "abounding in good works."

Before enclosing offerings or writing subscriptions, let all bow their heads while the pastor leads in a brief prayer asking the Lord to help each one to do his whole duty.

Then pass the baskets and take up the envelopes, and the offerings of those who don't care to use the envelopes.

To these contributions add the offering of the children previously gathered, and the Sunday-school collection of the day, which should be appropriated to the same use.

Note: While passing the envelopes and the pencils a soul-stirring missionary hymn may be sung by the choir.

Photographs of Our Missionaries.

I have a very fine cabinet size photograph of our missionaries and some of their native helpers. The group consists of Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth, the daughter Lina, and Miss Penrod; two Bible women, Mrs. Noda and Miss Ren; and six of our native preachers, to wit: Mr. Ianchi, Ohta, Kitamura, Fajina, Samomiya, and Takurai, twelve in all. I will furnish this group of pictures at 25 cents single, or $2.50 per dozen, postpaid on receipt of price.

Windsor.

On the morning of September 4th, in company with Dr. Jones and wife, I started to the World's Fair. The trip was a long and tiresome one—but upon the whole it was a most pleasant one. The rich, varied and extensive scenery invited me to behold its grandeur, and I did so with inexpressible delight, until I was compelled to say: "What hath God wrought." Chicago is a large magnificent city. This expresses my idea of it about as well as I know how. Its people are kind and obliging. No one seemed to be out of humor—while every thing moved smoothly on as far as I was permitted to see. The Fair is a great success, and I was pleased with its variety and greatness. I was only permitted, for want of time, to give special attention to just a part of it. That which was most helpful to me I studied, and I feel better and stronger by it. No one, who attends the Fair for the purpose of learning can come away without being benefitted. The exhibits from the states and different countries were very fine. Virginia's exhibition was the poorest at the Fair. A person is judged, to some extent, at least, by his dress. Va. was judged by her dress—her appearance—her exhibits at the World's Fair. I feel to say, that she was a disgrace to herself and to the World's Fair. Some one is to blame for it, and those whose fault it is, ought to be ashamed of it forever. Virginia stands off and talks about her ancestry—her great men—and her advantages, while others are working and showing to the world what they are. Virginia is living in the past too much, and has been doing so for many years, while other states and nations are living in the present and the future. Some of our brightest and best(?) meet at the State capital and make a few laws to suit themselves, then talk about Virginia as the mother of presidents—talk about aristocracy—talk about what she has done. How much was appropriated to represent her in the World's Fair? What has become of the money? These are questions in which all her children ought to be interested. I am for one.

My first week was spent visiting the Fair; the second week was mainly passed in attending the World's Parliament of Religions in the Art Building of Chicago. When foreign dignitaries from almost every nation and every religion came into Columbus Hall, it suggested to me unity in the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ and brought feelings of joy to my heart, such as I had never before realized. Upon that platform sat men and women from many nations of the world. That assemblage was picturesque and solemn, as all joined in singing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." It was indeed one of the grandest events of my life to be there and look upon that meeting. One man said, "I have come thirteen thousand miles to attend this Parliament." O, I thought that if such a meeting of just a few from many nations of earth was so delightfully pleasant, how glorious beyond description for God's redeemed loving children to meet in heaven to part no more—where they will sing the new song! In this Parliament it was my privilege to hear many distinguished men speak. Among whom was Lyman Abbott, Edward E. Hale, Joseph Cook and other American sons of noted ability. From France, England, Scotland, Germany, Greece, India, China and other foreign countries I heard eminent men, and from them came burning words of truth and love. Religion was their theme, God their Father, Jesus their Saviour, the Holy Ghost their comforter, and heaven their long desired home.

I also attended several religious services, and heard sermons from Moody, McNeil, Varley and others. Some of these services were good and very impressive.

It was a little surprising not to find the Christian church represented in the Parliament of Religions. I had learned that a committee from the church had been appointed to attend to that matter but when I referred to the general programme we were not named in it. I met several of our ministers, for a short time, from the North and we as a church could have had a good showing in the meeting, but nobody seemed to care much whether they were mentioned or not. This good old way of doing nothing is so pleasant with many of us we like to follow it. If we as a church ever come to the front we have got to put ourselves there. Other denominations were there, and I was glad to see them there, but sorry to know that the liberal union Christian church was not there. It certainly missed a good opportunity to put itself before the world—an opportunity it will never have again. We are not known much to the world—we are well known at home, but we want to be known and recognized abroad, from home. We have good principles, a good foundation to build our success on, but we are too slow, and sometimes too stingy to do it. Others will take our principles, and gain more success than we have done. Unless we take a wider view from our present standpoint, we must go back, while others go forward. This has been written with the very best feeling and now I entertain a strong hope that we will do better in the future, and thus be able to stand in the front rank with other denominations as they march on to victory and to glory.

Unite the Conferences, and Then Divide.

Knowing there has been under consideration for some time a division of the North Carolina and Va. Conference. Yet objections, lest the division cripple the usefulness of both Conferences by making them too small, have been raised; and the proposition has been made that the Deep River Conference unite with the N. C. & Va., then divide. I think the majority of our people are ready for the Union. Provided the division be properly made and for the advantage of both conferences This, it seems to me, can be done. The N. C. & Va. has 82 churches and the D. R., has 21, a total of 103. Now it seems to me by uniting, and then divide, giving each conference 50 churches more or less as is most convenient; that both conferences then would be strong enough to accomplish more than either can now do. The fields are now white for the harvest on the borders of the D. R. C., but we need more efficient strength to reap the same. We are progressing slowly. I well remember when we had only 8 to 10 churches. We have slowly grown to 21. With a larger force better equipped, and a united effort in broader bounds we can certainly accomplish more for the Master than we are now doing. If for the best, why not act.

Elon College Notes

A sense of surprise steals over us as we raise our eyes from text books and perceive the distance we have come. Only three months until Christmas. Every department in college has its ball-bearings, thus overcoming all friction, hence the smoothness of work and rapidity of time.

Prof. Atkinson's lectures in Social Science and Psychology are admirable. His style is argumentative and his aim is to make the student think.

Prof. Moffitt is a special favorite of essays. He is introducing the senior class to their English work with a course of seven lectures on Literary Criticism.

The President in company with Miss Berta Moring left the 23rd for Chicago.

Messrs. W.D. Harward and Herndon from Durham arrived for College the 22nd. Miss Lillie Strowd came home the 23rd after a protracted stay among relations elsewhere.

A good many of our young men went down to Graham last Sunday to hear Rev. W. W. Staley's special sermon to men.

Prof. Atkinson preached at Union, and Dr. Newman filled Dr. Long's appointment at Chapel. His sermon was not so long but well ground down.

Mr. J. H. Jones conducted the evening service. His remarks gave evidence of matured thought.

Mr. I. W. Johnson conducted Y. M. C. A.; subject Character.

Mr. S. L. Adams' family have returned from their visit to Va.

We offer our thanks for some subscribers to "Monthly." Let others send their dollar and name and get the two issues for this year.

The Origin of Christianity.

BY T. DARLEY ALLEN.

The position, the claims, and the success of Christ, taken together, present a proof in favor of the truth of his religion that may well be called a moral miracle. Eighteen centuries ago there was manifested among men a new moral power which changed the habits of thinking and acting among mankind, and advanced the race in all that was worthy of pursuit, far more than all the teachings of philosophy had done. This great spiritual revolution was due to a teacher in an obscure part of the world; humanly speaking, a poor mechanic with few advantages. This teacher claimed to be divine. How can we account for the great revolution he accomplished, except by admitting the truth of his claims? A thorough presentation of this argument can be found in a work by Samuel Smith, M. P., entitled "The Credibility of the Christian Religion," and published as a neat forty-cent volume by H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston, Mass.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Send in the minutes as soon as the conference adjourns, if you want the Annual out promptly.

Atlanta newspaper men gave an entertainment last week and sent the proceeds—about $900—to stricken Brunswick.

May the people of Youngsville reflect seriously on the excellent preaching they heard from Bro. Rowland. It was a meeting in which no sectarian spirit was manifested.

Some or other of the hands of the SUN office have been sick for the last two mouths. We hope all will be at their post again soon, so the work can be done better and more promptly.

The Ga. & Ala. Conference meets to day. May they have a profitable session. We will never forget the kindness of that people to us last year. We would have been so glad, if the opportunities had been such as to allowed us to have gone.

Rev. C. Rowland of Texas is helping Bro. C. H. Rowland in a meeting at Mt. Hermon, this week. We shall expect good results. Bro. C. Rowland is the finest gospel preacher that it has ever been our pleasure to hear.

A call has been issued by the International committee of the Y. M. C. A. for the Congress of Young Mens Christian Associations of the World, to be held under the auspices of the World's Congress Auxiliary in the Memorial Art Palace, Chicago, Ill., October 6th, 1893. A fine program has been arranged.

In the Congress of Religions in Chicago a Buddhist priest asked his audience how many had read the life of Buddha, and four hands went up, which brought from him in words of thunder—"How dare you judge Buddhism when you know nothing of Buddha?" What a wise (?) query! One day while riding through the country a tree loaded with apples was discovered in the corner of an orchard. The tree was crooked and gnarled, the apples were hard knotty and bitter, and when a remark not complimentary to the tree was made, the farmer in high indignation exclaimed—"How dare you judge that tree when you never saw the seed from which it sprung! I planted it and a more perfect seed was never sown." Ah but Christ said: "By their fruit ye shall know them." What of the fruit of Buddhism? By the fruit and not the seed are we to judge.

At Piney Plane.

Last Sunday, we went out to Piney Plane, N. C., to attend to the baptizing at that church for Bro. C. H. Rowland. On our arrival, we were greatly pleased to see that this little church and the community had built a good nice church house. The congregation was good, and as good singing as any one ought to wish.

Four were baptised, and one, Bro. G. C. Jones handed in a letter from the M. E. Church. He is a brother of Hou. A. D. Jones, Minister to Hong-Cong, China. He is a pious young man. Though he is much afflicted, he is willing to do any light work.

We took dinner at Bro. Ruffin Prince's. His wife Sister Prince always has something good to eat.

We were much pleased with our trip to Piney Plane, and think the out look for the church is excellent.

Youngsville.

We commenced a meeting at Youngsville, N. C., on the third Sunday in Sept. Rev. C. Rowland of Texas was with us and did all the preaching. The verdict was almost unanimous in saying that the preaching was the best that the people in Youngsville ever heard. The Holy Ghost came down in great power. Possibly 40 or more were converted during the seven days that the meeting continued.

Revs. J. D. Wickor, J. A. Jones and J. W. Fuquay were with us nearly all the time, and did excellent work in both prayer and song. Revs. J. W. Wellons and S. B. Klapp were present a part of the time.

The Roanoke Riot.

All honest hearts, to say nothing of Christianity have been made sad over the sinful and disgraceful affair at Roanoke, Va. Twelve men killed and twenty wounded. Surely fearful responsibility rests some where, and God will hold some one accountable.

Just where all the blame lies in this black crime no one but God can tell. We know the devil used the negro to start the thing, and from this flame of hell kindled, great wrong was done.

We are not in favor of lynch law; for it is a dangerous thing in any country. But there is a cause for all this lynch law some where. And it would be well for people to begin to look for the cause, and when found remove it.

Church News.

DEAR BRO. CLEMENTS:—By consent of my church at Pleasant Grove, Va. I was absent the last first Sunday, and father Sol Apple filled my place. It was my privilege to be at Grace Chapel the first Sunday and following week. On Sunday we dedicated their new house to the worship of God. We had a fine congregation. The pastor will give you the result of the meeting. Second Sunday I was with my congregation at Ingram, Va., the congregation was large as it usually is and very attentive. I felt that it was good to be there, for the Lord was present. The church here has decided to postpone their protracted meeting till Nov., pray for the little church that it may enjoy a gracious revival of religion. The third Sunday and Saturday before I was with my congregation at Damascus and the congregation on Sunday was the largest we have seen there during the year. We received and baptised 8 members. We preached twice and had the communion at the close of the morning service. Monday after we went to Antioch in Warren county beyond the Roanoke river, and engaged in a meeting with Rev. S. B. Klapp, and at the close of the meeting we received 12 members and baptised 2; the pastor will baptize the others at his next appointment. There is a fine opening for the Christians in this section I was told by a number of persons there could be 3 more churches organized within the limits of seven miles from Antioch. I wish we could put a man down in this district and let him take charge of Mt. Auburn and these points, and I think we would soon have a nice field of work opened here. Mt. Auburn deserves a good pastor, for they are a good people, and they pay their pastor what they promise him. Owing to the fact of my work being scattered so much, compels me to give it up. No brother who can with convenience, take this church, need not hesitate, your labors will be appreciated for this is the second time I have served them as pastor, and it is with regret that I take my leave of Mt. Auburn. May God bless, prosper, and lead them down beside the still waters, and out into green pastures

Holland Items.

Yesterday was communion meeting with Holland Christian church. Bro. Demarest's sermon on Saturday and Sunday were above the average. The congregation was large on Sunday morning. Three good members were received to fellowship—two of them excellent laborers, were from the Baptist church. One received baptism by effusion who had previously united with the church.

The Mission meeting in the evening was well attended, and exercises really interesting. We had two stirring addresses. One from Bro. Demarest and one—a very nice little speech, from Bro. S. E. Everett, an alumnus of Elon College. We are proud of Eddie, and we are proud of Elon. We hope many more such gifted and cultured young men may go out from Elon to honor our church and the cause of education. We were sorry Bro. Eddie was so hurried, having to take the train he did not have time to speak longer.

Our collection for missions was good and we will be able to pay our pastor and meet all our assessments.

We had one of the largest and one of the most delightful prayer meetings last night, it has been my privilege to enjoy at any time or place. I think there must have been near two hundred (perhaps more) persons present. It seemed to be a feast to all, and all were

"Loth to leave the place Where God shows his smiling face."

Doing.

Doing is the greatest word in the English language. To think, to speak, and to do, are three infinitives which eternity alone can know and therefore reward or punish! Thought should always precede speech, and as a general rule, and especially so in religious matters, speech should precede action, i. e., the eternal, the visible, the life of thought and speech, doing.

Doing is the fruit of thought and speech.

God's wonderful works in the creation are but the fruit of the greatest intelligence. The sun, moon and stars are said to be but the works of his finger tips, while man lives as a memorial of His highest thought. The making of man is the result of that infinite thought of those infinite beings, and those wonderful words, "Let US make man in our image," of course this is an act of Divinity, but that only strengthens our argument, that "doing" is not only the greatest word in the English language but that doing is the greatest and most essential principle in our natures. Doing (I mean in a spiritual sense,) is an absolutely essential trait in the character of God, Christ and the Holy Ghost. It must be in the trinity, and acts as an offset to about the same principle in the characteristics of the devil, i. e., industry and perseverance, for every one who has had dealings with the devil, and who has not? knows that his industry and perseverance, i. e., his doing, is only equaled by his wickedness.

This living principle as connected with God is good, as connected with the devil it is evil. The point in this article is, how is this principle as it is connected with you?

Doing can only be good or evil.

The divinity does good. The devil does evil. What are you doing?

Since by our nature, and by the condition of surrounding circumstances we will do good or evil, i. e., "He that is not for me is against me," then it is wise for man to accept God's plan as given to us by Solomon Eccl. 9:10, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might;" why? "For there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." Now if these words of Solomon are true, and who doubts them? do you not see and feel the importance of doing? Doing as connected with both religious and business life, I cannot better remark than to quote Dr. Clark's comment on the above Scripture, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do."

Says he, "examine here the what, the how, and the why.

I. What is necessary to be done in this life, in reference to another?

1. Turn from sin. 2. Repent. 3. Frequent the ordinances of God, and associate with the upright. 4. Read the Scriptures. 5. Pray for pardon. 6. Believe on the Lord Jesus that thou mayest obtain it. 7. Look for the gift of the Holy Spirit. 8. Bring forth in their seasons the fruits of,— 1. Repentance, 2. Faith. And, 3, the Holy Spirit—9. Live to get good. 10. And to do good. 11. And refer every purpose and act (all doing) to the eternal world:

II. How should these be done? "With thy might." 1. Be fully convinced of the necessity of these things. 2. Be determined to act according to this conviction. 3. Then act with thy strength; put forth all thy power in avoiding evil, repenting for sin, etc., etc.

III. Why should this be done? 1. Because thou art a dying man. 2. Thou art going into the grave. 3. When thou leavest this life, thy state of probation, with all its advantages, is eternally ended. 4. If thou die in sin, where God is thou shalt never come. For, 1. there is no work, by which thou mayest profit. 2. No device by which thou mayest escape punishment. 3. No knowledge of any means of help. 4. And no wisdom, restoration of the soul to the favor and image of God, in that grave whither thou goest. Therefore work while it is called today."

In the above Scripture by Solomon, and the comment by Clark the teaching both directly and indirectly is that of the most direct preserving industry, i. e., doing in its broadest and fullest sense.

Doing is not only a leading characteristics in the strong, healthy and vigorous Christian man or woman but it is the leading characteristic of the business, professional and laboring man.

Doing brings success, when it follows matured thought, and right words, and backed by unselfish purposes. It may not succeed in an hour nor in a day, but it will be a success in the end.

People of today think too little of what they can do. There are many who take doing by the fore-top and by the time they arrive at manhood and womanhood they have a vocation upon which they can depend for a good living: while others never do, consequently they never have a living, and therefore they are drones in the great brotherhood of man. This is applicable to the spiritual life. How high, how noble, how rich, how full is it possible for man! History alone, both sacred and profane, can answer for time. Eternity alone will reveal the fullness of all.

The Scripture further teaches this principle of activity: "Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling."

And he who makes no further effort than his conversion will fall short of the glory of God.

This life is one continual scene of activity. It is a battle field upon which generals, captains and soldiers are all kept busy doing those things which will destroy the enemy. Hence the stress I lay upon doing. I would not forget faith. I would link strong faith with consecrated endeavor. Then out of the heart the mouth will speak and the body will do.

Let me give an illustration of what I mean by doing, when I ask what are you doing?

Some time ago it was my pleasure to visit an old Presbyteriau home-stead in Alamance Co., N. C. In that home possibly four generations have lived. Hanging on the wall of that old time room is a picture, the frame faded and scarred, the glass broken, and the picture much injured by time, but there are the outlines of a manly form, with many features still clear. It is an old picture; but it represents a man whom the Christians delight to honor, and the memory of whom is still fresh in many minds in N. C. That picture represents, Rev. Isaac N. Walter. It was his strong hand that led my own precious mother into the water where he administered the ordinance of baptism. Under that old picture are the following words—and reader as ye read them may God give you inspiration and zeal that you may go forward and do likewise:—

"ISAAC N. WALTER,

"Minister of the gospel,

"Died July 9th, 1856, in Columbus, O., aged 51½.

"During 32 years he traveled a sufficient number of miles to have girdled the globe five times, crossed the Alleghany Mountains 50 times, preached 8185 sermons, funerals 1821, baptized 3375 persons received into church 8949 members, prayed with 1902 sick persons married 1052 couples.

"The state of Ohio has not money enough to buy me from the Christian ministry."

What a record! Count it not sacrilege nor vanity when I say I believe that such a record may be placed up near to that wonderful record of Paul. Indeed the record of Isaac N. Walter is a wonderful record!

This record, and this illustration of my subject, proves the success that will follow industry and perseverance, and what is industry and perseverance, but continual doing. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might."

Surely the talented and eloquent Walter was found up and doing while it was day. Surely he was "a doer of the Word, and not a hearer only."

Reader what is your record?

The doing of your life must produce a corresponding effect. If your industry and perseverance have been on the side of Christianity then the effect of your doing is good and your works like Paul's, like Walter's, and like millions of others will follow and honor you, and will glorify God; but if they have been on the side of sin then they follow for your condemnation.

Our intelligence and our ability to do, places a weighty responsibility upon each individual; and a grand duty upon the whole to God and each other.

It will be a happy day in the history of the church when the preachers and the members all become doers of the Word instead of hearers only. Look over the field the harvest is ripe—but the reapers (doers of the Word) are too few.

Christians let me persuade you to put on the whole armour of God and every man to his work, "Do not refuse the employment which the hour brings you, for one more ambitious." For—

"All are architects of fate
Working in these halls of time;
Some with massive deeds and great,
Some with ornaments of rhyme."

"There is something you can do—you 'can do your best!' and that is something. A select few do it, thousands do it. We sometime speak of aristocracies. Those based on wealth and family are not the noblest of the class. This aristocracy, composed of those who 'do their best,' is the noblest. The professions are not over-crowded with this sort, but with the other. To be this sort of a man—one that 'does his best'—is as easy as to be a Milo, a Michael Angelo, or a Paul. Do you grant it? What then? This. In that difficult but splendid personal trait (if you have it) you have the strong presumption—I had almost said prophecy—of success, the man who 'does his best' has a passport sealed with the King's signet, to some worthy field. There certainly is a place somewhere for such a man."

"My friend, all speech and humor are short-lived, foolish, untrue. Genuine work done, what thou workest faithfully, that is eternal! Take courage, then; raise the arm, strike home, and that right lustily; the citadel of hope must yield to noble desire, thus seconded by noble effort."

"We live in deeds, not years; in thoughts, not breaths;
In feelings, not in figures on a dial;
We should count time by heart-throbs.
He most lives
Who thinks most, feels the noblest, acts the best."

Washington Letter.

If a refutation were needed of the saying, "Ministers sons usually turn out badly," it would be furnished by the prominence of the sons of ministers in the present administration, starting with the President himself. Another minister's son—Mr. William B. Hornblower, of New York—has just received a very unusual honor for a man of his age, 42 years, in being nominated by the President to the vacancy upon the Supreme Court caused by the death of the late Justice Blatchford. Mr. Hornblower's father was educated to be a lawyer but became a minister, while Mr. Hornblower was educated to be a minister, but became a lawyer. He comes of a family which has produced many eminent jurists; one of his grandfathers having been chief justice of the State of New Jersey, one uncle—Justice Bradley—a member of the U. S. Supreme Court and another—Judge Woodruff—of the U. S. Circuit Court. His brother and his mother have resided in Washington for some years.

Surgeon General Wyman, of the Marine Hospital service, is in constant communication with Surgeon Murray, who is in charge of the yellow fever stricken city of Brunswick, Georgia. According to his latest information there is no need for physicians from the outside, and volunteers, neither nurses nor physicians, will be welcomed.

Rev. Dr. Domer anticipated the celebration of the centennial of the laying of the cornerstone of the Capital building, which took place on Monday by delivering an eloquent centennial sermon on Sunday, taking for his text 1 Kings v:17—"And the King commanded and they brought great stones, costly stones, and hewed stones to lay the foundations of the house." It was a sermon filled with interesting facts, all tending to show the Divine protection which has been given our country by the greatest of all Rulers and our obligation to appreciate that favor by worshipping God.

Another has been added to the long list of crimes committed at the National Capital by whiskey and which under our present laws cannot be punished. An aged and respected father's head is bowed down with disgrace because of the brand of Cain, which has been placed upon his son, and two daughters are cruelly bereft of their only living parent. All because the sale of intoxicating liquor is legalized in Washington. The facts in this case are so peculiar and point so clearly to the unmitigated evil of the liquor traffic that a synopsis is herewith presented: A young man of good family, while intoxicated went to the residence occupied by a highly respected widow and her two young daughters and attempted to make a forcible entry. He did not succeed in getting in, but he so badly frightened the ladies that they were afraid to go to bed, although it was long past the hour at which they usually retired. The mother in her anxiety to learn whether the man was still at her door went out upon a balcony from which the door could be seen. The balcony was old and insecure and in a moment had broken down and the watchful mother was but a moaning mass of flesh and bones, on the ground in front of her residence, and in an hour those two girls were motherless; all on account of whiskey. The young man was arrested, acknowledged being under the influence of liquor and having attempted to enter the house, but claimed that he did it because he thought a woman with whom he had been flirting on the street had entered the house. The judge was compelled to discharge the man, because there was no law upon which he could be held. Thus, whiskey had made that man's murderer, for he had just as clearly committed a murder as though he had killed the widow with his own hands; but, there being no law against the sale of whiskey, nobody could be punished. And so it goes on, the cursed stuff which carried ruin, desolation, crime and death wherever it goes, is sold under legal protection, and so it will continue to go on until an aroused people shall arise in their might and declare against the saloon, the mightiest single instrument of evil of our time. The day and hour of that arising no man can predict, but it will—it must come, sooner or later, and God grant that it be soon.

CORRESPONDENT.

Sept. 20, 1893.

The Value of a Character.

The captain of a large steamer was once filling up his crew for a long voyage, says a western paper, when a seaman came up and said:

"I want to sail with you, sir."
"All right, my man," replied the captain. "Where have you sailed before?"

"P. and. Q., sir, to Australia."
"What countryman?"

"An Oirishman," was the ready response.

"Well, you must get a character."
The discharge was obtained and as the Irishman was presenting it another seaman came up and said he wanted to join.

"What line were you on before?" asked the captain.

"Canard, sir."
"What countryman?"

"English, your honor."
"All right. Go forward."

Shortly after, as the two were swilling the decks in a heavy sea, the Englishman was swept overboard, bucket and all. Unmoved, Paddy finished his job and then went to the captain's cabin.

"Come, in," responded the officer to his rap. "What's up now?"

"Do you remember Bill Smith, the Englishman and Canarder?" queried Pat.

"Certainly, my man."
"You took him without a character."

"I believe so. What of that?"

which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and flung aside with a triumphant coo. The flesh tints are perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby is life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Pansies" and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.

Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24, '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. MeAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N. C., says: "I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. The Rev. Dr. A. T. Pierson tell a good story of a Roman Catholic priest in Victoria who strives to give his Sunday sermons a very practical turn. One morning he took a walnut with him into the pulpit to illustrate the character of the various Christian churches. He proceeded to tell his auditors that the shell was tasteless and valueless—that was the Wesleyan church. The skin was nauseous, disagreeable, and worthless—that was the Presbyterian church. He then said he would show them the Holy Roman Apostolic church. He cracked the nut for the kernel, and—found it rotten! Then his reverence coughed violently and pronounced the benediction.—Exchange.

Leaves From My Note Book.

In last week's New York Herald there was an editorial which certainly related a circumstance of no small import to the Christian church. It was to this effect: "In the Congress of the World's religions recently held at Chicago there was present the Archmandrite in the Greek church, or the chief of monks. It was expressed as the belief of this man of note that, the great religions of the human race have a common purpose, namely to bring us nearer in confidence and faith to the supreme Being that we may lead lives of integrity and holy ambition, thus preparing ourselves for worship in the Temple not made with hands after the fitful fever of our earthly existence is over. Furthermore this man of the Greek church declares that difference of theology ought not to separate men who have a common moral aim and a common destiny."

There was on the other hand an American clergyman who when commenting on this attitude of the Archmandrite remarked that "he was opposed to the comparison of any religion with Christianity." If I were asked which of these two men had most of the real spirit of Christianity I should unhesitatingly say the former and yet I doubt not that there are many and very many who would say the latter either in word or spirit. The heathens, though they have never heard of our system of religion—many of them at least—are not fools and idiots. Nor are they without some show of reason, and intelligence. If there had not been a nucleus of the right and truth in Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Brahminism and the rest they could never have gained the ground and run the course they have. There may be much that is inferior and superficial in their systems of religions, but yet there is some good things in them or men would not have adopted and lived by them for so long a time. If our system of religion is ever to gain credence among the other religions of the world it must be shown wherein our's surpasses the other systems.

I was much struck by an incident that Henry Drummond related in one of his lectures last winter at Harvard. Said Drummond, "recently on taking my leave of Japan I asked a man of learning, refinement, high estate and much authority if he had any message he would like to send to the western world? Yes, replied the Japanese I have one message I wish you would deliver to those people for us. And that is tell them to please send us one twenty thousand missionary instead of ten two thousand dollar ones. Of these latter we are tired and they are no good." This is significant and needs no explanation. There was no nationality of students with which I came in contact at Harvard of more keen intelligence and ready ability and intellect than the Japanese. I only name these for an illustration. If Christianity is to supplant these and other religions, it must do so by broadening its own sphere and absorbing what is best, assimilating what is noblest and true and annihilating what is false and debasing in the other systems. Ours is a religion that will help men to be better and the world to be a happier world, for it teaches man the simple lesson of "the brotherhood of man and the fraternity of the human race."

DEAR BROTHER CLEMENTS:—Having seen sometime since a request in our paper for news from the field. We will in obedience to the request try to let you hear what success we had. First Sunday in August we commenced a series of meetings at New Hill with very good success. We had two conversions, one accession to the church. Leaving New Hill we went over to Turner's Chapel to aid Rev. J. W. Hatch. Finding him at his post we commenced revival services day and night with very good congregations. We had a very good meeting. Several conversions with some accessions to the church. Among those that joined was Bro. Dawson, a very old man and also very much afflicted, so much so he could not come out to meeting. We visited his house, while there learned that he desired to join our church at Turner's. Rev. J. W. Hatch at once examined him, on Thursday following received him into the church. Leaving Turner's we returned home to be with W. C. Wicker in protracted meeting at O'Kelley's Chapel. Work commenced on Saturday before the third Sunday in August. On account of sickness of my wife I could not be with the brother every day, but nevertheless we had a very good meeting. We left on Saturday for Bethany, met the church at 3 P. M., found the brethren in good spirits and full of the faith. We held our third quarterly conference. Everything worked well. Sunday we met the congregation, and to our surprise met Brother Long of Elon College, and we heard a most excellent sermon from our most esteemed brother in the morning. We had to let him off before the close of second service, which was conducted by Brother Whiteman, after second sermon the Lord's table was spread. Services at night Brother Carden officiating. We had a very good meeting. Monday being so very stormy no one came to church. Tuesday we met the brethren again. The work went on until Friday at the end of which it was ascertained there had been eighteen conversions with 9 accessions to the church. Brethren pray for us. We remain,

Yours in Christ,
A. P. BARBEE.

Trust in God.

BY REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

Blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord, and whose hope the Lord is. Jeremiah 17:7.

There are two Hebrew words rendered trust in the old Testament. One means "to cling." It is the word used for a child clinging to its mother's breast. The other word means "to run for shelter." Hence Boaz said to Ruth, "The Lord recompense thy work, and a full reward be given thee of the Lord God of Israel, under whose wings thou art come to trust." Another Hebrew word from which the word Amen is derived, means "To lean upon." Two figures are used to illustrate holy trust in God. "They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever." Jeremiah uses a most beautiful figure to illustrate the happy condition of the man who trusts in God. "For he shall be as a tree planted by the waters, and that spreadeth out her roots by the river, and shall not see when heat cometh, but her leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit." This illustration shows that the man who trusts in the Lord is independent of all outward conditions, and derives his happiness from a source that the changes of earth cannot reach.

I. Trust in the Lord means confidence in his wisdom, love, justice, and power. God is infinitely wise, and knows what is best for us; he "is love" and desires to do what will be to our lightest good in time, and eternity; he is omnipotent and can do all that his wisdom devises, and his love prompts him to do. Thus you see that you can trust in him with implicit confidence. This is based upon his nature and attributes which are immutable. Hence David could say, "Lord, thou hast been our dwelling place in all generations. Before the mountains were brought forth, or even thou hast formed the earth and the world, even from everlasting, thou art God."

God's liberality to man as manifest in the history of his providence is a reason for trusting in him. David said to the Lord. "Thou openest thine hand and satisfiest the desire of every living thing." There is one manifestation of God's loving interest in man that shows that he will do all that can be done to promote our supreme good. "He that spared not his own son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?"

God promises encourage us to put our trust in him. "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue: whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." In connection with this statement of Peter take one of God's promises to the righteous man: "He shall dwell on high; his place of defence shall be the munitions of rocks: bread shall be given him; his waters shall be sure. Thine eyes shall see the King in his beauty: they shall behold the land that is very far off." What a glorious foundation for trust in God, these promises are. Then his dealings in all ages with those who have trusted in him confirms his promises. He saved righteous Noah from the storm of destruction that swept the wicked nations of the earth out of existence; he delivered Lot from the storm of fire that burned up the wicked cities of the plain; he protected the pious boy Joseph from the murderous hands of his cruel brothers; he freed his people from the iron bondage of Egypt, and brought them safe into the promised land. All through the history of his providence we have facts of this kind, and they encourage us to trust in him. "For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."

In all ages there have been those who trusted in God, and it was well with them. " whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the Scriptures might have hope."

II. God is the only being in whom we can trust in the great emergencies of life. Our friends may love us, and do much for us to make our life cheerful and happy; but they cannot meet our wants in the serious trials of life. Human love and sympathy is a fountain of strength and joy, and brings comfort in many a sad hour; but in the greatest trials of life it leaves us helpless. We need something above and beyond all this, and we can only find the help we need in God. Isaiah understood this and exclaimed: "Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and not be afraid: for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song; he also is also become my salvation."

The temporal blessings of life are valuable, and contribute largely to our present happiness; but they cannot meet the greatest wants of the soul. They can give us no assurance of pardon and eternal life. Voltaire was by one half the richest man in all France, but what could his wealth do for him in death? He offered one half of it to his doctor if he would secure to him six months more of life; but all his money could not give him one hour. God can and does sustain the soul in the dying hour. He gives his child the assurance of an endless life in heaven, and David could say in the calm confidence of faith and hope in him. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

Civil position and power may secure to a man wealth, honor, and the respect and reverence of his fellow men; but he needs something more than all this in the hour of sorrow and death. King George III was one day looking at the plate which had been brought from Hanover, and observing one of the articles with the arms of the electorate engraven upon it, he said to the attendant. "This belonged to King George II.; I know it by the Latin inscription," which he read, and adding, "In English it is, 'I trust in my sword.' "This," said he, "I always disliked; for had I nothing to trust in but my sword, I know what would be the result; therefore when I came to the crown, I altered it, my motto is, 'I trust in the truth of Christianity.' Which of the two inscriptions do you like the best?" The attendant replied, "your majesty's is infinitely preferable to the other." The King answered, "I have ever thought so, and ever shall think so; for therein is my trust and confidence. Think you that it is possible for any one to be comfortable and happy in himself, who has not that trust and confidence? I know that there are those who affect to be at ease while living in a state of infidelity; but it is all affectation; it is only the semblance of happiness—the thing itself is impossible." The experience of infidels themselves confirms this remark of the King.

The Lutheran World says: "Professor Huxley, now that he has become an old man looking eternity in the face, is not so sure of his materialistic theories as he once was. He is inclined to think that perhaps 'it is not all of death to die.' He has certainly read these lines of Tennyson's death song:

"For I shall see my Pilot face to face,
When I have crossed the bar."
and now he admits he too may need a pilot when he has 'crossed the bar' into an unknown ocean. May he find him."

III. It is impossible to trust in God while living in conscious disobedience to him. Our conscience will not allow us to do this, for we know that we deserve his displeasure; and that it would be just for him to punish us. We know that he is worthy of all trust, but our sins come up between us and him; and hide his face from us. Conscience kindles the fire of remorse in our souls, and we are unhappy. A Christian was talking with a man in this state of mind, and spoke to him of God's infinite mercy.

"I know it," said the man; "but he is just also?" There was the abiding conviction that he ought to be punished for his sins, and that he would be if he were not pardoned. Here comes in the necessity of repentance toward God, and faith in Christ. "Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts: let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." This is in harmony with the laws of our mental and moral nature, and it will bring present peace of mind, and hope for the future. The assurance of pardon delivers from all fear of the punishment of sin, and gives the assurance of acceptance with God in the life to come. "Say ye to the righteous, that it shall be well with him: for they shall eat of the fruit of their doings. Woe unto the wicked! it shall be ill with him: for the reward of his hands shall be given him."

IV. The glorious results of trusting in God. The man who trusts in God enjoys peace of mind in regard to his personal relations with him. He knows that all his sins have been blotted out, and will never be mentioned against him again. God has received him as his child, and he rests in his love. When the prodigal son came back in humble penitence to his father and sought his forgiveness he found peace of mind, and trusted in his love. All was peace between them. Thus it is with the sinner who in humble penitence and faith trusts in God's love. He can say with the psalmist, "Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the Lord hath dealt hountifully with thee. For thou hast delivered my soul from death, mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling."

The man who trusts in God enjoys peace of mind in regard to this providential government. He knows that God is infinitely wise and never makes any mistakes, that he is infinite in love and can do no man any harm, and that he is omnipotent and can and will work out his righteous purposes. With this view of God's nature and attributes he rests in the abiding assurance that "all things will work together for his good." How sublime the faith and trust of David, and how sweet his peace of mind as expressed in the twenty-third Psalm. "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." In the midst of his great afflictions Job

International Lesson for October 8, 1893
—Redemption in Christ—Romans
3:19-26.

[Specially Arranged from Peloubet's Notes.]
GOLDEN TEXT.—Being justified freely by His grace through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus.—Rom. 3:24.

THE COURSE OF THOUGHT.—The subject is, how men can be saved from sin. They cannot be saved by the deeds of the law, for as a matter of fact they have all failed in obedience to law. What have the Gentiles achieved under the law of conscience and of nature—these Roman citizens whose glory is in their Roman law? Behold, for answer, the awful picture in 1:21-32. But the Jews, exalted in privilege, with their birth of the law and their divine training, looking down from this height upon the heathen —have they become holy by the law? No; for they in their measure break the law of God as do the Gentiles (chap. 2). But is there no advantage in being a Jew then, and in possessing the law of God? Certainly (3:1). But if men live in spite of this law they are guilty before God, and must be condemned by Him. They can see their portrait in their own Scriptures (3:9-19). All are under sin. The whole world is guilty before God. By the deeds of the law can no flesh be justified before God. Is there no remedy then? no salvation? Yes; God has provided a way in Jesus Christ, who manifests the divine righteousness, who has made atonement for sin through His blood; and by faith in Him all who believe are justified, forgiven the past and made holy in heart and life.

LESSON NOTES.

The Need of a Way of Salvation.
Ever since the fall of man God had been working in two parallel lines for his redemption—one with the Gentiles through conscience and natural law, the other with the Jews through a divine revelation and training.

First, the Gentiles. The moral condition of the Roman empire, amid the glory of its military achievements that made Rome the mistress of the world; in the height of its intellectual supremacv, producing works which have aided the education of the world for eighteen centuries, and are still a part of the training of every educated person in Christendom; under the power of a law which is still the basis of civilized legislation; amid the triumphs of wealth and luxury.—Is portrayed in the terrible indictment of chap. 1:21-32, which the contemporary literature of the day fully confirms, as do the startling revelations from the ruins of Pompeii. Dr. Lyman Abbott says:
"There are six indications of the moral life of a community, either of which is significant; when they all agree in their testimony, they afford a nearly infallible test of its true character."

1. As to industry. "All honorable industry was dishonorable in Rome;"
one half the inhabitants were slaves, wretchedly treated. "The wages of a day-laborer did not exceed twelve or fifteen cents a day."

2. As to social habits. "The accumulation of wealth, in the hands of the few, was as dangerous a symptom of demoralization as the poverty, the ignorance and the moral degradation of the many." "The excesses of lust can only be suggested by saying that they paralleled the excesses of cruelty; and these surpass imagination."

3. As to the family. "Divorce was as free and as frequent as the most libidinous advocate of free-lust in our own age could desire." "Cicero repudiated his wife because he was short of money and wanted a new dowry." "Prostitution became honorable." "Chastity had become a perilous virtue."

4. As to the government. It was a military despotism. "The evils of unlimited power have had many tragical illustrations in human history, but none to compare with that afforded by the eighty years covered by the reigns of Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, Nero, Vitellius and Domitian." The senate was so abject, and the courts so corrupt, that the people had in them no aid for overthrowing the bitter despotism that crushed them.

5. As to education. "Such a government did nothing for the education of youth. Rome contained nothing ap-proximating to a public school system." "The ability to write well, if not to read, was a badge rather of the servile than the honorable class."
"Education was confined to a few persons, and limited to few and superficial themes."

6. As to religion. There was almost no faith in the gods, though temples were built with increasing splendor, and established forms were scrupulous-ly observed; yet the people laughed in the theaters at the popular satires of the gods whom they worshiped in the temples. Cicero and Caesar were both high officers of religion, though both disbelieved it. As usual with the decline of faith, came the rise of superstition and belief in all manner of por-ents and auguries. Religion had no practical bearing on the moral life except to degrade it. "Worship and vice were not inconsistent." In many cases worship ministered to vice.

Illustrations.—The traveler in the Hartz mountains is sometimes startled by a gigantic apparition in the clouds which are about him, until he discovers that his every gesture is repeated by the image which for the moment aroused his superstitious awe. The gods of Greece and Rome were but gi-gantic reflections cast upon the clouds by Greek and Roman life. The gods of Homer and Virgil are not only feasting gods, but roystering, bacchanalian, drunken gods. They are not only sensuous, marrying and giving in marriage; they are openly and grossly li-centious; adultery and rape are divine.
They are vindictive, passionate, intriguing, mendacious. They are dei-fications of Ahab and Jezebel, of Machiavelli and Lucretia Borgia, of Henry VIII. and Catherine de Medici.
Well cried Vespasian on his deathbed: "Woe is me, for I am about to become a god."

Second, the Jews.—The Jews thought that, because they were set apart for a higher training, by special revelation and care, therefore they would be saved whether they did right or wrong. They were God's own people; how could they be lost? But Paul shows them that salvation is salvation from sin, and they were not saved from sin. And lest they should not see this, he brings a picture of sinful men, Jews and Gentiles, out of their own Scriptures.

—What is love without truth or truth without love? They purify and ex-noble each other. —W. G. Clinton

There are too many people who pray that God will convert the whole earth who never give more than ten cents at a time to help him do it.

The right kind of a Christian will thank God every hour of his life, whether there is anything in sight to thank Him for or not.

There are people who claim to be praying for the salvation of the whole world, who never go to prayer-meeting in rainy weather.

International Lesson for October 15, 1893

—Justification by Faith—Romans 5:1-11.

[Specially Arranged from Peloubet's Notes.]

GOLDEN TEXT.—While we were yet sinners,
Christ died for us.—Rom. 5:8.

THE COURSE OF THOUGHT.—Thus far St.
Paul has established (1) the need of justification; and (2) its equal terms for Jews and Gentiles; and (3) that faith in Christ's blood is its one appointed condition. And (4) in Abraham's case he has illustrated the nature and actings of faith. Now he is to deal with the effects of faith in life and character.—Car-bridge Bible. He begins with chapter 5 (5:1-11), but (5) before he completes this picture he illustrates (5:12-21) the abounding grace which reigns "through righteousness unto eternal life." Then (6) he shows under several figures or symbols how the redemption in Christ leads to holiness. It is death to sin, but resurrection to righteousness (6:1-14). It is deliverance from slavery into the glorious liberty of the children of God (5:15-23). It is divorce from sin and marriage to Christ (7:1-6.) (7) Then follows a description of the battle of life. "The conflict is a life conflict. It belongs neither to regenerate nor unregenerate nature; but to nature. Paul portrays it again in the third chapter of Philippians: 'Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect; but I follow after if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus.' This is the life struggle of the Christian. Not till the water of the river of death laves the feet of the entering disciple can he say, 'I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course.'"—Abbott.
(8) "The eighth chapter of Romans is not victory after battle, it is hope and courage and faith in battle; it is a portrayal of the spirit in which this battle is to be fought." But in it are many foreglimpses of victory, and the blessedness that victory shall bestow, many Pisgah visions of the promised land.

LESSON NOTES.

Peace with God.—Ver. 1. After all the gloomy retrospect which fills the preceding chapters, the clouds break, and light steals gently over the scene.
Nor is it merely the subsidence of storm, but an ardent and eager hope that now awakens, and looks forward to a glorious future. 1. "Therefore being justified by faith:" Acquitted, pardoned, received into God's favor, and with a holy nature implanted in us. "We have peace with God." We are in a state of peace and reconciliation with God; the antagonism was removed when we were justified. The next step after justification is peace.
"Peace with God." Not "peace from God" (1:7), nor peace of God, but a new relation to God: "Through our Lord Jesus Christ." This full form gives a tone of triumph to the verse.

Hope of the Glory of God.—2. "By whom also we have access." This word sometimes signifies the art of bringing, or introducing. But the word has also sometimes an intransitive meaning; the right of entering, access. This latter meaning is preferable. The same mediator who gives us peace is the one who brought us "into this grace," as friends and children, "wherein we stand." "And rejoice in the hope of the glory of God." The glorious state which God Himself possesses, and into which He will admit the faithful.

Discipline and its Fruits.—3. "And not only so;" but what is still more wonderful, the salvation of Jesus trans-figures even our trials and suffering into life and hope and character. "We glory in tribulations also." This word, tribulation, both the English and the Latin equivalent of the Greek, is derived from the Latin "tribulum," which was the threshing instrument, or roller, whereby the Roman husband-man separated the corn from the husks; and "tribulatio" in its primary significance was the act of this separation.

The Love of God.—6. "For;" Introducing the proof of the greatness and the freeness of God's love. "When and, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." "For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God: whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another; though my sins be consumed within me."

The man who trusts in God enjoys peace of mind in regard to the great future, for he rests on his promise of a home in heaven. David enjoyed this peace of mind, and could say, "Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore." "As for me,
I will behold thy face in righteousness. I shall be satisfied, when I awake, with thy likeness." The Rev. William Grimshaw lay dying he said to his friends: "I am happy as I can be on earth, and as sure of glory, as if I were already in it.
Here goes an unprofitable servant."

REMARKS.

1. My friends, you must trust something, and what shall it be?
Wealth, position, power, friends or self? Where will all these things leave you in death? Adrift on the wild surges of the river of death without hope. An active business—man, seeing death unavoidable, said to his physician, "Doctor, I have made every provision for living; and now
I must die, though utterly unprepared for it."

2. This is a question that you must decide for yourself. Ay voluntarily sining you have put yourself in a position in which you cannot have this trust, and you must get out of it. This is your work. "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out."

Deal Gently With the Erring!

We have just received a copy of the greatest home song ever published in this country. The privilege of publishing in America alone cost $2,000 in gold.
It is a song that will reach the heart of every Christian in the land. The melody is perfectly beautiful; can be played on piano or organ. We give our readers the first verse and chorus.

FIRST VERSE.

Deal gently with the erring!
Ye knew not of the power
With which the dark temptation came
In some unguarded hour.
Ye may not know how earnestly
They struggled nor how well—
Until the hour of weakness came,
And sadly thus they fell.

CHORUS.

Forget not thou hast often sinned,
And sinful yet must be!
Deal gently with the erring one
As God hath dealt with thee.

Price 40 cents per copy; can be obtained by addressing the publisher, F.
W. Helmick, 265 Sixth Avenue, New York.

Our readers will receive a copy by sending 20 cent. in postage stamps.

we were yet without strength." Unable to save ourselves because of sin. "In due time." At the right moment. The best time in all the ages for the accomplishing of His work. "Christ died for the ungodly;" sinners "without God in the world," opposed to God, His enemies.

7. "For scarcely." This infrequent word expresses the great difficulty of the case, as we might say: "It would be very hard to find a man who would do this." "For a righteous man . . . a good man." The difference between the words righteous and good is that which in common usage is made between just and kind. "A righteous man," fulfilling all just demands, calls forth respect and admiration; but "the good man," himself prompted by love, evokes our love, and for him some one would even dare to die.

Salvation from Wrath.—9. "Much more than." If the greater benefit has been bestowed, the less will not be withheld. "Being now justified by His blood:" When the blood of Christ is spoken of in the New Testament, it means the offering of His life as a sacrifice, or His death as an expiation. "We shall be saved from wrath:" The wrath of God, His indignation against sin, and the punishment which He must inflict.

Salvation to Holiness by an Ever-Present Living Saviour.—10. "We were reconciled to God:" This expresses the changed relation to God and man effected through Christ. "We shall be saved by His life:" or in His life. By participation in His life, by the life He bestows, and which we live in and through Him, as the branch lives by the life of the vine.

Joy in God.—11. "And not only so:" There are greater blessings than in the mere fact of being saved. Once saved there come vision upon vision of blessings enfolded within that salvation, as when we climb a mountain, at each state of ascent we have a wider and more glorious view than was possible at the lower stations. "But we also joy in God:" Rejoice, glory, triumph, in God. God's salvation is full of joy.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

1. Every blessing of God contains, as the seed contains the plant, unexpected fruits. It is a doorway into larger rooms, a stepping stone to higher good.
2. Peace, reconciliation to God, is the basis of the Christian experience. The first thing for a wheel that has got out of place in the machinery, and thus has become broken and useless, is to get into its right place, into its true relations with the factory.
3. The Christian hope is the most glorious in the world. It looks forward to the very glory of God, in character and in blessedness.

TEMPERANCE.

O COOL GRAY JUG!

O cool gray jug that touched the lips
In kiss that softly closed and clung!
No Spanish wine the tippler sips,
Or port the poet's praise has sung,
Such pure untainted sweetness yields
As cool gray jug in harvest fields.

I see it now! a clover leaf
Outspread upon its sweating side,
As from the standing sheaf
I pluck and swing it high, the wide
Field glows with noonday heat;
The winds are tangled in the wheat;

The myriad crickets blithely cheep;
Across the swash of ripened grain
I see the burnished reaper creep.
The lunch-boy comes, and once again
The jug its crystal coolness yields—
O cool gray jug in harvest fields!

PHYSIOLOGY AND DRINK.

Some Popular Errors Regarding the Use of Liquors at Meals.

The Westminster Review, one of the leading vehicles of the best English thought, has a very strong article in a recent number in which are discussed several of the popular fallacies regarding the use of intoxicating liquors. It sets forth the latest conclusions of medical and other scientific authorities regarding these matters of general error among the masses of the people. The first of these mentioned is the common belief that the drinking of alcoholic liquors gives new strength and energy to the body after one has already become fatigued with labor. Physiologists agree that the sensation of fatigue is one of the safety-valves of the human machine. It is a warning that the bodily functions are being overtaxed, and that rest is imperatively demanded. To deaden the sense of fatigue by drinking, which excites the circulation, in order to do more work, is like tying down the safety-valve of a boiler. There is danger of over-pressure, and that an explosion may follow.

Another popular error is that alcoholic drinks aid the function of digestion. The use of wines and other alcoholic drinks during a dinner is fashionable, under the idea that the stomach is stimulated, and performs its duties better and quicker. Scientific investigation has proved this to be exactly the reverse of the truth. Experiment has shown that a meal taken without alcohol is more quickly followed by hunger than is a meal at which some alcoholic drink is taken. Further, it has proved that the process of digestion is retarded by the use of liquors at meals.

Another error is that mental exertion of all kinds is better undergone when a moderate amount of alcohol is taken. This is clearly disproved by the experience of those brain-workers who have tested both ways. The fatigue consequent upon mental labor is more easily recuperated in the case of the man who does not drink than in that of one who does.

There is no more conclusive proof of the uselessness of alcohol as a means of fortifying the system against cold, or heat, or the inclemencies of the weather, or long-sustained physical exertion, than the thousands of experiments which have been made by medical and scientific men in connection with the sanitation of armies. These experiments have been made in every climate, under all conditions of heat and cold, in all kinds of weather; and the verdict of science has been, in every case, that soldiers are better able to endure the fatigue of the most exhausting marches when they are not allowed any alcoholic liquor of any kind.

It will be seen that these results of scientific research cut the ground from under the feet of the very large class of people who attempt to excuse their drinking propensities by pleas of various kinds. The plain fact is, they drink because they like the effects which alcohol produces. They desire the state of exhilaration, of gaiety, of high spirits, which follow the imbibing of all liquors, spirituous, vinous or fermented, and make the various pleas enumerated above to excuse themselves to their friends, or to the community at large. There is no scientific basis for any of these pleas. No man is better, even temporarily, in mind or body, by such indulgence.

The Review article closes with a summing up which declares it to be certain that from 70 to 80 per cent of crime, 80 to 90 per cent of all poverty, and from 10 to 40 per cent of the suicides, in most civilized countries, are to be ascribed to the use, or rather abuse, of alcoholic drinks. With their uselessness so clearly demonstrated, and the terrible evils so graphically shown which follow from the unrestrained indulgence in them, why is it not better for the nation that the strong hand of the law shall interdict their manufacture and sale, and thus pulverize the rum power?—Toledo Blade.

INHERITED EVILS.

How the Children of Drinking Parents Are Made to Suffer.

The children of inebriates furnish a large proportion of the infant mortality which is a disgrace to our civilization. Such children begin with an unstable nervous system, which may express itself as the drink-crave itself; and in addition, all the nervous ailments, e. g., idiocy, infantile convulsions, epilepsy, neuralgia, hypochondria, hysteria, paralysis, insanity, or it may express itself in other ways. But even then, they suffer, though innocent. The parents' intemperance is represented in them, and will be for generations to come, by ailments which are called by respectable names; gout, dyspepsia, nerves and legion! But it is but seldom that the children of the intemperate thus break down the influence of the sad environment in which they have grown up. The evil that men do lives after them. The children of such parents are almost sure to be saddled with diseases and tendencies directly resulting from their parents' habits.—Journal of Inebriety.

THE saloon is called "the poor man's club." Yes, it clubs him out of all his manhood; clubs him out of his money, his self-respect. The frequenter of the saloon is the worst clubbed man temporarily and spiritually known.—Pittsburgh Catholic.

MISSIONARY.

Our Japan Mission and its Needs.

BY J. G. BISHOP, MISSIONARY SECRETARY, A. C. C.

The time for our annual September collection for Foreign Missions will soon be here. In this number of the American Christian the Convention Secretary issues his call for the same. Through the Missionary Department of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, as well as by the letters from our missionaries on the field, as published in the same paper, we have aimed to keep our people informed on the progress and condition of our Japan mission.

The Mission Board is well pleased with the work being done by our missionaries; indeed our mission has never looked more promising both for permanency and aggressive work than at present. If conversions are not reported as frequent as at an earlier stage of the work, this is true also of other missions in Japan. A few years ago the Japanese were eagerly seizing on every thing foreign, and it seemed as if it would require but a few years to Christianize that empire. But a strong anti-foreign sentiment has more recently set in, the people rallying to the cry of "Japan for the Japanese." This, with an increased effort on the part of the Buddhist priests so strengthen their religion, is making the progress of the gospel more difficult, and consequently much slower than it promised to be a few years ago. Still there is a substantial gain being made. In our own mission conversions and baptisms are quite frequent. Good foundations are being laid, and preparatory work done.

During the past year our workers in the northern field have been organized into a conference, for the purpose, largely, of unifying and strengthening the work, and drilling the workers in practical methods. This conference has already held two quarterly sessions; our Superintendent, Prof. Woodworth, of course presiding, drilling, &c.

It is found that mere evangelistic work by our missionaries, as important as that is, is not enough for Japan. Native Christians just converted from heathenism, however zealous they may be, cannot do intelligent, efficient work, without special teaching and training. Hence the IMPORTANCE OF SCHOOLS.

Some teaching of the native workers has been done by our missionaries from the beginning, but more is now being done and purposed to be done than in the past. In this, extra work is demanded because of the custom of the country and prejudices of the people which demand the education of the men and women separately. We don't so much wonder at this when we consider with what tenacity some people even yet in Christian lands hold on to the heathenish idea that the sexes must be educated in separate classes. This makes extra work for our missionaries. But the work must be done. The more of this preparatory work wisely done, the more rapid the progress, and richer the harvests after a while.

THE WORK OF THE WORKERS.

Of course only an outline can be given. First, and as very important, and to which they are giving themselves with all the energy possible under the circumstances, is the duty of the language. In addition, Miss Penrod superintends the woman's work, manages the Sunday school and teaches a Bible class at Oji, with house to house visitation and personal work, and gives special teaching and training to the Bible women. In reference to this work, on one of her letters she says: "Our teaching is in the line of theological work, aiming especially to make them active soul winners." She has also, with her interpreter as teacher, opened a school for Japanese children.

Mrs. Woodworth, in addition to superintending the domestic department of mission headquarters, is giving instruction in music

Prof. Woodworth, besides the study of the language, his correspondence and writing for our papers, teaches two Bible classes and conducts weekly meetings in Tokio and Oji, attends the quarterly conferences in the north, 250 miles from Tokio, has the general superintending of the whole work, and teaches the theological class of young men preparing for the ministry.

This remark in a letter from Miss Penrod some time ago will be in place here. She says, "The days are not long enough in Japan. As they cannot be lengthened that more work may be done, I see no other alternative but to send more workers, educated, dead in earnest Christian workers."

The prospect now is that Bro. Woodworth will have a class this fall in training for the Christian ministry much larger than we have ever before had. Among them is a man of good Japanese education—a graduate from one of the leading Tokio schools—who has recently, at a great financial sacrifice, relinquished a position in the Government employ in order to study for the ministry among us.

OUR PRESENT NEEDS.

1. Means to support the work as it is—pay salaries, rents, traveling expenses, and a few incidentals. We are barely doing this at our present rate of contributions.

2. Our missionaries need re-inforcement. By the outlining above some idea may be formed of the weight and responsibility of the work now resting upon the hearts and hands of one man and two women; when, as a matter of fact, they ought to have little to do for a year or so aside from the study of the language.

At a recent Board meeting it was "Resolved, That is the sense of this Board that we should employ additional missionaries for the Japan field as soon as it may be practicable." The "practicable" includes the idea of finding the money to send and support them.

3. For buildings Especially for a church and school building for our headquarters at Tokio. We ought also to have a parsonage, or "missionaries home." Besides paying rents, it is sometimes impossible to secure suitable building for meeting purposes. Then buildings of our own would give a sense of permanency to the work. We have comfortable churches in this country; some quite costly. We would not if we could invest extensively in buildings at present in Japan. But a few thousand dollars for this purpose is greatly needed. Surely we should do something—make it possible for our missionaries to have some kind of building accommodations for their work in Tokio.

Do not these considerations appeal to all of our love for God and the souls of men, to all of the spirit of Christ and generosity there is in us to contribute—contribute generously to our Foreign Mission work?

Good Words From Japan.

Bro. Woodworth, in a recent letter, speaking of Mr. Ohta and Mr. Kitamura, two of his native preachers whom he had just sent from Tokio to reinforce Miss Penrod in some evangelistic and conference work in the north, says:

"Mister Kitamura stands at the end of the line in the picture. (The group I have, as mentioned above.) He is one of the prominent men among the Christian writers of Japan, is fully alive to the danger of parasitism among evangelists who grow careless and satisfied if they get their salary regularly. He is relentlessly after shams and parasites. I have thought that he and Mr. Ohta would be a sort of Paul and Silas. I have great confidence in them. Our summer expenses will be a little heavy, but I feel that the work must go, and I am willing to be reasonably prodigal if the expense is along the line of showing our workers that they are not to be satisfied to hold positions as figure-heads. But that their work is to preach the Gospel and lead souls to Christ. I want them to feel this until it shall be the burning desire of their lives.

"We received two members in Tokio to-day, making sixteen in the past four months. Miss Penrod has just baptized five at Ishinomaki, and I baptized three at other points in the north. There are four or five at Wakuya waiting for baptism. Slowly, in spite of difficulties, we advance. Oh, for the power!"

Amen. The Lord give the power of the Holy Spirit.

FOR MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

Dear Co-Workers—Your very welcome letter came to us on the last mail. I hasten to reply. I am glad you ask the questions, because it enables us to spread the facts concerning the real condition of the Japanese. I fear I shall be unable to answer all your questions on this mail, as time is at a premium in Japan. Should I fail, I will send the second edition on the next mail, which will be ten days later.

First, as to the present condition of the people in Japan. Intellectually, they are an enterprising, intelligent people. They have a school system, by which every one that goes to school pays his own tuition, varying with the grade. A little more than one-half of the Japanese can read and write. Recently a few colleges have been established, four in number. The public school system is about seven years of age. The Japanese lived, for 216 years prior to 1854, like frogs in a well—all to themselves, in ignorance, superstition, and idolatry. At that time, her ports were opened to foreign communication. It was not until ten years after that, that a foreigner could keep his head on his shoulders in Japan. So you see that the modern missionary has been in Japan less than twenty, and that the Japanese, to do their very best, are yet away, way back in all kinds of heathen customs.

Prior to the 216 years referred to above, missionaries from Spain, Catholics, were in Japan. Hostility arose, and every Christian was killed—50,000 in all. Religiously, those not Christians, are Buddhists, Shintoists, and atheists. I will not describe these religions in full, as you can find them in encyclopedias. There are one half million of temples, Buddhist or Shinto, in Japan. Until recently, the government appropriated money to support and build these temples. Now they are supported by private contributions.

Allow me briefly to describe one of the Tokio temples. The building is 50 or 75 feet square, about 75 feet high. The first floor is reached by fifteen stone steps. The outside and inside are richly ornamented with carvings of wild beasts, and fowls, and human figures, inlaid with brass or copper. In the niches doves live and make their nests. These birds are brought from different, distant places by the pilgrims coming there to worship. Rice is kept on the ground and sold. It is considered a pious act for the worshiper to buy rice to feed them. It is sold very high, the proceeds going to the temple.

You enter the temple from the front. The first thing you meet is an incense stand, at which incense is brought to be burned. This has an obnoxious smell to the foreigner. Advance twenty feet, and you come to a huge money-box, about 15 by 10 by 2 feet, over which is a wooden railing. In the advance of this is a gilded railing. You can go no further, for, according to heathen ideas, this is holy ground. None but the priests tread there. Inside of this railing, among flowers, lamps, and decorations of all kinds, is an image of a man, golden in color. This is the temple's special idol. Now the worshiper comes, tosses his one-half cent or cent into the treasury, claps his hands a few times to attract the attention of the god, as he may be asleep, out walking, visiting, etc. (what characteristics for man's god!), then kneels in humble worship and petition to this image. The prayer is sometimes read.

Some temples have a bell to use instead of clapping the hands. This god is supposed to grant any request. However, there are gods of disease, wind, fire, water, thunder, fortune; in short, there are thousands. Some say 10,000. The god of disease is supposed to cure the applicant of any disease, if, after the money is deposited, the sufferer will rub that portion of the idol that is afflicted in himself, then rub the afflicted part of his own body. The eyes, nose, ears, and knees of this image are literally almost rubbed away. It is a wooden image.

Besides the above-named idols, there are many obscene shrines, which here cannot be described. The money-box is a never-missing attendant at every shrine. There are many miniature images and pictures sold in the temple. These are taken home for family use. The best person of the household is selected to wait on these gods.

Another form of worship in Japan is ancestor worship. The worshipers believe that their dead ancestors have power to grant their requests, and that they will make them happy after death, if they have been faithful in their worship. Recently, we have had a convert from this class.

Atheism runs riot in Japan. Many of the Japanese have found by experience and study that Buddhism, and ancestor worship, are false. Aided by reading infidel books that are poured in from the United States and Europe, they hastily cast aside the Christian religion also.

*This letter was written in response to one of our wide-awake workers for a Missionary Society in Illinois. I have secured it for publication, so that all our mission societies and friends can have the benefit of it. To write such letters to all our local Missionary Societies which might ask for them, would be too great a tax on the time and strength of our missionaries. Many letters—letters spicy, full of the Holy Spirit full of love, hope and good cheer—should be written to our missionaries, but very few in return should ask, or expect, letters from them. Let matters of general interest from them come for publication. The same letter will then answer for all. It can be cut out of the HERALD, or the SUN, and read to the society or missionary meeting, etc.

J. G. BISHOP, Mission Sec'y.

The Buddhists often, in fact, everywhere, give as great trouble. Many are school teachers. They plan their work so that the children can not attend Sabbath-school, and often punish them for doing so. If one member of the family accepts Christ, he often suffers untold torture for his sake. This subject is simply inexhaustible.

Physically, the people are a shorter-lived people than those in the United States. This can be accounted for by their poor houses, without light, except through paper, and on rainy days not this: their poor methods of heating; no stoves or fire-places in Japan; a foot-square box, two-thirds full of dirt and ashes, on the top of which is made a small fire of charcoal, and this is the family heater. Their food is not so nutritious as ours, consisting principally of fish and vegetables. What is worse, so many can not afford as much of this as is needed. The houses are void of chairs, bedsteads, and tables. Clothing is so made as to poorly protect the body.

Horse, steam, and electric powers are so little used here that everything is done by the main strength of men. In the city men pull the two-wheeled carriage to transport people from place to place. Men transport, on carts, merchandise of all kinds, including gravel, stones, and building timber, etc. In the country, men and women spade the fields; the rake is the pulverizer. They sow and plant by hand, reap with the reap-hook, thresh with the flail, winnow by the wind, and haul to market by their own strength. The women at the heavy work, work side by side with the men, in the rice fields working in mud and water knee deep.

Second. As to the women. No; the women are not bound in the zenanas of India, or the harm of Turkey. Women are considered by nature to be impure and vile. Therefore, she must be shunned in every possible way. She is a necessary evil. I wrote an article for the Herald on Japanese women. I will send you the manuscript I kept for myself.

Third. As to the mission route. Our most southern point is Tokio. Our most northern point is 275 miles north of this. After leaving Oji, which is five miles north of Tokio, we have no points till about 225 miles north. In an irregular area of about fifty square miles we have four principal points, each of these having four to six out-stations. There is one preacher at each of the four points, that preaches for it and for its adjoining six stations. There is also an evangelist in the north whose business it is to aid the other preachers in evangelistic work.

In Tokio, a city of 1,000,000 people, we have one church, and at Oji one. At each of these places we have a native preacher. The one in Tokio is a student of the Bible school. We have one woman that puts in all of her time in teaching and study to become a Bible woman; and another that puts in the most of her time teaching us, or helping us to learn the language. She helps some in Sunday school work also. We have six Sunday-schools. The minister is the principle teacher of the place. We use the International Sunday-school lessons. The children learn Scripture verses and stories just as your children do. They usually sit on the floor. We have the illustrations of the lessons in beautiful pictures, which aid them in grasping the new and strange news. Here in Tokio and at Oji our women helpers are teachers. The preacher's wife is usually a teacher, also. We have Sunday school quarterlies printed in the Japanese language for the pupils.

We have two new schools. The one that began the first of April is the poor children's school. There are thousands of parents in Tokio too poor to pay the government tuition; so the children can not read. Many of these come to our Sunday-school. We think the best help we can give the Japanese is to help them to help themselves. So we started this school. But the Buddhists oppose us very strongly, and the parents are afraid at first to trust their children in our schools, so the building up process is very slow. We are gaining ground. By and by, they will know, from the experience of the few, that we are what we claim to be. Now there are twelve regular pupils in this school. They are required to furnish their own books, etc., and pay what they are able. This is required in order to teach them self dependence. This school is held in the back room of the small church house. It in no way nearly pays expenses. So far, we have received about twenty-five cents in your money as tuitions. It is hard for you to conceive of the abject poverty that there is in Japan.

Our other school is the theological and trainer's school. This has been begun since last November. There are now four students. Next fall we know of a certainty of two others, and, possibly, several others. We have no place for this school. Our home is at one side of the city at present. So the class meets at the house of the pastor of the Tokio church. Changes will be made by fall.

As to the time of, and the effect of, mission effort in Japan. As previously mentioned, the time is less than twenty years, and at present there are 33,000 in all denominations. Our total membership is about 150. The missionary effort may not seem to be such slow work when we remember the modern foreign mission enterprise is one of this century; that, during the first fifty years, not more than fifty or one hundred men spent a few years each among one thousand million heathen; that this handful of men and women were not all here at one time, and that they had to learn difficult and entirely new languages; that they had no books or helps; that they had to work it out as best they could; that they often had to labor ten years before a single convert could be made; that the people of the Orient and Pacific isles have some form of religion of their own, in which they are deeply rooted, as much so as we are in the Christian religion; that they are grossly ignorant and superstitious; that they are moral beings; that, in view of these facts, it takes time to move them; that the climate and provisions afforded by these countries, together with incessant toil and anxiety of responsibility, break down the health of the strongest, so that the very healthiest and best-cared-for can often stay but a few years till they have to go home, their places to be filled by new and inexperienced hands.

Now, my dear co-workers, if you will compare statistics carefully, you will find that greater results, in souls actually saved, have been granted by our merciful Father in the heathen land for the money and men and women expended than at home, in spite of the above and many other obstacles. For these statistics write Rev. J. G. Bishop for leaflets named, "Trifling With a Great Trust," and "Open Doors." Read a book, "What We Get For What We Give," or consult some encyclopedia that is up to date.

As to our personal ease and comfort. In order that we may have all our time for the mission-work we have a man and his wife to do the most of our work. They are Christians. We pay them from our own salaries. So far we have had to spend much time in training them how to do our work so that we can keep alive. Heathen and Christian ideas are so unlike you would scarcely recognize the similarity.

What do we do? Not a tithe of what we would like to do. We came on the ground the 15th of last October. Then, Bro. Jones and wife were our missionaries, too; now they are in China. Hence, we are the only ones of our mission here. Mrs. Woodworth's health has been so poor that all she can do is to teach the native helpers how to sing our hymns when they come to the house. By this you see Prof. Woodworth and myself have all the rest of the work. He teaches in the forenoon and I in the afternoon. We teach the Bible and such studies as your ministers consider indispensable to success in their work; also, English. We teach the latter so that the students will have access to the great mines of knowledge in that language that is not translated into Japanese. The tendency at present is for every Japanese student to have a knowledge of English.

Prof. W. attends four meetings a week. Three of these are Bible classes, held in the churches for the benefit of the membership and others that will come. I have three meetings a week, two Bible classes and Sunday-school; besides these, we have special meetings, and make personal calls to explain the Scripture and spend quite a good deal of time entertaining callers whose business is to learn the truth. We are studying the language with all the power we possess. We are hand-and-tongue-tied till we can meet the people tongue to tongue. The best students require three years to learn this language so that they can preach in it. Many consume much more time. Those who do this don't do much else. We put in all our time at it that is not used in the other work, not taking our evenings to ourselves or for our own work. I can hardly explain how we do get our sewing, and such work as the help can't do, done; but we get it done by sheer push. Besides this, we have an immense correspondence with our native land. This is largely in answer to inquiries concerning the work. Then, the business and correspondence of the native work is no small item.

Well, if we are not busy, pushed, I wish some one would investigate, and if in his visit he receives more than ordinary attention it will be when Japan is Christianized, and this push and strain is over.

See what a long letter I've written, and it is almost midnight. I pray and trust that these answers, in brief, will do you some good. They are not satisfactory to myself, as to do so would take more time than I can muster.

My dear co-workers, there is nothing mysterious or incomprehensible about this work. Neither is there anything that we would keep from you. Indeed, we want you to know even the details of our work, when it will increase your interest.

I forgot to say we have no parlor. We have two bed-rooms, a dining-room, and a study-room. Our kitchen en is so small and dark that I am almost afraid to eat the material prepared in it. Then there is a room where we keep our boxes and trunks and bicycles. I suppose you would call a plunder-room. But this will soon have to be cleared out for a room for our new lady student. Where the plunder, etc., will be put, I can't yet tell. The man and woman that help us have one room built Japanese style.

I trust that you will build your missionary store of knowledge on the Gospel foundation. It is the greatest mission-work to which we have access. We will endeavor to be true to the trust placed in us both by God and man.

FIELD NEWS.

Elon College Notes.

There is no recalling the deeds of the past. Therefore if during the past month we have acted amiss it is now forever in the past. However if such has been the case let us not waste time in brooding over it, but let us, with a new zeal, do something during the coming month that will eternally outweigh the mistakes of the past.

Prof. Newman was called off last Thursday to officiate at the marriage of Mr. Henon Hughes to Miss Mattie Fowler. Mr. Hughes is the son of Mr. Peter Hughes our Ex-Liveryman. We wish the couple a long life filled with deeds of kindness.

Mrs. J. P. Barrett who has been with us ever since the opening of school, went to Raleigh last Friday. She made many friends during her stay among us. We trust that she and little Ethel will visit us again in the near future.

Pres Long, and Miss Berta Morning who are now in Chicago attending the Exposition report a pleasant and profitable time.

The first issue of the Elon College Monthly has gone to the press. We hope soon to have it before the public.

The railroad between Elon and Altamahaw is now a subject that is much agitated, and especially by Prof. Bandy's class in civil Engineering.

Rev. M. L. Hurley's dwelling is nearing completion. Its site is one of the prettiest in town, and it is generally accepted as being the most attractive and handsomely finished house in our town.

Mrs. E. A. Moffitt accompanied by her son Mr. John Moffitt and wife came in our "Ville" last Sat., and will spend a few days of this week with us.

Rev. W. J. Laine filled his regular appointment at Shallow Ford church yesterday. He reports a pleasant occasion and an attentive congregation.

Prof. Atkinson preached for us yesterday. His subject was: Truth, Honesty and Purity. His discourse was fine, and was delivered in his usual earnest and animated style.

Sunday night a very interesting prayer-meeting was conducted by Prof. Bandy. His subject was: Encourage your Brother. The Prof. gave us many practical suggestions and useful thoughts.

Decided improvement has been made in the singing since the organization of the choir.

All friends of the Elon College Monthly will do the Business Managers a great favor by subscribing to it and getting their friends to do likewise.

Dr. Herndon is now attending the Ga. and Ala. Christian Conference, and soliciting funds and patronage for Elon College in that territory.

J. H. JONES.

Windsor, Va.

It will soon be time for our conference to hold their sessions. It is a time to which many look with great interest. Many preachers and visitors have not the privilege of meeting each other except at the annual meetings. This within itself is very pleasant. The demands of the church are to be considered, and plans to be laid for successful work, but at the same time we ought not to neglect the devotional, the spiritual part of these meetings. We profess to be servants of the Lord we ought therefore to give enough time and suitable attention to the worship of God. I have often felt that our meetings at conference were not as devotional as they ought to be. Let the delegates, preachers, and visitors go up to our annual conferences this year in the fulness of the spirit of Jesus, and if we thus come no doubt we shall be greatly blessed with the presence of the Lord. The reason why so many of us fail in our plans in our work is because we do not ask the Lord to bless us and to help us. As certain as we go forward in our own strength, failure will look us squarely in the face. Let us take Jesus with us when we preach, when we speak, when we pray, when we work for Him we will find a greater friend, a greater helper than in any one else. If His presence goes with us it will make us more natural, more manly and more religious in the work we have to do in our conferences. It is well to have enough self esteem, but it is better far better to have Jesus for our all in all.

Notice.

The E. V. C. Conference will meet with the church at Mt. Carmel, Isle of Wight county, Va., on Tuesday before first Sunday in November, 1893, at 11 o'clock A. M. Those coming by the S. & R. railroad will get off at Carrsville, Va. Let all intending to come that way write to Mr. Jno. M. Ballard, Windsor Va., so that he may meet them there on Tuesday morning. All those who expect to come by Norfolk and Western road will get off at Windsor, Va. on Tuesday morning before first Sunday in Nov. All who intend coming this way will please write to Mr. I. W. Duck, Windsor, Va., and he will meet them. Let all who can come on their own conveyance.

J. T. KITCHEN Pastor.

Ashboro, N. C.

DEAR SUN:—At the great revival services held here a few weeks since, grand results were accomplished. Rev. Mr. Lee is an enthusiastic worker and a devout man. He preached to our people three times each day during his stay here. The pastors were greatly encouraged, the whole church of Christ was thoroughly aroused and built up in the faith, and more than a hundred souls were raised from the pit of sin and darkness into the glorious fold of Christ. There was very little excitement, but every one seemed to feel the presence of the Holy Spirit, and, glory to God, He has not yet departed out of our midst.

The Sunday schools have increased in number and interest; the preachings are better attended; the prayer meetings have been built up; the number in attendance at the Young Men's prayer meeting has been more than doubled; the women of our town have organized religious meetings of their own; and the little children seem very active in the Band of Hope. In fact nature seems to have on a new and appropriate dress while the very atmosphere seems to speak of the love of Jesus. Brethren lend us your prayers to keep us in the higher walk.

The writer has been engaged in teaching in the Ashboro Graded School about three weeks. The school now numbers about one hundred and sixty with about twenty-five more to come yet. The instructors with whom I am associated are very pleasant and my work has proven quite agreeable in every way.

Mrs. E. A. Moffit and Mrs. Jno. L. Moffit are visiting relatives and friends at Elon this week.

Friends, do not forget Elon College. May she go on and prosper.

Respectfully,
E. MOFFITT.

Dedication.

Last first Sunday morning Grace Chapel was dedicated to the worship of God. The pastor was assisted by Rev. J. M. Henley of the Baptist church, and Rev. P. T. Klapp who preached the sermon. The services were very solemn. The congregation was very large. The services were protracted till Wednesday evening. There were some 12 to 14 professions, and several accessions to the church. There was a very good revival in the church. Rev. P. T. Klapp did all the preaching and he did it well too.

We began our meeting there the 3rd Sunday in Sept. and closed on the following Thursday with 14 professions, several reclaimed backsliders, and 12 accessions to the church. Rev. P. T. Klapp came to our aid on Tuesday morning and preached till Thursday evening. His sermons were accompanied with great power. The baptismal services will be at the next appointment. We contemplate holding a few days meeting some 6 miles north of Antioch in Brunswick, Va. at the A. L. Hall. There is a good opening for a church there.

Bethel.

DEAR SUN:—At my last appointment, the first Sunday and Saturday before in Sept., I received three members into the church. After preaching on Sunday I baptized ten persons. The congregation, both at the church and the pond, was large.

I will, D. V., preach at Bethel Sept. 30th, and Oct. 1st. We are expecting the next district meeting at Bethel, Oct. 28th and 29th. We wish the churches of this district to send representatives. Let all the ministers in this district be present, and help to make the meeting a success.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

God's eye is upon you.

What evidences have you that you are a Christian?

True religion is not yielding an over production.

Are you going to live a better life, and do more for the church?

Brother, how much have you given to the cause of Christ this year?

Some of our courts are about as rotten as the politicians that elect the officers.

Have you been eating at God's table, and then talking about your neighbor?

The October Humanitarian is the best number yet of that excellent magazine.

Friend are you a Christian? If not why not? Is there anything else better?

What shall be done with all the lying newspapers that tell these "big frog stories"?

Have you been cheating God and then complaining about others for cheating you? Be consistent.

You will notice that the SUN is divided into departments this week. We will endeavor to keep it so.

If you receive a notice from this office do not lay it aside and forget all about it, because if it was not important we would not have sent it to you.

Drs. Barrot and Staley both are earnest in their appeal for the Ministerial Educational Fund. It is important.

The Musical Record for October is with us and as usual is full of news from the musical world and four nice musical selections.

A temperance department has been added to the SUN and each week will be filled with some fifty article or items of interest.

How many times have you prayed for the success of your church paper? Do you ever pray for the editor? He prays for every subscriber.

The University has 365 students which we consider as very encouraging indeed, and shows that Pres. Winston has been at work.

Rev. J. T. Kitchen gave, in last week's issue, a good article concerning his visit to the World's Fair. Will not others do likewise?

We hope that Mrs. Barrett, who is now in Raleigh, will have a pleasant visit among old friends. All are glad to see her looking so well.

Men may forsake us but God will never forsake us; so brethren what ever happens lets you and I stand true to ourselves and our God.

It will be seen from Our Norfolk Letter, that Rev. S. S. Barrett has passed from labor to reward. We hope all will read the account of him given in Our Norfolk Letter. It will do you good.

The SUN is in great sympathy with the family of Ruffin Canada in its loss in the death of a dear father and husband. We knew Bro. Canada, and can say that he was one of the best men we ever knew.

We give you two Sunday's lessons this week. We expected to have used the one for Oct. 8 last week but did not get it in time, so we print it that it be not lost. We shall here after print the lesson a week in advance so that all may have the use of it.

The rate that new subscribers are coming in will insure a new press for the SUN some time in the next century. Preachers, are you doing your duty towards your best helper? Put the SUN in every home and you have helped yourself better than you know.

We had the pleasure of spending a few hours at Elon College last Friday night. It always gives us pleasure to meet the faculty, young gentlemen, young ladies and citizens on the "hill" at Elon College. We heard Prof. Atkinson's lectures spoken of in the highest terms. From what we have heard about them, we doubt any other college in the State having a course of lectures delivered before the senior class equal to those that are being delivered at Elon College by Prof. Atkinson.

Stability.

Fixedness of purpose is necessary in all business transactions. Without it success is not attained. Failure is often the outgrowth of unstableness. Religion is made to reach its best results by the forces of stability. The body that moves with equal rapidity in one direction one hour, and in the opposite the next hour, must remain near the starting point.

When Columbus reached the conclusion that there was a new way of reaching land by way of the western waters, he did not believe it one day, and the opposite the next day. But his mind was held to the objective point until belief and effort surprised the world by bringing a new reality to light, which has revolutionized a thousand ways of work. By his steadfastness, the heaving seas have been connected into safe roads of transportation, and commerce made to move to and fro to all parts of the world; the wild forests give way to the waving fields of golden grain; and the marshy bogs grow up in to great cities.

Whenever thought presents an object for consideration, the first thing to decide, is the question of right and wrong; and, if the judgment passes upon it as right, the next question should be. Is this the best right thing to do, in order to bring about the greatest amount of good? If the judgment, answers in the affirmative, all efforts should be brought to bear in the direction of accomplishment until victory is reached. The word teaches us when the hands are put to the plow not to look back; also what soever our hands find to do to do it with all thy might. James says, "A double minded man is unstable in all his ways."

Heaven is reached by a continual moving in the road that leads in that direction, step by step, day by day, along the holy way. Dear friends are you in this way of holiness? Is it your fixed purpose to press on in this good old way until glory is reached?

At Liberty (R)

It was our good pleasure to attend the appointments at Liberty, N. C., last Sunday. The weather was inclement on Sunday and Sunday night, so the congregations were small. Brethren H. K. Trogden and Moffitt were appointed delegates to conference.

One night was spent in the pleasant home of Bro. H. K. Trogden, and one with the kind family of Bro. Paterson several other visits were made. Sister Robertson was fixing to move to Washington, D. C., where her husband has a government position. We hope they will enjoy their new home in the capital city of the United States.

Saturday through the kindness of Dr. J. R. Reitzel were carried out to Richland church to the Township Sunday School Convention, where we heard some good speeches and one excellent essay. The music was good and the exercises pleasant.

"Grape Shot."

H. L. Hasting, 47 Cornhill, Boston, is the author and publisher of "Anti Infidel" leaflets, to which he has given the name of "Grape Shot." The following extract from one of these tracts ("History Written in Advance") is sufficient to show their value:

Scripture history is full of Egypt's glory, Scripture prophecy is full of Egypt's ruin. When Egypt was in her pride, it was written, "It shall be the basest of kingdoms, neither shall it exalt itself any more above the nations" (Ezek. xxix. 15); and Egypt is to-day so base that it cannot hold one end of a canal that goes through its own territory. When Egypt exulted in her long lines of royal rulers, it was written, "There shall be no more a prince of the land of Egypt" (Ezek. xxx. 13); and for more than two thousand years Egypt has not had a native Egyptian king. When there were hundreds and thousands of idols worshipped in Egypt, the Lord said, "I will also destroy the idols" (Ezek. xxx. 13); and to-day the broken idols lie amid the ruins of their desolate temples, and there is not an idol worshipped in all the land of Egypt. The Lord said the paper reeds by the brooks... shall wither, be driven away, and be no more" (Isa. xix. 5-7); and the papyrus plant, once so famous, is unknown through the length and breadth of Egypt. The cities of ancient Egypt are all in ruins just as the prophets of old declared they should be. Who but an all-seeing God could have inspired such prophecies as these?

Notice.

Baptismal services will be held for Antioch church, Isle of Wight Co., Va., at Jenkins pond, on Saturday, October 14th, 1893, at 2 o'clock P. M.

Notice

In my notice recently published in the SUN to those who have not paid their Annual dues to the Christian missionary Association, by a typographical error I was made to say to those who did pay at the N. C. Conference at Wake Chapel, last fall, when I meant to address those who did not pay them. I hope it was understood. Let all members pay promptly.

J. P. BARRETT, President.

Our Norfolk Letter.

Rev. S. S. Barrett is dead. He departed this life Sept. 25, 1893 in the 84th year of his age at his home in Berkley, Va. I think he had no disease—he simply wore out and quietly and peacefully passed away. The last visit I made him was a few weeks ago, when I found him sitting in an easy chair, simply waiting the call. He said he had no pain, had a good appetite and was gradually weakening away—dying from the blighting touch of old age. He lingered, and as he grew weaker, mind and body gave way together, and while he knew and was glad to see his friends up to within a short time of his departure, yet occasionally the mind wandered and he seemed to see far beyond the lines of ordinary vision. Was it a weak mind, or did he see more than his attendants could see?

The Christian Sun

He had lived in Berkley about sixty years, and had seen that thrifty city come up through all the vicissitudes of its history. I have heard him tell how only a few houses marked the place when he became one of its few residents.

For twenty-two years, I think it was, he was pastor of the Berkley Christian church, and always, to the day of his giving up all earthly things, felt a deep interest in its welfare.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday, Sept. 26, from the M. E. church, as our own church was not quite ready for occupancy. The services were conducted by Rev. Roger Charnock, Bro. Barrett's pastor, assisted by the Rev. C. J. Jones, D. D., of Norfolk, the Rev. Bro. Edwards of the M. E. church of Berkley and this writer. A large concourse of people were in attendance, and the services were of a deeply touching and interesting character.

The casket containing his remains as it rested in front of the pulpit was largely covered with flowers and in the center was a shock of fully ripe wheat—most appropriate indeed. His remains were buried in the city cemetery at Berkley.

The deceased was the eldest son of the Rev. Mills Barrett who died during the war, and he was a brother of Rev. M. B. Barrett who died a little more than two years ago, all three of whom were well known ministers of the gospel and all had spent the most of their ministerial careers in the E. Va. conference.

Blessed be their memory. The Christian ministry has its trials but it has joys to—sufferings, but blessings as well, and blessed be God for the victory in the death of the true minister.

The Conference assessments ought to have attention now, that is, where the necessary attention has not already been given. Our Missionary operations ought to be enlarged and extended, and the ministerial educational fund ought to be doubled, for well qualified and godly men are greatly needed to re-enforce those already in the field. As unpopular as has been the ministerial educational fund with the churches, what would they do to-day, what could they do to maintain the worship of almighty God and the preaching of the Word, but for the men who have been so helped to get an education! God bless the ministerial educational fund and give the churches a great desire to do more for it—for it is paying them back compound interest at a high rate.

Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Rev. Nathaniel G. Newman, both of Suffolk, Rev. J. T. Kitchen of Windsor and Rev. C. J. Jones, D. D., of Norfolk have been to the World's Fair. I know of no others of our ministers in Eastern Virginia who have been to see the sights. Since Bro. Staley's return he has been at Graham for two weeks, helping Rev. P. H. Fleming in a series of meetings, and Dr. Jones is this week assisting me at Providence near Norfolk in a meeting. We are having fine preaching and large congregations, but so far no penitents. I can not say how long the meeting will continue.

The meeting at Antioch was a blessing. I cannot tell how many conversions—quite a number, probably as many as twenty-five—with 14 additions to the church. The revival in the church was good. I think I never saw the membership of Antioch work better than in this meeting, and I never saw the unconverted resist the efforts of church members more persistently than in this meeting up to Thursday afternoon; when the break came they yielded rapidly.

Rev. J. T. Kitchen was with me one afternoon and preached one sermon. Rev. J. W. Barrett was also with me through the meeting till Friday night and preached once. Many thanks to these brethren for their help in the good work. Antioch chose the following as delegates to the next annual conference which meets at Mt. Carmel, Oct. 31: Thos. J. Clements, Jno. W. Roberts, Joseph A. Barrett and B. P. Gay.

The three churches I have served since I left the SUN, Antioch, Berea (Norfolk Co.) and Providence, have given me a most cordial invitation to remain another year as their pastor. My answer is not yet fully determined, but one thing I most heartily say, I never had a pastoral charge that was kinder to me than the one I now serve, for which I thank the Lord and take courage to preserve in following where the Lord leads me. While my flock is so kind I do not wish to allow a pleasant field to keep me from hearing the call of duty to a harder field. I do not wish to rest on my oars, but rather would I answer when the Master calls and go where he bids me even on a smaller salary, or among those who love me less.

Suffolk Letter.

I spent from the 18th to the 29th of September in a meeting with Rev. P. H. Fleming at Graham, N. C., where I resided till I came to Suffolk in 1882. It was a great pleasure to me to meet many relatives and personal friends, to renew old friendship and form new ones, and to preach the gospel daily to large, attentive congregations. The weather was clear, bright, pleasant, except a few days at the last, and the moonlight nights made it almost like day. The interest seemed to be deep and wide, believers revived in spiritual joy and purpose, and twenty-two souls made a profession of faith in Christ. I spent one day at Mount Hermon church seven miles in the country and preached twice for them. This was my boyhood neighborhood and it was ripe experience to stand among childhood memories and old associations and proclaim the unsearchable riches of Christ and to witness the conversion of my niece. My home while in Graham was with my personal friend and former family physician, Dr. Geo. W. Long.

Brother Fleming is greatly beloved by his large congregation and the community and the interests seem to be rising under his ministry. I left him on Friday and the meeting was still going on. I spent Friday night with my family at Franklinton, and came to Suffolk Saturday. Our congregations here yesterday were large and interesting.

Raleigh C. Crumpler, a young lawyer of promise, and a member of the Baptist church, was buried yesterday after a lingering illness of fever. He leaves a widowed mother, a sister, and little brother, who have the sympathy of the entire community. Hundreds could not get into the church. Great multitudes sought admission.

I will thank the pastors of this conference to see that the assessments for Education are sent up to the Annual conference in full. We need it all to keep young men in college and we need young men in the field. Please remember that the money is loaned to young men, not given. Please do not neglect the collections.

W. W. STALEY.

Oct. 3, 1893.

For the Sun.

Our revival meeting commenced at New Providence on the third Sunday in Sept. and continued till Friday night before the first Sunday in Oct. The congregations were large and attentive during the entire meeting.

Rev. Dr. Staley of Suffolk, Va., was with us, and preached every service during his stay. This is Bro. Staley's native county, and he was at home in Graham and at New Providence. His many friends were delighted to listen to the powerful gospel truths as they fell from his lips. His sermons were plain, practical gospel truths suited to those to whom he preached. They are so true to life that they are not easily forgotten. The results, as seen, thus far are twenty-two professions, several reclaimed, the church much revived, twenty additions to the church, and six others have given me their names for membership. Last Sabbath I baptized eleven and there are others who desire the ordinance soon. I wish to mention one service especially. It was the service for men only, conducted on the fourth Sabbath afternoon. The church was full of men. It is thought by some, to have been the largest assembly of men that ever gathered in Alamance county for religious worship. While we were at church that afternoon many of the women of the village met in groups at their convenience, for prayer. It is needless to say we had a good meeting that afternoon and that night. God met with us and blessed us. Bro. Staley's appeal, that afternoon, to turn from insanity to reason was the most powerful effort, I think, that he put forth during the meeting. My work here is very hopeful. To God we give the praise.

P. H. FLEMING.

Holy Neck.

Special services for revival were held at this place, beginning Monday the 18th and ending Friday, the 22nd. Rev. H. H. Butler was with us after Monday, and did all the preaching. His efforts were faithful, and highly appreciated by the congregation. The preaching was accompanied by the power of the Spirit and good results followed. Eighteen professed faith in Christ, and the same number connected themselves with the church. The ordinance of baptism will be administered at Bro. E. S. Norfleets pond on the 30th inst., at 2 o'clock p. m. May God bless and keep these safe in time and eternity, and continue his blessings upon this dear old church.

THE CORNER.

MY DEAR CHILDREN:—

It has been two weeks since I wrote to you and I suppose you want to know why we had no Corner last week. I will tell you. Because of sickness three of our printers had left us for a week or two. One came back Monday but the others are out yet. So you see there were not enough type setters at work to get every thing up all right.

Here we have a nice little poem selected by one of our friends, and next week there will be another nice poem from Uncle Milliard. We all love Uncle Milliard and enjoy his letters very much indeed. I look for a large number of letters for next week. We have here some very nice letters and hope each cousin will write again soon.

Cordially yours,
UNCLE TANGLE.

PITTSBORO, N. C., Sept. 30, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I will write to the Corner. This is the first time I have written to the Corner. I see that all of the little children have stop-writing to the Corner. I am a little girl eight years old. It is a very bright day to-day. I am going to school and study four books that is, spelling, reading, arithmetic and geography are my studies. I must close for this time as I have nothing more to say.

Your little friend,
STELLA HOLT.

ELAMS, N. C., Sept. 22, 1893.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I will again write to you after a long silence I am very sorry that I have not written before but I have been visiting my cousins and just come home to be at the protracted meeting at Antioch. We had splendid preaching but had but few converts. I hope to be a Christian soon to join all the good cousins that are Christians and I wish for you and them to pray for me, that I may come to Christ in my youthful days so that I may have a long time to serve the good Saviour. I will send half dime to the Corner, hope it may do good. I am going to pick cotton to give our good pastor some money. Much love to you and all the cousins.

Remain your little niece,
LULA B. FLOYD.

MERRY OAKS, N. C., Sept. 18, '93.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—It has been quite a long time since I have written to the Corner, so I will write. Our school has stopped for three weeks so we children can pick cotton. I want to pick some and get some money of my own to send to the Band. I went to church to day, we had preaching in the school house as our new church is not done yet though it is nearing completion very fast, the preacher is my old school teacher who taught school two years ago in the same academy. We his old scholars were all very glad indeed to see him. I will answer Una Davis's question the Lord is mentioned 1,855 times in the Bible. I think am I correct. I will ask the cousins a question: What two chapter in the Bible are alike? For fear of my letter stretching too long I will close hoping to see our Corner brighter in the future than I have been for awhile.

Lovingly yours,
MATTIE A. LASATER.

MIDWAY, HALIFAX CO., VA., Sept. 2, '93.

DEAR UNCLE TANGLE:—I reckon you and the cousins are thinking that I am not going to write any more to the Corner. I commenced several letters but failed to complete them. It is raining to-day and I didn't know how to employ my time more wisely. I enjoy reading the cousins letters so much! My Grandma, Mrs. M. A. Perkins is here on a visit to see her children. She is from Kentucky. Rev. S. B. Klapp preached the funeral of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Tucker, two of the most noted and aged members of Union church. He preached a most excellent sermon. There has been quite a number of deaths in this vicinity. The beloved wife of Mr. Geo. Bowie died on the 21, of August. Her funeral was preached by her pastor, Rev. H. G. Crews, from 2 Cor 4:17. For our light affliction which is but for a moment, worketh for us a far more exceeding, and eternal weight of glory. She was 71 years of age. Mr. Bowie came from Scotland. There was a great wind a few days ago and it did the growing crops considerable damage. I will ask the cousins a question. What is the greatest question asked in the Bible? I think I know and would be glad to see how many of you are going to agree with me. But before telling you, I will wait and see what you decide on; and then I will try to write again and let you know what my opinion is. There has been a large number of protracted meetings in this neighborhood in the different churches. Quite a large number of conversion resulted. This gracious blessing demands our most earnest and ardent praise to the Father of light! It will strike a chord of sympathy in your young hearts when I inform you that I have a poor, delicate, sickly father who never sees a well day. Like the greatly beloved pastor of some of your churches, the Rev. M. L. Hurley, he is a constant and excessive sufferer from that most horrible of all diseases nervous prostration. Good by for this time.

Your little Baptist niece,
VIOLA E. WILLARD.

Take Care.

BY ALICE CARY.

Little children, you must seek
Rather to be good than wise;
For the thoughts you do not speak
Shine out in your cheeks and eyes.
If you think that you can be Cross or cruel, and look fair,
Let me tell you how to see
You are quite mistaken there.
Go and stand before the glass,
And some ugly thought contrive,
And my word will come to pass
Just as sure as you're alive.
What you have and what you lack,
All the same as what you wear,
You will see reflected back;
So, my little folks, take care.
And not only in the glass
Will your secrets come to view;
All beholders, as they pass,
Will perceive and know them, too.
Out of sight, my boys and girls,
Every root of beauty starts;
So, think less about your curls,
More about your minds and hearts.
Cherish what is good, and drive
Evil thoughts and feelings far;
For as sure as you're alive,
You will show for what you are.

SHARP BLASTS.

Notes of Cheer and of Warning from Ram's Horn.

It is better to suffer than to sin. The devil never gives any good gifts. Whatever we owe to man belongs to God.

Cloven feet are often found in patent leathers.

The faith that moves mountains began on grains of sand.

It doesn't make a lie any whiter but put it on a tombstone.

No man is ever alone. When God is not with him the devil is.

If we hinder God's work in our hearts we hinder it in the church.

When Christ fills us the first thing He does is to empty us of self.

Get religion enough to be good and God will see to it that you feel good.

God's children are the only people who have a place of refuge at all hours.

The devil will give up when he can no longer find a hypocrite in the church.

The devil has no fault to find with people who are satisfied with themselves.

Comparing your sins with those of others won't make your own sinning any safer.

There is no good pasture anywhere in the devil's country for the Lord's sheep.

If there is anybody on earth that the devil truly fears it is a Christian mother.

If you are rejecting Christ, you are rejecting the restoration of God's image in you.

If it is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord, why not do it with all the heart.

The devil has never yet been able to make any man poor while he was trusting in God.

All the devil can do against the man who bears the shield of faith is to waste his darts.

No man will ever be converted right until he is willing to be converted in God's way.

Some people never find out the real worth of their religion until they lose all their money.

RECOMPENSE.

Friend, whom I loved, passed coldly by,
And smiled when I wept, yet I knew not why,
So the world looked dark, and life seemed vain
In the fading light and the falling rain.
Then out of the darkness, soft and clear,
Came a voice that was full of hope and cheer—
The song of a robin, brave and bright,
Singing in the old elm tree that night;
And my heart grew strong and glad again,
As I heard the song of the bird in the rain.

The air was heavy with sweet perfume
From the new-mown hay and the rose in bloom;
But my spirit was out of tune that day
As I watched the children at their play.
For years I had toiled with an eager haste,
Hoping the wine of success to taste;
But a bitter draught to my parched lips came,
And for honeyed praise I had only blame.
Then up from the meadow came fragrance sweet
From the violets crushed 'neath the children's feet.
And it brought a balm to my heart and brain
As sweet as the song of the bird in the rain.

I had traversed the busy, crowded street
With a message of truth that was tender and sweet.
In the name of the Master the work was done,
And yet not a single trophy won.
With a weary step my feet now strayed
Through a dim old church in the twilight shade;
My heart was crushed 'neath a weight of care
As I knelt for a moment in silent prayer.
In the beautiful window I seemed to see
The face of the Christ as He turned toward me.

Nay, more! as the broken words are said,
Felt the touch of the pierced hand on my head;
Heard a voice that was sweeter than angel choir,
Thrilling my soul with celestial fire.
Softly He whispered: "Art weary now?
Remember the thorns that pierced my brow.
Hast thou forgotten the way of the cross
As sweet when thou countest all else but loss?
Canst thou not leave results with Me?
Some dry the harvest thou shalt see."

The vision faded. With trembling hand
I took up the burden my Lord had planned,
And my heart, while thrilled with ecstatic pain,
Sang a sweeter song than the bird in the rain.

FORCED INTO BLOOM.

The Very Thing Against Which We Chafe
Often the Best for Us.

We are apt to chafe against the material limits of our being, too hasty in resenting the physical obstacles to our higher aspirations; it is possible that the real obstacle lies in the condition of our own souls, and that God knows us better than we know ourselves.—Riddles of the Sphinx.

As the poet sings: "Man never is, but to be, blest." Jane Trent was a poor young woman, but with infinite possibilities. In this she was not unlike thousands of other poor young women. She differed from many of these thousands in her ability to develop the possibilities of her condition. As the lily draws whiteness and beauty and perfume and symmetry from the same black soil that supplies poison and ugliness to the noisome weed, she drew from the soil of poverty gifts and graces, attainments and virtues, that made her character radiant and exemplary.

Earning a small monthly wage, she applied herself to getting out of it everything there was in it of permanent good. All superfluities were rigidly rejected. Nothing went for candy or meretricious ornament or mere momentary pleasure. By thus denying herself in little things that waste so many pennies and nickels and dimes and dollars, she was able to own an encyclopedia and to take music lessons. She had a few hours in the twenty-four to herself. These she employed in keeping her wardrobe intact, in reading the best books, and in practicing her music. She never had any time for gossip, and her thoughts were so occupied with the books she read, that she had no disposition for gossip. So she was freed from a thousand little pricks and nettles that spring up in the path of the habitual gossip, and kill fine enthusiasms, and destroy at the root desire for noble things.

The florist, when he wants a plant to bloom, puts it in a small pot. The roots spread out and fill the pot, and when they can go no farther force the plant into bloom.

So the great Gardener put Jane Trent into a very small pot, so to speak, and by the very limitations set about her, forced her in abundant and luxuriant bloom.—Christian Advocate.

Why Not ?!

Heroism is a moral and not a physical trait. Archbishop Hare was once, when tutor of Trinity college, giving a lecture, when a cry of "Fire" was raised. Away rushed his pupils, and forming themselves into a line between the building, which was close at hand, and the river, passed buckets from one to another. The tutor, quickly following, found them thus engaged. At the end of the line one youth was standing in the river. He was delicate and looked consumptive.

"What!" cried Mr. Hare, "you in the water, Sterling; you so liable to take cold?"

"Somebody must be in it," was the youth's reply, "why not I as well as another?"

The spirit of this answer is that of all great and generous doing. Cowardice and coldness, too, say, "Oh, somebody will do it." and the speaker sits still. But nobility of character, looking at necessary things, says, "Somebody must do it, why not I?"—Selected.

Leaves From My Note Book.

In The Independent for last week is a very interesting series of articles—a symposium—on the subject: Is the World Growing Better?

The following are the distinguished authors who are the contributors to this symposium

Ex-Congressman Snow, D. L. Moody, Edward Everett Hale, Lucy Stone, Ex-Senator Dawes, Gen. Howard, Theodore L. Cuyler, Philip C. Garrett, Neal Dow, Rev. A. D. Mayo.

With two exceptions these writers answer the above question in the affirmative. Theodore Cuyler points out evidence on both sides and leaves the problem unanswered. The other voice not giving a direct affirmative answer is that of D. L. Moody. The answer given by this noted divine is so unique and novel that one can hardly pass it by without a kind of curious enquiry. Mr. Moody believes that while the gospel is doing much in its converting and elevating power, yet he believes that men who object to the truth are growing worse and worse and that "the present dispensation will end in a great smashup; but that out of this smashup the most glorious age in the world's history will come." One could wish that Mr. Moody would have extended his article just a little and told us something about this smashup—when, how, for what etc.—but he doesn't, so one is left to conjecture anything one may choose.

But to the answers in general—and especially to those who gave some reason for answering as they did—without throwing out some conjectural belief, sensational reply or novel make up.

The following then are some of the facts of evidence adduced to substantiate the affirmative answer:

By a comparison of the humanities of life, it is found that the prevailing sentiment of the present is far superior to that of former times. Once there was a time when all nations regarded it as right to make slaves of captives in war. Today none but the most barbarous tolerate such. African slaving once almost universal, is now but a memory and finds no advocate or apologist under the ban of enlightened Christian sentiment. The world is doing more to take care of its defective classes—the blind, deaf, dumb, lame and insane—than it did ever before.

Besides this the gospel has been spreading all the while. The "glad tidings of joy" are proclaimed through our country by some of the most eminent men of the age and thousands flock to hear these soul stirring truths proclaimed. And not only in our own country, but in heathen lands the gospel of our Saviour is being preached to hundreds now who a few years ago would not have heeded it at all. Alms-houses, Homes, Asylums, Retreats, Hospitals, Public Libraries, School houses, Churches, Auditoriums and Temples—hundreds of which are found today where none or almost none—were found a few years ago—all these attest the advancement of our times, the progress of Christianity and the betterment of the world. Now I would not have it understood that this is the only side to the picture. The writers in question have adduced evidence on both sides and then concluded as above. What does all this teach us? Is there a practical lesson in it? Yes. There are blind pessimists, continual fault-finders and chronic grumblers amongst us. These are absolutely blind to what is best in the world, and having as each of these have,—and everlasting case of moral dyspepsia, they not only keep themselves grum, morose and sour, but make those with whom they deal grum, morose and sour also. This world in which we live is a great, grand, beautiful world. And God made it a good world—yes and a very good one. ("And He saw all that He had made and behold it was very good.") Now if it is not as good as it should be, it is the place of each and all to try to make it a better world. Query: Did you ever know of a task's being made lighter, a burden made easier, a heart made happier, a home gladder or a single soul converted by being grumbled at and continually found fault with? It is true the world is hard, troublesome, vexatious, but with us sometimes—but if you do your kind deeds and pleasant words it will return them to you multiplied after a while. J. O. ATKINSON.

Oct. 9, 1893

From Berea Norfolk, Co.

DEAR SUN:—It is now 8 o'clock p. m. as I begin to write a few thoughts for your columns. I have just been meditating upon a grand sermon that I heard to day fall from the lips of our pastor, upon the subject of forgiveness. Surely a better sermon he seldom has ever preached for it seemed to me that his whole heart, soul and mind was in the grand, noble, wonderful, sublime thoughts expressed. Oh! may God spare him a long while yet among the children of men to proclaim the "wonderful words of life." As I write there is nothing that I hear to break the solitary stillness of the night, save an occasional bark of a dog, the ticking of the clock on the mantle and the chirping of crickets in the corner. As one sits alone in such moment of solitude and loneliness it brings upon him many feelings of sadness and sorrow, and many are his solemn thoughts. Surrounded by such circumstances one often feels (if it were not for a few ties that bind them to life) it would be far better if God would command their spirit to surrender its tenement of clay and make its abode with him. But, we are taught in God's word, that his ways are not our ways, neither are his thoughts our thoughts, for God knows the secrets and interest of the heart,—he knows what is in man at all times and under all circumstances. Therefore he being all wisdom, hath chosen many ways by which he may draw and keep his children in a sacred nearness to him. It may be highly important (God sees and knows) that the death angel invades our homes and takes from us the nearest and dearest of earth, or it may be well that disaster in some way come upon us by which immense means are demolished, causing us to fall in vales of adversity, or the heavy hand of affliction may rest unceasingly upon us, all of which, the divine chastenings of a fore-sighted all wise Creator sent that we may fully realize our situation and be made fit for the indwelling of His spirit, thereby fashioning us for the home of the soul beyond this "vale of tears" Oh! Father in thy way lead us safely Home.

Mutual Obligations.

BY REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

Bear ye one anothers burdens, and fill the law of Christ. Gala. 6:2.

We are dependent upon God, and each other for all that makes life desirable and happy. God is the author of our being, "for in him we live, and move, and have our being." We are mutually dependent in providing for our wants, and working out our destiny. Out of these relations grow certain obligations to each other, and they must be recognized and obeyed, or we suffer a great loss, and sin against each other. Men had grown selfish and disregarded their mutual obligations. Paul says that they were "foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, and hating one another." Christ came, taught, suffered, and died to redeem man from this degradation, renovate his moral nature, and inspire him with his own tender, loving, and sympathizing spirit. Hence Paul said, "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of sinful flesh: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Christ seeks to lift his disciples out of their selfishness and transform them into his own image. "He died for all, that they which live should not henceforth live unto themselves, but unto him which died for them, and rose again.

Man has a personal battle to fight to gain the mastery of his own passions and evil habits, and overcome his temptations to evil. He has spiritual enemies within and without to conquer. This will cost him many severe conflicts, and he will need all the help that he can get. Even the bravest sometimes get discouraged, and feel like giving up the fight. Then a word of encouragement will be a great help to him, and inspire him with new faith and courage. Do not laugh at him for his want of confidence, nor make fun of his blunders. With great tenderness Paul said to his Galatian brethren, "Brethren, if any man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." The fact that we have elements of evil in our own nature, that may cause us to stumble and fall, should make us tender in all our dealings with the erring.

Man has personal burdens to bear, and needs help to bear them. Sorrow and affliction come to man in various ways, and sometimes are a heavy burden to bear. Sickness, loss of property, and the death of friends are burdens that bring sorrow and many sink under these afflictions. We can help such to bear these burdens, and comfort them in their sorrows. Paul said, "Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort; who comforteth us in all our tribulations, that we may be able to comfort them which are in trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God." It is only through personal experience that we are able to comfort others in their sorrow. If we have found comfort and strength in the promises and consolations of the gospel we can point the burdened to the same fountain. A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver. It will bring strength and comfort in hours of weakness and sorrow. A young lady was out walking. She forgot to take her purse with her, and had no money in her pocket. She met a little girl with a basket of flowers on her arm. "Please miss, will you buy something from my basket," said the little girl showing a variety of book marks, matchcases, needle books, etc. "I am sorry I cannot buy anything today," said the young lady. "I haven't any money with me. Your things look very pretty." She stopped a moment, and spoke a few kind words to the little girl; and as she passed on she said again: "I am sorry I can't buy anything from you today." "O miss!" said the little girl, you have done me just as much good as if you had. Most persons that I meet say, "get away with you," but you have spoken kindly to me and I feel a heap better." These kind words were a comfort to the little girl and helped her to bear her burdens of life. It made life sweeter and richer to her.

There are burdens to be born by the church, and these rest equally upon the members. Each has his part of the burden to bear. "Bear ye one another's burdens," is the divine command enforced by the example of Christ. The church is not a play house nor a school where we go to be amused or instructed without any labor or expense on our part. It is a family in which each member has work to do, and his burden to bear. His obligation and duty is measured by his ability to do and bear; but each one must come up to the full measure of his duty to Christ. There is no escape from this, and we must obey or suffer the consequences." Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

There are financial burdens to be borne by the church. It cannot be sustained and do its work without money. There are expenses that must be met, and the money must come from the members of the church. There is no evading this fact. What is "the law of Christ" on this question? When he sent his disciples out to preach he said, "Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat." Paul says, "Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things." Paul gives us a beautiful illustration of this principle. "Who goeth a warfare any time at his own charge? Who planteth a vineyard, and eateth not of the fruit thereof? or who feedeth a flock, and eateth not of the milk of the flock? Say I these things as a man? or saith the law the same? For it is written in the law of Moses. Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. Doth God take care for oxen? or saith he altogether for our own sakes, no doubt, this is written: that he that plougheth should plough in hope; and he that thresheth in hope should be partakers of this hope. If we have sown unto you in spiritual things, is it a great thing if we shall reap of your carnal things." This makes the duty of supporting the church plain and imperative. All cannot give just the same, for some have more means than others; but all can do something, and it is their duty to do it.

Sometimes members of the church refuse to give any thing to support the church, but claim all privileges and advantages of the church. There are two reasons why they do this. Some are too stingy to pay anything. They do not understand and realize that they belong to God, and that he has just claims upon them. They love their money better than Christ and his cause. Can such a man be a Christian? Let the Bible settle this question. What doth it say? "The wicked boasteth of his heart's desire, and blesseth the covetous, whom the Lord abhorreth." Psalm 10:3. Can a man be a Christian "Whom the Lord abhorreth?" No wonder David prayed, "Incline my heart unto thy testimonies, and not to covetousness." Psalm 119:36. Should such a man be retained in the church? All possible means should be used to awaken him to a clear sense of his duty, and lead him to do it; but if this cannot be done then he should be expelled.

Paul's instruction to the church at Corinth was the following: "I wrote you an epistle not to company with fornicators: Yet not altogether with fornicators of this world, or with the covetous, or extortioners, or with idolators: for then must ye go out of the world. But now I have written unto you not to keep company, if any man that is called a brother be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolator, or a railer, or a drunkard, or an extortioner; with such a one do not eat." 1 Cor 5:9-11. God said of the covetous, "For the iniquity of his covetousness was I wroth, and smote him." Isa. 57:17. Paul says, "The covetous shall not inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. 6:10. "Covetousness is idolatry." Col. 7:5. If a church member should set up a golden idol in his house and worship it would you keep him in the church? Not unless you could reform him. The covetous man is just as much an idolator as though he had a golden image in his house and worshiped it.

Some times a member of the church gets angry because he cannot have his own way in the business of the church, and for this reason refuses to give any thing to support it. What is to be done with such a man? Use all possible means to change his feelings, and get the devil of anger out of his heart, so that he will do his duty; but if this cannot be done, he should be expelled from the church. To retain such a man in the church is no benefit to him, and he would make trouble among the members. Churches have been destroyed by such men. Paul said to the church at Rome, "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." Rom 16:17.

Christ is our example, and we must follow him in all our work in the church. Peter says, "Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps." He sacrificed everything, even his life, for us; and this is the measure of our duty to him. "Now if any man have not the spirit of Christ he is none of his." Rom. 8:9. "Christ also hath loved us, and hath given himself for us an offering and sacrifice to God for a sweet smelling savour." These words if framed in a picture would give us a beautiful idea of Christ. Pictures are inspiring. No doubt it was some ideal picture embracing the Gospel in miniature that Luther bound about his heart that gave him courage to defy the Diet of Worms and also the Emperor, I shall ask all here today to bind this picture of Jesus saving the world, and of the blessings that we derive from him, around your hearts.

It will prove a charm to ward off evil and an inspiration enabling you to overcome all the evils that may befall you in life. I will attempt to illustrate the idea of the Roman Catholic in carrying about with him religious pictures. The son of a poor widow was trying to pass the severe civil service examination of the English Government with a view to obtain a position under the Government. The examination took place in a room to which only the inspectors and candidates were admitted. Students are not permitted to make the least reference to books or date of any kind, and if a person failed to pass creditably, no amount of political favor can get for him a place. While this examination was in progress one of the inspectors observed the widow's son take something from his coat pocket. He walked noiselessly to behind where the young man was sitting and was startled to find that the young candidate was simply looking at his mother's picture. He had so far worked with satisfaction at the questions set him, and no doubt but he gained inspiration to renewed efforts in mastering the unsolved problems before him.

"What an inspiration it would be if we only carried about with us some picture of the Saviour's undying love as manifested on Calvary. The Gospel in miniature is contained in the passage which records how God gave his only begotten son that He might die for the sin of the whole world. God gave to man many things before this his great gift. He gave man a world and dominion over all that it contains and in fulness of time. He added the gift of His only begotten Son. That was his last and greatest gift He had to bestow. It was an infinite gift intended to save mankind from hell, whither they had so long been rushing. On Calvary the Saviour gripped with the devil, whom he conquered, and, in conquering, saved a lost world."

The meetings of the church are to be sustained. This is necessary in the nature of things. Two ends are to be accomplished by this means. 1. The spiritual development of the members of the church. In the Sabbath meetings for public worship and the preaching of the gospel Christians are brought under influences that enlighten their consciences, warm their hearts with love for Christ, and inspire them with new zeal in his cause. They cannot get as much help in any other place as in the house of God on the Sabbath, and those who neglect it are sure to backslide and fall into sinful habits.

2. The conversion of men through the influence of the public meetings is one of the great ends to be accomplished by them. There the gospel is preached, and men are brought under influences adapted to awaken them to a consciousness of their sinfulness and need of salvation. The great majority of Christians were converted in the public meetings of the church under the preaching of Christ. A faithful attendance of all the members of the church upon these meetings, will draw the unconverted to the house of God as nothing else can. The experience of centuries proves this, and if all Christians were only alive to this fact we would have greater prosperity in all our churches.

We all have our infirmities and are fighting a desperate battle with the powers of evil. There are infinite interests at stake, and we need all the help that we can give each other. Instead of finding fault, and discouraging each other we should pray for and help one another in every way that we can.

A certain eminent clergyman, who is greatly loved for his gentleness and forbearance with offenders, recently said that an experience of his own, in years long gone by, taught him the grace of ready excusing. When he was a boy he was a very poor boy, but he had already a strong theological bent, and was studying hard during the winter and working even harder during the summer trying to get a preparation for college.

He wanted to be a preacher, and the fact that he didn't seem to be good for anything else tended to convince him that he had not mistaken his calling. One spring he was entirely out of money and had to get out of school and go to work. Not being able to find anything to do in the small college town where he had been studying, the youth—call him Richard Vernon—went out among the farmers to see if he could get work from them. He found a man who was very busy with his spring's work and in a hurry to get the furrows ploughed in a big field for potato planting.

The weather was favorable for planting; the farmer's boys would be home from school the next day, which was Saturday, to do the dropping and covering. He told Richard that he might mark out the field with the plow for the planting, and if he suited he might be hired for two or three months. Meantime the farmer saw that the boy was very anxious to stay and that he had evidently a good disposition.

So the young theologian went to work with tremendous vigor. He did not stop to take breath until he had marked off a large tract of ground with deep furrows. Then came his employer from his work in another part of the farm and looked at the boys work, and leaned up against the fence and laughed until he shook. The potato field had been scraped and scalloped all over with the ridiculously irregular and wobbly little ditches which Richard had turned.

There was not a clean, straight furrow in the lot; the ground looked as if an insane elephant had tossed up the earth; the furrows were of all depths and at all distances from one another, for Richard had driven the horse most of the time in smart walk, and he had been too much occupied in keeping up and maintaining a precarious grasp upon the plow handles to be able to pay any attention to the regularity or evenness of his work. Richard Vernon laughed, too, as he stood and looked over the field.

He wiped the sweat from his brow and looked very anxiously at his employer. There was no chance for regular work there, that was evident. His laughter faded away and there was a certain faint twitch in the corners of his mouth as the boy said:

"I guess you don't want any more of my work, sir?"

"Oh, yes—yes, I do," said the farmer. "Maybe 'taint your fault that the furrows are crooked. You see, the sun's pretty hot today, and I reckon the heat warped them."

This farmer had the right spirit, and he did two good things for this young student. He inspired him with new courage, and taught him a lesson of gentleness and forbearance that moulded his character and made him a power for good in the world.

In this way we can bear one another's burdens, and help each other on in the divine life.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

International Lesson for October 22, 1893
—Christian Living—Rom. 12:1-13.

[Specially Arranged from Peloubet's Notes.]

GOLDEN TEXT.—Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.—Rom. 12:21.

THE SECTION.—The practical duties which grow out of the doctrines of redemption in the previous chapters, occupy chapters 12-15, and may be subdivided into (1) personal duties (chap. 12), (2) political duties (chap. 13) and (3) social duties (chaps. 14, 15).

LESSON NOTES.

The Basis of Christian Virtues.—Entire Consecration.—1. "I beseech you therefore:" in view of the great truths of redemption which have been set forth in the previous chapters. The foundation has been laid in truth; therefore build upon it the temple of a heavenly life. "By the mercies of God:" which have been shown in the whole teaching about redemption as the manifestation of the love of God in Christ. "That ye present:" The word used in the Jewish law for presenting their sacrifices. "Your bodies:" Your souls have already been presented by acceptance of Christ, now show that this act was real, and complete it by presenting your body, which is the instrument of the soul. "A living sacrifice:" Not slain as were the Jewish sacrifices, but alive and ready for the active service of God. "Acceptable unto God:" The kind of sacrifice God is well pleased with. "Your reasonable service:" The Greek word means rational, agreeable to reason, reasonable, who renders this phrase: "Worship which is rendered by the reason or soul," not an external service, as were the outward sacrifices of the Jews, but a real, hearty, spiritual service.

2. "And be not conformed:" Fashioned according "to this world." The whole current of life and influence around us, which has its aims, hopes, rewards, all in present visible things, as distinguished from spiritual and eternal things. "But be ye transformed:" The same word as is used in describing the transfiguration of Christ (Matt. 17:2.) "By the renewing of your mind:" The mind is not here simply the intellectual faculties, but the whole interior nature, including emotions, affections, habits of thought, purposes of the will and that disposition from which all grows. "That ye may prove:" Test, assay as one does ore, proving it by fire, appreciate, discern "what is that good" in itself, "acceptable" to God and man, one that men will see to be beautiful and good, "and perfect" in wisdom, righteousness and love. "Will of God:" His commandments, the course of life He wills for us.

Concerning Self-Conceit.—3. "Through the grace given unto me:" Not by my own authority, but as an apostle taught of God, and experienced in life. "To every man:" Because every man needs this advice. "Not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think:" The play upon pronein, to think, and its compounds is very noticeable. "According as . . . the measure of faith:" Faith is the graded qualification for service; the gift to see and accept the various duties of the Christian life.

The Unity of Christians.—4. "Many members in one body:" This comparison is worked out more fully by St. Paul in 1 Cor. 12:13-27.

Diversity of Gifts.—5. "Gifts differing according to the grace:" The various talents and faculties are gifts from God, a special favor from Him, for which each one should be thankful, but has no occasion for pride. "Prophecy:" Speaking under immediate divine impulse and guidance. "Prophecy according to the proportion of his faith:" Not according to his own impulses, but according to what he has received of God by faith.

7. "Or ministry:" This Greek word, when referring to a person, is unfortunately translated by two different English words, "minister" and "deacon." "Let us wait:" Let us give ourselves to our ministry; use all our wisdom, our piety, our intelligence, our love, our diligence in performing these more secular duties. "He that teacheth, on teaching:" His whole nature should go with his teaching.

8. "Exhorteth:" The original word, from which is derived the word "comforter" as applied to the Holy Spirit, combines the ideas of exhorting, and comforting, and encouraging. "He that giveth . . . with simplicity:" With singleness of motive, without admixture of selfishness. "He that ruleth:" Holds any position of prominence, presides over meetings, is on committees, leads in any work, either formally, or by his natural leadership. "With diligence:" In the performance of his duties and in learning best how to rule.

Sundry Duties to Others.—9. "Let love be without dissimulation." Not a mere form, not an outward politeness, but a real, sincere love. Therefore, "Abhor that which is evil." Not merely keep from doing wrong, but hate sin with the whole soul. "Cleave to that which is good." This is the only way to show that our loathing of evil is sincere.

10. "Be kindly affectioned." The word rendered "kindly affectioned" implies closeness of family affection, like that between parents and children. "In honor preferring one another." Or, more exactly, "preceding one another," "going before one another in giving honor."

Heart Virtues.—11. "Not slothful in business." In diligence. "Fervent (boiling) in spirit." The reverse of the previous exhortation, both of which apply to "serving the Lord." In whatever you do, in play, in work, in religion.

TEMPERANCE.

BITS AND BREVITIES.

If it takes total abstainers to run railway trains, what about the ship of state?

A THIRST has often been started with a teaspoon that barrels could not quench.

STOCKHOLM has the highest death rate from drink of any city in the world—90 in 1,000.

WOMEN are employed at railway switches and crossings in Italy because they keep sober.

WHENEVER you see a drunken man it ought to remind you that every boy in the world is in danger.

NINE drunkards out of ten are so today because they did not resolve in youth to lead a sober life.

THE Catholic temperance societies of the United States, have more than one hundred thousand members.

ACCORDING to a recent statement there are in Sweden alone three hundred thousand total abstainers.

POVERTY never drives a man to drink unless he wants to go; but drink drags a man to poverty, whether he wants to go or not.

"COMMON" drunkards are to be punished in Massachusetts after this by imprisonment that can be extended to a term of two years.

In Russia, the Mmjik abstains for twelve months and the first time he breaks his promise he is fined and whipped and the second time the punishment is doubled.

HOW startling are statistics. Three million children are born annually of drunken parents, half a million born idiots and three hundred thousand born deaf, dumb and blind.

DR. NORMAN KERR is authority for the statement that the proportion of men to women charged with drunkenness is now three to one, where it was formerly seven to one.

In the report of the Massachusetts state board of charities it is stated that the proportion of crime traceable to intemperance must be set down, as heretofore, at not less than four-fifths.

THE "Hell of the Pacific" is the name given to the port Apia, Samoa. For nine months of the year the harbor is full of vessels from all the Christian nations, while every third building is a saloon.

A BIT of comfort to total abstainers is found in the returns of the census inspector in New Zealand, which shows a decrease proportionately of forty-eight per cent in consumption of the spirits since 1878.

THE money value of the alcoholic drinks consumed by the Belgians in the year 1891 amounted to nearly four hundred and fifty million francs, which is about a third part of the whole average wages of the workers.

GRIST MILLS can not run without grain; neither can gin mills run without boys. If you vote to keep the gin mills running you shouldn't find any fault if the miller takes toll from your own family.—Portland Herald.

THE saloon is called the poor man's club. Yes, it clubs him out of all his manhood; clubs him out of his money, his self-respect. The frequenter of the saloon is the worst clubbed man temporarily and spiritually known of.—Sacred Heart Review.

THE statistics of suicides last year are startling, showing an increase of five hundred over those of 1891, the men greatly outnumbering the women; three thousand of the former to five hundred of the latter. Three hundred and fifteen are assigned to liquor.

THE report of the commissioner of internal revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, shows that the amount of beer produced in the United States was fifteen gallons per capita in 1892 against three gallons twenty-four years ago, and whisky holds it own.

DR. NANSSEN and Lieut. Peary, Arctic explorers, have both excluded alcoholic drinks from their list of supplies, as not only unnecessary but harmful in the Polar regions. Mr. F. C. Selous, for twenty years an African explorer, abstains not only from alcoholic drinks but tobacco.

It is noticeable that among the many failures, one seldom sees the notice of a saloon failure. Enormous profits, backing by breweries and distilleries and the fact that no matter whatever else the workingman goes without he never denies himself his glass of beer account for it.

At a recent "experience meeting," held at one of the missions in New York city, many testimonials were given by reform drunkards concerning the causes which led them to drunkenness. They were varied, and all had had too much or too little of something. Of one thing, alcohol, all had had too much. No one is ever led to drunkenness by abstinence.

LODGE CHIEF JUSTICE HALE was perhaps the first to call attention to inebriety as a cause of crime, requiring special study and attention. In 1870 he is reported as saying: "If the murders and manslaughters, the burglaries and robberies, the riots and tumults, and other enormities committed during the last twenty years, were divided into five parts, four of them would be found to have been the issue and product of drinking."

GREAT BRITAIN and Ireland brew more beer than the German empire. The production of the world is estimated at over 50,000,000,000 gallons per annum. In 1891 Great Britain produced 1,500,000,000 gallons. Great Britain spends on an average 20 shillings for drink for every half crown it gives to religion. Ireland, in 1890, spent about £11,000,000 on drink; its total rental did not come to more than £9,000,000 sterling.

AND still the temperance forces multiply. The "anti-saloon army" is an association of men and women whose object is the overthrow of the rum power. It is organized on the army plan, and knows no schism, ism or creed save hostility to the liquor traffic." It proposes to organize a post in every school district in the land, and will arrange for the same whenever five or more persons in any locality send such request to headquarters at Clinton, Mo. God speed this new salvation army!—Union Signal.

WHERE DOES ALL THE BEER GO?

Appalling Facts for Americans to Contemplate.

This question is suggested by the enormous amount of beer sold. Sober men who do not enter saloons have a great many acquaintances who never touch the gently inebriating beverage, and can not name many of their associates who do. It may be claimed that beer-drinking is not an American habit. The trade is maintained largely by the foreign elements of our population, who bring the habit with them from their native countries. There is a steady gain in sobriety among our native population. It is one of the most distinguishing marks of the progress of American civilization.

And yet there are brewed in the United States yearly 830,668,815 gallons of beer. This is an average of thirteen gallons for every member of our population. Estimating that half of the men do not drink beer, and the women and children none at all, we have a consumption of about seventy gallons per head by those who do, or nearly a gallon and a half a week. Computing the cost at five cents a glass, ten glasses to the gallon, (which is a liberal allowance for schooners), the cost is $41,533,440 to the people of the United States for this beverage alone. An estimate was put forward by a high beer authority a few years ago that the average profit on beer was four-sevenths of the receipts. This would give a return of $24,000,000 to the beer trade.

But our production of beer is small as compared with that of some of the countries of Europe. Germany manufactures 1,071,096,165 gallons per year, or twenty-three gallons per capita; Great Britain 874,192,275 gallons, or twenty-three gallons per capita; Austria-Hungary 308,889,675 gallons, or between seven and eight gallons per capita; France 225,000,000 gallons, or about six gallons per capita; while Russia produces only 65,892,870 gallons, or a little more than a half-gallon per capita. The countries of northern Europe are strong on beer. Denmark brews 49,185,000 gallons, or about twenty-five gallons per head; Norway 28,304,090 gallons, or over twenty-one gallons per head, and Switzerland 26,694,495 gallons, or nine gallons per head. Southern Europe, on the contrary, produces very little beer. Spain brews about 1-1/3 gallons per head, Italy about one-ninth of a gallon, Turkey one-seventh of a gallon, and Greece less than one-thirtieth. Japan produces 4,966,000 gallons, but this is only one gallon for every eight members of the population.

With the exception of Germany and Great Britain, the United States is the largest beer-producing country in the world. But our population is 27,000,000 larger than that of Great Britain, and 18,000,000 larger than that of the German empire. It is obvious that these countries, as well as others of northern Europe, have furnished a very large proportion of the beer drinkers of the United States.—Troy Times.

BEER AS A CORROSIVE.

Suprising Statement Made by Some Hospital Surgeons.

This is not a temperance treatise, but it has a bit of fact in it that the total abstainer may show to the beer drinker whenever occasion offers. The attention of the New York hospital surgeons has been called to the big number of bartenders that have lost several fingers from both hands within the past few years. The first case was that of an employe of a Bowery concert hall. Three of the fingers of his right hand and two of his left were rotted away when he called at Bellevue one day and begged the doctors to explain the reason. He said that his duty was to draw beer for the thousands who visited the garden nightly. The man was in perfect health otherwise, and it took the young doctors quite a time to arrive at any conclusion. But they did finally, and it took the beer man's breath away when they did.

"Your fingers have been rotted off," they said, "by the beer which you have handled."

Other cases of a similar nature came rapidly after this one, and to-day the physicians estimate there is an army of employes of saloons whose fingers are being ruined by the same cause. The acid and rosin in the beer are said to be responsible.

The head bartender of a well known down town saloon says he knows a number of cases where the beer drawers have, in addition to losing several of the fingers of both hands, lost the use of both members. "Beer will rot iron, I believe," he added. "I know, and every bartender knows, that it is impossible to keep a good pair of shoes behind the bar. Beer will rot leather as rapidly almost as acid will eat into iron. If I were a temperance orator I'd ask what must beer do to men's stomachs if it eats away men's fingers and their shoe leather. I'm here to sell it, but I won't drink it, not much."—N. Y. Mail and Express.

SALOON RESPECTABILITY.

An Idealistic Creation of a Fervent Imagination.

Much has been said, first and last, by liquor organs and by some professing temperance men about "respectable" saloons but after some years of patient inquiry and personal investigation we have yet been unable to locate one of these places. They appear to have all the elusiveness of Patrick's flea—"You put your hand on 'im and he isn't there." A respectable saloon, as we take it, is a place where liquor is not sold to children or habitual drunkards, where no one is permitted to indulge in liquor to the degree of intoxication, where disorderly and questionable characters are not allowed to rendezvous, where bawdy songs and language are forbidden, and where the Sunday and other laws are strictly observed. We have heard that such saloons as this were in existence, but we have never yet been able to get within hailing distance of one. Like most idealistic creations they appear to be always just beyond. If any one can put his hands on a "respectable" saloon, and hold it long enough for us to come up and see it, we shall be immediately relieved. Word may be sent to this office at any time.—Christian at Work.

The man who starts out to use up the Bible will be too old to enjoy his victory by the time he gets through with his job.

MISSIONARY.

Good Fruits of Christianity in China.

Those who are watching the progress and effects of Christianity in heathen lands will be interested in the following account, as given in the Missionary Herald for September, by PASTOR CHUNG, OF TUNG CHO, CHINA:

"China is one of the greatest and oldest of the kingdoms. Her land is wide and her people a host; and yet she has become so steeped and dyed in ancient custom and so fettered with old religions, that the thoughts of all are cramped and narrow. Hence they are self-honoring and self-satisfied, lightly esteeming the people of other kingdoms, and loathing the teaching of other lauds. The difficulty, under such conditions, of effecting a change, is scarcely less than in old Rome.

"Greatly to be praised is the heavenly Father's large grace, marvelous the Lord's limitless power by which, in a few decades, the truth of Jesus has made an entrance into the Middle Flowery Kingdom. To outward appearance, and upon a moment's inspection, there seem to be no results; but on careful examination we discover that the work of setting up the kingdom of heaven is well inaugurated. Of the changes wrought we will briefly narrate a few:

"1. Of those who know about God. Thinking back a few decades, there were few in the Eighteen Provinces (China) who knew the Lord's name. Men made a god of mud, a lord of wood. From the time the missionary came they have used their utmost endeavor, everywhere, and always, in preaching the great truths of the kingdom of heaven, and now many have received the Bible.

"2. Of those who believe that Christianity is true. Twenty years ago, when preachers from the kingdoms of the West walked the street, men looked at them with alarm and amazement and many reviled. Even natives who had entered the church, when they went out of their gates, were laughed at by all who knew them, and called the devil's slaves. But now there is a great change. Often, in private, men praise the doctrine as true. Often we meet men who say, "What you preach of our God is true. From the time I first heard, I have not worshiped images." Many who formerly dared not enter a foreigners' courts, now attend service. The wild talk of foreigners plucking out the eyes and digging out hearts is, in this region, no more heard. Now the Sabbath service is well attended, and some invite preachers to their homes to teach the Gospel story. Hence the grief of all missionary societies that the laborers are too few for the work.

"There is a great change in respect to schools. Formerly they were afraid to come, lest they would be defiled by the doctrine. Now the schools are more than full. The same is true of hospitals. Formerly men were afraid of foreign medicine. Now the physicians are exceedingly busy. Fear and doubt are gradually melting away.

"3. Of professing Christians. If we compare the number of Christians with the millions of China, we sigh because they are so few. However, the number who turn to the Lord in a year now is at least double that of ten years ago, and three or four times as many as twenty years ago. . . . The faith of many Christians is very firm, and their hearts of love very hot, leading them to witness for Jesus. Now, moreover, the majority of Christians love to keep Holy day, and particularly love to study the Sunday-school lessons. Some, finding it difficult to lay down their business, with all their might cast it aside in order to gain the blessings of the Sabbath.

"In giving, our Christians have made a great advance. Many give each Sabbath a fixed sum, always making it good if they fail to come.

"Believers now have some clear ideas on the government of children, delighting also to present their children to the Lord, caring for their bodies and instructing their hearts. In China, few are the girls who are taught to read—in poor homes none. But Christians send their girls also to school. Many girls of China through power thus gained, escape from the light esteem of men!

"The relation of husband and wife is also somewhat changing. The common thing is for man to despise woman, and beat and revile her at his will, and hence in every home there are constant fends. The mother-in-law dominates over the daughter-in-law. Our Christians now understand that husband and wife are equal, and are to love and cherish each other; and although things happen not according to one's mind, they are willing patiently to bear with and help each other.

"Every country knows of the wicked custom of our country of binding women's feet. A health society is organized here in our mission, and not a few women in middle life have unbound their feet. Many more of the daughters of Christians have unbound feet. Truly, Jesus sets free those who are bound in prison! In all this we see the beginning of a great change, and hope that not many years hence our whole country will be entirely new.

"4. Of government rulers. Few of the rulers, the gentry and the rich, are believers. However, many know about the church. Still more employ the Western doctor and examine the learning of the West. They protect the church according to the treaties, and few oppress and persecute. The governor of our province constantly defends the church and the preachers. (In view of all this, how contemptibly mean and unchristian is our own Chinese exclusion act?—J. G. B.) He especially honors Western physicians, and has built a hospital in the Tientsin foreign settlement, and another in the Chinese City, for the poor. This is surely fruit borne to Christianity.

"We know down deep in our hearts that you in the beautiful kingdom (United States) esteem our salvation as your crown of reward. May the Lord give you this reward abundantly, bringing China's countless myriads out of darkness, leading them to give themselves to the Lord Jesus!"

We are told that fifty years ago China had not to exceed one dozen native Christians. Now she has one hundred and fifty thousand.

Grand progress! But what are one hundred and fifty thousand to four hundred millions! Four hundred million and eight hundred and fifty thousand souls in one empire to-day without Christ! And the most of these have not yet heard that there be a Christ. What a call upon the Church of the living God!

Photographs of Our Missionaries.

I have a very fine cabinet size photograph of our missionaries and some of their native helpers. The group consists of Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth, the daughter Lina, and Miss Penrod; two Bible women, Mrs. Noda and Miss Ren; and six of our native preachers, to wit: Mr. Ianchi, Ohta, Kitamura, Fajima, Samomiya, and Takurai, twelve in all. I will furnish this group of pictures at 25 cents single, or $2 50 per dozen, postpaid on receipt of price.

Representative McCreary's bill, which is intended as a substitute for the Geary Chinese registration and exclusion law, has been favorably reported to the House of Representatives and will probably be taken up soon after the bill for the repeal of the Federal election laws, now under consideration, is disposed of, unless Congress takes a recess, which it may do if the Senate succeeds in disposing of Voorhees silver purchase repeal bill by the 15, or 20, of the month. This bill extends for a period of six months from date of its becoming a law the time within which the Chinese now in the United States may register; strikes out the word "white" wherever it is used in the Geary law, descriptive of the radical character of the witnesses to be produced by a Chinaman in support of his right to remain in the country, and more clearly defines the meaning of the term "Chinese laborer." The vote of the committee on Foreign Affairs was with one exception unanimous for the bill. The exception was Representative Geary, of California, author of the present Chinese Exclusion law, who gave notice that he would oppose the bill with all the resources at his command. But the bill will probably become a law, as there are numerous Representatives and Senators who voted for the Geary bill who will be glad of the opportunity to modify that law.

A series of interesting public meetings are being held this week in two Washington churches—one Congregational and one Methodist—to popularize the Auxiliary League of the Salvation Army, a branch of which was established here a few months ago. The meetings are conducted by female officers of the Salvation Army, assisted by members of that organization, and include afternoon meetings for ladies and children and evenings for the general public. The object of the auxiliary League, as stated by the principal speaker at these meetings, is to be a link between the churches and the Salvation Army, made up of those sympathizing with the objects of the army though not necessarily approving its every method. The work of the army in its various branches was explained in an entertaining manner by the several speakers and the result will be a considerable increase in the membership of the Auxiliary League, which already includes some of our ministers and prominent business men. Few who have studied the work of the Salvation Army in the slums of our large cities will deny that it accomplishes much good, however repugnant some of its methods may at first glance appear to persons of quiet and refined natures. It is the ignorant depraved and unrefined that the army seeks to save, leaving the organized churches to look after the refined, and, probably in accordance with the old time injunction to "fight the devil with fire," it has adopted unrefined methods to do it. I was once very much prejudiced against the Salvation Army, but long ago learned to respect it and its members because of the good results I have seen of their work, and became convinced that they, too, are engaged in the Master's work. The Salvation Army may be said to represent the brass bands, or, if you please, the drum and fife corps of the great army of Christianity which is battling daily and hourly with the cohorts of Satan and his lieutenants, rum, crime and moral depravity, and there is little doubt that their noise adds to the fighting quality of many of the soldiers, just as I have heard military veterans say that the inspiring music of a brass band at times had turned an ignominious retreat into a brilliant charge leading to victory. Let no man despise the instrument that helps to make men and women better.

An eleven year old boy was picked up on the street one day this week in a helpless state of intoxication, and is now being treated in one of our hospitals for alcoholism; one of the brightest young stenographers employed at the Capitol became a victim of the drink habit and in spite of all that numerous good and kind friends could do to save him he now fills a drunkard's grave. These are only two of the week's many victims sacrificed, one utterly and the other partially, to the rum idol. They happened to be brought to the surface by the secular press, just as were several murders and numerous petty crimes, all chargeable to the drink habit, and they are given place here in the hope that they may serve to spur on some man or woman who is growing weary of fighting the powerful rum power. Suppose that eleven year old drunkard had been your son, or your brother? Suppose that bright young stenographer had been your brother, or your husband, or your son? They were both somebody's sons, and doubtless those two mothers had as bright hopes for the future of their boys as you do for yours or for those of your friends and relations. Beware of rum; it is no respecter of persons.

It is difficult to look in any direction without seeing a picture representing the devastation of the rum demon. The other day a young woman, mother of three small children, appeared in one of our courts for the purpose of formally relinquishing all claim to her children, in order that they might be provided for by the Board of Children's Guardians. The Judge asked her if she fully realized the step she was taking. She answered with tears in her eyes that she did, and that it was the only thing she could do to keep herself and her children from the alms house. Her husband had become a victim of the drink habit and had deserted her and the children and, although she could get work to support herself, the children were so small that she was unable to leave them to work, so she must give them up. Think of that mother's feeling, ye who do not fully recognize the power of the liquor habit over human happiness, as she said: "My husband provided for his family before he took to drink."

Here is another picture, from far away Africa, presented to a Washington audience by Rev. Dr. David A. Day, who has spent twenty years at the Muhlenburg mission of the Lutheran church, on the St. Paul River in North Africa: After telling of the success of this mission, which has 10,000 acres of land under cultivation and a manual training school to teach the children of the natives useful trades, in Christianizing the Africans, Dr. Day said that he feared the sale of American rum to the natives was destined to overcome the work of the missionaries and eventually to sweep away the tribes. He spoke of natives who had after years of toil by the missionaries been raised above their natural degradation only to become victims to the White man's rum and to die drunkards. The same ships that carry Christian missionaries to the Africans also carry rum to act as Satan's emissary in undoing the good work of the missionaries; the vessel upon which Dr. Day went to Africa carried 100,000 gallons of rum, thus adding to the difficulties of Christianizing the natives. These are not pleasant pictures, but they are true to life, alas! too true.

Women's Work in the Sunday School.

An essay Read before the Township Sunday School Convention by Miss Annie S. Patterson of Oakdale, N. C., Sept. 30, 1893.

That women have a work to do in the vineyard of the Lord is admitted by all. That she is both fitted and willing to do the work allotted her is not questioned. Her heart is in the work as well as man's. But the question arises, where shall she work? What part of the vineyard—what work or corner is especially allotted to her? The answer is the S. S. The S. S. is but part and parcel of the church; and work in the Sunday school is church work, and church work of the highest importance. Here, then, is that work or corner in the vineyard of the Lord, where she is capable and especially fitted to train the tender vines for usefulness. This brings me to the subject allotted me: Woman's Work in the S. S. It is not properly woman's place to take charge of the school and superintend it. This belongs to man whom God created to rule and govern. God made man to sow and reap, and put the grain in such a form, that when it comes to her, her hands above all others, can prepare it for children to eat. Abraham furnished the meal, but it was Sarah's hands that prepared the cakes for the angels of the Lord. The same is true in the S. S., men rule and govern, prepare and place in her hands the literature, the lesson helps. These she takes and with the blessings of God implants in the hearts of the children such a love for Christ, as perhaps, men, have not, or can not do.

Woman is especially adapted to teach the Infant class. Nature has endowed her with a kind, loving, winning disposition, calculated to draw the little children to her. She above all others can get their attention, secure their confidence, win their hearts, and draw their tender minds to the things of God. Many a rude reckless boy has been brought to the S. S. and to Christ through the tender sympathy and loving kindness of woman. She is not only fitted for the Infant class. Her sphere and work in the S. S. knows no limit, and could only be realized and felt, if her work were withdrawn. Boys too rude and wicked for men teachers have been placed in her class and through her power and influence, not known, but realized, the worst of boys have become the best of boys. John Wannamaker, Superintendent of one of the largest S. S. in the world, had a theory that he would never put a boy out of school no matter how rude his conduct. This theory was one day put to test. One of his teachers came to him and said, "I've got a boy in my class that must be taken out; he swears and uses obscene language, and I cannot do anything with him," Wannamaker sent the teacher back to his class. The teacher came again and said, "Unless that boy is taken out of the class I will leave it." He did leave the class. Another was appointed. He came with the same story. He resigned the class on account of the bad boy. A third teacher was appointed, and he came with the same story as the others. Mr. Wannamaker then thought he would be compelled to turn the boy out; and as he and a few teachers were talking, of publically excommunicating that boy, a woman teacher of that school came up and said, "Let me have the boy; I will try and save him." But Wannamaker said, "If these young men can't manage him you will not." The boy was given her, and for a few Sundays did well, but soon was the bad boy, and when she spoke to him, he even spit in her face. But her heart was set on that boy, and in school and out, in her love and tenderness she won that boy for Christ, and Wannamaker said, "He was the best boy in school." This is but one of many incidents of woman's wonderful work in the S. S. She often accomplishes a work where men fail. Woman is also fitted by God for the mission work of the school. Her love for the Saviour, having drawn her to the tomb, put her in the place to be the first to see the risen Christ, and the first barrier of the Lord's resurrection—a mission than which there is none greater. Often there are many boys and girls who do not attend the S. S. How shall they be brought in? The Pastor, the Supt and officers can do much but the work largely depends upon the efforts of woman. She seems to have been above all others successful, in gathering into the S. S., those who stand aloof. Many of our great and good men were brought into the S. S., from the streets and highways of sin, by the earnest mission work of woman. Many instances have occurred where little girls have been the instruments in God's hands where souls have been brought to Christ. Let the woman workers in our S. S., awake to a sense of duty. There is much to be done.

"The two most beautiful things in the universe are the starry heavens above our heads, and the sentiments of duty in the human soul." Let woman feel the responsibility resting upon her, and the great good she can accomplish. Let her remember that she is an instrument in God's hands for good, if she will only use the talent given her.

Among My Waste Papers.

BY REV. R. H. HOLLAND.

The power of parental example is almost incalculable. Object lessons—scenes enacted before the eye, impresses the mind much more forcibly than sound, or words that reach the ear, only. A father once had hanging upon his parlor wall an ocean scene, or a beautiful picture representing marine life. The picture was not only attractive, but captivating; and the result was, all his sons four or more in number, became strongly attached to a sea faring life and enlisted as sailors. So the Christian life of the father, which is always impressive, often—yea, almost invariably, so attracts the admiration of his sons, as to lead them all to embrace Christ, and become shining models of piety.

There is a father now living, in ripe old age, a Christian minister, who like the picture upon the wall, his beautiful Christian life, pious walk and godly conversation, stood in daily review before the eyes of his sons five in number, and they not only won their admiration and reverence, but their imitation, and they all became leading Christian ministers, filling prominent places in the Christian church as pastors of some of the strongest churches of the denomination North.

But to the other and the dark side of the picture. For there are pictures upon the moral canvass that are not only sad, but repulsive. Upon this picture are unsightly blotches and stains of ugliness and repugnance. There was a father like the old crab in the fable, who undertook to reprove the young crab for swimming sideway, that it was ugly and he ought to abandon it. The reply of the young crab was, father you have been swimming so, and teaching me to swim so, all my life, and how can I now swim otherwise? The father referred to, had a bright minded son, whom he sent to good schools, as he was a man of means and finally to a law school. After leaving school he began practicing law with bright prospects of success. But as I before intimated, this father though a man of good natural gifts and some intelligence, had set bad examples for his son. His manners were coarse and sometimes vulgar. He was addicted to profanity and worst of all, intemperance. But as the father had some family pride, strong parental love and a most anxious desire to see his son rise to an honorable and useful position in the world and in society, he was exceedingly mortified to see his son adopting his course of life—profane and intemperate. He did not desire or expect this; but that he would heed his advice and not follow his examples; not remembering that the son will almost invariably be what the father's examples teach him to be. He undertook in a fatherly way to admonish him to quit his habit of intemperance, that it was necessary to his success in life, etc. It is useless, said the young man, to reprove me now, when your whole life has taught me to acquire this habit. You indulged yourself, did as you pleased, now I am a free man, and I intend to do as I please.

Upon the son's refusal to the admonitions the father disappointed and vexed withdrew farther support. The son believing he was then capable of working his way to fortune and fame, went South. But his old habits so clung to him, though a brilliant orator, he did not succeed, but returned to his old neighborhood, to old haunts and associates and vice, and the last I heard of that young man, he had committed murder. Fathers be what you would have your sons to be.

FIELD NEWS.

BRO. CLEMENTS:—Owing to press of work I have reported nothing from my field of work for some while. The second Sunday in Aug. I commenced a meeting at Apple's Chapel which lasted until Friday resulting in several conversions and 14 additions to the church. Rev. W. S. Long, was with us Sunday and Monday and preached two excellent sermons. Rev. C. C. Williams was with us several days and endeared himself to this people by earnestness and love for immortal souls. Rev. J. W. Fonville was with us also and greatly endeared himself to the church.

I left home the 28th of Aug., to attend the Va. Valley Conference and assist Rev. E. T. Iseley in his protracted meetings at Antioch and Bethlehem. The Conference convened with the church at Bethlehem, and although there was not a large attendance the business was transacted very harmoniously. Though this conference is very small yet the members show an interest in the work unsurpassed by any of the larger bodies. On Sunday evening Col. E. Sipe, one of the pillars of this conference, took me in his carriage and carried me to his hospitable home. After tea I tried to preach to a large and attentive audience at Linville. I spent the night with Col. Sipe and family. Monday morning I visited Rev. J. W. Scott and family who live at Linville, and in the afternoon went to Antioch to engage in the protracted meeting at that point. The meeting continued for 2 weeks but owing to the rains the congregations were small most of the time. The 3rd Sunday, Bro. Iseley began a meeting at Bethlehem where I joined him Monday night. We labored with this church for several days. The church seemed revived at both places though there were not many conversions. Four additions at Antioch and 3 at Bethlehem up to the time I left. On Friday the 29th I left Bro. Iseley and his hospitable people for home coming by way of Salem, Va., to visit a Sister, Mrs. Cliner, and arrived at home Tuesday morning and found all well. Bro. Iseley is doing a noble work in the Valley, and if he can have his health we may look for grand results from this conference in the near future.

I will hold a series of meetings with the church at Clover Orchard the 1st Sunday in Nov. and week following. If any of the Brethren can help me please do so.

Shallow Well.

We commenced a meeting at this place on Saturday before 4th Sunday in July. On Monday Rev. J. W. Patton came to our assistance, and did the most of the preaching during the meeting. His sermons were of a very high order and were enjoyed both by pastor and people. Rev. J. A. Whiteman came and preached two good sermons. Eleven were converted and eleven united with the church. Truly this was a good meeting. This church is getting ready for conference.

ZION

We commenced a meeting at the above named church, Saturday before the first Sunday in Aug. Rev. J. A. Whiteman assisted us in this meeting, and did a good work in the way of preaching and exhortation. This was a grand meeting, 32 were converted, 10 reclaimed making 42 in all, 16 united with the church, more will join at my next appointment.

CENTER GROVE.

Our meeting at this place commenced on Saturday before 2nd Sunday in Aug. I was suffering with a deep cold, so Bro. Whiteman had to do the most of the preaching, which was appreciated by the pastor and congregation. Two were converted and the church greatly revived. I believe every member that attended was enabled to rejoice.

HANK'S CHAPEL.

The meeting at this church commenced on Saturday before 3rd Sunday in Sept. Bro. Whiteman came on Monday and labored very earnestly till the close of the meeting which was on Thursday following. Bro. Hatch was also present and did good service. Truly this was a Holy Ghost meeting, 26 were converted, and 20 united with the church. Men and women worked in this meeting publicly that were never known to work before. The Lord has greatly blessed me in my work this year. To Him be all the praise.

Elon College Notes.

When the sun of each scholastic year is about sinking into its horizon, the student briefly looks back with regret upon the time and opportunities misspent. Then resolutions are made for better and deeper work the ensuing year, often these resolutions are forgotten and the same old ruts are run into again, but we fail to report, that the students here, as a whole, are more determined this year, and a greater interest in work is manifest. Since my partner reported last week, we have had several friends of the College on the hill. Among them we are pleased to mention Prof. Elijah Moffitt of Asheboro Graded School an Elon Alumni of '93, B. F. Long of the same class, from the university, W. J. Graham, Union Ridge, N. C., Mr. E. B. Strowd, Sanford, N. C., Mr. J. O. Ferrell of Halifax, Co., Va., Mr. Trogden of Liberty, N. C., Mr. Bart B. Walker of Asheboro, N. C., Mr. Thos. Hurdle Longs Chapel, N. C., Miss Lillie Harland of Carie, N. C.

A majority of the students attended the Burlington fair last Saturday and were much pleased. Some generous hearted person anonymously, sent the College three nice hall lamps. Two of them were put in the lawn hall and one at the top of first stairway. These add much to the comfort of night service, and we all feel to praise some unknown one.

The faculty has granted a petition from the Psiphelian Society to give an oyster supper on the evening of the 14th. We expect a nice time.

Dr. Long and Miss Berta Moring have returned from Chicago much pleased with their trip. It seems that the Dr. got onto the "Yankee style" as he preached only 30 minutes last Sunday. He consumed the time allotted for current events Saturday morning in picturing out something of the grandeur and magnificence of the Exposition which was exceedingly interesting.

Rev. M. L. Hurley was called to his home by telegram last Friday to attend the bedside of his wife, who is reported to be very sick with fever. Miss Lydia Micheal, a former student, was married by Dr. Long on the 4th, to Dr. Jordan of Alamahaw, they took the cars here next morning for Chicago.

We have organized an orchestra of seven pieces, with Prof. Bandy as captain. After a little practice we hope to have some good music.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

When did you pray for your enemy?

Did you do any work for the Lord yesterday?

Did you pray last night or say your prayers, which?

Rev. H. C. Fulton expresses a desire to obtain work for another year.

Do you think you can love God, and hate any being that God has made?

Rev. P. W. Allen, Walnut Cove, N. C., would like to engage in pastoral work next year.

Good meeting at Morrisville, N. C., this week. Rev. J. W. Wellons is doing the preaching.

The Baptismal scene reported by Bro Klapp is calculated to start peculiar questions in the mind of the reader.

S. E. Everett of the class of '93 of Elon College is now at the University of Va. We guess he is fixing to go into the law business.

The State Fair at Raleigh N. C., will come off 17, 18 and 19 of this month. It promises to be a big thing, and should have a large attendance.

If our good brethren will accept our thanks for the newsy letters now coming in and continue them throughout the year they will make glad the heart of ye editor.

No. 20. Hine's Chapel, Apple's Chapel and Bethlehem.

No. 21. Ingram's, Pleasant Grove (Va), Union, Va. and Hebron.

No. 22. Raleigh.

2. The Pastorate shall be the unit.

3. Each Pastorate shall hold a meeting each year at least one month before the annual conference meets, to elect a pastor for said pastorate.

4. Each church shall be allowed the same No. of delegates in a pastorate meeting, that is, in the annual conference.

5. Any minister taking work in any pastorate shall take all the churches in said pastorate.

6. An elder may associate with him a licentiate to assist in a pastorate, if mutually agreed to by elder and pastorate.

7. All difficulties arising between pastor and pastorate, which can not otherwise be settled shall be reported to the conference for final adjustment.

Of course this is subject to revision. But we do hope that the churches will mutually agree to something of this kind.

Is He Right?

Ordinarily, we are opposed to criticism in the public points. In fact one nature is rather foreign to it; and especially so respecting one whom we esteem as highly both for honesty of purpose and intelligence as we do Prof. Atkinson. But in love we feel constrained to take issue with him in one idea advanced by him in the last week's SUN, in the following language:

If there had not been a nucleus of the right and truth in Buddhism, Mohammedanism, Brahminism and the rest they could never have gained the ground and run the course they have. There may be much that is inferior and superficial in their systems of religion, but yet there is some good things in them or men would not have adopted and lived by them for so long a time.

The idea advanced seems to be that great numbers following anything for long years, is proof of some good in it. We think the history of the world as well as the Bible proves the contrary.

The natural disposition in man, in his unrenewed state is to follow that which is bad. Man, in his sins, is on the down grade, taking hold of that which is wrong in the sight of God instead of that which is right.

The whiskey traffic has a great army numbered among its followers, and for years and years this army has pushed its way along in its determined march. Who would say that the whiskey traffic has some good in it, or the thousands would not have held to it so long?

Christ teaches us that, if Christians were of the world, the world would love them; but because they are not of the world, the world hateth them.

This has been written in the spirit of love; and, if we are wrong, we hope Bro. Atkinson will show us our mistake.

Suffolk Letter.

On last Wednesday afternoon Miss Maggie A. Smith was married to Mr. A. M. Parker of Richmond, Va. The ceremonies were performed at the residence of the bride's father, No 36 Kilby street, in the presence of a large group of friends. The presents were numerous and useful. The happy pair left on the 5 o'clock train for Richmond bearing away the best wishes of many hearts.

The "Columbian Carnival," held by the ladies of the Christian church, opens tonight. They have a building one hundred by forty feet erected for the purpose, and the Carnival will last ten days. The object of this enterprise is to raise some money and to contribute it to the building fund of the new church.

Revs. M. W. Butler and J. P. Barrett were in Suffolk a short while last Saturday and both looking well.

The recent storm on the gulf coast was the most destructive for many years. The reports up to Saturday made the list of the dead more than twenty-five-hundred to say nothing of the loss of property by land and sea. On the islands which are near the coast and occupied mostly by fishermen the heavy tides added to the fury of the wind which moved at the rate of one hundred miles an hour sweeping homes and wharfs and boats to destruction, and whole families into eternity. At the same time yellow fever is raging at Brunswick, Ga., and many people are in distress. It is cause for profound thankfulness to God that we are exempt from these scourges so common and so dreadful in other sections. We took a collection of eleven dollars yesterday to send to the needy in the track of the storm.

It is to be hoped that all pastors in Eastern Va. conference will see that the churches send up the full conference assessments for all purposes. The time is short and the need is great. Every department has its peculiar demand and I plead especially for the Educational department as I am chairman of that.

Division.

I became interested in this subject after reading Prof. Moffitt's article some four weeks ago. I was hopeful that the brethren would give the subject due consideration; and express themselves through the columns of the SUN. To my surprise every body, editor and all, are dumb as regards this very important question. Will it be for the good of the church to divide the conference? Should the N. C. & Va., and Deep River conference unite before the division is made? Is the territory too ge or the membership too great for conferences? I am with Prof. Moffitt, unite, and then divide. We can have the two conferences in better shape, the division can be made more equal and future work more successful. As to how a union of conferences is to be effected I can't say, it seems to me that each conference at its approaching sessions could appoint a committee on union and let those two conferences appoint a time and place for meeting and consider this matter and at the same time the two conferences appoint a committee on division if the committee on Union agree and a union effected, then let the committee on division go to work and draw a line, so as to make the two conferences as near equal, in numbers, wealth and intelligence as is possible for it to be done with a creditably straight line. The result would be, as I see it, each conference would go to work with new life in all branches of our work, one not wanting to be out striped by the other; uniting two persons with equal advantages will leave the others without excuse; then for credit's sake each must work. I do hope the brethren will think on this subject, and give their ideas to the readers of the Sun. Remember conference will soon be here, and this very important question will be presented for consideration.

C. A. BOON

Should the Conference Adopt the Pastorate System.

Dear brethren of the N. C. & Va. C. C. The next session of conference will be an important session. The Pastorate System is an important subject for deep consideration. Let every church elect its delegates and instruct them to vote the voice of their church in conference on this question, and not to be changed out by long winded speeches they may hear. We evidently need better system in our work than we now have. I do not think it best for a pastor to have to go from one side of conference to the other to serve church and have to pay to the R. R. from 1/3 of his full salary. Let us have something that will both benefit the church and pastor. I am willing to endorse any system that will be for the good of Christ's cause in the Christian church regardless as to whether it will be for my personal financial good. I have made it a subject of prayer, and it is important that I should. Let the pastors bring it before their churches, and see that their delegates are instructed by the church how they should vote, then this matter will be justly fixed. This need not necessarily interfere with next years work, but will come into effect afterward. Get things in proper shape for the Gen. Convention. The Conference being an advisory body and the Gen. Convention a legislative body. Brethren think about it.

S. B. KLAPP.
Youngsville, N. C., Sept. 29, 1893.

Should the N. C. & Va. C. C. Be Divided?

I have been asked this question a number of times. I have answered thus: If the influence of Conference is a great power in the congregation where its session is held and so much good is the necessary result of two Conference, then divide for powers of influence will do more good than one. It is better to do two good deeds than one. Two dollars is worth double the amount of one dollar; then two conferences with the same ratio of influence is worth more than one. If it cost $725.00 to attend our conference by railroad. The territory being so great, and if dividing it will save the conference that amount then divide it, and put that money into the Home Mission fund. Then we could send out some 2 or 3 missionaries on the border of our conference with the amount of assessments from conference. We need several missionaries in the field. And if the conference is too large to be entertained by the majority of our churches, then a division is necessary. The weaker churches have the same right to want and to entertain conference, that the stronger ones have. This is in keeping with the liberal Principles of the Christian church. Let the churches instruct their delegates to vote for the church according to instructions for this is right in the eyes of justice. The line of division may have much to do with it.

S. B. KLAPP.

Youngsville, N. C., Sept. 29, 1893.

Notice

At the last session of the E. Va. C. S. S. convention it was decided that the keeping of a missionary in the field was impracticable, and convention realizing its inability to do independent missionary work, decided to co-operate with the Christian Missionary Association. It will therefore pay over into the hands of the treasurer of the Association, at the coming session, ($300.00) three hundred dollars and will elect a delegation of thirty members to represent its interests in that body.

We believe this is a step in the right direction. The S. S. convention has finally tested its inability to do efficient missionary work alone. By combining its efforts with those of the Association it can accomplish something permanent. We have made a great mistake in the past by doing so much independent work on a small scale. We need concentration of effort. "In union there is strength." Let all of the little streams flow into one channel and they become a strong and powerful stream, turning numerous factory wheels and bearing away upon its bosom the commerce of the land. Let each one run separately, and they will never turn a wheel nor float a pound of commerce, but will become absorbed by the land over which they pass. So it is with the little independent bodies in the church. Let them all concentrate their efforts upon one grand central object, and a great work can be accomplished for the cause of Christ and for our church. We can soon be doing in some other city a grand work like that now in progress in the city of Norfolk.

The thirty delegates have been nominated, and as soon as endorsed by the Ex. Committee will be notified of their election.

THE CORNER.

MY DEAR CHILDREN:—I want to ask you to do something, and all of you who are Christian will comply. It is this: Sunday, Oct. 22, Rev. J. L. Foster, my pastor, will commence revival services at the Raleigh church. I want you to begin now and pray that the influence of that meeting will be felt by sinners so strongly that they will yield themselves to God and become servants of the Most High even as we are. Bro. Foster and the Christian members of his church are praying for a great good to be done. Now I ask you to also. Why have we no letters this week?

Cordially yours,
UNCLE TANGLE

DEAR CHILDREN: As some of you seem to like my little poems for the "Corner," I have written another for you to read, if Uncle Tangle thinks he can spare room for it. Hoping you are all cheerful and happy.

I am as ever, your loving,
UNCLE MILLARD

HAPPY CHILDREN.

There were three little girls at play on a lawn,
On the bright summer day that was balmy and warm,
And they held in their hands flowers, fragrant and fair,
Yes, beautiful flowers, that scented the air.

The hair of one cherub was golden and bright,
Another wore tresses as dark as the night,
While the third had curls that were glossy and brown,
And each one seemed a queen, with love for a crown.

They sang, oh they sang like the birds in the trees,
Their musical notes, that were borne on the breeze,
Came floating to me, at my home that was near;
For the very air rang with their voices so clear.

'Twas a sweet pretty sight—and pleased me so well,
I thought to the cousins, in rhyme, I would tell—
How happy I was when I watched them at play,
And wished every child was as happy as they

O dear little children of Sunny Southland,
Who give of your dimes to help on the "Band,"
Be kind to your parents—be cheerful at heart—
Then your joy will abound—'twill never depart.

D. E. MILLARD.

A Baptismal Scene.

Last Sunday morning we met by the water at Bro. S. P. Burn's fish pond, near Moore Union Christian church to attend to the ordinance of baptism, Rev. N. M. Campbell, pastor of Pleasant Ridge Baptist church was present also for the same purpose. This writer suggested and Bro. Campbell acquiesced very quickly to a union service. Bro. Campbell invited the candidates for church membership, while this writer gave out the hymn and led in prayer. Then the candidates for baptism were arranged in a line with Bro. Campbell at one end and I at the other end of the line. We all joined hands Baptist and Christians and marched into the water where each minister baptized his candidates and again joined hands and returned to bank, while the congregation sang "Oh! how happy are they, Who the Saviour obey." etc. I also baptized one candidate in the Methodist church.

This was one of the most satisfactory baptismal services I was ever engaged in. This is the first Union baptismal service I ever knew. It looks like the coming together of the denominations. May God hasten the day when there will be no denominational lines to separate and divide the family of heaven. Let us, baptise together, commune together, worship together, and at last live together in heaven.

A LIFE STORM.

On a rolling, surging, tossing sea,
The craft of my life is striving;
I know not where the haven may be,
Nor whither the wind is driving.

One day of sunshine, the next of cloud,
The vessel sails on unheeding;
Often in terror I cry aloud,
Though I know not what is needing.

Why should I cry when I can not know
The depth or height of each billow;
Why thunder rolls, or wind doth blow,
More than brook knows of the willow?

O foolish, fretful mariner I,
To cry when the gale is blowing
In fury under an angry sky:
Rather sing as the crowd is growing.

My Lord hath power over wind and waves.
"The sea is His," for He made it:
In Galilee's storm, "O Master, save!"
Was enough, and He forbade it.

I rest in Thee on a restless sea,
O Captain of my salvation:
Thy word of "Peace" is enough for me,
Thou Lord of the whole creation.

So, when I cry he graciously nigh,
To hide me for my leveller;
Though stars be hid, and the tempest high,
Save me, O save me, my Saviour.

AN APPLIED GOSPEL.

The Best Kind of Benevolence Is That Which Reaches the Inner Nature.

In our eagerness to present to the world an applied gospel there is some danger that we may lose sight of the fact that a well of water springing up within the man is better than a cup of water placed in his hand, however gracious and refreshing that may be. It is a blessed thing to give the hungry a meal, but a more blessed thing to give the man a trade. The least act of kindness is not to be despised, but the greatest good is that which repeats its benefits and perpetuates its power. A hospital is a beneficent charity, but a kindergarten is still more so.

Now, in our anxiety that the Gospel may not seem to be a mere philosophy of relations between God and man, we may lay such emphasis upon an act of alms as to imply, or leave the impression, that the work wrought by Divine truth in the heart is of secondary or inferior importance. It was not thus that Jesus viewed His double mission, for when His disciples sought Him, and would fail have drawn Him back to the village where the sick awaited Him He replied: "Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also; for therefore came I forth." It was a clear and distinct utterance of our Lord upon the issue as between mere philanthropy and that religion which flowers in philanthropy.

In our aims to benefit man we may be guided by either one of two principles; to make a man's environment better or to make the man independent of his environment. The last is first in the Word of God, while the first is not lost sight of. And this purpose of the Gospel, this method of the Gospel, are as wise and Divine as are all its heavenly thoughts. It was when His hearers were most clamorous for "the kingdom of God" to appear, that the Master assured them the kingdom of God would not come with outer show, but be found in the changed heart which made to the believing soul a new world.

It is the losing sight of these truths which plunge our generous souls often into profoundest gloom. Laboring with an unselfish and loving zeal for the good of men, their efforts are often so fruitless, their kindnesses so abused and perverted, that from time to time they sink into an abyss of despondency, seeing those whom they would aid drawn down into lower depths of vice even by the efforts which are put forth for their rescue. The surest way to keep a beggar a beggar forever is to feed him freely; the silver quarter given to each tramp that shuffles up to the back door will people the world with tramps. There is nothing so unpractical as that benevolence which has regard only for circumstance and not for soul. The only way to create a new world is to create a new heart; that is the philosophy of the Gospel.

It should be understood, therefore, that "practical" Christianity is the introduction to spiritual Christianity, the means by which to bring the souls of men into saving relation to Divine grace, not a substitute for such relations. The boy's barley loaves were calculated to bring the hearts of men to that bread of life which came down from Heaven; but when men sought Jesus only that they might be fed, He sternly rebuked them and moved on.

In the thought of the Jew the Messiah was to restore ancient fertility to abandoned fields; to make waste places feel anew the thrill of life; to fill the long empty coffers with the gold of tributary kings; to lead the oft-vanquished banners to a wider conquest than any army David ever knew. In this new kingdom men were to rest content; content because nothing should be left to desire; content in bright skies, broad fields, opulent homes, beautiful temples, impregnable defences, victorious legions and a glorious name spread throughout the earth. And now, standing in the midst of the nation's deepest humiliation and poverty, subjects as they were of a foreign power; over-burdened by taxation that supported the pagan court of a foreign state; the temple service subject to and led by an infidel high priest, this rabbi of obscure birth and himself poor, proclaimed that the kingdom of God long waited for, prayed for, wept for was here! And when they asked, as if to bring his claims to open trial, when that kingdom should appear, He quietly responded: "The kingdom of God is within you." Not there, not over yonder, not seen coming in the dawn of brighter days or in the unfolding of fairer flowers, not by observation does it come, the seat of its authority and the spring of its joy is in men's hearts.

This is the truth that all Christian philanthropists need to bear constantly in mind. The most practical benefit after all is that which changes the man from what he is to what he should be. There are contented peasants and discontented kings, and what this earth is found to be depends more upon the finder than the found. That is a kindness which dresses the world's hurt; but that is the truer kindness which heals it. The aims by which present distress is relieved is benevolence; but the relief by which the heart is won and changed is alone the most "practical" Christianity.—Chicago Interior.

It is quite possible that notorious sinners may be more innocent in their profligacy than the outwardly moral are in their respectability. The presence of temptation and the absence of light must be taken into the account. Education, opportunity and knowledge of the Gospel, if abused or neglected, make little transgressions great. It is often the case that the worse the act, the less guilty the doer.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

We Are the Sum Total of Causes We Ourselves Have Set in Motion.

There is no lesson that needs emphasizing more earnestly in our own time than that of personal responsibility. One of the fruits of our tendency to congregate in cities, and to do business in corporations, is the loss of the sense of personal, individual accountability to God. The director or trustee will do a deed of selfishness or cruelty in his corporate capacity which as a man and a neighbor he would scorn. How many characters are ruined that way! But when God keeps accounts with us, it is not as firms or trusts, but as individuals. God does not regard us in the mass but as individuals. God not only chisels out mountains but He plants flowers and butterflies, and cheers the hearts of mountain squirrels, and tunes the voices of tiny warblers. We are not the creatures of circumstances over which we have no control. There is never a sin we fall into that we could not have escaped. There is never a temptation into which we fall but that we see afterwards how we might have resisted it. It has been our own fault, and no plea of the power of circumstances will avail us with God who sees us as individuals. We have a will given us, strong and indomitable, which, if sustained by prayer to God, will override the most adverse circumstances and make them stepping-stones in the Heavenly race. No adult person is in any sense a creature of chance; we are rather, each of us, the sum total of causes we ourselves have set in motion. When a man against great obstacles forces his way to become an orator, or a great general, or a renowned financier, we say he is a self-made man; but it is just as true that the great drunkard, the great liar, the great libertine, the great fool, are all self-made men. Let us not deceive ourselves. We, and not some one else, are responsible to Almighty God for our conduct, and we will have to give an account for it.—Louis A. Banks, D.D., in Common Folks' Religion.

$50 A Year For Life

SUBSTANTIAL REWARDS FOR THOSE WHOSE ANSWERS ARE CORRECT.

A man once entered a prison where was confined a condemned criminal. On making a request to be conducted into the presence of the doomed man, the visitor was informed that none but relatives were permitted to see the prisoner. The visitor said: "Brothers and sisters have I none, but that man's (the prisoner's) father was my father's son."

He was at one taken to the prisoner. Now, what relation was the prisoner to the visitor?

The Agriculturist Publishing Company will give $50 a year for life to the person sending the first correct answer; $500 to the second; 3rd, $250; 4th, $100; 5th, $50, and over 10,000 other rewards, consisting of pianos, organs, ladies and gentlemen gold and silver services, diamond rings, etc.

To the person sending the last correct answer will be given a high toned piano, to the next to the last a beautiful organ, and the next 5,000 will receive valuable prizes of silverware, etc.

RULES.—(1) All answers must be sent by mail, and bear postmark not later than Dec 31, 1893. (2) There will be no charge whatever to enter this competition, but all who compete are expected to send one dollar for six months, subscription to either THE LADIES HOME MAGAZINE or THE CANADIAN AGRICULTURIST—two of the choicest illustrated periodicals of the day. (3) All prize winners will be expected to assist us in extending our circulation. (4) The first correct answer received (sender's postmark taken in all cases as date of receipt, so as to give every one an equal chance, no matter where he or she may reside), will secure the first prize; the second, the next prize, and so on.

THE AGRICULTURIST is an old established concern and possesses ample means to enable its promises. (Send for printed list of former prize winners.)

JUDGES.—The following well-known gentlemen have consented to act as judges, and will see that the prizes are fairly awarded: Commodore Calcutt (proprietor Calcutt's Line of Steamers), Peterborough, and Mr. W. Nervous Prostration

Mrs. Emma Huss

Years of Suffering Ended

"I broke down in health, lost my appetite, had a bad cough, and suffered from nervous prostration. I read of Hood's Sarsaparilla and sent for a bottle of the medicine. After using it three days my nerves became quieted and I regained an appetite. In a short time I was able to walk, and before taking two bottles was attending to my household duties. I am now in better health than for years." Mrs. EMMA HUSS, Reepsville, N. C. Get HOOD'S —Out of suffering comes the serious mind, out of salvation the grateful heart; out of endurance, fortitude; out of deliverance, faith.—Ruskin.

—If the Christian course had been meant for a path of roses, would the life of the Author of Christianity have been a path strewn with thorns?—H. More.

—Talk about church differences, the most serious difference existing in the church to day is the difference between its Sunday and week day religion.—Bible Reader.

—When a man is no longer afraid, but is prepared to welcome whatever comes, because he sees in it the appointment of a loving Father, then he is in a happy state.—Spurgeon.

—Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; but the greatest of these is love; for love is the seraph, and faith and hope are but the wings by which it flies.—Henry Ward Beecher.

—What can one do to check the onward course of evil? He can at least take care of himself. Every person doing right is at least so much in the moral embankment against the flood.—United Presbyterian.

—Our God is love, and that which we miscall evil, in this good world that He has made, is meant to be a little tender shade between us and His glory, that is all; and he who loves the best his fellowman is loving the holiest way he can.—Interior.

—Prince Bismarck says that when we read a medical book we are apt to conclude we have all the maladies it describes. But when we read a book on morals we seem to think it is our neighbor that has all the maladies it describes.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

—“I every day see more and more how God's glory is to be found only in simple obedience. You've got to save your own soul first, and then the souls of your neighbors, if they will let you; and for that reason you must cultivate not a spirit of criticism, but the talents that attract people to the hearing of the Word.—Geo. Macdonald.

—No man is rich enough to keep out of the kingdom of God if he is also a humble servant of the Lord Christ. And no man is poor enough to gain admission as a charity. At the gate of entrance here and in Heaven the rich and poor meet together, and the gracious Christ is the Saviour of them all on the same terms.—Christian Inquirer

By able, conservative management, safe investments, big rate of interest, low death rate, the Northwestern has won the love and applause of its policyholders and the respect and admiration of all who are acquainted with it.

Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24, '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. McAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N. C., says: "I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. I now hold three policies in this company. My dividends are much larger than in other companies in which I carry insurance. The affairs of the company are safely and conservatively managed; they pay promptly and are exceedingly fair and liberal in their dealings with their policy-holders."

Mr. R. B. Roney, Raleigh, N. C., under date of April 1, '93, says: "I have held a policy in the Northwestern for a number of years, and am satisfied it has no superior."

Our Norfolk Letter.

I have recently had the pleasure of examining two books which have deeply interested me, and I believe will deeply interest any of the Sun's readers who may send for them and read them.

1. Ebenezers, or Records of Prolonging Prayer, edited and published by Rev. H. L. Hastings, 47 Cornhill, Boston Mass—price 85 cents. Any person who believes in prayer will have his, or her, faith strengthened by a careful reading of this volume. It contains 382 pages of the most wonderful records of prayers which have been, in most cases, answered directly and immediately. I feel that my faith has been strengthened and therein I have been blessed by reading this book. Were I a wealthy man, I would spend a part of my fortune, feeling as I now do, in giving this book to every Christian who would agree to read it carefully and prayerfully. As I am unable to do this I will do the next best thing I can: Advise the Sun's readers to send and get it and read it and be blessed.

2. Lessons of Comfort for the Afflicted, by Rev. I. H. Coe, New Bedford, Mass. This little volume of 168 pages, while prepared, as its name indicates, to bring comfort to any heart in trouble, or affliction, is especially prepared to assist ministers in their delicate duties in the homes where affliction has stricken the inmates, and also in furnishing suitable readings for funerals, and burials. It is nicely printed in large type, and in this, the best adapted to reading in darkened rooms, of any book of its class which I have seen. The scripture selections are very good and the poems are perfect gems. In addition to these advantages, the scripture selections are wisely classified, making the book suitable for all occasions where comfort is desired. The author is a Christian minister, a man of decided ability and well known to our brotherhood. The book may be had by addressing him as above. I do not know the price, but presume it is reasonable.

(I can most cheerfully endorse all that Dr. Barrett has written relative to Rev. I. H. Coe's book entitled "Lessons of Comfort for the Afflicted")—I have been using the book in the sick room and funeral work, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the best book of the kind I have ever seen.—C. J. JONES.)

The Norfolk Christian church has just sustained the loss of one of its most prompt and active members, in the death of Bro. W. T. Hyslop, who departed this life in this city on Friday, Oct 6, 1893, after several weeks of lingering, under the blighting touch of paralysis. He was in his 49th year and leaves a wife and several children. He was a brother of Deacon R. A. Hyslop of Providence church. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. J. Jones, D. D., his pastor, from the Christian church on Sunday, Oct. 8 in the presence of a very large congregation, and his body was laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery. The text was John 14:18. Bro Hyslop will be greatly missed both in his home and in his church. May God's blessings rest upon the afflicted family and through this sad dispensation of his providence bring them nearer to himself.

I want to send a message through the Sun to my old editorial friend and brother, the Rev. C. T. Bailey, D D., editor of the Biblical Recorder. He will doubtless recall the fact that we have had many a tilt on denominational questions, etc, but we are nevertheless good friends and I read his excellent paper with pleasure. Tell him that I deeply regret to see him "poking fun" at the Congress of Religions, which recently met in Chicago. I fear that he has shut his eyes to its merits just because it was not sufficiently baptistic. In this I think he is making a mistake and doing the cause of Christ an injury which he cannot easily repair. I did not, I am sorry to say, attend, but from what I can learn, it has been a revelation to the Christian world, and I dare say to the heathen world as well, or even more. It has been a revelation to the Christians in that that they have learned that these men who came as the representatives of heathen religions, were worshipping the one true God and that they accept Christ as His Son. If this is not a revelation to Dr. Bailey, it is to me. Hear what these men say in part. Keshub Chunder Sen, the founder of the Brahmo Somaj, says: "Christ exists throughout Christendom like an all-pervading leaven, mysteriously and imperceptibly, leavening the bias of millions of men and women." Will not Dr. Bailey endorse these words? Keshub again says: "Christ, not the British government, rules India. We breathe, think, feel and move in a Christian atmosphere." What of that, Dr. Bailey? Hear another, Mozoomdar, perhaps the greatest living Brahman, says: "In the midst of these crumbling systems of Hindu error and superstition, in the midst of this self-righteous dogmatism and acrimonious controversy, in the midst of these cold, spectral shadows of transition, secularism, and agnostic doubt, to me Christ has been like the meat and drink of my soul. His influences have woven round me for the last twenty years, or more, and outside the fold of Christianity, as I am, have formed a new fold, wherein I find many besides myself."

This may be the expression of a heathen, but it looks to me like the first bursts of light—of the "Light of the World"—upon the darkened horizon of heathen thought and heathen life. But I fancy Dr. Bailey may ask me what mean all their false gods and superstition, etc., if these things be so. I will give the answer of one of these heathen-Christians when pressed with this point. He asked: Would you have me judge Christianity in America by what I see upon the streets of New York City, of the idlers, loafers, thieves, and outcasts of your society? By this he meant to say, even so we should not judge their religion by their outcast, the low and superstitious. And I think he is right. The devil is entitled to his dues, and certainly any people who are trying to serve the true God should have as much. I see our Baptist brethren are in trouble over their methods of foreign mission work. Possibly they might have gotten light and help in at least, a partial solution of their knotty problem, if they had taken a fair part in the proceedings of this Parliament of Religions, for I believe it is the entering wedge which will revolutionize the methods of foreign mission work in all our denominations, at least to this extent, that instead of sending our missionaries there to introduce and establish the gospel, we ought to keep our men at home and send our money to aid the leading men there who have already accepted Christ as in the cases of Keshub and Mozoomdar and others who have already accepted Christ, for it is a well known fact that Christian natives, who are cultured leaders, can do more to establish the gospel in heathen lands than can foreigners. The work is opening on more hopeful lines, and I hope that the Parliament of Religions, even with "Baptist hands off," may be the means of revolutionizing the methods of foreign mission work for the glory of God in the early salvation of the millions of darkened lands. I hail the Parliament of Religions as the dawning of the morning light which shall hasten the glad day of salvation through Christ for the unconverted millions to the ends of the earth. (I am glad to say that while the Southern Baptist kept "hands off" in this Parliament, the Northern Baptist were there and in it. As yet, the North leads in great questions, even among our Baptist brethren, but one good thing is, that when the South does take hold, it holds and moves to the front—as is shown in instances too numerous to mention here.)

Poisoned by Scrofula.

Is the sad story of many lives made miserable through no fault of their own. Scrofula is more especially than any other a hereditary disease, and for this simple reason: Arising from impure and insufficient blood the disease locates itself in the lymphatics, which are composed of white tissues; there is a period of foetal life when the whole body consists of white tissue, and therefore the unborn child is especially susceptible to this dreadful disease. But there is a remedy for scrofula, whether hereditary or acquired. It is Hood's Sarsaparilla, which by its powerful effect on the blood, expels all trace of the disease and gives to the vital fluid the quality and color of health. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla do not accept any substitute.

Sept. 26th after a painful illness of weeks and so recovered as to get about and come one time to the church but relapsed and in a few weeks passed away quietly to the rest that remains for the people of God.

Bro. Canady was a true man, a good Christian, a kind husband, a devoted father, a good neighbor. How we will miss him, he always filled his seat at the church promptly, ready with his contribution and free to speak in the interest of the church and liberally contributed to the building of the church in this city.

So many ministers found shelter under his roof and a comfortable home with him and his kind family. How much we all will miss him! No one outside of his family will miss him more than the pastor. But our loss is his gain.

That was alright, Mr. Editor, perfectly alright about your taking issue with me concerning an idea advanced about the heathen. Certainly you are excusable. I don't blame you at all. But this much, I am not in for a newspaper controversy—"nor shall be till I die." My nature is averse to it and I am sure I would be no good at it at all. So much by way of prelude. Now for just a word or two—and then. Well I hope that will suffice and be satisfactory and all that. From the reading of your article in last week's SUN, Mr. Editor, in which you took issue with me for saying that there was a nucleus of truth and right in the heathen religions or they could never have gained the ground and run the course they have," I am driven to infer one of two things. First, I should most naturally infer that you mean to intimate that there was nothing of truth and the right in their religion. And yet knowing you to be a thorough believer in the Christian religion as taught in the Old and New Testament, I should not do you the unkindness to make such an inference, for if you say that there is no nucleus of truth and the right in Buddhism, Brahminism and Mohammedanism then you disregard and deny as truths some of the most beautiful, profound and striking truths of the Bible—truths which Christianity has accepted as genuine and unaltered. In other words, Mr. Editor, some of the most beautiful, profound and striking truths in our Bible are to be found recorded almost precisely though sometimes couched in different phrase, in the sacred books of these other people. Did Christ and his apostles exhort to purity, right doctrine, self-sacrifice, high and noble thoughts, good conduct, right living and deeds of kindness, generosity and love? So did Buddha. But then I am sure you were aware of this and could not have meant that the one was all right and the other all and entirely wrong when there are lessons and truths in both systems, and not a few, which are identical. Leaving this point then which you certainly could not have meant to convey we notice the second and only remaining inference to be drawn from the article in question—and possibly this is the only one which was intended to be set forth. You say that the idea advanced by me "seems to be that great numbers following anything long years, is proof of some good in it." From the point of view of the devoted advocate and the ends which the object or idea in the object was to subserve, most positively and absolutely—Yes. Take the illustration used. The liquor traffic is long lived and has many followers. Is there any good in that? From the point of view of the drinking man and the drunkard and to subserve the ends for which the liquor was taken. I should say yes—quite a deal of it. It stimulates for the time being, intoxicates and then begets a state of carousal and oblivion on the part of the drinker. And those are exactly the ends sought and the object desired in partaking thereof. Now conceive of it as having a directly opposite effect, failing entirely to subserve the ends whereunto it was sent and taken—would it not be disregarded, abandoned? Most assuredly. This you observe is entirely from the drunkard's point of view. What then is to be done? Why, there must be a higher standard of judging, a purer light of guidance and a nobler method of thinking established in the heart and life of that toper before you get him to forsake the error of his way. Is a bad habit to be broken up, a false idea to be removed and a low impulse to be eradicated. These can only be removed by supplanting them with better habits, truer ideas and nobler impulses. I am persuaded that no low or degrading impulse is removed from any human life save by supplanting that impulse with a nobler impulse and a grander ideal.

But however, Mr. Editor, I can but think I am writing here about an idea foreign to the one you intended to convey. For we have before us that illusory and altogether misleading method of reasoning from analogy about things which are not analogous. On the one hand we are trying to reason about something with an ideal content, altogether immaterial and entirely moral and spiritualistic in its make up and on the other about something which is altogether void of any ideal content, entirely material and superbiy immoral and anti-spiritualistic in its make up. I then trying to reconcile the two. But leaving all this to the bluster, and confusion of logomachy. I can but help remarking that if we would help the heathen we must show them wherein our religion is superior to their own. We must give them higher standards of life and living and nobler impulses. There is no religion whose standard is so high, no cult, nor creed nor "ism" that the world has yet seen which possesses such a noble ideal, which engenders such love and produces such lives and such character as the religion that the Christ our Lord taught us.

J. O. ATKINSON.

The Fruits of Christianity.

In his "Grape Shot" leaflet entitled "The Earl and the Cannibal," H. L. Hastings, the eminent author publisher of Boston, relates the following interesting anecdote illustrative of the power of the Gospel to change the most degraded savages into civilized Christian people:

"A story is told of an old Fijian chief and an English earl—an infidel—who visited the Fiji Islands. The Englishman said to the chief, 'You are a great chief, and it is really a pity that you have been so foolish as to listen to the missionaries, who only want to get rich among you. No one nowadays would believe any more in that old book which is called the Bible; neither do men listen to that story about Jesus Christ; people know better now, and I am sorry for you that you are so foolish.' When he said that, the old chief's eyes flashed, and he answered: 'Do you see that great stone over there? On that stone we mashed the heads of our victims to death. Do you see that native oven over yonder? In that oven we roasted the human bodies for our great feasts. Now, you! you! you!—if it had not been for these good missionaries, for that old book, and the great love of Jesus Christ, which has changed us from savages into God's children, you would never leave this spot! You have to thank God for the Gospel, as otherwise you would be killed and roasted in yonder oven, and we would feast on your body in no time!'"

The Inconvenience of Having a Conscience.

BY REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

We are verily guilty concerning our brother. Genesis 42:21.

Man was created in the image of God. This consisted in the mental and moral faculties that were bestowed upon him. He had reason, understanding, judgment, conscience and the power to love and hate. He was created for a noble purpose. The shorter catchism asks and answers the following question: "What is the chief end of man? Man's chief end is to glorify God, and enjoy him forever." This is a wise statement, but not so good as that of the Bible: "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." The pleasure of God is in the development and happiness of man. To secure this end he subjected him to his moral government, and to hold him in obedience to its laws he planted in his spiritual nature a power that we call conscience. This sits in decision upon his conduct approving the right and condemning the wrong. All are conscious of the existence of this faculty, and of its power over their minds and hearts. They realize that it brings happiness or misery as they obey or disobey the laws of God. It smiles upon our obedience, and fills the heart with joy; but it frowns upon our disobedience, and kindles the fires of remorse in the soul. This being true conscience is a very inconvenient thing to have, for it plants itself right in the path of sin, lifts its warning voice in thunder tones, and if not regarded and obeyed lashes the soul with a scourge of scorpions. All experience confirms this, and men have sought in every conceivable way to arm themselves against the power of conscience so that they can indulge their passions and suffer no punishment; but they have never been able to do this. True the conscience may be seared as with a hot iron, and the wrong doer may experience little or no present trouble from it in his sinfulness; but this is only for a time. Sooner or later God will quicken the conscience and make the wrong doer feel its power to rend the soul with anguish. This is illustrated and confirmed by the experience of Joseph's brethren. They did him a great wrong. Years passed away, and conscience caused them little or no trouble; but God was looking after those men. He loved them, and earnestly desired to save them from their wickedness. To accomplish this end he brought them in the course of his providence into circumstances that quickened their conscience and made them think. A famine prevailed in the land, and the family of Jacob found that they must find food some where else or perish. They learned that there was abundance of corn in Egypt, and Joseph's ten brethren went down there to buy what they needed. Benjamin was kept at home by his father "lest peradventure mischief befell him." Joseph was then governor of Egypt, and when he saw his brethren he knew them; but made himself strange unto them. He called them before him, and treated them in a manner that alarmed them. They were made to fear for their lives. Then memory did its work, and they were carried back in thought and imagination to the wild pasture land where they had treated their helpless little brother so cruelly. "They said one to another. We are verily guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw his anguish of soul when he besought us and we would not hear; therefore is this distress come upon us." They uttered this condemning sentence in spite of themselves. On the plains of Dothan they neglected conscience, and disregarded its warning voice; but now in Goshen the irrepressible thumb of conscience and the fear of punishment made them uneasy. They found conscience a very inconvenient thing in their sinful way. The sudden quickening of it into action brought condemnation, and they trembled for fear. Conscience asserted itself as the sense of righteousness. It was the tick of the moral law.

Conscience claims authority as the expression of a will above ours that has the right and the power to hold us responsible. It is the emphatic expression of a rule of duty higher than our other self. Men sometimes realize this, and it fills them with fear. A Christian woman selected a mission. With a few copies of the Bible, she passed from cottage to cottage. Standing in the door of a laborer, she asked him if he would accept the word of God. He replied: "If you leave one, I will fling it into the fire." Invisibly impelled, the woman laid a copy on the table. In a rage, the man seized it, and flung it on a bed of coals. His wife fled from the house; after a time, she returned, and picked up a leaf that had blown out of the flames. On this she read: "But my word shall not pass away." The furious man tore the leaf from his wife's hand, and flung that into the flames, but not until he had read it. This quickened his conscience, and he flung himself on his bed, but not to sleep. He found his conscience a very troublesome thing, and it rent his soul with anguish. He said: "Can you tell where the kind lady lives who left the Bible?" Early in the morning he sought her house confessed the great wrong he had done; and begged a Bible. The terror of the Lord as revealed through his conscience drove him to the Lord. He found conscience an inconvenient thing in the life he was living.

Interest sometimes incline us to wish that we had no conscience, or that there were some Bastille still standing in which we could lock it up without any fear of its voice coming back to us. When tempted by the apparent opportunity of acquiring great riches or power through a disregard of the moral law of God, a man wishes that he could hush the voice of conscience forever so that he could grasp the coveted treasure and fear no evil from it in the future. When Charles IX was induced to sign the decree for the terrible St. Bartholomew massacre he exclaimed: "God's death! kill the admiral; and not only him, but all the Huganots; let none remain to disturb us!" He could murder the protestants, but he could not kill his conscience; and in his last hours it kindled the fires of remorse in his soul that burned hot as the flames of tophet. Conscience was an inconvenient thing for him in that hour.

When passion and love of pleasure incline a man to sinful indulgence conscience is an inconvenient presence, and disturbs his peace of mind. It stands like a cherub with flashing sword upon his pathway and terrifies him back from his unholy objects of indulgence. Lady Macbeth could not murder the innocent Duncan for it.

"Had he not resembled my father when he slept. I had done it."

A young man of high position in a community where he lived committed a great wrong against a young lady, and to escape the consequence he resolved to flee the country; but he found conscience an inconvenient monitor then. It lifted its voice against the great wrong he was doing, and rent his soul with anguish. He thought of duty, honor and God and was troubled. He found that he was treading a burning pathway whose flames scorched his naked soul. The ruling passion in the soul of Judas was covetousness, and this led him to betray his master into the murderous hands of his enemies. He thought of only gain, but he found conscience to be an uncomfortable thing. It destroyed his peace of mind, and made him see and feel the awful nature of the crime that he had committed. The fires of remorse burned in his soul, and filled him with unutterable anguish. He sought relief in self-destruction. He "went and hanged himself."

A church member went a fishing on the Sabbath expecting to have a fine day's sport, but he found conscience a troublesome companion. Nothing seemed right. The catching of the fish afforded him no pleasure, and they tugged harder at his conscience than at the hook. He felt ashamed of himself, and the fish did not taste good when cooked. He wished that he had kept on better terms with his conscience.

There are current modes of thought that are very effective in putting conscience aside, or convincing us that it is one of the hobgoblins of ignorance which our advanced age need not pay any heed to. One of these is the heredity theory. All that we are, depends upon our birth. We inherit irresistible proclivities, and the nature of our career is predestinated in the blood. We cannot help what we do. This is bad philosophy and poorer theology. It will not save a man from the condemnation of conscience, that he ought and can obey God, and sooner or later he will see and feel as David did when he exclaimed: "Against thee, thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in thy sight." Another theory by which men try to shake off the inconvenience of conscience is that we are not subject to outside law. We can do as we please. The transgressor soon learns that there is a law outside of himself, and power above him that enforces it. Mr. Campbell says, "On one occasion, when I was at sea, a young man rushed from his bed, while yet asleep, to the middle of the cabin, and pointing to the floor, exclaimed, "There's the blood! there's the blood! yes, there's the blood!" Some only rose, and finding that he was asleep, awoke him, and got him back to bed. He was an officer in the army, on his way to join his regiment in Sicily. Sometime before this he had shot an officer in a duel. The crime haunted him as a fearful phantom. He found that there was a law outside of himself, and a power to enforce it.

The inconvenience of conscience applies to heavenly things. It is unpleasant to a man while living a sinful life to feel that he stands in need of forgiveness and should seek it. By the law is the knowledge of sin, and conscience appeals to the law. It thunders condemnation. This troublesome conscience is a blessing to the man, for it warns him against all sin, and makes him realize his need of pardon. This is a saving power in the soul of man. If he listens to its warning voice it will bring him back to God. A lady on a pleasure excursion in the harbor of Portland fell overboard, and was nearly drowned.

After her return to consciousness she stated that while in the water, her life, even to the minutest incidents passed before her mind, as in a visible panorama. This review quickened her conscience, and so affected her with a sense of her sinful ingratitude that she threw herself upon the mercy of Christ, and consecrated her life to his service. She lived and died an earnest faithful Christian. The annals of English literature furnish few finer scenes than that of Dr Samuel Johnson standing in the open square of his native town with the rain beating down upon his bare head. He stood for an hour. It was an expiation for the falsehood he had told his father on his death-bed.

This troublesome conscience is a blessing to the community. It turns men from their sinful life, and leads them to right the wrongs they have done. The other day a family received a note enclosing $4 60, and stating that it was money a servant girl had taken years before, with interest on the same. An inconvenient thing conscience was to her but a useful thing to those whom she served. Two farmers were bitter enemies. In a quarrel they had a law suit. The innocent man lost the case and the guilty man was jubilant, though he knew he was getting what did not belong to him. Some time after this he was brought under the influence of divine truth and the Spirit of God. His conscience was quickened, and he realized the sinfulness of his conduct towards his neighbor. He went to him and confessed his sinfulness, and said: "I have come to restore to you what is just." This had such a convicting, melting influence on the wronged man that he felt that there must be a reality in religion, and he sought and found the Saviour. These two men worked together for many years in the church, and are now in heaven praising God together. A troublesome conscience was a good thing in this case. Queen Mary of England took many ecclesiastical livings from their rightful owners, and appropriated the money to her own use; but when she came to die she could no longer stifle her conscience, and she restored them, saying that she set more value by the salvation of her own soul than she did by ten kingdoms. Conscience was an inconvenient thing for her, but it was a good thing for the ministers and churches that she had robbed.

There is only one way of stilling the voice of a guilty conscience, and securing that peace of mind that will enable us to think of God and eternity with joy and hope; and this is the way of "repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." We cannot put away our sins, and hide them from ourselves; and find peace in forgetfulness. A queen tried this, and as a result was compelled to exclaim: "Would God that thou couldst hide me from myself." There was the trouble. God has met this want of the soul in Christ, and his salvation. In olden days over the convent of Einsideln on the Lake Lucome was the Latin inscription. "Hic est plena remissio peccatorum." "Here is full forgiveness of sins." At the throne of grace conscience tells its guilt and from Christ cometh the forgiveness of all sin. This gives such peace of mind as the world cannot give.

Among My Waste Papers.

BY REV. R. H. HOLLAND.

"Old men have but few friends," said the great and good Dr. Jeter of Richmond, in a sermon in the hearing of the writer, a few years before his death. This is evident from the following, and some of the writer's own experience. Yet "none of these things move me" Act. 20:24.

There is a story of a Methodist conference a good many years ago, when Methodist preachers had small salaries, and instead of riding in top buggies as now, rode around their circuits horseback, and the churches not as numerous and as wealthy as now, sometimes their annual conferences, instead of being in towns and cities as at present, were sometimes held at country churches and more isolated places.

The evening before the conference referred to commenced, which was perhaps in a rural district, the delegates and visitors began to arrive in the neighborhood. One young "circuit rider" as they were called, and perhaps others, were pleasantly quartered in the vicinity of the church. Towards the close of the evening, near night-fall, an elderly man was seen approaching the house, way-worn and foot-sore perhaps, as he was on foot. He had a bundle of clothes, or his wardrobe tied up in a red bandana. The young preacher eyed the old man suspiciously and treated him coldly, as an old tramp, unworthy of social intercourse. The old man asked could he be permitted to lodge there that night. After some hesitation and some excuses as to being somewhat crowded with visitors, he was very reluctantly told he could stay.

We are not informed as to how time passed, or how conversation ran, except some sneering remarks of the young preacher as to the personal appearance and probable character of the old man, till time to retire for rest. The proprietor or the proprietress of the house having the rooms pretty well filled with guests, the young preacher and the disdained old man were shown the same room and the same bed for their nights repose. The young man full of worldly thought, and a joyful anticipation of a lively time with the gay and giddy on tomorrow, hastily undressed, and jumped into the middle of the bed, without any thought or attempt to return thanks for passed blessing, or to commit himself to the care and mercy of God. The old man slowly disrobed himself, spent some moments in silent devotion and got in bed the best he could.

Perhaps some moments passed before the silence was broken, when the young man, in order to assert his superiority, began to ask some abrupt questions as to the old man's purposes in visiting the neighborhood at that time, being a stranger to all. The old man gave him to understand that he was on his way to conference. And the answer was given in such tender, Christ-like tone and spirit, it was a complete rebuke to the haughty spirit of the young man; he felt it, it humbled him, he was more generous in his feelings and gave the old man a little more room. The conversation then turned to the doings of the conference, the young man's understanding began to be opened as the old man proceeded, he began to be enlightened as to the old man's real character and he gradually moved a little further to his side of the bed.

The young man then finding that the old man was well and intelligently informed as to the conference, and as an interest was awakened in the conversation, the man presumed to ask if he knew certain preachers, their presiding elder, etc to which a ready answer in the affirmative was given. The young man began to know now that the man was not only a man of intelligence, well posted in the affairs of the church, but began now to suspect he must be in some way connected with the conference, and he gave him a little more room. But when the old man went on to tell him of the various circuits in the conference, of the names of all the preachers, presiding elders, where each would probably be stationed, the young man began to be awakened from his illusion and to see his dilemma. And when he learned he was talking with his bishop, he not only gave more room, but nearly jumped out of the bed. The old bishop after some kind and fatherly advice as to the young man's future course, both went to sleep. It was not an easy matter for the young preacher to be composed after passing through such an ordeal.

Now we see the young preacher did not intend any disrespect to an old preacher. His conduct however was not becoming even though the old man had been a tramp. But we see he was mistaken in the character and mission of the man. Had he known it was his bishop, or even an old minister of his church, his conduct would have been very different. His conversation would have been chaste and his demeanor politely respectful and kind.

Never Alone.

No one but a true child of God can feel that they are never alone. We often have our most intimate friends to leave us temporarily, but if the sweet spirit of Christ has found a welcome to our hearts, we have the most comforting assurance that we have the best companionship and that we cannot be left alone. This is my own experience and it is during my lonely hours I feel the most comforting influence of the holy spirit. Perhaps if saint John had never had this experience, the blessed Lord would never have revealed to him such blissful realities of Heaven as he beheld during his banishment to the Isle of Patmos. It is an inexpressible source of happiness that we can carry Jesus with us wherever we go and feel at home with him when we confidently place our hand in his and feel that he is leading us. Then we also have the assurance that he will never leave us nor forsake us. It is the greatest astonishment to me that we are not ten thousand times more willing than we are, to have such a precious Saviour for our leader for without him we should dwell in the very darkness of sin and eventually be lost. I never saw so much light, even in the darkest hours as I have experienced since I have fully reconsecrated myself to God. It is indeed a peace that passeth all understanding. Heaven seems nearer and Christ so much dearer as I advance step by step in the way of holiness and I can with the greatest satisfaction join with the Poet in his own beautiful language when he said, Her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace.

I feel so happy and thankful that my lot has been cast in a Christian land when the sweet sunshine of God's presence gives such illuminating light language fails me when I attempt to express my sincere thankfulness and love to God for this especial blessing. I am truly glad that he knows all my thoughts and directs them heavenward where I hope to spend my eternity, and enjoy the royal feast which God has prepared for all who love and serve him here.

Can We Unite the Deep River and the N. C., and Va. C. Conference?

Since noticing an article in the SUN of Sept. 14, by Prof. Moffitt of Elon, under the above caption, I have waited with especial anxiety to see what would be said by the leaders of the two conferences. As yet, but one article has been published unless there be another in this week's issue of the SUN.

On referring to the Annual page 88 I notice the following, viz.: "Moved that a committee of three be appointed to suggest lines for the division of the territory of this Conference (the N. C. and Va.) and to publish their report in 'THE CHRISTIAN SUN' three months before the next annual session of this body, and to report the same to the next annual session of this body for ratification that a memorial thereto may be made to the next session of the General Convention" Carried.

It does not seem to me that proper attention is being given this vital subject of division.

My opinion is that the Deep River U. C. will petition the N. C. & Va. C. C., for admission at her next annual meeting at Shallow Well. If so, and if the mother Con. will receive us, then the N. C. and Va. U. C. will have 103 churches and about half as many ordained ministers.

With this many churches and ministers lines for the division of the territory can be gotten up and then we will have two non-cumbersome conferences, each of which will faithfully and rapidly disseminate our biblical principles and spread the blessed gospel of Jesus.

The Deep River C. C. especially needs help, and my opinion is, the suggested union and division, would eventually prove a grand mutual good.

Some of the brethren of the N. C. and Va. C. C. do come over to visit us, but their prime object seems to be to beg. Now I have not condemned this but what I want is, for the brethren to come over and educate us. Come and aid us in some of our protracted meetings and in different ways let the mother (the N. C. & Va. C. C.) teach the child (the D. R. C. C.) its duty along the line of giving and prove to us that you are not only after the loaves and fishes but for our spiritual growth.

By the union we would get some of the live workers now in the N. C. & Va. C. C., and they would educate us, i. e. develop the latent possibilities of the laity in the D. R. C. C.

Brethren, consider the subject well, prepare yourselves against the sitting of the two conferences and may such action be taken as will prove the best for our beloved Zion.

Washington Letter.

BY OUR CORRESPONDENT

The liquor dealers are already seeking to nullify one of the good points in the new law which goes into effect on the first of November. The point in question is that which prohibits the issuing of a barroom license to any place located within 400 feet of a church or school house. Everybody except the liquor dealers and those owned by them admitted when the new law was passed by Congress that this prohibition was an excellent thing, and it was expected that its enforcement would close a number of barrooms. This week a bill was introduced in the House of Representatives proposing an amendment to this law which would compel the authorities to issue licenses to all barrooms so situated at the time the original law was enacted. In other words the law would then only operate as a preventative of the establishment of new barrooms within 400 feet of a school or church, and leave all the old ones. In order to make friends for this bill among Congressmen the statement is made that unless the law is amended barroom licenses cannot legally be issued to several of the largest hotels and clubs. It would be a good thing if that statement were true—if there were no barrooms in those hotels many mothers and daughters would carry away pleasanter remembrances of their visits to Washington—but it isn't, and nobody knows it any better than the liquor dealers, for many of them have taken advantage of the clause in the new license law which compels the authorities to issue a barroom license to the proprietor of every established hotel having 20 or more rooms who may apply therefor by calling their places hotels, making the required number of rooms by means of partitions set up in ordinary sized rooms. It remains to be seen whether Congress will pass this bill and confirm the bold claim of the liquor dealers, that they can secure any legislation they desire, or will in the interest of good order and morality defeat it.

The House of Representatives yesterday passed the bill for the repeal of the federal election laws; and today began the consideration of the McCreary bill to amend the Geary Chinese exclusion law, which will almost certainly be passed in a very few days, possibly this week. It is understood that the Chinese government requested an extension of the time in which Chinamen residing in the United States might register under the Geary law and promised that they would register if the time was extended, as proposed by the McCreary bill.

From Washington to India is a longer bridal tour than is usually taken, but a couple married last night—Rev. T. S. Wynkoop and Miss Mary Marion Dodge—will sail on Saturday from New York for Liverpool en route for India, where Mr. Wynkoop and his bride will engage in missionary work. Hundreds of their Washington friends wish them Godspeed.

At a very interesting meeting of the Sunday School Union held Monday evening the seven Washington delegates who attended the recent Sunday School convention at St. Louis made reports in the shape of short talks. It was a novel way of rendering these reports and was enjoyed very much, much more than reports made in the usual way would have been.

One would not suppose that it be necessary to get a decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in order to convince anyone that lager beer was an intoxicating liquor, but inasmuch as Mr. Garland, ex Attorney General of the U. S., in asking the supreme Court to advance certain cases upon the docket stated that these cases involved the question whether or not lager beer is an intoxicating liquor within the meaning of the U. S. statutes, it seems that it is.

The Supreme Court began its fall term with one empty chair, the nomination of Mr. Hornblower, of New York, to succeed the late Justice Blachford not having been confirmed.

Never before have the colored ministers and churches taken such an active interest in aiding to reduce the number of liquor saloons in Washington as they are doing at this time. A special sermon was preached by one of their ministers on the subject last Sunday in which he correctly told his hearers that the liquor dealer, whose character he declared was no better than the thieves who robbed the travelers between Jerusalem and Jericho, was the worst foe the colored man had.

International Lesson for October 29, 1893
—Abstinence for the Sake of Others.

[Specially Arranged from Peloubet's Notes.]
A TEMPERANCE LESSON.

GOLDEN TEXT.—We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves.—Rom. 15:1.

THE CHURCH IN CORINTH was founded in A. D. 52, about five years before this epistle was written. It was on Paul's second missionary journey, after he had entered Europe, and gone down through Philippi, Thessalonica and Berea to Corinth. He remained in the city a year and a half.

REFERENCE.—For an account of Corinth and the church there, see third quarter, lesson IV.

PLACE.—The epistle was written from Ephesus (I Cor. 13:8).

TIME.—Early in A. D. 57. Toward the close of Paul's three years' stay in Ephesus. Paul intended to leave Ephesus about Pentecost that year, May 28 (I Cor. 16:8), so that the epistle was written earlier than that date. Lewin thinks, from the allusion in I Cor. 5:7, that it was written during the passover, which that year occurred April 7.

AUTHOR.—Paul, aged fifty-five, on his third missionary journey.

PLACE IN BIBLE HISTORY.—The story of the foundation of the church in Corinth is related in Acts 18:1-18. The story of his work in Ephesus, where he was when he wrote this letter, is told in Acts 19:1 to 20:1.

THE EPISTLE TO THE CORINTHIANS seems to have been written in answer to a letter received from them (7:1), and the report of visitors (5:1). The church at Corinth was a little band in a city of four hundred thousand, a gem in a flowing sewer of iniquity. The early training, the former habits, the surrounding influences of a city which even "in the Gentile world was famous—infamous—for dishonesty, debauchery and drunkenness," made it difficult to live the true Christian life. Says Farrar: "It is not in a day that the habits of a life can be thrown aside. Even the most sincere of the converts had a terrible battle to fight against two temptations—the temptation to dishonesty in their means of obtaining their daily livelihood, and the temptation to sensuality which was entangled with the very fibers of their individual and social life." "We often hear the early church spoken of as if we had nothing to do but to sit at her feet and learn, and weep because we had fallen so far short of her example. That is the conventional fiction: very different is the hard reality."

"Three main lessons dominate the epistle, (1) practical unity amid divergent opinions; (2) little details decided by great principles, and (3) life in the world, but not of it" (Farrar); with the two magnificent passages on Charity and on the Resurrection.

LESSON NOTES.

A Great Practical Difficulty.—Things offered unto idols were those portions of the animals offered in sacrifice which were not laid on the altar, and which belonged partly to the priests, partly to those who had offered them. These remnants were sometimes eaten at feasts holden in the temples (see ver. 10), or in private houses (chap. 10:27f.), sometimes sold in the markets by the priests, or by the poor, or by the niggardly.—Alford. Thus a Christian might unconsciously eat of such meat, either at the house of a friend (see chap. 10:27) or by purchasing it himself in the public shambles.—Elliott. Or, if he attended any of the social feasts, or wedding feasts of his heathen neighbors, or their public gatherings, he would almost of necessity partake of meats offered to idols, for only such were used. For the whole social life of the ancient world was closely interwoven with its religious worship. Sacrifices are enumerated by Aristotle and Thucydides amongst the chief means of social enjoyment. The feasts which take place amongst the lower orders in Spain, on the carcasses of the bulls killed in the great national bull-fights (Fiesta dos Toros), afford a good illustration of the practice.—Stanley.

The question, therefore, was, whether it was right for the disciples of Christ to partake of food so connected with idolatry. It is easy to see that under these circumstances, as Stanley says, this question "occasioned the greatest practical difficulty in the apostolical age," as the question of caste does in India.

1. Arguments why they might partake. (1) Because there was no essential wrong in it. The meat was not changed or harmed by being offered to idols. (2) Because the prohibition interfered with true Christian liberty. (3) Because the prohibition would cause a great deal of difficulty in obtaining meats for food. (4) Because any unnecessary burdens on disciples hindered others from becoming Christians. (5) Because it compelled the disciples to keep away from all social and civil assemblies, and prevented them from influencing their heathen neighbors toward the gospel. (6) Because such emphasis on matters not wrong in themselves would call attention away from real sins and crimes. (7) The decree of the Jerusalem council (Acts 15:29) was in this regard a matter of compromise and not based on any permanent moral grounds as if it were wrong in itself. Hence it was only temporary and local in its application.

Arguments why they should not partake—(1) Such meats were forbidden by the decree of the council at Jerusalem seven years before (Acts 15:29). (2) Because the act was peculiarly offensive to their Jewish brethren. (3) To use the flesh which had once been offered to a heathen divinity, "even in ordinary circumstances, would be an encouragement of the practice of sacrifice, much more to partake of the banquets which took place in the precincts of the temple itself, and on the scene of those licentious orgies with which the heathen worship was so often accompanied."—Dean Stanley. (4) There was especial danger that the disciples themselves would be led not only into the ceremonial, but the moral pollutions connected with idolatry. (5) There was danger of leading into temptation those who were not strong in the faith, and of inducing them to act contrary to their consciences.

PRACTICAL SUGGESTIONS.

Jesus, in Matt. 18:6, "shows how serious a matter he considers it to lead even the weakest Christian into sin."

"No rule of conduct founded on expediency can be enforced by church discipline." "Whenever a thing is right or wrong according to circumstances, every man must have the right to judge of those circumstances."—Professor Hodge.

We should have regard even to the feelings of others.

We should be especially charitable to the weak; not mock, nor ridicule, nor neglect.

TEMPERANCE.

WHAT THE BOBOLINKS SAID.

One afternoon young Philip Brown, Was reeling homeward from the town; His brain confounded by the flowing bowl, That fell destroyer of body and soul. The path where he was wont to go Lay where the rush and iris grow.

The merry brook went babbling by, The painted moth and dragon fly Poised lightly o'er its dimpling face, Or darted on with agile grace. A blackbird clattered in the sun, The bobolinks rose one by one From out the swaying summer grass, And seemed to mock him as he passed. "Job link! bobolink! Why, we should think A man would be ashamed to drink! Birds wouldn't do it! Chink-a-chee, chee; Not we! Not we! we! we! we! we!"

Poor Phil, ashamed, hung down his head; But soon forgot what the bird had said, And began to dream in a maudlin way Of all the money he meant to pay From his empty pockets, some fine day. He thought he'd invest in a flouring mill, And buy that handsome house on the bill, While his cellars would overflow—"Cheer chink!"

Up rose another gay bobolink—"You're fooled! You're fooled! You stupid, you! This 'taint no what liquor brings one to! 't will make you poor as poverty! You'll see! You'll see! See! see! see! see!"

Then Philip muttered, "A pretty pass! When the birds nag a fellow for taking a glass!"

But the thought soon passed from his misty brain,

And he built another "castle in Spain." He giggled and chuckled on thoughts intent Of the day when he should be president. He'd rule the roost with a rigid hand, He'd send his minions all over the land, He'd banish the opium-smoking Chinee, But tobacco and whiskey should both be free, And that jolly old rum-seller over the way Shouldn't have a penny of license to pay. But a bobolink swayed on a willow limb, And pertly and saucily answered him. "Bobolink! Bobolink! You seem to think A fool grows wise and great through drink! 't will bring you disgrace, you'll see! Twit! Twit! Trust me! Me! me! me! me!"

Then Philip bewildered and stammering said "T'-that bird must have a remarkable bead!" But the spasm of sense was quickly gone And the maudlin dreamer went maundering on, "As soon as Queen Victoria's dead My little Molly'll rule in her stead: And as for Willie, don't you be fooled, He's one of the heirs of the late Jay Gould. Thee'll see that their pa has money to spend! And I'll buy their mother such gowns—no end!" But a bobolink sprang from its resting-place, Flaunting reproof in his very face. "Bobolink! Bobolink! Chee-a-chee chink! The wives and children of them that drink Down to the lowest level sink. Would you have them looked up to, listen to me, Let drink now be! be! be! be! be!"

Then Philip muttered, "Why, what's to pay? The birds have turned temperance cranks to-day,

And the worst of it is I'm not so tight But I know very well they are in the right. Then tell me now, if it's not too late, What must I do to be wealthy and great?" Then every bird from its rounded throat, Poured forth a rollicking, joyous note: "Bobolink! Bobolink! Chee-a-chee chink! Oh, sign the pledge to leave strong drink! Sign it! Sign it! As quick as a wink! Do it! Do it! Quick as can be! And keep it! Teetotal! lee! lee!"

—Belle L. Barnes, in Union Signal.

TEMPTATIONS OF FARM LIFE.

How the Appetite for Alcohol is First Acquired.

There is a wide-spread fallacy among the residents of rural districts that their children are absolutely safe from the temptations of the drinking saloon, and hence, it is not necessary to instruct them thoroughly against the evils of intemperance.

That God's beautiful country is not frequently marred by the foul blot of saloons along its wide, smooth roads and beautiful meadows is a cause for profound thankfulness; nevertheless, farm life has its temptations which can not be ignored.

In the autumn, when the golden and russet fruit is being garnered into granaries and cellars, when farm neighbors work more or less together, gathering in groups now here and now there, there is always the cider mill with its deceptive allurements and promises of gain.

The young man of the family is sent to the mill with a load of apples and he meets other young men on the same errand. They stop for awhile, perhaps to await an opportunity to unload, perhaps to gossip over the crops and a new horse that one of them has purchased. Cider is all about them in vats, tubs, kegs and barrels in all the different stages of fermentation. How easy to take a drink every now and then as they talk.

Now it happens that cider ferments at a much lower temperature than almost any other sweet liquid. The cider-mill is always a fairly warm place and often the liquid can be seen fermenting in the tub into which the juice pours from the mill. The tiny white bubbles which show that alcohol is forming gather in groups and rows about the sides of the tub and can be seen by any one who pauses to examine. This same sweet cider, still with the little bubbles in it, is brought to the cornfield where the haskers are busy and often put in the cellar to be used at any time during the autumn work.

Although the percentage of alcohol is very small in this new cider, varying greatly according to the manner in which it is made and the length of time it stands, yet there is always a sufficient quantity to create an appetite for itself if it is drunk persistently. As the winter comes on the cider grows harder, that is, more alcohol is formed in it, yet still it is used as a beverage by many families.

The craving for alcoholic stimulants is thus formed unconsciously, while the boy is still on the farm, to be developed later when he comes in contact with stronger drinks or perhaps to be fostered by home-made cider and beer until it has mastered him.

Another dangerous temptation in farm life is the sheep-shearing. It is then that the neighbors and friends are gathered together in one place. It is warm weather, the work is arduous, the workers must have something to drink and in too many places beer is furnished by the farmer whose sheep are being sheared. Often young men who have never used this beverage, drink it for the first time at a sheep-shearing.

Threshing day and trips to the market, Fourth of July and the county fair have also their temptations to the farm boy, for whom the "prince of tempters" has set as sure a watch as for any other class of people. To protect the country home, then, from this enemy requires as persistent vigilance as to protect the city home, and wives, sisters and mothers need to be awake to this fact.

What can you do? Why, watch the enemy's every move and dispute every inch of ground with him. Does he tempt the youth with cider? Give them scientific instruction in the schools, where they will be taught the exact composition of cider, what constitutes fermentation and how the alcohol is formed by it. Show them how to prove the existence of the alcohol in the cider by actually distilling the alcohol from it. Then teach them how even a small amount of alcohol, when drunk in cider or other liquid, will create an appetite for itself, and you will then have the child fortified against the temptation of cider drinking.

At sheep-shearing time seek to persuade farmers not to provide beer for the men, but instead offer to furnish them with some cool, refreshing, home-made drink that shall take the place of beer. Here is still a field for woman's invention. To make up home drinks, which shall be cool, thirst-quenching and palatable, without being in any way intoxicating.

But sometimes the farm boy wearies of the dull routine and isolation of farm life and comes to the city to seek his fortune. Too often his love of adventure, his desire to see the sights, leads him among evil associates, and ignorant of the power of the insidious enemy he encounters, before he is aware of it he is in the demon's clutches. Mr. Paxton, now deceased, the former active and energetic secretary of the Citizens' League, in his annual reports used to tell us of hundreds and thousands of farm boys, from the contiguous states of Indiana, Iowa and Wisconsin, whom he found in the saloons of Chicago, some but just starting on the downward course and others far gone in sin and vice. Many of these were minors and were rescued by Mr. Paxton and returned to their homes, but alas, many others went on to lives of crime.

Anything that can be done to make farm life attractive, anything that can be invented to vary its monotony and make the boys contented to stay on the farm, will help to prevent this deplorable state of affairs. To be loved, to be thought of consequence, is always helpful to young people—it will hold them and keep them together. Many a young man has been saved from entering upon an evil course by being made much of at home.—Union Signal.

DRUNKENNESS AND INEBRIETY.

The Difference Between Inherited and Acquired Thirst for Drink.

Dr. James Stewart, an English surgeon, in a recent lecture makes a distinction not commonly made, between drunkenness and inebriety. The drunkard, he maintains, is a person who drinks whenever he finds an opportunity; the inebriate is a person who, in most cases, is born with an unsound brain and might even be a man who never tasted alcoholic drink in his life: the one vicious, the other diseased. The following is a summary of Dr. Stewart's conclusions:

1. Drunkenness is a vice, inebriety a disease; the two terms must not be confounded.
 2. The disease of inebriety once established may be transmitted to the patient's offspring either in the form of the alcoholic diathesis, epilepsy, chorea, insanity, or even tendency to crime.
 3. The child of an inebriate born after the functional or structural lesion has been established is sure to inherit some nervous diathesis.
 4. The only security against this diathesis developing as inebriety is lifelong total abstinence on the part of the child.
 5. Even the adoption of this precaution will not absolutely make certain that there will be no transmission of the cachexia by the child to his or her offspring.
 6. To prevent the development of the alcoholic neurosis in other directions—such as epilepsy—sudden excitement of the emotions and sensibilities, such as might be produced by corporal punishment by strangers, should in all cases be guarded against.
 7. In the prophylaxis of inebriety the principle to be acted on with regard to children's training is, that if we accentuate the good we attenuate the evil.
 8. The marriage of the child or even grandchild of an inebriate to a first cousin should be absolutely interdicted.

CHOICE EXTRACTS.

When a man is praying for a corn crop God expects him to do something toward it with a hoe.

When you pray for the Lord to bless other people, don't insist that He shall do it in your way.

The devil is not anxious about the souls of people who expect to go to Heaven on their own merits.

Find a man that the devil is fighting with both hands and you will find one who is praising God.

If you hate your next door neighbor it is all the evidence they need in Heaven that you do not love the Lord.

The man who is truly trusting in God never has to look into his flour barrel to see whether he ought to shout.

There is something wrong with our faith if we stop rejoicing in the Lord whenever our sky begins to cloud up.

FIELD NEWS.

DEAR BRO. CLEMENTS:—During the week following the 4th Sunday in Sept. we held our revival meeting at Martha's Chapel. We had large attendance at night but during the day our congregations were not so large. While there were not so many conversions as at some other places yet the Holy Spirit was seen in the meeting at every service.

Christian Baptist, Methodist, and Presbyterians came together and knew no names of distinction but worked together for one common cause and we had a revival. Bros. J. W. Fuquay and A. P. Barbee rendered good and acceptable work in the meeting. May the Lord bless these brethren wherever they may go. Martha's Chapel has given me a unanimous call to serve the church for next conference year. Saturday in this month we had preaching and held our last quarterly conference for the year at Union, N. C. In the conference we elected Bro. W. J. Graham Superintendent of the Sabbath school for the ensuing year. Bro. Graham is probably the youngest Sunday school superintendent that Union has ever had but we are quite sure that he will be successful in this line of work if the brethren both old and young will co-operate with him. Bro. Geo. Graham another young man, who was converted and joined the church this summer was elected to an important office in the Sabbath school is ready to take up the work at once. We need more of our young people in the work. When we can get the young men and women of the church to take more interest in the work then we are more hopeful for every true Christian among the older number will continue to encourage even though the young do lead. The church extended a unanimous call for the ensuing year. I have found the church work at Union very pleasant during the past year. The church is in one of the most prosperous communities in Alamance county. Its members have shown high appreciation to their pastor during the past year with valuable gifts, and they keep coming in. I received two nice presents besides some money presented on my last trip. On Sunday morning we administered the ordinance of baptism by immersion to three candidates, attended Sabbath school, preached, administered the communion of the Lord's Supper to a very large number of communicants, opened the doors of the church and received one member and administered the ordinance of baptism to him by effusion. We think our work here is making some advancement. The people are in earnest about the work and we trust that much good shall be done during the coming year. I suppose the most of the brethren in the ministry and the churches are ready for the adoption of the Pastorate System in our conference as no one has much to say against it. It would undoubtedly be the best thing for the cause, if not, why don't the brethren tell us why not? The question will soon be placed before the people for decision.

Union, Va.

BRO. CLEMENTS:—The second Sunday in Sept. This writer preached the funeral sermon in memory of "Uncle Percy" and "Aunt Eleama" Tuck. They were both a little over 80 years old. They had been members of Union, Va., C. C. for about 60 years. They were the last charter members of this church living. They lived a long time and did much good for the cause of Christ. Their home was the preachers home. I was with both of them in their last days and they were fully resigned to the will of God. While I now write I am reminded of the loss of this church by death within a little over a year: Bro. W. M. Elliott, one of the best members in the church, "Aunt Leah" Murphy, another very old member. She left $30 to Union church in her will. This is a good example. All should will the Lord at least some of their (His) property; it will bear interest all eternity. Sister Ida Allen died very suddenly. She was a good Christian. Sister Alice Wall died a very triumphant death. Old grandmother Hannab Sanford died in her 90th year. She was a good old Soldier. She was my wife's grandmother. Bro. Ned Tuck, died some time ago, and "Aunt" E. N. Wall died a few days since. She was resigned to the will of God. There are others I do not call to memory just now. Thus Union has sustained serious losses by these deaths. We will not hold a protracted meeting there this year. Last Saturday was our last quarterly conference there for this year. Bro. J. H. Overby and W. D. Gregory were elected delegates to conference, and their present pastor was unanimously called to serve them another year. I have been their pastor for the last 10 years. They are good people. May the Lord continue to bless them.

Berkley.

I have so little time at my command, that is not often that I can write a few lines to the Sir.

But yet it is not for want of a desire to let the Eastern Virginia conference know how things are moving along in Berkley.

We are rapidly nearing the completion of our church, and hope soon to dedicate it to God's honor and glory.

Soon Bro. M. W. Butler will be here to herald forth the message of the Cross, and there is no doubt, if the church will do its part, he will build up a strong church.

During the month of August the brethren here kindly gave me a month's vacation part of this time I spent in Waverly, Spring Hill and Burton's grove. My stay in Spring Hill will not be readily forgotten.

Rev Dr. Barrett was present during the protracted meetings being held at that time and I must confess that for earnestness, persuasion and power he could not be excelled.

I shall not forget the sight I saw there during these meetings. Brethren who had been at variance for a long time past were seen coming forward and shaking hands. Burying the hatchet I believe forever; and in Christian love praying for a baptism of the Holy Spirit.

Their prayers were answered and I believe that through Bro. Barrett's instrumentality Spring Hill today is in a good working condition.

As I think of this church, I come to the conclusion that if all our churches had preaching of this character, they would be better able to cope against evil.

I see political differences, malice and illfeeling are working disastrous consequences around in the churches and unless the tide is stemmed God alone knows where it will end.

There is a great need for a man like Bro. Barrett to go from church to church; from city to town and village building up weak churches confirming others in "the faith delivered to the saints, breaking down the idols of men, and persuading others to love one another as Christ loved us.

I am persuaded that no one can do this better than Dr. Barrett.

Why not appoint him as general Evangelist. I am confident there is a need for such a one as he.

We have formed a missionary Society, but unless we have one to advocate its claims and teach our brethren their duty in this direction, the years will come and go, and leave us where we are today.

I believe if Dr. Barrett could be persuaded to devote himself to such work as that I have mentioned it will be the beginning of great and grand things for our churches.

Others may not see the matter as I see it but I think the fact remains the same, that there is an urgent need for the conference to appoint one to go around on the mission I have referred to. The extra funds would be raised and the good accomplished would compensate for the toil and money expended.

Conference will soon be here and I feel inclined to make an effort in this direction.

For the Sun.

Perhaps a word from me would not be amiss. I expect I have been charged with a lack of interest in the "SUN" and the enterprises of our church because I have written so seldom for our paper. I have but one excuse to give and that is this: I have had more on my hands than I could manage without writing a single article for the SUN. I think this has been the most successful year of my life as a minister, with one exception and that is finances—they have been hard to control. I have held a series of meetings with the churches at New Lebanon and Union, in Surry county, Va., and Johnson's Grove, in Southampton county, Va.

At New Lebanon we had a grand meeting. The church was much revived and twenty-four professed faith in Christ, and twenty joined the church. Many of them were grown people and capable of being of great help to the church. I had no ministerial aid, but the brethren and sisters worked faithfully. This church is in fine condition and bids fair to stand among the first in our conference in the near future. Our Lapsitinal service was held on the 9th at Scotland Wharf on the beautiful James.

At Union, we had another deeply interesting meeting. The church was much revived. About thirty came out on the Lord's side, and sixteen united with the church. Here again, I had no ministerial aid, but the brethren and sisters worked earnestly and the Lord poured out his blessings upon us.

In neither of these meetings was there a single anecdote or death bed scene related. "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto the salvation of every one that believeth."

The baptismal service for Union was held on the 8th at Spratley's mill pond. On the 2nd Sunday in this month in the place of the regular services at Union, I preached a sermon in memory of sister Elizabeth Spratley, who died Oct. 4th, 1893. She was for several years a faithful and consistent member of the above named church. She leaves many relations and friends behind. May they all be ready to meet her when the call is made. She died at the age of forty-one. Our church has gained considerable strength from our meeting.

At Johnson's Grove we had the most successful meeting that has been held with that church for years.

My brother, Rev. J. Pressley Barrett, was with me and did the preaching. His sermons were full of gospel truth and were delivered with great power. Twenty-one professed faith in Christ, and ten united with the church. The church here is in very good condition, and we are confidently looking for brighter days. We expect to hold a called conference with this church on Saturday afternoon before the 5th Sunday. On Sunday following we expect to hold our baptismal service at Johnson's mill.

Carrsville.

DEAR SUN:—I left my home near Carrsville, on Friday morning to keep the usual appointment at Union and stopped with Bro. William Scott, Friday night. Saturday being the last conference of the year, we had a better attendance than usual, and attended to all the business of the year, that had not been attended to, and elected officers. I was elected pastor for next year, and trust God will bless our efforts to extend his cause at Union.

Saturday night was spent with Bro M. L. Beal and his interesting family. On Sunday we had the pleasure of having with us Dear Old Bro R. H. Holland, who preached us a good sermon from Hebrews 10:23. Bro. Holland gave a very nice talk and good advice to the young converts. After the sermon he administered the sacrament.

In the evening we met on the banks of the river and Bro. Holland baptized nine candidates, by immersion. We had a protracted baptizing. Three of the candidates were a little late and we had to go back and baptize them. We tried to persuade Bro. Holland to stay with us until Monday, but he could not, so returned home we trust safe. Sunday night we stayed with Bro. Henry Daughtrey and family. Sister Daughtrey always makes us feel at home, so of course we enjoy our visit there. Notwithstanding there is a revival in progress at the Baptist Church, there was a good congregation at Franklin Sunday night.

People in this section are getting very busy now, digging ground peas, crops generally fair.

Yours fraternally.

For The Christian Sun.

Yesterday Oct. 8, at Mr. G. B. Warren's, McCray, N. C., I united, Mr. J. A. Graham and Miss Mattie Nelson, in marriage. They are both popular, and their many friends bespeak for them much success. May their pathway be happy and prosperous.

From McCray, I went to Long's Chapel to fill my regular appointment. Found a nice congregation, waiting for service. This is a good congregation. I was unable to be with them on the fourth Sabbath in September on account of meeting at New Providence, Graham, but Bro. John Fonville filled my appointment. He reports a pleasant service. Our protracted service will commence at this church on the first Sunday in November. We are expecting Bro. J. W. Wellons, of Durham to aid us.

From Long's Chapel, I went to Haw River, and preached the funeral of Sister Etta F. Holt wife of G. A. Holt. Sister Holt was a member of New Providence church. She loved her church and the Sabbath school work. The congregation was large and very attentive. It was a busy day, and in that day's work, I see how near tears and laughter are together, thus it is through life, joy and sorrow, tears and laughter, sunshine and darkness. "While new chapters of experience are opening, some of great tenderness are closing." How beautifully Dr. Summerbell of Lewiston, Me, expresses this thought in the prayer at the marriage altar.

Conference is near at hand. Would it not be well for the important committees to go to the place of meeting one day ahead of the time to meet. Say, to illustrate, let the Educational Committee go one day ahead, and request all persons desiring to come before them to present themselves on the day before conference meets. By so doing, the committees would have all reports ready, or about so by the opening of conference. The work would not be delayed. Those on the committees could be in the Conference room. The work could be dispatched in better time, spirit, and the result would be for better, I think. As it is the reports come in towards the close, when ministers and delegates are getting restless, and impatient to be back home at their work. They are often passed over too hurriedly and without proper consideration. Delegates and ministers begin to leave, and the last of the conference is a hurry and push to get through. I think we should have all reports possible ready at the opening of the conference.

I think we ought to have lectures, Bible talks each night during the conference. Exchange views, and by so doing help one another. I think the last of the conference might very profitably be spent in consultation, prayer and song. How think you.

To the Readers of the Sun.

I have not written much concerning my work because for some time there has been nothing encouraging to communicate. Still I have not been idle: My visit to the Sunday School Convention of Va. resulted in some good by way of obtaining subscriptions. It is always pleasant to meet with our brethren of Eastern Va. My trip to the Valley Va. Con. was, in many respects, very pleasant. The usual kind hospitality of that people and courtesy of their popular pastor were graciously bestowed upon me, for which I am grateful, their session was of interest; their business transacted in harmony. One of the most interesting features was the indorsing of a plan by that body for the organizing of a missionary society in each individual church, from which I expect much good to result. Rev. E. T. Iseley who is doing a good work there was unanimously called to serve them again. I have also had the pleasure of visiting the Ga. & Ala. Conference. It was a pleasure for me to meet this people for the first time, and share their kind hospitality, I received much attention from both ministers and laymen, for which I wish to return thanks. It was a pleasure to meet with Rev. J. D. Elder at New Hope the mother church of the conference, organized, I believed by his Father, Rev. Mr. Elder, who for a long time stood almost alone upon our principles in the face of all opposition until he gathered around him a small conference. But at the close of the war the cause had languished, but Rev. J. D. Elder in all of his Christian manhood came to the front, and proved himself to be a worthy sire, and through his devotion and indomitable energy the conference has grown until it numbers 20 churches.

While Rev. J. D. Elder has been the acknowledged father of that part of the conference in Ala. Dr. Jubilee Smith is the father of the churches in Ga. It was my pleasure to meet this aged divine, and listen to his wise instruction. He possesses rare abilities, and displays much Christian manhood. The session of this conference was interesting and profitable. The various enterprises of the church were discussed by which all present were edified and encouraged. Rev. J. D. Elder was unanimously elected to serve the conference as missionary, than whom they could get no one more faithful. The establishment of their school and the success they are meeting with under the leadership of their efficient and popular leader. Prof. Fuquay of N. C., is one of the most important features connected with their work. It

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Rev. W. T. Herndon passed through Raleigh last Monday on his way to Eastern Virginia.

Those coming on the cars to the district meeting at Martha's Chapel, N. C., will be met at Morrisville, N. C., provided they write W. A. Ellington at Elm Grove, N. C. telling him when to meet them.

Sister A. L. Hill left Raleigh last Monday for Norfolk, Va., her home. The Raleigh people were delighted with her visit to the "City of Oaks," and hope she will come again. Sister Hill is one of the precious women of earth.

Many thanks to Bro. J. W. McGee of Franklin, Va., for words of cheer about the SUN. If every member of the Christian Church, loved the SUN like he does, we would have an easy time in this office.

The meeting at Morrisville, N. C., closed last Monday night, after a continuation of eight days. It was a good meeting. Brethren J. W. Weltons and J. A. Jones of the Christian Church and D. D. Edwards of the Baptist Church did the preaching, and they did it well. No denominational lines were visible. Seven united with the Christian Church, others will unite with the Baptist Church.

Revival services begin next Sunday with the Raleigh Christian Church. Evangelist Weston R. Gales will do the preaching. The prayers of the whole Church are earnestly requested for the success of the meeting.

Messrs. W. A. Wilde & Co., Boston, have just issued "Peloubet's Select Notes" for 1894. It is Dr. Peloubet's 20th annual commentary on the International Sunday-school Lessons, and, like its predecessors, presents the scripture truths in an attractive, comprehensive, and convincing manner, from both spiritual and practical stand points.

Even an English choir can strike, if not for higher wages, at least, to show its dissent with changes in the parish. The London Presbyterian tells of a church choir that entered its protest in this way, and thinks that "a greater proof of the progress of democracy is hardly conceivable." The occasion of the dissatisfaction was a bishop's visit to a church. At such a time every thing is expected to be in the finest working order, and everybody to be in a good spirit, so as to receive the episcopal benediction. But this choir was in the indignation mood, and was determined to air its grievance before the high functionary, and in the most emphatic way known to its members. When the Bishop of Asaph mounted the pulpit, lol the choristers at Colwyn were conspicuous by their absence. Investigation showed that this unusual procedure was intended to express the disapproval of the singers of the policy of the bishop "in compelling the Rev. Venables Williams to subdivide his parish, a matter which caused such a fuss in the House of Commons and the Privy Council." The choristers, however, were rather premature in disclosing their intentions, which enabled substitutes to be duly secured, thereby preventing any practical inconvenience from the musical strike. They may have had some justification for being incensed at the change inaugurated, but they took a poor way of showing it. Strikes are generally ill advised affairs and rarely justifiable, but they are out of place in God's house. They are more common on the part of the dissatisfied in our churches than is agreeable, but they show an un-Christian spirit, and reflect no credit on the parties. Pastors may suffer in this way from striking members who refuse to pay their pew rents, who desert their posts of duty in Christian work in the session, or on the Trustee Board, or in the work of the Sabbath-school, but in the end it turns out anything but a paying operation to the participants.

The above taken from the Presbyterian Observer, presents a new thought in connection with strikes. The devil gets his agents every where.

A Lost Soul.

The word lost always carries with it a vein of sadness, and when used to qualify the word soul, it is doubly intensified. And yet souls are being lost every moment without arousing the world from its state of indifference.

All men who have not gone so far in the ways of sin as to lose self respect, are concerned about the body. Effort after effort is put forth to add to its well being in both health and appearance. And when the body of even a small child is lost all is excitement until it is found. Strange that so much is done for the part that must soon lie cold in the ground, and nothing for the soul whose existence is equal to eternity.

Friend, you have a soul. Is it lost in sin or is it living in the Sun light of God's peace? If it is lost in sin now, and remains there till death, it must then be lost in the flames of God's wrath. Can you afford that, dear friends? If not give your heart to God immediately.

Suffolk Letter.

Charles C. Everett, a member at Holy Neck, and a young man in his twenty-first year, died, at his mother's residence, of consumption on Sunday, October 8th, and was buried on Monday. There was a large attendance at the funeral service. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. N. G. Newman, it was my privilege to be with the family and friends to present the consolation of the gospel. He was willing to depart and be with Christ.

"The Columbian Carnival," conducted by the ladies of the Christian church, has been doing well the past week except Friday night when it was closed by the storm. This is Nausemond Fair week and no doubt it will be a sort of harvest for the "Carnival." A goodly number of friends from Norfolk and Berea have attended and have not only contributed their helpful presence but, as they always do, liberally, of their cash. For this Suffolk is thankful.

Another storm has swept the Atlantic seaboard doing much damage to the cotton crop, to the forest, and some damage to cities and ships. The ravages of the storm fiend are so frequent and destructive as to alarm our society. One large unfinished framed store was destroyed in Suffolk. The lesson should be recognized that life and property have protection only in God. All ought to secure His favor so that safety may not hinge on an extension of life in the flesh, but on a permanent home in heaven. God rules the storm. "He bringeth the wind out of his treasures." "He maketh the clouds his chariots; and walketh upon the wings of the wind." We are safe in the storm if we commit our way to Him.

Only two weeks till Eastern Va. Conference will meet. Plenty of work for pastors between now and that time. Closing up the work of the year is very important. Let us present a balance sheet that will show a good record for the year. The tide of time bears us on and what we do must be done quickly. Souls are to save, weak ones to strengthen, collections for conference to be raised, delegates to elect, reports to be made, plans for next year to mature and scores of things to claim the pastors attention. The pastor is one man who is never out of work.

Will This Do?

The question of how to raise money for church purposes is one hard to be understood, and even harder to be met by some people, but it seems to me that the Bible is especially plain on this point. It says give as God has prospered you. That is the Bible way of raising money for sacred purposes. But suppose our prosperity does not afford enough to meet the demands, then what? Why, let the demands go unmet. God nowhere requires his people to give to Him more than He has given them, and so if He should not give enough to meet your ideas of the matter, you will do well to stop and consider, lest for the sake of worldly applause you go further than God wants you to go.

When a people have given according to their ability, God does not require any more. Then all this effort to supplement our ability in order to provide for the expenses of His cause shows one or two things: Either we have not rightly estimated our ability, or we have over estimated the demands. Say all you will, but the apparent necessity for more money than the church can raise is due to one or both of these reasons. Often, I dare say, it is both, for in spite of grace, most of us have a mighty weakness for under estimating our ability and over estimating the demands, and hence comes the urgent necessity for the church suspending its holy work of saving men through Christ and going into the unholy work of seeking gain through worldly methods, just as a merchant would do, only it aggravates the matter by posing as "for a good cause," and therefore it ought to be helped by the saint and sinner, and forthwith the church goes into the amusement business in order to get money from the ungodly to carry on its holy work—from anybody just so it is money. This may be according to modern ideas of church work, but never according to the ideas of God as given to us through Patriarchs, Prophets or Apostles.

In Gen. 14:22-23, we have an illustration which shows, as I see it, that the church ought not to play the truckling to the world. The King of Sodom offered Abram the spoils which were justly due him according to the rules of war, but not according to the will of God, and so when the king offered them, Abram said: "I have lift up mine hand unto the Lord, the most high God, the possessor of heaven and earth, that I will not take from a thread even to a shoe latchet, and that I will not take anything that is thine, lest thou shouldst say, I have made Abram rich."

In this incident I take it that the King of Sodom represents the world, and Abram the people of God. The king of Sodom was disposed to give to Abram, but Abram said, no, and he gave his reasons, which were twofold as follows: 1. He said the Lord was the "possessor of heaven and earth" and therefore He was able to give to Abram all he needed, and so Abram looked to Him for supplies. 2. Abram said he could not accept gifts from this king, lest afterwards the king should say: "I have made Abram rich," and so in the estimation of outsiders, the honor of Abram's riches should be claimed by the world, when in fact it was due to God.

Now it seems to me that these two objections hold good against the church going into the amusement business with the world for gain, lest after the church has made its money largely from the patronage of the world, the world should turn upon the church and declare that God, the "possessor of heaven and earth" had been unable to meet the demands of His church, and then go off boasting that it (the world) had made the church rich. This takes the honor from God and places a stigma upon His church, and then the world-spirit is forward to dictate to God's people, because they have made the church, in part at least, what it is, and forthwith the church must bow to this world-spirit and this and that must be done to please or amuse the world, "because they help us, you know."

In a recent issue of a secular paper I saw the following notices:

No. 1. "Considerable amusement is afforded by the efforts of blind-folded young people to pin a scandal appendage to a tailless donkey, who patiently but generally vainly waits for the proper placing of his disserved anatomical attachment."

Now that was a part of the performance given "for the benefit of the church" of Christ. Sure, is God poor, that He cannot provide for His church? Does He actually have to call, through His people, upon the world to join in an effort to save His bankrupt church, and in order to raise an interest sufficient to bring in money, they resort to the "very tastily" amusement of having young people, young men young ladies—"fumbling" around a donkey's hind parts trying to pin his tail on! Abominable stuff—it has no place in the work of the church of Christ

No. 2. "The Ladies' Aid Society of—church gave a dramatic entertainment at the public school house near the church."

It was spoken of as a "good cause," meaning of course for the church, as it was given by the Ladies Aid Society of that church. Now think of it! The church of Christ going into the matter to the extent of giving a "dramatic entertainment," which of course means it was a "young theater on its first legs" doing the best it could to imitate the big and wicked theaters. God help us! God help us, and that right early!

No. 3. In describing a certain entertainment "for the benefit of the church"—which in meaning is doubtful language—the paper says: "This is one of the most interesting and laughable entertainments ever presented in our town, and everybody should be sure to see it!" See what? Why the church giving itself to the grand work of amusing "the world, the flesh and the devil," all "for the benefit of the church, 'you know.'" Alas, how sad, that God and his people are too poor to take care of the church in its noble work of rescuing the perishing. How can the church rescue the perishing when it needs deliverance for itself? God hasten the day when clad in the beautiful white robes of Christ's righteousness, she shall come forth before the world, leaning as a bride upon the arm of her beloved, and go forth to victory—even to the victory of—not amusement—not pinning donkey tails on, not giving dramatic entertainments, and others the most laughable ever seen in the town,—but to the victory of faith unto salvation for poor sinners.

Think of what abominable—not to say indecent—stuff is being foisted upon the community "For the benefit of the church"! I wish any friend of this unholy work would turn to Matt 21:12-13, and then tell the SUN's readers in a plain, unvarnished way what they would expect if that character should come in at a time when the church was in the money market, giving theatrical entertainments and even playing young men and ladies in that wonderful feat of "fumbling" around the donkey's hind parts, trying to do the peculiar thing of pinning a donkey's tail on?

Perhaps Prof. Moffitt, or some one will ask, what harm in thus raising money for the church? I answer it is a sin when God has laid a special claim upon the "first things" of man, without blemish, to be given as He has prospered us, that we then disobey Him and make Him an offering of tribute laid upon the world, the flesh and the devil. I cannot see how any man having any spirit-life and power could endorse such unholy methods, when God has so plainly marked out the manner of giving for His Cause

We should not place ourselves under obligation to sin, or sinners, when we thereby disobey and dishonor God, which we do when we give in any way other than as he has directed

There is a plant in Eastern jungles which sheds a clear light when all beside it is dark. The mid-night traveler amid Himalayan hills regards the plant as a lamp, lighting his way through the darkness. Such a light to the world are the gifts of God's directions—they shine as free-will offerings, made under self-denial for the salvation of man—to rescue the perishing, but gifts coming from pinning on donkey tails and putting God's youth upon the stage in young theatres, they must be unholy and unacceptable in his sight! God save His church from such an unholy spectacle!

The Division of N. C. & Va. Conference.

For my part I can see no adequate reason advanced for making two conferences out of the one. I hear that such a course would result in disastrous consequences, and, instead of promoting good, would be found to result in weakness and inefficiency. All our work, every enterprise of the church, needs the united and concentrated cooperation of all the churches and preachers. None of these enterprises demand division of territory or of strength, but each calls for the united and harmonious assistance of the whole. It has been urged that it is too expensive for delegates to attend conference. If you divide the present conference you will still have the same churches, and some of them will remain in remote corners. You cannot make compact bodies out of the churches by any division possible. Then as for the item of expense in attending conference that would be divided between the bodies, but would really be the same. There is however, a course that will to some extent relieve the troubles of which complaint is made. It is this: reduce the representation from the churches and cut off some territory contiguous to the Deep River conference and add it to that body. The laymen ought not to complain at this. We could allow them one delegate from each church or two from each pastorate which I think is best. The churches would then pay their expenses, and doubtless, be more careful in their selections. As it is now each church has from 2 to 4 representatives and a pastor has rarely less than 4 and often 10 delegates from his field, whereas two would be enough—enough to take care of him and to outvote him.

Then by giving some territory to the Deep River conference we would increase the strength of that body without materially weakening our own. I favor this course most heartily and believe it will promote the strength and usefulness of our cause and the glory of God.

W. S. LONG.

Union—Division.

I write not to add anything further to what has already been said in favor of the union of the N. C. and Va. and Deep river conference; but merely to ask that more of the brethren of the N. C. and Va. conference express themselves on the measure presented. I have talked with no less than a half dozen of the leading ministers of this conference on the subject, and they all say they heartily favor the measure, they think it is the very thing to be done, etc. But as yet only one of them has given any expression of his views through the SUN. This silence of course, leaves us at the Deep River conference in a very doubtful position. We don't wish to come to you in the attitude of beggars, but in a spirit of brotherly union, which we feel and trust may be of lasting benefit to both conferences—acknowledging ourselves, perhaps, the greatest gainers in many respects. There seems to be little doubt as to attitude of the Deep River conference. The churches have been asked to instruct their delegates as to how they shall vote; and some of them have already unanimously instructed for the measure. Will the brethren of the N. C. & Va. conference kindly give us an expression of their feelings in the matter in order that we may know what action to take when our conference convenes, only a little over three weeks from now?

If it seems that the brethren of the N. C. & Va. conference favor the union, we will appoint a committee to confer with a like committee from this conference, for the purpose of arranging something definite to present to the General Convention for ratification. Let us hear from you, as our time is short.

Elon College, N. C. Oct. 16, 1893

was quite a pleasure to meet with my old friend, Prof. Fuquay and learn of his flattering success in his adopted home. This conference has a bright future before it. I know of no better field for the Christian church than the States of Ala. & Ga. afford.

Now as to my work for Elon College since the financial crisis set in, as you have already inferred from my letter, but little has been accomplished. All sections of the country seem to suffer alike. I have not made this statement because I am discouraged, but that you might see the situation of our beloved college, almost left to stand alone in this dark hour, when all we owe, nearly, are pressing their claims, and almost no income from those who have pledged to stand by her. I wish also to say that observation teaches me that there is too much complaint of hard times. I know that money is scarce, but if we were as zealous to guard and protect the enterprises of the church, in which is centered her success, as we are to guard our own person and business the world would be astonished at the results. Now brethren the divine command is to first seek the kingdom of heaven and his righteousness, but we are too apt to let self and the world come in first.

Elon College has done, and is doing the grandest work at all for the Christian church, and demands support at your hands, even though it be at a sacrifice.

As to its present work I will say it has never been equaled by any preceding term, both pupils and teachers seem to be interested as never before. The faculty is made stronger by the addition this term of Prof. Moffit, Atkinson and Bandy. Special mention should be made of the lectures of Profs. Atkinson and Moffit, which are of the highest type and will do credit to any school. Elon College needs your help and needs it now. Checks are in order by any mail. I expect to attend the various conferences with my books, and complaint of hard times will not secure your coupons, but if you will quit complaining and put forth a proper effort the money to your surprise will be forth coming.

Elon College Notes.

A slight frost and the cutting winds reminds us that the winter is approaching, and warn us to prepare for the same. Likewise the falling leaves tell us that all things mortal must pass away.

Mrs A. L. Hill of Norfolk, Va., who has been with us ever since the first of Sept. left for her home last week. Mrs Hill is greatly pleased with our way of doing things up here, and says that her influence shall ever be for Elon's promotion. Mrs. Hill's health was poor when she came up here, but just before leaving stated that it was better than it had been for several years. We feel proud of this and predict that our town will eventually be a health resort. Mrs Hill made many friends while here and we regret to have her leave.

Mr. Willie May a former student who lives near here, has been ill with typhoid fever, but we are glad to know that he is now improving.

Miss Emma Harward one of our worthy and esteemed Music teachers went on a visit to her home near Chapel Hill last Sat.

The most note worthy and enjoyable event of the week was the oyster supper Sat night given by the Psihelian Society. And we think that this last was the grandest success that it has been our pleasure to attend. At 8:30 P. M the bell rang and the crowd began to assemble in the Hall where it found everything arranged after the most artistic manner. So much skill was manifested in this arrangement that one could but feel perfectly at home from the very beginning. Soon, to the delight of all the announcement was made that the oysters were ready. We immediately repaired to the dining hall where we were nicely waited on by our young ladies who showed great skill both in the art of cooking and the manner of serving them. As an appetizer served round we were called on to give attention to Old Black Joe w. c. was beautifully performed by the Elon Orchestra. We congratulate the Psihelian on its judgment in procuring the services of such skillful players and singers. And if they continue to improve we think that it will be well for us to patronize home industry by having them play for us at commencement.

All who could not indulge in the seaside luxury were served with ice cream and cake. Thus the rounds continued until about 10:30, and it was conducted with a smoothness that you seldom see at such entertainments. Therefore we feel to compliment our young ladies on their skill and discipline in conducting such a supper. The proceeds which amounted to about $25.50 will be used for the benefit of the Psihelian Society. Press on beloved Psihelian for you and yours are the pride of our college, and the hope of our homes.

Dr. Long preached for us yesterday. He discussed ably for thirty minutes on the text "whether we wake or sleep we should live together with him" 1st Thes 5:10.

Rev. W. J. Laine commenced a protracted meeting at Mt. Vernon church yesterday, he reports very promising prospects.

An interesting prayer meeting was conducted here last night by I. W. Johnson, a very promising ministerial student from the East Va. conference.

We hear many speak in complimentary terms of the last issue of the "SUN". We would be pleased if the brethren would enter in more discussions, of important topics, through its columns.

Rev. Annie M. Kirk, at Grace's Chapel

Last Saturday the Rev. Miss Annie M. Kirk, from the Wesleyan Methodist Church of Ohio, an Evangelist, now in N. C., was with us at Grace's Chapel. She preached Saturday and twice on Sunday. Her sermons were good, full of the Holy Ghost. She is one of the great Gospel preachers; being a fine resources, fluent, logical, simple, forcible and practical. The weather was very inclement, the rain fell fast till about 10 o'clock a. m. yet by the time of the first sermon, the house was nearly filled with anxious hearers. One of the most remarkable things associated with her history is, that, some years ago, she was given up by her physician (her brother) to be in the last state of consumption, and a serious heart trouble. She lingered 4 years and went home to die as was thought by her friends, (she had been out preaching for some time,) but she soon asked her brother, a physician to go with her to N. Y to a Faith Healing Meeting, and 3 or 4 Elders poured divine oil on her, and prayed and claimed the promise as given in James, 5th chapter, and she said, she felt the healing power pass through her lungs and heart as quickly as the touch of cold water. She arose and says she has been an able bodied woman ever since, preaching all the time. She has not taken a drop of medicine since, nor has she suffered any pain of any consequence for the last 2 or 4 years. She is a Christian of the strongest faith I ever met. Oh that we had such faith in our churches, that we ministers had such. This just as she stated it.

REACH DOWN THY HANDS.

Reach down Thy Hands, O Lord, and lead me on my way,
In all the paths 'tis mine to walk, throughout life's closing day.
Reach down Thy Hands to me, and take mine own in Thine—
Thy own strong Hands, my own weak hands—
Thine holding mine;
Reach down Thy Hands.

Open my eyes, unstop my ears, and let me see and hear,
That I my onward way may take without a dread or fear;
Make strong, make steady, step by step, my weak and weary feet;
Lift up my fainting heart, the while, to Thy own Mercy Seat
Reach down Thy Hands.

Reach down Thy Hands from Heaven, reach down Thy Hands to earth,
Sustain my struggling soul in all its longings for new birth;

Reach down Thy Hands to me, and take mine own in Thine—
Thy own strong Hands, my own weak hands—
Thine holding mine;
Reach down Thy Hands.

A STRIKING CONTRAST.

The Difference Between a Theoretical and a Practical Christianite.

A survivor of the battle of Gettysburg has lately recalled in one of our leading magazines his experiences in the hospital after the conflict was over. He was so terribly wounded that when he said to the surgeon: "I am not afraid to hear the worst. Is there any hope for me, doctor?" the answer came tenderly, but decidedly: "No, my boy, none whatever."

The man had been shot through the lungs, and there followed in his case one of those struggles for life that show the wonderful vitality of the human body, and surprise both physician and patient. During the first weeks of unexpected convalescence, when his life might have been extinguished by an adverse breath, and was saved only by the devoted care of nurses, there came to this soldier's cot, as to many others, clergymen of different denominations. Each tried to administer comfort in his own way.

Among these good men, two stood out in the wounded man's mind in striking contrast, and at the end of a quarter of a century are thus dispassionately portrayed.

The first was a portly man of perhaps fifty-five years of age. His face was grave in expression, its lines somewhat stiff and hard. In his hands he carried an imposing Bible and a hymn-book. He never brought a delicacy to the hospital, nor offered the sufferers there even a glass of water. Neither his hands nor his feet were used for the physical benefit of these agonized and dying men.

His first question at the patient's bedside was: "Are you prepared to die?"

Then he sat down comfortably and read a chapter from the Bible. After this he selected what seemed to the sufferer who relates the incident the longest hymn he had ever heard, and sang it through without omitting a stanza. He concluded with a long prayer which was general in its pleadings, and had but little in it to help the poor soldier lying there in pain and weakness, possibly a waiting death.

The only thing that prevented the patient from being exasperated beyond endurance was the fact that he knew that, however mistaken the clergyman might be in his methods, he meant well, and was acting out his own ideal of Christian duty.

But, as after each visit the patient had a relapse, the surgeon finally forbade the good man, who relied on prayer without good works, to enter the tent again.

The other clergyman was simple and unassuming in his manners. He did not confuse the sufferer, who was too feeble to talk, with deep religious questions or weary him by his exhortations or long prayers. But he never entered the tent without doing something for the wounded soldier's comfort. Intuitively he knew that his personal sympathy and help would lead the patient sooner or later to listen to the story he longed to tell, of God's sympathy and love.

Sick people have whims, and our captain conceived an unreasonable notion that he could eat nothing but a roasted potato. Now there was not a potato to be had within miles of the hospital camp, and of course, that being so, he wanted one all the more.

One very hot Sunday morning he caught sight of the man of God earlier than usual. The clergyman was hurrying along with eager steps, his face bathed in perspiration and his coat flung over his arm. As he saw the wasted face watching for him he swung a bundle exultingly, and called out, with the enthusiasm of a boy:

"I've got them, captain! I've got them!"

He undid the corners of his handkerchief and drew forth a dozen potatoes; and in a few minutes proceeded to wash some of them and to put them in the ashes to roast. Not all the jewels in the world would have compared in the eyes of that wounded man with the cluster of Irish potatoes brought to him by that perspiring Samaritan.

Now, as the minister was washing the rest of the potatoes outside of the tent, the captain suddenly sent this message:

"It's Sunday morning; won't you come and give us a prayer?"

"I'll gladly come," replied the good man, tenderly.

He had only done unselfish, unpleasant things for the wounded man. He had not forced his prayers upon him when he was in no mood to listen. He knew the time must come when he would be willing to hear his message. And now he knelt down with his sleeves rolled up, his hands grimy with ashes, and his head and throat bare.

The prayer was short and earnest. His whole heart was in it, and it touched the heart of his hearer. When it was ended he went back and finished washing the potatoes he had obtained with so much trouble. But in the words of the captain.

"Every man who heard him felt that he had been with one who walked arm in arm with the master, and that he knew when to minister to the physical needs of men, and when to present to them the great spiritual truths that open the way to God and Heaven."—Youth's Co.

ONLY A HUCKSTER.

The Gentle Influence Wielded by a Market Woman of Philadelphia.

In a corner of one of the great markets of Philadelphia a little stall was for many years occupied by an old Scotchwoman. She sold only heads of lettuce and herbs, but few as crisp and fresh were to be found in the city. Sometimes the other hucksters urged her to "spread out" into the larger vegetables.

"Na, na!" she would say. "I ken my salats an' my herbs. I dinna ken th' ither. I suld cheat or be cheated wi' them."

"Herb Molly" never wronged anyone of a penny. Her sense of justice was so fine and so long proved that disputes in the market were brought to her to decide. Customers who stopped once to buy the fresh, crisp leaves from the tidy old body always came again. Something in the withered face which looked out from under the white cap went with them, and drew them to her again. More than one busy housekeeper would go a mile out of her way to buy from Old Molly.

"It is not only that her herbs are fresh and delicious," one said, "but it rests me to speak to her. She is only an ignorant woman, but so true, so friendly! It is the kindest soul in the world that looks out of her eyes."

In the twenty years during which she sat in the same quiet corner she gradually became a power in the market. Noisy people lowered their voices in their bargaining when they spoke to her. Even Big Pete, the butcher and "rough," made her his confidante.

It was to Molly that the women carried their troubles about sick babies and drunken husbands. It was Molly who coaxed Big Pete's boy to give up liquor, and who saved more than one girl in the market who was going astray. She lived alone. These rough folk were the only children she had. She had love enough in her old heart to mother them all.

But the thing which gave her such extraordinary power over them, was that God was so real to her.

"She don't preach," one woman said, "but Jesus is with her all the time. She talks to Him. She knows Him."

"I don't know nothin' of priests or preachers," Big Pete used to say, "but I believe in Molly's God."

Molly died the other day. There was no notice in any paper to show that a power for good had gone silently out of the world. But her empty corner was swept and closed that day, and over every stall in the market hung a scrap of black. One man whom she had brought back to decency and happiness said:

"A woman may sit as a huckster in this market, and yet be one of the angels of God."

That was her only funeral sermon.—Youth's Companion.

By able, conservative management, safe investments, big rate of interest, low death rate, the Northwestern has won the love and applause of its policyholders and the respect and admiration of all who are acquainted with it.

Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24 '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. McAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N. C., says:
"I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. I now hold three policies in this company. My dividends are much larger than in other companies in which I carry insurance. The affairs of the company are safely and conservatively managed; they pay promptly and are exceedingly fair and liberal in their dealings with their policy-holders."

Mr. R. B. Raney, Raleigh, N. C., under date of April 1, '93, says: "I have held a policy in the Northwestern for a number of years, and am satisfied it has no superior."

DO YOU WANT TO ADOPT A BABY?

Maybe you think this is a new business, sending out babies on application; it has been done before, however, but never have those furnished been so near the original samples as this one. Everyone will exclaim, "Well that's the sweetest baby I ever saw!" This little black-and-white engraving can give you but a faint idea of the exquisite original.

which we propose to send to you, transportation paid. The little darling rests against a pillow, and is in the act of drawing off its pink sock, the mate of which has been pulled off and hung aside with a triumphant coo. The baby's tint is perfect, and the eyes follow you, no matter where you stand. The exquisite reproductions of this greatest painting of Ida Waugh (the most celebrated of modern painters of baby life) are to be given to those who subscribe to Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893. The reproductions cannot be told from the original, which cost $400, and are the same size (17x22 inches). The baby's life size, and absolutely lifelike. We have also in preparation, to present to our subscribers during 1893, other great pictures by such artists as Percy Moran, Maud Humphrey, Louis Deschamps, and others of world-wide renown. Take only two examples of what we did during the past year, "A Yard of Panisies," and "A White House Orchid" by the wife of President Harrison, and you will see what our promises mean.
Those who subscribe for Demorest's Family Magazine for 1893 will possess a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides a Magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep everyone posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion Magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and we give you, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2, and you will really get over $25 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send 10 cents for a specimen copy.

Division.

DEAR BRO. CLEMENTS:—There has been a great deal said for the last two years relative to dividing the N. C. & Va. Christian Conference. Two of the strongest points of argument in favor of the proposed division are, the size of the conference, and the distance over which ministers and delegates have to travel to assemble in the annual meetings. Another objection brought against the proposed division is, that it will weaken our ability to support such churches as Raleigh and Durham (which are not yet self-supporting) in whatever conference they might fall. Another is that the ministers have built their homes and many of them are now living at Elon College and thereby one conference would have a greater number of ministers than the other or necessitate those who are already settled to build and settle again or else be less convenient to their work than at present. Another objection is that both the new conferences would be too small to do effective work.

The plan suggested by Prof. E. L. Moffitt in a recent issue of the SUN would undoubtedly be best for the general interest of our cause, viz.: by uniting the N. C. & Va. and the Deep River conferences and dividing the two which would cut off a great deal of the territory of one and add it to the other. The Prof. is a member and has been living in the Deep River Conference, and is therefore able to see the disadvantage of the small membership and is now living and had an interest in the prosperity of the N. C. & Va. Conference for the last four years so he could not possibly be looking at simply one side of the question. These two conferences are contiguous to each other and the one could be relieved of the large number of representatives and the extensive territory by cutting off a portion and adding to another conference which would be greatly benefited, not only that but our College would come in touch with two conferences then whereas now it is in one far separated from the others. Until we can work for general interest and lay aside any personal interest in matters pertaining to church work we cannot expect the same success. Now this plan would greatly enhance the prosperity of both conferences.

The Deep River Conference will consider this question at its next annual meeting and will doubtless favor it. The N. C. & Va. Conference should do the same if no objections can be brought against it. So far I have not heard a word of opposition to the plan either privately or through the press. Why don't the people speak, if there are any objections and discuss these objections through the SUN, and not wait until the Annual Conference to act on the question without giving it a moment's thought. Too many of our people are ready to act hastily and ignorantly in deciding important questions upon which the destiny of the church depends. There is no subject that should receive more consideration than those that effect the prosperity of the cause of Christ.

Fraternally,
W. C. WICKER.

BRO. CLEMENTS:—Our meeting at New Elam embraced first Sunday in Oct. and week following. Our congregation was smaller than is customary for that place on account of rainy weather and the busy season, but I do not think that I have ever witnessed a work that seemed to indicate a deeper interest. One or two made profession of faith in Christ, one united with the church, and quite a number of backsliders were reclaimed.

We have been engaged in building a house of worship at New Elam this year, the hall of which is nearing completion. Many of our members at this point want to move forward, while some are satisfied to do nothing. Ob that all would be persuaded to do their duty!

Our work at Burlington still moves on, if slowly. We hope, ere long, to complete and occupy our new church. God be praised for what has been accomplished.

C. C. PEEL.

Burlington, N. C.

To The Churches of The N. C. & Va. C. C.

DEAR BROTHERS:—Please see that your churches will make a strong effort and raise the full amount for Church Extensions. This is an important enterprise of the church and should not be neglected. There are many needy places that are asking for a little in this line and if all the churches will pay up their assessments something can be done. Hold up the work of the Lord, and he will bless you abundantly.

Asleep in Jesus

Asleep in Jesus, blessed thought. But still it brings sorrow to the human heart, when a dear, good, kind and loving mother is taken away. By her special care, by her many words of warning, by her unmistakable love and devotion she so ingratiate herself into son and daughter's heart that the richest benedictions of God are invoked upon her head.

Truly there is no other earthly love like a mother's! but this fountain of comfort cannot always exist. Death is coming, and the inevitable consequence is, separation for time.

The 19th inst brought this sad hour of parting to the family of Mr. W. H. Foust. His mother, Mrs. Mary Jane Foust, who was living with him, was very suddenly and unexpectedly called away by the angel of death.

She was 72 years and 15 days of age.

Her husband Mr. C. H. Foust, died Nov. 24 '64 leaving her the great work of training the children. But be it said to her memory that an exceptional family she reared. They are as follows: viz: Mrs. T. W. Harris of Chapel Hill, N. C., Mr. W. H. Foust, who lives near the old homestead, Mr. C. H. Foust, of Salisbury, N. C., Mrs. J. S. Harris of Pitt Co., N. C., Mrs. E. L. Harris of Maxton, N. C., and Mess. E. M. and C. G. Foust of Texas, each in charge of a high school.

Mrs. P. R. Harden of Graham N. C., is the only one left of nine. Seven brothers and one sister having crossed the river of death.

Sister Foust is no more; but her memory lives and her works do follow her.

Her home, known as the preacher's home and where many a weary stage-coach passenger in the olden times received hospitable entertainment, is closed. Her children are separated one from another; but may they all serve mother's God and at last meet within the amaranthine bowers of spotless purity, where parting is unknown, joy supreme and peace perpetual. LEAVES FROM MY NOTE BOOK

A Visit to Watkins Glen.

"Half past six o'clock and a good day to go on the lake!! Half past six o'clock and a good day to go on the lake!" That was the voice that rang out clear and distinct in the corridors of our hotel on that bright beautiful morning of August 25, 1893. You see we had stopped over at Geneva, in the State of N. Y. for the night and had left orders to be awakened at 6:30 a. m.—if it were a nice day for going on the lake, for we wanted to go by boat up Seneca Lake to the town of Watkins and visit the far famed and well known Watkins Glen. So the day was all that could be asked (when we started) and at 8 a. m., "with all aboard that's going aboard," we steamed out from the village of Geneva and were soon boldly afloat on that beautiful Lake—Seneca. And even now, before we reach the object of our search we are charmed by the surroundings. The Lake is calm and as clear as crystal. In the widest places it is only four miles and in the narrowest only one and a half to two. On either side are gently sloping hills and broad expanse of fertile fields now golden with the stubble of recent garnered harvest or entangled with the green of branching and running grape vine. It was a sight beautiful to look upon, and the hills, and the fields, and the Lake and the blue beuding sky beyond looked more like the handiwork of some skilled artist than it did the work of reality and of nature. And in fact what is this but the greatest and most beautiful of all painted pictures—what these things around us but the handiwork of the great Divine and the picture of a greater and more beautiful scene beyond? Who know but beyond all this then is a greater, better and more beautiful world? But back to our trip. It was just high-noon when we landed at Watkins after a most delightful ride of four hours. Soon a nice lunch had been served and we were ready for the march.

Watkins Glen? What is it do you ask? Well that is what I would like to tell about now—but then I can't. It cannot be described. There are some things that pass description and only remain for that reason the more vivid in our own minds. They remain there because we can't "tell them away." However, conceive if you will of two great towering hills some three hundred feet high or more and some three miles long at shortest, torn, washed and rugged on one side to almost perpendicular straits, and then conceive of these great hills with their torn, rugged and wasted sides shoved almost together—leaving between a space in some places only a few feet, in others some several yards. And indeed to the height of some forty to fifty feet from below these giants form a combine and from their blended shoulders crystal streamlets fall and merge into glittering sparkling pools below, forming, not infrequently as the fall, all the delicate hues and richer shades of shattered rainbows, and commingled sun beams. Here you can almost touch both sides of these towering peaks, while above you can only see a small cross section of the vaulted dome of heaven. Great hills three hundred feet high rising almost in perpendicular, but always in torn and craggy, flights on either side of you, different at every step you take and changing with every glance—it fills the soul with wonder and crowds the mind with delight and admiration. It crowds upon one's soul as one stands in silent contemplation. Here one sees in splendid panoramic combination, glen, mountain, lake and valley. Pass into the entrance amphitheatre and stand and gaze. Here you will behold glens and sections rising one above another, series after series of rocky arcades, natures thick set and well filled art galleries, grottoes spread and be decked with natures unique and varied carvings and sculptures—this is only the door and you may pass on for you have a distance of some three miles to walk and an ascent of some 800 feet to make before you are through it all. But pass on through this rocky wonder and at every step you will find some new born grandeur. But as you advance, as another than the writer has said "veils of mist invest your brow with the most delicious and soothing moisture, and one breaths air pure enough to have blown through Eden's bowers.

But rocky crag nor towering peak, nor hush of gentle zephyrs, nor fall of sparkling water, nor dash of glittering spray tells the whole story of this great nature picture. As one contemplates it all and views it in silent admiration there is something more that speaks from beyond, and this beauty, this greatness, this splendor, this grandeur is but a shadow and advance of the great reality behind it all. And this silent language that hill and valley and gorge and sea and woodland speaks to us is but the faint whispering of a deep toned voice beyond—but the silent mutterings of the voice that speaks the "Peace be still" to your soul and to my soul when thither for refuge we have fled.

The Cost of Sin.

BY REV. JAMES MAPLE, D. D.

The wages of sin is death. Rom. 6:23.

There are two paths open to man in this life. The path of obedience to God, and the path of disobedience. Man must walk in one or the other. He has his choice, for he is not forced by irresistible power to walk in either. He has the power to and must choose for himself which path he will walk in. Hence the command, "Choose you this day whom ye will serve." God commands man to walk in the path of obedience, and promises a blessing upon all who obey him. "This is the love of God that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous."

Man is governed by motives, and the first question with him when a course of conduct is open to him, and he is invited to enter upon it, "Will it pay?" This is a proper question. Powerful motives are sometimes brought to bear upon the mind of man to induce him to disobey God, and follow the leadings of his own sinful impulses. What will this cost him? Our text answers, "The wages of sin is death."

The tempter comes to the young man and seeks to lead him into the path of disobedience. He promises, pleasure, riches, honor and power. These things appeal to strong impulses in man's nature, and set his passions on fire, but if all these promises are realized will it pay him for what sin costs? To solve this question let us consider what it costs a man to walk in the path of disobedience.

Man possesses two natures, and through them he is related to two worlds. He has an animal nature and an intellectual and moral nature. Sin affects both natures, and to measure its results we must take into consideration the fact that he is to live forever. What does sin cost man? Let us look at man first in his lower nature, and consider the affects of sin on it. All sin is the transgression of the law of God, but there are different kinds of sin. There is the sin of the intemperate use of intoxicating drinks. This indulgence stimulates the passions, excites man's carnal nature, and brings a glow of pleasure. This is all it can give to man, but does this pay for what it costs him? It undermines his health, shatters his nerves, deranges his whole animal nature, and ultimates in death. It incapacitates him for the necessary work of life, and makes him a burden to society. Looking at man simply as an animal we see that the wages of the sin of intemperance is a blighting curse to him; but this is not all nor the greatest evil it brings to him. It extinguishes the lamp of reason in his brain, blinds his judgment, scars his conscience, hardens his heart, and makes him cruel and brutal. It costs him his manhood.

Another form of sin that is common is covetousness. This is an inordinate love of money. A desire to attain the possession of property is right in itself, and money is a necessity to man and society. God has planted in our nature this desire to acquire wealth, and given us the faculty to do it, but when we live for this alone, and make it the end of all our labor it becomes sinful. Money is only a means to meet our wants, promote our happiness, and to help our fellow men. To use it in this way it is elevating, enlarges our higher nature, increases our happiness, and makes the world better, but when we strive for its own sake, and make its acquisition the end of our existence, then it becomes a curse. It shrivels up the soul, hardens the heart against the claims of humanity, and makes us cruel. It leads us to practice inhumanity upon ourselves.

A paper published in Dewittville, New York of a recent date says:

For seventy-six years Zora Russell has lived near this place, and during that time his entire energies have been devoted to the accumulation of money. He was a miser of the most pronounced type. He deprived himself of the commonest necessities of life in order to hoard money, and whenever he had a good sized sum accumulated he would invest in real estate or mortgages.

During the past year he has not been about very much, and last Monday the neighbors went to investigate. He was found lying under the bed dead and covered and surrounded by filth indescribable. The walls of the room were black with the smoke of an oil lamp which he used without a chimney, and there was no furniture save an old table, a broken down bedstead and a chair. He had evidently been ill several days, and, unable or unwilling to summon assistance, had lain there and awaited death.

On searching his clothing and house $130 was found sewed up in the back of his shirt and $15 in gold hidden in the house. This was probably all the cash he had about him, but there are mortgages and other papers hidden, which have not yet been found. He has four brothers, all well-to-do men, residing in Chautauqua county, and they will inherit his property, which will, it is estimated, amount to about $12,000.

But they that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare, and into many of foolish and hurtful lusts, which drown men in destruction and perdition. For the love of money is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows."

What is wealth to the covetous man in the hour of death? What can it do for him then? When the Washington steamer was burnt, one of the passengers, at the first alarm of fire, ran to his trunk, and took from it a large amount of gold and silver, and, loading his pockets, ran to the deck, and jumped overboard. As a necessary consequence, he went down immediately. His treasure was his ruin, money is necessary here in this life, but it can do nothing for us in the hour of death; and it is of no value in the world to come. "The wages of sin is death."

There is a sinful pride. John calls it "the pride of life." The word he uses means ostentation or boasting, and then arrogance or pride. This sinful passion creates, a feeling of superiority to others, and manifests itself in ostentatious display of dress, equipage, furniture and houses. This sinful pride costs much more in its effects upon the mind and heart. How much money people spend on dress not for comfort, but to outshine their neighbors. I know a lady that spent nineteen hundred dollars on one article of dress just to wear once at a ball on Washington's birth day. I have known others to pay fifty dollars for a fan to carry at an evening party. It did not contribute to their happiness or elevation intellectually or spiritually. It only gratified a sinful pride to outshine all others. Persons governed by this sinful pride will deny themselves of the necessary comforts of life just to enable them to make an outward show. Goldsmith tells of a mandarin who appeared with jewels on every part of his robe. He was once accosted by a sly old fellow, who followed him through several streets, bowed often to the ground, and thanked him for his jewels. "What does this man mean?" cried the mandarin: "I never gave you any of my jewels." "No," replied the man; "but you have let me look at them, and that is all the use that you can make of them: so the only difference between us is, that you have the trouble of watching them; and that is an employment that I don't much desire."

Pride destroys all gratitude, for the proud man feels that he is the author of all his greatness and glory, and he wraps himself up in the robes of his selfishness. He thinks and feels as Nebuchadnezzar did "when he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon, and said, "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honor of my majesty." This pride robs man of the feeling of humility and gratitude that fills the soul with peace and

joy. A proud man is seldom grateful; for he never thinks that he gets as much as he deserves. When any mercy falls, he says, "Yes; but it ought to be more. It is only manna as large as a coriander seed, whereas it ought to be like a baker's loaf."

Pride creates envy and hatred, for it always sees some one who can make a brighter show. This destroys peace of mind, and causes bitter jealousy that rankles in the soul like a poisonous serpent. It has even led to murder. The infatuated Caligula slew his brother because he was a beautiful young man. Cambyasis killed his brother Smerdis because he could draw a stronger bow than himself or any of his army.

What can pride do for a man in the hour of death? Can it bring peace of mind and hope for the future? When Severus, emperor of Rome found his end approaching, he cried out, "I have been every thing; and every thing is nothing." Then ordering the urn to be brought to him in which his ashes were to be enclosed on his body being burned, he said, "Little urn, thou shalt contain one for whom the world was too little." It costs all this to live a sinful life. "The wages of sin is death."

Another form of sin is sensual indulgence. There is a degree of pleasure, and gratification in this sin; but in the end it is ruinous to man's physical and intellectual nature, and ends in premature death. It consumes a man's vitality, robs him of his manliness, and debases his whole nature. There is no abiding happiness in it. The life, opportunities, and seeming enjoyments of Col. Gardner were such as to secure to him the name of "The Happy Rake." While being congratulated by his companions, one day, he could not forbear groaning, and saying, as a dog entered the room: "Oh that I were that dog!" He envied the happiness of the dog. He despised himself. That is what it cost him to live a sensual life. "The wages of sin is death." Young man, you may be blinded by the blandishments of sense to the awful evils of a sensual life, but they will come sure as fate. There is no escape. For whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap."

The great mass of men who hear the gospel preached, and those who live in religious communities yet do not attend church, are not intemperate, licentious, covetous, nor governed by haughty pride; yet they are walking in the path of disobedience. They do not obey God. They are worldly minded, and live simply for this world, what does it cost a man to live such a life? The cost is what he loses, and what he suffers from his loss. In this life a man loses that peace of mind that comes from conscious obedience to God's commands.

Disobedience brings a sense of condemnation, and unrest of soul. Man knows that he is not doing right, and deserves the displeasure of God. He is conscious that he cannot hide from God, nor resist his power; and whenever he thinks upon this fact it disturbs his peace of mind. "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked." David realized this when he exclaimed: "I remembered God and was troubled," while his mind was occupied with the pleasures of sense, and absorbed in the pursuit of the objects of worldly ambition, he was not troubled; but when awakened to a consciousness of the existence, presence, power, holiness and justice of God and his accountability he was troubled. The sorrows of death compassed him, and the pains of hell got hold upon him. Then he "found trouble and sorrow." Does the pleasures of sin play for all this? Did David find it so in his experience? He realized what he was losing, and that sinful indulgence brought condemnation and sorrow. He turned in humble penitence to God, and sought forgiveness. He tells us his experience, and it was a joyous one. "I waited patiently for the Lord; and he inclined unto me, and heard my cry. He brought me up out of a horrible pit, out of the miry clay, and set my feet upon a rock, and established my goings. And he hath put a new song in my mouth, even praise unto our God." When the controversy between David and God was settled, his mind was at rest, and his heart was full of joy. Then he could say, "Return unto thy rest, O my soul; for the Lord hath dealt bountifully with thee." His rest of soul was permanent, and he expressed his state of mind in the beautiful and inspiring language of the twenty-third psalm: "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." A sinful life costs a man all this, and burdens his soul with guilt and fear. "The wages of sin is death."

A sinful life costs a man hope in death. "The hope of the righteous shall be gladness: but expectation of the wicked shall perish." "The wicked is driven away in his wickedness: but the righteous hath hope in his death." The man who walks in the path of obedience enjoys present peace of mind, lives in communion with God, and looks forward into eternity with the abiding assurance that he shall have a home in heaven. This was the experience of Paul. He trusted with implicit confidence in the wisdom, love, and power of Christ. He could say. "I know whom I believe, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." Looking forward into the future a glorious destiny opened before him, and in the day calm composure of triumphant faith and hope he exclaims: "We knew that, if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." A sinful life costs a man this hope, and leaves him without any refuge in the hour of death. The infidel Volney, overtaken by a heavy storm at sea, ran about the ship crying in great agony of soul, "O my God! O my God! what shall I do?" A sinful life costs a man all this. "The wages of sin is death."

The cost of sin is not confined to this life. Death does not free a man from sin. Its consequences follow him into eternity. It shuts him out of heaven. The sinful life is thus described by Paul: "The works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, various emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murderers, drunkenness, and such like: of which I tell you before, as I have also told you in the past, and they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." He loses all that is embraced in the idea of heaven and eternal life. Will the pleasures of a sinful life repay him for this loss. No wonder that John exhorts his brethren with great earnestness and tenderness "not to love the world, neither the things that are in the world

"If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him. For all that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life, is not of the Father but is of the world.

"And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

MISSIONARY.

The Congresses of Missions.

It was both appropriate and unfortunate that the Congresses of Missions should follow immediately the Parliament of Religions; appropriate, because they gave the right interpretation to the Parliament; unfortunate, because, as was natural, it required a little time to gather the energies that had been somewhat exhausted by the preceding two weeks. The weather also proved unpropitious. For four days it was so stormy that none went out who could stay at home; and even those who attended were obliged at times to raise their umbrellas to keep off the rain dripping through the roof.

While these things affected the size of the audiences, they did not in any way diminish the interest in the papers, by those who did hear them. Seldom in the history of mission conferences has there been more of thorough common sense on missions packed into the same space of time. There was scarcely a speaker who had secured his knowledge at second hand. Every one spoke of what he knew and testified to what he had seen.

Without going into detail in regard to the papers and addresses, their general characteristics may be summed up under the three heads, the object, the methods and the success of missions. The object was stated very broadly to be something far more than is ordinarily realized. The idea that missionaries are simply to preach in witness to the Gospel until Christ himself should come to finish the work in his own way was dismissed as the idea of those whose personal knowledge of mission was very meager. Instead of this the work of missions was repeatedly stated to be the building up of the kingdom of God in all its details, chiefly through the establishment of a self-supporting, self-propagating native Church. Evangelism is the essential preliminary, but only the preliminary to work of far greater difficulty, the development of a Christian life adapted to the particular needs of each field. This was brought out very clearly and forcibly by President Washburn, of Robert College, Constantinople, in a paper which ought to be read by every minister in this land.

As to the methods, also, there was the broadest latitude expressed. Whatever helps to bring men into closer sympathy with Christ's messengers, helps to bring them into a clearer understanding of Christ himself. Thus medical missions, education, higher, lower or industrial, assistance in providing better homes or easier lives, all have their place. Special emphasis was placed on the absolute necessity for some sort of co-operation between the Boards representing the different denominations. The evils of the present condition, which is still an improvement on the past, were most vividly set forth by Dr. Geo. W. Knox, of Japan, and the methods of applying and securing co-operation both at home and abroad by the Rev. E. M. Bliss, of The Independent.

Coming in such close connection with the Parliament of Religions, it was natural that considerable stress should be laid upon the success, present and future, of missions. Not a few have expressed a fear lest the attractive setting forth of the great religions of Asia by their cultured representatives would chill the interest in missions. "If what they say is true, why should we send any missionaries to teach them?" one lady is reported to have said in the Woman's Congress. She could hardly have heard Dr. Post, of Syria, as he set forth the grand truth of Islam not less forcibly than any of its adherents, only to show still more forcibly how error overshadows the truth. There was no minifying of the tremendous problem facing the churches in the great work of converting the world to Christ. Neither was there the slightest hesitancy as to the success. There was no perfunctory optimism based on the divine omnipotence, but a calm, clear-headed assurance that the Church of Christ is competent to the task committed to it.

The work already done was referred to as the pledge of what would be done; and even when Dr. Smith, of Edinburgh, traced out the regions as yet unoccupied, and Dr. Dennis, of Syria, described the belt of green from Eastern Asia to Western Africa which holds the as yet "inaccessible fields of Islam," there was never a suggestion of failure in accomplishing the great work. So, too, as Dr. Ellswood set forth the reflex influence of missions, showing how they permeate the whole life of nations, all fear of any subordination of them to any other departments of church work must have been dispelled.

The results both of the Congresses and the Parliament are not to be expected at once. We shall not be surprised if for a time the feeling expressed by the lady referred to above, exercises considerable influence; but with the clearer knowledge of the problems, as indicated by the Parliament, will come a still more firm resolve to meet those problems fairly and fully, and go forth to the work determined to conquer.—Independent.

No. 1. Biographical.

BY HERBERT SCHOLZ, A. B.

We always receive a certain encouragement and inspiration from reading the lives of great and good men, which is not obtainable from any other source. Every wise man will not fail to profit by the experiences of others, and the experiences of others often do us a wonderful amount of good by keeping us from engaging in things that would be detrimental to our welfare, and by persuading us to enter on that course of conduct that will bring to us the greater amount of individual happiness and personal success in the common affairs of life. The efforts which distinguished individuals who have gone before us have put forth to accomplish certain ends, the enthusiasm which they exhibited, the manliness with which they met the obstacles occasioned by their environments, the courage with which they fought their enemies, the faith they had in the result of the life-work which they felt assured was destined for them to perform, the tactics and diplomacy which they employed to advance themselves, these things help to strengthen the youth who is just beginning the practical work of life.

A young man is often embarrassed by a lack of confidence in himself, and by the fear of unseemly criticism by others. He sometimes feels that he is too weak for the undertakings which his chosen profession involve. The tasks to which he must subject himself appear exceedingly arduous. The competition of strong rivals requires a force of will and a persistence which is hard for him to command. A victim to these feelings finds in reviewing the lives of others consolation and strength. Human characteristics are catching. The association of a young person with an older one will more than likely shape the character of the younger into a similitude of the older. Thus if a young person associates with an older one who is wicked, the younger will be made worse; if the younger associates with an older one who is good, the younger will be made better. This rule holds equally well with reference to literature. If a young man reads the life of some good and true man, he will be elevated, his intentions to do right strengthened, and his life renewed. If he persists in reviewing the lives of great men who have been bad he will become tainted in some way. Thus we see men's deeds live after them to bless or curse humanity according to their nature.

No man has exerted a greater influence for good among the reading people of America than the subject of our sketch. While criticisms after criticisms have been passed on his literary works, some of a fair impartial nature, others seasoned with too much admiration, or with too much derogation, yet, no one will deny that he is the best beloved of any America author by the people of his nation. In Hawthorne and Lemoine's work on American Literature we find these words: "At heart Longfellow was of the people of that great average class that constitutes, substantially the population of the world. The range of his affections, sympathies, and sentiments neither rose above, nor fell below, this medium line. This fact was the source of his wide influence—this, combined with the other fact, that in education, culture, taste, gift of literary expression, and in that happy harmony of elements that go to make genius, he was far above the average. In other words, he had the power of saying, in lucid, pure melodious phrase, what everybody felt, but could not so successfully say."

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow was born at Portland, Maine, Feb. 27, 1807. He was the second of four sons. His father, Stephen Longfellow, was a lawyer of distinction. His mother was a descendant of John Alden and Priscilla Mullens whose lives he wove so successfully into the "Courtship of Miles Standish" She was a daughter of General Wadsworth of Revolutionary times. At the time of Longfellow's birth, Portland was a pretty town. Its situation on the sea-shore was full of picturesque scenery, and its harbor afforded shelter to vessels of sufficient burden to enable a moderate commerce to be carried on with other sections of country. The town was noted for its intelligence and simplicity, and its traditional purity of life. A democratic spirit was strong in the hearts of the people, and taking the place all in all, it was a good place in which to be born and to spend the early years of childhood.

The sweetness of Longfellow's disposition showed itself in early years. He was a gentle, docile, attractive child; "one of the best boys in school" was his teachers's report of him at six years of age. He early gave signs of a taste for literature, and was very much delighted with Irving's Sketch-Book. Using his own words in speaking of it afterwards: "Every boy has his first book; I mean to say, one book among all others which in early youth first fascinates his imagination, and at once excites and satisfies the desires of mind. To me this first book was the Sketch-Book of Washington Irving. I was a school-boy when it was published [in 1819], and read each succeeding number with increasing wonder and delight, spell-bound by its pleasant humor, its melancholy tenderness, its atmosphere of reverie. The charm remains unbroken, and whenever I open the pages of the sketch-book, I open also that mysterious door which leads back into the haunted chambers of youth."

From these words we see the influence which the Sketch-Book had over him. When he was thirteen he began to write verses. When he was fourteen, he entered Bowdoin College, and from that institution he graduated in the year 1825, ranking second in a class of thirty-seven members. At the commencement exercises, he delivered an oration on the subject, "Our Native Writers," which was noted for its artistic and literary merit. After leaving college he decided to make literature a profession. Having been elected as professor of modern languages and literature in the college from which he graduated, he decided to go to Europe to prepare himself. Four years were spent in different parts of the Old World in studying German, French, Spanish and Italian. At the end of that time he had mastered these languages to such an extent as to be able to speak them fluently. He then returned to America, and entered upon his duties at Bowdoin college, with a salary of $800. During his stay at Bowdoin he contributed a number of articles to the "North American Review." His duties occupied too much of his time to allow him the opportunity of composing poetry, so poetry for the time being was given up. In 1831, he married Miss Mary Potter of Portland, Me. It appears to have been a very happy marriage. About this time he began the publication of sketches of travel in the New England Magazine. Not long afterwards he was offered the chair of modern languages in Harvard University. As this position offered him greater advantages and more congenial society, he resigned his position at Bowdoin, and prepared to take a second trip to Europe for the purpose of preparing himself for Harvard. His wife accompanied him on this trip and while at Rotterdam sickened and died. The blow fell heavily on the bereaved husband, but his buoyant nature and strong faith in a divine providence soon enabled him to proceed with his work. After an eighteen months' stay in Europe he returned and began his work at Harvard.

It was while at Harvard he composed some of his most famous poems. In 1843, he married Miss Fanny Appleton of Boston. From this time forward his life was one of peace and prosperity for many years. The income from his writings together with his salary from Harvard, and the dowry of his wife, enabled him to live at ease. Two sons, and four daughters were born to him. But in 1861, a circumstance took place which cast a gloom over the rest of his life. While sealing a letter with a wax taper, Mrs. Longfellow set fire to her clothing, and burned to death. For a long time her husband could not recover from the shock sufficiently to do anything, but finally succeeded in diverting his mind from his misfortune by translating the Divine Comedy of Dante.

Longfellow made a third voyage to Europe, taking two of his daughters.

During this trip he visited the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and received honorary degrees from both. A few more years passed away. On March 18, 1882, Longfellow suffered a chill, and became seriously ill. On the 24th, March he quietly passed away, leaving to the world the record of a life well spent, a manhood nobly exhibited. One of the most striking expressions of feeling toward him was the placing of his bust in the Poets Corner of Westminster Abbey. It was the first instance of such an honor being paid an American poet. The last words ever written by Longfellow were.

"Out of the shadows of night,
The world rolls into light;
It is day-break everywhere."

University of Virginia.

After spending two weeks at this beautiful and picturesque place, which is situated among the foot-hills of the Blue Ridge mountains, I shall give to the readers of the Sun a few notes. The lasting love that I have for my People, church, and College, will not let me remain in silence, although "pressed" with work. Last week the Sun was happily received and as to the enjoyment derived from reading its articles, will not be expressed—why—cannot.

I first looked at the article written by Bro. Atkinson. It was quickly read thinking to get the news from the College, but disappointed, yet nothing else save the College would have interested me more than the subject he discussed. "Is the world growing better?" No subject will interest the thinker more than this one. The article needs no comment, but it is an endless subject, and it is to be hoped that Professor will pardon me for adding a few remarks. Nothing has impressed my mind more than this very subject for the last week. One writer thinks that the world is growing better. Thank God for that faith. Nearly every ambitious man will think so, who is trying his utmost to make it so, although oppressed with hands stained with crime.

I now think of Sir Thomas More's Utopia. Strive for Utopia, where there is perfect government, laws, politics, religion and the like. In this strife we will meet with conflicting forces, but battle them with strong minds and noble hearts. We may not reach there this year, perhaps not next, but push forward with determination and energy, future rewards are only waiting for us. If we do not reach that perfection we can get near it by acting as people ought to act.

"Tis coming up the steep of time,
And this old world is growing brighter;
We may not see it dawn sublime,
Yet high hopes make the heart throbb lighter:
We may be sleeping in the ground,
When it awakes the world in wonder."

But we have felt it gathering round, And heard the voice of living thunder.

'Tis coming: Yes, 'tis coming."

To-day I come across a scheme, if carried out, is thought be a great help in making the world better. This scheme for a civic church has been submitted to the parliament of Religions lately held in Chicago. It shall be composed of members of every church and sect, united together to improve all civic conditions. If there could be something done to kill this "church prejudice" and this excess of partisanism annihilated, the world would continue its upward course greater than ever before. Then we shall see Christians of every name and creed meet and grasp hands, leaving belief behind, but loving one God. It is not supposed now that we must give up our church and all belong to one and the same, but what we would impress upon your mind is not to think so much of your church as to forget God. I want to see men with big hearts, and not let there be any distinction on account of belief. Be nearer one family, then we will have a better and brighter world to live in, a better home for children to be born in, and a much more beautiful place to die in. God grant that things and men will become better than what they are to-day. But in the midst of trouble, shall we not say that the world is growing better. Just now I read of two prize-fights which were witnessed by more than 1000 people. The wife of a man in N. Y. shot down in the street by her husband and then he commits suicide. Football to be played Sunday afternoon. A game here Saturday which turned into a "young war," men lying cold on the ground. Does this tell us that we are growing worse? Where are the prayer meetings, where are the churches, where are the good people? The bad deeds of a few cannot over balance the good acts of many.

I am glad to hear that the students of Elon are doing still better work this year, not complaining of what they have done in the past, but glad to know that they have found room to improve. Boys it would be pleasant to be with you in your work. No doubt the class of '94 is looking forward with sweet anticipation for next June. Enjoy yourselves as greatly as possible now, because our "Elo-nian Days" are few and short. To know Elon is to love her and not to forget her. The principles on which she is founded are true, her views are correct. The writer has been always of the opinion that coeducation was superior to its opposite, but now since both have been tried, he is still more of that opinion. "Woman's cause is man's cause, they rise and sink together." Born they are to live together—to live for each other. Elon is based on this law, which is natural. We need not fear, she will and must grow. The young ladies are still at work. Oyster supper last Saturday night, the purpose of which is to add to that magnificent hall This is yours, make it what you want it. I am so strongly in favor of coeducation, which is natural and nothing else, I will give below a few extracts. Perhaps they will do our people and College good.

"Society includes both sexes. Discipline is easier, scholarship is better, and the sexes exercise a healthful influence over each other morally."

"We see no reason why the sexes should be separated in educational pursuits more than in others." "It is mutually beneficial; it cultivates a respect and esteem in each sex for the other which is necessary in later years." Others might be added, but I do not mean to treat the subject in this paper. I only wish to affirm that I am a stronger advocate for coeducation, since the opposite has been tried.

Class of '93, let us hear from you.

Washington Letter.

BY OUR CORRESPONDENT.

An international commission, one member from each country, has been appointed to settle the long-disputed question of the proper boundary line between the United States and Mexico, caused by the shifting of the course of the Rio Grande River. These disputes have been the cause of endless trouble between the citizens of the two countries and were it not for the disparity of strength between the countries would probably long ago have led to war. It is hoped that the commission will succeed in reaching a final and satisfactory decision.

The fourth annual convention of the Young People's Christian Union, which has in four years reached in the United States a membership of more than 12,000, a remarkable growth when the membership of the Universalist Church, to which it is attached, as compared with that of the other Christian denominations, is considered, was held here this week. About fifty societies, principally in the middle and eastern states, were represented at the convention. The Universalists have only one church in Washington and that is a small one which was crippled somewhat several years ago by the withdrawal of its then pastor and some of its members to form what is known as the People's Church, but its membership is large enough to handsomely entertain the delegates to the convention and they have liberally done so.

The hearing of several important cases before the Supreme Court will have to be postponed on account of the delay in the confirmation by the Senate of the nomination of Mr. Hornblower to succeed the late Justice Blatchford, as Chief Justice Fuller thinks they should be heard only before a full bench.

The House of Representatives passed the bill to amend the Geary Chinese exclusion law after adopting an amendment providing that the Chinese who register shall also be photographed. Representative Bowser, of California, just before the debate closed, denied that he intended his recent speech against sending American Missionaries to China as an attack on the Christian religion. The Senate is still in a dead-lock over the silver question.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

International Lesson for November 3, 1893—The Resurrection—Cor. 15:12-22. [Specially Arranged from Pelouet's Notes.]

GOLDEN TEXT.—Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.—1 Cor. 15:57.

LIGHT FROM OTHER SCRIPTURES.—This chapter should be read in connection with the accounts of the resurrection in the four Gospels, and the Acts, and 1 Thess. 4:13-17; 2 Cor. 5:2-4; Phil. 3:20-21.

INTRODUCTION.—Paul learned from the church at Corinth that there had arisen doubts and perplexities concerning the great doctrine of the resurrection, perhaps from the influence of the prevailing Greek philosophy. This chapter is an answer and solution.

LESSON NOTES.

Objections to the resurrection among the Corinthians.

First. The Epicureans among the heathen, and the Sadducees among the Jews, believed that there was no soul as distinct from the body, and no future life. Therefore, according to their philosophy the resurrection was an impossibility. The soul went as does the flame of a candle when it is blown out.

Second. The Stoics taught, what amounted to the same thing, the Pantheistic doctrine of the ultimate reabsorption of the soul into the divinity from which it had sprung, and therefore the final extinction of the individual personality. So a drop of water is absorbed into the ocean. It exists but only as a part of the great whole.

Third. The disciples of Plato, while maintaining the eternal personality and immortality of the soul, regarded matter as the cause of all evil, the only barrier between the soul and Absolute Good, a thing, in fact, essentially and eternally alien to the Divine, and therefore could not conceive of immortality except through the entire freedom of the soul from so malignant and corrupting an influence.

Fourth. As in 2 Tim. 3:17, 18, he speaks of Hymeneus and Philetus as teaching that the resurrection was passed already, it is probable that these errorists in Corinth also refused to acknowledge any other than a spiritual resurrection.

Fifth. There were others to whom the resurrection seemed contrary to common sense and the science of the day (ver. 35). It was impossible and absurd.

The Resurrection a Fact.—Paul begins his famous chapter with a marshaling of the proofs of the resurrection of Christ. He brings witness after witness, even five hundred at one time, during the forty days between the resurrection and the ascension, saw Jesus, touched him, heard Him talk, ate with Him, walked with Him at different times in various places. And many of these witnesses were familiar acquaintances. Later on Paul himself met Jesus, saw Him, and heard Him. Jesus must be alive. No event in all history has greater or more convincing proofs than that Jesus rose from the dead. Sight, hearing, touch, all combined in the proof. Then the Christian church, and indeed every convert and every miracle, was a proof that a living Saviour was working in the world.

Why is our faith vain if Christ has not been raised? (1.) If Christ has not been raised, then He has broken His promises and failed in His prophecies, for He repeatedly declared that He would rise again. And if these promises fail, what are any other promises of His good for? He would be either false or incompetent as a Saviour. (2.) If He has not been raised, then there is no proof that He was anything but a very good and great man, like Socrates, or Plato, or Luther. He cannot be proved to be the Son of God, the divine witness of divine things. It is His power over death, His continued existence, His ever living, that completes the proof that He is a Divine Saviour. (3.) If Christ is not proved to be immortal, by continuing to live, the strong proof of our immortality is taken away. He is the specimen that proves the existence of the future life. (4.) Then too we worship a dead Saviour, not a living one. He does not exist for us to trust and love, to be our ever-present helper. (5.) Then too there has been made no atonement for our sins, for only the Son of God could make atonement, and there is no Son of God. (6.) There can be no second coming, no triumph of the kingdom of heaven. (7.) Then, as Robertson says, "we must infer also that as the true disciples of Christ in all ages have led purer, humbler, more self-sacrificing lives than other men, they have attained to this higher excellence by believing what was false," and that therefore men become more "pure and noble" by believing what is false than by believing what is true."

The Resurrection of the Body.—There are those who object to the term resurrection of the body, but it is because that term has been regarded as meaning the material body which we now have. Paul's illustration shows exactly what is meant. Our present bodies, he says, cannot inherit the kingdom of God, but they shall be changed into spiritual bodies. This change he illustrates by the seed and plant which grows from it. Our future bodies may be no more like our present ones than a rose is like a black seed, or a lily like a bulb. How, then, is it the same? Just as the plant grows out of the seed the same kind of plant always from the same kind of seed. How shall we recognize each other? Just as a florist seeing a seed can picture the plant and the flower that will grow from it; or seeing a plant can immediately recognize the seed from which it grew.

LIGHT FROM THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST.

The resurrection of Jesus is the crowning proof that He is the Son of God. If He could not conquer death and come back from Heaven, He could not prove that at the first He came from Heaven.

It proves that we have a living Saviour, sitting on the right hand of God.

It is the proof of immortal life beyond the grave; that death does not end all, but the soul lives after the body dies.

TEMPERANCE.

DOOMED BY DRINK.

How a Father's Thirst Ruined His Family's Holiday.

Far into the night Jane patched and contrived, with that new, wonderful hope of taking the children to the show guided her fingers. She even produced one or two faded ribbons, relics of wedding finery, and sighed as she pinned them on, thinking how faded, too, was the face above them.

The day was hot, and they left their home early, "so's to git our money's wuth," said Jim. The children huddled around their mother, almost stupefied with admiration of the street parade.

"Jes' wait!" insinuated Jim.

From the summit of the great pavilion to a point within a few feet of the ground a rope was stretched and a wonderfully apparelled female began to descend the perilous causeway. Jane watched with painful absorption.

"I'm glad it's over," she said.

But Jim had disappeared.

"Pap's gone to git us in," said one of the children.

There was a crash of music inside the tent; the crowd began to stream inward; the field was deserted, save for a group of men gathered around a table, hitherto concealed from Jane's bewildered eyes. She saw her husband.

"Go tell pap its time for us to go in," she said, and, breathless, watched the child speed on his errand. He returned alone.

"Pap's treatin' the crowd," said the boy, his words drowned in a vociferous burst of applause from the tent.

"Stay here," commanded Jane, and went toward the hilarious group.

"Come, Jim," she said, coaxingly, "an' take us into the show."

"I'll be along—plenty o' time," answered her husband, with benignant good humor.

But he was deaf to her repeated entreaties. She stood, silent, watching him till the last dime was spent. Then she went back to the children. Something in her face awed them, and they only whispered among themselves.

"Your pap's drunk, and the money's all gone," said Jane, with an air of indifference, and sat down on the grass again.

The people were streaming out of the tent; the crowd was dispersing. One of the animal vans drew near. Jane crept to the driver.

"Mister," she said, in trembling tones, "won't you let the children take a peep? They never saw nuthin' in their lives."

"Boss wouldn't let me," answered the man, yet not unkindly.

A white monkey thrust its paw through the slats of the cage.

The children were in ecstasies of delight. The driver started his horse.

"Come, children, let's go home," said Jane.

It was dark when they reached the cabin. A whippoorwill sang from the thicket, and its wail was to Jane Sheplak the knell of hope.—Valerie Hays Berry, in Lippincott's.

A RUINOUS HABIT.

The American Custom of Treating and Its Evil Effects.

The drinking habit is a pernicious one at best, but there can be no question that the evil is greatly increased by the bad American custom of "treating," by which young men are led to drink to an extent far beyond what they would indulge in if it were not thought a point of honor to take turns in paying for "drinks for the crowd." It is, of course, infinitely wiser not to apply "hot and rebellious liquors to the blood" at all; but no sensible person will contend that it is not better to restrict drinking to one glass at a time rather than, on the treating principle, to take two or three or half a dozen glasses several times a day. We therefore regard the "anti-treating" crusade of Mr. Oliver Sumner Teall, of this city, as worthy of hearty commendation. It is at present only a tentation movement. Those who join it pledge themselves not to "treat" for a certain brief period—three months, we think it is. But it is hoped that the good effects of the scheme will become so apparent that the bad custom at which it is aimed will be permanently uprooted. Mr. Teall reports that in the three weeks since the movement has been underway one hundred and forty-eight signatures have been affixed to the pledge in New York, and thirty-one branches have been started in different parts of the country. It is not a very radical temperance movement, but it is good as far as it goes.—N. Y. Examiner.

BEER IN EUROPE.

Annual Brewings by Germany, Great Britain, Austria, France and Other Countries.

The following are some interesting particulars with regard to the quantity of beer which is now brewed in Europe, the figures given representing the average of the last five or six years. According to these figures the total quantity annually brewed is 2,105,000 gallons, Germany coming first with a production of 1,071,066,165 gallons, of which 644,752,505 gallons were brewed in north Germany, 344,830,305 gallons in Bavaria, 70,935,750 gallons in Wurtemberg, 56,445,840 gallons in Baden, and 17,083,305 gallons in Alsace-Lorraine. Great Britain comes next with a total of 874,192,275 gallons, Austria-Hungary is third with a total of 308,889,675 gallons, while France follows with about 225,000,000 gallons. Relative to their population, Denmark with 49,185,000 gallons brewed, and Norway with 38,304,990, have a much larger production than most of the others. But Russia, with its vast area and large population, produces only 65,892,870 gallons, while the quantity of beer produced in other countries is: Switzerland, 26,694,495 gallons; Spain, 23,062,500; Turkey, 3,150,000; Italy, 3,099,665; Roumania, 2,225,000; Luxembourg and Servia,

2,092,500 gallons each, and Greece 150,354 gallons. The average quantity of beer brewed out of Europe is 830,663,815 gallons in the United States, 36,258,940 in Australia, and 4,966,030 in Japan.—Paris Temps

Drink Statistics.

A minister in Chicago recently said that Chicago has eight thousand saloons, eighty per cent. of which are owned or managed by brewers, and brewers have gone into politics. Upwards of half a million of men in the United States alone, are engaged in the industry of making paupers and beggars. The malt liquors consumed in the United States in 1892 averaged about one-half barrel to the man. Carrol D. Wright, our greatest statistician, says that seventy-two per cent. of the crimes in Boston are liquor crimes. In the fifteen largest cities in the land, seventy-three per cent. of all arrests are for drunkenness, or for drink offenses. Terrence V. Powderly says that one-fifth of the drink bill of the nation is paid by the working men. In New York city alone, its aggregate is $15,000,000 a year. One county in Pennsylvania, chiefly habited by working men, pays $111,000 a year out of the pockets of the miserable. In 1801 the amount of liquor drank averaged twelve dollars and twenty-five cents a head. If these things are so, what manner of persons ought we to be?—Union Signal.

Two Pertinent Truths.

"No sir, I can't trust you," said a bar-keeper to an urgent applicant for a drink. "You've spent altogether too much money for rum. If you'd drunk less you might now be riding in your own carriage."

"That's true! That's true!" replied the other. "If I'd drunk less I might be riding in my own carriage, and if you'd sold less you might be doing the driving. You've got what I spent."—N. Y. Herald.

FIELD NEWS.

Elon College Notes.

The fang of winter in one night snaps the verdure, that a whole summer has patiently, yet perfectly created, and its venom in the day withers all the freshness and beauty, bringing autumn with its faded brow, and decrepit spirit, telling the sad tale of death to follow. Thus we are reminded that all things temporal are but for a season and must fade and die.

Man having been issued into this world, in a few months reaches the bloom of manhood, in a few years the fang of age inserts its venom into the verdure of his being, and as he fades from the beautiful bloom of action, looking back upon his life exclaims, it has been but for a season. Then if we make either a womanly woman or a manly man, as the case may be, we must work while spring time blooms upon us, else the season will be over and our ends not attained.

There are many young ladies and young men who should be at Elon College now preparing themselves for the life of importance that awaits them, who are carelessly letting the spring time of their life pass away unimproved. By and by the season will be gone. They will fade insignificantly away, the world will have been made no better because of their having lived in it "Nothing accomplished, nothing done (will have) earned (their) night's repose."

But to the notes, College work in its regular routine has not developed any important feature for note this week.

Misses Harward and Johnson (members of the faculty) and a few students attended the Raleigh fair.

Mr. W. P. Lawrence attended the Y. M. C. A. district convention which convened at Guilford College the 21st and 22nd; notwithstanding the bad weather he reports a very interesting session and much pleased with our sister college.

Much good has been done at Mt. Vernon during the week, several souls saved and the church revived. Thus, the Y. M. C. A. influence goes out from its own walls and creates in the world a pure moral atmosphere in which others may live.

The Senior and Junior Classes deliver their annual orations on Friday night the 1st of December.

We expected to have a nice "Tennis Tournament" Saturday but the weather interfered. We note that more interest is being taken in athletics on the hill; we have now six tennis courts and a good base-ball ground. It is our aim to come out from College well rounded physically, mentally and morally.

Oct. 23, 1793.

DEAR SUN:—The meeting at Morrisville closed Monday night. This was a grand meeting. Twelve were converted, and eleven reclaimed, making twenty-three in all. Seven united with the church, more I think will join at my next appointment. The church was greatly revived. I believe that every one attended the meeting was greatly revived. The singing was excellent and full of life, led by Prof. J. A. Moring with Miss Minnie Sears at the organ. Bro. David Edwards preached the first sermon for me on the second Sunday night as I could not get there until Monday morning. Bro. Edwards was with me nearly all the meeting, and did a good work. He had two dear boys and one dear girl converted in the meeting.

Rev. J. W. Wellons, of Durham came in Monday morning and was with us until Friday evening. He preached for us twice a day while with us. His sermons were of a very high order, and full of gospel truth, and were enjoyed by all. Bro. Wellons is in good health and looking well. May the Lord bless him wonderfully in his Durham work this year. Rev. W. G. Clements was also present at night, most of the meeting, and did a good work in the meeting. His son J. Barrett Clements was one of the twelve that professed faith in Christ. May the Lord bless him and finally lead him to the ministry and also to the Editorial chair.

Prof. Oates, the principal of the Morrisville School, did a good work in the meeting, several of his pupils were converted.

Yours in Christ,

J. A. JONES.

Alabama Letter.

As it has been some time since I gave the SUN a letter I thought I would let you hear from me.

During the revival season the churches of my charge enjoyed good meetings, and I trust much and lasting good was accomplished.

The churches are much revived and the membership enlarged. I must say that this has been the busiest year of my ministry, and the Lord has greatly blessed my efforts, for which I am thankful.

Last Sunday was my last appointment at Antioch Church. We had a good meeting, the spirit of God was manifest among us. It pains my heart to leave this dear people, they have been so kind and friendly to me. I trust that the Lord will enable them to get a good man to minister unto them next year. God bless Antioch.

I have been chosen to serve the churches at Beulah and Pleasant Grove again for the next conference year. We hope to have a prosperous year with these churches.

I don't know that I will serve any other, though others have called for my services.

We had a very interesting Conference, though not as many people in attendance as usual. The best of order prevailed. Dr. Herndon was with us to the delight of all, the Dr. is a good man, and an untiring worker in the Lord's vineyard. Come again Bro.

Rev. J. D. Elder is our missionary again. May God bless this dear man in his efforts to save souls.

The prospect for the Christian Church is hopeful in Georgia and Alabama, but we need more consideration among the brethren. We need more money to aid the great work. We need all our ministers to get to work in dead earnest, and the work will move on to the glory of God and the salvation of souls.

So if you will pardon this brief letter, you shall hear from me again in the future.

Yours in faith,

GEO. D. HUNT.

DEAR BRETHREN:—The Lord has blessed us much during the year.

Our membership has grown from 16 to 56. Bro. Roach assisted by Bro. Parker, has just closed a meeting of much power.

We held our last quarterly meeting Saturday night, and transacted the business of the church in love. Bro. Roach was called to preach for us another year.

Our conference assessments are all ready. We will not be left on that. May God bless and prosper us all.

Pastors and Their Salaries.

This is a subject of vital interest to the church, and I wish to direct attention to it at this particular time. Many of the churches are calling men to serve them, and others will do so at an early period. But what about the salary? Will, I presume, that will be made satisfactory, yet it must be admitted that our churches as a body pay less to their preachers than almost any other denomination. Anything beyond a bare living is seldom given to the preacher. A careful reading of church letters and minister's reports to conference will convince any one of the truth of this statement. Churches have accepted the services of good self-sacrificing men and after years of toil, and when the infirmities of age have disqualified them for labor we have seen these devoted servants sometimes retire to private life in poverty. Many have turned away from our church on this account. It would be unjust to say that all who have life as on this account lacked devotion to the cause. We all desire some substantial recognition of our services. No one can put his whole heart in his work when he sees that it is greatly undervalued. We have this evil to correct. Well, who is to blame? I answer the preachers and the churches. The remedy I would recommend is the gospel plan of giving. 1 Cor. 16: 1-3. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him." Here we see that this obligation rests on all—the rich, the poor, the male, the female, everyone. It is to be done without the aid of a collector. Every one is to lay it by. The time is given, the first day of the week. The extent of the offering as the Lord has prospered. Now there is a lack of two things, system and grace. With more systematic plans we would succeed better and with more grace any plan will accomplish wonders. Liberality is a Christian grace. As long as people think of giving as a duty collections are difficult, with grace in the person offerings to God's cause are full and easy. The thoroughly consecrated Christian need never be begged to give to God's cause. More consecration will produce more revenue.

Will you consider these figures and submit them to your church and try to explain them. I believe that almost any church can do this. Here is a church with 50 members, 5 pay weekly 40 cts. each, $104; 5 pay 30 cts. each weekly, $78; 5 pay 25 cts. weekly each, $65; 5 pay 20 cts., $52; 10 pay 10 cts., $52; 10 pay 5 cts., $26. The rest may be unable to pay anything, yet this would make $377. Now let two churches near each other do this, call a pastor and require all his time and a revolution will result. The church will put on new life, and God will be glorified. To discuss a matter like this will result in good, and I trust that more time will be given this subject at our approaching conferences than has been done of late years. Subjects often engage the attention of brethren that promote no growth or advancement of Christian activity. The support of the preachers, the consecration of the preachers—the full and entire surrender of the preacher to his calling, are matters of vital interest. I want to see our preachers all in the regular work to which they have been called.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Do your extortion God, and then despise extortioners? Where is the consistency?

Dr. W. T. Herndon wishes to be put down as favoring the union of the N. C. & Va. and the Deep River conferences.

Members of the E. Va. S. S. Conference should pay attention to the notice of Rev. N. G. Newman in this issue.

We are glad to note the accession of two more valuable writers for the SUN in the persons of Prof. Herbert Scholz and S. E. Everett.

The Editor of the SUN expects to attend both the Eastern Virginia and the Deep River Conferences. Have your money then for the Sun.

The article from the pen of Bro. Everett will be enjoyed by his friends and others. It was intended for last week's issue but came to hand too late to be used.

We see from the secular press, that some of the young men of the University of North Carolina are running around again at the foot ball business wasting their time, and thereby teaching, at least indirectly, lessons of immorality. But how can we expect any better of the University, when Wake Forest and Trinity Colleges, under the fostering care of two of the leading religious denominations in the State are setting the examples. Surely Wake Forest and Trinity ought to have too much religion to do such things if the University has not.

His old friends in Raleigh were delighted by a visit of a few days last week with Dr. J. P. Barrett. We were glad to see such an improvement in his health and hope his days may be many and fruitful for the Kingdom of God.

In last week's SUN Bro. Barrett told us how money should be raised for church purposes, now is it not in order for him to tell us how we can induce the people to give as directed by him, and, what the cause will be sustained by till those millennial days are brought about.—D. J. M.

A trip up to Chapel Hill, out to J. W. Cole's, where we spent the night, to Bro. Wesley Cole's and to sister Nancy McCauley's where we united in matrimony as husband and wife, Mr. C. R. Williams and Miss Belle McCauley, was one of much pleasure to us. Thus to meet and shake the hands of our old friends, was a joy for which we thanked God. A few hours were also pleasantly spent with Hon. W. N. Pritchard.

"Four Hundred Degrees Below Zero," in McClure's Magazine for November, tells of the search after the coldest cold and of the experiments of Professor Dewar, who succeeded in turning oxygen into a liquid. It was found at this extraordinary low temperature, produced in these experiments, the laws of chemistry, electricity and color are completely changed.

This is the first of a series on the extraordinary marvels of modern science.

Dr. Barrett's many friends in Raleigh, were glad to see him again. Dr. Barrett lived in Raleigh for a number of years during which time he made many warm friends. His wife and baby had been here several days before Dr. Barrett came, to the joy of her friends. May they all come often, they will always find a hearty welcome. We are always glad to see Bro. Barrett at the SUN office, and have his good advice. He filled the editor's chair so long that he has an experience that is valuable to any one.

Woman suffrage in Wyoming has a record of which its friends may be proud. In the ten years from 1880 to 1890 the ratio of crime to population fell off more than half, though it is said to be increasing in other parts of the country. Wyoming's neighbor, Oregon, has three and one fourth times as many offenders. In all the prisons of Wyoming not one woman was ever imprisoned for any offense whatever. The Wyoming house of representatives itself has declared that under woman suffrage the jails of the state are almost empty.

We have had occasion recently to speak more than once of the comparative failure of foreign missions; not to discourage ourselves, but rather to make it evident that very great results could not be expected, view of the prodigious in the way. Two of these hindrances were recently pointed out by the Rev. G. Howie, Ph. D., of Palestine, who preached on this subject in St. Andrew's church, Liverpool. He said that the reason modern Christians missions not more successful was owing chiefly to two things: First, the bewildering number of denominations in sending missionaries to the heathen, Jews and Mohammedans, who, in presence of such a babel of sects, were bewildered and hardened, or paralyzed; second, the missionary is a foreigner, and at best has but an imperfect knowledge of the ways and language of the people he seeks to evangelize. If these two causes be kept in view we shall not, said Dr. Howie, commit the error of supposing the Gospel less the power of God unto salvation, or that the heart of man is harder than it was centuries ago.—Southern Churchman.

Revival Service.

Evangelist Weston R. Gales, son of the late beloved and gifted Seaton Gales of this city, is conducting a series of gospel meetings at the Christian church on Hillsboro St. His sermons of yesterday evinced the fact that the son has inherited the gifts of oratory of the father. The sermons were simple but powerful expositions of the gospel. Last night a very large congregation attended and were deeply moved by the earnest eloquence in presenting the truths of the scripture. These services will be continued during the week. One hour services of prayer and scripture study from 4 to 5 p. m., preaching every night at 7:30 p. m.—N. O.-C.

A Little More Definite If you Please.

Prof. Atkinson's reply to what we said against his idea of the adherence of a multitude to a thing being proof that there was some good in it, is rather indefinite. The first part of his article seems to be talking about something we did not say, and could not logically be inferred from anything that we did say. And we shall not notice it at all, only to say that it is thought that whatever of good there may be in the heathen religion, is borrowed from our Bible.

We confess we are somewhat surprised at what Bro. Atkinson says about the whiskey traffic; for, if what he says means anything, it seems to be this: Whatever answers the purpose of a wicked man has good in it to him. Christ says: A fountain cannot send forth sweet and bitter water at the same time; and we know that the whiskey traffic sends forth much that is bitter. The last part of the Prof's. article is good, and we do not object to his saying that there is some good in the heathen religions. But we do say that it is so deep down in the mud of sin that it takes close looking to find it.

We do not believe that because great numbers believe in a thing, there must necessarily be some good in it.

Christian Character.

The late Professor——of Wake Forest College said, on his dying bed among his last words. While sending messages to friends, tell the young men of the College to not fail in establishing Christian Character. Real Christian character will be worth more to you in every stage of life, than rubies or silver or gold, for it is the only friend, that you make on earth, but what may desert you, and that will stand by you when sick or well, whether rich or poor, while living or dying, for time and eternity and will justify you before the Judgment bar of God. No man living can place a proper estimate upon Christian character, for there is no earthly possession or gem worthy to be compared with it. When a man has Christian character he is then enabled to subdue his passions, bridle his tongue, govern his temper, and to live an honest life; furthermore he will be true to God his maker and benefactor, true to the church and true to humanity; he will not turn the stranger and hungry man from his door, he will "visit the fatherless and widows in their afflictions, and keep himself unspotted from the world." Character like religion can have no substitute, it is either religion or no religion, hence reputation cannot be a substitute for character. Character is what a man proves to be: reputation is what he is thought to be. Character is the inner man, reputation is the outer man. Character is always real: reputation may be and often is false. Character is substantial; reputation is fleeting. "Character is in a man's own soul: reputation is in the minds of others." Character is a man's exact value: reputation is his selling price. I frequently fear that most of us, are more anxious about our reputation than we are about our character, and that men are trying harder to make a reputation than character. When it is found out that man has nothing but reputation, he will be hated and forsaken. A poor man with Chris-ian character is better than a man with nothing but reputation. Solomon says "A good name is better than precious ointment. Ecc 1:1, and again he says a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches. Pro. 22:1.

The Railroad Man.

Possibly no class of men are abused and censured more by the public than railroad men. This censure often makes a broad sweep from president down to the track hand. But, notwithstanding all the criticism from the cold public, the railroad men, as a class, are a warm hearted, polite clever set of gentlemen.

Just think for a moment, how many questions, of the same kind, these men have to answer every day, and then ask yourself the question; would my patience hold out as that of the agent, the conductor or some other important officer.

Remember that these men must remain at their post all kind of weather, denied many of the privileges of home life. No time to read the Bible or religious books. Often cut off from church privileges, and hardened by contact with all classes of wicked people.

No class of men are worth more to the public than railroad men. They handle the commerce of all kinds for the world, stand guard over a traveling public and convey the letters of business, love and sympathy to all parts of the earth.

These faithful men deserve the prayers and sympathies of all people. May God bless them every one.

Charity.

The primary meaning of Charity is love, and this includes all of its other shades of meaning. It is a pleasure to give to an object that you love, and look with pity upon the faults of those whom you admire. Love to God and man is the first characteristic of the Christian religion. Without this the high sounding professions are vain. They are as emptiness filled with nothingness. Paul says; "Now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." Paul tells us that "charity thinketh no evil." But we find many members of the church talking evil about their neighbors whether they think it or not. Surely if they had the charity that Paul speaks of, they would not do so.

You hear some say "charity begins at home." Is it in those homes where husbands abuse their wives, and wives are untrue to their husbands? Surely not. He who has charity at home will have it away from home.

Love for the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ in any one will send him to church, the prayer meeting and the Sunday school. It will open his pocket book to the enterprises of the church and suffering humanity. It will make him look for the good spots in his neighbor's character, instead of the bad ones.

Friend, have you charity? If so we know many of the things you have been doing. Let us pray for more charity.

Suffolk Letter.

Yesterday was a very rainy day. Congregations here very small. It must have been worse in the country. This shows the importance of doing our Conference work before the end of the year. If put off till the last Sunday, and that is a rainy one, the Conference assessments are not carried up in full. And yet Conference growth depends on local church contributions to Conference funds. I hope Eastern Virginia will come up in full this year.

The "Columbian Carnival" closed last Friday night. It continued ten nights. The good ladies worked heroically and as most everything was given their sales were almost net profits. Hams, eggs, chickens, turkeys, butter, fancy work, chairs, pictures and other things were given. Ice cream, cake, lunch, regular suppers were served at reasonable cost and they were well patronized. The two military companies, Phoenix Fire Company, and Uniformed Rank of Knights of Pythias all took supper during the time. It was no trouble to sell fifteen gallons of ice cream during one evening. "Uncle Zedekiah's trip to the World's Fair," which is a reproduction on canvas, under a powerful calcium light, of the "White City" and many exhibits of the Fair, and was given at the City Hall, by W. E. Hermance on Thursday night for the benefit of the Carnival, and this netted them $150. They cannot tell what the result will be till they dispose of the house built for the Carnival, but it will be near one thousand dollars. When the ladies of my church undertake an enterprise they know no such word as fail. The social feature of the Carnival was what might be characterized as ten evenings of religious enjoyment. Mrs. A. L. Hill who has been visiting Mrs. Beale, leaves for Norfolk today. Mrs. H. W. Brewer, of Washington, D. C., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Weller, and other friends. Col. Savage, and many others from Norfolk also, were here during the Carnival. Too many came from Berea to place their names in this letter. Many ladies outside of our church in other congregations not only attended but aided daily in the good work. For all this our ladies are grateful.

Of course we will be very glad to see North Carolina preachers at our Conference. They are always welcome and we expect several of them this year.

Today is bright and pleasant and so ought our hearts to be, far brighter than the sunshine after the storm are the tokens of Divine mercy and love to our lives. He floods our pathway with light. He fills us with music. Heaven and earth minister to our life. Time and eternity are full of hope to the believing one. Before us are thrones and spiritual dominion if we only follow Christ. Higher and holier are our aspirations as we near the end of our pilgrimage and the shining shore

Who Can Tell.

What? Why, where in the Bible these words may be found:

Blessed are sinners when the churches shall get up entertainments to amuse them.

Or these:

Blessed are the churches when the ungodly shall applaud them for the elegant entertainments given.

Or these:

Prosperity shall crown the church when it draws on the world a sight draft through an entertainment for money to help it maintain, or spread the gospel.

Now get your concordance and go to work, and report the results of your search through the SUN.

Christianity in India.

A little more than one hundred years ago the work of the Protestant missionary began in India. Then not one native Christian was to be found within the entire vast realm. The Gospel in the earth for 1,800 years, and not a living native Christian among the 800,000,000 of Eastern and Central Asia! Now sixty-five Protestant mission societies are working in India, supporting in their work a foreign force of 1,569 ordained workers, aided by 113 ladies assistants and 2,500 native preachers. The number of Protestant church members in India is now 560,000, or 160,000 more than ten years ago. Of these members, 133,313 are Episcopalians, 123,000 Baptists, 62,000 Lutherans, 37,000 Presbyterians, 32,000 Methodists, etc. Christians in Punjab, in ten years, have increased 335 per cent., in Bombay 92 per cent, and in the Madras Presidency 30 per cent. In 1850 the total of Christians was 91,000. In the mission schools are 175,000 boys and 105,000 girls, and in the Sunday schools about 136,009 children. While the empire contains 288,000,000 of people, only 13,000,000 of all can read and write. Of the entire population, Hinduism claims 75 per cent, Islamism 20 per cent, Buddhism 2½ per cent, and Christianity four-fifths of one per cent, the Christian population being counted at 2,225,000. The per cent of gain for the Christians in ten years has been 22, a much larger rate than the natural growth of the empire.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Resolutions.

At a regular meeting of the Berkeley Christian church the following tribute in memory of our deceased brother Rev. S. S. Barret was unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst our aged and most highly esteemed brother, S. S. Barrett, who was for many years a faithful member of the Christian church, kind father, good neighbor and loyal citizen, therefore,

RESOLVED, That while we miss our fallen brother, we submissively bow to our Heavenly Father's righteous will, believing that our brother is taken up higher to join his praises with those who have gone before him, by him whose will is supreme and whose providences "all work together for good to them that love the Lord."

That we extend our sympathies to the bereaved ones in their great loss. That we strive to imitate that Christian character and noble deeds of our highly esteemed brother, especially his amiable disposition, his inflexible fidelity to his trust, and in his unfeigned piety to his God; that we like him shall be prepared when the final summons shall come to bid the messenger of death a hearty welcome sent simply to translate us from this unfriendly world of trials and troubles to the eternal home of God, "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

That a copy of the above be spread on our minutes and also a copy be sent to the family and also one to the CHRISTIAN SUN for publication.

Life is Misery.

To many people who have the taint of scrofula in their blood. The agonies caused by the dreadful running sores and other manifestations of this disease are beyond description. There is no other remedy equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla for scrofula, salt rheum and every form of blood disease. It is reasonably sure to benefit all who give it a fair trial.

MISCELLANY CONTINUED:

World's Fair Wonder.

One of the many wonders at the World's Fair is the Ferris Wheel. From the ground to the top of the wheel it is two hundred and sixty-four feet. Between the two rims of the wheel are hung thirty-six coaches, about the size of Pullman passenger cars, the same being nicely upholstered in leather and elegantly furnished. Each coach will accommodate sixty passengers, and thus all the coaches will carry a total of twenty-one hundred and sixty persons when filled. From the platforms, six of the thirty-six cars can be filled at one time. Once filled, the doors of each car locked by a guide, who remains within the car. Two complete revolutions are made, and the circumference of the wheel being about seven hundred and fifty feet, a distance of about fifteen hundred feet is made in the two revolutions. Passengers rise two hundred and fifty feet, it being fourteen feet from the bottom of the car, when at the top, to the outer elevation of the wheel. Two towers of masonry reach from a depth of thirty-five feet below the surface to eighteen feet above. These towers support the wheel. The wheel rests on an axle of steel, which is forty-five feet two inches long and thirty-three inches in diameter. This steel axle is the largest piece of steel ever forged in the world, and itself weighs fifty-six tons. It cost $35,000. The entire wheel with its belongings weighs 4,300 tons, and cost $400,000. It is estimated that it will resist a pressure of one hundred miles an hour. At night the wheel carries 3,000 incandescent lights of various colors, which are alternately extinguished and relighted as the wheel revolves. The two revolutions are made in twenty minutes, the ride costing fifty cents. From the top one has a bird's-eye view of Chicago and much of Lake Michigan.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

Married.

In Burlington, N. C., at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. G. W. Holt, by Rev. C. C. Peele, Oct. 12, 1893, Miss Callie E. Holt, to Dr. R. M. Morram. The groom is one of Burlington's dentists and a popular and growing young man, while he is to be congratulated on winning the heart and hand of such an excellent young lady. The bride and groom left for the World's Fair immediately after leave taking of parents and friends.

Many and useful presents added to the interest of the occasion. May blessings and happiness crowd every path they tread.

Dr. Geo. E. Jordan and Miss Lydia L. Michael were married Oct 4, 1893. The father of the bride Peter Michael who lives a few miles from the college gave a sumptuous dinner to a few invited guests and made the occasion a delightful one to all present. The Dr. and his bride departed the next morning on the train going west for a visit to the World's Fair. Our best wishes go with these young people who were at different times students of ours.

Obituary.

It is with sadness, we chronicle, the death of Sister Alice Jones, nee Alice Allen. She was born March 28, 1871, and died Sept. 27, 1893. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church in 1883, and remained here until 1892, when she joined McGuires Chapel Christian Church where she remained a devout worshiper until her death. She first married, a Mr Atkins, and they lived together one year and went to Texas and there lived about one year, where Mr. Atkins died and left her a widow, with one child, she then returned to her father's in Tallapoosa Co., Ala. She had not been back a great while before her child was taken from her to join the Heavenly throng. After remaining single about three years, she again married to Mr. Robert Jones a model Christian man.

She was always prompt at the church, and always cheerful. And she was a sweet singer, but her voice is hushed here—but is not Heaven's music sweeter since she joined the angel's band? Those who witnessed her death were strengthened in their faith. She realized that her time had come, and met death as only a Christian could. She told her husband how she wanted him to live and how to raise her little babe. She died in the triumph of a living faith. May God bless the bereaved husband and console him with the assurance that he will meet her again, on the other shore. Our loss is her eternal gain.

H. W. ELDER.

Milltown, Ala.

Aunt Betsy Hatch.

This is the appellation by which the wife of Rev. J. W. Hatch was known for many years. The death of this good woman was announced in the SUN some time ago and one or two have written something about her life, but I want to speak of her as one who knew her well and as one who will ever fondly cherish her memory. For several years I was pastor of the dear people of Hank's Chapel. There were some choice Christian men and women in that congregation and one of them was Aunt Betsy. Last summer I visited the old church. Many had died since I had last seen the place, but many were still living, and in the congregation that gathered the first Sunday of last July in that old church was Aunt Betsy. I went to her home and found her just as busy and careful to entertain me as ever, the day was bright and balmy and she and her husband were cheerful and happy. Many years had passed over their heads, but benevolence and virtue dwelt in their hearts, and they were as cheerful as when the spring of life opened to their view. When we look at a good woman we never think of her age. A good woman never grows old. She is lovely and looks as charming as when the rose of youth first bloomed on her cheek. That rose has not faded yet; it will never fade. In her neighborhood she was the friend of all and benefactor of everybody. Who does not respect and love the woman who has passed her days in acts of kindness and mercy? We say such a woman never grows old, she will always be fresh and buoyant in spirits, and active in deeds of mercy and benevolence. What we call old age is to such only maturity or ripeness. As ripe fruit is better than green fruit so is age to such sweeter than youth. As harvest-time is a bright and more joyful time than seed-time so is the age of such brighter than youth. As the completion of a work is more glorious than the beginning so is the age of a Christian more glorious than youth. As sailing into port, gently wafted by soft breezes, is a happier thing than the voyage so is age to such better than youth. Her end was purer, Her gentle, tender, sweet spirit gave out blessing while she lived and will send forth an invitation to heaven to all behind.

Good Family Medicines

Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills.

"I regard Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills, the very best family medicines, and we are never without them. I have always been

A Delicate Woman

and began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla three years ago for that tired feeling. It built me up so quickly and so well that I feel like a different woman and have always had great faith in it. I give it to my children whenever there seems any trouble with their blood, and it does them good. My little boy likes it so well he cries for it. I cannot find words to tell how highly I prize it. We use Hood's Pills in the family and they

Act Like a Charm

I take pleasure in recommending these medicines to all my friends, for I believe if people would only keep Hood's Sarsaparilla and Hood's Pills at hand as we do, much sickness and suffering would be prevented." Mrs. L. TOWNSEND, Rising Sun, Delaware.

Hood's Sarsaparilla Cures

Hood's Pills act easily, yet promptly and efficiently, on the liver and bowels. 25c.

Oct. 7th, 1893, near Suffolk, Nansemond Co., Va., Mrs. Salinda Smith, beloved wife of Bro. John Smith aged 49 years, 9 mo. and 7 days, Sister Smith was a great sufferer, during her last days upon earth, though she was fully resigned to the Lord's will. She was a good Christian woman, and will be greatly missed at home, in the community, and in the church. She was a faithful member of Bethlehem C. church. She united with the church when about eleven years of age. She leaves a large family and many friends to mourn their loss. A devoted husband eight loving children, five boys and three girls, and several grand children. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor at the church where her remains were placed away to await the resurrection morn. God bless and comfort the bereaved ones. May the children remember the good advice of mother, dear mother, and meet her by and by in heaven.

Sister Effie E. Squires died at her home in Burlington, N. C., Monday Oct. 2nd, 1893, age 19 y'rs. 7 months, and 26 days. Sister Squires had been a member of Union Christian Church five years. Before dying she sang, "What a friend we have in Jesus." A beautiful song for a Christian in the hour of death to sing. She leaves a father, mother, brothers and sisters to mourn their loss. Funeral by the writer in Union Church, Oct. 3rd.

May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

THOS. W. STROUD.

Departed this life Oct. 5, 1893, Sister Annie Manu, aged about 23 years. The deceased had been for a number of years a consistent member of the Ebenezer M. E. Church, but was at the time of her death, a member of no church, holding instead a letter of recommendation which had never been deposited. She left behind to mourn her departure, two children, a husband, father and mother, and a large circle of friends; but they mourn not as those without hope. Funeral services by the writer from Ebenezer M. E. Church.

May God comfort the bereaved.

Rates from intermediate points in the same proportion.

Oct. 9th, 1893 near Suffolk, Nansemond Co., Va., Mr. Amos B. Badger, aged 73 years, 1 mo. and 9 days. Bro. Badger was a great sufferer, with cancer on his face near his eye. While he was a great sufferer, he was also a great and good man. He was a man of deep piety and full of charity. He was old Cypress Chapel's most faithful member. He was a true member of the masonic fraternity—practically—there was no better mason, than Amos B. Badger—He was a man of God. I asked him on one occasion, when he was suffering great pain, "Bro Badger, you have been serving the Lord, for lo, these many years have you, and do you, now, find grace sufficient to sustain you? He says, "yes, He is with me," and he praised the Lord and asked us all to meet him in heaven.

He was married twice—He leaves to mourn their loss—a devoted wife, several children—grand children and a host of friends—His funeral sermon was preached by his pastor at his home and his body placed away in the old family burying ground to await the second coming of his Lord. God bless the bereaved ones.

SUBSTANTIAL REWARDS FOR THOSE WHOSE ANSWERS ARE CORRECT

A man once entered a prison where was confined a condemned criminal. He was at one taken to the prisoner. Now, what relation was the prisoner to the visitor?

ALL POLICYHOLDERS UPON AN EQUAL FOOTING.

By able, conservative management, safe investments, big rate of interest, low death rate, the Northwestern has won the love and applause of its policyholders and the respect and admiration of all who are acquainted with it.

Mr. J. S. Carr, Durham, N. C., under date of Oct. 24, '92, says: "I am pleased to say that I have been insured in the Northwestern since 1887, and I am greatly pleased with my investment, so much so, in fact, that I have since taken out three additional policies making altogether $50,000, the full limit on a single life. I do not hesitate to commend the Northwestern to my friends."

Mr. J. H. McAden, President Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, Charlotte, N.C., says: "I think the Northwestern, without exception, one of the soundest organizations and the best for the policyholder. I now hold three policies in this company. My dividends are much larger than in other companies in which I carry insurance. The affairs of the company are safely and conservatively managed; they pay promptly and are exceedingly fair and liberal in their dealings with their policy-holders."

Mr. R. B. Raney, Raleigh, N. C., under date of April 1, '93, says: "I have held a policy in the Northwestern for a number of years, and am satisfied it has no superior."

YOUR FUTURE

IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well-marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness; a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the CIRCLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x22 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $300; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; long FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

Only a Workingman.

"He is only a workingman!"
How often we hear it said
With sneering supercilious tones
And slighting toss of the head.
I am only a workingman,
And proud I am of the name, Though my face be grimed with dust of toil
I count it no sign of shame.
I am only a workingman,
Though humble my toil may be.
At the carpenter's bench at Nazareth
Worked the man of Galilee
Yes, his hands were hardened with toil;
Oftentimes dropped his weary head
As the Lord of Creation labored
To earn his daily bread.
He was only a workingman,
My brother, like me and you—
True worth lies not in place or rank,
But in faithful heart and true.
Oh, brothers and sisters of toil,
Uplift your drooping eyes!
The humblest toil was dignified
By the Lord of Paradise.

—William Reid, in Utica Observer.

Durham, N. C.

DEAR SUN:—I went down to Morrisville Monday after the 2nd Sunday to help Rev. J. A. Jouns in a meeting, and stayed until the next Friday. We had a good meeting, all denominations came right together in the work; and with Prof. J. H. Moring to lead the music it was grand; as good as I ever heard. God bless the dear people of Morrisville. I can never forget their kindness.

I returned to my church in Durham, and preached Sunday to the children with a good congregation, and one sweet little girl joined the church and several more little girls praise their God aloud. At night we had a good congregation, two converts and 6 or 8 penitents and a good meeting. Monday morning I boarded the train for Henderson and to Liberty (Vance) where I met Rev. J. D. Wicker the pastor and remained until Friday and we had a good meeting, 12 or 15 converts, and 4 additions to the church. How pleasant was to be here with the dear brethren and sisters where I had labored so many years with them. This people are so dear to me and have a warm place in my heart.

My congregations were rather small at home both services yesterday but very pleasant. One professed faith in Christ at the evening service. I have a good revival interest in my church now.

Who Pays the Bills.

Who pays the bills? Who feeds the drunkard's children? Who provide for the drunkard's wife? Who supports the beggarly tramps who having wasted their money in drink, wander about the country? Who repairs the losses caused by the failure of intemperate merchants and reckless and half intoxicated business men? Who makes good the damages caused by the blunders of drunken workmen, and the hinderance of business caused by the srees of intemperate employes? Who pays for the railroad wrecks caused by drunken conductors and engineers? Who builds the asylums where crazy drunkards are kept? Who supports the idiotic children of drunken men? Who pays the expenses of trials and commitments and executions occasioned by the crimes of drunken men? Who pays for the property destroyed and burned by drunken men? Who builds and supports almshouses, which but for drink might remain unoccupied? Who endures the suffering and brutality, which are due to the recklessness and insanity of drunken husbands and fathers? Who pays for the inquests held on drunkards found dead by the way-side? Who pays for the pauper's coffin, and for digging a drunkard's grave in Potter's field, when the last glass has been drunk?

Who pays the bills? The drunkard cannot, for he has wasted his substance in his cup. Will the rum-seller pay them? The fact is, you and I, and the sober and industrious toiling portion of the community must meet all these bills. The drunken rowdy wounded in the street fight, is cared for in the city hospital at our expense; the drunken beggar is fed from our table; his hungry children come to our doors for bread and we cannot refuse assistance to his suffering wife, and when at last having "wasted his substance in riotous living," he comes to the almshouse, the asylum, the hospital, or the prison, honest, sober, temperate men pay the bills for supporting him there. There is no escaping it, we may protest, we may grumble at the taxes and find fault with beggars, but ultimately and inevitably we must foot the bill. —New England Evangelist.

Idols, Not "Statues."

One who was born in India, to whom idol worship is no myth, but who knows that hundreds of millions of poor, deluded human beings bow down and worship wood and stone, or animals and imaginary deities or demons, in comparison with which the Christian's devil is a charming character, grows very weary of the oft-repeated stories from the Parliament of Religions, of the purity of Buddhism, Brahminism and Shintooism, and the imperfection of Christianity.

When our brother from Ceylon places the idol upon a pedestal and points with pride to an image of Gaudama older than the Christian era which has been worshiped for more than two thousand years, we grow weary. But when our brothers of the daily press report that there was a "statue of Buddha" (instead of the only honest name known for the object—a heathen idol) placed upon the platform, we smile.

One of our Brahmin brothers boldly declared the other day that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," but we must insist that there is a great difference between a statue and an idol.

Christianity can court comparison with any and every faith without fear of any one being misled if the truth is told; but if black is called white, pollution termed purity, and idols called "statues," there are many foolish persons who may be deceived by such falsehoods into believing that the poor deluded dupes of heathendom are nearer heaven today than those who have the truth in all its fullness. All we ask for is the truth, fairly stated and fairly received. Then there need be no fear for the results. —Ram's Horn.

The joints and muscles are so lubricated by Hood's Sarsaparilla that all rheumatism and stiffness soon disappears. Get only Hood's.

To our poor blinded minds it seems strange that God should deny us so many of the things that we long to have. It is easy to see why, for our good, he should withhold such merely temporal benefactions as houses, lands, and moneys. These are not the soul's true needs. We can get along without them. The absence of them is, in fact, often a necessary condition of growth to the greatest heights of character. In crucifying our natural desires for them we may be performing the acts that shall give us the badge of nobility in the kingdom of heaven. But why should we be denied the human love after which we long with intense and ardent desire? Why should the very best and holiest of our instincts often fail to find the objects of their satisfaction? Ah, this is a hard question. But we may be sure that when our heavenly Father keeps back any good thing from us he does it in order that either here or hereafter, he may give us some better thing in its place. —C. Advocate.

TRUE SAYINGS.

Nuggets of Pure Gold Taken from the Ram's Horn.

Love is God's only weapon.
Faith never stops looking up.
The devil never wastes any powder on a corpse.

When a man believes God he does something.

When sin came into the world it brought indecency along with it.

The more unbaptized money a Christian has the worse he is off.

There is no sinner more dangerous than the highly-respected one.

The devil loves the man who lives only to make others unhappy.

The man who loves right loves God, whether he knows it or not.

The man who is a stranger to God is not much acquainted with himself.

God does not want anybody to do His work who does not enjoy His rest.

When we look at the mountain it grows, but when we look at God it goes.

It is only when the Christian feels himself weak that God can be his strength.

There are sermons in stories only for the man who knows how to break them up.

People who expect to praise God in Heaven ought to do something at it here on earth.

The Christian's peace is something the world has never been able to fathom or understand.

Christ ate with publicans and sinners, but He never took a meal with a hypocrite.

A hard place to find religious warmth is in prayer meeting on a back seat.

Some of our prayers would mean more in Heaven if our money would say amen.

God always plants a good man where his life can not be endangered by drought.

Obscurity on earth will never keep anybody from owning a mansion in Heaven.

The devil would rather prove God not good than to prove Him out of existence.

If you knew that you hate your neighbor, God knows that you do not love Him.

There are still a few preachers who should take a vacation and give their congregation a rest.

The man who simply wants to be good enough to get to Heaven can not make a prayer that is not selfish.

The agnostic who expects to fathom God with his finite faculties does not try to wind up the universe with his watch-key.

The man who gets religion right is continually saying by every act of his life: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."
