EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Earthquake In Italy. For years the world has not known a catastrophe surpassing, in devastation and destruction of life and property, the earthquake which visited Southern Italy and Sicily December 28. The Minister of Marine places the estimate of lives lost at about 200,000, there being no estimate given of the tremendous loss of property. The three provinces Cosenza, Catanzaro and Reggio, forming the southwestern extremity of Italy, or "the toe of the boot" on the map, were the chief sufferers, a score of towns, with all human life and property being destroyed—all in forty seconds. The city of Messina was about totally destroyed and 50,000 inhabitants lost their lives. Bagnana, a town of 10,000 people, was entirely obliterated. Not a few towns are entirely gone, not a trace of man or property to tell the awful tale of tragedy. In short, no newspaper account at present can give any adequate conception of the extent and awfulness of the catastrophe. All Italy is appalled and the civilized world stands aghast at the immensity of loss in life and property without a moment's warning for escape or the possibility of escape.

The Pope of Rome started a subscription for the sufferers by giving $200,000 himself and calling on Catholics everywhere to contribute. King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena went at once to the stricken district to aid in the work of relief and gave personally a subscription of $400,000. Southern Italy has suffered many tragedies in its history but we do not now recall one surpassing this in loss of life and property.

In such times when wholesale destruction and the instant death of unnumbered thousands stare us in the face this Scripture comes to mind, "Be ye also ready for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."

A Gracious Christmas Gift. The Celtic of our America navy had been supplied with Christmas gifts for the soldiers and sailors of our Atlantic squadron, but when the news of Italy's earthquake and terrible distress incident thereto reached our naval headquarters, orders were at once changed so that the gifts that were to go to meet our squadron in mid ocean, to make merry our soldiers returning home from their long trip around the world, went forthwith to Messina to relieve the starving and famishing there.

The Celtic has aboard $150,000 worth of provisions, sufficient food for 50,000 people for a month; $32,000 worth of clothing: tents enough to accommodate 1,000 persons and a large quantity of medical and surgical supplies; she has 7,500 suits of outer clothing, 3,500 suits of underwear, 25,000 pairs of socks and 3,500 pairs of shoes.

Our ships were the first to reach Kingston just after the West Indian earthquakes, so likely are we to have the first ship at Messina with actual supplies though we are 3,600 miles away from the seat of the disaster.

Stetson Hats. John B. Stetson has been dead some years, but his work goes on and there are thousands who wear his hats, made at the great Philadelphia manufactory, and will have no other. Because he learned a secret of felt making, not used by any other house in America, and in addition to adorning the head, wrought to warm the heart and adorn the character of many others, Stetson's name does not fade, nor the business that he established fall away.

In this establishment Stetson conceived the notion several years ago that the men in the shop who helped to make his business a success should share in the proceeds of his profit. A scale was arranged so that workmen who continued faithful and steadfast through the year should receive a bonus of 5 per cent on their annual wage. Seven years ago this bonus was increased to 10 per cent and since it has been increased to 25 per cent. The first year the system went into effect only 25 per cent of the men worked continuously through the year. Last year ninety-five per cent kept at work steadily. This means something in an establishment which employs 4,600 people. Among the free distributions the past year, besides the bonuses, were 1900 turkeys, one to each married man; 1,500 hats to men and boys; 1,000 pairs of gloves to the girls (in addition to 1,000 boxes of candy), 60 gold chains to old and faithful employees; over $50,000 worth of Stetson stock to particularly deserving workmen. Attached to the immense factory is an auditorium in which is an organ costing $12,000 and a chorus of 200 men and women sang there in glad-ness at Christmas.

No wonder men wear the Stetson hat. A great head conceived its making, and a great heart promoted its manufacture and sale. Capital and labor have no warfare in such an establishment as that, and both hand and dollar contrive for best results.

Such an establishment makes the world of industry its debtor and convinces us that men in any and in all honest trades may make the world better and life worth living.

The "Dry" Area Widens. After a splendid, but hotly contested campaign, Roanoke, Va., has voted "dry" on Dec. 30, Sothampton and Houston and "Banned District" in which they are situated following the same good way by comfortable majorities Dec. 31. Prohibition is sweeping all before it in the Old Dominion, not a city or a locality trying an election of recent months in which, as we now recall, prohibition did not win out in a walk. Evidently the people of that good commonwealth are making up their minds to get along without saloons for a season, a most fortunate and happy riddance.

By the decree of the people of the ballot box last May every saloon and dispensary in North Carolina shut up shop and went out of business on the evening of December 31st, and the barrooms may now be used for better merchandise than rum, and saloon keepers may engage in a better business than that of bringing poverty, wreck and ruin upon their neighbors and their community. And many will. Not a few ex-saloon keepers will soon be engaged in honest industry and by their energy and efforts will be adding to the wealth and welfare of their countrymen. Thousands of dollars heretofore dissipated in rum will be turned to channels of manufacture and other productive industries, and it takes no prophet to say that hundreds of men, driven by law from keeping saloons in North Carolina, will live to thank those who voted to enact the law and change them from the worse to the better way of living.

FROM THE FIELD.

Valley, Va. Letter.

Our revival meeting at Joppa was literally snowed under. On the night previous to the snow-fall the interest and visible results were so much better than at any time during the meeting that we had high hopes of still better results to follow. But our hopes could not be realized. As a result of the meeting five young people decided for Christ. Several others were, apparently, almost on the point of yielding themselves to the Lord, and it was with some degree of sadness that I turned my face homeward without other opportunity of appealing to them.

The Sunday-school at Linville observed Christmas by having a Christmas tree and appropriate exercises. The good people of Linville kindly remembered their pastor with a purse containing three dollars, for which he hereby expresses his appreciation.

Words of appreciation are also due the good people of Antioch, for a Christmas present of $8.25. So far as I have learned, Miss Jessie Wampler was instrumental in raising this amount. Though young in years, Miss Jessie has shown herself in many ways to be one of our best workers. A pastor is grateful to his people, not only for the material monetary value of these gifts, but for the kind spirit and feeling of which they are an expression. Such gifts remind us that back of the gift there is good will and appreciation on the part of the giver. And I think it does us all good to know that our services, however poor, are appreciated. A. W. Andes.

Field Notes.

I have closed the year's work with the churches of my charge in very good condition. The work on our new building at Union Ridge has been suspended for a while, owing to the winter weather and sickness of the wife of one of the contractors. Christmas exercises at Bethlehem and New Providence, were held on Christmas day. Every thing passed off pleasantly and the children did their parts well, and seemed to enjoy their treat of toys and good things to eat. Thanks are due and are hereby tendered to a number of kind friends for meats, sausage, honey, apples, etc. Among the donors were Mrs. E. W. Wilkins, Riley Sutton, Mrs. Smith, and Mrs. Gilliam. J. W. Holt.

—Every eight years eleven million pupils go, or drop, out of our Sunday-schools, unconverted, unsaved—lost.

IN PORTO RICO.

Dear Friends In The Home Land:

I will let you hear from me through The Sun. I had a most delightful voyage. The Captain and all the officers were very pleasant. I was on deck all the time, except when eating and sleeping.

I was met by Bro. and Sister Barrett and taken to their home first, which I enjoyed very much.

Met quite a number of missionaries and others, whom I am glad to know. I spent several days with Bro. Barrett and had the privilege of attending services with them. They are doing a good work here, though their labor is much handicapped by the lack of a church. You can't imagine what a draw-back it is to the work to be without a church home unless we compare our work with that of other missions here which have comfortable churches. I went to one service with the United Brethren, enjoyed it very much. They have a nice church and a good congregation, and are doing fine work. May God's richest blessings rest on them and their work is my prayer.

All the other Protestant missions have churches, and the natives seem to think that a rented hall is not just the proper place to hold services. They do not have the same reverence as they do in a church. So let us rally and go forward in God's name, and build a church. I believe it would advance the work more than any thing else could do at present.

As to my work, I arrived at the Orphanage Monday morning ready for work, but Miss Kinsley thought best to have a week to get acquainted, and it was not long before we knew each other. The children are all so bright and happy it does one good to see them. I think the work very interesting. Miss Kinsley has done a wonderful work in training these little ones for the Master. They all seem to love her just as they would their own mother, and I know she gives them a mother's love and care. I can truly say I believe it is God's will for me to be here. I already love the children and they seem to think a great deal of me. I have a S. S. class of six bright girls of which I am very proud, because they study their lessons so well and give such good answers to questions. God is with us in all our work. Pray for us. Susie Turpin.

—According to a New York dispatch an air ship is to be built, at the Nixon ship-yards, 700 feet long, with accommodations for 100 passengers and food and fuel enough for a voyage across the ocean. The craft is to cost more than $1,000,000.

THE GOSPEL FOR THE RICH.

So much that is false or unreasonable has been spoken and printed about the attitude of the churches toward men of wealth that it is refreshing to find a straightforward, common-sense discussion of this subject by a minister of the Gospel such as is presented by Rev. Charles F. Aked in the January number of Appleton's magazine under the title "The Gospel for the Rich." Although Dr. Aked has among his congregation the richest man in the country, he contends vigorously against the view sometimes attributed to churchmen by their enemies that injustice in the acquisition of riches can be atoned merely by lavish gifts to religious causes. He lays down as the three principles which should govern the attitude of Christians in this matter that money is honorably owned only when it is the equivalent of services rendered, that it is dishonestly owned when men and women have been used merely as instruments for producing wealth, and that no amount of money-giving can atone for money-stealing.

"The possession of millions is not necessarily the hall-mark of a thief," says Dr. Aked in his Appleton article, after laying down the preceding formula. "It may be that, but on the other hand it may be that the millionaire is only being properly paid for the work he has done for mankind. The Church must take its stand fearlessly against evil practices in the accumulation of wealth just as it is doing in its condemnation of evils of the drink traffic and in connection with other industrial and social evils. But we are not called to sit in judgment upon the past for any other purpose than that we may live better in the present and the future. Things were done in the past without protest which we consider wrong. It is the part of a minister of Christ to encourage the growth of a conscience which shall judge fairly the man who in the past did things which nobody then considered wrong and a conscience which will neither desire nor permit these things to be done in the future.

"It is an encouraging thing that vast stories of wealth are being used with ever-increasing readiness for unselfish ends. The doctrine of 'stewardship' is growing. What is needed is that everybody shall own it as a rule of practical living, and that the rich who have not joined the ranks of those who feel themselves 'stewards' shall be induced to follow the shining examples that have glorified our age."

The name of Florence Morse Kingsley brings instantly to the mind of thousands of readers some one or all of her great trilogy of religious novels, "Titus, a Comrade of the Cross," "Stephen, a Soldier of the Cross," and "Paul, a Herald of the Cross," in which the familiar Biblical characters named are the central figures. While these are perhaps the best-known of Mrs. Kingsley's books she has written several others dealing with incidents of sacred history which by their wealth of historical detail give one a better understanding of these events. In her latests romance, the serial publication of which begins in the January number of Appleton's, she has taken up the beautiful story of Queen Esther which serves as the groundwork of a fascinating narrative. The title of the story is "The Star of Love" which is the literal translation of the name Esther.

Appleton's magazine begins the new year with two features that are of especial interest to Christian readers. The first of these is a striking article by Rev. Charles F. Aked on "The Gospel for the Rich," in which he defines the attitude toward wealth and its possessors. The second is the first instalment of a serial by Florence Morse Kingsley, author of "Titus," "Paul," and other historical religious books. This new story is entitled "The Star of Love" and has Queen Esther as its central character. Articles by Mary Heaton Vorse, James L. Ford, Arthur W. Rolker, Francis Crowninshield, Professor G. Stanley Hall and Dr. James J. Walsn, and stories by H. C. Bailey, Jeanette I. Helm, Porter Emerson Browne, James Barr and Gertrude Kink complete a well-rounded number.

A PLEA FOR GOOD LITERATURE.

About a quarter of a century ago, on a cold day, we saw a loving Christian wife, burdened with anxiety walking the room, and peering out through the thick falling snow, to get sight of her kind, absent husband. For hours this storm raged, and the strong wind shook the slender old house, while the dear wife's footsteps quickened; and her anxiety changed to excitement; and then to frenzy, till it required the strength of her three grown daughters to carry her back into the house, out of the deep snow, into which she had rushed to meet her returning husband whom she saw not many paces away.

You must imagine that meeting of husband and wife, and daughters, for words are too few and cold to describe it. That embracing, kissing, and blessing the one whom they feared was lost, and buried in the snow. How they all thanked God for his return. Of course, we wept in joy with them. Well, after the brief period of rejoicing had subsided, the husband recognized us and shouted aloud: "I have the best wife and children in the world! I never could live without them; and I could scarcely live with them." (They were very poor people; we were sheltering there from the storm.) So have we heard our mother say as to the Biblical Recorder; "It is the best paper in the world to me; I never can live without it; and can scarcely live with it." And so, say we of the Christian Advocate. It is the best paper in the world to us. We cannot live without it; and we can scarcely live with it.

And doubtless many a good mother has said this of the Presbyterian paper, and of the M. P. paper, of the Christian Sun, and of all denominations.

Yes, the mothers often say this, for they know it is the best food that they and their children can find out of the Bible.

But how very few fathers agree with their wives on this line! Or, in other words, how very, very few of them take their church papers, and read them, and hand them to their children! Tennyson says, "We are a part of all that we have seen, heard and read."

With what care, then, should our literature be selected. As the years roll on we see the efforts of all ages and sexes to spread secular papers are becoming stronger and stronger, and reaching wider and wider. See how men and women toil in late contests to broadcast these papers! We pass no criticism here at all. Many of these give the Sunday-school lesson and, occasionally, a few other paragraphs of good spiritual food. But should not at least 75 per cent more strength be given to our church organs? for they contain scarcely anything at all accept clean, rich, wholesome food for all ages and classes; to say nothing of the valuable information given as to the condition and work of their churches.

A CHURCH COVENANT.

In a Manual of twenty pages just received covering the past year's work and present status of the First Christian Church of Huntington, Indiana, Rev. Warren H. Denison, Pastor, we find on one page this "church covenant" which strikes us as being practical, to the point, and altogether worth while. Here it is in full:

We, whose names are hereunto subscribed, desiring to form and establish a Christian church, in the town of Huntington, Huntington County, in the State of Indiana, and to unite ourselves therein for mutual love and fellowship in Christian work, do hereby, on this 23rd day of May, in the year of our Lord, 1891, accept and adopt the following:

Thankful for God's everlasting mercy, and for this great gift of Salvation through Jesus Christ our Lord, we covenant and agree together to seek to know and do his holy will, and to promote, so far as in us lies, the triumph of our Savior's Kingdom over a wicked world.

Heartily believing that the Holy Scriptures were given by inspiration of God, and that they are profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, and also that Christian freedom requires that they be interpreted by individual judgment; we covenant together to accept the Bible as our supreme standard of faith and duty, and to recognize as Christians and worthy of our fellowship, all who devoutly love the Lord Jesus Christ, and sustain a life of vital Christian piety as taught in the word of God.

Anxiously desiring that all differences which separate Christ's people may be removed and that there may be one Flock and one Shepherd, we covenant together to lay aside all distinctive and party names, and taking our title from the head of the Church, to be known simply and only as Christians.

And, furthermore, realizing that the success of each Church depends on the consecration of its individual membership, we covenant together to attend the services of the Church, to contribute according to our means for its support, to labor together to maintain its peace and harmony, and so far as possible, in every way to promote its temporal and spiritual welfare; looking for our reward to the peace of God, which passes all understanding and to the crown of rejoicing laid up for all who love Christ's appearing.

—Writing under date of Portland, Michigan, Dec. 11, Rev. D. E. Millard, D. D., affectionately known among Sun readers as "Uncle Millard," speaks cheerfully in these words, "Am well for a man nearly eighty. Conducted my 990th funeral service the other day and supplied the pulpit of the Congregational Church here last Sunday." Dr. Millard writes a steady and easy hand for one of his age, and the splendid article he contributes to this week's Sun shows that his thoughts are vigorous, logical and clear. May God increase his strength and multiply his years.

—Madame Curie, codiscoverer with her husband of radium, has been given a full professorship in the University of Paris. Madame Curie is one of the best known women scientists living.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—After serving gratuitously and efficiently as Treasurer of the Orphanage for eighteen months, Rev. C. C. Peel has resigned that position and Prof. Jno. T. Cobb of Elon College has been chosen his successor.

—Since 80 per cent of all church members come from the Sunday-school, would it not be well to make a new year resolution that you will strive during 1909 to help make yours a better, more attractive and more forceful Sunday-school?

—We heartily wish all the earnest, faithful ministers of the gospel, who may see these lines, a happy and successful year in their noble task of winning souls to Christ and advancing the kingdom of God in the world during this year of our Lord 1909.

—And so the "colored comic supplement" to the Sunday paper is to go. The Boston Herald and the Ladies Home Journal have both pronounced them "vulgar rubbish." A happy riddance. But one wonders why the B. H. and the L. H. J. were so long in making the discovery.

—Pastor I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., writing of our Teacher Training Book says: "I have secured orders for the book at Berea, Liberty Spring and possibly Oakland. I shall do what I can to get the book in all our schools. It is very fine. The work is well done. It ought to be in the hands of all our workers."

—The Annual for 1909 is ready, and is being mailed to subscribers this week. Any Sun reader wishing a copy will receive it by sending 20 cts. The Annual contains, this year, proceedings of all the Southern conferences, also of the Southern Christian Convention, of the Christian Missionary Association and a full church and ministerial directory.

—We are in receipt of the following: "Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Stephenson announce the marriage of their daughter Rosa Bernice to Rev. George Otis Lankford, on Wednesday, December 30th, 1908, near Roanoke, Ala." We extend felicitations. Bro. Lankford is an Elon College graduate and is now a successful minister located at 24—29th St., Columbus, Ga.

—His many friends will regret to know that Bro. D. Jennings Sipe, Greensboro, N. C., has been for more than a month, and still is, quite unwell, and unable to leave his bed, from a persistent attack of malarial fever. Bro. Sipe is at the home of his father-in-law, Bro. E. T. Pierce, News Ferry, Va., and the loved ones there, by the aid and counsel of two physicians are doing all possible to nurse him back to health and strength.

—Has your Sunday-school adopted, or have the teachers thereof seen and read "Preparing The Sunday-school Teacher to Teach," a book of 235 pages edited by Profs. Harper, Lawrence and Wicker and published by order of The Southern Christian Convention? If not, copies may be had of The Christian Sun Office, Elon College, N. C., for 60 cts paper binding or 90 cts. cloth binding. The book is beautifully printed and is full of rich fact for every Sunday-school teacher and superintendent.

—Under date of Dec. 30, 1908, Norfolk, Va., Rev. W. D. Harward writes: "We leave Norfolk next Monday p. m., Jan. 4th. Rev. J. W. Barrett takes charge of the Lambert's Point church, preaching twice per Sunday and Rev. C. C. Ryan will preach at Rosemont each Sunday afternoon. I will write for The Sun later. Best wishes to all." The Eastern Virginia Conference will feel the loss of Bro. Harward who is Secretary of the body and an active and efficient member. We wish him all success in his new field of labor as pastor of the Christian church at Madrid, Iowa.

—We have received the following on a very neatly printed post card "The Christian Colony of Jireh, Converse county, Wyoming, wishes you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year and extends you a cordial invitation to become a member and helper of the colony of happy, contented dwellers in the land of sunshine and opportunity. If you wish to know something of the prospects of our Colony, or the plans of our Company, or the outlook for our College, write to our Secretary, Daniel B. Atkinson, P. O. Box 325, Muncie, Indiana, and he will gladly furnish you the desired information."

Elon College Notes.

During the holidays there have been a large number of very welcome visitors on the hill. These friends have added much to the joy of the Christmas tide in our homes and in making the occasion mean more to us than it could have, had they not been with us. Our best wish for our visitors is that each may have had as much pleasure as their presence has given to us.

Mr. Lincoln, who has been sick, continues to improve. It is now thought that in a short while he will be sufficiently recovered to go to his home at Lacey Springs, Virginia.

The College pulpit was filled yesterday (Sunday) by Dr. Newman, and the usual religious bodies met in the afternoon. The Christian Endeavor at night, consecration meeting, leader, J. T. Cobb.

The sad news reached this town on Thursday that Miss Bessie Loy, daughter of Mr. John Loy who lives near Shallow Ford, was burned to death at her home. Her clothes caught on fire and before help could reach her she was so burned that she died within a few hours. The funeral was at Shallow Ford by Rev. J. W. Patton.

Our teachers are all in place and work is moving along smoothly and the spring term bids fair to be as good as the best in the history of the institution. Miss Allen, of the Department of Expression has returned from Atlanta where she went during the holidays and reports a successful and pleasant trip.

We clip the following from The Raleigh News and Observer:

(Special to News and Observer.)

Elon College, N. C., Jan. 2.—The spring term opened December 31. Quite a number of the students have not yet returned from the holidays, especially those from distant states. The roster of new students is, however, very gratifying. Already 17 new ones from three states, two nations, and twelve counties have matriculated for the ensuing term, and President Moffitt is assured of the presence here in a few days of as many more. This means that the spring term enrollment will at least keep pace with other years.

Miss Cornelia Bryan, a graduate of the Coreoran Art School, Washington, D. C., has become the head of the Art Department of the institution and enters upon her work under pleasing omens. She will give special courses in public school drawing and in architectural drawing. These courses will add very materially to the efficiency of the department and bring into it those of a practical, as well as those of an artistic turn of mind.

THE ANNUAL FOR 1909.

The Annual this year contains 141 pages and carries in full the proceedings of all the conferences of the Southern Christian Convention, of The Christian Missionary Association and of The General Convention which convened in Greensboro, N. C., last April. There are also statistical tables giving data of all churches and Sunday-schools of the Convention, apportionments for all churches in 1909 and a full church and ministerial directory. The Annual is neatly printed and bound and is invaluable to all who wish to know what our Southern conferences, churches, Convention and enterprises are doing.

Send orders at once. The price is 20 cts. per copy. Address The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Happy New Year.

The Tidewater Christian Sunday-school Association held its regular quarterly meeting Sunday, Dec. 27—with the Christian church at Portsmouth. Excellent reports were read from the schools represented showing progress. An interesting program was carried out, Rev. W. H. Thompson of the Third Church making the address of the meeting.

Rev. M. W. Butler of Newport News was elected Pres. Rev. M. L. Bryant of the Main St. church, Vice-Pres. and Rev. J. O. Cox of South Norfolk, Sec. and Treas. The next meeting will be held at the Third Church, Norfolk, the last Sunday in March.

The Sunday-school of the Third church had their election of officers Sunday, Dec. 27th, with the following result: J. W. Manning, Supt., T. J. Lawrence, Ass't Supt., Mrs. J. W. Manning Sec., B. L. Nichols Treas., Miss Lillie Nichols Pinaoist.

Bro. Jas. A. Eley of the Third Church has just built and moved into a handsome home on 30th St.

Christmas, 1908 is history. The usual Sunday-school entertainments were an event of the Holidays. The Memorial Temple held theirs on Tuesday evening. A large audience filled the church and Sunday-school room. After an interesting program by the children, old "Santa Claus" came out of his little log cabin, on which was constructed a windmill, and a little chute by the door. After making a speech, he delivered some presents to some of the officers and teachers. He then called some little girls to the stage and told them to blow on the windmill and it would begin to turn, and when it did presents for each one would come out the little chute—and they did.

On Wednesday evening the Third Church school had their entertainment. The school being small naturally could not have a very elaborate affair, but the committee had done some very faithful work—and were rewarded by hearing many expressions of approval from the large audience that was present, crowding the church to its capacity, quite a good many being turned away not being able to get in.

Rev. W. D. Harward preached Sunday, the 3rd instant, at the morning service for Bro. Ryan's people at the Temple. I hear the sermon well spoken of. Bro. Harward and his family leave this Monday afternoon via C. and O. for their new home in Iowa. The prayers and good wishes of a large circle of friends go with them.

Deacon D. J. Bowden and family left last Saturday for their future home in the country, near Antioch church. They will be greatly missed in the work of the Temple for possibly no one member of the church was in so close touch with every enterprise of the church as was Bro. Bowden.

That horse for the Porto Rico Orphanage is nearly bought. I only lack $2.00 now of having the necessary amount, and I expect to have that and the money forwarded to Miss Turpin before I write you again.

I am praying that we all may strive hard to know the Master's will concerning us for this year and then be willing to be used as He directs.

J. W. Manning.

Jan. 4, 1909.

Some Meetings.

November 4th we began our protracted meeting at Newport. After the first week we were assisted by Bro. Edward French who did most of the preaching. His sermons were strong and practical and well received by the people. The meeting closed the 18th. There were two conversions and two accessions. We believe the church was strengthened spiritually by the services.

Owing to some changes we are making in our work it was necessary for the writer to resign the pastoral care of this church and Bro. French was extended a unanimous call, which he accepted. It has been our pleasure to serve the Newport congregation ever since our arrival in the Valley. We are indebted to both the church and community for the many kindnesses shown us during our sojourn and labors with them. It was with deep regret we tendered our resignation with them. It has been our pleasure to receive between forty and fifty into the fellowship of this church and to note with thankfulness the increased interest in the contributions which have increased about 100 per cent.

November the 25th we began our meeting at Timber Ridge and continued for about twelve days. The church seemed much revived and twenty members were received into fellowship. Four of them by letter from the Presbyterian church.

December 8th we began our meeting at New Hope and closed Christmas day with 14 accessions.

We thank God for the blessings that came to us in these meetings. Our meeting closed our work with the New Hope congregation. We have labored with them since August and have found them a kind and hospitable people. Bro. Andes and Rev. Hammasp of the U. B. church each preached one sermon during the meeting which was well received. Bro. French will take this church.

Christmas night we attended the Christmas service at Concord, where a well prepared program was rendered in an acceptable manner. The design was a white ladder between two trees and was very pretty. Bro. J. H. Huffman and his collaborators deserve credit for the work done. The pastor was remembered with a cash donation which was highly appreciated. W. T. Walters.

SELFISHNESS CONTRARY TO THE LAW OF LOVE.

By Rev. D. E. Millard, D. D.

Although selfishness prevails largely in the world it is contrary to the teachings both of Nature and Revelation. The universal voice of nature, animate and inanimate, is that none of us were created to exist for ourselves. The sun moves forward on his journey, diffusing light and heat to other worlds. The moon and stars pursue their ceaseless courses, proclaiming, "Not for ourselves, but for others." Every tree that grows, every blade of grass that springs forth and every flower that blooms and sweetens the air with its fragrance expresses the same loving doctrine. And so it is with intelligent beings. It is seen in the little innocent child upon its mother's lap, is manifested in the strong and brawny arm of manhood and it is set forth in all the charms and attractions of womanhood. "It glows upon the cheek, sparkles in the eye, beautifies the mind and swells the soul with joy and gives a charm to life."

Our Heavenly Father has written this same law of giving and doing—this law of love—on every page of the Bible in characters that time cannot efface. It is eternal; it is the law of heaven and is expressed in every part of the great work of Creation, on every page of God's written Word and every blessing He bestows upon our race. Then, in addition to all His gifts to sinful and envied men, He gave His Son, His only Son, to die that man might live. It is here that love, pure and unselfish, finds its most beautiful and abiding expression, lays its highest and strongest claims before the mind, comes with its most powerful and most touching appeals to the heart and makes its deepest and holiest impressions upon the soul.

No wonder Paul speaks of God and Christ as having "loved us and given us everlasting consolation and good hope through grace." May our hearts respond to that love, may it set our souls aflame and bring all our powers into willing, faithful and constant obedience to our Lord and Savior. Faith in Him and love to Him as our Savior and to mankind as our brethren—will bring peace and life to the soul—peace and life everlasting.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HOW TO TEACH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JAN. 17.

A Few Suggestions.

The Beginning of the Christian Church—Acts 2:22-47.

Golden Text: They continued steadfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. Acts 2:42.

Review. Review the previous lesson accurately and completely, pay particular attention to review of verses 14-21, the first eight verses of Peter's wonderful, clear, logical, and convincing sermon, because our present lesson is the completion of that sermon and a study of its results.

The Lesson. Today's lesson readily falls into three sections, which, when written on the board as they are developed in the teaching, will constitute the outline and serve as a basis for the topical review to come after the teaching of the lesson by the question method.

I. Peter's Pentecostal Sermon, verses 21-36 (really 14-36). Here discover whom Peter summons to hear, concerning whom to hear, what they had done to Him, what God had done with Him and why, what David had said concerning Him (Psalms 16:8-11, which read or have read here), what Peter told them of the then condition of David, what promise God had made to David, how David had foretold of Christ's resurrection from the Psalm just quoted, who had raised up Jesus, who the witnesses of this were, where Jesus is now, what He had shed forth, what else David had said concerning Christ (Psalm 110:1), what identification Peter here makes. At this point I would call for work on the number of words in the sermon as a whole (531) and the number that are biblical quotations (218 from Joel 2:28-32; Psalms 16:8-11; 110:1); and on Peter's two other sermons—to the Jews, Acts 3:12-26 and to the Gentiles, Acts 10:34-43.

II. The Effect of the Sermon, verses 37-40. Learn what effect the hearing of this sermon produced in them, what they said, to whom, what Peter answered, what they would receive if they repented, to whom this promise was, what the burden of Peter's further exhortation was. Here call for assigned work on where Jesus had promised his Holy Spirit (to be found from the concordance) and on what the Bible teaches in regard to the remissions of sins (also to be found from the concordance.)

III. The Christian Church Begins, verses 41-47. Find how some received the word and what was done with them, how many were that day added to the church, how these converts continued, what came upon every soul, what were wrought by the Apostles, how all believed, how they held property, what they did with their possessions, where they continued daily, what the nature of their life was, how the people treated them, who were daily added to the church, by whom they were added. Here call for assigned work on whether or not the early Christians had communal property in the socialist sense today—Acts 5:4-12; 21:16; 2:44-45, with a comparison of Matthew 25:14-30 and Luke 13:6-9; and on what the Apostles' doctrine was from Acts 2:36; Eph. 2:18; 2 Cor. 13:14; Rom. 3:10, 12, 16; Eph. 1:7; Acts 3:19; Acts 10:43; Rom. 6:22; Gal. 5:22-23; 2 Peter 1:21; 1 Cor. 2:13; Titus 2:12-13; Acts 3:20-21.

Review the lesson by the topic method, using your outline on the board.

Truths and Their Application. 1. Our lesson introduces us to the study of a great revival of religion. This revival bore great fruit, so does every genuine revival, whether it be personal or congregational. These new-born souls immediately set about a new sort of life—began to do deeds and live lives characteristic of Christians. We are told that the recent great awakening in Wales, when 80,000 souls were converted, has had marked effect on the people. "As to this (the ethical result of the revival), the testimony of all on the spot is unanimous. Not merely are all the grosser vices reduced to the vanishing point, but the subtle sins of unforgiving rancor. Non-payment of debts, dishonest work, are abated," says Rev. F. B. Meyer. Do we not need such a revival in our Zion?

2. These early Christians can teach us a great deal in Christian liberality. They sold their possessions and distributed to each as he had need. There was special reason for this at that time, because most of the new converts were from distant lands and needed entertainment, if they were to remain longer than the regular Jewish feast. There are times now when we should contribute to the relief of suffering. We should not do so indiscriminately, for this is often to encourage beggary and crime. We need to be more liberal in our contributions to the church and charitable enterprises.

3. These early converts to the new faith were much in prayer. It has been said that the Devil never assails a saint when on his knees. We can always be on our knees in attitude of heart. Our whole life should be an attitude of prayer to God for guidance in every avenue of our endeavor. "What would Jesus have me do, say, or be?" should constantly be on our hearts. It was so with these pioneers of the faith.

4. They were also intensely interested in the salvation of others. Are we as anxious for the salvation of others as we should be, we Sunday school workers? If so, why do we allow 50 per cent of all our enrollment to be lost to the church? Is there not need for a revival of passion for souls in our schools?

Assignments for Home-Study. Ask one to find the teaching of the Bible with reference to alms-giving from Deut. 14:28-29; 15:7-11; 26:12-13; Matt. 6:1-4; another to find where the murderer of verse 14 was from Matt. 27:21; Mark 15:7; Luke 23:19; a third to find what is meant by "name" in verse 16 from Acts 1:15; 4:12; Eph. 1:21; and Rev. 3:4; a fourth to find from the concordance the number of miracles of healing performed by Christ; a fifth to find how we today may help others as Peter helped the lame man from Matt. 25:34-46.

W. A. Harper,

CONVERSION OF OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL CHILDREN—HOW IT MAY BE SECURED.

Having been requested to write upon this subject, let us consider first in what does the conversion of a single child consist?

What Is Conversion?

But One is qualified to answer. His reply is John 3:5, R. V., "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except one be born of water" (meaning repentance, John's baptism, Matt. 3:2, 6, Mark 1:4, Acts 13:14, and Christ's first teaching, Matt. 4:17) "and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God," and (v. 6), "that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit."

Conversion therefore consists in a new spirit being born in the repentant soul of a child, or man, and through the action of the Holy Spirit.

Who Leads to Repentance?

Who is it that, striving with the hearts of the children of men, brooding over their souls, and with His tender offices, wooing and winning some, and with His keen sword of truth, piercing the souls of others, convicting them of sin, incites them both to turn unto God, willing to obey Him? God and the Savior, Who alone are qualified to answer, reply (Gen. 6:3, R. V.): "My Spirit shall not always strive," showing that at times He does strive, "with man;" and John 16:8, R. V.: "And He" (the Holy Spirit) "when He is come, will convict the world in respect of sin." We see it is the Holy Spirit Who leads the heart Godward.

How Futile Is Unaided Human Effort!

Since conversion is to be "born of the Spirit," and since it is the Holy Spirit Who stirs to repentance, is it not perfectly clear that no human being, no set of human beings, no, not all men on earth combined, could convert the soul of even a single little child? How futile then is unaided human effort!

The Problem.

The problem therefore resolves itself into this: How can this action of the Holy Spirit be brought to bear upon the heart of man or child?

The Holy Spirit, except when grieved away, is ever willing to act. And, of course, He can act direct, as Christ did on Saul of Tarsus. But usually it is through some man, woman or child that He works upon the hearts of others.

The question therefore resolves itself into this, How can we be fitted for the Holy Spirit to act through us?

How the Savior Solved It.

This is exactly the problem that the Savior met when leaving earth: How to convert men after He had gone, and How to fit His disciples for the Holy Spirit to work through them? How did He solve it? As no one can hope to improve on His method, let us see what course He pursued. Just parting, He told them, "Behold I send forth the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city until ye be clothed with power from on high" (Luke 24:49 R. V.); and "Ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you" (Acts 1:8, R. V.). Power was what they needed and power is what you and I need. Shortly after, "they were all filled with the Holy Spirit" (Acts 2:4, R. V.).

With What Result?

Peter—the beforetime timid, faltering Peter—preached to a multitude and about 3,000 were converted at his first sermon (Acts 2:41). And at his second, enough more to make 5,000 men, without counting the women (Acts 3-4:4).

Christ solved this problem by leading His disciples to be filled with the Holy Spirit, so that the Spirit could work through them.

Can we improve on the Savior's method? If not, why not follow it?

This brings us to the question, Is This Power for You and Me, Lay Christians of Today?

Oldest Prophecy, Joel 2:28, 29, R. V.: "And it shall come to pass afterwards that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my Spirit."

Fulfillment, Acts 2:14-18, R. V., "But Peter" said: "This is that which hath been spoken through the prophet Joel: And it shall be in the last days, saith God, I will pour forth my Spirit upon all flesh: * * * Yea and on my servants and on my handmaidens in those days will I pour forth of my Spirit."

To whom is this promise made? Acts

2:38, 39, R. V.: "For to you is the promise and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto Him." (And what Christian has He not called?)

Facts—To Whom Fulfilled.

(1) To about 120 disciples, women (Acts 1:15) as well as men.

Acts 2:4, R. V.: "And they were all filled with the Holy Spirit."

(2) To ordinary lay Samaritans—Jewish half-breeds, despised by full-blooded Jews as dogs, with whom the Jews would have "no dealings." (John 4:9, R. V.)

Acts 8:14-17 R. V. "Now when the Apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John who laid their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Spirit."

(3) To a Roman Captain, to all his house, his kinsmen, and near friends. Acts 10:24, 34, 44, R. V. "And Cornelius,"—a Roman Captain,—"having called together his kinsmen and near friends and told Peter of the vision sent to him (Cornelius), Peter said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons," and then preached Christ to those assembled. "While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Spirit fell on all them that heard the word."

Who Can Doubt It?

With God's promise to pour out His "Spirit upon all flesh, upon the servants and handmaids"; with that promise kept to about 129 women and men at the opening of this new era; with that promise renewed through Peter to "all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto Him"; (and there is no Christian He has not called); with both these promises proven to be for unnamed and unknown Samaritans and Romans;—who can doubt but this promise is for lay Christians of today?—especially when we remember Jesus' words in Luke 11:13, R. V., "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him"; and when we also remember that "He is no respecter of persons"; (Acts 10:34, R. V.).

'Do God's Promises Grow Weak With Age?

Should anyone say that all these are men of long ago, I will enquire, Does God, or do His promises, grow weak with age? Which of His promises in regard to salvation is younger than this one, or has failed? If God's promise of salvation, though 1900 years old, holds good and strong today, why does not His promise to bestow His Spirit?

But to settle any such question, hear the testimony of a witness of today.

D. L. Moody's Testimony,

given at the Brooklyn Central Presbyterian Church just two months before he died.

I know that if I should be asked to be a witness in a court, my testimony would be taken; and I want you to take my testimony as to what it is to be filled with the Spirit."

"There are two epochs in my life which stand out clear. One is when I was between 16 and 17, and was born of the Spirit. There can never come a greater blessing to any man on this earth than to be born again—born from above,—to have the God nature planted in him."

"God has been good to me—has showered blessing after blessing upon me, but the greater blessing,—next to being born of the Spirit,—came sixteen years afterwards, when I was filled with the Spirit; and He has never left me to this day."

"He is for all,—women as well as men. When Pentecost was fully come, the whole church was qualified for work in God's cause."

Thousands of others still living stand ready to testify to the same thing. How can one doubt but this gift is for today just as much as then? How can we question it?

This brings us to the question, How Can We Be Filled With The Holy Spirit, and Receive Power For Service?

BOOK NOTICE.

"Up Through Childhood. A study of some principles of Education in relation to Faith and Conduct. A book for parents and teachers. By George Allen Hubbell, Ph. D. Knickerbocker Press, New York." Price $1.50.

I have recently received a copy of the book bearing the above title and having read it with more than ordinary interest, I can heartily recommend it to all who feel the responsibility of the teaching office in home and school. Those who are striving to train the young to be God-fearing, earnest and efficient citizens of this land and of the kingdom which we believe to be eternal, will find it of great value, and well worth the price asked. Order at present from the author, 217 104th St., New York.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE.

At the beginning of this good year we know of no better message to lay before Sun readers than that giving something of the history, and the present status, of our Orphanage. This Institution sprang from the hearts of the people who read The Sun, and they have the right, as theirs also is the pleasure, to know what the Orphanage is doing, and the exact status of its affairs. The Orphanage had its formal opening January 1, 1907. The first child, a little girl, was received there February 4, 1907. During that year twenty-four children were received and cared for, three of the number being only temporary inmates. During 1908 six more were received and cared for, the total at present being twenty-seven.

The cash received by the Treasurer in 1907 was $3114.15; and (with several collections to come from churches not yet reporting for Thanksgiving and Christmas) the cash receipts for 1908 were $2853.01. All cash comes as free-will gifts of the people, as there is no apportionment asked, or assessment laid upon churches, or Sunday-schools for this enterprise. How has this fund been expended? Not all for the support of the twenty-seven children there by any means. Remember that the Institution is new and buildings were not ready when the Orphanage was opened. Barns and all out houses had then to be built. The following will indicate somewhat as to where the funds have gone: In 1907, for building and equipment, $1321.21; on farm and equipment $992.73; for administration (salaries of Superintendent, house keeper, teacher, office stationery) $985.79; for living, $668.73. In 1908, expenditures have been as follows: For building and equipment, $262.82, on farm and equipment, $1051.90, for administration $1114.90, for living, $770.05. The (estimated) total products of the farm were, 1907, $567.52, in 1908, $1250.20. It will be seen by this that the farm has not met expenses, but it should be taken into account that much clearing had to be done, all stock and farm implements had to be purchased, and the farm lands had to be improved. If an inventory were taken of stock, cattle, implements and improvements of the farm, there would be a favorable showing on the credit side.

It takes time and effort to build and equip an orphanage. Additional expenditures for improvements are constantly needed.

We have a large two-story brick building in which the Superintendent, his family, assistants and the twenty-seven children are housed. Much building which has been necessary to equipping the place and the farm may now cease until the indebtedness of $3,000 yet against the institution, is liquidated. It was the decision of the Board of Trustees at their last annual meeting that expenditures for permanent improvements cease, until the indebtedness was lifted. Efforts are now bent in this direction and we sincerely trust that the year 1909 will bring such results as to enable the management to pay a goodly sum on the debt and make room for other children even now asking for a home and sustenance at our hands.

What a labor of love, and of untold mercy and helpfulness, the Orphanage has already been, eternity alone can tell. The Institution is a claim upon our charity, our sympathy, and our support. That it is being well managed, even wisely, judiciously and economically, we think none can doubt. God bless the thousands who remember it in their donations and with a portion of their substance.

DEADENING DOUBT.

One of the fundamental rules of philosophy and science is, Never relinquish an established belief until there is a higher and broader belief to take its place. If we poor mortals could learn well that simple rule it would save us much deadening doubt and dark despair. For there be those of us who are ready to doubt the very highest and holiest beliefs when even a mean and meager belief comes to claim credulity.

If, by this fundamental rule of philosophy, I am a sane and sober man I shall not relinquish the saving gospel that made my father and my mother good and great until I shall have found a gospel that will make me better and greater than these saints were. They believed in the Book, in the Incarnation, in the Atonement, in the Resurrection, in the new birth through Jesus Christ. And, moreover, by believing in these their hearts were made tender, their hands willing, their lives large, and their souls divine. Their belief, unshaken, continued, steadfast belief in these things made them good and generous and gracious and truly great in God's service. By the first rule of philosophy and its ultimate declaration, I am silly and foolish indeed if I fling away my belief in these things, unless I can give cause to show that I have found a higher, mightier and holier than these.

The good Sunday sermon, the accustomed place at the house of prayer on the Sabbath, an encouraging word for the faithful minister, a chapter from the good Book, moments in holy meditations, and the closet or the bedside for a season of prayer—well these be old and homely and well worn things and themes; but somehow they have carried man a long way, produced in our time, and in the past, a goodly and a noble race of men and women, resulted in time in giving to the home and community the very best saints you and I have known or will know. Until we can derive a better, God help us hold to these in the same good old way.

OUR TEACHER TRAINING BOOK.

Wherever our recently published book on "Preparing the Sunday-school Teacher to Teach" goes it finds high favor and meets ready approval. Sunday-school teachers as they study the book are surprised at its practical, common sense means and methods and are praising it for its great helpfulness in its rich and ripe suggestions. Scholars and thinkers declare that the book measures up to the best to be had on the subject and Sunday-school superintendents, as well as pastors, are recommending it to teachers and pupils.

Because in all our number there is no riper scholar, nor clearer thinker, nor abler critic than Dr. J. J. Summerbell, we were anxious for his judgment and opinion of the book. After he had been in possession of a copy many weeks, he writes the following estimate which we would like all our Sunday-school workers to read:

215 Fourth Ave., Dayton, O., Dec. 22.
Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D.—Dear Bro.:

I wish to say that the book you have published, "Preparing the Teacher," in the teacher training course of the Southern Christian Convention, is a remarkable production. It is of great value, both in the subject matter, and in the preparation. The mass of thought and fact is so great that the volume must become a valuable book of reference. It is surprising that it was prepared with such fulness and accuracy in the time used. The brethren who inaugurated the project and carried it to such success deserve the thanks of our brethren, north and south. It ought to be adopted by our northern Sunday-school workers, as well as your people. In making examination of it, I was more and more impressed with its freedom from errors; either of statement or printing. It is a strong book. If a full index could be prepared for it, it would be like a small cyclopedia; but the matter of the book is so condensed, that an index would be too large, in comparison with the bulk of other matter, and the editors have probably done wisely in making no effort at index. Besides, those who use it will readily become familiar with its logical plan, and will easily find the facts needed. Devoid of effort at fine writing, the book occasionally startles the reader with sentences that make him stop, wait, think, and read the lines again. It is an able production, and must prove very useful to those who have the advantage of possessing it. You are to be congratulated. I wish I had time just now to present you an adequate review of so important a work; but I am forbidden. You may use this opinion in any way you choose: for I have not fully expressed my admiration for the excellent work of your committee in editing the book, and your publishing force in printing it.

Respectfully, J. J. Summerbell.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Miss Adona Brinkley was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip B. Brinkley of Nansemond county, Virginia, and was born April 24, 1869. She was married by this writer to Benjamin D. Crocker, September 25, 1890. At the time of her marriage she resided in Suffolk and was a member of the Suffolk Christian church and choir.

Soon after her marriage they moved to Franklin, Va., where her husband was employed as sawyer by the Camp Manufacturing Company. He grew in favor with the Company and she grew in favor with the community as a good neighbor and an active member of the Franklin Christian church and choir.

About ten years ago Mr. Crocker and his wife with their three children removed to Suffolk where they have resided since that time. He and his brother James united in the lumber business and have prospered.

Three years ago another child was born making four in all: Marvin, Eloise, Nena, and Margaret.

They built a handsome residence on Saratoga street about two years ago and were in the full enjoyment of their new home. But Mrs. Crocker's health gave way and after a brief illness of three weeks, she passed away, Dec. 17, 1908, acute Bright's disease being the cause of her death.

Mrs. Crocker transferred her membership from Franklin and she and her husband became members of the church and she again of the choir.

She was a faithful member of the choir and lived to see all the family, except baby Margaret, members of the church.

She was a woman of rare qualities, being endowed by birth with an even temper, a sweet disposition, and abundant energy for all kinds of service; and she cultivated all these gifts with a genuine Christian life. Devoted and self-sacrificing in her domestic relations she made home not only the happiest place to her loved ones, but the center of a large circle of admiring friends. Many are the memories that crowd the minds of those who mourn; but hope rises above the darkness and dreams of reunion in the home above.

Her life illumined a large circle of influence rich in uplifted souls and sanctified friendships. Only thirty-nine in years, but never-to-be-forgotten in the hearts of those who loved her. The stream of time bears on its bosom the treasures of broken hearts and darkened homes and delivers them into the Celestial City to enrich eternity. We have made our contribution to that enrichment in the loss of this dear wife and mother. As sweetly as a babe goes to sleep on its mother's knee, she closed her eyes among the shadows of the valley to open them in heaven's endless morning without clouds.

The services at the church were simple and tender. She was the third active member of the choir, who had died in twenty-five years, and it was hard for them to sing; but they sang very tenderly and sweetly. The congregation was large and sympathetic. The floral offerings were beautiful and expressive in design and quantity. Mosses of magnificent designs tied theasket and reflected the character of the departed. No more will she enter the temple of worship on earth; no more will she go out of the temple of light and eternal song. Farewell to earth! Welcome to heaven!!

I am now looking out from our little country home into the Christmas morning and into the forest where the green pines lift their proud heads above the barren oaks and hickories. The pine keeps green through all the winter time like the true Christian, amid the adversities and storms of this world of sorrow. The evergreen Sunday-school is now the common thing; it used to be the exception. Evergreens in the forest, evergreens in the yard, evergreens in the church, evergreens in the heart; Jesus has made life perennial.

My immediate family is all here in health and relatives will join us later for our Christmas dinner. The angel message, the song of the heavenly host, the visit of the shepherds and the wise men, and all that followed in the holy train of events, fills Christendom with plenty, song, and unexpressible joy. Those who keep the stalls or watch on the hills may share in the blessings of this "Prince of Peace." Above the din of the world's babel hearts and homes that love Christ may hear music as sweet as angel choirs ever sang and enjoy feasts richer than worldly monarchs ever knew. The babe now may be minister, merchant-prince, president, or king. This babe of Bethlehem is King of kings and Lord of lords. He is wonderful—Counselor; Mighty—God; Everlasting Father; Prince of Peace.

W. W. Staley.

—Sixty-seven churches and more than 30,000 white church members have united in the Chapman-Alexander evangelistic campaign in Richmond, Va., to continue for at least three weeks. There will be six simultaneous meetings day and night in different parts of the city.

—Our Legislature meets today, Jan. 6, in regular biennial session. Ex-Judge Augustus W. Graham of Granville is to be Speaker. There will be a sixty day session, although there is a feeling, widespread, that the state at present does not need much law-making.

—Our battleships on their cruise around the globe are keeping schedule time and sailed into Suez spick and span two days ahead of time, Jan 3. On being wired from Washington if he had any provisions aboard he could spare from his own use for the Italian earthquake sufferers, Rear Admiral Sperry replied that he could divide up, without inconvenience and give the needy the following:

Beverages, 50,000 gallons; bread, 690,000 pounds; cereals, 80,000 pounds; fruits, 90,000 pounds; fresh meat, 90,000 pounds; other meat, 100,000 pounds; vegetables, 80,000 pounds; milk, 50,000 gallons; and other items without number in smaller quantities. If the ships can spare this much without disfiguring themselves, one wonders how much ration that squadron carries ordinarily.

Elon College, N. C., Dec. 30, 1908.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We herewith hand you the largest cash report of 1098—$384.80! And still the Thanksgiving and Christmas offerings come in—quite a number of letters left over. For this great liberality from our people we are very grateful, and wish for them much happiness and continued prosperity.

Our little people had a nice Christmas—presents from the Elon Sunday school; apples, oranges and candy from old Santa, and a nice package each of presents and good things from the Senior and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies of Burlington Christian Church. This was a splendid treat delivered by Misses Edith and Ella Carroll and Annie Faucett.

In a recent report we said that Henderson (N. C.) Church paid $3.25. It should have been $9.25, and the Sunday school $3.25. They are working and giving folks down there and we gladly make the correction.

The following donations have been received:

Senior and Junior C. E. Societies of Burlington, N. C., nice Christmas presents for all the children; J. M. Saunders, Elon College, N. C., 1 bu. apples; Gowan Medical Co., Durham, N. C., 1

doz. bottles, 50c. size, “Gowan's Pneumonia Cure;” Ladies' Aid Society, Durham, N. C., 1 set of enamel dishes, 2 doz. plates, 2 doz. cups and saucers, 2 pitchers, 4 bowls, 2 flat dishes; Sunday school class of Miss Ruth Magner, Arthur, Ill., scrap books, mounted and unmounted pictures for all the children; Mrs. Delia Williamson, Driver, Va., 1 box clothing; J. D. Simpson, Elon College, N. C., 3 pumpkins, 1 gal. molasses; W. T. Madren, Elon College, N. C., R. F. D., 1 bu. sweet potatoes; by Mrs. E. W. Croucher, Marion S. S., Marion, N. Y., 1 bbl. clothing, toys, candy for the children; Long's Chapel Christian Ch.: G. F. Hurdle, 1 bu. wheat, 2 bu. corn; H. C. King, 1 bu. wheat; L. W. Allen, 1 bu. wheat, 2 bu. corn; W. J. Fitch, 1 bu. corn; Peter Long, 1 bu. corn; C. H. Roney, 2 bu. wheat, 2 bu. corn; J. A. Dickey, 1 bu. wheat; Arthur Haley, 1 bu. corn; Mrs. L. W. Allen, 2 hens; Mrs. W. J. Fitch, 2 hens; Mrs. C. H. Roney, 1 hen, 1 lb. butter, 12 cans tomatoes, 1 qt. preserves, 1 jar jelly.

Suffolk, Va., gives the largest Thanksgiving offering—$100.00—for 1908. We thank them for the great help they are giving us. Long's Chapel Church has given us help which is very necessary, viz., bread—9 bushels of corn and 6 bushels of wheat, chickens and other good things to go with the bread.

We tak this method of publicly thanking the Gowan Medical Company, of Durham, N. C., for 1 dozen 50c. bottles of “Gowan's Pneumonia Cure.” We find this medicine very beneficial for the children who have colds, and it takes a considerable amount, hence we wrote the company for special price—and their price was 1 dozen bottles donated. We thank them.

That was a very valuable gift from the Ladies' Aid Society, Durham Christian Church, and came just at a time when we needed table ware.

The barrel of clothing from Mrs. E. W. Croucher, Marion Sunday School, N. Y., is very valuable, many useful garments, toys, and lot of fine candy. We thank Sister Croucher and her Sunday school for this kind help.

To all the good friends who have in and way helped us we say may God bless the giver as the giver has helped us here as we work to meet all necessities among our children.

Let all send in money on hand for Thanksgiving and Christmas offerings. Still quite a number of schools have made no report.

With gratitude for the joys and blessings of the past we now turn our face towards the future.

Yours for service,
 Uncle Jim.

Dec. 18, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed you will find five dollars and sixty cents. The five dollars mamma sends for a Christmas present to the orphans, to be used in any way you think best. The sixty cents is to pay my monthly dues to July, 1909.

Wishing you all "A Happy Christmas and a glad New Year,"

I am yours truly,

E. J. Brickhouse, Jr.

Thank mamma for us, little man. Trust you had a delightful time with Santa. Will hold your dues till we open 1909 account.

Isle of Wight, Va., Dec. 15, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a very little fellow, so will have to get mamma to write my first letter. But if I continue to grow as I have lately, I will soon be large enough to write myself. I send a dime for the little orphans.

With love and best wishes,

Your little friend,

James F. Porter.

We like to have the little ones join James and hope you'll write faithfully for a long time.

Clayton, Ala., Dec. 23, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We can't write much, we are too busy thinking about Santa Claus. We send our love, dimes and best wishes for a merry Christmas.

Bye-bye!

J. Newman Denton,

S. E. Denton, Jr.

Hope you and the dear Santa had a good time together, boys. He came to see us, too.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 28, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed you will find one dollar as a Christmas gift, also our dues for this month.

Good wishes for a happy New Year for all the cousins.

Your little nieces,

Jessie Penny,

Pauline Penny.

Thanks, heartily, girls. Hope old Santa was kind to you.

Timberville, Va., Dec. 21, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

It has been some time since I wrote. I am going to school and do not have time to write often. I like to go to school very well. My teacher's name is Miss Bertha Spitzer. I send in my dues.

Wish you and all the cousins a merry

FROM ACROSS THE SEAS.

Dear Editor of the Sun:

You have so much sympathy with missionaries wherever they are, and since during the last year you have been following some of your own Southern family over to Europe with much interest, that I venture to assume that you will be interested in my journeys as I travel the other half of the globe, via Atlantic and Indian oceans.

We sailed out of Boston Harbour early Saturday morning, Dec. 5th. The day was cloudy and misty and the boat left at eight a. m. but besides the dear father and mother and school teacher friend from Amesbury, Mrs. Rhodes, our all around missionary, and Mr. Sailer, former pastor of Norfolk Temple, were at the boat to see us off.

Our steamer is the Romanic of the White Star Line. She carries over 1400 steerage passengers, Italians returning home for Christmas but less than 100 first and second class passengers. These last are perhaps half Italians but of differing and interesting types. "The Making of An American"—to quote Jacob Riis—is in them all. All I have talked with like America—some look to her as their mother country, the older people look with longing to the land of their birth.

One is a sailer who never before sailed as a passenger. He shipped from Italy when a boy and went around Cape Horn.

"What days and months of sea-sickness and home-sickness I had," he said. Eight years away from Italy he goes now from the lumber camps in Maine home for a visit. He seems well Americanized—a good type too. I like his honest frank face and gentlemanly manners. We had to enquire if he were born in Italy, for the characteristics of the Italian as we see him in New England were not there.

Two tables beyond us are a bride and groom. The pretty little woman was married in church the Sunday before sailing. Her own people are among the "foreign citizens" of Boston. They spend their honey moon in Italy with the husband's relatives. He is a tall manly looking fellow, proud of his little bride. He frequents the engine room and comments on the blackness of the smoke as showing the new coal, and the wasted steam as it is allowed to escape from the valves. "I've been a fireman myself and I know how hard it is down there," he says of the men at the eight boilers, who shoved coal eight hours a day.

A young Italian couple are at our own table, happy and care-free. The wife of 18 was a bride two years ago. They spend the winter with friends in Genoa. As carefully dressed, as courteous in their manners, as honest, as any one whom you would care to meet, we are getting to be good friends.

One table across the way is occupied entirely by two families from Concord, Mass.

Descendants of Emerson and Alcott and Thoreau? Well, hardly. It is the fruit merchant down at the junction with his wife and four of their six children, returning for the Christmas holidays.

The wife and some of the little ones are after ordinary Italian type, but the father is a fine looking man rather of the German type. But the oldest boy is the joy of the ship.

Dodging from the anchor at the bow to the emigrants' bunks down in the depths at the stern of the ship, from the log to the game room with his "loto;" insisting on lending the missionary his school book on English history and listening with eager questions to stories of creation, Abraham, Moses and Joseph and the baby Christ himself. There is in him the making of another "Jacob Riis," if he only had the home. But the boy confesses there is no Bible in his home. His knowledge of it comes largely from what the school teacher has read to him.

Ah, many of the second generation of immigrants are easier to win to the gospel than the self righteous descendants of the Puritans—but so few are neighborly trying to give them the best America holds.

The other family is a short withered up man, his portly wife, neither of whom speaks much English, and a son of 20, whose countenance speaks of Jewish blood some where.

"I've never had anything like this in my life and I'm just enjoying it," he says confidentially. Think of their happiness as they go from cathedral to art gallery and from the crowded marts to the glorious hills. This younger generation, true Americans as they are, will be proud of Italy.

We have, too, the stout, coarse woman, whom somebody cared for, else she would be traveling in the steerage, complaining and rude. (She might have learned that in America, for it's in every land).

The sweetest type is the Waldensian girl at my right at table, a delicate, well-mannered, large eyed French woman dwelling in the north of Italy, a member of the largest Waldensian church in Italy. She is traveling alone. "God will care for me" she says in her pure but slightly accented English. A teacher in the S. S. at home in Turin, in the fore-front of the Protestant forces of new Italy. Yet broad enough to be good friends with my room-mate, a Roman Catholic from the convent schools of Toronto.

Both are conscientious Christian gentle women and through all the differences of training the Father's children find each other.

Dec. 11.

We stopped at the Azores and as this is the only line of passenger boats which does stop there, I suppose your readers may find, as we did, some thing novel about them.

They consist of nine islands belonging to Portugal stretching over a distance of 400 miles.

Thursday morning, the 6th day out, we passed the first Flores, far in the distance. In the afternoon we passed near Terceira and Pica. The capital, Augra, is on the northern side of Terceira. We could see the glimmer of the lights. The wireless telegraphy station is at Augra. 270,000 people were on these nine islands a few years ago, but they have been embarking by thousands to America, particularly New Bedford and vicinity.

About 200 returned via the Romanic this trip. It was interesting to watch them disembark.

A tug brings out four deep scows. The women who had looked so forlorn and untidy in the steerage suddenly blossomed in stylish American gowns and elaborate hats.

Only a close observer could have told them in their feathers and silk coats from first class passengers.

The small boats had gathered around some to sell oranges, nuts, dates and bananas. The boatmen toss up a rope, fasten on a basket, send up the side of the ship their produce and pull down the basket with the money. American money is preferred but any kind is accepted for trade with the ships. They are proverbially honest. They offered oranges for 5 cents a dozen though later in the town I purchased them a dozen for 3 cents.

Among the boats gathering around was one which contained a large family. The bearded old father pointed at the deck and finally sprang over the scows to lead the young woman with the little boy just leaving the ship in to her own family circle. The little boy was welcomed kindly but the grandmother threw her arms around the young woman and embraced her twice then later leaned over to kiss her again. Doubtless she had feared such a meeting might never be. That stalwart young man receiving a brotherly kiss! Doubtless the husband is in the States and it might well be with grave forebodings that the lady and her son had traveled steerage alone. I had noticed her on the voyage, different and above the rest, and as dainty as a steerage passenger could possibly manage to be. We may well believe there is many an excited glad household in Ponta Delgada tonight, as they listen to tales of far off America.

But what did we ourselves, see in Ponta Delgada, the third largest city in Portugal with its population of 18,000 souls? As the native boatmen rowed us ashore in groups of 10 to a boat, the first thing is a nearer view of the magnificent harbour. The city lies far along the coast for the mountains rise suddenly and abruptly giving it scant chance to stretch into the interior right unusual villages along the island of St. Michaels. At the left is a breakwater with many arches above the sea level reminding you of Roman ruins. This unfinished stone pier is almost a ruin for the fierce waves have for 20 years defeated the attempts of the Portuguese Governor to build a pier where ocean steamers may land.

Never have I seen such coloring in any port. It was my first glimpse of a European city and it was most attractive. Most of the houses were whitened plaster with here and there a bit of bright pink or blue. Before the stone steps where we land is a triple arch erected more than 100 years ago. The whole landing is crowded with Azore Islanders seeking the custom house or natives seeking friends. The women wore shawls or silk handkerchieves over their heads (and much more graceful and neat about it they were than those I have seen in Fall River and New Bedford.) Two women stood close together dressed in the long loose cloak and sharp pointed enormous hood of the native.

My roommate is a newspaper reporter and this is not her first trip to Europe, but she stood still to gaze and then said regretfully, "I think they are just dressed that way that they may attract attention and perhaps sell some wares." We went across the street to the Cathedral where it chanced that mass was being said and there nearly all the women, to my joy and also my friend's—were in that enormous nun-like garb. It is an old cathedral—old for a land discovered uninhabited less than five centuries ago.

Priests were officiating at two of the several altars in the church at the same time. The floor was stone but a wooden floor had been placed where the worshippers knelt! They evidently thought they had found the "soft side" of the boards. It is not a rich cathedral except in the number of priests, for nine priests and two altar boys at High Mass seemed quite a flock of clergy for the poor islanders to maintain.

Most of the worshippers were old women—one sat by the door with a crutch and begged. But all the beggars were quiet and civil—some children begged rather persistently in the streets but more in jest than earnest.

We took a carriage—six of us, representing five countries—and rode around the narrow steep rock on paved streets. The walls of the houses came close to the street and at the sound of the horses young girls came to the windows, some of them to bow and smile to us.

In going up a steep street another carriage had started down, returned to the head of the street that we might pass, for it was even difficult to pass the pedestrians and quite impossible to pass any kind of a vehicle. We visited the palace and grounds of Marquis Jerome. The house is stately, with several statues in niches in the side of the building and a nice view of the bay. The garden of Antonia Borges is more artistic with underground caves and arches, a beautiful ravine and stone bridge, roses and camellias in blossom. The orange trees were laden with fruit. We were taken into the green-house where were more than a hundred short pine apple plants each with one sturdy crown of fruit. It was so nice on the 11th of Dec. to receive a bouquet of out door flowers and to find chestnuts and oranges and acorns falling from the trees. The Concord lad of the Jewish cast, son of an Italian farmer, who supplies Boston markets, has found something more wonderful than the Public Gardens, which had been formerly his acme of magnificence. His taste is correct, too, for in the tropics one may obtain a natural effect impossible where one must begin anew every spring time.

But I was glad to come back to the shops and the people, with their leisurely polite happy ways.

I tried to find the Protestant place of worship of which my friend who disembarked here, Mr. Francisco Cravalho had told me. There are only a few Protestants but they have service.

Once I left the Public square, there was no one who understood English even enough to direct one to the American consulate. So I did not find it much to my regret.

The American Consul came only last September. He is very cordial, and perhaps somewhat lonely, for I heard of only one other American family on the island, Bostonians, who have lived here for the past two years, engaged in business.

Should any of the readers desire further information of these unique islanders they may find it in Webster's book on the Azores, a book recommended by the Consul.

A simple honest religious people, one with whom our churches in New England have more connection than any peoples I shall visit. I was indeed sorry to so quickly leave the beautiful shores, and again sail for days without a sight of land.

A PURITAN CAPTAIN

BY EMMANUEL C. CHARLTON, PH. D.

This thrilling tale of sea adventure is based on actual experience and is told in the author's own natural manner, which is made the more impressive because of his long experience as a seaman, and Christian worker among his fellow-craftsmen. The story is specially attractive to all classes. The moral is of a high character. There is not a dull chapter in it.

This beautifully bound book, printed from good, clear type, on first quality paper, containing nearly 270 pages, sold for $1.00. Address all orders to

At the elegant home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. D. Rhodes', Harrisonburg, Va., Miss Nannie Byrd Rhodes and Mr. Joseph Kieffer Ruebush were united in the holy bonds of wedlock, at 8 P. M., Tuesday, Dec. 29, 1908, the writer officiating, using the beautiful and impressive Souvenir Ceremony.

The room was beautifully decorated, palms, ferns, and carnations predominating. The color scheme was pink and green. Music was furnished by the orchestra of the Shenandoah Collegiate Institute, led by Prof. W. E. Ruebush, brother of the groom. The groom accompanied by his best man, Prof. E. R. Cruikshank, of St. Mary's School, Raleigh, N. C., and the bride, attended by her sister Miss Sallie Rhodes, maid of honor, approached the altar under the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, and in the presence of members of each family and a few intimate friends the two were made one.

The groom and his best man wore the conventional black, full evening dress. The bride was attired in white messaline over taffeta en train with veil and orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a directoire gown of pale blue messaline over taffeta, braided in silver. She carried pink roses.

After many hearty congratulations fruit punch and cake were served. The bride was the recipient of many handsome presents. About ten o'clock the bride and groom were driven in an automobile to Staunton where they took the train for points of interest in the south. They expect to be gone for a week or ten days, and upon their return will reside in Dayton, Va., where Mr. Ruebush and his associates have a flourishing business.

Mr. Ruebush is actively connected with the well-known and popular publishing house of Ruebush-Kieffer Co., of Dayton, Va. He is connected as editor with the "Musical Million," the oldest musical publication in the United States. He is prominent in the business, social, and intellectual life of Dayton, and has a host of friends, who extend to him hearty congratulations.

J. Everett, Franklin, Va., three step daughters, Mrs. Pretlow, Elon College, N. C., Mrs. J. B. Vaughan, Franklin, Va., and Miss Emma Rawls, Holland, Va., two sisters, Mrs. Long and Mrs. Edwards, Reynoldson, N. C., and five grandchildren. Mrs. Rawls was a member of Reynoldson Baptist church in Gates Co., N. C., and was a good woman. She was devoted to her children and they to her. We extend our sincerest sympathy to the family and pray the divine blessing on them. N. G. Newman.

Pickering.

Mrs. Lydia Pickering, wife of V. Pickering, departed this life at her home, Tenth Legion, Va., Dec. 10, in her 77th year. She had been a consistent member of the United Brethren Church for over fifty years.

Her home always extended a welcome to ministers, and few pastors at Bethlehem but have shared her kind hospitality. She had been in poor health for years but always had a smile and a cheerful word for visitors. She always showed her appreciation of any favor or kindness shown her.

She was married in 1859. She is survived by her husband, with whom she spent almost half a century in the happy married state, three sons, Henry, of Manesson, Pa., John, W., of Dayton, O., and Squire J. W., at home, and four daughters, Mrs. Bettie, Rosenberger, of N. D., Mrs. J. C. Bradford, of Tenth Legion, Va., and Misses Lydia and Mary at home.

The funeral was conducted in the presence of a large congregation, from Lacy Spring United Brethren Church, by Rev. A. P. Funkhauser, a United Brethren minister, assisted by the writer and the remains were laid to rest in the nearby cemetery. A mother in Israel is gone. May God comfort and bless the bereaved. W. T. Walters.

Adams.

Mrs. Julia Young Adams was born in Mecklenburg Co., Va., near Boydton, March 17, 1830, and died at the home of her son, Mr. G. M. Spain, Dec. 6, 1903, aged 78 years, 8 months, and 24 days. She was married twice. First to Stephen W. Spain, July 24, 1849. To this union were born six children, one of whom died in infancy. Her second marriage was to Robert L. Adams in 1864. To them was born one child, D. L. Adams. Her husband was killed in the Civil War and she was left to fight the battles of life alone. She endured many hardships until her children grew up and had homes of their own. After 1889 she made her home with her son, Mr. G. M. Spain. Since that time loving hearts and willing hands have ever been ready to administer to her relief.

For the last three years she was blind, yet she bore her afflictions with patience and cheerfulness and was never known to complain; often said she was willing for the Lord's will to be done. While in active life she was always ready to help any one in need. She suffered much for the last six weeks of her life. All that the family, kind friends and physician could do for her seemed to be in vain. Her time had come and the soul must take its flight to God who gave it.

Her remains were laid to rest in Mt. Auburn cemetery Dec. 7, the church of which she was a member for many years. The burial services were conducted by Deacon S. P. Read in the presence of many friends who had gathered to pay their last tribute of respect. She leaves to mourn their loss, six children, thirty-two grandchildren, twelve great-grandchildren and a host of friends.

Relieved by Heiskell's Ointment Eczema Quickly Cured

Even the old, stubborn cases of long standing, with their attendant aggravations—itching, burning skin, spots and raw eruptions can be immediately relieved, finally and permanently cured by the regular use of Heiskell's Ointment.

The first application practically dries up the raw sores, instantly cools and soothes the skin and stops the irritating itch. The hands should be washed in lukewarm water, carefully rinsed and dried, then Heiskell's Ointment applied, being gently rubbed in with the fingers. Fresh antiseptic bandages should be used after every application. One or two applications according to the above directions will produce a wonderfully grateful relief and improvement. Any kind of skin diseases and humors are amenable to Heiskell's Ointment. It readily soothes and heals where other preparations fail, and there is no skin disease, no matter how stubborn or long standing, not constitutional, that it will not cure. Its effectiveness is proven by the instant relief following its first employment.

Cures Erysipelas, Prurigo, Eczema, Milk Crust, Itching Piles, Scald Head, Tetter, Ringworm, Black Heads, Psoriasis, Pimples, Freckles, Sunburn, etc.

In some cases it is necessary to give constitutional treatment with Heiskell's Blood and Liver Pills, as in eczema and erysipelas, to tone up the liver and purify the blood.

Cure is hastened in all skin diseases by frequently bathing the affected parts with Heiskell's Medicinal Soap and toning up the blood with Heiskell's Blood and Liver Pills. In mild skin disorders, such as rashes, eruptions, pimples, etc., Heiskell's Medicinal and Toilet Soap is particularly effective, and its constant use not only insures a delightfully clean and luxurious bath, but its medicinal qualities, those of the ointment in a mild form, will prevent many diseases and disorders that the skin is heir to.

Heiskell's preparations are free from injurious properties and can be safely employed, even upon the thinner skin of babies.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Let-Alone Legislature. Seldom does an entire state undergo such rapid and radical change as has been witnessed in North Carolina the past two years. It is hardly too much to say that when our Legislature was in session twenty-four months ago all sorts of rumors were flying through the air. The public pulse was hot and feverish and high. The heart-throbs of the good commonwealth were full and thick and fast. Nobody knew what to expect and every body was uneasy as to the outcome. The sixty days of the session drew themselves out to lengthy and cruel proportions. It is needless to say that men breathed easier, slept sounder and felt a sense of deep relief when that Legislature closed and the law makers turned their backs upon the capital and their faces homeward.

How vastly different today. You hardly know that the Legislature is in session. Everybody thinks that the body is sane, sober, safe and conservative. And most believe that we shall have little legislating and less stir about it. The people feel that they have enough. The discovery has been made that the railroads are at work and are trying like other business interests to make a living. And even the reckless and radical seem to have learned that large, as well as small, business interests have rights that must be respected. The state has enacted a prohibition law and the people want that measure let alone. There is a feeling everywhere that we should have no "liquor legislature" pro or con at this session. And our present assembly is likely to prove its wisdom by actual demonstration that the wisest course at this session is to let things alone, do as little as possible and then go home.

We have come upon a better and happier day in North Carolina and proven also that it is sometimes wiser not to speak than to speak, not to do than to do. Which, furthermore, is wisdom's way, not only with legislatures, but with men and women every where, now and then? There be times when it is very easy to do or to say too much.

1809 and 1909. If this year of our Lord, 1909, shall prove as fruitful in its gifts of great men to the world as its predecessor of one hundred years ago we may well afford to welcome it with joy and gratitude. But few years have been so blessed with the birth of notables as was the year 1809. And it is doubtful if we shall live to celebrate the centennial of so many men, famous and useful in politics, science and literature, as the year 1909 brings to us. On Feb. 12, 1809, the great scientist and noted author, Charles Darwin, first saw the light of day, and few men in modern times have wrought such changes in thought, conception and attitude as did Mr. Darwin. August 9, 1809 the greatest poet of the Victorian era, Alfred Lord Tennyson, was born. William Ewart Gladstone, "the grand old man," orator, statesman, philosopher, philanthropist claimed as his birth day August 29, 1809. This remarkable politician and statesman found time at the ripe age of eighty-four to turn aside from affairs of state and give to the world a remarkable translation of Homer, and at eighty five to write and publish "A Commentary on the Psalms" and also "The Impregnable Rock of Holy Scripture" and at eighty-six publish "Studies on the Works of Bishop Butler." February 12, 1809 is famous henceforth in history, as the day on which Abraham Lincoln, our great war president and famous with Washington, Jefferson, and Jackson as one of America's very ablest and wisest chief executive, was born.

And it was in this year of 1809 that America's greatest poet, Edgar Allan Poe, was born, some say in Boston, but more likely at Baltimore, on January 19th. Poe was indeed a strange, wonderful, erratic, tragic genius. We call him greatest because he has a niche all his own. There was only one Edgar Allan Poe, and some of his poems are as sure to live as life and music and rhythm are. They throb with a vivid and vigorous vitality and reality not known to any other American verse. And then in the same year, on August 29, the "Sunny laureate of Boston," Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was born, and made a half century brighter and happier because he lived and wrought in it. These are only a few of the names whose centennial we this year celebrate with the wonder if 1909 will be in any wise as fruitful and fortunate as 1809.

The President and Congress. On the whole there is much satisfaction that President Roosevelt's term of office nears a close. Not that the President is not a good man, or a wise statesman on the whole. In these particulars the American people do not find so much fault with him. The trouble is along other lines.

One, for instance, is that no one knows where the President will take hold next, and what bluster he will stir up tomorrow. The final upshot of his many movements is usually sane enough and safe enough, but he does evermore keep you alarmed and in doubt while the upheaval is in progress. President Roosevelt hates nothing as he does a dull time. If he has had many dull days since he has been in the White House the country has not discovered it. In short the country has not objected so much to what President Roosevelt has done as it has to the way in which he has done it. He is an executive of noise and bluster. His wagon usually pulls up at the right place, but he chooses the roughest and rockiest road in getting there.

Coming now almost to the very close of his seven years' administration, he has set Congress in a bad mood and is fairly making dry bones rattle at the other end of Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House. He has preferred charges against Congress and now Congress has scotched itself and is not saying things calculated to make the executive happy. It is a queer plight and the country somehow will feel easier after March 4.

The idea is general that Mr. Taft has all of President Roosevelt's wisdom and ability as a statesman without having his love for the sensational and spectacular.

"Let not your good be evil spoken of" wrote an inspired one centuries ago. Which means that tact, prudence and caution should be exercised even in the performance of good and wise deeds.

FROM THE FIELD.

Nansemond Notes.

The Christmas holiday has come and gone. And now we are writing 1909. The shrieking whistles, tolling bells, booming guns, and watch-night songs bade the old year good-bye and ushered in the new with grateful hearts. Still we lingered at the parting and felt the tinge of sadness at the going, but it crept away as quietly as it came. The Old Year brought many good things with its mingled joy and sadness. The same old story of success and failure, victory and defeat can now be told. Thus it will ever be. The holiday season brings much joy to many hearts. This is the time of the home-coming. College students went home for a few days rest with parents and loved ones. They were glad, happy days. The fires burned brighter, the old hearth-stone seemed dearer than ever before. Rapidly the days sped away and the day came too soon, when work in the class-room must be resumed. The lunch-box held an appetizing meal for the journey back to duty. As the last piece of food, which had been carefully prepared by mother's dear hands was eaten, a stifled sob came into the throat—a sob of sorrow mingled with joy. Happy are they who can sit with father and mother in the old home, at happy Christmas time. Youth is renewed and dull care is driven away.

Berea (Nansemond), Oakland, Hobson and Mt. Zion Sunday schools had Christmas trees for the children. I was unable to attend any of these exercises, except at Berea. It was my good pleasure to be there. When Old Santa Claus called for the children to come and get their presents, I was among the number. He presented me an elegant set of buggy harness, a gift from the Berea church. I received it with a grateful heart. These good people are always thinking of some kindness to bestow upon their pastor. It is a genuine pleasure and a delight to serve such a dear people. I wish to express again my sincere thanks for this kind remembrance. "Dan," my faithful horse, seems to appreciate this favor and actually looks like he is proud of it. I wish also to thank Bros. Geo. Rawles, F. L. Jones, W. H. Brinkley, T. R. Gaskins, W. J. Lee, and Mrs. Bettie Lee of Berea, and Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Rogers of Liberty Spring for special favors recently. These favors included the gift of oysters, potatoes, sausage, butter, ham and other good things to eat, for which we are truly grateful.

Dedication of the Union Christian Mission.

Perhaps, some of the readers of "The Christian Sun" would like to read an account of the dedication of the "Union Christian Mission." The building has been completed at a cost of about five hundred dollars, furnished and paid for with sacrifice and constant devotion and prayer. A large concourse of people gathered there Sunday afternoon, Oct. 4th, 1908 to give the house to God and dedicate it to His service. The services began about 3:30 o'clock and continued two hours. We tried to get four ministers, one representing each denomination as follows: Christian, Baptist, Methodist, and Friends, but failed to get the Methodist as he had to fill other appointments. Rev. R. H. Peel of the Christian Church was invited and was expecting to preach the dedicatory sermon, but had to inform us a short time before, he could not serve, owing to his wife's illness. So the Baptist minister, Rev. B. F. Robinson delivered the dedicatory sermon, assisted by Rev. Alonzo Cloud (a Friends Minister) Bro. I. W. Norfleet of the Christian Church, from Franklin, gave a very encouraging address on "Faithfulness." Bro. B. F. Robinson's sermon was preached with inspiration and power which left a lasting impression on the attentive congregation; text, Matthew 16:18, "Upon this Rock (Jesus) I will build my church," and on "Faith" the eleventh chapter of Hebrews. There was an immense congregation. The house was filled and many outside. Near the close Bro. Robinson gave an opportunity for confessions. One sister came forward and professed faith in Jesus. Miss Lizzie Camp with skill and efficiency presided at the organ and several hymns of consecration were sung with the Spirit and life. Benediction was pronounced by Bro. Cloud. This mission has a regular afternoon Sabbath-school with an enrollment of about sixty-five members, besides visitors. A Foreign Missionary Society has been organized. Rev. B. F. Robinson, a Baptist minister, preaches there once a month. This Sabbath-school was organized in an old store house by Miss Pearl Beaton nine years ago, and through her faithful efforts and the encouragement of the liberal offering of one hundred dollars by Bro. Brickbouse of Norfolk, Va., for this purpose, in a discouraged time this building has been planned, erected, and completed, with the assistance of many others.

If some missionaries could be sent out from this place, those who were faithful to their duty in this work will be richly rewarded. (Miss) Ella Beaton.

Holland.

Our Teacher Training class, organized Dec. 11, meets weekly and is led by the pastor. It now has 16 members and they seem to find a real pleasure in the work. The Sunday-school Christmas tree and entertainment was Dec. 30. A large audience was present and a very interesting and appropriate program was rendered by the children. After this, old Santa came, unloaded the tree and gave each child a box of candy, a large orange and red apple, and a nice little present. The committee deserve much credit and thanks for their faithful and efficient service. On Christmas eve old Santa came to the parsonage in the person of a committee of ladies followed by some of the brethren bearing to us Christmas good things, a long list of substantials for the pantry, even including the fatted turkey,—old fashioned pounding—and, that nothing might be lacking, they added to all this a purse of money. Beside this, individuals have kindly remembered us from time to time. Mrs. Newman and myself sincerely appreciate these gifts and return our heartfelt thanks to each

Holy Neck.

Prof. Wilbur has just closed a session with a large singing class here, and will begin another the 12th. This church and Sunday-school have a large number of young people and much fine talent which only needs development. The closing concert was good and showed the value of even a little training. The Sunday-school continues large and we hope to introduce the Teacher Training Course and add to its efficiency.

Among the pleasant surprises of Christmas was the presentation of a handsome and expensive oak chair from Holy Neck Sunday-school. It is strong, heavy, almost too comfortable, and will last a life time. We greatly appreciate this and sincerely thank the school.

The members of both churches are very kind and to serve them is a pleasure. We trust they may be rewarded by the "Giver of every good and perfect gift," and that we may be able to render more faithful and efficient service in the future.

N. G. Newman.

Wyoming.

The readers of the Christian Sun have heard of the "Wyoming Movement," and some have doubtless wished to know more about it.

About a year ago a plan was formed for the establishment of a Christian colony and college in the state of Wyoming. An option was secured on a tract of land about five miles west of Manville on the Chicago and North Western railroad in the heart of a good agricultural district. The land was to be used for a town site. The surrounding land was owned by the Government and was subject to entry under the homestead laws. A company was organized and incorporated under the laws of Wyoming "to deal in real estate in the interest of the Christian Church." The officers of the Company, known as the Jireh Land Co., are Frank G. Coffin, President, Alvin W. Meade, Vice-President, Daniel B. Atkinson, Secretary, and George Dalzell, Treasurer.

The Company purchased 160 acres of land on which it held an option, and plotted it for town purposes. The name of the new town is Jireh. It now has a depot, post office, store, Christian church, public school, and dwellings are in process of construction. This is to be the seat of the Christian college. The lots have been placed on the market at prices ranging from $50 to $250. The total valuation of the lots is $72,375. After the obligations of the Company have been paid, 70 percent of the income from the sales of lots will go to the college, 20 per cent to street improvements, and 10 per cent to the building of a Christian church.

The colonists are locating on the land surrounding the town under the homestead laws a citizen of the United States may enter 160 acres of land. The filing fee is $16.00. The person must then establish his residence upon the land within six months after filing. If he maintains a continuous residence for five years and cultivates a portion of the land each year, the Government will grant him a patent for the land. After fourteen month's residence he may commute his claim by paying $1.25 an acre.

The soil is a dark sandy loam, and very fertile. The rainfall occurs from April to September, and while the amount is limited, it is sufficient for maturing crops suited to the climate, when cultivated by the "dry-farming" methods. The main crops are wheat, oats, rye, barley, hay, and potatoes.

The Company is increasing its capital stock by issuing fifty additional shares of stock, for the purpose of purchasing 160 acres of land adjoining the town on the east, and of aiding in the construction of the first college building. This land will be utilized in supporting the college.

The first college building is to be erected in the spring of this year and to be ready for occupancy by next September. The fall term of the new college will open in September. Among those who have been invited to be members of the faculty are, George C. Enders, M. A., B. D., Frank G. Coffin, M. A., Anna Hel-fenstein, B. A., Zuah Zenobia Weimer, M. A., George Dalzell, M. A., Charity J. Ford, Jessie A. Dalzell, and Daniel B. Atkinson, M. A.

The purpose of the "movement" is the establishment of the Christian church in Wyoming. This state, like others in the great west, is just entering upon a condition of rapid development. There is but one college in the state. There are many opportunities for the organization of churches, and it is the hope of those who are fostering the enterprise to make it a strong missionary movement for the Christians.

LESSONS FROM THE LIVES OF GREAT MEN.

I. Edgar Allan Poe.

By W. P. Lawrence, M. A.

Whether Edgar Allan Poe was, in his life-time, or is now entitled to be characterized by the adjective "great" is an unsettled question with the jury of public opinion. His name is written in mosaic along with other notable literary names in the Library of Congress, but as yet he has not been accorded a place in the Temple of Fame in New York, although many have protested in his favor,—Edward Clarence Stedman among the number. Perhaps public opinion has no definite, specified ruling by which to determine greatness in human character. All are agreed, however, that surpassing vigor, strength and integrity of personal character lay first claim to greatness. These qualities are the background of great deeds and great achievements among soldiers, statesmen and moral heroes. Then if we are accustomed to call one great who has outstripped his fellows in art or invention. Michael Angelo was a great sculptor, Christopher Wrenn was a great architect, Handel was a great musician, Milton was a great poet.

If Poe is great, he is great not in character but in the artistic production of poetry. He is much discussed now in magazine literature and during the month of January, at least two universities, the University of Virginia and Columbia University, will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of his birth which occurred at Boston, Jan. 19, 1808.

There are two lessons to be drawn from his life. One is negative; the other positive. The negative lesson is in his personal character. Left an orphan in early childhood he was adopted by Mr. John Allan a wealthy gentleman of Richmond, Va. He was schooled at London, Richmond, Va., University of Va., at Charlottesville and at West Point Military Academy. His record as student is that of insubordination, disregard of authority, if not positive rebellion against it. Too, when taken from the University of Virginia and put to work in Mr. Allan's office in Richmond he chafed under the restraint of business routine like a caged eagle, and ran away, thus beginning the breach between him and Mr. Allan which resulted in the unfortunate Poe's being entirely disinherited. The result was extreme poverty and a chequered life of shackled genius, penurious want and blasted hopes. Neither could Poe work in harmony with publishers. Through the assistance of friends he secured editorial positions, time and again which, if he could have held, would have secured a competent living. But in every case he allowed drunkenness or irritableness, or perhaps, both to rob him of this position. If Poe had made Paul's injunction, "As much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men," the watch-word of his restless, irritable temperament from boyhood, the world would have far less of faults to cover with the blanket of charity than it finds itself called upon to do in order to reckon him among the greatest of American literary artist. All such as Poe may profit by Matthew Arnold's teaching in "Lyric Stanzas of Epicedes" and "The Future," written in 1852, three years after Poe's death, wherein he likens time to a river flowing from out the unknown past onward towards the boundless sea of eternity, and each life to a bubble that appears for a little time on the surface and then vanishes. These bubbles should not chafe at the banks overgrown with grass and weeds that dip in the water to work delay, for now and then, obstructing their progress.

The positive lesson is in Poe's exquisite work as an author. He reached high attainment in three things; criticism, poetry, and prose fiction. He was endowed with a stupendous intellect and powerful imagination. He turned these gifts to excellent account. He took pains to be an artist. He knew better than any other American has ever known the art of composition. His mastery of words and phrases was marvellous. If the mantle of charity has to be thrown over his wayward, immoral, profligate life, his work as a great work challenges our admiration. Abroad, he is considered America's greatest poet and story writer, and at home, he is likely to come, at last, to the same high honor.

—Rev. P. T. Klapp, Pittsboro, N. C. was a visitor at The Sun office last week. Bro. Klapp is in good health, seems happy and hopeful for the new year with its tasks and opportunities.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. S. B. Klapp writes that he has made the rounds of his appointments for the new conference year and his work seems bright and hopeful.

—What good book and helpful volume are you reading these long winter evenings? It were a very shame to waste them in idle nothingness.

—Peloubet's Select Notes on the Sunday School Lesson for 1909. The Christian Sun office will fill your order at $1.00 per copy, post paid.

—The Christian Sun has entered its sixty-first volume. The first issue was printed in January, 1844, but there was a suspension of its publication for four years owing to the Civil War.

—Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., Burlington, N. C., is attending the annual meeting of the Board of Education of the American Christian Convention, of which he is a member, at Dayton, Ohio.

—We sent out the 1909 Annual to all subscribers last week. If any purchaser failed to receive his, a card to us will carry another. Others desiring the Annual should send in orders at once. Price 20 cts. per copy post paid.

—Our brethren everywhere will give President Moffitt hearty welcome, good cheer, and what assistance they can in his most worthy effort to raise $50,000 for Elon College in 1909. Every new movement for the college has resulted in more students, larger facilities and increased interest in the institution.

—Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Pastor of Suffolk church writes: "I have purchased twenty-four Teacher Training books for the class here and you will please send me ten copies more." This book is being used by teachers in many of our schools and is meeting favor everywhere. The price is 60 cts. per copy paper binding, 90 cts. in cloth. For Sunday-school classes 50 cts. and 75 cts. respectively.

—The door of opportunity and privilege will not swing wide always. This good year of 1909 will offer much that no other year has ever offered, or will ever offer. Every year, like every moment, is new, and carries its own charms, rewards and treasures. Those neglected, or disdained, or refused now will never return. He who would know the weight and worth of tomorrow will make today of weight and worth by energy and effort. He is the wise man, she the wise woman, who seizes the opportunities as they pass and makes something worth while of them.

—Raleigh Evening Times Mond., Jan. 4:

"Services yesterday at the Hillsboro Street Christian church were fully in keeping with the occasion. In the morning the pastor preached from the subject "The New Year's Call to Duty." In the evening he spoke from the subject, "The Open Door of Opportunity." One of the most interesting features of the morning service was the raising of funds for the maintenance of the work for the coming year, one thousand and seventy dollars was easily raised in a few minutes time.

It is probable that in addition five hundred dollars will be added this week. Rev. Mr. Johnson, the pastor, is very much encouraged with the present outlook and the indications now are that the year 1909 will be far the best in the history of the church.

HOW I BECAME AN EVANGELIST.

By Gipsy Smith.

I should not like to say that I was destined to be an evangelist, but I do say that after my conversion I perceived that I could be nothing else. I saw my life-work open before me soon after my conversion in the little Primitive Methodist Chapel in Cambridge in November, 1876. With that spiritual climax came the first real awakening of my intellect.

Remember, I was only a gipsy boy in my teens, and I had only a few weeks' schooling. I had just mastered my alphabet and had got no further than spelling my own name and spelling out a few words of one syllable. Then came my conversion, which instantly gave me not only a new vision of life and a new hunger for the Word of God, but a new motive behind my desire to learn. My conversion meant a tremendous lot for me. I felt that I was a new creature and that I had received a spiritual experience which was going to change the entire course of my life and make the world a new world and people a new people to me. My conversion experience so possessed me that I could not keep it to myself. I wanted everybody to know what I knew and to share in my new joy. I could not help becoming an evangelist, and I began at once to do evangelistic work in my own crude, primitive way. I wanted to make it known that I had given my heart to God and that I had found in Jesus a wonderful Savior.

As a gipsy boy I went about the villages of Cambridgeshire selling the products of my father's industry—clothes-peggs, tin pans, buckets, and other oddments. When I came to a cottage door and a woman bought anything of me, I used to say: "Can I sing for you?" She would say: "What can you sing?" and then I would sing either "Who'll be the next to follow Jesus?" or "My Jesus, I love Thee." They were all I knew—those two hymns.

For a time I contented myself with singing about Jesus—it was all I could do then. My first attempts at speaking were failures, and when I saw, as I often did, the women of the other cottages gathering round as I sang—some of them in tears—I did not know what to say, and I bolted. A little later, after I had had a few weeks' experience of this kind of thing, I began to put my own experience into words, and sometimes went as far as praying in the cottages with the women and children. It seemed to move the cottagers deeply to hear a gipsy boy singing and praying. There are people living in the Cambridgeshire villages to-day who remember my first evangelistic efforts. Close to my home now I have a neighbor who used to buy clothes-peggs of me, and from my study window I can see the telegraph-posts skirting the lane in which my father's caravan used to pull up. Those days come back vividly to memory when I pull aside my study curtains and look over the fields I remember from my childhood.

My earliest efforts as a gipsy boy evangelist, telling the story of Christ's love as I sold the cottagers their clothes-peggs, were educative to me. They made me realize my ignorance and realize that I had to train myself for my life-work. My ignorance was such a burden that it almost crushed me. I had no chance to learn. I did not know my Bible. I could not read; but I determined that I very soon would. One of my first reading lessons was from a lady whom I met one Saturday morning in Leytonstone. She was going shopping, and as I came by her I saw a big signboard outside a shop. I asked her to read it to me. She said: "You are a gipsy boy; what do you want to read for?" I replied that I had given my heart to Jesus and I wanted to learn to read my Bible. The lady went over the words on the signboard with me until I knew them. Then she said: "Now, can you read them?" "Yes," I said, "backwards." I so fastened those few words on my memory that I knew them wherever I saw them. That is how I began to get hold of bigger words—it was my introduction to polysyllables.

Every new word I heard and learned to spell I stored up in my mind. So I gradually built up a vocabulary. I never forgot a word I had mastered. Then I got possession of three books—the Bible, an English dictionary, and Professor Edie's "Bible Dictionary." They formed my first rudimentary library, and how precious they were to me! Whenever I heard a new word, I flew to my dictionary to learn its meaning and uses.

All this time I went on selling my clothes-peggs and tinware; but at nights in the caravan with my father and sisters and brother I struggled with my books. My father gave us every encouragement to read and learn. My brother and sister were just picking up their letters, and we helped one another as best we could. In the daytime the green fields were my Alma Mater and the blue sky my university. Saint Francis of Assisi preached one sermon to the birds, it is said; but I preached sermons miles long as I tramped from village to village. I did warm up the hedges and cows and sheep and birds as I preached to them. Those first sermons of mine were so easily preached. I was a gipsy lad, with all a gipsy's Nature lore and Nature love, and my congregations were the natural things I knew and loved as only gipsies can. But it was quite a different thing when I faced a human congregation and had to talk to real people.

In June, 1877, six eventful months after my conversion, I joined the Christian Mission under Rev. William Booth, as the thirty-sixth evangelist of the embryo Salvation Army. When I became a real evangelist, my real difficulties began. I had to do public speaking without any preliminary training. I went through no school or institution by way of preparation. My training in public speech, in visiting the sick, and in house-to-house visitation, was all derived from my own actual experience of the work itself. I was only seventeen when I thus came into living touch with men, women and children, and whilst I worked I had to train myself for my work. Many a time I had to speak when I did not know if I had anything to say or not. In sheer self-defense and desperation I taught myself to think on my feet. I enjoyed none of the advantages of those of my colleagues who had had decent or even half decent educations, or had, in their homes, opportunities of gathering a fund of information to think and speak about. My mind was almost a blank as to Bible knowledge, and absolutely a blank as to the subjects of general education. I knew my Savior and had a real personal experience of Him in my heart and soul, and all I could say sprang from that personal experience. I no doubt expressed myself very crudely in those early days, but I believe that the intensity of my religious experience and the reality which my hearing could see that experience was to me, convicted and impressed even educated people far more than the glib utterance of even brilliant educated men whose heart was not revealed in their preaching.

But while I had ample assurance that God was blessing my simple testimony, given in crude, unlearned words, I was determined not to rest there. I was at the bottom of the ladder of knowledge, but I meant to climb every rung that was within my possible reach. I first set myself to master my Bible in English, because it was that I wanted to preach. Many a night I sat up until the day dawned, poring over my Bible and struggling with its big words and difficult passages. I bought candles and carried a bottle with me for use as a candlestick, so that when I went to other people's houses I could study at night without burning their gas. I knew that if God could use my ignorance, He would make more abundant use of my knowledge as it expanded. Though God can work with a rough stick, He can work better with a polished one. God puts no premium on ignorance, and there is no incompatibility between the highest culture and aggressive evangelism.

Many a big struggle I had in those days, when I was called to address a meeting without a chairman. I chose hymns the first verse of which I knew by heart, and I gave out the verse I remembered and asked the people to sing it through. Then I chose the Scripture lessons that I could get on best with—passages of the simplest kind. Even then there would be words in almost every verse that I could not pronounce. I used to read on slowly, until I came to a big word, and then, instead of having a shot at pronouncing it, I would pause and make a little comment, taking care to resume my reading on the other side of the big word. I do not know that anyone ever found me out, though I should not have been ashamed if my ignorance had been discovered. I never posed and never disguised my ignorance. I always told my audiences that I was only a gipsy boy, and had only had a few weeks' schooling, and would make lots of blunders, but that if they would forgive me I would make fewer as I grew older and acquire more knowledge.

My five years in the Salvation Army were years of mental and spiritual growth, but my most formative years were those I spent in Henley after leaving the army. There for four years I had Sunday by Sunday a congregation of two thousand people. I realized that I must constantly have something fresh to say, and to that end I must be everlastingly refilling my own mind. O! how the scantiness of my store of knowledge was forced upon me then! but that only drove me to study with deeper intensity.

I read voraciously everything I could lay my hands upon—Biblical literature and general literature. I read first Matthew Henry's Commentaries and Dr. Adam Clarke's works, and I spent hours a day over Smith's Dictionary. The sermons of Robertson, Spurgeon, McLaren, and Parker were my intellectual food day and night, while Scott, Dickens, and George Eliot were the reading of my more leisurely hours. To the popular day, I turned eagerly, and, a child of scientists, like Hugh Miller and Faraday myself, born in a field and reared in the open, I devoured all the books on Nature I could procure.

The more I read, the easier I found it became to give expression to my soul's message; and ideas which had seemed inexpressible found, by degrees, easy utterance on my lips. Soon, to talk, which had been difficult, became a pleasure. I have never abandoned my early endeavor to expand my vocabulary, and to this day I delight in studying the exact use of words. I never read to waste; all the time I was reading I was pigeon-holing new facts, new expressions, new words, and new illustrations. I am thankful to God for giving me a retentive memory and a mind that works by association of ideas, so that when I am on my feet, things I have read and heard flash up into my mind and enable me to enrich my speech with fresh illustrations. I am still a student, and never hope to feel that my education is complete. My library, which is my constant resort and pride, includes most of the best modern sermonic literature, the great English classics, the standard commentaries, and even some of the Bible critics. Tennyson is my favorite poet, though I love Cowper and Wordsworth. On all my journeys I carry in my trunk a small collection of books—changed from time to time—and I invariably try to devote my mornings to my correspondence and study.

I have had to struggle for my own self-education, and it is not the educational process I would prescribe for an evangelist. No, indeed; if I could, I would have the picked men of the colleges and the universities for evangelists—provided that they are men with hearts as well as brains. Without the heart, without the spiritual power, a university professor would fail as an evangelist, while a man straight from a coal pit might succeed if he has the spiritual instinct and the passion for souls.

The day has happily passed when any ignoramus will do for an evangelist. The churches have blundered in that direction in days gone by, but I do not think the blunder will be often repeated. The intellectual level of evangelists has risen and must rise with the general advance of education. The slangy evangelist must disappear. I abhor slang and never use it—first, because I dislike slang intensely myself, and, secondly, because the

HOW TO TEACH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JAN 24.
A Few Suggestions.

The Lame Man Healed.

Acts 3:1-26.

Golden Text: His name, through faith in his name, hath made this man strong, whom ye see and know.—Acts 3:16.

Review. In as much as today's lesson is some of the first-fruit of the Christian Church, it would be a good idea to review the lesson of the two preceding Sundays on the Descent of the Holy Spirit and the Beginnings of The Christian Church;—review these lessons so as to bring out the relational elements between them and today's lesson—this lesson naturally following in accordance with Acts 2:43.

Incidental Instruction. This lesson offers to the zealous teacher ripe opportunities of incidental instruction. First as to the location of the Gate Beautiful, there were several gate-ways leading from the court of the Gentiles on the south and the court of the women on the east of the temple proper, all of which gateways were overlaid with gold and silver. But Josephus informs us of a gateway on the east leading from the court of the women "made of Corinthian bronze and much surpassing in worth those enriched with silver and gold." Very likely this was the Gate Beautiful. Then Solomon's porch which was east of the court of the Gentiles, 600 feet long, lined with stately columns of embellished marble, the only part of Solomon's magnificent structure which survive the destructive hand of Nebuchadnezzar, whence its name:—it was the nearest colonade to the Gate Beautiful and a much frequented part of the temple grounds. Then the daily hours of Hebrew worship, the 3rd, 6th, and 9th hours, corresponding to our 9 a. m., 12 m. and 3 p. m. respectively,—the latter being the most popular hour, coming as it did immediately after the mid-day siesta. Of course this incidental instruction will be interspersed in the lesson as you teach it.

Chronology. It is possible that this lesson came immediately after the preceding, but, as the miracle led to a persecution, some are inclined to think that it came a year or two after, when the fury of the strict Jews was gathering around the disciples' heads.

The Lesson. Our lesson today falls naturally into three divisions, which may be written on the board as they are developed in the teaching.

1. The Lame Beggar, verses 1-5. Discover by question who were going up into the temple, at what hour, who was being carried, how long he had been lame (See Chap. 4,22), how often he was so carried, whither, for what purpose, what had he asked of Peter and John, how they gained his attention, what Peter commanded him, what he expected of them.

2. Lame Man Healed and Praising God, verses 6-10. Here discover what Peter said to him, what promise he made him, what command he gave him, how he assisted him, what happened immediately, what the man did, who saw him thus rejoicing and healed, whom they knew him to be, how the sight affected them. Here call for assigned work on alms-giving: Deut. 14,28,29; 15,7-11; 26:11-13; Matt. 6:1-14.

3. Peter's Sermon, verses 11-26. (After the worship of the afternoon in the court of the women was over, Peter and John repaired homewards intending to pass out by the last gate.) Discover what the healed man did when Peter and John began to depart from the temple, where they were when the people gathered around them, why they gathered, who spoke to them, how he addressed them, what two questions he asked them, who had glorified Jesus, what they had done to him, whom they had denied, whom they had desired to be granted unto them (here call for assigned work as to who this murderer was, Matt. 27:21; Mark 15:7; Luke 23:19), whom they had killed, who the witnesses of this act were, through what means Peter declared the man had been healed and in whose presence (Here call for assigned work on meaning of name in verse 16, Acts 1:15; 4:16; Eph. 1:21; Rev. 3:4), through what they and their rulers had killed Christ, what Christ had fulfilled, what they were commanded to do, to what end, whom God would send, by what he must be received, what Moses had said respecting him, by whom his days had been foretold, what Moses had said respecting him, by whom his days had been foretold, whose children they were, what covenant God had made with the fathers, in whom this covenant was now fulfilled. Here call for assigned work on the number of Christ's miracles that had to do with healing, (for facts consult the teacher's supplement to your Bible) and on how we may today help others, Matt. 25:34;46.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

For Class Discussion: Why was this miracle selected rather than some other? (Perhaps, Luke, being a physician was more impressed with it; the difficulty of the healing would also come in.)

Truths and their Application. 1. Peter and John, we were told, fastened their eyes on the man who was lame and poverty-stricken. Is it not the duty of Christians to fasten their eyes on need and suffering wherever it is seen? Most assuredly it is. And Christians have done and are doing great service for the Master in their ministration to the poor and destitute. But there is a deeper sort of charity than this—the charity that ministers to the downcast and the broken hearted. We need more of this kind of Christian charity. Christianity has done much for the physical man's sufferings in its hospitals and other charitable institutions. What it needs to do is to establish hospitals for their souls also.

2. The lame beggar, when he was healed, walked and leaped and praised God. Do we give God sufficient praise for the marvellous kindnesses and tender mercies toward us? If not, why not?

3. This poor beggar is typical of the sinner—he was in dire need, and he could not help himself. God alone could save him. So it is with the sinner, whose dire need can be met by none other than Jesus Christ.

4. Fellowship in service is taught plainly in this lesson—Peter and John are together—each helped the other. Peter was bold—John was magnetic with love. John's love steadied the boldness of Peter and made him a stronger advocate of Christ. In spiritual matter one and one are more than two. We should strive for the making of our Sunday-schools into leagues of service, whose motto should be the "fellowship of all who love in the service of all who suffer."

Assignments for Home Study. Ask one to be prepared on the fellowship in service of Peter and John, Luke 5:10; John 1:14; Luke 22:8; John 28:16; 20:6; 21:21; Acts 3:1; Another to find what we are to gain from the name of Jesus, Col. 3:17; Matt. 18:20; John 14:13-16; Acts 9:27; Matt. 12:21; Eph. 5:20; Mark 16:15-18; a third to compare the methods of the Jewish council in verse 7 with that pursued in Matt. 26:62-66.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR SUN., JAN 17.
The Beginning of the Christian Church.
Acts 2:22-47.

Golden Text:—They continued steadfastly in the Apostle's doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. Acts 2:42.

Peter preaches to a typical congregation on the day of Pentecost. Some were curiosity seekers, some mockers and some truth desirers. What message should the speaker give them? With unflinching boldness the apostle's thoughts cluster around the one central theme—Jesus and the resurrection, the facts ringing with convicting and converting power that “We are witnesses brought men to cry for mercy.”

Lesson Outline.

- I. The instrumentality by which the church was formed.
- II. The Inquiry Meeting.
- III. Joining the Church.
- IV. The Church Beautiful. An Ideal for all Ages.

The Inquiry Meeting.

1. The first effect was conviction of sin. This leads men to Christ.
2. The inquiry—what shall we do?
3. Answer—Repent, exercise faith in Jesus.
4. Baptism. Two blessings were promised to those who comply. 1st, Remission of sins, 2nd, The gift of the Holy Ghost.

Joining the Church.

Who? They who received the word. Receiving the word implies committing ourselves to serve Christ, to obey his teachings, to live according to the principles of his kingdom, and to devote ourselves to carrying out his mission. How. By baptism. Baptism is an appointed method of making a profession of religion—a confession of Christ. Baptism is a public renunciation of sin, a symbol of cleansing, and of the baptism of the Holy Spirit. (2) Confession of Christ. Confession is a duty, a test of faith. It confirms and strengthens and gives power over the world.

The Church Beautiful.

It was a training school in the Christian life.

1. By instruction. The whole body of Christians should attend the teaching services of the church. The Sunday-school should be the Bible school for all.
2. By fellowship and personal influence.
3. By the ordinances—especially the Lord's Supper.
4. By prayer meetings. The results of effects. Deeds expressing Christian life. Deeds of Charity and love. Worship.

Praise Giving.

The gospel prevades the whole life with gladness.

—The first train over the Virginia railroad to run through from Norfolk to Roanoke arrived at the latter place Jan. 5. The road is 243 miles long from Norfolk to Roanoke and 77 miles long from Roanoke to Rich Creek. The road will soon be completed to Deepwater, W. Va., making a total distance of 446 miles. The road has been built, and is owned by Henry H. Rogers, the Standard Oil magnate.

A WORD TO OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.

My Dear Fellow Workers:—A supply of the Sunday-school handbook of the Christian Church, South, is being sent to the secretaries of the different conventions, and before very long you will probably receive several copies of this book for distribution in your Sunday-school.

The Sunday-school board desires that every copy of this book may be used to advantage. I would, therefore, like to ask, through the Sun, that you distribute those that are sent to you, among the officers and teachers of your Sunday-school just as soon as they are received. Heretofore the minutes of our conventions have been thrown around behind the pulpit, or away in some corner of the library, and left there until used by the church sexton to build a fire or otherwise destroyed. The hand-book which we have gotten out this time is too expensive to be disposed of in this way. It contains the proceedings of your own convention along with all the others, and ought to be of very great value to everyone interested in Sunday-school work. The officers and teachers of your Sunday-school need the information which it contains, and since it has been published at considerable expense the Sunday-school Board wishes that each individual school may get the greatest possible benefit from it. Please see, therefore, that the copies sent to your school are judiciously distributed.

Yours very truly,

S. M. Smith, Chairman.

SAVIOR OR JUDGE.

George Eliot, the novelist, in her “Adam Bede” puts these words into the mouth of Dinah, the woman preacher: “Jesus, who stands ready to help you now, won't help you then; because you won't have him to be your Savior, He will be your judge. Now He looks at you with love and mercy, and says, ‘Come to me that you may have life;’ then He will turn away from you, and say, ‘Depart from me into everlasting fire!’”

And that strikes to the heart of the matter. Jesus came into the world to save men—save them from themselves, their sins, their undoing, their everlasting ruin. He wants to save men. He offers Himself that He may thus save them. It is not His will, or pleasure, that any should perish, that any should bring wreck or ruin upon themselves. But, if they will not be saved, if they persist in being lost by their own volition, then He who would be Savior becomes inevitable and inexorable Judge. If we will not let Him be our Savior then we must let Him be our Judge. He will be one or the other. We may choose or refuse Him as Savior; we cannot choose or refuse Him as Judge. Savior or Judge, the one or the other. If we will not be saved through Him we must stand condemned by and before Him.

PREPARING THE TEACHER.

A book of 236 pages filled with rich and valuable lessons and suggestions to every Sunday-school Superintendent, Teacher and interested worker. Edited by Profs. W. A. Harper, W. P. Lawrence, and W. C. Wicker, Committee on Teacher Training of the Southern Christian Convention. Contains chapters on the Teacher: The Pupil: History and Organization of the Sunday-school: The Institutional Sunday-school: The Book: Biblical History: Church History: Biblical Geography: Bible Antiquities: and Five Lessons on the Principles of the Christian Church. Handsomely printed and substantially bound. Paper cover 60 cts; cloth 90 cts. post paid. Address The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

—The year 1908 reached the bad eminence of having 100 lynchings in the United States, the largest number in any year since 1903. By states the lynchings were: Alabama, 4; Arkansas, 1; California, 1; Florida, 4; Georgia, 16; Illinois, 2; Kentucky, 10; Louisiana, 8; Mississippi, 22; North Carolina, 1; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 8; Texas, 21; Virginia, 1. Of the total number 93 were negroes and 7 whites.

—Six of the Union City, Tenn. night-riders have been convicted of murder in the first degree and two of them of murder in the second degree, the penalty of the former being death, the latter twenty years imprisonment. The crime for which they were convicted was the murder of Capt Rankin at Reel Foot lake last fall, and the attempted murder of Col. Taylor.

—The article entitled “Wyoming” in this issue by Rev. D. B. Atkinson, Muncie, Ind., will be read with interest. We have heard not a little of the Wyoming Movement and the paper referred to gives sufficient explanation of what it means. In transmitting his paper for print, Bro. Atkinson says in a personal line: “I wish to say this is not a plan for personal gain. The facts have all been given to the public from time to time. I am giving the enterprise my endorsement because I believe it promises much for the Christian church.”

FIGHTING LIFE'S BATTLES.

The nature of passion and appetite is to put things in the bulk. The nature of experience and life is to put things in the unit, to separate into singulars and individuals. This is why passion, lust, appetite, deceive and delude even unto very death.

The man with an appetite for drink, for instance, regards drinking as drawn out over a life-time and thinks of it in the big and bulky abstract. He comes to think, if he thinks at all about it, that his temptation is strong drink in general and has to do with a long and adventurous life. And there the man errs. The man's temptation consists simply and solely in the power of one drink, at a very definite place and time over him. Not a barrell-full, not a gallon, nor a pint even: just that which he takes in his hand for a single quaff. His battle is to be fought out over less than a gill taken at a given time and place. If he can concentrate his powers, call together his wasted and wasting energies, summons the resources of his soul, and conquer this small amount here and now—that is the drinking man's fight. It is so of all fights with temptation.

The cigarette fiend has no fight with "Duke's Mixture," nor "Virginia Brights," nor any other big and bulky thing. Which has the more power, the man with soul and heart and hope and future, or just one pinched and parched and shriveled cigarette? No man need train the whole artillery of his mind and make up against cigarettes in general, in the big and bulky mass. Just one cigarette is doing the work for him. That one cigarette is his enemy. He must conquer that—or that will conquer him.

His fight is with a thing no larger than, not as large as, his little finger. He and that grapple in death agony. If he cannot conquer that, he must needs go down to a "fiend's" death. He deserves no better. If he is no stronger, stouter, braver, bolder than to be conquered and done to death by as small and insignificant a thing as that, he was too cowardly to live and too weak to survive.

It is not against oaths in general, and foul speech in the bulk, that the vile "swearer" must wage his battle. Just this one sentence, nay verily, this one word. The battle for better speech, and purer tongue, is fought out here; Can I at any given moment not abstain from the vile oath, the bitter breath? It is one of concentrated strength and effort. One summons all the powers that he has and makes a stand here for victory. It is the one act, the single deed, the separate moment, that is ruining the individual. We are called upon to fight out life's battles, not in the bulk and in the abstract, but in singles, and at definite and particular times and places—just when and as the temptation comes.

THE DISCIPLINE OF PAIN.

In the plan of Providence pain has its place. Else why are willing men, and submissive women, allowed, and even called upon to suffer? Some of the devoutest, let us say divinest, souls have been brought to their devoutness, and to their deep divinity, by and through suffering. Possibly the soul seemed already devout, and divine enough from all human point of view. But no heart that puts its trust in God and looks to Him for help and further favor is divine enough from Heaven's view-point until God has done His best with and for it.

If God sends or allows pain to one of His children it is not for harm or hurt, but for help, for hope and for happiness yet to be. God is love. In that is the consolation of every pain and pang. God was never cruel. He can never be cruel. Love is not cruel. It is some times corrective. It must be. It some times chastises. It must needs purify and make clean. Love would not be love otherwise. Because love is not cruel it must needs clarify, chastise, correct. It wants to enlarge the object of its attention, devotion and devout concern.

Here, then, is pain's discipline. Through it God is preparing the sufferer for a larger life, a broader and a deeper love than any the one was capable of before, and without, the suffering.

In his immortal ode to the departed Garfield, Longfellow represents the spirit to him from the other world, and concludes thus:

"Ah me! How dark the discipline of pain,
Were not the suffering followed by the sense
Of infinite rest and infinite release!
This is our consolation; and again
A great soul cries to us in our surprise
'I came from martyrdom unto this place.'"

We somehow fancy now that could other great souls than that of the martyred president speak to us from the better world, they would join in the same consoling sentiment:

"We came from piercing pain unto this place." The pangs of pain are often hard, nay intense and severe, but a loving Father uses these to discipline His children for future and further service and far greater and sweeter.

Meat. Americans are the greatest meat eaters on earth. One reason for this is that the American wage earner gets the best wage of any laborer in the world, and is able to buy all the meat he wants. Another, and a greater reason is, that this is the greatest meat raising country in the world. The cost of raising is low and the quantity correspondingly abundant. Every farmer kills his own meat, and many workers in mills, stores and shops do likewise. And yet what these all combined kill tell very little of what the real bulk of meat we consume amounts to. The great slaughter houses tell the real story of our meat eating habit. One of these alone, the Armour, kills in one year a total of 8,411,052 hogs, cattle and sheep. We hardly grasp the meaning of that. Last year Armour slaughtered 4,845,307 hogs; 1,912,486 sheep; 1,653,259, cattle. Which means that for every working day of the year, (counting no holidays), for every hour of every day, counting ten work hours for the day, Armour alone killed more than 25 hogs, more than 10 sheep and more than 8 cattle per minute throughout the entire year.

This says nothing of dozens of other great slaughter and packing houses well nigh as large as Armour.

"If eating meat cause my brother to offend I will eat no more meat while the world stands," said Paul. If eating meat does cause our brothers to offend, what a numberless host of offending brothers we have.

—Pastor L. F. Johnson, of our Raleigh church received four members into church fellowship in December. The work in Raleigh seems full of promise under Bro. Johnson's pastorate.

NORFOLK LETTER.

The Sunday-school at the Third Church Sunday morning was the best for some time. Four new scholars were added to the roll. Mr. Geo. W. Haughwout, a member with us at the Third Church, but formerly a member of Mt. Zion church at Crittenden, Va. is troubled severely with a throat disease to such extent indeed that he has found it necessary to sell out the fine cafe business which he had built up here, and seek a higher climate. His many friends are hoping that he may soon be restored to health.

Rev. W. J. Hohlen of New York, formerly engaged in pastoral and evangelistic work in the Christian church, was with us at the evening service at the Third Church and took part in the service. He had to give up preaching regularly on account of asthma.

Bro. Thompson made an address before the Missionary Society of the Memorial Temple.

Bro. Ryan is suffering from a severe cold, though he managed to preach three times Sunday and reports a good day. He is now preaching every Sunday afternoon at Rosemont.

I hear that Bro. Harrell received quite a number of new members at Portsmouth Sunday, representing five different churches, being members that had come to Portsmouth from the country churches. It always does me good to be able to report such as this for I believe that members coming to town from the country should bring their church letters with them.

Bro. Ryan is scheduled to go to Suffolk tonight (Monday) to make an address on Missions at the Christian church. He will use the subject "Take a bite and go."

I hope the orphans where Miss Turpin is at work will soon have the use of another horse, made possible by the following contributors:

Dr. J. Warren White, $1.00; Rev. W. H. Thompson, $1.00; Jas. A. Eley and family, $5.00; J. W. Manning and family, $5.00; B. L. Nichols and family, $5.00; C. L. Myers, $5.00; E. J. Brickhouse, $5.00; T. E. Brickhouse, $2.25; Jas. Turpin, $2.50; Walter Turpin, $2.50; M. J. W. White, 25c; Mrs. Geo. W. Haughwout, 50c; A. S. Woodin, $1.00; Mrs. Nichols, 50c; Mrs. J. B. Fanny, 50c; T. J. Lawrence, $1.00; Mrs. W. S. Johnson, $1.00; Rev. W. J. Holden, $1.00.

Every cent of the amount came as a voluntary contribution. No one was asked to contribute, but simply given an opportunity. J. W. Manning.

Elon College Notes.

The spring term opens Jan. 13, and already there have enrolled for the spring work many new students. Dr. Moffitt tells us there are still many more he expects to enter college soon.

Reports which are of much interest to parents and students are to be sent out this week for second quarter of 1908. These reports give you the grade of work done and are looked for early by all interested.

The Committee on Public Lectures for Elon College have secured six most excellent lectures for the spring. The gentlemen who have been chosen to deliver them have reputations as public speakers, which guarantees a treat to all who are so fortunate as to hear them. They will be announced later.

The Athletic Association is at work on the new ball ground putting in prime condition for the approaching season. There is no phase of college life that more appeals to the strong vigorous young man than athletics. It gives room for the natural overflow of his young physical manhood and rightly directed develops the best in him.

It is expected that Mr. A. L. Lincoln who has had pneumonia here, will some time this week leave for his home in Virginia. His mother has been with him and will accompany him home. He has best wishes of Faculty and students for his hasty and complete recovery.

Sunday, in lieu of a sermon, the College congregation was addressed by Prof. Lawrence of the Department of English, who sustained his high reputation as a forceful thinker and writer. The Christian Endeavor in the evening was led by Mr. J. W. Barney, subject: "Living for the day or for eternity."

The Sunday-school here has organized a strong Home Department and is looking towards organizing also a Cradle Roll. Both of these departments are needed.

Elon College, N. C., Jan. 11, 1909.

—Nineteen men were killed in a coal mine explosion at Zeigler, Ill., Jan. 10.

—President Roosevelt said last week that what started him for Africa on his hunting trip was the reading when a boy of Mayne Reid's "Jaegers" and "Boy Hunters."

—The temperance wave has struck Mexico. The capital, Mexico City, has passed an ordinance limiting the number of saloons in that city and driving out about one half the number now doing business there.

—W. W. Kitchen of Roxboro was inaugurated governor of North Carolina at Raleigh, Tuesday, Jan. 12, with the usual pomp and ceremony. The weather was beautiful and the occasion was largely attended and enthusiastic.

—Judson Harmon, formerly Attorney-General in President Cleveland's cabinet was inaugurated governor of Ohio at Columbus, Jan. 11. Ten thousand uniformed men were in the parade.

—Governor Paiferson of Tennessee has sent a special message to the legislature of that state urging that a state-wide prohibition law be not enacted. The legislature is grappling with the issue amid some turmoil and excitement.

—J. B. Duke, president of the American Tobacco Company, has purchased a residence on Fifth Ave., overlooking Central Park, N. Y., paying for the property $1,500,000. It is white marble and sandstone front building and will be further improved before Mr. Duke occupies.

—Retiring Governor Glenn "preached his farewell sermon" at the Presbyterian church, Raleigh, in which he has been a Sunday-school teacher and frequent speaker, during his four years' term as Governor, last Sunday night. The papers report the largest audience present ever assembled in that building and that his hearers were held spell-bound as the speaker told of "Civic Righteousness" and plead for a purer, cleaner citizenship.

—Not half the horrors of the awful and deadly earthquake in Southern Italy, Dec. 28, have yet been told. Thousands of homes were shattered, cities destroyed, untold numbers of lives and millions of property wrecked almost in the twinkling of an eye. And the tales of disease, death and suffering ensuing immediately after the catastrophe are pitiful to read or tell. History does not, in all the record of time, reveal a catastrophe of such proportions in wreck and ruin and death.

—At Wake Forest, N. C., Jan. 12, Vass Woodleaf, a 13 years old, returning from school, attempted, with other boys, to "hop" a slowly moving freight train, and had both his legs mashed into a pulp so that amputation was necessary. This was said to be the first time that Vass had tried this sport. And yet many another boy, possibly scores of them who read these fines, will take chances, in fun, of hopping on and off moving trains, and like young Woodleaf, go through life with amputated limbs. Boys will not learn even from the awful experiences of other boys.

—The motto of the Raleigh Christian church Sunday-school, "Every member present every Sunday on time, with his own Bible, a liberal contribution, a studied lesson and a mind to learn."

Elon College, N. C., Jan. 6, 1909.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We are pleased to present a liberal report again this week, $164.67 and still the thanksgiving offerings come in, some of which have been on hand for a month. We will close our 1908 report with next week's letter. We do hope that many will send in the different offerings made so we may have in time to get in. We are grateful to the dear friends at Apples Chapel, N. C. for the liberal help of wheat and corn they gave us on 4th Sunday, Dec. They really seemed glad to see the Supt. come again, when they knew he wanted bread, and so they gave it; and we thank them for it. Bro. Tyler Merritt made the corn and wheat into good old fashioned meal and flour tole free and we are enjoying some fine bread. Dr. Atkinson would call this “pounding the preacher”—but we call it feeding the orphans. We had a new style introduction to the Apples Chapel congregation by pastor Cox. Ask him to tell you about it. Bro. Cox is surely a friend to a worker for the Orphans. “Aunt Susan” (Mrs. W. A. Hughes) and Sister Alridge have our thanks for useful donations.

The following donations received:

Apples Chapel:

D. E. Michael, 1 bu. corn; J. T. Merritt, 1 bu. corn; P. R. Brown, 1 bu. corn, 1 bu. wheat; J. M. Brown 1 bu. corn; Alfred Apple, 1 bu. wheat; W. F. Andrews, 1 bu. wheat, E. P. Christman, 1 bu. wheat; C. A. Apple, 1 bu. corn; A. D. Gerringer, 1 bu.

wheat; J. A. Shepherd, 1 bu. wheat; J. Andrews, 1 bu. wheat; B. R. Ingold, 1 bu. corn; M. V. Brown, $1.00; J. M. Loy, $50; A. G. Apple and family, 2 hens; Mrs. W. A. Hughes, 1 towel, 2 pillowcases, 1 sheet, 1 sack dried fruit; Mrs. E. L. Alridge, 2½ yds. calico.

Other good things on the way. Come to see us while we have chicken, bread—pork and turnips.

Yours for the work,

Uncle Jim.

Franklinton, N. C., Jan. 5, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Do you remember the two little Pearce girls in Franklinton? Well, we remember the times you came to see us, and told us about your little girl and boy, and all about your big family of girls and boys. Enclosed find money order for $2.50, which we collected in Thanksgiving envelopes for the little orphans. Mama has been so busy, she would have written before Christmas, but as we had more promised us, we waited expecting to get it all to send at once. We wait no longer, but will send the other another time.

With best wishes and love to all your little folks, and wishing for all a happy and prosperous New Year, we are the same little girls, Janie and Rebekah Pearce.

I remember you well girls, and thank you heartily for your loving help in collecting this money.

Henderson, N. C., Dec. 29, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I have been sick for a week. Santa Claus came and brought me a doll, pistol, caps,, candy, apples, nuts and an express wagon. I am better now and will soon be able to ride in my wagon. Little sister got a rattler and a doll. Enclosed find my dime for December.

Your little nephew,

C. E. Newman, Jr.

Uncle Jim thinks it's time that baby sister was joining the Band. Bring her next time, Charles.

Crewe, Va., Jan. 4, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I think I am three months behind—four months with Jan. Well, that sounds very bad, but we have had so much sickness in our home. Mother is sick nearly all the time and I have no one to write for me. I hope the little cousins enjoyed the Christmas holidays. I am sure they had a happy time. Santa Claus came to see me and my little brother and brought us a lot of nice things. My little brother began walking yesterday and he just walks all the time. Well, I fear I will stay too long, as I haven't written in so long. I have so much to talk about, but will not say more this time. You will find sixty cents, my dues and little brother's.

Wishing you and the cousins much Happiness for a New Year,

Your fond little niece,
Helen S. Foster,
T. Clifford Foster.

Your Jan. dues, Helen, we keep over for the new year's report. It will appear later. Hope mother will soon be well.

Columbus, Ga., Dec. 28, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come with my dues for Dec. I am a little late but will try not to be late any more. I had a nice time Christmas, hope you and the children did. I will close with love to you all and wishing you all a happy New Year.

I remain yours,
Homer Elder.

Yes, we had a good time, Homer. Be sure to be on time for Jan.

Columbus, Ga., Dec. 28, 1908.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl just three years old, but I want to join the band. Will close.
Susie Elder.

We give you welcome, Susie. 'Tho you are young, some of our cousins are younger. Be sure to write every month.

NEGROES JOIN IN WHITE PLAGUE FIGHT.

Will Hold Congress on Tuberculosis.

One of the most progressive, as well as one of the most interesting steps in the campaign against tuberculosis, which is being at present waged with especial vigor throughout the South, is the Negro Congress on Tuberculosis which will be held at Tuskegee, Alabama, from December 14th. to 19th. The meeting which is being held under the joint auspices of the Tuskegee Institute, of which Booker T. Washington is the head, and the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, will be attended by representative colored men and women from all over the United States. The object of the Congress is to discuss means for checking the enormous mortality from consumption among the negroes.

In connection with the Congress, an exhibited showing the ravages of tuberculosis, and the methods for treating and preventing it, will be held. Among the striking features which will be demonstrated by the exhibit will be the fact that the mortality from tuberculosis is 150 per cent higher in the colored population of the country than in the white.

Broken Down

Over-work, worry, mental effort, sickness or any strain upon the nervous system affects the whole body. All the organs depend upon the nerves for strength. If they don't get it they can't do the work demanded of them. Dr. Miles' Nervine restores nervous energy, and builds up the broken down system.

"Two years ago my wife was almost at the point of death with nervous prostration. I shall never forget how she suffered, it was night and day, until we commenced to use Dr. Miles' Nervine and she speedily began to recover. Today she is enjoying as good health as she ever did.

The week of December 13th has been set apart in almost all of the colored communities in the South, and in many in the North, as "Health Week." All colored religious, educational civic and social bodies will unite at that time to spread the gospel of health, particularly as relating to tuberculosis, among the negroes.

Coincident with this meeting in Tuskegee is a determined effort on the part of the white population of the South to stamp out tuberculosis. Preparations are being made in Florida for a "Ninety-day Campaign," to commence immediately after Christmas, which is expected to reach every man, woman and child in the state with the message that consumption can be cured and that it should be prevented. Immediately after the campaign in Florida, a system-people do not want it. Give me the true evangelistic note in a man, and then add all the culture you possibly can. The future of evangelism will be bright indeed if we can rear a race of evangelists who ally rich experiences of the heart and soul with high culture and refinement.

I would not omit humor from the evangelist's makeup. Sometimes a flash of humor acts like a gimlet and prepares the way for a nail, when the nail might have split the board. But humor must not be allowed to gain mastery. Pathos, too, I would use, and do use. You can hold a man if you can make him both laugh and cry.

Another fruit of my experience is that an evangelist should aim at simplicity and directness—simplicity of illustrations and directness of appeal. For my own illustrations I draw constantly upon my gipsy lore, from the birds and the trees and the fields—the great world of Nature, which most people understand and all people love. My long years of evangelistic work have not obliterated my native gipsy spirit. I am still a child of the open and a wild thing of the woods. I am happiest when I am amongst the birds in my garden. I know them all by their songs and their calls, and I love to watch their habits. My garden is full of birds' nests, and when I find nests with young birds newly hatched, I make friends with them by feeding them. A young brood of greenfinches has just been hatched in my garden, and day by day I have been feeding them. The old birds hover near quite unalarmed; they know I love them and would not hurt their young ones. And just as I love great Nature I love to bring all beautiful and simple things into my gospel message, and through that gateway I find a means of entrance into human hearts, which are alike in England and South Africa, America and Australia.

So the experiences of my humble boyhood as a gipsy lad, hawking clothes-pegs in East Anglian villages, help me now in my world-wide mission, though they do seem a strange curriculum as I look back upon them through the intervening years.—In N. Y. Advocate.

If a revival is to come in your church as the result of the special meetings, so soon to be held, what part are you to have in the effort?

Revivals do not come as surprises. The law of cause and effect is as sure as that proper effort made in the right spirit on any well-known lines produces certain well-known effects.

THE FIRST NATIONAL MISSIONARY POLICY.

By J. Campbell White, General Secretary, Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The churches of Canada are moving steadily towards the adoption of a definite policy which contemplates the evangelization in this generation of their share of the world. This will be the first time in history that the combined Christianity of a nation has declared and accepted its proportion of national and international religious responsibility. During the months of September and October, under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, interdenominational missionary campaigns were held in twenty-four of the leading cities of Canada, reaching all the way from Sydney, Nova Scotia, to Victoria on Vancouver Island. It was a transeontinental campaign four thousand miles long, crowded into seven weeks. Although held during the period of active political agitation immediately preceding the general Dominion elections, the interest displayed and the readiness of men to take hold of the missionary enterprises of the Church, impressed the leaders in this campaign as unprecedented and truly marvellous.

While the whole series of meetings was planned by the Canadian Council of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, it had the most cordial endorsement and co-operation of the various missionary societies. Twenty-one secretaries and district superintendents of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Missionary Boards took active part in the campaign, some of them covering the entire series from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Never before have the secretaries of all these Boards undertaken to co-operate in this splendid and promising fashion. It was the greatest exhibition of Church unity ever witnessed in North America. More impressive still perhaps was the fact that the bulk of the speaking at all the meetings was done by laymen, over twenty of whom took active part in the work. Several of these men left their business for a period of from two to six weeks each, and at their own expense traveled from Toronto and Montreal as far East as Halifax and Sydney and West to Vancouver and Victoria, in order to assist in enlisting the men of Canada as backers and advocates of an adequate missionary program. Such practical demonstration of conviction on the part of business and professional men, commanded attention everywhere, and produced an impression upon other laymen more profound and permanent than would have been otherwise possible. It was my great privilege as General Secretary of the Movement to take part in the whole series of meetings.

Will Canada Evangelize Her Share of the World? was the one question asked and considered by all of the twenty-four cities visited. After careful consideration of the responsibilities involved, lasting in most cases through a period of three days, an unqualified affirmative was given to this question by every city. Practical plans were also adopted by each city looking towards the immediate securing of the funds required to meet its share of the aggregate amount needed.

An equitable distribution of the non-Christian world among the Christian nations, gives Canada about forty millions of people to evangelize, outside of her own territory. To maintain an adequate force of workers among this number it is estimated that $3,200,000 annually will be required. At present Canada's contribution to foreign missionary work is about $600,000 per year. To meet the home missionary problems in the Dominion itself, it has been estimated by Home Missionary leaders that $1,300,000 annually would suffice. The total for Home and Foreign Missions would thus be four and a half millions annually. As Canada has 900,000 communicant Church members, an average of $5.00 per year from all of them would produce the total amount believed to be needed. As the cities, however, are important centers of wealth and influence, it was recognized that their contributions should be higher than the average required from the entire church. As a matter of fact, the sums deliberately assumed by the twenty-four cities visited, work out to an average of $7.38 per church member. The lowest average undertaken by any city is $5.00 per communicant. Winnipeg undertook $10.00 per member, the highest standard ever set by a city; Calgary $8.88; Vancouver $8.62; Toronto and Montreal $8.33 each. In the twenty-four cities visited there are 209,000 church members. They contributed last year to missionary purposes a total of $542,000. They have now undertaken to increase this to a total of $1,544,000 annually. In other words, 23 per cent of the church membership of Canada have undertaken to raise over one third of the entire amount needed to prosecute the missionary work of the Dominion on what is believed to be an adequate scale.

This represents only the action of the twenty-four cities in which campaigns have been held. But there were present at these centers hundreds of delegates from other cities and towns who have returned to set similar methods into operation in their own communities. In each of these cities, an interdenominational Co-operating Committee of the Laymen's Missionary Movement has been appointed, charged with the duty of assisting all congregations in the city to reach their maximum missionary efficiency, and also to take the initiative in propagating the work throughout the surrounding district. The culmination of the entire campaign is to be a Canadian Layman's Missionary Congress, to be held at Toronto, March 31, to April 4, 1909. Two thousand men from every section of the Dominion will be brought together on this occasion, to consider and adopt an adequate national missionary policy.

All the churches of Canada are co-operating to the full extent of their power in this national campaign of education and enlistment. There will be a complete separate Convention held by the men of each of the denominations, during the forenoons of the Congress period. All of the afternoons and evenings will be given up to the sessions of the Laymen's Missionary Congress. This will be the largest, the most representative, and the most influential body of men ever assembled, to consider their own and their nation's responsibility, for the evangelization of the world. It will be the first time in history that a national missionary policy has been adopted.

Many of the most influential Christian laymen of North America and of Great Britain will share in the discussions. Some of the most distinguished men who have served in India and China during our generation, will be present. Massey Hall has been secured for all the sessions of the Congress. The details of the program are being wrought out with the utmost care by the Canadian Council of the Layman's Missionary Movement, of which Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C. is the Chairman. It is confidently expected that the representative men of Canada will adopt at this Congress a missionary policy which will challenge the attention, the admiration and the imitation of Christendom.

"THAT IS MY BOOK."

Many years ago, when Bibles were almost unknown in Mexico, a man in Chihuahua in some way obtained one. He read some of it, liked it, and asked the village priest about it. Curiously enough, the priest told him it was a good book and well worth reading, so the man gave it to his little son to read. The boy, who had few books, read it with delight, and in time came to know much of it by heart. As he had never seen another Bible, he believed his was the only one in the world. After the death of his father, when he was about twelve years old, he carried his beloved book to school one day to show it to his teacher. To his surprise and consternation, the master, throwing up his hands, cried, "Ave Maria! boy, where did you get that wicked book? It is one of those accursed Protestant books—give it to me at once!" The boy begged for it in vain. The teacher said he would give the dreadful book to the priest. The boy cried nearly all night for his lost book, and went the next morning to the priest to beg for its return. The priest, aware of the insidious Protestant teaching of the Bible, told the boy the book had been burned, and that to read such books meant excommunication from the church.

That was enough for the boy. He cared nothing for a church which would consider his precious book a bad one, and thereafter he led a most reckless life.

Some years after he drifted to El Paso, and one night accompanied a friend to some kind of a gathering, he did not know, or care, what it might be. He entered the place listless enough, but there, on a platform, was a man reading from a book. He listened a moment. It was his book!

Breaking away from his companion, who tried to detain him, he rushed up to the pulpit and cried: "Senor, have the goodness to give me back my book. That is my book you are reading; they took it away from me years ago, but it is mine. Please give it back to me!"

The preacher, astonished, asked him to explain. "It is mine, and I can prove it," he cried, and began repeating parts he had committed to memory years before, obviously believing that his was the only book of its kind.

The result was that they gave another copy of his book, and it changed his whole life. He is now an honored physician, member of an evangelical church in a city of Chihuahua, and he still believes there is no other book in the world so good as his book.—Bible Society Record.

The Centennial of Religious Journalism

EDITED BY J. PRESSLEY BARRETT, D. D.
Editor Herald of Gospel Liberty

This is without doubt the most generally interesting publication sent out by the Christians. Its centennial, historical and denominational features make it not only unique in character, but interesting as well. From beginning to end it claims the interested attention of the reader.

We have not space here to give the table of contents, but suffice it to say, that beginning with the "Discussion of the conditions which made the organization of the Christian Church a necessity," the reader will follow with interest and profit, the "History of the Herald of Gospel Liberty," "The One Hundred Editorial Gems," "Historical Sketches of One-Hundred-Year-Old Churches," "A symposium—A Hundred Years of Progress," setting forth in well prepared papers the development of the various enterprises of the Christian Church, and with a heart full of optimistic hope he will peruse "The Future Outlook of the Christian Church."

And all this, and more, in a book of nearly 650 pages, handsomely bound, with gold titles, while the price is only $1.00 for cloth binding and $2.00 for Morocco, with your name printed in gold. Postage, 15 cents extra. Send your order at once to

MARRIED.*Hunt-Hill.

At the residence of the writer in the presence of a few friends and relatives, Mr. W. H. Hunt was united in marriage to Miss Rebecca Hill. Mr. Hunt is the son of Mr. S. J. Hunt of Florida and Miss Hill the daughter of Mr. H. W. Hill of Sanford, N. C. After the marriage the bridal party drove to the residence of Mr. B. F. Hunt, the uncle of the groom, where a sumptuous supper was served to a number of the relatives and friends of the contracting parents. May God's richest blessings be bestowed upon them and their married life be a long and happy one.

Ross-Franks.

At the residence of the bride's uncle, D. M. Ireland, Esq., near Altamahaw, N. C., on Dec. 24, 1908, Mr. Luther Ross lead to the marriage altar Miss Lillian Franks.

In the presence of numerous friends this writer spoke the words that made them husband and wife. This young couple start out in life under very favorable auspices, and the bridal presents attest the high esteem in which they are held. May heaven smile upon them.

DIED.*Rawles.

Richard Thomas Rawles was born in Nausemond Co., Va., October 14th, 1854. He was the son of William and Elizabeth Rawles. He united with Holy Neck Christian Church when quite young. On July 20, 1872, at his own request, he was transferred to Liberty Spring church, where he held his membership until his death. Soon after uniting with Liberty Spring, he was elected treasurer of the church, and held this office consecutively for 36 years. In this office he rendered the church efficient service.

Brother Rawles was united in marriage to Miss Mary Louie Jones, on May 26, 1881. Unto them were born 14 children—10 boys and 4 girls. Twelve of the children are living. On December 10, 1905 his devoted wife was called to the spirit land. He never recovered from this great loss. He kept his family together and cared well for the children.

On December 20th, 1908, about 2 o'clock a. m. brother Rawles was taken sick and suffered greatly from a severe pain in his head. He called the children, and they soon found that he was very ill. They sent for the doctor and some of the neighbors, but before any one arrived he had passed away. He retired in good spirits, and, apparently in good health. His death was a great shock to his family and the entire community. He was a good man, a kind neighbor, an honorable citizen, a devoted father, a faithful friend and a sincere Christian. His reputation was excellent. His character was above reproach. All who knew him spoke well of him. The funeral services were conducted at Liberty Spring church by the writer, in the presence of a large congregation of sympathizing friends. It was a sad occasion. Twelve fatherless and motherless children stood about the casket and wept with aching, bleeding hearts. We pray that the heavenly Father may guide their footsteps in the way of eternal life. He left an aged father, William Rawles, who is 90 years old, and two sisters, Mrs. A. H. Savage and Mrs. John R. Copeland to mourn their loss. May the Father comfort and bless the bereaved family

Thomas F. Petty died at his home in Burlington, N. C., Dec. 29, 1908. He had been sick for several weeks. Bro. Petty is survived by his wife, five daughters, and one son, Thomas, who was the youngest of three brothers. William and Robert preceded him to the grave. These brothers were members of Hanks Chapel, near Pittsboro, N. C. Robert and Thomas were in the Confederate army. Robert was Major in the 26th N. C. regiment. Thomas was with the junior reserves, being under military age. These brothers were devoted members of the Christian church. Thomas was a very quiet, modest man, but very true to all obligations and in his home very tender and considerate. He was buried in Pine Hill Cemetery. Funeral by writer, assisted by Rev. J. W. Wellons.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Elon College, N. C.

Liberty, N. C., Dec. 13, 1908. His death was a great shock to his family and to the entire community. He made a profession of faith in Christ at an early age and for about thirty years he was a faithful member of Pleasant Hill Christian church. Bro. Lashley was a good man, a loving husband and a kind father. He was a great Bible reader and a man who tried to follow its teaching. It was the writer's pleasure to be with Bro. Lashley about two weeks before he died and his conversation then was on the spiritual truths of God's Word. He leaves behind to mourn his departure, an aged wife, four children, and a large number of relatives and friends. His body was laid to rest in the Pleasant Hill cemetery. Burial services were conducted by Mr. Reise. May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved family and help them to prepare for that final meeting where there will be no more parting, no more death.

W. L. Wells.

Gill.

Chas. Earnest Gill, son of Brother C. H. Gill, of Waverly, Died Dec. 21, 1908. Earnest was a young man of 27 years, and an electrician by trade. He was married Dec. 23, 1907 and located in Richmond. In the early months of 1908 he developed consumption and was forced to leave his work. He and his young wife came here to his father's where they spent the balance of his life. During the summer and fall months he grew weaker till the end came.

Although expected, his death was taken very hard by his people. It matters not how much expected death is, nor how much we are prepared for it, it draws tears of anguish and bitterness in its train. Life is so precious, and human ties are so sweet that no power of the world can comfort the broken heart, nor dry up tears of sorrow. If human comfort succeeds in any one place in allaying pain and sorrow, it will flow in another. It is only Christ who can wipe away all tears from the eyes. It is only the Christ who can conquer the all-prevalent death. 'Tis only the Christ who can say, "Let there be no more sorrow nor crying." 'Tis only He who can say, "Behold I will make all things new."

Earnest was a member of Spring Hill church about ten years of his boyhood. About the time he left his parental roof to battle with the cold problems of the world, he severed his relations with that church in which condition he remained until about two months prior to his death he was converted while on his bed. He told his pastor several times that he felt that he was converted,— saved, and willing for the Lord's will to be done. He often took occasion to say as much to his loved ones by his bedside.

May God bless the bereaved ones.

THE PHILADELPHIA PRESS TO TELL OF ASIA'S AWAKENING.

Beginning Sunday, January 3, "The Philadelphia Press" will begin publishing Frank G. Carpenter's letters on "Asia's Awakening" and the mighty changes that are taking place in the far East. Since Russia's defeat by Japan, the other side of the globe has become the world's chief news center. In order to give "The Philadelphia Press" readers all the news from the other side of the world, they have sent Mr. Carpenter to investigate all these matters in the Eastern countries, and his complete and truthful reports will appear from week to week. He will travel through Japan, from there into Korea, and then overland through Manchuria, into China, and may later go through Siam, Palestine and Turkey. His letters will be very interesting and should be read by everybody. Make sure you will get a copy every Sunday and order your copy in advance from your newsdealer or send direct to "The Philadelphia Press," Seventh and Chestnut Streets, Philadelphia.

THE NEW YEAR.

"New Year meets me somewhat sad;
Old year leaves me tired,
Strip of favorite things I had,
Balked of much desired;
Yet farther on my road to-day,
God willing, farther on my way.
New year coming on apace,
What have you to give me?
Bring you scathe or bring you grace,
Face me with an honest face,
You shall not deceive me.
Be it good or ill, be it what you will,
Its needs shall help me on my road,
My rugged way to heaven, please God."

WHEN I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride.

Forbid it, Lord, that I should boast,
Save in the cross of Christ, my God;
All the vain things that charm me most,
I sacrifice to his blood.

See, from his head, his hands, his feet,
Sorrow and love flow mingled down!
Did e'er such love and sorrow meet,
Or thorns compose so rich a crown?

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Friends or Foes? The air about us, so the doctors say, is charged with many sorts of deadly disease germs. These germs each must of necessity take, in unnumbered quantities, into the lungs. It is not a question, therefore, of whether we shall, or shall not, inhale these germs; but having inhaled them, will the tissue of the lungs be strong enough to kill and devour, and so appropriate, the germs, or will the germs kill and devour and so appropriate the lung tissue? In short, according to modern medical theory, the very thing that is food and flesh to some systems is destruction and death to others. It is a clear case of conquer or be conquered. If the lungs cannot kill and feed, then they must be killed and fed. That which is life and vigor to strong lungs is death and destruction to weak ones.

The preparation for this battle, we are assured, is fresh air, and a plenty of it. Unless the lungs can have continually fresh air that which would be their best friend becomes their bitterest foe.

That which physicians have demonstrated, as touching the body, the Word of God has long since declared as touching the soul. Isaiah declared centuries ago, "He shall be for a sanctuary; but a stone of stumbling and a rock of offense to Israel and a snare to the inhabitants of Jerusalem." Thus the same who was sanctuary and Savior to some was a stone and a snare to others. Unless we will be saved through Him we must stand self-condemned and self-judged before Him. The very message of the gospel is of this sort. To some it is friend, and fellowship and life eternal. To others it is foe, and fierce scourging and deadful death beyond the grave. Even God's most beneficent bounty to man may by man be turned into man's heaviest and hardest burden. The real battles of life are fought out within. For that within transforms that without.

A Book of Tragedy. If one wishes to read a book of blood and death one need not go to Nero's reign or to Bloody Mary's biography. (Those were times of heartless cruelty and wholesale slaughter. Just turn to the first page of your morning daily in "this piping time of peace." Take a pencil and tablet, if you will, and score the tragedies of a week recorded there. The result will stagger you. The murder in high places and in low, the wilful and deliberate shooting of man by man, the fistieuff and then the fatal fire, the gasping form and the glazed eye that looks but does not see any more, these are the repetitions without number week by week in this awful time of ours. Your daily told you of no less than thirty-six horrible deaths by fighting, murder or foul play last week. The likelihood is that you will read in the same paper an equal, or a larger number, next week. Verily is the daily paper a tale of tragedies, a book of blood.

That is to say, the daily paper is a treatise on sin. "The wages of sin is death" wrote a wise one centuries ago; and "the way of the transgressor is hard" wrote another equally as wise. Back of these bloody tragedies, the daily press tells us about, is Sin, transgression, violation of the eternal laws of an alwise God. It is sin in all its hideous mien and manner that is filling the world with woe, and bringing many a man, before his time, to a cruel and heartless grave.

Chinese Burials. The late Emperor Kwangsu, and the Dowager Empress, have been dead much over a month now, but the full and final burial ceremonies have not been accomplished. They bury a Chinese potentate on the installment plan, so to speak. To be more explicit they move him from place to place for local ceremonies before the wind-up comes in a final putting away. For instance, this royal pair were moved from the "Forbidden City" to a nearby Mortuary Dec. 8. At that mortuary the bodies will lie in state till a commission, among them several necromancers, shall fix upon a proper site among the Tombs for final sepulture. When the bodies were moved last 6,000 mourners and 4,000 soldiers marched in the funeral train. In earring for, watching, preparing the bodies for burial and paying soldiers and mourners, etc., the two royal corpses have already cost China $1,400,000; and it is estimated that when the ceremony is over the total burial expenses of the pair will have been at least $4,200,000. May their souls rest in peace! While the funeral train went through the city ten thousand people knelt in the dusty streets and bowed their heads in the dust. All the personal effects of the dead emperor were burned, as is the custom there.

Chinese do not in reality worship a god, but the spirits of their dead ancestors. And all this pomp and pageantry is in preparation of the peoples' hearts for the worship which is to follow in the ages and ages yet to be.

—According to the estimate of the United States Census Bureau there are at least 600,000 living cases of tuberculosis in the United States, and that at least 200,000 persons die from the disease every year.

—The first session of The International Association of Aeronauts met in London last week, with fifty delegates present representing nine nationalities. The chief business of the Association was to "draw up rules of the air"—such as regulate travelers by water and on land.

—On January 13, President Roosevelt remained seventeen hours in the saddle and rode 90 miles horse back to prove that certain army requirements are not excessive. The last thirty miles of the President's journey were through sleet and ice and the last fifteen miles in almost pitch darkness. He was in the saddle from 3:30 a. m. till 8 p. m. and when he dismounted his coat and hat were frozen stiff with sleet and ice. We have a strenuous and vigorous president.

—King Edward has exercised his royal prerogative of control over the theaters and music-halls of the United Kingdom by ordering that thereafter no public entertainment shall be given in such a place on Sundays, on Christmas day or on Good Friday, "unless under very exceptional circumstances." The control of such places lies with the local authorities in America, and they are opened or closed, according to the sentiment of the community.

FROM THE FIELD.

WAKEFIELD, VA.

Christmas has passed and we are down hard at work planning to make 1909 one of the most successful years of our work. During Christmas our churches had very interesting services. It was said by several here that our church entertainment surpassed any in town. Union church, Dendron, and New Lebanon had Christmas trees and treats for the school, all of which was much enjoyed by all present. We were kindly remembered by several of our friends here and at Dendron. Bro. W. L. Anderson gave us a nice 20 lb. turkey, L. B. Faison, a 15 lb. ham, Prof. J. J. Lincoln a bucket of oysters. All of these things were for our Christmas dinner. Bro. A. J. Calton gave me a very useful present, and another unknown friend gave me a very handsome silk muffler. We wish to thank all of these good people for these much enjoyed useful things. Prof. Lucius Lincoln, and Mr. Jennings Lincoln, sons of Prof. J. J. Lincoln, were here during Christmas visiting their parents. We had the pleasure of having Prof. Lincoln and his good family with us Christmas dinner. We had the great pleasure of visiting our old home near Holy Neck last week. We found our parents well and in good spirits.

Our new church here is building very rapidly, and if the weather remains good we hope to have it completed by early spring. We have a fine people in our pastorate and feel that this year's work will prove much good.

C. C. Jones.

PORTSMOUTH LETTER . .

We are beginning to feel it is about time that we should write to the Sun again. We have been intending to do so about two months, but other duties have crowded it out. The two months of the Conference year that have passed have been busy ones. They have, however, been fruitful and therefore we feel encouraged to press on.

The church has been taking on new life and working with a zeal that brings things to pass. The attendance at the church services has greatly increased and the Sunday-school has reached the one hundred mark in attendance and is now beginning to believe that she can go beyond the one hundred mark. She is now entering on a campaign for an average of more than one hundred for the next five months. We are hoping that our fondest expectations may be surpassed. The chapel is now getting too small for our school. Something will have to be done. We must take care of our opportunity.

Just after Conference we organized three leagues in this month that have for their object the raising of money for the new church. These leagues are trying to excel each other in their chosen work. They are doing admirably. They have raised since Conference, $225.37.

For the last few weeks we have been putting forth a special effort to get the people in the city that hold their membership at the old home church, in the country or in the city, to let us get their letters for them. A large number have consented and we are at work on the knotty proposition. If you do not believe it is just as I represent it you just try it! A poor mission pastor can work his life out trying to get people to the point where they are willing to join the mission church, and then the tug of war begins, and if he does not watch carefully, they will get out of the notion of joining before the letter comes, that is if he waits for it and undertakes to comply with all the requirements that may be on the records of the home church. We ought to have some system by which a letter of transfer could be gotten in a reasonably short time after it is requested. This way of waiting until the next Conference is not practical. We are receiving the people who are willing to transfer and then getting their letters. We received fourteen last Sunday and have a number of others who have consented to join at an early date. Sixteen have been received into the church since Conference.

The canvass for the new church is being pressed as rapidly as possible. The work which we have done to the present has been by personal solicitation. We will begin our work with the churches of the Conference next fourth Sunday. On this day I will go to Berea (Mass.) and Rev. I. W. Johnson will preach at Portsmouth. The first Sunday in February we will exchange appointments again and I will go to Liberty Spring. The fifth Sunday I will exchange appointments with Rev. W. H. Thompson and I will go to Third Church, Norfolk. The third Sunday in February Rev. H. H. Butler and myself will exchange pulpits and I will go to Antioch, and if it can be so arranged to Isle of Wight C. H. and Windsor. The fourth Sunday we expect to be at Cypress Chapel. The first Sunday in April we have arranged to be at Mt. Carmel. It is our purpose to visit all the Churches of the Conference as early as practical. Other appointments will be announced later.

The result of the personal canvass thus far has been as follows: Cash—Col. E. E. Holland, $100; W. H. Jones, Jr., $100; C. A. Shoop, $100; Dr. J. E. Rawles, $25; G. W. Nurney, $25; John King, $25; Hersey Woodard, $5; Geo. T. Rawles, $5; Miss Mary Lawrence, $5; Holland and Beamon, $10; Mrs. E. Cobb, $2; Mrs. J. H. Byrd, $1; Mr. Griffin, $1; Maywood Pierce, $1; Mrs. R. H. Norfleet, $10. Collected on previous subscription—Rev. N. G. Newman, $5; and Col. J. E. West, $125.

In addition to the above we have secured $330 in subscription, and have in old subscription $330.

Since Conference we have paid on our note $120, besides $100.95 interest. Our note stands now $460. We are anxious to see it paid off as early as possible. We feel that we must have our new church this year, but we cannot get it unless the money is raised to pay off this note. Now is the time for every one to do what they can. Remember, when the note is paid off we will have the entire value of the old lot to put in the new church. It will in all probability pay more than half of the cost of the building we are planning to put up.

The Christmas entertainment for the Sunday-school was pronounced one among the best that we have ever held. The attendance was larger than we could accommodate. The children were remembered in the usual way, and the pastor and wife in a way that made them feel that words were inadequate to express their real appreciation and gratefulness. The Ladies' Aid Society presented Mrs. Harrell with a handsome rocker and the Baraca Bible Class presented the writer with a beautiful gold watch. We feel that this is fully as good as being pounded. We feel exceedingly grateful for this kind remembrance and trust that we may be able to show our appreciation by faithful service.

The offering for the Orphanage has been taken both at Portsmouth and Berea (Norfolk), which resulted as follows: Portsmouth, $8.10 and Berea, $14.00, or more. The Berea Sunday-school is also taking the Orphanage collection every first Sunday. It is one of the best collections during the month.

NANSEMOND NOTES.

Several of our friends have kindly remembered us in a very substantial way, since Christmas. We are under many obligations to Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Rawles, and Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Peel of Liberty Spring for several good things for our pantry; also to Mr. and Mrs. Abram Miller of Deans, Va., for good things to eat. Thank you again, good friends.

My churches are starting off well for the New Year. I think there is an increase in the interest in the Sunday-school work. The prospect seems good for all the schools in my field to be larger than last year.

Rev. C. C. Jones is doing well in his new field. Reports from his pastorate indicate a flattering prospect for the coming year. Brother Jones is an earnest worker. He is consecrated to the cause of Christ. He is greatly interested in the new house of worship now in course of construction at Wakefield. This is an important point. It is a thriving town, located in the midst of several Christian churches. By all means we should have a good house of worship there at an early date. If the plans of the brethren do not fail, the house will be completed at an early date, and it will be a credit to the faithful work of that church. Keep your eye on Wakefield.

We have received the Christian Annual for 1909. The work is well done. This is superior to any others of recent issue. But how I do wish the Conference Secretaries would take the time to give the totals in the statistical tables. Some of the tables are deficient in this respect. It is very annoying to have to add a long column of figures in a statistical table, when this work should have been done before the minutes of Conference are sent out for publication. These tables reveal some very interesting facts in regard to the relative growth of the churches. One item in passing: several churches have reported a very large number of "Suspended" members. I have been wondering if any church has done this in order to reduce the Conference Assessments? I hope not. But in my own experience I have observed that there is, in many cases, more concern about getting rid of the members who do not pay any thing, than there is interest in getting new members into the church. It is very easy to get suggestions about cutting down the list of "dead-head" members. Have you heard something like this in your quarterly conferences: "Brethren, I think we should revise our church roll, we are carrying a long list here, and we are assessed according to our number, and I don't see any use in having these names on the roll?" Yes, you have heard that before. How many of those dear brethren ever make suggestions about trying to get the unsaved people in the community into the kingdom of God? There are some occasions when it is necessary to suspend church members; I am not condemning the action of the churches,—I am only inquiring into the motive. I. W. Johnson.

WAVERLY NOTES.

The "Acorn" Bible Class of the Waverly Christian church which was organized the third Sunday in Nov., 1908, with a charter membership of seventeen has now grown to the enrolment of fifty-five. We now meet in the old auditorium to the rear of the new church at the same time the main body of the school does and have an opening and closing according to the fashion of such classes. We have on trial a new "Whitney" Piano which the class expects to buy, either this or some other. We have an orchestra of four pieces, including the piano, which renders the music. We are making rapid strides for the one hundred men by the second Sunday in March. The motto of the class is: "Tis you we need." The class yell is:

"Ra, ra, ra,
Tu-ve-la-va-hu,
'Acorn,' 'Acorn,'
We need you."

Our purpose is, "The world for Christ." Our means, "The Word of God." And in addition to the above motto, "We mean business."

Last Friday night at the home of Mr. R. T. West a class of Juniors was organized consisting of eighteen boys ranging in ages from eleven to sixteen. Bro. R. T. West who has been their teacher for many years was elected their instructor. The officers were elected as follows:

Master Auther Wilson, President; Master J. O. Fitchett, Vice President; Master Oscar H. West, Secretary; Master Jno. W. West, Jr., Chairman Absentee Committee.

Each member was designated to solicit new members. They named themselves, "Tr. Mu." which means, "Three Ms." Thus they read, "Muscle, Mind, Morals." They chose for their motto: "All things are possible to those that believe." It is hoped that the class will grow to an enrolment of thirty-five or forty within a few months.

H. E. Rountree, Pastor.

ELON TEACHER TRAINING CLASS.

We organized at Elon College, N. C., a class in the Teachers' Training Course Dec. 6th, 1908, with twenty-two members enrolled. The following officers were elected: Pres., E. T. Hines; Vice-Pres., W. G. Cobb, Sec.; Ivie Andes, Corresponding Sec.; Nannie B. Farmer, Treasurer; Bessie McPherson, organist; Ruth Stevick, chorister; Nannie B. Farmer, chairman Social Committee; Affie Griffin, chairman Membership Committee R P Crumpler.

as interesting and how our work may be well as helpful.

Nannie B. Farmer, Cor. Sec.

LANETT, ALABAMA.

Dear Brother Atkinson:—Please give me space in The Sun for an account of our holiday meeting at Pleasant Grove Christian Church, Chambers County, Alabama. We began the meeting Dec. 25, continued seven days. The church was greatly revived. No new members were added. The people of that community say that it was the quietest Christmas they have had in years.

We are getting along nicely with our church building, want to have it ready for our January services the fourth Sunday. When we get our house completed we will have a church valued at twelve or fifteen hundred dollars. May God bless this people and direct them in their work.

I filled my appointment in Lagrange, Ga. on the third day of January. Preached at 11 a. m. to the church; text: Will a man rob God?, Jer. 3:8. Collection was taken for the Christian Orphanage; amount received, $6.00. I received five members into fellowship. My work is in better condition than ever before. Our people are having revival cottage prayer meetings.

My people in Lanett, Ala. are in very good condition. Our Sunday-school had a nice Christmas tree December 25. We appreciate our teacher and Sunday-school worker, Miss Sallie Lou Cobb. We hope to have our revival services early in the spring.

I have organized a church at Shawmutt, Ala., two and one half miles south of Lanett. I want to ask the Sun readers to pray that God may bless us in our work.

My churches at River View and Bellamy are in good condition.

Sincerely, B. F. Young.

—Miss Jean Beatrice Mills, daughter of Ogden Mills, a New York financier, was married to the Earl of Granard Jan. 14. The presents in diamonds and such were estimated at half-million, which, if this earl is like many other foreigners seeking American heiresses, the pretty bride is likely to need for the keep of her purchase before many years.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—A good motto for 1909: Some period set aside each day for reading the Bible.

—Was the determination to make this a better year for your church, God being your helper, a part of your New Year's resolution?

—President-elect Taft discussed in a lengthy address, before an immense audience of colored people in Augusta, Ga., last Sunday, "The Christian uplift of Y. M. C. A. work."

—If it is thought out in the practical Rev. D. L. Moody preached a sermon in this one sentence: Love works the most, Faith gets the most, and Humility keeps the most.

—On January 28th at noon the Cuban people will become a nation, and a republic, all to themselves. As to whether they are capable of self-government is yet to be seen.

—Lexington Dispatch: "A unique advertiser in the Charlotte papers asks: 'Has a statesman been since Vance?' One."

Name your man.

—Forty of the leading magazines proclaim themselves as total abstainers so far as liquor advertisements go. That shows something of the public spirit that is rapidly growing against the traffic in rum.

—Virginia, is said to be taking the lead of all Southern states in advertising its resources and attracting immigrants, over two thousand farms in that state being sold to immigrants and outsiders last year.

—Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman and Mr. Alexander, with their several aids are conducting a most stirring and successful evangelistic campaign in Richmond, Va., the whole city being aroused as it has not been for many years past, if ever in its history.

—It will be gratifying information to his numerous friends to learn that Prof. D. Jennings Sipe who has been ill for several weeks at News Ferry, Va., is improving and may now sit up some. Bro. Sipe hopes to be up and at his post of duty in a few weeks.

—Broken in health of body and mind, Ferdinand P. Earle, the founder of the school of "affinity" wife seekers and deserters is at a sanitarium in N. Y. He deserted his legal wife and young son many years ago that he might be free to marry his "soul mate," whom, by the way, he attacked and beat with a chair, and was arrested for it. Earle and his kind ought to have been in a mad house, or in prison, years ago.

Governor Hanley's final message to the Indiana Legislature contained a sentence throbbing with life and energy to this end:

"I am aware there are some who have already celebrated the county option law's repeal, but I beg to remind all those who contemplate its repeal that it is the liveliest wire in the political machinery of this commonwealth, and is charged with enough electricity to electrify the party that repeals it."

—President Moffitt has faith in the people for he knows that the people believe in Elon College. From the day of its opening to this good hour, the College has been a constant source of benefit, blessing and benediction to all our Southern church, and this is familiar fact to the multitudes who have stood by the college in loving loyalty all these years. This is why Dr. Moffitt looks to the year 1909 as a good and great one in our history, because he believes the people will respond to the clarion call "Fifty thousand dollars for Elon College in 1909."

—Deacon C. S. Holloman, the venerable and beloved father of Prof. S. A. Holloman is quite ill at his son's home in Greensboro, N. C., and many anxious hearts pray for his recovery. Bro. Holloman is a most lovable man, has seen long years of loyal service in the church and has a host of devoted friends who will regret to learn of his continued and severe illness. For many years Bro. Holloman was a deacon, and ardent supporter of O'Kelly's church in Chatham Co., near which church he resided until he moved to live with his son some years since.

(Later, Bro. Holloman died Saturday, Jan. 16, and was buried Monday, the 18th.)

—Last week's Raleigh Christian Advocate said:

"'Preparing the Teacher' By W. A. Harper, W. P. Lawrence, and W. C. Wicker, Committee on Teacher-Training of the Southern Christian Convention, Southern Christian Publishing Board, Elon College, N. C.

This is a volume containing 233 pages. Its title indicates the character of its contents, and the reputation of the editors justifies the conclusion that the contents are very helpful to Sunday-school workers, especially teachers. The subject of teacher-training in the Sunday-school is one of vital importance and should be carefully studied by all Christian workers. The present volume is a worthy product of the Christian Church."

—Of our teacher training book for

Sunday-school teachers, Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., writes:

"Preparing the Teacher" is, in my judgment, the most valuable book ever issued in the Southern Christian Convention, unless the "Declaration of Principles and Form of Government" is the solitary exception.

The "Teacher-Training Course" will transform the Sunday-schools throughout the bounds of the Convention as the Principles and Government have transformed the Convention.

The material in this book has been wisely gathered, judiciously arranged, nicely printed, and substantially bound in cloth and paper. The course of study must appeal to all who desire to be more efficient teachers and soul-winners. All the writers have done their work thoroughly and put spiritual quality into their literary finish.

After a careful reading I find only one grave error. In lesson 1, page 15, it represents Hebrew history as beginning with creation and running to the apostles. The history of the Hebrew people begins with the call of Abram more than two thousand years after the creation. Previous to the call of Abram it was the history of the human race in its fall, dispersion, wickedness, destruction by the flood, and the re-peopleing of the earth through Noah and his family.

OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOL HAND-BOOK

The Sunday-school hand-book, published by Prof. S. M. Smith, under the direction of the Sunday-school Board of the Southern Christian Convention, is now ready for distribution.

The book is a very creditable publication, and is a decided improvement over the old method of publishing the minutes of each convention separately. It contains the proceedings of all the Sunday-school conventions in our Southern Church besides the pictures of the officers of each convention with some of our other leading Sunday-school workers.

This book gives at a glance a bird's-eye view of the Sunday-school work of our denomination in the South. It should be in the hands of every minister, Sunday-school superintendent and teacher, and it is hoped that it may have a wide circulation.

The book is printed on the best quality of paper, and shows up well. A supply is being mailed out by the Sunday-school Board to the secretaries of all the different conventions, and the Christian Sun has a supply on sale here. Copies will be sent to any address, post paid, for ten cents each.

NORFOLK LETTER.

The friends of Dr. T. E. Baird will be glad to know that he is very much improved in health, and hopes soon to be able to resume his practice.

Mrs. Geo. W. Hanghwont of the Third church—wife of brother Hanghwont, whom I reported last week as not being well—has been suffering the past week with a severe attack of appendicitis. She is very much improved at this time, and it is hoped now that she may avoid having to undergo a surgical operation.

Rev. Alva M. Kerr, of Dayton, O., is in the city. He is on his way south where he expects to spend the winter at some point in Florida. His stop over here is for his health(?) and other interests probably, that I have not been specially commissioned to note, so I guess I will let it go at that for the present, at any rate.

I take the following from the Berkley News column of the Virginia Pilot:

"Rev. M. L. Bryant, pastor of Main St. Christian Church, has returned from Mt. Olive in the valley of Virginia, where he has been assisting Rev. A. W. Andes in a series of revival meetings at the Mt. Olive Christian Church. His subjects today will be: 'The Testimony of good deeds,' at 11 a. m. and 'Awaiting the manifestation' at 7:30."

Rev. W. H. Thompson preached two good sermons at the Third Church and filled his appointment at Providence in the afternoon.

Bro. Ryan of the Temple reports a good day. He is not to be held down by a little thing like preaching only three times on Sunday, but this week will assist a Methodist minister in a revival meeting in Berkley. He reports a remarkable meeting at the Naval Y. M. C. A. Annex at the training station last week. After addressing a meeting of men where there were 150 present, 62 came forward at the close of the meeting and made a public profession of Christ. He has been invited to conduct the meetings there each Thursday night in March.

The Naval Y. M. C. A. in the city, a magnificent building donated by Jno. D. Rockefeller, has been about completed, and was informally opened to the men of the Navy last Saturday. It means much for the comfort of the men who come here. The formal opening will be arranged for a later time not far distant.

ITEMS OF PUBLIC INTEREST FROM THE LATE TRUSTEE MEETING.

The annual session of the Trustees of The Christian Publishing Association was held January 6-8 at the Publishing House at Dayton, Ohio.

The members are O. W. Whitelock, Huntington, Indiana, president; Henry Crampton, Eaton, Ohio, secretary; D. M. Helfenstein, Des Moines, Iowa; G. D. Lawrence, Danville, Illinois; A. M. Heidlebaugh, Ottawa, Ohio; J. N. Dales, Toronto, Ontario; James S. Foust, Lakemont, New York; W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Virginia; A. H. Morrill, Laconia, New Hampshire.

All the members were present at all the sessions, and all were kept busy, especially the Auditing Committee which began its work before the others arrived.

A stenographer is to be provided for the editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty and the editor of the Sunday-school literature; they to divide the time; also a stenographer, who is to assist in the book-keeping, for the publishing agent.

A committee consisting of T. S. Weeks, Troy, Ohio; S. Q. Helfenstein, Dayton, Ohio; O. W. Whitelock, Huntington, Indiana, was appointed to look after the Graded Lesson Helps. The agent is to have our Sunday-school publications displayed at as many State Sunday-school conventions as possible. Space in the Herald of Gospel Liberty will be given for presentation of the work of Adult Bible Classes and Teacher Training Classes.

The library at the Aged Ministers' Home, Lakemont, New York, is to receive a copy of "The Centennial of Religious Journalism," "Centennial Addresses," "Scripture Doctrine," and "Kinkade's Bible Doctrine," free.

The Association published 4,500 books during 1908; 36,000 pamphlets, a large number of leaflets, and has other books under way. It was decided not to publish the life of Elias Smith because much has already been published about him.

The $18,000 debt reported to the Huntington Convention in 1906 has been reduced to $7,364.59.

The appropriations, in all departments, are the same as last year. The Hymnary Committee reported progress, and hopes to put out a book which will not have to take second place. Agent Hess was instructed to collect the money due the Association.

The Secretary of the Association is, by vote, to be the editor of the Christian Annual for 1910.

The Field Agency work is not to be given up, but the present method of conducting it will be discontinued, and the following resolution relative to the work of Brother Burnett was adopted:

Resolved, That the Board of Trustees of The Christian Publishing Association, in discontinuing the services of the Field Agent, desires to express its appreciation of the work of Rev. Dr. J. F. Burnett, who has filled the position faithfully and satisfactorily during the past year; and that the office is discontinued in the line of present economy; and that the value of his work cannot be measured by cash receipts.

Resolutions concerning Dr. J. P. Watson's death:

Whereas, Rev. Josiah Prescott Watson, D. D., since the last Annual meeting of the Board, has been called from this to the better life, and

Whereas, he was for so many years identified with the work of this Association, having served faithfully as Editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty from January 1, 1887 to January 1, 1895, and as Editor of our Sunday-school literature from January 1, 1887 to January 1, 1907, during which time the Sunday-school publications were greatly improved and developed; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Board of Trustees in annual session convened, that we gladly bear testimony to his nobility of character as a man, a Christian, and a minister of the gospel; to his consecrated ability and untiring work as an editor for so many years, and to our sincere esteem for him as a fellow-worker and a brother beloved.

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the Divine will that has summoned him from our fellowship to the home of joy and life; thankful to our Heavenly Father that he was spared to us so long, and confident that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathy to our sister, Mrs. Watson, in her affliction, and to all the members of the family; reminding them of the rich heritage that is theirs in Christian hope, which was his comfort and support in life's varied experiences.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon our records, and published in the Sunday-school literature, in the Herald of Gospel Liberty, and an illuminated copy sent to the family of our beloved brother.

O. W. Whitelock, J. P. Barrett and J. N. Hess were appointed a committee to arrange for the representing of the Association at the conferences, and the members of the Board offered their services in their localities for "only expense to be paid."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HOW TO TEACH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JAN. 31.

A Few Suggestions.

THE TRIAL OF PETER AND JOHN.

Acts 4:5-20.

Golden Text: They were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and they spoke the word of God with boldness. Acts 4:31.

Review. In the review of the previous lesson today let the idea be to show out of it and the circumstances connected with it grew our present lesson—the first recorded persecution of the Christian church. Show that the healing of the lame man at the very gate of the temple and the preaching of the gospel to the people assembled there for other worship was an attack on Judaism at its stronghold. Show further that Peter's sermon charging the Jews with the judicial murder of Christ would incense their rulers, and that especially his declaration that Christ had arisen would make the Sadducees, the then ruling Jewish sect, enemies—all of which taken together led to the arrest and trial.

Intervening Events. The intervening events are for today's lesson found in the first four verses of chapter 4 of Acts. While Peter and John were still preaching to the people in Solomon's porch, the priests, the captains of the temple, and the Sadducees came up and had them arrested. It was now night and the Sanhedrin could not meet at night, so the Apostles were imprisoned until next morning. However, the sermon had its effect for we are told that there were 5000 men believers at that time, and we don't know how many women and children.

Incidental Instruction. By way of incidental instruction the teacher will do well to make clear the duties of the priests and the Captain of the temple, the belief of the Sadducees, the constitution of the court of the Sanhedrin and its method of conducting a trial; also to explain thoroughly verse 11.

The Lesson. We may divide our lesson today readily into three parts, which may be written on the board as they are covered in the teaching.

1. Peter and John get a hearing, verses 5-12. By question learn what took place on the morrow, who came together to sit as judges, who the real high priest was (review your pupils on their previous study of this man—whom the Jews regarded as the real high priest), who the legal high priest was, what kindred of the high priest came, who were set in the midst of the court, what question was pronounced to them, with what intent. (Here call for assigned work on verse 7 and Matt. 26:62-66.) What answer Peter made, with what he was filled, through whom he declared the impotent man had been healed, what scripture quotation (Psalms 118:22) Peter here made, through whom he declared salvation must come. (Here call for assigned work on what the name of Jesus means to us, Col. 3:7; Matt. 18:20; John 14:13-16; Acts 7:27; Matt. 12:21; Eph. 5:20; Mark 16:15-18).

2. The Court Deliberates, verses 13-17. Discover what sort of men they perceived Peter and John to be, what these terms meant to them, what effect the boldness of Peter and John had upon the court, whom did they recall having seen them with, when this was, why could they not make answer to Peter's statement whither the healed man and the two Apostles were sent, what confession the court privily made in regard to the healing, what counsel they took to destroy the influence of the miracle, in whose name the apostles were forbidden to speak further.

3. The Decision, verses 18-20. Learn what command the court gave the recalled apostles, what answer Peter and John made them, which side had the better of this trial (Here call for assigned work on fellowship of Peter and John, Luke 5:10; John 1:41; Luke 22:8; John 28:16; 20:6; 21:21; Acts 3:1.)

Review the lesson by the topic method.

Truths and their Application. 1. Peter well said there is only one means of salvation—through Christ. Critics of the Christian faith have called it intolerant, and this is well so, for it is intolerant of all error. Every other faith is false, every hope that is not built on Christ is sinking sand. This is not harshness; this is not narrowness; this is not bigotry—it is God's eternal truth.

2. The self abasement of the disciples is explicable only on the hypothesis that they knew Christ to have risen from the dead. We have numerous instances of men who have effaced themselves to exalt others who were to their mind deserving it or able to reward them. But there is no record of such self-effacement for one who was dead and without power to bless them. We are forced then to believe in the resurrection of Christ.

3. The Sanhedrin took knowledge of Peter and John that they have been with Christ. They will also take knowledge of us if we are truly his followers. Our religious life cannot be hid; neither can hypocrisy.

Assignments for Home Study. Ask one to be prepared on the intervening events, Acts 41:21-30; ask a second to make an outline of next Sunday's lesson; a third to find from his Bible Concordance what the Psalms and Proverbs have to say about lying; a fourth what the New Testament has to say about lying.

An Explanatory word or two. Whenever the International Committee has assigned more than our Senior Quarterly gives for a lesson, it shall be the policy of this department to regard only that part printed in our quarterly as the lesson—this for the reason that it is all our Sunday-school pupils are going to prepare.

I earnestly hope, furthermore, that those teachers who made use of these "Suggestions" will not follow them slavishly and that they will not teach their lessons continuously in the order always herein suggested. For example, incidental instruction should be given all through the recitation just where it is needed, truths can be deduced and applications made in various ways and at various points in the lesson; thus the recitation may be varied from time to time. Be sure, dear teacher, to bring out in your teaching these suggestions and others too of your own, but not always in the stereotyped form which the printed page extracts of me.)

W. A. Harper.

THE LAME MAN HEALED.

Acts 1-26.

Golden Text. His name through faith in his name hath made this man strong whom ye see and know. Acts 3:16.

Time: Some afternoon in June A. D. 30, or not long thereafter.

Place. Jerusalem, in the outer court of the temple near the Beautiful gate, which led from the outer court into the court of the Women.

This one miracle was selected from the many wrought, because of its far-reaching influence extending nearly through Acts 3rd and 4th. It produced opposition. That opposition strengthened the character of the church and increased its numbers.

Lesson Outline.

I. Peter and John on the way to the Temple.

II. The lame man carried to the Gate Beautiful.

III. The meeting of the three.

IV. The healing of the lame man.

V. The saved man.

VI. Peter's sermon explaining and applying the miracle.

(1) The audience. (2) The text. (3)

The source of the healing. (4) The means of salvation:—Faith. (5) Jesus the promised Messiah. (6) Therefore repent. (7) Scripture proof. (8) Closing exhortation.

This miracle is the connecting link between the new church and persecution.

The two chiefest among the apostles were on their way to the Temple widely different in character. They were closest of friends alike in principle, devotion and purpose. They were attending the prayer hour.

A lame man was carried to the Gate Beautiful. His story in brief is. (1) He was born with the cause of his lameness. (2) Caused by weakness of feet. (3) So bad that he could not walk. (4) He was poor. (5) Was over 40 years old.

Was carried to ask alms of them that entered the temple. The kindness and most sympathetic people are the praying people.

Nine tenths of all the money raised for benevolent purposes comes from those who go up to the temple at the hour of prayer.

The Gate Beautiful.

There are many beautiful gates in life to higher and better things: the gates of hope, love, character, faithfulness and prayer.

Jesus Christ is the Gate Beautiful to eternal life.

The Meeting of the Three.

Peter looked upon the man and the man gave heed.

Peter had left all to follow Jesus, had no money to give but helped him to use his feet to rise, stand and walk.

The best gifts to the poor are not exactly the things they want, but the power to obtain them. This is the best and most effective charity.

The Saved Man.

He walked and leaped and amazed all who saw him.

Peter's Sermon.

Text: The restored man. The power came from Jesus, the Prince of life.

The Man's Faith.

Closing exhortation. Believe and repent for God and his Son, Jesus, earnestly desire to bless you and save you from your iniquities. G. W. T.

THE ORGANIZED CLASS MOVEMENT.

By Sylvester G. Rollings, A. B.

(An address delivered to the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday-school Convention and published by request.)

Since the dawn of creation we have known something of order. Through the Divine, order was brought out of chaos. The universe was so arranged that all the planets, all plant and animal kingdoms, were essential organisers for the life which was the objective manifestation of God's infinite mind. What was true of God's plan at the time of creation is, also, applicable to the plans and organizations of man. When "Jehovah God formed man of the dust of the ground and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life," the same tendency for order and organization was inherited. Such an inheritance since the day of Adam has been manifested in the social, political and religious institutions of man. In these phases of life organization has played its part, for men have realized that "The usefulness and efficiency of any institution is positive, or negative according as the institution itself is or is not thoroughly organized and systematically conducted." Success is necessarily measured by the limit of its organic completeness.

The Organized Class Movement may seem of minor importance to some of you of this convention, and scarcely worthy of your attention. I shall try to show you, however, that it is only through the organized Sunday-school class that the greatest good can be perfected and the best results accomplished.

The unorganized Sunday-school class, it is true has been a success to a great extent from its beginning. It has proved itself a divine agency for good. Progress has worked its splendid history, yet those who are most familiar with the signs of the time see clearly that through the organized class will be wrought even greater victories for the Sunday-school and the church.

None of you will think of organization as "a combination of scheming." Some may say, possibly, "It is altogether inimical to the spiritual." The Organized class of course, may be perverted into hostility to the spiritual, if carried too far, not so readily though as the lack of organization may be in effect. Suffice to say that a plan of organization was manifested through the works of Christ, "how he trained, and explained, and inspired, how he sent out the seventy by twos to do specific things."

Then, too, organization in our own time has done much for the evangelization of the world. A bare mention of Moody's success and the Student Volunteer Movement along this line are sufficient examples.

In this discussion, I shall confine the Organized Class Movement to the adult department. Could we enlist the middle-aged and elder people in Bible study, we would have scarcely any difficulty with the children. The idea was once prevalent, that we must interest the children at all hazard, an idea that we would not condemn; yet we feel that the elder people were seriously neglected. With such feeling has come a change in opinion. It is now estimated that there are 10,000,000 men outside the church and Sunday-school. The question now arises: How can they be interested in Bible Study? Old methods have failed. The old class arrangement is inadequate to the task. New occasions teach new duties. It is now seen that the spirit of the day must be brought into play. The dens of iniquity are putting forward every device possible for the destruction of our young manhood, and young womanhood. The Sunday-school should be equally as alert in saving them by the use of any right means. Out of such need has come the organized class.

The date of the birth of the adult movement is well nigh impossible to fix. Like all great movements, it was not the offspring of a single day, but has been the growth of many decades, yea, possibly many centuries. One thing we do know, however, is that it has been marked by special activity. Several plans concerning adult class organization have been devised that have attracted widespread attention. The work of the Baraca, Philathea, Brotherhood of Andrew, and Philip, the Yoke fellows have demonstrated the need for united action. Such need came before the International Sunday-school Convention at Toronto, June, 1905. In August, 1906, an International Adult Department was established. Through this department was fostered the Organized Class Movement, which we shall consider from six standpoints. How to Organize, Division of Labor, Growth of Classes, Relation to Church, Democracy, What It is and Does.

I. How to Organize. A class may be started by the teacher of an unorganized adult Bible class or by any member thereof. The pastor of superintendent might urge the adoption of the New Movement plans. One or more members of an adult Bible class might withdraw for the purpose of experimentation. In either case the promoter of a new class for thorough organization should be familiar with New Movement plans in order that he might interest others in his project. Leaflets explaining the plans and benefits of organization may be procured from the Secretary of your State Association.

Having become familiar with leaflets demonstrating new plans, personally interview the leaders of unorganized Bible classes and explain to them the value of organization. Suggest plans that might serve as a nucleus for a beginning. Make a careful canvass

THE MINISTER'S MESSAGE.

There are three classes of people to whom any body will freely give admonition and advice, namely, to farmers, rheumatics and ministers. If farmers were to receive one fourth the advice proffered them, and the rheumatics take one tenth the remedies prescribed for them, and ministers adopt one twentieth of the methods marked out for them the whole trio would be put out of commission in short order. For that one reason this writer has never advised a farmer, prescribed for a rheumatic or counselled a minister in wisdom's ways. So much by way of general introduction to a particular theme.

If the matter is sounded to the bottom, this writer is persuaded that the world—the world of men and women who think and act—is far more interested in the minister's message than it is in a message to ministers. After all, we love and cherish, the world does, the ministerial man because, and as long as, he delivers the ministerial message. The message of the man is what the multitudes are hungry for. The message is the might of the minister's power. Some may live that message more eloquently than their tongues can tell it, but after all it was the message that reached and saved sinful men and erring souls. For this reason ministers, and men every where, are interested in the ministers' message.

When a word comes about this message we "sit up and take notice." In reading the opening page of the Homiletic Review recently we found a real, live, worthy word about the minister's message. Unfortunately it was headed, "A Message to Ministers." This is the one transgression of the contribution in question. Removed from its heading and classed as "The Minister's Message" it is a real and a great contribution.

To our thought this editorial column cannot be given to greater service than repeating an excerpt from this "Message." Hear it and discern the difference between a dead message and a live one:

"The sin of a dead minister is the sin of the indefinite article. He preaches a sermon, offers a prayer, makes a call, where the minister who is alive preaches the sermon, offers the prayer, makes the call, his people's needs require and his devotion prompts.

"The worst feature about preaching sermons taken from a book or magazine is not that it is stealing. Other persons steal; promoters and pickpockets, for instance. Preaching another man's sermon is a sign that that you are dead: a much more serious matter. It is a sign that you are not alive to the specific need of your people on that particular day, and doing your best to meet that need.

"The same objection, with almost equal force, applies to one's own old sermons. A sermon which springs from any source other than the minister's present devotion to some particular spiritual need of his particular people, is conceived in the sin of laziness and delivered in the iniquity of insincerity. Sermons preached on exchange, and when "candidating," where the application of this principle is impossible, are the only exceptions.

"The same thing is true of Scripture-reading, prayer, and the pastoral call. Exalted into ends, done for their own sakes, or because it is one's duty to do them, they are little short of blasphemy; and of course unprofitable and unfruitful. Only when used as means to ends beyond themselves, are they holy, sacred, in other words, serviceable and faithful.

"A live minister is simply a man with a program in which the clearly conceived, deeply felt spiritual welfare of his people is the end in the foreground, and the appropriate material, mental, social means are in the background to support it."

UNDER THE SHADOW.

We wrote in these columns recently of the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Milton, the Quaker poet and Christian citizen. In that editorial we tried to bring to the fore those traits of man and character which had made the man to endure and survive through the centuries. If nothing said in that paper was sufficient grounds of survival, the following "Letter to a Friend," which the blind bard wrote shortly before the end came, would tell us why this name shines out with such lustre even to our day:

"They charge me with poverty, because I never desired to become rich dishonestly; they accuse me of blindness, because I have lost my eyes in the service of liberty; they tax me with cowardice, and while I had the use of my eyes and my sword I never feared the boldest among them; finally, I am upbraided with deformity, while no one was more handsome in the age of beauty. I do not even complain of my want of sight; in the night with which I am surrounded the light of the divine presence shines with a more brilliant lustre. God looks down upon me with tenderness and compassion, because I can now see none but Himself. Misfortune should protect me from insult, and render me sacred; not because I am deprived of the light of heaven, but because I am under the shadow of the divine wings which have enveloped me with this darkness."

ENTERED INTO REST.

The editor received a telephone message from his friend and brother, Prof. S. A. Holleman, Greensboro, Saturday night, January 16, to the effect that his father, Charles Sidney Holleman, had that afternoon at 5 o'clock quietly and peacefully passed to the spirit land. In that single sentence was contained the announcement that a life, more than the ordinary, had finished its earthly mission, that a most noble task had been completed and that a fearless and faithful race had been successfully and triumphantly run.

He was born October 3, 1827 and was therefore eighty-one years, three months and thirteen days old. He had survived two wives, to one of whom he was married in 1850, and to the other in 1871. With each of these he lived in loving devotion twenty-five years. There were no children born from the latter union, but to that with Martha O'Kelley in 1850, five were born, three of whom passed away in early childhood. Of the two remaining the daughter grew to beautiful and accomplished womanhood and was the wife of President Jerome Stockard of Peace Institute, Raleigh, N. C. Mrs. Stockard died some years since, leaving four children, two of whom were at their grand-father's burial. The only surviving member of our venerable brother's once happy family, is S. A. Holleman, now a successful business man of Greensboro, and for many years the beloved Professor of Mathematics in Elon College. In the latter's home did the deceased find, in the late years of his life, that tender, loving care that his own kindly and benevolent life had deserved. With two grand-children there who were ever solicitous of grandfather's care and comforts, with an affectionate son whose admiration and esteem for his aged father knew no bounds, and with a daughter-in-law whose sympathy and devotion discerned every want before it was expressed—in that home, in these later years, our good father in Israel lived, never a burden, always a blessing and a benediction. That is not a poorer, but a richer and happier home, because our brother lived there. The service rendered was a service of love because he led a life that elicited and deserved it.

For fifty years and more he had been a faithful, loyal, and efficient deacon in O'Kelley church, in Chatham County. And in the cemetery there we laid his wearied body to rest Monday afternoon Jan. 18, a large concourse of former friends and devoted relatives meeting to show their respect and manifest their esteem for such a splendid and unselfish life. The floral designs were handsome and numerous, covering the mound beneath which the body rested. Rev. W. S. Long assisted the writer in conducting the obsequies.

This good man made the world a more honorable and upright place in which to dwell, for he truly walked with God, and adorned his life with the noblest Christian graces. God rest his great soul, and multiply his kind among the children of men. Charles Sidney Holleman came to his grave in peace, full of years and of good deeds which he had done.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

In reading the 1909 Christian Annual one is impressed with the growth of the church and its institutions. The columns that represent departments to be supported have increased and the footings show increase in the financial support. It is not safe to measure Christianity by financial effort and support only; but "where our treasure is there will be our hearts also." People do not give their money to enterprises, as a rule, unless their hearts take some interest. It may be safely assumed that an increase in gifts to benevolent institutions and Christian enterprises is a sign of larger faith, more loyal life, and deeper interest. If statistical tables have any Christian significance, this Annual must prove that the Christian church is "growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth." The addition of new churches, the addition of new ministers, who give their whole time to the ministry, the erection of new houses of worship and the improvement of old houses of worship, the payment of better salaries to ministers, the more liberal support of all the undertakings of Conference and Convention, all add force to the claim that the church is growing along lines of usefulness and progress.

This is conspicuous in the smaller conferences. They are doing things in an intelligent, systematic and progressive fashion. This could hardly come to pass if no deep spiritual motive lay at the bottom of their activity. Pride and show do not furnish a sufficient motive to sustain such growth as the tables show from year to year. It is done because the people love God and His cause. Our faith is not dying out, it is not even growing less; but it has discovered that faith without works is already dead. Professor Percival Lowell may believe that the inhabitants of Mars will perish because the water on that planet will dry up; but we do not believe that the fountain of life will dry up or that the people will cease to walk by faith. Pessimists may sigh over the decadence of faith, of spirituality, and interest in religion, but facts tell a different story. It may be true that Puritans would not kiss their wives on Sunday, lest they violate that sacred day; but with all their right rules they did not fill the air with sweeter songs, nor the temple with purer devotions, nor the treasury of the Lord with more cheerful offerings than this very year of grace, 1909. Never, in the world's history, has such an appalling calamity befallen the human race as the Italian earthquake in December, when 200,000 perished and a million were made destitute in a minute of time; and never, in human history, has such help been given by spontaneous donations. Already more than $15,000,000.00 have started in streams of blessing from every quarter of christendom. The religion of Jesus Christ, even its benevolence, is adequate for the necessity of mankind. What would be the resources of helpfulness, if all men were Christians? The Pope $200,000; Red Cross Society $70,000.00; United States Congress, $800,000.00; British Parliament, £3,000,000; Pierpont Morgan, $10,000.00; thousands of churches throughout the land. #### Elon College Notes.

Mr. Peter F. Barber of Mississippi, class of 1903 and Mr. J. Adolph Long, class of 1905 have been on the hill for a day or two and both report success in their respective fields of work.

Mrs. Dr. G. W. Kernodle and little daughter, Iris, of Greensboro, N. C. have been visiting relatives and friends here and at Burlington during the past week.

Dr. W. P. Few of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., will speak in the College Chapel on Friday or Saturday evening. His subject is to be Edgar Allan Poe, this date being the one hundredth anniversary of his birth. A treat is in store for all who hear Trinity's dean, Dr. Few.

Mr. Liggett Lincoln of Lacy Springs, Virginia, who has been sick here for some time with pneumonia, leaves today for his home accompanied by his father and mother. He will return to Elon to resume his work as soon as his health is recovered sufficiently.

The Home Department of the Sunday-school here reported 54 for its first week. Is not this good for a beginning? Sunday, the 18th, the College pulpit was filled by Dr. Newman, and the Christian Endeavor was lead by Mr. J. R. Phipps.

Our enrollment continues to grow, several new and some of our former students, who have for some time been out, have matriculated and now are engaged in the regular College work. All departments are at work and there seems to be a genuine zeal and determination that will brook no defeat.

J. T. C.

—Rev. J. W. Patton reports his work in excellent condition since Conference. He has the same field of labor this as last year and has received twelve members into fellowship during the new year. Pastor Patton does not believe in being idle among the churches even in winter. There is no reason why spirituality should be less ardent in winter than in summer.

—His many acquaintances and friends will learn with regret that Deacon C. S. Holleman, the venerable and beloved father of Prof. Holleman, of Greensboro, died last Saturday evening. The interment was at O'Kelley's church, of which Bro. Holleman had been a faithful, loyal and devoted member and officer for many years.

—Have your eyes and nerves become adapted yet to dispatches like this? Wilbur Wright in France flew for two hours and nine minutes last Thursday thereby winning a $5,000 cup and $4,000 in money.

Grand Total, 1908 ..... $3187.26

Elon College, N. C., Jan. 13, 1909.

My Dear Children and Friends:

Our 1908 record is complete. We have wrought well in sympathy and works; and as the external results we show $3187.26. While this is not as much as we expected; yet it is a liberal amount when so many individual members do not give a penny. To the above amount should be added $275.00 put in two lots adjoining our field which will give us an inlet to 23 acres which is disconnected from the main farm and would have made our Grand Total $3462.26.

We congratulate the children on what has been accomplished in these few years through their influence. To the many individuals, churches, Sunday schools, Christian Endeavor societies, Aid Societies, we herewith convey our deep gratitude for your help in this noble work, and wish for you all a New Year laden with much happiness and great success. May the kind Providence be with you in 1909 as we feel He was with us in 1908.

The following donations have been received:

1 acre land (W. C. Wicker lot), Mary Lee Foster, Elon College, N. C., cost $150.00; 1 acre land (the Hines lot) James L. Foster, Jr., Elon College, N. C., cost $125.00; Prof. Z V Judd, Raleigh, N. C., Supt. of Schools, Wake county, check, $2.70 (10 cents for each child); W. A. Hughes, Watson, N. C., 100 lbs. flour; (Lucian Miles, Watson, N. C., 40 lbs. flour.

(The above flour from Bethel church, Caswell, Co., N. C.)

The children appreciate Prof. Judd's kindness to them very much. Bro. Judd thinks it's wonderful how the work of the children has founded our Orphanage that is now a real living institution.

We appreciate the flour from Bros. Hughes and Miles; it takes flour for our children. We bow to Rev. W. C. Wicker in appreciation for $100.00 check in full of his subscription which was made to secure the location of the Orphanage at Elon College, N. C.

Dr. J. W. McPherson of Haw River, N. C. hands us check for $10.00 which helps us very much. We thank you, doctor.

Volume II., 1908 Christian Orphanage is now closed! What did you write in that volume?

The past has weakness and errors, many; the future is full of hope, and packed with possibilities. What is your part?

Yours fraternally,

Unele Jim.

Roanoke, Ala., Jan. 11, 1909.

Dear Unele Jim:

Enclosed you will find $3.22, the amount of birth-day offering of New Hope Sunday-school for fourth quarter, 1908.

Wishing all the orphan children a happy New Year, I am,

Your niece, Zana Stephenson.

Good, Zana. This is quite a nice offering.

Franklinton, N. C., Jan. 7, 1909.

Dear Unele Jim:

I send 50 cts. for a Christmas offering. Hope all of you have had a merry Christmas and wish you a happy New Year..

Your friend,

Farmer Cook.

Yes, Farmer, we had a merry Christmas. Santa visited our children through kind friends and made them very happy.

Dear Unele Jim:

I haven't written in a long time, but think of the little orphans real often. Some of my friends gave me 85 cts. and mama gives me 15 cts. more to make a dollar to send as a Christmas offering. I am going to school and like it fine.

Your little friend,

Melissa Cook.

Your offering shows where your thoughts have been, Melissa. We know you always sympathize with the orphans.

Dear Unele Jim:

I am a little boy three years old. I send fifty cents as a Christmas offering to the Orphanage.

William S. Cook.

Thanks, little man. You have started on the right road. Let us hear from you again real soon.

Taro, Va., Jan. 5, 1908.

Dear Unele Jim:

It has been a long time since I wrote my last letter, but I have not forgotten the Orphanage. Will write oftener now. Enclosed please find ten cents.

Yours truly,

Susie R. Watson.

Yes, Susie, we want to hear from you and get your dime for every month in 1909.

Timberville, Va., Jan. 12, 1909.

Dear Unele Jim:

Here I come again from Valley. I guess you thought I had forgotten you but I have not. I have been sick. The snow is all gone but it is cold. I send in my dues. Love to all, of your church membership and community, enlisting those who might be interested in Christian service. Co-operate with the pastor, superintendent and leaders of existing classes; call a meeting for prayer and conference and present plans for starting a class for men, also a class for women. Persistently push the work until you find one or more men interested in building up a class for men, and one or more women who are interested in building up a class for women. The reaching of larger numbers of men and women cannot be easily done in mixed classes. Experience has shown that in this work, "men for men, and women for women, is the key to success." When three or more have been found who are willing to begin a class for either sex constitute them as a membership committee, put them to work, set a date for the reception of new members into a permanently organized class. Then make your class so attractive that its magnetic power will compel others to join its ranks for the purpose of breaking the Bread of Life.

Ella C. Myers.

Guess you sent your ice down to us, Ella, for we have had sleet and the cold continues.

II. Division of Labor. The organization of an adult class, as voiced by existing needs and conditions throughout the International field and ratified by the Adult Department Committee represents the minimum of organization rather than the maximum. Such organization distributing responsibility might be termed the "Division of Labor" by economists. This responsibility should be divided between teacher, president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the class, which class should also have a membership, devotional, music and social committees and such others as may be indicated by specific needs. A class thus composed of officers and committees should consist of members who are sixteen years of age or over. It goes without saying that such class should be vitally connected with the Sunday-school.

In the election of officers and the selection of committeemen the very best material available should be used. Thorough organization begins with the office-creating power. Class organization is no place for the exercise of favoritism or sentimentalism. It is the place for the exercise of the highest discriminating courage. It would be a mistake, yea, a crime against the class to allow any consideration except the good of the class to rule. Those who are capable of bearing the greater responsibilities, those who are brim-full of tact, should be selected to bear class burdens. If possible use each member of the class for its general perfection.

Divided responsibility is a good thing. It helps to develop him who assumes his part of it. The president of the new organized class should make a psychological study of its members and seek to discover the peculiar gifts of each, so that he might use them as a means to the best possible end. Is one man musical? He is just the man to consult about singing and to be made to feel that he has some responsibility in regard to the music. Is another man successful in business? He is the man for the chairman of your executive committee. Is another man friendly and cordial with all, meeting strangers easily? He is a good man for the Welcome or Social committee. a class thus organized with an eye singled to one purpose. It is not merely the naming of certain individuals for certain responsibilities. There is a deeper significance. The division of responsibilities is simply rudimentary—only the husk in which a ripe kernel should be found. Class organization is life and activity. It is union. It is strength. It is soul and sense. It is the touching of elbows and the joining of hands in a forward movement. It is the heart-throb which moves the multitude as one individual. It is the making a symmetrical power of the whole for the perfection of God's kingdom on earth.

III. Growth of Classes. The original Adult Bible class comprised of five young men, Andrew, John, Peter, Philip, and Nathaniel, was organized 1900 years ago by the shores of Galilee. These were personal workers devotedly attached to and loyal to their Master. They were zealous students of the Old Testament and were later organized for aggressive work. They are still a loving example to all enrolled students of the Bible, both in earnest pupilship of heart and life surrendered to the great Leader. This class itself was a momentous fact in the world's history. Its composition represents the head waters of Christianity. It has served as a nucleus of a great host that, through all subsequent centuries, acknowledged the Teacher of Galilee as their leader and an ever-growing army of today who gladly acknowledge the Divine Son as their Lord and King. And we of today, notwithstanding that the best of examples has lain almost dormant for nineteen centuries, have awakened to the realization that it is the most worthy to be imitated. With such awakening has come the actual practice.

In the report of Mr. W. C. Pearee, Teacher Training Superintendent to the Twelfth International Convention, Louisville, Ky., June, 1908, it was stated that 1,632 certificates of recognition have been issued by forty-nine associations, and an application for a certificate has been received from the Philippine Islands. Such report is a source of joy to those interested in Sunday-school work, notwithstanding the fact that it is impossible to give a satisfactory statement of the number of organized Bible classes or their membership. Abstracts from class reports, however, will suffice, in the latter instance, to show something of the magnanimous growth of the movement.

The Powell class of the Epworth M. E. Sunday-school, Marion, Ohio, began with less than twenty members; it now has an enrollment of 400.

The Muncie Bible class of the First M. E. Sunday school of Brazil, Ind., a pioneer new movement class, has an enrollment of over 500.

"Our class is very enthusiastic over New Movement plans," says G. A. Harriet, Lima, Ohio. "Before taking them up we had only five members; we now have 20. One young man got up last Sunday at 4:30 A. M. and walked eight miles to be with us. He had not been to Sunday school before in ten years. Why not adopt the organized class and bring into the Sunday school some of our moss covered Sunday-school goers—members of the church who style themselves "active church workers."

Says another there are no more who could join with us in a radius of four miles. All speak in praise of the movement and they are interested in the lessons wonderfully.

R. E. Gill, Petersburg, Va., the teacher of a discouraged class of young men, proposed a change in leadership. The boys objected, and, instead, suggested organization and a contest to build up the class, which was agreed upon. Six weeks later the membership had jumped from 16 to 268. The class now has an enrollment of over 700.

The men's class of the Venable St. Baptist Sunday school of Richmond, Va., was organized with four members; it now has over three hundred.

In 1906 W. M. Folger, Pres. of the First National Bank of Vandalia, Ill., started a men's Bible class in the First M. E. Sunday-school. On the first Sunday of January following he had enrolled 102 men. The class membership is made up of the leading men of the place, including the mayor of the city, a member of the Supreme Court, and every county officer except one. Lawyers, doctors, politicians, and business men make up the rest of the membership.

Such classes are being organized all over the entire country, and by nearly all denominations save our own. Why should we not begin organizing our classes for a more systematic and enthusiastic study of the Bible? Could we come to the full realization of the results there would be no trouble; we would begin at once.

But do I hear some one say, "The things which you recommend are all right for the city school, but are not feasible in the country." I have lived in the country almost all my life and clearly understand that there are difficulties to be overcome in rural sections.—i. e., tired horses in summer, bad roads in winter, and an isolated people during all seasons. Such minor difficulties can be squarely met. "Sunday schools of our day are not great because of their location, but because earnest hearts have spared nothing in the effort to make them what they should be. There are no model Sunday schools which owe their high character to accidental conditions." A consecrated, unremitting, year-in-and-year-out effort anywhere will bring some measure of the same outcome. Wherever there is enough energy and love for Bible study to establish a Sunday school, there should likewise, be enough to introduce the organized class.

REV. M. B. BARRETT MONUMENT.

Dear Bro. Editor:—At the last session of the E. Va. Christian Conference the information came to that body that the grave of Rev. M. B. Barrett was unmarked by any slab or monument to mark his last resting place. Bro. Barrett was one of the leading ministers in his conference in his day and was for many years president of the conference. The conference, therefore, decided to erect a suitable monument to his memory. Revs. C. H. Rowland, H. E. Rountree and the writer were constituted a committee to receive means to purchase and erect this monument, the writer being made treasurer of the committee. All, therefore, who may desire to assist in this worthy cause may send the amount they desire to contribute to me at Windsor, Va. Some subscriptions were given at Conference. I have a list of these and will report same through the Sun when they have been paid.

I have received the following amounts:

THE ANNUAL FOR 1909.

The Annual this year contains 141 pages and carries in full the proceedings of all the conferences of the Southern Christian Convention, of The Christian Missionary Association and of The General Convention which convened in Greensboro, N. C., last April. There are also statistical tables giving data of all churches and Sunday-schools of the Convention, apportionments for all churches in 1909 and a full church and ministerial directory. The Annual is neatly printed and bound and is invaluable to all who wish to know what our Southern conferences, churches, Convention and enterprises are doing.

—Corn-stalks have hitherto been used chiefly for fodder and fiddles. The farmers' boys have made the fiddles and the cattle have eaten the fodder. The Department of Agriculture, which has already made paper from the stalks as a laboratory experiment, is planning to go into the business extensively enough to test the commercial value of this new paper material. It thus hopes by encouraging the raising of corn to prevent the razing of the forests.—Ex.

An Extreme Case of Eczema Cured.

Winston-Salem, N. C., July, 13, 1908.
Mr. J. T. Shuptrine, Savannah, Ga.

Dear Sir:—Nothing gives me greater pleasure than when I am singing the praise of Tetterine. I consider it beyond doubt one of the best skin preparations ever offered the suffering ones.

Some ten years ago no mortal could have been in a worse state from eczema than myself. I had tried every remedy, blood purifier, skin salve, yet I seemed worse, until I was one mass of itching sores. Life simply a burden, I could not sleep. Could not work. The physicians could not help me. I was simply desperate. Glancing over a newspaper I received from a lady in Texas who wrote you telling her condition and what Tetterine had done for her; her case was so much like mine that I concluded that I would try it, feeling that if she could receive so great a benefit it might help me. After two or three applications I never saw such a sudden change. I am happy to say that I am well again. My case being so had it took a lot of it. I have never known it to fail to cure every case yet. I make a special offer to any one suffering with Tetter, Ringworms and Eczema, etc., that if it is used properly and fails to cure, I will refund their money. I have yet to repay any one. Whenever I see any one here suffering from Tetter, Ringworm, etc., I prevail on them to get a box, stating to them that if it fails, come to me and get their money back. I have had the pleasure of curing many with it.

Sincerely yours, P. S. Early.

Tetterine cures Eczema, Tetter, Ring-Worm, Ground Itch, Infant's Sore Head, Pimples, Boils, Rough Scaly Patches on the Face, Old Itching Sores, Dandruff, Cankered Scalp, Bunions, Corns, Chilblains, and every form of Skin Disease. Tetterine 50c; Tetterine Soap 25c. Your druggist, or by mail from the manufacturer.

—It now seems quite probable that the legislature of South Carolina, now in session, will pass a state-wide prohibition law for that commonwealth to be in effect from and after July 1 of the present year.

—During the past year the United States government made the snug profit of ten and a half million dollars on the coinage of silver, nickles and one-cent prices. It pays to use alloy—and to make money.

—Duke Litta, of Paris, France, at the head of a syndicate which controls 200,000 acres of land in Manatee, Florida, has offered to give five acres of land to each family of Italian earthquake sufferers who will come and occupy. The Duke hopes to colonize 3,000 families. His company is to retain five acres beside each five acre plot given away.

—President-elect Taft was really not elected till last Monday when the electors in all the States met at their respective capitols and cast the ballot. The speeches nominating William Jennings Bryan for president seemed like a call from the past and the echo of days that are gone. But despite the eloquent nominating speeches, Mr. Bryan was defeated and Mr. Taft was declared elected.

SUPPOSE.

Suppose that the Christian life in its daily manifestation, should come to be marked and known by simplicity and happiness. Suppose that the followers of Jesus should really escape from bondage to the evil spirits of avarice and luxury which infect and torment so much of our complicated, tangled, artificial, modern life. Suppose that, instead of increasing their wants and their desires, instead of loading themselves down on life's journey with so many bags and parcels and boxes of superfluous baggage and bric-a-brac that they are forced to sit down by the roadside and gasp for breath, instead of wearing themselves out in the daisy ways of competition and vain show, or embittering their hearts because they cannot succeed in getting into the weary race of wealth and fashion—suppose, instead of all this, they should turn to quiet ways, lowly pleasures, pure and simple joys, "plain living and high thinking." Suppose they should truly find and clearly show their happiness in the knowledge that God loves them, and Christ died for them, and heaven is sure, and so set their hearts free to rejoice in life's common mercies, the light of the sun, the blue of the sky, the splendor of the sea, the peace of the everlasting hills, the songs of the birds, the sweetness of flowers, the wholesome savor of good food, the delight of action and motion, the refreshment of sleep, the charm of music, the blessing of human love and friendship—rejoice in all these without fear of misgiving, because they come from God, and because Christ has sanctified them all by His presence and touch.—Dr. Henry Van Dyke.

The Centennial of Religious Journalism

EDITED BY J. PRESSLEY BARRETT, D. D.
Editor Herald of Gospel Liberty

This is without doubt the most generally interesting publication sent out by the Christians. Its centennial, historical and denominational features make it not only unique in character, but interesting as well. From beginning to end it claims the interested attention of the reader.

We have not space here to give the table of contents, but suffice it to say, that beginning with the "Discussion of the conditions which made the organization of the Christian Church a necessity," the reader will follow with interest and profit, the "History of the Herald of Gospel Liberty," "The One Hundred Editorial Gems," "Historical Sketches of One-Hundred-Year-Old Churches," "A symposium—A Hundred Years of Progress," setting forth in well prepared papers the development of the various enterprises of the Christian Church, and with a heart full of optimistic hope he will peruse "The Future Outlook of the Christian Church."

And all this, and more, in a book of nearly 650 pages, handsomely bound, with gold titles, while the price is only $1.00 for cloth binding and $2.00 for Morocco, with your name printed in gold. Postage, 15 cents extra. Send your order at once to

Duke-Cullifer.

At the bride's father's Nansemond Co., Va., Nov. 26th, 1908, Mr. Charles E. Duke and Miss Fannie E. Cullifer. The parlor was beautifully decorated and there were many to witness the ceremony, while Mrs. W. T. Kilby played the wedding march. After the marriage there was given by the bride's father a sumptuous reception. The bride was very pretty and quite a favorite in the community. She was organist at Bethlehem Christian Church. They have the best wishes of their many friends. May their lives be long and happy together.

White-Hodges.

Near Copeland, Nansemond Co., Va., Dec. 26, 1908, in the presence of a few friends and relatives a beautiful marriage was solemnized at the home of the contracting parties being Miss Katie Maie Hodges, the youngest daughter of the late H. H. Hodges and Cornelia Hodges and Mr. Gavin W. White, a very popular young clerk of the S. A. L. offices in Portsmouth, Va. At 9 o'clock, A. M. the bridal party entered the room with his best man, Mr. Marvin Ballard and the bride with her brother, Mr. Joseph Hodges of Roanoke, Va., who gave her away. The parlors were very pretty and beautifully decorated. The bride, who is very pretty, looked extremely beautiful, gowned in a white Paris muslin with orange blossoms in her hair being in deep mourning. She wore no other ornaments. She carried a shower bouquet of Brides roses and lilies of the valley. Mr. Clarendon Harrell of Portsmouth, Va., a cousin of the bride, played Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party entered and "Love song" all the time during the ceremony.

After receiving congratulations of their friends and relatives the bride changed her dress for her traveling suit, and the happy young couple were driven to Purvis, Va., where they took the South bound train for Jacksonville, Tampa and other southern cities.

The bride was beautiful and well accomplished and therefore was quite a favorite in the community and her many friends were loath to give her up. Mr. White is to be congratulated on winning the heart and hand of such a charming young lady. They will be at home after Jan. 4th, 1909, Portsmouth, Va.

Griffin-Sharpe.

At the home of deacon and Mrs. F. F. Sharpe, near New Lebanon church, Rockingham Co., N. C., a beautiful home wedding took place on the evening of Dec. 30, 1908, at 6 o'clock p. m., when their daughter, Miss Janie R. Sharpe and Mr. Patrick R. Griffin were united in marriage. The home had been beautifully decorated, especially the parlor. Three shaded lamps added to the beauty of the scene. At the appointed hour, while Mrs. Zillie Comer presided at the organ, the party entered the parlor in the following order: first, the attendants: Miss Claudie Sharpe with Mr. Numa Comer; Miss Annie B. Sharpe with Mr. William Mosley; Miss Annie Mosley, with Mr. W. G. Sharpe; Miss Gillie Griffin with Mr. W. M. Suits; Miss Annie Sharpe, with Mr. Reuben Truitt; Miss Laura Sharpe, with Mr. C. C. Griffin; and then came the bride and groom to the altar, standing under a large marriage bell suspended from a heavy and tastily arranged archway of ever greens and ribbon, while the words of a beautiful and very impressive ceremony were said by Rev. L. I. Cox, of Elou College, N. C., in the presence of the contracting parties. After the ceremony, the party retired to the reception room, where the friends and relatives extended hearty congratulations to the bride and groom. We were soon invited from this, to the dining room where we found a bountiful repast awaiting the party two who were present. It was good to be there.

A few hours were given after supper for social enjoyment. Many beautiful and useful presents were received, which attested their popularity. May the hand that is too wise to err, and too good to forsake, ever lead them through life.

King-Pond.

January 6th, 1909, at the home of Mrs. Sallie E. Pond, Olive V. Pond became the wife of Mr. Shirley C. King. The marriage was of the quietest type, there being only three outside the immediate family to witness the ceremony. They were married at 4:15 o'clock and left immediately for the home of Mr. Jack King, the father, of the groom, near Carsleys, where they were given supper and spent the night. Mr. King is a young farmer who will reside near Waverly. May the Lord prosper them.

Carter.

Walter Horace Carter, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Carter, near Holland, Va., died after a long and severe illness of meningitis, Jan. 19, 1909, aged 3 years, 9 months, and 9 days. The funeral was conducted by the writer at Holy Neck church and the little body laid away in the church cemetery. Little Walter's sufferings are ended, "for of such is the kingdom of heaven." We extend our sincerest sympathy to the bereaved parents and all the family.

Crist.

Saturday afternoon, Jan. 9th, it became my sad duty to bury a godly lady and mother, Mrs. C. D. Crist who resided near Waverly. Mrs. Crist had been a great sufferer for many months being afflicted by a spinal trouble. She was sent to the hospital, but all that loved ones, friends and physician could do could not avail. When they foresaw that they could not restore her they brought her back home where she died in a few days. Her body was interred in the Waverly Cemetery.

Mrs. Crist was a Miss Margaret Reed, of Peoria, Ill. She was born Dec. 9, 1869. At the age of 13 she united with the Christian church at Hammond of the same state. She remained a member of that church till the time of her death.

At the age of 17 she was united in marriage to Mr. C. D. Crist, of the same town. They remained in that town till three years ago when they sought a home in Virginia and located near Waverly. To their union have been born five boys and two girls all of whom survive her except one boy who died in infancy. We are told that she remained a constant Christian all her life. She was conscious till the end and realized that her hour was at hand. She called her husband and children to her side just an hour or so before the last and blessed them. They told her that she had been good and faithful to enter into her rest was all they could say or do for her.

She died Jan. 7, 1909, leaving to mourn their loss a husband, six children, a mother 87 years old and a sister the latter two living in the state of Ill. May the Lord bless and comfort them.

Resolutions of Respect.

At the midnight's holy hour on December the 16th, 1908 the messenger of death came and invaded our union and severed a link from our golden chain, summoning from time to eternity sister Adona Brinkley Crocker one of our most beloved members. We shall never again enjoy her genial companionship and wise counsel. She was always a willing worker in the Ladies Benevolent and Social Union and we mourn her departure, and her memory will ever be kept fresh and bright in our hearts as she was loved by all, and therefore be it

Resolved, That it is with sorrow we thus part with our sister. We would emulate her virtues and bow in humble submission to the will of Him "who doeth all things well" hoping for a meeting in the great union of a never ending eternity, where with hands clasped in hers, we shall take up the links of the golden chain.

Resolved, That the blessed hope of immortality leads us to dwell on the beautiful traits of human nature, and it assures us that the golden chain that binds us in life cannot be severed in death, and while the gloom of the grave may for a time obscure the vision, "at eventide it shall be light."

Resolved, That our hearts go out in tender sympathy for the bereaved and while we fondly cherish the memory of our departed sister we will not forget those she loved.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Union and that copies be sent to the family of our departed sister and also to the Suffolk Evening Herald and Christian Sun for publication.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A Year's Benefactions. Christian philanthropy, or philanthropy in this Christian country, has grown to immense proportions. Not that all philanthropy is in behalf of purely Christian institutions, nor that all donations are by those claiming to be Christians. Far from it. Yet the philanthropy of our time may be called Christian because Christianity, the spirit of Christianity, made all this philanthropy possible. Mr. Carnegie does not claim to be a Christian, yet the very thing he disclaims made him possible, produced his wealth for him, and engendered in him that spirit of care and concern for the welfare of others that makes him a great philanthropist. There are thousands of people outside the church, in Christendom, whom the church made possible, wrought in them and for them that which makes them useful and valuable and honorable men. Say what you may, our blessed Christianity made possible and brought into actual being our modern day philanthropy. We rejoice, therefore, at the enormous benefactions of our time, not merely for what they are in themselves, or may do, but because we know them to be the fruitage of a more glorious power and planting.

In the year 1908 ninety millions went as free gifts to the betterment of man's physical and temporal condition. Educational institutions received during the same time forty millions. Religious organizations received five millions, not counting, of course, regular contributions for maintenance. Libraries received one million.

The disparity between educational institutions and religious organizations seems, at first, amazing; but many of the educational institutions are themselves promoted by religious organizations, and have no other means of maintenance than through benefactions.

We may, therefore, put 1908 as by no means a bad year, but in many particulars a good one for the cause and progress of Christian philanthropy. The power of Christianity in our day is, in short, beyond all reckoning and computation.

Moral Character and The Church. Does the Church help to make men more moral and so the better fit them for citizenship? Or does it make them less moral, and so unfit them for good citizenship? Christian Sun readers, for the most part, will answer those questions in their own minds readily, and will wonder why we put them here. And yet there is a reason.

No less a personage than Dr. George E. Dawson, professor in the Hartford School of Religious Pedagogy, writing to a current religious journal recently said that the great majority of people above twelve years of age in the United States were church members, or to be exact according to the census of 1900, there were 53,000,000 above twelve years of age in this country. Of this number 30,000,000 belonged to one church or another. "So that it is a conservative estimate to say that, in the United States, the predominating influence lies with men and women who are nominally church members." Now then, contends Dr. Dawson, "the church here has had supreme opportunity to make men moral in the sense of fitting them to live as individuals, and as members of society. ****. Yet it has failed; and the evidence of its failure exists in the fact that today the great moral forces of civilization are outside of the Church, and, in a large measure, working independently of it." So much for Dr. Dawson who is a teacher in a religious institution.

Over against this we wish to place a recent statement of President-elect Taft. Mr. Taft was addressing a meeting of Protestant ministers of Augusta, Ga., and setting forth his views of the influence of the Church upon civilization and its moral influence in individual and governmental development. Adverting to the Philippines, with which he was familiar by residence and close observation, Mr. Taft said that "these people are now in a state of Christian tutelage, and must be uplifted in my judgment through us and our guidance before we shall have discharged the obligation that Providence has thrust upon us. In the study of the development it has made I have seen the enormous influence that the Church must exercise in order to make our progress there effective.

"The Roman Catholic Church was there for years and preserved that state of Christian tutelage to which I have referred. Now the ban has been removed from other denominations, and they are all in there on an equality in spirit of Christian emulation, attempting to uplift those people, and we for the government, by a system of secular education, are aiding that uplifting. But without the moral influence of the churches there we could not accomplish anything. It is that sort of experience by which there is borne in upon us the importance of the maintenance of a Church and its influence at all hazards."

And in this we believe that Mr. Taft, the statesman, has certainly taken the broader view than Dr. Dawson, the teacher. "Without the moral influence of the Church in the Philippines we as a government could not accomplish anything," declares Mr. Taft. And what he says here is true of all governments builded and in progressive development in our day. The moral influence of the Church, through hundreds of missionaries, has awakened China, aroused India, and projected Japan into an era of untold progress and development. Railroads and telegraphs and schools are all there now, but the missionary went there first and made these possible. By the moral uplift of the Church these things have come to be.

—No, ours is not yet a manufacturing, but chiefly an agricultural country. During the year 1908, by report of the Secretary of Agriculture, our farm products amounted to $7,778,999,999. The largest single item was corn. By the way, if last summer's corn crop could have been so diverted it would have paid off the national debt, dug the Panama Canal and bought fifty battle-ships. We believe in bread.

—And now another, and even still more deplorable departure in newspaperdom. The Washington Times has started a Sunday evening edition. Can the people not be spared their Sunday evenings without being distracted with the awful happenings of the day? The only redeeming feature about the Sunday evening Times edition is that it carries no comic supplement.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HOW TO TEACH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEB. 7.
A Few Suggestions.

True and False Brotherhood.

Acts 4:32 5:11.

Golden Text: Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord; but they that deal truly are his delight, Prov. 12:22.

Review. Last Sunday's lesson was the beginning of oppression from without,—the result of which was the holder preaching of the Gospel, the deepening of the spiritual life, and rapid increase in church membership. Today's lesson is the beginning of internal troubles,—the first instance of hypocrisy in the church and how it was disposed of. With these facts in view, carefully review the previous lesson, insisting on the essential facts in view, the golden text, and the spiritual lesson taught by it.

Connecting Links. The intervening events for today are found in verses 21 to 31 of Acts 4, where it is recorded that the two apostles, who had been tried for blasphemy and dismissed with the injunction not to preach in Christ's name any further, went to their friends and reported all that had been done, whereupon a prayer meeting followed in which the disciples of the new faith prayed for boldness in proclaiming the gospel they had been forbidden to preach. The result of this prayer-meeting was the shaking of the house where they were assembled and a renewal of the Holy Ghost in their souls so that they might be the more enabled to preach with boldness. This work was assigned last time: so call for it now, and be sure that these points are brought out.

The Lesson. Last Sunday it was suggested that you ask one of the pupils to prepare an outline of today's lesson. Call for it now, ask why it was so arranged, and make it the order of the teaching today. For purpose of our treatment we will divide the lesson today into three parts.

I. The Spirit of the Early Church, verses 32-35. Learn by question how the multitude felt toward each other, how they regarded their own property, how all things were held, of what the apostles witnessed, how, what was upon them, the meaning of this, what the owners of houses or land do with their possessions, what with the money they thus received, how this fund was disbursed, the possible reasons for this.

II. A Notable Example of Christian Piety, verses 36-37. Find who is mentioned as especially illustrating this principle, what surname the apostles applied to him, its meaning, his position among the Jews, his country, where it was, what he did with his land, what with the proceeds therefrom.

III. How The First Hypocrites were Dealt With, verses 1-11. Discover another instance of this custom, the meaning of their names, what they did with the money, what part Sapphira had in it, who carried the money to the apostles, when it likely was, what apostle spoke to Ananias, what question he pronounced to him, what further question showing that this custom was a purely voluntary one, to whom had Ananias lied, what happened to Ananias thereupon, the cause of this, what came upon the people, what was done with Ananias' body, who came later, how much later, what question Peter asked her, her answer, his further question, his declaration to her, what happened to her, how was she disposed of, what came upon the church and upon all who heard these things, the value to the new church of these seemingly severe penalties for hypocrisy. Call for what Proverbs and Psalms teach about lying assigned last time. Call for what the New Testament teaches about lying assigned last time.

Review the lesson from the topical outline.

Incidental Instruction. In the way of incidental instruction today; one biographical, another geographical, and a third having to do with Jewish customs. Be sure to give your class a clear conception of Barnabas as a man and as a power in the spread of the early church, especially his connection with Paul. You will find this from your Bible concordance. Then get Cyprus clearly before them as to location and position in Jewish history at that time, being the site of rich copper mines which Augustus Caesar leased to Herod the Great. Lastly the custom of burial will claim your attention. It was customary to bury on the day of the death, usually three or four hours after death—because it was a very hot country and also to avoid ceremonial defilement.

Truths and their Applications. 1. Drive home the Golden Text. Show the heinousness of lying. There is no hope of reform in a liar, for you have nothing to build on. Nor is there such a thing as a white lie. A lie is a lie, and all of them without exception blocks. The integrity of our courts is conditioned on truthfulness. Perjury strikes at the very roots of justice. We want boys and girls who will tell the truth, even though it bring hurt to themselves; then we will have men and women and future church members that will keep state and church in the proper course.

2. Teach also the inevitableness of punishment for sin. There is no way in the world to escape the consequences of evil doing. You may be forgiven for doing it, but the consequences will be with you just the same. Therefore sin not. If you do sin be sure your sins will find you out.

3. Ananias and Sapphira wanted to be thought good, but their lives did not cause people to think so. Therefore they seized upon a plan to tell people they were pious, whereas in fact they were not. Hypocrites have no way to get credit for piety except in some such way as this. Yet in every instance, sooner or later, they will be discovered. Those who give more than they are really able to give for the reputation there is in it will sooner or later be found out. The double life will out.

4. We should not judge the early church by its failures, but by its successes, not by its Ananiases and Sapphiras, but by its Barnabasses. To judge a course or a person or a thing by its failures is to be unfair and to arrive at uncorrect judgments. "We must be careful not to measure a man or a society by its imperfections alone. It is like valuing gardens by its weeds, and fruit trees by their worm-eaten fruit. By that method of measuring Sahara is better than the choicest garden in the like valuing gardens by their weeds, and dead tree is better than the most fruitful tree in the orchard for it has not poor fruit. Not by their weeds alone, but by their fruits ye shall know them."

Assignments for Home-Study. Ask one to report on Acts 5:12-16; another to find the effect of persecution on the persecutors from Matt 18:6, 7:23; 2936; Rev. 18:16-19-24; another on the persecuted from Heb. 11:25-27; Acts 20:22; Rom. 8:37; 2 Tim. 2:9,10; 4:17; Matt. 5:10-12; Luke 6:22,23; a fourth to find other Scripture text that would serve as golden texts for this lesson.

LESSON FOR JANUARY 31, 1909.

The Trial of Peter and John.

Acts 4:1-31.

Golden Text:—They were all filled with the Holy Spirit, and they spake the word of God with boldness, Acts 4:31.

Place in History.—This lesson is the natural outcome of the miracle, the teaching, the wide spread excitement described in our last lesson. It belongs to the early period of the church, not long after Pentecost.

Hitherto the progress of the church has been peaceful and rapid, presenting a beautiful picture of the heavenly life on earth.

We now come to a place where we must watch the progress of the church from two points of view.

One is the outward history flowing from the Pentecostal fountain in an ever widening stream, rising in restless tide when rocks of opposition would stay its onward course.

The other is the inner history, the unfolding of the Spirit's work in the believers. From this fountain flowed a marvellous power which led to confession of sin and the obedience of faith, great peace, noble generosity, wisdom and courage.

Lesson Outline.

Theme: Progress through opposition.

I. The Apostles arrested and imprisoned.

By whom? For what purpose? The effects of heroism in persecution.

II. The work went on.

III. Opposition gave the Gospel a hearing before the rulers.

IV. The Outcome

Position of Peter unassailed.

The disciples acquitted.

The Prayer meeting that followed.

The two apostles were, doubtless praying and praising God.

The fact that those interested in opposition to truth were grieved gave no reason for relaxation of effort.

Today liquor-sellers, gamblers, and those who make money out of vice, whose gains are fraud, are grieved at every effort to save men from their clutches. Their grief should only make us more zealous and hopeful.

The apostles now began to know the meaning of Christ's promised blessings. They recognized a new power that was working in them.

The Results.

Being with Jesus. To be with Jesus is to live in communion with him, to have him in our thoughts, to love him with all our hearts, to go to him for guidance, to make him our daily companion, to be in sympathy with his plans and purposes, to feel his presence and approval.

This daily companionship will change us as by the spirit of the Lord. This likeness will show in our daily life and character. G. W. T.

THE ORGANIZED CLASS MOVEMENT.

By Sylvester G. Rollings, A. B.

IV. Relation to Church. The organized class bears the same relation to the church that a large reservoir bears to a much-needed supply of water—it constantly refills.

Rev. Courtland Myers, Brooklyn, N. Y., says, "I have no question about the advisability of organization in classes of young people. It is an indispensable factor to best results. I have baptized into our church membership out of a class of young men, probably 300. In the first Baraca class organized in 1890, over 200 have confessed Christ and united with the church. One pastor writes that out of 146 members added in the past three years, 77 came from two organized Bible classes.

The Juniar Bible class of the First M. E. Sunday-school of Belleville, Ill. has in three years, reached an enrollment of 350; of this number 114 have become regular church attendants, 31 are enrolled in definite church work outside the class, 12 became Sunday-school officers and teachers, 37 have joined the church, and three are now members of the official board. Such abstracts, showing that the organized class movement has given many young men and young women their first impulse to lead Christian lives and to do active church work, could be duplicated many times. Let us spare no time nor means nor effort in adopting organization.

V. Democracy. The success of a Bible class to a great extent depends on its democracy. Class organization appeals to adults as well as to young people sixteen and twenty years of age. They like the idea of self-government. They like to feel that they are in an organization where they have a voice, and where they have something to do. Young men, especially, prefer doing things in a business like manner, rather than go to class and sit under the tutelage of a teacher who is the "sole proprietor" with the sense that he or she is the only factor of the class who has anything whatever to do with the class meetings. They themselves want to work and take great delight in it when it appeals to them as worth while.

Under exceptional circumstances there have been large and successful Bible classes that were created, maintained and ruled by one strong good man. Such classes have done inestimable service, but objections are so numerous, so serious so evident against the Bible class of the absolute monarch that nearly every one will agree that the ideal Bible class must be democratic, because the young American "eats, sleeps and breathes democracy. He wants a voice in things. From this point of view arbitrary government belongs to childhood. The consciousness of his developing strength must find somewhere opportunity for expansion. If there is not an organized class to gratify this desire, he quits."

VI. What It Is and Does. The organized class movement is not a beautiful theory, but a thoroughly demonstrated and wonderfully successful proposition. It is yielding large returns and, if pushed, must eventually revolutionize everything.

In practical application the organized class reaches beyond the ordinary unorganized Bible class spirit and pure social relations, it not only helps the unemployed and cares for class sick, but it lends assistance to those outside of its own realm. The great beauty of such missionary spirit thus manifested is that it reaches old and young people, whether church going or non-church-going, puts them to studying the Bible, and develops them so that they can interpret its rich truths for themselves.

The one vital thing that the organized class does, it teaches men to think. A very few men have done practically all the thinking of the world, and because they have thought they have seen meanings and forces in things that have been passed unnoticed by millions of their fellows. Wall with steam, Edison with nature's electricity, and a few others have revolutionized the world. They put their God-given endowments into service of the earth. If the organized class performs its proper task some of its disciples may revolutionize the world in a noble way by discovering in large measure the divine meanings that God intends for the salvation of men, and still unnoticed on the pages of the Book of Life. The organized class not only aims to prevent mental waste by redeeming the mind from idleness and torpor, directing its energies into a worthy and fruitful field for occupation giving it spiritual material to weave into a beautiful garment of truth for a living soul to wear, but it helps to make the men of the twentieth century something more nearly like the pattern of the ideal man in the thought of the Creator.

With such infinite inheritance, the organized class movement brings, also, a new relation of teacher to class. He no longer places emphasis on "my" class but on "our" class. He no longer stands before passive hearers to "teach" the lesson to those who are sometimes politely styled "listeners" to whom the lesson, in many instances, is neither instructive nor inspiring. As Thomas Carlyle once pertinently observed: "To sit as a passive bucket and be pumped into, can, in the long run, be exhilarating to no creature, how eloquent soever the flood of utterance that is descending." The teacher of the organized class does not try to pump the lesson into the class, but attempts to

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. W. D. Harward, Madrid, Iowa, writes a pleasing letter which his many Southern friends will read with delight.

—Rev. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va., writes: "Plenty of snow and bad weather, but our work moves along well."

Why in the world all those people out there don't move is a mystery. There is yet plenty room in the happy, sunny South.

—One paper has written it, "Wilbur Wright of Ohio, France and the Starry heavens," which does not go far of the mark.

—We are pleased to hear, by way of another breezy and unique contribution, from our friend and brother, Rev. J. T. Kitchen, Windsor, Va., who, by the way, wields too facile a pen to allow it to be idle so much.

—Sun readers would be delighted to have some words from new comers to our Southern pulpits, Rev. W. H. Bolton of our Greensboro church and Rev. W. H. Thompson of our Norfolk, 3rd Church. Let us hear how you like us and how the work goes with you, brethren.

—Under date of Jan. 11, Rev. H. G. Cowan, Cowan, Mont., writes: "Rather cold weather out here. Thermometer showed 50 below zero this morning, though it is a nice bright day and there is only about ten inches of snow on the level."

—Miss Elsie Atkinson, who was in school at Elon last year, and traveled in Europe last summer, is at Palmer College, Le Grand, Iowa. Under date of Jan. 20, she writes: "I like Iowa weather, the place and people here at Le Grand very much, and am delighted with my school work." "Elsie" made a host of friends among students and faculty at Elon who will wish her all health, happiness and success in her work.

—Rev. J. H. Barney, Clearville, Pa., sending his annual renewal of $1.50 for The Sun and 20 c's. for a 1909 Annual adds this gracious and kindly word: "I shall never forget my visit to Elon College and the kind treatment accorded me there by the brethren. It will always be a bright spot in life's memory. God bless the great work the brethren of the South are doing." Bro. Barney's visit here is remembered with all pleasure.

—How is this for a fine specimen of health, hope and happiness, on the part of our beloved Dr. T. M. McWhinney, now past 86, writing in The Herald of Gospel Liberty last week of a convention nearly two years yet in the future:

"Let us prepare for our coming Convention with a united and consecrated effort along lines of personal sacrifice, and co-operation, especially in our great educational movement. Let us pray and labor to the end that our next Quadrennial shall be by far, more to the glory of God than any we have ever witnessed. I am now in my 86th year, yet have great hopes of meeting my beloved brethren in that great Convention."

—The Sunday School Board and the Christian Endeavor Board of the Southern Christian Convention are holding sessions 26th and 27th inst. at Elon College. The Sunday School Board consists of Prof. S. M. Smith, Raleigh, Chairman, Revs. L. I. Cox, Elon College, L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, M. W. Butler, Newport News, G. O. Lankford, Columbus, Ga., and Dr. J. W. Manning, Norfolk. The Christian Endeavor Board consists of Revs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., Chairman, H. E. Rountree, Waverly, Va., R. H. Peel, Windsor, Va., E. M. Carter, Wadley, Ala., J. W. Patton, Elon College, and Prof. W. P. Lawrence, Elon College. This is too early to say what members are present. The object of the joint meeting of these two Boards is to decide whether or not a Convention of Young People of the Convention shall be called and if so, when and where. Also to prepare uniform blanks for all Sunday-schools of the Convention.

It is not often that one finds, in city or in country, a more delightful and imposing house for residence than that recently built and now occupied by Bro. J. Beale Johnson, near the homestead of his fathers, Cardenas, Wake Co., N. C. The house is set upon a hill at whose base, scarcely a hundred yards away, is the picturesque mill with the wide spreading, far reaching, pond that gives it grace and power. When one comes to scrutinize closely one wonders which to admire most the splendid present-day mansion built in every particular in antique colonial style, or the generous mill with its great, sluggish water-wheel and its soothing sound "as of the rushing of many waters," or the quiet, peaceful pond sleeping lazily in the sun shine, a very giant in its strength, a picture of pent-up power and repose. That is to say, Bro. Johnson and his good wife were as wise in the selection of a site for their home as they were generous, gracious and lavish in building it. The house, from the farthest sight, invites you. None but a generous hand and an open heart would have built such a home. Its great, spreading, restful verandas, skirting the house on three sides, its massive colonial columns thick studied and reaching from base to summit, its spacious halls, solid floors of beautiful, polished oak, its great spreading, hospitable doors, its spacious rooms, winding stairways from front and rear, wholesome bath rooms supplied up stairs and down with a constant stream from a nearby, friendly spring, an electric plant which gives abundant and brilliant lights, great open fire-places in every living room—all of these do but tell in poor speech of the appointment of this home even more beautiful from its gracious hospitality than from the builder's or designer's art. A few days in such a home, with such friends, with such surroundings of the builder's art and nature's lavish display, make this unworthy scribe and his wife and children feel like they have been carried almost by magic to a veritable Utopia of refreshing rest and delightful dreams. Editor and Mrs. Editor and little editors are all gratitude for the many tokens of kindness and gracious favors both in this and in other homes of the community, Bro. K. B. Johnson's W. Z. Atkinson's and others, whose bounty and cordiality sweetened the cup of existence and laid us under lasting obligations. Next to sweet fellowship in the house of God and divine worship at the place of prayer, is the commingling of friends with friends in the dispensation of kindly and gracious hospitality. The word home has its proper significance when there is bestowed upon it our best thought and endeavor and our fondest hopes and efforts. This southern country of ours, in which home has always held highest reverence and respect, has not lost the taste and the instinct for home-building and home-making. When our dear land shall blossom again with homes, such as once blessed it, this race of southern men and women will come into their own, and the joys and achievements of other days will return.

THE ANNUAL FOR 1909.

The Annual this year contains 141 pages and carries in full the proceedings of all the conferences of the Southern Christian Convention, of The Christian Missionary Association and of The General Convention which convened in Greensboro, N. C., last April. There are also statistical tables giving data of all churches and Sunday-schools of the Convention, apportionments for all churches in 1909 and a full church and ministerial directory. The Annual is neatly printed and bound and is invaluable to all who wish to know what our Southern conferences, churches, Convention and enterprises are doing.

Send orders at once. The price is 20 cts. per copy. Address The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

—Congress has voted to increase the pay of the 29 Federal circuit judges from $7,000 to $9,000 and that of the 84 district judges from $6,000 to $8,000.

NEWPORT NEWS LETTER.

"It Was Not Ever Thus."

This day and season are full of suggestions. It is the last day of the old year. It speaks in tones of love and tenderness, and then again hurls upon us the most terrible memories. Sitting alone with no visible friends but books to speak to me as the evening shadows of the old year are lengthening, and their outlines growing less distinct, soon to fade into the morning twilight of the New Year, memories the most sacred crowd unceasingly upon me. One year ago this evening (It seems too sacred here to speak) a loved one sat with us for the last time in the house of God, and for the last time placed her gentle step on mother dust. For the last time we drove together along the crowded street of happy children and light-hearted friends. Little did we think that the closing hours of the old year so certainly meant the closing forever-more of our union about the family altar, meal and circle. "It was not ever thus."

With what voices does this evening hour speak to us. What memories it revives! What scenes it resurrects and passes before us! Only one year ago this evening, and what temples of hope have fallen since and crumbled into dust. Roses so rich in perfume which grew along life's rugged pathway have been smitten by the frost of the old year and died. What tempests have surged and swept across our bosoms until life seemed like a storm center, and an ocean lashed and stirred to its depths. What starless nights have come and gone. What anguish and bitter weeping the old year has wrung from human hearts and lives! Shall we not wish the closing hours of such a year quickly past forever more?

Hush, my soul, and do not thus repine. 'Tis true friends have fallen by our side and disappeared, but have they not left heart and life, and memory, richer; and would we be so selfish as to even wish to detain them if we could from accepting their crowns and reward in that land so filled with the light and glory of God? Would we be so cruel as to even wish to hold them longer in pain and suffering? 'Tis true dark storms have swept and surged upon our lives and tempestuous nights have come and gone, but was not the Master's voice heard on every wave-crest saying: "It is I, be not afraid," and again, "Peace be still." 'Tis true fragrant roses have faded and died along our way, but have they not left their perfume on the air?

Rise, oh my soul, out of the ashes of gloom and sorrow, and meet the future with all the interest, hope, and life possible. Live to scatter all the sunshine possible on the pathway of thy fellow travelers and to gladden the lives of others. Let us bless the dear old year in its dying hour and charge upon it no wrong. It was our Father's gift and through all its lights and shadows He has guarded our path by gracious providence and crowned us with sustaining grace. The will has been subdued, the affections purified, the spirit of surrender and obedience enlarged, and the heart and life more firmly fixed in God. Her incidents now gone forever more have been stepping stones in the path to our Father's home. With due and profound reverence for the sacred past, and with heart and life enriched and enlarged by its associations and incidents, we greet the New Year and sealed future with holy faith and life fixed firmly in God.

"So long thy power hath blessed me, sure it still

Will lead me on;
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent till

The night is gone.
And with the moon, those angel faces smile

Which I have loved long since and lost

"Life is real, Life is Earnest."

There are times when life seems strange, and all the past mysterious. Sometimes we feel, in thinking of the past, that we have been stirred from a long dream. Friends prove disloyal, and long cherished plans come to naught. Ideals and conceptions inherited, and taught from childhood as the highest, best, and divinest, find no favorable conditions for application and service. Much which had been credulously accepted as real was found to be fictitious and only pretense. Motives the purest and most sincere are sometimes impugned. All down the ages men have cried with Solomon: "Vanity of vanity, all is vanity." But all is not, however, vanity. Life is not a dream and this world is an uncomfortable place for the dreamer, for the reason that life is real and earnest. The ties which bind true friends together; love which holds and anchors the family circle and altar; influences which lift the life toward God and unconsciously shape our destiny and character; the conscious presence of Christ; joy that fills the soul; peace that steals upon us because of the abiding presence of the Holy Spirit; these are real, and these are earnest.

Life's great mission and moral obligations and opportunities are real, a veritable and blessed reality. Pause not to dream over the past, nor give thyself concern about the sealed future, but with thy hand in thy Father's, trust and follow Him.

"Lord, for tomorrow and its needs I do not pray;
Keep me, my God, from stain of sin,
Just for today.

Help me to labor earnestly, and duly pray;

Let me be kind in word and deed,
Father, today.

And if today, this life of mine should ebb away,

Give me thy sacrament Divine, Father today.

So for tomorrow and its needs, I do not pray;

Still keep me, guide me, love me,
Lord, this each today."

Elon College Notes.

The address of Dr. W. P. Few of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., which was to have been delivered last Tuesday evening will be tomorrow evening, Jan. 25th. The reason the address was postponed was sickness in the family of Dr. Few.

The twenty-second of February Washington's birthday is to be celebrated here. The students to appear are making the necessary preparation. The program will appear soon.

A number of lovers of music from here are expecting to attend the greatest event of the season in Greensboro, on Jan. 27, the appearance of the famous Mlle Calve.

Sunday, Jan. 31, Rev. J. W. Holt, of Burlington, N. C., will preach from the college pulpit. It is with pleasure we make this announcement for Bro. Holt is one of our most thoughtful and forceful preachers.

There is an association here which means much to the religious life of our young ministers, and of which we hear but little from outsiders. This is the Ministerial Association which meets regularly once a week. It has done much to encourage the young ministers and now is doing a great deal of work at nearby needy points in supplying preachers.

Sunday Dr. Atkinson preached for the College. His congregation was large and attentive, his sermons are a pleasure, delight and inspiration to all who hear them.

The Highway Commission of Alamance County decided last Monday to build a McAdam road from Gibsonville to Burlington through Elon College. This is good news for us who live here as it gives us a fine graded road from here to Greensboro and places us on one of the state's great highways leading from Raleigh to Charlotte. J. T. C.

FROM THE FIELD.

Iowa Letter.

I suppose that our friends in the South will be looking for a few lines from Iowa, and they shall not look in vain. We heard it said years ago, "Go West young man" but we never took it seriously until a short time ago. Having consented to consider the matter of taking charge of the work of the Christian Church here, and then making it a subject of prayer, the way seemed to us to be opened by our Father for us to come. And without a sense of His guidance I am sure that we could not have felt free to start so far away. We left Norfolk, Va., at 4:20 p. m., January the 14th, and reached Madrid Wednesday evening, January 6th, about 8:30. When we left the sea-side it was warm and spring-like, but we had not traveled very long before we felt a change in the temperature and when we reached Chicago, Wednesday morning, we found the thermometer registering seven degrees below zero and a brisk wind was blowing from the lake. It was the coldest weather we had ever felt. But we enjoyed the scenery along the route and feel very thankful that we had a safe journey. The ground was covered with snow when we got here and it is still covered and there is no prospect now of its leaving. We have had but very little sunshine since we came, but they tell us that it does shine here and we feel sure that even now behind the clouds it is still shining. Some might think that these conditions might be unfavorable for long-sickness, but we did not come here for that and besides we would have to be very ungrateful to get home-sick when the people here have been so very kind and nice to us. For while it has been very cold without, we have been given a very warm reception by the people here and this has served to keep away the thought that we are so far away. We were given a reception last Saturday evening in the church parlors. All the pastors in town had been invited and were present. Each one made a short address assuring us of the good wishes of their people for us in our new field of work. After these speeches and a good hearty handshaking the ladies of the church served lunch. We were glad for these expressions of good will and kindly feeling on the part of our church here and the other churches in town. We had about one hundred at the first preaching service, though the thermometer was below zero. I find also a good Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor. These have been kept going all the while, although there has been no pastor here for about six months. We are now very comfortably situated in a new parsonage just across the street from the church. We have a good house of worship here and a church enrollment of 286, but about 75 of these are non-resident members. We are trusting to be used of the Lord in the work here.

The blessings of the Lord rest upon His people everywhere.

Berkley Letter.

I have often heard Dr. Staley say that the Suffolk Christian church was the best church in the world to him. The longer I remain at the Main St. Christian Church the more convinced am I of the same feeling in my heart for the brethren here. They are surely good to me. Of course, poundings are not in order in my case, but I have every reason to feel thankful to the good people who remembered me with gifts of gold and other valuable things during Christmas. I am truly thankful to the Ladies' Aid Society, The Young People's Auxiliary and Bro. John Cuthrel, each of whom presented me a five dollar gold-piece, and others who remembered me with many useful presents at Christmas. May the Giver of all good and useful gifts remember them through the coming years.

The work here grows more encouraging. Our Christmas entertainment surpassed any we have had in years. The program consisted of a Cantata in two parts, which, when begun, moved on like a river to the close. There were no hitches, no stoppings to announce the next thing on the program which more or less spoils the effect of most public entertainments. The church was filled in due time and many turned away for the want of room. The children were thoroughly under control and Miss Elizabeth Pierce proved her splendid talent to martial and discipline nervous and impatient children to act in rhythmic unison to a desired end. Mrs. W. Spence presided at the piano to the delight of all. These ladies had borrowed a piano for the occasion, but the school has since decided to purchase it, which with the service of Miss Laura Garrett who has been asked to act as pianist, will greatly improve our Sunday-school music.

The ladies of the church appointed a committee of two, Miss Margaret Tatem and Mrs. Lee Mercer to get a new pulpit set. They have installed a beautiful pulpit set, including a Communion table, which is beautifully engraved with the text—"In Remembrance of Me." Thus the improvements go on, and it is desired that they can continue till some day we may have the needed room and apparatus for progressive church work.

It was my privilege to be with Bro. A. W. Andes in a revival at Mt. Olivet, Va. from Jan. 13 to 22. But the weather was so severe that we could not have the results possible and with real sadness I had to return before the meeting closed. I trust many will follow the example of those nine who accepted Christ before I left.

M. L. Bryant, Pastor.

New Lebanon.

Third Sunday in Jan., with Bro. Jones, its pastor, I visited that part of the Conference. My sojourn was with Bro. Otis R. Cokes where I met his kind wife, his devoted mother, who is a splendid Christian lady, and his sister, Mrs. Olivia C. McKenzie, of Cambridge, Md. That is a very devoted and interesting Christian family, entertaining with ease and making you feel nearly at home. On my homeward way a day was taken in Wakefield with Rev. C. C. Jones. To him and his splendid wife I am thankful for special favors. Bro. Jones is a young man of good parts and is already doing much good on his charge by his winsome manners and helpful sermons.

Here I met Prof. J. J. Lincoln, principal of Wakefield High School. With his polite manners and scholarly attainments he will no doubt succeed at Wakefield. He has a fine school building with many modern improvements—several teachers and a full school. He looks fine and reminded me of a college president. A few years ago when I preached in the Valley of Va. he was a promising boy. He ought to be good and useful as he was reared in the most beautiful and matchless valley in the world. I remember him pleasantly for special favors shown me in North Carolina as well as his once lovely Virginian home.

Waverly, Va.

Christmas-tide was celebrated by the Waverly Sunday-school on Christmas night. The primary classes and the church choir entertained. There were about four hundred people present. A most delightful program was rendered which seemed to please the whole audience. Much credit is due the good ladies who trained the little children to do their parts so well. A beautiful tree stood in holy significance in the north corner of the auditorium, laden with many gifts for the children; it being too small to bear them all, the floor was covered with the many pretty things the children eagerly coveted long before they could lay hold of them. When the program was completed, each member of the Primary and Intermediate classes drew for their prize. The prize which bore their corresponding number was their fortune. The pastor was not forgotten. He was presented with a handsome rug for his home, for which he is profoundly appreciative. All had a good time, feeling thankful for the privilege to celebrate the birth of Christ in such a manner.

Richland, Ga.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—This finds me busy with my work at Columbus, Ga. I have been somewhat delayed on account of sickness in my home. My brick work is done and the roof is on. I have my windows and doors ready to put in. I will begin the inside work next week. Hope to have it ready for service by the last of March. The panic has made it very hard for us to build. The panic is worse here now than it has ever been. There is but little money in circulation and it is driving a lot of merchants to the wall. We look for this better after awhile. I hope to give to the readers of the Sun a full detail of the work in a few weeks. Pray for us.

H. W. Elder.

BANNER CHURCHES.

In several of the Conferences, churches which meet all their financial obligations to Conference as tabulated in the report of the Committee on apportionments are denominated banner churches, and gain recognition as such in the Conference minutes. The payment of all apportionments is the minimum financial obligation in the minds of the committees, and the maximum ideal in the minds of the membership. Some conferences have succeeded in educating their membership to feel that failure to pay these apportionments is a gross neglect of duty and have induced the churches to come up in full and place the entire conference in the banner list.

The attainment of this ideal should be the lowest ideal of every pastor, every member, and every local church. The church should desire to be progressive in every department. Every member and minister should be progressive not only in sections; but should desire to see every department of the church express a progressive spirit by a progressive policy. Whenever the entire church sees that its life, growth, depends upon an organic, co-operative development of all departments together; each member and minister, layman, and local church, will not only rejoice in the progress of the several departments of the church, but will seek strenuously to promote the growth of each department for the greater wellbeing of the entire church. Then not only will the lower ideal of banner churches and banner conferences be attained, but higher standards will be raised, higher ideals conceived, and greater progress realized.

The practical problem for the conferences to solve is the realization of our present ideals, for present ideals realized are the stepping-stones to greater heights of glory to be yet attained.

The reason why present ideals are not realized is not lack of ability. The church is able really to do twice as much for the financial support of her enterprises as she is doing, but the failure is rather due to lack of method and education. Some systematic method of paying our church dues and obligations would soon solve the financial problem. It is just as much the duty of the church to pay as it is for it to pray. A praying church that is not a paying church would be an anomaly for praying always leads to paying our obligations, not only to our fellowmen, but also to God and his kingdom.

One systematic method would be for the minister or some committee appointed by him or the church conference to canvass the church membership and solicit each one to pay as largely as possible, not in terms of Conference assessments but in terms of the daily blessings that God has bestowed upon each individual. Before half of the members of the church shall have had opportunity to contribute to the payment of this moral and religious debt, the sum realized will have proved that conferences cannot set bounds to Christian obligations and councils cannot measure human consciences.

Another method that would work is the appointment of an all-day mission service early in the conference year, but not too early, so as not to give sufficient time to educate the people to expect something great, and work and pray for the realization of great things for God. Let sermons be preached on the duties and obligations of members of the church and Christian people to support all the enterprises of the church. Let the leading, loyal membership be seen before the special day and requested to commit themselves to their whole duty in Christian giving for that day. When the day comes, have a strong missionary sermon or address upon the supreme moral and Christian obligation of paying our debts to God for His manifold blessings to us, for the salvation of those who dwell in darkness and for those who serve in home and foreign field. When this is done, call for pledges and cash subscriptions until all have responded taking their names and amounts. When this is done take a free-will offering that all present may contribute, then give the subscriptions to a competent committee for collection before conference. Let this committee see all members who have not subscribed or paid something to the church for its support. Let the ideal be to raise as much as possible for the church, for God, for the salvation of the world, for the support of the faithful pastor, and especially for the blessing that it will afford the soul and spirit of the membership of the church and this will be the best possible preparatory service for a real revival of religion and the salvation of souls.

These plans would solve the practical problem of banner churches and enlarge the spirit, life and activity of the denomination, until every member and minister would rejoice at the greater progress and prosperity of the Church in all departments.

W. C. Wicker.

THANKS.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—Please allow me to express my gratitude to kind friends of Pleasant Ridge church for a box of nice and valuable articles of groceries on Christmas eve. To Sister Sallie Dunn, of Ingram, Va., for a nice Christmas turkey and to Sister Henry Austin for a bucket of nice honey. And to Bro. W. D. Wall and Sister M. E. Lillard, of Happy Home, for valuable presents. All these things from the above churches were blessings to my home.

How much good a few of the deeply interested members can do in various ways, and especially to their hard working pastors, who have to live on so small salary. The good Lord bless them.

S. B. Klapp, Pastor.

Greensboro, N. C.

Jan. 17th, 1909, in the presence of a few of their friends, at the home of the bride, W. D. Wall and Miss Mary E. Adkins were united in marriage by this writer. This was a beautiful, quiet marriage. Bro. Wall is the popular and splendid Supt of the Sunday-school at Happy Home church, and the bride one of the popular teachers in this school. We extend congratulations to the happy couple.

A MEDITATION.

What I have lost by birth, station and previous conduct is not mine to pine over or deplore. God put these upon me, or allowed them, that, by His grace I might be what I am. I am what I am, therefore, by God's hand and help and loving favor. I came to be this by God's grace. If I have not now advantages others have, advantages of birth, station, wealth, God made it so, and it is all right. I have repented of my folly, am now doing the best I can and God is doing, and has always done, the best He could for me, so we are working together and I am what you see me today by God's grace and favor. Only under such limitations as I imposed by folly and rebellion, this that you see me to be is the very best that God could do with and for me. If my lot is a hard, dull, tedious and trying one, God wanted it to be so, or allowed it, that He might reach me and so make me what I am today.

If I am doing the best I can, and even seem a failure to others, it is none of my fault, for I am what I am by the grace of God. Felix and Festus and Caesar thought Paul a bright fellow, but erratic, imprudent, unwise, and therefore a failure. That I, like Paul, was born out of my time, that I am the least among my fellows, that I did that before now of which I am ashamed, all this is with God, and I appear before you and you before me and each before the other, what we are today by the grace of God. God did not create me forty years ago and then let me go while He rested or slept. He has been working with, or for me in creation every moment since. My folly, my rebellion, my sin, kept me in the dust. These I have, by His loving invitation thrown on Him, and He has deached down now and lifted me up, placed my foot upon a rock, turned my face and my desires heavenward, and you see me today hating sin and loving righteousness, despising error and seeking truth, pursuing peace and avoiding contention. It was not this self that did that, but the grace of God, just that, and so, "By the grace of God I am what I am."

A DENOMINATIONAL DIFFERENCE.

The Christians did not begin as a separate people in order to add one more denomination to the already over crowded category of churches. That was not in the mind and heart of those who first called themselves Christians. There were already too many churches and creeds in the world, too much schism and division in the body.

To reduce this number, not increase it by one, to remove this division, not to deepen it, the Christian church came and began its career.

It was thought by our fathers, it is still believed by their sons, that the Bible as the revealed Word and will of God was sufficient in teaching and doctrine, as a basis for church organization and individual co-operation. On the basis of this Book men might enjoy the sweetest, broadest and truest fellowship. Let each believe what he might as to doubtful and disputed questions of the Book. There was enough, and to spare, of the things taught very accurately, definitely, and explicitly there about which men could agree. In this agreement they might be fellow-workers, and brethren united in a common, and most glorious cause. Wherein they disagreed they would be friends and wherein they agreed they would be brethren for the promotion of our heavenly Father's work in the world. The Book is large enough for a brotherhood like this. It was certainly all the disciples had when they were first formed into a body, and called themselves, or more likely were called, by divine appointment, Christians. History, experience and vital fact have not proven to these people that the Bible is not sufficient, that it is too narrow or too broad, too liberal or too exclusive for the whole family of God upon earth to stand upon as a book and rule of faith and practice.

How vain indeed the thought then that we were trying to be simply one denomination amongst a myrial of others, or that we were excluding others by adopting the all inclusive name Christian. We only wish, if it were our Father's will, that all his children, under heaven, might take the Book as their constant and daily rule of faith and practice, and let this unite them into a universal brotherhood of believers, and that they were content to wear, not an incidental or man-made name, but the name of the Captain of their salvation and their Redeemer—simply Christian. In the divinely given Book, and in the heavenly appointed name, there is sufficient ground for the fellowship of all believers and the co-operation of all God's children. Not one among many, but one for many, and sufficient for all, is the Church we cherish and the faith we teach.

ALEXANDER THE COPPERSMITH.

The expected has happened. We were just sure, have been sure for several years, that some man was going to take as his text Paul's words, "Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil," and preach a sermon that would tell. The man and the theme and the occasion came on a recent Sunday in Calvary Methodist church, New York and Dr. Goodell spoke the word. He declared, having taken the text named above, that he was able to state upon absolute certainty that there were in his collection baskets on the Sunday morning before "one thousand seven hundred coppers"—cents, pennies, brownies. Yes, Alexander the coppersmith had certainly done Dr. Goodell much evil. This same Alexander, or some other worker in copper, has done every other pastor, and the cause he represents, much evil.

As a rule—mark this—as a rule when an adult person puts a penny in the collection basket he does so because there was nothing smaller that he could put therein, or because he wanted to put something in from sheer pride, hoping no one would discover how small was the mite contributed. By the way, if the mites in the collection indicated the widows in the land this would certainly be a world of widows and orphans. Alexander the coppersmith hath done each of us much harm.

An Inexcusable Sin.—Of all senseless sins, and frivolous follies, put that of profanity down in the lead. Did anybody ever explain the cause, satisfaction or joy of swearing? Hardly. It is a sin without the first sign of an excuse. There is no sin as hard to account for as this of gratuitous and cold-blooded profanity. It butters no parsnips, wins no dimes, secures no prestige and satiates no appetite. Nearly every other sin has in view some temptation, passion, craving, appetite, or supposed gratification. Not so of swearing. Surely was he a sage, and speaking eternal truth who said a hundred years ago: "In profanity the devil is fishing for fools with an unbated hook."

And yet people, respectable, otherwise genteel, sane and sober people, indulge in profanity to an alarming extent. A Canadian paper writing on the subject recently thinks this silly and sinful habit on the increase both in Canada and in the United States. And then the paper adds: "You hear men ripping out horrible oaths and calling blood-curdling maledictions down on the heads of others in perfect cold blood and in their natural tone of voice, as if they were making a remark upon the weather. This evil practice is one of the worst blots upon a state of things otherwise free from many serious blemishes. We are a sober, law-abiding and, in some respects, an exemplary, but we are a swearing people. Profanity is everywhere in evidence where men congregate." All of which we fear is a truth, a shameful and deplorable fact. And the more is the pity, for profanity is a silly sin without even the shadow of an excuse.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

It is a surprising fact that the human race is moved more by the accidental and unusual occurrences than by the regular and normal experiences of time. Because of this universal fact men get wrong impressions of life and moral obligation. The Messina earthquake has awed the world and startled the nations. The death of two hundred thousand human beings, the destruction of so many millions of property, and the injury and destitution of a million souls, appalls the race, and awakens a charity before unknown in history. And now that Professor Jagger of Harvard University expresses the opinion that the earthquake in Messina is the forerunner of the greatest eruption Mount Etna has ever known, and that such eruption will come within a year and half, and that Manchester, N. H., Providence, R. I., and New York City are earthquake centers, we look into the future with trembling, if we believe in the Professor's predictions and statements.

Over against the earthquake disaster and the frightful prophecies of "Jagger" is the "white plague" in our own country, carrying away two hundred thousand a year and doing this quickly. We see a victim now and then of this disease ourselves. We watch the ravages of this quiet enemy as it does its work in some young life, and then we lay the flowers on the grave and forget it. What the earthquake does in a century the "white plague" does every year. The property which the earthquake destroys in a century, rum wastes every year. The lives that the earthquake injures and renders destitute in a century, drunkenness does every year. But disease and intemperance move on in their quiet course and do not appeal to many people. A century went by before the public mind and conscience were moved to great effort to put away drunkenness and consumption. Great organized effort is now directed against these enemies of the race and we may hope that these forces will work just as persistently and effectively for their removal as these have for human injury. A man on his bed in great pain from alcohol said to me: "I do not see why the good people have not put this thing down before now. There is nothing good in it. I have sold it, but I knew I was taking the man's money for nothing when I did it. I have drunk a lot of it, but it has done me no good." That is the testimony of those who see it from the side of gain and use. This is a sign of a clearer vision on this subject. Both sides are beginning to see the path of duty and want to walk therein. W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Yesterday was a balmy, spring-like day. All the Sunday-school and church services from which I have heard had large numbers present. The Temple school report something like 30 more present than the Sunday before.

At the service at the 3rd Church in the evening we had quite a number of visitors present, amongst the number several members of the Park Place Disciples Church. We were glad to have them worship with us. They held their service in the afternoon.

There is, and has been for many years, in Norfolk, a splendid spirit of good fellowship between the two denominations, none of the spirit of rivalry and antagonism that I am sorry to say, does exist in some cities where the two are working.

Rev. Alva M. Kerr of Dayton, O., preached for Bro. Ryan's people at the Temple at the morning service. I hear the sermon highly spoken of. Bro. Ryan preached at night having in the service a party of men from the navy—63 being present—four came forward for prayer and one united with the church.

At Rosemont in the afternoon Bro. Ryan reports a large congregation—filling the house.

Rev. J. W. Harrell, of Portsmouth is visiting different churches now in the interest of the building fund of the Portsmouth church. To that end he and Bro. Thompson of the 3rd Church will exchange pulpits next Sunday morning. I note that our Alabama brethren are planning to build a nice church at the enterprising little town of Wadley. This is a new town on the A. B. & A road, about fifteen miles west of Roanoke, a few miles from Beulah church at Truett, Ala. This little town has had a remarkable growth, less than two years old, little more than one year, in fact. It has a population of several hundred, a large number of stores, a great many substantial brick buildings, a bank, high school, etc. The town was located and laid out by the road, and is situated on a river with fine falls capable of immense water power, which have already been acquired by a manufacturing company. It is destined to be an important point for our people. I am glad they are preparing to go in and occupy the field, and not do as we, as a people, have so often done, wait until some one else has done that and then come in on the edge some where, and make a comparative failure. I am trusting for and expecting to see results from the Wadley Christian church, for with a man to lead them, who will stay in the grove on a church yard with a young man all night and help him pray through to victory, they are bound to succeed and such is the record of Rev. G. D. Hunt, the man behind this movement.

J. W. Manning.

AN URGENT CALL.

The outside of the 2nd Christian Church, Columbus, Ga. is completed. The inside work is in progress. We are planning to finish by April. The seats have been ordered. My windows are on the ground. We are making a heroic effort to complete by April. Several contractors say the church, when finished, will be well worth $8,000, or $10,000. The money panic has made it doubly hard on us to raise money. We are having to incur a debt on this account. Yet we hope to raise the money to pay out by spring. I have called on the people of the Christian church before and have not called in vain. I don't believe I will call in vain this time. We will have a beautiful auditorium with five Sunday-school rooms, two dressing rooms. We will seat the church with Opera chairs. These are $2.50 a piece.

Now, I am asking the good people of the Christian Church to come to our assistance in this hour of so great need. I will acknowledge all contributions in the Sun. Who will be the first to cheer us?

Yours in hope,

H. W. Elder.

On Sunday, Jan. 10, 1909, Mary Harman, who was born June 24, 1845, died in the triumphs of a living faith. Sister Harman had been a great sufferer for a number of years and death was a relief to her. Her husband, Manoh Harman, died about five years ago. In early life she had one sister and seven brothers, but now she leaves only two brothers as the nearest of kin to mourn her departure. At the age of 63 years, 6 months, and 16 days, sister Harman was called from her earthly career, but her influence for good still lives. She united with Joppa Christian Church soon after the Civil War under the preaching of Rev. A. J. Kibler.

Funeral was preached at Joppa and the remains laid to rest in the family burying ground near by.

MONTANA.

Cowan.—The Christian Church at this place is without a pastor at this time. Several of the most active members have moved or are about to move to Missouri, cutting down the working force and the pastoral support. Others have backslidden, and "walk no more with us," and still others have withdrawn or talk of withdrawing. The vicissitudes of pioneer life always affect the regularity and performance of membership, and all denominations have felt the effects of removals, etc. Added to these things, last year was one of severe drought in northern Montana, and the crops were practically a failure. This compelled me to leave home and go to North Dakota, where I obtained employment, and for this reason I resigned the pastorate of the church. I have continued to preach here, however, as opportunity offered, and during my stay in North Dakota made an arrangement with Bro. Lyman Brough, of Surry, to come up and hold a meeting with us. He came in December, and we commenced the meeting on Christmas Day, and continued it for six days and nights, holding service twice a day. Bro. Brough is a strong preacher and holds up a high standard. He preaches holiness as a second definite work of Divine grace, received by faith subsequent to regeneration. This is a doctrine that is very much opposed in many quarters upon one plea or another, some claiming to have received it all at conversion, others that there is no such thing as entire sanctification, or holiness, in this life, still others that it is attained by gradual process, and many reject it because, as they allege, it is a disturber of the peace of the church and leads to divisions. But holiness, or sanctification, is a Scripture term and must be accounted for. No other accounting seems to me to be so reasonable, scriptural and true to Christian experience as that sanctification is that act of God's grace whereby man is delivered from all sin and made holy in heart; that this act is subsequent to regeneration, is instantaneous, and is witnessed by the Holy Spirit; it is received by faith in the atoning blood of Christ, and its immediate effect is the eradication from the heart of the carnality, or inbred sin which has abode there since birth, and the filling with the Holy Spirit, who comes to abide for ever. This experience is given to God's believing children, who have made a complete consecration of themselves and their all to God. This writer has believed and preached this doctrine for nearly two years, and Bro. Lyman Brough was the human instrument who, indirectly, led me into this experience. I say indirectly, because he was three hundred and fifty miles away, and I did not hear a sermon by him or any other man on the subject at that time. But he was preaching holiness in North Dakota, and was being persecuted for it, and was finally dismissed from the church without a fair trial because of his holiness doctrine. When I heard of the summary proceedings against him, he having been a friend of mine of some years standing, I immediately entered a vigorous protest against the action of the church, and demanded for him a fair trial, which was refused. Then I saw that I must examine his doctrine, to ascertain whether it was in harmony with the Scriptures, the only standard of authority in the Christian Church, and the more I searched the Scriptures on this subject, and examined my own heart, the more was I convinced that not only was the doctrine of holiness scriptural, but that its acceptance meant not so much a taking sides with Brough, as a getting right with God. I saw there was what Dr. Carradine calls "a dark something within," called by the Apostle Paul, "the carnal mind," the "old man," the "body of sin," etc., and to which the Apostle John refers when he says, "If we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin." At this time my attention was drawn to Heb. 7:25, "Wherefore he is able also to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by him, seeing that he ever liveth to make intercession for them." And I drew near by faith with a full surrender to God, and realized that "sin hath no more dominion over me." I felt also the peace which passeth understanding and the joy of the Holy Ghost. Day by day I realized that I was kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation, and that I had victory over the world, the flesh and the devil. I immediately began to preach and testify to the great things God had done for my soul, thinking that my people would rejoice with me. On the contrary, they began to criticize and object, saying, "We got all this at conversion," "We don't believe there is such a thing," "We think he has backslidden and been converted again," and similar utterances. As I continued to preach and testify to this grace, the opposition intensified until I was practically forbidden to preach on the subject of holiness. It was about this time that I resigned the pastorate of the church.

There was, of course, no other minister here to take my place, and so the church had no preaching during my absence in North Dakota, but maintained their Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor. In the meantime they had been doing some reading and thinking, and upon my return listened the more readily to the truth as preached by Bro. Brough. But it was evident that carnality was dying hard, as some became angry and ran from the meetings, and others wished to argue the case with the evangelist. But while Bro. Brough would answer questions, he would engage in no contention, but preached and prayed as one who is answerable to God. He is a man of prayer, and has frequently received assurance that some for whom he prayed would be given him in conversion or in sanctification. And God gave us victory in this case. Some ten or twelve testified to having received pardon or sanctification, some of them both. I am preaching the same old truth of "holiness unto the Lord," and know that God is with me and will be my stay in this work. H. G. Cowan.

THE PROBLEM OF PAIN.

One of the questions most frequently directed to Christians by unbelievers is, "Why, if God is all-powerful and all-loving, does he permit sin and suffering to exist in His World?" Even some church members find it difficult to put into words a convincing answer to this question. For all such, Appleton's magazine in its February number, publishes a simple and soul-satisfying explanation of "The problem of pain, and the mystery of evil," from the pen of Rev. Charles F. Aked.

"While the difficulties of belief may be great," says the Appleton article, "the difficulties of unbelief are immeasurably greater. Belief without understanding is far more reasonable than understanding without belief, but belief with understanding is best of all and is perfectly feasible for the Christian who gives earnest consideration to the subject. The difficulty is that in discussing fundamental questions of religious belief we do not take into account certain absolute limitations on the working of finite minds in thought. These limitations do exist. For instance, we cannot conceive of a window being open and shut at the same time, or of a valley without hills enclosing it for the reason that one condition presupposes the other. Likewise we cannot conceive of the existence of virtues and good qualities without predicting their opposites. That is not to say that such a thing is impossible, but that it is impossible to moral beings with finite minds.

"The very nature of man as God has created him implies the possibility of sin, disease and death. One of the evils of the world that brings suffering and misery upon the innocent as well as the guilty is the working of heredity. Yet heredity is at the same time one of the greatest sources of blessings of mankind. We cannot have heredity and not have it. In other words, we cannot enjoy its good without suffering from its evil.

"The whole criticism of pain and evil inevitably comes back to a questioning of God's wisdom in creating man and the world, and nobody yet has been able to suggest an improvement upon God's handiwork although many have tried to do so. If we ask for a world of life without feeling, without capacity for pain or pleasure, we would have the condition that exists in the vegetable kingdom and the critic is reduced to the position of declaring that he would rather be a cabbage than a man. If we ask for a world of feeling without capacity for sin we would have the state of affairs that exists in the animal kingdom and the critic must admit that he would prefer to be a horse or a dog rather than a man."

The February number of Appleton's magazine throws new light upon the character of Lincoln in an article by Major-General Grenville M. Dodge telling of Lincoln's visit to Council Bluffs, the most westerly point of the country that he ever visited, and of the writer's later association with the great President during the Civil War. The second installment of Florence Morse Kingsley's great religious novel "The Star of Love" in which Queen Esther is the central figure, bears out the fascinating promise of the opening chapters. Rev. Charles F. Aked contributes a simple and straightforward explanation of "The Problem of Pain and the Mystery of Evil" that will prove intensely interesting to all Christian readers. James H. Gannon, Jr., gives a dramatic picture of what would happen if the Stock Exchange were to close tomorrow and a delightful variety of fiction and fact stories make up an unusually interesting number.

draw from its members what they have gained from individual study,—his purpose being to make practical application of deductions growing out of the lesson. Such method is known as the Lesson Discussion Plan, which makes the class far more interesting.

With the introduction of the discussion plan emphasis is unconsciously placed on the three rules laid down in God's own word for its study: "Search" "Meditate," "Compare." Out of these three injunctions would naturally come "discussion," the only way for exercising judgment and discussion which the lecture plan expresses. Self-expression is important to thought activity. It shows a man his own logical and psychological deficiencies which is a stimulant to greater activity.

Then, too, contact of one personality with other personalities in an enthusiastic discussion makes thought more clear cut and incisive. As Macaulay says, "Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely." In a free discussion whatever God has given one in private study of the lesson may be compared with what has been given to some one else. In such way the comparison may prove a seed from which a beautiful thought may grow. In addition to an exchange of truths of the lesson we receive the benefit of the interchange of personality, a medium through which we give and receive the very indwelling Spirit of God.

The existence of the organized class is not a selfish one. The one recognized function that stands out most boldly is the neglected work it most properly does for others. In this connection its important task is to interest the entire American manhood and womanhood in religious things, to awaken the public conscience and demonstrate the peril of forgetting God.

After all, the thing to which class organization should tend is the deepening of spiritual life.—"comparing spiritual things with spiritual" sums up the whole matter. If the lesson should begin to drag, as it sometimes might do, the teacher should drive home some spiritual thought, something that will draw the mind back to Him who said, "The things I speak unto you they are spirit and they are life."

A spiritual awakening will set forth a collection of laws and principles of life,—especially will it reveal the laws of the spiritual world. "Give and it shall be given unto you," "He that watereth shall be watered." One never tastes of the water of life except in giving it to others, nor does one ever give it to others unless he himself is thirsty for it. It is thus that we enter into a realization of spiritual things, and thus it is that a union with God and heaven is established.

Let us, members of the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday-school Convention, spare nothing in adopting class organization at the earliest possible date. Other denominations are finding that it is one of the most vital pieces of machinery in their Sunday-school. There is no reason why the same should not be true in our case. We will find upon experimentation that the classes will swell, that the church membership will increase, that the saying of Christ, "He that shall confess me before men him will I confess before my Father and the holy angels," will be vitalized. In no other way can hearts be trained to search for truth and mouths be opened to confess what they have found than by co-operative lesson teaching which is made possible through The Organized Class Movement whose "purpose is the world for Christ," whose "means is the Word of God."

BY THE WAY.

Accepting an invitation from Johnson's Grove Southampton, Va., to deliver a lecture at a Christmas entertainment, I went on the Virginia Road to Sedley, a station near the church. The S. S. S. railroad crosses the Virginia at that place and the company has secured forty acres of land on which to build a town. This is just in a few hundred feet of the place where I first saw the light of day some—years ago. In Sedley I stayed for a while visiting friends, especially my aged and only sister. One afternoon as the sun shone out in his winter beauty and splendor, she and I strolled down the way to the old home—the home of our childhood's sunny days, but Oh, how changed was every thing, a new county road on one side and a new railroad on the other side of the dear old spot where loved ones used to be waiting, watching, and listening for my nimble footsteps. Emotions too deep to tell thrilled and filled me as I gazed with intense feelings upon the dear old place and thought so tenderly and fondly of the eternal past. Words are but feeble instruments to express my feelings on that memorable visit. All nature seemed to hold a solemn stillness as I looked down the way of time. The voices which used to encourage and welcome me had long since ceased to sound their sweet melody unto my delighted ears. It is so difficult to keep back the falling tear when the mind thinks such thoughts as these. Hamilton said: "The old look back in memory, the young look forward in hope." I could not help looking both ways—back and forth as I reviewed the surroundings. Those loving ones left me a good legacy—not a rich one—but a good one. They impressed upon my young mind and heart honesty and truth and taught me as well as they knew how to live the beautiful life, and impressed upon me daily to live a life hid with Christ in God. Those early impressions have helped me wonderfully on life's eventful pilgrimage.

Passed part of the time with my dear friend, J. W. Johnson, who kept me smiling and laughing mingled with a few unseemly tears as he recalled the past with his great mind and vivid imagination. He has been a ready man, and with his unbounded memory and large store of information is able to entertain any one in a most delightful and becoming way.

To Bros. John Joyner, Robert Beaton and several other friends, I am under special obligations for kind words and favors. Gladly shall I remember my last visit to them and of their devotion to the work. J. T. Kitchen.

A TRUE STORY.

Dear Children:—Your friend, Uncle Millard, is yet alive, and, although he is nearing his 80th birthday anniversary, he feels as young in spirit as a boy of 15.

And why should we ever feel old

At heart, or in spirit and love,

If we're sure when life's story is told,

We'll dwell with the ransomed above?

I have been very much interested today in reading a story, in the Michigan Christian Advocate, entitled “Mildred's Resolution.” Now, Mildred is a little eight-year old girl, living here in Portland, and the story is true. I shall not give it to you in full, as the grandma of Mildred wrote it, but only enough of it for you to learn the lesson it teaches. The story in substance is as follows:

It was the night after New Year's when as Mildred was curled up in her mama's arms, they were having one of their delightful evening talks.

Much had been said about Christmas and Santa, etc., when all at once the little girl said: “Mama, what is a resolution?”

“A resolution? Why do you ask, my dear?”

“Well,” said Mildred, “you know that yesterday you had a long table full of guests to dinner, sister and I were at a little table in the corner, and when you were through with the meal, you sat and talked about resolutions. Do tell me what a resolution is.”

“My dear little girlie,” said mama, “when persons make up their minds they will do something that they have not been used to doing, or have tried to do and failed; when they make up their minds very firmly and really mean to carry it out, they call that a resolution.”

For a few moments Mildred was silent, and when she lifted her brown eyes to mama she said: “And if they should fail to keep it, what then, mama?”

Clasping the child more tenderly in her arms, she said, “That would be very sad, my dear, and there would be only one way to do: ask God to forgive you and begin right over again.”

“Do you think I am too little to have a resolution, mama?”

“No,” said she, “but you must be very careful and thoughtful in making one, so as not to fail in keeping it.”

A little later when taken to her room and prepared for bed, little Mildred added to: “Now I lay me,” the petition: “Please help Mildred to have a resolution, and help Mildred to keep it.”

Several days passed by and each evening with the good night kiss, would come the words: “I haven't found it yet, mama.”

The holidays were over and school opened, but the thought of a resolution was yet in Mildred's mind. In her room was a girl named Nora. She was much older than the other pupils, not very bright nor agreeable. The pupils as a class had grown to be rude to her, so she had no real friends. The 3rd night after school commenced, when Mildred had her good night kiss, she threw her arms around her mama's neck and said: “Is a resolution something hard to do?” The mama answered: “Yes my dear, and blessed are they if they do them.” “Then, mama,” said Mildred, “I think I have most got one.”

The next day was a trying one for Nora. The scholars treated her very rudely, pulled her hair, hid her lunch box, and did many other disagreeable things.

When school closed at night they were ready to continue the frolic, when little Mildred stepped to Nora's side and taking her arm, said to the others: “You ought to be ashamed of yourselves. She can't help being as she is—and your treating her as you do does not help her, but makes her worse.”

Then arose a shout of laughter and ridicule. When it subsided, Mildred raised her head very high and said: “I do not care what you say to me, or how you laugh. I have got a resolution, and I am going to be Nora's friend,” and she walked home with her.

It was a tired but determined little girl who sprang into mama's arms a half hour later, and burst into tears on mama's neck. She told what an experience she'd had and that “she did not know that a resolution would be so hard to have—but she had got one and meant to keep it.”

Then with a sweet kiss her mama said “Be brave my little daughter; by doing the right, one by one different scholars will come to your aid and evil will be overcome, and Nora will be helped to be a happier and better girl. God bless you, my little girl. Many of mama's guests that New Year's day could well learn a lesson from you.”

Uncle Millard.

Portland, Mich., Jan. 16, 1909.

Elon College, N. C., Jan. 20, 1909.

My Dear Children and Friends:

Bright and beautiful this January day, as we begin our report for 1909. If the year shall be as happy as the day is beautiful we shall have a glorious year's work. The Band has done a noble work in the past, and now the indications point to a larger work in the future. We have now reached that point in our work that we are feeding and clothing orphan children; developing young manhood and young womanhood; building citizenship; making possible the higher attainments of life for those who otherwise would not reach them.

We are planning great things for the Corner in 1909. We must have in cash this year $5,000.00! Let every one lend a helping hand. We start out with a nice report.

Glad to hear from our faithful and liberal cousins the Vincent children; Suffolk, Va., Sunday-school makes liberal round for January, with Berea a fine following. The Hagerstown, Ind. S. S. and first Christian Church, Pattersville, Mass extend their sympathy and help to us in our work with $3.00 each. Bro. Johnson, Register of Deeds, Alamance Co. starts off early with $5.00 check for Jan., 1909. He says, "Will send check each month"—think how liberal that is! Bro. Carlton, of Durham, did that way in 1908 with a special $5.00 for good measure. Brethren, how does that strike you? Who else will begin and thus furnish food and clothing and education for an orphan child—at $5.00 per month?

The following donations have been received:

Mrs. J. M. Bryant, Liberty Spring, Va., lot of clothing.

We are grateful for all these gifts and cash that help us in meeting the expenses of the Orphanage and hope for 1908 great results and am ready and willing to use ourselves in any way for the success of the Orphanage.

We welcome Uncle Millard who comes again with a nice letter and hope all will read and enjoy. Uncle Millard's life must be full of happiness as he always writes something bright and that will do the children good. We guess he loves children. Come often.

Yours loyally,
Uncle Jim.

Zunie, Va.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little boy fourteen months old. This is my thanksgiving offering.

Be sure, little man, to write to the corner every month this year. Tell mama not to forget.

dine for January. Uncle Jim, I had a nice time Christmas. I went to Randolph to visit grandpa and grandma and visited my sister that lives near there. Old Santa Claus came to see me at sister's and at home too, so you just ought to see how many nice presents I got. I got three nice dolls and lots of other things. We had a nice tree at our church. Brothers Ollie and Claudie say they can't write any more as they are going to school and it takes all they can get to buy books, tablets and pencils, but I am going to write until I am a grown girl if I should live to be a grown young lady. Uncle Jim, you just ought to hear me sing. I am learning to sing alto. I like to sing.

I close with best wishes to you and the cousins.

The dear Santa seems to have forgotten no one near us children, and I am glad you had such a nice time.

Holland, Va., Jan. 11, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am seven years old today and we send ten dollars for Jack, Will, Harvey and myself. I hope you and everybody at the Orphanage had as good a time Christmas as we did.

I love dearly to go to school. Mama says I'm too young to stay all day, but shall be glad when I can stay all day like Jack and Will.

Your little niece,
Elizabeth Vincent.

Delighted to hear from you again, children, and also to receive your nice offering. Let us again get your welcome letters that used to come so often.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A Collision at Sea.—Many of us read in the daily papers with deep regret and interest, of the collision between the two ocean liners, the Florida and the Republic, off Nantucket, Mass., Saturday, Jan. 23, but it is doubtful if any of us, from these dispatches, realized vividly what this catastrophe really was. Dr. James M. Buckley, editor of The New York Christian Advocate, was aboard the Republic Friday afternoon just before it steamed out of Boston harbor, bidding farewell to Dr. Goucher who was going as a missionary to Egypt. So Dr. Goucher was aboard the Republic at the time of the collision and was returned on the Baltic with other passengers to New York. From conversation with him and several other passengers aboard the ship, and after "having read closely more than a hundred columns of reports and communications relating to the destruction of the Republic," Dr. Buckley gives a description and a picture of being "Saved by a Great Deliverance" such as we have not seen elsewhere. Remember that the Republic was a great and magnificent passenger vessel having held for many years the record of being the fastest passenger boat out of Boston harbor. She was 570 feet long, 67.8 feet wide and of 15,400 tons displacement. The Florida is a new ship 381.4 feet long, 48 feet broad and had a 3,231 tonnage.

Dr. Buckley writes: "The great steamship, with 238 first-class passengers and 211 steerage passengers, as well as supplies for the United States battleship fleet in the Mediterranean, left promptly on time at three o'clock on Friday afternoon. The objective point was Alexandria, Egypt. About 5:30 o'clock on Saturday morning, when the Republic was 178 miles east of the Ambrose Lightship, which is at the entrance of New York Harbor, at a point twenty-six miles southeast of the Nantucket Lightship, which guards the Nantucket shoals, she was struck a series of glancing blows by the steamship Florida, of the Floyds-Italiano line, bound from Italy to New York. The Florida is only about half the size of the Republic. The officers on the Republic's bridge say the other vessel, looming in the mist ahead, bore down upon them, and the next moment they struck amidships on the starboard side. The Republic's side plates were torn asunder by the sharp prow of the Florida; iron and wood were rent apart and the steel-clad bow bored its way into the Republic's engine room. Immediately it backed out again and staggered off out of sight into the fog. Instantly many thousand gallons of water plunged through the hole, extinguishing the fires. The engine-room force, driven out, hurried up the ladders to the decks. In three minutes the electric lights were out, the crew stopped, and the fog whistle—which had been blowing all night was silenced. Instantly, from the bridge, the crew were called to quarters and the collision bulkheads closed. The Nantucket Lightship previously mentioned is fifty miles from shore, so that the vessel was then more than seventy miles from the nearest land, and there was already water enough in the hold to sink the steamer unless the bulkheads held. The only hope of securing aid in that impenetrable fog was by means of wireless telegraphy. The operator was engaged in sending a message when the collision occurred, and soon from the masthead of the Republic a message went out telling every electric ear within 200 miles, as "concentric circles" of little waves spread from a spot in the water" in which a stone is dropped, that the Republic needed aid."

As a result of this wonderful wireless telegraphing a fleet of five ships in different parts on far distant seas caught the cry of distress from the Republic and faced about, making for the distressed ship, at full speed. The first to arrive on the scene was the Baltic which had caught the wireless message when entering New York harbor, and facing about immediately, reached the scene of the disaster at 3 o'clock Saturday p. m. The work of transferring passengers began at 11 o'clock Saturday night, with ten boats, each capable of carrying ten passengers, the vessels lying 400 feet apart. The work went on all night and until ten o'clock Sunday a. m., till the last passenger was transferred.

Tugs took the fast sinking Republic in tow, hoping to find a soft resting place on some shoal that she might be salvaged, but this was impossible. "The Republic had received her death wound." Early Sunday evening the floating palace, whose bow had been slowly pointing upward, went down in forty fathoms of water, leaving the two heroic officers adrift among the wreckage from which the cutter's boats soon rescued them."

"Saved by a great deliverance." This is the greatest tribute to, and triumph of, wireless telegraphy yet known. When you go to count the world's wonders and man's greatest invention, do not forget wireless telegraphy.

Decrease of Ministers.—Recent statistics given out by the Census Bureau bring home, to the thoughts of sober people, certain deplorable facts as touching the matter of decreasing number of those entering the ministry. The churches through their conferences, and conventions have said much of this decrease. Many may have thought that churches were unnecessarily alarmed. But Census figures certainly show the cause of this alarm and fully justify the fear expressed in church councils.

By the figures recently given out, Dr. H. K. Carroll, Superintendent of the Census says that the figures of 1906 show the increase of ministers to be 4,301. Now two years later, in 1908, the increase in the number of ministers was 2,835, or a falling off in two years of 1,466 in the number of those entering the ministry.

This is the fact that must be faced. Young men are turning their attention to other callings than that of the ministry. Either the ministry is too hard, or secular occupations are more lucrative and more inviting. Seek the cause in what you may, the fact is what stuns and stares. There was never such a demand for ministers. But the supply decreases instead of increases.

HOW BILLY PAID THE PRICE.

Rev. H. G. Cowan.

He was known as "Hobo Billy," according to the custom of the frontiersmen in giving nicknames to each other from some characteristic, real or fancied. It is probable that he never was a "hobo" for any considerable time, but he was a gambler and pursued his business at the Black Hills in the early days; he afterwards punched cattle on the Belle Fourche and the Little Missouri, clerked in a company store while a new railroad was being constructed through the Bad Lands and the wild country beyond, and finally settled down to the quieter life of a homestead rancher on the Milk River. It was here that we became acquainted with him, nearly five years ago. He was known as a hard case, and from his habits of life the church members in the community seem to have considered him a hopeless case. But a little more than three years ago his wife began to attend our meetings in the school house, on Cottonwood Creek, and soon asked to be received as a member of the church. She had been "a woman in the city which was a sinner," but like that other one of whom the Scripture speaks, who came to Jesus with repentance and poured her tears and her perfume upon his person, she came with repentance towards God and with faith towards the Lord Jesus, and testified to the forgiveness of her sins. But "Hobo Billy" would not attend the church with his wife until a little more than a year ago, when he, too, was led to the Savior in our revival meeting, and thenceforward for some time they led exemplary Christian lives.

But the preaching of holiness or entire sanctification seems to have become distasteful to them, and they talked of going to another church some miles away. They were at this time like thousands of church members all over the world who have really been regenerated and baptized with water, but have not received the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and are subject to pique and passion and pride, "sometimes up and sometimes down," today sinning and tomorrow repenting, walking hand in hand with the world and not noticing that they are being led astray by the devil. If it is only for this that we preach the gospel and get people into the church, then we and they are of all men most miserable. While the gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation we should insist upon salvation from all sin, both outward and inward, from the sin nature as well as from actual transgression. But there are many church members and preachers who resent this kind of preaching, and wish to be left alone to get angry and jealous, exhibit pride and avarice, defile themselves with tobacco and liquor, and take part with the world in questionable sports at their own sweet will, and then expect to take the communion, pay their subscriptions to the church, and be rated as members in good standing. But the Word of God says, "Be ye holy, for I am holy;" "this is the will of God, your sanctification," and, according to Peter, the Holy Spirit's baptism cleanses the heart by faith. It was this that I preached and testified to as a personal experience, and it was this that many, including "Hobo Billy" and his wife, said they didn't understand nor believe.

But some holiness literature was placed in their hands about this time, including Carradine's "Old Man," Wood's "Perfect Love," etc., and by reading which they gained a deeper insight into the possibilities of divine grace and the power of God to save to the uttermost. Soon afterwards I received a letter from them, asking my pardon for having said and thought hard things against me for preaching sanctification. Then came Bro. Lyman Brough, from North Dakota, and held a meeting with us, and among the first to bow at the altar for sanctification was "Hobo Billy" and his wife, and, bless God, they soon prayed through to victory.

And then it would appear that they had "counted the cost" and were ready to "pay the price." The first thing "Hobo Billy" did was to go home and burn his pipe and tobacco, and he has not returned to that idol since. Then he brought out his gambler's outfit, more than one dozen boxes of loaded dice and other tools of the gambler's trade, worth altogether about two hundred and fifty dollars, all of which he had manufactured and held for sale, and for which there was an active demand in spite of the stringent anti-gambling laws of the state, and dumped the whole outfit into the stove, where he made sure that the fire did its work. Some people may call him foolish, and even some professing Christians will likely suggest that he might have sold these things for a large sum of money and given it to the poor, if he did not need it himself. But the sanctified man believed that these things were the tools of the devil and that they had formerly led to his ruin, and while they were in his power he would put them where they could do no one else any harm. He had surrendered to God, to love and serve him only, and the idols which he had formerly served must be destroyed.

We are reminded here of a scene in Ephesus a long time ago, of which an old book speaks: "Many also of them that had believed came, confessing, and declaring their deeds. And not a few of them that practised magical arts brought their books together and burned them in the sight of all; and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver. So mightily grew the word of the Lord and prevailed." Acts 19:18-20.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

Inasmuch as Rev. S. A. Howell, Newport News, Va., will soon sail for Georgetown, British Guinea, to organize some mission work there and at other points, and is appealing to the brotherhood for assistance in defraying his expenses and for literature for the missions, I take pleasure in saying, I have known Rev. S. A. Howell for many years and deem him worthy of the confidence of our people. He is a leader in his race, a man of ability, character, and deep piety, and thoroughly imbued with the principles of the Christian church. I believe that any contribution for this purpose will be a good investment.

BOOKS.

I want books, not to pass the time, but to fill it with beautiful thoughts and images, to enlarge my world, to give me new friends in the spirit, to purify my ideals and make them clear, to show me the local color of unknown regions, and the bright stars of immoral truth.

I wish to go abroad, to hear new messages, to meet new people, to get a fresh point of view, to revisit other ages, to listen to the oracles of Delphi, and drink deep of the springs of Pieria. The only writer that can tell me anything of real value about my familiar environment is the genius who shows me that, after all, it is not familiar, but strange, wonderful, crowded with secrets unguessed and possibilities unrealized.

The two things best worth writing about in poetry and fiction are the symbols of nature and the passions of the human heart. I want also an essayist who will clarify life by gentle illumination and lambent humor; a philosopher who will help me see the reason of things apparently unreasonable; a historian who will show me how people have risen and fallen; and a biographer who will let me touch the hand of the great and the good. This is the magic literature. This is how real books help to educate us in the school life.—Henry Van Dyke, D. D.

Give your life royally.

—Thomas Carlyle.

BRIDGE WHIST.

What do we know about bridge whist? Have we ever played a game? Have we ever seen a game played? Never. What do we know about the bubonic plague? Did we ever have it? Did we ever see a case of it? Never. What, then, do we know about it? Enough to keep away from it, and to advise others to do likewise. This is all that we know about bridge whist, enough to let it alone and advise others to do the same. It is not so fatal as the bubonic plague—it merely makes its victims useless. They are not worth killing. Of course, we mean those who have a malignant, chronic case of it. And there are such. Its ravages are mostly among the women. They seem peculiarly susceptible to it, especially society women, women who are not under the stern necessity of working, and who have no serious purpose in life. When women of this stripe are found in any considerable numbers, there bridge whist is sure to break out, and to assume a chronic type.

Looked at morally, there is nothing intrinsically wrong in bridge whist. Neither was there anything wrong in the barren fig tree. But there was nothing good in it, and this was its fatal undoing. The owner believed that a fig tree ought to bestir itself and do something. He planted it for this, and cultivated it for this. There is nothing good in bridge whist. A dozen ladies may play it day by day for weeks and months at a time, and nothing good results. They will be no better off at the end than they were at the beginning, either in body, mind or estate. They will simply wish to keep on playing. They will feel less disposed to do anything else, and perhaps less fitted to do anything else.

We know an old lady, upwards of eighty years of age, almost blind, who can do nothing but knit. Her eye-sight is so bad that she cannot knit fine lace, or do any other kind of fancy knitting. She can knit only plain, coarse white mitts. She finds some demand for these, and she spends her time knitting these. It is not a great occupation, but it beats bridge whist four to one. This octogenarian, poor and blind, is doing more with her little remnant of life than any four able bodied women are doing by giving themselves, with all diligence, to bridge whist.

Some married women fall victims to this plague. They have homes where their presence is constantly needed, where they could make themselves very useful. But afflicted with the whist rabies, they are restless. They are impatient to be at their club, and they rush through their domestic affairs, giving them a lick and a promise. Home-making is secondary, and domestic duties are growing more and more irksome. Husbands, good, honest, hard-working husbands, are sometimes neglected. Their comfort is not carefully looked after. They must take their chances for a scrappy dinner or a cold supper, if business detains them late. Bridge whist must be attended to. It has the right of way, and must not lag, though the heavens fall.

Some mothers fall victims to this plague. Then the children must get along the best they can in the circumstances. If either bridge whist, or the children, must be neglected, then it is all the worse for the children. They can be left to the tender care of nurses. That is all that nurses are fit for. They cannot play bridge whist. The children would be the better of a little more maternal care, but they can get along without it, whereas bridge whist would stop stock still without these mothers to keep it going.

As already confessed, we have no personal acquaintance with bridge whist; but we do have an extensive acquaintance with women, and we are fully persuaded that they are too good for bridge whist. We believe woman is the finest of all God's earthly workmanship. We are reluctant to put the angels much above her at her best. Cherishing such views about woman, we feel perfectly sure that God made her for some higher, nobler purpose than bridge whist. Had this been the end, He might have left out about three-fourths of the best ingredients. She would need no literary capacity, no artistic talent, no heart qualities, such as sympathy and love, none of that wonder-working tact for home-making, only gray matter enough to discern the difference between cards, and a memory something after the order of Blind Tom's, "only this and nothing more."—Editorial in Presbyterian Standard, Jan. 27, 1909.

THE NEW TRANSLATION.

The new translation of the Bible in various places discloses the honesty of purpose of the translators; the desire to reveal to the common reader the real meaning of the Bible writers. And though this desire does not always prevail, owing to doctrinal or provincial prejudice, still the honest desire is revealed now and then in little variations that are more convincing than if the subject matters were great.

I was reminded of these little nones-ties of the translators by the closing words of the lesson of this morning (Mat. 5:26) "Till thou have paid the last farthing;" where the translators carry over into the English the method of the Greek, although the old translation, "till thou hast paid," sounds more musically to one born to the English tongue. Here it is evident that the translators, by the change from hast to have, were trying to suggest to the English the mode of the Greek, and thereby some possible shading of the meaning of the writer they were translating. This is an admirable spirit.

And yesterday I noticed a similar case of the same purpose of the translators in small matters (in anything in this connection can be called small), revealed in Mark 6:24-25:

"And she went out, and said to her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptizer. And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou forthwith give me on a platter the head of John the Baptizer."

Here by the mother John is called "John the Baptizer;" and by the daughter, "John the Baptist." (In former and less accurate Greek Testaments the phrase in both cases is "John the Baptist.")

Inasmuch as we have been taught that the word Baptist, when applied to John, means baptizer, we naturally are curious to know why the translators used two words, when they unquestionably referred to the same person. Our curiosity is satisfied, when we look at the original of the best Greek, and notice that Mark used two constructions in the two sentences. And while the new translation is not absolutely literal, we can make no criticism: for a literal translation idiomatic English is difficult. Although "John the Baptizer" is not exactly equivalent to the Greek, to have rendered the Greek by the half-English phrase, "John the baptizing (one)" (somewhat suggestive of the Greek), would probably have conveyed to the English reader the thought of baptism as then continuing. Whereas, the idea of the writer is nearer that of the phrase, the baptizing John. And yet that is not wholly satisfactory. And even John that baptizes cannot be wholly accepted. Therefore the translators varied from the old translation, "John the Baptist," only enough to make the reader investigate for himself. They used the same device in the 14th verse.

This opens to the reader a field of conjecture, as to the origin of the phrase, "the Baptist," as applied to John. Possibly the older generation may have sometimes called him the baptizing John, for it was the daughter that changed the words of her brother from the baptizing John, to "John the Baptist."

But what I wished to call attention to, was the effort of the translators to be true to the Greek. This is very gratifying, when found in such little points.

He was at Long's Chapel, Alamance, last Sunday and is to be at Pleasant Hill, Chatham Co., next Sunday. The brethren hear him gladly.

—It was a real pleasure to hear Rev. J. W. Holt deliver messages of weight, merit and worth last Sunday, one in the Elon College chapel at 11 a. m., and another to the Young Men's Christian Association of the College at 2 p. m. Bro. Holt is a logical thinker, a forceful speaker and a thoroughly loyal and consecrated minister.

—We are in receipt of the following, for which we express thanks and extend felicitations: "Rev. and Mrs. P. T. Klapp request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Mrs. Minnie K. Janieson to Mr. Thomas T. Green, Wednesday, February the tenth, at half after two o'clock, Pittsboro, N. C. At Home March first, 221 West Morgan Street, Raleigh, N. C.

—Rev. J. D. Wicker of Sanford, has been for several days a visitor at the home of his son, Prof. W. C. Wicker, Elon College. Bro. Wicker is a successful and energetic pastor, thoroughly alive to all the interests of the church and a man full of zeal for the good cause which he represents. It was a pleasure to have him at Elon College for a season, for no pastor among us is more loyal to the College than is he.

—It was a great pleasure to have in our midst last week so many visiting brethren. The Sunday-school Board and the Christian Endeavor Board of the Southern Christian Convention met here and laid plans, among other items of interest, to call a Convention of young people to assemble at Elon College some time in June of this year. Prof. W. P. Lawrence, Corresponding Secretary, will tell Sun readers of the proposed convention at an early date.

—Writing Jan. 29, Rev. P. T. Klapp speaks thus of his work:

At New Hope last Sunday the 24th, my congregation was much smaller than usual on account of measles and pneumonia, though the Sunday-school has pulled on through with a small number, but in a short time they are expecting their usual number. The school is right interesting at this church. The neighbors of this community have built a beautiful Academy across the road in front of the church. We have raised the necessary amount of money and had the church building at Moore Union finished and a nice heater put in it.

—As is known to many Christian Sun readers, Rev. S. A. Howell, the efficient and successful pastor of Wesley Grove Christian Church, Newport News, Va., went a year or two ago to South America to assist in the work being done there among members of his race. The work seems to have greatly prospered there and now Elder Howell writes us under date of Newport News, Va., Jan. 21, "I am called to go to Georgetown, South America, the last of February to organize a Christian Conference there and also to organize a body of Christians in the British West Indies. Whatever is done must be done at once or these people will be lost to our cause. I have promised to go to them, starting Monday after third Sunday in February. But I have not the means and I am taking this method of appealing to the brotherhood North and South, to help me out. I need funds also to carry to these people Bibles, and also Government and Principles of the Christian Church." Any amount that may be contributed by any Sun reader will be gratefully received. Rev. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., writes this week of Bro. Howell's fitness, capability, and worthiness, so money given for this will be used to a most excellent purpose.

The General Committee of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) has issued a call upon that church for two million dollars to be raised and expended this year in its home mission and church extension work. The Sunday-schools of that church are called upon for one million in these burning words:

"We appeal to the Sunday-schools. These are asked for $1,000,000 for Missions, one half of which is for Home Missions and Church Extension. The young people of this generation are our hope. We call on them to aid in the Sunday-school Missionary programs, to organize Mission Study Classes and to increase the offerings. Never in human history has Missionary teaching in Sunday-schools and Young People's organizations counted for so much as now."

The motto of the Committee, and of their crusade for home missions is, "America for Christ." This appeal is so in keeping with the spirit now prevailing in our Christian churches that we append the following excerpt from it:

"The outlook over the Church is an inspiration. The air is tremulous with expectation. The young people enlist for a crusade. Big-hearted laymen are everywhere asking how best they may help to extend 'the Kingdom.' Never were so many people doing things. Inquiry is abroad in the Church. District Superintendents and Pastors are grinding for a sweeping campaign. There is a new sense of Divine right and expectancy of triumph.

The General Committee confidently commits this great cause to God and the Church, fully expecting the meeting in 1909 to rejoice in returns that will thrill American Protestantism.

With this hope we appeal to all our people for direct and prompt contributions. We ask the rich to give their thousands; those of moderate means their hundreds. The poorest member of the Church, who is self-supporting, can give a dollar. We ask for something from each communicant and friend, though it be but a dime. Every member of the Church has promised to "contribute of his earthly substance according to his ability to the support of the gospel and the various enterprises of the Church," and among the many benevolent enterprises surely the cause of Home Missions and Church Extension stands first in importance. The work in foreign lands shall certainly suffer unless the work in the Home land is well sustained, and God, in the order of his Providence, is sending foreigners here by millions, and, for the sake of the foreign lands from which they come, these people must be reached and saved.

The great cities have become the frontier. If we save America we must save the cities of America. If America is evangelized the problem of the world's evangelization will be one of comparatively easy solution.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Rev. W. H. Thompson and Rev. J. W. Harrell exchanged pulpits Sunday. Bro. Harrell presented the claims of the Portsmouth church, and including $25.00 previously subscribed by some from the congregation, raised $118.00

Bro. Harrell and his people are doing a good work in Portsmouth, a work that is going to be of substantial worth to the conference in a few years.

We are having the most severe weather of the season, quite a contrast from the balmy weather I reported a week ago. In consequence of the weather, conditions all the schools I've heard from are considerably below their normal attendance.

Bro. Ryan has been confined to his bed a part of the past week with a severe case of the "Grip." Rev. Mr. Ryder, representing the Anti-Saloon League preached for him at the Temple in the morning at Rosemont in the afternoon.

Rev. J. D. McAlister also representing the League preached at the First church Disciples in the morning and at the Second Church in the afternoon. He spoke for Rev. M. L. Bryant's people at the Main St. Christian church in the evening. He will speak at the Third Church next Sunday night. He is a strong, forceful speaker and is being used of the Lord in putting down the saloon evil. J. W. Manning.

Elon College Notes.

Revs. G. O. Lankford, C. H. Rowland and Prof. S. M. Smith were here last week attending a meeting of the Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Boards of the Southern Christian Convention. It is understood that there will be held later in the year a joint meeting of the Christian Endeavor and Sunday-school workers. Each of the gentlemen above named gave us short talks at chapel service Wednesday morning.

Rev. J. W. Holt preached for the College yesterday, Sunday, 31st. He had an appreciative audience. We are always glad to have Bro. Holt with us. He gives us food for thought and spiritual meditation.

The Ladies' Aid Society held its regular monthly social meeting on Thursday evening at the home of Dr. G. S. Watson. The meeting was well attended by both active and honorary members and Dr. and Mrs. Watson and the young ladies proved themselves ideal hosts indeed.

The work of the second term is now well under way and quiet and good order prevails. The work for the spring term bids fair to be of as high order as that of fall term for 1908 and that is placing it upon a high plane.

The address by Dr. Few, Dean of Trinity College, Durham, N. C., on the life and works of Edgar Allan Poe, in the College chapel on Jan. 26, was of rare excellence and thought. It was a treat to have such a scholarly man, and he held the undivided attention of his audience. The Doctor spoke in a happy vein at chapel services on Wednesday morning.

The health of all at Elon was never better. Students are all able to be on class regularly notwithstanding the cold wave which now is upon us. J. T. C.

Henderson Letter.

We have been kindly remembered by the churches of my charge. The pounding from Liberty has been reported through the Sun. Fuller's church gave a purse of $5.65 as a Christmas present. On Christmas morning there came a check from Virgilina friends for $11.50 and Henderson has recently presented their pastor with a new and handsome overcoat. For all these tokens of remembrance we are exceedingly grateful and shall strive the harder to be a more faithful pastor and preacher.

The work in my entire field seems to be in a harmonious condition. Sunday-school and prayer-meeting are being conducted through the winter.

Liberty church has had a handsome dress of paint, both within and without and is one of the most attractive church buildings in the Eastern N. C. Conference. The Sunday-school under the efficient management of Bro. Geo. Whitaker is doing good work. Deacon Charles Aysue, the only surviving charter member of this church has reached his four-score years and for the past eighteen months has been in very feeble health. At this writing he is confined almost entirely to his room. His home is in Henderson with his four daughters. I am told that no one did more for the development of Epsom community than he.

C. E. Newman.

—President-elect Taft is visiting and inspecting the Isthmus of Panama.

—Carrie Nation has signed a contract with an English vaudeville manager at $500 a week; which inducement, let us trust, will be sufficient to keep Mrs. Carrie and her hatchet on the other side the remainder of her natural days.

JOINT MEETING OF S. S. AND C. E. BOARDS OF SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

These Boards met pursuant to instructions of the Southern Christian Convention to consider the advisability of calling a convention of the young people of the Southern branch of the Christian Church.

The following temporary officers were elected: S. M. Smith, Pres.; L. F. Johnson, Sec.; G. O. Lankford Assistant Sec.; L. I. Cox, Treas.

After much thought and deliberation on motion a committee to draft resolutions was appointed, viz., S. M. Smith, C. H. Rowland and W. P. Lawrence. It was voted to appoint a committee to draft letter heads and report blanks: L. I. Cox, G. O. Lankford, and L. F. Johnson, said committees to report in the afternoon. On motion, the railroad expenses of the Board were provided for.

Adjourned for committee work.

Reassembled at 2:30 P. M. The report of committee on resolutions was read and adopted.

A motion prevailed to confirm, as permanent officers, S. M. Smith, Chairman, L. F. Johnson, Recording Sec., G. O. Lankford, Assistant Sec.; L. I. Cox, Treas.; Corresponding Sec., Prof. W. P. Lawrence.

On motion, Prof. W. P. Lawrence was elected editor of the Young People's Dept. in Christian Sun.

It was moved and carried, to appoint a committee to arrange program and time for said convention. Committee: S. M. Smith, W. P. Lawrence and C. H. Rowland.

By motion the committee was instructed to prepare and have published by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Pub. Agt. 1090 uniform S. S. report blanks, and that they have printed an ample supply of stationery for the use of this Board Adjourned.

S. M. Smith, Chairman,
L. F. Johnson, Sec.
G. O. Lankford, Assistant Sec.

—One man brained with a club by a prisoner, another man shot through the heart by a pal, another man held up at the gun's mouth and robbed of $5,625, a boy accidentally killed while hunting, a man attempts to kill wife and child and then suicides, were all sensational tragedies that last Saturday morning's paper on first page told about, though several crimes and tragedies were recorded on other pages. There is no book of tragedies half so bloody as the morning daily that simply chronicles the crime of a day.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HOW TO TEACH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEB. 14.
A Few Suggestions.

Golden Text:—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven: Matt. 5:10.

Review. I would review the lesson for Jan. 31, "The trial of Peter and John," as a setting for to-day's lesson. Then I would review last Sunday's lesson as to facts and as to its spiritual teachings, insisting especially on being a true, and not a hypocritical, follower of Jesus.

Intervening Events. The remarkable display of the presence with the apostles of God's Spirit far from deterring men from the new faith, led thousands into it, but only those of spiritual discernment and who had genuinely repented of their sins. Miracles of healing were daily wrought; their reputation extended beyond Jerusalem and the sick and the afflicted of other cities flocked to them and were made whole. The whole land seemed to be going mad with the new heresy, as the Sadducees called it, and they saw that they had lost out in the attempt to destroy Christ's teachings by crucifying Christ. They saw that unless they did something to stem the tide, their old prestige and position in religious affairs were gone. Hence this second persecution of the infant church. The facts of this paragraph, found in Acts 5:12-16 assigned last time, can be had from the pupil to whom you assigned the verses; their meaning you will yourself impress.

Incidental Instruction. Verse 21 will give you opportunity to speak of the custom of early rising among oriental peoples and the necessity for it—the intense heat of the midday hours, when all work was suspended as far as possible. Worship, as other things, began early with them.

The Lesson. The lesson falls today into three divisions. Write these on the board for the topical review. Do the writing full view of the class, after the outline is developed in the teaching.

..I. The Apostles imprisoned and released, verses 17-21 (first clauses only). Discover who rose up, who he was like, who rose up with him, what the Sadducees believed and why they were so opposed to the apostles' doctrine (this is review to your class, since you gave them this in lesson 5 by way of incidental instruction.) with what they were filled, why, what they did with the apostles, who opened the prison door, when, what command was given the released apostles, how they received it, at what hour. (last clause).

II. A Perplexed Court Assembles, verses 21-26. Discover who came, who were with him, the purpose of their coming, for whom they sent, what the officers found, what report they made to the court, what effect this report produced on the chief priests and the temple captain, what further word reached them, who then went for the apostles, how they brought them, why.

III. The Apostles Defy The Court, verses 27-32. Discover what was done with the apostles, what the high priest asked them, when this had been (Acts 4:18), to what extent their teaching was spreading, what charge they were making against the council, what the first sentence of the apostle's answer was, who spoke for them, who had raised up Jesus, what they had done to him, to what God had exalted him, who the witnesses of these things were, what God had given to those who obeyed.

Review the lesson by the topic method, using the outline on the board.

Truths and Their Application. .I. The Golden Text. Drive this blessed truth home. Call for the assigned work on other scripture verses that would serve as golden texts for this lesson. Call also for assigned work on the effects of persecution or the persecutors, Matt. 18:6-7; 23:29-36; Rev. 18:16-18, 24; and on the persecuted, Heb. 11:25-27; Acts 20:22; Rom. 8:37; 2 Tim. 2:9-10; 4:17; Matt. 5:10-12; Luke 6:22-23.

2. This lesson should be to us a warning against jealousy. It is a beastly passion, unworthy of him who has been made in the image of God. It always harms him most who feels it most toward others, not the one toward whom it is directed. It caused the first murder; it embittered Saul's life; it made miserable these Sadducees. It always tends to murder, which is the full fruit of its seed when it has brought forth. Avoid jealousy, it will wreck any community, any church, any home. It is an evil serpent—it is the bane of friendship and brotherliness and loving fellowship and holy living.

3. "We must obey God rather than man" declared Peter. And Peter was right. We too have a conflict of the same sort to settle—the conflict of our conscience, of God's Spirit working in us, with the customs of the wicked world around us. We should always obey the call of conscience, or duty, not that of custom, of the world.

Assignments For Next Time. Ask one to prepare a short essay on the life of Stephen; another to be prepared on Rev. 7:9-17; a third on 1 Peter 4:12-14, a fourth on Hebrews Chap. 11; a fifth on Jeremiah, 11:19-23, and 20:1-12.

W. A. Harper.

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 7, 1909.

True and False Brotherhood.

Acts 4:32-5:11.

Golden Text:—Lying lips are an abomination to the Lord; but they that deal truly are his delight. Prov. 12:22.

There are two sources of danger to any church: one from without, and the other from within. In our last lesson we studied the first attempt from without to destroy the church. The fires of persecution were kindled to consume it.

Now comes a more dangerous attack from within. Satan entered the Eden in disguise. The real danger to a church is from within. God can even over-rule this evil and cause the victory to advance the Gospel.

Lesson Outline.

I. The Church Bountiful and Beautiful I. (Acts 4:32-37.)

II. Satan Enters the New Paradise. (5:1-4.)

III. The Danger Averted. (Vs. 5-10)

The Church Bountiful and Beautiful.—The church continued to have the characteristics which belonged to it from the beginning when it was small. It was filled with the Holy Spirit. It was a united church. Mutual helpfulness, generosity, fellowship rose to a high degree, and has been an example to the church through all the ages. They were a witnessing church by word, by teaching, by character, by deeds.

They had power. Great grace was upon them all.

Satan Enters the New Paradise.—Satan's kingdom was in danger and something must be done to put an end to the progress of Christ's kingdom. His first plan was by persecution. But this was a signal failure. It led to more prayer, more faith, more courage, more devotion. The next plan of satan was to destroy the church from within, introducing evil motives, pride, ambition, and hypocrisy into the very church itself.

Ananias and Sapphira sold a possession, kept back part of the price and brought part and laid it at the Apostle's feet appearing to have given all.

The crime was a complex one woven of many strands. There was a selfish, ambitious desire to be highly regarded by their fellow disciples, to be popular beyond their deserts. They were covetous and avaricious. They were unwilling to pay the price for which they wanted. They were hypocrites covering their vanity under a mask of generosity. At the same time there may have been mingled a desire to help the poor, save their consciences and deceive themselves.

The Danger Averted.—The punishment was severe. It was deserved. It was necessary in order to save the church from within. It was an act of mercy.

Application.—We should avoid the deadly sin of lying about others, or to others. Never tell a lie. Faithfulness is at the bottom of all personal character. G. W. T.

CHRIST THE LIBERATOR.

By Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

"Loose him, and let him go!" At this command of Jesus they unwind the bandages from the limbs of Lazarus, and by the old familiar path he walks back to his old home. This was the master miracle of all which Jesus wrought during his incarnation, but he is still doing for imprisoned souls what he did for the body of his Bethany brother when it had lain four days in the sepulcher.

I looked not long ago with genuine pity on a noble eagle, caged in a public park, as an exhibition for school-boys. The old gray mountaineer felt its galling imprisonment, and occasionally flapped its wings as if it were home-sick for the skies. "Loose him, and let him go," was the thought inspired by the sorry sight, and how he would have sailed off to fly in company with the sun! Eagles were not born for slavery. I thought, too, as I looked at the chained bird, how much he resembled some fettered souls, yes, some Christian souls that are terribly tied down by unbelief. Too many people have enrolled themselves in the Church—some have entered the ministry—with a heavy clog that binds them to the lower earth. It hampers them, hinders them and is fatal to all spiritual joy or growth in holiness. Many a young convert begins his religious life with a doubting or desponding spirit. He nurses his fears in a morbid way, and mistakes all this gruesomeness for humanity. He is a chained bird from the skies.

Others are fettered by besetting sins, from which they have never cut loose. They have never made a clean break with the old sinful self, or with the beggarly elements of this world; they are hobbled with practices and associates that they have never cut loose from. They have probably passed from death unto life, yet they appear very much as Lazarus would have looked if he had walked the streets of Bethany in his ghastly grave-clothes! This is a pitiable style of religion; it brings but little joy to its possessor, and gives him or her no power in the community. While they are content to be what they are, there is no hope for such manacled professors. Their only hope is in a timely and thorough repentance, and a fresh work of Christ, a deeper and thorough work, and for this they must earnestly seek, or else they will be chained birds in a church-age to the last.

Some really good people are clogged by body ailment—dyspeptic stomachs or weak nerves—and they see but little sunshine in their Christian experience. Bunyan has depicted several specimens of these pilgrims who hobble towards heaven on crutches, until death unlooses them and lets them go. Such Christians are to be pitied more than blamed; they are rather patients in Christ's hospital than soldiers on his battle fields.

False doctrine, false views of sin and of Christ are at the bottom of a great deal of this spiritual debility. Every error is the enslaver of the soul. Truth makes us free indeed. Martin Luther was a chained eagle in the Erfert convent, until that heaven-sent truth, "The just shall live by faith," unloosed him. Thomas Chalmers was another chained eagle, but when the great doctrines of man's guilt and Christ's redemption liberated him, he soared up into the empyrean, the king of Scotland's Gospelers. John Wesley never attained to a full salvation until in that little London prayer meeting his eye rested on these words: "The law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus hath made me free from the law of sin and death."

To every member of our churches who is dragged out a half-dead religion, the Holy Spirit comes with the arousing call: "If ye be indeed risen with Christ, seek those things which are above!" Instead of sitting in the gates of the tomb, cast away your grave-clothes, and begin to live as Christ's freemen and Christ's witnesses, and the heirs of a magnificent inheritance. Look higher! Live higher! Get a new grip on Christ and then go out and labor to draw sinners from the pit of hell. This is the revival we all need.—In N. Y. Christian Advocate.

LACK OF ACCOMMODATIONS FOR CONSUMPTIVES.

Fifteen thousand beds and 600,000 patients, or 400 consumptives for every bed, is a statement made to-day by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis in its investigation as to the need of beds for destitute consumptives in the United States.

Gathering statistics from every State in the country and from every hospital in which any provision whatever is made for tuberculosis patients, it has been found that the total number of beds provided, both by public and private resources, is less than 15,000. Over against these figures, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has placed the fact that there are, according to the estimate of the United States Bureau of the Census, at least 600,000 living cases of tuberculosis in this country that at least 200,000 persons die from this disease every year.

When analyzed as to their geographical distribution, New York State leads the list with 3,566 beds, while Pennsylvania comes next with over 1,500. Colorado and Massachusetts each have over 1,250, while New Mexico, the next in order, has 915 beds for consumptives. Several States provide less than 20 beds, among these being, Delaware, Kansas and South Carolina, while some of the States, such as Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Nevada, make no provision whatever for tuberculous patients, either in private or public hospitals.

The Adirondack region in New York State, Colorado, and particularly the regions about Denver and Colorado Springs; New Mexico, Arizona, and the Southwest; and North Carolina, are the principal resorts for consumptives. The recent demonstrations of experts, however, that tuberculosis can be cured in any climate, has led to a considerable distribution of the bed capacity and has called into existence a large number of small sanatoria, hospitals, and day camps, some of them with a capacity of only six beds. This is shown by the fact that, while the number of sanatoria during the last four years has more than doubled, the increase in the number of beds has been only about 50 per cent.

The most striking fact emphasized by the investigation is that, while the lack of beds for all classes of consumptives is so manifest throughout the country, the number of beds needed for advanced cases is far greater than the number needed for all the other stages put together. Of the 15,000 beds at present available for all classes of consumptives, less than 5,000 are for advanced cases. Computing that there are at least 200,000 living cases in the advanced stages of tuberculosis in the United States at the present time, the need for a large number of additional beds for this most deserving class is evident. Dr. John S. Billings, of the Health Department of New York City, estimates that about 60 to 70 per cent. of the advanced cases are unable to provide for their proper care at home. This means that over 120,000 beds in hospitals for advanced cases should be provided. The need for accommodation for advanced cases is further emphasized by the fact that every expert and specialist has agreed on this conclusion, that consumption will never be eradicated until the advanced cases of the disease are isolated, either

A MAGNANIMOUS GIFT TO THE ORPHANAGE.

Christian Sun readers will learn with great gladness of a magnanimous gift to our Christian Orphanage. The amount is fifteen hundred dollars, sent by check last week to Superintendent Foster by Sister E. J. Brickhouse, 131 Lovitt Ave., Norfolk, Va., and put at the disposal of the Board of Trustees of the Orphanage.

The Executive Board was called together at The Christian Sun office, Elon College last Wednesday, Jan. 27, and after mature deliberation voted to apply this amount, with an additional five hundred dollars already in the Treasury, to the present indebtedness on the buildings and grounds. The total indebtedness, a loan on a mortgage, from Alamance county was three thousand dollars. So that by the timely generosity of good Sister Brickhouse we are enabled to cancel, which we have already done, two thirds of the indebtedness, there being now one thousand dollars yet to be paid.

The Board while in session drafted and adopted the following:

“Whereas Mrs. E. J. Brickhouse, 131 Lovitt Ave., Norfolk, Va., has seen fit, in the goodness and generosity of her heart to donate to the Christian Orphanage the sum of $1500. a free-will and an unsolicited gift on her part, and,

Whereas the same has been placed at the disposal of this Board,

Resolved. First, That this Board, in behalf of the Orphanage, and the good people, who have helped to make the Orphanage what it is, extend to Sister Brickhouse a vote of sincere and heartfelt thanks for this generous, helpful and timely gift.

Resolved, Second, That there being now an indebtedness against the Orphanage of $3,000, that this amount of $1500 be added to a $500 balance in treasury and that $2,000 be paid on same, which indebtedness being removed will enable the Board to go forward with further improvements and enlargements already contemplated and much needed.

Resolved, Third, That a copy of these preambles and resolutions be spread upon the minutes, a copy sent for publication to The Christian Sun and Herald of Gospel Liberty, and a copy forwarded to Sister Brickhouse accompanied by our best wishes for our Father's blessing upon her and her household.”

Signed.

J. O. Atkinson, Chmn. Board Trustees,
Jas. L. Foster, Supt. of Orphanage.

This is the largest single gift yet received by the Orphanage, and the good cheer and helpful outlook that it brings to those in charge of the Orphanage cannot be told in words. Sister Brickhouse has chosen most wisely indeed a channel for her beneficence. It not only relieves a present strain, but brings new courage and inspires new zeal for the good work of Christian charity.

ELON COLLEGE AND SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Here is indeed a very significant fact. Of course Dr. W. W. Staley of Suffolk, Va. had to think of its significance first and then we all see it, and wonder why none of us thought of it before.

In a private letter to the editor Dr. Staley writes: An idea struck me, and it seems to be the only one for some time, and I have put it on paper as follows:

“Preparing the Teacher” contains not only internal evidence of merit, but commends Elon College. The Editors, Professors W. A. Harper, W. C. Wicker, W. P. Lawrence, and two contributors, President E. L. Moffitt and Dr. J. U. Newman, five of the ten authors, are members of the Faculty. Prof. S. M. Smith is a graduate and was once a teacher in the college. Revs. N. G. Newman and J. W. Harrell are graduates, and Rev. Dr. P. H. Fleming took his M. A. by work in the institution. Rev. J. J. Summerbell, one of the greatest scholars and writers in the denomination, is the only contributor who is not and has never been connected with Elon College

It is an Elon College production, and it is significant that the first book written by the college is a text book for Sunday-schools and not for academic instruction; and this emphasizes the fact that Elon is a Christian Institution and stands for Christian Education.”

This is significant, and the high favor every where, which the book in question is meeting, speaks volumes for the work being done in Elon College by the consecrated men laboring there. We thank Dr. Staley for the thought.

“The first text book from Elon College was a text book for Sunday-schools and not for academic instruction.”

A MAN AND MISSIONS.

Many feel, and all, who consider the matter, know full well that our Christian churches, of the Southern Christian Convention, are scarcely doing a tithe of what they can do for home missions and church extension. The churches in fact are not even doing as much as they would like to do. At the last of the year most churches rise to their privilege and raise what conference has requested: that is to say a few individuals in the churches do. But what we speak of now is a different matter. There is no one through the year and at all times to remind us of the great opportunities that await us and the great things we should undertake. This need the Southern Christian Convention at its last session endeavored to meet by adopting the following:

“We recommend that the (Home Mission) Board elect a Home Mission Secretary for the Southern Christian Convention, whose duty it shall be to canvass the churches and mission points in the interest of Home Missions, open up new work, etc., his salary to be paid by this Board out of the Convention Home Mission Fund; said salary not to exceed $75.00 and expenses per month, said Secretary to work under the supervision of this Board.”

The matter was discussed, the need for a man was realized and the recommendation was heartily adopted.

Since then the Home Mission Board has through much effort, on the part of individual members, and by one united effort in annual session, tried to secure the man to undertake this work as Secretary of Home Missions. So far our efforts seem to have been in vain. Where is the man? Who is there in all our number that will undertake this great work of awakening us to our real needs, duties and opportunities as a church and as a people. One thing is sure and fixed: we will never even see much less rise to meet, our opportunities, until there is among us a soul set on fire with zeal for this work, who will go in and out before us and arouse us to a sense of our responsibilities in this matter. Where is the man? The Board has not yet been able to find him. Can any Christian Sun reader help the Home Mission Board in this great and important matter? It is certainly worth considering.

PROPHETS FALSE AND TRUE.

There are always in the world prophets, false or true. Prophecy in fact, has always been a thriving business. This for the reason that any prophet can get a hearing and a following.

Palmists, card-readers and clairvoyants have deluded men for generations in the past and will continue to do so with profit for generations yet to come. These people, a great throng of them, run their advertisements in the papers, keep up fine quarters and pay for their advertisements in the papers; all this by deluding their victims. If not, why do they not read future events, tell how the stock market is going to be three months ahead, forecast events of trade and commerce and get rich in a few weeks? They cannot foretell the future to their own prophet, but delude others into the belief that they can foretell the future for them!

Some man had predicted the Sicilian earthquake. Of course. So also has some predicted a New York earthquake and a Boston earthquake, and so on and infinitum.

An exchange points out that a year ago Madam Thebes of France predicted war between Japan and America in November, 1909. The war did not come, but instead an exchange of peaceful notes. This did not deter the French prophetess. She now predicts that a terrible war will come in 1910 "between Japan and America."

The world soon forgets the ten thousand false prophecies made only to deceive and delude. The one that hits is made ground for credulity in all the rest.

One is reminded of Jeremiah 5:31 "The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so; and what will ye do in the end thereof?"

—People often fight hardest against that which is to help and to save them. When orders were issued that peasants should not cultivate the opium poppy near Amoy, China, two thousand of them offered resistance in "behalf of their rights." And yet the poppy was their chief source of destruction.

—Eighty-four new W. M. C. A. buildings, aggregating ten million dollars in costs, were opened last year, and work on as many more begun. "Hard times" did not count in this good work.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

At the request of Col. J. E. West, President of our local church Missionary Society, Rev. C. C. Ryan, pastor of the Memorial Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., addressed an audience in our church on Monday night, Jan. 11th on the subject, "Take a Bite and Go." His discussion was clear, strong, and interesting. The people were much pleased and enjoyed his burning words. No icicles form on his harness. No grass grows under his feet. His words are liquid iron and his thought glows with fervent heat. The people say, "come again."

A Y. M. C. A. campaign has been conducted in Suffolk this week with special helpers from Richmond and Norfolk. A special meeting was held in our church last Sunday afternoon with speakers from Norfolk, Richmond, and New York. The Secretary of the Naval Y. M. C. A. of Norfolk said in his speech that Rev. C. C. Ryan spoke for him the other night and that fifty-five of the mariners gave their hearts to Christ and that the boys filled the Hall when they knew Ryan was to speak. The campaign for Y. M. C. A. resulted in subscriptions for $2,832.50 and next Wednesday has been set to finish the sum of $3,500.00. This sum, it is estimated, will pay balance on building, furnish the building, and pay current expenses for one year. The Y. M. C. A. building is considered a very good one for a town the size of Suffolk.

"Principles and Government of the Christian Church" just from the press, deserves approval by good critics and a wide reading by members of the Christian Church. The committee has greatly improved the contents of the book, and the printer has put the book in good type, good form, and good binding. The type is clear and pleasing to the eye, and the arrangement of the book into four parts has simplified the whole. Many expressions in the old edition have been improved and some useless sections have been omitted. Readers will find a simplicity, a clearness, and a completeness in the new book that will make the Christian Church better understood.

The index, which has been prepared by the publisher, Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., adds very much to the book. Part I treats of the Principles of the Christian Church; Part II of the Government of the Christian Church; Part III of A Directory for Worship in the Christian Church; and Part IV of official Forms and Ceremonies in the Christian Church. The prices run according to the binding: in paper, 25 cents per copy; in limp cloth, 35 cents; in cloth, 50 cents; and in Persian Morocco, with name in gilt, $1.25. The prices are reasonable and the book ought to have a large sale. This book puts one in possession of satisfactory knowledge of the position held by the Christian Church both for himself and any who may enquire of him. The entire church ought to read this book.

W. W. Staley.

NOTICE.

The Southern Christian Convention, in session in Greensboro, N. C., April 30, 1908, upon the recommendation of the Committee on Publication authorized the following committee, with plenary power, to revise the Principles and Government of the church and turn the same over to the Committee on Publications for publication: W. W. Staley, J. O. Atkinson, E. L. Moffitt, P. H. Fleming, J. E. West, who could not act with the committee, and N. G. Newman was requested by the Executive Committee to act in his place. This committee spent eleven full days together and some work was done by individual members privately; it was then approved by the Committee on Publications and turned over to Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., the Publishing Agent, who indexed the book and has had it published.

The book goes forth on its mission of instruction and blessing to the church, duly authorized by the Southern Christian Convention, and every page baptized with the best work and sincerest prayers of the Revision Committee and the Committee on Publications.

W. W. Staley, President

Southern Christian Convention.

—January 1, the old age pension act went into effect in Great Britain, and nine tenths of the old men applying for pensions under the act were not able to write their names. Ignorance and indigence seem ever close akin.

—And now "they say" ear-rings are to "come back." And further more that they have been growing in length since they have "been out." A New York society woman recently wore a pair five inches long declaring they were the "latest thing" in London. May the angels of mercy defend us.

—Near Martimer, in Caldwell Co., N. C., on the night of Jan. 28, revenue officer Zeke Garland, who had arrested a "moon-shiner" was shot at by another law breaker. The aim was poor however, and the prisoner was killed by his pal rather than the officer. The murderer was captured and now a trial and possibly a hanging. Mean whiskey did it. The wages of sin is death.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We are very happy this week to present so many nice letters and offerings from the children and Sunday-schools; with remnants of Thanksgiving offerings coming in: and then Sister Brickhouse makes such a liberal gift—$1500.00 in cash, that our hearts go out to her in gratitude and we rejoice and thank God for such sympathy and help; and pray that the richest blessings of God may be upon both the giver and the gift! Even the dear orphan children manifest a gratitude for and feel a joy in this, the largest gift yet received by the Orphanage. The gift of Sister Brickhouse with $500.00 brought forward from 1908 collections enables us to reduce our indebtedness to $1,000.00

We are hoping that there may be great activity in all our work this year so that we do much in growth as an institution, and good to those who need help. A few more liberal donations will help us to be permanently established.

The following donations have been received:

Mrs. Fannie Boswell, Union Ridge, N. C., R. F. D., Bethel Church, 2 bushels wheat; O. L. Huff, Gibsonville, N. C., $3.00 (Equal 1/2 bbl flour.); The Capital Bush Pulling Machine Co., Washington, D. C., 1 Bush Puller.

We are very thankful to Sister Boswell for her gift of wheat, and Bro. Huff for his gift on our flour bill—flour is a very necessary article with our healthy boys and girls and my the quantity!

Our new “Bush Puller” attracted much attention at depot—one gentleman declaring that it was a “wire stretcher” “for he had seen many a one.” Well, if we had not been reading that good paper, The Progressive Farmer, and had found the “puller” in the road we would never have been able to name it. It pulls the bushes if you will pull it. We thank the Capital Bush Pulling Machine Co, of Washington, D. C., for the donation of this useful farm implement.

The New Hope offering, Valley, Va., in Sun., Jan., 6, which read $1.05 should have been $6.45; very sorry the printer made us make such an error.

With much gratitude to all, I am,
 Yours faithfully,
 Uncle Jim:

My Dear Cousins:

We have had a good time this warm weather playing out doors, but today Jack Frost cut us off a little and we didn't like that. However, with our rag babies and animals, blocks, etc., we manage to keep busy and happy.

Yours sincerely,

Mary Lee Foster,

Isle of Wight, Va., Jan. 25, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

It is time for me to write to the Corner and send a dime. I am very busy going to school. I have to study hard so don't have much time for any thing else.

With best wishes, Your little friend,
 Emily K. Porter.

Yes, Emily, school duties keep the girls quite busy, and we'll have to excuse you just a little bit.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 23, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I guess it is time I am writing to you. We are having some lovely weather, and we children at school do enjoy playing games in the open air. I hope all the little cousins at the orphanage enjoy their school days as we do ours.

Enclosed you will find our dues for this month. Love to all,
 Jessie Penny,
 Pauline Penny.

Yes, girls the warm weather has been delightful but we wouldn't mind a snow would we?

Walnut Cove, N. C., Jan. 22, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will send my dime for January. How are the little orphans getting along?

With much love, I close.

Your little niece,

Sallie Matt Marshall.

All well, Sallie, and busy going to school. Hope you'll come to see us some time.

Henderson, N. C., Jan. 24, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

My little sister Hannah Clare will join this time. She was three months old the seventh of this month. She is named for our two grandmothers. We call her the whole name, Hannah Clare. I call her ‘Nanna Tare.’ I love her. I guess she will be just as good as I am. Every time mother punishes me I punish her if I can get a chance. That does not happen often.

We send our dimes and love. Hope all the orphans a happy New Year.

Lovingly,

Charles E. Newman, Jr.,
 Hannah Clare Newman.

The little sister is very welcome indeed, Charles, and we trust she may prove as helpful and valuable member as her big brother.

AN ADDRESS TO THE PEOPLE.

To the People of North Carolina:—

There is a proper and not unnatural public interest as to the present policy of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League, and in response to this feeling we have thought it advisable to issue the following public statement:

Enforcing the Will of the People.

By an overwhelming majority the people of North Carolina have declared for the suppression of the liquor traffic in this State.

The State Anti-Saloon League stands simply for the enforcement of this expressed will of the voters of the State, and we appeal with confidence to the General Assembly elected by these voters to see that in no particular shall the verdict of last May be abated.

We do not ask for more than the people have declared for, nor do we expect less. The people having so unmistakably declared their wishes, it becomes the duty of their law-makers to provide in all cases the proper legal machinery for enforcing their newly-expressed will, and for punishing all violations of the new statute. Seeing that the enforcement of the law is now in the hands of our own State officials, we call attention to the fact that in most counties no compensation is now allowed sheriffs for breaking up illicit distilleries, and we earnestly ask for a general law providing for the payment of $25 for each capture made by a sheriff, a policy which has worked successfully in Cumberland and other counties, and without which the machinery is manifestly inadequate. Beyond this we ask for nothing.

Let's Make No Hole in the Dike.

We do not believe that the whiskey interests can bring any strong pressure to bear upon our law-makers for any weakening of the present law, but we do think it amiss to warn our people against agitation for seemingly innocent or unimportant amendments. To make one change will open up the whole subject afresh, and offer another much-coveted opportunity for the whiskey forces to spend money in an effort to corrupt public sentiment. We have seen indications, for example, of a plan to use the apple growers as cats' paws—the liquor interests insidiously endeavoring to arouse a spirit of dissatisfaction among them in the hope of weakening the law for their own ultimate advantage. We warn our farmers against these schemes; we cannot afford to make a hole in the dike which might lead in the end to bringing down the whole flood of corruption and intemperance again upon our homes.

It is our belief that the people of the State, the Anti-Saloon League, and the General Assembly, are alike resolved upon what has become known as the "stand pat" policy. Let us have no harmful agitation, and if it come, let the blame lie upon the heads of the whiskey element.

Duty of All Good Citizens is the Same.

If they seek to violate the law, swift and sure punishment must be meted out to them. Upon this point we ask all good citizens to be alert. It is the duty of every friend of temperance, of course, to see that our Prohibition Law is thoroughly enforced, but it is not more the duty of the temperance man than of any other good citizen. It is now one of the State's statutes which every official and citizen is sworn to support, and whatever his original attitude may have been, it is as much the duty of every man to support the Prohibition Law as to support the laws against gambling, theft, or arson. The same penalties provided by law for failure to enforce these last-named laws are also available in the matter of prohibition, and the duty of the citizen is the same in each case. Any negligent official should be promptly removed as provided by the statute.

Good citizens everywhere should also let their city officials, sheriffs, deputies, and their solicitors know that the better public sentiment of the community is behind law-enforcement, and in such cases even a determined minority, acting with the law as a club, can secure the same thorough-going enforcement which is expected in strongly prohibited communities.

Prohibition in Rebuilding the South.

The moral argument for prohibition has been too often stressed to require further mention here; but we do not think it unwise to add that considerations of patriotism have been no less potent in bringing the people of North Carolina and the South to the new policy of State-wide prohibition.

As a part of our progress in striving for industrial leadership, and because the first consideration here must be the development of a strong, efficient people, the South in the same spirit in which it resolved upon an educated citizenship, has also unalterably resolved upon a sober citizenship. And having put our hands to the plow, we appeal confidently to the patriotic men and women of North Carolina to see to it that there shall be no looking backward.

By order of the Executive Committee of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League.

WAYFARERS.

Others might call it passengers or travelers, but this seems to be the most expressive word, wayfarer.

One night the wind whirled and played with the drifting snow, whispering, whistling, singing in the thick, dark, stormy hours while the snow fell fast and banked itself high in the way. Out on the coast a ship plunged in the big waves that rolled over it and many suffered and died in the icy water. Booming canon from the life savers sent out large coils of long rope with the hope of saving all on board, but they were lost in disappointment and failure. Travelers over a dark and dangerous sea were almost saved, but lost by a drowning death, and as their lifeless bodies washed on a sandy shore the picture of death was awful to behold.

So many travelers over and round the world have met a sad, sudden end. Earthquakes, explosions, and many other causes have brought great devastation, and thousands have been quickly hurled into eternity. No time to pray, no way to send tender woots or a last farewell to anxious, waiting ones.

Many years ago a traveler was overtaken by a severe cold wave and as he was pressing his way homeward the light in the window looked so cheerful and inviting as he was nearing home where devoted ones were waiting for his return—almost home, but he chilled to death before reaching there. So we may almost be in the kingdom, and yet be lost.

The human family is moving in many different ways—up and down and about the highways and the low ways, the long and short, the straight and crooked, the wide and narrow—and attractive and destructive ways of life. Still every one is traveling in the one same way, the way that leads to eternity. A large company have already gone this way, and every one is following on. To-day we realize it as never before. All classes and conditions of people are moving to the end of it. There is no getting out of this way—we must travel it.

An artist conceived a true and impressive picture when he painted the wayfarers, Father sitting at one end and mother at the other end of a log with two children between them looking bright and happy as they stopped to rest while on their journey. What a good lesson for study and imitation! It is plain to see that there are many tired and tired ones on their journey to the promised land—it is rather discouraging to see them look so languid and sad—but send a word of encouragement to their listening ears and give gleams of joy by your approving cheerful looks. Stepping up the way which leads to the King's immortal realm we should brighten and feel refreshed as the prospect looms before us giving continual hope of living with Him always.

The other day while passing on a crowded street, a busy, anxious throng was moving along, most of them young, active and strong. Now and then one was seen resting on his staff and bending under many heavy years. They were going and coming—in deep concern about getting somewhere. There were expressions of gladness upon most of their faces. Many of them were glad, no doubt of their success and cheered with the hope of better and greater attainments. Then the thought came, how bright and happy ought the wayfarer Christian be as he looks and travels homeward. It will not do to lament over lost hopes and opportunities—if you fall by the way, rise in your determination and great ambition, take up your staff and pursue your journey for the goal of immortal life.

Two friends had not heard from each other in several months. They had been warm and constant friends, wrote beautiful and encouraging letters to each other. Each thought the other had passed over the great divide. But one glad day here comes a letter breathing true friendship and tenderness. It said in part, "It is so nice to renew the friendship. Life is too short to lose any of its sweetness, and I think I have not very long to stay on the way."

Believing in his word we will follow Him to the end.

J. T. Kitchen.

WORLD FIGURES.

Dr. Zeller, Director of the Statistical Bureau in Stuttgart, Germany, has again been working on the Religious Census of the World, and presents us with the results of his investigations. He estimates that of the 1,544,510,000 people in the world, 534,940,000 are Christians, 10,860,000 are Jews, and 823,420,000 are heathens. Of these, 300,000,000 are Confucians, 214,000,000 are Brahmins, and 121,000,000 Buddhists, with other bodies of lesser numbers. In other woots, out of every thousand of the earth's inhabitants, 364 are Christian, 114 are Mohammedan, seven are Israelite, and 533 are of other religions. In 1885, in a table estimating the population of the world at 1,461,285,500, the number of Christians was put at 430,284,500; of Jews at 7,000,000; or Mohammedans at 230,000,000, and of heathen at 794,000,000.

A magar was shot by Mr. Chapman in one of the rivers of the Bengal Presidency which had in his stomach thirty pounds in weight of gold, silver, copper, brass, and zinc—all women's ornaments. Mr. Carleyle shot a crocodile near the city of Delhi which had the following taken from its internal economy: "About a dozen large bunches of hair, probably human; sixty-eight rounded pebbles; one large ankle ring; twenty-four fragments of churis, of glass bangles; five bronze finger rings; a silver neck chain; a gold bead; and thirty small red coral beads." This enterprising fellow might have been promoted by the government to the position of a curator of a museum; or, failing that, he might have offered to be a museum himself.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

—The ninth day of the trial of the Coopers, father and son, for the murder of Senator Carmack ended with only seven jurymen in the box, and several venires of 500 talismen exhausted.

—Representative Langley of Kentucky has introduced in Congress a bill prohibiting the shipment of liquor from one State into another where there is prohibition territory.

—The cold wave which swept over the South last Saturday and Sunday broke all previous records in Atlanta, Ga., where the thermometer registered as low as ten degrees above zero. It is believed that much of the Georgia fruit crop is damaged.

—The House of Delegates of the West Virginia Legislature passed a constitutional amendment bill Feb. 1, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors in that state. It is believed the Senate and people will ratify the measure.

—This from The Burlington News:

We hope that Governor Kitchen will be a Good Roads Governor. We have had an Educational Governor in Mr. Aycock; a Prohibitionist Governor in Mr. Glenn, and now the most important question before the people of the State is Good Roads, and we hope that Governor Kitchen will turn his attention to this matter, and help us to further this work. It is the biggest question of any before the people, and our State will never prosper as it should until we have good roads in all counties.

And then Bro. Crossen said something worthy of serious notice in this good commonwealth. We heard our friend Dr. W. W. Staley of Suffolk say once that if he were going to run for an office in North Carolina he would want only one plank in his platform and that would be for "Good Roads." That is enough.

DIED.

Johnson.

Mrs. Ida C. Johnson was born Nov. 17, 1876, died Dec. 11, 1908. She was a great sufferer during her last illness but bore her suffering with Christian fortitude. About twelve years ago she joined Bethlehem Christian church.

She leaves a husband, two children, mother and father and four brothers, who are made sad by her death. May the grace of God comfort them in their bereavement.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Clark, of the Baptist church, at Mt. Carmel Christian church.

Lassiter.

Sister Sarah Ida Lassiter was born June 16, 1832, and professed faith in Christ in early life and became a member of Liberty Christian Church where she remained a faithful member until her death, Jan. 6, 1909. Sister Lassiter was a devoted wife and leaves a husband and two children to mourn their loss. She was the daughter of Bro. Tom and Sister Sallie Ayscue and leaves them with two sisters and eight brothers to mourn her departure.

At no time during her sickness did she seem to fear death and requested her eldest sister to take the children and help her mother to raise them right in the sight of the Lord.

Some times in the midst of health and happiness this life is changed for another world where we hope all is well with the departed ones.

IN MEMORIAM.

C. S. Holleman.

Pa has left us. Grandpa has gone. We are lonesome. His ever cheerful greeting around the home is lacking. The imprint of a great quiet influence, however, lives with us and will continue for generations, wherefore we say gone, but not dead.

He was not only a father and grandfather, but a boon companion. My earliest recollection sees him in full sympathy with childish pleasures and pains. He shared my successes and reverses, rejoicing in the one and giving words to encourage in the other. Never censuring or faulting but always cheering and suggesting. Such companionship is a mine from which I have drawn the wealth of home and such as fathers will do well to give their sons.

Thus he lives still in the lives of my family. In early life he married my mother, Martha O'Kelly. She was pre-eminently pious and made it manifest most in her household. It has always been the wonder of my life to look back to childhood and see the spirit of love and righteousness that hung around my home. They were happily mated and seemed to have only one ambition to teach their children to be good and happy too. Only two of their children grew to maturity and my sister was the natural fruit of such a home giving her heart and life to the Master at nine years of age and never growing lax in her religious zeal till her death at age 29.

My parents relied upon precept and not command and on many occasions in my life in the rushing tide have I been restrained by that early atmosphere rather than the words I might recall.

He lived about twenty-five years with my mother and about twenty-five years with his second wife, Mrs. Edith Markham, who was also a pious woman and who came nearer filling my mother's place in my heart than I think any other in the world could. During the lives of both, even after the old home contained only two old people, the family altar was never abandoned till the death of his last wife five years ago and my father gave up his home of more than fifty years to live with me.

During the last five years his life seemed crowned by a halo of beneficence. Blessed with health he went continually in and out, making friends of all, and was a joy to my family. In a new home among new faces he won friends and admirers always by his jolly nature and cheerful words while the children who came in contact with him soon called him "Grandpa" naturally and sought him continually for sport and pleasure. His very unassuming nature left its peculiar impress that lives. He loved his church and cared more for its welfare than he permitted known except to his own conscience. At a ripe age a long, well ordered life has ended in glory.

S. A. Holleman.

The expressions of sympathy from those who will read this have been so numerous that they will accept this token of my appreciation to them and spare me personal response.

McDonald.

The community of Keyser was very much saddened by the death of Bro.

Neil Thomas McDonald which occurred the 12th inst., Jan., 1909, at the home of his aunt, Miss Effie McDonald, near Keyser, N. C. He was about 24 years old, just stepping into the morning of manhood. He was one of the most useful young men in his home, in the Sunday-school and the church. He was always there when able and there was nothing asked at his hands but he was ready to respond with real true heart pleasure. It was the highest joy of his life to be useful in the church and to do something for the promotion of others' happiness. His life was much like unto that of King Josiah, "While he was yet young he began to seek after the God of David." He was a young man of true Christian character and died in the triumphs of a living faith and has gone to receive the reward of the faithful. During the last hour of his life he requested his friend, Bro. Glenn Keith, who sat by him to read Psa. 23rd and 103 and to pray with him as the end was near and as the last lingering smile played over his face as he lowly whispered in the silent and solemn hour of death, "Father, take me to thyself, where there will be peace and joy forever;" then the end came. His parents died while he was young and his aunt Effie McDonald took him and the other children to her home and has been as a true mother to them.

About three years ago Miss Minnie McDonald, his sister, the splendid organist in the Keyser Christian Church and a true, sweet-spirited Christian lady, passed on to her reward. Mrs. Indiana M. O. Rawles, widow of the late A. J. Rawles, passed away at her home near Holland, Va., Dec. 17, 1908, age 72 years, 7 months, and 25 days. Mrs. Rawles was a member of Reynoldson Baptist church. She was a good Christian, amiable in disposition, always ready to administer to her family, and those around her. She was the second daughter of the late Jethro D. Goodman. Mrs. Rawles was the mother of seven children, three of whom are dead, Lucy Willie and Margaret. The living are C. L. Rawles, Misses Pochahontas and Anna Jackson Rawles, Mrs. J. W. Folk, Mrs. W. J. Everett, three step daughters, Mrs. M. L. Pretlow, Mrs. J. B. Vaughan, and Miss Emma Rawles, two sisters, Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Long, and one brother, Dr. W. H. L. Goodman of Franklin, Va., five grandchildren. The funeral was conducted at her home by Rev. N. G. Newman, assisted by Rev. C. H. Rowland.

Mrs. Rawles will be sadly missed by those left to mourn her loss. Her remains were interred in the family cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

May God's blessing rest on the bereft.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Lincoln Centennial.—Throughout the United States in particular, and in other countries where there may be gathered many Americans, there will be much said and written this week, of Abraham Lincoln. His hundredth anniversary transpires Friday, Feb. 12, and the passions, prejudices and flames of war having been tamed and tempered with time, men in all sections are learning the real worth and weight of Lincoln's character. Human character is so many sided that it takes time to sift and separate the wheat from the chaff. In the crucible of years strong characters become stronger, while weak characters dissolve and disappear from human vision. Moreover, even the weak traits in strong men who lived long ago dissolve and disappear and so strong men seem to have had no weakness. Reader, do not you believe that any human character had no weakness. Every man that ever lived, save One, had his weakness. Abraham Lincoln had his. Had he no weakness he had been more than human.

But we have learned, and we are learning, the better and the nobler Lincoln. One hundred years from now people will know his best traits even better than we know them now. Real vigorous character endures with years and becomes more virile with age.

If pleasure, or even happiness, is the end of life, Lincoln did not win out. It can be said with all reverence that Abraham Lincoln "was a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief." His is the saddest character in all our annals. In this man Nature played one of its peculiar tricks. Beneath a heart bound and burdened and, ever and anon, almost breaking with sorrow and sadness Nature stored a rich fund of ready wit and humor, gleams these to penetrate, and drive away, if but for a moment, the dark and lowering clouds. Lincoln's wit can only be measured by the weight of his griefs, sorrows and disappointments. Sad and morose by temperament and disposition, he was disappointed in courtship and buried his heart with the lady-love of his youthful years; married finally to one who was more anxious to wed him than he was to wed her, his domestic happiness was never complete or even envious, and in early years lost the boy "Willie" who was the very apple of his eye; brought into the presidency amid the distracting scenes of an awful war whose horrors and tragedies Lincoln laid upon his own heart and carried daily as the burdens of his own soul; and then as the awful war was done and before he had ever seen any of the fruits and favors of peace and a real Union, shot down and carried to a most untimely death by an assassin's bullet; this life, if measured by the quantity and number of its pleasurable days and deeds, fails to measure.

And for this very reason we know that this life is not to be measured by the number of pleasurable days and deeds that it experienced. Never. Lincoln's life looms large and great and magnanimous and the standard that will not measure it must be torn down as unjust by which to measure any.

Time was when many did not believe Lincoln was at all religious. How far off the mark was such a thought. Lincoln believed in God, offered his petitions to God for guidance and help and strength; and depended upon Him for strength and hope and help in time of greatest and sorest need.

When Lincoln's father was ill he concluded a letter to his step brother with these lines:

"I sincerely hope father may yet recover his health; but at all events tell him to remember to call upon and confide in our great and good merciful Maker, who will not turn away from him in any extremity. He notes the fall of a sparrow, and numbers the hairs of our heads, and He will not forget the dying man who puts his trust in Him. Say to him that if we could meet now, it is doubtful whether it would not be more painful than pleasant; but that if it be his lot to go now, he will soon have a joyous meeting with many loved ones gone before, and where the rest of us, through the help of God, hope ere long to join them."

Abraham Lincoln's was truly a great life that the ages will come more and more to realize and revere.

Suicides:—There is a fearful and bloody reign of suicides. It is doubtful if any Christian Sun reader ever knew of as many, and as frequent suicides as at present. A daily paper without an account of a suicide would be almost a novelty. Young men and old, poor men and well-to-do are practicing the art of self-destruction with skilled and ready hand.

For our own part we do not believe that any sound and sensible man commits suicide. In some way there has been an unhinging. This for the reason that it is natural for one to cling to life. Nature is self-assertive and always prefers life to death—death being the abnormal or unnatural state. A mind may be rational in many particulars yet unhinged in one, or in some. At any rate the mental process whereby one comes to the conclusion to commit murder on oneself must be abnormal and unnatural.

What interests the student of these matters is the cause leading up to such a condition of mental being. That cause is not far to seek. We are in too much of a hurry. Our nerves are strung up to utmost tension. The mind is already strained to keep pace with other minds. Let any further strain come than the average and deadly consequences follow. Our age and the individuals of our land need "To Take time to be holy." Our age is mad with rush, risk, and wrong.

—California has created something of a sensation by enacting through its Legislature now in session a law providing for separate schools for whites and Japanese—the anti-Japanese school law over which Japan is said to be rather indignant.

—Although the pistol with which John Wilkes Booth shot President Lincoln has been locked up securely in a United States Army office ever since the conspirators were tried, still "genuine pistols" have been sold and are sold yet by the score "with which Lincoln was assassinated." We have often heard that if all the apple tree wood could be collected which had been sold and distributed as that "from the tree at Appomattox under or near which Lee surrendered," there would be many cords of it. But credulous mortals in this world will be humbugged till the end of time, we suppose.

FROM THE FIELD.

Greensboro.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—Please excuse my delay in writing, or rather neglecting to write a few lines to let the Sun readers know something of the work in Greensboro. I am quite favorably impressed with the work here, and also with the people. They are very kind and obliging and seem interested in the work. Indeed they have done a great work since the church was organized and we hope greater things are in store for them. It will take some time for wife and me to become acquainted with the people and learn just how to do the best work, but we hope soon to measure up to the full standard. I believe that we will have the hearty co-operation of the entire church and brotherhood. Yes we are much pleased with the "Sunny South" and hope to enjoy it more as we become better acquainted. I shall hope to visit Elon College soon and meet you, brother editor, face to face, and many of our good people there.

J. W. Bolton.

Valley Letter.

We have recently closed a successful revival meeting at Mt. Olivet, (R). We were fortunate in having Rev. M. L. Bryant, of Norfolk with us part of the time. Bro. Bryant greatly endeared himself to the people. The weather was very bad most of the time but the congregations were good. All regretted very much that Bro. Bryant could not stay until the close of the meeting. There were in all fifteen conversions and twelve accessions to the church. This is one of the mission churches established by Dr. W. T. Herndon.

Second quarterly communion services were held at all my churches during the past month. All are, I believe, doing as well as could be expected considering the limited time I am able to give each place.

I am now in a meeting at Bethel—my fifth meeting for this winter in my field; have three others after this one.

THE TWO NAPLES.

"Naples combines with the charms of a Paradise, the horrors of a subterranean world."—Guide Book.

I.

Of all the cities of Italy, Naples is famed for its poverty. Many of the streets of old Naples are so narrow that one carriage cannot enter therein. The tenement houses are very high with occasional connecting bridges over the street. Sometimes ten people occupy one room or several families. The washing which hangs over your head, may be the only garments of the poor child who is waiting at the window. There are still greater depths of poverty. Standard is responsible for the statement that—not here and there a beggar, not a few families, not even a hundred people, but thousands of people, live in Naples too poor to have even a home. The new system of sewerage and all sanitary movements have been bitterly opposed by those who need them most.

We met our first disappointment as we entered the famous harbour. The mist which soon turned to rain, prevented a satisfactory view of that far-famed scene. During our two days in Naples, the only time the sun shone upon us was during a period of half an hour's duration at the very beginning of which our train car was blocked. There we sat during the only period of nice weather, unable to take the perpendicular railway or "vernicular" to the Convent above the town and feast our eyes upon that much coveted view. The Neopolitans themselves fevered and fretted about the blockade more than any one else and we lost our own regrets in seeing theirs.

The train ways have 1st class and 2nd class compartments with sometimes a car hitched behind for third class passengers.

The ticket is purchased of the conductor but not surrendered on leaving the car. Occasionally an inspector boards the car, and demands the tickets, to test the conductor's honesty. I think one of them thought I was willfully teasing him, for I unknowingly produced a ticket of yesterday from my little bag into which I had dropped all various coupons, and I could not understand why my ticket did not satisfy him as well as that of the other passengers. Finally recollecting those old tickets, I produced another, but the inspector looked more angry than before. A third trial brought the right coupon, which he tore up and threw on the floor, that I might not vex other inspectors with it, I suppose.

The porters and cab men are famed for their dishonesty. One of our traveling companions who speaks Italian as well as his native tongue said: "I always talk with my fingers to those cab men and pretend not to know the language. The more you understand, the more they will pester and cheat you."

The Italians of North Italy declared that they had no pleasure in visiting Naples because of these ruthless tormenters.

But worse than the cab men and the porters and the beggars of Naples, as I saw it, was the customs. It chanced that several vessels were leaving the port and others entering that same morning. The wharf before the Custom house doors was crowded with trunks. After vainly trying to find an entrance through them and finding all avenues closed up near the door by tugs the stewards from the "Romanic" climbed over one pile and walked on top of the baggage, until mine was deposited inside the door. The problem of my own entrance in the midst of those waving arms and shouting restless porters with the blocking baggage, was rather serious but was accomplished at last. I saw one Customs House officer come to blows with an Italian about the tariff, but the officer had very little curiosity about my luggage, which was only taken there as a place to wait until the delayed German Lloyd boat came in. I think of Dante's Inferno whenever I think of that place.

The "Luitric" sailed after midnight and for two hours and more we were entertained by nine ragged beggar-boys, who sang snatches of patriotic Italian airs, most generously interspersed with "Give me a penny, Mr.!" Our passengers, especially two young Chinese, were generous, but the young beggars seemed never satisfied.

II.

One who is familiar with the fine photographs of the harbour of Naples sees, even through the falling rain the island of Capri, the Palazzo Donn Anna, the convent on the hill top above and realizes something of the beauties around.

From my window in the Porsion Poli, on the hill side among the foreign hotels I loved to gaze to the North on the beautiful residences along the water side.

New Naples has wide streets with small parks or plagas at the junctions of the streets and stations of many of Italy's heroes. The ride on the trainway from the S. S. offices to my hotel was on such a street. We passed the arch and Plaza of Victor Emmanuel, also the Royal Palace—now being used as a hospital for the sufferers from Messina.

Porsion Poli was surrounded with hotels, the gardens of some of which were beautiful. Neapolitans may, in many instances be rude and impolite and untrustworthy but there are also the courteous honest gentlemen.

The agent of the White Star Line, a native, was most kind in his arrangements for me, greatly exceeding in honesty, and courtesy, the agents in Boston.

In the train cars I always found some passenger who spoke English to direct or assist me. Once a gentleman, whose brother is a consul in Central America, escorted me to the hotel, at personal inconvenience to himself, I am sure. As I descended the vermicular a lady took great pains to direct me the winding way to the street.

Though we could not visit Pompeii for the rain, we could see wonderful relics from Pompeii in the National Museum, a very plain unornamented building but one of the most famous museums in the world. Some of the paintings which interested me were the "Adoration of the Magi" by Van der Beke. One of the magi is in the central picture, kneeling. A panel at the right represents an Ethiopian with his dog; the panel at the left shows a Moor with an urn.

"L'Adultera" is a very vivid picture. Van der Beke's Crucifixion is here, too, where little angels hold up cups to catch the blood flowing from the feet and from the hands of the Saviour. One side picture is of kneeling nuns and the other of priests.

A lady was copying Raffaello Sanzio's Sacred Family. Her sketch was nearly complete. Indeed many artists were copying faces or parts of great master pieces. I was sorry indeed when the hour for closing came and I had to leave the building.

I could never see enough of the life on the streets, the vendors of fruit and sweets, the goats and their drivers, the funny little donkeys.

Near Pansion Poli I happened once on a milk man selling his milk fresh, milked on the spot, to some of our neighbors, so for two pennies he milked for me a fresh, warm glass of pure milk.

Life at the Pansion was very social and cordial. Americans, English and Scotch were among the dozen guests at our table.

M. Poli is a Waldensian who said that, were there only time, he would have great pleasure in presenting to his brethren in the church one who had come from so far a land as Japan.

I took tea in English fashion with Rev. Irving of the Scotch Presbyterian Church who for 25 years has labored in Naples. He had recently returned from assisting at the dedication of the new Home for Sailors in New York City, made possible by Helen Gould's generosity. It was his first visit to America. Mr. Irving has services every night for sailors, reading room, etc. He is also pastor of the Scotch Presbyterian Church composed of residents of Naples, which is also the place of worship for Protestant tourists.

Day schools and a girls' school are also under his direction. The boarding school has done much to break down the prejudice of rich Roman Catholic families and is the only way of access to them, Mrs. Irving said. There are daily lessons in the Bible. At the time the school was started it was the only higher school for girls, although now the Romanists have erected girls' schools on either side of it, it is still well attended by Italians and some French, English and even American girls. Were the Bible lessons omitted the attendance would largely increase but these lessons never are omitted. The school has an excellent building which it owns and is nearly self-supporting.

I visited two churches in the centre of the city with plain exteriors but beautifully decorated small chapels with fine paintings. It was at evening vespers. The worshippers generally used the chairs of which there was a small number, though some knelt on the stone floor. They were not many in number, women and aged men, but they seemed devout.

This second picture lingers with me while the other will die away—"Napoli Bella"—Naples the beautiful.

THREE LITTLE JOKES.

A young man in an Indiana town thought it great sport to ring an apothecary's night-bell and arouse him to come to the door and find nobody waiting. The pastime was adopted by other roguish youth, until finally the apothecary was forced to disconnect the bell. A few weeks later, when he was wanted in real earnest, it took a long time to convince him of the fact, and the delay cost the life of a baby sister of the original joker.

A girl who mounted lithographs in a New York factory slipped a bit of a strong-smelling cheese into a package of prints that ordinarily would have been inspected by a "chum," who was relied upon to remedy the mischief. In the holiday rush, however, the usual routine was set aside, and the tainted package made a part of a large shipment. The consignees promptly rejected the whole lot, and the proprietors of the factory then discharged every girl employed in the room where the joke was played.

A Colorado ranchman "loaded" a purse in such a manner that when it was opened a substance supposed to be harmless would explode with a loud report. The purse was meant for a birthday present to his sister, to "even up" a trick that she had devised; but her little son got hold of it, and the explosion blinded him.

A single issue of a newspaper records these happenings of one of the last days in 1808. Such incidents are always numerous enough, but there should be fewer of them reported during 1909. Tricks of this sort are seldom meant unkindly,—that wards off a part of the blame,—but the trouble is that they hardly ever work out as they were planned, and when they go wrong the innocent seem most liable to suffer.—Youth's Companion.

REAL CAUSE OF THE DIVORCE EVIL.

If the one million divorces in the country during the last twenty years had been granted for trival causes, the outlook would be bad enough, but the situation becomes all the more serious when the separations take place for grave moral reasons. It is generally recognized that such causes as adultery, desertion, cruelty, imprisonment for crime, habitual drunkenness and neglect to provide are grave reasons for divorce; and while some of our States have omnibus clauses in their divorce law, these six principal grounds are the ones recognized by the majority of States.

Moreover, the statistics of divorces granted show that ninety-seven per cent of all divorces are granted on these six principal grounds. Only an insignificant fraction of the divorces in the United States are granted for trival reasons, such as "incompatibility of temper." Again, over sixty per cent of the divorces in the United States are granted for the two most serious grounds of all—adultery and desertion. In other words, in two-thirds of the cases divorce was granted after husband and wife were already practically separated.

We must conclude, therefore, that divorce is prevalent not because of the laxity of our laws, but rather because of the decay of our family life. The real evil is not divorce, but the decay of the very virtues upon which the home rests. The problem in American family life is whether we are able to build up the virtues upon which a new and higher type of family may be founded, higher, that is, than the despotic, semi-patriarchal type of family of our fathers which is now passing away or is, rather, already extinct. It must be remembered, however, that the first essential element in the home life of a people is stability.—Charles A. Ellwood in the February Delineator.

—At this writing fifth venire of talismen had been drawn from which to select jurors for the Cooper murder of Senator Carmack, and only eleven men were in the jury box.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—His numerous friends will be pleased to learn that Bro. D. J. Sipe, Greensboro, N. C., after an illness covering several weeks, is able to be at his post of duty again.

—It is with pleasure we print a "Raleigh letter" this week—the first for very many weeks. We trust Pastor Johnson will greet his friends thus quite often and with such good news as he presents this week.

—Bro. F. T. Banks, Assistant Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, Montgomery, Ala., and one of Elon's wide awake graduates, writes that the Association is in good shape and is doing splendid work.

—Bro. Samuel Wilkins, Suffolk, Va., in renewing for The Sun for 1909, says he has been a continuous subscriber to The Sun since 1893.—forty years now. Such faithful friends and readers encourage the editor's heart and make a church paper possible.

—Brethren—! am writing to my brother ministers now—read Rev. H. E. Roundtree's Waverly, Va., letter this week—and then grow green with envy. Nothing else will do. Talk about pounding, that is a pounding, such an one as even an editor might—But perish the thought.

—Mr. A. Rudolph Eley, Norfolk, Va., and for some time a student at Elon College, was married to Miss Elizabeth Weaver, at Wilkes-Barre, Penna., Saturday, Feb. 6, 1909. After Feb. 15, the newly married pair will be at home, Exchange Hotel, Montgomery, Alabama. Our thanks for an announcement are hereby expressed.

—Rev. P. T. Klapp, Pittsboro, N. C. writes: "I have called attention of Sunday-schools in my charge to our Teacher Training book and one of my schools has already adopted and introduced the book, and another speaks of getting it at an early date." Many schools are finding the book of great worth and helpfulness.

—Congratulations to our friend and brother, Rev. "Joe" Jones, formerly of Holland, Va., and an Elon graduate. The immediate cause of felicitations is this, "Mr. Ralph F. Moore requests your presence at the marriage of his sister Edith to Rev. Joseph H. Jones, Monday, Feb. 22nd, 1909, 7 p. m. Unity Church, Topeka, Kansas. At home after March 15th, 766 Tyler St., Topeka, Kansas.

—That wonderfully energetic and successful pastor, Rev. S. L. Paugher, writes a card Feb. 3: "God is still blessing the old Galf Christian Church. I received six members during the month of January. Prayer meetings are well attended and spiritual. We hope to organize shortly a Bible class. The people want to know more of God's Word and God's wonderful love."

—In remitting her subscription to The Christian Sun for a year Miss Anna Helfenstein, now of Palmer College, Le Grand, Ia., but remembered so pleasantly by many Sun readers as the efficient Elocution teacher in Elon College for two years prior to this, reports a pleasant and successful year's work at Palmer so far and yet she feels an interest in the work at Elon and in the welfare of the many friends she made in the South.

—Rev. L. P. Johnson, pastor Hillsboro St. Christian Church, Raleigh, makes following report of his first quarter year work to the Mission Board: "Sermons 17, prayer meetings 9, Christian Endeavor meetings 6, Teacher Training 6, Sunday-school 9, Communion 1, Committee Meetings 5, Total number of meetings 52, visits 125. Members received by letter 5, experience 1, reinstated 4, total 10. Have supplied the church with hymn books, and have secured more than $700 in pledges for support of the work. The outlook for a good year is fine."

—We congratulate our wide awake, energetic and justly popular business friends, Messrs C. T. and R. E. L. Holt of the Burlington Hardware Company. Starting in business about two years ago in a modest way they have by strict attention and courteous conduct to all corners built up a trade and won a constituency of which any firm might well be proud. Recently they have moved across Davis street on which they were located into one of the very largest, most modern and beautiful business houses in the town of Burlington, a magnificent Erick building with full glass front. It is a pleasure to witness the growth and prosperity of such courteous, clever, Christian gentlemen, who are succeeding because they deserve it and are popular because they make friends and keep them.

—Mr. J. Adolph Long, Elon graduate class of 1905, a law graduate of the University of North Carolina, receiving his license from the Supreme Court last September, and since that date located at Graham, N. C., was a welcome visitor at Elon and at The Christian Sun office Tuesday of this week. Mr. Long was saying "good-by" to his host of friends here, he then being on his way to El Reno, Oklahoma where he locates for the practice of his profession, the law. There has been no more popular man to graduate at Elon in many a year and his loyalty and love for the College have been manifested in many ways since his leaving here. A clear thinker, an eloquent public speaker, courteous always and a Christian gentleman ever, his numerous friends will expect, with cause, to hear good things of him in his chosen field and profession.

—In answer to one of the 1,000 requests sent out last week for Sun renewals Bro. J. A. Foster, Semora, N. C., gladdens the heart in this gracious and brotherly manner: "Yes, it is always a convenience and a pleasure for me to pay you for such a paper as our dear Christian Sun with its weekly visits to my home, which fills us with inspiration and continually renews our interest in all our church affairs. I cannot see how any true member of our Church can do without The Sun which shines so brightly and keeps us informed about the great and good work our church and its institutions are doing. You may count me a life time subscriber, certainly as long as I am able to pay for it." The kind words of a man who loves his church and is loyal to all its enterprises.

—A severe wind storm, in some localities, a cyclone, passed over sections of Ga., Ala., and Miss., destroying much property and a dozen lives, Feb. 5.

—Congress has agreed upon a bill appropriating $12,000 for the "purchase, care and maintenance of automobiles for the President of the United States."

—Captain Quattrough, of the battleship Georgia, in the Atlantic squadron, was convicted by court martial at Gibraltar, of being intoxicated while on duty, and has been suspended from the service for six months and set back ten numbers in rank.

—Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, than whom there is no greater preacher in our time, declares, "I do not hesitate to affirm that there is nothing the Church needs more at the present hour than to understand what a real prayer meeting is." A good prayer-meeting is certainly the power of the church.

—Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and an orator of national reputation, says that, owing to his undoing and unnering by the death of a dearly beloved daughter and the tragedy which took from him his beloved son some months ago, he will never again appear in public or take any part in any public exercise.

—In Cleveland, Ohio, several young people entered into a resolve to live for two weeks "just as Jesus lived." A Jewish paper of Denver rises to enquire, "We wonder if these young people attended temple and studied Torah? for that is what Jesus did. Then Jesus was a Jew and lived as such." Wherefore one wonders then why the Jews hated Him so and so cruelly put Him to death?

Elon College Notes.

That was good news that came last week from the Christian Orphanage located here, that a gift of one thousand five hundred dollars had been made to it by Mrs. Brickhouse, of Norfolk, Va. We congratulate Brother Foster and the management. This money has been used to pay a debt to the county of Alamance for money borrowed.

The Athletic Association has been pushing with vigor the preparation of the new Athletic field and hope to have it ready for use in the near future. The determination showed by Prof. Pritchette and his helpers when accompanied by the work they do is sufficient to transform a pine thicket into a fine field for sport.

The Christian Endeavor Society met in business session Tuesday and elected officers for this term. In the consecration meeting Prof. Harper led. It was a meeting of much interest, it being the twenty-eighth anniversary of the founding of the society.

Commencement of 1909 will be one that will interest the class of 1899 more than any since the date of its graduation. The Alumni address is to be delivered by Rev. C. E. Newman of Henderson, N. C. It is the purpose of the class to have a reunion and so celebrate the first decennial of its existence.

The musical given on Saturday evening in the college chapel was well attended and throughout the entire program there was not a dull moment, neither shadow of uncertainty by those performing. Seeing is believing so come to Elon and attend the musicals and become your own judge.

Dr. Moffitt is in receipt of a check from the Palmer Fund for five hundred dollars on running expenses of Elon College. This was in waiting for Dr. Moffitt upon his return from Randolph and adjoining counties, where he has been for the last few days. The Raleigh News and Observer, Feb. 7, had the following:

"Sunday the college pulpit was occupied by the Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, N. C., whose theme was Wholesome Advice Disregarded with Fatal Results. Mr. Holt is always an entertaining speaker and a forceful presenter of the truth.

President Moffitt has aggressively entered upon his campaign to increase the endowment of the college by the sum of $50,000. He is absent from the Hill this week, and will continue to be absent from the college most of the time from now until commencement in the interest of this upward movement. Only three years ago the magnificent west dormitory was opened formally for college purposes, even now the college equipment, in the way of buildings, is not sufficient to accommodate the increasing patronage. If the college is to grow and to meet the obligations that are constantly devolved upon it there must be an increase in equipment of the buildings for library facilities and gymnasium. That these increased demands upon the income be met it is absolutely necessary that this $50,000 be raised at once.

Prof. Wicker, who is a member of the North Carolina State Sunday School Association Executive Committee, was in Raleigh this week attending a session of that committee looking to preparation for the approaching State convention at Concord. Prof. Wicker says that the prospect now is that a very excellent convention will be held this year at Concord, and that a full program will be announced later.

Dr. Atkinson, for several years professor of Latin in Elon College, and chairman of its faculty, but now editor of the Christian Sun and pastor of the local church, will deliver a lecture next Thursday evening in the college auditorium on George Eliot's Adam Bede. Later on this spring, Dr. Atkinson will deliver a lecture on Shakespeare's Brutus. These lectures are open to the public as well as to the student body and are without charge." J. T. C.

LESSONS FROM THE LIVES OF GREAT MEN.

II. Abraham Lincoln.

By W. P. Lawrence, M. A.

We are here face to face with a giant character. The closer our approach through any of the numerous avenues of information about his sad, checkered career, the larger he looms before us. We feel the spirit of hero worship stealing over us, and it is difficult to write with calm unimpassioned sanity about Abraham Lincoln. In his infancy observe him far below the range of decent poverty in a squalid hut of frontier Kentucky. At ten years of age, he is still under a cloud of absolute illiteracy when a great shadow falls upon his heart in the death of his mother. He had no sympathy from his illiterate father to frighten and make sweet his childhood life. His biographers tell us that he knew no joyous childhood nor happy boyhood. Not as other men who live over a thousand times in delightful memory and care-curing reverie the days of childhood, Lincoln found no inviting retreat in the memories of this part of his life.

He had many bereavements and failures. His first and, perhaps, his only real love, Ann Rutledge, who taught him to love Shakespeare, the Bible and religion, died of typhoid fever when Lincoln was a member of the Illinois Legislature in his twenty-seventh year, and with her his heart's affections were buried in the little town cemetery at Petersburg, Illinois. Again, when the crushing weight of the civil war was all he could bear, another sorrow came in the death of his oldest son, "Little Willie" at the White House in Washington. It seemed now that the heart-strings would snap, but Lincoln's hour had not yet come; his great work was not finished.

Lincoln knew, too, the pangs of defeat. In 1832, the same year he had served as Captain in the Black Hawk war, he was defeated in a campaign for a seat in the legislature. Two years later he was elected, however, and held the position eight years, but without distinguishing himself. He served one term in congress, being elected in 1846, but failed of renomination chiefly because of a speech he delivered in Congress opposing the Mexican war. Again he was defeated in 1858 in an attempt to be elected to the United States Senate. But, perhaps, the worst defeat he ever had was, not political but domestic, when in 1842, November 4, Mary Todd married him, and too, after his intuition, or judgment, or likely both had, on a former occasion, kept him from appearing in the capacity of bridegroom when she was to be the willing and victorious bride. She was, from all accounts, a termagant wife. Sorrow on one side, and melancholy on the other were the bad angels of a hero whose life was set hard in a place and lay through dark ways. Another has said of Lincoln's marriage, "The only time Douglas (Lincoln's opponent in law and politics as well as in courtship) got the better of him was when he didn't get her (Mary Todd)."

The sorrows of Lincoln's life were in his face as if a printed page. Frank B. Carpenter, the portrait painter, said in 1865 just after Lincoln's lamentable death, "Mr. Lincoln had the saddest face I ever attempted to paint. During some of the dark days of the spring and summer of 1864, I saw him at times, when his careworn, troubled appearance was enough to bring tears of sympathy into the eyes of his most bitter opponents. I recall particularly one day, when, having occasion to pass through the main hall of the domestic apartments of the White House, I met him alone, pacing up and down a narrow passage, his hands behind him, his head bent forward upon his breast, heavy black rings under his eyes showing sleepless nights—altogether such a picture of the

HOW TO TEACH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEB. 21.

A Few Suggestions.

Stephen, The First Christian Martyr.

Acts 6:8-15; 7:54:3.

Golden Text:—They stoned Stephen, calling upon God and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit. Acts 7:59.

Review: Review the previous lesson carefully. Then recall the number of "first things" in the history of the church in early days which our lessons this quarter have covered. These are in Lesson II, The First Baptism with the Holy Ghost; in Lesson III, The First Revival and the Beginning of the Organized Church; in Lesson IV, The First Miracle; in Lesson V, The First Trial of the Apostles; in Lesson VI, The First Case of Hypocrisy in the Fold. Today we study another "first thing"—The First Christian Martyr. Here call for the life of Stephen assigned last time.

Connecting Links: Considerable time has passed between last Sunday's lesson and today's. The church has increased in numbers. The membership consists mainly of two classes—Jerusalem or Palestine Jews or Grecian Jews or those Jews who were not born in Palestine, but who had come there to take up their residence. The Apostles not only had undertaken to preach to all the Church, but to distribute the alms as well. They had had too much to do and complaint had arisen against them that the widows of the Palestinian Jews received more consideration than the widows of the Grecian Jews. The apostles very wisely decided that it was none of their business to be concerned in such temporal affairs and recommended to the church the election of laymen to look after such work. This the church readily agreed to and seven men, whom we today call deacons, were chosen,—one of whom was Stephen. Stephen soon developed rare power of religious insight and comprehension and became a lay-preacher or evangelist as well as a deacon. It was through his preaching that his martyrdom was sealed. Acts 6:1-7.

Chronology. Some date this lesson as early as 32, or 33 A. D., but perhaps 36 is nearer right—we say this because in that year there was a sort of interregnum of the Roman power. Pontius Pilate was sent to Rome to answer for misgovernment and Vitellius, governor of Syria, was anxious to appease the Jews. This made possible the murder or lynching of Stephen without the intervention of the Roman power, Rome having withdrawn from the Sanhedrin the power to execute the death penalty.

Incidental Instruction. The teacher today will make clear the relation of the synagogue to the temple in Jerusalem. The Teacher-Training Course, recently published, chapter IV, p. 204. f will be found very helpful in this connection. The teacher will also explain the method of stoning to death, the Hebrew method of executing the death penalty, in which the witnesses threw the first stones, laying aside their outer flowing robes, and the by-standers assisting them. Still further the teacher will speak of the place where Stephen was stoned and the church which had been erected over his supposed tomb.

The Lesson. The Lesson today falls into three divisions, which you may write as a topical outline as they are developed in the teaching:

1. Stephen the Lay-Preacher, verses 8-10. Question as to what Stephen was full of, what he did, who arose against him, what a synagogue was, what its part in the spread of Christianity, what synagogues are mentioned, where these places were, the result of the argument between the representatives and Stephen.

2. Stephen arrested and carried before the Council, verses 11-15. Find out what action these men then took in reference to Stephen, what suborned means here, what these men said (compare this procedure to the trial of Christ, Matt. 26:59-60), whom these witnesses stirred up, what they did to Stephen, where they carried him, what the false witnesses testified, how Stephen's face appeared (compare this to Moses as he came down from Sinai and to Christ on the Mt. of Transfiguration.)

You will here give the class the substance of Stephen's masterly defense, Acts 7:1-53, showing his mastery of the scriptures and a new point of view of the relation of Judaism to Christianity which he enunciates, namely, that Judaism is completed in Christianity and that Judaism and the temple and the law must pass away, the very doctrine which Paul later preached so effectually, whereas the apostles were strictly orthodox Jews and up to this time regarded Christianity as only a sect of Judaism, whose law and system of worship were to be perpetuated; or perhaps it will be better to read the defense to the class and bring out these points as you read.

3. Stephen a Martyr, verses 50-60 to 5:1-3. Find the effect Stephen's defense had on his hearers, how they exhibited their anger, what Stephen did and saw, what he said, what his hearers then said, what they did with Stephen, what the witnesses did with their robes, at whose feet they lay them, what Stephen cried as they stoned him, what he said when he had knelt down, with what tender words his death is described, what then arose against the infant church, whither the members of the church were driven, who remained at Jerusalem, the possible reason for this, who buried Stephen, what Saul now undertook to do. Here call for assigned work: Rev. 7:9-17; I Peter 12-14: Hebrews Chap. 11 and Jer. 11:19-23; 20:1-12.

Review the lesson from the outline on the board by the Topic method.

Truths and Their Application. 1. It is almost impossible to please everybody. Even the Apostles could not do that. There was complaint against them. This complaint has often been magnified by the enemies of the church. As long as we are men, we shall fail to be perfect and we are not to be unduly censured for not being perfect. We shall, however, strive to be as free from cause for censure as possible. But the criticism hurled against the apostles in this instance served a good end and made the organization of the church more efficient through its deacons. So too the criticisms which others make of us or of our work do us good very often.

2. Notice that these deacons were beforehand active workers in the church and known among the brethren for the piety of their life and the simplicity of their faith. The people to be honored in a church or other religious organizations are those who are already interested. It is a poor policy to give people offices in religious work and other organizations to get them interested; they are not fit to be officers in any church or in any of its auxiliaries.

3. You have often heard it said that the blood of the Martyrs is the seed of the Church. It certainly was so in Stephen's case. His martyrdom caused a great persecution to arise against the infant Church and the scattering of its members far and wide. But it was also an entering wedge in Saul's conversion. That Christ-like prayer of Stephen's for his slayers touched Saul's heart. He tried for a time to throw it off by vigorous persecution of the Christians. But it lingered with him and when his Lord appeared to him on the road to Damascus he yielded his heart and life to the spread of the gospel, and advocated the very doctrine for which Stephen had been stoned.

Assignments for Next Time. Ask one to give a short history of the Samaritans; another when and why Jesus had forbidden his disciples to preach in Samaria, Matt. 10:5,6; a third the parable of the good Samaritan, Luke 17:30-37; a fourth Christ's sermon to a Samaritan woman, John 4:4-24. W. A. Harper.

Elon College, N. C.

LESSON FOR FEB. 14, 1909.*The Apostles Imprisoned.

Acts 5:17-42.

Golden Text:—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven, Matt. 5:10.

The prosperity and growth of the church are followed more closely and violently than in the previous attack.

Lesson Theme:—Persecution, its evil, its failure, and how to deal with it.

Lesson Outline.

- I. The Form the Persecution took.
- II. Deliverance from Persecution.
- III. The Apostle's action in Persecution.

IV. Lessons concerning Persecution.

The Form the Persecution Took:—The Apostles were popular with the people, and rightly so, that the rulers did not dare to kill them; but they arrested them, and put them in prison. They regarded the prison walls next best to the silence of the tomb.

The Deliverance from Prison.—God overruled all the persecutor's plans by sending his angel to liberate the apostles thus showing that the leaders were frightened against God and were defeated. It was not only deliverance for the apostles, but a warning and a lesson to the rulers which should have brought them to recognize the claims of the Messiah. With the deliverance, was the command to go right on preaching the gospel in the most public places.

The Apostles' Action in Persecution: They went on fearlessly preaching the gospel, just as if there had been no threats. But the officers again arrested them as quietly as possible and brought them before the courts. They were afraid of mob violence.

By way of observation:

- (1) Popular favor is a great power.
- (2) It is well to make use of this power in the advancement of the gospel.
- (3) But it is unwise to trust it. A very small thing may change the "hal-lujahs" to "crucify."
- (4) It should never be sought as an end. It is worthless except as the result of faithfulness in doing good.

Lessons Concerning Persecution.

What is persecution? It is the employment or administration of any uneasiness to mind or body, in consequence of a person's belief, with a view to change it. It seeks to modify opinion by the use of fears instead of reason.

Among young people petty forms of persecution arise. These every true Sunday-school member should avoid. Sneers and ridicule are inflicted upon those who refrain from questionable popular amusements, who refuse intoxicating drinks, who try to live a pious life.

Persecution has always in it an element of meanness. Hazing in schools and colleges is a form of persecution always practiced upon the inexperienced.

Our duty when persecuted: To go on and do what is right at any cost, but in the spirit of peace and piety and kindness.

The one way to overcome evil is by good.

The three men in Nebuchadnezzar's furnace were all unharmed because the Son of God was with them.

"There are those like the seer of old, Who can see the helpers God has sent And how life's rugged mountain side Is white with many an angel tent."

—Whittier.

TARBELL'S TEACHERS' GUIDE TO THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSONS FOR 1909. (FLEMING H. REVELL, NEW YORK, PUBLISHERS. PRICE $1.

A Review.

This volume is an improvement over its predecessor for 1908, though that was an excellent piece of work. The general plan and scope of the work is the same as that of last year, but the material seems to be handled with more ease and confidence. Last year the lesson was given in the Authorized Version. This year it is given in the Revised Version. This change is largely due no doubt to the fact of the change of publishers from the Bobbs-Merrill Co. to the Fleming H. Revell—perhaps also to the steady growth in favor of the American Revision. It might have been better, however, to give both versions; for frequently the Revised Version is a commentary on the Authorized.

The Frontispiece is a reproduction of an ancient pinacotheca in Munich by Albert Duerer representing Saints Peter, John, Mark, and Paul, identical with that in the 1909 Peloubet's Notes, and is, of course, well chosen considering the lessons we have for the year. Then follow the table of contents and a list of the "Lesson Truths" for each Sunday in the year, which are expounded in full under each lesson—always three, like the sermons of by-gone days with their "firstly, secondly, thirdly," which number we think might be varied for the sake of avoiding the monotony of the thing.

The Introduction comprises some wholesome suggestions, on the preparation and teaching of the lesson and on the use of lesson notes by teachers. A comprehensive view of the books of the New Testament, a detailed examination of each of the New Testament books from which lessons come during the year, a brief, but appreciative life of St. Paul, and very sensible and appropriate paragraphs on the Roman Empire and the Acts. Miss Tarbell is thoroughly orthodox in her treatment of all these topics, though there is abundant room for "Higher Criticism" to creep in. It does not, however, creep in.

Each lesson is treated as follows: The Lesson Text (American Revision), word and phrases explained, Suggestive Thoughts From Helpful Writers, Light From Oriental Life, The Historical Background, The Geographical Background, The Approach to the Lesson, (Rather, The Approaches to The Lesson, since there are always two, one for young pupils and one for adults, founded on a well-known pedagogical principle), Lesson Topics and Illustrations (always three), Sentence Sermons (from distinguished theologians and the Bible itself), The Lesson's Meaning to Us (practical, heart-to-heart talks—these), The Lesson Briefly Told, Subjects for Bible Class Discussion, and Work to be assigned for the Next Lesson. It is not necessary to comment on the appropriateness of any one of these departments of help for the busy teacher—and, if it were, Miss Tarbell has done this herself in the introduction most admirably.

Perhaps the strongest point of improvement over last year's volume is the substitution of "The Lesson's Meaning For Us" in the place of the previous "Personal Thoughts." The substitution was a wise one and carries with it a real difference in aim and method of treatment. There is not a dull page in the book so far as I have been able to see. The interest never lags—for the busy teacher. It is replete with choice material, selected from the masters of the world; it abounds in unforgettable illustrations, witness the one on page 84 for young pupils. In its 455 pages are contained the most accurate scholarship, the deepest piety, and a vital spiritual uplift for any earnest seeker of the truth. There is no better help for the Sunday-school teacher known to me.

It sadly lacks an index. Let us hope that future numbers of this useful and valuable work will be made even more useful and valuable by the addition of an index.

THE COMFORT OF THE CROSS.

The hope of the human heart hangs on the cruellest tragedy that man ever knew. There is no other cruelty comparable to that of the Cross. The Just went there for the crime of the unjust, and the righteous One went there burdened and heart broken for the sins of the unrighteous. Yet in the Cross is our comfort.

Unless Christ conquered by way of the Cross, bore its cruelty, endured its agony, suffered its shame, and triumphed over its trials, then is our preaching vain and hope dies. This world of ours would be all night but for the gleam that comes from the Cross. If I may not live again I would wish ten thousand times that I had never been born. But for the hope of life beyond the shock of death I would bid my heart despair and would wish to burn it with hottest and bitterest tears. And so would other men. We may not say as much with speech or conduct, but in our secret heart we feel and know that we must endure and live again. The Lutheran World prints the following as an authentic fact:

"In a certain place a 'freethinker' had died. Instead of asking a Christian minister to officiate at the funeral, it was arranged to secure the services of another freethinker to deliver the funeral oration. No service of any kind was held at the house or the church, but the procession went at once to the burial ground. After the casket had been lowered into the grave, the orator began to speak. There was no singing, no prayer, no reading from the Bible.

"In a cold, harsh tone the speaker went on to say that we have no proof of life after death. If there is such a life, he declared that the deceased would come into possession of the best that was in store; but so far as we know this life ends all; this may be the last of our friend and loved one.

"In the midst of his agnostical assertions there came an interruption. The dead man's aged mother could not endure such cold-hearted statements. Suddenly she began to cry out, 'No! no!' and placing her hands upon her ears to shut out the sound, she walked away from the grave, leaving the speaker to finish his heartless oration as best he could."

Somehow when it comes to the last analysis, to the crucial, testing time, the heart goes out in hope for something better than man's science or philosophy. The heart of agnosticism is too cold and cruel. Even most wicked and wretched men want that a minister of the gospel officiate at the funeral and burial of their loved ones. Many a man while yet in health and strength seeks to avoid the preacher; but when disease comes and death draws nigh, they are anxious enough that the preacher be near and give a word of comfort, counsel and advice. Sinful men want the comfort of the Gospel in the trying hour.

The world's comfort is in the Cross.

A WORLD MOVEMENT.

Once the keynote was struck it was not difficult for Young Men's Christian Associations, Sunday-schools or Christian Endeavours to become world movements. Each struck a fundamental fact of human nature and so easily became quite universal.

The simple truth in each was that young people, as well as old ones, should be reached for Christ, and put to doing something in moral and spiritual development. Young people had the energy and the will. These only needed outlet for occupation and opportunity. The organizations named supplied the outlet and so created the opportunity. It had been more the province of the Sunday-school to teach; of the two other organizations to do. Christian Endeavor gives young men and young women the privilege to go and do something for the betterment of persons and conditions about them, in the name and for the sake of Jesus.

For this reason in the short period of twenty-eight years Christian Endeavor has spread from one small Society in Portland, Maine, to seventy one thousand societies scattered and planted in all parts of the globe where the name and service of Christ are known.

At the heart of him the young person is a religious being. He has instincts and inclinations that lead him toward the sentiments and sanctities of religion. Young people are not all mean; they are not altogether depraved. The universal sentiment of the human heart is the religious sentiment. That which reaches and touches this sentiment and directs it toward service for God and truth and eternal life, that is a beneficent and a blessed and sacred institution. Christian Endeavor is of God because it gives young people a chance. It invites them to take part and to try. It calls them to service in Christ's name and for His sake. No wonder it has been blessed and is being armed to accomplish wonders for the church and for the salvation of souls. It is one of God's invitations to young people to come in, take a hand and do something—something that is unselfish, manly, noble, Christ-like.

CHRISTIAN BENEFICENCE.

Christianity is ever and always thinking and planning some good thing. It is continually on the alert for a new field to enter, an untried kingdom to conquer. If Christianity had done nothing else than open up new fields for beneficent and charitable endeavor it would well have paid the world for its keep and its requirements.

The State of New York has a Bible Society which last year distributed nearly ninety thousand Bibles. One of the particular tasks of this Society is to employ two men to stay at Ellis Island and give to each immigrant that lands on our shores a Bible, in his own tongue, and a copy also to every sailor who enters the harbor. Nothing but the spirit of Christianity would have thought out a scheme like that. There is absolutely no selfish end to be attained nor base purpose to be accomplished. The spirit of Christianity—deep, unselfish, and liberal—created the plan.

But what does such a plan, besides enlarging the world's labor and commerce in printing and making Bibles, accomplish? What does it bring to pass?

Of course thousands of these books are thrown away and prove of no avail. But that does not balk the energy and effort of Christian beneficence. Now and then one Book reaches its mark, does the work, and so pays all the price of the others. For instance, "The Lutheran" relates this story of what one Bible did:

"A Swedish immigrant landing at Ellis Island lately was given a copy of the Bible by a worker of the New York Bible Society. The Swede stopped, apparently startled, and stared at the worker, saying: 'Weren't you here twenty-six years ago? I think you are the same man—yes, you are the same man." The worker told him he had been engaged for twenty-eight years distributing the Scriptures to the immigrants, and giving to each one a book in his mother tongue. "Well," said the Swede, "twenty-six years ago I landed here a stranger, and you gave me a New Testament in the Swedish language, just as you offered me one now. I read it, and through reading it I became a Christian. After a few years I made up my mind to become a preacher, and for twenty years I have been preaching the gospel in Colorado. It all began with your giving me a New Testament." The Word of God is still 'quick and powerful.'"

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Most of the Generals of the Civil War, who added lustre to the Southern cause, have passed over the river, many of them to rest "under the shade of the trees." Whatever is felt, spoken, and written, in the future, of the confederates must be felt, spoken, and written of that remnant of privates whose unknown history was the glory of that chivalric army, known as "the army of northern Virginia." That army is smaller now than in the sixties, but there are no faded honors in the line of march that stretches from Appomattox to the present time. Many of those loyal privates have fallen along the path of these passing years and wherever a Confederate soldier lies buried is a spot sacred to the southern heart. The recumbent statue of Lee at Lexington, Va., is the symbol of the thousands of unmarked graves of the men who followed their chief. Human life must be measured by the cause for which it stands and not by apparent failure or success. The history of nearly half a century has brought out into the open field confirmation of the claim for which the southern valor suffered and died. There is not a state in this union that does not now respect the confederate soldier and the brave women who stood behind the men who stood behind the guns.

Among the braves whose names have been transferred from the roll of earth to the lamb's book of life was Caleb R. Busby who was born in North Carolina, Feb. 19, 1842. He enlisted at the age of seventeen and was appointed a drum-major in Mahone's Brigade, 16th Virginia Regiment. He spent most of his life in Nansemond county, Virginia. He was a brave soldier during the war and was a member of the Tom Smith Camp of Confederate Veterans in Suffolk after the war.

He married Miss Emily Lassiter of Nansemond county who died December 5, 1904. He died at the home of his son, C. R. Busby, Jr., in Park View, Portsmouth, Va., Dec. 6, 1908, in his 64th year, and is survived by three sons James, Caleb, and Robert; and two daughters, Mrs. A. J. Hutchenson, and Mrs. Albert Young. All reside in Portsmouth.

After services in Portsmouth by Rev. J. W. Harrell, his body was brought to Suffolk and interred in Cedar Hill cemetery, Revs. H. H. Butler and R. L. Walters conducting the services at the grave. Veterans from Tom Smith Camp escorted the remains from the station to the cemetery.

Brother Busby was a member of Suffolk church, but the pastor was in Philadelphia at the time of his death.

"Crossing the river, one by one," is true of the old soldiers of the Civil War; but blessed is that crossing when they are also soldiers of the cross.

Our Christian Endeavor Society will observe Christian Endeavor Day the first Sunday in this month and they have arranged a very good program of exercises, consisting of recitations, solos, duets, quartetts, choruses, and an address by Wilbur E. McClenny, President of the society. The time for the meeting is 3:30 p. m., Feb. 2nd, which is the 28th anniversary of Christian Endeavor which now has 71,000 societies in 71 countries of the world. The society girdles the globe and praises God in every land under the sun. When this mighty army of young people becomes a host of Christian veterans and multiplies itself in the generations to come, it will make this old earth tremble under the tramp of devoted feet. To be in an army that circles the world, and engaged in a battle that saves the conquered, and blesses the unborn, is to be allied to forces that will become an army with banners going forth to the conquest of the world. Every church ought to have a Christian Endeavor society and furnish a few recruits to this army to swell the members and the songs of praises till the sun never sets on the young who are praising God.

NORFOLK LETTER.

At the Memorial Christian Temple last Wednesday evening in connection with the regular prayer meeting service, Bro. T. A. Twiddy was ordained as a deacon of that church. Rev. W. H. Thompson of the 3rd church took part in the service. The prayer meetings of the Temple are noted for good attendance, considering the size of the regular congregations, and also for the spirit pervading the meetings. That church amongst other losses it has sustained during the last two years, has sustained peculiarly heavy loss of deacons—during that period having lost two by death and three by removal.

Rev. Mr. McAlister of the Anti-Saloon League, who was to speak at the third Church Sunday night failed for some unexpected reason to reach there.

I am beginning to wonder if those "Boston Breezes" have frozen the ink of our good Bro. Sailer. I am sure his many friends in this and other sections of the country would be glad to hear from him and his work oftener.

I must apologize for the very poor letters that I have been giving the Sun readers recently, but I hope in just a short time to present to you a plan for some work, that if carried to a successful termination, will mean much for our work. I ask you all to pray that I may be specially led of the Lord in an effort to work it out. I believe the thought is of the Lord—if I can be sure of it, then I shall go forward feeling certain of success.

—The Government and Principles of the Christian Church revised and considerably changed and modified by order of the last Southern Christian Convention and now attractively printed and bound are on sale at The Christian Sun office, Elon College, N. C. The prices are, paper binding, 25 cts., limp cloth, 35 cts., cloth, 50 cts., Persian Morocco, with name of purchaser in gilt, $1.25, post paid. The book contains a sketch of our history, a statement of our position and principles, the form of our government and a directory of our worship and has 137 pages.

—The editor had the privilege of worshipping with our Greensboro First church last Sunday night, the occasion that of the 28th anniversary celebration of the Christian Endeavor. Bro. C. A. Hines was in charge of the services and also made fitting introductory remarks. Bro. J. W. Benton read an interesting sketch of Christian Endeavor and gave valuable facts as to its growth and development. Rev. W. H. Bolton, the pastor, made an address urging the claims and importance of Christian Endeavor and counseled his people to a deeper interest, and a larger membership in the local organization. Bro. Bolton likes his work and the good people of our Greensboro church, and we have it on good authority that his people not only like him but are lining up with him for successful and aggressive work there. It was a pleasure to spend an hour with this interested and interesting people.

My Dear Children and Friends:—

Just see what a list of Cousins this week—21! That's starting off very fine. That would give us $4 per month; but we want 500 letters per month and ought to have them. Wake up, cousins, and let's make new 1909 just ring with our nickles and dimes and dollars! How many new ones next?

This is nice—our two generous hearted friends—Bros. Carlton and Johnson appear side by side this week with their $500 monthly offerings—look out, they will have company soon in their good deeds.

We are grateful to all these friends and churches for their help and we are working to merit their support.

We are using this fine weather to get five acres of land in shape for cultivation this year. We have had just one case of measles in the Orphanage and expect only 23 more—what a time!

Yours for the work,

Uncle Jim.

Clayton, Ala., Jan. 23, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We are late this time, but playing is so delightful these sunny days. And we have a new “joggling” board. Come help us joggle, everybody joggles and chews came down here—O, such a jolly good time!

Our love and dimes.

J. Newman Denton,

S. E. Denton, Jr.

My, how I would love to joggle with you, boys! Have you had a fall yet?

304 Ivey St., Berkley, Va., Jan. 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We will write our letter for Dec., and Jan. I hope you and the orphans had a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Enclosed please find fifty ets. for two months. Your friends,

Pierce Harris,

Ruth Harris,

Louise Harris,

Jack Harris,

Laura Harris.

Glad to place your names a gain upon the new role for 1909. So many from one family makes quite a help.

Boykins, Va., Feb. 1, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here is another little boy who would like the band of cousins, if you have no objections. I am a little boy only twenty-two months old and will have to get mother to write for me until I get a large boy and then I will enjoy writing myself. Love to you and the cousins, I enclose one dime.

Your little nephew,

J. Carroll Barnes.

We certainly have no objections, my man, to your membership and place your name among us gladly. God bless the babies.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 3, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We will send our letter for Feb. Our aunt is visiting us now. I guess she will go home Saturday. We like our school teacher fine. I think she is as sweet as she can be. Enclosed please find twenty-five cents.

Your nephews and nieces,

Blannie Franks,

Bettie Franks

Dwight Franks,

Noma Franks,

Numa Franks,

Then you will learn fast I know children. Glad you have such a nice teacher.

Mt. Clinton, Va., Feb. 2, 1909

Dear Uncle Jim:

We are having cold weather now. Enclosed find my dime. Love to you and the cousins.

Your little nephew,

Ewell J. Argenbright.

Your letter in good time, little man. You are a faithful little member.

Mt. Clinton, Va., Jan. 30, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed find twenty ets. for the orphanage. We saw in the Christian Sun that old Santa Claus visited the orphans and left a good part of his pack of toys with them. He did not forget us either. We had a very nice Christmas.

It is very cold here and looks like the snow king may visit us.

Lovingly, your nieces,

Jessie and Eula Wampler.

The Snow King seems to have forsaken us girls. We wish he'd pay us a visit.

Cypress Chapel, Va., Jan. 31, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come again; hope I will do better in the future than in the past. I go to school and am learning real fast. I am in the first reader, spelling, and arithmetic. On Saturdays I cut down corn stalks for papa and play with my goat. I wish some of the cousins could come and play with me. I am going to try to write each month if I can. Enclose five cents and best wishes to all.

I think Uncle Millard's letter was fine. Your little nephew,

Harvey C. Harrell.

That's right, Harvy, keep up your resolution to write every month.

Cypress Chapel, Va., Jan. 31, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I guess you have forgotten us little children as we have never written but one time but hope we will be welcomed back to the Corner. I am going to school now and am learning real fast; hope it won't be long before I can write for myself as mama has so much to do. We all had a nice time Christmas and old Santa came and brought us lots of nice presents. I got three pretty dresses besides my nice little toys. Uncle Jim, please send me a half dozen of your pictures you have and I will sell them if I can. Enclose 5 cts. and lots of love for the cousins. Your little niece,

Thelma Lee Harrell.

Cypress Chapel, Va., Jan. 31, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

It's the last day of the month but I thought it was never too late to do good. I want to try to write each month if I can, so that's why I start to-day. I am too little to go to school so I stay at home with mama to help wait on grandma. I can bring her water when she wants it. Enclose 5 cts. for the little children. Your little niece,

Mary Ida Harrell.

Helping mother and grandma is a fine occupation Mary. Glad to get your letter.

Roanoke, Ala.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I have been so busy going to school that I would hardly find time to write. Enclosed you will find 10 cts. for my dues for Jan. Your niece, Rillie Stephenson.

Just a word and your dime Rillie, if you cannot write full letter.

THE VALUE OF EARLY TRAINING.

By Rev. D. E. Millard, D. D.

Much has been said and written about early impressions, and there is little danger of there being overestimated, as their effect will last through the whole period of human life.

We begin to acquire knowledge at the very dawn of being, and often learn that which we find necessary afterward to unlearn; and since it is much easier to learn what is right than to unlearn what is wrong, it is highly important that the mind should be early trained to acquire sound knowledge. Let children be trained, and the youth of our land be kept in virtue's path until they reach manhood or womanhood, and they will rarely depart from it.

Vice begins its ruinous career on young minds. Of this our prisons and the confessions of culprits are standing evidences. And that the seeds of piety are sown early we have abundant proof, since to the value of early Christian teachings a vast majority of those who have been eminently pious have borne testimony. Dr. Boardman says: "The law of harvest is to reap more than you sow. Sow an act and you reap a habit; Sow a habit and you reap a character; sow a character and you reap a destiny." Hence the words of the wise man should be heeded: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

In the conduct which prevails too largely in the world today, is a fearful disregard of the principles of equity. How sadly true are these words of an earnest minister of the Gospel: "When an attempt is made to guide and restrain men by suggesting that a thing or course of conduct is wrong, the answer is, 'I see nothing wrong in it; everybody does it.' Every man has his standard, every business its code. . . . Crime is condoned or polliated. Criminals are lionized while they live and followed with pageantry and pomp to the grave when they die. Things are pretty well mixed. There is a large belt of twilights hanging over questions, principles, and usages where ought to shine the noontide sun." Men everywhere, need to be summoned back to first principles. And this work of moral reform should begin with the young at home and in the Sunday-school. They must be trained in morals, and they must be so trained that a part of their mission in the world will be not alone to be virtuous, but to promote virtue and truth, and aid in overcoming vice and error.

A celebrated teacher once said that he had seen boys enough who loved God. He wanted to see one who hated the devil. We need to train the young to hate the devil of avarice, of impurity, of dishonesty, of deceit, of intemperance, of wrong under whatever plausible and insinuating disguise he may come. May the Lord grant to us a trained vision, that discerning good and evil ourselves, we may be able to instruct the young aright.

"Children our kind protection claim;

And God will well approve—

When infants learn to lisp his name,

And their Redeemer love."

Abraham Lincoln.

effects of sorrow and care as I have never seen." Horace Greely writing of Lincoln about three years after his death said: "When I last saw him, some five or six weeks before his death, his face was haggard with care, and seamed with thought and trouble. It looked care-ploughed, tempest-tossed, and weather-beaten, as if he were some old mariner, who had for years been beating up against wind and tide, unable to make his port or to find safe anchorage. Judging from that scathed, rugged countenance, I do not believe he could have lived out his second term had no felon hand been lifted against his priceless life."

Honesty His Wealth.

Lincoln's honesty shines out like a star set in the dome of this night of sorrow and melancholy. Honesty was his characteristic among his contemporaries. He was called "Honest Old Abe." It was his wealth in life and became his legacy bequeathed in death, to every American youth. It was confidence in his honesty that made him President. It is that star of honesty which rests like a Divine benediction upon his heroic head and makes the world set him in an exalted place. It was honesty that made him capable of being the hero in the most tragical hour of American history. But for a large fund of just common honesty, he could never have stood like a towering rock through the four years of terrific storm of mad fury that began to break with the secession of South Carolina. Men thought their souls were tried when Hayne, in the Senate, had finished that speech which stamped pale fear and crouching resentment in the face of his opponents, and when Webster armed with such forensic power as no other American orator has ever shown, finding himself unable to answer Hayne's argument rose above it on the Union, and brought tears of joy to the eyes of friends and foes alike because truth had triumphed over error,—even the error of the Constitution. But that was only a debate. Lincoln was the one American who, in a tragical moment—a supremely tragical moment had to act—to act the hero, save his honesty, save four million slaves from bondage and save a nation from being shattered; and, too, action meant war. It meant the sacrifice of untold thousands of human lives; lamentation throughout the country for tens of thousands of fathers, husbands and sons who should go out to war never to return; and for himself, perhaps failure and shame in the end, such as he had never known in all his checkered experience. The fountains of the great deep of American feeling were already broken up. The horizon was gone. Lincoln was the center of a raging tempest with only honesty as the magnet to control the needle of his compass. Of this war period Henry Ward Beecher said in an address on Lincoln in 1865, "He wrestled ceaselessly through four, black and dreadful purgatorial years, wherein God was cleansing the sins of his people as by fire." Honesty is the gold in the alloy of human character. Lincoln had it in an unusually large degree. His name is above par, even among great men. With no domestic happiness; with a cabinet during his first administration,—three of them aspiring for the Presidency at the convention that nominated him and now secretly trying to supersede him for a second term; with his own party so divided that its hostility lost to him his own state in the election of 1864; and with the incalculable strain of a terrible war upon him as commander-in-chief, with all this, he was as one in a furnace heated seven times hotter than is needful to consume a character of fair appearance, but with little of the real mettle of honesty, yet he came out of it an unsullied soul. It is such lives as Lincoln's that make such lines as Burns's: "An honest man's the noblest work of God" mean so much. Literature is of little value except as reinforced by noble and honest lives.

As An Orator.

It took a great occasion for Lincoln to deliver a great speech, and he was always equal to the occasion. Every one knows about the famous debate with Stephen A. Douglas, in the campaign for election to the Senate, Aug. 21, to Oct. 15, 1858, wherein Lincoln rose to the dignity of a national character in the five speeches delivered during this debate.

The fame of this discussion was the cause of Lincoln's being invited to New York where he delivered the famous Cooper Institute political speech, Feb. 27, 1859. Forty years after this event, Joseph H. Choat, who was present, gave the following account of the speaker and the occasion: "He appeared in every sense of the word like one of the plain people among whom he loved to be counted. At first sight there was nothing impressive or imposing about him—except that his great stature singled him out from the crowd; his clothes hung awkwardly on his giant frame, his seamed and rugged features bore the furrows of hardship and struggle; his deep-set eyes looked sad and anxious; his countenance in response gave little evidence of that brain-power which had raised him from the lowest to the highest station among his countrymen; as he talked to me before the meeting, he seemed ill at ease, with that sort of apprehension which a young man might feel before presenting himself to a new and strange audience, whose critical disposition he dreaded. It was a great audience—including all the great men, all the learned and cultured men of his party in New York; editors, clergymen, merchants, statesmen, lawyers, critics * * *. His style of speech and manner of delivery were severely simple, what Lowell called "the grand simplicity of the Bible" with which he was so familiar—; It was marvellous to see how this untutored man, by mere self discipline and chastening of his own spirit, had outgrown all meretricious arts, and found his own way to the grandeur and strength of absolute simplicity." This speech won him the presidency.

One other famous speech was that delivered Nov. 15, 1863 upon the dedication of part of the battlefield of Gettysburg as a national cemetery. Edward Everett was the orator of the day, and delivered an address two hours long. Lincoln, in the brief space of three minutes, delivered an address of ten sentences that would have entitled him to high rank as an orator if there had been no other great speeches to his credit. Mr. Everett's speech has been forgotten, while Lincoln's has become a classic, and has the distinction of being the only piece of American oratory adopted for study in the schools of England. The secret of Lincoln's oratory was the man behind the words. Indeed, could his friends say, "speak that we may see you." Behind his words was not only an honest man, but also a man chaste and pure in speech and personal life. He did not use tobacco nor drink intoxicants, and never stooped to the ignoble use of profanity.

His Greatest Work.

As great as was his interest in behalf of negro slaves, yet his efforts for them is not his greatest work. Those who regard his emancipation proclamation, Jan. 1, 1863, as his greatest work, lose sight of what the proclamation really was. It did not free the slaves, and if it had been effectual, there were certain counties in Louisiana and Virginia and the entire states of Tennessee, Arkansas, Kentucky, West Virginia, Delaware and Maryland in which the slaves would have remained "precisely as if this proclamation had not been issued." The thirteenth amendment to the constitution, which went into effect Dec. 18, 1865 was what freed the slaves. The one thing of chief concern to Lincoln was the Union and it was the saving of the Union that will forever make Lincoln great in the minds of the descendants of those who wore the gray as well as of those who wore the blue. He was, perhaps, of that same Cavalier blood that had furnished so many statesmen in the former history of the United States. When the tug of war came, he was pitted against the Cavalier spirit that now, in a fit of anger wanted to destroy the flag to the establishment of which it had contributed its full share in human blood. The emancipation proclamation is of far less consequence than the will, courage, and wisdom exhibited in the decision to coerce seceding states back into the Union, and the tenacious integrity that it took to accomplish the task. The emancipation of the slaves would come in time, but a severed Union meant everlasting ruin to the American nation. Lincoln, like a prophet of Israel, felt, doubtless, that God meant to make a world power of this government. None but a prophetic soul could have endured as he did when the divine purpose, as he believed it to be, seemed about to miscarry. The far reaching sentiment in his Cooper Institute speech that Right Makes Might ran through the four dark years of his presidential career and was a fitting motto for his honest soul.

Raleigh Letter.

The work at Raleigh is quite hopeful. The members seem to be much in earnest. Our congregations have been small but very interesting. I have no fear about the future. I feel quite sure that a faithful band like this people with the help of our heavenly Father will not fail. The outlook to me is very bright indeed. I only hope that I may prove to be the right man in the right place. I believe that God had a purpose in directing me to this city. Knowing the field as I did when called to the work I felt that I could not accept the place. I am glad now that I did not run from duty for I see already a great opportunity for our cause in this city. In the strength of a kind heavenly Father I shall go forward. The work is taking on much life. We are working hard to perfect our organizations. We have succeeded fairly well so far. The Sunday-school under the leadership of Prof. S. M. Smith is doing well. The Christian Endeavor Society is making some progress in its work. The opportunity for this kind of work is fine. The mid-week prayer meeting is growing in interest and attendance. The teacher training class has been organized and the class has recited five lessons. The book used is a very good one. It should have a place in all of our schools.

We have some sickness in our congregation. Brother W. B. Mann has been confined to his room for about ten days. Mrs. E. A. Horward has been very ill but is resting better at present. We hope that all our sick ones will be well enough to worship with us next Sunday.
L. F. Johnson.

—A man was arrested in Chicago the other day who is said to have married fifty wives in England and America within the last five years and to have swindled them, during the time, out of $500,000. He palmed himself off as an English duke and at one time occupied quarters at the Auditorium Annex in Chicago that cost him $100 a day. He has been put in the penitentiary, to the sorrow, we suppose of fifty "merry widows."

Weak Heart

Upon the heart action depends not only health, but life. If weak, the circulation is sluggish, and the supply of nourishment diminished. It also fails to carry off impurities. Disease follows from decay and stagnation. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure stimulates the heart action by strengthening the heart nerves and muscles.

"I had frequent sinking spells, sometimes as many as three in a day, during which my heart would seem to stop beating, necessitating the calling of a physician to resuscitate me. Before finishing the first bottle of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure the sinking spells had ceased, and I took altogether five bottles for a complete cure."

IF THE "PASTOR FALLS DOWN."

When the preacher "falls down," the popular way of meeting such a situation is to turn him off and get another. So says the editor of The Interior (Chicago), who apologizes for the seeming slur on the minister. "Being just one human man on a job big enough for a half-dozen superhumans he's only too certain to fall down somewhere sooner or later." The editor's business is not here with the man who falls down, but with the people who straightway turn him off. To them he supplies somewhat more liberal reasoning about the case. Thus:

"That might be fair if the pastor's job was just one plain job that one set of qualifications was sufficient for. Then when he failed in that one line you'd be justified in saying it was all off—that he had missed his calling.

"If a carpenter can't fit two boards together, he'd better go and heave coal; fitting boards is all there is to carpentering. So with most occupations; they are single narrow lines.

"But the business of being a preacher is different; it's about a hundred lines wrapt up into one man's task, and it's beyond any decent and reasonable human requirement to expect any one individual to come out with a hundred-per-cent. success on all of them.

"Just give a minute's clear and honest thought to what a variety of abilities a minister's position demands of him.

"He needs to be a smooth, fluent orator. He ought to have not merely words but ideas too; he very decidedly needs to be a thinker. He needs a lot of book knowledge—theology, philosophy, history, and the like—but it won't do for him to read books all the time; people won't stand for him unless he is also very much of a 'mixer'—perfectly at home among men.

"And of course the modern preacher should be an organizer—masterful as a general in fitting people into the places where they belong. He doesn't dare, however, to show a bit of a general's spirit of command; he's bound to manage people wholly by persuasiveness—which takes enormous persuasiveness. The preacher should be an acute, accurate, discreet business man—in order to keep the church 'temporalities' out of tangle. And above all he must be a spiritually-minded man, though at the same time it is highly important that he must not be a visionary; people won't listen to him if he is not practical.

"Just see what a tremendous bundle of qualities you've got. You could make a lawyer, a politician, a business man, a teacher, a settlement-worker, a popular lecturer, an author, a philosopher, a man-around-town, an ascetic, a military commander, all out of that combination, and have a lot of qualities left over to distribute along a whole line of occupations from family physician to church janitor.

"Yet you're supposing that you've hired the whole combination in the pastor of your church, and are expecting to get the benefit of each of these various elements of strength—all out of one man.

"But you won't; somewhere in the list you're due for a disappointment. If your minister's a great preacher, it's more than likely he won't be very strong on organization. If he's a gentle, comforting pastor, he may very probably be a good deal lacking in the pulpit. If he is a deep student, he may be awkward among men. If he's a hearty good fellow to meet, he may impress you as not very deep intellectually or even spiritually. Some day before long you'll find a weak side to him."

Then the question will come up as to what you are going to do about the discovery. Of course the next preacher will have his weakness, too, is the writer's reminder, with these additional words:

"And you'll do a rank injustice to the man you drive away. No man should be driven out of a pastorate for his defects of ability. There are only four good reasons for shoving out a preacher—his being lazy, being silly, being selfish, or being morally crooked.

"When a minister lacks honor, self-sacrifice, industry, or horse-sense—any one—he's not fit for anybody's pastorate.

"But all other deficiencies than these are curable. Many of them the preacher himself should be able to cure. But all the shortcomings that the minister either can't cure or doesn't cure—these are up to his church to take care of.

"Every church when it calls a new pastor, ought to watch narrowly to see where he is going to fall down. But not to get a chance to complain—God forbid! When the pastor falls down, then the church has discovered where it can help him.

"If the preacher shows up inefficient in organizing the people for work, then that's the signal for the men in the church who are strongest in the knack of organization to turn in and line up the membership for effective results.

"If the pastor seems to get tangled and befuddled when money matters are to be dealt with, then let men used to handling dollars step forward and get the money worry off the pastor's mind.

"If the pastor is slow and timid about calling on strangers and diffident in meeting newcomers, let the folks that have easy social graces go in strong for friendly visiting and hand-shaking.

"If the Sunday-school lags or the prayer meeting is dull, and the pastor doesn't seem to know what to do about it, let the congregation boom those features of work with their own effort.

"If the pastor falls down on his preaching, it's harder for the church to fill in that defect—which, by the way, is reason enough why the pastor ought to try especially hard not to fall down there. But even poor pulpit work a live congregation can do a great deal to remedy.

"They can listen hard; that will inspire the preacher. They can praise his best abilities; that will encourage him to cultivate his most valuable gifts. They can lift detail matters off his shoulders; that will leave him more time for study. They can give him money for books and convocations; those will freshen him. And they can pray for him; God only knows what that will do.

JACK LONDON SAFE.

The special correspondent of the Woman's Home Companion in San Francisco has telegraphed the following message in regard to Jack London:

"San Francisco, Jan. 27, 1908.

"Jack London and wife arrived on the Mariposa, safe and well. Snark laid up for repairs."

London's bankers in Oakland, despairing of his safety, recently recorded the mortgage against his home at Glen Ellen, which was drawn last April in order that the adventurous writer could obtain funds with which to fit out the Snark. It was understood that the mortgage was to be held without being recorded as long as London's safety seemed assured. The action of the bank was taken as an indication that its officers feared he had met disaster.

Jack London left Hilo, Hawaii, on October 27th for Tahiti of the Society Islands on his voyage around the world for the Woman's Home Companion in his little ketch-rigged boat the Shark. He should have reached Tahiti by the first of December, and it was feared that some serious accident had befallen him. With London in the Shark were his wife, James L. Warien, who is captain, Martin Johnson, the engineer, one sailor and two Japanese servants.

London intends to spend seven years on his voyage around the world, describing for the Woman's Home Companion the life and customs and countries of the strange people he meets. From the Society Islands he expects to touch at Samoa, Tasmania, New Zealand, Australia, New Guinea, then up through the Philippines to Japan, Korea and China, and so on to India. After this is to come Europe, the Atlantic Coast of America, and San Francisco again, via the Horn.

The Shark is forty-five feet on the water line, weighs thirty tons, and has an

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

Other men have been able to double and more than double their yield per acre with a liberal application of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers.

Messrs. Lucas & Jackson of Kelsey County, Tenn., used Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer on about 55 acres planted with cotton, and say: "We have the finest crop of cotton we ever saw, and all the people around here think the same. We actually counted 447 bolls on one stalk. Another stalk had by actual count 409 bolls, forms, squares and blossoms. On about 8 acres we expect to make about 2 bales to the acre, and an estimate of adjoining farms not so fertilized and under other cultural methods, will yield only 1 bale to five acres."

auxiliary gas engine, which, getting out of repair, caused the delay that has occasioned so much worry. The engines are now being overhauled at Papeiti. The boat, as originally planned, was to cost $7,000. She actually cost about $25,000 before she left San Francisco, six months late, the terrible increase in cost being due to the earthquake and fire and to the subsequent scarcity of labor.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. I now have one of them absolutely cured and looking as natural as I could ask for. The other one very much improved. I also had it on my feet and they are cured. In the twenty-five to thirty years I have been embarrassed and tortured with skin trouble I have consulted and taken medicine from many doctors, and bought and used many different kinds of ointments, but none gave me relief and satisfaction as your Tetterine has given me. I would not have had my two finger nails just as they were for $100.00.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Liquor Dealers Desperate.—Evidence is accumulating daily of the desperate straits to which the liquor dealers are being reduced in this country. This time the distress call comes from those in high places in the heinous business, from no less a personage than T. M. Gilmore, of Louisville, Kentucky, who is connected with the leading liquor periodical in the United States and president of the National Model License League. Mr. Gilmore acknowledges that the saloon keepers are becoming more and more sensitive to the opinions of the public and so he has a great deal to say about indecent saloon keepers (as if any of them are exactly decent), about the influence of the political boss in the business, and about high license. He proposes a remedy—to make the liquor selling privilege a franchise, a property-right. He cites England as an example—for in England when the government puts a saloon keeper out of business, it has to reimburse him.

We heartily agree with Mr. Gilmore that the political boss is a serious problem in connection with the saloon or alone, but we do not believe it will be possible to separate them unless the saloon is abolished. As to the matter of making the privilege to sell liquor a vested property right, the whole trend of modern life is against Mr. Gilmore. The tendency in this country today is to grant no perpetual vested rights in any public utility. Certainly we would not consider granting vested rights to a disutility, such as the saloon most assuredly is. The rights of the people cannot be safely protected where there are vested rights in matters of this kind. Even the example which he cites, England, condemns his scheme—for the English people are having an awful struggle to regulate the saloon—they can hardly rid themselves of it except by degrees. We want no vested rights in liquor selling in this country.

The encouraging feature in this whole matter is that the whiskey folks are frightened. They deny that prohibition prohibits. Mr. Gilmore does in this modest proposal, but they are frightened at the ominous cloud of temperance and righteousness now rising from the far quarters of the globe. The people have said the saloon must go. The saloon keepers have seen the handwriting on the wall. Their Babylon must fall. The American people have said so and no amount of specious proposing will ever again fool them into giving the saloon keepers a new lease of life. The saloon cannot be reformed from within, Mr. Gilmore; it is a nefarious business and it is doomed. Your ship is already sinking; you had best take to the life-boat and land on the shore of honest industrialism and moral democracy.

Standard Oil Again.—For several years the States of Texas and Missouri have been waging war on the Standard. Both these States have stringent trust laws. These laws the Standard flagrantly and openly violated. It was placed on trial and convicted. In Texas the huge fine of $1,623,500 was imposed on it and its permit to do business in the state was canceled—this because the Standard had purchased the Waters-Pierce Company's business, had driven independent refiners from the market, and had increased the price of oil to the consumers to the point of robbery. The Standard appealed. The State Supreme Court sustained the lower court's decree. The Standard carried the matter to the U. S. Supreme Court. That court also confirmed the sentence. So the fine must be paid and the Standard go out of business in Texas. This is a victory for the law. The Texans are elated.

In Missouri three companies had combined to control the output and otherwise fleeced the people by destroying competition. The Standard and its colleagues in violating the law were haled into court. They were each fined $50,000 and prohibited from doing business in the state. The Standard appealed to the State Supreme Court which confirmed the sentence. Hereupon a notable thing took place. The Standard did not follow its old tactics of appealing to the U. S. Supreme Court. It proceeded to make terms with the State of Missouri, a thing the Standard was never before known to do—for this corporation has ever proceeded as if the law had little to do with the management of its affairs. It has proposed to the State of Missouri that a Missouri company be chartered to take over its property—the Standard to name two trustees and the State two—and that this receiving company report to judges of the State court or to referees appointed by them. This is to establish a permanent receivership, the wisdom of which we very seriously doubt. Receiverships are necessary for business reorganization, but it is no judicial function to manage perpetually a corporation's affairs. That is an administrative function. It is not known what view the people of Missouri will take of these overtures of the Standard, but evidently the Standard has come to the parting of the ways. It has realized that it must "about face" and manage its affairs acceptably to the people. This is one of the most hopeful signs of industrial peace and order we have read of in many a day. We hope the Standard is a convert and that it will not backslide; and even if it does, we know that the people are determined on its permanent conversion or its eventual destruction. The people shall rule.

—President-elect Taft has returned safely from his isthmus of Panama trip and is pleased with the progress of the work there on the canal.

—After three or more weeks of the Cooper-Carmack murder trial at Nashville, Tenn., the jury has been completed and sworn in. The jury has been tried, before they had chance to try the murderer.

—We of the warm and sunny South enjoying so far a winter remarkable for its mildness in weather conditions are poorly prepared to receive and realize the statement that the famous Niagara Falls are choked with ice and only a tiny rivulet not deep or swift enough to carry a log over, is flowing over the American side. The great wall of ice runs from the head of Goat Island to the mainland, the gorge below being choked, and the rapids having lost their fury and the whirlpool is barely in motion. This is only the third time since the white man came that such an event has taken place. The other occasions having been in 1848 and 1903.

FROM THE FIELD.

Wakenfield, Va.

During the month of Jan. we held our several quarterly meetings and communion services. The people of all the churches were well pleased with the work done during our first quarter together.

Our services have been well attended and good interest manifested from start to finish. We are looking and praying that our work here prove much good to the Lord's cause. Third Sunday afternoon, at New Lebanon, we were much pleased to have with us Bro. J. T. Kitchen, who happened to be in the community on business, and through his kind heart, that was overflowing with love, consented to preach for us. His sermon was logical, brilliant and eloquent. We would like to meet our brother on a like business trip again. May God bless brother Kitchen, and help him to run with patience the race that is set before him.

On Friday before the fifth Sunday, Bro. J. R. Holland, one of the contractors in the building of our new church here, and Bro. S. E. Holland, another carpenter, both from Holland, Va., fell from the building and were hurt very badly. Bro. J. R. Holland was taken to my home on a stretcher and remained there two days without any improvement. So on Sunday morning he was taken on a stretcher to his home in Holland, where he has been confined to his room since. Neither of the brothers had a bone broken, but J. R. Holland's back seemed to be injured in some way. S. E. Holland was cut about the face and head. He has returned to his work here.

Bros. R. H. Riedel and J. R. Holland are the contractors of our church building, and they are giving us a good job. We love to have Christian men employed and especially in the building of a church. We hope that Bro. Holland will soon be able to return to his work.

We find the people of our pastorate the best in the world, because they have proven such. A few days ago the kind hearted Christian people of Wakenfield came to our home with meat, flour, sugar, coffee, beans, fruit and money and gave it to us as an act of appreciation of our work among them. The next day Bro. R. H. Hargrave, a big hearted man, drove in to our yard with a load of wood, sweet and Irish potatoes, turnips, fresh milk, butter, and two large joints of meat. A few days later that whole soul brother, J. J. Lincoln, sent us a load of coal.

When coming from New Lebanon,

Monday morning Bro. E. J. Judkins stopped me at his gate and put in my buggy a sack of potatoes and a ham of meat with his best wishes. We know that God will bless these good people and when the end does come they will receive a bright crown. We wish to thank all these good people for their kindness toward us, and we pray God to enable us to serve His people aright.

Our church is closed in and is about ready for the plasterers. We are going to have a nice church when completed. May the brotherhood pray for our success at this place. C. C. Jones.

Columbus, Ga. Letter.

That the old year is past reminds us that the opportunities of another twelve months have glided by and are gone forever from our reach. There comes to mind the familiar, but true, adage: "Lost opportunities can never be recalled." But all have not allowed the opportunities of the past year to go by without making use of them. Many noble men and women have labored zealously and faithfully and have brought to pass things good and true, holy and heavenly. Some would maintain and argue that the efforts put forth, the energy of hand, head and heart, the strong gospel sermons preached, the devout prayers that have gone up from consecrated souls are vain and fruitless. But such is not the case. God's word and God's people have made progress in their mission of peace, light, love and salvation. That some have allowed not only the past year, but past years, to slip by wholly unimproved is very true. That others have done only a part of their duty can't be denied. Almost every one is guilty of letting some duty go unperformed. Is this any reason for giving up in despair? By no means. Yet some incline to say, "I can't" or "I'll not try" because of some mistake or failure. One has said "To err is human; to forgive divine." Some brother does not succeed in business as he would like and leaves off working. His fate in the business world is already written. It takes no philosopher to say what such an attitude leads to. The man in the church who ceases to try on account of his mistakes is doomed to defeat, failure and despair. Why not bear in mind that our Father still loves us and, if we trust Him, he will care for our souls? Remember that each new day brings with it new opportunities, new blessings. So then "forgetting those things which are behind and reaching forth unto those things which are before," let the desponding brother "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

North Highlands Christian Church celebrated Christmas with appropriate exercises. An interesting program was rendered by the children and young people of the Sunday-school on the night of Dec. 24th. A beautiful tree bearing presents for the children had been arrayed beneath the artistic decorations overhead, centering around a large star that shone under the brilliancy of electric lights. This scene beautifully adorned the church for the service held in commemoration of the birth of Christ.

The church in Girard held no special exercises Christmas, except a Christmas sermon by the writer, the fourth Sunday in Dec. The children of the Sunday-school, however, received gifts through the school.

Since the holidays the work at both places seems more hopeful. There is a marked increase in attendance at the regular preaching services. The writer feels encouraged on account of the attendance on the last preaching day at each church. Sometimes it is said that we depend too much on numbers and in many cases it is very likely true. But the numbers must, by some means, be brought to the horse of God if these numbers are to receive benefit of the divine services. Three months on the work in this city convinces me that we have been sorely in need of more people present. So often have we desired, nay, yearned, to see them come. In a measure our desires are gradually being gratified and "yet there is room."

At North Highlands we have a class of ten studying the course in Teacher Training. Our class in Girard taking the same course, numbers seven. Those engaged in this work are highly pleased with the course and enthusiastic in their endeavors to become more efficient teachers. We are fully persuaded that much good will result from our study of "Preparing the Teacher." To our way of thinking this course on Teacher-Training is destined to have a telling effect for the good of the cause we love, in the years that are yet to be.

Say, Brother Pastor, have you encouraged your people to take up this work? If you have no class yet organized, suppose you make an effort along this line and see how it works. It may take an earnest effort. I am quite sure it will. It is that way with a large number of preachers. If the first trial fails, the second might avail.

Waverly, Va.

Dear Brother Editor:—Last Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Faison drove up in my back yard and unloaded great quantities of pantry bounties. These were little gifts that had been gathered up from the members of Spring Hill church and sent me and my family as an expression of the love and appreciation they hold for their pastor. God bless them.

Yesterday afternoon my granary was filled from jam to joist with pea-vines for my horse; and about eight o'clock at night the people of Waverly took me by storm. There was a storm at the front door and a charge at the rear. In an instant my house was filled with men, women and children. A loaded cart was standing scotched to the rear piazza. All hands began to unload and when they had finished the table was full, piled up, burdened, groaning beneath its weight. The floor was covered with sacks and packages, and the pantry was sharing its capacity in receiving the gifts. There was almost everything a pantry, a kitchen, a cook and an appetite needed to make all happy. There was enough coffee to last us a life-time and then have a plenty (We don't drink coffee). There was an assortment of nearly every good thing from candy and fruits to sweet potatoes and hams, and a little money included. We gave our guests the most cordial welcome possible. I am sure no one was ever more welcome to any place. We asked them to spend the night; but "No," they must go and they were soon gone.

We rejoice much that we are so kindly remembered by this good people. We rejoice more to know that the people love their pastor. We rejoice yet more that the religion of Jesus Christ finds a dwelling place here, and this gift is not only an expression of a love for a pastor, but it is also a type of their generosity and kindly feeling toward other people.

Please allow me space to render our very great thanks to every one who has in any way been so kind to us.

WORK IN GEORGIA AND ALABAMA CONFERENCES.

Dear Christian Friends:—

By permission of our kind editor I will give you a brief report of work actually done as proposed in my letter which appeared in December.

Staying over at Brown Springs, Ga., after Conference a few days, on the first Sunday in November at that church I began my work in the Georgia and Alabama Conference. From that time until December 20, my last appointment before Christmas I visited every church in the conference except Enigma, Ga., speaking at every place except Richland, Ga., the revival services being in progress there at the only time I could give an appointment and it being deemed unwise to interfere with those services with any other service. I am planning another visit there in the spring. I attended the District Meeting which was held the fifth Sunday in November including Saturday before with the church at Red Hill, Ga. The meeting was well attended and much interest manifested.

Separate mention and a detailed account of all services would make my letter too lengthy. Will say, however, with the exception of about three places where unavoidable circumstances hindered, I have been greeted by large congregations and without any exception had almost perfect attention. I have been gratified and encouraged by the interest shown by our people generally in all lines of work presented, especially our mission cause, both Home and Foreign, and our Publications. I am more confirmed in my opinion that all that our people need to be even a more loyal and liberal people than they are is to know. I again urge, in the name of our common Master, that our pastors in both conferences give liberally, both of time and energy in presenting the general enterprises of the denomination to their respective congregations in order that their people may keep informed, that they may give more intelligently and more liberally to the support of the cause.

I have also found in many places a distressing lack of organization. I know from experience the burden of over-organization, but if either of the two evils are necessary I prefer that to lack of organization. But with the proper application of sound, common sense and Christian zeal, neither evil is necessary. No church can effectually do Christian service without sufficient organization to give intelligent direction to its religious energy. Scarcity of competent leaders is a great hindrance along this line, but even this can be overcome if the pastors will follow up the efforts I am making to aid them in this work by a little careful and tactful attention given in this direction. I wish to express my appreciation to both ministers and people for their hearty co-operation already manifested and to express my confidence in a continuation of same. I wish to say also in this connection that my confidence as expressed in my former letter as to finances was not misplaced, the work having been self-supporting so far, for which I am very grateful both to the people and to my Heavenly Father whom I believe to be leading and directing in this new effort toward the advancement of His kingdom.

Beside the above reported work I gave some assistance to Rev. H. W. Elder at the new point on Rose Hill in Columbus, Ga., doing some collecting and making more than one hundred and fifty calls in the interest of the work there.

On December 23, I reached my own home after an absence of thirteen months, spent a very pleasant Christmas with home folks and friends. During January I have remained at home doing considerable correspondence and some work in my home church. I spoke there (at New Hope) December 27th, the first Sunday after my return. My stay at home has been pleasant and restful and I take up my work with renewed zeal and energy. I have been unable to make plans so as to make announcements at this time.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

From its name it ought to shine. It has been shining in homes for many years making them glad, cheerful and bright with beautiful words and helpful thoughts. No paper is read with more interest and pleasure than The Sun. It has shone in my home in many a dark hour, making it bright by lifting the thick clouds which gathered over it. It began to shine there in the early days of childhood.

There are papers with much larger circulation, more wealth and influence, because they have the means to become so, but none excel it in literary taste, and religious devotion. The young and brilliant editor gives a good, clean, clear, comforting paper, which is not only an honor to himself, but a credit to the church it represents. Its editorial matter will compare with the best. His style is fluent and easy, sometimes graphic, picturesque and salline, with a variety of expression which pleases and charms the reader.

The news items and current events of the times are noticed with much care and great discretion. There is a smooth, gentle, mellow flow in his language which blends into natural simplicity. To say it plainly, he wields the pen of a great word painter with unbounded zeal and power. With freedom of thought and Christian manliness he makes his way to the goal of truth and honesty.

The Sun swings high up in space and was placed there to shine and give light to other worlds. Hope the Christian Sun will never grow dim but that it may rise high and give its splendid light to many homes. J. T. Kitchen.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—We listen to extend to our beloved friend, Dr. V. W. Slatery, Suffolk, Va. our sincerest sympathy, condolence and commiseration. The water company have decreed that there shall be no more fishing in Lake Killy, an erst while favorite resort of the Suffolk pastor.

—The Brotherhood will receive with gladness, and help in his great work, Pres. E. L. Moffitt, who has entered aggressively on his campaign for "Fifty thousand dollars for Elon College in 1909." The church has always responded, and that to its great gain and profit, to the needs and demands of Elon College. There will be no exception now when farther progress and development are absolutely necessary.

—The editor has been grappling with the "grip" for a week and this issue of The Sun is edited in bed amid dozing, dozing, doctering and dreadful dreams. It's more than ordinarily poor editorial work, therefore, will be pardoned by the patient and pitied by the critic. Prof. W. A. Harper kindly supplies the Editorial Comment of first page which will atone in large measure for the editorial short comings on other pages.

—Orders for the new and revised edition of our Government and Principles are coming in rapidly. It should be so, for the book as now completed and printed should be in every home where our cause and our church are esteemed and honored. The book will tell you clearly and briefly what the Christian Church is, what it stands for and teaches. The prices are, paper binding 25 cts., limp cloth 35 cts., cloth 50 cts., Persian Morocco with name in gilt, $1.25 per copy post paid. Order of The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

—Bro. Lee Johnson, a very promising ministerial student of Elon College, from the Eastern North Carolina Conference, filled an engagement, which the editor, because of grip, could not keep at Wentworth Christian church last Sunday, this being Bro. Johnson's initial effort at a regular Sunday preaching service. This line is written to express the wish, and prophecy, that in years to come, of expected usefulness and influence in the ministry, the good people of Wentworth will remember with pride that they were the first to hear Bro. Johnson and give him welcome, and that he will recall with pleasure the scene and occasion of his first effort to tell the people of Christ and the Cross. We have no doubt that the hour was happily spent by speaker and people.

—Unless we are much mistaken many friends will respond to the call of Rev.

H. W. Elder for funds to aid in building at Columbus, Ga. We have printed in many a week no plea more worthy and urgent than that appended under "Acknowledgements," from Bro. Elder elsewhere this week. Besides this personal note under date of Feb. 13, came:

Bro. Atkinson:—I am making the hardest effort in my life. The Mission Board of the A. C. C. has been so hard pushed that they have only sent me $50 of the $500 promised and this has worked special hardship on me. I am doing all I can and we are going to have one of the best church buildings in the Southern Christian Convention. I will appreciate any help my dear brethren and friends will give me." Bro. Elder's heart, hand and purse are in this work and we trust many Christian Sun readers will heed his worthy and earnest plea.

Elon College Notes.

The lecture scheduled for last Thursday evening was not given, the reason being that Dr. Atkinson was sick. This lecture will be given as soon as Dr. Atkinson recovers sufficiently to do public speaking.

Dr. Moffitt is in the field at work trying to raise the fifty thousand dollars for Elon College. There is at present perhaps no other want so pressing as the raising of this sum. Those who have funds and expect to ever help the college can never find a more suitable time to make their donation than the present.

There was no preaching yesterday at Elon. Prof. Harper made an interesting address at eleven o'clock instead. The Christian Endeavor at seven o'clock was led by Miss Nannie B. Farmer and Miss Bessie McPherson. The Committee on Lecturers for the spring have reported that they have secured Dr. Joseph Pratt of the University of North Carolina to lecture on February twenty-fifth, and W. W. Ashe on March eighteenth.

College life is running smoothly. Little or no sickness, and students orderly and quiet, hard work is being done and the general bearing and deportment is satisfactory. The Elon correspondence in Monday's Charlotte Observer had the following items of general interest:

Elon College, Feb. 13.—Saturday evening, February 6th, the intermediate department in music gave its annual piano-forte recital in the college chapel to a large and appreciative audience of music-lovers. Twelve young ladies of the pupils of Miss Elsie Ramsey, assistant in piano, took part in the program and rendered to the delight of all present choice selections from the master composers of instrumental music. The following young ladies figured in the program: Misses Estelle Butler, Newport News, Va.; Annie Laurie Wicker, Elon College; Wilmer Winn, Baltimore; Vannie Howerton, Greensboro; Allene Patton, Elon College; Lillian Aldridge, Union Ridge; Ruby Michael, Gibsonville; Virgie Beale, Windsor, Va.; Jessie Brinkley, Norfolk, Va.; Macie Farmer, News Ferry, Va.; Louise Davidson, Gibsonville; Beulah Foster, Burlington.

Dr. Moffitt this week received from Rev. F. S. Child, D. D., Fairfield, Conn., secretary of the Francis Asbury Palmer Foundation for the uplifting of education in American colleges and institutes, a check of $500 to be applied to current expenses in the institution. This gift comes at a most acceptable moment for the institution and is very much appreciated.

Dr. J. U. Newman, professor of Greek and Biblical literature, has been giving for the past three months a series of studies in the Psalms on the first and third Sundays in each month. These addresses are highly entertaining, richly instructive and profoundly inspirational and spiritual. They have received the favorable comment of all who have heard them. These addresses have been published in The Herald of Gospel Liberty at Dayton, O.

Invitations are out to the annual entertainment of the Clio Literary Society. This celebration comes annually on the 22nd of February and will fall on that date this year. An interesting and varied program has been prepared, consisting of two-voice solos, a trio, two orations, a humorous recitation, a concert solo, a chorus by the society glee club and a debate on the question: "Resolved, That a national law should be passed providing for the guarantee of bank deposits by the banks of each State." The debaters are Messrs. G. S. Cornwall, Dory, Va., and J. S. Lincoln, Wakefield, Va., representing the affirmative and Messrs. R. L. Walker, Burlington, N. C., and J. P. Farmer, News Ferry, Va., representing the negative. The marshals are Messrs. J. F. West, Jr., Waverly, Va., chief; P. C. White, Marion, S. C., and M. T. Whitley, Windsor, Va.

President Moffitt is a busy man these days occupied with plans and interviews with reference to raising the $50,000 endowment. Encouraging reports are coming in every week with reference to this great work and Dr. Moffitt is meeting with encouragement on every hand.

Boston Letter.

If all the readers of the Sun could come to Boston for a few days and enjoy the gracious revival season with us, I am sure they could not help but appreciate the privilege. Old residents claim there has never been anything like it as far back as they can remember. Thousands are daily turned away from Tremont Temple because they fail to find even standing room. If the tidal wave of enthusiasm continues to prevail to the same extent until the close of the campaign—and it seems to be increasing—it is estimated that more than a thousand converts will result from this gathering together of the people of God.

Dr. Chapman is of course a preacher of exceptional power. Some of his associates in the work are also preachers of more than ordinary ability, but some of them are men of but ordinary talents, and are apparently no more devoted followers of Christ than many ministers whose efforts have been far less abundantly blessed with gratifying results. The secret of power in these meetings therefore seems not to be found in the strong personality of the workers—taken as a whole—nor yet in the measure of their consecration. In my humble judgment, there is but one great underlying principle which is proving the secret of power. After attending many of the meetings, and studying closely the situation, I am quite convinced that I have never witnessed anywhere such a near approach of the abolition of denominational lines as is to be found today in this city. The churches are losing their acrimonious temper. Dr. Chapman declares he is not here to denounce Roman Catholics, Christian Scientists or any other denomination of Christians. He does not profess to agree with them, of course. He said one day in a Tremont Temple meeting that if people chose to differ with him in his view of the atonement, it mattered little to him. The one thing about which he was concerned was that men should come to live at peace with God. He was here to fight sin. He was desirous of joining hands with every force which makes for righteousness. He frankly admitted that he had very pronounced views on the atonement, and that he could not be easily driven from his position on that subject. His contention however, was that men do not so much need salvation from erroneous views of the atonement as they do from sin. Over and over, have I heard the statement made in the various group meetings that the one concern of this movement is to make Christians.

The limits of this letter will not allow me to go into details and tell of how many instances there have been during the past seventeen days of efforts to sidetrack the movement. Issues have been raised again and again only to be lowered at last, for the instructions are to avoid controversy. If the whole church which professes to stand on this platform on which Dr. Chapman and his co-workers really stand, would awake to her opportunity what could she not do in the next decade? Do you see it? The secret of success is being Christians and nothing else. Christians who desire to be only what their name implies—Christians—followers of Jesus—will never know a Methodist from a Baptist if they too are Christians. If I read aright Jno. 17:21, the world will never have a chance to believe in the God-sent character of the mission of Jesus until God's people ignore their differences of opinion to the extent of full co-operation for the coming of the kingdom. Dr. Chapman and his co-laborers are virtually members of our body. Much truer are they to the principles we profess to love than many of our own people—so called.

CHANGES IN CREEDS.

Graham, N. C., Feb. 12, 1909.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—A friend has requested me to give "A full account of just what changes have been made in the Confession of Faith" by the Presbyterian Church South, "during the past hundred years." Also to "state just what was the Creed of the late Henry Ward Beecher, during the last years of his life," and "send the same to the Christian Sun and Herald of Gospel Liberty." I reply. 1st. That I hardly think you will want the article for the Sun. 2nd. The quotation from Dr. Van Dyke answers the first, and a clipping from a paper published in 1885, answers the other question. I hand them both to you.

Daniel Albright Long.

"In a series of sermons on Evolution, which he is just now engaged in delivering, the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher seems to have severed finally any connection he may have heretofore been supposed to hold with orthodoxy. He outlines his peculiar creed in a recent letter to a friend as follows: 'The formulated doctrines, as I hold them, are: A personal God, creator and ruler over all things; the human family universally sinful; the need and possibility and facts of conversion; the Divine agency in such a work; Jesus Christ the manifestation of God in human conditions; His office in redemption supreme. I do not believe in the Calvinistic form of stating the atonement. I do not believe in the fall of the human race in Adam and, of course, I do not hold that Christ's work was to satisfy the law broken by Adam for all his posterity. The race was not lost, but has been ascending steadily from creation. I am in hearty accord with revivals and revival preaching, with the educating forces of the church and in sympathy with all ministers who in their several ways seek to build up men into the image of Jesus Christ, by whose faithfulness, generosity and love I hope to be saved and brought home to heaven.'

The clipping referred to is this:

Church Evolution.

The General Assembly of the Northern Presbyterian Church at Los Angeles voted unanimously in favor of the revision of the Confession of Faith. Of the eleven amendments proposed to the presbyteries not one received a negative vote in whole or in part. One of the commissioners on revision explains that the revision does not mean that the church has changed faith, but that phrases of double meaning have been made clear, while others have been made more explicit. According to Dr. Van Dyke the revision has settled three main points: 'First, the interpretation of the doctrine of predestination—and by this term I do not mean fatalism; second, the salvation of those who die in infancy; and, third, good works are always good, no matter who does them. These three points are the most important in the creed revision, and I believe they have been rightly settled at last.'

Some of the changes made are as follows: Old creed—Elect infants, dying in infancy, are regenerated and saved by Christ. Revised creed—We believe that all dying in infancy are included in the election of grace. Old creed—Neither are any other redeemed by Christ, effectually called, justified, adopted, sanctified and saved, but the elect only. Revised creed—No man is condemned except on the ground of his sin. Old creed—Nor can the Pope of Rome in any sense be the head thereof, but is the anti-Christ—that man of sin and son of perdition. Revised creed—The claim of any man to be the Vicar of Christ and the head of the church is unspiritual. Old Creed—Works done by unregenerate men. * * they are, therefore, sinful and cannot please God. Revised creed—Works done by unregenerate men * * they come short of what God requires.

This revision indicates not the tearing down, but the strengthening on broader lines of the church doctrine. All controversy over the election or damnation of infants is eliminated.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR FEB. 28.

A Few Suggestions.

The Gospel in Samaria.

Acts 8:14-25.

Golden Text:—The people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did, Acts 8:6.

The Review. Last Sunday's lesson completed the first act in the program of establishing the gospel as given in Acts 1:8—the progress of the work at Jerusalem. I would, therefore, today briefly review the history of the establishment of the Church in this city as we have learned it in the first eight lessons of this quarter, which have covered a space of six or seven years. I would pay particular attention to the last Sunday's lesson as giving the real source of the spread of the gospel in Samaria.

Connecting Links. The connecting links are found in Acts 8:4-13. The persecution which followed the martyrdom of Stephen led to the scattering of the early Church far and wide. The apostles, who were yet strict Jews and attendants on the temple worship, who had not yet seen the passing away of the old form and ceremonies and the substitution therefore of a spiritual religion remained on in Jerusalem. It was the men who had "got the larger vision," men who were proselytes to the Jewish faith or who had been reared away from Jerusalem and consequently were unhampered by the ritual of the Jewish system, who were forced to flee for their lives. One of these was Philip, one of the seven deacons and later an evangelist, who carried the gospel to Samaria. Here call for history of Samaritans, assigned last time. Also other assigned work having to do with Christ's relations with the Samaritans; When and why he had forbidden his disciples to preach to them, Matt. 10:5-6; How he taught respect for them, Luke 17:30-37; A sermon he preached there and its results, John 4:4-24. One of Philip's converts was Simon Magus, the magician, of whom we hear much in our today's lesson.

Incidental Instruction: Give your class a clear conception of Philip as a deacon and as man: The chief characteristics of his preaching were freedom from the ritualistic customs of the Jews and the proclaiming of the spiritual Messiah, Christ. Give them also a conception on the extent of the belief in magic of that day. The world was full of superstition. Magicians were appearing on every hand. Simon had been remarkably successful, so much so that the people thought that God was surely with him. Simon looked upon Peter and John as magicians who could beat him.

The Lesson: Our lesson today falls into three divisions. Write these on the board as they are developed in the teaching.

I. The Church at Samaria Confirmed, verses 14-17. Discover who at Jerusalem heard of the work of Philip in Samaria, whom they sent, why, what they did when they had come down, for what they prayed for them, what had not yet come upon the Samaritan converts, what the extent of their baptism was (what the extent of our baptism is), what they laid upon the Samaritans, what they then received.

II. Simon Rebuked, verses 18-24. Learn who of the Samaritan converts did not receive the Holy Ghost, why, what he offered to give for it, Peter's answer to him, what Peter commanded him to do, in what condition Peter declared him to be, Simon's answer, why his request for prayer must have been unavailing (He prayed to avoid the consequences of his sin, not to be cured of his sins).

III. An Evangelizing Tour, verse 25. Find out what Peter and John did before they left the new church, whither they then returned, what they preached as they were returning, where.

Review the lesson by the topic method by the outline on the board.

Truths and their Applications: 1. If you want evidence of the power of the Holy Spirit to change a man's life, it is certainly found in the case of John and his dealings with the Samaritans. We read in Luke 9:54 that John desired to call down fire from heaven to consume these people because they would not receive Jesus. Today we find him preaching to these same people and praying for the descent of the Holy Spirit upon them. The Son of Thunder has become the Apostle of Love, through the quickening, regenerating power of Jesus Christ.

2. Paul told the Philippian jailor that, if he believed on the Lord Jesus Christ, he would be saved. We read in verse 13 of Acts 8, that this Simon Magus believed and was baptized. But manifested that he was not a Christian. How is that? Simon's belief was intellectual assent only, it was not a living faith; he had laid hold on it, but it had not taken possession of him. It was not controlling his life. Faith, what we might call intellectual assent or belief, is worthless in our relation to Christ. To believe on him is to give him the lead and guide and control of our lives. Our faith must live in us and through us and issue in deeds and conduct if we are to be saved by it.

3. The Sin of Simony, which takes its name from the despicable man mentioned in our present lesson, is not entirely gone from the church today. Simony is trafficking in sacred things. Simon desired the Holy Spirit that he might give it to others for a price. He hoped to make gain from it. So he was willing to pay for it. So with many Christians today. They covet the positions in the church for the "pull" they will have with the members in a secular way. They are willing to make liberal contributions to secure these positions. They are guilty of Simony and they reap its rewards. There is room for them to repent—even Simon Magus was assured by Peter of the opportunity to be saved. But how many of them will grasp this opportunity?

4. Home Missions ought to receive great attention from us today, fellow teachers. This is the first home mission lesson we have had this quarter. There have been lessons with home missionary tendencies, but this whole lesson is a missionary one. Let us insist upon the duty of giving support to this great cause. Give your class a few facts about home missions near you and the good in consequence thereof. Show that the Christian religion is essentially missionary.

Assignments for Home Study. Ask one to be prepared to give the class a clear conception of Ethiopia and Gaza; another to find how the prophecy in verse 32 was fulfilled in Christ from Matt. 26:52,67 and 68; Matt. 27:12-14, 7-31; a third to find under what circumstances Jesus had said this prophecy was fulfilled in himself, Luke 4:17-21; a fourth to prepare a short essay on the need of Bible Study.

LESSON FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 21, 1909.

Stephen the First Christian Martyr.

Acts 6:1—8:3.

They stoned Stephen, calling upon God, saying, Lord Jesus receive my spirit. Acts 7:59.

The time of this lesson is four or five years after the resurrection of Jesus and the gift of the Spirit on Pentecost.

The trial took place in the hall of the Sanhedrin, near the temple at Jerusalem. The execution probably was near the brook Kedron, opposite Gethsemane, in the valley between Olivet and the city on the northeast, to which place the Gate of St. Stephen now leads.

I Stephen's Address. The address was almost entirely Scriptural. It was a historical argument. It was the presentation and interpretation of the course of history that brought out neglected facts. It was an extempore rehearsal from memory of facts.

The address refutes the charges against Stephen, that he spoke blasphemous words against God and Moses, and the law, and the temple.

It was a defense of the truth.

This address shows Stephen's gentle graciousness, his acquaintance with scripture, his power of logic, his courage and fearlessness, his unselfishness, his zealous temperament and his faithfulness to duty.

II. Stephen's Martyrdom. The death of Stephen was a murder and not an execution.

The method of stoning was that the witnesses placed their hands upon the head of the criminal in token that the guilt rested upon him. The culprit was stripped of all clothing except a cloth about his loins, and was thrown to the ground from a scaffold by the first witness, the second witness dropped a stone upon the chest or over the heart of the criminal and if this failed to cause death the bystanders completed the execution.

As Stephen was thus being stoned he arose upon his knees and cried so that his prosecutors could hear, "Lord lay not this to their charge," and "he fell asleep."

III. The Martyr's Crown. Stephen's name signifies in Greek a crown. He has received three crowns. The beautiful crown of grace with which the Lord adorned him, the crown of suffering, and the heavenly crown of honor.

Stephen's Christian life was short, but he accomplished much. Stephen's success was shown in that he preserved his manhood untarnished amid great temptations. He was a hero. He was gold tried in the fire. No person's life is a failure who is a moral success, and is a victor on the battle-field of the heart.

Stephen's example is a star which never ceases to shine. He holds up an ideal of heroism, courage, faithfulness to duty, and is a perpetual inspiration. "In heaven he wears the victor's crown, and dwells forever in the joy of his Lord, 'eating of the tree of life which is in the midst of the paradise of God,' 'a pillar in the temple' having 'the morning star' and 'the new name.'"

'If thou wilt be a hero, and wilt strive To help thy fellow and exalt thyself,

Thy feet at least shall stand on jasper floors;

Thy heart, at last, shall seem a thousand hearts—

Each single heart with myriad raptures filled

While thou shalt sit with princes and with kings,

Rich in the jewel of a ransomed soul.' "

IN THE LAND OF FISH, FRUIT AND FLOWERS.

(Some times it becomes necessary for an editor to betray the most sacred trust he has. An instance is now at hand. Even at the risk of incurring the displeasure of a very dear friend we give the following lines to print. It was a purely personal letter, but so fragrant with the very atmosphere in which it was written, and with the splendid and happy Christian spirit in which it was conceived, that we wished for others to enjoy it with us. No one will be so much surprised to see the lines in print as will the friend who was only trying to cheer the editor and give him a glimpse of good things he may not now hope to see or realize.—Ed. Sun)

Huntington Hotel, St. Petersburg, Florida, Feb. 3rd, 1909.

My dear Professor:—How many times have I wished for you here to go fishing. My! You would have the time of your life. I have never seen anything like it, and seeing is believing. Right down in front of us is a big dock, which, by the way, is more like a pleasure pier than a dock, to see the rush for fishing stands every day, Anglers rushing and pushing to get the best places for the big fish on the dock. The fish are called Groupers, and are very fine. They have been going out in the Gulf of Mexico to catch them, but are now catching them here on the pier, and we go down daily to see them. Some weigh forty pounds. Louise caught one weighing eight pounds. They use a gaff, there being only one on the dock and the anglers run from place to place to get that one. One man gives his line to a man to hold while he goes after the gaff. When he reaches after his fish, some other disciple of Isaac Walton takes it away from him to have same treatment in return. It is like a circus to see them, and besides being fine sport is great fun.

Last Saturday morning the very air was blue with "quaint expressions" and rushing fishermen, and it is said that even the pelicans were smiling as they passed. Those who faced the weather that morning had fine sport, and, the stay at homes are sore.

I wish for all my friends to be here, but if you were here I don't know what we would do with you: you would almost jump overboard. In fact I know you would—for they go in bathing almost every day from this wonderful pier.

But all the joy here is not in the water. It is indeed grand to see the green trees just loaded down with oranges and grape fruit. We went an eight mile trip on open trolley cars with groves on both sides as far as the eye could see, and many trees so full they were touching the ground (grape fruit is heavy you know). On our return we were not satisfied with riding along and seeing, we got off the cars at Phenix farm, or grove, and went in and a nice little lady, Canadian by birth, came out and said they bought that field and started the groves thirteen years ago. And it was the prettiest sight at all to see palmettoes and oranges growing together, and the pineapple too. My, the very atmosphere was fragrant with the odor of pine-apples and oranges. The different kinds of oranges were interesting, pine orange, king orange, tangerines, mandarins and the tiny little kamquat, perfectly delicious, and the Japanese paw-paw, a common looking little melon, some what resembling our canteloupes only slick skin and instead of growing on a vine it grows on a tree. We ate some, and my, how palatable, then the little guava, about the size of a lemon, that just melts in your mouth. We bought two dozen tangerines, pulled them off the trees ourselves, ate all we wanted, and our little lady said, "Now if these are not good, when you come again I will give you more." She said the white worm did them damage in their early start and they were not perfect this year. In her yard there were palms of every variety, date palm, sage palm, and flowers of every quality, kind and color, roses, hibiscus, primroses, and a lovely vine that covered the porch, just loaded with yellow flowers in full bloom. It was a great curiosity. When we were ready to go she cut flowers and gave us.

We went last Wednesday to a lovely little Island, and spent the day, called Pass-a-grill, Gulf on one side and Tampa Bay on the other. I remember when a child, reading, also studying, about the lovely shells on the Gulf of Mexico. It was no longer an anticipation; it was a realization. I picked up shells on the Gulf side all day until well worn with stooping. Prof. this is surely God's country; every body looks happy and every thing is pretty. When happiness is in the heart it is sure to break out in the face. I don't think the devil has a hand in any thing in this place, or around here. I said to our landlady, "Why do you all leave your doors open all the time?" She said "Mrs. Jones, if a thief were caught here he would be lynched before night, no such thing as stealing here." Now another instance.

Important Notice.—As readers will see, The Christian Sun is now published at Greensboro, N. C. The office of publication there is 302½ South Elm Street. Our editorial office, however, remains at Elon College, N. C., to which all letters and communications to the Editor should be addressed, as heretofore.

THE ONE OBJECT.

We shall not forget, brethren, that all our preaching and teaching and church going and giving and getting and labor and life come to this: Winning souls to Christ. In this, God has exalted men above the angels. For unto the angels has he not given the power and privilege to preach the unsearchable riches of the Cross, but unto poor, weak human creatures. God's resources were infinite and boundless in the matter, and He could have commissioned angels, as well as men, to make known the message of an arisen Redeemer, but Wisdom saw it was best to commission men.

This work of winning souls is so many sided that every child of God has a part in it. Houses must be built in which congregations may gather to worship and to hear the gospel. He who helps by gift or effort to build such a house is helping to win souls to Christ. The ministry must be supported that it may give its time, talent and energy to the work of preaching and teaching the gospel. He who helps in the support of the ministry, therefore, is helping in the world's one work of winning souls to Christ. Young minds are to be taught the Word of Truth, and inspiration that they may be susceptible to holy and heavenly influences. He who teaches and labors in the Sunday-school is, therefore, helping in the world's one and most important work of winning souls to Christ.

Why are churches, why preachers, why Sunday-schools? They are here to this: To win souls to Christ.

This then we shall not forget through all the year and through all our labor. True we have a revival season only once a year, sometimes not that often. But all the work of all the church of all the months of all the year are to this one end. The fifty one weeks are a preparation for the fifty second. We are preparing and laboring and preaching and praying that when the season, or the opportunity comes we may be successful in winning souls to Christ. When we do this we have done all: when we fail of this we fail of all.

The message of the pulpit, the errand of the Sabbath-school, the object of the church conference, the purpose of the church paper, all of these, brethren, and ten thousand other agencies, we shall not forget, is to win erring souls to a knowledge and to a love of Jesus Christ. Glorious, grand and holy work!

ABIDING THE DIVINE WILL.

There are many kinds of men and women, young, old, and indifferent pursuing the Christian life. With these, their several temperaments and dispositions, one and the self-same Spirit deals in His various manifestations. It comes about, in consequence, that there are diversities of gifts, to the one the part of wisdom, to another much faith, to another gifts of healing, to another prophecy, to yet another the discerning of spirits, and many other varied wonders worketh this one and self-same Spirit.

All this was told us by an inspired writer many, many centuries ago. Strange indeed it is then that the Christian of one peculiar and particular gift will decide that this is the gift that all Christians should have and must have in order to be Christians at all. All have not the same gifts.

There was a time when many believe even the late Alexander Dowie, now of notorious and ignoble name and memory, had peculiar gifts and wonderful marks of divine favor. The use of these gifts brought him fame and favor. He thought then, and taught, that all men, in order to be Christians, must believe as he believed and share and show the gifts that he had. Such relief made him an autocrat in his own mind and soon drove him from God and truth and virtue. Alexander Dowie, and all his kind, try to "corner on" divine favors, form a monopoly of "special gifts."

The good and great Dwight L. Moody at the height of his power and influence often prayed it is said, "Lord, keep me humble." Failing of this one grace many a man has missed his goal and ruined all. "Lord, keep me humble." No man gets so good, grand or famous as not to need continually the godly grace of humility.

There are many wild, strange, extreme views and beliefs among Christians. These extreme beliefs had goodly and gracious origin and parentage. The ones who hold them were once humble, complacent, trustful and walked in the divine way. They now need the heart and prayer of Moody, "Lord, keep me humble."

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING.

The committees appointed for the purpose met at Elon College recently, as was told in these columns last week, and decided to call a meeting of the young people of the Christian churches of the Southern Christian Convention at Elon College, May 29-31, 1909. This is not to be a mass meeting, but an assemblage of representative young people from our churches throughout the Convention on a basis of Church membership. The Constitution is printed elsewhere in The Sun. As will be seen, moreover, this is to be a permanent organization, as is our Southern Convention, meeting once in two years.

This movement should mean very much for the young people of our Church. It gives them an opportunity of coming together for Christian service and opens up a field for activity and co-operation among the young people of the churches. Sun readers will learn of the proposed Convention, and all its detail, from the pen of Prof. W. P. Lawrence, Corresponding Secretary of the Young People's Department of the Southern Christian Convention.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

SUFFOLK LETIER.

William Cooper was born in 1820 before the days of railroads, steamboats, telegraphs, and telephones; before the days of mowers, binders, separators, and washing machines. He was married to Nancy Elizabeth Powell February 27, 1855, and they lived together in happiness for more than fifty-three years.

He died at their residence in Suffolk on corner of North and Market streets on January 5th, 1909, and was 89 years old. His wife survives him, though very feeble.

They were the parents of seven children, five daughters and two sons as follows: Martha Sarah, Alexander, Mary Frances, Indiana, Sarah Ellen, Martha Elizabeth, and Wm. Loyd. The two oldest died unmarried, and all the others are married.

There are 23 grand children and all are living. Four great grand children, 2 dead and 2 living. The whole offspring 34 and only four of them dead. The total number of surviving offspring is 30.

He had been a member of Bethlehem Christian church for 50 or 60 years and was a very faithful member. I was his pastor for four years, 1884-1888, and Rev. H. H. Butler has been his pastor for 20 years since 1888. He loved Bethlehem more than any spot on earth and the funeral services were conducted from that church on Sunday 3 p. m., January 7th. Rev. H. H. Butler, his pastor, conducted the services, and was assisted by this writer. Brother Butler paid a good tribute to this veteran of the cross.

Brother Cooper was in the Civil War and was in many battles. He was a quiet and peaceable citizen after the war, and died respected and loved by all who knew him.

His grand sons were pallbearers, and the church was crowded with old neighbors and friends.

The choir sang touching songs and the tear-filled eyes of a great congregation made the obsequies solemnly tender.

The time had already been appointed for his youngest son, William Lloyd Cooper to be married to Miss Sallie Etta Rawles, on Wednesday, January 10th, 1909, and the only change in their plans, made by the death of his father, was they abandoned the bridal trip to Washington and other cities.

At the residence of Deacon Wm. H. Barnes, on North Street, the uncle of the bride, at 9 o'clock on Wednesday, Wm. L. Cooper and Miss Sallie E. Rawles were united in marriage in the presence of a goodly company of relatives and personal friends. It is well that the marriage altar can take the place of the funeral occasion. If there were nothing but funerals and graves the shadows would be so thick that sunshine could not penetrate the gloom; but the marriage altar brightens up the human heart and opens new fields for mind and heart and we forget the grief in the flush of new joy. These experiences all come and go quickly, so naturally, that we seem to be borne along a current that leads us ever upward to better things in Christ.

The young groom and bride are both members of Suffolk Christian church choir, and are held in high favor as active workers in Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor.

The 28th Anniversary Christian Endeavor exercises in our church last Sunday were good and greeted by a house full of people who very much enjoyed the hour. W. E. McClenny's address on The History and Purpose of Christian Endeavor was pronounced by the audience as very good. W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

The Virginia Anti-Saloon League held its annual meeting at Epworth M. E. Church, this city, from Tuesday to Thursday night. There was a large attendance, being between three and four hundred delegates present. One could not look into the faces of those men and hear the reports of work done and discussion of plans for the future, without feeling that the President, the Rev. W. C. Taylor of Petersburg was right in the poem with which he closed his responsive address, to the address of welcome—"Virginia's Going Dry."

By the stillside on the hillside in Pittsylvania all is still,
And the only damp refreshment must be dipped up from the rill.

From the ocean to the mountains, from Potomac to the Dan,

This pesky whiskey business is ever more beneath the ban;

And its useless at the fountain to be winkful of the eye—

For the cocktail glass is dusty and Virginia's going dry.

They are crying, "Water, water, every where, and not a drop to drink,"

They no longer hear the music of the mellow crystal clink,

And when the Colonel and the General, and the major and the judge

Meet to have a little nip to give the appetite an edge,

They find the nog is nogtess, and the rye has gone awry—

For the punch-bowl holds carnations and Virginia's going dry.

Rev. J. W. Harrell was with Bro. Ryan at Rosemont Sunday afternoon in the interest of the Portsmouth work and I hear got a right nice collection.

Bro. Ryan preached to a large congregation at the Temple Sunday night—a special sermon to the members of the Brambleton Athletic Association.

At the Third Church, had a good day with several visitors in the congregation in the evening. J. W. Manning.

Portsmouth Letter.

Since our last letter we have visited the following churches and secured in cash subscription the following amounts:—Berea (Naus.) $306; Third Church, Norfolk $118; Liberty Spring $146.25. We have canvassed among other congregations, but will not report the result until we have visited them and completed the canvass. Each church will be credited with the amount given by its membership. The churches visited and the congregations canvassed have shown a substantial interest in the work. It is almost certain we will build this year. The plans are being drawn for the new church and arrangements are being made to dispose of the houses on the church lot. Now is the time for every one to lend a helping hand and make the matter of building this year an absolute certainty. We must have at least $5000. We are asking the churches of the Conference to give us this amount. We have to date, in cash and subscription on the above amount $2239.13.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We present you quite a liberal report this week; though our children are busy with their lessons and only three took time to write; yet our Sunday schools and friends and churches have almost surprised us—No, not a surprise, for the Lord works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform; and our Orphanage work is nothing but the work of God wrought out by childish hands. And the work continues to gain in commendable proportions.

Our Burlington Sunday-school lacks only a few cents per month of feeding and clothing a child—averages between four and five dollars. Berea (Norfolk) is coming up nicely and we hope soon they will report monthly. Catawba Springs was one of the first schools to respond to the call, and we do not believe they have missed a month. We look for their letter Tuesday after 1st Sunday. Union Grove is another school which is proving regular and faithful.

Bro. S. C. Hobby of R. F. D., Raleigh, N. C., again remembers us with a $25.00 check. We believe this is about the 5th year Bro. Hobby has so liberally aided us; and we thank him for his deep interest. Union Church (Virgilina, Va.) is a little late with her Thanksgiving offering but $ $ are always acceptable, also Bro. Hunt of Beulah Church, Ala., has been out Hunting sends us up $7.40. Spoon's Chapel S. S. gives us an offering but we could not tell whether it was intended for a monthly S. S. or Special, so we make it special. Parks Cross Roads makes additional cash offering with the donation which is about the third time they have sent in since Thanksgiving. Our good Bro. and old school mate, J. D. Wilkins, kindly remembers us with a liberal donation for which we are very grateful. All in all, dear friends, we are very happy and thankful that so many of you have given us your sympathy and liberal help—but we must not forget:

The donations:

D. C. Heath and Co., Publishers, 239 West 39th Street, New York kindly donates us 20 Hyde's 2 Book Course English, No. 2, and 20 copies of same Book No. 1. These books were exchanged books but all in good condition and are a great help to our children. We thank them very sincerely for this liberal gift.

From Parks Cross Roads, Randolph Co., N. C.; J. W. Parks, 1 bu. corn; Hugh Coward, 1 bu. corn; R. W. York, 40 lbs. meal; C. F. Burgess, 1 bu. wheat; W. T. Foushee, 1 bu. wheat, 1/2 bu. corn, 12 1/4 lbs. meat; J. R. Rightsell, 1 bu. wheat, 10 lbs. meat; T. J. Green, 1 bu. wheat; T. B. Parks, 16 lbs. meat; J. W. Burgess, $1.00; T. R. Burgess, 50c; J. C. Stout, 50c; J. W. Brown, 25c; W. A. Stout, 25c; Jas. A. Stout, 50c; J. P. Stout, 5c; G. C. York, $1.00; Mrs. J. C. Stout, 25c.

Thus the good friends aid us in feeding as well as clothing, educating our orphan children. The day we visited Parke's the weather was very unfavorable and only a small congregation were present. We are grateful to all these kind friends.

We found our first family of pigs at the Orphanage last Friday, (Feb. 5th) 4 white and 4 spotted; we hope they will do well and that we will be able to report them to you again next Dec.

Best wishes to all.

Yours sincerely,

Uncle Jim.

Taro, Va., Feb. 6, 1909

Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed find my dime for February. I am going to try to send my dues in the first of every month. I go to day school in the week and Sunday-school on Sunday when the weather is good. We live five miles from church.

With best wishes for you and the Orphanage, I remain,

Yours truly, Susie R. Watson.

All right, Susie, that is a nice decision and I hope you'll be faithful and write every month.

1003 Nicholas St., Henderson, N. C.
 Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come with my dues for January and February. Enclosed please find 20 cts. I close with much love to all the cousins. Your loving niece, Addie Newman.

Thanks, Addie. We missed your letter for Jan. So glad you have started on another year.

Henderson, N. C., Feb. 5, 1909

Dear Uncle Jim:

I failed to write last month, but I will make up for it this time. So I send twenty cents, my dues for Jan. and Feb. Papa keeps a beef market and wood yard, so it keeps me very busy delivering wood and meats after I get from school.

With best wishes for you and all the orphans, I close. Your nephew, Clarence Newman.

We will have to excuse you Clarence, since you are helping Papa, for 'tis a very nice thing to do.

On my way from Clar-Water to Belleview—to see the grand Belleview Hotel we passed a large public school, and it was recess and all boys, and right by the side of that school house was a large orange grove, trees loaded down and ground covered, and those boys right there and not touch an orange. Had they been Norfolk boys not an orange would be on those trees.

There is a revival going on, but I cannot see much here to work on unless it is the visitors from every state, (myself for one.)

Well, I must stop for my head is bewildered, and my eyes are dazed from such wonderful sights. I feel that I can never thank my dear husband enough for giving me this grand trip, and thank my Heavenly Father enough for giving me strength and health to stand the trip and enjoy it. Heaven's blessings attend you.

As ever your friend, and Aunt,

Holland.

Mrs. Annie Gertrude Holland, wife of Charles L. Holland, and daughter of W. T. and Mary E. Eli's, departed this life at the home of her parents near Holland, Va., Jan. 28, 1909, aged 20 years. The funeral was conducted at the home by the writer and the remains buried in the new cemetery near by. Beside husband and parents, the deceased leaves four brothers and three sisters. We deeply sympathize with them all in this sad death and pray a Heavenly Father's richest blessing of guidance and consolation. Mrs. Holland had been a member of Holy Neck church from childhood.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

Whereas, the Southern Christian Convention, in regular session in the city of Greensboro, N. C., April 26, 1908, authorized the co-operation of the Committees of the Young Peoples' Society of Christian Endeavor and the Sunday School in calling a convention of the young people of the Southern Christian Convention for the study of the best method for aggressive Christian work among the young people of the Christian Church, the said Committee met at Elon College, N. C., Jan. 21, 1909, pursuant to a call issued by the Chairman of the respective committees, and adopted the following constitution and by-laws. (subject to the approval of the Executive Committee of said Convention and afterwards of the Southern Christian Convention for the conduct of said body.)

Sec. 1. Name. This organization shall be a part of the Southern Christian Convention and shall be known as the Young Peoples' Department of that body.

Sec. 2. Purpose. Its purpose shall be to promote the social, intellectual, and religious life of the church membership especially among the young people.

Sec. 3. The Representative of this Department shall be a Board of fifteen members appointed at the next session of the Southern Christian Convention and biennially thereafter, provided, that the present Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Committees be constituted said board until the next regular meeting of the Southern Christian Convention.

Sec. 4. The Department shall have as its exponent a biennial convention the first session to be held at Elon College, May 29-31, 1909, and the other sessions biennially thereafter.

Sec. 5. The membership of the convention shall consist of delegates elected, (1) by the various Sunday School Conventions within the bounds of the Southern Convention on the basis of one delegate for every 25 members or fraction thereof. (2) from Young People's Societies of whatever name working under an organized church on the basis of one delegate for every 25 members. (3) all regularly ordained ministers of the Christian Church, South, and the members of the Board shall be ex-officio members of the Convention.

Sec. 6. The Convention herein before provided for shall have the following Departments: Sunday-school, Christian Endeavor, Missions, Moral and Civic Life.

—There is a bill pending before the Legislature of N. C. directing the issue of one and a half million dollars State bonds for the permanent enlargement of the charitable and educational institutions.

—After one year of prohibition in Atlanta, "the metropolis of the South," the police reports show, says The Constitution, a decrease in arrests of 8,810; a falling off in fines collected of $34,350; and a decrease in fines worked out on the streets of $10,388. No, dear reader, prohibition does not totally prohibit, for there was drunkenness in Atlanta the past year, and sore arrests and some fines; but prohibition does evermore decrease the number of these deplorable nuisances and by all sane argument under high heaven is therefore justifiable.

"TURKEY GOBBLER STRUT."

In an address Sunday evening at the First Christian church Christianity and war were said by Rev. C. Summerbell, D. D., to be inharmonious, if the recorded teachings of Jesus are a test of what christianity is. As the flower of Judaism, the Christ saw and knew that love and kindness were the quickest and best way to bring about the kingdom of God, not war or retaliation, or legal restraint. The Old Testament plainly teaches retaliation, but the Old Testament philosophy had been superseded by the New Testament, in which the method of war was ignored, because, Dr. Summerbell said, the real battle had been carried to the higher realm.

War might have its uses in the future, as in the past, but it was a stage coach way of travel in comparison with love and sacrifice, which typified the electric method of the heart. The United States could not be called a Christian nation unless it recognized the fundamental philosophy of Jesus, and the secretaryship of war be merged into a secretaryship of peace. The "big stick" must give way to the big heart, because God's truth is marching on.

In the turkey gobbler strut of our navy around the world, both good and evil had already happened. The South American republics were impressed to imitate us, and the Italian sufferers were helped. It is simply wonderful how much the naval officers and their friends, the people who build battleships and furnish supply, want and demand a navy to keep the peace. This year they asked, and he hoped in vain, for more than England spends on her navy, one-third more than France, Germany or Japan.

Is it because we are cowards that we fear to use the method of Jesus, love, rather than the method of Caesar, force? We have tried the philosophy of force for centuries, why not give the philosophy of love a trial?—Fall River Daily Herald.

—Charlotte had its street scene tragedy and murder last week when a citizen, J. G. Hood, was shot to death in broad day light amid the passing throng in front of the Central Hotel by another citizen, W. S. Biggers. Now for another sensational murder trial and—a probable acquittal.

—In joint session of House and Senate at Washington, Feb. 10, the electoral vote of the States for President and Vice-President were counted, William H. Taft of Ohio and James S. Sherman of New York receiving 321 votes; William J. Bryan of Nebraska and John W. Kern of Indiana receiving 162 votes. Necessary to a choice 242 votes.

"We Americans need to be saved from commercialism and from rationalism. How can we better be saved than by giving of our abundance for missions and watching the great miracle of the evangelization of the world? And yet this movement is not a financial movement. It asks much in dollars but it asks first of all for life to be identified with Christ's business. No man has money enough to discharge his obligation to Christ. Money is the cheapest thing you can give. It is your time, yourself, that counts. I believe that men are craving for greater interests in their lives—the interest that missions give."

—Business failures in the United States for the week ending with February 10, were 211 against 286 last week. 326 in the like week of 1908, 204 in 1907, 208 in 1906 and 243 in 1905.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MARRIED.*Wrenn-Rawlings.

On the evening of Jan. 27, 1909, Mr. B. F. Wrenn, of Dendron, Va. and a member of Union Christian church, and Miss Ida Rawlings, of Dendron, Va., a young pretty popular girl, were united in marriage at the bride's home. The bridal company drove to Mr. John Huber's, a friend of the groom, where a most sumptuous supper was served.

C. C. Jones.

Hargrave-Hancock.

The afternoon of Feb. 6, about 4 o'clock, the popular young farmer, of near Manry, Va., and the pretty seventeen year old maid, of near Wakefield, Va., were married between heaven and earth (on buggy) on the public highway, half way between Dendron and Wakefield, as the birds were singing their evening song. C. C. Jones.

James-Savage.

Sunday morning, Feb. 7, just before preaching service at New Lebanon Christian church, Mr. W. E. James, and Miss V. E. Savage, both of Elberon, Va., were married at the home of the bride, after which the bridal company drove to church. Mr. James, and Miss Savage are fine young people, and will live in their home community. We wish all of these young couples all the happiness that life can afford. May God bless them. C. C. Jones.

Joyner-Carr.

At the home of Rev. H. H. Butler, 207 Chestnut St., Suffolk, Va., Feb. 3, 1909, Mr. Geo. W. Joyner, a prosperous young farmer near Zuni, Isle of Wight Co., Va., and Miss Hurley M. Carr, a very pretty and accomplished daughter of Mr. D. W. Carr, near Windsor, Isle of Wight Co., Va. The young couple returned to the bridegroom's home where a very delicious reception awaited them. May their lives be long and happy together. H. H. B.

Harcum-Milteer.

There was a beautiful marriage at the residence of Mr. John Thomas Milteer, near Holland, Va., on the 3rd inst., when his oldest daughter, Miss Susie Belle, became the bride of Jesse Quinton Harcum. The parlor was tastily decorated in evergreen and a large company of relatives and friends were present. The ceremony was performed by the writer. Mrs. J. K. Jones rendered the wedding march. The attendants were Dawson Harcum, best man, and Iva Milteer maid of honor, Alto Byrd and Della Howell, J. H. Eley and Ollie Holland, E. C. Clark and Iola Gomer, Lindsay Garner and Mollie Harenum. A sumptuous wedding supper was served at the home of the groom, near Whaleyville, Va., where a large company were present and spent a delightful evening. These are nice young people and we wish for them a most happy and prosperous married life.

N. G. Newman.

Blythe-Joyner.

On Jan. 14, 1909, at the parsonage, Mr. James Blythe and Miss Nicholas Joyner were united in marriage. Only a few friends came with them. The good wishes of many friends go with them.

Blythe-Lankford.

Near Franklin, Va., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Lankford, the home of the bride, Jan. 24, 1909, Mr. Collin R. Blyth and Miss Daisy Belle Lankford were united in matrimony. Many friends and relatives were present to witness the ceremony. Their future home will be near Prethlows, Va. C. H. R.

Pierce-Hall.

There was a very beautiful marriage solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Louisa Frances Hall near Isle of Wight court house, Isle of Wight county, Va., Wednesday, Jan. 13, at 10 o'clock a. m., by Rev. H. H. Butler, the contracting parties being Mr. Andrew Jackson Pierce, a very prosperous and influential farmer and Miss Emma Frances Hall. The bride is very pretty and well accomplished and therefore has a great many friends.

The parlors were beautifully decorated with potted plants and evergreens. The bride's Bro. Mr. George Hall acted as best man and Miss Eula H. Pierce, niece of the bridegroom, acted as maid of honor. Mrs. James A. Whitley played the wedding march. After the marriage ceremony, which was very solemn and beautiful, there were many congratulations and good wishes given them and they were driven to Smithfield, Va. where they took the steamer for Norfolk, Washington and other Northern cities. H. H. B.

Langton-Woodard.

Mr. Z. T. Langton and Miss Lillie L. Woodard were united in marriage, Jan. 22, 1909 at the home of Mrs. M. C. Kitchen, the sister of the groom. After the ceremony a sumptuous supper was served. Their home is near Holy Neck Church, Nausemond Co., Va. They have the best wishes of a host of friends.

day-school, therefore be it resolved;

1st. That we bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will, knowing that "He doeth all things well."

While she will be greatly missed from our community, we feel that she has gone to receive her reward in Heaven.

2nd. That our Sunday-school has lost one of its brightest members. She patiently bore her sufferings with a Christ-like spirit, therefore, let us try to imitate her example.

3rd. That we extend to the bereaved family this expression of our heart-felt sympathy in their great loss.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy be sent the Christian Sun and each of the county papers for publication, and a copy be recorded in the minutes of this Sunday-school.

Bell.

Whereas it has pleased our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom and love to remove from our midst little Mary Ellen Bell, the 8 year old daughter of Mr. E. L. Bell and one of our most faithful Sunday-school scholars, be it resolved by the officers and members of the Berkley Christian Sunday-school,

First, The Sunday-school has lost one of its brightest members. We do hereby express our sorrow at the loss we have sustained by her death and extend to the family our heart-felt love and sympathy.

Second, That we bow in humble submission to our Heavenly Father's will knowing that "He doeth all things well," while we miss her we feel that she has gone to receive her reward in heaven.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to the Christian Sun and a copy recorded in the Minutes of the Christian Sunday-school.

Rosser.

Susan Rosser was born April 24, 1844, and died Jan. 27, 1909, making her age, therefore, 64 years, 9 months, and 3 days. Sister Rosser was a consistent member of the Methodist Church, she having connected herself with that church about forty years ago. She leaves to mourn their loss one brother, two sisters, a husband and nine children.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Linville Christian Church, and the body laid to rest in the cemetery near by. A. W. Andes.

Huff.

Mrs. Amanda Huff, was born April 29th, 1830, died Jan. 27th, 1909, aged 78 years, 8 months, and 28 days. She was the daughter of Christina Cummings and was married Nov. 24, 1860 to Mr. E. P. Huff, at her mother's home, by Rev. J. W. Howe, of the U. B. church. They lived together in holy wedlock about 45 years. Her husband preceded her to the Spirit world in April, 1906, at the ripe age of nearly 85 years. They were members of Bethlehem Christian church, and were loyal, consistent Christians, good citizens, and kind neighbors. ## How to Increase the Yield of Fruit

Increased fruit crops are more often the result of good management than of good luck. Fruit trees and fruit plants need a liberal supply of

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

The trees absorb plant foods—that is, nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash—from the soil just the same as any other crop. Experience has shown this over and over again. This truth has become so well recognized that "return to the land what the tree removes if you would expect the best results" has become an axiom with the best growers.

Apple, pear, peach, orange and other fruit trees soon respond to careful fertilization. But be sure to use the best fertilizers.

"I made a test with other companies' fertilizers," says Mr. H. O. Lowry, of Manatee County, Fla., "and yours proved to be the best. The yield where I used Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer, was just twice as much as where the other two companies' fertilizer was used." Hundreds of users say Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers are cheapest because of their good qualities—give better satisfaction and quicker results.

Many facts of great interest and value to fruit growers are published in the new 1909 Farmers' Year Book, a copy of which will be sent free on application to any of our sales offices.

the time, but stood the trip very well, however, in a few days she grew worse, and for three weeks she suffered a great deal at intervals, and for 36 hours she suffered continuously. She was perfectly rational and calm until the end came, and expressed her willingness and readiness to go and be at rest. Two of her nephews, Charles Wise and Rev. #### Atkins.

Brother Josiah Atkins was born April 4th, 1832, and passed over the river to the home beyond recently. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Mary Conch. There were four children to this union, one girl and three boys. These all preceded him to glory except one, J. W. Atkins who is a deacon of O'Kelley's Church serving loyally in this work. His second wife was Miss Mary Lee. To this union were born three children, all boys. One of this number died last summer with typhoid fever. He was a consistent member of Mt. Pisgah Baptist church. Brother Josiah was formerly a member of Mt. Pisgah Baptist church. For twenty years he had been a faithful member of O'Kelley's Chapel where he ended his career in loyal service. He was busy about his daily work around his home. He walked into his kitchen where his wife was busy about her domestic work, dropped on the floor and died suddenly. So ended the life of a good husband, and father, a faithful church member, a good neighbor, a loyal Christian. The church sustains a loss, the community will miss this neighbor, but none will miss him like his good companion whose faithfulness is worthy of emulation. His funeral was conducted by the writer who has known the family all his life.

May heaven's blessings rest upon all the bereaved ones. He was laid to rest at Berea church. A. P. Barbee.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The History Of A Day.—We some times feel that when we have read the current events of a day in a daily paper we have read the world's history of a day. How far of the mark! We have only read the world's crime of a day. Do you know that virtues are so constant, natural and universal that no paper would be large enough to print them? When one has read the history of wars and fightings and political intrigue and social upheavals, one has not then read the history of mankind. This was man's history at his worst. The millions of men pursuing the ways of peace, truth and righteousness had nothing of their deeds told in press or print. The real day's or world's history would be not merely a record of the vices, but a portrayal of the virtues of men and women.

In his "Development of Personality" the lamented poet, Sidney Lauier, draws this picture: "It is true that Jones, the bank clerk, was yesterday exposed in a series of defalcations; but how many thousands of bank clerks on that same day resisted the strongest temptations to false entries and the allurements of private stock speculations. It is true that yesterday Mrs. Lighthouse eloped with the music-teacher, leaving six children and a devoted husband; but how many thousands of Mrs. Heavyhearts spent the same day in nursing some drunken husband, who had long ago forfeited all five; how many Milly Bartons were darnng six children's stockings at five o'clock of that morning; nay, what untold millions of faithful women made this same day a sort of paradise for husband and children."

He who would understand mankind, know events, issues and measures about him, must take into account the virtues of these teeming millions who love peace and pursue it, hate sin and flee from it.

Yet, strange as it may seem, many have cultivated their tastes for sensation and vice till the very reading about the ordinary and virtues is insipid and dull.

Rev. Dr. Kilgo President of Trinity College well said the other day:

"That must be a dreary household into which no news comes except the news of murders and thefts and gambings and adulteries and all other crimes. Nothing but pessimism of the gloomiest sort can reign in such a home. The members of such a household never hear a note of heavenly song, they never see a ray of cheering light, they never form acquaintance with that noble company of men and women who are working for righteousness, and they cannot but feel that the earth is the one of incurable evil.

"It may not be saying too much to say that the majority of American men, women, and children know more of, can tell more about Harry Thaw, John Sullivan, and Peter Hains than they know about and can relate of Dr. Charles Eliot, Bishop Wilson, George Stuart, and their kind. It is a miserable bunch of scoundrels that many newspapers march through our homes daily to be introduced to our parents and their children. It is well to have some papers that have acquaintance with clean, high-minded and godly folks who are doing good, and can bring them into the home circle that the members of the household may have some acquaintance with the decent folks of earth."

The Inter-State Commerce Commission.

The 22nd annual report of the Inter-State Commerce Commission has just come from the press, a valuable pamphlet of 96 pages, which we would be glad for our readers to read. The report shows beyond doubt the effective work this Commission is doing in the interest of the business community and of the American people. The report chronicles the many matters it has been called upon to adjudicate during the past year and then makes some very sensible proposals for the greater efficiency of its service.

One of these proposals is the request that Congress enact a law allowing the commission to pass on the reasonableness of an increased rate before the rate is put into operation. This is but just. The railroads have always insisted that before a rate should be reduced, they should have a hearing. This claim of the railroads the public has respected.

Even after the railroads have had a hearing and a rate has been passed, they frequently resort to filibustering to retard its operation for years. This method of the railroads we condemn—we believe that they ought to give the rate a fair trial and than appeal to the courts if they have lost money. And we are glad that our Supreme Court has recently so held. But we do believe the people also have a right to be heard before a rate is advanced—the only body competent to hear evidence and pass on such a proposal is manifestly the Inter-State Commerce Commission. We therefore favor this request.

The Commission further requests that Congress enact a law compelling railroads when requested to publish the regular rate on any article and to so state their answer. This also is but just. It is time the tariffs are required to be publically displayed in every railway office, but it takes a specialist to unravel them. A shipper applies to a railroad for the rate on a certain article—say coal—the railway furnishes one. The shipper accepts it. The next month he is haled into court for accepting a rate less than the published tariff. The court holds him, not the railroad, responsible. Manifestly this is unjust. The Commission desires to make the railroad equally culpable before the law. We favor this also.

A third request is not so obviously just. It relates to the Commission's right to summon witnesses, without complaint by an outside party, and to compel them to answer. Recently, it will be remembered, the Supreme Court decided that the Commission did not have this right, on the ground that it was prying unduly into private affairs which must be protected except where their protection involves injustice to others. The Commission denies that a railway's affairs are private affairs and asserts that such power is necessary to them if they are to prevent watered stock and other schemes of "high finance." This recommendation is not an unmixed evil. In the hands of demagogues it might mean disaster to our industrial arteries, for that is what our railway systems are. We should think long and hard before we endorse this proposition.

FROM THE FIELD.

Abanda, Alabama.

It has been some time since I had anything to say through The Sun. The churches that I have this year are Christiana, Forest Home, New Home and Macedonia. I am just from Macedonia. It takes three days to make the trip, but it is always a pleasure for the pastor to be with the people at Macedonia. They are planning to build a house. The lumber is all about on the yard. The church when completed will be worth about $800.00. We have a faithful little band at this church. The people at Forest Home have the lumber ready to ceil their church. They have a weekly prayer meeting and they have also organized S. S. at this place.

I go to New Home second Sundays. We have some faithful workers at that place. The church needs ceiling. I hope the way will open up so they can ceil it.

This is my third year at Christiana. It has been a pleasant work. Brethren, I need your prayers for the work. It is hard on me this time but I feel that if I will trust God He will open up the way and make the burdens light.

J. H. Milam.

Wakefield Notes.

Our new church here has begun to make a nice appearance, and when completed will be the most handsome buildings in town. It is closed in and has taken its first coat of paint. The entire building will be painted perfectly white, and having galvanized sashings the appearance will harmonize with our principles. Our 36 inch church bell was installed, and its mellow chimes were heard for the first time this morning, Feb. 16. We are anxious to hear its Sabbath calls, and see the town and country people gather for worship. Our people here have sacrificed and we feel that but few have worked as Bro. J. H. Harris has to erect a church building here. The Christian people throughout the Virginia conference are interested in our building. The writer was in Suffolk some time ago and met with Bros. J. P. Lee, and R. L. Gaskins, and they donated $2.50 each toward the building. Since that time the writer was in Waverly and happened to see Bros. Elmer and H. H. Gray and they gave $10.00 each. We always find the Gray boys ready to help in any good cause. My people at Dendron have shown their interest in our work. The following persons have helped us through the writer's solicitation:

Mrs. A. G. Higgins ..... $5.00
E. T. Atkinson ..... 5.00
L. E. Johnson ..... 5.00

J. W. Calton ..... 5.00
A. J. Calton ..... 5.00
J. D. Hart ..... 2.50
A. N. Jordan ..... 2.00
M. Persell ..... 2.00
C. Collier ..... 1.00

There are many others who are going to give and they will be reported later. The C. M. A. sent us a check for $200.00 and the Christian conference $100.00. We wish to thank all of these good people and pray that many others will remember us as these have. C. C. Jones.

THE LIFE WITH A MARGIN.

An Address Delivered at Elon College Sunday, Jan. 10, 1909, By W. P. Lawrence, M. A.

Matt. 5:38-40.

Our subject is a comparison of the Mosaic law with the teachings of Christ as regards the conduct of the individual. We want to emphasize the wisdom of the life that has a margin; that sets bounds for itself wider than the requirements of the Law as set forth in Exodus and Leviticus where the spirit of retaliation and revenge is countenanced. We want to emphasize the wisdom of a reserve, of a margin in life that is suggested by Christ in the verses on which these remarks are based.

He said, "Ye have heard that it hath been said, 'An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth;' But I say unto you, that ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also, and if any man will sue thee at the law and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go with him a mile, go with him twain."<sup>13</sup> This is a concrete precept, probably, to be taken, not literally, but figuratively. Then its meaning and application are suddenly so expanded as to cover the entire range of human life. The first part of this three-fold precept as to resisting personal attack, when taken figuratively covers the whole range of evil assaults that one may suffer from his fellows in the entire experience of social business and professional life.

The second part gives direction for one's conduct towards the requirements of all law, religious, civil, and social. The third part of this three-fold precept enjoins the conduct of Christian wisdom towards all who may be over us in authority or influence.

The person without a margin of moral character and self possession finds it difficult to resist the quick, but desire to strike back when struck in anger, and even more difficult not to resist the malicious, fiery stab of a slanderous tongue by a counter thrust with a like weapon in his own possession. There is a vague feeling, however, in the Christian heart, more clearly felt in some than in others,—that this precept of Christ's is based on wisdom deeper and wider than any other teacher ever set forth.

The Christian heart thrills with the quickening power of this truth when in a moment of righteous indignation, because of some wicked assault from a vile emissary of the prince of darkness, it finds room in the broad margin and perspective of Christian wisdom to resist the attack by a stratagem far superior to, and far more effectual than meeting the enemy with weapons like his own. The life that is bound within the narrow limits of the Law—"an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth"—lives by a marginless code, and has never known that higher, sweet freedom which that same life might know, if set in a "large place," in such as David found his soul even when a homeless fugitive dwelling in Judean mountains and caves. It was by living under this higher law of resisting personal assault that George Washington gained a victory over Conway, Gates and Lee in that wicked and malicious, combined attack they made on his character during the Revolutionary War. His code of conduct had margin enough to give his soul free play. And possibly, no other victory in his life, as military leader or moral hero, is of more value in perpetuating his illustrious name.

The apostle Paul is another example of a man with a wide margined life. It took more than an ideal based upon the "An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" gauge of life, for him in the hour of persecution. His soul was not within narrow walls guarded by revenge, but ranged in a wide place where there was room for freest action and easiest escape in the hour of peril.

But if we should turn to such a soul as Benedict Arnold, we would find a pitiable scene. A soldier of great physical courage and personal bravery, but set in so narrow a place as to allow no room for strategic action in the hour of great peril. Revenge thus became his only defence, and ruin, disgrace, and infamy his only heritage. In the old chapel at West Point hang shields inscribed to the memory of the officers of the Revolution. Many an American youth at that famous school, in training for the perilous business of war but for the glorious purpose of defending his country is impressed with the answer to the question, "Why is that shield over the entrance there under the gallery without a name or other inscription? when he is told that that shield is for Benedict Arnold, It is perhaps, only the life of wide margin that can live up to the rather difficult command: "Be angry and sin not."

The life with a margin is also vitally connected with the second part of the Saviour's teaching we have under consideration. Whoever makes exaction of us in the name of the law or by the authority of the law will find in the life of wide margin a spirit not only to meet that requirement but a willingness and a cheerfulness to go beyond and over and above all legal exactions. This fact is true with reference to social and civil law alike. If the child has already began to set the margin line of his life beyond the line of parental law, his conduct is abundant in obedience towards all known authority of his parents, and with each test of his expanding soul, he breaks new ground and sets the margin line still farther out, and there is added freedom of heart, hope, and spirit. When he is told that it is the Christ spirit within him that is prompting this soul growth, he understands a larger meaning than before in the words of Jesus when he said: "I came that ye might have life and that ye might have it more abundantly."

The student who lives the freest and happiest hour on recitation is not he who has drawn in the boundary lines of his preparation to the limits of the one question he is most likely to get, but it is he who has set his margin line of preparation as far as the limits of the lesson. In a certain college a German class came in for recitation. The professor called on Mr. A. to read. He read through the first paragraph and stopped. "Go on," said the professor. The student continued to the end of the page and stopped again. "Go on," was the professor's directions a second time. He read to the end of the second page and looked up when the same monotonous "Go on" came a third time. Thus the unusual procedure continued while the class experienced a feeling of mingled astonishment, fear, and amusement until Mr. A. had read, with ease and fluency the entire ten pages of the lesson. At the next meeting of the class Mr. A. had a similar experience, but came out of it with equally as great success. He had made an impression upon both professor and fellow students that he always had margin enough for any emergency.

There is an account in each of the three first gospels of a young man who came to Jesus during his ministry and inquired what he must do to inherit eternal life. At first Jesus told him to keep the commandments. He replied, "All these have I kept from my youth; what lack I yet?" If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me," was the Saviour's reply. But when the young man heard that saying, "he went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions." He had set the margin line pretty wide—wide enough to include the keeping of all the ten commandments, but it was not quite wide enough, He had striven to comply with only the letter of the law and had succeeded but could not pass the test of the wide margined, liberal soul.

Finally we come to consider the precept of the Christ regarding the individual life in its behavior towards those who exercise superior power or authority. If compelled to go one mile, be willing to go two is the teaching. A sullen, begrudging compliance with authority is not in keeping with the idea that the growing soul must have a margin for expansion. I once saw a carpenter who would throw down his hammer with a nail half driven, when the call, "Time is up" greeted his ear. He was the first man to be "laid off" when any of the crew was to be dropped. The employee who watches the clock scarcely ever gets a position.

The parable of the ten talents recorded in the 25th chapter of Matthew illustrates the fatal consequences of niggardliness in the human soul as contrasted with the wide margined soul. There is no intimation in the Bible story that the master in giving out the talents, on his departure into a far country, intimated that he would expect an increase to be returned with the original loan. The servant with the one talent was a narrow soul, without margin, and hence there was no room for growth or multiplication. The fatal judgment pronounced upon this narrow, unprofitable servant upon the return of the landlord, should be a warning to every one who upon examination of his own soul, finds no margin there.

It appears to me that Christ hid a volume of meaning behind the figurative language in these verses we have been considering and a part of this volume of meaning is the truth that we have here briefly set forth.

Our final conclusion is that there is no freedom or real liberty for the narrow, niggardly, stingy soul, and no such soul can be found in possession of the real spirit of Christ, but at the moment of the real entrance of the Christ spirit into such an imprisoned soul, it finds itself in a "large place" with the margin line constantly being set farther out. Perhaps this is what an American boy poet meant when he said:

So live, that when thy summons comes to join
The innumerable caravan which moves
To that mysterious realm, where each shall take
His chamber in the silent halls of death, Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night,

SOCIAL BENEFITS OF CHRISTIAN SONG.

Religion is a social force. It breaks down the middle wall of partition which divides men and burns up the prejudices which separate them. Of all religious exercises singing is the most social in its character. In preaching one person speaks while the rest listen in silence. In public prayer one leads while others follow in thought, and earnest longing. But in singing all may unite in the same song, and as they sing together they are drawn nearer to each other. If ever one feels like taking every member of the congregation by the hand it is while singing together with them a song of Zion. Many a bitter feud has been swallowed up and lost in the volume of a Christian song.

Our logic does not unite us. It rather tends to alienate us from each other more and more. Our philosophy does not break down the barriers that divide us. Our science cannot reconcile us to our neighbors. There is no blending power in science. It is not a melting force. Even theology fails to reconcile men to their neighbors. But when the music begins we all begin to feel that there is something in the soul deeper than science, deeper than logic, and in that mysterious depth we are all one. Wesley and Toplady could not agree in theology. The contention was so sharp between them that, like Paul and Barnabas, they parted asunder. But when Toplady wrote "Rock of Ages cleft for me," and when Charles Wesley wrote "Jesus, lover of my soul," they could all sing these songs together with one accord. Their theology divided them, but singing united them. They were wide apart in doctrines expressed in theological terms, but they were close together in their doctrines expressed in holy song.

If a discord should arise in a church it cannot be banished by discipline, nor by argument, nor by fighting, but a holy song may heal the breach. The string of a musical instrument which is not touched will respond to the music of another string which is struck in the same key, because there is essential harmony in it which cannot be silent when it feels the vibrations coming from a kindred string. Fill the church, fill the

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. G. O. Lankford changes his address from 309 29th St., Columbus, Ga., to 2735 Beacon Avenue, Columbus, Ga.

—The Editor after grappling with the grip for ten days is at his desk again joyous and happy, with thanks for many messages of enquiry.

—Rev. J. W. V. Collins assisted Pastor Fleming last Sunday morning at the Burlington Christian Church in the ordination of four deacons.

—Rev. Frank S. Child, D. D., a favorite of visitors and lecturers at Elon College, writes regretfully that he cannot visit the College this spring, but indulges the hope and expectation of coming at another time.

—These were Dr. Staley's subjects at the Suffolk Christian Church last Sunday, Morning: "Christ Manifested Through the Christian," Text II Cor. 4:6-10. Evening: "The Motive Power of Love," Text, John 14:23.

—At the Main Street Christian Church, Berkley, last Sunday, Pastor Bryant presented to his congregations these themes, Morning: "Jesus in the Midst." Evening, "The Christ Under a Supreme Command."

—Rev. S. L. Baugher, Conshohocken, Pa., the pastor who is always busy and accomplishing something, received two members into church fellowship Feb. 7, and has organized an adult Bible class for men with twenty two members. His work moves along well.

—This is a high compliment paid to our Sunday School Teacher Training book by Rev. Frank S. Child, D. D., Fairfield, Conn. Dr. Child is a man of great culture and scholarship, is himself the author of many popular and successful books, and the unstinted praise from him of our book is a tribute to its excellence that the authors of the book will rejoice in with pardonable pride. Our Sunday-school teachers will also find pleasure in the thought that they have at their disposal one of the very best books there is published for use in preparing themselves for their work.

—A great many of the pastors are ordering the Government and Principles now revised and brought up to date by order of our last general Convention for their people. The book should have wide reading for members of the Christian church know all too little of their own principles, practices, ceremonies and way of doing things. The paper binding is 25 cents per copy, limp 35 cts., cloth, 50 cts., Persian Morocco with name of purchaser in gilt $1.25. Order of The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

—The Montgomery Advertiser in its issue of Sunday, Feb. 7, carries a fine cut of a former Elon College man, Mr. A. Rudolph Eley and a most flattering and extensive write up of Mr. Eley's successful business ability and achievements. Mr. Eley has been made manager of the advertising department of the Advertiser over many competitions and The Advertiser rejoices in his acquisition to its staff. Rudolph's many Elon and Norfolk friends will rejoice at his promotion to this lucrative and responsible position. He will, with his bride, says the Advertiser, make his home in Montgomery.

—Our friend, Rev. B. F. Black, Secretary of the Street Railway Y. M. C. A., Memphis, Tenn., seems to be a busy and a successful servant from a report of work recently sent us. There are 438 members enrolled, 88 of whom were secured the past month. One item of the report, "Number of baths given 1520," would indicate that Bro. Black is a busy man and is doing something to keep his Y. M. C. A. men clean—which is well since "cleanliness is next to godliness."

Then the report closes with a still more interesting item, and this is to the point, "Let us plan for a real revival of old time religion, and try to feed the spiritual man as well as the physical. The harvest is passed, the summer is ended and we are not saved."

—Pastor J. W. Holt reports a large audience and a pleasant service at Bethlehem church, Alamance, last Sunday. Three members were received. He reports that the venerable and much esteemed Bro. Eli Iseley for many, many years one of the pillars in Bethlehem church is now very feeble in health, but full of years and hope of eternal life.

—A revival of religion without precedent or parallel is in progress in Boston, Mass. Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman and Charles M. Alexander are in charge of the services. Says a Boston paper: "Hundreds are daily surrendering to Jesus Christ. God is marvelously blessing our churches, and musaved multitudes are thronging the meetings. Pray that the face of the entire city may be turned toward God."

—We do not care to butt in to the rucus between The Charlotte Observer and The Norfolk, Va., papers about the virtues of being born in North Carolina, but since they are at last, after months of wrangling, coming down to ideal conditions, kindly indulge us one feeble remark. Thus from The Observer:

Quoting from The Virginia-Pilot, of Norfolk:

"We commend this saying to The Charlotte Observer as worthy of all acceptance, and we call as witness to its truth thousands of Norfolk's leading citizens:

"The ideal condition of man is to have been born in North Carolina and to have emigrated to Virginia at an early age.

Selah! So mote it be frequently."

And The Observer:

"No. The ideal condition of man is to be born in North Carolina and to stay and grow up with the country."

No, beloved, the real ideal condition of man is to be born in North Carolina, go to Virginia and get a wife, come back to North Carolina and stay the rest of his natural days—except when he goes to visit his wife's kinspeople.

A LESSON IN CHRISTIAN ETHICS.

The Master said: "Love your enemies," and "whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also." No sublimer teachings on morality were ever given to man. There are those who appear to think that when you are smitten "on the right cheek," you have no right, as a Christian, to "appeal to Caesar," or speak one word in defense before you turn to the smiter. "The other also." Let us turn to John 18:22,23, and see how Jesus acted, when he was actually smitten, after teaching the first lesson.

"And when he had thus spoken, one of the officers which stood by, struck Jesus with the palm of his hand, saying, Answerest thou the high priest so?"

Jesus answered him, If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil, but if well, why smitest thou me?"

Daniel Albright Long.

—In South Omaha, Neb., Feb. 21, a mob attacked a Greek settlement, wrecked thirty houses and injured a few persons though none fatally. The riot resulted from a Greek prisoner's having shot to death a city policeman. The riot raged for several hours and was checked only by great effort on the part of the police.

Elon College Notes.

The regular correspondent, Prof. J. T. Cobb with his wife, and two daughters, Misses Lucy and Bertha Bess, are spending Saturday, Sunday and Monday in Greensboro, visiting Dr. Geo. Kernodle's family. That fact accounts for the change of correspondents this week.

Senator F. M. Simmons has been secured at the invitation of the Clio Literary Society to deliver the annual address at the approaching commencement. Senator Simmons is an able man and has won deserved laurels in the U. S. Senate. He has never before addressed an Elon audience and will no doubt receive a hearty welcome from a large concourse of people at this time.

Rev. and Mrs. M. L. Winston, Creedmore, N. C., are visiting Mrs. Peace, stewardess of the West Dormitory, and her little daughter, Gladys. We are always glad to have these friends with us.

Dr. Joseph Hyde Pratt, State Geologist and Professor of Economic Geology in the University of North Carolina, will lecture before the faculty, students, and villagers on Thursday evening of this week. His subject is "The Utilization and Preservation of our Natural Resources." Dr. Pratt is a specialist in this line and we are expecting sound instruction on this theme of engaging interest just at this time.

Prof. A. L. Lincoln, class of 1906, principal of the Haw River Graded Schools, spent the holiday season with Dr. Moffitt's family.

Aunt Helen Winborne is visiting friends and relatives in her old Wake County community this week. We know she will be heartily welcomed by her many friends there as she will be missed by them here during her absence.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Walker, father and mother of Mrs. Harper, spent the 22nd with their daughter at the West Dormitory.

The 22nd was a gloomy day, rain, rain, rain, and clouds, and mud. But the students never found it out. The callers at the West Dormitory were numerous, gay, and delighted. Bad weather does not discourage social intercourse on the holiday occasions: amor vincit omnia.

But the item of greatest interest on the 22nd was the annual entertainment of the Clio Literary Society, which always occurs on this night. Despite the bad weather, a large audience greeted the young men who acquitted themselves with credit and merited the generous applause of which they were the happy recipients. Every number was rendered with perfect ease and satisfaction. The following was the program:

Duet, "They say he went to College."

(Orchestra Accompaniment). Oration, "Pride of American Citizenship," J. Allen Dickey, Jr. Solo, "The Response," J. Wesley Barrett, Jr. Journal. R. Arndt Campbell. Oration, "Patriotism," C. Ashley Griffin. Cornet Solo, "Souvenir de la Suisse," R. Arndt Campbell. Humorous Recitation, "Major Jones' Christmas Present to Mary Stallings," J. Barret Walker. Solo, "Go Lovely Rose," Barney Nicholson.

Debate:—Query: Resolved that, A National Law should be passed providing for the Guarantee of Bank Deposits by the Banks of each State.

Affirmative: G. Smith Cornwell, (Va.), J. Sipe Lincoln, (Va.). Negative: J. Pleasants Farmer, (Va.), R. Loy Walker, (N. C.).

Chorus, "Three Crows," Glee Club, S. Claudius Harrell, President; J. Wesley Barrett, Jr., Secretary.

Marshals:—J. Felix West, Jr., (Chief) P. Chandler White, Jr., M. Turpin Whitely.

The chief interest in the program, of course, centered in the debate. The judges were Hon. E. S. W. Dameron, Dr. Atkinson, and Prof. W. P. Lawrence who rendered the decision in favor of the affirmative. A medal was also given, a likeness in gold of the monogram of the society, for the best speaker. The judges awarded it to J. Sipe Lincoln. All who took part in the program wore full dress. It was an enjoyable evening.

Dr. Moffitt is still at work on the endowment proposition and is receiving favorable words from every source.

PREPARING THE TEACHER.*An Appreciation.

By Frank S. Child, D. D.

Numerous books for the instruction of Sunday-school workers are upon the market these days. Specialists upon every phase of the work are giving us their best counsel. And one of the most interesting and satisfactory books which has come to my study table is that issued by the Southern Christian Publishing Board and edited by Professors Harper, Lawrence and Wicker of Elon College.

The book is admirably adapted to its important purpose—well written, wisely arranged, and properly printed. It reveals scholarship of a high order and enthusiasm in the service. It not only instructs the reader but it inspires to freest endeavor. Men thoroughly competent for their task and genuinely interested in Bible study have put themselves into the work. It ought to quicken the life in many a Church and community.

I do not know where one can find in such small space and compact readable form an amount of helpful information and sympathetic guidance equal to that which one finds in this book. The whole field of Sunday-school work so far as the teacher is concerned has been canvassed by these trained, experienced writers. They have performed their arduous labor in a way to command great praise and evoke hearty appreciation.

It is a sign of distinct advance when such a book as this is demanded and forthcoming. We predict for it a large use and a wide influence. We recommend it to the thoughtful consideration of all Sunday-school people—officers, teachers and pupils alike. They will get invaluable aid from it and reward the authors with goodly measure of gratitude.

Fairfield, Conn., Feb. 18, 1909.

Supplanting Utilities.—That which is useful and serves a good purpose is not supplanted by inventions and discoveries. One must improve upon a utility to supplant it. For instance a dozen methods of travel have been introduced, but these do not and cannot supplant the horse. The only way to supplant the present horse is to improve him. Automobiles will not abolish the horse, nor even decrease the demand for him. This for the reason that the automobile is not an improvement on the horse, but altogether a different sort of utility. Statistics show an increase of 648,000 horses in this country last year over that of the year before, making now 20,640,000 horses valued at over a billion nine hundred million dollars. Only a few years ago it was declared that owing to bicycles, street cars, and automobiles the day of the horse was about done and his fate was fixed.

The spinning wheel and the weaver's loom in the home are gone. This for the reason that a better spinning wheel and a swifter loom have been invented. The old stage coach is gone because a better method of travel for long distances has been found.

One utility is not supplanted by another utility of a different type, but any utility abides till an improvement upon it supplants it. The world holds tenaciously to the person, place or thing that is useful and serves a good purpose until an improvement upon that same person, place or thing comes. Man and his Maker combine in using every useful thing as long as there is good purpose served by so doing.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MARCH 7.
A Few Suggestions.

Philip and the Ethiopian.

Acts 8:26-38.

Golden Text—Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me. John 5:29.

Review.—Review last Sunday's lesson thoroughly—it was the first home mission work of the early church, today's lesson is the first, definite foreign mission work of the same early church. The same man is the leading figure in both, so proving that there is no conflict between home and foreign missions. The Gospel according to Acts 1:8 was to be preached not only in Jerusalem and Judea and Samaria, but to the uttermost parts of the earth as well. Today's lesson begins the third step in the spread of Christianity—it imitates the "uttermost parts of the earth" movement. In your review keep these matters in mind.

Intervening Events:—There are none printed in our Bibles. Philip kept on preaching in Samaria until the spirit of God moved him to do a larger work. We do not know just how long it was until this call came, tho, perhaps it was A. D. 37 at the Feast of the Tabernacle (in the fall). The portion of the Bible the eunuch was reading was usually read at this time of the year and so helps us to date the event.

Incidental Instruction. 1. Tell your pupils of the custom of Bible study among the Synagogue service—all Jews being thoroughly conversant with the Scriptures, the Arabs calling them "the men of the Book." Call attention also of the custom of coming to Jerusalem to worship, especially at the great feasts, and what a help this was to the new Faith. Also explain the custom of reading aloud to the ancients.

The Lesson:—Our lesson divides into three divisions. Write them on the board as they are developed in the teaching.

1. Philip Divinely Commissioned, verses 26-9. Find who appeared to Philip, what he commanded him to do, how Philip received this command, whom he beheld (Here call for assigned work on Gaza and Ethiopia), under whose authority he was, his official position, whither he had been, why, what he was doing, from what books he was reading, what further instruction the Spirit gave Philip.

2. A Truth-seeking Bible-reader, verses 30-34. Discover how Philip received this second command, what the eunuch was doing, what question Philip asked him, the eunuch's answer, his desire as to Philip, what the words of the Scripture were which were puzzling the eunuch (Here call for assigned work on the fulfillment of these prophecies in Christ, Mattt. 26:52, 67, 68; 27: 12-14, 27-31; and when declared Isaiah's prophecy was fulfilled in himself Luke 4:17-21), what question the eunuch asked in regard to the meaning of these words.

3. Philip unfolds the Scriptures, verses 35-38. Learn what faith Philip preached to him, what the essential burden of this faith was, (ask your class to point out how Christ fulfilled the verses.), to what they came as they rode along, what the eunuch then said, Philip's answer, the eunuch's response, what command was given the chariot-drivers, whither Philip and eunuch went, what sacred rite was then performed.

Review the lesson by the topic method using the outline on the board.

Truths and their Application.—1. The Golden Text needs especially to be emphasized. We boast of the fact that almost all our homes have the Bible in them. Can we also boast that they all read their Bible? We have been negligent in this regard in the past, but the tide is turned the other way. I believe the day is coming, is almost here, when to be ignorant of the Bible will be as great a cause for shame as ignorance of addition and multiplication today. We Sunday-school teachers have a rare opportunity here to impress on our pupils the necessity and value of Bible-reading. See if you cannot get your pupils to read a portion of the Bible every day. Here call for assigned work—"Short Essay on Need of Bible Study."

2. The eunuch was a sincere inquirer. His heart was prepared to receive the truth. He read his Bible to understand it and to guide his life by it. To all who thus read it there is abundant joy and inspiration and light will be constantly given in God's appointed way. We must meditate as we read or our Bible reading is of a poor quality and we will lose the better part of it.

"Take time to be holy; speak oft with thy God."

3. Last week you had good opportunity to impress the home-mission work. Do not lose today's opportunity to create enthusiasm for foreign mission work. Home Missions and Foreign Missions are just convenient themes to designate an identical work on various localities of the earth's surface—they are the same in principle and purpose—the salvation of human souls. Be certain to tell of our work in Japan and Porto Rico and South America. If you don't have the facts before you write to Drs. J. G. Bishop, O. W. Powers, or M. T. Morrill, Dayton, Ohio, for back numbers of The Christian Missionary giving you these facts and then become a subscriber to this valuable paper. If our mission work is to flourish we must create a mission spirit in our Sunday-school pupils. Will you do your part?

Assignmentes for Home Study.—Ask one to trace Philip's movements in the interval between today's lesson and next Sunday's, Acts 8:39-40; another to give an account of Saul's conversion, Acts 9:1-18; a third to be especially prepared on lesson IV of this quarter, Acts 3:1-26; a fourth to be able to tell the story of the raising of Jairus' daughter, Mark 5:35-43; a fifth on the raising of the Shunamite's son, 2 King 4:32-37.

W. A. Harper.

THE SUNDAY PAPER.

I spent five cents for the Sunday "Dart" and hauled it home in a two-wheeled cart; I piled the sections upon the floor, till they reached as high as the kitchen door; I hung the chromos upon the wall, though there wasn't room to hang them all, and the yard was littered some ten feet deep with "eomic sections" that made me weep; and there were sections of pink and green, a woman's section and magazine, and sheets of music the which if played would quickly make an audience fade; and there were patterns of women's gowns and also for gentlemen's hand-me-downs; and a false mustache and a rubber doll, and a deck of cards and a parasol. Now men are busy with dray and cart, a-hauling away the Sunday "Dart."—Emporia Gazette.

NOTICE ABOUT THE ANNUALS

We are surprised to get several complaints from our brethren in the Alabama and Georgia Conferences especially, that their Annuals have not arrived. These Annuals were sent out carefully and promptly, securely wrapped and postage or express paid by us about January 10. Our conviction is that several parties to whom we were ordered by Conferences to send Annuals in packages have laid the Annuals aside and have not delivered them to purchasers. However, we are sending duplicates to all who write us, as we had plenty Annuals made this year and are determined to place one in the hand of every purchaser. So if any brother any where has not received the Annual he ordered will he please send us a card that we may mail him another? If every purchaser does not receive his Annual this year it shall be no fault of ours. Respectfully,

The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

A DESTRUCTIVE CRITIC OF 1907.
TWENTY SEVENTH LETTER.

Kinkade, New Zealand, 15, 8, 2908.

My Dear Grandson:

It took me a long time to recover from the influence of your grandmother's remarks, to which I referred in a late letter. With a supreme effort at last I rallied. But as I continued to study the conditions of 1908 my depression returned: for it was a period of calamities to the cause of higher criticism, which phrase some of our opponents charged us with misusing; saying that we were not higher critics, but destructive critics.

The early part of the twentieth century was a period of calamities to our cause, partly because of the unlucky admissions made by higher critics, to some of which I have referred. I now tell you of a perfectly amazing admission made by the celebrated Dr. Ward. At first, I was prostrated by it.

Some of the explorers of our day, in digging in the ruins of Dayton, Ohio, found a lot of unconsumed rubbish, among which were some newspapers in English, all printed in the latter part of 1907. They were turned over to me for inspection. The papers seem to have been printed in various cities: New York, Chicago, Cincinnati, Boston, and other places. Among them I found an article by Dr. Ward, the distinguished Congregationalist and higher critic, in his "Independent," dated Dec. 26, 1907. It began thus:

"The recent remarkable discovery of Aramaic papyri in Upper Egypt further strengthens the proof, which has now become irrefragable, that the Old Testament is an honest book."

And Dr. Ward closed the first paragraph of his editorial with the following words so injurious to our theories, and so helpful in explaining why most spiritual people for thousands of years have so unreasonably trusted the Bible:

"The background of the Hebrew Scriptures is so manifestly the historical conditions as they stand out before us from the letters and inscriptions composed centuries before Christ that the general honesty of the Bible is not open to the slightest question."

You can easily see, my dear grandson, how such admissions would damage our theories. For a higher critic, in the year 1907, to discover that the Bible was "honest," was astonishing.

Otherwise in the editorial, however, Dr. Ward tried to minimize the effect of his unlucky admission by the following language, which, with many other vague allusions, is well adapted to undermining the respect which common people usually give to honest records:

"The question of emigration to Egypt was brought before the prophet Jeremiah, and he counseled against it, and declared in the strongest terms that disaster would result:

"So shall it be with all the men that set their faces to go into Egypt to sojourn there: they shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: and none of them shall remain or escape from the evil that I will bring upon them."—Jer. 42:17.

The papyri show that they did not die, but on the contrary that many were living and prospering many years after Jeremiah pronounced their doom. Here again the contention of critics has been sustained, for they have long held that the prophets were not infallible in their warnings of future events."

But even this passage is unlucky: for the papyri did not show that the men of whom Jeremiah spoke did not die. Dr. Ward seems to have supposed that no Jews went to Egypt except those referred to in the day of Jeremiah, and by him; and that all those who went down there at different times settled in the one spot, Upper Egypt, far from the portion easily reached by fugitives; but of such suppositions Dr. Ward had no proof.

But he makes a fine argument in the interest of the higher critics, to the effect that the book of Deuteronomy had not been written, up to that age, and not until the time of King Josiah; because the papyri found in Egypt in 1907 showed that the Egyptian Jews had a temple there; which Dr. Ward reasons that they would not have had, if they had possessed the book of Deuteronomy.

My labor was not lost: for Dr. Ward's beautiful style of reasoning suggested (when applied to the newspapers found in the same rubbish with the editorial) a method of correcting one important error of the historians of our age, 2908, concerning the government of the United States in 1907.

Our historians had all agreed, until I made this discovery, that there was an important document, considered authority in the United States from some time in the eighteenth century, called the "constitution." In the belief that it had any authority in 1907, however, we have only been following tradition, as is proved by the following reasoning:

The document called the "constitution," distinctly provides that the president of the United States must be a native. But by the help of the periodicals I found in the ruins of Dayton at the same time as the "Independent" I found that a certain president of that republic, Roosevelt by name, had been asked by somebody to serve a third term; but he issued an ukase, refusing the honor, containing this passage:

"On the fourth of March next I shall have served three and a half years, and this three and a half years constitute my first term."

Singularly, I found quite a number of papers, daily and weekly, containing this ukase, and they all had the passage just as I have quoted it, except the "Independent," Dr. Ward's paper, which corrected the English of the president, and printed the ukase thus: "and these three and a half years constitute my first term." Dr. Ward evidently knew the English language, and being a great admirer of the president corrected his English, without saying anything about it. At first I had been disposed to consider the word "constitute" a typographical error for "constitutes;" the phrase, "three and a half years," being the subject of the verb. But that Dr. Ward used the word "these" instead of "this," and that all the other papers had the ukase one way, shows that the error was not typographical, but in the writing of the president.

But the very fact that the president did not understand the English language shows that he could not have been born in the United States, where English was the language of the common people and of the governing classes. If President Roosevelt had been a native he would have written the language correctly and idiomatically.

Then it follows, since the "constitution" required that the president should be a native, and Roosevelt was not a native, that the "constitution" was not yet in force; probably not yet written. Thus it is proved that the "constitution" must have been written in a larger age than 1907; just as Dr. Ward so beautifully proved that the book of Deuteronomy must have been written in a later age than the generation of Moses.

This discovery of the late origin of the "constitution" of the United States compensated me in a measure for my depressing discoveries of the unscholarly admissions of the higher critics of 1907.

THE LIGHT AND THE WITNESS.

A correspondent requests: "Will you kindly write in The Sun of next week something of 'The Light and the Witness' spoken of in John 1:4-9 and 8:12?" The Scriptures referred to in the authorized version, are: "In him was life: and the life was the light of men. And the light shineth in darkness; and the darkness comprehended it not.

There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe. He was not that Light, but was sent to bear witness of that Light. That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." * * * * *

* * * * * "Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."

There are so many truths wrapped up in and taught by every Scripture of this length, taken from St. John especially, that it would be impossible to tell on just what points our correspondent wishes light.

In its broad outline and general meaning the teaching is very clear. John, the inspired writer, is setting forth the offices in particular that distinguish John the Baptist from Jesus the Christ. John the Baptist is the witness and he it is that testifies of the Light. There his work ceases. Jesus the Christ is the Light. He it is who shines in men's hearts and will shine there till every knee before Him shall bow and every tongue His name confess.

John the Baptizer was the immediate predecessor who witnessed that the Christ would come—and was even then at hand. After our Saviour was glorified, exalted to the right hand of the Father, then He who was more than man should and did and does testify and bear witness of Him, even the Holy Spirit whom He sent forth on the day of pentecost and who has been in the world ever since testifying of Jesus, and of Jesus' love and of Jesus' power to redeem and to save. On the day of Pentecost Peter in closing one of the most perfect and powerful orations that ever fell from the lips of man declared (Acts 2:32, 33) "This Jesus did God raise up, whereof we all are witnesses. Being therefore by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit, he (the emphasis is on the he) hath poured forth this which we see and hear." What they saw were the tongues of fire! what they heard was the sound as of the rushing of a mighty wind—the events of Pentecost.

Then again Peter in closing his third post-pentecostal address said, (Acts 5:32) "And we are witnesses of these things: and so is the Holy Spirit."

Peter and the Apostles witnessed of Christ, of His death, resurrection and ascension, and then was left in the world a Witness not only of these things, but of the validity, reality, and power and coming triumph of our Lord Christ. He is the Light and one day He will shine more brilliantly than sun and moon and stars and all the orbs of night and day combined.

These facts are plain enough if only we seek to be like Him that we may one day arise and shine with Him. Praised be His glorious name forever and forever.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

There is no accounting for the credulity of many mortals here below. If proof of this were needful it is found in the fact that there have been, through all the years, those who believe the end of the world was close at hand. Despite the teaching of the Bible to the contrary, that not even the angels of heaven know the day nor the hour, many professing Christians and Bible readers have often predicted the year, the month and the day. Famous in history among the dates designated as "the end of time," was 1666, the royal house of England having been overthrown and Cromwell, "an ordinary man" put to rule and reign in the king's stead. The wonderfully brilliant mystic, Swedenborg, designated, with considerable sow of el-loquent and profound reasoning, that the year 1836 would see the world's wind up and final finish. There were not a few scholars, speakers and writers who taught that 1867 was the final year, as civil strife in the United States had ceased and the lamb and the lion were about to lie down together.

The most famous date fixed upon, however, as that on which Christ would certainly return to the earth to begin the millennium was 1843. This date won more adherents, and was championed by more writers and public speakers than any other date of modern times, especially in the United States.

In 1831 William Miller of Pittsfield Mass., began in a small way to preach that the end of time drew nigh and would certainly take place between March 21, 1843 and March 21, 1844. In 1833 Miller was licensed to preach by the Baptist church and began to speak to larger audiences. Miller soon became famous as preacher and lecturer and before the appointed year he had no less than 50,000 avowed adherents and thousands of others partially believed (and feared) that he was right. As the time drew near, history tells, excitement grew intense and the movement swept over many states, especially of New England and the West.

In "The Life and Letters of Austin Craig," who was a college student at the time, I find this simple narrative on page 47: "Hour by hour as the middle of the summer of 1843 approached the excitement deepened. The 11th of August had been set by some as the day. Many believing that the end was at hand, and seeing no further need of their personal belongings, gave away houses and lands, saving out only enough money to tide them over to the last great day. Some who were of a highly organized nervous nature went hopelessly insane. Very many men and women made robes, some white, some purple, in which to garb themselves for the last hour. An island in the Connecticut River was selected by one band of the faithful from which to ascend into heaven, and thither they went as the day approached. In Ohio there were bands of men and women ready to go up to the highest hill top. In portions of New York and Pennsylvania, in Maine, and other of the Eastern States other men and women were satisfied that to mount the tops of their houses, or barns, would be the proper place to be located. (Many) fixed around their waists heavy leathern belts by which they hoped to facilitate their ascension, the belts being for the purpose of affording ease in lifting them!

* * * It was announced on 22nd of December, 1843, that Jesus Christ was that very day within forty-five miles of the earth just above the atmosphere, but that He could not be seen on account of its density."

It is of course needless to say that many when disappointed went stark mad and numbers of others committed suicide. Miller himself declared he had made a mistake of a year, and though he lived till 1848, he had many followers who continued to believe in him though all his prophecies failed.

All this movement was by men, many of them educated for their day, highly intelligent and fluent and in the name and under the garb of the church. All these claimed to be Bible students and to be preaching a very definite Bible doctrine. The credulity of many mortals here below is certainly past finding out.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

When the Atlantic Fleet steams through the Capes into Hampton Roads next Monday it will add a new interest to Washington's birthday celebration. Cape Henry wireless telegraph station could not communicate with the fleet last night because the atmosphere was overcharged with static electricity which smothered the wireless sparks. This illustrates how it is possible for local spiritual conditions to smother spiritual communion with God; nevertheless both wireless and spiritual communications, while they may be called mysterious, are both great, practical facts. Land stations may talk with vessels far at sea, while hearts may talk with God far beyond the stars.

This circuit of the globe by the Atlantic Fleet, and the receptions given to our warships by other nations, and the peace and safety which have attended them in their voyage of twenty-seven thousand miles, all add lustre to the stars and stripes, and glory to Columbus and Washington who made this possible. It seems that the past has done all the great things, but this voyage opens up new wonders to the nations of the earth; and no doubt we have only seen the beginning of great things yet to be accomplished. It is the history of progress that latest discoveries and inventions are the most startling and the most useful. The utilization of electricity has made this a "new world," so that this has been a "new world" twice and it may be again for aught I know. I know that man may be a "new man" twice and I cannot tell how often he may be carried forward by changes that make him new. The air is full of electricity and Elisha's servant found out that the air was full of "horses and chariots round about Elisha." The very moment one drives down his stakes and says this is the end some new Columbus crosses a sea and shows us a new continent with riches untold.

What we need in the church of the living God is faith and enterprise; faith in God, faith in man, and faith in the future. Say not "that the former days were better than these," and do not even think that these days are better than the future will be. Yesterday was good, today is better, tomorrow will be the best; childhood was a dream, manhood is assertive, and old age is a reality. Beyond this lie continents of good that will furnish endless years and endless good. Paul was right when he said, "I press toward the mark of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." He did not say that he had attained unto it, but he was pressing toward it. This idea is in all the scriptures. It is "a land that I will show thee," a "land of milk and honey," a "country to come." The outlook for souls that follow Christ draws out all the powers of the life and develops man into the God-like. The outlook for the Godless man grows narrower at every step, until the end where there is nothing but a grave; the outlook for the Godly man grows wider at every step, until the end where heaven opens in endless glory. That man will neglect the only life worth living and go on in sin is itself a sign of his low ideals and unbelief. It is the grandest thing in this life to be a Christian with faith that can remove mountains, with courage that can slay giants, with songs that can drown sorrows, with hopes that can submerge despair, and with peace that can flow as a river and rejoice as the waves of the sea.

Pro. Thompson reports the service at Providence almost a failure in the matter of attendance on account of sickness in the community and among the families of the members of the church.

Dr. T. E. Baird whom I reported a few weeks ago as being so much improved in health that he had resumed his practice, I am sorry to report has had a relapse and has been in a very serious condition for the past two weeks, and is now in Baltimore for treatment. The best wishes and prayers of a large circle of friends go out to him and his wife in this affliction.

Rev. J. W. Barrett reports the work at Lambert's Point as taking on new life since they are having services every Sunday morning and evening. They are considering the advisability of changing their location if they can sell their present property to advantage.

Not since the days of the Jamestown Exposition has Norfolk been in such a stir. Her hotels are crowded, her boats of all classes are loaded to their capacity, the street cars are packed and jammed with their loads of human freight and the streets are crowded with people, the principal buildings all gaily decorated with flags and bunting. All in a special effort to give a glad welcome to the returning battleship fleet on its return from its famous record-breaking cruise of more than 42,000 miles.

AN EXPLANATION.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—In the note from Brother Elder published in your issue of Feb. 17, he says: "The Mission Board of the A. C. C. has sent me so hard pushed that they have only sent me $50.00 of the $500.00 promised."

The promise of $500.00 is only conditional. $120.00 of the amount was appropriated to be paid "when the Home Mission Balance in the treasury will warrant." Our Home Mission Offerings, which is not due until June, furnishes the largest resource for Home Mission funds, and the balance in the treasury is consequently very low at this time. It is difficult to pay the regular appropriations, and still harder to meet the "specials." The remainder of the $500.00 is to be raised in special offerings, and cannot be paid at all unless the friends of the cause will send it in. So far only $15.00 has come in since October 1. We are trying to get the money, but it may be late. Bro. Elder needs the help now. So if any are willing and able to help him at once, let them make haste and do so. There will be plenty of use for the Mission Board's $500.00 later on.

My Dear Children and Friends:—

How nicely our reports are holding up this year; if they should continue like this with the swell of Thanksgiving Offering our "Grand Total" would be great! See the splendid reports from our Sunday-schools, that's fine, but the only trouble is there are but six schools reported when there should have been fifty-one; counting one fourth of our churches for each week; and if one fourth had responded at the same ratio as the above schools we would have had $251.43 from schools instead of $29.61. The work is done by the faithful few; but results would come if all would do as well as the average few does? My Brother and Sister, the departments of God's work here in the Church needs your present support—shall they have it for this great year, 1909?

Our measles are still thrifty and continue to multiply; 12 were able to leave there rooms today for the first time; one sat up for first time; 3 others up in their rooms; one still quite sick but better; and little James L., Jr. is just "breaking out"—you know the meaning of that word—2 others (little brother and sister) have escaped till now; some others have had measles, and say they do not want it any more.

We are anxious to have the cousins give us many nice letters each week, so write often and short letters and we will assure you room in our Corner.

With love and best wishes to all.

Fondly Yours,
Uncle Jim.

Raleigh, N. C., Feb. 13, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We will try to write little sooner this month. We are still very busy in school, and on Saturdays we help mama.

With much love for you and the cousins,
Your little nieces,

Jessie and Pauline Penny.

Your letter and money welcome girls. 'Tis better to write the first of the month.

Holland, Va., Feb. 10, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come again. Though I have been silent for several months, I did not forget you and the little Cousins. Uncle Jim, I had a merry Christmas. Santa Claus came to see me and brought me a big box of nice things. I guess you and all the cousins had a merry Christmas. I hope Santa Claus went to see all the little cousins and carried them lots of nice things. Please find enclosed my dime for Feb. I will close, wishing you much success for 1909.

Fondly your little niece,
Maud Lee Howell.

We have missed your letter little girl, and very glad to hear again. Try to get Mother to write every month till you are large enough to write yourself.

Timberville, Va., Feb. 11, 1909.
Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write my letter for Feb. It is very cold and windy here but the snow is all gone. Enclosed you will find my dues for this month. With love to you and all the cousins, I will close.

We have had no snow Ella, but plenty measles. Hope it will soon be all gone.

NEARING HOME.

Any thing spoken, written or intimated concerning home ransacks our whole nature and fills us with interesting pleasure. The shadows of time lengthen—the world grows old, cold and less inviting to some—the way appears long and very tiresome to others, while there is a large class learning in the school of experience and observation, and they are real happy as they look and move onward to the goal of their anticipation. Nothing retards their progress nor impairs their vision, because they are looking for a permanent kingdom whose maker and governor is God. Time nor space affects them as they press their homeward way looking not at the things which are seen, but to the things which are not seen.

Once a patient was exceedingly ill—he did not expect to recover, but to the glad surprise of others and himself too he did. Many anxious days passed during his sickness and restoration. After showing proper appreciation to the doctors and nurses who had given him careful attention, he payed the charges of the hospital, began to pack up and start for home. His very looks, actions and every move he made plainly told that he was so glad. Coming out of the sick room on his way to health and home made him look joyful. And as he was nearing home his heart was full of inexpressible pleasure. So when the poor soul wounded and sick with sin is healed by Jesus it rises higher with triumphant assurance that it is nearing home. An ingenious sculptor of Brazil with chisel in one hand and mallet in the other carved out of a rough block of marble from a distant quarry a beautiful statue of a young man "Nearing home." That picture was so impressive that the party who saw studied it with increasing pleasure. The features appeared to play with inexpressible gladness as the white, cold marble stood still and told it all—nearing home.

The Messenger of peace in looking over his work and in contemplating the thought of nearing home—of going to his Father's home where all the redeemed of every world would live, speaks tenderly to him in these words: "I have glorified thee on the earth; I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was."

There is a great host of marching pilgrims nearing home. They are on the last division of the journey. They have heard, read and sung about this ideal home, and it has been painted in glowing and flowing terms by gifted writers and speakers. Looking with expectation they wish to enjoy their new home.

It is no wonder that the bands on the American battle ships are playing "Home sweet home" on their return homeward from their twelve month's voyage round the world. All on board the warships as they heave in sight of Hampton Roads the 22nd of this month will be profoundly glad they have made a safe and successful voyage and are nearing home. No doubt the bands will be active playing national airs but none will sound sweeter nor feel dearer to them than "Home, sweet home." The very act of nearing home amid thundering cannon and waving flags and a hearty welcome home will be a happy time with them.

The thought comes over and over to the Christians that when the voyage of life is over and they are nearing home—while the heavenly hosts sing the new song to welcome them, the great multitude of redeemed ones will join in the united symphony until heaven shall be full of His praise. J. T. Kitchen.

SLANDERED.

An easy way to harm a good man is to slander him. Few good men have escaped this fiery dart of the enemy. Let no one who has been attacked by a lying tongue think his case is peculiar. No weapon is so hard to defeat. Men have tried to stop a lie, but often with no success. One who is slandered may deny the accusation indignantly, but the denial will not cure the evil. The lie flies faster than the denial. Slander will travel a thousand miles while the denial is going one short mile. The atmosphere of this world seems to be favorable to the rapid circulation of an evil report. Hundreds will believe the evil rumor where one will believe the denial. What can a man do in such a case? What shall he think when his good name has been tarnished by a wicked falsehood?

It is not half so bad as it would be if the story were true. How glad such a man should be that the thing is false. He is not what men say he is. Jesus says, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad." Jesus does not seem to consider it a dreadful thing when one is slandered. He tells us to rejoice and be exceeding glad. It would be bad enough if the story were true. See to it that no one shall ever say evil of you truly, and all shall be well. If we could see the end from the beginning, if we could see what shall follow all this mischief, we should not complain. "Rejoice and be exceeding

VALLEY LETTER.

Jan. 28 I began the meeting at Bethel. The interest was good almost from the start, and grew rapidly, and the congregations grew accordingly. The time seemed to be ripe for a revival. The members of the church and of other churches in the community went to work in dead earnest and results came. The church and community were greatly revived. Thirteen professed faith in Christ, and twelve have united with the church,—several heads of families. The meeting continued only about a week and a half, and with some interruptions during the time, and we feel that could it have continued longer there would have been others who would have decided for Christ.

This is my first year with the church at Bethel. Before I assumed pastoral charge in October they had been without a pastor for a year or two and had not had a revival for several years. But Sunday school was kept up during the time and the work was not allowed to die.

First Sunday in this month Rev. Edward French and myself exchanged pulpits, he preaching for me at Dry Run, Joppa, and Palmyra, and I for him at New Hope, where I also held communion service.

Owing to the illness of Rev. W. T. Walters I filled his appointment at Timber Ridge, W. Va., last Sunday; Rev. Edward French filled mine at Linville, and Antioch; and Rev. L. L. Lassiter preached for Bro. French at Woods' Chapel and at Whistler's Chapel, and administered communion at both places.

Next Sunday I preach and administer communion for Bro. French at Newport, and he fills my appointments at Mt. Olivet (R) and Mt. Lebanon.

We are just now making an effort in behalf of our conference missionary association. We cannot succeed standing idle, nor even doing half duty. The work in the valley has need of the interest and co-operation of every member of the church in the conference, and the Lord wants nothing less, and requires nothing more, than the very best we can do. The opportunity is before us. The duty is upon us. May the Lord help us to see our duty and discharge it to the best of our ability. "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law, and that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to wake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed."

A. W. Andes.
Harrisonburg, Va., Feb. 18, 1909.

Salinas Letter.

Our missionaries in Porto Rico have received an apportionment of $3,800.00 for the coming year. This amount is $1,000 less than the mission asked for. When the news reached us that the financial situation would not justify our Board in giving us the appropriation asked for, and that Miss Mishler could not return, we were not a little disappointed. We had hoped that Miss Mishler might be located in Santa Isabel with a helper, so that there might be less travel and more time given to personal work.

Our missionaries had a meeting to consider the work, and it was found to be utterly impossible to carry the work on, even in an imperfect way with less help than we now have, nor could we consent to give up any of the halls now rented and used in our work. The situation looked sad, but we determined to face it and, if possible, make the year the richest yet, in point of soul-saving. Our rent bill for the year costs us at the lowest estimate $987.00, or a little more than one-fourth of the entire appropriation for the year. We pay our native helpers $720.00 for the year. The missionaries now on the field have been receiving a salary of $1,000.00 per year. This may seem large, especially to our brethren in the ministry, who as a rule receive less, and give their entire time to the work. But many things must be considered: Our appropriations have never been sufficiently large for us to employ many native workers. At present we have but three, and two of these are only partially employed. To the one who gives his entire time, we pay $480.00 per year, and to the other two, $240.00. However large may appear the salary of the full time worker, he has never been able to keep a horse or to pay his traveling expenses. This expense must be met, and it has been the custom for the missionaries to prepare and pay the traveling expenses, and the cost in Porto Rico is enormous. Favors are not shown us along these lines; we have to pay for everything.

Not only do our missionaries expect to pay all traveling expenses of themselves and their helpers for the coming year, but also it was seen to be necessary to keep the work as at present, that we each pay $10.00 per month. All this is said with no desire to complain, but that the facts may be revealed.

I repeat that it is a disappointment to us and to our members that Miss Mishler is not to come back. Her need is keenly felt, and we have not ceased to pray and expect her back. Perhaps before these lines are read a sufficient number of hearts will have been touched to send her back to us.—Rev. T. E. White, in Christian Missionary.

CATECHISM ON CHINA.

By Amos R. Wells.

1. What are included in the Chinese Empire?

China proper, Manchuria, Mongolia, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet.

2. How large is this, compared with other regions?

It is one-third of Asia, and one-tenth of the habitable globe. It is larger than the United States.

3. How many provinces in China proper?

Eighteen.

4. What is the size of China proper?

About half as large as the United States.

5. What is the population of China proper?

About 400,000,000, or five times that of the United States. No accurate census has ever been made.

6. Whence came the ruling family of China?

From Manchuria, the first Manchu emperor conquering the country and mounting the throne in 1644.

7. Under what form of government is China?

An absolute monarchy of Oriental type; but reforms are in progress that will transform it into a constitutional monarchy of Western type.

8. What Chinese rulers have recently passed away?

The emperor, Kwang Hsu, and the Empress Dowager, his aunt, who was a most remarkable woman, and the real ruler of China.

9. Who is the present ruler of China?

Prince Chun, a brother of the dead emperor, who is acting as regent for his young son. He has declared his allegiance to the programme of reform.

10. What led to the present awakening of China?

Primarily, the work of the missionaries; immediately, the proof of the weakness of the empire made by the coming of the allied army after the Boxer massacres, and the success of Japan in defeating Russia.

11. What is the most striking evidence of the new life in China?

The adoption of the Western education shown in the abolition of the ancient examinations, the establishment of a modern school system, the education of women, the founding of newspapers, the demand for books and the sending of young men abroad to be educated.

12. What change is taking place in the Chinese government?

The gradual transformation of the empire into a constitutional monarchy.

13. What change is taking place in the army?

A modern and efficient army and navy are being created.

14. What reform in the courts is being effected?

Cruel forms of punishment have been abolished and the prisons are being reformed.

15. What social changes are taking place?

Breaking off from opium, doing away with foot-binding and the wearing of the queue.

16. What industrial changes are taking place?

The introduction of railroads, telegraphs and telephones, the establishment of the modern post-office, and the appointment of Sunday as a legal holiday.

17. When were missions began in China?

In 1837, when Robert Morrison reached the country.

18. Now how many missionaries are at work there?

About 3,500, and the force is doubled about every ten years. There are about 10,000 Chinese assistants.

19. How many native Christians are there?

About 200,000 and the number doubles about every seven years.

20. How many missionary societies are at work in China?

Thirty-one in America and about as many in other lands.

21. How many mission hospitals in China?

166, caring every year for more than a million patients.

22. How many mission schools in China?

More than 2,000 primary schools and more than 200 higher institutions.—Christian Endeavor World.

—Not infrequently it has been contended that the liquor dealer lives to bless those who help to vote or persuade him from his nefarious traffic.

Rev. Dr. Rankin, editor of the Texas Christian Advocate, quotes Mike O'Grady, one of the deposed liquor dealers of Chattanooga, as saying:

"As for the whiskey men, it is my personal opinion that after they become settled in some other field of endeavor they will bless the people who liberated them from the official tax gatherer, the extortionate landlord and voracious political grafter. Ours is anything but pleasant life. We are vilified by the preachers, scorned by the church people, damned by the toper, bled by the politician, and drawn and quartered by the landlord."

—That the heroic, life-risking effort of a sick man, in casting his legislative vote, killed the hopes of the race-track gamblers of New York State last June, was flashed by telegraph throughout the country the day the victory was won. Whether his effort would cost him his life was not known at the time. He recovered; but he has never before told his own story of that day and the stirring events that led up to it. The story is now published, for the first time, exclusively in the Sunday School Times of February 20, for which journal the heroic legislator, the Hon. Otto G. Foelker, has written it. It is a story of costly personal heroism that stirs the blood, and that gives the lie to the cheap talk still heard in some sections that men don't do things these days for mere righteousness' sake. The facts in the case also puncture the notion that men who do things from a stern standard of duty never get their reward in this world. Although, next to Governor Hughes, Mr. Foelker seemed to be the worst hated man in New York State after the victory, nevertheless when a vacancy occurred from his district in the United States House of Representatives, he was sent to Congress with a handsome plurality over his opponent for that office.

Tetterine for Corn Eczema.

Mocksville, N. C.

Mr. J. T. Shuptrine, Savannah, Ga.

Dear Sir:—I have a friend in the country here who has suffered for years with Eczema, and like myself has tried all the "sure cure salves" for it with no relief. I told him if he used Tetterine he would soon be relieved, for it is the only thing that I ever used that would kill it,—and I ought to know for I have had it for 10 years, and never got any relief until I used your Tetterine. I told him that if he would try it, and it failed to benefit him, it would cost him nothing, I would pay for it myself; but I am not uneasy as to the results.

It will kill any corn, for my wife had one that gave her no end of misery, and I prevailed upon her to use Tetterine freely on it, and it soon disappeared. There is nothing equal to it.

Yours truly, P. S. Early.

Tetterine cures Eczema, Tetter, Ring Worm, Ground Itch, Infant Sore Head, Pimples, Boils, Rough Scaly Patches on the Face, Old Itching Sores, Dandruff, Cankered Scalp, Bunions, Corns, Chills, and every form of Skin Disease. Tetterine 50c; Tetterine Soap 25c. Your druggist, or by mail from the manufacturer, The Shuptrine Co., Savannah, Ga.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Epilepsy, Fits

Every part of the body has its nerves. It's the channel through which energy—nerve force is transmitted. If too much nerve force goes to a part, it is irritated, causing pain, congestion, spasms, fits, epilepsy, etc. If not enough it is enfeebled, and if none at all paralysis results. Dr. Miles' Nervine soothes the nerves, assists the nerve cells to generate nerve force, and in this way restores nervous energy.

"My eighteen-year-old daughter had fits for five years, as often as two and three a week. She began to take Dr. Miles' Nervine, and she has not had an attack for two months."

Mr. John H. Staylor, of Suffolk, Va., and Miss Nettie Eure of Gatesville, N. C., were married at Eure's church, Jan. 27th. The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. An hour before the ceremony, the church was filled. Mrs. T. A. Eure rendered the wedding march, and the bridal party entered in the following order: Mr. Willie Walters of Suffolk, best man, with Miss Essie Ellen, of Drum Hill, maid of honor; Mr. Peter Bunch, with Miss Beatrice Howell, of Suffolk; Mr. Earnest Spivey with Miss Ona Howell, of Suffolk; Mr. Marvin Vaughan, of Suffolk, with Miss Annie Green, of Eure, N. C.

The ushers were, Mr. T. A. Eure, of Eure, N. C., Mr. G. H. Hale, Hobgood, N. C., Mr. L. D. Eure, Suffolk, Va., and Mr. C. S. Eure, Eure, N. C.

The bride was dressed in white silk voile, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bride's maids were dressed in silk mull, with yellow sashes.

After the ceremony, the bridal party was given a most sumptuous reception at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Woolfry of Gatesville, N. C.

The presents were numerous and useful. The bride is the talented, and highly accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Eure, who lived in Suffolk until a few months ago. She is a member of Eure's church and has been a leader in church work.

Mr. Taylor is a successful merchant of Suffolk,

May God bless them in this new relationship, and may they ever have joy, peace and happiness in the Holy Ghost.

Ayscue-Eaves.

Wednesday evening at 7:30, February 10th, 1909 in Liberty Christian church there was a very pretty marriage. Mr. Sollie Ayscue was the groom and Miss Cassie Eaves the bride. Messrs. Geo. Eaves, Arthur Purnell, Willie Duke, and Joe Mitchell acted as ushers. Mr. Walter Ayscue, brother of groom was best man, and Miss Bulah Eaves, a cousin of the bride, bridesmaid. The other attendants were Mr. David Duke with Miss Onnie Thomas, Mr. George Eaves with Miss Margelia Ayscue, Mr. Charlie Eaves with Miss Ida Duke and Mr. Tollie Ayscue with Miss Pearl Newton. Miss Earl Duke presided at the organ. The writer officiated, using the general marriage ceremony of the Christian Church.

After the ceremony the wedding party spent the evening at the bride's uncle's, Mr. R. S. Ayscue. The presents were numerous and valuable. Mr. and Mrs. Ayscue are useful members of Liberty church. They will reside near Epson where Mr. Ayscue is engaged in farming. The pastor of this couple has no truer friends than they, and his prayers go with them that prosperity and usefulness may bless their career in life.

Saunders.

C. W. Saunders departed this life Feb. 9th, 1909, aged 13 years. His suffering was great, though he bore it with great patience and Christian grace. He was a member of Concord Christian Church and was also Deacon for a great number of years. The church has lost a worthy member. He was beloved by all who knew him. I was with him much of the time while he was sick and I believe the Lord has taken him to eternal rest. He leaves to mourn their loss two daughters, Miss Rosa Saunders, Mrs. Ida Miles and husband, Mr. Robert Miles and three grand children. May the Lord bless them in their bereavement and continue to bless the Church of which he was a faithful member. Joseph W. Massey.

DIED.*King.

Sister Martha King, age 85 years, 2 months and 3 days, departed this life Jan. 4th, 1909. Her husband, Bro. Willis King preceded her years ago. She leaves six sons, one daughter, many friends and relatives to mourn their loss.

Sister King joined Mt. Carmel Baptist Church in early life and remained a consistent member to her death. She was buried at Damascus in Orange Co., Jan. 5th, 1909. Funeral services by the writer. May God bless and comfort the sorrowing ones. Thos. W. Strowd.

Riddick.

Sunday I was called to conduct the funeral of Mr. Nathaniel Jones Riddick, who had passed his eightieth mile post a few steps. In many respects, he was one of the most gifted sons Gates ever produced. His boyhood days were spent in the neighborhood of Sunbury. At an early date in life, he showed talent and worth, and by the assistance of loving friends, he prepared himself, as best he could in those days, for the duties of life. It was not long before his worth was recognized, and he was called into public life. In the sixties, he was made clerk of the United States District Court, and remained there without a superior, if many equals, for 39 years. A few years ago, he put aside public life and came to his native county, to await the Master's will. His wife died in 1869, and he was never married again. He often talked of his wife who lived only a few months after their union. She was a member of the Christian church, and he always held a favorable opinion of the denomination, though he never joined any church.

He was a most liberal man. His check was the first donation received for the Christian parsonage at this place, and he has made liberal gifts since that time. He took great delight in helping worthy persons and institutions.

He leaves only two near relatives, Mr. Rountree, a nephew, and Mrs. Eason, a niece. He died at the home of Mr. Rountree, where the funeral was conducted, and his remains were taken to the old family burying ground and interred by the side of his wife. May God's blessings rest upon the relatives and friends.

The Centennial of Religious Journalism

EDITED BY J. PRESSLEY BARRETT, D. D.
Editor Herald of Gospel Liberty

This is without doubt the most generally interesting publication sent out by the Christians. Its centennial, historical and denominational features make it not only unique in character, but interesting as well. From beginning to end it claims the interested attention of the reader.

We have not space here to give the table of contents, but suffice it to say, that beginning with the "Discussion of the conditions which made the organization of the Christian Church a necessity," the reader will follow with interest and profit, the "History of the Herald of Gospel Liberty," "The One Hundred Editorial Gems," "Historical Sketches of One-Hundred-Year-Old Churches," "A symposium—A Hundred Years of Progress," setting forth in well prepared papers the development of the various enterprises of the Christian Church, and with a heart full of optimistic hope he will peruse "The Future Outlook of the Christian Church."

And all this, and more, in a book of nearly 650 pages, handsomely bound, with gold titles, while the price is only $1.00 for cloth binding and $2.00 for Morocco, with your name printed in gold. Postage, 15 cents extra. Send your order at once to

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Moody.—Many felt that, when the evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, died, Dec. 22, 1899 the chief and conspicuous work of the good preacher had come to a close. The world had heard of Moody as a preacher and knew him as an evangelist who drew immense audiences and won many converts.

The world is beginning to realize that this was only one element, and that not the largest one, of this many-sided character.

As subsequent events have shown, and continue with the passing years to show, Moody's greatest contribution to humanity's betterment had scarcely been made while he himself lived. The student of events is just beginning to see who and what this man Moody was.

Take that for which he was most noted and conspicuous while living, to wit, the work of an evangelist. We have no hesitancy in saying that this year of grace 1909, ten years after Moody's death, will in all probability witness more and greater evangelism, (more men and women led to Christ through preaching) directly traceable to his life and work than that of any year during his most successful ministry. Moody's evangelism now is even more successful, influential, and wide spread than at any time even in the evangelist's life. How and why? Because Moody while preaching in the present was planning for the future.

The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago has recently celebrated the 72nd birthday of Mr. Moody by announcing that a new men's dormitory is to be erected at once at a cost of more than one hundred thousand dollars. From this Institute there goes every year a constant stream of missionaries, Bible teachers, Y. M. C. A. workers and evangelists into all parts of the world with the one idea of winning men to Christ. Over half of the last graduating class went to foreign lands to preach the gospel and teach the Bible. Remember that this most vital instruction is given to all, regardless of nationality or denominational affiliation, free of charge. The object in the Institute is to teach men how to win souls for Christ.

And then the greatest of all Mr. Moody's great work has not even been mentioned, Northfield and Mt. Hermon. Northfield, for nine months of the year is a seminary for girls, the enrollment being about 450. Mt. Hermon near by is a college for boys with an enrollment of nearly 400. Many, if not most, at both schools work their way through. These students are taught text books, but are inspired with religious ideas and ideals and scores of them, year after year, go out into the world to teach the Word and win men and women to Christ. And then best of all Northfield every summer, from June till September, is turned into a veritable bee-hive of religious teachers, preachers, students, missionaries and evangelists. Here the best known and most powerful preachers and evangelists all over the world gather in religious council, and talk and plan and pray and counsel together about the best methods of winning men to Christ. There is nothing in all the world to compare with Northfield, and it is doubtful if any single institution, enterprise or undertaking organized among men is doing as much for evangelization as Northfield. Here is Moody's greatest work and most powerful and constant influence: and from there at the hill top near his home where his remains lie buried this illustrious man speaks yearly through a thousand tongues and by ten thousand agencies and influences for the betterment of man and to win souls to Christ. Moody's greatest work has scarcely begun.

Roosevelt.—No one will, we think, deny that Mr. Roosevelt has made a good President. He is a man of resources and ideas. The country witnessed a financial panic near the close of his last term of office, but every student of economy knows that Mr. Roosevelt was no more responsible, personally, for that than he was for the years of unprecedented prosperity that preceded it under his administration. Though a "Rough Rider" and prepared to hit hard, his administration was one of peace and he himself did more for the promotion of peace than any President has had the privilege of doing for many decades. A man of affluence, refinement and great scholarship, he knew how to reach, to sympathize with, to talk to and to help the poor, the untutored and the less favored.

Mr. Roosevelt loved the spectacular, reveled in the sensational and took a hand in many things; but he usually made good. Few but he and his kind would have chosen the rather boastful term "Rough Rider." But, come to think of it, he backed the boasting with the daring and, who ever denied that he was indeed a rough, ready and hard rider? So through his entire administration. The Roosevelt theory was usually followed by the Roosevelt fact. Roosevelt hunted bears, a rather strenuous life, and unusual, for the chief magistrate of the land. But, forsooth, he did it so fearlessly and strenuously, that the whole country went wild over Teddy bears and placed ten million of them in shop windows, toy stores and nurseries. And all wonder now how we got along without the word, "strenuous" before Roosevelt came, though we knew nothing of it in particular before his time.

Mr. Roosevelt delivered many messages, preached many lay-sermons, and gave many eloquent addresses while President that will live in our literature. His personality was not winning, but his speech was fluent, his pen facile, his language and logic cultured, chaste, scholarly. He will not rank with the greatest presidents, but his character and administration were unique, his service on the whole acceptable, and the historian of the future will not show him up in any bad light.

He had confidence in the people, and faith in almighty God. He was clean in personal habits, loyal and faithful to his church, spoke and acted always in due and highest reverence in the worship and service of God.

He had his faults, certainly. His weaknesses and his failures, sure. Plenty of them. But his public service was of such nature that his countrymen are not ashamed of, but grateful to him, and will wish him well and esteem him highly, in the years that yet remain to him which, please God, may be many.

—God is love.

FROM THE FIELD.

Durham Letter.

Dear Brother Editor:—We are still at work pushing forward the Lord's cause as best we can. The work here is taking on renewed zeal. We held our business meeting March 3rd which completed the first quarter of the year's work for 1909. Some enthusiasm is being manifested along various lines of the work. We are looking forward to a season of revival work to take effect not later than second Sunday in April. We ask that the brethren and sisters join us in prayer for an outpouring of the Holy Ghost and a glorious revival in our city. There are some changes taking place in our work. Brother B. C. Canada, our faithful secretary, having been elected as Captain of Fire Company No. 1, going on duty first of March, sent in his resignation. It was accepted and Sister Ollie Hamlett being assistant secretary was elected and installed as Secretary. Brother J. L. Harward was elected as assistant secretary. On report of the deacons a recommendation to elect Treasurer to receive all monies for the debt on our church property was passed. The election resulted in the choice of Brother S. B. Lee, who recently came to our church from Lebanon Christian Church. All pledges and offerings from any and all sources to aid in liquidating the church debt will be sent to him. His address is East Durham, N. C. We hope that all the readers of The Sun will become so much interested in our work at Durham that they will send some offering to our brother. We are hoping and praying and looking for an answer from our heavenly Father and the loyal brotherhood of our Church to help in this great work that means so much to lost souls and so much to a growing church. A. P. Barbee.

POUNDED.

On the evening of Feb. 24, Bro. J. W. Johnson of Johnson's Grove came to my house bringing us hams, sausage, meal, flour, canned and dried fruit, sugar, potatoes, soap and money as a gift from Johnson's Grove people. Bro. Johnson found my wife and little daughter sick in bed and the writer just up from a spell of grip and hardly able to go around, but the gifts he brought cheered our hearts and seemed to bring light to our home. I am now serving these dear people for my sixth year and have found them very kind. We are all very thankful for this expression of their kindness. May the Lord abundantly bless them and help their pastor to give them better service. R. H. Peel.

SINAI.

At the north end of the Red Sea, two long narrow bays extend into the mainland, the Bay of Akaba on the east and the Gulf of Suez on the west, down which we were travelling in the good ship, "Prinz Regent Lintpold." To the north-east we see the barren coast of the peninsula of Sinai or Arabia Petraea.

The ranges of mountains are the only relief to the eye from the quiet ocean inlet and we know that soon upon the Red Sea and the Indian ocean we shall lose all sight of land for days until the barren coast of Aden and later the Paradise of Ceylon burst into view.

This triangular peninsula is 9400 square miles in extent, about the same size as Sicily. Ritter says of it: "Isolated by the sea and desert from the rest of the earth and its history, it has yet, from a very remote period, formed the highly revered vestibule of all the temples of the civilized world."

The range of mountains we are watching is Jabel et-Tib which begins at the isthmus of Suez and occupies the northern part of the country.

The "river of Egypt" which is given on our maps as the southern boundary of Palestine, now called "Wadi-el-Arish, flows from these mountains north to the Mediterranean. The mountains are limestone, like a great part of Palestine. Some chalk and sandstone formation also is there.

The journey into this peninsula is said by Baedeker to be the most interesting of oriental excursions, particularly to the student of the Bible as one traverses nearly the same route as the Israelites. The scenery is very varied and rugged with wonderful geological formations. "Colorless quartz, flesh-colored felspar, green hornblende and black slate arise in majestic and precipitous masses furrowed by vertical cliffs." Since the time of their formation, these crystalline masses have undergone no geological change, but have reared their summits above the ocean from the beginning of time unaffected by the transitions of the Silurian or Devonian, the Triassic or chalk periods. At the base only do these venerable ruts show any trace of alteration. The Red Sea has thrown a girdle of coral around Mt. Sinai and so in recent times produced a coast district while towards the north is a limestone plateau, 4000 feet above sea level which stretches from Sinai to Mt. Lebanon.

The next morning we saw no land but one of the Capachine priests, our fellow traveller, was earnestly gazing where the Mtn. range had been.

"When do we see Mt. Sinai?" he suddenly asked me, as if I, indeed knew anything about the sights of this wonderful journey. I appealed to our experienced travellers, the Shanghai business men, who said that about noon we should see a long mountain range. The highest peak in that is Mt. Sinai. Evidently the business men did not particularly regard Mt. Sinai with interest, but the priest's eyes were very wistful and I began to wonder why he showed so much more interest in Mt. Sinai than any other view on the voyage. So I began to read about Mt. Sinai and its surroundings and gained the following information which I send you:

Mt. Sinai is the nucleus of the whole peninsula to which it gives its name. It in the central south, with masses in granite about it, wards extending to the gulf of Suez and Akaba, which are dry except after rain and then only scantily filled.

The history of Sinai is rich in interest though of deepest interest to us because of the law given there.

The first Pharaoh of Egypt conquered these mountain tribes and discovered mines here. When we examined the precious stones brought on board ship at Aden and Suez for sale, we could remember that since the beginning of Egypt's history, precious stones, especially turquoises have been found here. Once the mountain tribes threw off the yoke of Egypt but most of the time they have been tributary to it.

The natives worshiped the brilliant stars in the almost cloudless sky. Their caravans were more richly freighted than at the present day. Moses tended the sheep of Jethro on the slopes of Jabel Musa, so the Arabs say and show the spring of water which he used. Elijah concealed himself in a cavern here after he had slain the priests of Baal. Here the still small voice was heard. Mendelssohn's oratorio has its setting in these awful mountain heights. A hollow resembling a cistern near a mosque is said to be shown, where tradition says that Moses remained fasting while writing the ten commandments. An old willow tree on one of Mt. Sinai's peaks is unblushingly said to be the very tree from which Moses cut his rod! A mass of rock in the valley on the left side of the mountain is said to be the rock of Horeb from which the spring issued when struck by Moses. "It is probably in accordance with an ancient Jewish tradition with which both St. Paul and the expounders of the Koran seem to have been familiar, that the monks assure is that this rock accompanied the Jews throughout their wanderings in the desert and then returned to its own place."

March 10, 1909.

Were we able to stop on our journey and climb the mountain which we saw in the far distance, we would travel from Suez to Tar, the only good harbour in the Gulf of Suez beside Suez itself, then inland.

The "Bell Mt." near Tur must be most curious. On ascending the sand which covered its slope, travellers hear a peculiar sound resembling that of distant bells which gradually increase until it terminates in a strange kind of roar. Our traveller writes: "The noise at first resembles the faint tones of an Aeolian harp when first struck by the wind, then the sound produced by rubbing a moistened finger on glass. At last the reverberation is as loud as thunder, causing the rock on which we sat to tremble. Our camels were so alarmed at the sound that the attendants could scarcely hold them in." The cause of this phenomenon is the dry sand loosened by the travellers, falls into clefts of the sand stone rock. The Arabs, as always, have their tradition about it. They say the curious sounds proceed from a monastery buried under the sand. An Arab discovered it, received entertainment there and swore not to betray its existence. When he afterwards broke his oath, the monastery vanished.

At Akaba one would find the Elath of Scripture mentioned on the occasions of the voyages to Ophir. The Crusaders fought for this town and for many other sites here on the peninsula. The great pilgrim-route to Mecca lives through this country also. Our fellow-travelers, the lapachines priests probably have much interest in the famous monastery of St. Catharine on Mt. Sinai.

In the early part of the Christian period hermits settled here among the springs of these rocky mountains. Justinian erected a church of the Virgin and castle here in A. D. 130 to protect the monks against the attacks of the Saracens. The architect is said to have been beheaded because the fortress was commanded by the slope above it and on the Emperor's ordering the slope to be removed, he was told by the architect, "If we spend the whole treasures of Rome, Egypt and Syria, we could not level the mountain." Later Justinians sent 100 Roman and 100 Egyptian slaves with their wives and children there. Their descendents called Jebeliyeh, still serve the monks. Now they profess Mohammedanism and even the monks of Sinai have compromised much to the Muslims so much so that in 1530 they built a mosque inside the monastery.

In the 14th century 300 or 400 inmates were there but now there are only 20 or 30 monks, natives of Greece.

The monastery itself is not Roman Catholic but of the Greek Orthodox Church. The vows of those residing here are very strict. The monks cannot use meat or wine. During long fasts oil is forbidden. They eat fish, coarse bread, dates. They assemble for prayer twice during the day and twice at night. Women were rigorously excluded and even cats and hens as belonging to the same obnoxious sex! Many monks, happily spend only a few years here and then return home. The whole building presents the appearance of a fortress. There are cubes and round arches, pointed and flat roofs and a church and mosque in close contact with each other. The Church is in the midst of the apartments occupied by monks, pilgrims and travellers. There are mosaics wrought in the 7th and 8th centuries, the most important being the "Transfiguration of Christ." A frame is formed to it by a series of busts of apostles, prophets and saints in mosaics. Pictures of Moses as he kneels before the burning bush and as he stands before Mt. Sinai with the tables of the law in his hand are appropriate. Figures of St. Catharine, sent from Russia, are there also. A chapel of the Burning Bush is at the back into which the sun rays enter once only during the year. There are chapels for Roman Catholics but they no longer make pilgrimages to this monastery. Prof. Tichendorf's "Codex Sinaiticus" is at St. Petersburg, having been purchased from the monastery for a large sum by Alexander II. The Codex or copy of the Bible dates from the middle of the 4th century, as Bible students will remember.

I am more interested in the inhabitants of the Peninsula, the Beduins than in the churches. We saw Beduins along the Canal and on the Caravan route. About 5000 of them live in this desert. They have slight figures and regular features. The men carry charcoal, mill stones and other ware to Egypt. They supply pilgrims with camels and hunt the mountain goat. In the east the boys and girls drive the goats and speckled sheep (reminding one of Jacob's artifice.) Around the oases there are huts and plantations of dates, every where else they live in tents. They are good natured, honest and generally of noble bearing. The bridegroom purchases his bride for several camels and a sum of money. They do not practise polygamy. Occasionally a girl flees to the mountains and seriously resists and throws stones at an unacceptable suitor. The dress is a turban and a gray gown fastened with a girdle. The wealthy wear sandals of camel leather. Though professed Muslims they know little of their religion.

They celebrate festivals to Moses. At the "Mt. of the Conversation between God and Moses," they offer sacrifices to him, singing, "O Mt. of the Conversation of Moses, we seek thy favours: preserve thy good people, and we will visit thee every year." On the tomb of Shekh Salih, a national prophet, they leave native offerings, tassels, shawis, ostriches' eggs, camel's halters and bridles. Every May they have a great festival here with sacrifices, feasting and games. After the date harvest there is also a festival.

It is to be hoped that the missionary work done among the Beduins of Southern Palestine may extend into this territory. These Muslims would seem to be rather more susceptible to the Gospel than the Muslims of Cairo and the Nile.

CHRIST AND THE FAMILY.

The law of the cross must control the family. Love, which is a natural passion and principle of life, will always insure the institution of the family and the ministrations of motherhood and the protection of fatherhood in the lower ranges of human life. But natural love needs to be inspired with divine emotion in order to insure the holiest ministrations and the highest service. Hence the Christian man is commanded to love his wife as Christ loved the Church—thoughtfully, considerately, tenderly, and with willing sacrifice—and the Christian wife is commanded to reverence her husband as the Church reverences Christ—with such faith and devotion as will seek his success and his honor. And parents are commanded to bring up their children in the nurture of the Lord—in that atmosphere of love and kindness and faithful training which will tend to promote a character worthy of continuance by virtue of its likeness to the character of Christ.—The Homiletic Review.

—Owing to a driving snow and a furious blizzard Mr. Taft was compelled to take the oath of office of President, March 4, in the senate chamber, oat door exercises being abandoned to the chagrin of the many thousands who gathered in Washington to witness the inaugural ceremonies. Not since Andrew Jackson's first inauguration in 1833 has any President been compelled to take the oath of office in doors. Mr. Taft's remark to retiring President Roosevelt was, "I knew it would be a cold day when I was made President of the United States," Mr. Roosevelt replying, "And I knew there would be a blizzard clear up to the moment I went out of office."

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—There are now in North Carolina 1250 rural free delivery mail carriers.

—Dr. Torry has just conducted a revival of a month's duration in Montgomery, Ala.

—Statistical reports on religious progress in the United States show an increase for 1908 of 2835 ministers, 1874 churches, and 720,647 church members.

—One of the night riders, named Hogg, under sentence of death at Union City, Tenn., escaped prison last week and has not been recaptured thus far.

—Pastor M. W. Butler of the East End Christian Church, Newport News, Va., sends out a very neat brochure giving the Prayer meeting Topics and Reading for Young People's Circle from Wed. Feb. 3, to Wed., June 16.

—Writes a successful lawyer, and close reader of The Christian Sun, "Enclosed find my renewal to The Christian Sun, an interesting church paper which is so conducted that it deserves the patronage and ought to be read in every family of the Christian Church."

—President Finley of the Southern Railway declares that the work done by the railroad Y. M. C. A. is just as important an economic problem in railway management as that of the maintenance of the road-bed, the provision of the trackage or other material equipment.

—"Gipsy" Smith is holding great revivals and winning hundreds to Christ out in the far west, Denver, St. Paul, Minneapolis. His life is a miracle, and his power and eloquence a mystery, save as the gifts of God and the special manifestations of His favor and blessings.

—Rev. A. P. Barbee changes his address to 706 Chapel Hill St., Durham, N. C. Bro. Barbee writes, "The order for the several copies of the new Government and Principles is for our Deacons: you may expect a larger order from many members in the congregation at an early date."

—The taking of evidence in the Cooper-Carnaek murder trial at Nashville, Tenn., ended last Saturday, the lawyers are to argue now and the case is likely to go to the jury by the last of the week. There were fourteen days of actual testimony, but nearly five weeks of selecting a jury.

—Writes Sister Alice M. True personally, with the delightful letter published elsewhere, from the China Sea, "We are having a good voyage. The China Sea is not as rough as usual. I am gathering rest and strength from the voyage for the many duties when I reach Japan. Her address will be 26 Kasumi Cho, Azabu, Tokio, Japan.

—There was a severe wind storm, partaking of the nature of a cyclone in eastern North Carolina particularly about Goldsboro Wednesday, 3rd. A most unusual occurrence was that of the wind's blowing from the track, six cars of a freight train on the Atlantic Coast Line and blocking traffic for several hours.

—The Charlotte Observer has been under its present management, that of J. P. Caldwell and D. A. Tompkins, for seventeen years. It is indeed a great paper, splendid in its news service, unsurpassed in the South in editorial acumen and ability. When the present management took the paper seventeen years ago it had 1,100 subscribers; it now has a daily average of 9,813; its paper bill then was $1,600 per year, it is now $16,200. This will indicate something of the growth which the esteemed Observer has achieved by merit, business methods, and marked ability. The Charlotte Observer is indeed a great paper, independent, bold, fair, just, fearless.

—A good Sun subscriber and dear brother in Christian service writes personally, "I am right feeble now and will soon enter my sixty ninth year, but I go six miles every Sunday to superintend a Sunday-school and have missed but one Sunday in nine months." That is a record that one may well be proud of and grateful for. The sacrifice and effort may sometime seem burdensome, but the pay in blessings, benefits and favors far excel the price and he who does such deeds is happy indeed in the hope of a reward that man cannot measure and the world cannot give. Sound it to the bottom, dear brethren, and the real joy of living is the joy that comes of Christian service.

—It is announced from Northfield, Mass., that Rev. G. A. Johnston Ross of Cambridge, England, will be one of the speakers at the Northfield Christian Workers Conference, July 31—August 15. The most charming, fascinating and eloquent word painters of the events, incidents, and characters of the Bible the editor of The Sun ever heard is Mr. Ross. It is well worth a trip to Northfield to be thrilled and inspired in Bible study and research by this scholar, orator and artist, and we wish that many Sun readers would avail themselves this summer of that most helpful and uplifting of all outings, a trip to the Northfield Bible Conference. There is no summer outing comparable to it. Hundreds of the most delightful people of all this land gather there where the religious inspiration and the social enjoyment combined make the days a supreme delight.

The New Administration.—The event of the past week was President Taft's inaugural. Nearly a half-million patriotic Americans assembled in Washington to participate in or witness the ceremony. Few could hear the inaugural or witness the oath taking, on account of snow storm and blizzard that prevailed during the day. In outlining his policy, Mr. Taft declared that, as he had been a member of the former president's cabinet, one of his advisers, and assisted in the reforms which Roosevelt had initiated: "I should be untrue to myself, to my promises, and to the declarations of the party platform upon which I was elected to office, if I did not make the maintenance and enforcement of those reforms a most important feature of my administration." That which is to have first attention from Mr. Taft, he declares, is the revision of the tariff for which Congress is to convene March 15, in extraordinary session. The Panama canal work shall have constant attention and shall be prosecuted vigorously.

The newest note in the inaugural was Mr. Taft's attitude toward the South. The feeling has some how gone abroad that Mr. Taft knows Southern life, and understands the Southern white man and the Southern negro, and their status, feelings and relationship as they exist. And this feeling Mr. Taft fully justified in his inaugural, declaring that there is no prejudice in his heart and that he regards the South as much a part of the government as any other portion of the country. The general verdict is, from the papers, that Mr. Taft has made a good beginning and that his inaugural address measured up and is satisfactory.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Rev. C. C. Ryan reports the largest congregation Sunday night of any regular service in the past six months. At the Third Church the morning congregation was the largest we have had.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Third Church are having good attendance, and doing a good work under the leadership of their Pres., Mrs. Jas. A. Eley.

Wilmer Dennis of our Sunday-school has been confined to his home, at his uncle's, Mr. Geo. W. Haughwout, for some time, with scarlet fever. Wilmer is one of our brightest boys. We hope to soon have him in his place in the Sunday-school.

Mrs. Edwards, who was shot by her husband, some weeks ago, and who then shot himself from which he died in a few hours, was seemingly recovering until a few days ago when she began to grow worse and died Sunday night. Bro.

Ryan of the Temple will accompany the remains to Waverly Tuesday and conduct the funeral service. Another awful tragedy due to the demon of drink, by which a father is made a murderer and suicide, a mother is murdered and some children are left orphans.

Have you ever thought about the need of a church building in Ponce, Porto Rico? Think and pray over that subject, and watch this column next week. I may possibly say something else about it then. There is much that might be said.

J. W. Manning.

Boston Letter.

In my last letter to the Sun either the man at the type case or the man at one end of my pen made me say Boston expected to close her revival campaign with "a thousand converts" when I wanted to say "ten thousand." The latter figure I believe was actually approximated if not reached. Mechanics Building, an auditorium seating between eight thousand and nine thousand people, was used the last four days for the central meeting, and on Sunday night it was said over twelve thousand packed into it, leaving fully ten thousand outside.

Quite a number of neighborhoods were left out of the campaign because of the expense involved. One of these groups of churches located at Roslindale, where there are three churches, M. E., Baptist, and Congregational, has since decided to enter into a campaign March 21st, with the writer to conduct the services. The first week in the M. E. Church, the second in the Baptist, and the last in the Congregational. The Alexander songs will be used by a chorus of 100 voices. Pray for us. Other groups in the city are likewise trying to organize their forces, so you see the revival is still going on, though the evangelists have left.

We have recently organized a Syrian Sunday-school in our church. Though we organized with but seven, less than six weeks ago, we now have over forty on roll and an average attendance of thirty five. Our Chinese school enrollment is about 125 with an average attendance of about 75. P. S. Sailer.

CAN CONSUMPTION BE CURED?

In view of the constant agitation and misrepresentation with regard to the treatment of consumption, the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis has issued a statement in which it states that the only sure cure for this disease is fresh air, rest, and wholesome food.

Hardly a week passes without some quack "doctor" or "eminent specialist," informing the public that he has at last discovered the sure cure for tuberculosis. After examining every one of these so-called cures, several hundred in number, the National Association states that, one and all, they are misrepresentations or fakes.

Two Classes of "Cures."

These so-called "cures" are divided into two general classes. The first class of "cures" includes the quack remedies and nostrums with which the public is being constantly deceived. These range in kind from "good whiskey" to pig's blood or ultra-violet rays. Some few of them, for instance, are cod-liver oil, lime dust, malt extract, goat's meat, corn-oil, clabbered milk, vegetable teas, and numerous inhalations of supposed germicides, besides a large number of well-known patent and proprietary medicines and numerous disinfectants. None of these are cures for consumption. They are rather for the most part of a dangerous character, and patients who take them may be running a serious risk. Consumption is caused by a germ which destroys portions of the lungs or other affected tissues. No drugs, medicines, inhaled gas, or home-made remedies can, by any means, kill the germ or close up the cavity in the lungs, as is so often claimed for these specifics. Neither is it possible to inhale a sufficiently strong germicide to kill the consumption germ. Such an inhalation would kill the patient before it would kill the germ.

Another class of "cures" for consumption, by which many people are deceived, includes the secret remedies advertised by unscrupulous "doctors" and "professors" at the heads of so-called "institutes." These people advertise that they can cure consumption at home by means of remedies which are secret and known only to them, or sometimes they advertise that they can cure consumption at the "institutes" through some secret course of treatment. For instance, a "professor" out in Kansas conducts an "institute" where he claims he has a drug which will surely cure consumption. A "doctor" in Minnesota says he has a new remedy which he himself will exploit for the benefit of humanity. A Colorado specialist has advertised a new method of curing the disease. A St. Louis druggist claims to have found how to "dynamite" tuberculosis germs. An "institute" in a western state has been opened recently, which pretends to cure consumption, without resort to fresh air treatment, largely by means of massage, osteopathic manipulations and some secret methods. Again, the National Association asserts that the very fact of secrecy in these cases tends to discredit the so-called cure. No responsible physician will find a cure for disease and refuse to make it known because of pecuniary motives.

Cure Possible.

These two classes of "cures" are not "cures" at all. Consumption is a curable disease, however, and in some places more than 75 per cent. of the patients under treatment have been restored to health. The essentials for the cure of consumption are rest, fresh air, and wholesome food. A large number of physicians have been working for years to perfect a vaccine, or anti-toxin for tuberculosis, or to find some agent such as tuberculin which will assist in the cure of the disease. Thus far, the experiments have not furnished a product which will either absolutely cure or prevent consumption, or render the patient immune against the disease. Many of these serums have proved effective in increasing the resistance of the patient and thus helping in the cure, but no scientist of repute today claims to have discovered a tuberculin which will produce a cure without the combined aid of fresh air, rest and wholesome food.

THE HOLY SPIRIT.

His Personality and Work.

God the Holy Spirit (or Holy Ghost, or Spirit of Holiness) is the Third Person of the Trinity, the coequal of and the co-worker with God the Father and God the Son, and is the invisible Divine personality in the world which reveals to human hearts and consciences the love of the Father and the atonement of the Son of man's salvation. He proceeds from the Father and the Son, being sent by them and through whom they operate in preserving the Church and promoting its growth in the world.

Jesus is "the way, the truth, and the life;" the Holy Spirit leads the soul into that way, guides it into all truth, and imparts to it that life. He convicts of sin, aids in repentance and faith, regenerates our natures, purifies from sinfulness, and gives peace and joy. He comforts, strengthens and sanctifies believers, bears witness to their acceptance with God and adoption as God's children, dwelling in them as the principle of that new and divine life, and giving guidance, force and effect to the efforts of those who work and witness for him.

The Holy Spirit thus continues, in union with the Father and the Son, the work of redemption which Jesus began and performed, while in person upon the earth, to the day of His ascension.—Preston A. Ross, in Presbyterian Of The South.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MARCH 21.
A Few Suggestions.

Review Lesson:—Acts first nine chapters.

Golden Text:—They that were scattered abroad went everywhere teaching the word. Acts 8:4.

There are various methods to conduct a review lesson, and only a few of them can be given below. The way not to teach is the one so usually followed of asking in regard to each lesson, What is the subject? The topical outline? The Golden Text?; then the question printed in the quarterly, the pupils finding answers from the same. This is not testing; it is parroting; please don't be a parrot anymore.

I. The method of the Written Examination. If you announced a quarter ago that you would pursue this method, there is none better. If you did not, will you not today give such notice for the next quarter's review? Your examination might well contain such questions as these: Who was the author of the Acts? The relation of the Acts to the Gospels? What important event in our Lord's history did we study in the first lesson? What promise was fulfilled in the second lesson? Who is the leader among the Apostles? Who is usually associated with him? Describe what part these men take in our first quarter's work. What led to the election of deacons in the church? Who was the most prominent of these? His life? Who was next in prominence to him? His life? Who led the persecution of the Christians? The cause of the persecution? The beneficent results of the same? Give an account of the conversion of Paul. Show the spread of the church. Of course these questions are merely suggestive,—by no means exhaustive; some of them you may desire to use.

II. The Lesson Method. To use this method assign a lesson each to a pupil, requiring all to be prepared on the Golden Texts. Ask the one to whom Lesson I. was assigned to tell the lesson in his own words, ask others to fill in omissions, another to recite the Golden Text, you yourself giving the chief spiritual truth of the lesson. Bring out the intervening events by question or by assignment ahead or by way of incidental instruction. Proceed likewise with the other lessons.

III. The Chapter Method. We have covered nine chapters of the Acts this quarter. Assign a chapter to each of the class, ask the others to read all the chapters and be prepared to fill in omissions.

IV. The Practical Truth Method. This method is best adopted to Adult Bible Classes. Assign a lesson to each and request that at least three practical teachings be brought in. Bring out the facts of the lessons by pointed questions to the others.

V. The Outline Method. Make no assignments, but ask all to be prepared on all lessons. When the class meets, with chalk in hand go to the board and write "The Early Church." Ask from what chapters our lessons have come, state that we have been studying the origin, growth, development, persecution, what the church was doing during this lesson. You will find by this method that it was watching the ascent of Christ from the Mt. of Olives. Write "Watching" to the left of Lesson I. Then by the question bring out the facts of the lesson and the Golden Text; then give the central truth you desire them to remember. Do likewise with all the lessons. At the conclusion, your board will look thus:

Early Church, Acts Chap 1-9.

Watching ..... Lesson I.
Spirit-filled ..... Lesson II.
Growing ..... Lesson III.
Working Miracles ..... Lesson IV.
On Trial ..... Lesson V.
Purified ..... Lesson VI.
Witnessing ..... Lesson VII.
Triumphant ..... Lesson VIII.
Aggressive ..... Lesson IX.
Scriptural ..... Lesson X.
Widening Its Borders ..... Lesson XI.

It would be an excellent idea to have the pupils take this outline down in their note books, if you use them in your teaching.

VI. The Person and Place Method. Assign ahead to each member of the class for a short essay or a verbal report one of the following: Peter, John, Barnabas, Saul, Stephen, Philip, Aeneas, Dorcas, The Lame Man, The Ethiopian, Ananias either or both, Sapphira, Simon; or, in their relation to the work of the quarter, Jerusalem, the temple, Gaza, Lydda, Sharon, Joppa, Mt. of Olives, Samaria, Ethiopia.

VII. The First Things Method. We have studied the following "first things" relative to the Church during the quarter; The First Descent of the Spirit, The First Sermon After His Descent, The First Revival, The First Miracle, The First Trial, The First Case of Hypocrisy, The First Imprisonment, The First Extension of Organization, The First Christian Martyr, The First Persecution, The First Home Missionary Effort, The First Foreign Missionary Effort, The First Raising from the Dead, etc. If you employ this method ask all to read the first nine chapters of Acts, and note the "first things." Teach by asking a certain one to name a "first thing," another to describe it, then write it on the board. Do likewise until all are found out.

VIII. The Recitation Method. This will be best suited to primary and intermediate classes. If you have twenty in your class, write the corrected history of the quarter's work in your own simple language in twenty parts, covering alike lessons and intervening events. Assign a part to each one. Ask him to memorise it for next lesson. Then have them all stand up in a row and begin thus reciting the connected story of all the lessons. You might intersperse the recitation of the parts with a song after each four or five. This would make an excellent method for the Superintendent's review before the whole school.

Give an examination next time.

Assignments for Home Study. Ask one to prepare an essay on the growth of temperance in the United States; (You yourself would do well to prepare a temperance map of the United States to display to the class next Sunday;) a second to collect instances of the evil of strong drink from the secular papers for the week; a third to find from his concordance the six best passages against drunkenness; a fourth what the Bible says about temperance; a fifth what it teaches in regard to total abstinence from 1 Cor. 13; Romans 14 and 1 Cor. 8:9.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR MARCH 14
Aeneas and Dorcas.

Acts 9:31-43.

Golden Text:—And Peter said unto him, Aeneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise and make thy bed. And he arose immediately. Acts 9:34.

The persecution had ceased and the churches had rest. The church had been in existence about ten years and had spread widely in the last three years. The Christians are not only in Palestine but in Damascus, Cyprus, in Asia Minor, Antioch and one at least in Ethiopia.

The Church has multiplied and its practical benefits are being realized. The Apostles are healing the sick and helping the poor.

Healing The Sick. These early preachers went everywhere, visiting and encouraging the Christians. As they were going about doing good, providence brought Peter into touch with a man named Aeneas who had been afflicted eight years. The man was sick with a kind of paralysis and unable to walk. Peter guards against being thought the source of the healing and draws no attention to himself but says to the sick man: "Jesus Christ maketh thee whole, arise and make thy bed." The bed was a mat or rug quilted and stuffed with wool. The making of the bed was to roll it to prevent it's being trodden upon.

Note. To those seeking to do good new opportunities will continually come.

2. Good works toward the sick and unfortunate, expressing true character of our religion forms a strong influence for drawing men to Christ.

Helping the Poor. There was at Joppa a good woman named Dorcas who was not abundantly blessed with this world's goods but she was full of good works, especially did she minister to the wants of the very poor and thinly clad.

After a time this good woman died and was lamented by a large number of those whom she during her life had clothed. Peter put them all from the room, kneeling down prayed bidding the woman to rise. When this miracle had been made known, many believed upon the Lord.

In helping the poor Peter went where he was welcomed. He went where he was most needed. He showed he was no respecter of persons.

The raising of Dorcas with her life and deeds of charity was a more enduring monument than one of bronze or stone.

"PREPARING THE S. S. TEACHER TO TEACH."

Rev. Marion W. Baker, Lakemont, N. Y., Sec. of Education for the A. C. C. writes the editor of The Christian Sun as follows:

I am glad that you have got this material in the present form, for it evinces a spirit of enterprise and will result in consciousness of powers of which out men have formerly been in doubt. It will moreover serve an excellent purpose directly, as was intended, in helping our Bible teachers at their task. I am surprised at the amount of material, and at the range covered. Considering these facts and the diversity of authorship, the result is commendable indeed.

Some parts could, I think, profit by revision and condensation. The revision should bring all parts up to the literary standard of most of the book, and some matters dealt with in a general or introductory way might be treated as to give more space for what is exceedingly condensed. Some matters are touched by different writers, a thing which might be adjusted by an editor who was understood to deal with all such cases freely.

I am surprised not to find named among the "versions" of the Bible the "American Revision." The list looks somewhat as would a list of the world's republics, lacking our own. Possibly the necessity of brevity accounts for the handling of Hebrews, Revelation, etc., as if no question were pending regarding their authorship. Or possibly the writer eschews all such considerations. But the twentieth century Bible teacher should know, even if he does not mention the fact, that few scholars attribute Hebrews to Paul, and many cannot regard Revelation and John as the same man. The only criticism meant is that the writer seems to speak as if the matter were finally settled on the traditional basis.

But the whole is so good that the minor imperfections may well be overlooked. It would be difficult indeed to secure by joint authorship, involving the contributions of ten men, what would be better. Beside, it is a positive contribution to the literature of religious pedagogy, in which we may justly take pride.

I hope that the book may have wide circulation, may lead to the general adoption of the teacher-training plan, and may do much in spreading the intelligence and providing the training it is meant to encourage.

BLOOD.

Among castaway manuscripts of N. Summerbell I find matter suggesting the following thoughts:

If God could have saved men just as well without the shedding of the blood of Jesus Christ, would God have allowed his only begotten Son to die, "in whom he was well pleased?"

If to give his Son to die was the best way, was it not God's only way?

If the best way to save men was "by blood," and the best way was God's only way, then

Is not the way of salvation by the death of Christ the only way that could have been provided? Then was not the death of Christ necessary?

If necessary, and Jesus died, is it not cruel to argue against salvation through the death of Christ: cruel to Jesus, and cruel to the sinner? This would appear to be so, from the bearing of an ancient and honest history (Mat. 16:21, and later):

"From that time began Jesus to show unto his disciples, that he must go to Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and the third day be raised up."

There was present a "higher critic" in the company, and we read of his assurance as follows:

"And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall never be unto thee."

But Jesus did not approve of Peter's presumption, or opinion: for we read on, in the history:

"But he turned and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art a stumbling-block unto me: for thou mindest not the things of God, but the things of men."

If Peter had not changed his opinion about the death of Christ, he would not have been instrumental (with the other preachers) in winning three thousand on the day of Pentecost. In fact, there are very few, holding to Peter's first opinion, that win any sinners to Christ. Their theory of salvation without blood is so much like going to heaven on a pass of the Pullman Sleeping Car Company, where the only sacrifice is the tip given to the porter (the fashionable, intellectual clergyman). Peter's ideas in rebuking Christ, possibly, I fear, may be commended in our own time by some who lament that their ministry is comparatively barren; but Christ called him "Adversary." Those who love Jesus should beware.

Christ argued this question on other occasions with some other intellectualists; and we find the record in the words of another honest historian (Luke 24:25-47):

"And he said unto them, O foolish men, and slow of heart to believe in all that the prophets have spoken! Behooved it not the Christ to suffer these things, and to enter into his glory? * * * Thus it is written, that the Christ should suffer, and rise again from the dead the third day; and that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name unto all the nations."

Christ taught that it behooved him to suffer. And I believe that the citizens of heaven will not argue with the Master, when they stand before the throne, and understand better the sweets of immortality and the mysteries of redemption, but will rather say (Rev. 5:9):

"Thou wast slain, and didst purchase unto God with thy blood men of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation, and madest them to be unto our God a kingdom and priests."

For long ago Jesus said of his own blood, "This is my blood of the new covenant, which is poured out for many unto remission of sins." He said that before he died. J. J. Summerbell.

GOING UP TO WORSHIP.

Somehow one wants to put in that word "Up" when speaking of attending divine service. One always goes "up" to worship. The house of public prayer and service may be nestled quietly at the foot of the hills, or deep in the dale or valley. Yet one goes "up" to worship. It simply fastens itself in the human mind that there is an upward movement, an up-going in worship. And there is.

Man's highest exaltation of Almighty God is this, that he is permitted to go up to the place of prayer and public worship, and have access, find approach to God there. We have not rightly considered and esteemed the privilege. Through thousands of years even the chosen race of God's peculiar people, the Hebrews, were not allowed the high prerogative of approaching God personally and directly. They could and did find access only after due sacrifice and offering and then only by the agency of their priests. The priests must sanctify themselves and the instruments of their approach and accession. It was a tedious, trying and often painful process.

But by an offering on Calvary for the whole race, that offering in which the High Priest gave Himself as the sacrificial Lamb, men everywhere might come by the grace of God, and find access to the throne.

There is not under high heaven, and by the appointment and ordinance of God, a holier, more beautiful, and higher privilege among men than this of going up on the Sabbath, and at the appointed time, to the house of God, the place of prayer. You may deem this privilege quite ordinary and commonplace because frequent and repeated and easy; but we repeat, there is no privilege of our day equal to this of going to our church on the Sabbath to engage in public prayer and to worship God. Whether we know it or not this is having more influence upon our lives, doing more to shape and fashion our characters, telling more in consequence on our destiny and our future, than any other event, habit or privilege that comes into our lives. Here the love of Christ is learned, moral sentiments are crystalized, patriotic zeal is multiplied, care for home and community is inculcated, hope of eternal life is engendered, and faith in God is taught and realized. How beautiful indeed and how sweet the privilege to turn aside from the daily routine and go to the place of public prayer for worship on the holy Sabbath day.

THE CALL OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

It is a well known fact that the great majority, about four fifths in fact, of those brought to Christ in our country come through the agency and efforts of the Sunday-school. How hardly indeed are those reached at all for the Church whose lives have not already been touched by some training in the Sunday-school!

This alone should inspire to zeal and effort through this saving agency. And yet there is sad, nay, verily, pathetic neglect along this very line. It does not take an ordained minister to organize or conduct a Sunday-school. Any Christian worker with ordinary intelligence in his head, and the love of God and zeal for souls in his heart may go out and begin a Sunday-school. It does not require a church equipment as a meeting place. A school house or any convenient building may serve that end. And yet, with facilities so easy and men and means so ready there are in these Southern states two million five hundred thousand white children out of the Sabbath-school and almost untouched by any religious teaching, power or influence. In North Carolina there are 81,267 such children; in Virginia 90,689; in Alabama 157,169; in Georgia 200,302; in Tennessee 224,514; in Texas 406,153, and so on among the other States.

Here indeed is a problem for our time; hence a task for the churches.

Christian Sun readers, bring this home to self. What are your church, your school, your own dear self, doing to reach these unreached children and bring them into touch with that agency and that institution most likely to reach them for Christ?

THE REVEALED WILL.

The Bible is the revealed will of God. There is no other ground of account for its beauty, its wonder, and its mystery. Assailed by foes, and attacked by critics, within and without, it has not only survived through the ages, but has grown in power, influence and might with increasing centuries. The Book is read by more people, studied by more scholars and taught by more thinkers today than ever in all the world. All this has been said again and again, and this is not written to repeat, but with this in view: The Bible is the revealed will of God.

Our Father does not speak to us any where else as plainly, forcefully and directly as through the Word. Nature whispers of His bounty and love, the mountains speak of His might and the ocean of His omnipotence: but when we want to hear His voice, see His hand, feel His touch, know His life and understand His will, we must read, study and learn the Word. The world about us shows us His shadows: the Word reveals His will and shows us His desire concerning us. I may learn of God through nature and my fellowmen: I may learn God only by reading, studying, and praying over His Word. If you would know what God wishes, thinks, desires concerning you and your welfare you will find out if you read carefully and prayerfully His Word, the Bible.

TRANSFERRING CHURCH MEMBERSHIP.

It is surprising indeed that so many sane, sober, good people, in changing their place of residence, to another community in which there is a church of their own name and faith, leave behind them their church membership. This is true not only of our Christian Church, but of all churches with local self-government. There are thousands of members in the Christian Church today who are members only in name. Our Baptist and Presbyterian brethren seem to suffer the evil consequences of this habit as we ourselves do. Following an editorial on this line we gave recently a quotation from a good Baptist paper. Here is one from The Presbyterian of the South:

"How surprising that so many who bear the name of Christ change their homes, and do not transfer their church membership.

The letter of transfer remains unopened for in the trunk, or has never been asked for. And in the new place of residence they are not known as followers of Christ; they take no part in Christian service to the world, and bear no part in the Church's burden of care and effort for the world for which Christ suffered and died.

Dr. Chapman in his evangelistic campaign in Richmond made earnest and repeated appeals to such unenrolled Christians to come out from the world, with which they are now identified, and again take the name of Christ. And all the churches are having names added of men and women who for a long time have worn no badge of membership and followed afar off."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

I need ideas as bad as Texas needs rain. It is hard for me to find a good idea as it is to find out what is being done on the Panama Canal. My thoughts are like migratory birds, except they do not have the instinct to go in the right direction. I do not know whether I feel like Roosevelt going out or like Taft coming in; I know I feel like the place I fill is too big for me. I feel as young as I ever did, but I do not feel like I have as much sense as I once did. I wonder if people ever feel old; and I wonder more if people ever get old enough to feel as wise as they did when they were young. I wonder, too, how people write books, when I have a hard time to fill one column in the Sun. They say practice makes perfect, but I have not found it so in writing for print. When I talk, I seem to have something to say; but when I put the same ideas on paper they seem to lose their strength. I do not see how editors spin out so much good thought and keep on week by week. No matter whether editor Atkinson is at home or abroad, whether he is sick or whether he is well, whether he is busy or on vacation, he seems to use a fountain pen as full of ideas as of ink.

Well, time and tide wait for no man and the Enotype machine is as bad as time and tide. It eats up copy like the great mills eat up North Carolina pine. Sometimes I think the printing presses are nearing the time when all their products will be second growth, as they say it is coming to that in milling pine. The heart trees are going fast, and the heart products of the press may be going, too. Won't it be too bad if the next generation has to live in sap houses and read sap books and papers. They save sap timber by putting on paint, and I guess we will have to paint our ideas; but even "modern paint is not good," they say.

Some people try to make us believe that religion is losing heart, too; that it is style, and doing, and show; but I notice one thing in all of these departments—that houses are better than when the continent was covered with virgin trees; that they are better furnished; that they contain more good books and papers; that intelligence is more widely distributed; that moral sentiment is purer and stronger; and by the logic of facts religion seems to be more intelligent and benevolent in its manifestation, if not more demonstrative in its emotional expression. I am inclined to believe that intelligence can construct a better house out of old field pine than ignorance can out of virgin heart pine; and I have no doubt that religion has suffered more from ignorance than from learning. So we may hope that nature's resources will not exhaust and leave mankind without shelter and without bread, and that God's grace will not grow less and leave mankind without faith and without love. I know that man is better clothed, fed, and housed today than ever before, though he has been cutting down trees, digging up coal, and filling the soil for thousands of years; and I am inclined to the belief that the moral status and spiritual character of man today is better than in any century since Adam and Eve withered the hope of the race by their sin. Hence I feel like prolonging my prayer, continuing my ministry, singing my song of praise, and pressing "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus;" and if I can write one letter, in a lifetime, that will help any soul out of darkness into light, or upward in the divine path, or put one new ray of sunshine into one home, I shall be repaid for all that I write without results.

Elon College Notes.

Dr. E. L. Moffitt is this week in Eastern Virginia in the interests of the college endowment. Several very encouraging reports have come in and we are expectant that this trip will result in much permanent good for Elon.

Sunday Dr. Newman preached for the college continuing his series of sermons upon the Psalms. Fortunate indeed is that community and body of students who are permitted to listen to such a man as Dr. Newman discuss so divine a theme.

The Publication Committee has been busily engaged for the past week getting the catalogue ready for the press. Their work is almost complete and the catalogue this year will be larger and contain much more information than any the college has previously gotten out.

The idea of the Easter Examination has struck a popular vein and the decision meets the hearty approval of the student body. It is realized that the long term from Christmas to June can be much more easily passed and the work made more satisfactory to student and teacher by a mid-term review and examination.

The Young Men's Christian Association has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: W. W. Elder, Pres., J. W. Barney, Vice-Pres., A. C. Hall, Sec., J. W. Barrett, Treas.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its regular consecration meeting last night for March, J. W. Barrett leader. The Society has elected officers as follows for the ensuing year: Pres., J. T. Cobb; Vice-Pres., Miss Affie Griffin; Sec. Miss Carrie Boyd; Corresponding Secretary, Miss Iola Johnson; Treas., W. G. Cobb; Organist, Miss Ruth Stevick; Collectors, Misses Bond and Wellons.

Miss Ida Garrison, State Secretary of the Y. W. C. A. will be here the fifteenth of March to address the Association. The officers just elected are as follows: Pres., Miss Affie Griffin, Vice-Pres., Miss Carrie Boyd; Rec. Sec., Miss Nannie B. Farmer; Cor. Sec., Miss Nannie E. Farmer; Treas., Miss Bessie McPherson; Organist, Miss Beulah Foster.

The Psiphelian Literature Society is to give its regular Easter Entertainment April 10th. It is not necessary to say that this will be good for all who have ever attended these exercises know what to expect from these young ladies.

Mrs. W. B. Hobly of Raleigh has been a visitor this week and Miss Martha Pearl Holleman of Greensboro, daughter of S. A. Holleman, a former teacher here is visiting friends here now.

J. T. C.

—Surely people will never tire reading about the twenty-third Psalm, called the Shepherd Psalm. Dr. O. P. Gifford says in a recent magazine article that he has read that there have been written 500,000 volumes on this one Psalm, and that there are now more than 224,000 volumes in libraries on this single Shepherd Psalm. It is a wonderful piece of literature, for its length, the most wonderful ever written.

—Pleasant Grove Church in Halifax Co., Virginia, which has recently completed one of the very handsomest country churches in all our Southern Convention, is this week putting down a handsome carpet all over its floor space, and installing heavy oak pews of latest and most substantial model. For devotion and loyalty to their church, we do not know where to find a membership and community surpassing this.

My Dear Children and Friends:

Spring is coming and already we have begun our planting in the garden. The very busy days will soon be coming when we shall put forth great effort to get the best results from that part of Old Mother Earth which means so much to the Orphanage.

Measles all gone and children all able to be in school again. We are very grateful to our heavenly Father that no serious results followed and with the exception of a few colds the health of the children is excellent.

We have to report this week a nice box from Raleigh Church containing: 4 lbs. coffee, 3 cans peaches, 1 lb. dried peaches, 1 can blackberries, 4 lbs. sugar, 2 cans potted meat, 1 can tomatoes, 1 can pickles, ½ gal. Irish potatoes, 2 pencils, 1 pkg. tea, 2 boxes crackers and 2 dresses.

From members of Union Grove, N. C. Christian Church 1 box containing: Mrs. Arren Phillips, 2 towels; Mrs. E. C. Phillips, 1 sheet; Miss Cora Phillips 5 yds. chambray; Miss Myrtle M. Phillips, 3 prs. stockings; No name, 1 dress, 2 collars; Mrs. E. C. Phillips, 9 yds. gingham; Miss Ada Phillips, 1 pr. shoes; Mrs. Lou Moffitt, 1 towel; Mrs. Lenora Hancock, 1 handkerchief; Miss Ethel Brown, 2½ yds. ribbon, 3 yds. calico; Mrs. Sarah J. Brown, 8 towels, 1 pr. pants; Mrs. Caroline Moffitt, 4 yds. calico.

All this is very great help to us and we wish to express our thanks for same and say God bless the friends who help in any way.

Very cordially yours,

Uncle Jim.

Somerton, Va., Feb. 23, 1909.
Dear Uncle Jim:

Guess you think I have forgotten you by not writing in some time, but I keep busy helping daddy farm. Uncle Jessie Harrell gave me ten cents and mamma gave me fifteen so will send my dues for the first quarter in the year. I will soon be large enough to make my own money for the Orphanage.

Your nephew,
Curtis Parke Harrell.

Cypress Chapel, Va., Feb. 26, 1909.
Dear Uncle Jim:

Here we are for February. It's a short month so we send a short letter. Mama will write for us all together this time as Grandma has been sick and she is kept so busy all the time. Enclosed find our dues for this month. Will write a long letter next time.

Love to each of the cousins and the little orphan children.

Your nieces and nephew,
Thelma Lee Harrell,
Mary Ida Harrell,
Harvey C. Harrell.

Glad you are so prompt little folks. Be sure not to get behind.

Macon, N. C., Feb. 26, 1909.
Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed you will find a check for one dollar, our dues until March. We little folks have to stay pretty close these wintry days, but now and then we catch some bright ones, and it makes us think of Frank Stauton's "Spring is a comin', but the winter's on the hill."

With much love, Your little nieces and nephew,

Helen W. Scholz,
Herbert Scholz, Jr.,
Elizabeth Scholz.

Again we hear from the dear little Scholz cousins. Spring will indeed soon be here, then for the scattering of the little ones to find the pretty spring flowers.

Henderson, N. C., Feb. 25, 1909.
Dear Uncle Jim:

I am feeling so grown these days. Miss Roselle Harton gave me a blue linen Buster Brown suit. I am so proud of my first pants. Hannah Clare weighs 16 pounds. She is well and growing nicely. Enclosed find our dimes for Feb.

Charles E. Newman, Jr.,
Hannah Clare Newman.

Well, little man, you must not get ahead of James, Jr. He has no pants yet but daddy says when he stops sucking his thumb he'll get him some.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Feb. 25, 1909.
Dear Uncle Jim:

I want to join the band of cousins. I enjoy reading the letters. I will send ten cents for February.

Yours truly,
Hubert Neville.

Right welcome you are, Hubert. You have written a nice little letter.

Holland, Va., March 1, 1909.
Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl six years old. My mama has left me to stay with uncle and auntie to be company for them since Grandma's death. I now wish to join the band of little cousins. Enclosed please find ten cents.

Very truly,
Willie Jackson Everett.

You are welcome little Willie. Little girls can brighten many an hour for their dear ones when they will.

My Dear Cousins:

We send our dues for Feb. We had the measles when the other children had it and are now all right again. We did not like it but are very glad to think we won't have it again.

Your little cousins,

SELF-CONTROL.

I remember that once a man came to our house red with wrath. He was boiling over with rage. He had, or supposed he had, a grievance to complain of. My father listened to him with great attention and perfect quietness until he had got it all out, and then he said to him, in a soft and low tone, "Well, I suppose you only want what is just and right?" The man said, "Yes," but went on to state the case over again. Very gently father said to him, "If you have been misinformed I presume you would be perfectly willing to know what the truth is?" He said he would. Then father quietly and gently made a statement of the other side; and when he was through the man got up and said, "Forgive me, Doctor. Forgive me." Father had beaten him by his quiet, gentle way. I saw, it, and it gave me an insight into the power of self-control. It was a striking illustration of the passage, "He that ruleth his spirit is better than he that taketh a city."—Henry Ward Beecher.

*THE DUTY OF OUR WOMEN IN RELATION TO OUR HOME MISSION WORK.

Christian missions had their origin in the example and command of our Lord Himself. From the first foundations of the Church, individual missionary activity marked the life of the Apostles. The result of Paul's labors and his successors' was the growth and extension of the Church through Asia Minor, Greece, Italy, Southern Gaul, and Northern Africa.

The missionary idea lies close to the heart of Christ. While our faith and love reach out for the whole world, and we feel true Christian sympathy with the foreign field, let us not forget to consider the immensity of the work at home. The women of the Christian Church have cause to congratulate themselves today that we have really enlisted in this grand work of Home Missions. We have been late in taking it up, but now is the propitious time. We should have our "Woman's Home Missionary Society" in every Church, and do all we can to aid our agents in this grand home work. "The Church can have no such sign of Christ's living presence and gracious power in the world as she has in the existence of the missionary spirit in her members, and the reports of missionary success from the fields." Humanity in ignorance and degradation is the sign of sin in the world. Humanity elevated, enlightened, purified, and redeemed, is the sign of Christ in the world. The mission of the Church is two-fold. First, to enlighten the believer, strengthen his faith in Christianity, take the raw material gathered within her fold, and construct a kingly, Christ-like character. Secondly, to save sinners, to go anywhere, everywhere, throwing out her influence until men and women see her power, and come to dwell in Christian love with one another. All the various denominations have their "Woman's Home Missionary Societies," which are doing something to aid this noble work. Shall we women of the Christian Church stand idly by and smile contentedly while our sisters gather in the rich harvest? The females outnumber the males nearly two to one in all denominations. If the mission work is not a success, we are to blame.

"Go ye, then, into the harvest,

With your might and with a will;
Bravely toiling in life's vineyard,

Thus the holy law fulfil;
Gathering into Christ's own kingdom
All the friendless, fallen ones,
Who are wand'ring by the wayside, Waiting till the reaper comes."

In the slums of our cities, out on the frontiers, there are millions of poor ignorant enslaved souls, and these must be redeemed or perish. The ignorant and unevangelized of all lands are coming to our shores by hundreds and thousands. And the only agent for Americanizing them, in the true sense, is the Church of Christ. If the Church fails in her work here, the population of our country will become a mass of many nationalities with nothing in common, except to do as they please. These immigrants are quite a large element in some of our large cities already. You can see that this work is overwhelmingly important. We have a missionary duty to perform which is of such a character that it is impossible for us to draw the line of demarcation between the Home and Foreign work.

No church can be truly Christian and not be missionary. We can learn the news from Japan in a few minutes, and send a missionary across the Atlantic ocean in less than a week. The nations are our next-door neighbors. Our nation differs from all others in this: We have the largest stream of immigration, pouring into our land from every other nation to be found on the face of the globe. Our very existence as a Christian nation is seriously threatened. As my subject is "The Duty of our Women in Relation to our Home Mission Work," I ask if anything could be plainer than the duty of Christianizing this incoming tide? Unless we do, we shall have neither home nor foreign missions for Christ. Let us not forget that the land where Christ and the early apostles of Christianity preached, and obtained the red rose of martyrdom, is now land for the missionaries. I was greatly impressed in reading the remarks of Rev. E. F. Kupfer, who had been a missionary to China. He visited New Orleans, and wrote for "The Gospel in all Lands," published by the Methodist Missionary Society in April, 1890: "While visiting this great mart of the South, enroute for Texas, I found much that was interesting and new; much that was pleasing to the eye that just came from the bleak North. But what pleased me more than the sweet-smelling roses, the ever-green villas, the moss-covered trees, or the heavy-laden boughs in the orange groves, was to find a most flourishing mission among the sons of the 'middle kingdom.'" Forty-five young ladies of the Presbyterian, Methodist, and Episcopal Churches were working in beautiful harmony in trying to make life more pleasant to these men.

"The Mission, under Presbyterian management, has been most successful. Only a little over five years old,—twenty have been converted: one has returned to China as missionary to preach to his countrymen the Savior of the world.

"Forty-three were present when I visited the Mission, and I must admit that never before have I seen so many men of this class together who were so cheerful, happy, and content. The cordial way in which these ladies welcomed them, and the polite reciprocation of these men, convinced me that however hard cases they may be, with love and sympathy they can be gained.

"This work interested me so much because of its bearing and influence upon our work in China. Most of the Chinese now living in this country will sooner or later return to China, and their attitude to the Church and the missionaries will then entirely depend upon the treatment they have received from the Church here.

"I have often been asked since my return from China whether the Chinese Exclusion Bill will not injure our work in China, and my answer has always been, 'not likely, among those who have not been abroad.' The element we have to fear most will be found among those who have lived here and have been led to feel that the Church took little or no interest in them."

Then, too, may I not ask, Why was it that Senator Blair, Minister to China, was refused? Secretary Blair may not give the official reply for prudential reasons, but it is understood to be because Senator Blair is opposed to Chinese immigration. Let us keep a standing pledge in our Herald for Home and Foreign Missions.

I would not have anyone think that I am not just as much in favor of Foreign as Home Missions. I did what I could to aid my husband in his struggles to educate Rev. David F. Jones, our first Foreign Missionary. Let us regard the souls of the heathen in the United States just as worthy to be saved as those in Asia and Africa. The work is one. The world can and must be taken for Christ. Can we not do more to aid the editors and agents of our papers in their appeals in behalf of missions? Can we not arouse our people to aid our Convention Secretary of Missions in his noble work, so that the number of our missionaries, both Home and Foreign, may be greatly increased? It is our duty to aid our Mission Agent and his worthy companion, Sister Bishop, as they go forth to organize societies.

My paper is growing too long. I will close in the language of F. F. Seward in "Our Mission Field at Home:"

"How many in our favored land
 God's holy day profane—
 Neglect the Savior's gracious call,
 And take his name in vain!
 Then while we pray for heathen climes
 Far o'er the crystal foam,
 O let us ever bear in mind
 Our mission field at home.
 "Go feed my lambs," our Savior said,
 'And bring them to my fold;'
 For us the same command is given
 As them to him of old;
 While others toil for dying souls;
 Far o'er the ocean's foam,
 Be ours to serve this noble cause,
 Our mission field at home.
 "How many a poor neglected child
 With pleading eyes we meet!
 A gentle word might higher guide
 Its little wandering feet,—
 A precious lamb that God may bless,
 Beneath this hallowed dome:

Then let us ever bear in mind
 Our mission field at home."

—Last week's issue of The Herald of Gospel Liberty was the Annual Foreign Mission Number and did great credit to Editor Barrett and the other efficient workers in our Dayton Publishing House.

—The Biblical Recorder of Raleigh, in a recent issue, says:

"The Centennial of Religious Journalism (1808-1908) by Dr. J. Pressley Barrett, Dayton, Ohio, is an attractive cloth-bound volume of 656 pages, 'designed to commemorate the first century of the history of the Herald of Gospel Liberty,' (the oldest religious newspaper) having been founded in September, 1808), and therein to give a bird's-eye view of the work and progress of the Christian Church.' There are many illustrations, a good number showing leaders and churches of the denomination in North Carolina where O'Kelly lived, wrought, died, and was buried. History, centennial addresses and articles, and selected editorials from the paper, occupy most of the volume which serves its purpose admirably."

Your Cotton Crop Can Be Increased

It costs no more to cultivate an acre that produces two bales of cotton than an acre which produces only one-quarter of a bale. Why not see what you can do with

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

Other men have been able to double and more than double their yield per acre with a liberal application of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers.

Messrs. Lucas & Jackson of Kelsey County, Tenn., used Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer on about 55 acres planted with cotton, and say: "We have the finest crop of cotton we ever saw, and all the people around here think the same. We actually counted 447 bolls on one stalk. Another stalk had by actual count 409 bolls, forms, squares and blossoms. On about 8 acres we expect to make about 2 bales to the acre, and an estimate of adjoining farms not so fertilized and under other cultural methods, will yield only 1 bale to five acres."

An interesting picture of the cotton plants referred to will be found in the new 1909 Virginia-Carolina Farmers' Year Book, copy of which may be had from your fertilizer dealer, or will be sent free, if you write our nearest sales office.

DIED.

Winn.

Mrs. Lucy Ann Winn (nee Miss Edwards) was born June 21st, 1846 and died Feb. 9th, 1909, at her home near Epsom, N. C. Age 62 years, 7 months and 19 days. In 1860 she was married to Richard Griffin Winn who died a few years ago. There are five children living and one dead.

Early in life Sister Winn professed religion and united with Trinity M. E. Church in Franklin Co., where she always held her membership. Some of the children are members of the Christian Church. The writer conducted the burial service at the family cemetery on the afternoon of Feb. 10th. The children feel keenly the separation, but they will always think of her as a true devoted mother and their dutifulness to her is attested by all who know them. The prayer of the writer is that mother's influence may ever remain in the lives of children and they may meet mother in the home of the beautiful.

C. E. Newman.

A HISTORY OF YOUR LIFE.

What will it be? Will it be a thrilling, interesting, acceptable and commendable one? or will it be the reverse? Let thought run back over the past and look for itself upon the written or unwritten pages of your record. Every day through the short or long column of years something or nothing has been done. What you have written, said and done has been noted by the recording hand of time. Would you like to see a history of your life? Many things long since forgotten would be brought fresh to the mind, and if you had lived a beautiful life you would love to review it, but if it had been filled with black spots you would not be very anxious to see it.

Each one has been writing his history for years—ever since you were accountable for the deeds done in the body, and our Father has been reading it when we did not think of him. Many of us did not stop to think that we were acting and writing the deeds of a life, but we have, all these years, been making either good or bad history. Some of it, in many characters is too black for the public to see. It would surprise and condemn many to see the history of their lives opened before them. Long columns of guilt and sin would invite you to read them. What would you do if you saw them? You could, and ought to ask Jesus to blot them out and have them against you no more. And if you were to ask Him in simple, faithful earnest He could take one stroke of that nail pierced hand with the pen of salvation dipped in his own precious blood and blot them out forever. For He says: "He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed with white raiment, and I will not blot his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father and before his angels."

The question comes to each one over and over being the swift message with momentous and urgent interest: "What is your life?" Coming down the crowded ways of time over the eventful past, many voices are telling what life is to them. With plaintive tones one says: "My life is full of trouble." I would recommend to you as a remedy for your troubled life the fourteenth chapter of, Jno. where it says, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe in me." Then let David cheer you in his hundred and thirty eighth Psalm. Listen to him: "Though I walk in the midst of trouble, thou wilt revive me; thou shalt stretch forth thine hand against the wrath of mine enemies, and thy right hand shall save me." Get your Bible, turn to its precious comforting promises, study them, pray—listen for the voice which whispers, "Peace, be still." Think of and sing some cheering song, and let these exercises bring you near to God. Have something to do. An idle mind and unmen-ployed hands make room for sin to come in to trouble and ruin you. Then you know a wise head makes a still tongue. The tongue gets you in trouble sometimes. Learn to use it well with winsome, tender, loving words; then it will be a blessing to you and not a curse. Do not say all you think, nor think all you say, but live in the splendid realms of Christian experience and walk with God all the way to the eternal city, so as to live beyond the scenes of time the deathless life.

I once knew a man who appeared very devotional and claimed to be holy, but his life was not consistent with his profession. He was a whisperer and untruthful. If he had employed more of his precious time in self-education and confined himself to the truth, it would have been so much better for him. There are some today in all the avocations of life who belong to this man's class. Many of them, however, are better qualified by nature and education to practice their work—whispering and deceiving. "Being filled with all unrighteousness . . . full of envy, murder, deceit; whisperers, backbiters, haters of God." "Be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." He will reap the same kind of seed he sows, and he will reap many more of the same kind than he sows. The law of retribution will certainly be enforced. Please never forget that.

Another voice is heard coming down through many weary days and nights saying, "My life is one of affliction. Being tired and fatigued with an afflicted life, I desire to get home and rest." You desire the pity and sympathy of every one, but you will find divine help in these comforting words, "For our light affliction, which is but for a moment worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." If our minds were influenced more by the divine Spirit, in most cases we would live better and more healthy lives. Sin and ignorance have made very much affliction in the human family. If we had known more about ourselves, and not been such violaters of the laws of nature we would have been healthy and strong, and better in every way. Many a man and woman is weak and worn out when the race is just half run. If they had, in early life, begun to provide a reserve force, they would have it to draw from in declining years when they most needed it. Cultivate a cheerful, friendly, forgiving, tender, loving disposition. If the world seems cold and friendless to you; if others have mistreated, misrepresented and tried to tear down a character which for years you have labored to build upon honesty, truth and virtue, be patient and forgiving, remembering that "vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good"

If any who are sick, tired or discouraged read these lines from the pen of one who sympathizes with you, permit him to advise you to bind the everlasting promises of God close to your heart and look for brighter, better and more healthy days. J. T. Kitchen.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MAKING A LANGUAGE.

A language is usually a slow growth, not a deliberate manufacture. "Gilbertese," however, the written tongue of the Gilbert Islands, is the work of one man, the late Rev. Dr. Hiram Bingham, sometimes called the "John Eliot of the Gilbert Islands." He and his wife sailed from this country in 1856 to their new field on the Morning Star, the mission ship which was built by contributions of Sunday-school children.

The chief trouble was that the islanders had no written language. Doctor Bingham's eyesight was poor, but he set out actually to make a language, being obliged to collect his own vocabulary and construct his own grammar.

He had great difficulty in finding a Gilbertese equivalent for "prayer," and was thereby led into a ludicrous mistake. The word which he used meant "to practise incantations," which was the exact opposite of what the missionary intended to convey.

He had the New Testament three-quarters translated when in 1865 his health broke down, and he was compelled to return to this country. He started back the next year, again in the Morning Star. He was made captain of this ship, and commanded it for two years, and sailed from one island to another as a supervising missionary of the stations which had sprung up rapidly. Finally, in 1873, after completing the New Testament, he returned to the Gilbertese settlement of Apiang.

Ten years later his wife asked him to translate the Old Testament before he gave up his work in the islands. At that time he was fifty years old, and the task involved making the translation direct from the Hebrew, which he had not been familiar with for a long time. He buckled down to hard work, however, with his old grammar, and in two years was ready to begin the translation. Immediately afterward he was taken ill, but with the help of an amanuensis kept steadily at work.

In the spring of 1890, after an absence of many years from the United States, Doctor Bingham and his wife watched the last verse of the last book of the Bible being put into type. The proof was taken, and he read aloud the words in Gilbertese.

Even this accomplishment did not end the missionary's labors. He started to write a Gilbertese dictionary. When it was ready for publication, he lent the manuscript to a man who entrusted it to a messenger, and the messenger lost it. The work had to be begun again, and was completed after ten years, just before the death of Doctor Bingham.—

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Bryan:—In an address at a banquet in Pittsburg, Pa., March 4, Hon. William Jennings Bryan is reported thus by the Associated Press: "Mr. Bryan said he would rather be the defeated candidate and have the support he received than be President and feel that he owed it to the powers that corrupt." There was more but this is enough, and we have not seen the report denied or called in question.

No other inference can be drawn from these words than that in Mr. Bryan's estimation, his opponent, Mr. Taft, is President of the United States today by virtue of "the powers that corrupt." Now that there was corruption in Mr. Taft's party, and like wise in Mr. Bryan's party, before the recent election, we have no disposition to deny. Each charged the other with corruption and so far as we know their charges were sustained. Let that be as it may. The more is the pity.

But are we to believe that the President of our great country, our great Christian country, owes his elevation to office to the "powers that corrupt?" Are we to consider that Mr. Bryan is a private citizen today because the people who supported him did not corrupt, and Mr. Taft is President because those who followed him did corrupt? If that be true, we have a government owned and controlled by corruption.

Such a view of government would make us skeptical, anarchistic, unpatriotic. And no one could censure. For the youth of this land to be called upon to admire, reverence, and be loyal to a government of corruption would be foolish and wicked. We want to be patriotic, but to believe this latest teaching of Bryan we cannot be, and at the same time maintain our self-respect.

That Mr. Taft owes his election to "the powers that corrupt" we ourselves do not believe, neither do we have the first thought that the great American people believe so.

Three times has a great party honored Mr. Bryan with all that it could give and do. Each time he has lost with a constantly increasing majority against him. For him now to claim that he has lost and his President and your President and my President won out and governs the nation by "the powers that corrupt," strikes us as not only unpatriotic, unjust, and unfair, but as unbecoming one who has been greatly honored by millions of his countrymen as a "great statesman and a Christian gentleman."

Admit that there is corruption, but for the sake of our patriotic zeal let us believe that the great body of our American citizens are honest, sincere, patriotic and not corrupt and that these control and govern. We do not believe that Christianity is loosening its hold with us, but tightening it; that we as a people are becoming more corrupt, but less so, the cries and moans of a thrice defeated candidate to the contrary, notwithstanding.

Cuyler:—Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D. LL. D., born Jan. 10, 1822 in Aurora, N. Y., died at his home in Brooklyn, Feb. 26, 1909. Dr. Cuyler was a Presbyterian preacher and pastor. Till old age and failing strength caused him to resign his pastorate, he gave his great energy and wonderful mind and heart to his pulpit and the people of his charge. That which loomed large before him always was his pastorate. He would not be diverted to other things. The one ambition and consuming desire of his life was to be a faithful preacher of the Word and shepherd of his flock. How Dr. Cuyler in his balmyest days loved his pulpit and his people! He strove ever to lead men and women to Christ and to direct them in the better way. As a result not only did his own people love him, but the peoples of all evangelical denominations revered him and claimed him as their very own.

When a truly good and lovable man comes, how he does shatter into fragments denominational lines and sectarian differences! Everybody knew Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler as an amiable, efficient, able, preacher of the Word. All evangelistic pulpits were open to him. Christian homes of every faith stood ready to receive and welcome him. And now that he is gone you would with difficulty discover to what denomination he belonged. Methodist papers, Baptist papers, Presbyterian papers, Christian papers, all join equally in telling of his great heart, his splendid service to humanity, his noble career, his sublime achievements in the name of Christ.

When a great and good man arrives he belongs to no sect or section. The world claims him; for he serves humanity and blesses all mankind. This is the natural way: it is the only true way. Dr. Cuyler was a noble, consecrated Christian gentleman who gave his hand and talent to the uplift of his fellowman. That is sufficient. May God multiply his kind in the earth.

Standard Oil Acquitted.—Judge Landis of the Federal Court in Indiana several months ago found the Standard Oil Company guilty of accepting rebates and fined the Company something over $29,000,000. The case was appealed to the higher court which reversed Judge Landis and sent the case back to Indiana for a new hearing. This hearing was last week completed and the Standard was declared not guilty.

Between twenty-nine million and nothing is a long stretch and one wonders at just what point justice would come in, were it possible. And yet we are inclined to think neither court was trying to evade. Legal technicalities, precedents and phraseology bind the courts until they are tied, or in a maze, and the average layman does not understand. Between Chicago and East St. Louis there were two rates for oil, an 18-cent rate and a 6-cent rate. One was a class rate, the other a rate made for big shippers. In fact the Standard was the only shipper and enjoyed the 6-cent rate. When it came to the final test it could not be proven that 18 cents was the legal rate, and it could not be presumed that the traffic manager knew there was any other than the 6-cent rate. The fact that one was published as the schedule and the other was not, did not prove the legality of the one or the illegality of the other. Therefore the Standard Oil Company committed no legal or moral wrong in accepting a 6-cent rate. When this was substantiated the case collapsed. Judge Landis knew of these rates, but presumed that the 18-cent rate was

FROM THE FIELD.

Bethel.

This is where I go on first Sunday. Our people at this place seem to appreciate the 11 o'clock appointment. Our congregation is growing and the prospect is hopeful.

Christian Chapel.

This is where I go on second Sundays. We have a very good congregation here and is growing. We have good singing led by Bro. Auther Woodell, with Sister Gertrude Davis at the organ.

New Hill.

This is where I go on fourth Sundays. This is one of our old churches, but it has dwindled away considerably. We hope that the future will reveal greater things. I have received four members, three of these being men. We have reorganized and elected new officers. We hope to get far enough along to do some repair work on the church this year. We want the good people to pray for us that we may succeed.

May the good Lord bless the labors in his vineyard this year.

J. S. Carden.

Durham, N. C.

I have held my first quarterly meeting at Bethel, Center Grove, Lebanon and Mt. Zion and shall hold at Concord soon. All my churches have taken the collection for the Orphanage.

Rev. J. L. Foster was at Bethel and Concord and took the collection, Rev. A. F. Iseley at Mt. Zion and I at Center Grove and at Lebanon.

The collections were good at all these churches. I am pleased with the work at all my churches.

Thos. W. Strowd.

March 8, 1909.

We have held our first quarterly meetings in my churches, Pleasant Ridge, Ingram, Va., Happy Home and Keyser, for this conference year. The work so far has been very gratifying. The attendance at the services has been very good for the winter months. When the spring opens I shall expect to preach at three mission points. The Sunday schools in three of my churches are doing very well. We are now planning to hold missionary services in all my churches during the month of May. A program will be rendered; a sermon on missions at 11 a. m., and at 2 p. m. Three or four essays on missions by interested lady workers and talks by some of the brethren in each of my churches, presenting the great need of missions and a better support of the church of today.

The church is what it is by way of education and the spirit of missions in the church is the vital spring of action and the most direct way to successful harvesting souls for Christ. The spirit of missions today means aggressive Christianity, and the church filled with this is a spiritual church and a willing people. The spirit of missions in the city of Boston, Mass. is the great spring of action in the great American revival of to-day. Why not this spiritual fire kindled throughout the Southern Church? Surely this is the great need of the church. Men and women are dying daily prepared or unprepared. Some only have done their duty while others have failed in leading those dear souls to Christ. Dear reader, have you done your full duty by way of example to help some poor wayward one out of the ways of sin? The value of one precious soul for whom Christ died, is worth more than all your gold, silver, lands and momentary pleasures in sin. You will know this to be true at some period, some time, some where, at least the judgment.

“And must I be to judgment brought,

And answer in that day,

For every vain and idle thought

And every word I say?

Yes, every secret of my heart,

Shall shortly be made known,

And I receive my just desert,

For all that I have done.

How careful then ought I to live,

With what religious fear,

Who such a strict account must give

For my behavior here.”

Shall we not pray and work to the end that this may be the best year's work for the Master's cause we have as yet done.

Wakefield, Va. Letter.

On the 22nd day of Feb., in honor of “the father of his country,” the ladies of the Christian Church at this place had several little girls selling Washington's hats, and at night Mrs. C. W. Richardson, a most excellent hand in training children, gave a very enjoyable play, after which the Ladies' Aid served ice-cream and cake. The evening passed off very pleasantly, and the receipts for the same were some over $25. Church work here is in good working shape and the church building is going on. The first coat of plaster has been put on, and money still comes in. We had the pleasure of having in our town Bro. W. H. Sipe, of Bridgewater, Va. some time ago, and while here with his sister, Mrs. J. J. Lincoln, he visited our church, and was much impressed with our undertaking and the style of house in building. So in a few days the good brother sent the writer a check for $20 to be used in the building. Mr. D. P. Pursell, and Dr. Bains, both of this place, gave $5 each. We wish to thank these brethren for their donations. We are looking for letters every day with checks for our building, so let them come in brethren. We need money very much indeed just now.

On the night of Feb. 25, The Ladies Aid Society of Dendron Christian Church gave a magnificent reception to the members of the church and Sunday-school. Some two hundred persons were present and the sumptuous repast was much enjoyed by all present. After the supper was over some twelve baskets full of cakes, fruits, jelly, etc. were gathered up. During the evening several addresses were delivered, giving a history of the church, its beginning, workings and present condition.

Dendron is a lumber town, but her church work is remarkable in every way. Our church there is but a few years old beginning Feb., 1901, in Odd Fellows Hall, with Bros. W. S. Barrett, A. G. Higgins, A. J. Cotten, E. T. Atkinson, W. L. Anderson, J. W. Cotten, J. W. Williams, F. B. Richardson, and A. W. Laine and decided to build a Christian Church. $400.00 was raised by those present to build the church and various committees were appointed to begin at once to purchase a lot and build. On April 16, 1901, another meeting was held in the same Hall, and the Christian Church was organized, with the following membership: W. S. Barrett, May W. Barrett, A. G. Higgins, Susan A. Higgins, E. T. Atkinson, W. L. Anderson, David L. Cotten, Roxie A. Cotten, J. W. Williams, Albert J. Cotten, Nannie J. Cotten, James A. Cotten, Mary E. Cotten, A. W. Laine, Florence A. Laine, J. Ollie Davis, Henrietta A. Williams, Joseph T. Atkinson, J. R. Matthews, and Addie A. Matthews. Bro. J. W. Williams and wife and Mrs. Florence A. Laine withdrew for the reason that they preferred to remain at Union Christian Church. So we see the Dendron Christian Church was founded with eighteen charter members. May 22, 1902, the corner stone was laid by Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D. and some $500.00 was raised that day. In March on the fifth Sunday 1903 the church was dedicated by Rev. W. C. Wicker. From that time the church has had as pastors Revs. R. H. Peel, H. E. Rountree, and at present the writer. The church has at present a membership of seventy six true, and faithful workers.

On the first Sunday in Sept., 1908, in the afternoon a Sunday-school was organized with twenty-four members. Feb. 28, 1909 the Sunday-school had one hundred and twenty names on the register, with present the previous Sunday one hundred and seven, which is the largest number we have ever had present.

The church property is now worth more than $2,000. The Church people are kind and thoughtful in every way. The church has set aside one Sabbath in each month to contribute of her collections to the sick. All of the organizations of the church are working fine and the religious spirit is very good. May God abundantly bless them in their most excellent work. C. C. Jones.

Valley Letter.

For years and years the Va. Valley Central Conference has been struggling along never, perhaps, measuring up to its responsibilities. Considering the age of the Conference and the section of country in which it is located we ought to be at least two or three times as strong as we are. Why have our prayers not been more rapid? We simply have neglected our opportunities, and have not taken hold as we should. Shall this criminal neglect continue? It need not continue, and it will not continue if every loyal member of the Christian Church in the Conference will shoulder his part of the responsibility, and rally to the support of the work with prayer, and effort and money. Are you one who will?

There is a bright opening for us in Winchester, and there are many other places within the bounds of the conference where we ought to be doing work. But we cannot do much at these places without Home Mission funds with which to push the work along.

By reference to page 32 of the Christian Annual for 1909 you will find a recommendation by the Home Mission Committee to the effect that a Conference Missionary Association be organized, the purpose of which shall be to raise funds to push forward the mission work within the bounds of the Conference. The Association was organized by electing Rev. W. T. Walters, Pres.; Rev. A. W. Andes, Sec.; and J. E. W. Bryant, Treas. This Association will meet each year during the sitting of the Annual Conference. All the money raised by this Association will be turned over to the Treas. of the Conference, and will be paid out only by order of the Conference. The membership fee in this Association is $5.00 for men and $2.50 for women, payable annually. I trust you see the importance of the work, and that you will write me at once authorizing me to enroll you as a member. You can send your fee to me or to the Treas., J. E. W. Bryant, between now and the next session of the Conference. Let us awake from our sleeping and get to work in dead earnest.

Yours for work,

A. W. Andes, Sec.

Roanoke, Alabama.

It has been some time since I have had the opportunity of writing to the Sun. I have been very busy since conference, however, I have had the privilege of visiting the people at Bethany and am always glad to meet this people. I also had the privilege of visiting the people at Forest Home. Besides this I have been very busily engaged in work at Rockstand but it has been a pleasant work. We now have a nice house of worship at this place. We held our first preaching service in our new house yesterday and today. We received three members into fellowship yesterday. We have received four members since conference. God has wonderfully blessed our work at this place. Brethren, pray for us. We have a band of faithful workers at this place and the prospects are bright before us and may the Lord be praised for it all.

Brethren, let us pray that this may be the year of greater success of the whole church of Christ than any of the past.

Yours in the vineyard of the Master,

J. D. Dollar.

ETERNITY.

Too wonderful for me to contemplate or even try to investigate. The Bible says but little about this word. So stupendous, so great and so everlasting in its illimitable meaning. "Canst thou by searching find out God?" Still we are commanded to search the scriptures, for in them we think we have eternal life. Some are better prepared to search them than others because they have the means, the education, to do so, but every one ought to do his best in finding the will of God concerning himself. It is a great privilege to look up to "the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity" and say, "Our Father." It is also a glad thought to realize that He provides for our temporal and spiritual needs, and permits us to enjoy so much of this beautiful world.

The bell of time rings in clear tones, eternity, eternity, eternity, and every one does, or will, realize that he will inhabit it. Great Judge of every one, if now Thou art standing at the entrance of our souls, O, let us feel Thee near and get ready for a happy eternity!

A colporteur on a boat between two distant cities was attending to his work in distributing religious tracts, presented one to a man who did not take interest in them, but after a while consented to look at one, and looked at it in a casual way. But he very soon tired of reading it and tore it into small pieces, throwing them overboard as he stood on the deck. The wind blew one little part of it to the lapel of his coat. In picking it off, his eye noticed two very prominent words. One was God and the other was Eternity, and these words took possession of his mind so completely that he repented, believed, and was converted. The arrow of conviction charged with the eternal truth of God's word speeds its way to the mark and sticks there, leaving a deep and a lasting impression.

You may talk of large means, of much wealth, tell of grand achievements, and of splendid attainments, but one of the greatest things any one can possess is a conscience void of offence toward God and man. Conscience is the alarm bell in the sleeping chamber of the soul to awaken us to right thinking and correct living. The soul may sleep in an indifferant way but conscience will ring it up to think and act. It may have been badly wounded by sin, but the lofty One who inhabits eternity can bind it up with his love and give it perfect ease. There are some who do not feel worthy to receive His divine healing, fearing He will not hear them when they call upon Him, but He will listen to you for not even a sparrow falls without His notice. If you have fallen, rise higher on the wings of faith and get right with Him. If a dewdrop resting on a tiny blade of grass can hold a star and a part of the blue sky on its diamond face, the soul can hold Jesus, the star of Bethlehem, in its embrace and reflect His glory.

—Congress met in extraordinary session at noon March 15, the purpose of the session being to consider the tariff.

—One man was killed and many injured in a wreck on the Seaboard Ry. near Sanford, N. C., March 13. A passenger train at full speed collided with a through freight, resulting from "mis-read orders."

—Ex-President and Mrs. Roosevelt walked to church last Sunday, the distance of the walk being six miles. Many of us Southerners would think it "awful" to walk two miles to church, New England and the North having us altogether outdistanced when it comes to walking.

*COVETING THE BEST GIFTS.

1 Cor. 12:31. "Covet earnestly the best gifts, and yet show I unto you a more excellent way."

Man is a religious animal. This truth was noted and proclaimed by Aristotle thousands of years ago. No other animal seems to be possessed of this faculty. But no savage, be he never so low in the scale of civilization, be he never so degraded and ignorant, has ever yet been found who did not give evidence of possessing this distinguishing characteristic. All men everywhere realize the existence of superior beings and long to put themselves in a favorable attitude toward them. Various systems of religion have been brought forward to satisfy this longing in man. The theological systems of the Greeks and of the Romans said that religion was a matter of ritualistic conformance to the will of the gods declared through portents, prodigies, and signs. If a man did as the ritual said do, he was all right, no matter how unchanged his heart might be. The same thing is to a certain extent true of the formalism of the Old Testament, which culminated in the sect of the Pharisees. The religion of China, the worship of Confucius, forbade progress, because it made him a model, a mould after which every good Chinaman must model his life and to whom he must conform. All the pagan religions contain more or less prohibitions to do certain things. They put the emphasis on doing some act and had a tendency to make men conform to a model, to be more or less like each other, to subordinate individuality. There is one religion which puts the emphasis of conduct not on doing, but on being. That religion is Christianity. It is the crowning glory of Christianity that it does not make men after a pattern, as a dressmaker makes a dress, that it does not run them through the same mould, as does the worker in clay or plaster of Paris, but that it makes them individuals. In all these other religions that have been offered to the world, there is a certain element of artificiality, of externality, of the addition of something to the professor. This arises out of the fact that they put the emphasis of conformity to the religion on doing rather than on being. But Christianity, alone of the religions of the world, the one religion that is to conquer the world, sets up no standard and says do this; it sets up no model and says make your life an exact reproduction of it. Its message is as follows: You are an individual and in you are the possibilities of great things. Christ is to you an example. To him you are not to slavishly conform, but by him you are to be transformed by the renewing of your spirit. If you would be a Christian, be a man, be the best man or woman you can be, and in thus being you will also be a Christian. If your life is the expression of the best in you, then you are a Christian, and you are not a true Christian unless your life does express the very best in you. Christianity is life, the best life of which you are capable, and nothing which contributes to the excellence of life is unchristian. Christianity does not furnish you with a list of precepts for conduct, there is no such thing as being a Christian according to the standard of your neighbor. No amount of calculation will give you the rule which you can apply to all questions and incidents that may arise. Christianity is not mathematics nor the application of rules of conduct to the solution of perplexing problems, it is life. Whatever adds to the realization of life, to the betterment of it, is for you to follow as a Christian. In order for you to be a Christian, you must be a man, a true man or a true woman.

This does not mean that you are to do nothing. Far from it. You are first to be and then to do. Nor can you do, until you have become and are. This truth comes to light more than once in the teachings of Christ. He it was who said that by their fruits ye shall know them. He it was who asked if you would gather grapes of thorns or thistles of fig trees. He knew that being would necessarily result in doing and that doing to have moral and ethical value must rise out of being. Life, which Christianity is, is activity, not inactivity. When an organism that is alive ceases to move, it is dead. A true Christian is full of life and must therefore always be doing something. We are told that the Christ went about doing good, and so will all of those do who profess to be his disciples. Christianity is not and cannot be a life of contemplation, of separateness from the world. It is a life of ceaseless expression of the inward man in deeds of kindness and acts of love and of gradual, but continual unfolding of the Golden Rule. The drone, the slothful man, cannot be a Christian, because his life does not issue in expression, the circle of his being is not completed by the segment of his doing. A good tree bringeth forth good fruit. The unprofitable tree is hewn down and cast into the fire and consumed. The Christian who does not bring forth fruits is a poor sort of Christian.

Christ is a person. Christianity is founded on a person and is a religion of persons. The central fact in the Christian religion is the personality of the Savior. If Christ were an abstract principle, like goodness or happiness, then he would have to be approached through reason and worshipped through contemplation, but since he is a person, he must be approached by a person, as one individual approaches another, and is to be dealt with as we deal with ourselves. He is himself a person and understands our longings as persons. He did not obliterate his personality in his teachings. Again and again does he say that it had been said of old so and so, but I say unto you. This is what made the people hang on his words, because he taught them as one having authority and not as the Scribes and Pharisees. And he taught them as one having authority simply because he kept his personality clear and distinct. Christ is a person and you are a person, and if you approach him and become one of his followers, you too must be a person, must be an individual, must be yourself, with your talents, your personality, your deeds and your life lived in accord with your own best instincts.

Christ, who is your elder Brother, does not come to you, my brother or my sister, and say to you that you must obey certain commands, wear a certain kind of clothing, look pious on Sunday morning and whenever you see a preacher. He does not say that you must make him a model in that you must speak the language he spoke, eat the kind of food he ate, keep the hours he kept, or do the deeds he did. He says to you that you have been endowed by the God and Father of us all with certain talents, powers, inclinations, ambitions, gifts, and that all of these are holy unto the Lord; that if you would receive the reward of the faithful servant when your Lord cometh in his glory to judge the quick and the dead, you must develop these powers, gifts, ambitions, inclinations, and talents to the fullest extent; that his purpose in life for you is the full fruition of the powers in you and the bodying forth of the best that is in you.

Do you have the possibility in you of stalwart physical manhood? Then the message of Christ to you is that you are to husband that possibility and develop your physical manhood to the very highest extent. The deformation of the body practised by many savage tribes that they may satisfy the gods in their suffering, has no place in the beneficent gospel of Christianity. The word for gospel in the original Greek from which the New Testament is translated means "good tidings." It is not the will of Christ that any of his children should torture themselves. His greatest pleasure is in their enjoyment and happiness. Again and again in the Scriptures of the new dispensation we are told that our bodies are the temples of the living God, and we are forbidden to defile them in any way. Our bodies are sacred and he who maltreats his body is a sinner.

If you are a follower of the meek and lowly Nazarene, you must take all steps possible to you to have a strong, healthful, vigorous body. You must obey all the laws of health and avoid all the things that tend to wreck and undermine the physical system. This is especially true of those who are fitting themselves for larger things in life, by striving after an education as you young people are who are before me. You think that you are to prepare your recitations and make good grades. In fact you are a little inclined to think that a strong, vigorous body is inconsistent with a well-trained mind. Herein you err. For you cannot have the strongest mind without having a physical basis for it, any more than you can have a 40-story building on a 2-story foundation. Such a building will soon tumble down, and the full-orbed mind that has no health behind it is doomed to flitter for a moment and pass away. There is a vital, seismic relationship between a man's mind and his body, and both are sacred. The student in college that studies every hour he is awake except the time taken in his meals and recitations is sinning against his body and is not a good Christian. The young man who will smoke cigarettes and drink and keep unwholesome hours is sinning against his body and is wounding the heart of Christ. All of us do not have the possibility of giant physical strength, but we have the possibility of taking care of what endowment of physical powers we have been blessed with, and the message of Christ to us is, that we should make the most of our bodies that we can, remembering that they are the temples of our God.

But to those whom God has given the talent of exceptional physical strength Christianity brings this message. You are a child of God and he wants you to make the most of your gift of physical strength. Develop into the strongest man you can. If you can make of yourself the strongest man in the world, it is your duty to do so and you are not a full-orbed Christian unless you do attain this strength. Be the strongest, the best man physically that you can be is the message of Christianity to the man whose talents and inclinations lead him to long for physical development. Thus much on the side of being, be a man, a strong man. But Christianity does not stop here. Being must necessarily result in doing. What shall a man do with his strength? Shall he be a gladiator, a bully, a prize-fighter? Never.

This would be a prostitution of his physical manhood and Christianity and Christians can have no part with any sort of prostitution. The strong man, if he be a Christian, will use his strength for the betterment of humanity. He will join a life-saving station or enlist in some occupation beneficent and beneficial to his fellowman and will thus use his strength for the upbuilding of the happiness of mankind and the advancement of the kingdom of Christ in the world. The best that the pagan world could do with exceptional physical strength was to pit it in deadly combat against itself. Gladiatorial shows and fights with wild beasts were the destination of men talented with Herculean physical strength in unchristian lands. The Christian of great physical strength will use it to help, not to hinder, to advance not to retard, to save not to destroy, his fellowman.

Do you have desires, founded on endowed powers, to be a master of assemblies? Then the message of Christ, your Savior and mine, to you is to covet that gift, make the most of your powers and gifts and inclinations towards eloquence. It is a goodly gift, one of the best gifts, and you should covet it and husband it and make the most of it. You cannot aim too high. You should try to be a Cicero or a Demosthenes or a Webster or a Clay. Let your ambition be to sway those who come to listen to the words and sentiments that you utter. To be able to stand before your fellowmen and to declare to them your sentiments and to convince them that you are right, that is the power of a king among men. Such a power is more potent and efficacious than the autocratic sovereignty vested in the Czar of Russia. Could the Czar of Russia persuade his people that he is right, his government would be on a sounder basis than it is today. The world has always honored the orator and it always will. He is a master of men. The shrewd Caesar, eloquent orator that he was, knew the value of Cicero's eloquence to him and to his cause and sought to buy him. The persecutors of Saint Paul knew the value of eloquence and employed an orator Tertullian to accuse him, the platitude of whose phrases is very evident to all who have read the Acts of the Apostles. Be an orator, be a man of eloquence, covet earnestly the power to sway your fellowmen, for it is one of the best gifts of God to man, says the Master to the man or the woman whose talents tend in that direction. Thus much for the being. But what of the doing? Shall the orator and the master of assemblies sell himself to an unworthy cause for money as did Tertullian when he accused Paul? Shall he be a demagogue as were those men of rare gifts and startling eloquence, Alcibiades at Athens, Tiberius and Gaius Gracchus at Rome? By no means. A great many lawyers hold today that they are at liberty to accept any case and do all they can for their clients, irrespective of the deserts of these same clients. They have a paltry opinion of the functions of the barristers' profession. If any of you become lawyers, I beg you not to accept a case unless you believe your client is in the right. Do not sell yourself for money. Treasure your eloquent tongue and your knowledge of the law higher than that. Nor will the Christian orator be a demagogue. He will consecrate his powers to eloquence to the service of his fellows and to the advancement of the kingdom. He will be a preacher of righteousness. I do not mean that every eloquent man, that every orator who professes Christ will become an ordained minister. But I do mean that every Christian orator will be a preacher of righteousness, of right-living, whether he be a lawyer, a platform lecturer, or a politician. Whatever his profession, his tongue will ever and on all occasions ring clear and loud for that which is right and makes for human betterment.

Do you have a desire and the talent to make money, to acquire wealth? If so, the message of Christ to you is that you shall employ that talent to the best of your ability. Try to be as rich as a Croesus or a Crassus or a Shylock or a Rothschild or a Rockefeller. There is no disgrace in being rich. Some men have the talent to make money and they are not full-orbed men unless they become wealthy; it is the duty of some people to be wealthy. Wealthy men have a distinct mission to perform in the world and can do an immense amount of good. If any of you have the talent to amass wealth, my advice to you is to amass it. The power to make money and to gain wealth is a rare power and is one of the best gifts to man. King Solomon was a very rich man, one of the wealthiest men of his day and generation. Many rich men have been the benefactors of their race. The world could ill do without them. Be the wealthiest man you can, provided you use honest methods in getting your wealth. If God has endowed you with the talent to make money, to be wealthy, then if you are a servant worthy of your hire, you ought to be wealthy, and you have not fulfilled your purpose in life unless you develop that talent.

But what shall I do with my money,

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT
—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVEN-
TION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

—It is May 29-31.

—Keep this date in mind.

—It is the time for the Young People's Convention.

—The place is Elon College where a great gathering of Christian young people will be assembled.

—You may expect splendid music and excellent addresses.

—The Executive Committees of the various Sunday-school conventions are expected to appoint as delegates the most wide-awake Christian workers from among the young people of their respective conventions.

—Do not let your convention lag behind in its representation. Get young people to the convention that are whole-souled and willing to work for the improvement of the intellectual, social and religious life of the young people in the churches of the Southern Christian Convention.

—By the term "young people" we mean not simply persons young in years but also those older in years and still young in spirit.

—Many an older person would be glad to have the privilege of attending the Convention, and get the spiritual uplift and renewed enthusiasm that comes from a great gathering of Christian young people. Appoint some of these to come as delegates along with the young people.

—Talk for the Convention; pray for it; work for it; and attend it. It is only a little more than two months away. Begin now making your plans to be present. The Baccalaureate sermon of the Commencement will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Atkinson Sunday, May 30, and will lend to the interest of the Convention. Keep your eye on this column from week to week.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MARCH 23.
A Few Suggestions.

Temperance Lesson:—The tragedy of strong drink:—Prov. 23:29-35.

Golden Text:—At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. Prov. 23:32.

The Setting of the Lesson:—Our lesson today is a break in the chronological order of our study of the New Testament, but there are some things better than chronology, and one of these is sound, wholesome instruction in temperance. There will be no review today, but in its place the teacher will do well to give the lesson its setting. It comes from the book of Proverbs, which is usually ascribed to Solomon and of many of whose chapters he is the undoubted author. The book, it is thought, was put in its present form after the exile by the Jewish scribes who used the original copies of the writers quoted in the book. This lesson then must have been written about three thousand years ago and very likely by the wisest king who sat on Israel's throne in the heyday of Jewish history. The advice is given to a young man, and comes from the so-called "Little Wisdom Book" of Proverbs, which book begins at chapter 22, 17, and concludes with chapter 24, 22, and which I would recommend to be read by every one who reads this. This little wisdom book is said to be the "words of the wise" and most scholars think this refers to Solomon.

Approach to the Lesson:—This is the third time we have studied this lesson in three years so you will not be expected to startle your class with new discoveries—but it offers to you a ripe opportunity to impress a desirable truth. Yet there is no denying that Temperance Sunday is getting to be as tiresome to many pupils as Review Sunday was. The pupils hear so much of it that they are beginning to get listless. Therefore, find some good story illustrating and enforcing the necessity for teaching temperance in the Sunday-school—a real, living, burning, true story. At the conclusion their eyes will be all sparkle, their interest will be intense, and you will be master of the situation. Then begin to teach the lesson.

The Lesson:—The lesson today falls into four divisions. Write these on the board as they are developed in the teaching.

1. Six Questions, verse 29. Find what the first question of the wise man to the youth is, its meaning; the second, its meaning; the third, its meaning; the fourth, its meaning; the fifth, its meaning; the sixth, its meaning. Ask if they have seen illustrations of any of these questions.

2. The Answer, verse 30. Find what answer the young man makes to the wise man's questions; the meaning of the first clause of the same; the meaning of the second clause. Ask why it is that other business establishments keep reasonable hours, whereas run shops are ordered to be closed by law and then disobey the same.

3. An Exhortation, verse 31. Find what advise the wise man now gives the young man, why not look upon it; what is meant by "when it is red," by "when it giveth its color to the emp," by "when it moveth itself aright."

4. A Warning, verses 32-35. Find what it does at the last, what the drunkard's eyes shall behold, what his heart shall utter, to what two classes of fools he is compared, the appropriateness of these comparisons to his condition, what silly ejaculations the drunkard utters as he awakes from his state of stupor, what question he asks, what his resolve is.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

A nice variation would be that suggested by Peloubet. From their Bibles have some member read verse 29; let the entire class in concert read verse 30; let the teacher read verse 31; the entire class in concert read verse 32; one member read verse 33, another the first clause of verse 34; another the second clause of that verse; and the entire class in whispers, lead by the leader, the last verse.

Truths and their Application:—1. The progress of temperance in this country as one of the most encouraging signs of the times. It is a victory for the teaching fraternity. The generation that has been taught the direful effects of the drink habit on the body in the Hygiene lessons of the public school and the damning moral curse of it in our Sunday-schools is now on the arena of life's action. We pedagogues should thank God and take courage—whether we teach Physiology or a Sunday-school class. Our labors and the labors of our kind are bearing enduring fruit. Here call for the essay assigned last time, on the Growth of Temperance in the United States. Here also display your Temperance map, if you made one.

2. But while the temperance idea is progressing in the country at large, the evil is not yet past—nay, there is even greater danger ahead of us if we do not see that the laws are enforced and do all we can to blot it out in our individual way. The spread of the Temperance sentiment will safe guard the boys. It will deter some of the men, but the rest must be individually reached. Here call for instances of evil from the drink habit that have recently been recorded in the papers, assigned last time. You will very likely get the Cooper-Carmack case, besides others. Tell the class that only the "big cases" get publicity—that 95 per cent of the evil never comes to light.

3. Turn your class into a Temperance Society. Call for assigned work on the six best passages in Bible on the evil of drunkenness, on what the Bible says on temperance, and on what it teaches regarding total abstinence from I Cor. 13, Romans 14 and I Cor. 8, 9. Quote verse 31 of today's lesson, and show that the Bible standard is even higher than that of the W. C. T. U. which pledges its adherents "to touch not, taste not, handle not," whereas the Bible commands us to "Look not upon the wine." Have pledge cards on hand and give all the opportunity to sign. If you have a W. C. T. U. organization in your church, turn the names over to it. If not, wouldn't it be well for you to consult your superintendent in regard to organizing one as an auxiliary of the Sunday-school, which society should have special notice before the whole school on the regular "Temperance Sundays?"

Assignments for next Sunday:—Ask one to be prepared on the vision of Cornelius from Acts 10:3-8, 30-33, and 11:13-15; another on Peter's vision from Acts 10:9-16 and 11:5-10; a third on the Centurions of the Bible, Matt. 8:5, 10; Luke 7:1-10; and 23:47; a fourth on the use of housetops during Bible times from Josh. 2:6; 1 Sam. 9:25; 11 Sam. 11:2; 2 Kings 23:12; Neh. 8:16-17; Isa. 15, 3; Jer. 32:29; Matt. 24:17; a fifth to report on the 11 chapter of Leviticus in connection with Mark 7:15 and 1 John 1:29 and 3:7; a sixth on what Peter later regarded this vision as being from Acts 15:7-11. ### S. S. LESSON FOR MARCH 21, 1909.

Review.

Read Acts 1:6-14.

Golden Text:—They that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word, Acts 8:4.

The lessons of this quarter show the progress and development of the church during its first five or six years. It was a marvelous development both in numbers and in character.

The life of Jesus after his resurrection is studied in the first as an introduction to the quarter's lesson. They begin with the ascension.

Following in quick succession are lessons continuing the life of Jesus, the ever present Saviour, and his return to earth through the Holy Spirit.

After the resurrection Jesus proved himself the living Saviour. The apostles were commissioned: "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel unto every creature."

Before entering upon this work and scattering abroad they engaged in a ten days' prayer meeting. They were endowed with great power and so effectually were their sermons that three thousand were converted in a single day and added to the church.

Counting twenty-four hours to the day, this day's work added to the church for a whole day at the rate of about two souls per minute. A model beginning of a good work. The result was the birth of the church.

The character of this church is summed up briefly: Generosity, joy, miracles of mercy and courage.

Soon this model church was attacked from without. This persecution only aided the church to grow. The apostles were delivered from prison having preached to the rulers.

Next came dangers from within. Deception and hypocrisy crept into this body of Christian workers, but with such swift execution of judgment that the church was respected and preserved.

Finally after the church was completely organized so strong persecutions were made that even the preachers of righteousness were stoned to death.

This even did not hinder church extension. In thought, in numbers, in character, in extent of territory, this doctrine spread until it embraced the country between the sea and Samaria and even extended into Africa.

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT PROGRESS.

Six hundred men at a missionary dinner for which they each paid one dollar, and six hundred others turned away for lack of room, was the unusual experience at Minneapolis recently. They came at six o'clock and left about eleven, many of them wondering why they had never before discovered the fascinating interest of this greatest world-problem. The meetings continued for three days, with growing interest and powers. Over four hundred men came in from sixty cities and towns in Minnesota. Last year the 356,000 church members of that State averaged 42 cents each to send Christianity to the non-Christian world. The men at Minneapolis believed that this should ultimately be increased to an average of five dollars each. To this task many of them have already addressed themselves, in their own congregations and cities.

At Birmingham, Alabama, considerably more than a thousand Southern Presbyterian men came together for three days, Feb. 16-18, to look at the world in the light of Christ's program for His Church. The Southern Presbyterian Church is asking its members for an average of $4.00 each per year in order to reach the twenty-five millions of people in their fields abroad. Already sixty of their congregations have reached this average, while some of them are giving twice or three times this amount. Two whole Presbyteries have passed this standard, Florida Presbytery giving an average of $4.20 per member and Upper Missouri Presbytery an average of $5.23 per member. Quite a number of the individual men present at Birmingham guaranteed that their respective congregations would come up this year at least to the $4.00 standard. This denomination increased its foreign missionary offerings by $47,000 last year, in spite of the financial depression. They are fully $50,000 ahead this year of the receipts at this date last year. And $50,000 more were subscribed at Birmingham for new Hospitals, Schools and other equipment. A comprehensive plan of Deputation work among individual congregations was decided upon at the Convention, looking towards the presentation of the question to the entire denomination.

In the effort of the city of Toronto to raise $500,000 per year for missions, the Baptist Churches a year ago assumed $50,000 of the total. They had given $23,225 the year before. Not only have they raised and paid into the treasury the $50,000 they undertook, but over $5,000 in addition, thus making an increase in a single year of 137 per cent and bringing up their average giving to missions to about $8.00 per member.

From far Australia, in a letter from a Presbyterian Mission Board Secretary, comes this striking testimony:

"With regard to our Victorian Branch we are now organized within the Presbyterian Church, and we have had our first meeting of business men representing other denominational movements. It was decided to form a brotherhood of prayer with a view to forming an interdenominational Movement. We are having a united Missionary Conference in June and we hope to make that the starting point of the wider Movement. I feel sure that there is immense blessing in this Laymen's Missionary Movement. I thank God that it is now set a-going in Australia. I feel that the Laymen's Missionary Movement has already given a great impetus to our Missionary spirit in Victoria. I believe it is the most profound influence for good that has yet come to us."

A far-sighted Presbyterian layman of Chicago has decided to invest $7,500 a year in a Campaign of Missionary education among the Presbyterians of his own state, in the effort to lead them up to an average of $5.00 per member for the work abroad, this being the amount to which the Presbyterian Church is officially committed. This would mean an increase of over $400,000 per year from this constituency. It is doubtful whether money for missionary extension could multiply itself faster in such an educational campaign.

AN EASY YOKE.

We often speak, and think, of Christian service as if it were full of sorrow, heartaches, trials, hardships and burdens. Lord Christ did not so teach and preach. On the contrary He bade the tired, the worn, and the burdened to come to Him and find rest. Nowhere did our Savior invite people to Him to get burdens and take sorrows, but always the opposite.

Only one man ever came to Christ and went away sorrowful. That man was already heavy with burden bearing and Christ told him how to become light, free and happy. The young man refused to accept or obey and so went away heavy hearted, born down with burdens, full of sorrow.

The Word is full of instances in which men and women came to him stricken, sorrowful, worn with burdens and griefs, and He sent them away light hearted, free, in good cheer and happy.

The sinful life is hard. The Christian life is sweet and easy. But shall we ever learn it? Long, long ago One said of an eternal truth: "The way of the transgressor is hard." And it is hard. But the way of the obedient is sweet, easy and comfortable.

If you would see those who are bearing the scars and marks of hardship, trial and tribulation, go to the skulls of sin, the saloons, gambling dens, the jails, prison houses, penitentiaries. Look at your fellowman furrowed with the weight of transgression, wearing the stripes, driven like cattle, chained like wild beasts, watched over with fire arms, and shot down like dogs—there you see burden bearing, hardships, trials and tribulations. "The way of the transgressor is hard."

If you would see those who are lighthearted, happy and free go to the sanctuary on the Sabbath and watch the throngs who gather and greet each other there. It is the hearty hand-shake, the smile of joy and gladness, the greeting of friend with friend in fellowship with Christ. Every happy congregation of Christian worshipers on earth declare by their looks, greetings and conduct that the way of Christian service is easy, light and free: every prison house and sleuth of sin declare in feature, bearing and conduct that "The way of the transgressor is hard."

"My yoke is easy," and a yoke implies burden-bearing, argues one.

The yoke is made, however, not to increase, but to diminish the burden: not to make heavy, but to make light and to make possible the burden.

The beast of burden walks with firm, steady, and proud step bearing or drawing the burden with the yoke, a burden which if placed upon his back would crush to death or tie to the earth. The yoke was and is the emblem of ease and comfort that makes the burdens bearable and comfortable. So our Lord Christ knowing that man's natural burdens were crushing him to death, lifted them with His yoke and said, "Come unto me. My yoke is easy, my burden is light." Oh the joy, the light, the happiness, the ease, the comfort, the good cheer of genuine Christian service.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

The great body of our young people in the churches are idle and avail nothing, so far as actual church work and Christian service are concerned. Many are loyal enough, intelligent enough, ready enough. But they are given nothing to do, and they do nothing. Some of them go to Sunday-school, but they go to get, not to give, to have something done for them, not to do. They go to church. Some few sing. They listen in respectful silence and attention. This is well. But what of their vital, vigorous, ready energy, so far as active, Christian service is concerned? Can this ready and willing energy not be utilized for the church and for Christian service? Here is the issue. And the prevailing pity of it is that this energy is not being realized in any sort of practical or efficient manner.

With this in view, our Southern Convention when last in session planned and voted that our young people be called together in council and convention. Let them assemble, said the Convention, and with some to direct, let them by the multitude of their counsel see and say what they will do, what by the grace and favor of God they can do.

This convention of young people has been called. The date and place have been fixed upon. The sixth page of The Christian Sun each week has been given to this service and Prof. W. P. Lawrence has been chosen by his fellows to make known the plans and purposes of the Convention. We feel that much depends upon the first meeting. Our young people will be told of it through The Sun, through the churches, societies and Sunday-schools. It should be a great gathering and from that gathering a great stream of quickening influences should go back to all our schools and churches. May God help this good call and cause.

—Dr. Edward Everett Hale, the venerable and distinguished Chaplain of the United States Senate certainly displays, now and then, at least, splendid taste and a spirit of due reverence in reading Scriptural selections and the offering of prayers. On March 4, inauguration day, the following was used:

"I will multiply my people, they shall not be few. I will glorify them, and they shall not be small. Their congregation shall be established before me; and I will punish all that oppress them. Their nobles shall be of themselves and their governor from the midst of them.

I will cause him to draw near. And he shall approach unto me. And ye shall be my people, and I will be your God. The law shall not depart from them. Be thou strong and of good courage; Be not afraid, neither be discouraged. For the Lord God is with thee whithersoever thou goest."

"Father Almighty: this Nation is in prayer before Thee today. We thank Thee for Thine untold mercies in the past, for Thy guidance to our Fathers and Thy protection and blessing extended to them. And we ask Thee for the days before us for the same blessing, protection and care. Our Governors are from ourselves and our Rulers from the midst of us. Thy servants whom this People have appointed to execute their Laws need and ask Thine Almighty help and blessing, as they oversee this People, as they come for the Common Life and welfare of the land.

We pray for them, for the People, that this may be that Happy Nation whose God is the Lord; that every man may bear his brother's burden, that every man may follow in our Master's footsteps, all living for each and each living for all."

—Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.

the legal one and that the traffic manager knew. In all probability Judge Landis's presumption did not go far of the mark as the Standard enjoyed a 6-cent rate between the two points named to the extent of a saving of over $29,000,000, according to Judge Landis.

All of which is another evidence that justice in this world is often slow-footed or does not come at all. All human institutions are weak, frail, short-sighted. The only just Judge sits upon the throne before which all must one day appear to give account of the deeds done in the body. In that Judgment will be absolute justice.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Mrs. H. W. Elder, under "Acknowledgements" in another column this week, certainly makes a modest request that many, many Sun readers would be happier for heeding. Read what she says and try.

—Bro. J. T. Kitchen's little sermon in this issue on "Eternity" will catch the ear, reach the heart, and do good. The Sun would welcome such sermons often from the brethren. They are the very soul of a religious paper.

—Rev. L. L. Cox gladdened the editor's heart with a long list of renewals for The Sun from his field this week. If all our pastors were as loyal and faithful to the church enterprises as Bro. Cox the passing years would mark a progress not now known.

—Rev. W. T. Walters requests that we make correction of a mistake he made in The Sun of March 3. Bro. J. E. W. Bryant married Miss Cora Liskey and not Miss Lispey as Bro. W. wrote. We were tempted at the time to change Bro. Walter's copy, but dared not. We cheerfully make the correction.

—South Norfolk Correspondence Norfolk Landmark: "A large audience heard the Rev. C. C. Ryan lecture Friday night at South Norfolk Christian Church. His subject was "Trade Mark," and a considerable sum was realized for the Baraca class, under whose auspices he spoke."

—Dr. Manning of the Norfolk Letter has begun quite early in spring with a tremendous fish story which, according to Dr. Staley's theory, is entirely excusable, the Dr's theory being that when one tells about a "great fish," one is not exaggerating at all; just "painting a picture."

—Last Saturday night by legal limitations the saloons of Suffolk were closed up and went out of business, "the first time Suffolk has been dry in a hundred years," says an exchange. Now let Suffolk try without saloons for over a hundred years, and then compare the record of the two centuries and her populace will be in position to say which is better, saloons or prohibition.

—There is universal regret in the newspaper fraternity, and among his great circle of acquaintances and friends that Mr. Joseph P. Caldwell, editor-in-chief of The Charlotte Observer who suffered a stroke of paralysis several days ago recovers very slowly and will not be able to resume his duties at the desk for some time yet. His recovery is awaited with keen anxiety.

—All preachers seas do not go to the bad. Wilbur Wright born April 6, 1867 and Orville Wright born August 19, 1871, both yet young men but famous the world over, sought by princes and favored by kings and lavished with money in plenty because of their success as aeronauts are the sons of Rev. Milton Wright, Bishop of the United Brethren Church. These boys went to work for daily wage as machinists and latterly turned their energies to air ships.

—Prof. W. A. Harper in his "How to Teach the Sunday-school Lesson" in this issue comes to a practical point in suggesting that the teacher call for signers to the temperance pledge card. It is by no means a bad idea to face the Sunday-school pupil with a decision of such a nature. There is no need of waiting till another comes to call for decisions. The teacher himself may do that. Why, by the way, does the teacher not often call for decisions, on the part of his pupils, for Christ? The teacher has the advantage of the preacher even here, the advantage of personal contact and face to face appeal.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Miss Eva Etheredge of the Memorial Temple, and one of the most efficient workers of that church, is again at her post of duty after a visit of several weeks to Mrs. Elsie Snipes at Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Margaret Brickhouse, another one of the faithful workers there, is proving a very successful leader of the Baraca Class of the Temple. She took the class when it had very few in number and has steadily led it forward until now they have a membership of about 35, with a regular attendance of from 20 to 25, and it is not simply a growth in members, but of general development and efficiency.

The Missionary Society of the Temple held their regular monthly meeting Sunday afternoon. Rev. M. L. Bryant of the Main St. Church made the address which together with the meeting is reported as very good.

The congregation of the Main St. Church have been painting and otherwise improving their church.

The church at South Norfolk has recently put in a rolling partition for the benefit of the Sunday-school. Bro. Ryan delivered a lecture one night last week to a large audience for the benefit of this improvement fund.

Rev. W. H. Thompson of the Third Church preached at the Park Place Disciples Church Sunday afternoon for the pastor, Rev. J. T. T. Hundley, who is engaged in a series of revival meetings in South Norfolk.

The Third Church Sunday-school has taken a collection for a library, which resulted in $28.00, being raised and Bro. B. L. Nichols contributes a book-case. Miss Kate Moore, Mrs. T. J. Lawrence and Mrs. J. W. Manning were selected a library committee to expend the fund.

I had the pleasure of a very pleasant call from Dr. Moffitt of Elon College one day last week. He is out making a sort of preliminary canvass in the interest of an endowment fund for the college. If the matter can be accomplished Dr. Moffitt is the man who can do it.

A good deal of interest has been aroused in this community recently by the washing ashore of two whales; one came ashore near Buckroe Beach, and was said to be about 45 feet long and weighed 24,000 pounds by actual weight. The other one came ashore a few days later near Cape Henry, and was said to be 65 feet long; it being so convenient to the car line, a great many people availed themselves of the opportunity of viewing it. A few years ago one washed ashore at Lynn Haven inlet that was 85 feet long, and though partly embedded in the sand, a man standing on one side of it could not be seen by one on the other side. There is at least one woman in Norfolk who did not go to see the one at Cape Henry.

The Parsonage Aid Society of the Memorial Temple had a meeting last week at which time they were to send in some contribution which represented some act of self-denial. One sister sent in hers accompanied by a slip of paper on which was written the one word "Whale."

The program is out for the State Sunday School Convention to be held at Concord, April 6-8. Prof. W. C. Wieker is on for response to the address of welcome. Prof. S. M. Smith of Raleigh, and E. Moffitt of Asheboro are two former Elonians on the same program.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We are now entering the happy spring season when all nature re-clothes herself for new life, fresh beauty, delightful fragrance and rich fruitage; and as nature about us does, so should we do. Let us as Christians take on new life and be doubly active in our religious work; and as members of the Band of Cousins be working children and give each beautiful spring day something to keep in store.

We are glad to have the nice reports from five Sunday schools this week in monthly offerings: the Sunday-school of Medway, N. Y. kindly remembers and sends us an Easter offering for which we thank them; also Liberty Chapel, O. sends us one dollar with best wishes for our work. It is very generous for those so far away to send liberal amounts to us. Our "Cousin" William P. Butt not only sends his dues but a special $1.00. Thank you, William, that's nice. Bro. Johnson is again right on time with his $5.00 for March. Our gratitude is yours. Mt. Carmel sends in an additional amount for which we thank them.

Let's all get right down to real work for the Corner, children, and just make it grow rapidly—what say you all?

Fondly yours,

Uncle Jim.

Raleigh, N. C., March 6, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We will write our letter for March.

Our school will be out the seventeenth of April. Enclosed please find 25c.

Your nephews and nieces,

Blannie Franks,

Bettie Franks,

Dwight Franks,

Nuna Franks.

Nume Franks.

Well, make good of the remaining school days, children, and do your best.

Walnut Cove, N. C., Mar. 3, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little late this time, or rather I am late for Feb. But I guess I am on time for March. So you will please find enclosed 20c, for the two months. I am not going to school now, but mama is hearing our lessons at home. I have been very sick with diphtheria but am about well again now.

With much love I close.

Sallie Matt Marshall.

I guess you did not like that disease Sallie. Rather have measles, eh!

Berkley, Va., Mar. 5, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed please find $2.20 in P. O. money order, one dollar being for a birthday offering and one dollar and twenty cents for dues. Wishing you all a happy Easter, I remain,

Your nephew.

Wm. P. Butt.

Received and duly credited William. Many thanks. We are so glad to have you again among our cousins. Your letters have been missed.

—The city of Jacksonville, Fla., had three suicides last Sunday, not such an uncommon occurrence, but one that shows the tremendous rate of suicide at present.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS.

Since I last wrote I have received the following amount's on the Christian Church at Columbus, Ga.: C. H. Stephenson, $1.00; J. A. Foster, $1.00; J. R. Highsmith, $1.00; Mrs. Ula Swanson, $.20; Mrs. W. W. Staley, $5.00; Total $8.20. We appreciate these amounts and return to these friends our hearty thanks and pray to God to bless them for their favors in this hour of great need.

I believe that many others would like to help us, but because they can't give large amounts they don't give any. I want to make this proposition. Let all who read this and feel that they can do so, send me as follows: Men, 50 cts., women 25 cents, children, 15 cts. These amounts are small, but they will help us very much. We are anxious to get into the church by the 2nd Sunday in April. If you see how you can spare some amount for us we will greatly appreciate it.

My husband is pushing the collections in Columbus. He has collected about $200.00 there since I last wrote. He has about canvassed the field there and can't hope to collect a great deal more there now. Do what you can for us quickly.

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. H. W. Elder.

NAPOLEAN ON THE DIVINITY OF CHRIST.

A French journal gives the following conversation related by Count de Montholon, the faithful friend of the Emperor:

"I know men," said Napoleon, "and I tell you that Jesus is not a man! The religion of Christ is a mystery which subsists by its own force, and proceeds from a mind which is not a human mind. We find in it a marked individuality, which originated a train of words and maxims unknown before. Jesus borrowed nothing from our knowledge. He exhibited in Himself the perfect example of his precepts. Jesus is not a philosopher; for His proofs are miracles, and from the first His disciples adored Him. In fact, learning and philosophy are of no use for salvation; and Jesus came into the world to reveal the mysteries of Heaven and the laws of the Spirit.

"Alexander, Caesar, Charlemagne and myself founded empires; but upon what did rest the creations of our genius? Upon force. Jesus Christ alone founded His empire upon love; and at this hour millions of men would die for Him. It was not one day, or one victory, which achieved the triumph of the Christian religion in the world. No; it was a long war, a contest for three centuries, begun by the apostles, then continued by the flood of Christian generations. In this war all the kings and potentates of earth were on one side; on the other I see no army, but a mysterious force—some men scattered here and there in all parts of the world, and who have no other rallying point than a common faith in the mysteries of the Cross.

"I die before my time, and my body will be given back to the earth, to become food for worms. Such is the fate which soon awaits him who has been called the great Napoleon. What an abyss between my deep misery and the eternal kingdom of Christ, which is proclaimed, loved and adored, and which is extending over the whole earth! Call you this dying? Is it not living rather? The death of Christ is the death of a God!"

TUBERCULOSIS CAMPAIGN'S GREAT PROGRESS.

New York, January 1, 1909.—With the opening of the new year, the campaign against tuberculosis in the United States exhibits the most remarkable progress that any movement for social betterment has ever shown in this country. During the past year, the amount of activity and the number of people who have been reached by this activity has been far in excess of similar work that has been carried on during the four years previous.

Measured by dollars, the campaign against tuberculosis in the United States during the year 1908, has cost well over a million. Measured in the number of workers, the campaign has enlisted hundreds of thousands in its ranks. Measured by the number of institutions and organizations that have been established during the year 1908, more work of this sort has been accomplished than during the entire period before January 1 of the year just closing. For instance, before January 1, 1905, there were only 19 dispensaries in the United States providing special treatment for tuberculous cases. Up to the year 1908, this number had increased to slightly over 100. During the year 1908 alone, over 100 dispensaries providing special treatment for tuberculous patients have been opened. The number of tuberculosis sanatoria and hospitals opened in the year 1908 is more than 80, a figure which is four times that of the amount of progress shown in this line in any other year before 1908. The number of associations having for their object the study of prevention of consumption, established during the year 1908, totals up to 120, which figure again is more than the entire number which had previously been established in the United States.

But not only in the number of institutions but also in the variety of people interested and in the increase in workers can the progress of the anti-tuberculosis campaign be measured. Never before in the history of the United States have so many movements co-operated and allied to fight the common foe, the white plague. Never in any single year have so many different organizations and so many different ranks of people been joined to activity in a movement for the betterment of the condition of man, as during the year 1908. For instance, during the past year from one end of the country to the other, the labor unions and working men have been started to a realization of the fact that consumption is a disease which affects them and they have been arming from east to west to fight against this common foe. Hand in hand, the movement of the labor unions has been the stimulus given to the clergyman and the churches throughout the country. Never before have so many sermons on tuberculosis been preached from the pulpits of the various churches of the country. The schools, too, have been aroused both through special institutions for the treatment of tuberculous children and by means of special instruction to the children in the regular grades in the schools. Hundreds of children have been instructed on the dangers of tuberculosis. State Legislatures, government officials, business concerns, factory owners, social workers, men and women of all sorts of classes have during this past year been aroused to renewed interest in the campaign against consumption.

Of the influences which have contributed to produce this result, probably the most weighty, has been the international Congress on Tuberculosis which was held in Washington during the latter part of September and the first part of October, attracting, as it did, the attention of men and women in every State in the Union. Representatives were present from almost every section of the country, and the benefit derived from this inspiring gathering has doubtless given the greatest impetus to activity in the fight against consumption that this country has ever experienced. The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis by means of its constant propaganda and its two traveling exhibits, has also helped to contribute to the success of the campaign. Particularly is this so in regard to the work being carried on in the South. The Red Cross Stamp Campaign, with its 25,000,000 stamps, has been one of the greatest mediums of education on tuberculosis as well as a means of raising money that has ever been used in this country.

The managers of the campaign against tuberculosis are realizing that they have a hard fight ahead of them, and every means that will bring home to the ignorant the gospel of health is being employed. It is safe to predict that with the present rate of increase in activity against tuberculosis maintained, the white plague will be ranked in a class with some of the least dangerous of the infectious diseases within less than fifty years.

do you ask? Use it to the glory of God and the upbuilding of his kingdom. The Christian man who is rich will not take advantage of his poorer brethren. He will help them in every way he can. If you are rich, and are at the same time a Christian, you will not hoard your wealth; you will use it to benefit your fellowman. The Christian who is rich in this world's goods, will use his wealth in such a way that he will lay up for himself treasures in the world to come, where moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal. I know a man who has the talent to make money and he makes it, but he does not hoard. I have heard him say that every dollar he makes beyond an amount sufficient to support his family and to provide for them after his death, he gives to the Church or to the destitute and needy. That is the Spirit of Christ as to the disposition of wealth. This man says that he deserves no credit for his ability to make money, that the talent was given him by his Maker and that he ought to use it not for his own private ends, but for the advancement of the Kingdom of the Master in the earth. If you have the talent to make money, the exhortation of Scripture is to make it, and then to adopt the more excellent way and use it for the glory of God and the betterment of man.

Do you feel that you are gifted as a writer? That you ought to become an author? Then, says Christ, by all means be an author; that is the work appointed you by the Lord and you ought to do it. Read the best books in all languages. Read Homer and Cicero and Demosthenes and Virgil. Read Dante and Goethe and Spenser and Milton. Read Pope and Dryden and Addison and Carlyle. Read Hawthorne and DeQuincey and Browning and Tennyson. But above all read the Bible. It is an old-fashioned book; it is written in an absorbing style, and in it are found the principles that give dignity and weight and poise to life. Not only read these authors and their books, but imitate them as well. Strive with all the power that is in you to develop freshness and vigor of expression. Strive for virility and crispness and force. Strive for beauty and rhythm and excellency of cadence. Be the most vigorous user of your mother tongue of your day and time if you can attain to such perfection. God has given you the talent to be an author, the power to express your ideas in such a manner that the reading of them shall be a pleasure to men and possibly bring them around to your way of thinking. If you are a child of God, it is your duty to develop this talent, or you will receive the curse of the unprofitable servant who hid his Lord's money in the earth.

But this is not all. This is only half the message of Christ to you. For what purpose ought you to develop this power that is in you? To be yourself. That is true; but it is not all the truth. You must go further than this and use this gift for the good of your fellowman and the coming of the kingdom on the earth. You will not join the staff of a Yellow Journal. You will not write trashy novels. You will devote yourself to the portrayal of the great passions that surge in the breast of yourself and of your fellows. You will give them such excellence and elegance of setting that all who read will be moved to act from noblest impulses and strive for highest aims both for themselves and for others. If you do not enter the realm of fiction, but choose that of the professional journalist, you will devote yourself to the great questions that confront men for solution and you will endeavor to help them to solve them in a manner and a way in accord with the purpose of God in the universe. Your pen will never be found except on the side of right and of justice and of eternal truth. No man will be rich enough to buy you to advocate a thing you do not conscientiously believe to be right. Yes, be a great author, but be at the same time a child of God and a vigilant and unrelenting preacher of righteousness.

Would you be a scholar? Does your mind long for knowledge? Does your talent lie in the line of accurate and pains-taking scholarship? Then it is your duty to be a scholar. Go to College and graduate. Go to the University and pursue your specialty. Be an authority in your line. Do not cease to search for truth. The scholar with all the ridicule that is heaped upon him by the so-called practical folk, with the smell of antiquity about him and the dust of ancient volumes adhering to him, has yet a distinct mission in the world. The story of human progress would be a short one, if the part contributed by the scholars were to be subtracted. It is no disgrace to be a scholar. If you have the instincts of a scholar and are talented in that direction I do not know a more worthy field in which you may labor and live out your days.

A PURITAN CAPTAIN

BY EMMANUEL C. CHARLTON, PH. D.

This thrilling tale of sea adventure is based on actual experience and is told in the author's own natural manner, which is made the more impressive because of his long experience as a seaman, and Christian worker among his fellow-craftsmen. The story is specially attractive to all classes. The moral is of a high character. There is not a dull chapter in it.

But what shall you do with your scholarship? Use it for the advancement of truth. Give yourself to the instruction of those who do not know as much as you do, but who would be wonderfully helped in life if you were to impart to them some of the light you possess in occult and hidden matters. Infuse into your scholarship the spirit of Christianity and by means of it make life sweeter and the lot of humanity more delightful. If Pythagoras had kept secret his discovery of the fact that the hypotenuse of a right angled triangle can be found by extracting the square root of the sum of the squares on the other two sides, if Euklid had never published his Geometry, if Franklin had kept the result of his kite experiment a secret, if Newton had never divulged his researches, if Bell and Morse and Marconi and Fulton and Harvey and Edison had not enriched the world by making known their discoveries and inventions, life had been a long way less delightful than it is today and the sum total of human happiness much less. Scholars are the benefactors of their race. Be a scholar if you are inclined that way. Scholarship is one of the best gifts. Covet it; then use it not for selfish ends, not to take advantage of the ignorance of your less fortunate fellows, but use it to better mankind, to help on the world, to do good, not evil, to make existence more heavenly and life more Christlike.

Would you like to be a minister of the Gospel? Has God given you a talent to save others? Has he called you to be a man who by the foolishness of preaching is to save the world from sin? Then

How to Increase the Yield of Fruit

Increased fruit crops are more often the result of good management than of good luck. Fruit trees and fruit plants need a liberal supply of

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

The trees absorb plant foods—that is, nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash—from the soil just the same as any other crop. Experience has shown this over and over again. This truth has become so well recognized that "return to the land what the tree removes if you would expect the best results" has become an axiom with the best growers.

Apple, pear, peach, orange and other fruit trees soon respond to careful fertilization. But be sure to use the best fertilizers.

"I made a test with other companies' fertilizers," says Mr. H. O. Lowry, of Manatee County, Fla., "and yours proved to be the best. The yield where I used Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer, was just twice as much as where the other two companies' fertilizer was used." Hundreds of users say Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers are cheapest because of their good qualities—give better satisfaction and quicker results.

Many facts of great interest and value to fruit growers are published in the new 1909 Farmers' Year Book, a copy of which will be sent free on application to any of our sales offices.

MARRIED.*Farmer-Doughtie.

Chestnut St., No. 207, Suffolk, Va., Feb. 11th, 1909, Mr. Robert Lee Farmer, of Chesterfield Co., Va. and Miss Lida Octavia Doughtie, the very pretty and accomplished daughter of Mr. B. R. Doughtie of Holland, Nansemond Co., Va. They have the congratulations of their many friends.

King-White.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, Feb. 14, 1909, near Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond Co., Va., at the bride's father's, Mr. Charles William King, a very popular and prosperous young man of Nansemond Co., Va., and Miss Frances Alton White, the very beautiful and highly accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo White of Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond Co., Va. The parlor was beautifully decorated and Mrs. W. T. Kilby played the wedding march. After the marriage the young couple attended the services at Bethlehem Christian Church and returned to the bride's father's where a delicious reception awaited them.

May their lives be as beautiful and as happy as the occasion.

H. H. Butler.

DIED.*Nelms.

At her home near Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond Co., Va., Feb., 18, 1909, Mrs. Sarah E. R. Nelms, aged 63 years, 5 months and 20 days. She was a member of Western Branch Baptist church. She united with the church there at the age of 18 years and was faithful to the end. She was a good mother, devoted to her children. She leaves three sons, W. M., E. L., and P. D. Nelms, one daughter, Miss Lucy A. Nelms, one sister Miss Gabrilla Johnson, 2 grand children. The funeral services were conducted by the writer and her remains were laid to rest in the old family cemetery.

Thompson.

Fannie Jennings Thompson, the devoted and faithful wife of our youngest deacon, brother, J. S. Thompson, was born in Pittsylvania Co., Va., Dec. 25, 1874, and died Feb. 15, 1909, at her home in Newport News, Va. She was converted when a little child and united with the Houston Baptist church, Jan. 17th, 1900. She was married to J. S. Thompson and it proved a happy union with strong and beautiful devotion on both sides. They located at Newport News, Va. in 1901 and became charter members of the Newport News Christian Church. She was stricken by typhoid fever in 1906, which was followed by pneumonia, and from the effects of these diseases she never recovered. For almost two years she was confined to the house and gradually lingered until finally the tired body gave up a brave fight and the struggling spirit in triumphant victory swept out to regions and glories beyond the skies.

Sister Thompson was a most beautiful Christian character. During the long and dreary weeks, and months of sickness and suffering, when hope and despair alternately gave way to each other her faith never failed and no word of complaint escaped her lips. There was patient endurance to the end. The beautiful devotion and ministry of husband, the faithful and constant attention of skilled physician, the love and prayers of friends, all combined, could not hold her longer. A new grave is made, a once happy home destroyed, a young husband weeps, but another soul is numbered with the redeemed about the throne, crowned with the glories of eternal praise and happiness. The world is richer in Christian love and sympathy and memory of husband, mother, brothers and sisters are vastly richer because she lived and wrought. It was the privilege of her pastor to be with her much during her last two days and nights on earth. It was a touching scene when to husband, mother, brothers, sisters, and pastor, she gave parting messages and asked the privilege of taking messages to those we "Had loved and lost awhile." Funeral services were conducted from East End Christian Church of which she was a member, by the pastor, and attended by a large circle of friends.

May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved hearts. Brother Thompson has the love and sympathy of the church and community. Many kind friends placed upon her bier many beautiful floral offerings, among them one "the Gate Ajar" by the Ladies' Aid Society of the church.

Murdock W. Butler.

THANKS.

Dear Bro. Editor:—It again becomes my privilege and pleasure to report a pounding from my people. During the week after the 4th Sunday in Feb., I received information from Bros. W. F. Richardson, S. J. Rollings, and J. L. Hancock that there were some boxes on the way for me, being shipped from Dorry. The boxes reached Windsor Sat., March 6th, and contained hams, shoulders, sausage, flour, sugar, coffee, canned and dried fruit, soda, baking powder, peanuts, and other useful things, all as a gift of Barrett's church and community. We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to each and every one who had any part in this great kindness. These expressions of kindness are highly appreciated as well as useful. May the Lord abundantly bless each giver and help their pastor to give them more faithful service.

WHERE WAS THE DEACON?

Deacon Jones, the great man of a little village of Massachusetts, whose outward piety was of the vociferous order, but whose charity toward his fellow men was not as abounding as it might have been, was dangerously ill, and his brother deacons, impressed with the custom of issuing bulletins from the sick rooms of prominent individuals, decided to follow the fashion, with the following results:

"6 P. M. Deacon Jones is in a serious condition."

"7 P. M. Deacon Jones has rallied slightly."

"9 P. M. Deacon Jones has suffered a relapse."

"1 P. M. Deacon Jones has departed for heaven."

Thus the bulletins read at midnight; but early in the morning some unregenerate mortal who did not love the Deacon, evidently passed that way, for the light of a new day showed curious townspeople later report:

"Heaven, 7 A. M. Great consternation here. Deacon Jones has not arrived."—Woman's Home Companion for March.

happy are you. Yes, by all means answer the call. By all means be a minister of the Gospel. It is the noblest work in all the world. It will not bring you great wealth, but will bring you the grateful appreciation and the devoted love of those to whom you minister. We need more ministers today, and particularly our Church. We are growing rapidly as a people and we must have more preachers. We want men who will take the full College course and who will devote themselves wholly and entirely to the cause of the Gospel. Never was the demand for a consecrated ministry greater than now. If you feel the Spirit of God working within you and calling you to preach the Gospel, I beseech you to answer that call and do all you can to spread the kingdom on the earth. Do not aim to be a great preacher, but aim to be a good one. Aim to serve your fellowman and to deserve the approval of your Master. Preaching is the best gift of God to man. If you have that talent and do not develop it, you are of all men falling far short of doing your duty. Covet this gift. Labor to improve it and then use it as becomes a servant of the living God.

Whatever your inward inclinations, in your best moments, lead you to do, whether it be to have a strong body, to amass money, to be a master of assemblies, to be an author, to be a scholar, to preach the Gospel, whether it be to shovel, coal, or to follow the plow, or to manage a home, or to push a saw, whatever God may lead you to believe that you ought to do, that do with all your might and in so doing you will merit his approval. But remember that while you are a person and are to develop yourself to the very highest extent, to be what your powers tell you you ought to be, remember that, while this is so, you are also to complete your life by doing, by doing the things your hands find to do, that you are to consecrate all the powers you have and all the attainments you may acquire and all the successes you may achieve to the glory of God and the good of his Kingdom. The message of Christ to you is to covet earnestly the best gifts, labor zealously for the attainment of the best things to which your individuality would lead you. Be yourself, be a man, be a woman, be an individual be a person. But the pagan world also would tell you that you can not stop there if you would be a Christian. Saint Paul not only exhorts us to covet earnestly the best gifts, but he also adds this, "and yet show I unto you a more excellent way." And what is that more excellent way? It is to consecrate all your powers and all your attainments and all your successes to the advancement of the kingdom of God and the betterment of your fellowmen. This is the message of the Gospel, this is the exhortation of Paul, this is the voice of Christ to you. Will you accept this message? Will you receive this exhortation? Will you obey this voice? My heart's prayer to God for each of you is that you may answer these questions in the affirmative; that you will covet earnestly the best gifts and choose that more excellent way by consecrating yourself and the powers you have and the success you may achieve to the Master; for in so doing you shall enjoy this life far better than you otherwise could and you will inherit a crown of righteousness in the life to come.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Tariff.—Congress is in extraordinary session to consider revising the present tariff laws. The purpose of the revision is two fold: First, that more revenue may be secured with which to defray increasing expenses of government: Second, that there may be reduction of duty on several articles now almost prohibited and an increase in others that need protection.

One outside of Congress little realizes what it means to change the tariff laws. Since a committee was appointed last November to consider revision, over three hundred importers, exporters, manufacturers, growers and dealers have appeared to plead that, if there was to be reduction, let that reduction be on other articles than those with which the person pleading was concerned. Manufacturers of shoes, for instance, are anxious enough for raw hides to come in free, but the butchers and cattle raisers of the West are dead set against such "destructive legislation" as that. It was thought that some reduction on textile fabrics might be made to advantage but a strenuous protest has been entered, and a committee sent to Washington to protest against any ruinous reduction in the name of cotton manufacturers South and North. The lumber dealers are likewise protesting that the price of manufacturing has increased so much that lumber cannot stand any reduction.

Meanwhile President Taft has sent a special message to Congress urging that what is done should be done quickly, as business in suspense means dull times and stagnation. Besides all this the country faces a rapidly increasing deficit and must have revenue.

This Congress now in session certainly has no easy road to travel: That legislation which directly affects individual finance is always difficult. For there be those and not a few who agree with Ecclesiastes 10:19, "Money answereth all things."

Benevolent Missionaries.—Carrying the gospel is the chief, but by no means the sole, business of the missionary to foreign fields. Christianity, "the religion of the poor to the poor," has blessed, and is blessing, the nations financially and economically as well as morally and spiritually, and faithful missionaries have carried dollars as well as gospel to the nations that sit in darkness. Ideas of agriculture, manufacturing, engineering and other industries have been carried to "the heathen" by missionaries and these ideas have helped to progress, enlightenment and comfort. Because missionaries have taught the Chinese the use of cotton, every bale and bolt of that staple sells for a better price on the home market than it could bring otherwise. Reckless deforestation has done untold damage in China, and even now a Christian missionary is planning a series of meetings in large Chinese cities in which the importance and benefits of forest preservation and reformation will be discussed. Forest, field, factory and fireside are all benefited and blessed wherever Christianity goes and is received.

The finest system of economy ever taught is embodied in the Christian religion.

Base-Ball.—College base-ball may be all right—is all right when properly conducted. Boys in school need exercise and base-ball affords that. But for the colleges to hire professionals as chief players, and to have betting and gambling galore on the outcome of the game, that is not right and no sort of argument can make it so. Can't the colleges manage in some way to do their own ball-playing and leave off the professionals, the swearing and the betting? It would be well if they could.

The Poor Boy.—It comes out that the eight Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) elected last year, after a notable and prolonged contest, were all of humble birth and rearing and had experience in the school of sacrifice and endeavor. Three are the sons of poor Methodist preachers (another proof that all preachers' sons are not bad); three are the sons of farmers; one, the son of a weaver; and one the son of a merchant, who was compelled in early life to shift for himself.

There is a richer legacy for children than affluence, ease and social rank.

The legacy is one that every parent can bequeath. Every child has a right to a good honest rearing, to a godly parentage and example in the home: to habits of sturdy thrift, industry and energy. With these in the heart of the boy, poverty and humble station are no barrier.

Poverty does not make a boy great, but it frequently affords the privilege of thrift and industry which do make men great. Riches do not make a boy great; but they frequently afford the privilege of indulgence and idleness which prevent men from becoming great.

—Many fine tributes were paid to the memory of the late President Grover Cleveland March 18, that being his 72nd birthday anniversary. There was a note gathering in New York at which President Taft, Governor Hughes, Chief Justice Fuller and others spoke. In the beginning of his address President Taft said: "Grover Cleveland was as completely American in his character as Lincoln. Without a college education, he prepared himself for the bar. His life was confined to Western New York. His vision of government and of society was not widened by foreign travel. He was a pure product of the village and town of the Middle States, aided by New England ancestry and the atmosphere of a clergyman's home. His chief characteristics were simplicity and directness of thought, sturdy honesty, courage of his convictions and plainness of speech, with a sense of public duty that has been exceeded by no statesman within my knowledge."

—While statistics show an increase of 2,408,200 gallons of turpentine and 288,962 barrels of rosin for 1908 over the output of 1907 in the Southern States, North Carolina showed a decrease of from 916,400 gallons of turpentine in 1907 to 732,300 gallons in 1908 and 168,561 barrels of rosin in 1907 to 131,907 in 1908. Only N. C. and S. C. of the states showed a decrease and this is due we are told to the use of old and wasteful methods of turpentineing yet in vogue in these two States, in large measure.

FROM THE FIELD.

Church Notes from Raleigh.

The Hillsboro Street Christian Church of Raleigh, like a few of our churches in other cities, has had quite a struggle. The growth has not been as great as the founders had hoped that it might be. The conference, the Convention, and the entire brotherhood have expected much, but have received little. The reasons if there be any are all unexplained to me. I shall not try to satisfy any one on this point, because I do not know how and besides it would not benefit us much to talk about this. The thing that we want to talk about is progress, not failure. I do not know how it may seem to others, but to me there is a better day for the Raleigh work. I have accepted the call and entered this field to succeed. I have faith to believe that I will, and I am very anxious that I may have the prayers of all who believe in progress to pray for me that I may succeed. Let the faithful pastors who have been here and have borne the burden and heat of the day, be very earnest in prayer for us while we try to do our best for the work in this important center.

The work is beginning to show some signs of progress. We have a growing Sunday-school, a good prayer meeting, and Ladies' Aid Society. Easter services will be observed in our church, morning and evening. We have secured splendid talent for our special music. The Church and Sunday-school are looking forward to a very happy day at the church on Easter Sunday. May the glory of the Lord fill all of our churches on this hallowed day. I am too busy to write at length this time. Hope I will have something good to tell Sun readers next time.

Portsmouth Letter.

Since our last report to the Sun we have exchanged pulpits with Revs. H. H. Butler, H. E. Rountree, and R. H. Peel and visited their churches in the interest of the Portsmouth work. The people have enjoyed their visits and messages. The attendance at the services has been very gratifying. There is a growing interest in the work and a general feeling that we must build our church this year. We are laboring to this end with all the zeal which we possess. Our efforts are being crowned with a measure of success. We have secured $2815.43 in cash and subscription on the $5000 we must raise in order to launch the building proposition. The churches visited since our last report responded as follows: Rosemont, $55.50; Antioch, $47.95; Mt. Carmel, $30.30; Cypress Chapel, $51.50; Waverly, $112.50; Windsor, $55.10; Berea (Norfolk), $250; Providence, $105; Centerville, $30.

We will visit Suffolk church next Sunday and the Norfolk church the fourth Sunday in this month. The third Sunday in April we will be at Holy Neck and the fourth Sunday at Franklin, Bethany and Union (So).

The next date on which we will ask for subscriptions to be paid will be May 1st. We shall need every dollar that can be raised by that time. Let every one who wishes to see us succeed in our purpose to build this year send in a donation. $5000 will put us in position to go forward. Without it our hands are tied. Who will withhold and hinder the work? We expect to have the plans for the new church ready in the course of a few weeks. Will you help to make it possible for us to begin building in June? Remember, it is not help after the building is begun that we are in need just now, but to begin. The need is urgent. Do your best. Let us hear from you.

Columbus, Ga. Letter.

Did you read in the Sun Rev. H. W. Elder's recent, earnest appeal for funds with which to prosecute the work on the church he is now building on Waverly Terrace, Columbus, Ga? If the church at large only knew the conditions as they are, I feel persuaded that more would respond with a liberal contribution. If you could see what is being done and the pressing need of the hour, you could hardly withhold your gift which is so much needed at this time. But some do not contribute to this cause from the fact that they are not sure that it will be a paying investment. Let us view the situation a moment.

The location of the church is one of the best in the city, if rapid development of valuable property has any meaning. Truly this part of Columbus is destined to become one of the most beautiful and desirable residence portions of the city, nay it is already that and continues to build, twenty-seven residence within a radius of a quarter of a mile having been erected during 1908. Just two blocks from the church, carpenters are busy today and I hear the music of the hammer and the saw. Only one block away another building is to go up soon. Vacant lots near the church are valued at $950.00 and upward to $1250.00. No residence for less than $1500.00 and $1800.00 value is allowed on these lots. The church itself is in keeping with that part of the city in which it is located. Just a few days ago a competent judge stated that the church, when completed, would be worth $10,000.00.

But there are not funds enough on hand to finish the work. Bro. Elder is in need of $1200.00. This amount will complete the building and liquidate all indebtedness. Who will help? Come to the assistance of this work. Now is the time of great need and large opportunity.

TEACHER TRAINING CLASS.

Since we realize the interest manifested in the Teacher-Training Course, we feel sure those interested will be glad to know of an organization of this class in the Burlington Christian Church.

This class was organized Jan. 12th, 1909, with Dr. P. H. Fleming, Teacher; Mr. J. H. Kagey, President; Miss Nina Holt Vice-President and Miss Sadie Lou; assistant Secretary and Treasurer. This class meets Thursday evenings, with a good attendance and much interest is being taken in this work.

—Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God.

THE WORD OF GOD.

One must accept the Bible as being in the highest sense the true Word of God, else he cannot reasonably account for certain unquestionable facts in connection with the Bible, and the proclamation of its truths. If, as it is affirmed by the advocates of the "new theology," the contents of the Bible were obtained in ordinary ways, and by men who were not under the direct inspiration and guidance of the Holy Spirit, then how can the fact be accounted for that no other book in all history ever produced such mighty and measureless effects upon innumerable people as the Bible has? This fact cannot be explained on any other ground than that the Bible is, in a superlative degree, the true Word of God, having been especially inspired by the Holy Spirit, who specifically guided the men that gathered the materials which they used in the preparation of those portions that became a part of the Bible. Each man was directed by God in doing the work which He required of that man. The whole Bible was planned by God, and therefore nothing was left to the ingenuity and determining purpose of man. There was no council of men held for the purpose of consulting each other as to what each one should do in making the Bible. All of the writers were so separated from each other that one could not and did not influence the other in respect to gathering material and in writing what he did write. God superintended the whole business from beginning to end, and each writer was controlled by Him. This is one great reason why the Bible produces effects upon all classes of people which no other book ever did or could produce. Multitudes of ungodly people by simply reading the Bible have been radically and eternally converted by it. Some of the strongest minded men, formerly very skeptical, have become believers by reading Christ's sermon on the Mount. Most truly is it said in Hebrews that "The Word of God is living and active, and sharper than any two-edged sword." It would be a Satanic falsehood to speak thus of any other book; and it is false to say other writers were inspired as much as the Bible writers were. Verily, the Bible is God's great Book.

THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN PUBLISHING BOARD, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

Preparing The Teacher, Edited by W. A. Harper, M. A., W. P. Lawrence, M. A., and W. C. Wicker, M. A., Professors in Elon College, Pp. 236. Cloth 90 cts.; paper, 60 cents.

This interesting volume is Book One of the Teacher Training Course of the Southern Christian Convention. I feel safe in saying that it will do unlimited good in preparing the Sunday-school teacher for the difficult and delicate task which is so often entered upon without due thought and preparation. I have been much interested in this book. Note some of the chapter heads: Seven Lessons on the Teacher; Six Lessons on the Pupil; Three Lessons on the History and Organization of the Sunday School; Three Lessons on the Institutional Sunday School; Four Lessons on the Book; Twelve Lessons on Biblical History; Six Lessons on Church History; Five Lessons on Biblical Geography; Five Lessons on Biblical Antiquities; etc.

The book is pedagogically sound. It is true to Christ, also; it makes Christ the chief corner-stone: "We Sunday-school teachers cannot afford to leave Christ out of our teaching. There are Sunday-schools which study Bacon and Tolstoi and Emerson rather than the Bible. They are consistent, however, because they regard Christ as a man only. But to us Christ is the divine Son of God, and so we teach Him, if we measure up to our responsibilities and harvest our possibilities. To do less is to do violence to the Kingdom of God." The arrangement of the volume is admirable throughout. Every Sunday-school teacher should own a copy and study it well. The day of the untrained, unprepared Sunday-school teacher is past, and the new era is dawning. May the morn hasten! Watch for Number Two of this Course.—Waldo H. Dunn, in the Wooster Quarterly, January, 1909.

REJOICING.

There are many times when it is an effort to be jolly—inward emotions and outward conditions drive away the animated spirits and despondency comes in and nearly takes possession of the situation, but a cheerful disposition is cultivable, and ought to be, and must be cultivated to produce good results. Many persons are easy to shed tears they are on the verge of their nature and flow profusely at will. They cultivate the habit until it grows to be a strong and necessary one with them. It is beautiful, grand, noble, strong and brave to weep when necessary—but prudence and correct thinking out to take possession of the mind and control it in extreme cases, so that that which steals our happiness should be excluded as much as possible. Affliction, loss, poverty, and other causes produce sadness and weeping, and these have their proper places and relations, but to do justice to ourselves we must refrain from that which will injure us, and learn to experience, or to practice those things which will help—make us useful and happy. Then a new start will be made on the way which leads to a joyful life.

Gladness brings laughter. Laugh—laugh, and let the pleasant exercise smooth out the frowning, premature wrinkles which many anxious moments have made, and which have impressed themselves deeply in your face. The vacant laugh of the drunkard, the silly, or the laugh influenced by the continued use of some dangerous, pleasing drug, is not meant here, but a refined, helpful, healthful, sensible laugh is meant. It exercises the mind and the body and brings the muscles into full exercise, tunes the soul, and gives tone and more regular action to the heart. Notice the difference between a smile and a frown; one is pleasing, the other is to some extent repulsive; one is natural, the other is not. Of course extremes in this as well as in other things must be avoided. Common sense will tell any one who reasons what to do. It is a very difficult thing to give a smile when you feel more like frowning; it is very hard to laugh when you feel like crying—but covet earnestly the best gifts, and look for more excellent things.

Laughing is not only a healthy exercise, but it is a beautiful one. It makes some people more beautiful, more attractive and more lovely, while the opposite makes many good subjects for the cartoonist. We ought to be anxious to say, "Make me to hear joy and gladness that the bones which thou hast broken may rejoice." One of the greatest prophets of the Bible in studying this theme said: "For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace; the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands." May all who have started up the beautiful way have the joy of the great salvation, and enter their Father's house rejoicing.

J. T. Kitchen.

—Under date of Ponce, P. R., March 8, Rev. D. P. Barrett writes, "The missionary force in Porto Rico is all well. We had the best Annual Conference Feb. 22, and 28th we ever had in Porto Rico. A copy of our proceedings will be furnished for The Sun shortly. Send me two copies of our newly printed Government and Principles, one for myself, one for our native missionary who is going to translate the book into Spanish."

—The new naval Young Men's Christian Association building at Norfolk, costing $300,000 and given by John D. Rockefeller was dedicated March 17.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Pastor L. F. Johnson writes encouragingly of the Raleigh work and says the outlook for upbuilding our cause there is very bright and hopeful.

—Two state-wide prohibition bills are before the Arkansas legislature now in session, one for prohibition by statute, Dec. 31, 1909, the other for submitting the question to a popular vote.

—President O. B. Whitaker, of Union Christian College, Merom, Ind., announces that Levi J. Wilkinson and wife of Cynthiana, Ind., have recently handed the board of trustees of the college a check for seven thousand dollars. Mrs. Wilkinson was one of the first students of the college, being in school there during the presidency of Dr. N. Summerbell. Mr. Wilkinson is past 80 years old.

—There are noble, self-sacrificing souls in the ministry of the Christian Church. The public little knows. One of these, think of it, a preacher of the Word, we would give his name if he allowed, and all Sun readers would know him, gave away to religion and Christ-work last year $3024.42. Yes, ministers give of their earnings as well as of their strength.

—Rev. H. W. Elder is making herculean effort and untold sacrifice of time, means and strength to enter his new and handsome church at Columbus, Ga., and hold the first service there Easter, 2nd Sunday in April. This will be the Second Christian Church of Columbus and is, we are told, a very creditable house indeed. A contribution to Bro. Elder now would greatly aid and much encourage him.

—The following received from Rev. C. C. Jones, Wakefield, Va., shows that his people want to know more about their church, its principles, its method of government and what it stands for and teaches: "Dear Editor Christian Sun: Enclosed find check for twenty-five copies Government and Principles Christian Church recently sent me. Please send me immediately twenty-five more copies."

—Many of our churches are calling for help in building houses of worship. These calls are worthy and should not go unheeded by Sun readers. It is a privilege and not a task to help further the cause of the Kingdom. The world is not poorer, but richer, because the church in need calls and pleads for gifts for holy purposes. There is far more danger that all will give too little than that any will give too much.

—Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler of Brooklyn, whose life and death were spoken of in these columns recently, during his thirty years pastorate of one church received into fellowship 4,223 persons, 1920 of them on confession of faith in Christ. One of the last letters ever written by Dr. Cuyler was to Rev. Dr. Hallock, Editor of Christian Work in these words: 176 South Oxford Street, Brooklyn, February, 18, 1909. Beloved Brother:—The glorious news from Boston and elsewhere prove that this is harvest-time for winning souls. Use this article as soon as you can, and may God give it His blessing. Yours Ever Lovingly—(Clear Through!) Theodore Cuyler. P. S. I had a serious break-down this week at 87. I cannot preach the glorious Gospel much longer.

—Mrs. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., who is laboring with her husband to secure means to finish the Second Christian Church, Columbus, Ga., wishes us to acknowledge that since her recent report through The Sun she has received the following much appreciated contributions: J. S. Stephenson, Kite, Ga., $5.00; Enigma Church, Enigma, Ga., $5.00; Bettie Stephenson (New Hope Church) $3.41; T. J. Burton, Miltown, Ala., $1.00. Any other contributions will be gratefully received. Bro. Elder is making a heroic effort to have the building ready for the first service 2nd Sunday in April.

—Revs. H. H. Butler and J. W. Harrell kindly favored us the past week with lists of Christian Sun renewals from their fields, for which we are grateful. The pastors that help The Sun help the people whom they are trying to serve.

—The Biblical Recorder (Baptist) of Raleigh, had this agreeable comment recently:

"It is gratifying that the various denominations are offering to their own people Training Courses for their Sunday-school officers and teachers. A recent example we have in Book One in the two-volume course issued by the special committee of the Southern Christian Convention, W. A. Harper, W. P. Lawrence, and W. C. Wicker. It is entitled "Preparing the Teacher" and is published by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, editor of the Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C. The fifty-six lessons by ten of the ablest scholars in the denomination are well prepared; they measure up to the standard set for the International Teacher-Training Course; and happy would be every local church composing the Southern Christian Convention if its workers were to master this book so admirably suited to their needs."

—The Elon College Library recently came in possession, by purchase, of neatly and substantially bound volumes for 1908 of The Charlotte Daily Observer, The Raleigh News and Observer, The Herald of Gospel Liberty, and the Christian Sun. These will be of great value to the future student and writer of history. The secular press tells the world's events of a day as they occur; the religious press tells of incidents and events that, and as, they should occur.

—There is a striking item in Portsmouth Letter this week and one that is universally characteristic. In his summary of churches visited since last report, Waverly is put down as contributing $112.50 to the Portsmouth church. Now it happens that Waverly has just come out of the throes and turmoil of church building on its own account. So instead of draining to the bottom, or bankrupting the Waverly people to build and furnish their own elegant building at tremendous expense, it seems that the experience has done good and only fitted our Waverly brethren for helping others in need. We have no way of telling, but it is exceedingly doubtful if Pastor Harrell would have received over $50 at Waverly if the good people there had not just gone through the experience of church building. Another verification of Dr. W. W. Staley's well known theory that if you want good wool shear the sheep in proper season and do not wait till the bushes and briars pull the wool out. The sham sheep thieves better and yields larger returns—always.

GREENSBORO CHURCH. HELP.

Our church has decided to make their Easter offering for the cancellation of the debt of $1650.00 and we are going to raise it all if you will help. Never has one of our conferences undertaken a mission that shouldered the responsibilities of its own work so early. This has been quite a burden to us, therefore, we ask our brotherhood for assistance this one time. We will help you next. Those who attended our Southern Christian Convention here last year we believe will appreciate our efforts. We ask each Sun reader to send some contribution.

HENDERSON CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

THE HENDERSON CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

We are pleased to present to the readers of The Christian Sun a cut of our new church at Henderson, N. C., of which Rev. C. E. Newman is the efficient and beloved pastor.

While the Church Loan Fund will not attempt to claim to be entirely responsible for this house of worship, yet the facts are that in securing the title to this lot on which it is built there seemed to be no other way except in using this fund and since the building began there was another time when to proceed with the work this loan was increased. Now as it is evident that we need a fund of this kind and a larger one for similar work we believe our brotherhood will respond more readily than heretofore. Some of our faithful are already sending in for 1909. Remember this remittance should be made in March. If you do not pay by March 15th a statement for this year's dues and arrears if any will be sent to you either by mail or by person. The possibilities and opportunities of the Christian church are now open. We only need to prepare the means. We have ministers ready to do their work. We have laymen able to donate the means but they need to be stirred to be made to realize that we have a work to do and that there is pleasure in doing this work. Please send your dues in at once, or make a donation that will also be appreciated.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

It may be a late day to say it, but I have a word of commendation for the work of the N. C. and Virginia Christian Conference done during the year 1908. It was in many respects our best year. More churches were represented at Conference, more money was sent up for the regular apportionments, the speeches and addresses and sermons were of a higher order perhaps than is usual, the spirit of the brethren was refreshingly brotherly for the most part, many steps were taken looking to the enlargement of our borders in the future. The church letters showed an increase in membership—there were more banner churches than in any previous year. The call for Sunday-school Home Missions met a liberal response and received substantial encouragement. Thirteen of the schools of the conference sent up their money and received the appropriate memorials, which are no doubt now displayed in their places of assembling. The Palm Street (Greensboro) Church was handed over to the brethren free from debt. The work at Spray was placed under the pastoral care of Rev. S. B. Klapp. Rev. C. C. Peel was employed to reorganize the work at Sage Garden. Dr. W. T. Herndon was asked to look after our interests in Winston-Salem. The Teacher-Training Course of the Southern Christian Convention was approved. Provision was made for a Conference Missionary Association to meet in connection with the Conference this year, and membership in it was placed at $10 for men and organizations and $5 for women.

Yes, last year was a good year—the best year we have yet had. Let us work and pray that the Conference at Belew's Creek this November may see even greater things done for our Lord and his Church.

THE CHAPMAN MEETING IN BOSTON.

The evangelistic meetings in Boston led by Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman are making good progress. They are pervaded by a spirit of thoughtfulness. They are largely attended. This is generally true of the twenty or more centres in and around Boston where assigned evangelists are the leaders, but at Tremont Temple where Dr. Chapman speaks, and at other places where he is announced to appear, the crowds always exceed the capacity of the meeting-place.

The object is to reach all classes. There are evangelists trained to work among laboring men in the shops and factories, where they usually go at the noon hour, and for the patrons of saloons, although under the ruling of the exercise commissioners the evangelists are not allowed to conduct meetings in the saloons, and for street car men, and various other classes. There are night parades to gather people in from the streets, and among these people there have been some interesting experiences.

A gracious and beautiful feature of the campaign was the gathering of flowers and sending them by special messengers on Wednesday of last week to the hospitals, to the orphanages and asylums and to every room in private houses where people were shut in by sickness or invalidism. This service carried cheer to many a person.

Dr. Chapman's preaching is strong and direct. It presents the simple gospel. It shows no doctrinal bias, except that it makes Christ the centre, the example and the hope of all redemption. Dr. Chapman does not aim to terrify people but to convince their reason that the best life is the Christ life.

In the "all classes" that Dr. Chapman tries to reach are included the ministers and the church members, the deacons and all the church officers. An effective revival, he says, must begin in the churches. No use to bring freezing people in out of the cold unless it is warm inside.

Dr. Chapman's characteristic methods in conducting his meetings were well shown in the Tremont Temple meeting on Wednesday evening of last week. His aim was to induce a spirit of reconsecration on the part of ministers and church members. At the close of his sermon he

—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

—The most wholesome social life ought to be found among Christian people, and such is usually the case. The association of Christian young people should be eagerly sought by all young people desiring the fullest and most helpful social life. The Convention of Christian young people to be held at Elon College May 29-31 will afford, aside from its business and strictly religious work, the very finest social fellowship. It will be composed of the select religious young people throughout the Southern Christian Convention.

—The Convention will call for wise, consecrated counsel from the most intelligent and devout young people of the Christian Church, South, for it will be a convention largely devoted to ways and means,—ways and means of organizing into effectual working order the Christian virtue among the young people in all our churches. Some of them are already pretty well organized; others are not. The Convention will need the wise counsel and experience of those already organized. So, whatever may be the nature of the organization of Christian young people working under the authority of any Christian church, South, that organization is expected to send delegates to the Convention, May 29-31.

—The names of the local entertainment committee will soon be announced in this column. If you are interested, watch for what occurs here from week to week. The program committee is at work, and the Chairman says he expects it to be a great convention. The Orchestra of the Elon College Sunday-school may be expected to infuse added charm into the music of the Convention. Be thinking about the most suitable persons to send as delegates. Talk about the Convention and pray for its success.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR APRIL 4.
A Few Suggestions.

Peter and Cornelius.

Acts 10:1-20.

Golden Text:—In every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. Acts 10:35.

Review.—In broad outline review what we learned of Peter during last quarter's lessons, especially the mile-posts of his spiritual development that mark his growth in Christian liberality—Pentecost, Samaria, and Joppa. Up to this time only Jews or those with Jewish blood have been received into the church. The Samaritans were of Jewish stock, those converted on Pentecost were Jews from all lands that had come up to Jerusalem to worship. Simon, the tanner, was a Jew, but the willingness to lodge in his house was, as we have seen before, a distinct advance in liberality for a sectarian Jew such as Peter was. Today a Gentile is received into fellowship by the chief apostle and the church becomes one step nearer what Christ intended it to be.

Chronology.—This lesson comes not long after the eleventh lesson of last quarter, for we find Peter still at the home of Simon, the tanner. Caligula was emperor at Rome. The Jerusalem Jews were too much concerned about keeping the emperor's statue out of the temple to give attention to the rising sect. It was a time of sweet joy in religion and expanding spirit and liberality.

Incidental Instruction.—The hours of Hebrew worship will be explained. Reference has already been made about hours for worship. Today explain that in the morning, noon, and at the ninth hour (about three p. m. according to our time) the devout Hebrew worships in his home if not at the temple. You also will need to explain that the phrase "a devout man and one that pleased God" means a Gentile who worshipped Jehovah, but who did not submit himself to the rite of circumcision of the Levitical ritual. Be certain to get the geography of the situation clearly before the class and to characterize Joppa and Caesarea as cities Jewish and Roman respectively. Here call for assigned work on use of house tops in Bible times, Josh. 2:6, I Sam. 9:25; 2 Sam. 11:2; II Kings 23:12; Neh. 8:16-17; Isa. 15:3; Jer. 32:29 and Matt. 24:17, in this connection explaining how these roofs were built, flat and with their battlements to prevent falling off and to conceal those thereon from the prurient curiosity of the passerby. The office of centurion will also be explained, corresponding to our captain, a position of authority.

The Lesson. The lesson falls naturally into three divisions which may be written on the blackboard as they are developed in the teaching.

1. Cornelius the Gentile Sees a Vision, verses 1-8. Find who is mentioned, from what city, where, his office (Here call for assigned work on Centurions of Bible from Matt. 8:5,10; Luke 7:1-10 and 23-47), to what band he belonged (this means he was an Italian by birth), how he is described, what kind of house (family) he had, what he gave to the people, to whom he prayed, when, what he saw, at what time of the day, who appeared to him, what the angel said, the effect on Cornelius, his question, the angel's answer, its meaning, what he commanded Cornelius to do, where Peter was, where Simon's house was (Houses for tanners for sanitary purposes as also to avoid ceremonial defilement had to be outside the city), how Cornelius received this command, whom he called, whither he sent them. Here call for assigned work on vision of Cornelius, Acts 10:3-8, 30-33 and 11:13-15.

2. Peter, The Jew, Sees a Vision, verses 9-15. Find where Cornelius's servants were on the morrow about noon, what Peter did at that time, what appetite took possession of Peter, what he fell into as the meal was being prepared, what opened to him, what descended, what there was in it, what he heard, what it said, his answer, what the voice now said, how often this was done, what then became of the vessel. Here call for assigned work on Peter's vision from Acts 10:9-16 and 11:5-10 and on the 11th chapter of Leviticus in connection with Mark 7:15 and 1 John 1:29 and 3:7.

How these Visions Bring the Men Together, verses 17-20. Find what, as Peter pondered the meaning of this vision, Cornelius's servants were doing, where they stood, what they were asking, what the spirit then said to Peter, what command it gave him. Here call for assigned work on what Peter later regarded this vision as being, Acts 15:7-11.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

Truths and their Applications.—1. Cornelius saw his vision while at prayer. So did Peter. God always attends with blessing the time devoted to his worship. There are today 45,000 Christian Endeavors that belong to the quiet hour. These noble-souled young Christians spend at least 15 minutes daily, preferably in the early morning hours, in prayer, meditation and Bible reading. Who shall deny that these young people shall be pillars of strength and beauty in our church in the coming days? Would that 45,000,000 in the United States alone indulged this holy custom! There is nothing that can take the place of prayer in the Christian's life. All the men of power in the Christian Church have been much given to prayer. The 20th century needs sound instruction on this point.

2. Today's lesson authoritatively launches the foreign missionary movement of the world. It is true that Philip had already preached to the Ethiopian and baptized him, but Philip was a layman and an evangelist. He acted as an individual. Today, Peter, the chief apostle, lends the sanction of his high office to the world-wide spread of Christianity. The vessel which he saw with its various animals were typical of the various nations of the earth, which to the strict Jew were and are today unclean. Though it remained for Paul to rid Christianity of its Jewish provincialisms and make it truly a spiritual force, the stand which Peter takes in today's lesson (even if he did later recede from it, Gal. 2:11,12) marks an epoch in the history of the church.

3. Neither Peter nor Cornelius was disobedient to the heavenly vision and in obedience to it the one laid aside his bigotry and the other his pride and haughtiness and they met on common ground. The spirit of God strives with men today—there are visions from heaven even yet, but they can come only to those who will prepare them by the purity of their life and walk. Would it not be a laudable ambition for a Christian to so live that he may catch luminous glimpses of the spirit world and become a distributing center of the same to his fellows who are too busy to take time to be holy?

Assignments for Next Time:—Ask one to write a brief biography of James; another to be prepared to report on Exodus 12th chapter; a third to report on Peter's previous imprisonments, Acts 4:1-31 and 5:17-32; a fourth on Peter's appearance at the house of Mary, Acts 12:12-17; a fifth to find what we learn about Herod in Acts 12th chapter.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR MARCH 23. Temperance Lesson.

Proverbs 23:29-35.

Golden Text:—At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. Prov. 23:32.

This lesson is universal in its character, and considerations of time or place or connected events are not important for the understanding of it.

If only Americans would not go to excess as they do in their drinking habits as in everything else, alcohol wouldn't hurt them. Now in the wine-growing countries of Europe, every one uses light wines as freely as water, and you see no drunkenness and no one is hurt by it. It is our treating and excessive drinking that does harm. This kind of argument has a plausible and reasonable sound to it. It has a quiet hint of moderation, then attacks totalism as fanatical(?)

Documents from Palestine land where vineyards have long flourished refute this argument.

Again I have to smile. My Bible has at the top of the page where this lesson text is printed 1000 B. C., nearly 3,000 years ago. Some argue the purity and innocency of the drinks of long ago. Solomon lived then and his wisdom taught him that it did hurt people as now-a-days.

As this subject very much affects the laboring people, I give my space this week to an explanation from the pen of Chas. Steltzle, as it appeared in the S. S. Times:

If the saloons are closed down, hundreds of thousands of men and women will be thrown out of employment,—say the brewers and distillers. In this argument they are appealing principally to the economic interests of the workers, because they know that it is this kind of statement which will affect the largest number of people. Not only does this situation control the millions who receive their support directly from the manufacture and sale of intoxicants, but it also affects the working-people who are employed in the production of furniture, harness, wagons, glassware,—indeed, everything that is necessary in the manufacture and sale of beer and whisky, and the list of such things is almost endless.

But those who make this argument forget several important facts.

First, it must not be supposed that all of the money formerly spent in the saloon will suddenly be thrown into the sea. It will be used for better purposes.

Second, the liquor interests are not the only institutions which have need of the products of the workmen which are now supplying them with their output. Other folks besides brewers and saloon-keepers need wagons, harness, glassware, furniture, etc.

Third, the liquor interests pay the smallest percentage of profit to the workman.

When the public spends $100 for distilled liquors, labor gets $1.08; $100 for malt liquors, labor gets $5.18; $100 for boots and shoes, labor gets $22.50; $100 for clothing, labor gets $17.94; $100 for the average product of industry, labor gets $17.78.

So, for example, when one hundred dollars are spent for shoes, the money provides about twenty times as much work in their manufacture as does the same amount of money spent for whisky.

It is true that the economic change necessary in the transfer of the workers from the brewing and distilling interests to some other craft or occupation will cause a temporary hardship to those directly concerned, but such adjustments are constantly being made through the introduction of labor-saving machinery and the changing methods in manufacture due to the discovery of new forces. For such workers we should have the greatest sympathy, because to many of them their occupation was not one of thought out choice but of seeming necessity. However, the change due to the closing of the saloon is a far more necessary and vital one than that due to the introduction of labor-saving machinery; and if the latter is justified for economic reasons, surely the former has greater justification, because of the deeper moral principle involved.

TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE N. C. S. S. ASSOCIATION.

The greatest Sunday School meeting of the year will take place in Concord, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 6-8 in the First Presbyterian Church. The entertainment will be free and any one interested in Sunday School work may attend.

The music will be in charge of Messrs. Tullar and Meredith of New York City, both of whom are known and loved in our State. It will be worth a trip to Concord just to be in the song service of the Convention.

The railroads have given reduced rates. The tickets will be sold on the Certificate plan and the rate will be one and one-third fare, plus 25c for the round trip.

The representative of the International Association in the Convention this year will be Rev. Franklin McElfresh, D. D. Ph. D. of Chicago, Teacher Training Superintendent. Dr. McElfresh is a strong, original, thoughtful and pleasing speaker. He is equal to any demand that may be made on him in presenting the Sunday School work.

The program has been prepared with great care. Among the subjects to be discussed are: "The Scope of Teacher Training," "The Week-Day Work of the Sunday School," "The Passion for Service," "The Child and the Sunday School," "The Country Sunday School," "The Organized Class," "The Evangelistic Mission of the Sunday School," and others of interest to Sunday School workers.

The afternoons will be given to Conference Work on the Organized Adult Class, Elementary, Home Department, Teacher Training, County Officers, Superintendents, Baraca.

This is an interdenominational Sunday School Convention and every Sunday School in the State should have a representative in Concord.

Any one wishing to attend should send their name to Mr. B. E. Harris, Concord, and entertainment will be provided.

DARKNESS.

One does not have to prove that darkness is dreadful; and light agreeable. Even a plant knows that, and will bend its tendrils from darkness towards the light.

The Bible is the best book of human nature, lays bare the heart and soul of man as no other book, and from start to finish this Book identifies darkness with death and dread, and light with life and joy.

Job 10:7, "Let that night be solitary, let no joyful voice come therein." Psalms 91:5-6, "Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness." Eccl. 2:13, "Wisdom excelleth folly, as far as light excelleth darkness." Matt. 25:30, "Cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." 2 Peter 2:4, "Cast them down to hell and deliver them to chains of darkness." Darkness in the Book stands for dread, death, pestilence, punishment.

On the other hand, how different is light. Psalms 27:1, "The Lord is my light and my salvation: whom shall I fear?" Eccl. 11:7, "Truly the light is sweet, and a pleasant thing it is for the eyes to behold the sun." John 8:12, "Then spake Jesus, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Acts 26:18, "To turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." 1 John 1:5, "This is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all."

Light then signifies life, love, liberty, the Lord.

Men do not have to be told that darkness is ugly, uninviting, and is to be dreaded. Children in early infancy know this, and cry out against the oppressive darkness. You do not have to teach your child to fear darkness: the child already fears it.

This is not only the nature of the child, but it is the nature of darkness also. Darkness means absence. Everything is far away in the dark. Color is not even present. Darkness means the absence of all colors. Light is sweet because it is the presence and power of all colors: darkness is bitter because it is devoid of all the presence and power of color. And man moves in a world of color.

God made the darkness dreadful because He wanted men to flee from it and spurn it. He made the light wholesome and inviting because He wanted men to come to Him and live in the light. God is light. And this innate, inherent love for light is God's eternal wooing of man, the image of the Father on the child. How the spirit of God yearns for man, even as the light of day allures and charms him. Even through this sweet light of day God is revealing to man His own love and life and liberty.

The man in sin gropes and grovels in mid-night darkness. The pure, sweet light of God's eternal day, and boundless love, has never yet illumined and rejoiced his heart. But the fact that any man dreads darkness and loves light shows that God is pressing hard His invitation to leave the ways of darkness and walk in the paths of light and joy and peace forevermore.

THE "BEGGING" CHURCHES.

Does one not get so tired of the many appeals from the struggling churches for help? One who reads The Sun sees the appeals every week, Wakefield, Portsmouth, Henderson, Columbus, a dozen others and all asking aid. Would one have the editor exclude these appeals and put in their stead some wholesome reading matter?

Nay, verily, my dear reader. What would a church paper be, what would a church be, what would a community be without such appeals? Think a moment.

Our sympathy is none too great as it is. Our hand is none too liberal at best. Our interest in God's kingdom, and the spread of the gospel, is none too deep at most. Our pity for those who have no suitable place of worship is none too prevalent at highest. These appeals? They awaken interest, enlarge sympathy, change pity into piety and help to make liberal hearts of stingy ones. Heed them when you can. They mean a new joy, a sweet privilege, a high opportunity for service and salvation.

And this is only one side. These churches that "beg" this year put their shoulder to the wheel next, and help do the world's best work preaching Christ and holding up the Cross. The churches that beg this year will help give in the twenty, thirty, fifty years to come, give to a hundred good causes that make the world better and humanity happier.

If none ever begged or persuaded us to do the things we do not at first feel able and willing to do, we would do few good deeds in this world at very most. And with all the persuasion and solicitation we shall do none too many good deeds then, and be none too liberal with our possessions. God bless the folks who beg us, not for themselves but for the betterment of man and the glory of God. They are our Father's agents amongst us trying to lead and persuade us into the better and happier way.

THE LESSER AND GREATER.

Only that which we can do is required of us in this world. And we do not know what the standard of our Father's measurement really is. Peter is the more noted disciple, and his name occurs in holy writ quite often: but it was the less noted Andrew who found Jesus first and led Peter to Him. Could any one wish a higher eulogy on earth, or a holier one in heaven, than that which St. John writes of Andrew in John 1:42 "And he brought him to Jesus." There is no saying just how great or how small, how rich or how poor, Andrew was. What we know of him was that he brought him (his brother Peter) to Jesus.

Philip was not a particularly noted man, but his name is safe in the annals of all sacred history in that he preached a notable sermon in these words, (John 1:46) "Come and see." and thus persuaded Nathaniel, an Israelite in whom was no guile, to come to Christ.

We shall not know in this world, but we do know that God only requires of us what we can do. In doing this might may God help.

—Rev. G. O. Lankford, Columbus, Ga. March: "The inclemency of the weather yesterday greatly interfered with our congregations at Girard. Notwithstanding the continual rain, however, I attended, and took part in five services during the day. On Wednesday night before the fourth Sunday we are to begin a series of meetings with this church. Brethren, pray for us."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There is one thing that is in danger of becoming a religious nuisance, and that is the custom of begging for benevolent and church purposes. It is not the opportunity offered to religious people to give to the causes that deserve support that deserves sane direction but the manner in which such calls are put before the public. It is no doubt true that the people of God give too little to the support of the church and benevolent and educational institutions, and it is furthermore true that their giving is too much scattered.

A little reflection may reveal the conditions that now prevail in Christian society. Present methods at least tolerate solicitations for money for any good cause and from any person who will give. This makes so many calls that liberal-hearted souls fall in the habit of giving in very small sums to all causes. The habit of small giving so works upon the people that large giving is hindered. It appears to be contrary to simple right that as many people as desire to do so should canvass the public for contributions. What right has one denomination to canvass the members of another denomination for money? What right would one lodge have to solicit the members of another lodge for money? Is the kindness of men to be imposed upon by universal solicitations? It is clear that regular organizations have the right to order or consent for the members of the organization to be solicited by duly authorized agents for duly specified objects, just as a State has a right to levy a tax upon its citizens or a lodge to make an assessment upon its members.

Again, it is a custom for customers or clients to solicit donations from those with whom they trade for such religious or benevolent purposes as they may be interested in or may have promised to support. For instance, customers of a merchant feel that the merchant ought to help put a new carpet on their church floor or a new organ in their church simply because they buy goods from the merchant. By what law of right or obligation does it appear that the merchant should contribute to the customer any more than the customer to the merchant. If the transaction over the counter is an honest one it is also a mutual one: if it is a mutual transaction the buyer is under as much obligation as the merchant. The customer buys a pair of shoes for $3.00. The customer gets the merchant's shoes and the merchant the customer's money. Both are benefited and neither is under money obligation to the other, unless one is as much in debt to the other as the other. The ground of such solicitations is false and any false course hinders the cause of righteousness.

The cause of Christ should be liberally and permanently supported, but self-constituted solicitations for money to help all the enterprises that individuals project and endeavor to raise money for, is, in the long run, waste of effort and imposition upon the public.

These observations do not touch those great individual enterprises organized and put before the public until they really appeal to men of means who make large donations to aid a worthy cause; but they have in mind those petty solicitations that afflict every community of any size in which children and grown people, and written solicitations repeat themselves until good people are irritated and fall into the habit of giving a few cents to get rid of the solicitor, instead of giving "as unto the Lord."

NORFOLK LETTER.

In lieu of a Norfolk Letter this week this telegram came:

"Norfolk, Va., March 23, 1909. No Norfolk letter this week; watch this column next week. J. W. Manning."

Elon College Notes.

Miss Nan Lansdell, a student here, was called to Durham March 13th on account of the death of her grand-father, Rev. Mr. Lansdell, an aged Baptist minister. He was very old and left a large family of children and grand children.

The church and community of Shallow Ford should be congratulated upon the progressive spirit manifested. Recently the church and school have bought a nice bell to serve for both, and now it calls school workers and church goers together. In a short time they are to vote for a local tax for a graded school. Let the good work go on.

Mrs. W. A. Shell of Lenoir, N. C., is visiting Mrs. J. T. Cobb, her sister.

The regular religious meetings were held yesterday. However there was no preaching. The Christian Endeavor held an interesting meeting. Topic Temperance Laws. Mr. H. E. Truit leader.

Next week will be examination and every one is now busily engaged in their review work. Indications are that there will be less nervous strain and excitement by dividing the term into two parts than by the old method.

Prof. Harper went to Greensboro last Thursday where he met the Executive Committee of the North Carolina State Christian Endeavor Society. The business was to make arrangements for holding the next session of the Society which is to meet in Winston-Salem in May.

On Wednesday evening, March 18th, Mr. W. W. Ashe, State Forester of North Carolina delivered an instructive address to the faculty, students and villagers, upon the conservation and propagation of the forests of North Carolina.

Miss Garrison, State Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., has been for the past week advising and consulting with leaders and various committees of our organization concerning the methods of work for the greatest efficiency.

President Moffitt is at home for a few days again. He reports a successful trip to Eastern Virginia. There are no more loyal friends to be found any where to Elon College than those of Virginia and so now as formerly they respond heartily to Elon's needs.

The college pulpit on Sunday, March 21, was filled by Dr. J. U. Newman. His sermon was another of the series from Psalms. The Endeavor Society was led by Mr. W. G. Cobb. His subject, the Wicket Gate in the Pilgrim's Progress series.

This is a time in college which tries the student, a time when all the moral as well as the intellectual power is called into action. Examinations give the student a view of his moral strength no less than of his intellectual achievements. In a great time of testing like this it is sincerely hoped by faculty that each student may have the moral stamina that will carry him safely through without his losing his self respect or that of his fellow-student by stooping to cheat or be in any way unfair on an examination. J. T. C.

—The death of George T. Angell of Boston, is a loss to the whole country. No man lived who did as much as he for the benefit of "our dumb animals." His paper by that name, brilliant every issue with pleas for mercy for the horse, the dog, the cattle that could not plead their own cause, did untold good for increasing the country's sympathy and interest in "Dumb Animals." If the animals could take a collection an even higher than a Washington's monument would mark George T. Angell's last resting place. Here is devoutly hoping that "Our Dumb Animals" will find another to carry on his mission of mercy. For the world of men, heaven knows, is all too cruel to the animals about us that cannot talk and tell.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We present you one of the finest reports this week made in a long time. Just see what a total from the “Monthly S. S. Offering!” This report shows what could be done if all schools would join and give us about 40 offerings per week, then you would see what can be done.

Our donations are very liberal this week, and in thanks to them all we make our best bow—to friends at Shallow Ford church and Pleasant Hill church, Alamance Co., N. C., and Mt. Auburn, Warren Co., N. C. These gifts are of the kind which enable us to see our way to harvest time. The chickens, home-made molasses, and nice canned fruit from Shallow Ford pleased the children very much. Sister Iseley often sends us little things which we appreciate. Bro. Ellington knows that farmer boys enjoy nice country-ground corn meal and we will come to bis meal later. The Pleasant Hill meal got into the barrel first. The seed corn and horse apple trees had their time, but when the boys and girls saw 19 chickens from Pleasant Hill, they forgot everything else, and said, “Thank you for chicken,” and they got a mess of chicken last Sunday (2nd Sunday)! If Bros. Murcherson and Hornady could have seen our 30 children (Mary Lee and Jas. L. Jr. included) at that dinner they would have decided that other people love chicken beside the preachers!

We are under special obligations to Bros. Hornady and Mereherson for bringing two loads of corn, chickens, cotton seed, etc., etc. to us. Indeed this is the largest donation in kind that we have ever received. And Pleasant Hill church asked us to come to see them and give them an opportunity of giving. How you like that kind of help? That's genuine charity.

The following donations have been received:

From Shallow Ford Christian Church: W. D. Walker, 1 bu. corn; J. B. Gerringinger, 1 bu. corn; Mrs. D. R. Barber, 2 hens and 2 cans tomatoes; Mrs. Egbert Truitt, 7½ yds. bleaching, 18 prs. shoe laces, 3 spools thread; Dan Barber, 25 cts.; Miss Janie Cable, 35 cts.; Miss Daisy Truitt, 25 cts.; Miss Roxanna Thomas, 50 cts.; Mrs. Sarah Sams, 10 cts.; H. P. Tickle, 25 cts.; I. G. Pibbs $1.00; W. H. Truitt, 2 gal. molasses; J. B. Tickle, 3 gal. molasses and meat; Mrs. J. B. Gerringinger, 4 cans fruit and dried fruit; Mrs. F. A. Iseley, 1 coat and vest, 1 dress, 1 lb. butter, dried peaches and apples, seed corn.

From Mt. Auburn church:
Billie Hilliard, seed corn; W. W. Spain, horse apple trees; Geo. W. Ellington, 2½ bu. meal

From Pleasant Hill Church:
Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Stroud, $1.00 in coffee; Howard Stuart, 25c; Mrs. W. E. Overman, 15c; William Hodgen, 10c; Mrs. D. E. Pickett, 10c; Miss Fleta Waumack, 25c; Everett Stuart, 10c;

Rev. W. L. Wells, pastor.

We feel good to have so much encouragement and so many kind words and nice gifts.

With gratitude to God and thanks to man for the good gifts, I am Yours for work, Uncle Jim.

Crewe, Va., March 15, 1909.

Dear Unele Jim:

I enclose 15 cents, my dues for March. Hope you and all the cousins are well. Love to you all.

Your fond little niece,

Helen S. Foster,

T. Clifford Foster.

You and little brother I hope are having fine times together these nice spring days. Can he walk good yet?

Toro, Va., March 10, 1909.

Dear Unele Jim:

Enclosed please find my dime for this month. I am going to send my dues in the first of all the months. I hope the Orphanage children have gotten well of the measles.

With best wishes for you and the Orphanage, I remain,

Yours truly, Susie R. Watson.

All well, Susie. 'Tis much better to write before the month goes by. I'm sure you'll find it so.

Raleigh, N. C., March 6, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We will write and send our dues for March. We send our love to you and all the cousins.

Your little nieces,
Jessie Penny,
Pauline Penny.

To know that we have your love and best wishes along with the money, girls, is pleasant and encouraging.

Isle of Wight, Va., March 11, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am such a little fellow that I will have to get sister to write for me. Grandma gave me a dime today to send to the little orphans. Hope they are all well and happy this spring weather.

Lovingly, James F. Porter.

"Little fellows" make nice cousins, James, so we welcome you gladly.

Chapel Hill, N. C., March 14, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I want to join the band. I am a little boy ten years old. I have a little sister two and a half years old. I go to school and I am in the fourth grade.

I send my dues for March, 10c.

Yours truly,

William L. Lindsey.

You are welcome, William. Can't you bring little sister to the Corner too?

HOPEFUL.

In the Christian Sun of March 3rd, there was a "Notice" relative to placing a monument at the grave of Rev. J. C. Colley. Did you read it? I am sure many of you did. Well, what did you think about it? Are you favorable to this matter? Yes, I know some are. Already I have substantial evidence from several. Consequently, I am hopeful of success, which is already in sight. I am looking for a number of contributions within the next few weeks. Let those who are interested and expect to aid us in this worthy cause, fall in line with those who have already contributed. We want to push this matter rapidly to success. Send your contribution to

"THE WHOLE FAMILY."

The new translation (American Revised) of the Bible makes a break in the passage in Eph. 2:14-15; which it renders as follows:

"For this cause I bow my knees unto the Father, from whom every family in heaven and on earth is named."

I do not allude to the word family, concerning which there is discussion, but to the word every. The translation should be, the whole family, as it is in the old translation.

To make Paul say every family in heaven and on earth is named from the Father (meaning the heavenly Father), is to make him say untruth. There are some families on earth that are not even named from the real human father; saying nothing of the heavenly Father, to whom Paul bowed his knees.

Probably the translators were led into error by the fact that the Greek which they used omitted the article in this place; because the meaning of the Greek work pas, (every, or all, or whole), is usually guided by the presence or absence of the article. But it is not always so. There is another place in this same epistle of Paul (2:21) where the translators have made a similar mistake, making the passage to read as follows:

"Built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Christ Jesus himself being the chief corner stone; in whom each several building, fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God in the Spirit."

The old translation, however, had it right:

Ye "are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets; Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord," etc.

For the translators to change this, on account of the absence of the article, and make Paul teach that "every," or "each several building," would be "fitly framed together," and "grow into a holy temple in the Lord," was unnecessary; making Paul teach untruth. For many buildings do not grow unto a "holy temple in the Lord." To say they do is offensive. But Paul means the "whole building," of which Christ is the "chief corner stone." He is not the corner stone of gambling houses, nor of theaters, nor of temples of sin. He is the corner stone only of that one building of which Christians are "living stones;" that building which grows unto a holy temple in the Lord. Paul was speaking of the church of Christ as a whole, the whole building.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Sleeplessness

Sleeplessness is a result of exhausted nerve force. You must have sleep—it is nature's rebuilding period. It is the period in which she stores up strength and vigor. You will sleep well and awaken fresh, if you take Dr. Miles' Nervine. It brings sleep by soothing the tired nerves. Its invigorating effect is felt throughout the entire system.

"I used Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine for extreme nervousness, brought on by over-exhaustion. It soothed and strengthened my nerves. It enabled me to get restful sleep which I was unable to get before taking the Nervine. For nervous troubles I know of nothing that can equal it."

DR. JNO. H. BROOKS,
—DENTIST—

Nine years practice. Recent degree from Philadelphia Dental College and Garretson Hospital of Oral Surgery.

So in Ephesians 3:15 Paul did not mean that every family was named of God; but the "whole family" (the real family.)

See Col. 4:12, where the translators would have translated, "stand perfect and fully assured in every will of God," instead of "all the will of God," if they had used the method they did in Eph. 3:15 and Eph. 2:21 for the article is omitted in Col. 4:12. There are also other passages illustrating that the omission of the article does not always turn the Greek word pas from all, or the whole, into every.

The translators should have remembered that Paul was a Hebrew, of the tribe of Benjamin.

But, in the main, the new translation is better than the old one.

The Chapman Meetings.

called all the ministers in the room, old and young, pastors and theological students, from galleries, floor platform, to come and stand before him. They crowded around as well as they could. Then in a quiet but deeply impressive manner Dr. Chapman said:

"I do not set myself up to teach you. Far be it from me to do that. Many of you could teach me. But there are some things I know—I know. God has burned knowledge into me. I have learned it from scenes like that I saw last night. I have learned it where I have seen men flocking to Christ in hundreds, where I have seen them come alone—one by one. There is only one thing to preach to a lost world—Jesus. God can never use a minister until he has all there is of him. I want you to want Him, want Him so hard that perhaps it will kill you wanting Him. I want you all to say: 'From this moment I am all for God.'"

From every minister came the response: "From this moment I am for God!"

Then, while the ministers were still standing Dr. Chapman called to all Christian men and women to stand and repeat after him, "What you have said to the ministers I take to myself. I want Christ to fill me." Everybody was then asked to arise but only on condition that he felt and meant that he wanted to consecrate himself to the life that would be best for himself and that would make him most helpful to others. Practically the whole vast audience was on its feet and repeating the prayer of consecration. Dr. Conrad, pastor of Park Street church, then offered this prayer:

"We are Thine, O God. All we have and all we are is Thine. Thou art our Redeemer. Henceforth and forever we will all testify for Jesus. Grant that forever we may be true to our vow to Jesus. Holy Spirit, breathe upon us Thy power, breathe into our lives."

"Now I will say, 'Dear Lord, I give myself to Thee,'" said Dr. Chapman. "I want those ministers to reply 'I will.' I want the people on the floor to reply 'I will.' Then those in the balcony, finally those upstairs."

In unison each group replied as Dr. Chapman repeated his sentence for them. In increasing volume the "I will" rose from the people.

Dr. Chapman raised his hands in prayer. "Dear God," cried he, "we believe the angels have heard us. There must be new joy in Heaven. Our dead ones must have heard it and rejoice. Send us out to live as Jesus would have us live. This day, Feb. 3, 1909, means, take more of my life, possess it all. It means that we will live in the home as a consecrated father or mother, that the business man will reflect it in his office, that the student will live as Thou wouldst have him live, that the minister from tonight, more than ever, will reflect the spirit of Jesus, that he will pray more, work more, seek more souls, be about Thy business day and night,

The Centennial of Religious Journalism

EDITED BY J. PRESSLEY BARRETT, D. D.

Editor Herald of Gospel Liberty

This is without doubt the most generally interesting publication sent out by the Christians. Its centennial, historical and denominational features make it not only unique in character, but interesting as well. From beginning to end it claims the interested attention of the reader.

We have not space here to give the table of contents, but suffice it to say, that beginning with the "Discussion of the conditions which made the organization of the Christian Church a necessity," the reader will follow with interest and profit, the "History of the Herald of Gospel Liberty," "The One Hundred Editorial Gems," "Historical Sketches of One-Hundred-Year-Old Churches," "A symposium—A Hundred Years of Progress," setting forth in well prepared papers the development of the various enterprises of the Christian Church, and with a heart full of optimistic hope he will peruse "The Future Outlook of the Christian Church."

And all this, and more, in a book of nearly 650 pages, handsomely bound, with gold titles, while the price is only $1.00 for cloth binding and $2.00 for Morocco, with your name printed in gold. Postage, 15 cents extra. Send your order at once to live as Jesus Christ would have us all live."

We have given details of this meeting because it indicates the fundamental character of the evangelistic campaign. The great object is to reach the unchurched, but to reach them effectively and so they will stay reached. Already many hundreds have professed conversion and the evangelists are hopeful of reaching thousands. It is a union movement of all the Protestant churches and they should all share in its quickening results. That means that Boston itself should be a better city and its people a better people after the campaign is over than they were when it began.—The Morning Star, Boston, Mass.

—Ex-President Roosevelt sailed Tuesday 22d on the steamer Hamburg for his East African hunting trip of fifteen months.

—The President always takes the oath of office kissing the open Bible and whether he had selected it or not, Mr. Taft was fortunate in the passage that he kissed, it being at the place where Solomon's prayer when he succeeded David on the throne of Israel is recorded in these words 1 Kings 3:9: "Give thy servant therefore an understanding heart to judge thy people, that I may discern between good and evil; for who is able to judge this thy great people."

Gomer.

Thomas Gomer departed this life at his home, near Holland, Va., March 5, 1909, aged 87 years, 6 months and 2 days. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at the home and the remains laid away in the family cemetery near by. He leaves six children, W. B. and R. E. Gomer, Portsmouth, Va.; A. T. Gomer, Holland, Va.; J. J. Gomer, Whaleyville, Va.; Mrs. J. T. Milteer, Holland, Va., and Mrs. Floyd Fanny, Gates, N. C., and 29 grandchildren. The deceased had long been a member of Holy Neck Christian church and enjoyed personal religion to a marked degree. He spent much time in reading his Bible and hymn book and in singing and praying. When the death summons came he was found upon his knees. May his memory ever be precious to his children and grandchildren and may they seek to emulate his virtues.

N. G. Newman.

Brown.

Mrs. Savilia E. Brown was born May 15, 1832, and departed this life Feb. 14, 1909. She embraced religion at an early age, and until called to her reward she was a faithful member of Pleasant Ridge Church, and was always solicitous for the success of her Master's cause.

On Nov. 11, 1852 she married the lamented Rev. W. R. Brown well known to our people during his active ministry, and was a devoted wife, sharing with her husband in the joys of their happy married life, and helping him bear his burdens. This union was blessed with nine children, four of whom, M. C., Orlando, Mrs. Mary E. Cox and Mrs. Sallie E. Coddell, preceded their mother to the spirit land. John C., L. W., E. W., W. H. H. and Mrs. Eliza J. Parks await the summons to meet father and mother. Upon the lives of her children are stamped the sweet influences of her beautiful character.

Truly a mother in Israel has departed, and her kindly presence and words of comfort and encouragement will be missed by many to whom she was a blessing.

Many relatives and friends were present when funeral services were conducted from Pleasant Ridge church and her body laid to rest by the side of her husband.

May God's presence and comfort sustain the bereaved ones.

R. L. Williamson.

Holland.

Jesse W. Holland died at his home in Holland, Va., March 10, 1909, aged 38 years. The funeral services were conducted at Holland Christian Church by the writer and the remains buried in the Holland cemetery. The deceased leaves a widow, three small children, father and mother and three sisters and one brother.—Mrs. E. T. Holland and Mrs. J. R. Holland, Holland, Va.; Mrs. J. G. Williams, Suffolk, Va., and Hardy Holland, Suffolk, Va.

Bro. Holland had been a member of Holy Neck Church from boyhood and was almost universally esteemed as a good man. His integrity and faithfulness had brought him success in business, while his quiet, humble and consistent life had established him in the affection and esteem of the community. We extend our sincerest sympathy to all the bereaved, but especially to his widow and children and aged parents.

THE NEWS OF A WEEK.

—President Roosevelt leaves this week for his African trip to hunt lion, tigers and elephants. His itinerary is for 15 months.

—Announcements are issued that the forty-ninth Annual State Fair will be held at Raleigh, October 18th, to 23rd inclusive, 1909.

—The Corporation Commission of Virginia has decided upon a 2½ cents per mile passenger rate for that state, instead of the 2 cents rate in effect the past year. The new rate goes into effect April 1.

—Distinguished medical scientists and experts in convention at Washington, D. C., March 17, declared and emphasized that alcohol had no therapeutic uses and that it will be ultimately eliminated as a drug.

—The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals has decided that the Ward law is constitutional and that the towns in that state voting dry, and whose elections were contested, must remain "dry."

—Rear Admiral Schley paid a visit to the White House recently to pay his respects to President Taft. The Rear Admiral had not been to the White House before since President Roosevelt took the Sampson side of the Santiago sea fight controversy.

—Rev. J. William Jones, D. D., known throughout the country as "Chaplain" and as "Historian of the Confederacy" because of his intimate association with Lee and Jackson, died at the home of his son in Columbas, Ga., March 17. Dr. Jones was an eloquent platform speaker, a good preacher and ready writer, and was thoroughly familiar with the ins and outs of the Confederacy.

—New York has a bill before its Legislature legalizing the opening of licensed saloons Sundays from 1 to 11 o'clock p. m. Some preachers (?) advocate the law because, as they say, present Sunday closing laws are not enforced. It is always the same story: abolish saloon laws because saloons are so mean they evade and violate all laws made against them.

—The sister-ships, Mauretania and Lusitania of the Cunard lines continue to make and to break all records across the Atlantic. On a trip recently the former covered 686 knots, about 792 statute miles from noon of one day to noon of the next, a speed of thirty-two miles an hour, as fast as the ordinary railroad train goes. The average for the whole trip across was nearly 30 miles an hour. No other ship ever crossed the Atlantic so quickly. The best previous record was made by the Lusitania.

GIPSY SMITH: HIS LIFE AND WORK. By Himself.

This is a grand record of achievement. A poor lad, born in a gipsy camp, has been used as an instrument in God's hands to awaken multitudes throughout the world to spiritual consciousness. He tells in this book of 330 pages his rich and varied experiences from birth through years of success in soul-winning. The style of the book is not boastful; it is a humble attempt to satisfy the persistent requests of his friends for a history of his romantic career. The narrative is prefaced by appreciative introductions by Dr. Alexander McLaren and G. Campbell Morgan. Several illustrations add to the interest of the book.

We offer "Gipsy Smith" handsomely bound in cloth as a premium for two new subscriptions to The Christian Sun at $1.50 each; or for one new subscription and 45 cents additional.

The book alone will be sent to any address for $1.10, postpaid.

Mr. J. T. Shuptrine, Savannah, Ga.

Dear Sir—Last winter my mother had eczema all over her. Could not rest day or night for the stinging, burning, itching. She tried various kinds of salves and ointments but they did her no good at all. She happened to see Tetterine advertised. We ordered one box and tried it on her arm. It did her so much good we showed it to our doctor. He immediately ordered one-half dozen. She used it as directed twice a day. It did her so much good we ordered one dozen more. After using it several weeks she was completely cured. I can certainly recommend Tetterine as it is a sure cure for eczema. I really believe it saved my mother's life.

Yours truly, Miss Minnie Cromatrite.

Tetterine cures Eczema, Tetter, Ring Worm, Ground Itch, Infant's Sore Head, Pimples, Boils, Rough Scaly Patches on the Face, Old Itching Sores, Dandruff, Cankered Scalp, Bunions, Corns, Chilblains, and every form of Skin Disease. ## EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Alamance Battle Ground.—About seven miles south of Elon College, marked by one lonely monument, but not otherwise designated or preserved, is Alamance Battle Ground. Here on May 16, 1771 about 2,000 "Regulators" met the royalist Governor Tryon in armed resistance to "excessive taxes, dishonest sheriffs and extortionate fees." A battle was fought in which Tryon, while victorious, because the Regulators were not half armed and poorly organized, lost seventy men and the patriots only nine "with many wounded." This was four years before Lexington and Concord and while seemingly unsuccessful it showed the mind of the patriots, and was, in reality fought out on and for the same principle as the later battles of the Revolution. It was a patriotic effort in behalf of justice and against tyranny, for liberty against bonds, and for home and fireside against invasion and oppression. There was no battle of all the Revolution that followed more patriotic in purpose, more loyal in motive, or more heroic in action.

Alamance Battle Ground marks the spot where as brave and heroic men fought and fell as any in all our broad land.

It is more than fitting, therefore, that the Legislature, but now adjourned, incorporated the Alamance Battle Ground Company for the purpose of preserving and adorning the grounds on and over which the battle of Alamance was fought on the sixteenth day of May (May 16, 1771) and the grounds on and over which the battle known as "Pyle's Hacking Match," was fought on the twenty-fifth of February (February 25, 1781) and of commemorating the virtues of the brave men who struggled there, by the erection of monuments, tombstones, or other memorials, and by beautifying the grounds.

For carrying out the purpose and objects of this act the sum of $100 for the year 1909, and the sum of $100 for the year 1910 was appropriated out of funds in the hands of the State treasurer not otherwise appropriated.

It is to be hoped that the Alamance Battle Ground Company now duly incorporated, and with at least an initial sum in hand will do much to adorn and commemorate the spot where these brave men fell fighting in defense of the country and their rights. It is pity indeed that the memorable spot has not been better cared for from long, long ago. No country can be fertile of heroes, statesmen, patriots that gives little heed and pays poor tribute to the great and the noble who have lived, sacrificed and fallen.

Race Characteristics.—Alcohol has different effects upon people of different temperaments. Some editor, who has observed racial distinctions in this regard, says, to the Englishman alcohol brings repose and comfort: to the Frenchman it gives excitement and interest: to the German it is anesthetic: to the Italian courage and force: to the Irishman sense of enjoyment: to the American a feeling of capacity and power. To one and all, if diligently pursued, drunkenness, poverty, ruin.

A certain traveler made a classification as follows: Give a glass of alcohol with a fly in it to a Spaniard, and he will hurl the glass, liquor and all, against the wall: to a Frenchman and he will daintily remove the fly and drink the liquor: to a German, and he will drink the wine and leave the fly: give to a Russian and he will drink liquor, fly and all. The American drinks his too quick for a fly to find it, or without regard to flies and other poison.

Regulating Railroads.—There are pending now fifty or more bills before the Kansas Legislature, so recent newspaper statements say, to regulate the railroads. And Kansas is only keeping pace with other States in this particular. The National House of Representatives recently called upon the Interstate Commerce Commission, to know what increase or decrease of railway rates had taken place since the Hepburn Act was passed many months ago. The Commission replies to Congress that nearly 600,000 rates, classifications and schedules varying in size from one page to seven hundred feet were filed with it from July, 1906 to January, 1909, and that it will be necessary to compare many million separate items before the Commission can inform the House what increase in rate, if any, has taken place.

Recently the Erie railway of New York asked the Public Service Commission of that State to be allowed to issue bonds to pay interest on outstanding indebtedness. It took the Commission two months of investigation and deliberation to say whether the Erie should or should not issue said bonds. This page might be filled with similar examples showing the intricacies and enormities of managing a railroad. Yet there are thousands who think they know all about railroading and could regulate them to perfection single handed and alone. The conceit, and the ignorance, of some of us are past comprehension.

Books.—In an address at Atlanta, Ga., President Eliot is quoted: "In the course of a public lecture I said some time ago that a shelf three feet long will hold enough books to give a person a liberal education if they be read ten minutes each day."

Immediately Dr. Eliot said he was flooded with letters asking for the list of the books he would name and replied: "I didn't have time to select them, but now that I am about to retire from the presidency of Harvard, I intend to devote my time to their selection, only I have decided to make the shelf five feet long."

It is not the number of books one reads: but how well one reads those books. Abraham Lincoln acquired a fine education with less than a half dozen books.

President Eliot's list will be valuable and will be awaited with interest for it will name the few best books, and one always likes to feel that one is acquainted with "the best books."

—The Amalgamated Iron, Steel, and Tin Workers Association decided through its executive committee at Reading, Pa., March 27, to reject the proposed reduction in wages and go on a strike. The action affects nearly 10,000 workmen.

FROM THE FIELD.

OUR WESTERN LETTER.

Dear Southern People:—

It is more than two years since I have written a communication directly for the dear old Christian Sun, in whose service I spent more than twelve years. I cannot say that it was always a delightful service, for it had its trials and its burdens, but I can say, in the main, they were happy years, and I trust among the most fruitful for good, except possibly the years of my pastoral labors in Norfolk. Of course, I cannot say that any of them were unusually fruitful for good, but as I look upon those days now, they impress me about that way. It was not my intention to cut off my "Sun Letters" when I accepted the work here in Dayton, but our intentions are not always carried out—the pressure in the work here was so heavy that I did not feel that I could add my letter to the Sun and so the days and weeks and the months have come and gone, till more than two years have elapsed. By the goodness of the Lord, I am still in the land of the living and doing what seems to me about my best. I cannot cease to love our work in the South—it has had a strong place in my love for many years, and I believe it will never grow less. On the contrary, I see much need, urgent need, for that work to go on in greater power than ever. There is much that needs to be done for the spread of the Gospel. Work as it seems to me that no one else will do, and by reason of the fact that you are peculiarly situated on vantage ground where you can do the work in a way to produce best results. May our Father help you to do that work fully in a way that will glorify Him and bless men in our day and generation. It is a great opportunity.

The Southern branch of the Christian Church has won its vantage ground and I hope she will hold it, and as she holds it, gain more and more in her qualifications for larger service and a deeper loyalty to the truth. Her strong points in this direction (I think I see them more clearly now than I did when I was among you) are: A free uniformity in thought and purpose, a definite government and a systematic way of doing things, and a faithful standing together in the work in hand.

The work in the North and West (in this sense the North includes the East) we have many difficulties, but we are advancing in some respects. In the matter of building up our educational institutions there is encouragement, for while one or two of our schools in the further West are having a hard pull, even they are doing some noble self-sacrificing work, work that will be like the bread cast upon the waters—it will show for itself in days to come. We thank God for men and women who work hard, making many sacrifices and carrying many burdens for the cause of Christ. They shall not lose their reward—no, a thousand times. No, if the promises of the Bible are to be believed, as we feel they are. The work at Defiance College is doing nicely. I saw Dr. E. Morrell to-day (he is pastor of our church at Defiance and also gives instruction in the college courses) and he tells me that Defiance is doing nobly—has this year 240 pupils. This college has forged ahead wonderfully in the last few years under the presidency of Rev. P. W. McReynolds. Trowbridge Hall (one of the finest dormitories for young ladies in the State of Ohio, so we have been told) has been built and furnished, and although it was burned about two years ago, yet under the wise and energetic management of President McReynolds it has been rebuilt and on a larger scale than originally. Then under the work of President McReynolds the Christian Biblical Institute was removed from Stanfordville, N. Y., and located at Defiance on the college campus. For the Institute a handsome new building has been erected, adding greatly to the appearance of the campus and greatly to the influence of the college. Dr. J. B. Weston, so well known to many of our Southern people, though about eighty-five years old, is still at the head of the Institute as President. The two institutions seem to work together admirably.

Union Christian College, Merom, Ind., under the presidency of Rev. O. B. Whitaker, D. D., is beginning to move up gradually. A few years ago local conditions operated against the success and usefulness of the college. It was while Dr. Jones was president of this college that he departed this life, as many thought, due at least in part, to overwork. Since his successor has gotten the work in hand, a great change has been wrought, and the college is now on the way to larger things. Not only is the patronage building up, but the people begin to believe in its assured usefulness under Dr. Whitaker's management. Only recently one church gave the college $900, then one brother gave it $1,000, and then quickly a man and his wife gave the college $7,000. Rev. G. D. Lawrence is the field agent for the college, and is pushing the canvass with energy and success. I wish our brethren in the South could meet these two college presidents, though not at all alike, they are both doing a great work. President McReynolds is a very quiet man—rarely ever appears before the public to beg money, but he is a thinker and a worker of no ordinary ability. On the other hand, President Whitaker is a man of great magnetism as a speaker, electrifies you from the pulpit, and carries the people with him as by storm.

Palmer College, LeGrand, Iowa, is doing a great work under the presidency of Rev. Erey Kerr, an Ohio man. It has a pretty good start in the way of endowment and the work is hopeful. Mr. Kerr is a growing man.

The other two colleges, Kansas Christian College at Lincoln, Kansas, under the presidency of Rev. Geo. R. Stoner, and Weaubleau College at Weaubleau, Mo., under the presidency of Rev. Fred Cooper, are both having a hard struggle, but they are braving the storm, and expecting better days. They need help, and not only so, we believe they deserve help.

Our church work is moving along fairly well. We need more ministers, churches, a great many of them, cannot get pastors. Of course, this is a great drawback to the work, and yet we are making progress. Just now we are in the midst of the annual collection for Foreign Missions. We cannot, as yet, tell how the results will show up, but the Foreign Secretary, Rev. M. T. Morrill, is hopeful and pressing the fight with all the power he can command. The work in the foreign field is gaining, if we may but be able to support its needs.

The work in North Dakota is doing finely. Bro. Hall is taking well, and already they are needing another man. The mission at Surry has become a self-sustaining church and takes Bro. Hall for all of his time.

Reports from Madrid, Iowa, indicate that Bro. Harward is doing well and the people like him very much.

Now that I have gotten started it seems as if I cannot quit, but I must and I will, and yet I have not said near what I would like to say, but your patience is exhausted, so good night for a while.

J. Pressley Barrett.

Dayton, O., March 22, 1909.

A STORM.

In Georgia we have had, during the past few weeks, a number of wind storms and heavy rains. But last Monday, the 22nd instant, had no appearance of stormy weather. The day was fair, the sky blue and the sun shone bright. There was nothing indicative of a storm until about two hours after sun-set, when the sound of rushing feet was heard on the pavement without. Human voices were also distinctly heard. The sound drew nearer. What could all this mean? An interval of silence and then a mighty rush against our door. A wind storm? No. A cyclone coming? By no means. It is only members of North Highlands Christian church coming to pound their pastor. This was a storm of human beings and I like that kind of a storm, too. It blew open our kitchen door and struck the pantry with great force. My! the good things to eat that were piled in the pantry, on the kitchen table and then the floor had to take its share of the burden. Such things as flour, meal, meat, lard, sugar, salt, coffee (we use coffee only when "company comes"), soda, baking powder, pickles, preserves, potatoes, cereals, butter, eggs, canned fruits and vegetables were left and now our pantry shelves groan beneath their load.

A storm of this kind has a great deal of significance. It pushes the clouds of despondency from the pastor's pathway. It drives away darkness, disperses the shadows, dispels the gloom and sweeps joy into the pastor's heart and brings gladness to his home. It draws the pastor closer to his people and the people closer to their pastor and brings all of us nearer Christ.

May the Lord richly bless each one who remembered us so kindly and pounded us so generously. In our hearts we are deeply appreciative of this act of kindness and unto Him from whom all blessings flow, we bow in thankfulness, at the same time asking for guidance that we may do more efficient service for His glory.

G. O. Lankford,

Columbus, Ga., Mar. 23, 1909.

FROM PORTO RICO.

I have just returned from a visit to Ponce, where I attended the Christian Conference. It was my first attendance since reaching the mission field. It was one of the best conferences I ever attended. I enjoyed it so much. Although I could not understand their language, I did know that the Holy Spirit was in our midst. The closing session was the best one, as at the close the invitation was given to all who wanted to accept Christ to come forward, and I think a dozen, both young and old, went forward without another word. One man looked to be at least 70 years old. There was no excitement to cause one to think it was just enthusiasm. But to the contrary the whole room was filled with His presence. It did my soul good to be there to hear and see them witnessing for Jesus. It was said to be the best meeting ever held in Ponce. I think all who attended went away feeling it was good to be there.

I ask all who may read this to join us in prayer that we may have a real revival in Porto Rico. While in Ponce I visited some places of importance. Through the kindness of Mrs. D. P. Barrett I went through St. Luke's hospital: it is situated on a beautiful mountain top overlooking the sea. It has all modern conveniences, good physicians and nurses. I also visited the schools. There was good discipline in all. Most of the teachers are Americans. I think Porto Rico is on the up-grade, both spiritually and financially. It is wonderful to look at the orange trees, some laden with their golden fruit, and some in full bloom. The coffee groves are in full bloom and their snow-white blossoms fill the air with their fragrance.

I have only been in Porto Rico since November but must say the longer I stay the better I like. God has blessed me in casting my lot with one of the most consecrated women I ever knew. I enjoy the work in the Orphanage a great deal more than I expected. It is a real joy to be able to work here in the Master's service. My! when I read of the terrible lizzards in the States it makes me think the climate more delightful than ever. As Mrs. T. A. Jones said about Florida, this is a land of "fruits, flowers and vegetables."

I am glad to note from the Norfolk letter that the Third Church is moving on nicely with splendid congregations and good preaching. I would be glad to see a letter in the Sun from Bro. Thompson. [Many Sun readers would, but requests so far have not availed.—Ed Sun]. I enjoy the Sun so much, but a letter from my home church and pastor would brighten its pages considerably.

We have with us one of Ponce's native workers for a two weeks' visit. I am glad she can be with us a while. She is so persecuted by her family because she is a Christian. She is a faithful, devoted worker.

I feel I can't close without again mentioning the great need of a Christian church in Ponce. Let all Sun readers make it a subject of prayer that money may be raised to build the much needed church.

Yours in the Master's name,

Susie Turpin.

IDEAS.

The mind is full of ideas—good ones, bad ones, and all sorts as far as it is able to conceive them, but selecting the best, and using suitable words to express them clearly and attractively is a great consideration. To know the meaning of those words and their relation to other words and the subject is often very difficult to determine. So then, ideas often crowd the mind and want to fly out on a suitable conveyance of words, and for the want of them have to be crowded out and forgotten.

The association of ideas brings out many charming reflections, rich clusters of helpful thinking for our selection and use. This exercise is what the mind finds pleasure in doing. We had better think the thoughts of others and express them in our own style than not think at all. In fact, all the thoughts which come in our minds some one else may have thought, written or spoken. There is therefore but few new thoughts. Old thoughts worked over in a new form is often done. Ecclesiastes, or the preacher, says, The thing that hath been is that which shall be; and that which is done, is that which shall be done: and there is no new thing under the sun. Is there any thing whereof it may be said, See, this is new? It hath been already of old time, which was before us. Noah said, Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with a span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance? Who hath directed the Spirit of the Lord, or Leing his counsellor hath taught him?

The same material exists now that was formed in the creation of the world, it has had many chemical and philosophical changes but exists somewhere in all its internal and external forms. There are constant changes in some way going on all the time, but the same weight and measure that God gave to the world holds good today. What a great privilege you have of using the things which God has made; of living the life He has given; of looking upon the broad expanse of the universe and admiring its superlative beauty; of walking up and down the illimitable heights of its greatness, and of thinking the thoughts of God after Him! Little as we are, there are sparks of His divinity in us, and when we but touch the hem of His garment the light of salvation is turned on, and we are made to shine with the light, with the light of God.

There are so many pleasing and consoling subjects for investigation and consideration we often feel confused in the midst of them, and fail to grasp those which are most pleasing and profitable. Yet there is such a variety we ought never to be delayed in choosing suitable ones. In company with your brightest, purest and best thoughts you must never feel lonely, for they will richly and rightly reward the careful and faithful

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Under the caption of "Berkley Letter" pastor M. L. Bryant writes sanely and sensibly of a topic of general and profound interest.

—Here is a paragraph, going the rounds that contains point: "The whole duty of the whole church is to give the whole Gospel to the whole world."

—Rev. T. A. Pounds, Clayton, N. C., in renewing for The Sun speaks a gracious word, "We await The Sun every week anxiously. It brings us messages of hope, faith and good cheer. I pray God that there may be no clouds to over shadow our dear Christian Sun."

—There is great and pressing need for a house of worship in Ponce, Porto Rico. Shall we continue our mission efforts there in a rented house, or shall we build a suitable place for service? This question is pressing for answer. Dr. Manning, of Norfolk, is planning to help us answer it in the only right way. Read his letter this week and next. It is a clarion call.

—Fail not to read "Norfolk Letter" this week. Dr. Manning is one of our most loyal laymen interested always in all good things that make for church progress and the advancement of the Kingdom. He has a burden on his heart that he is laying before Sun readers. Will we help him share, and so relieve, that burden? It is worthy and should be thought on.

—North Carolina loses to Virginia another great scholar and distinguished citizen in the person of Dr. Charles Alphonso Smith who resigns the chair of English at Chapel Hill to accept a similar position in the University of Virginia. Virginia's great gain is certainly North Carolina's sad loss in this, Dr. Smith being one of the most eminent and useful of our University's scholars and teachers.

—Bishop Candler of the M. E. Church, South, is set against the "live like Christ" movement started in several cities recently. At the Baltimore conference, March 27th, the Bishop said: "All these so-called movements to make people live like what they think Christ would live have been failures. From Thomas A. Kempis down, all who have tried such plans have ended by becoming morbid. These campaigns did no good."

Bishop Candler pleaded for a personal religion and was specially severe in condemning ministers who preach series of sermons on English literature and kindred subjects.

—This news item comes from The Burlington News of March 24:

The name of Rev. P. H. Fleming of this city, will be placed before county school board for Superintendent of Public Instruction, by his friends. Mr. Fleming has had a considerable amount of experience in teaching, is a scholarly gentleman, and will fill the position with honor. His name was mentioned two years ago, but no active steps were taken to secure his election.

We do not know whether Rev. W. S. Long, the present incumbent, will stand for re-election. We suppose he will. He has made a faithful officer, and has been very diligent in his work.

—There is no sadder comment on the ravages and ruin of liquor than the actual facts as printed in the daily press. Every day, sometimes several in one day, dispatches like this appear:

Pittsburg, Pa., March 27.—After firing two bullets at his wife, pointing a revolver at his mother-in-law, when she attempted to help her daughter, and trying vainly to get his little daughter out of a neighbor's house, that he might kill her, Harry Smith, aged 31 years, a motorman living at Coraopolis, near here, today sent a bullet through the brain of his six-year-old son, Russell, killing the boy instantly, and then shot himself through the head, dying in a few moments. The cause of the tragedy is said to be liquor.

—This sad story from The Burlington News, relating an incident that occurred within a short distance from Elon College on a Sunday recently, when the churches were open and the gospel invitation was being extended, is but another witness to that eternal truth that "the way of the transgressor is hard." For warning, and for pity read: "The facts as given before the inquest are as follows: On Sunday afternoon Faucette, Becom and some other men went to a tobacco barn on the place. They had a jug of whiskey and imbibed quite frequently. Along in the afternoon the whiskey began to take effect, and they lay down in the barn. The others left as night came on. Becom and Faucett remained all night. Next morning the little son of Faucette went down to awaken the men. He turned his father over and was horrified to find him dead. He ran back to the house and notified his mother. In the meantime, as soon as Becom woke up and seeing his companion dead, he got up and left. He was asked why he left, and stated that he did not care to stay there with a dead man.

After examination of the different witnesses a verdict was returned that deceased came to his death by using whiskey excessively.

The deceased was about 50 years of age and leaves a wife and family."

Shall we never, never learn that temptation is dangerous, evil habits ruinous and that "the wages of sin is death?" May God help the widow and the orphans in their bereaved home to a life of love and truth, of peace and happiness.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

The social meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society was held on Thursday evening with Mrs. W. A. Harper. All who were present bear ample testimony to the pleasure furnished on the occasion.

The Ladies' Reading Club went on Friday P. M. with Mrs. Wilson. This club furnishes to the ladies an hour a week for social and intellectual recuperation and is highly appreciated by its members and friends.

Sunday afternoon from three to five o'clock the rules of the college were suspended, as is the custom at the expiration of the examination period, and the young people were allowed this time for social enjoyment.

The Athletic Association is to give an entertainment on the evening of April first. The boys usually get up something of real merit on these occasions and we are sure this will be highly enjoyable too. Mrs. Wilson has charge and is doing the training.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered yesterday at close of Dr. Atkinson's sermon. It was indeed a spiritual part and uplift to the soul desirous of a nearer walk with God. In the evening the Christian Endeavor Society held its monthly missionary meeting.

The Sunday-school decided to send two delegates to Concord to the State Convention. It also took steps looking towards the meeting of the young people's societies of the Christian Church South which is to be held here in the beginning of the commencement week.

The examinations, which have just closed, seem to have been a period for which our student body was well prepared. There was an appreciable improvement in the records made. Some of course were not satisfied, some did not do justice to themselves but all things considered there is much to encourage both student and teacher. J. T. C.

NORFOLK LETTER.*For a Church Building In Ponce.

I desire to discuss the above subject under the following heads:

- 1st. Is it needed, and if so, why?
- 2nd. What will be the cost?
- 3rd. Can we raise the money, and if so, how?

1st. There can be but one answer to the question as to whether a church building is needed in Ponce for our work, and that is a decided YES!

Now as to the why. There are a great many reasons why; I shall, for lack of space, give only a few of them.

It is the principal city on the island. Our mission work was started from there. It is the logical center of our work on the island. There is being made a constant expenditure of money for rent, something for which there is nothing left to show, the mission having spent about $2,000.00 already in this way. It is needed for the comfort of our workers, both missionaries and natives. It would give an air of permanency to the work that does not exist today; were our workers to leave the field today there would soon be nothing left to show they had been there, and I think everything considered they have done and are doing a remarkable work. It is natural with the natives to look about and if they see other denominations with good church buildings, showing stability and permanency, for them to be inclined to cast their lot with these people instead of with us, and can you blame them? The Baptist, Methodist and United Brethren, doing work there, all have creditable buildings on lots costing from $3,000.00 to $4,500.00 and buildings costing from $10,000.00 to 12,000.00. We do not necessarily need a building as expensive as these, but if we are to succeed in Ponce we must build a church house to meet the needs of the field.

Now as to the second question, What will it cost? Brother D. P. Barrett, our missionary on the field, says that a lot may be secured that will meet the need for from $2,500.00 to 3,000.00; that a church such as needed can be built for about $6,000.00; that to buy the lot, build and equip for service will require about $9,000.00. Can we raise the money? YES.

This letter I fear will get to be too long, but next week if you will take the trouble to look up this column, you will find an answer to the last half of that third question and I will tell you in that, how I propose that we do it, so as not to interfere with any present work, and by the way, I have some real good news for you in that connection that probably will be a pleasant surprise for you as it was for me.

J. W. Manning.

BERKLEY LETTER.

We have made considerable improvements in our house of worship since my last letter to the Sun. In a meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society it was agreed that the entire house, including furniture, needed a new coat of paint and varnish. A committee consisting of Messrs. John Cuthrell, George Frey, Jesse Mercer was appointed to receive bids. The contract was let to Bro. W. A. Johnson who went to work at once with the best painters, and in three weeks turned over to us what we are almost persuaded to call a new house. The walls were finished in a dull buff, stenciled at the top in dark brown and finished at the bottom in variegated aluminum. The ceiling and wainscoting were finished in natural wood effect, while the pews and chancel were cleaned and recoated in the original clear hard finish. In the little round window situated just above the pulpit, Bro. Johnson painted a very beautiful design of the "Cross and Crown." The carpet was taken up and Bro. Frey cleaned this at his own expense. Then a class room and the pastor's study had to be recarpeted and furnished with different things which the ladies presented at once, to whom I am thankful indeed. And if it is not taking too much of the Sun's valuable space I would like to stop my letter here long enough to thank the ladies and gentlemen who worked for almost a whole week without charge, replacing furniture in order that we might have services in the church on the 20th inst.

The main auditorium has been pronounced by several outsiders to be one of the prettiest in town, and we believe so too.

If there is any place on earth people should take holy pride in, it should be that place where they assemble for sacred worship. Silver, gold and the cedars of Lebanon are not too costly to adorn the tabernacle of our God. It is strange indeed, that some people in all sections of this intelligent land allow the tempter to let them believe a neat, clean and up-to-date house of worship is exceedingly sinful. That it's all for show, savoring of the worldly and a petting of foolish pride. Why not let us recognize that "The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof;" and that when we manifest a spirit to accumulate so much of this "fulness" for our own profit in the form of riches, lavish places of merchandise and gorgeous homes; we make a mock of our heavenly inheritance, if we balk, when it comes to making the church as good as, or better than, these.

What is it, but rankest selfishness to refuse to take part in breaking the box (of beautiful churches) at the Master's feet? This is an age of Christian art and it should naturally find its greatest expression in the building where the people assemble for sacred worship and renewed inspiration.

Let us as members of the great Christian church, swing out along this line of erecting better and more beautiful houses of worship.

We are now planning to begin a revival about April 18th. Pray for success.

M. L. Bryant.

THE BLOOD.

There is not a little talk of a "blood religion." We are told that blood shed on Calvary could do no good now; that ours is an age of culture, refinement, ethical development, and that blood jars upon our senses. If we are to have peace and pursue it, these esthetic ones tell us, we must not mention blood. What our age needs is not blood, but beauty.

We have not anywhere found a finer answer to all this than the closing paragraphs of a recent utterance by Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, published in The Record of Christian Work for April. Dr. Morgan goes to the heart of the subject in this convicting and convincing fashion:

A spurious, latter-day refinement, which objects to the mention of blood, is both sickly and sinful. A deeper sentiment would be conscious that the awful blood-shedding of the Son of God is the most terrible revelation of the meaning of sin, and is in itself proof of the dire necessity for such means of salvation. Do not let us forget this. I want to utter this with all the solemnity of conviction. I pity from my heart the man who tells me he objects to the phrasing concerning blood. I pity him, for he is suffering from a soft, sentimental ignorance of his own heart, and ignorance of the actual deceitfulness and heinousness of sin.

They say that the Cross of Jesus is vulgar! I know it. Never was there anything so vulgar in human history as the Cross of Jesus! But where is the vulgarity? It is in the sin that mauled Him and put Him there. It is your vulgarity. It is my vulgarity. It is the vulgarity that lies and cheats, that

—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

Remember the Convention at Elon College May 29-31.

If the Young People's Convention, May 29-31, is to be largely a convention of "ways and means"—ways of organizing the young people into the most successful Christian work, and means of carrying forward that work, we should have, from week to week, paragraphs for this column, from persons who are interested in "ways and means."

Send the Editor of this Department some suggestions arising from such questions as, What benefits can the individual get by attending the Young People's Convention? What benefits can the convention get from the individual who attends? How may this convention affect the various Sunday-school conventions of the Southern Christian Convention? How can it be of benefit to local Sunday-schools? What part should Christian Endeavor societies play in the Convention? Should the Convention seek to promote Young People's Missionary societies? What ought to be its attitude towards the general enterprises of the church? How far should it enter into the work of actual training of young people for church leadership, and in moral and civic righteousness? How far ought this Convention go in dealing with the social life of Christian young people? Ought it undertake any educational work or lecture courses such as Y. M. C. A.'s and Y. W. C. A.'s carry on? How much attention is to be given to the question of evangelistic work?

Write in just a few sentences your opinion about some one, or more, of these questions, and of other questions pertinent to "ways and means," and let us have them for publication.

The young people's movement is not a spasmodic whim of the Southern Christian Convention. It is on the other hand, a natural product of the needs, both of the church and of the young people themselves. The church needs their organized aid in the tremendous battle it is waging against sin. They need the vital aid of the church in their personal struggle against the same enemy. As I think of the hundreds of young people I know and have known, I can count off on my fingers dozens who, have lost out—sad spectacle—because they quit the church. I count, likewise, dozens of churches that are putting up a poor fight, largely, because the Christian young people lend no reinforcement by organized, trained effort.

The growth of this young people's movement will be slow or rapid, in the immediate future, according as it is agitated or not, in the various churches. Then, let the work of agitation go on till the possibilities of the movement shall be felt everywhere, in every church.

C. E. CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the North Carolina Christian Endeavor Union will be held this year in the First Presbyterian church of Winston-Salem. April 23-25. A very interesting and helpful program is being prepared, and every Christian Endeavor society in North Carolina is urged to send as large a delegation of members as possible to the convention, and a cordial invitation is extended to pastors of all denominations to be present. Rev. Francis E. Clark, D. D., President of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, and founder of the society, will be present, and this fact will add much to the interest of the convention. "Christ and I" will be the general theme of the convention, and the importance of this companionship will be emphasized at every session. The promise is a successful convention in the interest of Christ and the church.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON FOR APRIL 11.

A Few Suggestions.

Peter Delivered From Prison.

Acts 12:1-11.

Golden Text:—The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them. Psalms 31:7.

Review:—Today's lesson marks the close of our study of the "Acts of Peter." I would therefore broadly review what we learned about him in lessons I to VIII of the last quarter, which tell about the "Church in Jerusalem," lessons IX to XI of the last quarter, which tell of the spread of the church outside of Jerusalem and lesson I, last Sunday's lesson, of the present quarter, which shows Peter's spiritual enlargement to fine advantage. State to the class that today's lesson closes the "Acts of Peter" and that with next Sunday we begin the "Acts of Paul."

Intervening Events.—From 4 to 6 years have passed between last Sunday's lesson and today's. A new emperor is on the Roman throne, the emperor Claudius, and the king of Palestine, Herod Agrippa I, is anxious to curry favor with his Jewish subjects. Give your class the substance of the interview between Peter and Cornelius, Acts 10:21-48. Also give them an account of how the Jerusalem Church received the news of Peter's visit to Coracliis and of his defence of his action before them, Acts 11:1-18. Tell them of the spread of the gospel to Phenice, Cyprus, and Antioch, of the sending of Barnabas to confirm them, and the liberality of the Christians in other places to the Jerusalem Christians, Acts 11:19-30. Tell them that they will be called on later for these matters in detail, but they are passed over now so as to get our "Acts of Peter" complete before we take up the "Acts of Paul."

Approach to the Lesson.—Here call for assigned work on James, from the concordance, and on Herod from Acts 12th chapter and other sources. If these papers do not bring out the facts you are after, give them to the class yourself. It will especially be well to show the relation of this Herod to the others mentioned in the New Testament. Herod I, or Herod the Great, who is infamous because of his connection with the slaughter of the innocents, died soon after Christ was born. His three sons received his divided kingdom. Herod Antipas, one of these, who ruled Galilee and Perea, put John the Baptist to death. The Herod of today's lesson, known as Herod Agrippa I, or Agrippa the Great, was grandson of Herod the Great by his son Austofulus, who was strangled by his father's order for plotting against him. Our Herod of the Lesson was educated at Rome and stood in high favor with the emperors Caligulo and Claudius, though Tiberius had imprisoned him for wishing that Caligulo would soon become emperor.

The Lesson.—The lesson today divides readily into three divisions, which may be written on the board as they are developed in the teaching.

1. Herod Vexes the Church, verses 1-3. Find who stretched forth his hand, when, for what purpose, whom he killed, how, how the Jews received this act, what Herod then determined to do, what feast was near (Passover in 44, came April 1-8). Here call for Exodus 12 chapter, assigned last time.

2. Peter Imprisoned, verses 4 and 5. Find what he did with Peter when he had arrested him, how Peter was guarded, when he proposed to bring him out, for what object, who prayed for Peter, how often. Here call for assigned work on Peter's previous imprisonments, Acts 4:1-31 and 5:17-32.

3. Peter Delivered, verses 6-11. Find how Peter was guarded the night before Herod proposed to destroy him, who was before the prison door, what prison this likely was (the Tower of Antonia, adjoining the temple grounds), who appeared to Peter, what shined in the prison, how the angel waked Peter up, what he said to him, what fell from Peter's hand, what command the angel then gave him, what the angel and Peter now did, what Peter conceived all this to be, how many wards (guards) they passed, how they passed through the prison gate, how far the angel accompanied him, what Peter said to himself when he came to himself. Here call for assigned work on Peter's visit to the house of Mary, Acts 12:12-17.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

Truths and their Application.—1. there are various ways of serving God. James who was a younger man than Peter, was beheaded. Peter was miraculously delivered and spared many years to lead the early church. Who shall say that Peter served the Lord more acceptably than James? Our ways are not God's ways, and our human estimate of things is often incomplete and incorrect because of short sightedness and blurred vision. It is the spirit in which we act and serve and worship that marks the products of our work high or low.

2. Peter's delivery from prison is an epitome of all history. In it we see the world and the church arrayed against each other, and the victory falls to the Church. And as Peter's prison doors were opened, so shall our prison doors be opened—the doors that make us prisoners to sin, to selfishness, to self. These doors must be opened if we are to attain to usefulness in the Christian life, and they will be opened if we put ourselves in the proper attitude.

3. The efficacy of prayer is abundantly illustrated in this lesson. There can be no doubt that the prison doors were opened to Peter through the influence of the prayer of the saints that ascended without closing to the throne of God on his behalf. The prayers of God's people avail much. We have all seen it demonstrated in our own experience when preparing for the revival season. Lately the prayers of Christians for temperance in this country have certainly been heard and abundantly answered.

Assignments for Next Time:—Ask one to be prepared on what Paul says of himself in Acts 22:3; Phil. 3:5-6; 2 Cor. 11:21-22; a second to be prepared on Paul's conversion from Acts 22:1-16; 29:9-20; - Cor. 15:8-9; 2 Cor. 11:32-33; Gal. 1:13-17 and 1 Tim 1:12-16. Ask all to bring with themselves a note book and pencil for the purpose of beginning a "Life of Paul," which life is to be written according to directions to be given in the class. This will add interest to your work, especially for the young people. If you have never done such work with your class, give it a trial now.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR APRIL 4. Peter and Cornelius.

Acts 10:1-48.

Time:—A. D. 38-40.

Place:—Peter was at Joppa, in the house of Simon the tanner. Cornelius was at Cesarea, the Roman capital of Judea, about thirty-three miles to the north.

Cornelius was a member of an ancient and distinguished Italian family. He was a Roman centurion, that is, captain of one hundred men. We know nothing of his early life except that he must have been brought up in heathenism, with all its cruelties and unsatisfactory worship, which left his heart hungry, being fed only on husks.

A man in the position of Cornelius had abundant opportunities of becoming acquainted with the Jewish religion, their God and the loftiness of their code of morals. Cornelius accepted the truth, but did not become a Jewish proselyte, accepting all their forms and ritual worship. He was a devoutly religious man. He worshipped God the best way he knew. He was openly religious, his whole household going with him. He expressed his piety in almsgiving, helping his fellow-men. He was honest and upright in his dealings. He prayed for what he wanted: more and clearer light, assurance of forgiveness of sins, and to know more about the life to come. All this made it possible for God to give a full answer to Cornelius' prayer.

There appeared unto him at the hour of prayer a vision—an angel in the form of a man in shining raiment who bade him send to Joppa and ask Peter to come to him. Cornelius at once sent two trust-worthy men to Joppa in quest of Peter.

At the same time Peter also fell into a trance and saw the heavens open and a sheet let down filled with all kinds of animals, and he was bidden to rise kill and eat. This vision was thrice repeated. The need of this vision was apparent. It was necessary that there should be a broadening of the church from a Jewish to a universal church including Gentiles as well as Jews. Cornelius, a Gentile, was knocking at the door.

Peter was still in perplexity. The Spirit bade him go. The next day Peter and six leading disciples of Joppa accompanied the messengers. They reached Cornelius' house on the fourth day. The Centurion welcomed Peter, who preaches the gospel unto him. He is told that this "good news" came by Jesus Christ, and that its effects are worthy of the Son of God.

He is shown infallible and abundant proofs and have the promises pointed out to him for all who believe. The Roman accepts Christ in baptism.

Both Peter and Cornelius were benefited by receiving new light. A man can be good under all circumstances.

The change wrought in Cornelius was very great. He had a new revelation of God's will. He had new life, new love, a new Master, a new power.

industry of all. "Be not diverted from your duty by any idle reflections the silly world may make upon you, for their censure are not in your power, and consequently should not be any part of your concern." To live the life that now is with honesty, looking forward to the life that is to come for the reward of well doing ought to give each runner in the race more persistence and greater ambition.

Education has embellished and developed so many minds, they know when to do, how to do, and what to do, but many of them have been contracted by wrong thinking and acting. An active mind, other things being equal, becomes strong with use, and helps influence the body, causing it to be more healthy and strong. An old unused anvil that has a thick scale of rust upon it does not work well at first; it has been idle so long it needs to be used and made bright for good work; then when the iron is properly heated and laid upon it the sparks fly in every direction under the hammer. So the idle, inactive mind may be made bright with proper use, emitting sparks which shall catch other thoughts, and cause them to burn with justice and truth.

AN APPEAL TO STRONG MEN.

America's most noted private citizen, and distinguished educator, President Eliot of Harvard University, recently delivered an address, now printed in pamphlet form, of wonderful penetration, power and candor on the theme, "More Harvard Graduates for The Ministry" in which address this situation is laid bare:

"You may read on the College Gate that the training of ministers for the churches was the prime object in view at the founding of Harvard College; but now the College sends but a small percentage of its graduates into the ministry, although it does better in this respect than most of its neighbors. Amherst, Williams and Dartmouth have had a similar history. The Theological Department of Yale University is mainly recruited from other colleges and schools, and only to a small extent from Yale College. These facts indicate that the ministry does not hold the high place in the social organization which it used to hold, and that the other professions, learned or scientific, have stronger attractions for well-bred and well-trained young men of force and character. Moreover, the number of serviceable professions has more than doubled, and the university prepares men for them all. Hence a smaller proportion of college men goes into the ministry."

Deploring this situation and making a powerful plea for strong men to enter the ministry, President Eliot sets forth some of the reasons therefor in these words:

"The minister can be highly serviceable. He has the great function of preaching, the weekly opportunity of setting before a group of well-disposed men and women the best ethical views on all human experiences, common or exceptional, and the highest motives for right action in all the emergencies of life. The good preacher enlightens, cheers and guides. He may sometimes denounce or condemn; but, in general, he shows men and women how to walk through this world lovingly and nobly. He may sometimes be a warning prophet, but he is chiefly inspirer of high motives and of good ruling sentiments.

* * * The minister may be infinitely serviceable through the advance he gives in private to persons anxious, bereaved, tempted or gone astray. This function or advising requires sympathy, insight, and, above all, wisdom; and these qualities are gained or perfected only through experience, so that the young minister may hope to gain more and more of this influence as his years increase. The minister may also be greatly serviceable by attending to the social functions of a modern church. * * *

Every active church is a center of good works for the improvement of society, and offers to young people and new-comers many safeguards against evil, as well as incitements to good. When we consider that ethical progress is the only real progress in human society, material gains being chiefly good as they contribute to, or supply the necessary conditions of, moral gains, we realize how direct or immediate is the work of the church, and of the minister at the head of the church, not only for the uplifting of individual men and women, but for the progress of mankind toward nobler living."

DOING ONE'S BEST.

It is related that, in a factory where delicate fabrics were woven, when the threads became tangled, the weavers were instructed to touch a button and the superintendent would respond immediately and straighten all out. One day an "old hand" decided she could straighten out her own tangled threads without calling the master. After she had tried a season and there was a much worse tangle, with loss of time and fabric, the superintendent was summoned. "I did my best," was the weaver's plea. "No, not your best: your best was to call me, which you failed to do and invited this loss and trouble."

No man does his best in any day, or in any task, who does not call the Master. Human hands do but tangle the slender and delicate threads in the skein of our daily living. Our Master knows, and is willing. He will come if we call. We have not done our best till we have called upon Him and left it all with Him.

Life has its tangles, its temptations and its trials. We cannot straighten these out with human effort, however nimble the finger or skilled the hand. In the workshop of life we have done our best only when we have called for our help Him who has promised to stand by and forsake us not.

THE CHURCH AND MORAL CHARACTER.

Writing in The Homiletic Review for January, the distinguished teacher and moralist, Prof. Dawson took the ground that the Church had failed in producing the right sort of moral citizens. "The evidence," of the Church's failure, writes Dr. Dawson, "exists in the fact that to-day the greatest moral forces of civilization are outside of the Church, and, in a large measure, working independently of it."

In the same magazine for April, a writer signing A. J. P. so completely answers Prof. Dawson, and at the same time sets forth certain fundamental facts of the Church that need to be emphasized again and again, that we submit the same in full to Sun readers:

"It seems to be a fad in these days to belittle or find fault with the Church, because she has not accomplished, or is not accomplishing what some choose to think is her special work.

A man or a number of men will start a hobby, and, because the Church does not at once enlist under them, or furnish them with money, they condemn the Church as dead, or as held in the mercenary grip of the rich.

I have known temperance reformers berate the Church because she does not go with them, or contribute bountifully to their work. They forget that the temperance work originated in the Church, and has had its main support from Christians.

The same is true with moralists, social workers, etc.; these have all come through the influence of the Church, which gave the intellectual stimulus for the development of science, and the elevated conception of human society. None of these reformers, or philanthropists, have arisen outside the direct or indirect influence of the Church.

To hear these judge and condemn the Church, for not meeting their conception of her duty, as a failure, as dead, or against progress, always seems like a young man rising up and kicking the breasts that nourished him.

Professor Dawson's definition of moral character (human fitness to live and be a member of society in this world), comes into the category of the Church's aim, purpose, or work, only as a correlative or side issue.

Yet, even with his definition, it would seem to me that the Church has been wonderfully successful considering the material she has had to work upon.

Professor Dawson's science and democracy had a very clear and fair field to show its power for producing moral character in ancient Greece, but they did not fit men to live and be members of society in his sense. They could accomplish virtually nothing in that sense, because they did not have the Church back of them or underneath them.

In Mexico the result is, when men are brought to Christ for salvation and converted (in what the Professor calls the mystical sense) they immediately begin to rise in the moral and social scale, "to live and become members of society," and in a short time free themselves from the bondage of peonage.

The same in mission-work in New York City. I have known men labored with, helped, but not converted to Christ, and after a long time they were lower than at the beginning; while others with no better natural abilities, but who were converted to Christ, in a few days needed no more material assistance, and some of them to-day, after thirty years, have their own homes, and their daughters have pianos.

Look at the influence of the Church of Christ in India at the time of the great famine a few years ago, even the Hindus (as reported) said, "Let the Christians have the distribution of the relief funds, then the people will get help, for these Christians are honest and they have sympathy."

Thus in the sense of his own definition of moral character, it seems that the Professor ought not to charge the Church with failure.

The aim and mission of the Church of Jesus Christ in the world was, and is, to present to men the knowledge of a nobler and better life than this in the flesh; a spiritual life, the gaining of which must be by a spiritual birth, but in the living of which the life of this world would be ennobled and purified. Hence the Church can not justly be called a failure for not accomplishing what was not her legitimate mission to the world."

THINGS NECESSARY.

We may learn, in our Christian experience and efforts, from the ambitions of the world. It is related of the Roman Pompey that his friends endeavored, because of a tempestuous sea, to dissuade him from going to Rome, for an important occasion: "It is necessary for me to go, it is not necessary for me to live."

It is not necessary that we grow rich, become cultured, acquire fame. These are worth while but not necessary. It is necessary that we love righteousness, hate iniquity, act honestly, speak truthfully, and, in all our way, serve God.

It is even more necessary that we live well than that we live long.

Our gracious Creator was even more anxious for our salvation than for our creation. With the word of His mouth and the breath of His nostrils He created us; but with the gift of His son and the suffering of the Cross He sought to redeem us.

Being in the world, it is the one everlasting necessity, the one essential of our being, that we be saved and that we fear, serve and trust God.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The North Carolina legislature has passed an act to "electrocute" criminals instead of "hanging" them. New York, Virginia, and perhaps other states had already passed such acts. The reason assigned for such change is to make the method of execution more "humane." I have not been able to see that "electrocution" is more "humane" than "hanging." "Human" denotes what every man is; "humane" denotes what every man ought to be. So far as capital punishment is concerned, the law, at least for the present, leaves no room for any large opinion: the State believes in capital punishment. The only question that has concerned our lawmakers so far is the method of execution. So far as the facts go, any quick method of execution seems to be as humane as another. The guillotine and the gallows seem to me to be as "humane" as the electric chair. The preparation for electrocution is as bad as the axe or the rope. When it comes to the surrender of life for crime the manner of execution, provided it is not in the form of torture, counts but little. There can be no "humane" execution and of all the forms "electrocution" seems to me the most horrible. If "humane" treatment prevailed in human society, and on a more universal scale, it might prevent "humane" executions in many cases.

Local option has been in force in Suffolk for two weeks. The transition took place quietly and orderly, some going to Norfolk to continue in the saloon business, and the larger number continuing their grocery business in Suffolk. It is too soon to say how local option will work in this town so close to Norfolk, but the law-abiding habits of our citizens would seem to assure us of respect for law under present conditions. No doubt those who have been accustomed to drink will provide themselves in some way with drink; but the young people will not be so likely to contract the habit. The absence of social drinking will prevent boys from learning to drink. All great movements require time to show results. The panic of 1907 is felt more in 1909 than the year it occurred. We have to wait for the return of prosperity and we have to wait to see the fruits of local option. In N. C. local option ended in State-wide prohibition.

Every Christian ought to pass a local option law in his own life and his own family. When malaria is in many individuals and in many homes it is proof that malaria is in the community. As long as many individuals and many families use strong drink as a beverage, it is proof that the temperance atmosphere is impregnated with a sentiment that is hurtful. Spiritual and moral sanitation, like physical sanitation, require a cleaning up of the "premises."

W. W. Staley.

—The pastor, Rev. J. O. Cox, assisted by Rev. C. C. Ryan of Norfolk, is conducting a series of meetings with large attendance and much interest in the South Norfolk Christian church.

—A good brother minister in closing a delightful personal letter uses this fine sentiment: "I believe with Paul that the life I now live in the flesh, I live by faith in the Son of God who loved me and gave Himself for me."

—Rev. Thos. S. Weeks, Troy, Ohio, Secretary of Sunday-schools for the A. C. C., ordered two dozen copies of our Teacher Training books last week, having organized a class in his church that is to take up the work at once.

—Sun readers will greet with gladness "Our Western Letter" by Dr. J. P. Barrett this week. The letter is so full of information and news of interest that every Sun reader will wish Dr. Barrett to write a Western Letter often—every week could he but find the time. And the editor is personally grateful for this favor and courtesy from his good friend.

—Rev. G. O. Lankford who is preaching at our North Highland's church, Columbus, Ga., writes March 23: "Last Sunday was a good day with us; our congregation being the largest for several months." Bro. Lankford is joining with Rev. H. W. Elder in a most successful and aggressive work at Columbus.

Elon College, N. C., Meh. 24, 1909.

My Dear Children and Friends:

This week hits us hard. We had hoped for at least $75.00 and you see we are far below that amount. We are specially in need of liberal amounts just now as we want to pay our guano bills and wire fencing bills so as to get the discounts. We trust that many friends will help us at once. The following donations have been received:

B. F. Keith Co., Wilmington, N. C., 1,000 lbs. ground phosphate lime; Ladies' Aid Society, Elon College, N. C., one memory quilt; Mrs. J. K. Gibson, (deceased) Morrisville, N. C., by Miss Lessie Pugh, one home-made blanket; Rev. Rufus P. King, High Point, N. C. Holstein calf.

We are very thankful for these kind donations. We could use tons of lime to fine advantage on our farm. It was very considerate of Messrs. Keith Co. to give us 1/2 ton. It helps us that much. Quilts are always acceptable, and the Elon L. A. S. will long be remembered by the nice quilt they have presented, and people in years to come will read the names on said quilt. The old fashioned "cover-lid" by sister Gibson will be here when we are gone. She has gone to her reward and yet this piece of work which represented the toil of her hands in younger days, is still here. You know the old fashioned home-made "cover-lid" never wears out.

Uncle Rufus King has again remembered us and last week sent us a nice two months old Holstein calf. We thank all kind friends who thus aid us.

With love and best wishes to all kind friends, we are Yours heartily,

Uncle Jim.

Wake Forest, N. C., Mar. 18, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl of 13 years. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday. I would like to join the band of cousins if you will receive me. Enclosed you will find five cents.

Iola Timberlake.

We receive you gladly, Iola, and hope you can get more of your little friends in your neighborhood to join the Band of Cousins.

My Dear Cousins:

We come again with our March dues. We hope we'll get some Easter eggs and chickens. Mother made us some rag rabbits and they are better than candy ones for they'll last. We wish warm weather would come, then we could play in the sand and dig, dig, dig.

Lovingly,

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl four years old and wish to join the band of cousins. My home is in Raleigh, but my mother is dead, and I stay with Mrs. Moring most all the time. Enclosed please find ten cents. With much love, Jennie May Smith.

Guess kind Mrs. Moring feels as though she had your dear mother back again, Jennie May. Glad indeed you have begun to write and send your money to the Band.

Durham, N. C., Mar. 18, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write you a little letter for the first time in my life. I am going to school. I feel like I want to help the little orphans. I am an orphan myself. I will enclose 20 cents for the Easter offering. I will close.

Your niece, Ruth Hamlett

You can sympathize with orphans more because you are one yourself, Ruth, can't you? You are heartily welcome to join our ranks. Write again soon.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

CALAVERAS BIG TREE NATIONAL FOREST BILL SIGNED.

By signing the bill for the creation of the Calaveras National Forest, California, President Roosevelt has completed the legislative act which saves for all time the most famous grove of trees in the world. The people of California, particularly the 500 women of the California Club, have been working to interest the Government in this wonderful grove of Big Trees for more than nine years, but not until now has it been possible to arrange a plan satisfactory alike to the owner of the land and to Congress.

The Senate Bill passed by the House of Representatives has just been signed by the President. Everyone interested in the great natural wonders rejoices that as a means of saving the Big Trees, the way has been paved for a practical exchange of the timber in the groves for stumpage on other forest land owned by the Government. The first Calaveras Bill was introduced in the Senate four years ago by Senator Perkins of California. Bills for the same purpose were passed in the upper house of Congress a number of times, but always failed of favorable consideration in the House until Senate Bill 1574, also introduced by Senator Perkins, was called by Congressman S. C. Smith, of California.

Robert B. Whiteside, of Duluth, Minnesota, a prominent lumberman operating in the Lake States and on the Pacific Coast, is the owner of the Calaveras Big Trees. After his agreement to the proposals which are simply a practical exchange of timber for timber, the entire California delegation gave its solid and enthusiastic support to the bill. No appropriation is needed to carry out the provisions of the act.

The land to be acquired under the bill includes about 960 acres in what is known as the North Calaveras Grove in Calaveras county, and 3,040 acres in the South Grove in Tuolumne county. The North Grove contains ninety-three Big Trees and in the South Grove there are 1,380 of these giant sequoias. Any tree under eighteen feet in circumference, or six feet through, is not considered in the count of large trees. Besides the giant sequoias, there are hundreds of sugar pines and yellow pines of astonishing proportions, ranging to the height of 275 feet and often attaining a diameter of eight to ten feet. There are also many white firs and incense cedars in the two tracts. A government study of the land was made by a field party under the direction of Fred G. Plummer, United States Forest Service, in 1906.

The Calaveras Big Trees are known the world over. The North Grove contains ten trees each having a diameter of twenty-five feet or over, and more than seventy having a diameter of fifteen to twenty-five feet. Most of the trees have been named, some for famous generals of the United States and others for statesmen and various states of the Union. "The Father of the Forests," now down, is estimated by Hittel, in his "Resources of California," to have had a height of 450 feet and a diameter at the ground of more than forty feet when it was standing. "Massachusetts" contains 118,000 board feet of lumber; "Governor Stoneman" contains 108,000 board feet, and the "Mother of the Forest," burned in the terrible forest fire which licked its way into a part of the grove last summer, contains 105,000 board feet. Each of these trees named grows as much lumber as is grown ordinarily on fifteen or twenty acres of timberland. The bark runs from six inches to two feet in thickness. Among the other large named trees in the two groves are "Waterloo," "Pennsylvania," "James King," "Old Bachelor," "Pride of the Forest," "Daniel Webster," "Sir John Franklin," "Empire State," "U. S. Grant," "W. T. Sherman," "J. P. McPherson," "Abraham Lincoln," "Connecticut," "Ohio," "Grover Cleveland," "Mrs. Grover Cleveland," "Dr. Nelson," "General Custer," "Dr. J. W. Dawson," "General Hancock," "Knight of the Forest," "Two Sentinels," and "Old Down."

—The tariff bill in Congress is reported as making good headway and it is promised that it will be finished and enacted into law by June 1.

is impure, that laughs at sin, or speaks of it as though it were something to be pitied. It is the vulgarity that has lost its sense of the high throne of God and the white purity of His heaven. It is the vulgarity of the age which drags God off His throne and makes Him merely a force in His creation, and denies righteousness and purity. That is the vulgarity that lifted the Cross! Sin is so vulgar that it can only be dealt with by that which violates the essential life of God. The Cross; yea, verily; but the rough, brutal Roman gibbet was only the expression in time of something far more terrible. Those two pieces of timber and a dying Man! Awful, terrible; but infinitely worse was the pain of God, which was invisible save through that Cross. In His rich grace He took hold upon sin and expressed, in the suffering of His only Son, its vulgarity.

Thank God, He did more, for that very Cross of blood and shame is radiant with the glorious light of the infinite grace; for even at the cost of such suffering as makes poor half-cultured man shudder, Love, determined on man's salvation, accomplished it. Yes, disease is vulgar, but the mother and the nurse who touch it, to heal it, are not vulgar. Contact with it in order to heal it is not vulgar. I come to the Cross to bow my head in shame, and smite my breast with remorse. Vulgar Cross; but that in it which is vulgar is my sin. Shining through it is the light that comes from the throne; and flowing through it is the great river of His grace.

Blessed be God, this is the evangel for me. O soul of mine, guilty, polluted, paralyzed, we have "our redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses." There my conscience finds rest. There I begin a new life, lifting my eyes toward the ultimate ages, God's last purpose for me made possible because He is able to forgive my sins.

Making More Money Out of Cotton Crops

is merely a question of using enough of the right kind of fertilizers.

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

are the right kind.

The cotton plant cannot feed on barren land. Study your soil. Find out what it lacks. Then apply the necessary fertilization and the results will surprise you.

See what Mr. W. C. Hays of Smith Station, Ala., did. He says: "I planted about 30 acres of some 'gray sandy land' that had been in cultivation for over 20 years, and used 300 pounds of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers per acre, and I expect to gather 30 bales from the 30 acres." This is why we say it is the right kind. We have hundreds of letters like this, and even stronger, in praise of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer for cotton.

Get a copy of the new 1909 Virginia-Carolina Farmers' Year Book from your fertilizer dealer, or write our nearest sales office and a copy will be sent you free. It contains pictures of the capitols of all the Southern States.

MARRIED.*Carter-Holland.

John Jefferson Carter and Nancy L. Holland were united in marriage by the writer at the bride's home near Holland, Va., Mar. 18, 1909. The attendants were: Irvin Ellis and Francis Holland; Jason Wyatt and Cola Carter; J. Wilbur Holland and Mary Holland; Clyde Ellis and Berta Holland. After the ceremony the bridal party and a number of friends repaired to the home of the groom and partook of a generous wedding supper. The bride is a daughter of the late George Holland, of Lamb, and the groom the son of J. H. Carter and wife, formerly of Gates Co., N. C. These are worthy young people and we wish them a happy and useful life.

DIED.*Brown.

It pleased our heavenly Father to remove from us, March 9, 1909. Sister Lula E. Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Brown, and wife of Monroe Brown. Age 28 years, 4 months and 8 days. Sister Brown joined Union Grove Christian church in early life and remained a consistent member till death. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. R. L. Williamson at her home church, and the remains were laid away to rest in the church cemetery. The grave was covered with beautiful flowers. She leaves to mourn their loss, a loving father and mother, four brothers and four sisters, a devoted husband and four little sons, and a host of relatives and friends. She was a kind and faithful companion, and a loving mother. She will be greatly missed by her neighbors and friends and all who knew her, for she was a kind and good neighbor, but we feel our loss is her eternal gain.

May we all prepare to meet her in heaven. May God bless and comfort all the sorrowing ones.

Walker.

Departed this life, March 17th, 1909, the infant child of Dr. and Mrs. L. A. Walker, at their home, Burlington, N. C. The little one's life was short. A few brief hours, and he was not, for God took him. The funeral services were conducted from the home by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. McKeever; and the body of the little one was laid to rest in Pine Hill cemetery. Dr. and Mrs. Walker have the sympathy of their many friends in the loss of their babe. In their sickness and sorrow, we commend them to the care of the infinite Father, who would fain be their strength and comfort now, and at last wipe away all tears.

HOW A STUDENT OVERCAME SIN.

A young university student in Japan, who had been a leader in his classes, near the end of his course gave way to temptation. After some time, eager to regain his self-respect and his lost position, he sought the priest of a famous Buddhist temple. To him he told his troubles and his longings. The priest said, "I can help you. If you will kneel with your thumbs together before the Buddha here, and remain absolutely motionless for three hours, you will be given strength to resist temptation." The seeker obeyed. In spite of the fact that the mosquitoes annoyed him constantly, he knelt as nearly motionless as possible for the required time. Then he passed out of the temple—to fall before his temptation, as before. For two years he groped for help, but in vain, until he heard of Christ who came into the world that the world through Him, might be saved. In Christ's strength he was enabled to conquer temptation. Today he is secretary of the Osaka Young Men's Christian Association—Christian Herald.

This is a grand record of achievement. A poor lad, born in a gipsy camp, has been used as an instrument in God's hands to awaken multitudes throughout the world to spiritual consciousness. He tells in this book of 330 pages his rich and varied experiences from birth through years of successful winning. The style of the book is not boastful; it is a humble attempt to satisfy the persistent requests of his friends for a history of his romantic career. The narrative is prefaced by appreciative introductions by Dr. Alexander McLaren and G. Campbell Morgan. Several illustrations add to the interest of the book.

In as much as it has pleased the all-wise Creator to take from us one of our much beloved and highly esteemed members of the Ladies Aid Society of Damascus Christian Church, (Gates Co.), Mrs. Henrietta Hinton, we bow in humble submission to His will, feeling that He doeth all things well; therefore, we submit this tribute of love and esteem:

Resolved 1. That in the death of this member, the Society deeply feels the loss of one whose interest was always made manifest by acts of kindness and deeds of love.

Resolved 2. That we deeply deplore the great loss sustained by her family and the community in which she lived.

Resolved 3. That it becomes us to bow with reverence and humility to this dispensation of providence and say, "Thy will be done."

Resolved 4. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this hour of sad bereavement.

Resolved 5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the Society record, a copy be sent to the family of the deceased, also a copy be sent to the Christian Sun for publication.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

President Eliot.—It is doubtful if any educator has ever received the welcome and created the enthusiasm in the South that President Eliot has the past several days. Thousands of educators have heard him gladly. And wherever he has gone, whether to a city commercial club or to a college, high school, or university, great throngs have greeted him and given him glad audience. His visit assumes the air of some ancient conqueror in triumphal procession, so anxious are the people to greet and to cheer him.

For forty years President Eliot has been at the head of America's oldest and largest university and he, more than any other one man has made Harvard what it is, a typical university. As the years have advanced they have multiplied rather than subtracted from Dr. Eliot's usefulness and intellectual grasp, and now at the age of seventy-five he is still learning and showing the very best that is in him. He is abreast of the times and does not hesitate to express himself on public issues. He has always been a bold, fearless advocate of what he deemed to be right, it mattered little whose political faith or public record was at stake.

Many declare him to be America's foremost citizen. He has made his position great and conferred everlasting honor on all institutions of learning in the country by his untiring zeal for education, culture and scholarship. It is well that the South honors him and stops to show him admiration and respect.

Neighbors Who Rob.—A scientist has discovered that even the health of a dog is dependent, to a degree, on human kindness. By inserting a glass tube in the side of a dog and attaching it to the bile duct, it was discovered that when the dog was petted and treated kindly, bile was secreted in healthful and wholesome proportions; when treated harshly and unkindly, secretion of bile was checked and an immediate unhealthy condition of the dog was superinduced. Human kindness and the tide of life in the animal were somehow secretly attached; unkindness and a low tide of life were associated.

It is even so in man. No man can work as well, think as clearly, and achieve as successfully under unkind and unhappy conditions and treatment, as under kind and happy conditions.

An old Grecian philosopher, nearing the end of his well spent days declared, "I have caused no one to wear crepe." That was well. He who by rude conduct, and unkind word or treatment sends a dart of sorrow, sadness, or unhappiness to his neighbor's heart robs his neighbor of so much life. There is life in kindness and no man has the right to rob his neighbor by unkind words, ungenerous acts, and heartless, thoughtless deeds. I found this paragraph in a paper recently:

"To take the brightness out of human lives is a kind of manslaughter, yet we do it by our ugly retorts, our morning moroseness, and our midday boorishness. It is a serious thing to make people go into mourning inside. I don't care how you do it, whether by temper, or by dishonesty, or by a life that makes angels weep. To kill happiness in another is a species of assassination.

'He that hateth his brother is a murderer.' Close down your crepe-factory, and start up a plant for the manufacture of shining garments of joy woven from heaven's sunshine!"

Forest Fires.—Every year thousands of dollars worth of property are destroyed in North Carolina, as in other Southern States, by forest fires. Thoughtless people put fire to broom sage or to clear the land of other "useless" trash and undergrowth, resulting not infrequently in great destruction both to their own and their neighbor's property. This is one way we are wickedly and maliciously destroying the valuable trees and shrubbery God has given us in the forests. Coming generations will certainly not rise up to call us blessed, in the matter of preserving for them growing trees that would naturally have been theirs.

North Carolina is doing something to protect her forests and has this law on the statute books (Section 3346 of The Code):

"If any person shall set fire to any woods, except it be his own property, or in that case without first giving notice in writing to all persons owning land adjoining to the wood-land intended to be burned, at least two days before the time of firing such woods, and also taking effectual care to extinguish such fire before it shall reach any public or private lands, near to or adjoining the lands so fired, he shall for every such offence, forfeit and pay to any person who shall sue for the same, fifty dollars and be liable to any one injured in an action, and shall moreover be guilty of a misdemeanor."

And then as further protection this law was also enacted (Section 3347 of the Code) "If any wagoner or other person encamping in the open air shall leave his camp without totally extinguishing the camp fires, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding fifty dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding thirty days." If all waste is sin, somebody will have to answer for terrible sins in the wastes of Southern forests.

—Of course the best part of the great Boston revival cannot be counted in figures, but these estimates from The Boston Journal as to results show something of result, though The Journal does not claim absolute accuracy: "Number of day meetings, 890; number of evening meetings, 600; total number of meetings, 990; smallest attendance Jan. 26, first day, 15,450; largest attendance, Feb. 14, 61,501; converts at day meetings, 11,350; converts at evening meetings, 19,184; total number of converts; 30,534; attendance at day meetings, 213,070; attendance at evening meetings, 507,883; total attendance during revival, 270,953.

A writer who was present at one of the meetings said in connection with these figures: I was at an afternoon service. Between 11,000 and 12,000 people were packed into the building. As I left at 5 o'clock, 5,000 were standing about the doors waiting to be admitted to the evening service which began at 7:45. They practically covered the wide street and sidewalk on Huntington Avenue the entire width of the building."

Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth.

FROM THE FIELD.

V. Ley Letter.

On reaching home last Saturday night after an absence of over three weeks, I found awaiting me a beautiful expression of good will and kind feeling. It is a slumber robe made and presented by the members and friends of Mt. Olivet (R) church. It is a fine piece of work, the most beautiful I think I have ever seen. What I have ever done at Mt. Olivet (R) to merit such treatment, I know not. This unexpected gift adds much to encourage this inefficient pastor, and makes him wish he could render them a far more efficient service. Our church there is not strong but there are some who stand by it faithfully.

I have recently closed a revival meeting at Mt. Lebanon. The meeting there was characterized by the largest crowds, the best order, and the best singing we have had since I have been pastor there. Three professed faith in Christ, united with the church and were baptized by immersion in the Shenandoah river. The church building there proved so inadequate to accommodate the congregations during the meeting that we are planning to build a new and larger house this summer.

I had the pleasure of meeting with the people at Woods Chapel last Monday afternoon, baptizing two young men by immersion and preaching at night. I was once pastor of this church and am always glad to get an opportunity of visiting them.

I am now at Dry Run where I began a meeting last night.

Some time ago letters were sent to over a hundred of the leading men and women in the Christian Church in the Valley urging them to take a membership in the Conference Missionary Association. So far very few replies have been received, and they are all women. God bless the faithful women in the Conference, and cause many more of them to take a membership, but what is the matter with the men?

Wanted at once:—A man to take a $5.00 membership in the Conference Missionary Association. Where are you, brother?
A. W. Andes.

Harrisonburg, Va., Mar. 31, 1909.

Moore Union.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—Moore Union church has finished their house, carpeted the pulpit, put in a nice heater, and placed three nice chairs in the pulpit, and the little band of members who have been without a pastor for two years, are beginning to take on a little courage. And here I want to thank

Mrs. J. W. Let, Mrs. James Womack and Mrs. Emly Drake for valuable presents, and pray God's rich blessings upon these friends. We had a very interesting consecration meeting at New Hope Sunday. It was indeed a blessed meeting. To God be all the praise.

LESSONS FROM LIVES OF GREAT MEN.

III. Sir Walter Scott.

By W. P. Lawrence, M. A.

Scotland is a small country, yet it has a long list of illustrious men. It has produced great warriors, great religious teachers and great writers. Then there is a vigor and sturdiness in the general character of the common people. This, together with the fame of her great men, has won and maintained an enviable, world-wide reputation for the little country known as Scotland.

We want to talk about one of these great men, Sir Walter Scott. His popular names, "Wizard of the North," and "Great Magician" used to work on my fancy like magic. I heard about his unequalled rapidity as a producer of manuscript, of his peculiar fondness for dogs, of how he loved the poor and of how he could keep company with a king or take his turn at the axe with a common wood chopper in the forest. It was, therefore, with unusual expectancy and alertness of feeling that I made the journey from Carlisle, through the Border Country, to Melrose, and thence two miles up the Tweed to Abbotsford, the home of Scott the last twenty years of his life. If I ever felt the spirit of Border minstrelsy, I felt it that day. I was looking out upon the very hills that, for generations, had echoed the richest melodies of folklore known, much of it not committed to written form until Walter Scott picked up lay after lay with his marvelous memory and gave them to the world in the volume "Border Minstrelsy" which marked the real beginning of his fame as a poet.

Scott was the son of an Edinburgh attorney, and was born in that splendid city Aug. 15, 1771. His mother was the daughter of a professor in the famous University of Edinburgh. He had, besides intelligent parents, a long line of worthy ancestors whose history he early took great interest in. "Every Scotchman" he said "had a pedigree. It is a national prerogative, as undalienable as his pride and his poverty. My birth was neither distinguished nor sordid." Visits to Abbotsford are shown two pictures in the armory that represent an interesting incident in the life of one of Scott's ancestors. The story runs thus: "The larder in the ancestral house had run low and a gallant, brave son was sent out to kill fresh meat. It was in the days of the Clan and the Great Chieftain when "might made right." The young gallant was caught in a neighboring chieftain's cattle and sheep range in the act of driving away some choice beeves and muttuns. He was captured. This crime was usually punished with death to the criminal. So Scott's ancestor was condemned to execution, but being of honorable blood and ancient family, he was given the alternative of marrying the chieftain's daughter. On hearing the conditions of escaping death, he promptly chose between death and marriage, the former as the less of the two evils. The execution of the mortal sentence was delayed to the following day. The criminal was again given the opportunity of choosing marriage, whereupon he took the young border beauty to wife, reasoning that, were he to take death, there would be no opportunity of a subsequent choice, but should he take marriage first, the other still remained and could be had at any time should marriage prove unsatisfactory.

Scott's family suffered a high rate of mortality in childhood. Of twelve children, he and four others were all who reached adult life, and he suffered a severe illness when a year and a half old. He was sent to the home of his grandparents in the Border Country where the rural life and open country improved his health, though he was lamed for life from the effects of fever in one limb.

He was educated in the Edinburgh schools and in the University of Edinburgh. At the same time he was taking his university course, he was studying law under his father's directions. He became a barrister. He fell desperately in love at nineteen. The passion and his heart were broken together five years later by the marriage of his sweetheart to another man. Two years later with his cracked heart "Handsomely pieced," he was happily married to Miss Charlotte Margaret Carpenter a lady of French parentage. She was a faithful, happy companion for thirty years through all her husband's unparalleled success as a popular author. She saw her four children—two sons and two daughters—grow to manhood and womanhood; she rejoiced with her husband in the honors that came to him four years after their marriage in the appointment at Selkirkshire of the county of his ancestors; she felt the keenest delight in the popular applause of the whole English-speaking world Scott received from 1800 to 1814 because of his poetry; she in full sympathy with her companion during the ten years their princely stone mansion was building at Abbotsford; her heart thrilled with rapture many a time during this same period while her husband was flooding an admiring, book-buying world with those unique "Waverley Novels" that proved a veritable gold mine to the author. All this and more had been crowded into three decades of this loving wife's happy heart. But a great crash came one day; it was the twenty-sixth of January 1826, when all their wealth suddenly became poverty. The great blow crushed Mrs. Scott's life and she sank down, down under the awful pressure as many another has done in sudden reverses of fortune, until her death May 15. Scott was away in Edinburgh where the necessities of his prostrate business interests had called him. This record is made in his diary the next day: "Abbotsford, May 16.—She died at nine in the morning, after being very ill for two days—easy at last. I arrived here late last night. Anne (the older daughter) is worn out, and has had hysterics, which returned on my arrival. Her broken accents were like those of a child—the language as well as the tones broken, but in the most gentle voice of submission. "Poor Mamma—never return again—gone for ever—a better place."

A little more than six years, the great heart of Scott labored on through despair until his fading greatness went out like the sun at evening. It is about three periods of his ever admirable life—the Poetry Period, the Novel Period, and the Great Struggle Period that we want next to talk.

IN TIMES OF ADVERSITY.

In a general way it may be said that he who is distracted and mournfully distressed when he is touched by some ordinary adversity, is morally weak, though he may think that he is strong. It is quite proper that one should mourn and weep when death takes from him a member of his family or some dear friend. Really strong people do so. But when adversity in the form of loss of a small amount of property, or the blasting of some cherished hope comes upon one, it is a time for him to assert all the manhood that he possesses, and to become stronger by the discipline of that adversity. Rev. L. A. Banks says: "I used to know an old man who would whine like a peevish child whenever anything went awry with his plans, and would say: 'I can stand prosperity very well, but hard luck takes all my nerve.'

But a man has not learned the secret of manhood whose muscles do not harden and nerve stiffen and heart grow large with purpose, as he sets his teeth in the face of a storm. We must make up our minds to it that things will not always go pleasantly. No career is ever without a break in its prosperity. Only weaklings could be made that way." Remember the fact that the patriarch Jacob, when he was a young man, grew strong much more rapidly while he was passing through the straits of adversity than he did while he was carried on the crest of prosperity. In reality his greatest prosperity came through his greatest adversity. While he was struggling amid the currents of adverse forces he was gaining in compactness of mental and moral strength. His most unpleasant experience with his brother Esau, while yet a very young man, was not only a needed trial of his faith in God, but it was a most valuable means for the development of the best elements of mental and spiritual strength. While he was thus thrown upon the strength of God, he was also thrown upon his own resources. That wrestling which he had with God issued in the gaining of a degree of strength which he could not have had without it. He owed a great deal to that adversity. And so it was with the young man Joseph, the son of Jacob. When he was only seventeen years old he was sold as a slave into Egypt, and became the subject of a series of remarkable adversities. Those years formed a period of strength-gathering. By those humbling and probing trials he was being strengthened for the occupation of an office in the front rank of Pharaoh's great kingdom.

RELIGION IN THE FAMILY.

Begin, my friend, with your children. Speak cheerfully, but reverently and solemnly, to them of the righteousness of God. Tell them he is their Father, and tell them he is their Judge. Show them his face and compassion; show them his throne of tribulation. Teach them that he loves the good; teach them that he hates lying and lust and all iniquity. Take care, yourselves, to touch not the unclean things, so that your counsel to your sons and daughters be not a mockery. Shake off the first dishonest penny from your fingers, as the apostle shook off the venomous viper into the fire.

Stand in awe of your conscience; stand in awe of the King of kings. Expect and welcome from the ministry of Christ searching messages. Pray for prophets, who will rebuke you, as their ancient predecessors did Israel, for robbing man by any fraud, for robbing God by keeping back the offerings at his altar which he requires at your hands. And when we, your ministers are weak, when our lips stammer or our courage falters or our poor lives seem to empty our words of power, turn to old Isaiah and listen to the burden of his ancient vision:

Hear, O heaven, and give ear, O earth, for the Lord hath spoken. I have nourished and brought up children and they have rebelled against Me. Wash you; make you clean. Cease to do evil; learn to do well. Seek judgment; relieve the oppressed; right the fatherless, plead for the widow. Zion shall be redeemed with judgment, and her converts with righteousness. Say ye to the righteous it shall be well with them, for the reward of his hand shall be given him. The mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. —Bishop F. D. Huntington.

COMMENDS ELON COLLEGE.

"Preparing the Teacher contains not only internal evidence of merit, but commends Elon College. The Editors, Professors W. A. Harper, W. C. Wicker, W. P. Lawrence, and two contributors, President E. L. Moffitt and Dr. J. U. Newman, five of the ten authors, are members of the Faculty. Prof. S. M. Smith is a graduate and was once a teacher in the college. Revs. N. G. Newman and J. W. Harrell are graduates, and Rev. Dr. P. H. Fleming took his M. A. by work in the institution. Rev. Dr. J. J. Summerbell, one of the greatest scholars and writers in the denomination, is the only contributor who is not and has never been connected with Elon College.

It is an Elon College production, and it is significant that the first book written by the college is a text book for Sunday-schools and not for academic instruction; and this emphasizes the fact that Elon is a Christian Institution, and stands for Christian education.

W. W. Staley.

—The Baptist Orphanage at Thomasville, N. C., gets $25,000 or more from the will of the late Charles O. Riddick. We agree with The Charlotte Observer in the observation that "we do not know where money could be invested to better real advantage," than in an Orphanage.

—But for a beneficent and stalwart human system which, when attacked, fights desperately against its enemies and seeks with zeal to recuperate itself, mean whiskey would kill more people than it does. Some "Hockade" liquor captured at Greenville, S. C., the other day was found, by actual analysis, to contain fusel oil, concentrated lye, amylie alcohol and cocaine—all desperate poisons.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. L. F. Johnson, of Raleigh has been assisting Pastor P. H. Fleming of Burlington in a series of meetings since last Wednesday night.

—Pastor J. O. Cox assisted by Rev. C. C. Ryan of Norfolk, has conducted recently a successful series of meetings in the South Norfolk church. The meetings were largely attended and much good was accomplished.

A fond mother writes, "I want a copy of Gipsy Smith's life for my boy to read for I want him to be a preacher." We submit that there is no worthier ambition for a mother to indulge than that her soon shall be a preacher, if God wills.

Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., Graham, N. C., has kindly consented to preach the Easter sermon at Elon College 11 a. m. next Sunday. This is usually a most pleasant day at the College, because of special music, and the occasion this year will attract even more because of the distinguished minister who is to speak.

—Rev. P. T. Klapp writes March 29, "Enclosed find money order for Government and Principles sent n.e. I placed eleven copies in one congregation. I am trying to place one in every family in my churches, for many of our own people even do not know their own church, what it stands for and endeavors to teach. I may wish other copies of the book at an early date."

—We have an obituary signed "A Cousin," which could be inserted, but no name is given. For the four hundred and sixty first time let us say that no communication can be printed in The Christian Sun without the writer's giving to the editor his or her own name. Unsigned articles, even if they sparkle with gems and diamonds of thought from caption to foot note, find their way to the waste basket.

—Rev. and Mrs. Frank S. Child, of Fairfield, Connecticut, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Grace, to Mr. Alder Ellis, April 15, First Congregational Church, Fairfield. The editor acknowledges with pleasure an invitation and joins with Dr. Child's hundreds of friends in The Christian Sun family in wishing for the happy couple all the joy that a devoted union in holy wedlock can give.

—A recent writer says, "The superintendent of a school ought to have the learning of a college president, the wisdom of a judge, the executive talents of a financier, the patience of a church janitor, the humility of a deacon, and the craftiness of a politician." So ought every body else. The Bible injunction, however, is better and covers the ground, "Be ye as wise as serpents and as harmless as doves."

—D. L. Moody's influence among men increases rather than decreases with the passing years. Though he has been dead nine years the schools founded at Northfield are larger now than ever. In the past three years nearly a half million dollars have been given to those schools for new buildings and yet, last fall 1,200 applicants had to be turned off because of lack of room. The people believe in the name and influence of D. L. Moody.

—There is no more aggressive, self-sacrificing and successful worker and church builder in all our number of ministers than Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., who is now about to crown the strenuous efforts and trial of several months by opening for service a handsome and commodious Second Christian Church in Columbus, Ga. The first service in this new church is to be held second Sunday in April. The Sun's editor regrets indeed that, because of some weeks poor health and present pressing duties, he cannot accept Bro. Elder's renewed invitation to be present on the auspicious occasion. Bro. Elder has wrought wonderfully and achieved mightily in bringing this building to completion in this brief period.

—A workingman and a minister have been telling what each would do if he were in the other's shoes, in a pair of vigorous articles in two recent issues of The Sunday School Times,—“If I Were a Minister,” by a Workingman; and “If I Were a Workingman,” by a Minister.

Each man really seems to know what he is talking about, and deals some straight body-blows, yet in a spirit of such friendly common sense that the man at whom he is talking must, if honest, inevitably respect his fairness and his force. If every minister and every workingman in the land should digest and act upon the straight talk of these messages, there would be a new era in the church and the shop.

There is considerable mystery as to who the anonymous writers are. We have the Editor's word that they are bona fide minister and workingman. Each seems to be solidly "on his job,"—yet each has an unusual insight into the other fellow's job. Perhaps that's because each is a real man, and a hard worker besides.

—No, Pauline, dear, as said before, you should never spell the seasons, spring, summer, autumn, winter, with a capital letter, but the word State, when it refers to a form of government, should always begin with a capital, and the word Christian should begin with a capital under any and all circumstances. And, Pauline, should you ever again see any one write Xmas for Christmas kindly see to it that you have such an one imprisoned for ten years for maliciously mutilating one of the finest words and happiest names in all our English speech. Further, dear, we had started to say that, if any one in your hearing or seeing should say or write, "Rev. Jones" "Rev. Smith" (when what he means is "Rev. L. S. Jones, Rev. A. T. Smith") that you get out a writ against him for assault and battery with intent to ruin the English tongue, but we will not advise you thus for any one who will commit that desecration is hopeless and has gone beyond pity or censure. Just let him alone. There never was a Rev. Jones, or a Rev. Smith in any language under the sun. When the given name comes out it is as unpardonable to leave the "Rev." there as it would be to say Mr. Dr. Smith or Mr. Prof. Jones. But, child, our feelings got the worst jolting the other day we have had for many. A preacher in his public prayer said "You" in referring to the Lord. He said "Oh Lord will you come and be with us and bless us." That was awful. The good man did not mean it of course, but it was just the same as if he had said, "Mr. Lord." "You" is a term of familiarity and equality. Thee and thou are the only pardonable pronouns our language has for formal and reverential personal address.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

We wish to thank the members of the Revision Committee of the Southern Christian Convention for a nicely bound copy of the Principles and Government of the Christian Church. The appreciation of this is enhanced by pleasant thoughts expressed and names of the Committee recorded on fly leaf of the book

NORFOLK LETTER.

For a Church Building in Ponce.

Can we raise the money, and if so, how?

I promised in my last letter to tell you how to do it and not to interfere with any present work. I propose that we not interfere with any present plan, but that we revive a plan put into practical operation by the American Christian Convention at its last session; a plan that in a little while raised $2,500 for the Salinas church, and though no special effort is being made to work it now, there is on hand at this time to the credit of the Porto Rico Building Fund, and which would be available for the Ponce church, the sum of about $2,000.

At the last session of the American Christian Convention it adopted the following resolution: "Resolved, That all the Sunday-schools in the bounds of the American Christian Convention be requested to adopt the following plan for the benefit of the Porto Rico Building Fund.

First. That each school provide itself with a little bank or box for the purpose of receiving money that may be contributed for said purpose.

Second. That the Superintendent or Pastor request every member of the Sunday-school and church to contribute at least a penny for each and every year of his age, the Sunday following his birthday, the money to be forwarded quarterly to the Mission Treasurer at Dayton, Ohio."

Now there you have it in a "nutshell." The American Christian Convention, our highest body, authorized the plan; some of us put it to work, and worked it for awhile and indeed it worked wonders in the little while that it was pushed, but most schools let it drop when the Salinas house was built. The Mission Board had already promised to try to build next a house in Japan, but I am quite sure that the Board will not object if we, the schools, bestir ourselves and put into active working the plan of the Convention and raise the other $7,000.00 necessary.

The Memorial Temple, Norfolk, inaugurated a movement that made the Porto Rico work possible. I thought it would be very fitting if the Third Church Norfolk, could inaugurate a movement that would result in a building in Ponce. To that end I ask this, that each Sunday-school in the bounds of the American Christian Convention that is not using the birthday bank plan for this or some other cause, at once comply with the request of the American Christian Convention as embodied in the above resolution. If at present using this plan for this purpose, I request that it be continued; if using this plan for some other purpose, I request that a special offering for this purpose be taken and the amount sent to the Treasurer, Dr. Bishop at Dayton. I hear that one church is planning to take a special offering already, possibly on Easter Sunday.

Now Brother Pastor and Superintendent, won't you pray earnestly over this and if the Lord so leads, will you not at least, give your school the opportunity to do what they have been asked to do? If the box is put before them and their attention is called to it each Sunday I have no fear whatever about results.

We will have the necessary money in hand by the end of the year if that is done in every school in the bounds of the Convention. Don't fail because you think your school will not effect the result materially one way or the other. Suppose one thousand others should think the same way; you can see at once what effect that would have on the general results.

By unanimous concert of action we can accomplish much. Don't fail because you think your school and church is too small; if the amount would only be $1.00 a quarter and one thousand schools should do even that much, it would mean $4,000.00 for the year. Don't fail because you have so much money to raise, so many calls to meet; your church is building and has so many obligations to meet, but simply provide the receptacle for the offering, explain the need and what it is for, and give the opportunity and if it is of the Lord, He will see to it that the money comes in and none of your work will suffer in any of the various phases because of what is done for this. And at the same time you are doing a double work, you are raising money to build a needed house and you are keeping the missionary idea before the people and training the children to be practical missionaries. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it."

Next week I hope to get a letter to at least 1500 church clerks, asking them to lay the matter before their Pastor and Superintendent; in the meantime pray earnestly.

J. W. Manning.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT
—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVEN-
TION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

Entertainment will be furnished the delegates to the Young People's Convention May 29-31 by the students and citizens of Elon College. The young people's Christian organizations at the college, including the Sunday-school, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and the Junior Society of Christian Endeavor, have jointly appointed the following persons a committee on Entertainment for the May Convention: Professors W. A. Harper chairman; Mr. R. A. Campbell of Virginia; Mr. W. W. Elder of Georgia, Mr. J. F. Morgan of North Carolina, Mr. John W. Barrett, Jr., of Virginia; Miss Jennie Lee Williams, of Virginia; Miss Maud Pritchard, of North Carolina; Miss Macie Farmer, of Virginia; Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson, of North Carolina; and Miss Gladys Peace, of North Carolina.

All delegates who purpose attending the convention, should notify Professor Harper, the chairman of the Entertainment Committee, not later than May 15. Otherwise, it may be difficult for entertainment to be provided.

What are the Executive committees of the various Sunday-school conventions doing about getting their delegates appointed? Do not wait. It takes some time to get these committees together. Then it will take several days after you appoint your delegates to get notices of the appointments to all of them. Then still, these have to write the Entertainment Committee, and all this to be done by May 15. If any of the authorities who are to appoint delegates are not beginning to stir won't you stir them? This matter of the young people's movement is of great importance to the church and to the young people as well. Talk the Convention up; pray for its success, that God may seal it with the spirit of zeal, Christian fellowship, and Divine power.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR APRIL 18.
A Few Suggestions.

The Conversion of Paul.

Acts 9:1-19.

Golden Text:—He fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? Acts 9:4.

Review.—Today we begin to study the "Acts of Paul." I would, therefore, not review last Sunday's lesson, but the eighth lesson of last quarter. Stephen the First Christian Martyr, Acts 6:8-15; 7:54-8:3, since Paul had part in that lesson.

Chronology.—We do not know exactly how long it was from the martyrdom of Stephen to the conversion of Paul but manifestly some time elapsed, during which time Paul continued to persecute the early church, so much so that he was not content with punishing those at Jerusalem for their so-called heresy, but was anxious to hound them to death in other cities also. The most nearly universally accepted date for his conversion is 36 or 37. This would put it about five years before Peter's visit to Cornelius. Make clear again why we make this break in the chronological study of the early church.

Geographical.—Paul was from Tarsus the university town of Calicia, "no mean city." Find out all you can about this city and tell enough of it to your class to make them "realize" it. Do likewise of Damascus, the oldest city in the world. Consult "Preparing the Teacher," page 186 f. Use your map or draw one on the board that will show these places in reference to Jerusalem.

Incidental Instruction.—The teacher will need to explain by what authority the High Priest could give Paul right to go to Damascus and drag people to Jerusalem for trial, Damascus being in a different province. The explanation is found in a decree issued by Julius Caesar in 47 B. C. and confirmed subsequently by Augustus granting the Jewish authorities original jurisdiction in matters touching their polity—though the severest punishment they could inflict was flogging. Explain that Saul was the Hebrew name of the great apostle, while Paul was his Greek name. Explain the nature of the "scales" which were over Paul's eyes. Luke, being a physician, uses a technical term here, which means a scaly substance had formed over the eyes as a result of the too dazzling brightness which they had been subject to. There is evidence that Paul never afterward recovered complete eyesight from Acts 23:5; Gal. 4:13-15; 6:11; 2 Cor. 12:7.

The Lesson.—Our lesson today falls into three divisions. Write these on the board as they are developed in the teaching:—

1. Saul, The Persecutor, verses 1 and 2. Before the questions begin, call for assigned work on what Paul says of himself from Acts 22:3; Phil. 3:5-6; 2 Cor. 11:21-22 and give the class a clear idea of the kind of man he was. Find out what Saul was yet doing, to whom he went, what he desired of him.

II. Saul, The Penitent, verses 3-9. Find to what city he was coming near, what suddenly shone out around him, what he did, what voice he heard, what he said, what command he received, what his answer was, the Lord's reply, what of the men who journeyed with him, what Saul now did, what of his sight, how he continued his journey, how long he was without sight in fasting.

III. Saul, The Convert, verses 10-19. Find what Damascus Disciple is now mentioned, who appeared to him, how, by what word did he call him, the disciple's answer, what command the Lord gave Ananias, with what objection Ananias offered, what further command the Lord now gave him, how Ananias received the message, what he did, what he said to Saul, what fell from Saul's eyes, what he received, what was then done, what he did in order to receive physical strength. Here call for account of Saul's conversion, assigned last time, from Acts 22:1-16; 26:12-18; 1 Cor. 15:8-9; 2 Cor. 11:32-33; Gal. 1:13-17 and 1 Tim. 1:12-16.

Review the lesson briefly by the topic method.

Truths and their Application.—1. Personal work is plainly taught in our lesson today. "Won by one" is certainly the gospel way. The effectual preaching is that done to a congregation of one. The race is saved not in the mass, but as individuals. Every organized class ought to have its "Personal Workers Committee." Every Sunday-school teacher is a personal worker for Christ or he is not what he ought to be. Perhaps too many of us object as Ananias did when we feel called upon to speak a personal word. But if we will only go God will bless our efforts as he did Ananias's.

2. There is something peculiarly tender in Ananias' salutation to the arch-persecutor of the way—"Brother Saul." These words must have sounded strange to Saul. But they were and are the words of the truest brotherhood in the world. The bond of this brotherhood is Jesus Christ. He is our elder Brother and we are all brethren in Him. This brotherhood to which Saul was thus admitted and to which we all belong is a heroic one—it calls for the sacrifice of self in the interest of humanity. Now that the church has ceased to use this scriptural salutation as in former years, it has been taken up by the Labor Unions and other secular organizations. Is the Christian Brotherhood not poorer by reason of its failure to use this scriptural salutation? Are we no longer brethren?

3. There are various types of religious experience. In the tenth lesson of the previous quarter we found the "understanding type" in the conversion of the Ethiopian. Today we meet the "violent type" in the conversion of Saul. Then there is "the gentle type" as in Timothy's experience, who, brought up in a godly home, was a Christian from his earliest days. From this we see what a glorious asset a Christian home is. It is our duty to recognize that there are various types of religious experience or conversion and to encourage all to develop the very best spiritual life possible to them.

Manual Work.—If you ask your class to provide themselves with note book and pencil for "Life of Paul," ask for them to be presented now and on them record the following outline with such explanations as you see fit to add or request them to make independently at home. Offer a prize for the best note-book at the end of the Life.

Life of Saul (Paul.)

Where born? (Acts 9:11 and 21:39).

Facts about Tarsus.

His rights of citizenship. (Acts 22:25-29).

His greatest teacher. (Acts 22:3; compare Acts 5:34).

How his own people regarded him. (Acts 26:5; Phil 3:5; Gal. 1:14).

How he felt toward the disciples of Christ (Acts 8:1-3; 26:9-11).

What sins he committed (Acts 7:58; 22:19-20; Gal. 1,13).

His trip to Damascus (Acts 9:1-2).

His conversion. (Acts 9:3-30; 22:1-16; 26:12-18; 1 Cor. 15:8-9; 2 Cor. 11:32-33; Gal. 1:13-17; 1 Tim. 1:12-16).

Assignments for Next Time.—Ask one to be especially prepared on Acts 5:4-40; ask another to find on what occasions the word Christian is used in the New Testament; a third to bring out a brief account of Antioch; a fourth a similar account of Barnabas; a fifth to find by what other names than Christian the followers of Christ are known in the New Testament, Acts 5:16; Acts 9:30; Acts 9:2; Acts 6:1; Acts 9:13; Rom. 8:33; Acts 24:5.

PRISONERS OF HOPE.

Zechariah was of priestly descent, a man of influence, and a leader of those who returned from captivity under Zerubbabel. He understood something of captivity and talked of evangelical prospects with beautiful and prophetic visions. Having had experience and careful observation he was abundantly qualified to speak with divine authority, and to inspire confidence and great hope in others, for he said, Zechariah 9:12, "Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope, even today do I declare that I will render double unto thee." The prophet, having taught those that were returned out of captivity to attribute their deliverance to the promise of the Messiah encourages them with the prospect of a joyful and happy life before them; but these promises have their accomplishment in the spiritual blessings of the gospel which we enjoy by Jesus Christ.

There is a turning point in the life of every one. Sometime the turning is the right way and often it is the wrong way; some time the low way, and then the highway; some time up the narrow way and very often down, down the broad way. We are invited to look to Jesus, and turn to him as our city of refuge. Turn you to the stronghold, ye prisoners of hope. The Bible is our guiding star of hope showing us which way to turn and then tells bow and where to go. Turn ye, turn ye, for why will you die? Sinners are prisoners, but they are prisoners of hope. Jesus is a strong-hold for them, a high, strong, everlasting Tower in whom they may be perfectly secure.

Today there are many in prison—some have been tried, condemned, sentenced, and there are others who are waiting to be tried for violation of the law. No doubt they have a shadow of hope in the dim, dark future. How glad the word pardoned would sound to them—how bright they would look, and how the features would play with joy! Every one condemned desires above all things to be pardoned. Glad, grand, great, noble privilege to breathe the air of freedom. O liberty, thou art a priceless jewel! Worth more than vast fortunes. In prison is an awful place to be. It makes the blood tingle in the arterial system as we hear the faithful heart beating under such a heavy load of guilt and condemnation. In prison, it is so dark, lonely and repulsive; it shuts out joy, and brings guilt. If they had thought right and lived right how happy they might be. Some of them were given capacity and were able to do much good in a land of liberty, but they stranded on a rock of ruin—disgraced themselves and blotted out their usefulness. This is the sad refrain that comes back to many hearts today. O, that every one who is induced to do wrong would just wait a while until right and reason tell them to stop and think how much suffering both in mind and body would be avoided!

When heated passion, prejudice, or any grudge wants revenge—let peace, love and forgiveness come in and take possession of your disposition. It may be hard to control yourself under many conditions, but an earnest effort will give you the victory and cause you to subdue your passions. A poor widow was partly dependent for support upon the produce of her garden. In it was a peach tree, the fruit of which was coveted by home boys of the village. They came one night to rob the tree, she had however gathered the fruit that day. In revenge for thier disappointment, they turned the swine into the garden which by morning had destroyed her vegetables. She picked up a knife with a name engraved on the handle, and it was the name of a boy whom she knew. She said nothing about it, and not long a revival took place in the village, and among those who became convicted of sin was the owner of the knife. After he was converted he went to the widow confessing his wrong. She told him she had long known it because she had the knife with his name on it. "Why did you not inform me and make me pay the damage?" he asked. "There was a more excellent way," she said, "I took that." "What way was it?" asked the lad. "To pray for you, in accordance with the Master's directions." So the widow had her revenge, and so will every one get his revenge if he will watch and wait, and go after it in the right way.

We are assured of God's favor today. Even today do I declare that blessings shall flow into every life and make it happy with his presence. I will render double unto thee. To you, every one of you, prisoners of hope, he will give you double comfort for all the trouble you have experienced. Do you not already realize that your blessings are double? The way is being opened up before you as never before; the advantages in life, the opportunities are being augmented, are being doubled all the time, and the way is opening up to higher, greater, and grander experience in the natural and divine life. I will render double unto you. Ought we not then to render better and more service to Him who gives us such a comforting assurance of help? Some time ago I asked an old man who was about 95 years old, what made him look so well and active. His ready reply was, "Prudence and prayer." He also added, "When I was a young man I found myself in the prison of sin, but Jesus opened the door and I came out. He brought me out from the bondage of sin and set me free with his pardoning love. I never forgot that day—it has been a joy to me all the way. I was a prisoner of hope bound by the shameful ties of sin and indulgence, and

THE STRENGTH OF OUR WEAKNESS.

Human nature is not capable of the burdens put upon it. At the crucial moment it snaps, under the strains it must endure. The Creator thus intended, and so built and fashioned human nature. Thus even through our weakness God would reach and redeem us. This is what the apostle meant when he wrote: "My strength is made perfect in weakness." In our weakness, and at our weakest point, God comes to give strength. "For when I am weak," Paul declared, "then am I strong." Where Paul's weakness was manifest there God entered to give strength.

This is a broad and far reaching principle. Where and when human nature breaks down, divine nature comes in to supplement and strengthen.

One makes an excuse that one is quick tempered, "and can't help the harm that comes of it because it is just human nature—my nature." If being quick tempered is your weakness, just there the Father appears to come in and give strength. One is indifferent, cold-hearted, unconcerned as to church and Christ. "Can't help it; just my nature; born that way. Cannot be blamed, therefore." If indifference and cold-heartedness is your weakness, that is what you can help, by the grace of God. His strength comes to supply your weakness. Where human nature breaks down, divine nature builds up.

This is the nature of every miracle in the sacred records. When man's lack was sorest, God's supply was surest. The lame man was lame by nature—had been lame all his life. The very thing that God's power supplied was ability to leap and walk. The blind man was blind from birth up. What he lacked most was light; and that God supplied. "Take up thy bed and walk" said the Master. "God faces us with our impossibilities," says G. Campbell Moigan. "Why, my Master, I cannot walk: that is the one thing I am incapable of doing." "Well, my son you must walk. That is the one thing you shall now do." There man's weakness and God's strength fused, and man received power. "For when I am weak, then am I strong," declared Paul. All men who have tried Christ and found Him strong bear testimony to the same fact.

Shall we give way to our weakness, because it is our nature and we cannot help it? God forbid. In and at our weakness God comes to supply most needed strength.

SPIRITUAL RELATIONSHIP.

When our Lord Christ told His disciples that it was expedient for them that He go away, they could not comprehend. They thought to lose Him in the flesh was to lose Him altogether.

As after events proved, being acquainted with Him in the flesh, they hardly knew Him at all. He had spiritual worth for them they had never known or felt.

It is even so with us, in relationship to our friends. We do not calculate at all as to their spiritual worth until they are gone. Your good neighbor is of great worth, of invaluable weight to you, spiritually: but you have never stopped once to consider it. His economic value, his social worth, his financial aid and convenience have often been thought of and appreciated. If he were gone, what one would most think of was his spiritual worth.

When Tennyson's friend Hallam was gone, in the flesh, the great poet felt that the departure was a distinct loss that could not be atoned for. Finally the poet felt the spiritual influence of the man he had loved and then he wrote:

"Far thou art, but ever nigh;
I have thee still, and I rejoice;
I prosper, circled with thy voice;
I shall not lose thee though I die."

The spiritual relationship is dearest and weightiest, for it cheers more in life and survives the shock of death and the sadness of separation.

Paul wrote that he was constrained to know no man "after the flesh," but he wanted to know all men in the spirit.

Your neighbor's and your friend's spiritual worth and weight! Had you thought on and appreciated that sufficiency?

A WORTHY AMBITION.

A mother writing the Editor of The Sun recently said, "I want a copy of the Life of Gypsy Smith for my boy to read, for I want him to be a preacher."

We submit that this mother's ambition for her son is a most worthy one. All too few mothers, we are persuaded, cherish such an ambition for their sons. Most mothers want their sons to be lawyers, doctors, teachers, congressmen, governors and presidents. They are anxious enough for their neighbor's sons to be good, but they want their own sons to be great. "Preachers have to live so hard, and be away from home so much, and rarely become great and famous you know."

With such ambitions and ideas in the mothers' hearts, it is not difficult to prophesy what their sons will be.

There is no higher calling under heaven, and no holier one, and no greater than that of the humble, faithful minister of the gospel. He fills an office not permitted even to the angels. He speaks the words of soberness, of truth, of faith, hope and love, and of life to come. He is the forerunner of his Master and makes the path straight before Him. All just men love such a minister and Heaven bends to bless and honor him.

All of which mothers, and others, admit in the abstract, but when it comes to their own sons, how many mothers of our day prefer that their sons should be preachers rather than presidents?

WORK AND WORSHIP.

The two words, work and worship, may be akin, but they are quite different in character. It is a good thing to work, to work much, long and late. But work, however zealous and pious, is not worship. No man can work himself into the kingdom of God. This comes only by worship. "By grace ye are saved." And this not by works, but by and because of worship.

Work may lead to worship, and should. But work cannot take the place of worship. No man can make enough, by work in the week, to supplant in his heart the need, the necessity of worship on the Sabbath. "I have worked hard all the week and am too tired to go to church on the Sabbath," is a world's and Satan's excuse. Work, however honestly and zealously done, cannot take the place of worship. He who thinks so drives himself further from God instead of being drawn closer to God.

What the Master calls for is not doing good, but being good. And no sort of service or doing or deeds can substitute for this being.

At a meeting of the Religious Education Association Dr. Francis G. Peabody dean of the Divinity School of Harvard University called attention to this tendency in society in the following strong language: "The absorbing interest of the present time in social duty, its desire for social service, and its dream of social revolution have been a summons to the Christian church, as also to the modern world, to new forms of duty; but have they not, it is asked, diverted the church from its original and permanent purpose of redeeming and sanctifying the individual soul? Is not the church tempted to diminish its devotion to worship and to apply its energies to work? Are we not substituting clubs, gymnasiums, and social settlements for prayers, conversions, and revivals? The awakening of the social conscience has been so abrupt and startling, and the reaction of an individualized and self-centered religion so marked and compelling, that the church as a religious shrine may be easily supplanted by the church as a social laboratory; and the practice of the presence of God may be forgotten in the practice of the service of man. Is the Christian church to teach an industrial revolution instead of a spiritual evolution? Are we to be so busy in doing good that we have no time to be good? Is the old issue between faith and works to be revived, and must another Paul preach again the vanity of unspiritualized conduct and the power of the risen life?"

Man needs "the practice of the presence of God" more than he needs all other practices and pursuits, and whatever leads him to forget or ignore that practice leads him to bad results. There is nothing under high heaven that can take the place, in man's life, of the devout worship of God at the sanctuary on the Sabbath day. Who neglects that, unless physically incapacitated, does so to his own hurt.

This busy, restless, nervous age of ours needs, as no age has ever needed more, the "practice of the presence of God" in sincere and devout worship at the sanctuary on the Sabbath day. A spiritual awakening, not an industrial development, is what our time stands in direct need of.

—The last squadron of American troops hauled down their flag and took leave of Cuba March 31. Immediately the lone star flag of Cuba was hoisted in its stead and now it is Cuba for the Cubans.

GENERAL BOOTH.

Mediately or immediately the world finds a man's weight and worth. It matters little as to his particular calling. As history and events go, who would have chosen street preaching and slum scraping as a highway to favor and to fame? Yet just that is what one of the most distinguished characters of our day chose. We do not say that he chose it for fame, but he chose it—and came to fame.

It has been nearly three score years ago. William Booth saw "the submerged tenth" of London and his heart went out in pity. Here were men and women beneath the mud. No church received them. For good reason. They had fallen too low to go to church.

William Booth conceived the notion of carrying the gospel to them, planting the banner of the Cross and of the church in their midst. Some might be saved, and pulled ultimately from beneath the mire. The "Salvation Army" was born. The effect of Booth's work spread and multiplied. Soon world-wide schemes were born in this devout and fertile brain. Every city in the civilized world was soon to see the banners and hear the drum beat of the "Army" created, organized and on the march "to rescue the perishing and care for the dying" in the waste and fallen places. In charge of this vast army, many thousands strong, Booth was made "General."

Next Saturday General Booth celebrates his eightieth birthday. Already hundreds of telegrams from rulers of principalities, governors of States and mayors of great cities have reached the General, congratulating him upon his continued and useful career. To these felicitations from America the good man thus responds: "On this, my 80th birthday, tell the American people this: If they will seek the honor of God, the reign of righteousness, the welfare of the friendless people, the riches that endure forever, with the same self-sacrificing avidity with which they seek the wealth and pleasure of this world, they will have a good chance of finding that life of satisfaction which now so often eludes them and of building up a pattern nation for the world to imitate."

Elon College Notes.

Easter services will be conducted by Dr. Daniel Albright Long on next Sunday. The choir will furnish special music.

Last Saturday evening in the college chapel at 7:30 P. M. Miss Allen's class in elocution gave a recital which was very much enjoyed by all who were present. It was the best that has been rendered this year.

Misses. Mary Pritchard and Nellie Cole of Chapel Hill, N. C., were visitors here last Saturday night and Sunday. Miss Pritchard who is now teaching in the graded school at Chapel Hill is a graduate of Elon College and her many friends were glad to welcome her again.

Miss Stella Cox who has been in Raleigh for some time is at home this week visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. L. I. Cox.

The annual entertainment of the Psi-Phi-Lian Literary society will be given next Saturday evening in the college chapel at 7:30 P. M. You are cordially invited to attend.

Easter will soon be here and the young people are looking forward to having a good time as the rules will be suspended Sunday afternoon and all day Monday. Some are going home to see their parents and others to see their friends.

The pulpit was filled last Sunday morning by Rev. Dr. Newman who preached a splendid sermon from the book of Psalms. He has preached quite a series of sermons from this Book and we certainly do enjoy them and pray that God will abundantly bless his work.

At 7:30 P. M. the monthly consecration meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society was led by Mr. E. T. Hines. We were glad to see so many young people taking part in the meeting to help build up the standard of Christianity among men.

The annual orator's contest of the Philologist Literary Society was given last Friday night in the Phi. hall. The judges were Professors Lawrence, Kernodle and Harper. There were nine contestants for this gold medal, each of which had a good oration and delivered it well. Mr. E. L. Daughtrey was awarded the medal.

Among the visitors on the hill this week, have been Rev. W. G. Clements of Morrisville, N. C., Supt. Judd, of Wake county, E. Moffitt of Asheboro, N. C., and Mr. Mendenhall of Greensboro, N. C.

Mrs. W. S. Tate, mother of our librarian, Miss Mamie Tate, is and has been for some time quite sick.

Profs. W. C. Wicker and J. T. Cobb and Messrs. E. T. Hines, and J. W. Barrett, Jr., are in Concord this week attending the State S. S. Convention.

Local tax carried in the Shallow Ford public school district one mile north of here last Saturday. The fight was hard and close, we congratulate the good people upon this work of progress.

My Dear Children and Friends:

These busy spring days are rather quiet in our Corner, much to the regret of Uncle Jim, as the 1st of the month is here and bills to pay. Let us all wake up and do our full duty. We shall greatly appreciate.

Paul Fowler is quite busy now looking after his young ox. It is just one week old. Bedford Brown is attending to “Rufus” the calf reported last week. Bedford and his calf just suit each other, they don't say much till about eating time. Willie Knott is bragging about Rose-bud being the finest calf in the county, and is expecting to win first prize at County Fair next fall. “Uncle John” does not say much but leans on the hog pen sunny days and listens at the cracking of the corn and says, them's growin,” and names weights all the way from 200 lbs. to 500 lbs. each. Miss Dora can't make the old hens keep all their baby chicks at home and when they get mixed up then there is trouble. You know how it is? Well things at the Orphanage are beginning to look like crop time; and we do hope for great success this year.

The following donations have been received:

John R. Foster, Burlington, N. C., 12 hdk's. for little girls; Mrs. T. P. Dawson, Elon College, N. C., one calf. We thank Bro. Foster and Sister Dawson for their gifts. This calf makes us 12 head on hand now.

We regret very much that the printer or some one, after copy left us, omitted the following from the liberal donation of Pleasant Hill church and community, and should have appeared with other names—they appear in order on our “book of donations:” Artilla Teague, 1 quilt; Add Teague, 1 quilt; Kate Holmes, 1 quilt; Della Fogleman, 1 quilt, and garden seed; Mrs. Sarah Euliss, 1 hen; Mrs. Sarah Fogleman, 1 hen; Mrs. P. D. Teague, 1 hen, 5 lbs sugar, onion sets, garden seed; Mrs. Angie Iseley, onion sets, and garden seed.

We are very thankful to these kind friends for their gifts, very sorry that this report has been delayed by oversight.

With love to the children and best wishes for the field, I am,

Yours faithfully, Uncle Jim.

Elon College, N. C.
 Dear Uncle Jim:

I have had the measles but am well now. I do not think there is much fun in it because you feel so bad all inside; but its nice when you can sit up and have Mama read nice stories to you and Grandma fixes nice things for you to eat. That's the good part! I send my dime. Lovingly, Maryon Saunders.

Glad you got along so nicely, Maryon. Hope the pretty warm sunshine will soon bring back the roses to your little cheeks.

Wedowee, Ala., March 26, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I want to join the little Band of Cousins. I am a little boy nine years old and wish to join the band. I go to Sunday-school every Sunday and like to go. Enclosed please find five cents for my dues for March.

Your nephew, Jesse Dollar.

Your name enrolled with pleasure, Jesse. You and sister work hard for other little boys and girls to join the Band.

Wedowee, Ala., March 26, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl 12 years old, and want to join the band of little cousins. I have been reading in my paper tonight. We get a Girl's Companion every Sunday. I like to read it. I read fine stories. So I will close for this time. Enclosed please find 5 cents for the little orphans.

Your loving niece,

Sallie Dollar.

We welcome this little Alabama cousin heartily. Our little cousins from the South must spring up like violets now that the warm days are near at hand. Let us hear from you little Southerners.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years local remedies and by constantly failing to prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and the only permanent cure is a local disease and Catarrh Cure, manufactured by R. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a drachm. It is the only constitutional cure on the market. Catarrh Cure, manufactured by R. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Dear Sir:—Enclosed find check for $3.00 for the month of March, which I am due the Orphanage. I am well. Hope you and family are all well. I hope Fred and Earl are both well and getting on nicely. My father is not so well as he was when I was up there last. Tell Fred and Earl to be good boys till I come again. I will close with much love to all in the home.

Very Sincerely,
Mrs. Bettie H. Cates.

Holland, Va., Mar. 29, 1909

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come again with my letter and dime for March. I am late. You will have to excuse me. Papa cut his arm very bad about three weeks ago and Mama had to nurse him and she did not have the time to write for me. I will try to do better next time. Uncle Jim, I help Mama to pop peanuts every day. I can pop lots of them. Do the little cousins pop peanuts? I hope they are all well and having a fine time. Please find enclosed my dime which Papa gave me. I will close with much love and best wishes to you and all the little cousins.

Sincerely,
Maud Lee Howell.

Our little folks want to eat all the peanuts they can get. Maud, but do not care to "pop" much.

Dear Uncle Jim:

The Newman babies are a little late this time. We have colds. Shall be so glad when it gets really warm.

Uncle Jim, daddy is in the poetry business. He set two hens. One hatched four chicks, the other three. You know where to come for fried chicken this summer.

We send our dimes. Hope all are well.

Lovingly,

Hannah Clare Newman.

Clayton, Ala., Mar. 24, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We are a little late, but no less interested for it. We have a good time these spring days playing in the sand. We send love and dimes.

Fondly,
J. Newman Denton,
S. E. Denton, Jr.

You are fortunate, boys, to have the sand days come so early. Our little ones are still kept close on account of the high March winds.

Be angry and sin not.

MAINTAINING SPIRITUAL EQUILIBRIUM.

This world is full not only of distractions but also of disturbances which tend both to draw the Christian from his heavenward course and to upset him along his pilgrim pathway. Everywhere are stumbling-blocks and pitfalls, and easy is the descent into the gutter. In view of these moral dangers very apposite is the warning of Scripture, "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall!" The gay and the giddy quickly come to grief, where only the cautious and the circumspect walk safely.

Inasmuch as so many temptations and moral perils tend to sweep the Christian off his feet the utmost watchfulness is necessary lest life for any particular soul end in utter shipwreck. The question of questions then becomes on inquiry as to how to maintain spiritual equilibrium. On a correct answer to this query depend the issues of life. In the first place, it may be said that no man can provide, as by a kind of moral gyroscopic device, for his own stability as an onward spirit, any more than the ship in the midst of the billows can secure itself against buffeting and rolling by the waves. No man is sufficient unto himself as a moral being. One's own good resolutions cannot be depended on to keep a man right and upright. "Morality" alone is a weak and undependable reed on which to lean.

Only those who have lived long in the world realize in any adequate way the force of the temptations which assail even the most experienced and ordinarily good people. Satan has many stratagems by which he seeks to entrap men, and he knows how to snare even old birds. Every day's papers bring tidings of some supposedly reliable men or women who have fallen under the power of the tempter, and have become the slaves of sin and so of Satan. Lost his spiritual equilibrium! is the sad comment which must be made with respect to many a man's career; beginning perhaps with excellent promise, it has ended in sore and shameful disaster.

Spiritual equilibrium, or moral footing, so necessary to secure and to safeguard, can be maintained only by diligent use of the means of grace which God has generously provided for all who are wise enough to make use of them. Among these means of growth in grace, by which the graces of the Christian life are to be cultivated, are the stated reading of God's word, the securing of hours for meditation, the diligent pursuit of prayer, the conversation of good people and the frequenting of the sanctuary. Man shall not live by the bread alone, nor support his life on machinery, trade, arts or manufactures, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God—which words are spread before him in the volume of the Holy Book of books. In quiet meditation God's Holy Spirit finds opportunity to interpret and apply the deeper meanings of that word, and to take of the things of Christ and show them unto the believing soul. By prayer the means of communication with God are kept open, man speaks to his Creator in accents of mingled humility and confidence, and drinks again and again of the divine refreshment. By spending time in the company of religious people a taste for things pure and lovely is developed and strengthened, their unworldly conversation helping to form good manners. But all these personal and private means of grace require to be supplemented and reinforced by the frequenting of the public sanctuary, where prayer is wont to be made and where God's word is regularly expounded by trained students thereof. Many people by staying away from church have tempted the tempter to come to them, have nullified their other processes of essayed worship, have grown cold in the faith, and have finally dropped away into the mass of the world's people, and so ultimately into perdition. Let every man be sedulously careful to pursue and improve the means of grace above enumerated, in order that, in this world of turmoil and temptation, he may be able to maintain spiritual equilibrium.—New York Observer.

IOWA LETTER.

I am reminded that I am dealing lightly with my promise to furnish a few notes occasionally for the Sun readers, but the negligence is not premeditated. Like many of the brethren we have just failed to write. We could have told you of some more very cold weather, plenty of snow and ice. The last of a very deep snow is just now leaving. It has been fine for sleighing and we have never seen so much of it for so long a time. We are now in a spring month but it is still cool. The birds are singing their spring-like songs and the fields are taking on a greenish hue and so we feel that the force of winter has been well nigh spent. They tell us that in the coming months we are to see Iowa at its best. We appreciate the kind wishes of our friends for success in our new field of labor. We are going to do our best by the help of the Lord and as He blesses us we shall be glad to report for His glory. Our services have been well attended notwithstanding the very cold weather. Last Sunday the weather was pleasant and we had the largest attendance at Sunday-school that we have had since we came. Our average for the school so far has been about 100. Our mission offering the second Sunday in March was about $57.00. This is not large considering the ability of the church but I am told that the offering was as large again as it usually is and so we are hopeful for this phase of the work. The C. E. Society is taking steps to purchase a small mission library. We are hoping too to have a mission study class before long. The Ladies' Aid Society meets each Saturday afternoon and is well attended. There were more than one hundred present at the last meeting. There is a Home and Foreign Mission Society which meets monthly. The society is fortunate in having a member who has served as a foreign missionary in India for several years. Her talks in the meetings are interesting and instructive.

We have announced to begin a series of meetings next Sunday, April 4th, and we are praying to the end that we may have a good revival. It would mean much for our work here as the church has not had a revival in quite a while.

We are feeling much at home and the impression grows upon us that we are in the midst of a mighty good people. I failed to state before that they gave us a pounding to begin with and we have not fully gotten over it yet. We have disposed of the two tons of coal but we still have some of the good things to eat. We are healthy in body and happy in the Lord's service, but if any of our friends in the good old South wish to add to our delight just pay us a visit and we will show you how it can be done. I met a man the other day who was associated with a college mate of mine in the Spanish-American War. So you see how close we have come to seeing some one that we knew before we came out here. We hope to see our old friends again and to make many new ones and to meet them all in the better world.

A SISTER'S INFLUENCE.

A sermon about Moses and the strange phenomenon of a bush that was burning, but was not consumed, has set me to thinking about the remarkable life and work of that great man. I have been thinking over the early influence and the little things which affected his early life. I find that one of the things which I have never heard emphasized in sermon, Sunday-school lesson, or in any article on the life of Moses seems to stand out very prominently. And I would like to say a word about this. It is of the love of his sister, who watched over the ark of bulrushes and who eagerly waited for a chance to do something for him, that I wish to write.

You hear a great deal said about the influence of the early life of Moses, and of his training at Pharaoh's court and of many other things that helped to shape his character. But consider for a while what the watchfulness of his sister meant to him. If you read the story you will find only a few lines are used in telling about it. But sometimes the fruits of a life time are summed up in a single sentence. The diplomacy of his sister in the little speech she made to the king's daughter secured for Moses the loving care of a mother to nurse him. It was a simple act but it was his mother's early influence that interested him in the life of his people. But for that he might have grown up simply an ornament of Pharaoh's court. And it was the intercession of his sister that made the influence of that mother possible. If you wish to call what she did for Moses a simple act I will grant it so; but it was the foundation of the deliverance of the children of Israel, and you would hardly call that a simple or an insignificant thing. And that is exactly what I want to emphasize. It was the little deed prompted by a sister's love that bore such a great fruit in later years. She cared for him while he was too young to care for himself, and she provided for him when his tears were the only appeal he could make. Whether or not Moses was the first boy whose life was blessed by the thoughtfulness of a sister I don't know, and I am not concerned about that. I know, however, he was not the last boy who has been thus blessed, and I know that it is possible for thousands of girls to exert a wholesome influence over the lives of their brothers, and perhaps make a success of what would otherwise be a failure. A sister has an influence over her brother that no one else has. I know scores of boys who are living wild, reckless lives, but they have sisters whose opinions they respect and of whom they are thoughtful and tender, and they would spill their last drop of blood sooner than hear their sister's fair name insulted. They respect their purity and the high standard of their lives and if there is anything that can reach these boys the influence of such girls is the power that can do it.

Consider for a moment girls the possibilities of your influence. Think of what the simple act of the sister of Moses resulted in and then think of what you can do to help some one. It may be a brother who needs an encouraging word or perhaps a sister in need of a word of advice, or perhaps some friend can be influenced by your life, or a parent made happy by some act of love. Whatever your hands find to do, do it in the spirit you believe the Master would have performed it in, and it will not fail to produce golden fruit. The world may never learn about it, but when you reach the eternal city you will find it emblazoned in large letters upon the book of life. A Brother.

Your Cotton Crop Can Be Increased

It costs no more to cultivate an acre that produces two bales of cotton than an acre which produces only one-quarter of a bale. Why not see what you can do with

Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers

Other men have been able to double and more than double their yield per acre with a liberal application of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers.

Messrs. Lucas & Jackson of Kelsey County, Tenn., used Virginia-Carolina Fertilizer on about 55 acres planted with cotton, and say: "We have the finest crop of cotton we ever saw, and all the people around here think the same. We actually counted 447 bolls on one stalk. Another stalk had by actual count 409 bolls, forms, squares and blossoms. On about 8 acres we expect to make about 2 bales to the acre, and an estimate of adjoining farms not so fertilized and under other cultural methods, will yield only 1 bale to five acres."

An interesting picture of the cotton plants referred to will be found in the new 1909 Virginia-Carolina Farmers' Year Book, copy of which may be had from your fertilizer dealer, or will be sent free, if you write our nearest sales office.

HOW TO PRAY.

Daniel could doubtless teach a great many today how to pray. He did not get into bed and say his prayers when half asleep, but kneeling before open windows, his face turned toward Jerusalem, he prayed earnestly, devoutly, sincerely, expecting to receive an answer to his petitions. There is too much form in prayer, when words fly up but the thought remains below. Such prayers never to heaven go. The apostles had been with their Master, had heard him pray, and then very wisely said, "Lord, teach us how to pray." A parrot can say a prayer, but a parrot cannot pray. Many prayers are said, but far less are made. Not a few find time during the day and evening for work and pleasure, but seem to think they are too busy to pray. No man ever makes lasting headway who finds no time for private devotion. He may succeed for a time, but a man might as well cut off the fountain and expect the stream to continue, as to cut off the divine source of power, and expect to continue to be strong.

It is a mockery before God for a man to go through a formal act of saying his prayers when his mind and thought are elsewhere, or when he is doing it simply because he thinks he ought to. The hungry child does not ask for bread simply because he thinks he ought to do so. The sick patient does not take medicine as a mere form. The guilty do not ask for mercy and pardon half asleep, or as they are turning over in bed at night. The hungry ask for bread because they are hungry and want food. The sick take the applied remedies because they want to be made well. The guilty plead for mercy because they want freedom. And shall any come before God in a less earnest and sincere manner? Will a man mock God? How did the Saviour pray when in Gethsemane? If we are truly in our Gethsemanes of devoutness before God, if we, like Daniel, are in earnest, we will be "in the spirit" of prayer, praying from a soul that is in touch with God, praying in the faith of the woman who touching the hem of the garment of the Master received virtue from him, praying with the power of a Daniel, that with windows open toward God in heaven, there will be such a communication between the soul of man and God that there will be received a great blessing. We need more true faith in God, more devoutness and sincerity, more expectation in prayer, for with purity of heart and such praying, there will be such visions of God as will behold the very doors of heaven open, and, like John of old, the one thus praying will be able to say, "Immediately I was in the spir-

"Seest Thou a Man Diligent in His Business? He Shall Stand Before Kings; He Shall Not Stand Before Mean Men."

Wilbur and Orville Wright have been diligent in their business for many years. King Edward VII, after negotiations, visited Pau, France, on March 17, for the express purpose of making the acquaintance of the Wrights and witnessing their conquest of the air. He arrived in the afternoon and the Brothers Wright and their sister were presented to him by the local officials. Wilbur then conducted the King to the shed where the aeroplane, decked with American, British and French flags, was housed in preparation. A large group then minutely explained the mechanism to King Edward. After this the machine was taken out to the starting track. Wilbur first embarked alone and carried out a series of beautiful evolutions above a crowd of spectators of whom King Edward was the center. He then descended and took his sister on board and soared to a great height. Then he swooped toward the earth and skimmed along the ground; then, putting on speed, he was rapidly lost to view; but within a few minutes he was seen returning and swept past the King, alighted with easy precision. During the second flight the aeroplane traveled at the rate of forty-five miles an hour. The King paid particular attention to Orville Wright and questioned him sympathetically about the accident that befell him at Fort Myer. When Miss Wright was complimented by the King upon her coolness, she said that she had so much confidence in her Brothers and the machine that she felt as safe as in a railway car. The King shook hands heartily with the three Wrights and said that he was looking forward to seeing them in England.

This has a double interest: the interest of amazing invention and the interest of strict attention to business. The United States cannot claim all modern inventions, but in steamboats, the telegraph, the telephone, the aeroplane, and several other great discoveries it has surpassed the world.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

GIPSY SMITH: HIS LIFE AND WORK.
By Himself.

This is a grand record of achievement. A boy lad, born in a gipsy camp, has been used as an instrument in God's hands to awaken multitudes throughout the world to spiritual consciousness. He tells his story in a book of 330 pages, full of rich and varied experiences from birth through years of successful soul-winning. The style of the book is not only readable; it is a humble attempt to satisfy the persistent requests of his friends for a history of his romantic career. The narrative is prefaced by appreciative introductions by Dr. Alexander McLaren and G. Campbell Morgan. Several illustrations add to the interest of the book.

We offer "Gipsy Smith" handsomely bound in cloth as a premium for two new subscriptions to The Christian Sun at $1.50 each; or for one new subscription and 45 cents additional.

We will sell it in combination with a renewal to The Sun for $2.20. The book alone will be sent to any address for $1.10, postpaid.

a message of love is doubled with telling interest to every one who hears. Give service, for there is happiness in serving. Give God the honor, and the world your service, and streams of glory will flow into the life and soul. There are so many prisoners today locked up in the dark, cold prison of sin who ought to come out, who must come out. Send your petition to the Supreme Ruler and ask him to pardon you. If any one who sees these lines is bound by sin, permit him who wrote them to introduce you to the supreme Ruler that you may seek and obtain pardon. No doubt there are many who will go to him for refuge and help, as they hear him saying in his heavenly message. SUSPICION'S DESTRUCTIVENESS.

If we are in doubt as to whether a person is seeking to harm us, the surest way to bring about that harm is to make our suspicion apparent. Nothing antagonizes two persons more completely and destructively than either one's expressed suspicion of the other. Many a time has the friendship of two persons been wrecked because one got to suspecting the other of an unfriendliness that never existed until it was brought into being and cultivated by the openly expressed belief that it was there. We ought not to show suspicion; and we ought not to have suspicion. If our own lives are as they should be, we have nothing to fear from any one; suspicion only breeds trouble and weakens us. And our resolute refusal to doubt the goodness of others will often help them to do away with an unworthiness that might indeed have worked harm to us, if encouraged to continue by our expressed belief that it existed.—S. S. Times.

Twenty-five thousand manuscripts were submitted and the Emperor is having a hard time deciding on the winner. The mayor recently resigned rather than stand a "recall" election. What if this law were applied to United Senators and other long term officers?

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Blasting At the Rock Of Ages.—Is the decalogue no more sacred than a syllabus? Is the family as a unit to disappear? Is the home as an institution doomed? Is there no absolute wrong and no sacred and eternal right? Is immorality only a breach of society etiquette? Is democracy a failure, and the Declaration of Independence simply spectacular rhetoric? Is the change from paganism to Christianity no greater than that of getting a new hat? Are conceptions of right and wrong as changeable as styles of dress? Is the sole effect of many children that of increasing tiny graves? Are there holier relations without the marriage bond than within it? Are our most sacred institutions only myths, and our most cherished institutions only passing phenomena that will soon fade and fail?

The great host of Christian Sun readers will have no trouble in answering these questions satisfactorily, and if we ourselves alone were concerned the questions might be dismissed as idle and empty.

But we are told that these questions and their kind are those much discussed in our colleges and universities and the answers are contrary to what they each and all would have been a few years since.

Mr. Harvold Bolee, a writer for the May Cosmopolitan, declares, with a show down of authority, and with direct quotations, names of authors attached, that leading teachers in the leading colleges of the land are "blasting at the rock of ages," arguing with all zest and vehemence against the ten commandments, the sanctity of the home, and even the marriage vow. The said Mr. Bolee claims to have spent two years as visitor and special student in several colleges whose name he gives. He took lectures in these institutions and claims to quote directly from notes and interviews had in class rooms from Cambridge to California. "In my course," declares the writer, after naming the long list of institutions attended, "I have heard all the multiplex issues of morality and all the pressing problems of political economy—marriage, divorce, the home, religion, and democracy—put through merciless processes of examination, as if these things were fossils, graptolites, vertebrates, equations, chemical elements, or chimeras." And, continues the writer, "There is scholarly repudiation of all solemn authority. The past has lost its grip on the professor. From the college standpoint there are no God-established covenants. What happens at the primaries is more to the point than what took place in Palestine." As a result of his study of two years as to what the colleges are teaching, as touching our most cherished and sacred institutions, the home, the family, the church, the writer declares, "Contemporary college teaching, as I find it, may be likened to an exploring expedition over a sea that has not been charted or across unknown continents. Everything encountered is new. The lecturer take you along a course lined with none of the immemorial landmarks. The church does not count. To accept the teachings of any hierarchy is like looking for life and light in the grave. * * * And the home, once the cradle of the race, has become the breeding place of woe, ignorance, inefficiency, and debt. The professors even suggest and outline a substitute for the modern home. They teach young men and women, plainly, that an immoral act is merely one contrary to the prevailing conceptions of society; and that the daring who defy the code do not offend any Deity, but simply arouse the venom of the majority—the majority that has not yet grasped the new idea. Out of Harvard comes the teaching that there are no absolute evils and that the highest ethical life consists at all times in the breaking of rules which have grown too narrow for the actual case."

The summary is that "marriage is a transitory standard and that the home as an institution is doomed. * * *"

* * * "The professors are sanguine that their metaphysical science will illumine humanity. Theology, they believe, is breaking down. At Syracuse University, whose chancellor is a clergyman, I heard it stated that to change from one religion to another is like getting a new hat." As stated, the writer gives the professor and the college, in each instance, from which his quotations and deductions are received. It is further stated that there are 493 institutions of higher learning in the United States, in whose class rooms are 229,600 students being taught daily by twenty-one thousand professors and assistants. "Thus a quarter of a million people are busy with new ideas, doctrines which are potent in transforming the standards of society."

One can hardly estimate the potency of this influence, flowing daily through the college term, from teacher to pupil. What the teacher teaches the pupil may, by slow degrees or fast, be expected to absorb and believe.

If the article is valid, and it has every appearance of being so, one wonders what the youth of our country are to be led to. It seems awful to contemplate. Are the professors in our leading colleges really "Blasting at the Rock of Ages?" God of mercy forbid. If they are, then so much the worse for the professors and the colleges. Here is neither time nor space to give grounds of objection to what these professors teach. A question must suffice. For the reader wearies and the heart grows sick at contemplating the results of this new stuff and trash.

We quote again, "The professors are sanguine that their metaphysical science will illumine humanity. Theology they believe is breaking down." We wonder if one of these professors could point us to one seat of learning, shrine of culture, or house of charity, for the "illumination of humanity" that "metaphysical science" ever conceived, constructed or supported? No, sirs, the very institutions from which such skeptical and agnostic doctrine come were themselves built by and in the name of the theology that is believed to be breaking down. Who was Harvard's first great benefactor and for whom named? John Harvard, a preacher of the gospel. Who were the founders and first trustees of Yale? Ten or a dozen humble preachers of the gospel in the province of Connecticut. Why was Williams and Mary chartered and founded in the early history of the Virginia colony? To teach people theology, pri-

FROM THE FIELD.

OUR WESTERN LETTER.

Dear Yoke-Fellows:

When I was a boy on the farm, I often saw a yoke of oxen drawing a load. Both oxen were fastened in the same yoke, and yet they seemed to pull one against the other, but they seemed to like it. It may be that pulling against one another may be all right in an ox yoke, but I doubt that it is all right for brethren to find delight in pulling one against the other under the yoke of Christ. When I began this letter "Dear Yoke-Fellows," it seemed to be ludicrous, if I only meant to use the name without the spirit.

It is a happy experience when two, or more, souls are bound together in the work of Christ, if they can feel and work under the thought that they are fastened together by the yoke of love—yoked on to the Lord Jesus that they may do their best work in the promulgation of the Gospel. That is a beautiful sight to look upon, to contemplate, a band of men and women, united in labor and love for the spread of the truth. No wonder Jesus said, take my yoke upon you and learn of Me. The yoke of Jesus is a bond none of us need dread, for it holds us to Christ, and that is the need of every heart.

Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D., Secretary of the American Christian Convention, in his office work has been studying some interesting questions. One especially as it bears upon the outlook of the Christian Church in the North. It is as to why in so many places we once had strong churches in thrifty communities, as did other denominations. Now in many of these places we have no church at all, while the other denominational bodies are living and prospering, and serving their day and generation well and wisely. That does seem like a singular thing in the history of denominational effort, for which there must be some reason. A few of our people seem disposed to shut their eyes to the facts and move on, as though everything is lovely. We do not belong to that company. We believe it is not even brave to pursue such a course. If the cause is sick, in the name of all that is good, let us be honest enough to admit the fact, and then brave enough to believe there is a cure, and let us go to work, seeking to find the cure—it is most certainly needed, and we but stultify ourselves when we try to make it appear that all is well, when we know better—when we know that disease of some kind is working destruction to the body. For one, I believe with Dr. Burnett, as to this matter, there is a "fly in the ointment," and the sooner we get it out, the sooner we shall see a change for the better in our work as a people. I am glad to say there is improvement already in much of our work. There are signs of more vigor and more activity among us, but this is but the beginning. We need to get out of the lowlands of inactivity, and we need to go well up onto the high lands of an active service, where we can get the pure air, and so make improvement possible. There will be another great advantage on the high lands and in the pure air. With better health we can pray more and get nearer to God. It is a fact that praying is not easy work, and when a man is weak and sluggish from malaria, he does not do much praying—he has not the life to do it. But you let the man who is a Christian get up on the high lands, away from the malaria, where the fresh and pure air fills his being with new physical vigor, and if there is any Christ in him, then you may expect the man to do some praying, and the praying man will get to work, and getting to work under the power of real prayer, you may expect things to come to pass—results will follow. As I see it, this is one of the needs of the people of the Christian Church—we need more prayer for the individual life. This is the way to get out of a poor dying state, and go to living to mean something for the salvation of a lost world.

The missionary outlook at this time is far more encouraging than it has been for quite a while. The annual offering for Foreign Missions, now in process of crystallization, begins to promise well for the year. Already Miss Mishler is on her way to Porto Rico to re-enter the work there as a missionary, and we have cause to believe the way is almost open for Bro. McCord and his wife to return to Japan. Now, if we may all pull together, as in the yoke of Christ, we may soon see a high degree of prosperity prevailing throughout the Christian Church. And brethren, it is useless to talk of any permanent or great prosperity in our work, except as by a life prayer we get energy of the Spirit and throw ourselves into the missionary work. We must be a missionary people, or we must be a dwarf church, and a dwarf church which has had chance to grow, and would not, need expect only to live if at all, at best only in a poor dying state.

Such a body of Christians as we profess to be, with the Bible as our only creed, ought to be leaders in the great world of missionary activity, and it will be a shame to us, if we do not fill our place to the credit of the Lord Jesus, and to the spread of the Gospel, and the building up of the church. A good many of our churches are coming to the front in this missionary spirit, and wherever that is the case we find behind that church a godly and capable pastor. If the pastor has no interest in missions, you can hardly expect the people to take the lead in advance of the pastor. There is no mistake about it—every conference ought to be careful as to what sort of a man is put into the ministry. Every man, before being fully equipped and committed to the full work of the ministry, ought to fully prove his gifts and his adaptability for the work. A bad pastor, or a careless pastor, or a selfish pastor—well, I know not the church for which such a man is qualified. Brethren, let us be more careful. We sometimes admit the unworthy, while we turn away the worthy. We are glad to believe this turning away the worthy ones does not occur so often, but there can be no doubt but that all too frequently, we do admit the unworthy man. Let us pray for wisdom, for spiritual insight, that we may discern between the good and the unworthy, and then for courage to say No, and mean it, to the man whom God has not called to the work of the ministry.

J. Pressley Barrett.

Salem Chapel.

The churches of my charge seem to be on the up grade. Services at Salem Chapel seem to improve along all lines. Congregations are improving and the church has made arrangements by which they think the finances of the church will be raised in full. There are a great many young men and women here whom I am praying God to inspire to be great powers for good in building up the church. A Sabbath school has been organized with bright prospects, and weekly prayer meetings are held. A pretty marriage service was performed in the church here just after the services 1st Sunday in April, by the writer, David Solomon and Julia Vaughan being the contracting parties. May a long and happy life be granted unto them.

Beulah.

Beulah services are also improving. Congregations fairly good. Ladies' Aid Society and Sunday-school organized with apparently a bright future. There have been four members added to this church.

In addition to the above work I have held two meetings in the eastern part of Wake and Franklin counties, which resulted in several confessions.

W. T. Herndon.

—Trust in the Lord and do good.

Durham.

I returned home and found our people rejoicing over a delightful service in our city work. The pulpit was filled by Rev. J. W. Proctor from Trinity College. We will commence a series of meetings Sunday, April 19th, it being our Easter offering day. May the Holy Ghost fill to overflowing the dear brethren and sisters of Catawba Springs for their gracious remembrance of their pastor.

A. P. Barbee.

Greensboro.

Dear Brother Atkinson:—Perhaps a line from Greensboro would be of interest. Have just closed a ten days meeting and while it was quite interesting, we did not accomplish what we had hoped and prayed for, but we must do our work or rather the work the Lord has for us to do and leave results with Him. Three were added to the church and a number of others expressed a desire to become Christians. We were glad to have with us over Sunday the "Grand old man" of Elon, Rev. J. W. Wellons, also in the evening Rev. W. L. Wells and another minister whose name I have forgotten. We are glad to have the brethren call and see us.

J. W. Bolton.

Catawba Springs.

Dear Bro. Editor:—Will you let the brethren and sisters who read The Sun hear about the work in my field? We enjoyed the most gracious services at Catawba Springs first Saturday and Sunday in this month that I have witnessed since I began work there. The largest congregation on Saturday and the best business meeting I ever attended. The spirit of the Lord led in every part of the services. After the close of the services on Saturday, sister Smith conducted the pastor to rear end of the church and introduced him to a generous pounding around which seemed to gather a halo of joy shared by all, especially among the little boys and girls. The pastor was as usual at a loss for words to express the sentiments of his heart, but we all experienced a season of refreshing from the Lord as we stood around such a visible token of love from people to pastor. We proceeded to pack a trunk that was furnished by Bro. J. E. Franks which we found was not large enough.

Our services Sunday were glorious. A large and attentive congregation greeted us.

—Trust in the Lord and do good, and verily thou shalt be fed.

LESSONS FROM LIVES OF GREAT MEN.*III. Sir Walter Scott, Continued.

By W. P. Lawrence, M. A.

The Poetry Period.

It was thought honorable in Scott's young days to write poetry. Burns had excited a tremendous interest in poetry just as Scott's boyhood was coming into manhood. Burns's exquisite songs had lifted him from the furrow, where the Muse found him, into the glitter and splendor of high social life. She shone like a meteor. But, while his songs brought honor, they brought but little money, and Burns died in poverty when only thirtys-even years old. Scott was now twenty-five. He had done some translating and had published several poems.

But it remained for the first edition of "The Minstrelsy of the Scottish border" to introduce him to the public. This was issued in London, Jan., 1802, the edition going off in twelve months. The publishers were encouraged and bought the copyright for £500. Five editions had been exhausted in eighteen years. The work was translated soon after the second edition, 1803, into German, Danish, and Swedish. Scott's influence as a poet now grew rapidly, and every now and then, received a new shove forward by some new, popular poem. "The Lay of the Last Minstrel" was published in January, 1805—a fine edition of seven hundred and fifty copies. Edition after edition was sold. Nothing in the field of British poetry had ever sold so rapidly. Burns had been dead but nine years and his fame was still in every mind. Thomas Campbell, another Scotchman, had recently published that exceedingly popular poem, "Pleasures of Hope." It began to look like the poetic Muse had dealt to Scotland with a lavish hand. Scott now decided to be a poet rather than a lawyer. "Marmion," that thrilling story of the civil wars when religious animosity and the spirit of liberty were the combined inspiration of opposing armies, came in 1808. Its popularity exceeded that of "The Lay of the Last Minstrel." The poet Southey wrote Scott upon first reading it, "You have conceived nothing before that equals the death of Marmion" in this poem. And everybody knows and likes that couplet uttered by Marmion when he began to realize that the web of sin he had been weaving was entangling his own soul:

"O, what a tangled web we weave,
When first we practice to deceive."

No sordid soul could conceive such a poem as "Marmion."

Two years after "Marmion" came another great poem, "The Lady of the Lake." While this poem was going through the Ballantyne presses in Edinburgh, snatches of the finest parts got to the public ear through the proof-readers. Expectation was intense. Lockhart, Scott's son-in-law and biographer says, "The whole country rang with the praises of the poet—crowds set off to view the scenery of Lock Katrine, till then comparatively unknown; and as the book came out (in May) just before the season for excursions, every house and inn in that neighborhood was crammed with a constant succession of visitors." This poem is a striking example of the commercial value a creation of literature may bring to a neighborhood, just as Dickens's Nicholas Nickleby by utterly destroying the school at Bowes is a striking example of what destruction a piece of literature may bring to an institution. There seems to be no abatement to this day in the stream of visitors Scott's "Lady of the Lake" set into the Highlands. Possibly Lock Katrine and the neighborhood, scenes described in this poem, stand next, as a literary shrine, to Stafford-on-Avon, the home of Shakespeare.

It is a great temptation to turn aside and talk more about these great poems of Scott's, but that is not our purpose since we are concerned mainly with getting simply a glimpse of this "Wizard of the North" as he was journeying through life a century ago.

But there suddenly came an end to Scott's career. One day, Feb. 29, 1812, an English Nobleman, of great imagination, fine feeling, passionate—in short a great genius, published a poem that took the world by storm. This poet was Lord Byron, and the poem with which he eclipsed Scott was "Child Harold's Pilgrimage." Byron was but twenty-four and had just returned from a trip of two years in Spain and Portugal. This poem that brought him so suddenly into fame, is an account of his travels two years. His overwhelming popularity in Great Britain, in America, and in France where no English poet had before caught the popular fancy, frightened all the Scotch poets into silence. Campbell stopped, and even Scott was beat out of the field. Late in life, while in Italy for his health, a friend asked Scott why he ever relinquished poetry. His reply was "He (Byron) beat me out of the field in the description of strong passions and in deep seated knowledge of the human heart."

We next find him in the field of romantic prose where he put poetry into shame and exalted prose fiction, till then a despised craft, into an honorable place where it still remains.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

Norfolk Landmark, Sunday, April 11: "Rev. I. W. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson of Suffolk, both of whom were carried to Lakeview Sanitarium, sick with fever, are doing well."

—Rev. B. F. Young is conducting a successful and largely attended series of meetings at Lanett, Alabama. The meetings are to continue several days. Rev. G. D. Hunt is assisting Bro. Yonug.

—Dr. J. W. Manning of Norfolk, a very busy layman, is undertaking an admirable and noble work for the church. Read his Norfolk Letter this week. It is of weight and worth.

—Rev. J. L. Foster and wife left Monday P. M. to attend the Tri-State Conference of Orphanage Superintendents, in session Wednesday and Thursday of this week at Decatur Orphans' Home, Atlanta, Ga.

—We fear these spring days have wooed Dr. Staley away to some lake or mill pond and the musical swish of the rod has made him forget the needs and anxieties of Sun readers. At any rate we sorely miss Suffolk Letter.

—Sunday night, April 18th, at Main Street Christian Church, a series of revival meetings will begin to continue for ten days or two weeks. The pastor, Rev. M. L. Bryant, will be assisted in the meetings by the Rev. H. H. Butler, of Suffolk, Va., and special music will be rendered nightly.—Norfolk Landmark.

—We note with felicitation that our friend and brother, Elijah Moffitt, Asheboro, has been appointed Assistant Judge Advocate-General with title of Major on Governor Kitchen's staff. We hail and salute Major Moffitt, knowing that he will wear worthily and creditably any honors that may come to him.

—We acknowledge with grateful appreciation an invitation to the marriage of Miss Lula Belle Matthews of Montgomery Ala. to Mr. F. T. Banks, now Sec. of the Y. M. C. A. at Montgomery, April 26. Mr. Banks was a popular student at Elon College where he graduated some years since. He has a host of friends. Felicitations are extended.

—Major E. Moffitt, Asheboro, N. C. had the honor of being elected President of the North Carolina Sunday school Association in session last week at Concord. The meeting place next year is Wilson. Major Moffitt is an enthusiastic Sunday school worker and an able executive and presiding officer and may be expected to meet with dignity and efficiency all the requirements of the honor conferred.

—Our Greensboro brethren did themselves and the cause credit last Sunday by raising one thousand and fifty dollars toward liquidating the indebtedness on their church. This has been a most liberal people in gifts to their church building, as well as to other enterprises of the church, and now that they are making an effort to pay off all their debt friends should cheer them with liberal assistance.

—Easter was appropriately observed at Wentworth church, McCullers, N. C., with excellent music, a sermon, a bountiful dinner in the church yard for all, and addresses in the afternoon, one by Prof. S. M. Smith, and another by Col. Z. P. Smith, both of Raleigh. The addresses were of high order and the music had been well prepared by the church choir under the leadership of Bro. Geo. M. McCullers. An immense audience was present and the day pleasantly spent.

—Berkley Correspondence Norfolk Landmark:—

"The revival which has been in progress at South Norfolk Christian Church for sometime past continues to be largely attended and many conversions have resulted.

The Rev. C. C. Ryan, pastor of Christian Memorial Temple, who is assisting the pastor, Rev. J. O. Cox, by his earnest efforts there has endeared himself to the congregation and the closing days of the series of meetings are expected to be the harvest time of the revival.

—Bro. E. G. Forlines, a loyal and active member of Hebron Church, Nelson, Va., writes these words of encouragement to the Sun which are received with gratitude: "The Sun feels to us almost as one of our family, therefore we desire it to be continued. It is always a welcome visitor in our home, we find it so inspiring, helpful, and uplifting. Its pages grow brighter and more interesting to us as the weeks and months go by. I wish the Sun continued success." These lines are reproduced to let those who write for the Sun's columns from time to time know that their contributions are read and appreciated, for not a few letters come like this of Bro. Forlines. A religious paper's contributors largely make it what it is.

—Mr. and Mrs. John D. Kernodle celebrated in becoming and royal fashion at their hospitable home in Graham, N. C., their silver wedding, April 9, 1909. Many friends gathered from 5 to 7 p. m. to extend congratulations and to be remembered, with best of good wishes, by suitable gifts of costly silver. The decorations and refreshments were in the very best of good taste and the words of welcome and good cheer by host and hostess were no less cordial and welcome than the words of esteem and congratulations from the numerous guests. It was a beautiful and happy occasion. We wish for Bro. Kernodle and his bride of twenty-seven summers, formerly Miss E. Cora Harden, many more years of wedded joy and happiness.

—Prof. W. P. Lawrence, curator of the Elon College library is making commendable effort to preserve current history, especially that of our own making. To this end he is having bound The Christian Sun, the Herald of Gospel Liberty and some other papers into neat, substantial volumes. A few days since Prof. Lawrence's heart was made glad by the receipt of the following magnanimous letter from Bro. J. L. Clements, North Wilkesboro, N. C.:

My dear Prof. Lawrence: In regard to binding the Christian Sun for the Elon library enclosed find my check for the 1908 volume. If you will send me the bill for this work each year I will pay same. It is quite a pleasure to me to do this. Sometime in the near future, I expect to place a sufficient sum of money with you so the interest can be used for this work continuously and in that way provide for the future binding of each volume of the Sun without the trouble to you of collecting the money each year for this purpose."

Prof. Lawrence further informs us that Bro. J. Beale Johnson, Cardenas, N. C., furnished the funds for binding the Herald of Gospel Liberty for 1907 and 1908; Bro. K. B. Johnson, Cardenas, N. C., those for binding the Raleigh News and Observer for 1908, and Bro. C. D. West of Newport News, Va., those for binding the Norfolk Virginian Pilot for 1908. The work of binding was satisfactorily done by W. H. Adams of Richmond, Va.

— This from the Raleigh Christian Advocate:—

"The 'Gift of Tongues' movement has its sad side. About a year ago five young men and twelve young women left Philadelphia and New York to go and teach the world about the real Christ. They all had, or thought they had, the gift of tongues. One of them, Mabel Collins, about nineteen years of age, has just returned to Philadelphia, disillusioned, and she tells the sad story of these unsent apostles. One girl died in Argentina, two are working in factories in Buenos Ayres, two are in harems in India, and one is living with a hill tribe in India. Three of the men are laying ties on a South American railroad; none are using their gift of tongues. They tried India and they tried Argentina, but they failed miserably in both. 'Our gift of tongues,' Miss Collins says, 'was not from God. It was from some devil. The story needs no application.'"

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

—The Legislature of Arkansas has passed a law imposing a heavy penalty on persons drinking intoxicants on trains in that State.

—The Congressional Record carried over 600,000 words on the Tariff debate last week, this being over 100,000 more words than the Record ever carried in any one week within the memory of man.

—J. Pierpont Morgan, the Wall Street financier, is passionately fond of art and last year spent a million dollars for works of art which he gave to the Metropolitan Museum of New York. Morgan himself is said to possess the richest and rarest art collection of any man in America.

—Booker T. Washington declares that the outside world hears much of the difficulties between the two races in the South but scarcely ever "of the healthy progress which both races are making every day. There is no other part of the globe where races so dissimilar dwell together on such good terms." Right again.

—The State-wide prohibition law in Alabama has been carried to the Supreme Court twice, by enemies of the measure, and in both instances the Court has rendered a decision declaring the law valid. Prohibition went into effect in Alabama, Jan. 1st, but many thinking the law would be overthrown by the courts have been lax about its enforcement. From now, it is declared, there will be vigorous effort to enforce.

—A Parliamentary Blue Book issued March 31 shows that convictions for drunkenness in Canada have, in the last ten years, increased by 164 per cent. In the year ending Septemehr, 1907, there was an increase of twelve and a half per cent in convictions for general offenses under the Criminal Code. In the Yukon there were fifty-six convictions for every ten thousand of the population, and in Prince Edward Island, which is in the prohibition province, only one conviction.—Ex.

—The Archbishop of Paris has publicly blessed a new aerodrome and tow aeroplanes. He said: "Man by his original fall lost sovereignty of the air, but these inventions permit the hope that he may be allowed by divine grace to regain some small fragment of his original dominion. The Church is, therefore, happy to bless these machines, destined to soar in space and conquer realms hitherto beyond man's dominion." In his prayer he said: "May we, like aeronauts in aeroplanes, rise above the earth and lift our souls in gratitude to the Divine Author of all inventions." He then sprinkled the machines with holy water and blessed them. We will not willingly speak triflingly of sincere worship; but this to us seems a form of superstition." —New York Christian Advocate.

—A very enthusiastic debate between representatives of Wake Forest and Davidson College was held in Greensboro Monday evening, April 12. An immense audience greeted the debaters. The query was Resolved, That the United States Government should adopt the policy of subsidizing her Merchant Marine. Davidson debated the affirmative, Wake Forest the negative. The unanimous decision of the judges was for the negative. The judges were Pres. Hobbs, of Guilford, Pres. Moffitt of Elon, and former Judge Strudwick of Greensboro. People of culture everywhere applaud such a contest between colleges. There were not any hired league debaters.

According to statistics of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis there are now 600,000 cases of "Consumption" in the United States and 200,000 die annually from the disease.

COLUMBUS, GA. LETTER.

This is a time of protracted meetings in this city, there being six series of meetings in progress at this writing. While I have not attended services at each place, I understand that all these meetings are being largely attended and there is evidence of a deeper spiritual life on the part of church membrs, and many sinners are being convicted and are turning to God. The meeting that seems to have attracted the widest attention is that in progress at St. Luke M. E. church, the Rev. Dr. Christian of Miss. doing the preaching. This is the third week of Dr. Christian's meeting and it is not known when the services will come to a close.

But for the recent heavy rains in this section, causing high waters and consequently throwing about 1800 cotton mill operatives out of employment for several weeks, in this way necessitating night work at present, there would be three other meetings going on now. Because of so many people having to work at night, two Baptist churches and our church in Girard postponed their meetings. We are to begin our meeting (Girard) the second Sunday in May.

We were highly pleased to have with us two days last week, Rev. A. M. Kerr of Dayton, Ohio. As many Sun readers will remember, Bro. Kerr has been in the South during the past few months for his health. He had almost recovered from the disease that brought him South, but three weeks ago another trouble set in. It was his purpose to have spent at least another month in the land of birds, sunshine, and flowers. Instead of this he went directly from here to his home in Dayton, where he had to undergo an operation (I know not the cause). His sister writes that he is getting along nicely, but that he will be confined "many days."

One day last week, one of our Disciple brethren, Col. Patterson, from Griffin, Ga., came to see us about co-operating with them in the work of their church. Of course he said that he was a member of the Christian church. When told that his church and ours are separate and distince organizations he said: "I did not know there was any difference." Our Disciple brethren need to acquaint themselves with the differences between the two churches, and by all means they ought to cease, and cease forever, telling it abroad that they are the Christian church and that there is under God's high and holy throne none but them. And I would to God that our own people would likewise get acquainted with the principles of their church as distinguished from those who have appropriated our name and who reject and repudiate the teachings of the Christians. How sad to think of the many who are approached on the subject of our principles and to hear the answer, "I don't know." Brother, you ought to know, and there is a way for you to know viz., Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon, College, N. C., has for sale "Principles and Government of the Christian Church." He will send you a copy for 25 cts. Of course this is the cheap binding, but the reading matter would help you, and the neat cloth binding is only 50 cents per copy. G. O. Lankford.

Columbus, Ga., Apr. 7, 1909.

marily. Why and what was and is Syracuse University? A church college headed by a preacher of the gospel. And so the whole history of our institutions from which modern day teachers send out a high sounding skeptical trash that never built a college, or blessed a home, or redeemed a life.

If the professors in our colleges are blasting at the "Rock of Ages" then so much the worse for the professors and the colleges. For the verities of Almighty God are eternal and will abide forever, professors or no professors.

Do not be troubled because you have not great virtues. God made a million spears of grass where he made one tree. The earth is fringed and carpeted, not with forests, but with grasses. Only have enough of little virtues and common fidelities, and you need not mourn because you are neither a hero nor a saint. H. W. Beecher.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT
—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVEN-
TION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

It is May 29-31.

The first convention of the Christian Young People of the Southern Christian Convention.

Entertainment will be furnished by the students and citizens of Elon College.

Prof. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., is Chairman of the local Entertainment Committee. If you want entertainment during the Convention, write him not later than May 15.

"What is this Convention for?" asked an intelligent young person a few days ago, who had not read a line about it in the Christian Sun. There are probably others of the same intelligent class who scarcely know that a movement is germinating that, with proper cultivating, will yield abundant fruitage within a very few years. It is a movement to organize the Christian virtue, the Christian character, the Christian hearts among the young people of the Southern Christian Convention into effective service for the local church, and for the enterprises of the church at large. It is a fact that we secretly deplore, that the study of the Bible in our Sunday schools is, except with a conscientious, studious person now and then, a mere farce, a hollow name. Perhaps it is pretty much the same way in Sunday schools of other denominations. But does that excuse us, —us who take the Bible as our only creed? We, perhaps, have less excuse than they. Are we indifferent because the task of improving this defect is plainly a very difficult one to remedy? Most likely. Shall this Young People's Convention undertake so to improve the efficiency of teaching the Bible in our Sunday schools and so improve the actual result of work in the classes by a wise and proper system of grading, as to make the improvement actually perceptible? It took hundreds of speeches, some thousands of hours of the best thought of scores of good and wise men and women, and other thousands of hours of hard, faithful work to lower the illiteracy in North Carolina seven percent during the ten years from 1890 to 1900. What is it going to take to make a perceptible improvement in the Sunday schools throughout the Southern Convention? Are you willing to do your part of the work? Then attend the Convention May 29-32.

Then, there are other questions for this Convention to deal with that are just as vital as the Sunday school question. If some ministers have been too busy to agitate the question of this Convention, let them take an hour of their best time to contemplate the boundless wealth, to the church, there is in the organized, unharnessed Christian energy among our young people. It is estimated that North Carolina alone, has three and a half million horse-power in her mountain and upland streams, yet this rich-poor State for a hundred years, has been kept poor by spending her money for wares manufactured outside her borders. But when she began to wake up an harness her own energies, note the rapid transformation. In 1890 there were $32,000,000 invested in her manufactories. Fifteen years later there were $141,000,000 invested in like industries. In 1896 the individual deposits in all banks in the State amounted to $9,000,000. Ten years later they amounted to $47,000,000.

For a hundred years the Christian Church has allowed its energy to go largely unorganized, poorly harnessed. See how small we are, how poor, how weak. The coming convention may be a small one, but may it count.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR APRIL 25.
A Few Suggestions.

The Gospel in Antioch.

Acts 11:19-30; 12:25.

Golden Text:—The disciples were called Christians first at Antioch, Acts 11:26.

Review.—Review the previous lesson briefly, but bring out all its essential points. Then call on one to read from his notebook the account of "The Life of Paul" for last Sunday. Point out deficiencies, if any. Inspect all the books. Give directions for their improvement. Insist on neatness. Call for assigned work on Acts 8:4-40, which recounts the spread of the gospel to Samaria and the conversion of the Ethiopian; and Acts 10:1-48, which recounts its acceptance by a Gentile "devout man." Tell the class that today's lesson gives them the first instance of the bringing of pagans directly into the church.—all other converts previous to this time were either Jews, Jewish proselytes, or "devout men," that is, men who worshipped Jehovah, but did not submit to the Levitical ritual.

Chronology.—The lesson today is at least eight years after our last Sunday's lesson. Saul the arch-persecutor was still feared by the disciples and he had to have time to find himself in his new sphere of acting. Immediately after his conversion he spent three years in prayer and meditation in Arabia (Gal. 1:17-18). Returning to Damascus he preached there, aroused the animosity of the Jews, and was rescued from their violence by being let down from the wall in a basket (Acts 9:20-25; 2 Cor. 11:32-33). He then went to Jerusalem where the hostility of the Jews forced him to retire, (Acts 9:26-30; Gal. 1:18-23). He then went to his own city, Tarsus, and began work, where he remained perhaps for five or six years, (Acts 9:30). This would put our lesson today then in 44 or 45. The dearth prophesied by Agabus fits in with this date, for Josephus speaks of a severe famine in Palestine between 44 and 48.

Incidental Instruction.—It will be well to explain the word prophet to your class. It comes from the Greek preposition which means before, or forth and the Greek verb meaning speak and so may mean either to speak before, that is, to foretell; or to speak forth, that is, to preach in our sense. Agabus gave evidence of the former power here and in Acts 2:10, but was also a preacher in our sense. Then a word should be said about the elders mentioned in verse 30. These were the older among the Christians and were leaders in the Jerusalem church, since the Apostles were now scattered preaching the Word. Then the word Grecians of verse 20 will need to be made clear, and it will be hard to do this perfectly except to Greek scholars. Two words for Greeks appear in the Acts, which may be translated Hellenists and Hellenes. The former were Greek proselytes to the Jewish faith or Jews who were born out of Palestine in Greek territory. The latter were pagan Greeks, and this is the word accepted by translators as the proper one in verse 20. It is the use of this word in this verse which gave the church at Antioch its unique character in the expansion of the gospel idea.

Geographical Outline.—Be sure to locate intelligibly on map or your black-board Phenice, Cypus, Antioch, Cyrene, Tarsus, Jerusalem and to have your class get a conception of these places that shall be more than a mere name.

The Lesson.—You may teach the lesson under three heads, which you will write on the board as they are developed in the teaching.

1. Antioch Has a Revival, verses 19-21. Find by question what caused the disciples to scatter from Jerusalem, to what places they scattered, to whom they preached the Word, whence some of these scattered ones had come, to what great city they came (Here call for assigned work on Antioch), to whom they preached, what was with them, the result of their preaching.

2. What Barnabas Finds at Antioch, verses 22-25. Find to what leading church tidings of these matters came, whom they sent to confirm the work there (Here call for assigned work on Barnabas—first perhaps asking if the class has heard of him before and under what circumstances, Acts 4:36-37), how he was affected by his visit, what exhortation he made, what is said of him as a man, what the result of his ministrations was, whither he set out, for whom.

3. Christians in Name and Also in Deed, verses 26-30. Find whither Barnabas lead Saul, how long they both served as copastors of the church there, what glorious name was given the disciples of Christ there, (Here call for assigned work on the use of the word Christian in the New Testament; also on the other names by which the early followers of Christ were known from Acts 5:14; Acts 9:30; Acts 9:2; Acts 6:1; Acts 9:13; Rom. 8:33; Acts 24:5), what class of church workers came from Jerusalem to Antioch in those days, a prominent one of these, what he signified by the spirit, when his prediction came true (Claudius ruled from 41 to 54), what action the Antioch church took in reference to the famine, from whom they raised their relief fund, to whom they sent it, by whom, whom they brought back with them to Antioch.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

For Class Discussion:—Whence the name Christian: Was it an instance of the keen wit for which the Antiochians were celebrated and given in ridicule? Was it of divine origin? Study the instances of its use in the New Testament and note whether it is employed as a term of reproach or compliment. Such discussion will be profitable only in Baraca, Philathea, or Adult Bible classes.

Truths and Their Application.—I. "Preaching the Lord Jesus" led to the revival at Antioch. It has led to every revival service and will lead to every one in the coming years. No other preaching, however eloquent, will ever lead to a revival. Do we need reviving as God's people? Then we need to have Jesus preached to us. And whenever he is preached, a revival is sure to follow. It may not be timely for a layman to give advice to the ministry, but it seems to me that the Church and the world today are sorely in need of the simple Gospel message of salvation through Jesus Christ.

2. "The hand of the Lord was with them" we are told of these scattered disciples who went to Antioch. That is why the Antioch church became a strategic point in the spread of the faith. The hand of the Lord always insures success to any man or movement.

Be sure you have the hand of the Lord on your side.

3. "He was a good man" says the sacred historian of Barnabas. What higher words of praise could have been bestowed upon him than these. Good men are God's men—let us all strive to be good men, to the end that our lives shall not be simply as a breath that is past.

4. The teacher who fails to impress the lesson of sweet charity which is given in verse 30 will fail to do his duty. These disciples at Antioch were poor—Christianity began among the poor—but the brethren at Jerusalem were poorer. So they gave "every man according to his ability" to the relief fund to the Judean brethren. This is practical Christianity. The Christian cannot afford to be an indiscriminate giver—statistics and common sense both teach that this is often everything else than charity. Neither can he afford to be a contributor only to the "Organized Charities"—this divests his charity of its heart. Let him give specifically part of the time—to those around him whose needs he knows and appreciates. The true giver gives himself with his gift.

Manual Work.

In their notebooks have the class write an outline for expansion at home as follows:

37 A. D. Paul in Arabia, Gal. 1:17-18.

39 A. D. Returns to Damascus, Acts 9:20-25; 2 Cor. 11:32-33.

Goes to Jerusalem, Acts 9:28-30; Gal. 1:18-23.

Work at Tarsus five or six years, Acts 9:30.

44 or 45. Comes to Antioch, Acts 11:25-26.

Carries Alms to Jerusalem, Acts 11:30; 12:25; Gal. 2:1-10.

Assignments for Next Time:—Ask one to give a brief account of the life of John Mark; another a short account of the islands of Cyprus; a third on what is said on sorcery in Deut. 18:9-14; a fourth on what the Bible teaches in regard to fasting.

Note:—"Preparing the Teacher" published by the Southern Christian Publishing Board and for sale by J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C., and J. N. Hess, Dayton, Ohio, will materially help every Sunday-school teacher for the next three months—especially pages 149 to 156 and pages 175 to 195.

NOT A FICTION.

It seems to be a pleasure to a good many professed Christians, among whom are not a few preachers, to reject the truth that Jonah was a real person, and claim that the one who was called by that name was only a figurative character. There is no sense in saying that he was a man if he, or it, were a mere figure, or a fictitious personage. A mere figure is not a man, nor a person. A myth is not a person. What does anyone gain by believing that there was no real Jonah? What is the object in saying that such a man never lived? Now read what a rationalistic preacher, Rev. Frederick Lynch, says in Christian Work: "Whether Jonah (the book) be a transcription of an ancient event, or be a beautiful allegory, told by some religious teacher to impress upon his hearers a great religious lesson, as Jesus some years afterward told His own inimitable stories, it has equal value, as far as its moral and religious meaning is concerned. Perhaps it has more." It is apparent that this man does not believe that Jonah was a historical person. It is also evident that he does not believe that the book of Jonah is actual history. But he is very ready to believe that "some religious teacher" composed the book. So, it appears that Mr. Lynch is not at all concerned as to whether or not that teacher was divinely inspired. Why should he care about that question? The radical critics have spent a good deal of time to find out the names of the writers of the Bible; why, then, have they not discovered the name of the "religious teacher" who wrote the "beautiful allegory," calling it the book of Jonah? Who was it that gave such a name to the book? And what a marvelous thinker and writer that "religious teacher" must have been! What great inventive powers he possessed! What vast foresight he displayed in so arranging his "story" as to make it prefigure the burial and resurrection of the coming Christ! Surely that teacher must have passed great originality in his thinking, in his planning, and in his use of language. Why do not some of his modern and scholarly admirers write a similar book?

Then consider the proposition that if there were no actual Jonah, Christ was badly deceived in thinking that there was just such a man. He told his disciples and others that there was a man whose name was Jonah, and that he was three days in the belly of a fish; but from our modern writers it would seem that even Christ was in great error!!

LIVE INSTITUTIONS AND DEAD ONES.

The most potent and vital institution in the world today is the Church. It is gross error to suppose that the Church is dead, or is dying. It has been a live wire now for nearly nineteen hundred years, and it was never more alive, never more virile and vigorous than today. One must judge a tree by its fruit.

The church has been, and is, mighty, not only in the shaping and making of individual character, but in the founding and fashioning of interests, enterprises and institutions that make for man's uplift and welfare. Seek to its source, and behind the enterprises that help man you will find the Church. Out of the Church grew asylums for the idiotic, irrational and pitiable. Because Lord Christ opened the eyes of the blind and unstopped the ears of the deaf the Church has planted, mediately or immediately, places where the blind may learn to read and the deaf may be led to hear. Every institution for man's protection, uplift and betterment had its origin in and out growth from the Church. Homes and places of refuge for the weary, worn and worthy were planted by the church. Nobody ever thought of an orphan's home till the Church taught its worth and made it possible. The Sunday-school seems a small and insignificant affair but there was no free school system worthy the name or place till the Sunday-school demonstrated that the free teaching of all children was not only feasible but the most potent factor in enlightening the masses and building a democracy. Surely has God chosen the weak things, not only to confound the mighty, but to lead, inspire and direct the mighty as well. He who measures the might of the Church by the membership roll, or the number of the places of preaching and of worship has not rightly considered nor estimated what the Church is, and what mighty things it is bringing to pass. Search out that which the Church has set on foot and is responsible for and you will find all the best and mightiest that make for man's uplift, enlightenment and edification. The Church has always taught the State the worth and weight of sentiment, and of culture. When the State builds one institution for the higher education of youth, the Church builds a half dozen similar institutions for the self-same purpose.

Neyer man spake words as weighty and as eternal as those of the Master: "I will build my Church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

The deadliest institutions are the places of sin. The germs of dread and death go out from the saloon. The gambling place is the builder of cruelty and crime. The houses of corruption sow the seeds of wreck and ruin. All these and their kindred types sow, cultivate and develop the seeds of death and destruction. Neither these nor any of their kind ever built an institution, fathered an enterprise or began an influence that made for the betterment of man's condition or the uplift of the human race.

If any man's love is growing less for his Church let him consider what the Church has done, is doing, will do.

If any man is inclined to the places of sin let him consider what death and ruin these have dealt out, and are now dealing out, and always will deal out to him and to his fellowman. "The wages of sin is death."

MORE HOPEFUL.

The churches emerge from the Easter services inspired with new vigor and more hope. If Easter did nothing else than call to mind afresh the ground of hope, its observance with appropriate religious ceremony would be worth while. In the fact of Lord Christ's resurrection, is our sure and steadfast ground of hope. This hope inspired the early church and gave a new and strange strength to those who accepted and believed it then.

After the resurrection there was no Judas to betray, no Peter to deny, and no despairing disciple to forsake. A new hope struck home to the Apostles' heart and they were then ready to face the bitterest foes and carry the gospel message to the uttermost parts.

But for this fact and this faith we are of all men most miserable and are yet in our sins, declared the apostle to the Gentiles. And but for this fact and faith the future is dark and the grave foreboding.

Last Sunday's Easter songs and services inspired the world to nobler doing, stronger effort, larger sacrifice and more ready obedience to the will and way of God. We look to the rest of the year with brighter prospect, larger hope, happier vision.

READING DIME NOVELS.

Daniel Johnson, aged 18 years, is in jail at Atlanta, Ga., for having attempted to extort $35,000 from Asa G. Candler. The young man wrote "black hand" letters threatening Candler that if the money was not deposited as directed, Candler and his house would be blown into smash. Detectives were put to work, more than one letter having been received, and the direful threats repeated, and in a few days the culprit was apprehended. Young Johnson was a member of Candler's Sunday-school class.

Finding himself apprehended, Johnson confessed: "It was a fool notion I got from reading dime novels." This young man will have opportunity to think at leisure behind prison bars of what the awful effects of reading dime novels are.

This instance just chances to come to the surface. Thousands are going the way of wrecked lives, blasted hopes, ruined careers from this same cause—reading trash from which the most silly and wicked notions are obtained. The world is full of good, wholesome, helpful books—literature that enlightens the mind and edifies the heart. Why will men turn to filth and trash when there are health, hope, and happiness as readily at hand?

Greensboro.

Easter services at our church today were much enjoyed by those attending. The program was not as elaborate as usual, owing to sickness and pressing duties by many of the congregation. The songs by the children and choir, also the sermon by Pastor J. W. Bolton were fully in accord with the occasion. Ten hundred and fifty dollars was raised in cash and subscriptions to be used towards cancelling the church debt amounting to sixteen hundred and fifty dollars. Our outside members are asked to help raise this so we may dedicate this house of worship about June first, which will be the ninth anniversary of this organization. Send your donation to S. A. Caviness, Greensboro, N. C.

Thanking you in advance,

Faternally yours,

R. S. Petty.

NORFOLK LETTER.*A Church at Ponce, P. R.

I am sending the following letter to the clerk of every church whose name appears as such, in the "Christian Annual" for 1909.

Now kind reader, if the success of this cause appeals to you and you know of any church that I have failed to reach, won't you tell them of this movement and ask them to join in at once. And don't forget to pray much and earnestly. Dear Brother:

DON'T READ THIS NOW, unless you have fifteen minutes of leisure; after you have read it, THINK AND PRAY over it ten minutes and then READ IT AGAIN. If at all convenient, read it again in a half hour, THEN ACT. At your earliest convenience please call together your Sunday-school Superintendent and Pastor for a conference on the following suggestions—THE BUILDING OF A CHURCH HOUSE IN PONCE, PORTO RICO.

The Memorial Christian Temple, Norfolk, took a special offering several years ago, and has kept it up since, that made the Porto Rico work possible; a good work has been, and is now being accomplished there. We need a house there for many reasons. About $2,000.00 has already been spent for rent, nothing left to show for it. It is needed for the comfort of our workers, both missionaries and natives. It would show permanency, and help the people to realize that we were there to stay. The Baptist, Methodists and United Brethren have houses costing from $10,000.00 to $12,000.00 on lots costing $3,000.00 to 4,000.00. Brother D. P. Barrett, our missionary on the field, says that to buy, build and equip a house such as is needed to meet the requirements would cost about $9,000. He says he will vouch for the home field on the island raising about $300.00. Rev. M. T. Morrill, Foreign Mission Secretary, informs me that there is on hand available for that purpose about $2,000.

At the last session of the A. C. C., the following resolution was adopted:—"Resolved, That all the Sunday schools in the bounds of the A. C. C. be requested to adopt the following plan for the benefit of the Porto Rico Building Fund.

First.—That each school provide itself with a bank or box for the purpose of receiving the money that may be contributed for that purpose.

Second.—That the Superintendent or Pastor request every member of the Sunday-school and Church to contribute at least a penny for each and every year of their age, the Sunday following the birthday; the money to be forwarded to the Mission Treasurer at Dayton, Ohio.

This plan has the authority of the A.

C. C. back of it; it has built the Salinas church and raised $2,000 besides. It will not interfere with any regular work; it will develop a missionary spirit and practical missionaries.

Now won't you please PROVIDE the receptacle and give the OPPORTUNITY, and leave it to the people and God as to whether they will give or not. If you will do that much I do not fear for the results. If you are already using this plan for THIS purpose, CONTINUE; if you are using it for some OTHER purpose set some day, and take a SPECIAL OFFERING for THIS purpose and send it to Dr. J. G. Bishop, at Dayton, Ohio.

Now I am sending this letter to about 1500 churches. Now Brethren let's have a concert of action for ONE TIME, and show to the world what we can do for God. Won't you write me a line and let me know how this appeals to you? and above all, won't you put the plan to the test AT ONCE?

Yours for the Master's cause,
J. W. Manning.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Dr. E. L. Moffitt is in Greensboro today where to-night he serves as Judge in the debate between Davidson College and Wake Forest. The question is: Resolved, That the United States should adopt the policy of subsidizing her Merchant Marine.

In the State Sunday-school Convention which was held last week at Concord, North Carolina, Mr. Elijah Moffitt, of Asheboro, an alumnus of Elon, was chosen President, and Prof. S. M. Smith, of Raleigh, was chosen Statistician, Rev. W. C. Wicker of Elon College is a member of the Executive Committee.

Prof. W. P. Lawrence went to Haw River April 9th to deliver an address at the close of the schools there, of which Mr. Lucius Lincoln, Class of 1907, is superintendent. This has been the most successful year of the schools at Haw River and we congratulate Mr. Lincoln on his success.

On Friday evening, April 9 at 8:00 P. M., the Elocution Recital was given in the college chapel, "After the Game," in three scenes, in which ten characters took part. This was the beginning of the Easter exercises and was witnessed by a large audience.

The Annual Entertainment of the Psi-chelion Literary Society was given to a large and very appreciative audience, in the Elon College Auditorium, Saturday evening, April 10. There was not a dull selection on the entire program and the play, "A Dead Heat," was especially strong.

The Easter service here was highly enjoyed, the music was especially fine, having been prepared for the occasion by Miss Wilson. Dr. D. A. Long who preached on the "Resurrection" was at his best and his congregation was highly pleased with his discussion.

The C. E. Society was led by Misses Bond and Williams and the music was also a feature of this meeting, being special Easter music.

Among the visitors for Easter we have Misses Nanny Doak Wilson, and Edna Greenwood of News Ferry, Va., Misses Mamie Fonville, Edith Walker, Myrtle Isley, Ollie Hall of Burlington, Miss Bronna Clymer of Greensboro, Miss Maud Shoffner of High Point, Miss Atkinson of Raleigh, Mr. Warren of Richmond, Va., Dr. Walters, wife and sister, Mr. J. Ed Garrison and family of Union Ridge. All these friends we have been glad to welcome.

Prof. W. A. Harper is busily engaged now on the work of the State Christian Endeavor Society to be held at Winston Salem April 25-27. Elon College will be represented by perhaps eight or more delegates.

To-day, Easter Monday, is holiday and rules are suspended, the students are entertaining their visiting friends, while some have gone to their homes for the holidays.

Mrs. W. S. Tate who was reported in these columns last week as being sick, is improving, and now it seems that she will soon be out again. J. T. C.

F. Marion Crawford, the novelist, died at Sorrento, Italy, April 9. He was conscious and composed to the last, and in passing out used these words, "I enter serenely into eternity." Being aware that his final day was "Good Friday" he said "I die with Christ."

—The Lower House of Congress passed, amid much excitement, the Payne tariff bill April 9. It now goes to the Senate for further debate. The efforts to put lumber on the free list failed. It is generally believed that the $2.00 Dingley duty will prevail, though there is division of sentiment in both parties.

—Of the making of laws there is no end. Statistics now compiled show that 41 legislatures in 1907 passed a total of 16,064 laws and resolutions. North Carolina led with 1,572 in a session of 62 days—25 a day. Michigan came next with 790, Connecticut 782, Alabama, 766, Penn. 741, Wisconsin. 724.

For Children.

"A child should always say what's true
And speak when he is spoken to—
And behave mannerly at table
At least as far as he is able."

My Dear Children and Friends—

The nice report we have this week makes our hearts glad as the beautiful spring weather does the heart of dear old Mother Earth. Nature seems to be doing her best for the "Good Friday" planting, and our friends this week have been doing their best to give us a good report for Easter. We hope to hear from others who wish to send a special Easter Offering.

Life, life every where! May there be renewed energy on the part of cousins and friends for the advancement of the cause we all hold so dear.

Uncle Rufus King sends another cow and calf this week. "Mrs King" and "Miss King." We now have seven cows and seven calves, one for each boy though some of our little fellows are as yet too small to attend them. Mr. J. Milton Banks sends us 2 bu. sweet potatoes. Miss Mollie Clendenin, Graham, N. C., sends three under vests. Miss Eudora Marks, Osgood, N. C., 1 pr. pillow cases; Mrs. Lula Kelley, Osgood, N. C., 1 quilt; Mrs. Mary A. B. Wicker, Osgood, N. C. 1 quilt, sent by Miss Annie Wicker.

For each of these gifts we are very grateful, and thank the kind friends. We are glad to receive so liberal cash report this week. Let us have a great Easter Offering next week!

Fondly yours, Uncle Jim.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Apr. 5, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I wonder how many eggs the little cousins have saved for Easter. I will send my dues for March. Much love to all. Hubert A. Neville.

I guess, Hubert, our eggs will be scarce as our Mother Hens insist on having them in their nests to help swell the chicken family. But never mind, maybe we'll have more fried chicken by saving the eggs.

Elon College, N. C., Apr. 3, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We "The Juniors" have decided to write monthly and send our contribution for the Orphanage. Mrs. Patton is our superintendent now. We have been sending a little amount every month since before Christmas. We hope you will accept our letter every month. Now please find 50 cents for our amount for March.

Lovingly, Treasurer.

We thank the Juniors of Elon for this monthly offering. The regular monthly amounts help very much to pay bills, etc.

Statesville, N. C., Apr. 6, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here comes an Easter offering and a heart full of love for each and all the orphans, from an old cousin who still remembers you.

Lovingly, Jessie E. Massey.

Thank you very much, Cousin Jessie. To know that we are remembered by cousins of former years is very pleasant indeed.

Sanford, N. C., Apr. 3, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write my letter myself this time and send my dime for April. Our school will be out in this month. I am learning fast. I can't write good yet. I must close. With love to you and all the cousins, Your niece,

 Annie Pearl Way.

How nice to write your own letters, Annie Pearl. This one is real good; try another.

Fuquay Springs, N. C., Apr. 6, 1909.
 Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed find one dollar for dues to date. Will try to write oftener when I get a little larger.

Your niece,

Margarette J. Ballentine.

Well, Margarette, we are glad to get your nice letter and now while you are too small to write yourself, be sure to get some one to write for you.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, etc.

FREE DEAFNESS CURE.

A remarkable offer by one of the leading ear specialists in this country, who will send two month's medicine free to prove his ability to cure Deafness, Head Noises, and Catarrh. Address Dr. G. M. Branaman, 1100 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

SPRING TIME.

The time for gardening is here and you need garden tools. We can supply you at lowest prices.

Poultry Wire.

The best assorted stock in the county. Four different styles and weight.

Remember plumbing and bath room fixtures, a speciality. You will find us on Davis St. third door from Post office. BURLINGTON HARDWARE CO.

CANCER CAN BE CURED.

Personal or Home Treatment. Both successful. Scores of testimonials, from persons who gladly write to those now suffering, all tell of permanent cures. My Mild Combination Treatment destroys growth and eliminates the disease from the system. Free book "Cancer and Its Cure" and 125-page book of testimonials from cured patients in all parts of the country. No matter how serious your case, how many operations you have had, or what treatment you have taken, don't give up hope, but write at once Dr. Johnson Remedy Co., 125 Grand Ave., Kansas City, Mo. THE REWARDS OF THE MINISTRY.

No thoughtful person can contemplate the scenes attending the funeral of the Rev. Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, in Brooklyn, the other day, without concluding that there are compensations in the Christian ministry which can be compared favorably with the rewards of secular business.

Doctor Cuyler was eighty-seven years old, and had retired from the active pastorate at the age of seventy, after serving one church for thirty consecutive years. More than two thousand persons crowded the meeting-house of this church for the funeral, and as many more gathered in the streets outside to show their affection and respect for the good man.

This tribute was not a final and impulsive effort to atone for lack of cheer to the man during his life. It was the continuation of regard even to the last possible moment. Had Doctor Cuyler devoted himself to making money, he would have accumulated a large fortune. Instead, he devoted himself to the conservation of all that is good and true and beautiful in his fellow men, and accumulated for himself and for them a large store of that which is imperishable.

So much stress is laid on success, in the sense of getting rich, that many persons find it difficult to look upon a man who has not got rich save with some feeling of pity, if not of contempt. It is desirable that we should all shake ourselves out of this false idea and begin to understand that there are what a noted New Englander has called enduring satisfactions in life which have nothing to do with money.

The love and respect and gratitude of one's fellow men are worth more in the evening of life than those who have them not can realize. Every worthy minister has these rewards, and would not exchange them for much gold.-- Youth's Companion.

THE CHURCH PAPER.

It is not only the right but the bounden duty of the church to use every effective agency for the promulgation of truth and the promotion of righteousness.

The church paper is a part of the working machinery of the church. It is far from being an unnecessary frill. There is a loose sentiment among church folks that regard the church paper as a fashion which has come to be popular in ecclesiastical organizations, or, as a sort of convenience for the preachers which the laymen are called upon to support. The leader who can devise some plan by which these mistaken no-

The church must use the press. It must have its printing houses and its papers. If the press is an arm of power to a political party, it is vastly more important that the church shall use these mighty agencies in its work.

Besides, to the church paper is committed a place which it alone can fill. The pulpit cannot fill it, the college cannot fill it, the Sunday-school cannot fill it, the young people's organizations cannot fill it. In the struggle between truth and falsehood, between righteousness and sin, the church paper has been assigned a definite position to hold, and the issue of the struggle rests with its success as well as with the success of other forces.

And there never was a period when its work was more vital than it is now. Evil never employed the printing press so largely at any time as it is employing it at this time. Running through all the classes of social and political journals, evil is published in all its hideous forms and deeds. Over against such agencies of sin stands that class of papers represented by the great journals of industry, commerce, literature and religion. The battle of the nation, even the struggle of civilization, are being waged just at this time most vigorously at this point of the line.—Dr. J. C. Kilgo, in the Raleigh (N. C.) Christian Advocate.

PLEASANT RECOLLECTIONS.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—

I read with a great deal of interest what Rev. P. T. Klapp said about the new house of worship at Moore Union. I am so glad to learn that a faithful few have completed their new house of worship, and have the pulpit neatly furnished with a carpet and three good chairs and a good heater in the church, notwithstanding they have been two years without a pastor. It calls to my mind, I had an appointment there the week following the fourth Sunday in November, 1854 and I found only one person there, Sister Penny Thomas, the leading member of the church. She soon proposed "let's go home for there will not be any more here." I said, "No, let us have worship before we go," and we prayed together and I went with her home. They had very few members. I preached for them three or four years, and we had some good meetings and some good additions to the church. The church was a small pole building. I don't recall that I have been in that community for about fifty years. I fondly recall the family of Abner Kelley, Methodist, Tillman Thomas and family, Baptist, Henderson, Jordan, an old bachelor brother. I had just started out then on the voyage of life as a minister, and how kind they all were to me.

A TRICK OF HISTORY.

A few weeks ago the Lincoln homestead in Kentucky was turned over to an association which has undertaken to preserve it in commemoration of the distinguished citizen who made it famous. It is interesting to note that the Davis Farm Association has been organized, the purpose of which is to acquire the homestead upon which Jefferson Davis was born and to perpetuate it in honor of the great Southern chieftain.

The funds are now being collected with which to pay the purchase price, and as soon as that has been accomplished, steps will be taken to provide for the maintenance and care of the property. These two men who were destined to play such momentous parts in the national history were born in adjoining counties in Kentucky, and in birth they were separated by but a few months of time. One grew up a patrician, the other a plebeian; one drifted further South and the other further North, and in the course of human events they each were honored by being made President of their respective sections of the country in which they lived.

At that time the present territory of the United States became divided into two separate republics. Hence during the period from 1861 to the close of Mr. Lincoln's life the country had two Presidents, one whose authority was exercised over the Northern States of the Union, and the other, whose jurisdiction had the allegiance of the Southern States. It is proper that the American people should honor both of these great men, whose deeds fill so large a chapter in the history of the country and each of whom was accorded the highest honors within the gift of the great people whom they respectively served.—New Orleans Daily States.

THE GREATEST BLUNDERS OF MY LIFE.

Here are some "Blunders," written down by the five hundred men, and to be found in the Crear Library:

"The greatest blunder of my life was gambling."

"When I left my church and mother."

"My greatest blunder was when I first learned to smoke."

"When I left school before I was past the fourth grade."

"Did not stiek to my trade."

"The greatest blunder of my life was not accepting Christ and thereby avoiding many sorrows caused by serving Satan."—American Weekly.

Kitchen.

At Ivor, Va., March 31, 1909, Mrs. Pocahontas Kitchen, wife of E. F. Kitchen, aged 26 years and 6 months. She was married to Bro. E. F. Kitchen, Feb. 12, 1900 and leaves three children and a devoted husband who are made sad by her death. She had been a member of Barrett's Christian Church about 11 years. During her last sickness, she remarked several times that all she minded about dying was leaving her family. Funeral services were conducted at Ivor Christian Church after which the remains were carried to the family burying ground near Manry.

R. H. Peel.

Laine.

March 9, 1909, A. W. Laine, aged 42 years and 10 months. Bro. Laine joined Barrett's Christian Church about 29 years ago and remained a true and faithful member of that church until Dendron Christian Church was organized. He then became a charter member of Dendron. Those who knew him looked upon him as a true and consistent Christian. He was a great sufferer for several months before his death, but through all these sufferings he was happy in his hope of eternal life. A little more than a year ago, he moved to Ivor where he resided until the time of his death. He leaves a wife and two daughters who are made sad by his death. Funeral services by the writer.

Gunter.

J. Ambros Gunter was born June 22, 1830 and died March 22, 1909, aged 78 years and 9 months. Bro. Gunter was a good citizen, devoted husband, faithful Christian and a true member of his church. Bro. Gunter was religiously inclined from boyhood.

J. A. Gunter, Malcom B. Watson, Patrick Lashly and James Hights erected a log house about a quarter of a mile north of where H. A. Hight now lives. This was the beginning of Shallow Well Christian church. Afterwards, with the help of others they erected the second house, about 200 yards north of the present building, later on the third building was erected, near where the present building stands. The fourth building is the one in which Bro. Gunter officiated as deacon for many years. This gives us some idea of the spiritual side of his life. He grew up with his church, worked in his church, till the Master called him home.

Bro. Gunter was left a fatherless boy at ten years old. He helped his widowed mother to provide for three sisters and one brother. Bro Gunter was married the first time to Miss Bettie B. Brown in 1852. To them were born two children, John D. and Mary T.. Bro. Gunter was married the second time to Miss A. E. Sloan. He is survived by two children, two sisters, seventeen grandchildren and one great grand-child.

The large congregation at his funeral was an evidence of the esteem in which he was held in the community. An old land mark and a good man has gone to his reward. God bless the bereaved ones. Funeral by the writer, who was his pastor for twelve years.

COME DOWN.

I have great respect for small men many of whom I know to be intelligent and full of energy. They often get to the front and stay there, and they deserve to do so on account of their splendid achievements in acting their part so well on the stage of life. Zacheaeus, in this interesting Bible story, was an attractive character, and may be viewed as a model of simplicity and honesty. As Jesus passed through Jerico there was this man who was the most prominent among the publicans and he was said to be rich. But apart from this he wanted to see Jesus—desired to know who he was, but he could not see him for the great crowd that pressed its way before him as he was little of stature. The best way to see him concerned his mind in the haste and rush of that exciting time, and he was anxious and determined to see him then as that might have been his last opportunity of seeing Jesus. Now the bright, quick thought flashed into his mind that there was a large Syeamore tree just a little way out of town. "It has low, long spreading limbs and I can climb it easily, and then I can see Him well as He is to pass that way." Then he ran and climbed up into the tree to see Him. He showed his great desire to see Jesus because he ran. When a man runs he means something. He went there at once—it might have been to gratify his curious nature, or he might have had some other motive for seeing—for beholding the Lamb of God. Maybe he did not think that Jesus would see him, but when Jesus came to the place, the Commander of heaven and earth caused the surging crowd which was following Him to stop. Then he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, "Zacheaeus, make haste, and come down, for today I must abide at thy house." He at once made haste and came down, and received him joyfully. He did not talk with Jesus long before he was converted—for Jesus said unto him, "This day is salvation come to this house."

Jesus is looking for you to-day. Where will he find you? It matters not where nor how high you have gone He invites you to come down to-day—He wants to abide at your house. Let us invite Him into our house, into our souls, by saying, abide with us to-day, thou Saviour of the world, for we will make haste to come into thy great presence—because we know that thou art our all and in all.

Come down from all old grudges and from evil speaking and let forgiveness entertain your minds. There are many who have a heavy load of old and new grudges—then they have also formed the habit of speaking evil of each other un-

GIPSY SMITH: HIS LIFE AND WORK.

By Himself.

This is a grand record of achievement. A poor lad, born in a gipsy camp, has been used as an instrument in God's hands to awaken multitudes throughout the world to spiritual consciousness. He tells in this book of 330 pages his rich and varied experiences from birth through years of success in soul-winning. The style of the book is not boastful; it is a humble attempt to satisfy the persistent requests of his friends for a history of his romantic career. The narrative is prefaced by appreciative introductions by Dr. Alexander McLaren and G. Campbell Morgan. Several illustrations add to the interest of the book.

We offer "Gipsy Smith" handsomely bound in cloth as a premium for two new subscriptions to The Christian Sun at $1.50 each; or for one new subscription and 45 cents addition-til it has become a part of their thinking and practice. From house to house, from place to place they are going to deal out gossip and give it the coloring that suits themselves best, and shows others to the greatest disadvantage. "We should lead a miserable life if we could hear everything that is said about us when we are not listening." Some one said something to you or about you that you did not like. It cut its way to your very heart, and you have had that grudge in you all the time since, but Jesus says to you and to me if we have them, make haste, and come down for to-day I must abide at thy house. Jesus is a guest worth entertaining. Leave the gossip shop and meet Him. Go and tell Him all about yourself—tell Him that you need Him more than any thing else. He will listen to you and he will bless you. He will give you happiness. Come down out of that old den of evil speaking, and put your own house in order, bathe yourselves in his pardoning love, be clean—dress up by putting on the beautiful garment of righteousness and walk in the light of liberty and love. Then when you take this exercise and perform this duty you will feel better, and you will look so much better. When these bad faults are corrected and the old desire to engage in them is removed, your life will be sweeter and your prospects for more usefulness will enlarge.

When one is offended the feelings are hard to control—revenge and thoughts which are repulsive rise up at once and so often govern the actions and leave the actor in a storm of lasting trouble. Just a few unguarded thoughts and hasty actions have produced, in many cases, a life of untold trouble and regret. Some may call you a coward, if you do not fight—shoot and kill—but God, and reason, and prudence say you shall not, and if you will, you must suffer for transgression. If the law does not detect you, God will, and your guilt will be a just punishment. It takes a brave man to subdue himself, and hold himself back to keep from going too fast. It takes an honest, faithful one to go right on to the mark for the prize; it takes a brave one to rush through the din of life in the suffocating smoke from the guns of the enemy, and it takes a brave soul to enter heaven.

Temptation and dissipation have forever destroyed vast multitudes. They are beyond the line of redemption. They listened to the songs of sin too long, until at last there was a sting in them which was deadly. Tempted to do wrong has been a trouble with many. Dissipation of many kinds has impressed itself upon the faces of thousands and to-day many of them are ruined by its dreadful effects. Bad enough it would be if it only injured the guilty, but there are so many others troubled by it. It spreads out like fire licking with a long tongue everything in reach, and burning through buildings and the woods with distressing devastation. Where, O where is that devoted father and that tender, loving mother whose boy is in some prison cell? An answer comes back bearing the sad message from their trembling lips, we are at the old home in sadness and much distress, and our boy whom we loved so much has caused this distress. Where is that one who tarried too long at the saloon, and left his family behind in need and so lonely? He comes late and the next morning his two bright little girls of six years came to him and as they sat one upon each knee with their little arms around his neck, "dear father, we were so lonely last night while you were away—please don't leave us so long any more." Temptation and dissipation go arm in arm. They are doubled in many ways to charm and deceive the thoughtless, and to resist them demands a double portion of care and prayer. Pray that a double portion of caution and resistance may be given, and that great deliverance may come in time to save. If any one who sees, thinks, hears and reasons, is mixed up with temptation and dissipation, let him remember that One who is able to save to the uttermost is looking up to him and saying in simple, tender, and inviting words, Make haste and come down. If you fail to come down today you may miss your last invitation—you may not have another opportunity. Come down, come down, come down to-day from the ways of sin and meet Him who wants to abide at your house. Have a house clearing and cleaning to-day and let Jesus abide with you in it. Set your house in order. Come down from the dens of sin—let them alone—come down, come out.

Death is the wages of sin. In 1893 in Chicago where the writer was stopping a man and woman registered at the hotel from an eastern city. The woman had left her husband behind and came there with this man. They had only been there a short time when the man disappeared and she was left alone. Being greatly troubled about her condition she committed suicide, and left a note on the center table saying: "The wages of sin is death." In the great crowd that

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Panic.—That was a peculiar financial hysteria which struck this country in the late fall of 1907 and from which industries of almost all sorts suffered in 1908. Rural districts did not feel the effects as did the trading centers and manufacturing interests.

That panic brought a strange thing to pass. It set the tide of emigration the other way. In 1908 only 635,000 immigrants came; 859,000 left this country and went back whence they came. Immigrants of 1908 were fewer by 1,048,000 than in 1907, and the loss to the steamship companies last year in gross receipts was $34,000,000. It may be the ignorant masses from abroad that came as immigrants to our shores, but one wonders how on earth they found out so quickly that money was scarce, labor plentiful and business dull over here. The world may not be united in fellowship, but it is in finance.

Pitiful Richmond.—One would think that Richmond, Virginia, was old enough, large enough and strong enough to take care of itself. But it is not. Last Wednesday night a big mass meeting of its citizens, who oppose prohibition, was held and sent out a pitiful plea to other sections of the State urging the people not to close up the saloons of Richmond.

The News-Leader of that city in advocacy of the plea said recently: "With in ten years we have abolished Sunday selling of liquor, have reduced the saloons about one-half, have reduced the hours during which they may be open, have abolished the all-night saloons and have thrown about the traffic all the safe-guards that experience and careful thought could suggest or approve."

Now there just chances to be one safe-guard that the "we" of The News Leader have not thrown about the Richmond saloon business. And that is the constant and determined and perpetual endeavor of those self-same Richmond saloons to sell liquor in all parts of Virginia and in North Carolina as well, and debauch, is possible, a half or all the population.

It is a far cry indeed, this of the Richmond saloon keepers and their friends, calling on the rest of the country to let them alone in their business and then they in their turn by every mail and by every other device, known to the salesman's and advertiser's art, strive with all their might not to let alone other sections of the State and country. We doubt if there is a village, hamlet, nook or niche in all Virginia or North Carolina, prohibition or no prohibition, where the advertising matter of those Richmond saloons has not gone, begging men and women "to buy their good liquor," and now that those in other sections talk of taking a hand in helping to close up Richmond's saloons they raise the cry, "Hands off. Leave us alone to run our own business." In Heaven's merciful name then, why do not the Richmond saloon keepers leave the peoples of other sections, especially of "dry" territory, alone to run their own business? Hands off indeed! The saloon keepers should be the last in this good world to cry "hands off." When even they themselves well know they are trying their utmost to "hands on" every man and youth in all this broad land so as to drag them to the places of debauch and wreck and ruin.

This is a pitiful plea that comes from Richmond, such an illogical and silly plea as only saloon men can put up.

Corn.—The country seems to be just waking up to the value and possibilities of corn. Already it is the greatest single crop, greatest in bulk and value, in the United States. It would take one hundred and nineteen thousand trains of thirty cars each to haul our corn crop of any average year. If the corn crop of the United States were loaded into freight cars, it would form a train which would more than encircle the globe. It would take a freight train of one hundred and five cars all loaded with gold to pay for the crop of one year. The six great corn-producing States, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri, and Indiana produce nearly three-fifths of the entire crop of the United States. In these States fifty bushels per acre is considered a good yield, though the average for the United States is twenty-five bushels per acre. The largest yield of corn on record is 237 bushels per acre on a farm in South Carolina. The highest price paid for corn was $250 per ear, this being received by L. B. Clore at an auction sale at a Chicago corn sale in 1907. The chief value of corn is food for man and the domestic animals. It is used in the preparation of more than one hundred different articles. Corn is native to America, it having been cultivated here by the Indians long before Columbus' discovery.

To the worth and possibilities of this wonderful plant the country is just waking up. Here is a plant yielding yearly an income which, if our gold and silver mines combined, in their balmy days had equalled, American miners would have been considered and would have been, fabulously rich.

No wonder the Russian Government has just sent to the United States for an up-to-date corn grower to go to that country, at a salary of $4,000 a year and all expenses, to teach the Russians how to grow king corn. And no wonder that in many counties of the Southern States a premium is offered each year to the successful competitor in the "corn contest."

A kindly Providence made corn grow in abundance because for man and beast it is bread—the staff of life. He who cannot see the smile of God in the waving corn is blind indeed.

College Presidents and the Public.—President Alderman of the University of Virginia has completed the million dollar endowment to that time honored institution, the raising of which amount he undertook last year.

President Alderman rejoices in the success he has achieved in this undertaking and counts it a great happiness to have rendered some service in this great matter.

In announcing to the public the completion of his task these words with their touch of fine sentiment, are added by Dr. Alderman: "But I want to say that the president of an American university ought not to be required to raise money as a business and under contract, so to speak, and God helping me, I will never again undertake just such a task

FROM THE FIELD.

Greensboro.

Editor Sun, Dear Brother:—I write to let you and the people of the Conference know that we are still alive at Greensboro. About four weeks before Easter we began to lay plans and announce that we would make an Easter gift for the purpose of paying the debt yet remaining on our building. Money being close we feared a little, but the Master's words, "Lo, I am with you," sustained us and we went forward. Our expectations were more than met. However, we did not raise the full amount but we are where we can see the silver lining of the cloud, and expect to raise the full amount before dedication day, which we are now planning for the first Sunday in June, it being the ninth anniversary of the church. This little band has certainly labored faithfully to this end and feel the Lord has blessed them in their faithfulness. May the Lord keep us consecrated in the faith.

J. W. Bolton, Pastor.

Park Place, Norfolk.

We desire to report a surprise which was in our interest Friday evening, April 9th, that being our birthday anniversary. A number of members and others who are regular attendants at Third Church, Park Place, gathered in our home and spent the evening in a very cheerful manner. They brought with them oranges and bananas to be served with other refreshments, also a beautiful present in the form of a gold watch, which was presented to their pastor by Doctor Manning in a neat and appropriate speech.

It is needless to say we were delighted with both the present and the kind regards expressed by those who came into our home on that occasion.

The membership here consists of tested friends of the Christian Church. A more hospitable, agreeable class of people would be hard to find. We were sorry to have to spare one of our number, Miss Susie Turpin, to go to a foreign field but meekly submit to the Divine will. We are glad that we have others who are very devoted to the cause of Christ. They have faith in God as their great Leader.

W. H. Thompson.

Henderson Letter.

Last Sunday (Easter) Mr. Johnnie Langston, son of Bro. W. W. Langston united with our church here on profession of faith. He is a young man of fine appearance and will be of service to us. This is eight adults and one youth received since our meeting in the fall. We will not hold a series of meetings this spring, but are prayerfully and hopefully looking forward to the second week in October for the same. Members are being urged to begin now to pray and work preparatory to the meeting. Our work here has its encouraging features and the trials of the average mission point. The membership is fifty one. The pastor's salary and other obligations in the way of current expenses are met promptly. The Sunday-school is doing good work. We are expecting the convention to meet with us in July. Our prayer-meetings have been fairly well attended during the winter. Attendance at preaching services is never large; but smaller in the spring than at other times. For the past two months there have been more sickness than usual among our people.

Since my last report I have received the following which has been applied to church indebtedness.

Wentworth S. S. ....	$5.00
Dr. H. H. Utley .....	$5.00
Dr. J. P. Barrett .....	5.00
Dr. E. L. Moffitt .....	5.00
E. M. Newman .....	5.00
R. C. Underwood .....	10.00
C. D. Harton .....	10.00
Mrs Bessie Ralston .....	5.00
Miss Effie Harton .....	2.50
By sale of house and lumber ....	40.00

We have had the church lot graded, twenty shade trees put out and a frame dwelling removed. All of which adds to the appearance of the grounds. There are several pledges to the work here due. We have a note due this month and one in May. As fast as these pledges are paid they will be applied to indebtedness.

C. E. Newman.

Raleigh Letter.

Since my last letter I have received four excellent members into the church. The work moves along very nicely. There is a slight increase in the average attendance at the regular church services. Our Easter services were of a very high order and attracted some attention. The church was literally packed at the evening service, when the children and young people gave a service which was a credit to them and a delight to the large audience. Miss Lovie Jones, the accomplished music director at Peace Institute, had charge of the music. Mrs. Johnson directed the work of the evening service. The choir, the young people, and the children were all at their best. I have never been more deeply impressed with Easter music and Easter exercises than I was last Sunday. The decorations were in the very best taste and were quite beautiful. Palms, ferns, Easter lilies, Calas and other white flowers were used in abundance. A liberal offering was made for missions. Monday we had an enjoyable Egg Hunt at Pullen Park. In many respects this has been the happiest Easter of all my life. I feel greatly encouraged for the greater work which I must undertake soon. Next Sunday we begin a series of meetings which we hope will grow into a great revival. I beg that the readers of The Sun join us in prayer for a revival. I understand that we are soon to have a convention of our young people of the Southern Christian Convention. My prayer to God is that we may make it a convention worth while. We need just such a convention as has been called for by the committee in charge. I believe we have as fine body of young people as can be found in any section of the country. And what we all want to see is the young people trained for service. I am persuaded in my own mind that the convention will prove to be a great blessing, in giving inspiration. I hope that our leaders will take a peculiar delight in working up the matter in the local churches. Pastors, Sunday-school Superintendents, Christian Endeavor Presidents and leaders on Mission committees ought to be greatly interested in the movement. A good pull and all pulling together will give us a convention worth while. I am with the committee and shall stand by them for a better system of organization for our young people.

L. F. Johnson.

Lanett, Alabama.

Dear Bro.—It has been some time since I wrote any thing for our church paper. I have not lost interest. I am very busy and have been all the while. My work seems to be in a fair condition and moving along very smoothly. I am at Lanett, Ala. assisting Rev. B. F. Young in revival services. We are having a fine meeting, one that I trust will do great good. Lanett has more than 4,000 people and it requires a great amount of work to do what should be done. I suppose the meeting will continue through this week. We are planning to hold our Missionary Rally 5th Sunday in May. We are expecting a great meeting. One that will thoroughly educate our people along lines of Christian benevolence. Can you come Bro. Editor? Will write a lengthy letter when I get home.

May God bless the Christian Sun, its editor and readers. G. D. Hunt.

—The Bible is the Word of the King, and in it there is power. Here is the source of authority—the oracle of the living God.—Ex.

ALABAMA LETTER.

Dear Editor:—It has been a good while since I last wrote to the Sun, though I have read many letters from others who are more careful than I.

New Harmony church is inclined to move forward after so long a time. We have a very good Sunday-school and the prospects point to a better day, both for the Sunday-school and church.

A few weeks ago death came and took from Bro. C. D. Mitchell his beloved wife. She had been sick but a short while. Her life was a model for us to store in memory. She was a member of the Baptist church. To mourn, she leaves a husband, son and daughter. Funeral services conducted by the writer.

My prayers are for the laborers to accomplish more good this year than before.

We have several openings for establishing churches if we had the means. At present we are unable to work these places, but I hope some day we can be able to meet the demands. Many of our ministers are poor and are forced to spend their time in obtaining a support, and to have recourse to other occupations to support their families.

I do not believe in a minister's going out to preach for money and nothing else, but he must have a support if he does his people justice in preaching to them. When they fail to give him reasonable support he is bound by nature to resort to something else for his support.

There are ministers who are confronted with better opportunities than others. I am speaking of the different denominations. In some of our towns and cities the churches pay as high as $3,600 per annum. While some of the churches out in the country pay as low as $500, and have preaching twice a month. At the best our country churches do not pay over $250.00. A country church that will pay that much this year will be a banner church when the reports are read at conference. At these figures a minister is unable to give the church his entire time. After he pays for his conveyance, or for keeping one for the year, it will amount to almost half of his salary. Then take his other extra expenses and his actual living expenses and subtract it from his salary and you find him in debt, if he has a family and depends altogether on his salary for a living. It is true that we have preachers who have served the best they could and worked at home as hard as they could and have made a very good living, but if they could have turned their entire time to the church, how much better they could have done.

Our young men who have prepared themselves for the ministry by contracting debt and then enter the field with the promise of just enough to pay expenses, is very trying and it has its weight on others. If we want our young men to respond to the call we must offer some inducement to encourage them to push forward. Now we have some old men who have fought and stood almost as long as nature will permit, and now barely have a living. Take Bros. Elder, Edmonson and Speight. We have three who have stood their time almost out fighting difficulties and even surmounting obstacles that we younger men would give way under. If we want our church to move on better and grow faster we must give to our servants better opportunities and look after our old worn-out servants who are now waiting for their time to come for their departure from labor to reward.

We are going to hear of this subject being discussed later. May God put us to thinking of our old servants.

Yours very truly,

Linville, Ala., R. D. 3. A. A. West.

THE SPIRIT AS TEACHER.

I apprehend that very many Christians do not prize the teaching of the Holy Spirit nearly as much as they are capable of doing. Perhaps all of us quite often forget the great truth that the Spirit is the ever-ready teacher of the Christian in respect to the exercise of prayer. Hence it is that there is a great deal of dead formalism in many of the prayers of many Christians. There may be a ready utterance of words in prayer. An observer of a certain one in prayer, noting how he seems to be in speech, may say that he is "very able in prayer;" and yet the Spirit may not have any direct connection with the prayer. Paul, with all of his natural fervency of spirit and freedom of speech greatly felt the need of the Holy Spirit as his teacher in prayer. So he wrote these words: "We know not how to pray as we ought, but the Spirit Himself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered." In those words Paul confessed that he did not know how to pray as well as he ought to pray. He depended upon the Spirit to help him in his petitions to God. He wanted instructions from the Spirit, because the Spirit knew just what things God would give in answer to right praying. Paul did not want to spend any time in useless praying. He did not want to ask God for certain things which God would refuse to give to him; but the Spirit knowing the mind of God, would instruct Paul to ask for only such favors as He would grant. Mr. S. D. Gordon, in his book on prayer, says: "Let the Spirit teach you how to pray. The more you pray, the more you will find yourself saying to yourself, 'I don't know how to pray.' Well, God understands that. Paul knew that, out of his own experience before he wrote it down. And God has a plan to cover our need there. There is One who is a Master intercessor. He understands praying perfectly. He is the Spirit of prayer. God has sent Him down to live inside of you and me, partly for this, to teach us the fine art of prayer." If you would succeed in prayer, ask the Holy Spirit to teach, guide, and empower you. C. H. Wetherbe.

FEARING GOD.

Love and fear can go hand in hand, and must go hand in hand if love is to be perfect. Yet few Bible injunctions puzzle and disturb young people more than that which tells us that we ought to fear God, fear the God whom we are also to love! It seems unreasonable and impossible. Of course the word "fear" in this connection has been commonly explained as "reverence," but that does not altogether satisfy the Anglo-Saxon mind, to whom fear means fear, and not reverence. A minister threw a flood of light on the matter recently, in a very simple and beautiful thought to which he gave expression in public prayer: "May we have that fear of God which is not dread of thee, but fear of hurting the love of that Fatherhood which sent the Son to save us." Such fear will make our love only deeper and more watchful.—S. S. Times.

ALONE WITH JESUS.

Alone with Jesus! What a sweet and holy spot! What a blessed refuge to which the soul may betake itself from the charges of Satan, the accusations of the world, and the sorrows of life! Sweet spot for the heart to unfold itself, to tell its hidden tale in the ear of infinite love, tenderness and compassion! Alone with Jesus! How different a front would Christianity present to the world if the Lord's people were oftener there! What humility and gentleness and love would characterize all their dealings! What holiness stamped on the very brow, that all might read! What few judgments passed on others, how many more on ourselves! What calmness and resignation and joyful submission to all the Lord's dealings! Be much alone with Jesus! Then will the passage to glory be one of sunshine, whether it be through the portals of the grave or through the clouds of heaven.—Frederick Whitfield.

A REMINDER.

We regret to take editorial space for a reminder, but we are forced to do it. Twice recently we have sent out individual statements urging those now due to renew. Many have neither renewed nor written a word of explanation. There is no fund, save from individual subscribers, to support The Sun, and this fact explains our position. The amount YOU owe, dear delinquent subscriber, is small, but it will greatly aid us and put you to little inconvenience to send us $1.50 for a year's subscription. Please do not force us to the necessity of expense of sending another individual notice. Kindly renew today. We will appreciate this kindness very, very much.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Palm Street Church, Greensboro, is moving to put nice oak pews in its house of worship, and to that end a collection of $200 was taken Easter Sunday.

—Pastor C. C. Jones writes that the new house of worship now rapidly going up at Waverly, Va., will cost about $5,000 and the hope is to be ready for dedication about the last of May.

—Union Church at Union Ridge, Alamance Co., N. C., is making rapid progress in building its elegant house of worship. The pews are to be quartered oak, made in circular fashion, of latest and most comfortable design.

—One of our interested, faithful and thoughtful ministers recently wrote us: "There are some older people I know who would be gladdened in their last years by the light of The Christian Sun, but it is all that some of them can do to earn a living, and I would like to know that they were helped and comforted by the weekly visits of The Sun. They will not stay in this world much longer. Could we not devise some plan to place The Sun in some of their homes?" It is a question worth considering and we often wish there was a provision such as this brother speaks of.

—F. Marion Crawford, the writer, who died at his villa at Sorrento, Italy, April 9, had a hobby of learning modern languages. He was as well acquainted with French, German and Italian as he was with English. He was also proficient in Spanish, Swedish, Russian, Turkish and Portuguese. He had also studied at twenty seven he was a scholar, but poor, almost penniless, and had no idea what to make his life's work. He did not begin novel writing till 1882, but since that time had written more books of fiction than any man since Dickens, there being no less than forty-five separate volumes put down as his chief works. At the time of his death he was engaged on what he considered his last work, A history of Rome in the Middle Ages.

—From the wonderfully analytic pen of Dr. J. J. Summerbell there is a view of the beloved Dr. McWhimney in last week's Herald of Gospel Liberty that will interest Sun readers. Every line of the message is so tender with sympathy and beautiful in sentiment that we print the whole as found in The Herald:

There is but one Dr. McWhimney. It is not necessary to give his titles, nor initials, or residence, when speaking of him. Everybody knows whom you mean, if you say, "McWhimney." There is no one like him. He is the brilliant survivor of the most brilliant galaxy of the Miami Conference.

I heard that he was ill. Wishing to see him with my own eyes, I went to Yellow Springs on Monday of this week, and found him, not ill, but feeble; not sick, but weak. It is the weakness of great age, the great age of the machine that has been run by the youthful spirit within, until it is nearly worn out. The young engineer, residing within the body, now finds difficulty in making some of the wheels work. The cogs seem to slip; but there is no piece broken, there is no organ diseased. But the friction of four score and more years has worn them. The hands seem far from the heart, and easily get cold; any they are not as quick to report to the brain, as when Dr. McWhimney began preaching, three score and more years ago. But yet the essentials of the body, the vital organs, work on, and shall work on, for a considerable period, no doubt. His physician says that warm weather will renew his strength.

I found him as clear-headed as ever, as enthusiastic as ever, as genial as ever. Fully realizing the weakness of his body, which he lays down to rest much of the day, he told me of his plans of continued activity:—soon to meet Dr. Weston and President McReynolds of Defiance College, concerning its interests; to serve in an appointed duty at the coming institute of the Miami Conference; to go to New York next month, to attend the meeting of the Palmer Fund.

And these plans of his are likely to have realization; for he has a skillful nurse, in his wife, who has much of the knowledge of a physician, and cares for him with unceasing watchfulness. If she can attend him in his travels, he will be spared many dangers.

He told me that religion was an increasing support to him now; that hitherto he had been scattering its blessings and sustaining it; but that now his relation to it was reversed:—it brings its blessings to him, and is sustaining him.

He asked me to inform the brethren through the Herald of his condition; and I promised to tell them (by the editor's permission). But the very fact that he asked me to do him this little service saddened me: for it showed me that he was shrieking from some burdens; and when I glanced at his hands, I saw that "the keepers of the house were trembling."

How strange it would seem to be without Dr. McWhimney! How varied have been his services to the cause of Christ! His activities have been unceasing in many directions. As pastor he was in different places a church builder. He has been connected with various colleges as lecturing professor. He was long a trustee of Antioch College. He is now chancellor of Defiance College. At one time, when he was simultaneously agent of the Christian Publishing Association, editor of the Sunday-school literature, and editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, he advanced five thousand dollars of his private funds to run the business of the House. He served as trustee, and was usually on the executive committee. I believe he was agent, when the old property was sold, possibly under President Long (of the C. P. A., and the House was started on its upward progress. He is one of the directors of the Palmer Fund. For half a century he has been a voluminous writer, popular orator, and author of interesting books. His titles, doctor of divinity, and doctor of laws, evince the respect of his brethren.

But now he shrinks from going to his machine to answer a letter, or write an article; and is thinking of his new home. And in a letter to me before my visit, he had sweetly said, "With all my sickness and the feebleness of old age I enjoy great peace of mind. I appreciate, as never before, the wonderful truth of that sacred proposition, 'Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on thee.' * * * * My trunk is packed for my angel home, and I shall be pleased to answer the last call."

His form is beginning to stoop, his step to linger; and new emotions crowd to the front for recognition. He wishes me to let the brethren hear that his heart years for them to know of his weakness, and yet of his hopefulness; still finding in Jesus the manifestation of divinity, in the highest form in which it can be presented to humanity.

Elon College Notes.

The North Carolina State Christian Endeavor Society will meet in Winston-Salem next Friday and continue for three days. From Elon College there will be present, State Secretary, Prof. W. A. Harper and Mrs. Harper, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, who is to deliver an address, delegates from the local society, Misses Wilmer Winn, Jennie Lee Williams, Laura Bond, Nannie Lansdall, Maggie Pitt, Messrs. J. Lee Johnson, B. J. Earp, W. L. Wells, and E. T. Hines. Junior, Misses Jennie Willis Atkinson and Mary Williams.

Dr. W. S. Long, Elon's first president has written a book on Theology which will soon be brought from the press. Dr. J. O. Atkinson is publishing agent. Dr. Long is a very scholarly man and his many friends will look forward with pleasure for this production.

By act of our recent Legislature the Alamance Battleground Association was incorporated. Wednesday of last week the Association met in Burlington to organize. Those present were: Erwin A. Holt, Robt. L. Holt, Dr. Coble, Col. J. Bryan Grimes, P. E. Shaw, Dr. E. L. Moffitt, Dr. Geo. W. Long, R. W. D. Connor. The association is contemplating holding a celebration on this famous field May 16, the anniversary of the Battle of Alamance which was fought May 16, 1771, being the first blood spilled in America for independence. The battle ground is six miles south of Elon.

Next Thursday Prof. Harper goes to Holly Springs, Wake county, to deliver an address at the close of the school there.

Prof. Lawrence was in Durham Saturday and Sunday, he having been one of the judges of debate between Trinity College and University of the South.

Mr. C. C. Howell, class of 1908, at present a law student of the University of Virginia, is at Elon for a few days. It gives us great pleasure to welcome home our boys who are so loyal and true as he.

There will be Mayday exercise on the college campus this year. All are invited to be present and participate in the festivities of the occasion.

The College pulpit was filled on Sunday by Dr. J. U. Newman. Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. and the Christian Endeavor societies all held their regular meetings. To those out of touch with college life it is hard to form a just idea of the great importance of these organizations in the spiritual welfare of the student body. J. T. C.

as this. The silence and reserves of one's soul and character are too previous to expend them in just this way too often." While these words are cautious and conservative, and convey a sentiment worthy of the man who uttered them, one can hardly agree with the position taken on the whole.

College presidents owe the public somewhat, as well as the institutions over which they preside. The very highest type of our citizens are called to preside over our colleges, and no class of citizens so quickly and readily gain the public ear and have more ready access to the public conscience. Now, in our day of great material prosperity, and the piling up of great wealth, we need the very best teaching to keep us in ways and channels of unselfishness and liberality. College presidents are needed in the fray to help beat back the ever increasing tide and volume of self-engrossed materialism.

Any college president, who teaches the people he is trying to serve, that they owe something of their gain and increase to culture and the higher institutions of learning has wrought a noble work and blessed his day and generation. No, we would not have a college president a perpetual beggar, but we would have him place before the people the privileges and the needs of the college which exists never for private gain, but ever and always for public good. We believe it is no less a college president's function to teach the public lessons of philanthropy and liberality than it is to teach the pupils of his institution Greek, Latin and Mathematics. The silence and reserves of one's soul, of every soul, are too precious to be engrossed always with materialistic things, but the college president, like the preacher of the gospel cannot remain silent forever, but must and should now and then cry out and spare not. The public at large is to be considered as well as the pupil in the class room.

"THE GREAT REVIVALISTS"

The great Christian generals who lead the world's battles for souls against the forces of the underworld are described in an article by Arthur B. Reeve in the May issue of Munsey's Magazine.

From the time of John Wesley to the recent triumphs of Chapman and Alexander, the writer has outlined the work accomplished by these great religious movements.

George Whitefield, "Gipsy" Smith, Dr. Spurgeon, "Sam" Jones, Ira D. Sankey, Dr. Dwight L. Moody, and Dr. Torrey are among the famous evangelists whose remarkable careers are outlined in this paper.

Their methods are described and the record of their wonderful success discussed. The article is profusely illustrated with photographs of the leading evangelists since Wesley's time.

"Lives of Christian Ministers" deceased, edited by Prof. P. J. Kernodle, Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, (Elon College, N. C.), will soon be published and be on sale. The price of the book will be \$2.00, but it will be delivered to advance subscribers for \$1.50 if the order is received by May 1. It will contain more than 400 pages, the size of page, 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ x8 $\frac{3}{8}$ , bound in cloth, and be illustrated by more than 30 cuts. Those who wish a copy should order at once, as the author proposes to publish only a limited number.

—Mrs. Eva A. Ingersoll, widow of the late Col. Bob Ingersoll, after much litigation, has won a suit for $138,810 due from the estate of the late Andrew J. Davis, the same being attorney's fee which the Davises tried to get out of paying after the death of Ingersoll.

—Kemilworth Inn, one of Asheville's most famous hotels, was burned, with all its furnishings and much property of the 70 guests, was destroyed by fire April 14. The cost of the Inn was $310,000, insurance, $74,000. There were no fatalities, but many narrow escapes and some injuries, as the fire was discovered about 2 a. m.

—Kidnapping stirs the emotions of the world more than any other crime. One reason is that it is happily infrequent. When a case like that in Pennsylvania comes before newspaper readers, it is always accompanied by the story of Charlie Ross. That story is remembered because the boy was not found, and therein it differs from most other true stories of kidnapping. American parents have less to fear from kidnapers than from firecrackers or measles, or a hundred other dangers which do not keep us awake at night. It is the infrequency, not the nature, of the crime that renders it comparatively insignificant. It can be more horrible than murder, and those who suffer receive universal sympathy.—Ex.

The boys in a mission school in Africa had a discussion one day as to whether the girls should be educated as well as the boys. The verdict reached was that they should not. And the chief argument given was that if the girls were given as good an education as the boys they would refuse to bring the water or chop the wood.

—The shortage in the wheat crop in the United States is estimated at 60,000,000 bushels, and a similar decrease is reported in other countries.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT
—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVEN-
TION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

Keep your eye on May 29-31.

Make your preparations to attend the Young People's Convention.

Send your name to Prof. W. A. Harper, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, Elon College, N. C., before May 15, if you want entertainment at the Convention.

Last week we wrote of the Sunday-school and its improvement. Now, a word about the Christian Endeavor and the Young People's Convention. While the Sunday-school is intended primarily to give instruction in the Scriptures, the Christian Endeavor is intended, above all things, to train young people for leadership in the church. The pledge enjoins faithfulness to one's church no less than to the society itself. Not only in our church, but in other denominations as well, the most prosperous churches in actual Christian service are those that have Christian Endeavor societies, or similar organizations for the young people. Practical common sense teaches a farmer that methods of improved agriculture that put his neighbor farmer ahead of him in getting results from the soil are the very methods that he must use or else be left still further behind. First the farmer wants to KNOW,—know his subject, know about soils, stock, implements and the raising of crops. Then he needs energy enough to put this knowledge into practice. Just so in the questions confronting the Christian Church, if it means to cultivate its part of the moral vineyard intelligently and skilfully. The Sunday-school is our most potent agency for disseminating knowledge of the Bible, and the Christian Endeavor Society is the most effective medium of giving this knowledge expression. Let every Christian Endeavor Society in the Southern Christian Convention be represented in the Young People's Convention at Elon College, May 29-31.

UNITED EFFORT WILL COUNT.

The Southern Christian Convention in session at Greensboro, N. C., April 29, 1908, adopted the following resolutions: "That the Christian Endeavor Committee of this convention be authorized to call a convention of the young people of the Southern Christian Convention for permanent organization for the study of the best methods for aggressive Christian work among the young people of the Church." . . . . "That the committee on Sunday Schools be requested to co-operate with the Christian Endeavor Committee in the organization, and work of the young people.

This action, on the part of the Convention, was taken not without purpose. The C. E. Committee's report stated that "little progress" in the C. E. Society had been made, "not because of any lack of importance" in this work, but because there is no "aggressive policy" in "our present method" of operating the work. Consequently steps were taken to bring about a reformation in methods and to set in motion a practical, aggressive way of enlisting our young people in Christian work. To this end the committees on Christian Endeavor and Sunday Schools have planned for a convention of young people to be held at Elon College the latter part of May.

It is the ardent hope and earnest prayer of these committees that this convention may prove to be a great success, and that it may mark the beginning of a greater day for the Christian Church, for the Kingdom of Christ. That the Christian Church has suffered and is suffering today from the lack of untrained, inefficient leaders is a fact that all can easily see. Neglect to organize our young people and they wander here and there without anything to do. Give them nothing to do and they soon lose interest and begin to drift until in many cases they are lost to the church and finally drift back to the world. But one asks, "What will the convention do?" If left for only the Christian Endeavor and Sunday Schools committees, not a great deal can be done, because this work is for the entire Southern branch of the church and should have the united strength, effort and prayers of all our people. If this work is to succeed in bringing in large results for good and for the glory of God, we must "stand in our place and lift." Let each one say, "I'll do my part." If you will do that, you need not fear the outcome of the Young People's Convention.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MAY 2, 1909.

A Few Suggestions.

Paul's First Missionary Journey—
Cyrus.

Aets 13:1-12.

Golden Text:—Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Mark 16:15.

Review.—Review the previous lesson, and in it see the First Gentile Church sending home mission money to Jerusalem. Today we see the same Church embarking upon a foreign mission enterprise, sending its two strongest helpers. Examine the note book; have one of them read.

Geography.—Get clearly before the class Antioch, Salamis, Seleucia, Cyprus, Paphos. Point them out on the map or draw a map on the board so as to indicate their location. Call for assigned work on the island of Cyprus.

Incidental Instruction.—Find what you can of Herod the tetrarch and tell the class. Tell them of the sorcerers' part in oriental society and especially what part they played at this era. It may be well to explain the two kinds of governors sent out by the Roman government. The proconsul was sent by the Roman senate and had no military force. The praetor was sent by the emperor, who was at this time Claudius, for this is about 47 A. D.,—and had military forces under him. Cyprus had been of the latter class, but was just now of the former. Distinguish between prophets and teachers, i. e., preachers and Sunday-school teachers.

Intervening Events.—After going up to Jerusalem to carry the alms, Paul and Barnabas returned to Antioch, accompanied by John Mark, and resumed their pastoral labors, which continued so far as we know uninterrupted for about two years. Then came the first missionary journey.

The Lesson.—The lesson divides itself into two parts, which you may write on the board as your topical outline.

1. The Antioch Church Is Directed by the Lord, verses 1-3. Find what two classes of workers are mentioned in the Antioch church, what individuals are pointed out, what one of them was evidently of high rank, what the Holy Ghost said to them as they fasted and prayed, (Here call for assigned work on what the Bible teaches in regard to fasting), in what way they sent them away.

2. The Gospel in Cyprus, verses 4-12. Find to what place they first came, whither they thence sailed, at what place they landed, what they did there, who attended them, (Here call for assigned work on John Mark,) to what place they now came in their journey, whom they found there, his business, his nationality, (Here call for assigned work on what the Bible teaches in regard to sorcery, Deut. 18:9-14), who was deputy of the country, Bar—Jesus' relation to him, what kind of a man Sergius Paulus was, for whom he called, what he desired, how the sorcerer Elymas acted under those circumstances, what new or second name is here given Saul, (He is called by this name from now on—we have already explained this about two weeks ago), with what Paul was filled, what he said to Bar-Jesus, what happened to him at Paul's command, what the effect on the deputy was. Review the lesson by the topic method.

Truths and their Application.—1. The Antioch church did not send such workers as they could spare, but the best they had, their two excellent co-pastors. Do we always try to get the best talent we have for the foreign field? Have you ever read "The home church can ill spare Brother So-and-So?" Let us regard our missionary efforts with too great earnestness to commit them to the care of weak brethren.

2. "Being filled with the Holy Ghost," that was the secret of Paul's mastery over Bar-Jesus. When the church is so filled, no power can resist its onward march. Are we so filled?

3. Barnabas and Paul were set aside for a special service. So are we all. Happy is the man who has found his place and is filling it. The joy of noble service, such as comes to the man who feels that he is filling his God-appointed mission, is the supremest joy a mortal can know. Let us be ambitious to enter into it.

Manual Work.

Have written in the note books the following outline, to be expanded fully at home and to be returned next Sunday for inspection.

Life of Paul (Continued).

45 A. D. Return from Jerusalem, John Mark accompanying, Acts 12-25.

45 A. D. Paul, with Barnabas, is co-pastor at Antioch.

47 A. D.—49 A. D. Paul's First missionary Journey.

Leaves Antioch, being specially set aside by the Holy Ghost, Acts 13:1-3.

Arrives at Seleucia, Acts 13-4.

Sails to Cyprus and crosses the island to Paphos, Acts 13:4-6.

Meets with Bar-Jesus, Acts 13-6-12.

Ceases to be called Saul, Acts 13-9.

Assignments for Next Time.—Ask one to report on Luke 4:16-30; another to compare Acts 13:17-41 with Acts 2:14-39 and Acts 7:2-53; a third to find parallels between Acts 13:17-14 and the epistle to the Galatians.

EASTER REFLECTIONS.

As much as has been spoken and written on this subject it is still full of interest to us, and each returning Easter gives more devotion and better service to thousands of devout worshippers. Easter Sunday was a perfect day—a bright, glad day in which many helpful, eloquent and edifying sermons were delivered, and many willing hearts full of joy and praise were anxiously looking up to Him who said, in John XI, 25, "I am the resurrection and the life; he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die. Believeth thou this?" In several other places in the Scriptures He names himself I am. It is so expressive of his existence we love to hear it, and we delight in believing it. If there is any faith at all in him, we must believe in his resurrection, for if he is not risen our faith, worship and teaching about him are vain.

At the time of his resurrection the doctrine of the resurrection was not a new one because Job believed in it when he said, "I know my Redeemer liveth, and that at the latter day he shall stand upon the earth, yet in my flesh shall I see God." And Daniel tells about it in these words: "And at that time, thy people shall be delivered every one that shall be found written in the book, and many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Some who were in authority went to see Pilate saying, "Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, After three days I will rise again." The stone, at the door of the sepulchre, the seal and the watch made a trifle, only means to prevent those who loved him from coming by night and taking away the body.

If he had power to raise a man to life after he had been dead four days—he also had the power to raise himself into life. At that eventful time there was a great earthquake, and you remember there was also another earthquake when the veil of the temple was rent from the top to the bottom—the earth trembled and the rocks were split, and many of the bodies of the saints which slept arose. The powers of nature were in commotion at that time as if they were mourning at the death of Jesus. Then think how these same powers shook the world for joy as the Son of God so gloriously and triumphantly conquered death. The angel came from heaven to announce the birth of Jesus, and the angel first told of his resurrection. The angel—no doubt it was the same angel—the swift-winged messenger of heaven that brought glad tidings of great joy to the world at the advent, and at the resurrection of this same Jesus. It was truly a splendid thing when the angel came from the shining throng of heaven and rolled away the stone. Let all the kingdoms and their rulers when heaven and earth combine stand still and see the salvation of God. And if watching the grandeur of the starry realms, or looking with careful attention at noon day splendor, let us live in the light from the throne of God as it flashes on our way to the beautiful home.

The angel's face was like lightning and his raiment white as snow showing the neatness and purity of the place from which he came. Arrayed in such a suitable manner how gladly he came down the shining way to attend the resurrection of Jesus. The imagination has often pictured the angel in his lovely dress as he sat upon that rolled away stone telling those who came to see, He is not here; he is risen.

Since many of our Easter services are conducted with much form and external demonstration, the thought comes, Do we get as much spiritual blessing as we need on these impressive occasions? The preparation in many places was large; the decorations of the church were appropriate and beautiful; the music well selected, diligently practiced, and perfectly rendered and enjoyed by the congregation. The sermon was well prepared—thought out with care and excelled in literary taste—but there appeared to be a great lack of spiritual devotion in the entire service and not the inspiring worship which gives new visions of heaven.

No doubt that the services on Easter Sunday were a blessing to many who went to wait upon the Lord. All over this great world there were millions of voices praising him who declared, I am the resurrection and the life, and their lives are so much better, sweeter and purer by engaging in the delightful service. To them the words, "I am" sound out with a sweeter tone. They enjoy this life, but after the night of sleep from which none ever wake to weep they shall live, yes they shall live a resurrected life in immortal joy. Every one ought to be concerned about the resurrection, "For the hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth, they that have done good unto the resurrection of life and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."

This is the time for nature's resurrection. After the rest and sleep of winter it begins to wake—to rise. The wonderful power of nature is quietly working. The beautiful and tender flowers of so many kinds and names decorating the woodland, painting the mountains and hills, tinging the green vallies and extended planes, and pleasing the eye as it looks upon such enchanting objects. Yet what are these but the images of the resurrection of Christ? The voice of nature is calling "Come forth," and in obedience to the call she is putting on her spring dress, and is coming forth to beautify the earth and to cheer up

THE WIDOW'S MITE.

A man who could have given five dollars to a good cause the other day gave only ten cents saying, "Mine is only the widow's mite, but I give it with all good wishes."

In the single, simple statement that man told three glaring falsehoods. First, he was not a widow and so had no widow's mite to give. Second, the widow gave all she had, all her living, and this man gave not a thousandth part of his living. Third, he did not give with all, or with any good wishes, but he gave unwillingly, reluctantly, grudgingly and only as a matter of excuse.

I am not saying that he should have given even the dime. The cause may not have been worthy. I had not investigated and so did not know. What interested me was this intelligent man's misinterpretation of a very plain Scripture, and the glibness with which he packed three falsehoods into one short sentence. I would have been shocked if I had not heard that widow's mite incident worked to death before.

It is a living, burning shame to misinterpret beautiful and plain Scripture like that. Any ten year old child outside of a lunatic asylum should know better. How often, indeed, do men throw a few pennies in the basket and then proceed to satisfy their conscience with a self-gratifying wag of the head, "Well, I gave the widow's mite at any rate."

Why brother, that widow was the most liberal soul spoken of in all Scripture. She literally put into the collection box all she had. We do not know why, but some spirit of liberality possessed that devout widow's heart that day and she carried all her living and deposited it in the contribution box. Such large heartedness, such unprecedented liberality attracted the Master, and to set before the world an ideal of liberality He seized upon this incident and held it up to the gaze of all men for all time to come, an example and a model of liberality such as the world was not acquainted with, an ideal instance of unselfish and liberal giving. For the stingy and close-fisted soul to seize upon that example as an excuse for not giving is little short of profanation, is sheer sacrilege and borders almost on blasphemy. Brethren, we have done to death that widow's mite business and interpreted it as it most veritably is not.

A NEW MIRACLE.

There is a wonder that never grows old, a miracle that never becomes common-place. That is the miracle of regeneration.

How a lost soul is saved, by what process the drunkard's appetite is changed, the gambler's passion is transformed, and the sinner's waywardness is stopped, how the hard heart is melted, and hatred turned to love; that is a miracle. And no living mortal can fathom its depths or heights. We stand amazed and with Nicodemus exclaim, "How can these things be?"

A bleeding, weeping heart said to this writer once, "Oh! if I just could be regenerated, redeemed, saved! But I cannot grasp the process, cannot understand the method and the matter. I want to be, but I fear I cannot be." No soul ever was regenerated, save by a miracle. And that miracle no mortal can perform. It is of grace, a work of Deity. If man must save himself, or understand the process, he is hopeless, already doomed. It is all a miracle too marvelous for his comprehension, much less for his manipulation.

But man can meet the conditions precedent to this miracle. God is no respecter of persons and that He has saved many under given conditions is proof positive that He will save others who meet those same conditions. One must realize that God can, and that God will do for one what He has done for others, when one flings oneself upon Him as others have done. "He has saved others, me He will not cast off." My case is different from other cases only as I differ in character and impulses from others. God does not differ. He is the same, yesterday, today and always.

Out of the anguish of the heart one cries, "God cannot. I have been too bad, wicked, sinful, mean." Such an one is exercising a preconceived notion about God's power and willingness. God can, if the individual will.

"Behold I stand at the door and knock. If any man will open the door I will come in and sup with him and he with me." He knocks and is willing. He does not force an entrance. But when allowed, the glorious miracle, ever new, always continuous, but never old, is wrought in wonder and in beauty and in salvation then. God saves man from sin by a miracle. He can, if you will.

EFFECTS OF THE REVIVAL.

No religious awakening or revival can be measured by any sort of numbers. A series of meetings is held. Some are converted, the church is edified, Christians are encouraged and all are more hopeful. Owing to such far reaching results and the real good that flows out of a genuine revival, it is very easy to exaggerate about what actually transpired. This is why many reports of revivals are discredited. Those elated go to the limit, if not over it, in telling of the glorious things that did take place. We will never know, therefore, the results of the great Alexander-Chapman meetings in Boston, but if even one half of what that eminently level-headed and conservative Christian worker, Dr. Francis E. Clark, says, is true, all the efforts put forth were certainly worth while: "Boston, I believe will be a better city to live in for a whole generation to come because of their presence. Business men will be more scrupulous in their trading, ministers will be more earnest in the proclamation of truth, lawyers and doctors will be more conscientious in their practice, laboring men in all walks of life will give better measures to their employers, fathers and mothers will be more conscientious and careful in the training of their children, and children will be more loving to their parents, while a multitude of those yet unborn will have reason to bless God for the moral and religious atmosphere into which they will come because of the revival of 1909, which has changed the lives of so many men and women."

—The money-making gift is not magnified in the New Testament, but the money-spending grace is. Our gracious Lord knows and loves us wisely.

It is a matter of especial notice that in every department of applied science we have to deal with the unseen. All forces, whether in physics, mechanics or electricity are invisible.—A. Mackey.

While the works of once famous skeptics are left to rot on book-shelves, every year sees the Bible translated into some new tongue, acquire a greater influence, and receive a wider circulation.—Guthrie.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Rev. I. W. Johnson and wife are at Lakeview Hospital in Suffolk, under treatment for malarial fever. Brother Johnson is convalescent, but Mrs. Johnson has a rise of fever each day; she will probably soon be in normal condition to the joy of her many friends. Brother Johnson missed his appointment at Berea, Nansemond, last Sunday and Rev. J. T. Kitchen will preach for him next Sunday at Oakland, Crittenden, and Hobson. It is safe to report that neither of them is in any danger and the hope is that they will soon be at home and able to resume their work which is in a prosperous condition.

Easter Day was ideal and the Christian church was thronged and the great congregation enjoyed the exercises in which the church choir, Junior choir, and Little People took part. It was a great day and the cash offering was $650.00. These Easter exercises have been conducted continuously in this church for twenty-five years without abatement in interest or loss in spirit and devotion. Year by year the exercises are viewed less as an entertainment and more as real worship. The Resurrection idea is made prominent in recitation and song, and the hour is made bright with happy faces and joyful with happy hearts telling of the resurrection.

Mrs. J. E. West, Miss Mamie Holland, Mrs. J. M. Butler, Mrs. J. M. Darden, Mrs. C. B. Duke, Miss Lizzie Brothers, Miss Eloise Crocker, and Jake Kelley trained the little people, and Miss F. A. Hawey trained the Junior choir of twenty-five voices. This choir has weekly meetings on Tuesday night, and is very fine. It is one of the hopeful signs of present day Christianity that it trains and uses the young people and is thus preparing a future church to be more efficient than the past. It was sweet to see at the organ and piano children whose parents I had married. The stream of Christianity, like a river flowing toward the sea, widens and deepens in its progress toward the years before us; and it will one day flood the world and make the desert blossom as the rose.

I never dreamed that envy or suspicion lurked in the mind of the editor of the "Sun" till I read in last week's issue that he felt I was off to some pond with rod in hand when I ought to be holding a pen in my hand. He must have envied me such a good time as that would give, for he can fill the paper himself with better than I can write. He wields a pen not only full of ink but full of ideas. My pen contains only pale ink. But to relieve his mind I will say that I have been at hard work and have not even seen stream or pond. I have not dug a worm nor caught a minnow. In fact I am almost out of the line of apostolic succession, it has been so long since I saw the plunge of a cork or heard the music of a line; but of the Editor will come to Suffolk and preach for me we will renew our love for each other on some still lake where fish do bite and where dull care is unknown; but when I do not write "Suffolk Letter" let Dr. Atkinson keep in mind that I am too busy or have nothing to write. But laying all jokes aside, I really think fishing is the most apostolic way for a minister to take recreation. There is nothing that gives a minister so much for so little. He can wear clothes fit for nothing else; a few worms, a fifteen cent rod and line; a piece of bread and a piece of fat meat; a match or two and a frying pan; then a good day; and a king could not fare better, if they bite. The sleep that follows such a day is as sweet as any babe ever knew. To see the woods reflected from the still water and the floating clouds overhead and down in the deep, and then to hear the plunge of the cork, and feel the thrill of that sudden pull, is more than pen can write or brush can paint. Peter enjoyed it, Cleveland loved it, and Dr. Atkinson and I never tire of it. If the tired and weary ones will try it, they will find fortune in poverty, hope in despair, songs in sighs, sweet sleep in insomnia, and memories that will delight for a year.

Norfolk Letter.

Since I have last written a general letter, there have been several meetings in this section. Rev. C. C. Ryan held a two weeks meeting for Bro. Cox and his people at South Norfolk with quite a number of conversions and several additions to the church.

Rev. M. L. Bryant assisted pastor Harrell for two weeks. A good meeting is reported with several additions to the roll of members.

Rev. M. L. Bryant is holding a meeting at the Main St. Church, assisted by Rev. H. H. Butler, of Suffolk. Bro. Bryant used for his subject Sunday morning, "The work of the Holy Spirit," and at the evening service "Sent into the vineyard."

Mrs. W. H. Evans who has been ill at St. Vincent's Hospital for several days has sufficiently recovered to be at home again.

The friends of Mrs. E. L. Myers will regret to know that she is critically ill at her home on Granby St. All that three physicians and two trained nurses can do is being done for her.

Very encouraging reports are coming to us of Dr. T. E. Baird's condition. His improvement has been quite remarkably rapid under the treatment he is receiving now, and it is expected that he will soon be at home, well again.

The Missionary Society of The Memorial Temple was postponed from the second to the third Sunday; a special program of music and recitations was rendered, and an interesting letter to the society from their missionary, Mrs. Eva O. Barrett, was read by the President of the society, Miss Margaret Brickhouse. The writer made a talk on the subject of a "Church Building in Ponce," a subject that Sun readers have discovered by this time, probably, is very near his heart.

The first practical report I have to make with regard to the "Ponce Building Fund" is from one of our smallest churches—Rosemont. Easter Sunday they took a special offering for the purpose, amounting to $64.00, despite the fact, that they only have 29 members and that during the two months immediately preceding that, had raised for other special missionary purposes $44.00. This church is to be commended for its liberality and prompt response thereby setting an example that might well be followed by others.

I had a long letter a few days ago from Miss Susie Turpin in Porto Rico, urging the need of a house in Ponce. She says that she considers it an imperative need. If it were not that it would make this letter too long, I would give you some extracts from her letter. I hope she will write a letter to the Sun soon, telling the need as she sees it there on the field.

The Memorial Temple has been having a genuine old-fashioned, good meeting where sinners are convicted, mourners converted and backsliders are reclaimed. Immediately following the meeting at South Norfolk in which Bro. Ryan preached for two weeks, he began a meeting at the Temple which has now been in progress for two weeks in which he has been doing the preaching. There have been between thirty and forty conversions and reclamations. Ten have united with the church, making twenty-two additions to that church since conference. The meeting is announced for this (Monday) night, and it will then be determined whether it will continue through this week. J. W. Manning.

the nations of the world. If any one is doubting the resurrection of Christ and the general resurrection let him take an excursion through the realms of nature as one evidence of it—then let him look upon our risen Lord and behold him in his ascended victory still repeating with assurance, I am the resurrection and the life.

The bulbs of the lily and other lovely plants put in the ground are not at all attractive. Some dark, others brown, and many discolored. They appear to be dead—but when influenced by the right conditions they begin to spring into life, when touched by the resurrecting power they rise and live. Then out comes the lily with its purity and attractiveness. Is it any wonder then that we look upon them as suitable emblems of the resurrection? Why did you have so many of them with such sweet fragrance and loving attraction around the altar, in the pulpit and in other prominent places in your churches last Sunday? For you had more of them that day than on other days, and much time and care was given in arranging them so as to show to the best advantage, as they were garlanded and wreathed, and twisted into so many exquisite designs, as they were piled up in rich profusion. An answer comes telling truly, "We wanted to show our faith in the resurrection of Christ—our love, reverence and devotion to him."

He not only says, I am the resurrection, but he declares, I am the life. Life, what is it? It is spirit—energy. We are so anxious to live and how much we try to make this life as long as possible. If we only had hope in this life we would be miserable. It is right for us to live here as long as we can, and to be as strong and healthy as we can so that others as well as ourselves may enjoy life with us. But they know that this life will end—but immortal life looms up before their vision and as they see through imagination the tree of life and remember the leaves are for the healing of the nations they are encouraged to pursue their journey, for they believe that it is light and life with Jesus and the angels. As light comes out of darkness so life comes out of death. It may be that some one who thought so much of the Easter day and its service could not attend; some one blind could not see the day; some one who was deaf could not hear the praise of God from other lips, and some one could not speak his praise, but they could feel that he was life to them.

Is Jesus your delight and life? He is life and can give you everlasting life. If you have it not—seek it now, he has it for you. And when the redeemed shall wake in the dawning of the resurrection morning—morning of infinite day—it will be heaven. J. T. Kitchen. Windsor, Va.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. ## EASTER.

1 Cor. XV-20.

*"But Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept."

Fellow Students:—I call to give you an Easter greeting at Elon College this morning. This is the festival of our Lord's resurrection. In the early history of the Church, it corresponded with the Passover and designated the festival of Christ's crucifixion. From the first century to near the close of the third, it meant both the festival of the crucifixion and the resurrection. Ecclesiastical controversies were kept up for many years about the name to give to the festival, and the day which was proper to be celebrated. From the fourth century to the present time it has been observed as the festival of the resurrection. The word Easter occurs but once in the Bible. In Acts xii-4 we read: "And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quarternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people." Showing Herod's treatment of Peter.

The term Easter was first used when Christianity was introduced among our Saxon ancestors. "Bede traces it to Eastre, a Saxon goddess, whose festival was celebrated annually in the spring. In 325 A. D., the Council of Nicea fixed on the Sunday immediately following the fourteenth day of the Paschal moon, which happens at, or on the first Sunday after the vernal equinox."

Let us turn to II Thes. 4th chapter and read five verses. "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope.

For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him.

For this we say unto you by the word of the Lord, that we which are alive and remain unto the coming of the Lord shall not prevent them which are asleep.

For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first:

Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air: and so shall we ever be with the Lord.

Wherefore comfort one another with these words."

In all lands, and among all people who believe in the gospel of our Lord and Saviour, the joyous words of Paul are read from 1 Cor. xv. Especially from the fourth to the 43th verse.

The golden mouthed Chrysostome, fifteen hundred years ago said in an Easter sermon, " * * * Death is now only a sleep. Death which before Christ's resurrection had a fearful aspect is now an object to be despised. On this day Christ freed human nature from the dominion of human nature and brought it back to its original dignity. Let no one be dejected today on account of his poverty, for this is a spiritual Feast; let no man pride himself on his riches, for he cannot contribute to this feast with his wealth. Here all distinctions are taken away. There is one table for the rich and poor. For the bond and free. Divine Grace knows no respect of persons.

In the year A. D., 380, Gregory, Bishop of Uysa, of Cappadocia, said of Easter, * * * "All tried to be home on this great day. All Christians assembled everywhere as members of one family. The poor man dressed like the rich, and the rich wore his gayest and brightest attire whilst those who had no good clothes of their own borrowed of their neighbors. Even the little children put on their new clothes." For hundreds of years it has been the custom to dress up in new clothes on Easter Sunday.

Boys and girls do not remain in College four years, until they hear or read of some objection to the mysteries around the resurrection of the body which no one can unravel. Paul heard of them in his day, and answered them. "But some will say, How are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die." (1 Cor. xv:35,36). But the human body, like the bodies of all animals is continually changing. In about seven years it has completely changed. When man dies, plants may take up parts of his body, animals may eat the plants, and other men may eat the animals. Now, says the skeptical student, to which body will belong these particles of matter? Let us follow the teachings of science a little farther. This is a time of garden making and seed planting all about Elon College. You see seeds of various kinds placed in the earth. When all things answerable for germination are supplied, the seed, by absorption of moisture, is softened and swollen. It then undergoes certain chemical changes. The changes consist partly in the converting of the starch into sugar and are accompanied by the evolution and production of heat as the fluid matters are absorbed by the embryo plant. The seed continues to increase in size until it bursts through the softened outer covering and arises an independent living plant. But where did it get its new body? It is not composed of a single atom that can be recognized as the substance of the seed." God gave it a body. There was a gradual, but marvelous change; nothing destroyed, but all changed.

When Priestley discovered oxygen, he taught us "that there can be no destruction, and likewise no creation," that disappearance really means change.

The question is often asked, "Shall we know each other in heaven?" Dives knew Lazarus with an impassable gulf between them. David said: "While the child was yet alive I fasted and wept; for I said, who can tell whether God will be gracious to me, that the child may live? Can I bring him back again? I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me." Moses and Elias lived centuries apart. After they had been in the glory land a thousand years, they appeared with Christ, Peter, James and John on the mount of transfiguration; and they knew each other.

The fact is the whole race of mankind testifies to recognition in the hereafter. The American Indians bury their dead with the bow and arrow. Why? Because they believe in life and recognition in a happy hunting-ground beyond the grave. In the great museum at Cairo, you may see the mummies of little children with trinkets in their hands, placed there thousands of years ago, and on the byssus band the inscriptions which tell of faith in an awakening and final reunion. Virgil tells us of the hero of the Aeneid, "going out into the unseen world," and how he was "greeted by his former companions:" "The glad some ghosts in circling troops attend, And with unvaried eyes behold their friends." Socrates, with the poisoned chalice ready to be pressed to his lips, voiced the faith of the wisest philosophers of Greece, when he said: "If the common expression be true that death conveys us to the place of departed men, with delight I drink this hemlock, for it sends my spirit to commune with Ajax and Palamedes."

Paul's whole gospel was the gospel of the risen Saviour; to his call he ascribes his own apostleship, and to His working all the elements of the Christian faith and life. There is no fact in the history of the world more certain than the resurrection of Christ. It is attested by evangelists and apostles, by Paul himself and the "five hundred brethren whom he summons as co-witnesses with him," by the visible "power of God, sealing the testimony of his servants" through His efficient working in the hearts and before the eyes of many, and by the "divine success and progress of the gospel and the resurrection of the first age, and through all subsequent ages, Christ rose from the dead! After two thousand years of the most determined assaults upon the evidence which demonstrates it, that fact stands. His glorious body was different from the body of his humiliation, yet it was the same. He could vanish and pass through doors, yet they knew Him the same. "So" says a great writer, "those that sleep in Jesus become fairer, stronger, swifter, more apt for service, yet wake with the endeared features, familiar tones, and happy companionship."

When Elijah raised the body of a child from the dead, he was obliged to stretch himself out upon the body. It is easily understood that he was invoking a foreign power, and that he is not himself the master of life and death. Jesus Christ raised up the dead as easily as he performed the most common actions; it is thoroughly felt that "He is the God of the dead as of the living."

As I stood upon the Mount of Olives on the reputed spot, last pressed by the resurrected feet of the world's Redeemer, before His ascension, I remembered that Elijah was taken up to heaven on a fiery chariot, and a single disciple was the only spectator of that miraculous ascension. But Jesus Christ surrounded with glory, mounts up to the heaven before the eyes of five hundred disciples.

As I stood in "the midst of Mars Hill" and viewed the broken arches and fallen monuments of ancient Greece, I thought of the great philosophers, and contrasted in my mind, the difference in their teaching from the teaching of the world's greatest teacher. Christ speaks only the "language of heaven;" he never replies, but when his answers "may be useful toward the salvation of those who interrogate him." In what philosopher had ever been observed such a love of virtue, so sincere a contempt of the world, so much charity toward men, such indifference for human glory, such zeal for the glory of the Supreme Being, such elevation above whatever is admired or sought after by men! The philosophers criticised only the men, and solely endeavored to expose their weakness or their absurdities; Jesus Christ never speaks of their vices but in order to point out their remedies. The philosophers were the censurers of human weaknesses; Jesus Christ is their physician: the former gloried in being able to point out vices in others, although they were guilty of all the sins they mentioned. Jesus Christ was absolutely free from sin, yet he speaks in sorrow of the sins of men and sheds tears over an unbelieving city. The philosophers always tried to attract esteem to themselves; the only wish of Jesus Christ was to save men, and he did not do or say anything for applause or esteem. The principal homage which he expects of us is, that we try to become like him and that his life be the model of our own.

At the close of Easter week here at Elon College, let me say to the faculty and students that I did not come to you to bring the teachings about the resurrection as a dogma to be forced upon the mind of any one. I presume you all believe it. Yet, we should all pray for a re-baptism of the Holy Spirit. No man can truly say that Jesus is his Lord and Master, but by the Holy Spirit; so no one can profess, to any saving purpose, faith in Christ's resurrection, but by the Holy Spirit. "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thy heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved."

I never hear or read the words of one to whom I once looked as my successor, but who is now numbered with my ancestors but I feel the sorrow drops as yet undried upon my cheek. O the pain yet sharp in my heart with every waking hour. This day as I look on these fair flowers and listen to the splendid music I ask myself where will we be when another Easter morning appears? I hear no voice of comfort like that of the Saviour. He has brought life and immortality to light. My bewildered mind and troubled heart hears it gladly. All the days of my appointed time I can await in hope. I can journey on the returnless path. I find the loveliest flowers, the brightest light, and the sweetest joy for myself, and all those I love dearest on this earth, by remembering the words of the text: "But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept."

The Centennial of Religious Journalism

EDITED BY J. PRESSLEY BARRETT, D. D.

Editor Herald of Gospel Liberty

This is without doubt the most generally interesting publication sent out by the Christians. Its centennial, historical and denominational features make it not only unique in character, but interesting as well. From beginning to end it claims the interested attention of the reader.

We have not space here to give the table of contents, but suffice it to say, that beginning with the "Discussion of the conditions which made the organization of the Christian Church a necessity," the reader will follow with interest and profit, the "History of the Herald of Gospel Liberty," "The One Hundred Editorial Gems," "Historical Sketches of One-Hundred-Year-Old Churches," "A symposium—A Hundred Years of Progress," setting forth in well prepared papers the development of the various enterprises of the Christian Church, and with a heart full of optimistic hope he will peruse "The Future Outlook of the Christian Church."

And all this, and more, in a book of nearly 650 pages, handsomely bound, with gold titles, while the price is only $1.00 for cloth binding and $2.00 for Morocco, with your name printed in gold. Postage, 15 cents extra. Send your order at once to

Suffered 14 Years from Piles—Tetterine Cures the Case.

Bellaire, Mich., Nov. 19, 1908.
Mr. J. T. Shuptrine, Savannah, Ga.

Dear Sir:—About sixteen years ago I had a case of itching piles. Like many others I tried first one thing and then another until I had tried all the remedies I had heard of. Some of them eased for a few days, then they got worse. They seemed to bother me more at night than any other time—I could not lay in bed for five years only on my back, and for weeks I never lay down at all. They got so bad till at times they caused my blood to rush to my head and render me unconscious. I moved up in northern Michigan three years ago and the same old case followed me. Last February I went into the Economical Drug Store, on State street, in Chicago, and asked the clerk to give me the best thing he had for my trouble. He sold me a box of Tetterine, but it smarted so when I put it on till I left it off and got a milder salve. I came on back to my home and finally run out of all the other salves but Tetterine, so I started using it again, but more lightly; at first I noticed it seemed to do me good, and I did not use but half the box before I was entirely cured. That has been five months now, and there is still no signs of its reappearing. It seems so good to me that, after fourteen years suffering, I have at last found a cure. Tetterine did it. It's the best thing in the world. Grady G. Wilson, R. F. D. No. 2, Bellaire, Mich.

Tetterine cures Eczema, Tetter, Ring Worm, Ground Itch, Infant's Sore Head, Pimples, Boils, Rough Scaly Patches on the Face, Old Itching Sores, Dandruff, Cankered Scalp, Bunions, Corns, Chilblains, and every form of Skin Disease. Tetterine 50c; Tetterine

Wilkerson.

Sister Nancy P. Wilkerson, wife of the late Richard F. Wilkerson, died at the home of her son near Virgilina, Va., March 19th, 1909, age 82 years, 11 months and seven days. Sister Wilkerson was the oldest member of Union Christian church and had been connected with the same for nearly seventy years. Her last years were in the home of her only living child, D. Y. Wilkerson. I was her pastor for over four years, and visited her several times. She had been feeble ever since I knew her; but made no complaint. She loved her church and attended services as long as able. She believed in the church and had strong faith in God. A long useful life closed with but little suffering of the body. A stroke of paralysis followed by a few days in an unconscious state and her spirit is with her God.

Eure.

At his home, near Corapeake, Gates Co., N. C., April 8, 1909, Mr. Samuel Eure, aged about 74 years. He gave his heart to God, consecrated his life to the service of his Master and united with Parker's M. E. Church, when quite young and was true and faithful to the Lord. A week or two before the end came, he said to the writer, "I have made all my arrangements, I want you to conduct my funeral service. You know me better than any other preacher and I love you, I have tried to do my duty; I am ready to go. I have a good wife, my children, my neighbors are all as good to me as they can be, I love them but I must go. I hope we will all meet together in Heaven." "There never was a more obliging or better neighbor than this man," said one of his neighbors to the writer. "Truly a good man has been taken to that rest that remaineth to the people of God. We all feel deeply our loss, but God who made all things and governs all things knows what is best for us and our loved ones. Therefore we know that our loss has been our loved one's eternal gain. We weep but not as those without hope.

He will be greatly missed in the church, community and home.

He was married twice, first to Miss Martha Frances Gay, daughter of Elisha E. Gay of Isle of Wight Co., Va. God blessed the union with eleven children.

The second marriage was to Miss Mary Bridger, of Isle of Wight Co., Va. God blessed their union with two children, one son and one daughter.

Funeral service was conducted by the writer at his home, by the request of the deceased brother, and his remains were placed away in the family cemetery close beside those of his first wife to await the resurrection morn. H. H. B.

Moore.

Mrs. Cornelia A. Lynear Moore was born Jan. 7, 1869, and died Feb. 26, 1909. She was married Dec. 24, 1885 to Mr. John Moore, who preceded her several years ago. Mrs. Moore leaves four children, a father, several brothers and a host of friends and relatives to mourn their loss.

Mrs. Moore was a member of New Elam Christian church for many years. She was a devoted Christian and lived a pure upright life. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

May our heavenly Father, who knoweth and doeth all things well comfort those who sorrow and draw them closer to Himself.

A Cousin.

Horne.

At his uncle's, Mr. Robt. Horne, Zuni, Va., March 30, 1909, John Clyde Horne, aged 17 years, 3 months and 13 days. Clyde was a very bright and interesting young man. His future seemed to be full of promise. All who knew him loved him on account of his many amiable qualities. His father and mother died when he was a very little boy, and his uncle Robert took him and reared him. He was perfectly devoted to his uncle, whom he was never known to disobey; and while his uncle Robert had children of his own, there were none that seemed nearer or dearer to him

Harrell

At her son's, Jef. Harrell, near Cypress Chapel, Nausemond Co., Va., Apr. 1st, at about 3:30 o'clock, a. m., Mrs. Mary Ann Harrell, aged 84 years, and 28 days. She had been a great sufferer for more than five years. She was never known to complain or murmur. She was a good Christian mother. She made a profession of religion when quite young and united with Great Fork Baptist Church and remained faithful to the end. She leaves to mourn their loss, five sons, Elijah, Sam, Jef, Henry, and Wash'r, on Lee Harrell, two daughters, Mrs. Mollie Daughtrey and Mrs. Everlena Taylor, all living.

She was conscious to the last and told her loved ones that she was going home to glory. Her funeral service was conducted by the writer and her remains laid to rest in the old family burying ground to await the second coming of her Lord. God bless and comfort the dear ones left behind. H. H. B.

Stalor.

March 16, 1909, Jesse, the sweet and interesting little son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Stalor and grandson of Dr. Maggie Spencer, of Suffolk, Va., aged 15 months, was called from its loved ones here up to Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of God." Luke 18:16. The funeral service was conducted at the grave by the writer in Cedar Hill cemetery, where the remains were laid to rest.

"Tis Jesus speaks; I fold says he,

These lambs within my breast;

Protection they shall find in me,

In me be ever blessed;

His words the happy parents hear,

And shout with joy divine,

"O Saviour, all we have and are Shall be forever thine."

The Lord bless and comfort the dear bereaved ones.

CHRIST AND THE LOWLY.

When Jesus came to deliver man He found a sorry world. Among the weak and the lowly who constituted the masses of mankind, there was neither happiness nor hope. Children had no right, women were enslaved and degraded, the poor were downtrodden and the toilers were scorned. There was no asylum for the blind, the cripple, the afflicted, and no refuge for the unfortunate. A few tyrants and aristocrats ruled with an iron hand and ground the lowly into the dust under an iron heel. There was no chance for the poor to rise to a better state, for the cast-iron rules of custom forbade a poor man or his children to cross the narrow boundaries of caste, which had imprisoned His people for ages. But Jesus brought compassion and pity and help. In every land where His gospel has had a hearing the condition of all these classes has been completely revolutionized.

"The poor have the gospel preached unto them." This does not seem strange to us, for we have been accustomed to see it from our earliest childhood; but when Jesus came it was not so. One who thought he had a message for the world did not deliver it to the poor and ignorant. How could they understand it? But Jesus used language which the lowly could understand. His discourses were not prepared for highly intellectual people. They are pictures which appeal to the imagination and the heart. Contrast the discourses of Jesus with the ponderous, pompous, stately productions of philosophers and learned teachers. Their messages have an intellectual tone, an intellectual flavor, an intellectual ring, and are adapted to an intellectual aristocracy. There is something terrible about them to the mind of the unlearned. But the language of Jesus is so simple that a little child can understand it, and "the common people heard him gladly."

He not only had a message for the lowly, but He gave them a helping hand. He sought them out that He might do them good. He took them by the hand, lifted them up, and made them stand on their feet and respect themselves. He smashed the barriers of caste, broke open the prison doors, and smote the fetters of the Lordman. He laid His hands on them and made them kings and priests unto God. We have seen in our day and in our country one born a plebeian, and destitute of educational advantages, rise to the highest place in the land, and become a world-power. This thing could not happen in any place where the minds of the people were not saturated with the mind of Christ. It belongs to Christianity to do this for men.

Many years ago, a very rich man attended a camp meeting. A lowly itinerant minister was also present. In a testimony meeting the rich man, who was highly respected, because of his benefactions and especially because of his fine character, bore testimony with becoming humility to the power of Christ to support a man amid the tumult and strife of business. The poor minister rose and told of the power of divine grace to keep a man through the trials of the itinerancy, and then said, "Religion puts me on a level with my brother of wealth; for it brings him down and lifts me up. I am just as rich as he." This is a true testimony. Talk about leveling up and leveling down the inequalities of men. There is a right way to do it. In Christ we are all on a common level. The rich man, the learned man does not feel himself superior to his poor brother, and the poor man, the unlearned man does not feel himself degraded by the side of his rich brother. Grace makes the rich man humble and the poor man self-respecting. It brings the lowly up to the side of the King and no one can rise higher than that.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

An Unexpected Answer.

A rather pompous-looking deacon in a certain city church was asked to take charge of a class of boys during the absence of the regular teacher. While endeavoring to impress upon their young minds the importance of living a Christian life, the following question was propounded:

"Why do people call me a Christian, children?" the worthy dignitary asked, standing very erect and smiling down upon them.

"Because they don't know you," was the ready answer of a bright-eyed little boy, responding to the ingratiating smile with one equally guileless and winning.

Much of that which tries our patience in our dealings with one another is the expression of physical discomfort and distress. Let patience have her perfect work in our closest relationships.

No interpreter is needed for that scripture which speaks of the "abundance of peace" in a trusting soul. The peace of God cannot be shallow: it is his own, and necessarily abounds.—Ex.

To live in the presence of great truths and eternal laws, to be led by permanent ideals—that is what keeps a man patient when the world ignores him, and calm and unspoiled when the world praises him.—Rev. F. G. Peabody.

God's help and God's blessing are indispensable to success, but the real effort must be ours. Prayer and work go hand in hand to any goal that is worth striving for. God directs our steps, but He never takes steps for any traveler who has feet.—Ex.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Woods.—Have you tasted the woods yet, since these glorious spring days began? Well, a feast awaits you there. Surely were they never quite so beautiful and inviting as now. The mellow green is so sweet and restful to the eye: the white dogwood is so pure and graceful to look upon; while the honeysuckle, the dandelion and orchard blossoms of many hues make the heart glad. I stood on a hill side the other day and counted sixteen different hues and tints of green. The artist never lived who could mix colors so delicate and delicious. Green, you know, is the most restful of all colors to the eye. And after the long, barren winter the eye craves to rest and recreate itself with varied hues of green. So He who created the delicate and intricate organ of sight created also an abundance of green to refresh, restore and preserve it. When looking upon this gorgeous green of the woods and fields remember that God made the eye to behold this beauty, and made the beauty to restore, preserve and recreate the eye. (God never deals out His blessings in singles: always in doubles and in multitudes).

But the redolent and resonant woods now. One's soul runs riot and revels there. "Give me freedom and a day," said Emerson, "and I will put emperors to shame."

Every man is rich in the woods. Jones owns this farm, Smith that, and Brown yonder; but no man owns the landscape. That was not included in the deed of transfer and bill of sale. That belongs to God and me. By His matchless beauty He invites me there, to that landscape with its glory, and there God's soul and mine meet and mingle. This is why I feel so happy and free and young and brave in the woods. God is there and fills me with His love and life.

Tacitus, the Roman historian, tells us that certain pieces of woods were held sacred by the ancient inhabitants of Germany and the people assembled in these sacred groves to worship a God who was too great, gracious and generous to be contained within the walls of any house built of hands. These ancient Germans were only wrong in limiting the sacred woods to certain places. All the glorious woods are sacred and God dwells in them, a good and gracious God too great, too holy, too sublime to be limited to the walls of any human house.

God invites us to the woods now. In the sacred solitude, in the imposing silence, in the sublime fragrance and freedom there you may hear the very whisperings of God and catch glimpses of that glory land of eternal spring and everlasting youth. Go out into the woods, reader, and let your soul feed on God's glory there.

The Sultan.—The stirring scenes of war and blood-shed in the Turkish empire has interest for Americans in that the principle of liberty and human rights is involved. The Turks have come to that degree of intellectual and civic development that they demand a constitution. The Sultan, Abdul Hamid, swore, in all solemnity, last August, to support a constitution. That oath has had no more weight than a cotton string. But this is typical of his whole career, and such a monster cannot stand forever in the way of human progress.

Abdul Hamid is thirty fourth in consecutive male, the longest line in all history, to occupy the throne. He has ruled by intrigue, falsehood, corruption and assassination. In these arts he is past-master. He is well acquainted with all the methods of villainy and all the sins of vice, practiced by a ruler whose word was law. He is the sovereign who first corrupted the garrison of his capital to mutiny, and then because of the muting slew 220 of his officers. Fire, massacre, torture, private intrigue and plunder have been the means employed by which he held his throne. He and his ancestors for 610 years have occupied this throne of the Caesars, the first of them, riding to his shrine over heaped corpses, having polluted the scepter with bloody and murderous hand. So last week while the guns of patriotic men thundered their volume of gore and death at the gates of Constantinople everyone knew that the longest, most merciless and bloody despotism known to the annals of men was about to end its sin-cursed and blood-thirsty career. And when last Sunday Abdul Hamid laid down his arms and gave the signal for surrender, amid the humiliation of overwhelming defeat, none save a few of the crowned heads of Europe and Asia who see in this the writing on the wall for themselves, felt a pang of pity or uttered a word of commiseration.

The mills of the gods grind slowly, was an ancient maxim; but they grind all the same; and as sure as heaven is, retributive justice has its part and place in the events and issues of this life.

Abdul Hamid lived out of his time, and his cruel and heartless record is more like that of the dark and bloody ages than that of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

The wicked, however astute and entrenched, cannot sit in high places forever. God from the beginning so ordained it. And so whatever fate awaits this disarmed despot, his day of blood and crime is done.

Swearing.—What has come over our boys? It looks as if every mother's son of them is to take to the swearing habit. That this most silly and senseless of all bad habits is on the increase among boys there is hardly a question. It has come to pass that where two or three boys are gathered together there will be profanity (and the smoking of cigarettes, which is an inseparable concomitant). One does not hear as much swearing among men, especially in public places, as among boys. Evidently our boys have turned anarchists in speech, and because they are unwilling to exert themselves to use clean and decent language, try to make themselves mannish by the use of foul mouthed profanity. It is pitiable and deplorable.

The Charlotte Observer said editorially recently: "A few weeks ago a crusade that was only too short lived was begun in Charlotte against profanity on the streets and in the street cars. An example was made of one offender by the recorder that had a wholesome effect, but the fact remains that the ears of decent people are still too often offended in Charlotte by language of the blustering blackguard. It is to be no-

FROM THE FIELD.

Burlington, N. C.

On March 31st, we commenced a protracted meeting and continued eight days. Rev. L. F. Johnson was with us and did all the preaching except one sermon on Sunday, April 4th. On that day he was with his congregation and preached at eleven A. M. That night he was with us again, and the largest audience of the meeting greeted those in charge of the service at the evening hour. The church well nigh overflowed.

Bro. Johnson is an interesting, practical, and earnest preacher, and we were glad to have him with us. He spoke very hopefully of his work in Kaleigh, and writes me a good word from his Easter service. I like to hold about a weeks meeting every year just before Easter for the deepening of the spiritual life of the church, and for the ingathering of such as may hear and believe, and for special preparation for Easter services. One of the gladdest of all glad days, is the resurrection day—the day Christ arose from the dead. Most of those who attended the meeting seemed much interested, and we believe good was done.

Our Easter services were good. The day was ideal, and the church had been beautifully decorated by the sunshine and flower committees of the Christian Endeavor Society. The audience was attentive, the music good, and the cash and pledges for missions amounted to more than our conference apportionment. There seemed to be present the joy of giving. On account of sickness, the evening services were called in. For some days the pastor had been sick and was unable to be up for several days after the Easter services. That accounts for the lateness of these notes. Our Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Society are doing good work. I pray the Lord of the harvest to grant unto his laborers a great ingathering of souls this year. P. H. Fleming.

Wakefield, Va.

It has been some time since I have written to the Sun, yet I have been busy all the while and preaching the best I could. Six months have past since I accepted this pastorate, but can say, that I have never enjoyed any work as I have since being in the Wakefield pastorate. I have found the people in all my churches, kind, loyal, and righteous. They have many burdens heavier than in years gone by, yet they have carried the burdens, and attended to duties, not as a task, but as a pleasure. Some changes in the membership of the several churches have been made during the last quarter. Brother and Sister W. J. Williams, moved from Union to Dendron, Brother F. B. Richardson, from Dendron to Wakefield, Brother Floyd and Sister Faison, from Burton's Grove to Wakefield. We feel that these changes will be a help both to church and people.

Our new church is about complete, and we are wanting to dedicate some time the last of May, but we are fearful that our seats will not get here by that time, so we have nothing definite as to that. A committee from the Ladies' Aid Society, composed of Mrs. J. J. Lincoln, Miss B. L. Faison, and Mrs. C. C. Jones, went to Petersburg today (April 23) to buy carpet for the church. The following persons have contributed to our church building since the last report: Bro. Willie White, of Many, $5; W. E. Price, of Dendron, $1; Mrs. Charlie Richardson, of Spring Hill church, $1; Dr. J. G. Holland, of Holland, $5; and Wilson J. Holland, of Holland, $5. We thank these brethren and may God bless them.

We had the pleasure, a few weeks ago, of having with us Mrs. K. J. Jones and her mother, Mrs. D. L. Darden, both from Holy Neck. We love to have our home people with us, and hope that we can have them with us again soon.

The writer visited his parents, near Holy Neck, during last week, and found father in bed suffering very much with rheumatism, but the visit seemed to cheer him, and it gave the writer much pleasure. May God bless old people every where. C. C. Jones.

THEY SHALL SHINE AS THE SUN.

Nearly the whole of this chapter is filled with parables. When the Son of man shall send his angels to take out of his kingdom every one who offends and shall cast them into the furnace of fire, "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father." There are some who do not believe in the furnace of fire. In taking a course of study in any department of learning the student has text books so as to study and learn with proficiency what the author gives him. If he knows more than the author he has no need to study him. The Bible is our divine text book given by the Author of everlasting life, and if we expect to learn and be benefited by it we must believe and obey its teachings. They may be hard for us to understand—and many doubts may cluster about us—but we must believe them if we want to get the blessings which are promised. Many things have to be taken for granted which we do not understand. This occurs all through revelation as well as in nature. It is scarcely necessary to repeat this because every one knows it is true.

There was a beautiful simplicity in the teaching of Christ—a perfect model for every preacher to follow—simple in manner—suitable in illustration—beautiful in expression; saying the very things needed at the proper time, in the right way, and then waited until He had something else to say. He was full of beauty in every characteristic of His divine nature, and the admiration and glory of the world. He had said before this in speaking of the tares and wheat, "Let both grow together until the harvest." With his sympathetic nature both human and divine He appeared to put off punishment to the last—to stay it as long as possible. He had the power to tear them up from the prolific growth of sin and to give them punishment equal to that of fire—but He spares them a little longer. For hear Him as He pleads with the Father to spare them longer. The parable of the sower, of the leaven, and of the hidden treasure are all well worth careful study, for with them very useful lessons may be learned.

There are many who are experts in finding defects in persons and things, and it is natural for them to do so since they have made it a special study. If there are good qualities—they never try to bring them out or say much about them. In many cases they do not try to help the poor and destitute upon a higher plane in life. If the conveyance in which you travel were to get broken down or get out of order in any way, you would give it attention and have it put in order so that you might move on. If your garments were to get torn you would have them sewed or darned as soon as you could. If you were sick you would want to know the disease and apply a remedy. If you were wounded, bleeding and near dying, you would want some one to help you by binding up the wounds and if possible save your life. When imperfections are seen in others put the veil of sympathy over them—try to mend them up—help them on the way if you can.

The righteous—those who are just and have the Christian religion, and only those shall shine in the coming kingdom. Those who have been pardoned of sin, and become members of the spiritual family, these shall be known by their fruits, for, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father." One may observe the rules and regulations of his church—he may do many things which are right and good; and yet not do the will of his Father. Each one ought to know this will and have it recorded in his heart. The Bible contains God's will to us, and it is a good will giving us everlasting life and providing us a home in our Father's kingdom where we shall be heirs and joint heirs to an immortal inheritance. What more do we need, or what besides do we want? He wills for us to be faithful, true, honest, sober, and righteous, and if you are not you will be excluded from the benefit of the will.

It has been said that every one will be saved whether he is righteous or not—that the Judge of all people is too good to cause any to suffer. There are laws we must obey, conditions which must be met in order to receive the divine approval. He has the power to forgive or condemn. That which maintains life, health and strength may bring destruction. The air we breathe as one of the best gifts is necessary for physical existence, and to exclude the breath of life from us would soon smother us, but this same air when set in violent motion is dangerous, for the whirlwind's devastating power has taken the life of many. The air is needed, it is enjoyed, yet it is to be feared. The cool, refreshing water is another necessity and was a wise provision in the creation which caused it to spring and flow in abundance for the comfort of life. The water supply of the world is a wonderful conception and we love it—but when turned loose with its dashing, rushing flow there is danger and death in its way. And so on and on other things could be mentioned which are none the less powerful and useful—but which contain the elements of pain or death. Violation of the laws of nature brings suffering, and the violation of the divine law brings spiritual punishment or death.

After noticing the good and the bad objects in the natural world, after hearing the blessing promised upon the righteous and the sentence of conviction upon the sinner it is more fully understood what will be their happy and unhappy conditions in the future life. Shine as the sun. This is an impressive figure and behind it stands the eternal Word. It is such a brilliant comparison the soul reaches out for it with strong faith to grasp the immortal prize. By its use the mind is fixed upon the ineffable vision and wants to go up the shining way, repeating as it goes these expressive words: "When my heart is overwhelmed; lead me to the rock that is higher than I." It is inspiring to know that the Bible is so full of such eloquence and telling imagery.

A DESTRUCTIVE CRITIC OF 2907.

(To the Reader of 1907.

Dear Brother: Although interested in the able writings of the higher critics of 1907, especially in their assumption of having discovered something valuable, as if the "historical method" were new in studying the Bible, I confess I became somewhat drowsy under their monotonous efforts to make the sacred writings seem to abound in misstatements. But I gradually absorbed their genius and spirit, and seemed to become a destructive critic, though calling myself a higher critic.

While in this state of mind, sleepy though I was, I seemed to live rapidly through the centuries, century after century, until I found myself moving among scholars who dated their letters with the numerals, 2, 9, 0, 7.

On seeming to be roused from a semi-consciousness, and supposing that a thousand years had passed from the time I fell asleep under the dreary chanting about the mistakes of the Bible, I seemed to be walking among the fancied alcoves of my library, now increased by the additions of a thousand years, and coming across the following correspondence I give you the letters, believing that it may be interesting to the reader to observe how the reasoning of the future destructive critic (writing in 2907 of our times in the spirit in which the destructive critic of 1907 writes of Bible times) will make the conditions of our generation to appear.

If we of the year 1907 know something of the conclusions of the learned gentleman of 2907 to be false, whose letters I now reveal, or if his modes of reasoning are absurd, or if he lays stress on insufficient data in his logic, or, especially, if he is ludicrously given to denying the statements of eye-witnesses to the facts which we of our time know to be true, these faults must not be attributed to me: for I copy the letters and publish them exactly as I found them a thousand years before they were written.

Twenty Eighth Letter.

Kinkade, New Zealand, 30, 8, 2908.

My Dear Grandson:

Out of the rubbish found in the ruins of Dayton, Ohio, that survived the great heat that destroyed most life on the western continent, and to which I have heretofore referred, there was turned over to me for investigation and translation a fragment of a book (from the page headings) apparently entitled "The Finality of the Christian Religion." There seemed only to be left the portion beginning with page 325, and ending with page 344. I made my investigations with mixed emotions, because of two reasons: (1) The title evidently indicated that the author supposed the Christian religion had come to an end, or was approaching its end. (2) But a thousand years have passed, and we all now know that the Christian religion is stronger than ever.

But yet the author seemed to have the true historical spirit, and I read the pages of his book still remaining with much approval. However, on account of the failure of the author as a prophet, or incorrectness as a historian, I considered it prudent to turn the fragment over to your grandmother, for more accurate investigation than I was competent to give it, and the following is her paper about it:

* * * * *

Higher Critic,

My Dear Husband:—

This fragment of 1907 literature was probably written by a man called Foster: for by using the microscope I found this line written on a margin by some reader:—"If this amounts to anything, Foster himself might not be the author of this book: for his name does not appear in the body of it; only on the title page."

The passage the reader seemed to be attacking was this:—

"We pass, then, to ask the gospels themselves concerning their authors and origin. What we can gain by way of answer is not much. No single gospel names the name of its author" (page 335).

But the ancient reader's remark, "If this amounts to anything," etc., in criticising the author, presumably Foster, shows that Foster's name was on the title page, and we may accept that as determining the authorship; although, in a certain sense, that has little more force than tradition, because I admit that the title page might have been forged. Still I lean to the opinion that Foster was the author, although his name does not appear anywhere else on the fragment, and although his own handwriting does not appear anywhere.

The book was probably written shortly before the dates of the newspapers among which the fragment was found: 1907, or earlier.

Although this Foster, like most other destructive critics of that ignorant age, may only have called himself a higher critic, he was certainly a destructive critic. This is proved by the following passages:

"It is also evident that the self-witness in the fourth gospel raises more riddles than it solves. Besides, the manner of this self-witness awakens the strongest doubts and suspicions, instead of convincing one of the trustworthiness, of the gospel" (p. 337)

"Such attempts to harmonize the two groups, the Johannine and the synoptic, will never cease to impress many Bible readers. Yet they come to a point at last where all such attempts fail, and where the sober sense for truth rebels.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Pastor Bryant, of the Main St. Christian Church, Berkley, Va., is conducting a successful and fruitful series of meetings.

—The revival in the Main St. Christian Church, Berkley, Va., continues this week and is of much interest. Rev. H. H. Butler is assisting the pastor, Rev. M. L. Bryant.

—Prof. Harper, of the Chair of Latin, Elon College, delivered the annual literary address before the Holly Springs High School, Holly Springs, N. C., Thursday, April 22.

—Rev. J. J. Summerbell, D. D., is to preach the baccalaureate sermon at Union Christ College, Union, Ind., at the approaching commencement—a rare treat in store for those graduates and that college.

—Rev. J. L. Foster, Superintendent of our Orphanage does not tell, in his splendid write up of the great Orphanage Conference at Atlanta, Ga., recently, which appears in The Sun elsewhere, that he himself was made president of the body. And we are sure that Bro. Foster wielded the gavel well, and met all the requirements of his high office.

—This line is written to express the best of good wishes and congratulations to Mr. Otto Leonard Farmer, who on April 28th, is to wed Miss Nathalie Crews Rodden, in Oak Level Presbyterian Church, Halifax Co., Va. Mr. Farmer, some years since, was a student at Elon College and won many friends while here.

—It is gratifying to note that Rev. L. W. Johnson has recovered from recent illness sufficiently to leave the hospital and to occupy his pulpit last Sunday, preaching, by special invitation, the anniversary sermon to the Lodge of Odd Fellows at Berea church, Driver, Va. Mrs. Johnson, still at the hospital, is improving.

—Evidently Bro. Hersey Woodward, of the Suffolk Christian Church has an interesting class of men in the Suffolk Sunday-school. From The Norfolk Landmark, Sunday 25th: "Mr. Hersey Woodward, teacher of the Twentieth Century Baraca Class of the Christian Church, has invited Rev. Joseph B. Dunn, rector of St. Paul's P. E. Church to address this class in the main auditorium of the Christian Church Sunday morning at 9:45 o'clock.

The subject of the address will be "The Life and Character of St. Paul." There are one hundred and sixty men in this Bible class.

—Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D., Secretary of the American Christian Convention writes, Dayton, Ohio, April 22, "Dear Brother: I have just completed mailing the Sunday-school call asking the schools to make an offering to the Sunday-school department of the American Christian Convention. For the sake of conveying information in the form of printed matter I have sent the call to the ministers of the Southern Christian Convention, not with any desire or thought of changing any plan which may exist in the Convention, but for the sake, as above stated, of the information contained in the printed matter.

If you would state as much in the next issue of the Sun, I should appreciate it.

—Our congratulations and very best wishes to Bro. Charles Ballentine, a sentiment expressed on seeing in the Raleigh News and Observer, Sunday, 25th inst: "Yesterday at high noon at the Christian parsonage in this city, Mr. Chas. A. Ballentine, of Cardenas, one of Wake county's most popular young farmers, and Miss Elizabeth Leigh Taylor, of Raleigh, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Taylor, were happily united in marriage in the presence of a company of friends. Rev. L. F. Johnson, pastor of the Hillsboro Street Christian Church, officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Ballentine will live at the late William Ballentine home in the southern part of Wake county. A host of friends in Raleigh and the county of Wake will wish for them a happy and prosperous life."

—A correspondent from Lynchburg, Va., commenting kindly upon our editorial last week, "Blasting at the Rock of Ages," very truthfully points out: "Serious and devout skepticism is sometimes possible and pardonable, but a rank, arrogant, foolish scepticism and triviality of mind and heart is unworthy of any people and a curse to any nation. Our Lord had patience with honest doubt, devoutly and seriously entertained, and sought kindly and tenderly to remove it; but He gave no quarter and showed no consideration to a careless, trifling scepticism which gives no thought and no care to serious and important things that it so lightly questions. * * * * * Have not God's people everywhere, of all names and faiths, cause to fall on their knees and pray God that this curse and shame, triviality and folly, of ignorant, shallow, thoughtless, irreverent scepticism be banished from among us?"

—The editor of this paper left the trials and tribulations of this vain world last week, for two whole days and a half and went fishing. Though he has been back at his place of labor five days he is still enjoying those fish bites, those cork plungers, those shoeks and thrills of ecstasy and delight which suffuse the whole frame when a game speckle perch or lively "club" is landed. If there is aught among the pursuits and pleasures of men to drive away dull care, relieve ennui, and bring absolute rest to wearied flesh equal or comparable to fishing with hook, line and rod this scribe has never yet discovered it. And these lines are written not to make Dr. Staley grow green with envy again, but to thank Bro. J. Beale Johnson for the liberties of his glorious fish pond, the hospitality of his happy home, and sixty two hours of solid joy and unbroken delight. Work is genuine pleasure after such a season of relaxation and recreation.

Raleigh News and Observer, Sunday 25th inst.: "There is a good revival in progress at the Hillsboro Street Christian church. The meeting started on last Sunday. Rev. L. F. Johnson, the pastor, has done all the preaching with good results. The church has been greatly revived. Christian people of other churches in the city have given valuable assistance in the meeting. Lasting good has been accomplished. The church is taking on new life since Rev. Mr. Johnson took charge in December, 1908. About fourteen or fifteen members have been received. There will be two services today, one at 11 a. m. and the other at 8 p. m. The pastor is undecided about when the meeting will close. Everybody is invited to the services today and tonight."

—In the recent Armenian massacres it is estimated that between 20,000, and 30,000 native Christians and missionaries were slain. It is known that 21 native pastors were massacred.

—Sunday's Philadelphia Press says Senator Aldrich's tariff schedule is fixed and will pass. This schedule includes duty on rough lumber at $2.00 per thousand, iron ore 25 cents per ton, coal 40 cents per ton, present rates on hosiery and the elimination of the inheritance tax.

BIBLES FOR SALE.

I am selling, in Alamance County, Wilmore's New Analytical Reference Bible, the most thorough and complete Book for all who wish to study and understand the Bible on the market today. Sold only by subscription and I shall be glad to show it to you. Thousands of copies are being sold. Alfred Apple, Jr., Elon College, N. C.

NORFOLK LETTER.

I reported last week, that Dr. Baird was improving. I am glad to report now that he arrived at home last Saturday night from the hospital in Baltimore where he has been under treatment for several weeks, very much improved. He tells me that he has not felt so well in three or four years as he does now, has gained 32 pounds in weight.

Rev. J. W. Harrell spoke at Portsmouth Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock to men only; subject, "Character building." A good meeting is reported in progress at the Main St. Church, where Rev. H. H. Butler of Suffolk is assisting the pastor. Several conversions reported last week. His subject for the evening service Sunday was "The Master has come and calleth for thee." The pastor, Bro. Bryant, used for the morning service "The Glory of the Mysteries of Christ." Rev. J. O. Cox of the South Norfolk Church used the following subjects: 11 a. m., "Purpose of Heart," 8 p. m., "Firmness of Character." Rev. W. H. Thompson of the Third Church spoke to a somewhat larger congregation than usual, from the subject, "God's keeping power."

The revival at the Memorial Temple closed last Wednesday night. They had larger congregations Sunday than for a long while. Two united with the church at the morning service. At the evening service Bro. Ryan administered the ordinance of baptism to nine candidates—six by immersion, and three by sprinkling.

Elon College Notes.

Prof. P. J. Kernodle will soon bring from the press his book on "Lives of Christian Ministers." The book represents much labor and thought on the part of the author and fills a long felt want in our church. We have too long, as a church, been making history and allowing others to write it for us, or allowed it to go unrecorded. Advanced subscriptions will be received till May 1st for this book, which contains more than four hundred pages and thirty illustrations.

—The State Christian Endeavor Society which just closed its most successful convention at Winston-Salem, N. C., did, we are sure, make no mistake when it chose for its president Prof. W. A. Harper of Elon College. Our delegation to this convention was mentioned in the Sun of last week. The unanimous report of those attending is that Winston-Salem is the right place for royal entertainment and hospitality.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Brown were called to Randolph county last week on account of the death of Mr. Brown's sister, who died after a lingering illness from tuberculosis.

The College pulpit yesterday was filled by Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. in afternoon held their meetings. In the evening the Christian Endeavor Society held its monthly prayer meeting in the Chapel.

Prof. N. F. Brannock, class of 1899, at present a member of faculty of Elon College, will spend next year in study at Johns Hopkins. We will, we understand, take his major work in natural and mathematical sciences.

The Ladies' Aid met on Thursday evening with Mrs. M. A. Atkinson in a social meeting. This one, like its predecessors, was very enjoyable and the guests one and all were only sorry the hour for separation came so soon.

Swearing.

ted, too, that the greatest offenders are mere boys, and this peculiarity is not confined to Charlotte. It is becoming a matter of discussion by the press in other cities. In Savannah, for instance, The News says that it is not in the least out of the ordinary, where a group of boys of ten to fifteen years are together upon the streets or in an open space to play a game of ball, to hear them using oaths that might suit the tongues of the proverbial fishwife or costermonger, but which are shocking falling from the tongues of children of tender years. "Of all the stupid and silly vices," moralizes the News, "profanity is one of the worst and most abominable. A simple statement of fact is much stronger than any statement embellished with swear words, and no lie is made any the more believable by being framed in profanity. In fact, both truth and falsehood are weakened by swearing and taking the Lord's name in vain. Foul epithets and comparisons are not convincing, but are almost invariably disgusting, except to those making use of them."

Not only does profanity weaken speech, it weakens the person using it. All speech, the psychologists teach, is reflective in influence. The oath hurts the one who utters it worse than it hurts any one else. It is an evil thing which rebounds and strikes back at the heart of the user. This anarchy of speech acts backward upon mind and heart, and the boy who swears now will, in no long period from now, be ready for other forms of depravity and defilement worse than that of tongue and speech.

The devil uses the tongue first that he may get hold of the hand and control the heart.

That our boys are swearing is a dangerous and deadly omen.

NEWS ITEMS.

—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company purchased $19,000,000 more of Norfolk and Western Railroad stock last week thus gaining practical control of this system.

—There is an uprising and a revolt in Turkey against the present order of things and the Sultan is threatened with dethronement. The populace is greatly aroused and danger of civil strife and blood shed is grave.

—Thieves tunneled under four buildings and entered by a subterranean cavern, thus dug out, the Bank of Suffolk, Sunday, April 18th, and secured $1,479,754. The tunnel was supposed to have been many days in digging.

—The tariff bill as passed by the House and now under discussion by the Senate is a document of over thirty one closely printed pages, small type, three columns to the page, and must contain some 50,000 to 60,000 words.

—The last census, that of 1899, showed a mixture of humanity in Cuba as follows: Native whites, 910,299; foreign whites, 142,198; negroes 235,638; mixed, 70,805; Chinese 14,857; total 1,572,797. The next census will show a larger and more complex mixture than this.

—The National Government is preparing to take the next census, the actual work to begin next April. North Carolina will have ten supervisors, one for each Congressional district, as we presume other States will, at a salary of $1,500 each. There will be in this State about 1,500 enumerators.

—More than a week before ex-President Roosevelt arrived in Africa photographs appeared "taken on the spot" showing Mr. Roosevelt in the act of assaulting a lion, and another showing him in hot combat with an elephant! This is a fast age, you know.

—It takes great men to make great mistakes, we are told, and it is often even so. Chief Justice Fuller came near making Mr. Taft take oath, at his recent inauguration, that he would faithfully "execute the Constitution of the United States." Senator Knox was standing near Mr. Taft and noticed Judge Fuller's mistake. "Don't do it" whispered Senator Knox and after a pause, Judge Taft said, "I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT
—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVEN-
TION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

May 29-31 is the date of the Young People's Convention.

One delegate for every 25 persons in Sunday-schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, Young People's Missionary Societies, and other Christian organizations among the young people of the Southern Christian Convention. See that you are represented. The executive committees of Sunday-school conventions are to appoint delegates to represent their conventions. These delegates should be so distributed as to have every Sunday-school represented. Where there is no Sunday-school Convention, and hence no Executive Committee, the individual schools should send delegates. Christian Endeavor and other religious societies among the young people should send delegates, and should see that they are chosen right away. All delegates and visitors to the convention, wanting entertainment, are to write Prof. W. A. Harper, chairman of the Entertainment Committee, before May 15. Entertainment is not guaranteed for those writing later than that date.

A Look Ahead.

It is hardly to be supposed that the young people's movement has as its end and purpose—its ultimate purpose—simply to organize and make more efficient the local work of the young people in the church. There is likely a larger and more far-reaching, underlying idea in the movement. Perhaps this underlying idea has not yet taken definite shape. Perhaps it has not been definitely stated by any one. It may take several efforts by as many several persons to get it definitely stated. So, in view of the fact that we are conscious of some such underlying idea, and in view of the fact that the Christian Church existed—merely existed—for nearly a century, conscious all the while of an underlying purpose, idea, in its existence, but was never able to put this vague underlying idea into definite form or project definite ends, and in view of the further fact that nearly a quarter of a century ago, when the Christian Church, South, began to mould its subconscious purpose—its underlying idea, into definite effort, church enterprises sprang up and grew rapidly—in view of all this, shall the young people's movement have for its ultimate reason for existence, the great question of planting the Christian Church in the southwestern states, beyond the Mississippi during the twentieth century, a section of this great country that will likely be crowded with a vast population a hundred years to come? Shall we improve the efficiency of organization at home, both for the benefit of the local church and for this larger purpose? There is a large historical fact in the words, "Westward the course of empire takes its way." Shall such a truth a hundred years to come be a fact in the history of the Christian Church, South? In such a movement the Young People's Department could be the power behind the Home Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention through which Board the movement might work.

Such a movement working out a long and difficult task such as is suggested above, needs not simply enthusiasm but quiet devotion, determination and unanimity of effort. Let us hope the Convention May 29-31 may be so characterized.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MAY 9, 1909.
A Few Suggestions.

Paul at Antioch in Pisidia.

Acts 13:13-46.

Golden Text:—The word of the Lord was published throughout all the region. Acts 13:49.

Review.—Review the previous lesson thoroughly, bring out its truths, develop the fact that Barnabas was leader when this first missionary journey was started. It is very likely that Barnabas planned the journey and expected to limit it to the island of Cyprus. But Paul soon demonstrated he was the leader and is from now on put down as such. It was no doubt he who suggested the continuation of the journey to other places. Call for the note books. Examine them, make suggestions, by lot appoint one to read.

Chronology.—The first missionary journey extended over two years from 47 to 49 A. D. We do not know how long the missionaries were in Cyprus, but likely this lesson is in the early summer or late spring of 47.

Incidental Instruction.—Tell the class the origin of the synagogue and its place in the Hebrew worship; for information on this point, see "Preparing the Teacher" page 204 f. Make clear the order of service in the synagogue, because this will explain how natural it was for Paul to get the opportunity to preach on this occasion. First there was prayer, then the reading of the Scriptures—a passage from the law and also from the prophets, then singing from the Psalms, the Hebrews Song Book. Then the exhortation by some one designated by the ruler of the synagogue, usually from among the rabbis, sometimes even a layman, often from visiting brethren, as in this case. There was no one whose regular duty it was to preach in the synagogue as in our churches to-day. The speaker was expected to explain the passages already read. From internal evidence it appears that the chapters read on this Sabbath were Deut. 1, and Isaiah 1, which chapters were usually read together: it would not be a bad idea to have these two chapters read as a setting for the lesson.

The Lesson.—The portion of the lesson printed in our quarterly divides into five parts, which you may write as a topical outline as it is developed in the teaching.

1. Paul Goes to Antioch in Pisidia, verses 13 and 14. Find from what part of Cyprus Paul and his companions sailed, to what place they came (locate this place on the map and tell the class of its malarial climate which made it unwise for Paul to stay there: perhaps even he fell sick here as some suppose and never completely recovered from the effects of it), what one of the party left, whither he went, to what city now Paul and his company came, (locate Antioch and tell the class enough about it to cause them to realize it—describe the journey of 100 miles, through a country and over mountains, infested with robbers, which was necessary to reach this city), where they went on the Sabbath day.

2. Paul is invited to Preach, verses 15 and 16. Find who sent to Paul and Barnabas, at what point in the worship, what invitation was extended them, who of them spoke, how he secured attention, what his opening words were. Here call for assigned work on a similar experience in Christ's ministry, Luke 4:16-30.

3. Paul's Sermon, verses 17-41. (The first part of this discourse is omitted in our quarterly, only the last four verses of it being given. For primary and intermediate classes, only these ought to be studied, but for young people's and Bible Classes, the whole sermon should be covered at least by outline so that the comparative study of the assigned work may be of advantage. The suggested outline below may be placed on the board, as someone reads such division aloud.

Verses 17-21, God chose the Hebrew race as his peculiar people and had preserved them for centuries through great perils.

Verses 22-23. God had chosen David's family for the descent, and Jesus had appeared in this family.

Verses 24-26, Jesus some men recognized as the Messiah.

Verses 27-29. But the majority of the Jews had rejected and crucified him.

Verses 30-37. His Messiahship was established beyond doubt by his resurrection, which was according to the Scriptures and attested by many witnesses.)

Find through whom forgiveness of sins is preached, who this man is, how all are justified in him, to what extent was this justification, why the law could not accomplish this result, what warning Paul gave them, the substance of the warning.

4. The Result of Paul's Sermon, verses 42-43. Find who first left the synagogue, who besought him to preach again, who followed Paul and Barnabas, what they persuaded them.

5. The Next Sabbath, verses 44-46. Find what happened on the Next Sabbath, the effect on the Jews, what action they took, the effect of this action on Paul and Barnabas, what they said, of what the Jews judged themselves to be unworthy, to whom they would turn. Here call for the comparative Bible study assigned last time. First the comparison of Peter's sermon, Acts 2:14-39, with this; second, the comparison of Stephen's sermon, Acts 7:2-53, with this; and third, the comparison of the Epistle to the Galatians (which included the people of Antioch of Pisidia very likely) with this sermon.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

Truths and their Application.—1. This is the first sermon of Paul's that is recorded. It sounds the keynote of all his subsequent writings, justification through faith in Jesus Christ. There is no other means of salvation—and Paul was right in giving this doctrine of faith such a prominent position in his system of theology. We need more of such preaching as this today and more of the faith of which his career was such a thrilling example.

2. In our lesson today we have four different illustrations of the attitude of men to truth—Christian truth. First, there is the attitude of John Mark, who follows the truth where the road is easy, but deserts when it becomes steep and precipitous. Secondly, there is the attitude of the Antioch Jews, who tolerate it until it offends their pride and their preconceived notions. Thirdly, there are the Antioch Gentile converts, who receive the truth gladly and publish it abroad. Fourthly, there is the attitude of Paul, who follows the truth through joy and sorrow alike, his faith ever increasing, his hopes ever growing brighter. Which of these attitudes is yours?

3. It was Paul's custom, as it was his Master's, to attend the religious services on the Sabbath. We cannot conceive of Paul as going on a picnic or visiting on Sunday and not going to church. We need more church-goers among our nominal church members than we at present have. There is joy in going to the house of prayer to the genuine Christian. Do you enjoy going to the place of worship on the Sabbath? If not, why not?

Manual Work.

Have the following outline copied in the note books to be explained at home and returned to class next Sunday for approval.

Life of Paul (Continued).

47 A. D. Sails from Paphos (Have pupils locate all places on maps drawn by themselves in their note books) Acts 13:13.

Travels over land to Antioch in Pisidia, Acts 13:15-16.

Preaches his first recorded sermon, Acts 13:17-41 (Ask all to write this sermon out in their own minds).

Result of his sermon, Acts 13:42-44.

Turns to the Gentiles, Acts 13:45-46

Assignments for Next Sunday.—Ask one to be prepared on Acts 13:47-52; another on Acts 14:1-7; a third to report on Peter's healing of a lame man, Acts 3:1-13; a fourth to report on Stephen's stoning, Acts 7:54-8:3; a fifth on what Paul later has to say about his experience at Lystra, 2 Cor. 11:25 and Tim. 3:11; a sixth on what the New Testament teaches in regard to tribulations, Matt. 13:21; 24:21; John 16:33; Rom. 2:9; 5:3-5; Heb. 12:11; Rev. 1:9; 2:9; 7:14.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR SUNDAY, MAY 2, 1909.

Paul's First Missionary Journey— Cyprus.

Golden Text.—Go Ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, Mark 16:15.

Paul with his companions, John Mark, the Evangelist, and Barnabas who was a native of Cyprus made an itinerant visit to this island.

The island itself lies at the distance of less than a hundred miles from the coast of Syria and more than fifty from that of Cilicia. Its length is one hundred and forty miles and its extreme width about fifty. A chain of mountains extends through the northern part of the island. On the south side of the island are extensive plains of great fertility. The mountains yield abundant supplies of forest timber, and are rich in mineral productions.

These missionaries reached Salamis on the eastern extremity of the island, the nearest port to Antioch. From here they went through the whole island and came to Paphos, now Baffo. Here they encountered a false prophet—a Jew whose name was Bar-Jesus. This man was with the consul or deputy of the country and when Paul sought to instruct this deputy the sorcerer withstood them and sought to drive away all good that might come unto the deputy. Yet with all his subtlety Elymas was unable to over-rule the work of the Lord. The deputy believed, was converted and entrusting himself to Jesus became one of his disciples.

We are apt to say, what a pity that Elymas was on the spot to interfere with the good work. As Christ said when Lazarus died, I am glad for your sakes that I was not there; so he might say in the case of Sergius Paulus, I am glad for his sake that Elymas was there with his sorceries. For the efforts of the sorcerer to turn him away were over-ruled as the means of bringing him nearer.

The missionary, and every one who attempts to do good, must expect opposition, false charges, and every hindrance which the bad interpose when the good interfere with their gains. G. W. T.

Ex-Governor Glenn has been on the platform and in the pulpit almost continuously since laying aside the reins of government in North Carolina first of January. Of the great work he is doing the Charlotte Observer observes: "Ex-Governor Glenn has reached New Orleans on his Southern tour. He was booked to preach twice yesterday and once to-day in the pulpits of three different Presbyterian churches. He is working in the cause of 'religion in the homes,' and the New Orleans papers are according him a warm welcome. The Times-Democrat thinks that ex-Governor Glenn's contribution of a year's undivided service as lay preacher, to the cause of home missions, is unique, and adds: "His meetings elsewhere have been largely attended and gratifyingly successful. To the oratorical power, native ability and sincerity that made him a popular and successful executive, he adds a fervor and devotion in the Christian cause that wins and impresses his audiences." He has been attracting attention wherever he goes and has been successfully fulfilling his contract."

—The invention of wheat binders, like many another invention, created a new industry, that of making twine to bind grain with, 120,000 tons of which are needed to handle grain crop of the U. S. one year. When bound by hand a few stalks of wheat were used.

A GREAT BIOGRAPHY.

No other term will do. One must call it Great, if one would be even half way honest. W. S. Harwood had a great subject, of which he became enamored. "The Life and Letters of Austin Craig" were enough to inspire him. The work is certainly done in masterful fashion.

It has been many a day since we have read a book so full of human interest as this of these Letters and this Life. Austin Craig was one of the very first and foremost ministers of his time, not only of the Christian denomination, but of any denomination. If any Sun reader wishes to know something of the struggle which took place a little less than a century ago and which resulted in firmly establishing the Christian denomination and in broadening and liberalizing all denominations, let such an one read "The Life and Letters of Austin Craig." This is no mere biography. It is truly a great book, touching life, and the most vital of human events at very many points.

The book tells in graphic manner of the methods of thought and work employed by a successful man, eminent scholar and great preacher. It is therefore of unusual worth to young ministers.

Fleming H. Revell Company, the New York publishers make this announcement of the scope and value of the book:

Dr. Craig was for many years one of the foremost members of the Christian denomination and a preacher of rare power; he was the intimate friend and adviser of some of the most famous men of his day, one of the leading scholars of his generation in America, a man of great intellectual power. He became not only the most notable preacher of his denomination and president of Antioch College, but he founded, and remained president up to his death, of The Christian Biblical Institute. The book is out of the line of the average biography in the points of human contact in which it abounds, making it a volume not only of particular importance to the members of his own denomination, but to any one who loves the story of a life of surpassing unselfishness. W. S. Harwood, the editor, has been for a number of years a contributor to leading American and English magazines. His recent volume, "Life and Work of Luther Burbank," has attracted wide attention in the United States and Europe.

Outside of "The Life and Writings of N. Summerbell," there has not been in recent years such a contribution to the literature of our Christian cause. The book will have wide reading and far reading influence.

The volume is of best print and binding and sells for $2.00 net. It is certainly a book that every Christian minister should have in his library.

ANOTHER GIFT TO THE ORPHANAGE.

Superintendent Foster reports in another column a cash gift of one thousand dollars, the beginning of an endowment for our Christian Orphanage. What a friend indeed is this! The name of this gracious and generous donor is withheld by request with the simple excuse and statement that "the gift is made for the glory of God and not for the praise of men." It would be a pleasure to give the donor's name, but the expressed wish must be respected.

This is the gift of a liberal, and loyal and devout soul. Nothing but the spirit of the Master could inspire such a deed.

This is to be put at interest and, if it can earn 6 per cent, $60 a year, five dollars a month, it should support, feed, clothe, shelter and help to school, some orphan child for all time to come. There must be comfort indeed in that thought to the generous heart that sent this thousand dollars. For the years and years to come, this money will, in all probability be blessing and benefiting some worthy, but unfortunate child. This is Christianity put to practice. God bless this noble donor, modest, faithful, loyal, living, not for the praise of men but "for the glory of God" and the relief of human suffering.

WHERE SIN IS.

The life of God in the soul of man, has been given as the definition of religion. If this be so, one wonders at the weakness of many vessels through which God expresses His life. The life of God is pure and holy and spotless. The trouble, therefore, with our religion is not on the divine side at all. It is entirely on the human side. We mortals do evermore err and come short of the glory of God.

Life is sweet and wants to express itself. God's life is sacred and sweet, and would ever express itself in us. Through us mortals would He manifest Himself to the world.

But when we have, or harbor, sin in the heart, God does not manifest Himself there. God will not dwell in wickedness. "Ye are the temple of God, which temple is holy," but where sin lives, God will not abide.

How sweet to have, knowingly, the life of God in the soul, but if God is there, sin must not be there. God and sin will not cohabit. Fill the heart with sin and you drive God out. Let God live there—and He wants to abide there evermore—and sin will not stay. You and I must have with us and in us one or the other. Will it be sin? Or will it be God?

AN ANCIENT LETTER OF INTEREST.

We are indebted to Mr. W. E. McClenny for finding, copying and sending to us the following letter which in all probability was the first ever written from our churches in the South to the Christian churches of the North. The letter is taken from Volume 1, page 87 of The Herald of Gospel Liberty. The letter was replied to by seventeen ministers in the North a few months later and these constitute the first negotiations for a union of the two branches of the Christian Churches.

Besides the historical worth of this paper as will be seen, it breathes a spirit of piety, devotion and fellowship too seldom seen in our day.

The letter reads:

From the Ministers of the Christian Churches at the Southward, dated May 27th, 1809.

"We whose names are hereunto subscribed, being Ministers in the Christian Church assembled from different parts of Virginia and North Carolina, at Shiloh meeting-house in the state of Virginia,—to our Christian brethren in the New England States.—Greeting.

Brethren:—From our beloved brother Frederick Plummer, we have received such information of you as causes our souls to rejoice and induces us in this manner to express our sentiments.

We are informed that you receive CHRIST as ONLY HEAD OR KING, of the church, to the exclusion of Popes, Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, or any body of men invested with legislative authority for the church of God. We believe that one head is sufficient for one body, and more heads than one would make any being a monster. The church is said to be the "body of Christ" and Christ the "head of the body." We rejoice that the government is on the shoulder of the Saviour, and cannot forbear to express our joy that a people exist in New England, who, like us, have rejected human heads, and cheerfully submitted to the authority of Christ alone.

In consequence of your receiving Christ as only head, and ruler of his church, it necessarily follows, that his laws as contained in the New Testament, should be received without any addition, abridgment, alterations, or embellishments, to the exclusion of all articles of religion, confessions of faith, creeds, etc. etc., composed by men. That the New Testament is alone sufficient for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness, is a sentiment in which we are confirmed; and experience has taught us to believe, that, as like its author it is perfect, for it answers every purpose to promote the peace, happiness and prosperity of the church of Christ, and has a direct tendency to prevent those jars and contentions which always have, and always will attend imperfect human productions.

We are informed that like us, you have rejected all other names by which you may be designated as a religious body, but the Christian. This is a matter of great joy to us, because it is the name by which the primitive disciples of Christ were first known in Antioch. We also conceive it a proper name given by the Holy Spirit to the church which is said to be the Lamb's wife, consequently should be called by his name. Moreover we are of opinion, that many distresses and sorrows have been experienced by many of the children of God, in consequence of other names assumed by them, expressive of their attachment to certain articles of religion, creeds, forms of government, manner of administering ordinances, or of certain founders of their sect, or framers of their system.

Dear Brethren, our fervent prayer to Almighty God is, that we may not be Christians in name only; but that we may largely partake of the "Divine nature" and in a greater degree feel Christ the hope of glory formed in our souls.

We feel thankful to God that on these points we agree with you: O! that the Mighty God of Israel may pour out his Holy Spirit upon us! We do love you and most ardently desire your prosperity and happiness. Do brethren, pray for us, that we may honor the Christian name, serve our God acceptably, finish our course with joy, and finally shout the high praises of the God of our salvation in the mansions of eternal glory.

We are dear brethren, yours in Christian love,

William Glendenning, James Jackson, William Guirey, Thomas E. Jeter, Joseph H. Bland, T. Ray (South Carolina), Henry Hays, George Wilkins, James Hays, Ellis Evans, Joseph Thomas, John Sled, Walter Chustean, Joseph Hatchett, William More, Philip Vass, John Hays.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The springtime not only clothes the face of nature with robes of beauty, but opens a field of suggestion for thought and enjoyment. The upspringing grass, the swelling buds and the opening flowers, tell us of a winter that is past and a harvest that is coming. Every form and color tells us that nature grows all in graceful and symmetrical relations; deformities come by some distortion of nature caused by injury or obstructions. The best artist cannot equal normal nature. In all the tracery of twig and vine nature surpasses Rafael and Angelo. And in all this life of springtime the movement is so quiet, so tender, so gradual, that a continent is robed in green and decorated with uncountable tints of beauty before we are aware of it. The wind, the earthquake, the fire, are nothing compared with this still, small voice of life filling a hemispheric canvass with indescribable glory. "The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation!" but it comes. The quiet life of Christ in the hearts of men is growing and the dead past will one day be put out of sight by the glory of this new life of righteousness. The religion of noise and show is not necessarily the religion of Jesus Christ; but the Christ life quietly, persistently, overcomingly at work in the soul is the potential force that is to subdue the evil of the world and conquer the nations.

This life should begin in the young child, in the buds and blossoms of humanity. Childhood is naturally religious and needs only the environment and leadership of religious opportunity to grow up into the life of Jesus Christ. As the tendrils of the vine are in the growing branches and instinctively or naturally seek some object to cling to for support, so the image of God in the soul is feeling after Him and will cling to Him, if not hindered. It is the obstructed life, the distorted soul, that makes the Cross necessary and mars the race. The human soul is susceptible of growth toward God in that tender, quiet way that conforms to the requirement of "grow in the grace and the knowledge of the truth." The earliest time in life is the best time to begin this soul-growth. When seeds are planted later than nature's best time they require artificial light and fertilization to bring them to maturity; and even then, chances are against best results; so later conversions and spiritual training have to overcome delays, distorted souls, weakened wills, and loss of faith. It takes a whole season to mature nature's best harvest; and it takes a whole life to mature the best character for the harvest at the end of the world. Religious character developed in the full course of an uninterrupted life of grace in the soul rivals the wealth of nature's best and most beautiful in the field of growth. The song of bird from the treetops in orchard and forest is not half so thrilling as the songs that roll from joyful hearts in the temples where the children sing. A whole lifetime for the development of a whole Christian, and then eternity to finish the joy and song of the soul. W. W. Staley.

—Turkey is in the throes of civil strife, constitutionalists being arrayed against royalists, and the Sultan Abdul Hamid, is imprisoned, he and his troops being at the mercy of the constitutional army, to whom they have surrendered. There was a battle and much blood-shed. The oppressed Turks seem determined to have some constitutional rights and liberties.

—The tendency of much of our modern society is to destroy the home by rendering our women unhappy in the ordinary channels of home duties and real home-making. How often is a woman who has been placed providentially at the head of a home, disqualified for her duties in the home by the dissipating pleasures of society. One of our contemporaries says truly: "When women become possessed of a passion for worldly pleasures and get a false idea of liberty and independence, there is danger for the nation. It is the duty of every woman who is married to rear a family, God intended that she should."—Ex.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We will make a short letter and ask you to read our special found in another column which should have been in last week's paper but we could not get it ready. The following donations have been received since last report:

- Mrs. R. T. Kernodle, 4 doz. eggs, 1 quilt;
- Mrs. G. W. Suits, 6 yds. galated, 5 yards drilling, 1 doz. buttons, 1 spool thread;
- J. B. Gerringuer, 4 gal. vinegar.

We are very grateful for these kind donations; they are all useful.

We are glad to have so many Sunday-schools help us. Every school will thrive better and be more loyal and liberal which joins in this noble work.

We herewith express our great joy and profound gratitude to "Our Friend" for a one thousand dollar check for "Endowment Fund" for the care of an orphan child. The name is withheld by request as the gift is made for "the Glory of God and not the praise of man." It comes at a time when it thrills us with hope and opens the way for other kind friends to follow. This is our first cash endowment: though many of our Sunday-schools are serving in place of endowment.

Now, dear children, let's go to work with greater determination, for the days yet to come will reveal greater works still!

God bless you all.

Fondly Yours, Uncle Jim.

Raleigh, N. C., Apr. 17, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here we come with our April letter. Our school closed last week and we had a nice entertainment. We all regretted for school to close, but guess the vacation will do us good. We enclose our dues for this month.

With love to you and all the cousins.

Your little nieces,

Jessie Penny,

Pauline Penny.

Play time girls. Enjoy it fully! But be sure to keep in touch with the Corner all through the summer months.

Raleigh, N. C., Apr. 12, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here we are again with our letter for April. Our school is out Wednesday. Enclosed please find 25 cts.

Your nephews and nieces,

Blannie Franks,

Bettie Franks,

Dwight Franks,

Noma Franks,

Numa Franks.

The little "Franks" on time as usual. The quarters amount to dollars quickly.

DO YOU WANT TO GO TO COLLEGE? If so we can help you. We have already put hundreds through college by means of our plan. Write today for full information regarding our offer of a free scholarship in any school or college. Address, Robert J. Sherlock, 29-31 East 22nd Street, New York City.

YOUNG MEN! If you want to know why you should become telegraph operators and what school to attend, write to SOUTHERN SCHOOL OF TELEGRAPHY, Newman, Ga., for free Catalogue "A." EVERY BOY should read it. Positions positively guaranteed.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & Co., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by Druggists, 75c.

FREE DEAFNESS CURE.

A remarkable offer by one of the leading ear specialists in this country, who will send two month's medicine free to prove his ability to cure Deafness, Head Noises, and Catarrh. Address Dr. G. M. Branaman, 1100 Walnut Street, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am behind this time; I have been home to stay with mama for a little while. Uncle has sold my peanuts I picked up last fall, and I am going to send the little folks ten cents of it. I have traded chickens with Auntie and now I have a hen and sixteen biddies to get some money out of later. My best wishes.

Your little niece,

Willie Jackson Everett.

Well, Willie, this letter shows you to be a man of business. Let us hear from the Biddies when they grow up.

Wake Forest, N. C., Apr. 12, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come again with my monthly dues. I had a very nice Easter. We had Easter entertainment. We went egg hunting. I found three eggs. Enclosed find 5 cts.

Your niece,

Iola Timberlake.

I am sure you must have had a good time Iola, going to these two nice things. Wish I could have joined in the hunt.

Asheboro, N. C., Apr. 10, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Tomorrow will be Easter, and all we little folks will have such a good time with our pretty, bright colored Easter eggs. Mother has promised that I shall go to an Easter service given by the little children too. I am not old enough to take a part in it, though I soon will be. Enclosed find forty cents for dues, including April. This shows me up a little tardy doesn't it? I'll try to be more prompt. With love to all the cousins,

Fondly,

Holt Moffitt.

But you've made up for last time, Holt, so we will have to excuse you this time. Glad you enjoyed the pretty eggs Easter.

Toro, Va., Apr. 9, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write and send my dime for this month. I am glad that all of the Orphanage children are well of measles.

I will be ten years old the twenty-first of September. Wishing you a happy Easter, I remain,

Susie R. Watson.

P. S. I wrote my letter before now, but lost it so had to write another.

Well Susie, you meant to be on time didn't you? Look well to your next letter.

Crewe, Va., Apr. 5, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come with my April dues and I must tell you about my little chicks. Mother set the incubator and has 98 little chicks and I just think that is fine for I love fried chicken so much.

Love to all, Your fond little niece,

Helen S. Foster,

T. Clifford Foster.

This is fine Helen. You and Clifford must pay notice to these dear babies and find worms and other things for them to eat 'till they can scratch for themselves.

THE ORPHANAGE CONFERENCE.

A Visit to Many Children.

After a journey on the cars of nearly 500 miles, a 16 hours ride from Raleigh, we arrived at the city of Atlanta, and were met by one of the members of the Board of Trustees of the North Ga. Conference Methodist Orphans' Home at Decatur Ga., and sent for a street car ride of six miles, and a walk (which however we were not allowed to take often, as their own vehicles were furnished at our convenience) of half a mile at the end of which we came to our destination—the above Orphanage where the Tri-State Conference of Superintendents and their workers was held.

Although called the Tri-State Conference, five states were represented, viz. North Carolina, South-Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi and Texas. About 40 workers were present, the last state being represented by perhaps the oldest man both in age and service in the South. Dear Father Buckner, as he is lovingly called by the children he has in charge, is about 76 years old and has been at the head of the Dallas Orphanage from its beginning, about 30 years ago. From his almost life-long experience and deeply religious character we learned many helpful lessons that will better qualify us in this responsible work of saving the orphan children. His orphanage is now accommodating 660 children and they have 1000 acres of land—a veritable village within itself as they not only care for orphan children and teach them every kind of useful work but, in cottages apart from the children's building, under the same management old women and men are being cared for as they richly deserve in their old age.

To tell of the many good things enjoyed during the two days of this conference would take too much space, so we will try to mention only the most important. Tuesday night was spent in an informal meeting, getting acquainted for the morrow's work, but as most of us had come a long distance and were so tired, sleep was more inviting and interesting than making new acquaintances. However, after a good night's rest at one of the cottages called the "Atlanta Building" because built by the Sunday-schools of Atlanta, we were prepared to enjoy the day's program which began by warm welcome addresses by one of the trustees and other home workers. (By the way one of the Trustees of this Decatur Home is Mr. Candler, the Coco-cola man who built the grand "Candler Building" of Atlanta 18 stories high.)

Other papers and addresses were as follows: "What should be the scope of the education of the Home and how can the Home arrange to get the proper time for study?" With one or two exceptions the workers reported that their children work half the day and are in school the other half.

"Value of the Kindergarten—what the Kindergarten does for the feeble minded." A teacher of this department in the Decatur Home read this most excellent paper, then illustrated by having a little girl about seven years old who was supposed to have but very little sense when she entered the Home, read and spell for us. When she first came, there was only one word that she could utter and that a curse. It was wonderful what training had done for her.

"What are we to do with the large boys and girls?" was the next paper read and discussed after which a splendid lunch was served in the large dining room and kitchen building.

After doing full justice to the good things of the table the following excellent papers were read and discussed fully, for we came to learn and were not afraid to ask questions.

"How to maintain spiritual life in the Home?"

"How does the individual patronage of children on the part of visiting friends affect the work of the patronized and that of the Institution?"

"Are there any incorrigible orphans, and what are we to do with them?"

At 3:30 we took the car for the Hebrew Orphan's Home. This Home is a beautiful building in the heart of the city. They look more to the intellectual than industrial part of the work. Their children attend the public schools and are taught to do light housework and given lessons in Hebrew in the afternoon. A large play ground and one outside building, a nicely arranged hospital complete this well equipped Orphanage. At 5 o'clock they served a most elaborate dinner, after which came other treats in the form of an address by Dr. R. C. Buckner of Texas on "A third of a Century of Orphans Home Work," and a paper on "The Cultivation of the Aesthetic in Orphanage Life," by Rev. M. L. Kesler, Supt. of the Thomasville, N. C. Orphanage.

Back again at Decatur and a good night's rest again prepared us for the second day's program. Thursday Conference held an early session so as to crowd in the many things before us. The following papers were read by the delegates: "Conference on various forms of office work with reference to the raising of necessary funds," as with us, so with nearly every orphanage represented—Monthly S. S. Offerings and Thanksgiving Day Offerings were the most successful ways by which to raise needed funds. A very unique and splendid way was employed by some of the workers—that of "Work Day," which is one day the latter part of September preferred when friends will give the amount of one day's labor as a Harvest Offering.

"Suggestions for a uniform method of statistical reports both financial and numerical also with reference to the causes of destitution of the children."

"Is State supervision of all child saving institutions desirable?"

"Should a Home assist a worthy widow a few dollars per month to prevent the family from being broken up?"

By reading these subjects one can readily imagine the many helpful suggestions made by those most experienced in Orphanage work and how instructive to us who are in our infancy.

One o'clock found the delegates again speeding away on electric cars to the Baptist Orphans' Home at Hopeville, Ga. a distance across Atlanta of about 15 miles. Dinner was served here in the beautiful dining room with tiled flooring, steel ceiling and a seating capacity of 500. This handsome Home has a gentleman Supt., who with his family resides in the building but the Board of Trustees are composed entirely of ladies, 10 in number. The farmer, a most efficient man with the older boys, cultivates 35 acres of land and because of the rich soil is able to furnish nearly all table supplies.

Upstairs after dinner in the lovely chapel a little service was held where over 100 children sang the child's song, "Jesus loves me this I know for the Bible tells me so," and as their childish voices rang out in this old familiar song which our own little ones know and love to sing so well, we felt as tho' this surely must be one of the beautiful songs that will be sung in Heaven and having been practised by so many children on earth, what will be the chorus by the millions in Heaven!

This Home, and the Decatur Home also have a Baby Cottage and the tiny creatures as they toddled up and clasped your knee to be loved and petted, looked as tho' they were well nourished and cared for.

The next place to which we were invited was the "Home of the Friendless" a handsome brick building in Atlanta and so well were the children cared for by the city and wealthy people that it seemed they had the wrong name. Friendless no longer but surrounded by numberless friends! There were babies here also toddling around just able to walk and they take them at any age, always finding a home for the tiny waifs if one is available. Here supper was served in the reception room to the delegates and we had an opportunity of seeing the crowd of little people sit down to their simple supper of grits, bread and butter and an apple.

Friday morning we said good bye to the hospitable people of the Decatur Home. Mr. and Mrs. Jamieson who are Supt. and Head Matron, Mr. Vrumly, the untiring business manager, matrons, teachers and children had certainly combined forces to give us a good time. Not alone was their liberality confined to every nook and corner in their own well managed household but the chance to see three other Homes was given us not even allowing street car fare to be paid by delegates. We came away feeling greatly benefited and better able in every respect to take up the work of another year.

All day Friday was spent in seeing some of the sights of Atlanta. At 10 o'clock we attended the Free Tuberculosis Exhibit and lecture held at the Central Congregational church. Much good is being done by these lectures, "Tuberculosis or Consumption," How it is spread, the prevention, and cure, etc., and it is hoped that as the years roll by the death rate from this dread plague will be greatly lessened.

The Candler Building, Carnegie Library, Capitol, etc., were among the interesting places seen in this busy hustling Southern Metropolis and Saturday at 6:30 P. M. after a ride of about 18 hours we reached home tired but happy to have had such a lovely trip and to find our own babies, children at the Orphanage and all workers well.

After seeing such handsome Orphans' Home Buildings and hearing of others even more handsome and better equipped we have found great comfort in the thought that they all had to have a beginning and that even now in our struggling condition we compare favorably with other denominational institutions when we think of our numbers and finance.

—Dr. Edwin Mims, of the chair of English in Trinity College has been elected Professor of English in the University of North Carolina.

If the synoptics narrate impossible miraculous stories, what argument follows therefrom in favor of changing the water into wine, or of the resuscitation of Lazarus after he was dead four days? That the three synoptists do not utter a syllable concerning these greatest miracles of all that Jesus did, suffices of itself to destroy all credit of the Johannine tradition on the subject" (pp. 343-344).

Both these quotations show that Foster would destroy the gospel of John. Hence he is what may justly be called a destructive critic. His emphasis is destruction, not construction. And he would even destroy the character of John as an honest man; thus contradicting the celebrated and scholarly Dr. Ward, whose testimony you lately quoted to our grandson, to the effect that the Bible was an honest Book.

Still more:—Foster's argument that because Matthew, Mark and Luke do not mention the turning of water into wine and the resuscitation of Lazarus from the dead, we must reject such statements of John, and deny those miracles, is as absurd as your own argument in letter seven to our grandson, and the argument of Dr. Nöetaul, that individual communion cups were not used in the twentieth century, as stated in the history of Dr. Naxelarian; because you found that such cups were not mentioned by other historians.

But Foster's shallowness of judgment is also illustrated by the following passages:

"Nor do we even have a narrative concerning Jesus in the handwriting of those who claim to have walked and talked with him in the way" (p. 325).

I can find Foster's handwriting nowhere in this fragment of his trashy book. But I have no doubt of his having existed, and having written. This book is the effect of his life and work. And Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, those books, are likewise the effect of some genuine cause. That cause was the life, deeds and words of Jesus; a tremendous reality. It is silly to talk about handwriting. And Foster says, further:

"The material for writing a life of Jesus, in the strict sense of that word, does not exist" (p. 325).

Probably Foster would have used the Bertillon system on Jesus. He would have measured his physique; mentioned his height, weight, color of eye, convolutions of his ears, wrinkles of thumb, length of arm, shade of his hair, etc.

But who could write a life of Jesus? The tumultuous witness that those four books of the New Testament give of the tremendous reality, Jesus, is far more convincing to mankind of the "truth as it is in Jesus" than would have been the effort of Foster to write his scientific history. In fact, Foster makes the following admissions:

"Nor does religious certainty depend upon historical certainty in the sense that is usually supposed" (p. 333).

"Religious certainty has its roots in the will and conscience rather than in the theoretical understanding; it reposes in principle upon no science, not even biblical science" (pp. 328-329).

Then what did Foster write his book for?

Do you not see, my dear husband, that Foster's assumption of being a historical critic as to the Bible, and then trying to destroy its credibility by the use of criticism, puts him forever in the ranks of those who must fail? I think God know how to communicate his will and salvation to man. Foster well says that, "religious certainty has its roots in the will." And I assure you that religious certainty does not depend on science, history, handwriting, or criticism. It depends on the will. That is why John the Baptist preached, saying, "Repent ye." That is why Jesus commanded, "Believe the gospel." The will must surrender. Men cannot be saved from sin by scientific criticism, that has the destructive tone and spirit. Men must believe.

Foster's book, if this fragment is a true specimen of the whole, must have made trouble even for his own critic friends. For I noticed the following statement:

"We cannot even show a development of Jesus during the period of his public ministry" (p. 332).

How plainly this contradicts the higher critics of the 20th century, who claimed that Jesus did not at first know that he was the Messiah, and only found it out gradually! This one sentence, if scientifically established, overthrows the whole theory of the destructive critics, that Jesus was only a man, that he became a rabbi, then grew into the conception that he was the Messiah, and finally the Son of God. But Foster does not intend to overthrow the destructive critics; his "will and conscience" are revealed in his evident attempt to overthrow the New Testament, and he is to be avoided. But the New Testament has brought salvation to mankind for nearly three thousand years; and it should not be destroyed.

My dear husband, please send this essay of mine to our grandson, when you write him again.

* * * * *

My dear grandson, I gratify your grandmother's wish; but her essay is very unsatisfactory to me.

Affectionately your grandfather,
Higher Critic.

Admonished are we to let our light shine before men. The light must shine here if it is ever to shine as the sun. Our Father, we look up to Thee trusting that a flame of light shall come into every life and make it so bright that we will not want to be in the dark any more.

These bright days have given to the world so many floods of sunshine how it makes us rejoice to live in them! Shine on king of day with your central power and brilliant splendor giving light and heat to the earth and other worlds, but when you shall refuse to shine and your last lancing ray is gone out, then shall the righteous shine as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Repeat the glad words the righteous shall shine. With a harp in one hand—palms of victory resting in the other, and a brilliant crown of stars on the head the righteous shall shine.

Neglected, discouraged, forsaken, diseased, righteous one brighten up—for you shall see a better time, and shine as the sun in the kingdom of your Father.

DIED.
Horne.

Died at his home in Burlington, N. C., April 6th, 1909, Mr. Charles A. Horne, aged 33 years, one month and 20 days. He had been a sufferer for some time, and for several months prior to his death he was confined to his bed. He bore his affliction with great fortitude, and though he had much to live for, he was not afraid to die. He frequently spoke of dying, and expressed a firm trust in Christ the Saviour. His friends were many. The large audience that attended his funeral and burial, and the beautiful flowers that literally covered his grave, spoke of the high esteem in which he was held. He was an earnest and active member of the Burlington Christian church. The funeral services were conducted from the home and the body buried in Pine Hill cemetery. Rev. L. F. Johnson, of Raleigh, was present and assisted the writer in the services. May the Lord bless the bereaved ones and give them peace. P. H. Fleming.

Hook.

At her home, Hook's Mill, W. Va., April 17th, aged years, Mrs. Laretta M. wife of L. C. Hook. Sister Hook united with the Church early in life and took an active interest in its work. At the time of her death she was a teacher in the Sabbath school. We seldom find a Christian with as firm faith and bright hope as that enjoyed by sister Hook. Her death will bring a feeling of sorrow to the many ministers who have visited Timber Ridge church.

She leaves to mourn her departure, a husband and one son Loy C.

The funeral services were conducted from Timber Ridge church, by the writer on Sunday, Apr. 18th, in the presence of one of the largest congregations ever assembled at the church, and the remains laid to rest in the adjoining cemetery. May God bless and comfort the bereaved. W. T. Walters.

Taylor.

Near Semora, N. C., Bro. Lesley Taylor passed from labor to reward April 16th, 1909, aged 19 years. He is a son of Bro. Geo. A. and Sister Mollie Taylor.

He leaves a father, mother, two brothers and two sisters and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

He was sick about ten or twelve days. He had typhoid pneumonia.

He professed faith in Christ and joined Lebanon Christian Church, when 14 years of age.

He was a true and faithful member till death. He rejoiced and died trusting in Jesus.

He was buried in Lebanon cemetery

Deacon Levi W. Allen.

Deacon Levi W. Allen of Long's Chapel Christian Church departed this life April 19, 1909 at the ripe age of 71 years, 1 month, and 25 days. His funeral and burial services were conducted on the following day at his church by his pastor assisted by Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D. in the presence of a large concourse of friends and neighbors, and his earthly remains were laid away in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

In early life, deacon Allen was united in marriage with Miss Barbria King, Esquire Alvis King's daughter. To this union were born eight children, four sons and four daughters. Two daughters, Mrs. J. B. Rodgers, and Mrs. John Chandler, preceded their father to the glory land. Sister Allen and her other six children, W. J. Allen, Haw River; J. L. and E. N. Allen, High Point; J. A. Allen, Mrs. B. T. Hester, and Miss Cornelia Allen are still living to mourn their loss.

Deacon Allen was a charter member of Long's Chapel Church, a strong supporter of all its enterprises, and a regular attendant of all its services until death. He was a good, substantial citizen, an excellent neighbor, a faithful husband, a loving father who will be greatly missed in church, home and community.

His death was a greater shock to the family because he was in his usual health until a few moments before the grim reaper came to call him home, and because only one month ago his daughter, Mrs. Chandler, was suddenly taken unexpectedly. To the surviving members of the family, in this double affliction, I would commend the loving sympathy of Jesus Christ, the comforts of the Christian religion, the hope of a glorious resurrection, and a happy family reunion in heaven.

By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave

Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch

About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

GIPSY SMITH: HIS LIFE AND WORK.

By Himself.

This is a grand record of achievement. A poor lad, born in a gipsy camp, has been used as an instrument in God's hands to awaken multitudes throughout the world to spiritual consciousness. He tells in this book of 330 pages his rich and varied experiences from birth through years of success in soul-winning. The style of the book is not boastful; it is a humble attempt to satisfy the persistent requests of his friends for a history of his romantic career. The narrative is prefaced by appreciative introductions by Dr. Alexander McLaren and G. Campbell Morgan. Several illustrations add to the interest of the book.

We offer "Gipsy Smith" handsomely bound in cloth as a premium for two new subscriptions to The Christian Sun at $1.50 each; or for one new subscription and 45 cents addition-

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Government and Christian Workers.—

Our government recognizes the economic worth of Christian service. We have no State church, and God forbid that we ever should have, but those most interested in the State know best the weight and worth of Christian service in the State.

It may not be generally known to Sun readers that, even out-side of the army and navy our Government has several ministers of the gospel employed and several Young Men's Christian Association Secretaries purely for the economic value of such service. I refer to those ministers and Secretaries employed and sent to the Isthmus of Panama to look after the moral welfare of a conglomerate community there.

In apology, or rather in explanation, of this rather unusual procedure, President Taft recently said in a public address: "We pay the salaries of the secretaries that we have drawn from the Young Men's Christian Association of this country because they are experts in carrying on such institutions, and we are going to found two or three more. We pay the ministers on the Isthmus. I think there are some ten or a dozen in our pay, and we keep churches going. It is possible that we will be charged with having filched that money from the Public Treasury, but if we have we have accomplished a good work, and I think it can be defended on the strictly legal grounds that where you enter a country like the Isthmus of Panama and introduce into it 50,000 souls, unless you take special pains to have their morality looked after, unless you furnish ministers and churches and Christian clubs, you are going to have such a saturnalia of vice, such demoralization, that you will never build your canal. Hence, if we are to be impeached for spending that money it will be in a good cause." If the money is spent in the employment of good and honest men, faithful to their calling and zealous in their work, and without fear or favor to creed or calling, we do not believe a thinking people will impeach the officials who employ such servants. The transaction is one of economy, for there can be no economy where morals are bad.

Cotton.—The progress of civilization is marked, not by waste, but by saving. Looking at the habits and customs of savages, how poorly they are fed and how scantily clothed, one would think they were living on the waste and refuse. And the measure of their meals is meager indeed. This is not because they are living on the waste, however. It is because they have not learned how to save. Waste, therefore, is not the sign of thrift, but of thriftlessness. The most highly cultivated and cultured peoples know how to save most and best.

But of cotton? This seems to go with culture and its usefulness with the progress of civilization. Until Eli Whitney invented the cotton gin, the great staple largely went to waste, four pounds a day being considered a good task for "a hand" to pick.

With the invention of the gin came enormous increase in production; but for nearly a hundred years the cotton seed was practically thrown to waste. Then came the discovery of worth in cotton seed products. In 1900 there were produced in the United States 4,472,703 tons of seed whose value in oil, meal and fertilizer amounted to more than $33,000,000.

Now the movement is toward saving the cotton stalk. A mill is to be built in Georgia at an early date to manufacture paper exclusively from cotton stalks. This mill will cost $150,000 and is to consume all the stalks for a radius of twenty miles from the mill. The Federal Department of Agriculture has already demonstrated that paper can be manufactured from the stalk at a profit. This will complete the whole round of saving the cotton weed, save the leaves which are of immense value to the land on which the stalk is grown.

As the luxuries of one age become the necessities of the next, the waste of one age becomes the wealth of the next. As brain is applied to industry and material development, the bounty of a lavish Providence is made to appear more and more.

And the moral and spiritual waste of one age becomes the moral and spiritual wealth of the next. We are throwing away moral and spiritual force and energy today which in a few years, please God, will be utilized to the conversion of men and the uplift of the race.

The Tariff.—We may learn a lesson or so even from the dry and prolonged discussion now going on in Washington about the tariff.

It has been thought that the South was for free trade. This is a mistake. We are for free trade, or a very low tariff, on goods produced or manufactured elsewhere. On our own goods we like a tariff—as much of a tariff as possible. And the South is just like every other section of the broad land on this point.

There is nothing wicked or selfish in this. It is just the same old human nature that has been predominant since the days of Adam and Eve. All peoples under the sun want the best trade conditions possible. And every son of a woman wants to buy in the cheapest market and sell in the dearest. That also is human nature. If we people of the South did not manufacture at all we should then be for free trade and could preach it everywhere.

There was just one reason why the North saw the sin of slavery and the South did not. Slavery did not pay in the North: it did pay in the South. Trade conditions do not cloud the reason, but they give human nature the opportunity to assert itself.

We have not the first doubt but that in the ages yet to be, afar off, the tariff will be regarded as a sin and a nuisance. This on the broad basis of the brotherhood of man and that God made this universe and all it contains for the benefit of all his children. But morality and human nature have not developed to that point yet—not by a very great deal.

—Prof. S. M. Smith, chairman, writes "I am now at work on the program for our Young People's Convention, to be held at Elon College, May 29-31. I find it quite a job." The Committee is planning to make the Convention of deep interest and practical worth.

FROM THE FIELD.

Raleigh Letter.

April has been a delightful month to me. The weather has been grand in this section. I have spent the greater part of the month in evangelistic work. The first part of the month I spent with Rev. P. H. Fleming assisting in a meeting in his Burlington church. It was a great feast to be with brother Fleming and his good people. Surely the Burlington Christian Church is a spiritual church. I have never been among a kinder and a more religious people. The Lord has greatly blessed brother Fleming and his good church. We had a very good meeting. The church was revived. We had good congregations from the first service to the close of the series of meetings. Brother Fleming was not at all well during the meeting and I learned with much regret that he has not been so well since the meeting. May the Lord speedily strengthen him for his field of work and may he continually teach his people in the good way that he has taught them in the past. May the Lord bless his congregation and keep them spiritually minded. May the work continue to grow as it has grown in the past few years. If every minister will push his work as brother Fleming has pushed his it will not be long until we will have many strong city churches in this State and some stronger ones in other States. I shall remember my short stay in Burlington with a very great deal of pleasure. I enjoyed so much the sweet spirit of fellowship and the royal treatment that I received.

I began a meeting in the Raleigh Christian Church one week after Easter and closed same yesterday. I had no ministerial aid but was ably supported by some of my leading laymen. The meeting was a success in every way. We had hoped to see more souls brought to Christ. There were only a few converts but a splendid revival in the church. The attendance was larger than we expected. Many people thought that we ought not to close the meeting. I feel very happy over results. It has strengthened me very much and I know that the meeting has been a great blessing to the people. We are just now beginning to see success in our way. The Sunday-school has increased in membership and it keeps on growing. We had the largest number yesterday that we have had since Christmas. We expect an increase every Sunday until the first of July. If all the good members of the Christian Church who live in Raleigh will hurry up and join us we will soon have strength enough to make it interesting. I feel that almost all of the Christian families in the city will unite with us at some time during the year. I shall be very happy when all of them have their names on our church roll. Nearly all the families are already helping us in some way. We have a few here that have shown but very little interest if any in the work. We pray for them and visit them any way. We believe that the Lord will guide them in their thoughts and that it will not be long before they will come up to the House of God and help us. We will observe Memorial Day and will have Children's Day in June. We hope to have a great day on the Fourth of July, a Patriotic Service. We are looking forward to many interesting events this spring. We hope to hear favorable reports from all the churches that hold Memorial Services. Let the services be written up in full. L. F. Johnson.

After Many Days.

Third Sunday in April I was at Oakland, Mt. Zion and Hobson to fill the appointments at those places for Rev. I. W. Johnson. The day was a perfect one, and the congregations were good. In the early part of my ministry I preached at Oakland and later at Mt. Zion. The visit was pleasant and the associations of former years vividly recalled. As I called the names of those who used to greet me and worship there nearly all of them were absent. The congregation was almost entirely new to me and I felt somewhat like a tall tree looks in a large field.

Bro. Johnson is doing well and is popular with those people, but like many other preachers, is doing too much scattered work. I know by experience when a preacher has to travel so much and so far, he often injures his health, and cannot accomplish the good he desires. It will wear any man down prematurely. The preacher ought to have his work near together, and the churches to succeed well and get the best service from him must pay him a better salary. A church may just live and drag along in this way, but it never will succeed so well, nor do the work it ought. At 60 and 75 years when a preacher ought to be ripe and preach his best sermons from experience and observation, and the help of the divine Spirit, he is often too feeble to do so. When he has worn himself out in the service and has no means for his support to make his last years easy—he is sometime in a needy condition. It requires much more for a minister to live now than it did when Lorenzo Dow, the cosmopolitan preacher lived. He must present a good appearance to the people—he must have good sermons seasoned with the proper and popular flavor; he is expected to preach as well as any other preacher and to move in as good style and do as much work as any other preacher, and in order to do this he must be paid well. When he is tied up by a poor salary how can he preach and work to good advantage in such condition? Did not mean to take Bro. Johnson as a text. Doubtless he gets a good salary, but I took some of his churches as a starting point to express what I wanted to say on this subject, and what I say is for the general good. I am not pleading my own case. I can employ some one to do that if I need them, but I want all the preachers to be paid a good living salary. Some thoughtful, able ones among some of the churches pound their preachers with bags of silver and gold as a supplement and that makes the dear brothers smile at both corners of their mouths no doubt, and their members ought to do all they can to make them smile, and not forget to help them draw the heavy loads they sometime carry.

Am under special obligations to sister Wm. Newman for kind attention. Also to brother and sister Johnson of Hobson for delightful entertainment.

Lambert's Point, Va. Letter.

I have felt weak after week since I took charge of the work here that I ought to have a word in the "Sun" about our church and its doings at this place. As is known to many of our readers, at the earnest call of the church I took charge as its pastor Jan. 1st, 1909. I had served this church for about four years prior to this, and so felt, knowing me as they did, that the call must be of the Lord. Our Sunday-school Jan. 1st numbered about thirty and at the close of the quarter our enrollment was eighty-six. Our prayer meetings are well attended for us. The attendance ranging from twenty to forty. We have preaching morning and evening now and I think our average attendance will reach seventy. We have a very interesting choir made up of about twenty young men and ladies. Sister Rosa Holland is our church organist and is very faithful in the discharge of her duties. Miss Hattie Frisley is organist for the Sunday-school and does her work well for one of her short experience. Mrs. Hettie Newcomb is chorister, and she makes a good one. The prospects for our church at present are very bright. We are expecting to begin a series of meetings in about two weeks, at which time we are praying and looking for a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit. We must humbly ask that we be especially remembered by our brotherhood in their prayers.

Our Easter service was almost a perfect success. The young people and children acquitted themselves in a most commendable way. The house was crowded so that many had to seek a seat in the gallery. Though the congregation was very large we had almost perfect attention.

Our church is burdened beyond its capacity in supporting its pastor and providing for our church debt. Both, however, are being looked after admirably well. We desire to return thanks to Bros. J. E. West of Suffolk, Va., and Judge J. F. West of Waverly, Va., also to a friend of Suffolk, Va., who desired his name not to be mentioned for help in meeting a payment on our church debt April 1, 1909.

On the evening of April 19th, 1909, between thirty and forty of the members and friends of our church came to our house and gave us a very liberal pounding consisting of sugar, flour, coffee, postum, tea, starch, peaches, tomatoes, ham, pork, crackers, pound cake and other cakes and preserves. While they were with us we spent a most precious little season together around the family altar in prayer and songs of praise to our God for his blessings: No one but my heavenly Father knows how much we appreciate these tokens of their love and appreciation. I do not feel worthy, but I do feel thankful. I pray that the blessings of a loving heavenly Father may attend them through life.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL LEADER.

A Pen-Picture of Dr. F. N. Peloubet, Author of the Famous "Peloubet's Notes."

By Amos R. Wells.

What is the most successful book, from a business viewpoint, that America has produced?

It is not a novel, not even Sheldon's "In His Steps," of which probably seven million copies have been sold. That great sale was chiefly in exceedingly low-priced English editions that brought nothing to the author.

As I look at it, the palm belongs to a Sunday-school lesson commentary, Peloubet's "Notes."

In the aggregate, 1,500,000 copies of this book have been sold, and its annual sale is increasing rather than diminishing.

The remarkable feature of the achievement is that the work is an annual, and has been issued in successive volumes now for thirty-five years, more than a third of a century. I do not know of any book success that compares with it.

"Best sellers" have come and gone. School text-books are introduced, whole series of them, enjoy a brief popularity, and grow antiquated. Peloubet's "Notes" go on forever. No publishing venture except the Bible excels it in popularity, and it is about the Bible.

Now all this did not merely happen. There's a reason for it, lots of reasons; and the reasons are full of "pointers" for whoever would get on in the world.

One of these reasons is that Dr. Peloubet knows how to use other men's brains as well as his own. No one can go far, in this world and this century, on merely his own supply of gray matter. Dr. Peloubet has one of the largest private libraries in the country. He is all the time adding to it. He makes a card catalogue of press notices describing all the new books on the Bible, and gets every one that bears on the Sunday-school lessons for the coming year.

And his library is not for show, but for use. I wish you could see one of his books. It would be marked in the margin from preface to finis, and page after page would be riddled, as literal "extracts" have been made by Dr. Peloubet's scissors.

For the book that is under construction year after year in this literary workshop is by title and in reality "Select Notes on the Sunday-school Lessons." All men are wiser than any one man. Dr. Peloubet believes that, and gathers up in his pages the best and the brightest from hundreds of volumes. Nor does he ever forget the quotation-marks.

The industry and system with which all this is done are inspiring to witness. Dr. Peloubet is endlessly painstaking. He will wade through a library, or write half a dozen letters, or make as many interviews with college professors, all in order to hunt down a single fact. "I will go ten miles any day," I have often heard him say, "after a good illustration." And that is not hyperbole.

These are all qualifications that explain Dr. Peloubet's success, but there is another that comes very close to the heart of the matter; I mean his humility. There is no atom of the self-pusher about him. He is heartily liked by all the hundreds of rival workers in the same field. Wise and scholarly as he is, he is always, like Socrates, professing ignorance. He goes about buttonholing this learned man and that, asking fundamental questions, and getting at the truth of things. Shallow folks are likely to think that this procedure indicates a lack of knowledge. Wise folks see in it his wisdom.

"I am no genius, as you are," he often says to his assistant, with a sly twist to his mouth. "Whatever success I have gained has come from my being right on a level with common, ordinary folks, and so not firing over their heads."

Whatever one may say about his genius, this understanding of the average worker, this ability to put himself in his place and see what his difficulties and perplexities are, has contributed immensely to Dr. Peloubet's success, as it would contribute immensely to the success of a storekeeper, or a newspaper editor, or a President of the United States.

Another point: this seller of a million and a half is not a mere theorizer. He could never be a leader in the Sunday-school world unless he did the thing himself. He is the heart and soul of a model Sunday-school. It is in his home town of Auburndale, Massachusetts. It is housed in a beautiful set of rooms of Dr. Peloubet's contriving, large and cheery,—a general central space out of which open two tiers of class-rooms, eight in all, separated from the main room by glass partitions which can be thrown up. Below is the large primary department; also the kindergarten department.

As soon as Dr. Peloubet hears of a new wrinkle in Sunday-school methods, he must try it in his own beloved school. Sand maps, modelling, reference library, double blackboards, stereopticon, stereoscopes, all sorts of pictures,—whatever is going must come his way and be tested.

Of course he is a model teacher. I am not sure which draws his boys most closely to him, the candy he gives them, the parties and excursions to which he treats them, or the bright and sensible discussions of the lessons!

This is all of a piece with the lovable nature of the man. He lives with others and for them. His splendid study is the "sitting-room" of the house. Its windows, looking out upon the street, are always full of his well-loved flowers; and at night the curtains are always up, showing the cheery scenes within. How many jolly social gatherings and pleasant and profitable Sunday-school conferences that study has witnessed!

And so it is easy to see that Dr. Peloubet, though he is seven years past his threescore and ten, is still the youngest of us all. He jovially quotes the motto that was placed above Franklin's printing-press when it was exhibited in company with many presses of modern date:

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—The despatches give credit of three full-sized lions at three shots to Ex-President Roosevelt, now hunting in the "lion jungles" of Africa.

—A terrific wind storm swept portions of Ga., Ala. and Tenn. last Friday, killing between 50 and 100 persons and destroying immense property.

—Union church, at Union Ridge, N. C., is nearing completion and is a handsome and substantial structure. It is to be seated with circular oak pews of modern design and comfort.

—Prof. W. A. Harper, of the Elon College Faculty delivered the annual literary address at the closing of Kenley Academy last Saturday morning. Prof. Harper was once principal of this school.

—Rev. Thomas Dixon, Sr., of Shelby, N. C., sire of a distinguished family of great preachers died at the home of his daughter in Raleigh, N. C., Saturday, May 1, at the ripe age of ninety.

—The Sun's editor is to deliver a memorial address at Shallow Well Church, Jonesboro, N. C., next Saturday, May 8, and conduct a Memorial service at Wentworth, McCallers, N. C., Sunday, May 9th.

—Rev. J. W. Wellons assisted Pastor W. L. Wills in an all day service at Pleasant Ridge church, near Liberty, N. C., last Sunday. Bro. Wellons has stood the winter well, and is in better health and strength than usual at this season of the year.

—Brethren who are in arrears! We did not write those reminders and pay several dollars postage on them recently just for fun. We want all subscribers to continue to get The Sun but we cannot continue to send it to those a year in arrears. Please answer our reminder today.

—Just before going to press a telegram comes from Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., giving the glad and happy announcement that Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Suffolk, Va., will be at Columbus, Ga., next Sunday (May 8) to assist in the dedicatory services of the recently completed Highland Terrace Christian Church.—Second Christian Church of Columbus. This promises to be a happy occasion and one largely attended. Sun readers and their friends of Columbus and in reach thereof are cordially invited to be present and participate in these services.

—We are just in receipt of Modern Light Bearers, a book of 218 pages neatly bound in cloth and closely printed, edited by Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., Editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty. The book consists of the Addresses celebrating the centennial of Religious Journalism at Portsmouth, N. H., September 15-17, 1908. From the wide range of topics used, and the character and ability of the men whose names are on the index page we judge the book to be of much worth and significance. It is issued by The Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio. The frontispiece is the face of Elias Smith, June 17, 1769,—June 29, 1846, the founder of Religious Journalism. The covering of red, stamped with snow-white letters and bordering present an effect pleasing to the eye, and in fact the book shows every evidence of good workmanship of much merit.

—Congratulations thrice over again to South Norfolk and Rosemont churches, their good pastors and peoples. These two contiguous and wide awake churches have voted voluntarily to unite themselves into a pastorate and are on the outlook for a pastor for next conference year. Each church has appointed a committee of five to select the pastor. This seems to us a wise step and a most fortunate and happy arrangement. It will make the work in that thriving community more stable, and the two churches thus working together will give a minister good support and a fine field of labor and of usefulness. We do not know a community in which our cause has made finer progress the past five years than this, and there is even finer opportunity now for greater growth and influence. The one need now is the right man to take hold of this important post, and in this good work we sincerely trust the committees will be guided by the Holy Spirit.

—Editor Crowson of The News in our neighboring town of Burlington struck s'raight at the mark in a splendid editorial last week touching upon the subject of better houses of worship for the people of his town. So fitting, not only to his town, but to other towns and communities as well are his words that we submit some paragraphs, limited space only precluding the entire editorial:

"We are glad to note that there is a disposition among nearly every denomination in Burlington to improve their church building. There is not a church building in this city in keeping with the means, wealth and ability of the congregation. Perhaps with one or two exceptions, one of the saddest commentaries on the life of the Christian people of Burlington is the poor church buildings, that are behind the growth of the city. We are building new and handsome homes, new business houses, there is progress, improvement, and advancement everywhere, except when it comes to the places where we worship God, and right there the advancement seems to stop. A half dozen congregations are moving in the matter of new churches, but it is like pulling eye teeth to get down to practical work.

The nations, cities, communities and people that honor God, will be honored by Him. The earth and the fullness thereof and the cattle on a thousand hills are His and for as many denominations as there are in Burlington, there should be high spires reaching up from handsome buildings proclaiming to the world the love of the members and allegiance to God. He should be honored in His holy temple and these temples should be distinct, stand out and tower above all other buildings, as His greatness is above the greatness of any other.

When His followers get a sufficient amount of love and devotion in their hearts, then no building will be too good, or too grand in which to worship the Lord Jehovah. When this devotion becomes sincere the old buildings that are crumbling down are going to be replaced by new and modern ones."

Elon College Notes.

Mrs. Mary G. Reitzel, former matron of Elon College, and Miss Mildred Atkinson, who was graduated here last year, both of whom have been teaching at Boone, North Carolina, are visiting relatives and friends at Elon. They report a most successful year's work and are pleased with their field.

As an indication that we are nearing the end of another scholastic year comes the handing in of Junior election, Senior thesis, and representatives' addresses and commencement orations. By these signs we know we are approaching the end of the year. All are busy, most pupils are hopeful, and but few are home-sick or despondent.

May day was so rainy that the exercise which was to have been held was postponed till Monday, since this exercise was to be held out of doors. The Y. W. C. A., however, served ice cream, cake and candies in the halls in the afternoon, so the disappointment was not so acute.

Dr. Newman filled the college pulpit on Sunday. His discourse was a continuation of the study from the Psalms. The study of thought, the sublime conception, depicted therefrom is wonderful to contemplate. Prof. Lawrence led the Christian Endeavor, in which the delegates from the State Convention at Winston-Salem made their report.

This is the period of our annual municipal renovation, and like the sister towns of North Carolina, Elon College will hold its election for town officers. This is a duty no citizen should shirk, the voting for good men to control our local affairs. As you will it so will your town be.

Mr. Sylvester G. Rollings, class 1908, who has had charge of the Kenly High school has just closed a most successful year. We clip from the Raleigh News and Observer of Sunday, May 2:

"The board of directors of the Kenly high school met yesterday and arranged to build a dormitory for the school, sufficient to take care of the boarding pupils who attend this school. The main building is to be enlarged also, the school having outgrown itself.

The annual commencement and exercises of this school began today and will close tonight with the address by Prof. W. A. Harper, of Elon College, the Kenly Cornet Band furnishing the music. J. T. C.

NEWS ITEMS.

—More than 1,000 automobiles took part in the New York carnival parade May 3. The line was five miles long.

—Ten thousand refugees from Sicily, coming because of the destructive earthquake recently experienced there, landed in New York in one day recently.

—Thirteen Turkish officers and men were hanged publicly at Constantinople May 3, for mutiny. The bodies were left hanging in public places and were viewed by over a hundred thousand people.

—Abdul Hamid has been deposed and his brother proclaimed Sultan as Mehmed V, the new Sultan being 35th sovereign of Turkey, in male descent, of the House of Osman, founder of the empire. This is said to be the longest line of royalty by male descent in the annals of all history of any people.

—A Washington, D. C. correspondence to an exchange says that marriages between whites and blacks have become such an ordinary occurrence at the Capital that out-of-town negroes bring their white mates there to have the marriage ceremony performed, at least eight such marriages having occurred there recently.

—The recently deposed Sultan of Turkey will not be put on trial nor behind prison bars, but with his four wives, five daughters, two sons and servants, he has been taken from the Yidiz Palace and placed in a near-by house with walled grounds—and will be kept and guarded there. His brother now reigns in his stead.

—An exchange tells that a popular lecturer of Chicago recently put this question to his audience, How was the Bible invented? and undertook to answer it. I have somewhere seen it that a small boy being asked who made him replied "I grew." That Chicago lecturer may be answered in the language of the small boy, The Bible was not invented at all, it grew. It was given by the inspiration of God to good and holy men and the several parts took shape in their minds and hearts through many ages.

—General Booth, head of the Salvation Army celebrated his eightieth birthday April 10. He entered the ministry in 1852, became an evangelist in 1861, began his active work in behalf of London's outcasts in 1865, founded the Salvation Army in 1878. This Army had in 1908, 8,224 corps, circles and societies established in 54 countries and colonies with 21,186 officers and employees. There are 2,450 officers and cadets employed in social relief work. General Booth is a great character and has accomplished a most noble work.

—Count on the New Englanders when it comes to economy, unless the Westerner gets ahead of him now and then. A typical New Englander visiting a great packing house in Chicago and watching the process of killing and saving the hog said "he had been taught to save all of the hog but the 'squeal' but here in Chicago they save the squeal, too." But Boston is coming along, for the leading editorial in the Herald of April 19, said: "Black smoke is a waste as well as a nuisance. In the new steel capital of Gary, where economy and prevention of waste is the first principle of success, the smoke from the furnace stacks furnishes sufficient gas to supply all needed power for the plant. The pillar of smoke is the sign of industrial waste, rather than of profit-making activity. There is value in its blackness if properly utilized."

DO YOU WANT TO GO TO COLLEGE NEXT YEAR?

Then Here is Your Opportunity.

We want to help you: You can help us, and by so doing help your self.

READ OUR OFFERS.

To any young man or young woman, approved of good moral character and recommended by his or her pastor, sending us 300 new subscribers to The Christian Sun for one year at $1.50 each, by Sept. 1, 1909, we will give a scholarship in Elon College for the scholastic year of 1909, and 1910—one full school year. By doing the work you give the individual subscriber full value received for his $1.50 and he in turn helps you in a most estimable and worthy manner. You can ask your friends to help you in such a work as this—and they will be glad to help.

Further, If you work you shall not lose out. For, if you fail to get the required number we will give you a liberal cash reward on all work done. See your Pastor at once and ask him for a letter to send along with your own to us. Write today. No time to be lost.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN, ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

BUILDING UP TRUST.

Trustworthiness is contagious; and so is untrustworthiness. One of the surest ways to make others trustworthy, is to show them that we believe they are. This habitual trusting of others is also one of the surest ways to build up our own trustworthiness. And one of the surest ways to destroy the trustworthiness of ourselves and of others is to be constantly doubting others. Jesus, of all men who ever lived on earth the worthiest of complete trust, had and showed more confidence in the good of others than any man who ever lived. His very confidence in mankind has raised mankind to a higher standard of trustworthiness than the world had known before his day. If we would be trustworthy, and expect any one to count us trustworthy, we must believe in others and show that we believe in them. Unbelief injures others with ourselves.—S. S. Times.

SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

A LOOK FORWARD.

What do you think of that suggestion in this column, last week's Christian Sun, under the heading "A Look Forward?" Shall the ultimate purpose of this movement be as great an undertaking as the planting of Christian churches in the south-west states beyond the Mississippi? One brother suggests, that perhaps this ultimate purpose should be, to get all churches to bring up in full, every year, all their obligations to conference. Perhaps another brother has some other idea, and still another, still another idea. Let the approaching Convention have the benefit of all prayerful thinking as to the ultimate purpose of the movement. If you have an idea and cannot be at the Convention to make it known, let it be made known through this page of the Christian Sun or write it out and send it to the Convention to be read.

Pray for the Convention, that it may be open to the direction of the wisdom and spirit of God to direct.

The limit of time has been extended to May 20th, when names of delegates wanting entertainment should write Prof. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., chairman entertainment committee.

Letters were sent last week to all church secretaries asking that they bring the matter of appointing delegates to the Young People's Convention, May 29-31, to the attention of the young people's organizations, Sunday-schools, Christian Endeavor societies and Young People's Missionary Societies, or other young people's religious organizations—in their respective churches. Delegates have already been appointed in some churches. Let no church that has an organization of young people fail to appoint delegates. In all Sunday-school conventions, where the Executive Committees have not taken up the matter of appointing delegates, it is the duty of every Sunday-school to appoint its own delegates—one for every 25 members.

I find that ministers, whose reports to conference show up best, are taking hold of the Young People's Movement and are shoving forward. These are the ministers who are seeing to it that delegates in their churches are appointed to the May Convention.

—See Notice on page 11.

FROM REV. E. M. CARTER.

I like the plan for the organization of the young people. If we would look about us a moment, for an example as to its need, we could see it at the first glance. The reason some of our churches have no Sunday-schools now is, because we have no one to take hold, and go ahead with the work. Hence it is a decided fact, in my mind that we need the Convention. How shall we make it a success? If it is left with these committees (Y. P. S., C. E. and S. S.) it cannot succeed. But the entire convention must help.

As I think over the matter this thought comes very forcefully to my heart: "God needs men." And the men who have wrought most for Him are those whom God has trained. Moses, when he was trained to see the need of his people and to find his place in "the work" was the means of saving his people. Nehemiah, by night, rode around the walls of Jerusalem, counted the cost of rebuilding and fortifying them against his enemies. Then he called his people together, submitted his plans, and, as leader, carried the great work to completion. The church needs the good men who are filled with the Holy Ghost as leader to meet in council. Who knows but that this Convention may be a school through which there may be developed many latent talents to do greater service for our King.

I did not begin this as an argument, to convince, for I took it for granted that there was none left to oppose. I am glad that we are to hold a convention as an agency to build up, and to help both the individual and the church. Certainly one thing that has hindered the progress of the church is, that in many places it has been in the hands of the untrained. Let us give to every child his birthright,—a well organized young people's movement.

Success to the Young People's Convention,
E. M. Carter.
Chipley, Ga., R. F. D. 3.

NOTICE, ELECT DELEGATES.

The pastors and superintendents within the bounds of the Eastern Va. Christian S. S. Convention are requested to see that each Sunday-school and C. E. Society elect delegates to the Young People's Convention which has been called to meet at Elon College May 29-31, 1909. The Executive Committee has not appointed delegates, as the committee expects that each Sunday-school and society can elect those best suited to attend. If pastors and superintendents have not received the report of the Ex. Com., this notice is to urge upon each Sunday-school and C. E. society to elect delegates at the earliest date possible, and insist that those elected attend. We feel that this is a great opportunity for helping our young people.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MAY 16, 1909.

A Few Suggestions.

Paul at Iconium and Lystra.

Acts 14:8-22.

Golden Text:—All the gods of the nations are idols; but the Lord made the heavens. Psalm 96:5.

Review.—Review the previous lesson thoroughly; bring out its facts and its spiritual teachings—examine the note books; have one read, or parts from several read in succession.

Intervening Events.—These are contained in Acts 13:47-3., assigned last time, which should now be called for, and in Acts 14:1-7, which should also now be called for.

Incidental Instruction.—We do not know what the speech of Lycaonians was: certainly they understood Greek, in which language Paul had been preaching to them. But he did not understand their language, else he would have stopped their design to honor Barnabas and himself with sacrifices before it assumed such ominous proportions. Explain in regard to Jupiter and Mercurius, and show why Paul was regarded as Mercury and Barnabas as Juppiter. It will be well also to explain the manner and the significance of the rending of the clothes among oriental people.

Geographical.—Be sure to locate intelligently Iconium, Lystra, Derbe, Antioch, Pisidia, and Lycaonia, the last two being provinces. Explain enough about them to fix them; have the pupils put them on their maps; explain that Lystra is the first wholly pagan city to which the gospel was carried, there being no synagogue there.

The Lesson.—This lesson divides into four parts, which write on the board as the topical outline, as it is developed in the teaching.

1. Attention through a Miracle, verses 8-10. Find at what place the missionaries were, who sat there, the man's condition, whom he heard speak, what Paul perceived in regard to the man, what command he gave the man, how, why, what happened. Here call for assigned work on Peter's healing of the lame man. Acts 3:1-13.

2. Worshipped, then Stoned, verses 11-19. Find the effect of this miracle on the people, in what language they spoke, what they said, whom they called Barnabas, whom they called Paul, why, what the priest of Juppiter was preparing to do, what Paul and Barnabas did when they understood this, what they said to the people, how they were themselves like the people, what the burden of their gospel was, the extent of God's handiwork, what permission he had granted nations before this, what witness he had left, the result of these words over the people, who came from Iconium and Antioch, what was done to Paul, where he was thrown out. Here call for assigned work on Acts 7:54-8:3 and on 2 Cor. 11:25 and 2 Tim. 3:11.

3. Successful work at Derbe, verses 20-27 (first clause). Find who stood around Paul, what he did, whether he came, where he and Barnabas went the next day, what they did in the city.

4. Confining the Disciples, verses 21 (last clause) and 22. Find to what city the apostles now returned, what they did on this visit, what message in regard to tribulation they carried them. Here call for assigned work on what New Testament teaches, regarding tribulation from Matt. 13:21; 24:21; John 16:33; Rom. 2:9; 5:3-5; Hebrews 12:11; Rev. 1:9; 2:9; 7:4.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

Class Discussion.—Did Paul and Barnabas do right in the firm stand which they took against the idolatry of the Lyeonians or would a compromising course have been better? Apply this principle to intoxicants and cards—was Paul really dead and was he roused in response to prayer?

Truths and their Application.—1. The vanity of popular favor is well brought out in the lesson, as in the case of the Saviour, the crowd which welcomed him to the city also cried, "Crucify him," so in Paul's case the man who would offer him divine adulation are the ones who stone him and cast him out of their city like a dead dog. The fickleness of popular favorites a matter of universal experience. Hence the folly of catering to popular favor.

2. The care of young converts is plainly taught as a Christian duty of greatest importance. It is harder to instruct a convert than to make one and to do so successfully is one of the highest guarantees of fitness for leadership in Christ's kingdom. Paul not only made converts, but he confirmed this faith and exhorted them to live acceptable lives. Better not have great revivals if the new converts are to relapse into sin because they are not properly shepherded in the new fold.

3. "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men," said the idolatrous

Lystrians. In this sentiment they but voiced the universal expectation of the race, the belief in an incarnation. An incarnation is necessary to bridge the gulf that separates the infinite and the finite. That this gulf should be bridged has been the universal desire of all men. It was bridged forever when the "Word was made flesh and dwelt among us."

4. How bold Paul and Barnabas were! Leaving Antioch they go to Iconium, from thence to Lystra, being stoned there they go to Derbe, whence Paul could easily have gone to his old home in Cilicia but he retraced his footsteps in the face of almost certain death and visited the new-born brethren. The religion of Jesus Christ always emboldens for His service.

Personal Preparation. (Continued.)

Having seen that the Holy Spirit is the only Worker (John 3:5); that the Saviour solved the problem of how best to fit His disciples for the Holy Spirit to work through them, by leading them to become filled with the Spirit (Luke 24:49, Acts 1:8 and 2:4) whereupon 3000 were converted at the first sermon (Acts 2:41); and Dr. Torrey having pointed out the steps by which each of us may obtain the Holy Spirit in personal experience, and how to retain Him; we have come in the Next Step to

II. How to Profit by the Great Helper; In The Inner Life.

Being filled with the Holy Spirit does not make one immediately perfect,—does not mean the immediate attainment of absolute perfection, though it is a long step towards it. A moment's reflection will show this. Matt. 5:48. R. V. "Ye therefore shall be perfect, as your Heavenly Father is perfect." That is perfection. What man is that? Paul himself did not claim to be that. Phil. 3:12, R. V., "Not that I have already obtained, or am already made perfect." But he does say, 1 Cor. 4:4, R. V., "I know nothing against myself." His own conscience did not condemn him. And this is already a great deal.

The Holy Spirit is the "Helper" John 14:16. R. R. "I will pray the Father, and He shall give you another (Comforter) Helper" (see marginal Greek).

When one is filled with the Holy Spirit, one is, as Mr. Campbell Morgan puts it, in the right condition for growth.

And in what ways is He to help us to grow?

To "His disciples" (Matt. 5:1,2) Jesus taught love's acts and conduct under the varying demands of life, in the Sermon on the Mount, Matt. chaps. 5, 6 and 7.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit." (Matt. 5:3)

"Blessed are the meek." (v. 5)

"Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness;" (v. 6)

"Blessed are the merciful;" (v. 7)

"Blessed are the pure in heart;" (v. 8)

"Love your enemies." (v. 44) etc.

These are the Laws of the Kingdom, which Jesus gave His disciples to live by. The first thing for us to do is to learn to live by these laws. Without the Holy Spirit, we can make almost no progress in any of these, but with His help, progress may be made.

To this End,

(a) Each Sunday take up consecutively a fresh beatitude, and spend a couple of hours in ascertaining, from the Bible, exactly what is meant by it. Thus, ascertain exactly what is "Poverty of Spirit." Is it pride, haughtiness, arrogance, or is it their opposite, defined in Matt. 11:29? And so with "Meekness," etc. Is meekness the same as patience—or is it the same as keeping one's temper down? If not, what is it?

Next consider how that quality would lead you to live, how it would alter your nature and conduct, and your outlook on life and the world.

(b) Each morning pray God to put into you that quality,—such as poverty of spirit—after you have ascertained what it is, and what changes it would mean in your life,—and to cleanse you from just the opposite qualities, i. e. pride, conceit, etc.

Stumbling.

(c) As you find in daily life that you stumble in trying to live out this, or

DECIDING FOR CHRIST.

The very glory of our Christian religion is that it calls for decision. Pontius Pilate is not the only man asked and compelled to decide. What shall I do with Jesus, the Christ? Since that day, and before, every one who has heard the gospel story has been brought face to face with that same decision.

And not once, but over and over and over. No one decides for Christ at once, back yonder at the hour of conversion, and then stops. In all the events and issues of life that same question comes, and the same decision is called for. What shall I do with Christ.

Now the body of Christ with us is the Church. In this Christ lives and moves in the world for the redemption of man and the salvation of souls. He who assails and insults the Church assails Christ. The Church is His institution. He founded it. He is its Head, He its body. What will you do with the Church? Will you be indifferent, unconcerned, cold-hearted, stiff necked? So will you be, so are you also to Christ.

The mob cried, "Crucify Him! crucify Him." Will you be one of that mob? What will you do with Christ? What will you do with the Church?

BEGINNING THE WORK.

Not what we achieve, but what we set on foot, marks the majesty and the might of every man. This life is too short to see the fruition and fulfillment of any great task. All great men have been content to do their work and leave results to the future and to God.

David was not allowed to build a temple to the honor and glory of God. He contented himself in preparing the way. He welded a people together into a nation and fixed their affections on things divine. The matter of building a house he could well leave to another.

John the Baptist was not the Messiah and never claimed to be. He was content to spend his days in the wilderness given to the noble task of making the Master's way straight and possible. And of the men born of woman there is none greater than John, we are told authentically.

As the ages go by the world sees more and more how great and wise and able a man was Paul. He looms large upon the horizon, not so much for what he brought to pass as for what he made possible. The few churches he established have fallen away and crumbled. But those he made possible multiply in number, and increase in power, and in influence, every day. He did his work and left results with God.

John Wesley and James O'Kelly grow larger with increasing years. The results of their labors do but now begin to appear. Their good souls have gone on to glory, but their great works, only begun by themselves while in the flesh, remain with us, and we see and reap the benefits thereof.

Moody is a greater man today than when he was translated. Then his work had hardly begun. The increasing years reveal the wonderful wisdom of this good and great man.

We shall not worry and fret that we do not easily come to results. If we labor together with God, as is our privilege, He will surely bring it to pass, and the future will reveal the fruition of every task done in His name, His strength and for His glory.

That we do not finish the work is not of our ordering. That is with God. That we help to make His path straight is a sufficient task and ample encouragement to any man.

CHRIST AND THE MAN.

Governments, philosophic and scientific systems will one day recognize that Jesus the Christ went to the source and foundation of purification and of cleansing when He appealed to the man and not to the multitude. Lord Christ's work was always with the man. He regenerated, not Society, but the Individual. He reformed, not governments, but persons. He found the unit of human society and dealt with that.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright eminent sociologist and government employee and expert makes this notable utterance and admission in his book, Some Ethical Phases of the Labor Problem:

"It (religion) is putting its hand upon the government and upon all the integral elements of government. It is influencing the individual units of society, so that by their development and by their culture the government itself shall be as pure as its source—a long struggle to be sure; but religion and sociology as allied forces, or, as a better expression, religion as a force in determining sociological work, is bringing about the regeneration."

This regenerative work Christ began with the man. He was the first to discover the true and real worth of the individual.

Economists, teachers, philosophers might have labored all the endless centuries to awaken and reform the governments of the far East, but their efforts would have been fruitless. The regeneration in the far East is due to the efforts of the faithful missionary who has taught and labored with the individual there.

Let the church attend to the regeneration of the man. Our Saviour's interest was centered here. And He knew and did best. The secret of moral reform lies in the work of personal regeneration.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

The first Convention of Young People of the Southern Christian Convention is to be held at Elon College May 29-31. Prof. Lawrence has been telling Sun readers of this meeting in every issue now for many weeks. In fact the sixth page of this paper is given to Young People's Work.

Every Sunday-school, every Christian Endeavor Society, every Young People's Missionary Society should have a representative in this Convention.

It is a pity that we waste as we do the moral and spiritual energy of our young people in the churches. Can there not be some plan adopted whereby this energy may be conserved and put to the Master's use? Our young men and young women are willing enough. This Convention wants to mark the way.

It is a new thing with us. Our last Southern Convention provided and prepared the way for it. Much depends upon this first meeting. A polity is to be shaped, and plans laid for the future. There should be a full attendance from all schools, and societies, one delegate to every twenty-five members. Let this be borne in mind for no more important meeting has been called among us. See to it that the young people of the churches foregather here May 29-31.

—There were eighteen funerals in one village of Giles Co., Tenn., May 2, as result of the terrible storm of Friday.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

I have read of the "thirty years war," or the war of the "Roses;" and I have heard married people say: "We have been married thirty years and never had a cross word." I have been married thirty years and am still living. We celebrated our thirtieth marriage anniversary yesterday, April 30th, and these thirty years have neither been years of "war" nor exempt from "cross-words." Dr. D. A. Long says "to think is to differ," and my idea is that he is right, when his statement is applied to married people. We have never had a fight. My wife thinks it would not sound well for a preacher and his wife to fight, and I have a sneaking feeling that it is not brave to fight a woman. I think we have done fairly well to live together for thirty years, when so many "prominent" people have parted. It is too late in life now to part and, by reasonable inference, we will remain together "till death do us part."

We just had a plain, country dinner yesterday with only the family present. The family consists of mother-in-law, Mrs. Rebecca Pearce, in her 87; wife whose age is omitted for feminine reasons; Bessie, now Mrs. Thos. F. Cheatham; Annie, and Willie, the three children; and hired man, Isaac Williams. I was present also, and enjoyed the day, although a fragment of the great southern storm struck us. I enjoyed my dinner more than I did thirty years ago and my wife is in better health, if not so good looking. The girls are all through college and are facing the future hopefully.

I could not get my wife an automobile, so I concluded to give her an autoseat new buggy. The truth is the old buggy was so nearly worn out that my "folks" were ashamed to ride in it and I had to get a new one. Women, you know, are ashamed of old things, except the "old man;" if they are ashamed of him, they say nothing about it; and it is delightful to have people omit the unpleasant things that some people take pains to say. Altogether our thirtieth anniversary was quiet, pleasant, and full of memories. It was an occasion for thanksgiving for God's mercies to us in these years that have carried so many into the beyond. Our children are all living and all in the church; our own health is better than when we started; we have experienced more sweet than bitter; religion has been our largest asset in life and our comfort in trial; and these thirty years have been thirty streams pouring good into our souls. This world is not a "howling wilderness," but a concert hall filled with music most of which is rich with sentiments of love. The hot fires of human experience burn out the dross of earlier years, and bring out the purer gold of purpose and consecration. Life-purposes change as much as human faces in thirty years. The abutments of this span of thirty years rest, one on the 19th and the other on the 29th century. We have lived in the best years of all the ages, except the years of the future for our children. The arts and the sciences have passed from theories into facts, and religion has passed from emotion to devotion, from saying to doing, conserving all that was best in the past and adding all that is best in the new advancement. Sweeter than the air of spring, now loaded with the fragrance of new flowers, is the air now crowded with consecration and self-surrender to the use of the kingdom of God. We enter upon the fourth decade of our married life amid the golden days of Christian civilization, inspired by experiences that have proved the reality of the Christian life to us and to many who have entered into sweet rest.

By invitation of brother M. W. Joyner of Suffolk I went with him, his wife and son and other friends to Burdette, Va., on Monday, April 26th, to the celebration of the 87th birthday of his father, Elisha Joyner. Instead of a house-dinner, his children and grandchildren gathered on the bank of the Blackwater River and spread a good meal in the woods. It is good fishing ground here and the old man was in his boat when we arrived; but the river was too full for fishing. His son had caught some fish in a trap and the sumptuous dinner was enjoyed by all. Bro. E. Joyner is the father of 9 children; 6 living, 3 dead; 45 grandchildren, 34 living, 11 dead; 11 great grandchildren, 7 living, 4 dead; in all, 65, 47 living and 18 dead. He was married to his present wife, who was Miss Sallie Later, March 12, 1888. He is in good health and enjoyed the good dinner as much as any of us. Dr. Thomas H. Barnes, Geo. Lawshe, and Mrs. J. M. Lilliston of Suffolk were also guests that day of brother Joyner. We returned on the Tidewater train at 3:30 p. m., full of a good day. W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

A social event of more than usual interest to many readers of the Sun occurred Wednesday of April 28th, at 5:30 o'clock at the home of deacon and Mrs. Samuel A. Etheredge of the Memorial Christian Temple, when Mr. John Watson Lewis led to the marriage altar their daughter, Eva Bernice.

The interior of the residence was decorated with palms and cut flowers in honor of the event. Preceding the marriage rite Mr. Mordant Etheredge sang "O Promise Me." The Rev. C. C. Ryan in a very impressive manner spoke the words that made them husband and wife, using the ring ceremony. The wedding march was played by Miss Margaret Brickhouse. The bride wore a going away gown of blue cloth with hat and gloves to match and carried a Testament.

Miss Ethleen Haggard filled the roll of maid of honor. She was attired in a white silk directoire gown, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations. The best man was Mr. Mordant Etheredge, brother of the bride, and the ring bearer was little Miss Bulah Maude Etheredge, the bride's niece.

Following were the ushers: Messrs. D. Fentress and W. P. Ballance. At the conclusion of the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lewis left on the Old Dominion steamer for a bridal trip to New York, Niagara, Thousand Island and other places of interest. After their return about the 10th inst. they will be at home at 124 Brown Ave., Brambleton.

The groom is a traveling salesman representing the wholesale drug Co. of Martin and Gray. He numbers his friends by his acquaintances. The bride as Miss Eva, was known and loved by a large circle of friends. In an attempt to describe her, I might use many terms, commonly used in describing the charms of a bride, such as the "Beautiful and accomplished daughter," etc., which I could truthfully employ, but I desire to use a stronger term, one that to my mind means more than anything else and takes in all the others: she is a good, true Christian woman.

The popularity of both is attested by the large number of beautiful and handsome presents received—being more than a hundred. The groom's present to the bride was a handsome piano.

That their way may be one of sunshine and flowers, with just enough clouds to cause a glorious sunset, is the wish of the writer. J. W. Manning.

—It is not known yet (the returns are not all in) how many wives the late Sultan of Turkey had in his harem, but forty-five carriages carrying two to three wives each drove from the harem May 2nd and fifteen carriages with a similar number each carried the remainder May 3rd. Several had already gone to the new home of the deposed Sultan. Out of all this number, however, by agreement with the Young Turks, the deposed Sultan must confine himself to eleven wives only.

My Dear Children and Friends:

You see our report is much smaller than it was last week but we will not grumble for of course we could not expect $1,000 oftener than once a month. My, how we wish another big check would come in the next month! See to it, dear co-workers, that you do your part. The small amounts coming in regularly once a month have been largely the means by which we are supported.

The nice box of oranges sent by Mr. T. E. Brickhouse of Norfolk, Va., last week to the Orphanage was very much enjoyed and highly appreciated. This is not the first time this friend has so kindly remembered our children in this way. Little Baird West of Waverly, Va. also sends, this week, some old Sunday-school cards with which the children will enjoy playing and studying.

On April 26th, was plucked our first ripe strawberry. We hope to give the children strawberries and cream for dinner before many days.

With love and best wishes to all,
Fondly yours,      Uncle Jim.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We have often heard there are two bad pay masters, one that pays in advance and one that never pays. The weeks pass so swiftly and we keep so busy at school that it is hard for us to think to send our dues in promptly. Enclosed you will find one dollar, our dues for March, April, May, June and July.

Lovingly,

Clarence and Addie Newman.

Well, children, we will not consider you poor pay masters, when you send a great big dollar like this in advance.

Elon College Junior Society.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here we come with our dues for this month. I hope you'll excuse our short letter. We send 70 cents., our dues for this month.

Annie Laurie Wicker, Treas.

Glad to get your offering little folks. You have done well this year.

Dear Cousins:

Here we are with our April money. All we little folks from the Orphanage went to the picnic at the school house last Tuesday. My, what a good dinner we had! The teachers were so nice and kind and furnished splendid pineapple sherbet for the whole crowd. Guess there were about 100 people. Nice talks were made by Dr. W. S. Long and others, and if it had not rained we children would have had a fine afternoon playing. Your loving cousins,

"HONEY" AT THE 'PHONE.

"Honey's" mamma had gone to market, leaving her home with nurse. Nurse was upstairs making beds, while little Honey, with her hands behind her, was trudging about the sitting-room looking for something to do.

There was a 'phone in the house which was a great mystery to Honey when it first came. She could hear voices talking back to mamma, yet could not see a person. Was some one hidden away in the horn her mother put to her ear, or was it in the machine itself?

Honey never failed to be on hand when the bell rang, and found that her mother generally talked to her best and dearest friends, ladies that were such frequent callers that Honey knew them all by name.

Her mamma wrote down the names of her friends with the number of their 'phones, and, because the child was so inquisitive about it, she very carefully explained to her just how the whole thing worked, never thinking that Honey would sometime try it for herself; indeed, for a while she satisfied herself by playing 'phone.

She would roll up a piece of paper and call out through it: "Hullo!" asking and answering all the questions.

One day, on finding herself alone, she took down the receiver and tried to talk to one of her mamma's friends, but it was all a failure.

She watched mamma still more closely after that, and, on this particular morning, while mamma was at market, she tried again, commencing with the first number on her mamma's list.

Taking down the receiver, she called out, "Hullo!" Then soon came the answer back "Hullo!"

"I wants A-125," said Honey, holding the receiver to her ear.

"Yes," came the reply.

"Are you Miss Samor?" asked Honey.

"Yes," was the reply.

"We wants you to come to our house to-night to supper, mamma and me."

"Who's mamma and me?" asked the voice.

"Honey," was the reply.

"Honey, through the 'phone, eh?" laughed the voice. "Tell your mamma I will come with pleasure."

Honey was not only delighted, but greatly excited.

She used every name on her mother's list, inviting them all to supper.

About four o'clock P. M. the guests began to arrive, much to "Honey's" mama's amazement and consternation, especially when they divested themselves of their wraps, and proceeded to make themselves comfortable.

What could it mean? She would think she was having a surprise party if everyone had not come empty-handed. Perhaps it was a joke on her. If so, they would find she was as game as they.

There wasn't enough in the house to feed all that crowd, but she had the 'phone, and she fairly made the orders fly for a while.

When her husband came home from his office, he was surprised to find the parlors filled with company.

While helping the guests to the second plate of chicken, turning to his wife, he said: "Why, this is a sort of surprise, isn't it?"

Honey's mamma's face flamed, and she looked right down at her nose without saying a word.

"Why didn't you tell me you were going to invite them, and I would have brought home some flowers?" said Honey's papa.

Honey, who sat right next to her papa, resplendent in a white dress and flowing curls, clutched his sleeve, and said "It's my party, papa. I wited 'em frew the 'phone. Honey likes to have cean coes on, and have comp'iy."

It was the visitors' turn now to blush, but Honey's papa and mamma laughed so uproariously that it made them feel that it was all right even if Honey had sent out the invitations.

Not one went home without extending an invitation to her host and hostess to another dinner or supper, and in every one Honey was included.

"Just what she wanted, the little monkey," said her papa, as he tossed her up in his arms and kissed her. Then turning to his wife, he said: "Never mind, mother, she will learn better as she grows older."—Sunday School Times.

(Begun on page seven.)

any other of these divine qualities, note what occasions cause you to stumble, and the next morning all to your prayer, that God will grant you this quality under the especial circumstances which caused you to stumble. Thus,—to illustrate by the second beatitude, meekness,—that He will make you meek "under vexatious delays,"—if these have caused irritation to arise in your heart,— "under injustice," etc, etc. Every morning repeat this addition with your prayer for meekness, and add to it each fresh cause of stumbling you have found. Gradually you will find you will stumble less and less hard under these particular circumstances.

Don't be discouraged if this list grows to be a very long one. That only shows how greatly we need His help. Don't let a morning pass without going carefully, and with your heart, over the whole list,—ever bearing in mind that

"To say my prayers is not to pray,

"Unless I mean the things I say."

The next Sunday take up the next beatitude, and so on.

After finishing the beatitudes, take up the next subject, whether contained in a single verse or in a number, and deal with it the same way.

Thus go through the entire 5th, 6th and 7th chapters of Matthew, and as you study each subject, add to your daily morning prayer.

And after thus going through these chapters several times, subject by subject, go through them backward, that is, take up the last subject first, beginning with Matt. 7:24.

Growth.

1st. If we daily, yielding ourselves absolutely and entirely to His will, ask our Father for a fresh filling of the Holy Spirit, and then, from our hearts, ask Him to cleanse us from pride, and in its place to give us poverty of spirit; from anger and temper and in its place give us meekness and especially under vexatious delay to make us meek and sweet and loving, and under injustice, etc., etc.; from impurity, and in its place to give us purity; from hate, dislike, grudges, and to fill our hearts with love, and so on right through the 5th, 6th and 7th chapters of Matthew; and if we also strive to exercise these graces in daily life, He will gradually (or suddenly, as the case may be) give us these, and we shall begin to bear some fruit. Ex. 36:25,26, "From all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you and a new spirit will I put within you, and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh." John 8:36,

R. V., "If therefore the Son shall make you free,"—from bondage of sin,— "ye shall be free indeed." John 15:7, R. V., "If ye abide in me"—that is, "keep my commandments" (v. 10)— "and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you." But we must not be discouraged, if this is not done immediately. Christ did not say "immediately." He said "if ye abide"—i. e. continue to keep my commandments, "it shall be done unto you." He knows the best time and the right time. Perhaps too, we may not be "abiding" in Him.

I have known these promises to be fulfilled immediately in regard to a large part of one thing, gradually in regard to some other, and after a very long delay a beginning made in regard to a third, in the same person.

What Else.

2nd. Each morning ask Him to have His own way with you.

3rd. Each morning ask Him to show you the Saviour in all His loveliness and to change you into His likeness. John 16:14, "He shall receive of mine, and show it unto you."

And each morning at your morning watch, after you have thus prayed, take time to gaze into the face of the Master, as the Holy Spirit shall reveal Him unto you.

"Have you and I today
Stood silent as with Christ apart from joy or fray
Of life, to see by faith His face;
To look if but a moment at his grace,
And grow by brief companionship more like Him?"

"Then One drew near with the brooding eyes,
That are homes of love unpriced."

This brings us to How to profit by the Great Helper B. in our work.—Contributed.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR MAY 9, 1909.*Paul at Antioch in Pisidia.

Acts 13:13-52.

Golden Text.—Through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins, Acts 13:38.

Time.—Immediately after the close of last lesson; probably summer of A. D. 46 or 47. July according to Professor Ramsay.

Place.—Antioch in Pisidia, Asia Minor.

It was probably in July that Paul, Barnabas, John Mark and perhaps others, set sail from Paphos on Cypress to the mainland of Asia Minor, and reached Perga, the seaport of Pamphylia on the lowlands of the coast. There is nothing of interest to record of Paul's stay at Perga. He did not remain long. No preaching there is recorded. Either the inhabitants had taken refuge in the highlands or Paul himself was taken sick there and compelled to go away.

The journey from Perga to Antioch of Pisidia was up rugged and dangerous passes. Paul encountered the perils of robbers of which he himself speaks.

Antioch.

"The situation of Antioch" says a modern traveller "is on an isolated rock, rising in the centre of the mouth of the valley of the Mosynus, and commanding a view of that of the Meander, is worthy of the ancient Greeks; but the ruins, now covering and undermining its summit, are quite inferior. The site of the town is covered with huge blocks of marble. The first ruin is an oblong building consisting of an inner and outer wall. The outer wall was built of rough blocks of limestone, four feet thick. The length is about one hundred and eighty feet; the breadth sixty. The buildings now are in ruins. The ruins exhibit some very skillful masonry. The arches are nearly perfect. The stones are without cement and of mossy dimensions."

It was to this city that Paul came and at first preaches in the synagogue of the Jews. His sermon in brief outline was:

1. Text:—Jesus is the promised Messiah of the Jews.

2. Argument:—(1) In your past history, you see the plans of God unfolding for his kingdom.

(2) The kingdom was established in the house of David.

(3) The promise of the everlasting kingdom was to the house of David. so acute.

Jesus, a descendant of David is the promised Saviour and Messiah.

Objection Answered.—But Jesus died, slain by the rulers of Jerusalem. Yes, but God raised him from the dead, and he is a living Saviour.

Application.—Here is the forgiveness of sins, the way of salvation, "Believe on him or you must perish."

After Meeting.—At the close of the service the apostles went out before the congregation was dismissed and many followed and were persuaded to continue in the grace of God. These meetings brought to them a new vision of God's grace. It was not now confined to the Jews, but the gates of the city of God were seen to be on every side and flung wide open with a welcome to every race, every nation, every condition of men, to all who would receive it by repentance and faith.

Through jealousy the Jews in most instances, were much opposed to this preaching. The more the opposition the firmer became the apostles. Many Gentiles were converted. These preachers were expelled from the city, yet the apostles who went and the Christians who remained were filled with joy. That is the kind of religion to possess. A religion of gloom, of asceticism, may be sincere and solid, but it wants the abounding strength, the rich consolation, the glorious attractiveness of a religious joy.

The other day a crowd of students from a college that advertises Christian education entered a car with their baseball equipment, in the usual boisterous, noisy manner that characterizes most of the ball teams. This effort to make themselves conspicuous in a crowded car wouldn't have been so bad, if they had left off the oaths and "cuss words" in the presence of ladies. If there's anything elevating or refining in the average baseball game we have never seen much evidence of it, and a baseball team from a college of Christian education does not, as a rule, make the Christian part very impressive.—Marshall Home.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

It has pleased almighty God in his wise providence to take from our midst our Bro. James M. Wells out of this tabernacle in the flesh. While we mourn his departure we humbly bow to His divine will, knowing He doeth all things well.

In his death the widow has lost a good and kind companion, the children a kind, loving and indulgent father, the people a true and good neighbor and the church a true and consistent member.

We the undersigned knew Bro. Wells for many years and he was ever found at his post of duty as to his religious affiliations.

The Golden Fleece lodge of Masons has lost one of its oldest and truest members.

Be it resolved; That a copy of these resolutions be sent to one of our county papers, a copy to the Christian Sun, his church paper, for publication, a copy be sent to the bereaved family and be spread upon the minutes of our lodge.

John B. Yarbrough,
W. A. Hinton,

Committee.

(Begun on page three.)

"Once I was young and spry

As any of my name;

Now I am old and slow,

But I get there just the same."

As a matter of fact, though his hair is silvered, the adjective "slow" does not apply to him; but the last line certainly does. He is more enterprising by far than most of the young men of my acquaintance. He will post off anywhere, at any time, to see a well-appointed Sunday-school or interview a man worth talking with.

Just now he is interested in getting a set of public-library books for the Sunday-school library. Next week it will be something else, but as good.

This youthfulness of temper goes with a willingness to make changes. Many old men (and not a few young ones) render progress impossible for themselves because they lose the power of adaptation. They get "fixed in their ways," as a bowlder is fixed in its way, or a rotten stump.

There have been changes in the Sunday-school world of recent years, and some of the changes have been almost revolutionary. But Dr. Peloubet has revolved with the revolution. He seems to rejoice in a chance to do things differently, and that is a success-manufacturing quality.

Back of all this work, it is interesting to know, was a godly home, in which the Bible was constantly read and studied by all the members of the household.

Through it all, as well, runs a missionary purpose. Dr. Peloubet at one time definitely decided to go as a missionary to India, and made much progress in learning the Tamil language. Circumstances prevented this, fortunately for the world, since his Sunday-school annual has been a missionary force greater than any life spent on the mission field could possibly be. The many thousands of copies that Dr. Peloubet has given the missionaries, and the constant use of the book as the basis of Sunday-school commentaries in the native languages of all mission lands, make up through these thirty-five years an enormous total of influence.

So we must guard against thinking of Dr. Peloubet's work as merely secular money-making, largely successful as it has been on that side. The author of this "best seller" for more than a third of a century has given away far more of his earnings than he has laid by for old age, is merely comfortably well off, and has always been the most liberal of Christian stewards. Success in "the King's business" has been the supreme desire of his life.

The centre of it all is the fact that Dr. Peloubet not only "has" religion, but he practises it. He lives his creed. Wherever his body may be, his soul is in the sunshine on the mountain-tops of faith.

Every summer he goes to the literal mountains. With big boxes of books and a supply of ink and paper he betakes himself, with his beautiful family, to his pleasant cottage at Waterville in the White Mountains. When he comes back he seems to bring with him the freshness and serenity of the hills.

But I think he would have them anyway, though he dwelt all the year in the lowlands.—C. E. World.

LOST HIS FAITH IN GOD.

A small boy, new to the Sunday-school, was greatly pleased with his picture card and its text, "Have Faith in God." On the homeward way, however, the precious possession slipped from his fingers and fluttered from the open street car and immediately a cry of distress arose. "Oh, I've lost my 'Faith in God!' Stop the car! Please stop the car!" The good-natured conductor signaled, and the card was regained amid the smiles of the passengers. One of them said something about "the blessed innocence of childhood," but a more thoughtful voice answered: "There would be many truer and happier lives if only we older ones were wise enough to call a halt when we find ourselves rushing ahead on some road where we are in danger of leaving our faith in God behind us."—Ex.

—A New York paper says there are now in Sing Sing Prison, that State, 1,953 convicts crowded into 1,200 cells, which cells average three feet six inches by six feet six inches floor space.

THE MAJORITY ARE TRUE.

In these days of religious liberalism, there are many genuine Christians who are alarmed at the spread of skeptical sentiments among those who have been under better influences. It is feared that the enemies of a sound faith are becoming more numerous than the true ones are. The liberals are making great claims, and we are governed by their proclamation. We must suppose that most Christian people have given up the conservative doctrines, and now belong to the liberal class. But, while it is true that skepticism, in the garb of piety, is apparently increasing rapidly, it is also evident that the vast majority of professing Christians are still true to orthodox doctrine, and therefore are loyal to the inspired Bible. Evangelist L. W. Mamball, who has had a long experience in revival work, and who is a staunch believer in all true Bible teaching, says: "There is so much said against the Bible by people who are supposed to believe in the Bible. They stand in the pulpits, and occupy teachers' chairs in church schools, and what they say in criticising the Bible gets into the newspapers and is widely read. I have traveled many thousand miles in my day; I have united with people all over the world; I have kept my eyes and ears open, and my humble judgment is that nine-tenths of the body of the church membership, and nine-tenths of the ministry of the church, are orthodox, and sound in their views concerning the Scriptures; but these other folks make such a noise that you would think that the Bible is just ready for burial!" This statement is assuring to the friends of Bible truth. It is pleasing to know that the great majority of professed Christians remain loyal to God's cause. And yet it is the duty of the true ones to warn people against the false teachings of men who pose as the friends of the Bible, and claim to be loyal to Christ. We must expose their damnable heresies, and put our young people on guard against them. The true ones are to be the steadfast defenders of Bible truth.

Wetherbe.

MY ENDEAVOR.

By J. H. Tewksbury.

To be joyous in my work, moderate in my pleasures, chary in my confidence, faithful in my friendships; to be energetic but not excitable, enthusiastic but not fanatical, loyal to the truth as I see it but ever open-minded to the newer light; to discourage shams and rejoice in all that is beautiful and true; to do my work and live my life so that neither shall require defense or apology; to honor no one simply because rich or famous, and despise no one because humble or poor; to be gentle and considerate toward the weak, respectful yet self-respecting toward the great, courteous to all, obsequious to none; to seek wisdom from great books and inspiration from good men; to invigorate my mind with noble thoughts as I do my body with sunshine and fresh air; to prize all sweet human friendships and seek to make at least one home happy; to have charity for the erring, sympathy for the sorrowing, cheer for the despondent; to be indifferent to none, helpful to some, friendly with all; to leave the world a little better off because of me; and to leave it, when I must, bravely and cheerfully, with faith in God and good will to all my fellow-men—in Nashville Christian Advocate.

WORKING GIRLS AS WIVES.

College education seems to insure reduction of progeny among college-bred fathers and mothers. Not two-thirds of the men graduates have children. Not fifty per cent of the girl graduates ever wed. Those who become wives seldom or never bring large families of children into the world.

In this dilemma President Mary E. Wooley, head of Mount Holyoke college, a Massachusetts institution, acknowledged to be one of the leading girls' colleges of the English-speaking world, comes to the rescue with the admission that working girls make better wives than college graduates or girls reared in idleness.

The working girl appreciates the difference between housework at her own convenience and toil for a fixed number of hours six days a week in store, office or factory under orders from some one else. The college graduate or the girl reared in idleness condemns her husband to life in apartment houses because she thinks housework a burden.

The working girl wife is seldom seen in the divorce court. She does not taunt her husband with his inadequate income or moan because she has fewer dresses than her father used to provide.

She leaves recrimination and divorce to wives who read novels and primp while their mothers did the housework.

The business girl makes housekeeping a business, and her home is a success. She is a helpmeet and not a drawback, and the man who weds her may well consider himself in luck. Such is Miss Wooley's high opinion of the class of young women to whom we must look for the mothers of the next generation.—Chicago Journal.

MISSING THE POINT.

It is often a positive duty to cultivate an incapacity to see and to hear. For there is such a thing as seeing and hearing a great deal too much; and we make ourselves and others miserable when we do this. There are unkind things, for example, said to us or about us, evidences of others' dislike or antagonism, or—what is harder to bear—their indifference to us, or their desire to smother or humiliate us; and when any of these things come within our range of sight or hearing, we are very likely to devote ourselves to them with disagreeable intensity. That is because self-wounded, suffering, indignant, or angry self—is allowed to take control of us just then and give back "as good as we got,"—which always means worse than we got. Then follow bitterness and heart-burning indeed. The only safe way at such a time is to strive to be blind or deaf. Self must be roughly treated to accomplish this; crushed, ignored, trampled under foot, killed. Only when we ourselves thus treat self can we learn the art of not seeing and not hearing; to be so indifferent to the word or act that hurts, that an onlooker would suppose, if watching our face, that we had quite missed the point of what was said or done. The self-mastery that will not see or hear an affront is possible only to one who is Christ-mastered. All enemies are helpless against one who thus insists on missing the point—S. S. Times.

—The consciousness of duty performed gives us music at midnight.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Patriotism.—We little reckon how strong the tie of patriotism is. The patriotic sentiment is so deep-seated, so thoroughly fundamental with the Anglo-saxon races in particular that we little reckon its worth.

That which President Gomez, of the new Cuban Republic fears most is, that his people are not sufficiently patriotic to maintain, and keep inviolate their republican form of government. He declares that the Spanish-American races seem afflicted with a fatal inability "to work together for the common good." He warns Cubans to beware of this tendency to rebel against everything wearing the badge of discipline. In Cuba, we are told, the public treasury is "regarded as the prey of the strongest, and access to it is fought for almost with the desperation of freebooters." All of which betokens lack of deep seated and far reaching patriotism. And unless the Cubans can engender and develop this spirit of genuine, unselfish patriotism, there is indeed little hope for the new republic. There can be no sound and stable government where the spirit of patriotism is lacking.

A Slump In Business.—The Tumbler business is in a hard way. The manager of The Huntington (W. Va.) Tumbler Company declares that his factories will have to shut down for lack of orders. This particular company has $45,000 worth of manufactured tumblers on hand and the demand has almost ceased. Many other Tumbler factories have already shut down, and others yet are to follow. In brief there has been a tremendous slump in the tumbler business. What a pity.

The cause of the slump? Why, the temperance wave that has swept over Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, Kansas, Oklahoma, North Carolina, Alabama and other States, "has so diminished the demand for glassware of the tumbler variety" that the manufactories are tied up, have closed down "until a better state of affairs"—so they declare. What a pity! what a pity! We respectfully submit to these tumbler manufactories that they turn their capital and their energies to other industries. There is a slump in the tumbler industry.

The Genius of Hard Work.—If one will read "Mark Twain's" books, page after page, one will decide that here is a genius. His sentences are free and easy, his language choice and chaste, his sense of humor boundless and overflowing. One just glides over those pages. They seem to have flowed off from the author's pen as easily and as naturally as a gurgling stream flows down hill.

Will it jar one to be told that the genius of Mark Twain consists in his ability to do hard, persistent, painstaking work, and that every one of these smooth flowing sentences has been wrought out in toil, effort, sacrifice and labor? Sometimes these smooth pages are the result of a dozen writings, we are told. Mark Twain has the genius of hard work.

We used to be told that Grover Cleveland went fishing too often, and duck-hunting, to work hard or accomplish much. Grover Cleveland was, in all probability the very hardest working President the White House ever had. His biographer tells us that his regular hours were from 9 of the morning till 2 at night, though very often he was still at his desk and hard at work when the sun rose.

His state papers were wrought out in the deep hours when Washington and the great country were in sleep. And as sure as time goes by it will be known that G. Cleveland was one of the ablest and most efficient chief executives that ever labored and wrought at the White House.

There may be some natural born, pure and easy geniuses; but those that history tells us about as becoming great and useful were those who had the genius of hard work. God helps him who helps himself.

Fighting The Fly.—The gospel has begun at Jerusalem and is to spread outward, this gospel of destruction to the house fly. It has begun none too early for these contemptible little pests have carried off their tens of thousands of human lives. The spirits of our departed dead call for revenge and the house fly is to go. It is to be a deadly and desperate combat. Health Officer Woodward of the national capital has instituted the campaign and the line is to go out through all the land.

These swarming millions of germ carrying flies are a nuisance, and there is no excuse for their being. Physicians and scientists are agreed that the house fly is bred and born of filth, dirt and death, and are the medium of exchange and communication between these bad elements and the human system. Clean up the premises, screen the doors and windows and bar out or clean out these death laden, germ carrying pests. Prof. G. E. Beyer has written Officer Woodward: "The house fly, the dirty fly, the typhoid and cholera infantum fly will soon swarm in thousands of millions, unless precautions are taken. The house fly, which we were taught in our childhood to treat with kindness, has been exposed. Its habits are filthy. It breeds in stalls and garbage pails and carries the filth it revels in, and tracks it across the sugar, the butter and the beefsteak. It paddles its horrid feet, gummed with the vilest rotten matter, in baby's milk. It probably disseminates every disease. It must be exterminated. It can be driven out of every city. In an age of knowledge, screens and cheap disinfectants there is no excuse for flies in any household. Clean up your premises, get rid of breeding places of flies and you will get rid of the flies.

—What Patten, the wheta king of Chicago, did for flour recently was enough. Besides making a take-off for himself estimated at $5,000,000 he forced an increase of more than 25 per cent in the value of flour, decreased the size of bread loaves one-fourth and increased the price of bread 25 per cent. Secretary of Agriculture, Wilson, declares there is no shortage of wheat and that there is a corner, and Patten declares Wilson's assertion is "the joke of the country."

—Sir Thomas Lipton, the gallant and popular English sportsman declares he is busy building other boats and will, at an early date, challenge the American cup owners.

FROM THE FIELD.

Waverly.

The services at Waverly, Sunday morning, May 2nd, were much enjoyed. The music was exceedingly delightful, and the sermon preached by Rev. J. O. Cox, was a very fruitful discourse on "Decision for Christ," and was much enjoyed.

Since the dedication of this church last fall, the people have not ceased to give and work. Besides making contributions to outside demands, a little more work has been done at home. A wide granolithic walk has been built from the church entry to the pavement; the grounds have been filled in and leveled for a lawn; the "Acorn" Bible class, by the assistance of the school, has purchased a new "Whitney" piano; and the Ladies' Aid Society has done many little things to beautify and protect the house of worship, and is now working on the problem of purchasing a new organ which is very much needed. In the Sunday-school a Cradle Roll and Home Department have been organized and are on the way to success. In general the church is in a most delightful condition. To the Lord be all the glory and the praise.

Columbus, Ga. Letter.

The third Sunday in April we began a series of meetings at our North Highlands church, this city. Rev. B. F. Young of Lanett, Ala., came to our assistance on Monday and remained with us until Friday before the first Sunday of May. We continued the services until Sunday night, the second of this month. From the beginning of these meetings a deep interest was manifested by the church. This interest seemed to grow more intense as the meeting progressed. Much time was given to meditation and prayer, preparatory to these services and, as a result, a revival came to the church. Bro. Young preached sound gospel truth presenting it with power. Because of these meetings we feel that the church is much stronger in spiritual things, which means that we may look forward to more aggressive work for the salvation of the lost. Six members were added to the church.

Next Sunday, May 9th, we begin our meeting at Girard. We expect Rev. G. D. Hunt, of Truett, Ala., to assist us in these services. With Bro. Hunt in the pulpit, strong, logical gospel sermons may be expected. We are praying that the Holy Spirit may direct us in these services.

Ex-Governor Glenn, of N. C., is scheduled to deliver his famous address, "Our Country" at the first Presbyterian church here, Thursday night, May 6th. A rare privilege is before the people of this city.

Today, carpenters and plasterers are busy finishing the new Christian church which Rev. H. W. Elder has striven so earnestly and heroically to erect. Before this appears in print, the first service will have been held in this church. May the month is the day set for this service. Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., is to be with Bro. Elder that day to preach morning and evening. Watch the Christian Sun for a cut of the new building and a "write-up" of next Sunday's services at the Waverly Terrace Christian Church of Columbus, Ga.

Hines Chapel Christian Church.

The Annual Memorial Services of Hines Chapel Christian church will be conducted on Saturday before the first Sunday in June, beginning at 10 o'clock, dinner, and an afternoon service. All members of this congregation are requested to be present and take part in the exercises.

The revival meeting will begin on the first Sunday in August. 3rd quarterly conference will be held on Saturday before the first Sunday in August at 2 o'clock and we would like to see every member of the church present at that time for our annual reunion.

On last Sunday the entire conference assessments were raised by subscriptions and cash collections, and $52.00 in cash on the new church building fund. The membership is urged to pay as promptly and liberally as possible toward the church building fund, so that a much needed new church may soon be erected to the honor and glory of God.

W. C. Wicker, Pastor.

May 3, 1909.

NOTICE.

The Sunday-schools of the Ga. and Ala. conference will take notice that the Sunday-school Convention will meet with the Girard church the second Sunday in June, instead of the fifth Sunday in May. Let all superintendents inform their schools of the change. Elect your delegates right soon and be sure that you elect those who will attend. We can make the convention a success and we ought to do it. Let every school in the conference do its part and a successful convention will be the result. The program will appear in the Christian Sun. Look for it and see if your name appears. If so, be prepared to discuss the subject assigned you.

ORGANIZATION AND HISTORY OF CENTERVILLE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

Centerville Christian Church is located in Prince Geo. Co., near Disputanta, near the N. & W. R. R. The original building is now about 75 years old. It was first a Methodist church for many years. In the eighties of the last century, Rev. A. B. Warrick, then pastor of Disputanta Circuit, wished to transfer the Centerville membership to Trinity of Disputanta and close this point. As a result the church ceased. A part of the membership transferred to Trinity, but the remaining part "began to be moved with indignation" and withdrew from all church relations for a season. The house was sold to the school trustees of that district and for the period of a few years it was used for educational purposes. But in the year 1835 a sentiment prevailed among the people to reorganize as one independent body and unite with the Christian Church. This seemed to be a little fresh outbreak of free thought, liberty of conscience, which is the dominant feature of the Christian Church.

On Oct 18th, 1835, they came together with Rev. M. W. Butler, then of Waverly, now of Newport News, as their leader and organized under the Charter, government and principles of the Christian Church, and united with the Eastern Virginia Conference.

They who signed the agreement were as follows: E. H. Gordon, Mary E. Gordon, A. T. Hatch, Mary F. Hatch, Lula A. Hatch, J. T. Livesay, James E. Morris, Elizabeth Morris, Jno. T. Morris, Mariah Morris, W. W. Moss, J. T. Simmons, Rose T. Simmons, W. E. Bain, Indiana Bain, Jos. A. Bishop, and Georgiana Bishop.

The house was again purchased from the school trustees and immediately they began to worship here. Since that date we have been in continuous service. The following brethren have served as pastors:

Rev. M. W. Butler, 1839-90; Rev. J. W. Barrett, 90-91; Rev. M. W. Butler, 91-92; Rev. N. G. Newman, 92-93; Rev. M. W. Butler, 93-94; Rev. R. Charnock, 94-95. Rev. Mills Barrett was called for the year 95-96, but preached only one sermon. Rev. W. J. Laine was sent in his place. In a few months he died. Rev. C. C. Peel was then sent and was pastor for the unexpired time. Rev. J. W. Harrell, 96-1902; Rev. W. D. Harward, 02-03; Rev. R. H. Peel, 93-04.

The present pastor succeeded Brother Peel from the fall of 1903 to the present time, a period of five years and six months.

The Sunday School.

Following the organization of the church in the year 1886, E. H. Gordon organized the Sunday-school. This school has been kept evergreen the most of the time. Bro. Gordon was Supt. for seven years in succession. Succeeding him the following Supts. have presided: G. W. Bain, 1897-1900; E. G. Gordon, 1900-1902; W. H. Morris, 1902-1906; G. W. Bain, 1906-1909 who is at present serving.

During this period of twenty-four years, the church has had its struggles and its victories, and by no means has been without her defeats, but her defeats have been only in proportion to her unbelief. Its membership has consisted of ladies more than 50 per cent, and the male members of the church have been limited in means, by reason of which they have been handicapped in keeping up repairs, paying large salaries and contributing in large sums to benevolence. But we remember that Jesus Christ chose the poor to be his disciples,—to drink of the cup he drank of,—and to be baptized with the baptism wherewith He was baptized;—He chose the weak to confound the strong and the mighty. As a church we have not found our poverty a handicap to piety, nor an impediment in the way of the Lord in our midst. Most of the members are Godly members,—even in the community, from neighbor to neighbor, there is a breath of righteousness and piety which makes association sweet; and a pastor finds delight in preaching to and mingling with such people. The sting of regret within his bosom is all the keener when multitudinous duties prevent the full satisfaction of this pleasure.

Regarding Benevolence: Centerville Church perhaps comes as near her duty as any other. She responds most liberally to every call and, considering proportional strength, she much outstrips her sister churches, who, we may say, are not ashamed of their contributions.

God has been here all the time, and the people have been conscious of Him. A revival can be had most any time the people come together. Our older members well remember the glorious days of revival in the past and the quiet peace of every service. Many of them live in distant communities to-day but find delight in visiting old Centerville once more and attending service there. But this is not all. Our young people, too, of today can tell you of the joy and the happiness of Centerville Church.

For the past five years the membership has increased as many as forty which would make a total enrollment of seventy-five. But many have died, and some have withdrawn, and others have moved

We have now built a larger, and a more attractive house of worship. The need of repairs and extensions has been in evidence for many years. We have prayed and talked over the matter much. Two things have developed in our favor which have made this extension possible; viz., the timber on the lot and the contributions of friends. The timber on the lot has supplied the lumber for the building. The contribution of friends has been of an unusual nature. The amount of money received from every source has been $180.00 and the expense of building has been about sixty more. One carpenter was employed as foreman and the balance of the mechanical construction has been done by the voluntary contribution of members and friends who have given their days, from a half day to twenty and more; who have given their hands, their hammer and their saw to the construction and completion of this church which reduced the cash cost of the building to the minimum $240.00.

I want to take the opportunity here, on behalf of the church, to thank every one, member or friend, who has contributed anything either in money or time, for so befriending and assisting in the work.

May the Lord bless thee and keep thee,
May the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee,

And give thee peace.

H. E. Rountree, Pastor.

A HOUSE MOVING IN PORTO RICO.

One of the conveniences in Porto Rico that people in the States know but little about is the facility of moving houses. Sometimes a house is moved from one part of the city to the other and indeed sometimes from one town to its adjoining "barrio" and even to another town.

There are men in a city like Ponce who give their entire time to moving old houses and setting them up on other sites in good condition.

The necessity for moving houses is very easily explained. There are a great many people who can afford to build a small house but cannot buy a lot. Therefore in order to reduce their rents, they build a house and place it on a rented lot for which they pay fifty cents or one dollar per month. It may be only a short time till the owner of the lot needs the ground for other purposes, or the owner of the house prefers his home in another neighborhood, then there must be a house-moving. By the use of jack screws the house is lifted to two or three feet from the ground and blocked up often without moving all the articles of furniture.

The house-mover has a cart somewhat on the plan of a wagon with four low wheels and axles just a little longer than the house is wide. A pair of wheels is placed under either end of the house, it is then lowered onto the axles which have a strong, heavy coupling made of hard native wood. Two or four yoke of oxen are used in drawing the horse to the selected site. Sometimes the house is so wide that it cannot be drawn through the wider streets and it becomes necessary to remove telephone, electric lights, and telegraph wires.

Last Wednesday as I walked through the district in Ponce where our Secretary said would be a most excellent site for our Ponce church, I saw a little house which had been built on a very beautiful lot, all blocked up and ready to be moved. It occurred to me that that would be a fine location for the church that we believe we are soon to build in Ponce. But I was on some other errand at the time and the church site passed out of my mind.

After having read in The Sun Dr. Manning's second or third appeal for our church building in Ponce and feeling sure that success is his, I felt impressed Saturday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock to go to this lot where I saw the house blocked up. I went immediately to the spot. The first thing that impressed me was that the house-mover had done his part in clearing the lot, the second was that the owner had done his part in placing a sign "Lot for Sale." I walked over the lot and judged it to be a most excellent site. I inquired of an old man who lived nearby, who the owner was, he told me. I lost no time in seeking the owner. Arriving at his house I found him to be the French Consul. On inquiry I learned that the lot was for sale at $1.25 per yard. There are 1504 square yards. This gentleman has promised to hold the lot until we have heard from the Mission Board. We believe the Board will buy.

To us it has been a comforting thought that while Dr. Manning is working to raise the money for building, the opportunity for purchasing a lot on which to build seems to have presented itself.

D. P. Barrett.

Ponce, Porto Rico, April 27, 1909.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—The Street Railways of Richmond, Va., were bought up by the Gould syndicate May 3, the price paid being $8,100,000.

—President Roosevelt bagged two more large lions May 4, this making to that date five lions and one lioness to fall before his steel.

—Papers seized at the Turkish imperial palace show that the late Sultan, Abdul Hamid, had $5,000,000 on deposit in foreign banks.

—Rev. M. L. Bryant has received several additions to the Main St. Christian Church, Berkeley, Va., as a result of his recent series of meetings.

—October 12 has been made a legal holiday by statute law in New York and in New Jersey. This is Columbus Day. But where is this legal holiday business going to stop?

—Augusta Evans Wilson, the well-known southern novelist, died at her home in Mobile, Ala., May 9, in her 74th year. Among her productions are St. Elmo, Inez, Beulah, At the Mercy of Titinius, etc.

—James H. Boyle, and his wife, Helen Boyle have been convicted for kidnaping little Willie Whitta, Mercer, Pa., some weeks since, and sentenced, the former for life, the latter for 25 years, in the penitentiary.

—It is estimated that the output of automobiles for the present year in this country will reach one hundred and twenty-five million dollars. There are a hundred and fifty-three factories operating on a large scale. The value of these plants is $300,000,000.

—Ex-President Roosevelt has killed a rhinoceros, among the other fifteen varieties of game already taken. Forty-five skins of wild animals have already been prepared, May 10, as a result of this expedition, for the Smithsonian Institute.

—We learn with regret that Russell Klapp, eldest son of Rev. S. B. Klapp, Greensboro, N. C., is ill with typhoid fever at Bartow, Fla., to which place Russell had gone working under the auspices of the State Historical Association of Florida.

—President Taft has appointed to the eastern N. C. federal judgeship, H. G. Connor, a Justice of Supreme Court of this State. This appointment has been under advisement for many weeks and has given President Taft no small amount of concern. Judge Connor is a Democrat, politically. The position is for life.

—Cuba is starting in a bad way. The House of the Legislature has a bill, sure of enactment it is declared, to create a national lottery. A few days since this same House passed a resolution requesting the Senate's speedy action on the House bill legalizing cock-fighting.

—Rev. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., writes: "Annual Memorial day was observed at Holy Neck Sunday, May 4, and we had a pleasant day. The address by W. J. Kendrick, Editor of the Suffolk Herald was a beautiful production and delighted the large audience. There was special music by the choir. Visitors were present from Suffolk, Franklin, Norfolk, and other places."

—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, declares, in a published statement, that the present price of wheat is fictitious, and not warranted by natural conditions. He points out that the wheat crop of 1908 was 31,000,000 bushels greater than the crop of 1907! and that on March 1st, there were in the hands of farmers 142,000,000 bushels. The speculators, it is alleged, are largely to blame—or, to the one who has wheat to sell, to bless.

—The Lexington, N. C. Dispatch celebrated its twenty-seventh anniversary last week, and enters its 28th volume full of power, push and promise. No wonder it has the largest subscription list of any county weekly in the State. The merit, and vim of its management deserve every whit of the liberal and enthusiastic patronage that it enjoys. Editor Varner is not only a splendid fellow and everywhere popular, but he is an editor and business manager who makes a paper readable and desirable. Heartly congratulations, Bro. Varner.

—If any pastor knows a worthy young man, or young woman, who wants to go to Elon College next year but has not the means, will he call attention to our offer elsewhere of a few scholarships defraying the entire expense while at Elon College? We regard this as one of the best offers The Sun has ever made, and one that worthy young men and women can well afford to work for. The persons working for these scholarships must be recommended by their pastor as we will not make the offer to one who is not believed to be well worthy. This is done at tremendous sacrifice on our part and we want to help only the worthy and deserving. Read our proposition on page 5, and write us for receipt book, particulars, etc. Begin work now, and by September you can easily earn enough in this way to pay your expenses in Elon College for all of next year. Do you know any thing else you can engage in at which you can save that much in that time? We make the offer and some deserving boys and girls are going to be in Elon College next year at our expense. Watch and see.

—The editor was with Pastor J. W. Patton in his memorial service at Shallow Well church, Jonesboro, last Saturday. An immense audience was present. There were services in forenoon, abundant dinner for all, and services in the afternoon. Flowers were profuse and the graves were liberally decorated. The following program was carried out: Song service by the choir. Devotional exercises by the Pastor. Song. Welcome address by Bro. J. B. Watson. Song. Address by J. O. Atkinson. Song. Decoration of Graves by the children. Dinner. Afternoon. Song service by the choir. Report of Cemetery Agent, Mr. J. Walter Kelly. Song. Address: "The Tie that Binds" by Mr. L. H. Gibbons. Song service. Benediction by the Pastor.

The feature of the exercises was the singing which was edifying and uplifting indeed. A male quartet sang several selections that would have done justice to any occasion however elaborate. It was a pleasant day profitably spent.

Cuba Libre.—Cuba is not free yet. With its present tendency it is likely to be a far call to Cuba Libre. The Horse of its Legislature has before it a bill, sure of enactment we are told, creating a national lottery. This is a scheme to raise revenue, that which the Government now stands in dire need of. A few days since the House sent a resolution to the Senate requesting speedy action on the House bill legalizing cock-fighting. The repeal of General Wood's military order prohibiting bull-fights is under discussion by the Cuban Congress. "Cuba needs revenue and can get much money by licensing bull-fighting," it is argued.

The United States went in and freed Cubans from Spanish misrule and oppression. Our Government went in again and established a Republic to free Cubans from their own greed and oppression. And with present tendencies some government will have to free Cuba from its own ruin. For a nation of gamblers will not, and cannot abide. The Lord God has ordained otherwise.

Elon College Notes.

Sunday-school officers have been elected for the next scholastic year as follows: Superintendent, Prof. W. P. Lawrence; Asst. Superintendent, J. W. Barrett, Secretary, A. L. Lincoln; Asst. Secretary, W. W. Elder, Treasurer, Miss Carrie Boyd; Organist, Miss Virgie Holland; Asst. organist, Miss Macey Farm-er.

Dr. Moffitt gave the student body an excellent lay sermon Sunday. His discourse was inspiring to young men and women seeking for the best and brightest life. These efforts by our laymen are productive of great good. The student sees the high ideal placed before him by others than the minister of the gospel.

The Bulletin of Elon College—1909 (Catalogue Number is out. It has been largely rewritten and contains much new matter. The old one contained seventy-three pages, the new one has ninety-four, besides the covers. Prospective students should examine closely the Catalogue for it is for the information of those interested that it is gotten out.

Professor Kernolle has been in Richmond, Virginia, for a day or two looking after the bringing from the press his new book, which was mentioned in these notes a short time ago. Advanced subscriptions indicate that the book will meet a merited and substantial sale.

It is with pleasure we announce that Gen. Julian S. Carr, of Durham, N. C., will deliver the orators' and essayists' medals at the approaching commencement. Gen. Carr is a friend to education throughout the State, and he has been especially kind to Elon and we welcome him on this occasion for we know in him we have a tried and true friend.

Mrs. W. Z. Atkinson of Cardenas, N. C., has been a visitor and spent Saturday and Sunday with relatives and friends here.

Mr. R. S. Petty, of Greensboro, was at Elon for a short while Sunday. It would bind all our brethren more closely together if they would only visit more frequently.

Memorial service was held on Sunday at Shallow Ford. Several of our young people attended. Prof. Harper delivered an address in the morning. Bro. W. L. Wells preached in the afternoon.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Rev. J. W. Harrell of Portsmouth and Rev. N. G. Newman of Holland exchanged pulpits Sunday. In the afternoon we had the pleasure of hearing Bro. Newman in a splendid address on the subject of "Character Building" at the meeting for men at the Portsmouth Y. M. C. A.

Our Portsmouth brethren voted Sunday night to begin on their new church building as soon as arrangements can be perfected. They are a hard working, sacrificing band and have undertaken with all prospects of success, a great work.

The Third Church Sunday-school had decided, as it was already using the "Birthday Bank" for the Orphanage, to take a special collection for the Porto Rico Church building fund and had set apart Sunday as the time for it. And it responded to the opportunity nobly, the amount of the subscription being $150.00. I am sure it would gladden and encourage the hearts of all who have the cause of the Porto Rico work at heart if they could only see some of the letters I am constantly receiving now. Here are extracts from a few of them:

"Will do all I can and send results to Dr. Bishop." "Have been taking the birthday offering, this is the third year. . . . School voted to use it again in Porto Rico." "Pastor put the matter before the congregation last Sabbath and it was voted that we prepare a box and contribute to the fund. May God strengthen your hands and also all others who forward this good work." "I will do all I can with the Sunday-school and C. E. Society. Hoping that with our united efforts you may soon see a church in Ponce." "The matter of building a church in Ponce was presented to the Sunday-school and a vote to adopt the plan was unanimous." "After giving the matter prayerful consideration I have decided to pledge $5.00 for the work myself and also to lay the matter before our Sunday-school."

If time and space permitted I could give you others. I have had a few letters saying they could do nothing, but in every case it was only the opinion of the individual and not of the school, the schools not being given an opportunity.

I do not believe there is a school amongst our brotherhood in which a majority of the school would vote against the plan in its entirety as suggested in my letter that I sent out.

I would suggest to all schools that contemplate a special collection for this work that it be taken as soon as possible so that it may give encouragement in, and impetus to the work.

Rev. C. C. Ryan of the Temple reports a splendid day Sunday. The largest morning congregation at a regular service, since he has been there. Received seven members at the evening service.

Bro. Thompson at the Third Church in the morning preached a good sermon on the subject of Mothers, this being "Mother's Day." At night he preached to the largest congregation that has been present at a regular service since he has been with us. Rev. H. W. Elder of Richland, Ga., is expected Monday, 17th, to assist the pastor in revival services at the Third Church. We are praying for and expecting a good meeting.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DEPARTMENT
—of the—
SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVEN-
TION.

W. P. Lawrence, Editor, Elon College.

CONSTITUTION OF YOUNG PEOP-LE'S CONVENTION.

Preamble.

Whereas, the Southern Christian Convention, in regular session in the City of Greensboro, N. C., April 26, 1908, authorized the co-operation of the Committees of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor and the Sunday-school in calling a convention of the young people of the Southern Christian Convention, for the study of the best methods for aggressive Christian work among the young people of the Christian Church, the said Committees met at Elon College, N. C., January 21, 1909, pursuant to a call issued by the Chairmen of the respective committees, and adopted the following constitution (subject to the approval of the Executive Committee of said Convention and afterwards of the Young People's Convention, for the conduct of said body.)

Constitution.

Sec. 1. NAME: This organization shall be a part of the Southern Christian Convention and shall be known as the Young People's Department of that body.

Sec. 2. PURPOSE: Its purpose shall be to promote the social, intellectual, and religious life of the church membership, especially among the young people.

Sec. 3. The Representative of this Department shall be a Board of 15 members (five of whom shall constitute a working board) appointed at the next session of the Southern Convention and biennially thereafter, provided, that the present Sunday-school and Christian Endeavor Committees be constituted said board until the next regular meeting of the Southern Christian Convention.

Sec. 4. The Department shall have as its exponent a biennial convention, the first session to be held at Elon College, May 29-31, 1909, and the other sessions biennially thereafter.

Sec. 5. The membership of the convention shall consist of delegates elected, (1) by the various Sunday School Conventions within the bounds of the Southern Convention on the basis of one delegate for every 25 members or fraction thereof, (2) from Young People's Societies of whatever name working under an organized church, on the basis of one delegate for every 25 members, (3) all regularly ordained ministers of the Christian Church, South, and the members of the board shall be ex-officio members of the Convention.

Sec. 6. The Convention hereinbefore provided for shall have the following Departments: Sunday-school, Christian Endeavor, Missions, Moral and Civic Life.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MAY 23.

A Few Suggestions.

The Council at Jerusalem.

Acts 15:5; 22-29.

Golden Text:—We believe that through the grace of the Lord Jesus Christ we shall be saved even as they. Acts 15:11.

Review.—Review the previous lesson thoroughly as well as the full first missionary journey of Paul. Call for assigned work on the spread of the church among those not Jews from Acts 14:23-28, Acts 10:1-48, Acts chapters 11, 12, 13, and 14. Call for the note books. Have one read.

Intervening Events.—The intervening events are found in Acts 14:23-28, assigned last time, for which call under this head.

Chronological and Geographical.—The events narrated in this lesson came some time after the return from the first missionary journey—in the year 49. Some think this was Paul's third, others think his second trip to Jerusalem after his conversion. It will be well to trace his journey, accompanied by the brethren, to Seleucia, thence through Phoenicia and Samaria to Jerusalem. You will note that Galilee is not mentioned: this makes it likely that the journey extended southward along the coast, through the cities of Sidon and Tyre and on to Phoenicia, thence across the plain of Esdraelon into Samaria, thence southward to Jerusalem. Trace this route on the map or draw it on the board.

Incidental Instruction.—Make a little Bible study of circumcision and give the result of it to your class. Speak of the custom of escorting distinguished guests and other personages of note part of the way on their journey when they set out. Make clear that James was Christ's brother, not the apostle James, who had already been slain by Herod.

The Lesson.—The lesson as printed in our quarterly divides into two parts. Write these on the board as an outline as they are developed on the process of the teaching.

1. How the Council Came About, verses 1-5. Find whence certain teachers had come, what they were teaching, how this teaching was regarded by Paul and Barnabas, what the Antioch church decided to do in regard to the matter, who escorted them as they set out, through what regions they passed, what they declared, the result of this declaration, to what city they at length came, by whom they were received, what they declared to those who greeted them, who rose up in the midst of this preliminary meeting, their contention (verses 6-21, which include the speeches in the council of Peter, Paul, and James, and the motion of James, was assigned last time. Call for them now).

2. The Council's Decision, verses 22-29. Find what it pleased the council to do, whom they sent, what further step they took to inform them of their decision, the salutation of this letter, what the letter said in regard to circumcision and the law, what it said of Barnabas and Paul, whom it named as their representatives, what else were to do besides deliver the letter, whose leadership they acknowledged in coming to their decision, how, from what four things they were enjoined to abstain. Here call for the comparison of Acts 15 to Galatians 2, assigned last time.

Review the lesson by the topic method.

For Class Discussion.—What the Jerusalem council meant to the Early Church; whether compromise measures are ever permissible for the Church.

Truths and their Application.—1. To condition salvation on a rite, a ceremony, is to do violence to the gospel. This was natural perhaps for the Jews of that day, trained as they had been to elaborate ritual and wedded to the doctrine of salvation by works. But there is no excuse for 20th century Christianity in this matter. We know better and the tending of our age is away from this danger, yet there are survivals among certain ecclesiastical bodies and among individuals in all Churches of this perversion of our holy religion? Let all such study carefully the contention of these Pharisee Christians and the decision of the first Church Council as recorded in our lesson to-day.

II. The Story of the reception of the gospel by the heathen and by the brethren at home also is ever an interesting one and ever brings joy to the devout Christian's heart. It was so in this case. The recital by Paul and Barnabas to the brethren of what God had done at their hands for the Gentiles brought great rejoicing throughout the Church. Sometimes our ministers no doubt think the reports of revivals and other field items which they send to the Church papers are not read and appreciated. Yes they are: they are the most interesting things in any Church paper. We need more of them. Why should we conceal or keep secret the success that attends our labor of love?

III. It is true that later three of the provisions of this decision were relegated to the private interpretation of the individual Church member, but they are justified here not merely as compromises, but also as the only way to spiritual triumph for the Gentile converts. The abstinence from doing the matters enjoined would make it easy for them to live correct, consistent Christian lives. The indulgence of these matters would sap the strength of their spiritual vitality by keeping them in close touch with their pagan life. If we are to get close to God, we must withdraw ourselves from all things that bind us to the world.

Manual Work.—Have the following items, including the geographical items above, taken down in the note books and expanded at home.

Life of Paul (Continued).

48 A. D. Ordains Elders in Early Church, Acts 14:23.

Preaches in Perga, Acts 14:24.

Returns to Antioch and abides a long time, Acts 14:26-28.

49 A. D. Jewish Christians make trouble at Antioch, Acts 15:1-2.

Paul and Barnabas sent to Jerusalem respecting this matter, Acts 15:2-5, and Gal. 2:1-9.

The First Council of the Church, Acts 15:6-21.

The Decision of the Council, Acts 15:22-29.

Assignments for Next Time.—Ask one to prepare a short life of the Lord's brother, James; another to make a summary of the Epistle of James; a third to be prepared on the study of Abraham's offering of Isaac, Gen. 22:1-19; a fourth on Rahab's services to the spies, Josh. 2:1-21; Josh. 6:22-23.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR MAY 16, 1909 Paul at Iconium and Lystra.

Acts 14: 1-28.

Golden Text:—All the gods of the people are idols; but Jehovah made the heavens. Psa. 96:5.

Time.—The events of this lesson followed immediately those of the last. How much time they occupied is not indicated.

Places.—Pisidian, Antioch, Iconium and Lystra.

The persecution of Paul and his company which had begun in Antioch of Pisidia by the Jews was no immediate out-burst, but a deliberate policy. They definitely proposed, as far as possible to so hamper the work of the missionaries as to render it impracticable. This challenge Paul and Barnabas understood and accepted. They persevered with their work, prepared to take such consequences as might come.

Paul's experience was made up of one moment the encouragement of a large and popular following; the next, violent persecution and attempts on his life.

When once Paul and Barnabas were safely escaped from the fury of the Jews in Antioch and Iconium and Lystra and had reached Derbe they were nearer the northern headquarters of the Christian Church whence they had been sent out on this perilous missionary journey, than at any time since starting.

Later in verse 22 is the courageous challenging message "through many tribulations we must enter the kingdom of God." Paul wanted the new converts to remember as he would have us to remember today, that it is a splendid thing to meet trouble aright.

It is a great thing to have it said as was said of these men "the gods are come in the likeness of men."

In all probability the mere preaching, important and far-reaching as it might have been, would not have had this effect upon the people. It was the larger ministry, which extended to the physical needs of the people which made them believe that these men were the representatives of God. It was well that the people considered God as interested in the affairs of their daily lives.

Soon after this some messengers came to Lystra from the two cities where Paul had been preaching before. They told such stories that some of the people really stoned Paul until they thought he was dead and dragged him out of the city. But while some of his friends gathered round the Lord opened his eyes and the next day he was strong enough to go on to another city and preach there.

They consolidated the results they had gained. They organized churches for permanent growth. Returning to Antioch in Syria they told their friends all that had happened during their journey and under God's blessings many were entering the Christian Church. G. W. T.

—W. H. Martin, convicted over eight years ago for stealing $16,000 from the State treasury, of which he was chief clerk, and sentenced to ten years in the N. C. penitentiary, has been pardoned by Governor Kitchen. Martin has been a model prisoner, is in his 69th year and is in poor health from confinement, says the governor in his pardon.

—The uprising of the Turks in Ardena, of Asiatic Turkey, and their attacks upon and massacre of the Armenians are not only deplorable, but disgraceful and outrageous in the extreme.

More than 5,000 persons were killed in three days and nearly the whole Armenian city was destroyed by fire. It is known that two American missionaries, possibly many others, were killed. Two ships of the American navy, the North Carolina and the Montana, are hurrying to the scene with utmost speed to protect Americans and their interests there.

—These are troublous times in Turkey, of which the outside world knows little, owing to stringent censorship of all dispatches sent out. The pillage, plunder and murder in Asiatic Turkey being shocking in the extreme. This letter from Marash, Asiatic Turkey appeared in Thursday's dispatches:

Marash, May 5.—A letter received by messenger from Harni says that every man there had been killed. Only women, girls and boys under 10 years of age have been left alive. The churches and houses were plundered and most of them burned.

The letter, which is from the widow of a clergyman, says: "We have nothing to eat or wear. Worse than this, the Moslems are trying to force the women and girls to become Mohammedans. Already some of the women have been carried away."

—Count on the small boy to imitate the large and great. This from a Boston exchange of May 6th:

"With a courage equal to that of Columbus, two seven-year-old lads set sail from Boston the other day to join Roosevelt in Africa. They had built a raft of railroad-ties and provisioned it for the long voyage. Besides several cans of tomatoes and condensed milk, three loaves of bread, a pound of Bologna sausage and a lot of crackers, they had two fishing rods, a lantern and an oil-stove. They expected to catch all the fish they could eat, no matter how long they might be on the water, for do not fish grow in the sea? Not the least important article in their equipment was a log-book, in which they planned to write a record of their adventurous voyage. Of course they were picked up by fishermen before they got to the mouth of the harbor, but this interference with their plans did not lessen the audacity of their undertaking. The discoverer of America knew little more of what was before him than did these small boys, and his contemporaries thought him as rash as every one knows the boys were in the light of mature judgment. Yet these boys, foolish as they were, had the spirit which accomplishes great things. They dared the perils ahead, seeing only the goal."

OUR PRINCIPLES AND OUR PURPOSE.

If the Christian Church has no distinct principles and purposes of its own there is no excuse for its being. It has a right to exist only on condition that there is that in the Church which differentiates it, sets it apart, gives it character and a name. There are enough church organizations in the world, enough divisions, names and denominations, without our adding another, unless there be vital and valid reason therefor.

But this is what we claim for the Christian Church, namely, that it has a fixed principle, and a very definite purpose in the world. It has no desire to commit the egregious blunder of adding one more to the already too many sects, schisms, and separate schools of belief. Its principles and plans make in exactly the opposite direction. The Christian Church everywhere teaches that the Bible is a platform large enough for all to stand upon. That to this platform nothing can be added; from it nothing can be taken. As a Church and as a people, however widely we may differ in other things, we agree in this, that our creed and only creed is the Bible.

First of all the very name will indicate. Where did we get this name Christian? In the Bible. The disciples, when they had formed themselves into a local body for purposes of Christian fellowship and aggressive work, were then for the first time called Christians. Now, it is folly to say we appropriate this name which all denominations claim. We do not appropriate this to the exclusion of any. We accept this and this only, preferring it and it alone to any name derived from method of church polity, or church government.

Whence came our first claim as a distinct people, that The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church?

Again, from the Bible. Paul, writing under divine inspiration declared "He is the head of the body, the church" (Col. 1:18). That seems sufficient.

So of the principles of the Church about which we are agreed. They are Biblical—just that and nothing more. For we declare as a fundamental fact of our history that the Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. We are willing as a people to take our stand upon the Book, accepting what it plainly teaches, rejecting what it does not embrace and teach. About these principles and purposes we as a people are agreed. And out of these agreements have grown up among us certain practices which unite and designate us. And out of these practices and usages, not before, but after them, has grown what we are pleased to call The Declaration of Principles, Form of Government, and Directory of Worship.

This "Declaration" is no creed. It is as far from a creed as a book on parliamentary practice is from a treatise on Ethics, or Theology.

In the Preface to the second edition of our Declaration these words are used: "The Declaration of Principles, Form of Government, and Directory of Worship, as set forth in this book, had their origin in the birth and growth of the Christian Church. They present views and practices long in use before they were reduced to the printed page. The purpose of their publication was to secure uniformity in all the churches, and to place the denomination in its true light before the world, as an evangelical body or church."

How then does our book of Declarations differ from a creed? The book itself tells in these words, "There is a difference between creeds and principles, and hence the forms of these statements are neither made tests of religion nor binding upon the consciences of men. Principles are axiomatic in their nature, while creeds are rules or formulas deducted by logic as the right interpretations of Scripture. These principles are, therefore, comprehensive and may serve as the basis of evangelical interpretation of the Bible in any age. One of these is presented here to illustrate this claim: 'The Holy Bible, or the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, is a sufficient rule of faith and practice! This principle includes the whole Bible, though not limiting it to any fixed interpretation, and therefore excludes destructive criticism. It is inclusive in the sense of broadest charity. It is an anchor to the Ship of Zion with chain enough to reach the bottom of any sea of thought. No storm can drive the church with such a principle from her moorings. It is better to contend for truth than to contend against error, and in that spirit these declarations are made. While the Bible alone binds, these 'Principles' prevent us from being misunderstood, from drifting and from formality. * * * * * and thus scope is furnished for growth, for fraternity, and even for union among the people of God."

If any doubt that the Christian Church has a distinct principle and purpose, let such an one enquire into our history, learn of our practice and find out the fellowship that binds us in brotherly love and heavenly bonds.

The book from whose preface we have quoted is sufficient to convince any one. It may be had at The Christian Sun office, for 25 cts. in paper, or for 50 cts. in cloth. And if any reader of The Christian Sun is not thoroughly acquainted with the Christian Church, its Principles, Polity, Government and History, let him read this book which is compact, comprehensive and filled with vital fact: and which above all, we think, will show that the Christian Church has principles and purposes of its own, heaven sent, and bearing everywhere the mark and stamp of divine approval.

The reason some discredit the Christian Church is because they are ignorant of its trials, triumphs and traditions.

THE SWEETNESS OF SIN.

We speak of the bitter dregs of sin, and they are bitter. This, however, is when the dregs have been reached. The cup of sin is exceedingly sweet in the drinking. One drinks as if there were no dregs. But there are dregs. Sin always has sediment, and the sediment is bitter, exceedingly.

Here is the very harm and hatefulness of Sin. While the cup is being drained, it is so savory and sweet one reckons that this cannot be sin. If it were sin would it not be odious, disagreeable, obnoxious? Nay, verily. Sin is not sour in the taking, but exceedingly sweet. Would Adam and Eve have eaten the forbidden fruit had it been unpalatable disagreeable, unsavory? Hardly. That likely seemed to them the very best tree of all the garden, and fruit of rarest flavor. The unsavory part of it only came after the act of eating was done for. Then the taste and flavor of dregs appear.

Sin is alluring, seldom if ever obnoxious and odious. We learn it by its consequences rather than by its contact. In its consequences it is obnoxious and odious beyond compare. The sweetness and flavor of sin are ever its richest asset and most dangerous element. It's odium appears only when the eup has been drained and the dregs appear.

THE DIVINE ENERGY.

Pity the man who sees nothing but bad in his fellows. Such a man has not himself realized what is in man, what man is capable of.

The Romans thought the early Christians stark mad. These Christians taught and lived the fundamental principle of Christ's gospel, the forgiveness of enemies. To the Roman mind, which held that the only way to deal with an enemy was to conquer him by force, this principle was dangerous fanaticism and rank idiocy. To forgive enemies was, to the sturdy Roman mind, the doctrine of idiots and fools who should be put out of the way. The Roman, like the man of our day, who sees only bad in his fellows, did not know man, had not reckoned sufficiently of the divine energy.

No one ever had such an exalted opinion of men as had the Christ. He saw in a demon-possessed woman the possibilities of a loyalty and devotion that would lead her to be last at the Cross, first at the Sepulcher. He saw in the lying and profane Peter the possibilities of a man against whom the powers of earth and the gates of hell could not prevail. He saw in the impetuous, fiery John, "Son of Thunder," the possibilities of a love that would not rest till it had leaned on Jesus' bosom. He knew what was in man.

Plato taught that perfection was impossible, and Confucius thought of men as weak children. To Plato and to Confucius perfection was impossible and all men were weak, for they reckoned not of the divine energy.

We are weak, yea, very, very weak. But we are also the children of God. And He ever supplies strength for our own weakness. Paul caught the vision and so declared, "I can do all things through Christ who strengtheneth me."

VENGEANCE IS MINE.

It is difficult for us of this day to realize that men and women are being butchered like beasts because they believe in the Lord Jesus Christ. Thousands of Armenians have recently been slain by fanatics whom they could not resist. They died as true Christian martyrs, died for no other crime than that they believed in Lord Christ as the Saviour of the world. Many of them fell in the birth place of Saul of Tarsus, the place made famous for all time because from it Saul went forth as Paul to preach this same gospel for which these martyrs die.

It is no new story. These Turks have through the centuries shown a bloody and beastly hand. It would be appalling to know the unnumbered thousands who have filled martyrs graves at their cruel hands. This will never be known; but this was spoken long, long ago, "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." And it is known that these words are eternally true. Turkey's day of reckoning will surely come. The cunning of man and the device of demons cannot stay it. Man may not, but the Arm of an avenging Lord will one day strike. And this may not be a far-off event.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Just above my head, in the Terminal R. R. station in Atlanta, Ga., is this: "Travellers Aid—Information and assistance given women and girls traveling alone." "Atlanta Woman's Missionary Association." A lady in charge kindly offered me the use of her table as she saw me writing. This is only one of many kind provisions to help the traveller, not only on his way to the kingdom, but also on his way in this world where people go to and fro in the earth. At almost every town in life there are authorized agents who can give the right information for travel so as to reach the right destination, and it is surprising how many people travel in these days. It is a real school to thousands upon thousands who see and hear the best thought and life of the age in newspaper, on train, in city, hotel, and through the country which is the largest of all, and, in many senses, the best of all.

Does prohibition prohibit? That is the question everywhere and the answers differ almost as much as the answers to questions in theology. The truth is that no one has been able to put a period after the answer to this question. I have inquired in Atlanta and I find the correct answer is both yes and no. If you mean that prohibition prohibits relatively, the answer is yes; if the answer is to be absolutely, it is no; that is prohibition is a great improvement over the open saloon, but intoxicants are still sold underhand, if not underground. This city is no exception to this rule, but it is orderly, enterprising, and prosperous. Atlanta is one of the growing, influential cities of the South; and, for its age, no doubt the first Southern City.

Richmond, Va., is the first southern city when all the points are considered, but Atlanta is moving ahead with rapid pace. It is safe to say that railroads have made Atlanta—in fact railroads have made almost everything in the last fifty years. Willie Staley said yesterday that she was teaching in a school district where two railroads cross and they have a good house and two teachers and that the tax on these roads enabled them to have this good school. She said she could not understand why the people were so down on railroads. I thought her remarks were wise. I have read of the man who killed the goose that laid the golden egg, and I have read of some legislatures that spent much of their time in geosekilling. I could not have done my work as a minister without the help of railroads; and I hope some rich man or rich missionary society will project a railroad into some foreign land as a missionary enterprise, and keep out rum, opium, and speculation, and build towns, schools, churches, and Christian civilization on a scale that will change a nation from heathenism into a Christian nation. Steam is doing more and must do more than haul tons; it is and it will haul truth. Railroads and steamships are the greatest educators and civilizers of this country. The intelligence and power of the world must finally serve Christianity. The kingdoms of this world must become the kingdoms of our Lord Jesus Christ; not simply kingdoms ruled by kings, but vegetable kingdom, mineral kingdom, animal kingdom, kingdoms ruled by kings, all the kingdoms of this world. The revolution in Turkey may be the breaking up of conditions that will give the gospel freer course. The Mohammedan empire cannot remain. Its butchery, its slaughter of Christians, because they are Christians, will finally react and the banner of the cross will some day wave over the lands now swayed by the crescent.

I am on my way to Columbus, Ga., to be with Rev. H. W. Elder tomorrow in the opening of the second church in that city. My next letter will give an account of that work. W. W. Staley.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We are glad to welcome the cousins Gillies this week; they send their dimes through their grandmother, Mrs. M. E. French, who writes us a very kind and encouraging letter, from Moscow, Idaho. Just think how far our children's work has extended and is becoming a principle in the growth of our church. We welcome all these new cousins and hope they will write us letters.

Our good friends Carlton and Johnson remember us again the same day. Thanks, brethren. Hayes Chapel kindly remembers us again. Pastor Banks says, "Memorial afternoons" will be given to the Orphanage interests. Thanks to you and churches. Our Sunday schools are a liberal means of support now on running expenses.

We are planting and beginning the cultivation of our field crops, corn cotton, potatoes, melons, etc., etc. We had our 1st strawberry on April 26th, and our first berries and cream May 6th. Onions all the time.

Give us a full Corner and liberal reports next week. Our trustees will be in annual session about 1st of June.

Love and best wishes to all.

Fondly Yours,

Uncle Jim.

Walnut Cove, N. C., April 30, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little late this time, but will try to do better next time. I am going to Winston in a few days to visit Grandma Marshall. Uncle Jim, papa has bought us a new piano and I am studying music these days. Enclosed please find my dime for April. With much love to all, Your little niece, Sallie M. Marshall.

Learn to play well so you can play for church.

Clayton, Ala., April 27, 1909.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Time does not fly so fast with us as it may seem to you—the month goes nearly by each time before we write. Mama and Papa are so busy. We are thinking again of Santa and wondering why it takes so long for Christmas to come.

I could tell James why I (Newman) stopped sucking my thumb—I was afraid of being called a little girl.

Love to all,

J. Newman Denton,

S. E. Denton, Jr.

Little James tries to quit his thumb but it's hard. We will try the "girl" remedy.

THE SOUL'S LONGING.

One may for a time so debase the soul in earthly pursuits and pleasures that he may seem satisfied with the gratifications of his earthly appetites; yet when repletion comes—as it will—a disgust succeeds, and the experience of Solomon is realized: "All is vanity and vexation of spirit."

But when one is "born again," when his mental and spiritual affections and tendencies are cultivated in accordance with God's law, and Christ is to him "the Way, the Truth and the Life," earthly things lose their power to please and enthrall, and the desires and anticipations overstep the bounds of this life and enter into the future as the place of our real existence. Here Revelation comes to our aid. Here life and immortality are illustrated by the Gospel. Hereby "the word of prophecy"

There is more Catarrh in this country than all other diseases, and until the last few years was incurable. For a great many years Dr. F. J. Cheney & Co. announced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. ## THE PLEASURES OF MEMORY, IMAGINATION AND HOPE.

As you walked out on a lovely morning in May when nature was smiling and adorning herself with a new spring dress, becoming and attractive, the ground covered with a splendid green carpet soft as velvet and inwrought with suitable colors, you were in a scene of enchanting beauty. The scene had also been improved with another charm in the form of dew which gleamed with rich profusion when touched by the first rays of the golden sun. The night had been bathed in the river of rest to refresh animated life and they looked so much better when, the next morning. As you strolled up and down the winding way gashing springs attracted the eye inviting you to rest beside them. Then rocky glen, mountain gorge, sublime heights and picturesque views invited you to look at them and admire their beauty. And when you stood on the edge of a silver lake watching chasing waves in graceful succession roll and the floating clouds skimming in the distant view you were enchanted with such matchless reflections and observations. So when thinking of the interesting Bible stories and the sayings of Jesus with their helpful influence it gives pleasures to the memory, inspires the imagination, and sends a greater charm to the pleasures of hope. The apostle whom we are now studying with so much interest in the Sunday-school lessons, said in I Cor. 15:1,2: Brethren, I declare unto you the gospel which I preached unto you, which also ye have received and wherever ye stand, by which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you. It is desired to get three prominent points from these words. The pleasures of memory, the pleasures which memory gives the imagination, and the pleasures which memory lends to hope.

The faculty by which ideas are kept in the mind is a great blessing and helps us to enjoy living. The memory of childhood's sunny days is pleasant to recall, and in fact all the pleasant things are pleasing to the memory. It would be wise to throw away into forgetfulness the unpleasant things, but bring into the light of precious memory the beautiful, the true, the honest and the happy ones. It is a great pleasure to think the thoughts of the mind as it ascends illimitable heights and runs through the profound works of God. The distant and different excursions it takes, and the pleasure and profit it develops from them are great and wonderful privileges to enjoy. If I were asked which is the greater the power which holds the earth in its orbit, or the earth itself—my answer would be the unseen power; if it were asked which is the greater, sixty cars holding a hundred thousand pounds each, or the unseen power called steam moving the engine, the answer would be, steam is greater than the whole train. Then if the question was put, which can move around the world faster, the mind or the body—the mind would be the right answer. The mind travels around it in a second of time, while it would take the body months to get there. It takes but a moment, a thought and it is done, for the mind to go ninety-five millions of miles—to the sun—but you cannot yet say how long it would take the body to go that distance if it could. A ray of light is supposed to take three minutes to come from the sun to the earth, but the mind can go and come over the same route in two seconds. What a wonderful difference in the time taken between the ray of light and the mind! It is so mysterious—wonderful and pleasant thus to think of the great comparison, and of the magnificent difference between the two. The superiority of mind over matter in these simple and natural illustrations is clearly seen.

No one has told all about the mysterious power of electricity—but you believe in it and use it. No one can tell you all about the Great Spirit of the universe—but many believe in Him and receive His influence. For "he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

No mental philosopher has explained all about the mind—it is too wonderful to tell—too full of greatness to know but little about its origin and development. No biologist has yet been able to tell all about life, yet we live and move and have our being in the Giver of life, and enjoy the living more than can be expressed. The forces which are not seen are the strong ones—we know them by their effects. You cannot see the mind but you can see and feel its influence. Mind when freed from sin, ignorance, and prejudice soars high into intellectual greatness and grandeur until it meets the mind of God. Then there is a flood of radiance and spiritual happiness which binds and blends the finite under the heavenly spell of the infinite Mind.

To use the mind in thinking good, pure thoughts is certainly elevating, healthful and helpful to both soul and body. It may often become injured by indulgences. If it does, it needs to turn its attention to better things, and think of the splendid opportunities it has for greater improvement, and higher advancement. That which has led the heart and body in the wrong way must reflect, turn and pursue the right way. In these times there are diseased ones—made so in part, by unhealthy conditions of the mind—but there is still pleasure for them in the future training and government of their minds. The will also has much to do in making up your mental and physical condition. If you are in poor health commence now to look at the bright, beautiful things which the world holds out to you, and think over and over the charming things which will come into your minds. Do not be afraid to try—trust fully in the Great Spirit that pervades all space and time looking upward and onward for better health and continual happiness. It has already been stated that the silent, and unseen powers are the strongest and most useful in the economy of nature. Let us conclude therefore that the silent and unseen mind in man is the strongest and best part of him.

The pleasure of the imagination imparts help to the memory and gives zeal to the whole character. Permit the imagination to take its delightful flight through the matchless dominions of God, then let it repeat to the anxious ear:

“Go wing your flight from star to star
From luminous worlds as far
As the universe extends its flaming wall,
And one moment of heaven is worth them all.”

As the imagination sweeps through space it is busy exploring the works of God, admiring more and more this and the other great worlds in the starry realms. But we should not fail to have that experimental knowledge of Him which will make us wise unto salvation, for as much pleasure as we take in the play of the imagination let us remember these impressive words, “Casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ.”

The pleasures of memory lend hope many a charm. Let us call it eternal hope. Hope is the greatest inspiration of life, a sweet thought which lifts the soul up to God; the brightest star that glitters in our minds. Faith hears the soft rustle of her invisible wings folding triumphantly upon the highest dome of the eternal city. By it the cheerless way is made bright by its welcome, delightful presence. In every department of activity it is the leading element, and invites all classes and conditions of men to live in its genial company. In sickness, in grief, in adversity, in poverty's friendless grasp, or in any condition, it is ready with its silent and loving visits of encouragement. When the stars hide behind the clouds of night, when the moon fails to give her silvery light and when the sun cannot be seen—hope gleams on the way and causes the imagination to paint a beautiful and happy picture. There are many poor, despairing souls who could not have lived without it. Blot it from the mind, then darkness and dismay would rush in all the time. Hope leads us up the bright side of life.

Why spend so much anxious time in reviewing some of the unpleasant surroundings when there is so much brightness, beauty and splendor about you—inviting you to see, hear, live and be happy? Get out of the way of sin and travel a more pleasant and lovely way which leads to peace and righteousness. If any sad, sick, lonely, discouraged ones are on the way, look for the dawning of a brighter morning and sing in your hearts that tender song beginning with: “In darkest hours if He appear, my dawning is begun.” If you feel that some have treated you with injustice; if your friends of other days have fled swiftly away like leaves before a whirlwind—so live that they may return to you again, and be sweet and nice to you. Have a heart full of love and hope—yes one which is large enough and so influenced by Christian religion as to forgive all who have worked against you in any way. Take down the old dusty, unpleasant things you have had so long and throw them into the whirlpool of oblivion never to rise again. We all know that this will be hard to do in our natural weakness, but we can do all things through Christ who is our everlasting strength. Rise to higher, sublimer heights of Christian love and forgiveness. Then you will gain a complete victory over your selfish self by dethroning the little sneaking, annoying prejudices which have a great part of your life, consumed and left so little for God. Have constant hope for peace with God—then when the dark night of ignorance shall be dispelled by the light of eternal day—glad hearts with undying love will exult in the glorious realities of heaven.

Hope takes up the transporting way of supernal joy and thrills us while contemplating the unseen and the unknown. The eagle confined in a small place cannot soar above the clouds, nor enjoy the blazing sunlight, but when free from confinement ascends the great arena of space and moves with ease and freedom. So when we get out of our little selves and live in the sublime heights of divine thoughts and holy meditations we are better prepared to enjoy the present, and to more fully realize that there is abiding felicity beyond the narrow confines of this life. Yes, the precious hope you have is like an anchor to your soul in the dark, stormy hours of life, and when eternal hope anchors you in Jesus you are safe. Do not forget to take it with you when you start on the voyage of life. Let us see by faith the angel of hope—“lifting glittering wings in eternal flight.” J. T. Kitchen.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

Have your Sunday-school, your Christian Endeavor Society, your Young People's Missionary Society appointed their delegates to the Young People's Convention, May 29-31? "Yes," is the reply from a number of churches. "I forgot it last Sunday," said a number of church secretaries to whom blanks for delegates had been sent. "But I will bring the matter to the attention of our young people's church secretaries. There is but one remaining Sunday in which now to attend to this matter of delegates in order to get their names to the entertainment committee, Prof. W. A. Harper, Chairman, Elon College, N. C., by May 20. In some cases where church secretaries fail to bring the matter before the young people's organizations, the pastors are doing so. Some churches that find they cannot have delegates present in person, are appointing delegates and these are sending messages of good will and hearty approval of the young people's movement. Other churches that find the expense of sending delegates too great, and not having any able and willing to pay their own way are writing letters assuring the Convention of their co-operation in its undertakings. These letters have already begun to arrive, three weeks before the Convention. Let the young people's organizations in every church, which finds it impossible to be represented find it impossible to be represented by a written message. Did you read Dr. Atkinson's editorial on page eight of last week's Christian Sun, headed "Our Young People's Convention?" Perhaps no minister of the church has his finger so much on the pulse of the body at large as the editor of the church organ, and Dr. Atkinson says in that editorial that "no more important meeting has been called among us." He further says, "A polity is to be shaped, and plans laid for the future."

Pray, think, that this polity and these plans may be wise, and be divinely approved. W. P. L.

CHRISTIAN BIBLICAL INSTITUTE

The annual catalogue of the Christian Biblical Institute for the year is just out, in connection with that of Defiance College. It shows an enrollment of 37 students of its own: (of the two institutions together, 341.) Of the 37, all are in biblical studies, tho' not all studying for the ministry. However, 27 of them are either already in the ministry or are consecrated to it; others are preparing for Christian work in other lines. The faculty of the Institute is much enlarged and strengthened since its removal to Defiance, and other advantages largely increased.

Your northern brethren are greatly pleased with the spirit and aggressive energy with which you are pushing the cause. The increase in your churches, in your college, the new places taken and held for Christian work, your missionary enterprise, both Home and Foreign, betoken a spirit of wakefulness to opportunity that warms our hearts with admiration. Truly "there is much land to be possessed" if we are ready for the work. J. B. Weston.

MARRIED.*Bishop-Skinner.

The Dendron Christian Church, April 29th, was the scene of an attractive wedding, when Miss Hattie A. Skinner became the bride of Mr. J. Roberts Bishop, both of Dendron, Va. Rev. C. C. Jones, the bride's pastor, was the officiating minister.

The church was beautifully decorated in green and white. Candles of same color were artistically arranged in the altar arch. Mrs. E. T. Atkinson was at the organ and Mr. A. S. Higgins, with violin played the wedding march. Little Miss Jennie Barrett sang, "Call me thine own," accompanied by violin, during the ceremony. Little Misses Ruby Atkinson and Lucy Hobson were flower girls. Miss Annie S. Skinner, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore green silk, made princess, and carried white carnations. The bride, a pretty young maid, popular and attractive looking beautiful, gowned in white silk, carrying lilies of the valley and ferns. The bridal party entered from opposite doors and met at the altar. The bride's maids were, Misses Iola Bell, Grace Slade, Nora Cotton, and Lizzie Wilson. They wore directorie gowns, made of white silk mull, and made empire, and carried ferns.

Their attendants were Messrs Henry Bishop, brother of the groom, and Logan Chapel. Dr. J. H. Parker, and F. J. Brittle were the ushers. Following the ceremony the bridal party drove to Wakefield, where Mr. and Mrs. Bishop took the west-bound train to Richmond, from there to Washington, Baltimore and other points of interest.

Mr. Bishop is a successful merchant of Dendron, and he, with his bride, expects to return in about ten days to make this their home. C. C. J.

DIED.*Freeman.

Mrs. Julia A. Freeman died at the home of her son near Wakefield, Va., April 26th, 1909, aged 82 years, 6 months and 23 days. She had not been sick but feeble from old age, and just dropped off as ripe fruit from the tree. She had been a true member of the Methodist Church since childhood. She was well known throughout her community as one of the best of women. She leaves to mourn their loss, three noble sons, one of whom is a deacon of Burton's Grove Christian church, and the other two, good true, men. The writer preached the funeral, and the remains were laid to rest in the family grave-yard. We pray God's blessings upon all the sorrowing ones.

Whereas our heavenly Father has seen fit to call from faithful service in His kingdom on earth, to a more happy and glorious service in His kingdom above, our beloved brother and senior deacon, C. W. Saunders, therefore be it Resolved, 1st, That by his death Concord Christian Church loses its oldest and one of its most loyal and devoted members; the community a most kind and obliging neighbor, and a citizen without a known enemy; and his children a most devoted and loving father. In his death we feel that our church has lost one of its most enduring pillars—one whose loyalty to her cause no storm cloud could ever shake. While we very much regret our loss, still we believe our loss means his eternal gain.

Resolved 2nd, That we extend to his family our heartfelt sympathy and trust that our Heavenly Father may comfort them in this their sad bereavement.

Resolved 3rd, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the church, a copy be sent to his family, and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Rev. Carlyle Summerbell preached a sermon to a congregation of Odd Fellows in the First Christian Church, Fall River, Mass., Sunday 25th, April, on Loyalty, taking for his text Psalms 66:12, "Thou hast brought us into a wealthy place. The Fall River Herald gives account of the discourse:

Prof. Josiah Royce, one of the greatest metaphysicians of today, is engaged in preaching the gospel of Loyalty. In it he finds the basis of the mother's devotion to her children, the patriot's zeal for his country, and the martyr's sacrifice for his religion and his God. One cannot get the best out of life unless he is loyal to something, to church, country, lodge or family.

But in order to have loyalty there must be an appreciation of something worth loyalty. The speaker then described the natural beauties of this region, and called attention to some of the advantages of Fall River.

He said the statesmen of the world had not yet discovered what was practised in Fall River, for here a police force was sufficient. If the various nationalities here used the philosophies of world wide statesmen, the French and the Italian would have navies to watch each other, and the German navy would scare the life out of the English. But the citizens here trust each other, and do not spend their hard earned dollars in useless ways. Loyalty to truth, friendship and love makes it possible. God has brought us into a wealthy place in our social community.

James, the practical, said religion was visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction and keeping oneself unspotted before the world. Jesus makes the last judgment to depend, not on what a man believes, but on what he does, visiting the sick, clothing the naked, feeding the hungry. And He said that those who did the will of the Father in heaven were His brothers, sisters and mothers.

But He did not forget the natural ties. Mr. Summerbell praised the mother of Jesus as the ideal woman of the New Testament, and regretted she had been over-exalted by one communion and ignored by another. There must yet be a true appreciation of her beautiful womanly qualities.

Jesus, when upon the cross, thought of the material things, and by signs of His eyes and words arranged for John, his beloved disciple and friend, to take Mary the mother to his home, which the record says he did.

After brief words concerning Thomas Wildey, the founder of Odd Fellowship in America, and his helper, John

GIPSY SMITH: HIS LIFE AND WORK.

By Himself.

This is a grand record of achievement. A poor lad, born in a gipsy camp, has been used as an instrument in God's hands to awaken multitudes throughout the world to spiritual consciousness. He tells in this book of 330 pages his rich and varied experiences from birth through years of success in soul-winning. The style of the book is not boastful; it is a humble attempt to satisfy the persistent requests of his friends for a history of his romantic career. The narrative is prefaced by appreciative introductions by Dr. Alexander McLaren and G. Campbell Morgan. Several illustrations add to the interest of the book.

We offer "Gipsy Smith" - handsomely bound in cloth as a premium for two new subscriptions to The Christian Sun at $1.50 each; or for one new subscription and 45 cents additional. We will sell it in combination with a renewal to The Sun for $2.20. The book alone will be sent to any address for $1.10, postpaid.

BY EMMANUEL C. CHARLTON, PH. D.

This thrilling tale of sea adventure is based on actual experience and is told in the author's own natural manner, which is made the more impressive because of his long experience as a seaman, and Christian worker among his fellow-craftsmen. The story is specially attractive to all classes. The moral is of a high character. There is not a dull chapter in it.

That in the financial depression of 1907 over $5,000,000 was bestowed by the fraternity.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Many Minds.—Mrs. Russell Sage is proving herself to be a wise, practical philanthropist. Her millions are being used for the benefit and uplift of humanity. On Saturday, May 8, the new and handsome Young Men's Christian Association building at New Rochelle, N. Y. was dedicated with appropriate ceremony. Mrs. Sage gave this building. From the same purse is promised a half million to the American Bible Society as soon as that Society shall have raised another half million.

Would the late Russell Sage turn over in his grave if he could know these things? Not by any manner of means. Mr. Sage did not know how to give away money. He knew how to make and to save. He was no more of a philanthropist than Robert Burns was a statesman. This, Mr. Sage knew. So he gave his great brain and energy to making money. And then, knowing his wife's gifts, excellent education, Christian training and good judgment, he left her all his many millions to be distributed.

The world will have to revise its opinion of Russell Sage, as it has of many another man, whose best deeds and wisest conclusions only appeared after he was gone. All minds in this world are not fitted for the same function, a consideration which should make us more charitable in our opinions and decisions.

Women and Manners.—It is a pity to put it that way, and we hesitated, for all women are supposed to have good manners. There are exceptions. We are now talking about the exceptions.

On a railway car not one woman in forty will move one inch to accommodate another woman. Strange, but true. I saw a woman enter the train the other day and walk from one end of the car to the other without being offered a seat. About half the car was taken with women, one to the seat. The men would not get up because there were dozens of seats occupied by one woman only. The woman in question finally perched herself on the arm of a seat occupied by one woman and her hand bag. There she sat for miles without being offered a comfortable seat even that occupied by the hand bag. This is no rare instance. It is every day occurrence. If women receive courtesies travelling they must receive them of men; women do not show them. Train manners among men are bad enough; among women, as touching their sisters, they are unspeakable.

Courtesy and kindness are the most amiable of graces. Why may we not cultivate them travelling, and when guests of a railroad company, as well as when at home. Travelling manners are worthy of consideration for, be it understood, that a large part of the population is on the go every day and all the while. Our sisters in bonnets may easily improve their bearings toward one another on the cars—but it is dangerous for a man to say so.

An Evangelistic Wonder.—Gipsy Smith still remains the wonder of modern evangelism. His power to win men is without parallel. This man, born and reared in a gipsy's tent, schooled to hardship, experienced in ignorance, brought up in a peddler's want and pity, comes upon the platform, after due season, uses language the most chaste, expressions the most winsome, and rhetoric and grammar and enunciation without a flaw—and with the simple message of the Cross leads hundreds and thousands to a life in Christ. That is a modern miracle.

We have not heard much of the Gipsy lately. That is because this is a large continent and he is on the other side of it, holding for the Master on the Pacific coast. A friend of his told the writer that he had never had such meetings in all his life as he is witnessing now.

He preached fourteen nights in Denver recently. The congregations averaged ten thousand. There were five thousand professions of faith in Christ. On the Sunday afternoon an outdoor demonstration was made. Twenty-five thousand men marched two miles along the streets singing Christian hymns.

A leading paper of Denver declares editorially that nothing but the power of God could explain such preaching as this by Gipsy Smith. The same might have said that nothing but a miracle of God could explain Gipsy Smith himself, his conversion, his character, his power with men.

Steel and the Sabbath.—The United States Steel Corporation put into effect Sunday, May 9th, at its National Tube Works, its order for the abolishment of all Sunday work, and not one of the numerous "whirls" of the great galvanizing departments turned on that day, or will turn on Sunday till the order is revoked, if ever. The Sunday rest day is to be observed at all the mills and repair shops of this vast corporation.

This is news indeed. The order was not given for religious, but, for economic, reasons. The sweeping order carries this explanation: "Hitherto most of the repair work has been done on Sunday, but it has been figured out that to give the mills one day of absolute rest in seven will save time and money in the long run."

While this assigned cause shows absolute disregard of the religious idea, it shows also that which has long been contended by some that the finest piece of economy under heaven is the decalogue: and that all of God's moral laws have an economic basis.

That is to say, to desecrate the Sabbath with toil and labor is not only bad morals and irreligious, but is poor economy and bad business from a financial point of view. God's moral laws all have an economic basis. None are as wise, none as rich as God. And He deemed it wise to rest one day in seven. Man cannot improve on that.

—The average wage of farm hands in Kansas is thirty dollars a month and board, but a great plea goes out for more men to work those fertile fields. Harvest approaches and the plea for help to harvest is pitiful.

—Wilbur and Orville Wright, inventors of the best flying machine, with their sister, Miss Katharine, after being received, honored, dined and feted by kings and princes on the other side of the sea, have returned to their home in Dayton, Ohio, and are to have a fifty thousand dollar reception in June, the papers say.

FROM THE FIELD.

Valley Notes.

Bethlehem.

Our meeting at this place has been held since our last letter, resulting in four accessions. This Church has a good Sunday-school and an interesting Endeavor Society. The Sunday-school gave an Easter exercise in the presence of a crowded house. The program consisting of music, recitations, etc., was well received and regarded as the best ever given by the school. The decorations were beautiful. This church is about up on pastor's salary, has nearly nine tenths of the conference apportionments in hand, has bought land for a cemetery and is now erecting an iron fence around it, the combined cost of which will be $1120.00. The church and pastor are under many obligations to Mrs. Sallie C. Long, whose generosity has made the cemetery and enclosure possible.

Cecord.

This church has opened its Sunday-school for the summer and fall. They have all conference apportionments in hand and some over. A missionary society is kept up in the church.

Maylard.

Our meeting at this point since my last letter resulted in three accessions. An interesting Sunday-school has been organized at this point.

Timber Ridge.

This church is isolated from our other churches but is doing good work. A good Sunday-school has been kept up all winter, also an interesting Christian Endeavor. Conference apportionments will be paid in fall. Pastor's salary paid up to date. This church is interested in a church at Winchester and will help liberally towards it.

The church lost one of its best workers in the death of sister Laretta M. Hoop.

Timber Mountain.

This point is handicapped by not having a place of its own in which to hold services, but the people seem interested and the work is moving along as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

Winchester.

While we have no organization in this city of six thousand, we have several members and are making an effort to establish our work there. We have a temporary place for services in a small church at the edge of the town. The arrangement is not convenient either in the size of the house or its location but it is the best we can do at present. A nice corner lot, almost centrally located, has been purchased and $500.00 paid on it. We hope to be able to build in the near future. With five other churches to look after, I have not the time to attend to the work as it should be.

The following amounts have been paid. I give them in the order in which they were received, viz.:

Mrs. Laretta Hook, .....	$2.25
Miss Nettie Johnson .....	$5.00
Miss Maggie Spaid .....	5.00
Miss Lydia Creswell .....	10.00
L. S. Johnson .....	50.00
E. R. Johnson .....	100.00
H. P. Hook .....	50.00
Miss Irene Capper .....	10.00
A. Friend .....	100.00
R. C. Hook .....	50.00
E. W. Cather .....	50.00
T. A. Hook .....	25.00
J. S. Davis .....	25.00
J. W. Davis .....	25.00
Total .....	$507.25

Any one wishing to contribute to this fund may send money to me and I will receipt them and acknowledge it through the "Sun" and "Herald."

Sanford.

The church at Sanford is doing well. We have a large S. S., large and attentive congregations. We have a Ladies' Aid Society of more than twenty members. The church is in fine condition spiritually and we are expecting a great revival in Sanford this year. On last Sunday night Bro. John D. Gunter presented the church with a handsome communion set of silver lined with gold. Bro. Gunter made an excellent presentation address in which he stated that he was acting as executor of his father's will and that as there had been a communion set placed at Shallow Well in memory of his mother this came to Sanford to perpetuate the memory of his father, J. A. Gunter. Rev. G. R. Underwood accepted the set with appropriate remarks in which he called attention to the fact that Bro. J. A. Gunter had not only remembered the church at Sanford in his will but during the erection of the church by many cash donations. May God's richest blessings rest upon our people at Sanford and the precious bond of brotherly love and unity which now exists never be broken.

Poplar Branch.

This is a very weak church, numerically but the nineteen members are truly a loyal band. We have a good S. S. and are expecting a good time in July, as we will entertain the S. S. convention of the W. N. C. conference.

Graces Chapel.

Graces Chapel is a growing church lo-ated at a convenient place. She is weak financially as most of the members are women and children, it seems as though it is very hard to reach the men of that community. Pray with us, brethren, that they too may be brought into the fold.

Mt. Pleasant.

This is a live little church, good active members in good spiritual condition. The church is growing and large congregations assemble at each service. We preach at Vass in the afternoon. We have a good church here in fairly good condition but no membership. We will hold a series of meetings here some time during the year and see what can be done.

Antioch (C)

This is another one of the old landmarks that had almost failed but has taken on new life and is doing well. They are a good spiritual people.

Smithwood.

Smithwood has more than doubled her membership since we have been pastor of that church. She has made considerable improvements of which we may speak at another time.

Praying God's richest blessings on all and asking an interest in your prayers,
E. L. Stack.

Christian Chapel.

Saturday before second Sunday in May we held our memorial service at Christian Chapel, Chatham Co., N. C. We had a good service. The spirit of the Lord was with us. We had some talks from the brethren and several speeches from the little folks. They had been trained by Sister Bula Reynolds. Our music was good, led by Bro. Wooddell. The congregation was large and attentive.

Sunday we had a large congregation. We administered the Lord's Supper and we had another good service. I feel encouraged. The people are so kind to me. May God's great care be with them at all time.

New Hill.

At my last appointment at New Hill we had a good service. Our congregation is growing. At each appointment these good people saw that if they would give their pastor a pound he would appreciate it. So some of the good people began to talk the question, and when the pastor had to start for his home he found that he had many presents, sugar, coffee, canned goods, cloth, dried fruit, and many other things that a preacher's family has to use. We appreciate the kindness of these dear people at New Hill. May the Lord bless them.

Bethel.

Our congregation is very good. We will administer the Lord's supper at our next appointment which will be on first Sunday in June. I want the prayers of all praying people in behalf of my work. May God's blessings be upon his people and cause them to live right in this present world. J. C. Carden.

Durham, N. C.

Madrid, Iowa Letter.

Beginning the first Sunday in April we held a series of meetings for two weeks resulting in good for the work here. There were not many conversions so far as we know. There were five accessions to the church. The meeting closed with a good interest. Rev. F. G. Coffin was with us for two or three days on his way to Wyoming. He preached five sermons and rendered acceptable service in the meeting. Our congregations are good and growing. We read with interest the reports from the brotherhood in our church papers. Surely we have much to encourage us as well as to remind us of opportunities for enlargement and of opened doors that we should by all means seek to enter. Shall we listen in vain to the appeals that the faithful few are making for the support of the various enterprises of the church? It is oftentimes easier to criticize proposed plans and methods than it is to support them. But if we have not something better to propose let's stand by those who are making their appeals to us. And if we do not we may not only disappoint some faithful one with the highest motive but hinder the progress of the cause of Christ. Why can we not have a little more interest shown in the matter of the building fund for the Ponce, Porto Rico Church? Dr. Manning has called our attention to a very simple plan and one that, I'm sure, will work in most of our Sunday-schools if there is some one in each school who will look after the matter and give the school a chance to help in this way. There did not seem to be any serious objections in our school here and the plan is now in operation and the birthday band received its first contribution last Sunday.

Surely every one cannot respond very largely to every call that is made but all may show that they are interested, that is, if they are interested and after all that is the point. In many cases it is not a matter of ability but of interest and willingness. "If there be first a willing mind it is accepted according to what a man hath and not according to what he hath not."

Without discrediting the faithful few we have it in mind to exclaim, when shall we as a people see the inconsistency of calling ourselves Christians and manifesting so little of the Spirit of Him whose name we wear?

The weather in Iowa now is more pleasing than it was some time ago but it is not very warm yet. We still find it comfortable to have a little fire. They tell us that the unusual has taken place since we came. We have had an unusual winter and an unusually bad blizzard and an unusually late spring and one woman the other day said that she never had the rheumatism so bad until about the time we came but I have no idea that she meant to charge that up to us. We should like to know of the unusual taking place, spiritually, in the way of advancement in the divine life.

Among the Churches.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:—So far as I know the work in my churches seems to be gratifying. The congregations are steadily growing. The Sunday-school in each church is good. The interest seems to be increasing. I think the spirit of missions is growing, which is the true spirit of Christianity. I think all my churches will meet all their obligations. I will say I have a good people to whom I preach at Pleasant Ridge, Ingram, Va., Happy Home, and Keyser. The good Lord bless the work. S. B. Klapp.

TO VISIT WESTERN N. C. SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

I will visit the following churches in the interest of the Western N. C. Sunday-school Convention on the following dates:

St. John's, Randleman, 1st Sunday in June at 11 o'clock a. m.; Big Oak, 2nd Sunday, 9:30 a. m.; Brown's Chapel, 2nd Sunday, 2:30 p. m.; Shady Grove, 3rd Sunday, 10 a. m.; Christian Union, 4th Sunday, 10 a. m.; New Center, 4th Sunday, 2 p. m.; Union Grove, 1st Sunday in July, 10 a. m.; Shiloh, 2nd Sunday, 10 a. m. We hope that the schools of the above named churches, and also all the other churches of the Western N. C. Christian Conference have already been thinking of our Sunday-school Convention which meets with Poplar Branch church, Lee County, Friday before the last Sunday in July, 1909, and have been thinking about whom they will send as delegates to this convention. If not it is time to be, not only thinking, but doing something that will help to make the convention a success. If you feel that if you elect a delegate he will not be financially able to go, begin now on some plan to raise enough money through your Sunday-school to defray the expenses of your delegate. You cannot afford to let your school not be represented in this convention. We want a full delegation. We must have it, if the convention is to be of the greatest success.

We want the convention to be, not only one of the best, but the best Sunday-school convention that has ever been held in the Western N. C. Conference. We can make it so if we will, and my prayer is that God may help us—the people of the Western Conference, to wake up and get a vision of the great necessity of a wide awake Sunday-school in every church, and a thrilling convention each year, such as will inspire every delegate, and every other person present at the convention to give more time, energy, and soul to the great work of the Sunday-school.

Yours in the work,

J. F. Morgan

THE SUN'S OFFER TO YOUNG MEN AND YOUNG WOMEN.

What an opportunity! The editor of The Sun has opened a way for you to attend college. There ought to be quite a number who will accept his terms, and go right to work. When I was just entering the field of activity if such an offer had been given, it would have been accepted at once by me, but no such a chance was presented. Any one who has the ambition can get there if he tries, and it will take try and work too to accomplish any thing. It is a real pleasure to any young man or lady to engage in work for The Sun. The source from which it comes causes it to shine with a beautiful light, and for that reason it will make it easy to introduce itself and then secure subscribers. If I could say to Time, just roll backward a few years and make me a boy again, I would enter the field at once and try my luck. This is an undertaking at once commendable—and it will not only profit those who may engage in it, but it would be a great blessing to others. I hope to hear of many who have accepted this offer. J. T. Kitchen.

—There are many orders for The Government and Principles of The Christian Church. The last edition is a great improvement on previous editions, and a copy should be in every Christian home. By the way, Bro. Pastor, have you announced to your congregations that the new edition of the book is ready and is on sale at The Christian Sun office, Elon College, N. C., cloth 50 cts., limp cloth 35 cts., and paper bindings 25 cents, the copy post paid?

—Dispatch dated Constantinople, May 13, says: "Thousands of Christians who perished in the recent massacre in Adana District are to be avenged. New Turkish government spurred by protest of powers is assembling an army of thirty thousand men at Dodegath which as soon as mobilization will be shipped to Mersina as punitive expedition against Kurdish Tribes by whom Armenian Christians were put to the sword."

—Ex-President Roosevelt having killed several lions, a hippopotamus, a rhinoceros charging him and within fourteen paces when brought down, two giraffes and goodness knows what else, the New York Advocate thinks there is nothing left for his energy and daring now but to discover the North Pole and fly higher and stay up longer in an aeroplane than any one else. And if Teddy, the strenuous, should undertake either of these there will be something doing that will startle the natives.

—The Sun's editor was in delightful memorial services, last Sunday, 16th inst. at Wake Chapel, Sunday before, 9th inst., at Wentworth, in Wake Co., N. C., both of which services drew large audiences and were edifying. In both instances the cemeteries adjoining the church had been cleaned off and beautifully prepared and the floral offerings were profuse and fragrant. These services give opportunity to put cemeteries and the graves there in good shape and to call up tender memories of loved ones gone before. It is a beautiful custom the churches have adopted.

—The feature of this week's Sun is Dr. J. J. Summerbell's article touching our Sunday School Literature and the American Revision. Writing to a particular point, Dr. Summerbell's pen is incisive, poised, pungent, and marks out matter of universal concern, as well as particular moment, in that many points of demarcation between the old and the new versions are brought out. This writer in his daily reading and pulpit practice uses the American Revision, but the thought of abandoning, or substituting for, the authorized version has never entered his mind. Dr. S. has given many of the very reasons why we cannot substitute for the Authorized.

—Acknowledgement is hereby made, and thanks expressed to the Philologist Literary Society, for a ticket to the Elon College commencement, May 30-June 2nd. This is the nineteenth annual commencement and the Faculty and Senior Class have issued a very neat and attractive invitation. Following is the program: Sunday, May 30, 11:30 a. m. Baccalaureate sermon by Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Elon College, N. C. Monday, May 31st, 8 p. m., Society Representatives. Tuesday, June 1, 11:30 a. m., Annual Address. 3:00 p. m., Eloquence Recital. 8 p. m. Annual Concert. Wednesday, June 2nd, Commencement Day, Graduating Exercises. 3 p. m. Society Reunions. 4 p. m., Art Exhibit. 8 p. m., Alumni Address. The annual address, it is understood, is to be delivered by U. S. Senator F. M. Simmons, and the Alumni Address by Rev. C. E. Newman, of Henderson, N. C.

Following are the members of the graduating class: Simeon McClellan Atkinson, Ralph Parker Coble, Richard Perry Crumpler, Stanley Claudius Harrell, Percy Glyndon Guiter, Iola Graham Johnson, Samuel McCoy Patten, Julia Maude Pritchard, Pearl Gertrude Walker.

HARD TIMES AND MISSIONS.

Gifts to church and charity come from earnings, not from hoarded savings, and depend for quantity and bulk, not on prosperity or ability, but upon loyalty and willingness. It matters not what one has, if one is unwilling to give, one might as well have nothing. The greatest gifts to missions are as a rule, not in years of great financial prosperity, but in times of financial depression. Last year was a hard one in financial circles. Money had not been as close for a long time, and the money market was unusually dull. Now when it might have been expected that offerings for foreign missions in particular would shrink, they increased by $602,000 from the United States and Canada last year. And, points out an exchange: "The income on the foreign mission field was even more remarkable. It increased last year by $1,360,000. The total gifts on the various foreign fields were $4,844,000. This is forty-eight per cent of the total amount contributed to this object by the Protestant Churches of North America. Another striking fact is the increase of native converts last year by 164,674, or over 450 per day. It took about one hundred years to gain the first million converts, or until 1896. The second million were added in twelve years (1896-1908). They are now being added at the rate of a million in six years. While our Church membership in the United States increased one and one-half per cent last year, the increase in the membership of American missions abroad was twelve per cent."

People work for Christ and the church better when money is scarce and times are hard.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONVENTION.

Held Under the Auspices of the Young People's Department of the Southern Christian Convention, Elon College, N. C., May 29-31, 1909.

—The Confederate Veterans reunion will be held this year at Memphis, Tenn., June 8-10.

—The Seaboard Railroad lost by fire early Sunday a. m. 16th inst. the general warehouse at Portsmouth, Va., entailing a loss of over $100,000. The origin of the blaze was unknown.

—Two young men of prominent families, William Bailey and R. M. Young, of Lee county, Va., shot and killed each other in an altercation with another man at a school breaking, near Roanoke, Va., May 13. The altercation was over tickets of admission, the young men trying to shoot the door keeper, but missed him and shot each other. The wages of sin is death.

DO YOU WANT TO GO TO COLLEGE NEXT YEAR?

Then Here is Your Opportunity.

We want to help you: You can help us, and by so doing help your self.

READ OUR OFFERS.

To any young man or young woman, approved of good moral character and recommended by his or her pastor, sending us 300 new subscribers to The Christian Sun for one year at $1.50 each, by Sept. 1, 1909, we will give a scholarship in Elon College for the scholastic year of 1909, and 1910—one full school year. This scholarship will include Board, Furnished Room, Tuition, Matriculation and Library Fees. (Board and Room at either of the college dormitories, or with private family as individual may prefer):

Or, For 225 New Subscribers $1.50 each, Board and Room at any place individual may select; or Board, and vacant room at Young Men's Boarding Club, Tuition Matriculation and Library Fees.

HOW TO TEACH THE S. S. LESSON
FOR MAY 30, 1909
A Few Suggestions.

Believing and Doing

Jas. 2:14-26.

Golden Text:—Faith without works is dead, Jas. 2:20.

Review.—Review the previous lesson thoroughly, especially that portion of it which covers the part James took in the Jerusalem Council. Call for the note books: make suggestions: have one of them read.

Setting of the Lesson.—The lesson today is a break in the Chronological study of the Acts, introducing us more fully to the saintly James. Call for the assigned work on his life and for the outline study of his epistle, which also was assigned. If the fact is not brought out in this assigned work, state to the class that the epistle was likely written about 62 A. D. (some say as early as 40 or 50 A. D.) and to professing Christians.

The Lesson.—The lesson divides readily into two parts, which write on the board as the topical outline as they are developed in the teaching:

I. Dead Faith Illustrated, verses 14-20. Find with what question the lesson begins, with what question this one is followed, what first example of dead charity is given, what is said of faith without works, how the apostle declares he will show his faith, what example of dead faith is cited, what repeated statement form is made in regard to faith.

II. Real Faith Illustrated, verses 21-26. Find how Abraham was justified, how his faith was helped, how it was perfected, what quotation is made from the scriptures in regard to Abraham, by what name he was called, what conclusion is reached respecting justification, (Here call for assigned work on Abraham's offering of Isaac, Gen. 22:1-19) how Rahab was justified, what illustration is given of the relation of faith to works, (Here call for assigned work on Rahab's services to the spies, Josh. 2:1-22; Josh. 6:22-23).

Review the lesson by the topic method.

For Class Discussion:—The relation between Paul's justification by faith and James' idea of works as stated in today's lesson. The influence of a man's religious beliefs over his life.

Truths and Their Application:—I. Paul and James are not fighting each other. They approach the Christian life from different standpoints. Paul's justification by faith and James' justification by works are as the positive and negative poles of an electric battery. They are not combating each other: they are as two warriors, standing back to back, both fighting the same enemy, but on different sides. No amount of faith alone will save a man: no end of works alone will save a man. It takes both faith and works to make a true Christian.

II. Orthodoxy of life is the important orthodoxy after all. Orthodoxy of belief is important too, but our beliefs, no matter how orthodox, if they are inoperative, are valueless. We do not need less orthodoxy of belief, but more orthodoxy of life. By no means let us commit the fatal error of supposing that heresy in a man's beliefs guarantees a saner orthodoxy in his life.

III. Works of faith are in the reach of all. Kind words, pleasant smiles, friendly visits, the sympathizing tear, cups of cold water given in his name—these are opportunities for the work of a genuine, living, real faith. Let no Christian despair of his opportunities: this world is an arena of golden opportunities, which all of us may reap, to the betterment of life and to our personal salvation.

Assignments for Next Time:—Ask two pupils to memorize alternating verses of the whole lesson and to be prepared to recite them before the entire class; a second to see what the Bible says about the power of the tongue from Prov. 18:21 and Jas. 3:2-13; a third what it says about right speaking from Psa. 145:5-12; Prov. 12:22; Eccl. 3:7; Mal. 3:16; Gal. 4:6; 1 Peter 3:9-10; a fourth what it teaches about ignoble speech, Job. 38:2; Psa. 70:3; Prov. 18:7,13; Matt. 12:36-37; 1 Tim. 5:13; 2 Peter 2:10; a fifth what it teaches about swearing, Ex. 20:7; Lev. 19:12; Jer. 23:10; Matt. 5:33-37; Jas. 5:12; a sixth on how to govern the tongue, Judg. 8:1-3; Job. 13:5; Matt 5:23; Matt. 12:34; Eph. 4:29-32; Jas. 1:19, 26.

Elon College, N. C. W. A. Harper.

THE S. S. LESSON FOR MAY 23, 1909.

The Council at Jerusalem.

Acts 15:1-35.

Golden Text:—We believe that we shall be saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus in like manner as they. Acts 15:11.

The church at Antioch had rejoiced over the evidence that God had opened wide the door of faith to the Gentiles. This was not so difficult as a very large proportion were of Gentile origin.

With the Judean brethren it was different. Biased by early training and narrowed by prevailing conditions they heard with astonishment that a multitude of Gentiles had been recognized as Christians just as they were.

Busybodies.

Yes, busybodies. While Paul was away carrying to the front the gospel, there was an easy time at Jerusalem. There were "stay at homes" and they are not all dead yet. They agitate troublesome questions and perplex the church. They were troubled to find out whether a man must be a Jew to be saved. Paul had to come back and fight this stir. It was turning good people away from truth. Peter had to have a vision from heaven to get his bearing and set his head clear to thinking.

A Stirring Up.

In spite of all that had been taught there was quite a "stirring up." This is a sign of religious life when agitation is going on.

Whether orthodox or not an honest investigation will bring about thinking and thinking upon the truth brings conviction of error and conviction leads to a turning from error to truth from darkness unto light. Agitation brings to realization in active form latent powers. That church which is at perfect peace may be in a complete state of stagnation and soon to turn the road toward retrogression. That Sunday-school which is satisfied with past achievements and present opportunities unimproved is already wrapped in the robes of indolence and is soon to be buried in the field of oblivion.

Business is Religious.

He at Jerusalem, 1900 years ago, the men who were Judaisers were at variance with the Gentiles who were coming rapidly into the church. The apostles and elders saw that for the church to prosper they must get together and reason with each other and find for a truth that Jew and Gentile alike were saved by the same salvation which was to them and us a gift from the same Jehovah. Now this was a perplexing situation and it took a convention of the best to talk these matters over and get together in a successful movement.

The world recognizes the power in conventions and everything moves through the spirit of the conventions. Everything and everybody plans for, and works with the convention. The convention idea is to rub ourselves up against the best that there is in other good folks. In religion, in politics and commerce, God is bringing the human race into one mind and one spirit. We are preparing for the great judgment when the wheat shall from the fields over all Christendom shall be gathered into one garner and all the tares separated forever.

Give us the conventions, the conferences, the class meetings, synods and convocations with full attendance and the fires of our Sunday-school enthusiasm will sweep with mighty force along the lines of Christians, otherwise unapproachable.

Open Doors to Homes

"Brethren" was a new name 1900 years ago. A man of another nation or family was an enemy barbarous and cruel. Christian work makes all people brethren. When a person is a Christian whether from near or afar he can be received with safety as a beloved brother.

Whether conference or convention, Quaker meeting or an assembly which meets in Christ's name, open go the doors. None open the doors for political gatherings. It is unsafe. But for the religious convention the public opens wide its doors. G. W. T.

THE LESSON LEAVES AND THE NEW TRANSLATION.

The trustees of the Christian Publishing Association do well in sustaining the editor of the Sunday-school literature in his polity of printing both the old and the new translation in connection with the lesson.

In the present condition of the competition, it would not be judicious to seem to dictate to the people which version they should use; for it would apparently withdraw from them opportunity to observe the peculiarities and merits of the two; thus misleading the people by seeming to indicate that the superiority of the new version is not sufficient to cause it to be used, if the reading of both were fully free.

Besides, it would put the managers into the attitude of small popes; indicating more than doctrine to the people;—even the very translation they must use.

Thus the managers would stand between the student and his Master, by turning him from the translation of his choice to the Lord's words as WE "brogue" or "patois" them. For the best language of earth, spoken by the most highly educated native, is only a miserable dialect of the language of Paradise. We surely do not wish to be lords about the Word of the Lord.

To take advantage of our public would hardly be fully generous. Jesus treated his disciples more kindly; saying to them, "I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now."

Wherein would we be superior to the creedists, if we should compel our people, without their having expressed their will on the subject, to accept a certain translation made by fallible men? That polity would enable publishers to have greater power over the doctrines of the people than even creedists assume: for if we may force one translation, we may force another. If we may force a version, we may force supposed improvements of that version (which may possibly not be improvements), containing our own views of doctrine, which are thus forced on the public more irresistibly than creedists dictate their doctrines. We may even go to the length of forcing a full version upon the people, which might by some scholars be called a PER-version.

But even creedists do not meddle, by taking advantage of their printing or publishing opportunities, with the popular choice of the people as to the Word of the Lord. How much greater power over the doctrines of the people we would have (if we should force a translation), than the creedists have!

And this power would rest, not in the hands of scholars chosen by the people to translate for them, nor in the hands of representatives chosen for their correctness of belief, (however scholarly or correct our trustees may be), but in the hands of brethren chosen because of their business knowledge and financial honesty, or because of their denominational influence of local prominence in geographical sections of the country:—solely to manage business.

In considering such a subject as this, great care should be taken not to stigmatize as prejudice the favor felt by many for the old translation. It is easy to ridicule conservatism unwisely. Remember that the "old fogy" has become old, because he has through life chosen the safer and better way, the way that conduced to permanence and success; while those who ridiculed his notions have gone down in the struggle of life, and disappeared. "Prejudice" should be overthrown by sound reasoning, not by force.

And I think that for the trustees to print only the new translation with the lessons would have no effect in removing prejudice for the old translation; it would only excite prejudice against the lesson leaves.

What I say does not come from my own "prejudice" for the old translation. Because, long before the American Committee authorized the publication of their translation, I was using their translation as issued by the American Baptist Publication Society, having bought a number of copies of it when it first appeared. This I used, except when quoting from memory, (although the Society, from business reasons, soon tried to suppress their editions), until the American Committee issued their version still further improved.

Our trustees have done well to sustain the S. S. editor in printing the old translation together with the new, because love for the old translation is largely the vehicle that carries the new into use. For many a saint that attends Sunday-school has learned much of the old translation by heart. Its phrases are precious. Its words are his delight. Many of them are connected with his deep spiritual experiences. Many of them had influence over his heart in the days of his conversion. Although he knows as well as anybody that the King James translators made those phrases and shaped those sentences, because of his own history they have become for him the Word of the Lord. It was through them that the Spirit spake unto his heart.

But when the new phrases are substituted for the old, the slight variation often made as if merely to make variation (as it seems to him), jars on his spiritual susceptibilities, and is really offensive. Shall we tear to pieces his prejudices, by depriving him even of the sight of his old loved words in the lesson leaves? It is sufficient shock for him to yield to the general reading. . . . The Golden Rule ought to have influence even in religious things.

If the new version were perfect (laying aside considerations of liberty and spirituality), the argument for suppressing the old translation might not be so weak. But I am not aware that any one contends that the new version is perfect. The only plea is that it is better than the old one. As a matter of fact, we all know that the new translation must work its way slowly; because the number of changes is too great in comparison with the number of improvements.

Although there is no question of the general honesty and delicate conscientiousness of the translators, there are occasional lapses into gross doctrinal mistranslations, evidently intended to harmonize with the belief of the translators, though not supported by the Greek text.

There are mistranslations caused by the personal location or experience or habit of the translators.

There are printers' errors and variations of typography, in various editions of the new translation, which no one would consider in any sense authoritative; not even the present publishers. To illustrate this point, I quote a portion of a letter from the publishers, Thomas Nelson and Sons, where they

THE BOOK OF LIFE.
The Higher and The Highest Critics.

When Sir Walter Scott, that master genius of romance literature, himself the author of a score of books, and one of the most voluminous readers that ever wrote, said when dying, "Bring me the book." Lockhart, standing by, inquired, "What book?" Scott replied, "There is but one Book now. Bring me the Bible."

In that experience, and a thousand similar, is hidden the secret of the Bible's strength. It is a book of life. The lines that go out from it strike deep into the soul of man. Human experience finds its story all told there. As long as the Bible answers to the demands of life, meets the requirements of experience, and yields to the aspirations of heart and soul, no higher criticism need be feared. Having stood the test of the highest criticism, life and experience, it has nothing to fear from higher or lower criticism. The highest critics have gone to the Book, put it to the test, demanded it in the exigencies, and found it not wanting. Since it has stood all the tests of the highest, the higher can have little weight in its undoing.
