One of the most interesting things the traveler in Italy sees is the excavation still going on at Pompeii, by which the scoriae of ancient Vesuvian eruption are being carefully removed from the buried city. It is never known at what stroke the pick or shovel will uncover some relic of great interest and priceless worth. Report was made recently that workmen who were digging for a foundation of a new building outside of the area of the buried city found the body of a woman which had been petrified. Both hands were full of jewels. Evidently the woman fled from the eruption of the fateful mountain and was caught and buried in the down-pour of hot ashes. The jewels are excellently preserved, having been protected from the lava by the body. They consist of bracelets, necklaces, rings, amulets studded with gems, and a pair of ear-rings, which are probably unique. They may be the most valuable specimens of ancient jewelry ever discovered. Each ear-ring contains twenty one perfect pearls set in gold in imitation of a bunch of grapes. What a tragedy is revealed in that petrified corpse still grasping those jewels in its hand! The oncoming rush of darkness and ashes, the attempted escape with the precious treasure closely gript in the hand, the deluge of burning scoriae that finally overwhelmed the unhappy woman—all is laid bare by the spade as tho it happened but yesterday. And is not the same fate overtaking many in this day? How many are searching for and grasping after jewels and gold, wealth and fashion and pleasure, while careless of their souls and the oncoming judgment?—Presbyterian Standard.

WARNING THE PEOPLE.

(Hear the word at my mouth, and give the warning from me. Ezekiel 3:17. Golden Text for Sunday, Oct. 1).

Ezekiel was a prophet who spoke in no uncertain tones. There was no doubt in him. He knew by Whom he was sent. There was no wavering, neither shadow of turning, with him. He did not say "I am of the opinion," "my inclination is to believe that," "I reckon that the correct view is," and a whole lot more of the present day lob-lolly and palavering in the pulpit. Ezekiel understood and realized that he was chosen and called of God to do a very definite line of work. "The word of Jehovah came unto me, saying, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore hear the word at my mouth, and give them warning from me." Ezekiel went before his people with the "Thus saith the Lord" burning in his heart and fresh upon his lips.

If the ministry of our day is weak in results it is not because the world no longer needs the ministerial message, nor because the message itself has lost anything of its fullness and freshness. It is because the ministry wavers and falters with doubt and uncertainty. The minister whose heart is upon the altar and goes with the "Thus saith the Lord" upon his lips is as effectual as he ever was.

Ezekiel was a pessimist as to his people and their moral and spiritual condition; but he was an optimist as to the power of God, as to the character of God. Everything else might fail; God stood steadfast. He went not depending on the people, not even on what they would say or think about his words and his work. Ezekiel went forth depending upon God. You cannot hush the mouth of a man like that. You cannot stop nor stay his message. Such a man has a zeal born of God which the coolness and the indifference of the multitudes cannot silence. The Book, with all its weight and wonder, had become a part of Ezekiel's being. The figure is indeed a strong and striking one; he had been caused, he said, to eat the Book. That is more than reading it; that is appropriating it.

And the Book, when appropriated, was sweet to Ezekiel. There are books which if you eat would prove a deadly poison indeed. To appropriate them means moral nausea and spiritual death. But the Bible, when appropriated, when digested, when taken within, is sweet, is wholesome, is life-giving. "All scripture," said Paul to Timothy, II Tim. 3:16, "is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Scripture will not hurt, but will always help when appropriated.

Here, then, is the burden of the message of our day, as of Ezekiel's and of Timothy's, "Preach the word, be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine."

The preacher is to be the bearer of the message of instruction and of warning from God, from the Book of God, and if the people will not then hear the fault is with them, and the blame not with him. The Word of God is a solid rock from which the true warning may be sent out.

THE CHRISTIANS' BELIEF.

We have heard it advanced that, the people who are content to be called Christians only, believe so many things that there is no common standing ground amongst them; that they believe and teach nothing in particular. This is a very great and grave error. We have found members of Christian churches who believed many and sundry things, as is true of all thinking people everywhere; but we never have yet found any number of members of Christian churches who doubted the validity of, or called into question the scriptural truths enunciated in, what is termed, The Five Cardinal Principles of the Christian Church, to-wit:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church. (Col. 1:18; Eph. 1:22, 23).

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church. (Isa. 62: 2; Acts 11:26).

3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. (II Tim. 3:16,17; Psa. 19:7, 8, 11.)

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership. (Matt. 7:21; Jno. 1:12, 3:15).

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all. (Rom. 14:4; Matt. 15: 9. Gal. 5:13).

We have on sale in The Christian Sun office, Elon College, N. C., a small book entitled "The Christian Church" which contains these Cardinal Principles, and what the Christians believe and teach as touching these and many other scriptural matters about which there is common, if not universal belief amongst us. The book, post paid in paper binding is 25 cts. the copy; flexible cloth, 35 cents; cloth, 50 cts., manilla with the name of purchaser in gold, $1.25.

If one doubts, does not know, or really cares for, the faith, the doctrine, and the ground of belief, of the Christian Church, let such an one possess himself of this book and read it. It is worth while.

HOME MISSION BOARD MEETS...

The Home Mission Board of the Southern Convention met in Greensboro last Wednesday, Sept. 20. The members present were: Col. J. E. West, Suffolk; Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., and J. O. Atkinson, Elon college. The two absent members were, Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, and K. B. Johnson, Cardenas, N. C., both of whom were confined to their homes with illness. Rev. W. G. Clements, Morrisville, and C. H. Stephenson, Raleigh, were present with petitions and appeals, the former for Chapel Hill, the latter for Raleigh.

The items of general interest passed upon were:

That we send 15 per cent. of all collections from our Southern Conferences for Convention Missions this year to the A. C. C. Board as per order of the Southern Convention at Suffolk (see last Annual). Appropriation of $1250.00 for the work the ensuing year as follows:

Winchester, Va.,	$100
Henderson, N. C.,	50
Columbus, Ga.,	350
Portsmouth, Va.	200
Third Church, Norfolk,	200
Chapel Hill, N. C.,	100
Raleigh, N. C.,	250

(The amount to Raleigh was conditional, it being made to appear that $5,000.00 is to be raised for building a new and improved house of worship, and that the $4,500.00 can be raised if this Board will guarantee $500.00. The Board's appropriation is available, $250.00 when the amount of $4,500.00 is on hand and the other $250.00 Dec. 1, 1912, if conditions are fulfilled and the sum called for then. One member of the Raleigh Church pledged $1,000. if conditions are met, and there is a spirit manifest to build a modern and convenient house.—Ed.)

The Board also recommended to the A. C. C. Board the following points as worthy and needful of appropriation: Winchester, Va., Columbus, Ga., South Norfolk, Va., Portsmouth, Va., Third Church, Norfolk, Chapel Hill, Lambert's Point, Raleigh.

The Board will undertake to do some work along the lines of publicity in behalf of giving and of missions the coming year. The desire of the Board is to create the spirit of missions and develop the desire among our people to do more for the cause of missions. Some tracts and pamphlets are to be published and distributed to this end.

LIFE OF REV. H. Y. RUSH, D. D.

This excellent book contains about 300 pages. It is divided into two parts. Part I. Life and Letters, about 120 pages. Part II Sermons, Addresses, Miscellaneous Writings, etc.—about 200 pages.

There are five good portraits of Dr. Rush's home life. It is printed on best egg-shell paper and is bound in best grade of cloth with gilt title on back and front cover.

The Introduction to Part I is by Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., and that to Part II by Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D. Estimates, Reminiscences and Tributes are furnished by Rev. D. E. Millard, D. D., J. B. Weston, D. D., S. S. Newhouse, D. D. Rev. D. A. Long, D. D. Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., furnishes a beautiful letter. Dr. Rush was a native of Randolph County, N. C., and though spending most of a busy and fruitful life in Ohio and the West never lost his love for the State of his nativity and for the South. For years Dr. Rush was a regular contributor to The Christian Sun and his letters were read with interest and profit. The book is well edited, tastefully printed and elegantly bound. We shall write more fully of the volume later. If any Sun readers desire a copy, and many should, we will supply it at the regular price, $1.25 post paid. All orders sent to The Christian Sun office, Elon College, N. C., will be promptly attended to.

AN IMMORTAL LETTER.

At a sale of ancient documents, old letters and such, in Paris recently, J. Pierpont Morgan bought a letter written by Martin Luther, to the Emperor Charles, for the sum of $25,000. At the same sale there were other valuable letters written by the world's great and famous who are long since gone, but none brought over one tenth of what the Luther letter sold for. And now the papers in Paris are astonished that "the signature of a religious reformer could be valued at more than those of really great men"

Now if Luther was not a really great man there have not been any; though of course Catholic France has not found it out yet.

The Emperor Charles had been led to think that Luther was a disobedient and hazardous subject, and gave him to know as much. In reply, this letter still extant as written, in a bold and fearless manner, was sent, and its spirit is that of a good and great man:

"God is my witness that I am ready to obey your Majesty with eagerness, in glory or in shame, in life or in death. I always have been, and am, ready for every sacrifice save that of God's Word by which we have life. Since it is higher than all else, it ought to be free to every one.

"In that which concerns eternal things, God does not allow a man to submit himself to another. He intends that all and everything should be under Him alone. This faith, this submission to Him is the true worship, the real adoration to which no creature has a right. To trust in man in those things which have to do with eternal salvation is to render to the creature glory due to God alone."

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

A Man's Measure.

Far be it from us to interfere with the perfectly beautiful fight—if there are such fights—now going on between Col. Wade Harris, of The Chronicle, and "Major"—how come "Major?"—John B. Sherrill of the Concord Times. These both are brethren and will finally kiss and make up. It seems that the growing town of Concord passed an ordinance that trains must pay proper respect to that thriving population by running only so fast and coming to a dead stop now and then within the corporate limits of said town. Whereupon Col. Harris, who was bred and brought up in Concord but has since departed from the place of his nativity and hied him away to the more pretentious city of Charlotte, sharply criticises the place of his birth for its naughtiness to the rail roads. Then what Major Sherrill says in reply about its wayward and ungrateful son is a plenty. Nothing abashed the Colonel comes back with these plaintive words: "When we are brought to final account for the lies we have told in behalf of Concord, in the course of a long news-paper career, we shall expect to look around in vain for any Concord angel to put in a word in extenuation for our sins in that respect. Towns, like republics, are always ungrateful."

Now here is where we come in. We want to assure The Chronicle's editor that he was never worse mistaken before in interpreting human nature and the disposition of angels. Why, Colonel, we haven't the first doubt but that when you get to that brighter and better world the very first throng of angels to greet and gladden you will be of the Concord type. Every fellow that tires to speak the truth in love and do his full duty gets raked fore and aft; but it comes around all right finally.

Every fellow gets finally measured for his full worth. Do not be alarmed. A man gets his dues today, or tomorrow, or next year or in the next century.

I have heard it said that the people will scatter palm leaves in your path and tomorrow will cry "Crucify him, crucify him." Now that phrase goes far, but not far enough. If they crucify him today, wrongfully and unrighteously, as the ages come there will be, not multitudes to scatter palm leaves, but millions to worship His name as the ages go.

Republics unjust? Well they may seem so for a day, a month, a year. They do not remain so. Columbus gets his dues—finally. So Cromwell and Luther and Napoleon and Josephine and Marie Antoinette and Aaron Burr and Hamilton and Jefferson and all the rest. The world's immediate judgment may be hard and cruel and killing. But justice finally prevails. The right wins out. In this decade, or that to come, a man's eulogy gets pronounced in fitting terms.

Don't be alarmed, Colonel, the Concord angels will be all right, even if their forms, embodied in this earthly clay, shall seem cold and cruel and killing. Every man will get his dues and the angels will be all right.

CHURCH.

(A sermon preached in North Highlands Church, Columbus, Ga., by Rev. Clyde Cooper and published by request.)

The Church is purely a New Testament organization, and the word itself is entirely a New Testament word. The word "Church" does not occur in the Old Testament. The Church of the New Testament is parallel with Israel (Israh—Prince; El—God. i. e., A Prince of God) of the Old Testament, and just as "All who are of Israel are not Israel," and only a Remnant shall be saved," so it is with the Church: All who are of the Church are not the Church, and only a remnant shall be saved. The Greek word translated Church is "Ekklesia," from Ek—out of, away, from, and Klesia, from Kaleo—to call; therefore, we see the Church consists of such people as have separated themselves from the world. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." 2 Cor. 6:17. This does not mean that we are to come out of the different organizations or denominations. We must admit that the different denominations, to a large extent, have deviated from the true teaching of God's Word, and a great majority of the members are only unconverted professors, but God does not want men to "come out." He wants them to "come in" and let their light shine and make an effort to save those who are unregenerated. Christ would never have organized the Church if He did not want members. The doctrine of "come-outism" is absolutely unscriptural, and without a foundation except in error, and a false theory.

The earliest form of the Church is seen in Gen. 4: 3-14, where Cain and Abel offered sacrifices to God. This form is the altar, and while the Scripture does not state directly that Cain and Abel had an altar, we are left to infer that they did. The idea conveyed by the altar is to sacrifice to God, and it was used as a meeting place for God and His people; a place to return thanks for all His benefits to the children of men, and to typify the atonement of Christ. Christ is our altar. Heb. 13:10. The first direct mention of the altar is in Gen. 5:20, and we find the same idea connected with it, i. e., to sacrifice to God; a place for God and His people to meet, and a place to return thanks unto God. When Noah came out of the ark, the first thing he did was to rear an altar to Jehovah. The altar as used originally continued some 2500 years. It then evolved into the tabernacle.

During the days of Moses, about B. C. 1490, God spake to him and commanded him to build a tabernacle, but by no means was the altar done away with, nor was it or its purpose changed. It was the same altar with the same idea, only for the sake of convenience it had a tent over and around it; a place where God's people could go and communicate with Him. The tabernacle continued about 490 years. It then developed into the temple.

There were three temples. During King Solomon's reign, about B. C. 1011, God commanded him to build a temple. In this temple we find identically the same altar and the same tabernacle, with the same idea attached to them. Only for the sake of convenience another addition was made on the outside, and it was more beautiful and elaborate than the tabernacle. This temple was destroyed about B. C. 587 when Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, captured and destroyed Jerusalem. About B. C. 515 Zerubbabel re-built it. This one went to decay and dilapidation, and was re-built by Herod the Great, beginning about B. C. 20. It was not finished until 65 A. D., just 5 years before the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus. It had been under construction 46 years when Christ began His ministry. John 2: 20.

About B. C. 440 Ezra instituted what was called the synagogue, which was in use during the life of Jesus. Practically the same idea as was in the altar and tabernacle was adhered to in this institution.

It is rather a difficult matter to tell just when the Church was organized. The word "Church" does not occur but three times in the Bible before the Acts of the Apostles. In Matt. 16:18 and Matt. 18:17. In Matt. 16: 18, when Peter made his great confession, Jesus said to him, "On this rock I will build my Church." The words "I will" signify that it had not been built at that time. In the second chapter of Acts, on the day of Pentecost, when Peter preached that noble sermon at the "Third hour of the day" immediately after receiving the Holy Ghost, we find the statement, "And the same day there were added unto the Church about 3000 souls." And at the "Ninth hour," he preached again and about 5000 believed. 8000 converts the first day. We have no definite statement just when the Church was organized, but we know it was between the time of Peter's confession (Matt. 16:18) and Pentecost, and we have a right to infer that it was organized on the day of Pentecost when the disciples were baptized with the Holy Ghost, thus showing the importance of all Church members being baptized with the Holy Ghost.

There are three kinds of Church members: "Constructors," "Obstructors," and "Destructors;" the Constructors are always building up; the Obstructors do nothing but sit around in the way, and smoke, chew tobacco, dip snuff, tell lies and talk about their neighbors, and thus hinder the work; the Destructors are doing their very best to create a disturbance and tear down the work some one else has built. God delivers us from such a life, and make us to get about our Father's business and be "Constructors."

There is a true Church, and there is a false Church. If there had never been a genuine dollar there would never have been a bogus dollar. When you see a counterfeit quarter, you may know that there is a benefit quarter somewhere, and that some one was trying to imitate it. Just so with Christians. When you see a false professor of holiness, you may rest assured that there is one somewhere that is real, and without a doubt has the blessing, otherwise Satan would not try to palm off these hypocrites on the world as real and genuine. The devil tries to imitate all of God's work. He himself is transformed into an angel of light. The fact that so many profess to be holy, and are not, proves that such a life is possible.

Woman all through the Bible is a type of the Church; when she is pure and virtuous, she represents the true Church, and when impure and full of vice, she represents the false. This will throw some light on the interpretation of "Mystery, Babylon the Great; the Mother of Harlots and abominations of the Earth." However, our subject is the true Church, so we will drop the other side of it.

The true Church has two divisions, i. e., the Church Triumphant and the Church Militant. The Church Triumphant is in Heaven. ("They overcame sin and the Devil, they've reached that fair City at last.") The Church Militant is on earth; a body of people banded together to fight sin. As our subject has to do with the Church Militant, we omit further reference to the Church Triumphant.

Here another important division comes in. The Church Militant is divided into two parts: The Organized Church and the Mystical Church. The organized Church is the people who pledge themselves to put their name and efforts together for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom in this world. The Mystical Church is in and a part of the Organized Church, and consists of such as have really been saved by the Blood of the Lamb. (Only a remnant shall be saved.) We can point out the members of the Organized Church, but we cannot tell which of them constitute the Mystical Church; only God knows that. We may see a good man or woman and think they are a part of it, and they may be, or they may not be; we have no way of telling. This Mystical Church revolving in the Organized Church is like Ezekiel's "Wheel in the middle of a wheel." We will now omit the Organized Church, and look at a few scriptural facts about the Mystical Body.

Origin: Gen. 2:21-23. "And the Lord God caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and He took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead thereof. And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he woman, and brought her unto the man. And Adam said, This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh; she shall be called Woman, because she was taken out of man." When God created Adam, He created the beasts to be his companions, but soon found that there was not found an help meet for Adam, so God caused a deep sleep to fall upon him, and while he was asleep, He took one of his ribs from his side, and out of the rib He made a woman. The word "Woman" is very significant. God did not call her a woman, but Adam. The word signifies "Woe man," as through her, misery and woe came upon man (mankind). After God had made the woman, he presented her to Adam for a wife; a bride. Christ was the second Adam. God caused a deep sleep to fall on him when hanging on the cross of Calvary, while making atonement (Atonement means "At-one-ment." This is why so many churches are powerless; because they are not with one accord.) for a guilty world and while this sleep was upon him, his side was pierced, and there flowed out water and blood, and out of these two, the water and the blood, God made a wife, a bride, for Christ. This is the origin of the Church. The water represents regeneration, and the blood symbolizes sanctification, which two are necessary before we can be presented to Christ a "Chaste Virgin." (2 Cor. 11:2)

We find that Adam said, "This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh." The Apostle Paul says, (Eph. 5:30-33) "For we are members of His body, of His flesh and of His bones," and he states plainly that he is speaking "concerning Christ and the Church." This same apostle tells us (Rom. 8:9) "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His." And also, (Phil. 2:5) "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus." The apostle John says, (Rev. 1:5) "Unto Him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in His own blood." You see from this the relation we have to Christ. Paul tells us (Eph. 6:13-17) to put on the "Whole armour of God." Having our loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God." And you tell me a man in that condition can't keep from sinning!!! I don't believe a word of it.

Portrait: P'sa. 45: 9-14. "Kings' daughters were among thy honorable women: upon thy right hand did stand the queen in gold or Ophir. Hearken, O daughter, and consider, and incline thine ear; forget also thine own people, and thy father's house (John 8:44); so shall the King greatly desire thy beauty; and worship thou him. And the daughter of Tyre shall be there with a gift; even the rich among the people shall entreat thy favor. The King's daughter is all glorious within; her clothing is of wrought gold. She shall be brought unto the King in raiment of needlework; the virgins her companions that follow her shall be brought unto thee." Who is this King's daughter? Christ spake a parable, saying a certain King made a marriage for his Son. All Bible readers know that the King is none other than God the Father, and the Son is none other than Christ, so this "King's Daughter" can be none other save the bride of the King's Son. She is all glorious within. She is pure in heart. Lots of folks have plenty of religion upstairs (head) but none in the cellar (heart). Sometimes folks say we are too close, and too plain, but listen at what Jesus says; (Matt. 23:25-28) "Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess. Thou blind Pharisee! cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also. Woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity." This King's Daughter, the true bride of Christ, the Lamb's wife, is all glorious within.

Aim: Eph. 5: 25-27. "Husbands, love your wives." Allow me to stop long enough here to say that there are two Greek words translated love: "Agape," in this verse, means divine love. "Phillia," (Matt. 10:37) means human love. The veriest harlot in the world would give her life for her child, because she loves it, but that is human love. A man can drink, gamble, break the Sabbath day and take God's name in vain and still love the brethren. The passage where it says "We know that we have passed from death unto life, because we love the brethren," has the word "Agapomen," which means "We love with divine love." This is where so many are deceived. Men and women whom we know by their fruits that they are not converted will stand up and testify to conversion with no other basis than this. Paul tells us in

Rom. 5: 5 that this divine love is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. If you have not got the Holy Ghost, I doubt whether you have got this Divine love in its fullness. Now, back to our subject. "Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the Church (His wife), and gave Himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word, (God pity a man who can see nothing but water baptism in this verse. The water spoken of is the same as that in the fourth chapter of John where Christ was talking to the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well; it is living water. Dr. Godbey says when a man has hydrocephalus, i.e., water on his brain, he can see rivers and lakes where there is not a drop of water. The Devil is likened unto a snake all through the Bible, and if you want a snake to be at home, just put him in the water. You cannot run the Devil out of folks by baptizing them. It takes the blood of Christ and Holy Ghost fire to run him) that He might present it to Himself a glorious Church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." Christ is better than a steam laundry. The Prophet Malachia says (Mal. 3: 2) "He is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' sope." He gives us a thorough washing, (Tit. 3: 5) then sprinkles us with clean water, (Ezek. 36: 25) then he irons the wrinkles out, (Eph. 5: 27) but he uses no starch; He has no stiff-necked or stiff-kneed people. The Devil has gotten hold of a good many people and they are so stiff and starchy they can't even kneel or bow their heads when God wants them to pray. God pity such a man or woman.

Victory: Rev. 12:1. "And there appeared a great wonder (The margin of this reads, "A sign," which means something else signified other than is mentioned) in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet." Here is the woman again. The Church, the Bride of Christ; the Lamb's Wife. She is clothed with the sun. The sun is the king or ruler of the day, which is light, and light represents righteousness, therefore, the sun is a symbol of light; "The Light of the world." (Matt. 5: 14 and John 8: 12). She has put on Christ, (Col. 3: 10). The sun is also an emblem of power and purity. She has the moon under her feet; a position which signifies authority. Just as the sun is king of the day, and represents light, righteousness, so the moon is queen of the night, and represents darkness, sin. The attitude which the woman is in, i.e., trampling the moon under her feet, shows that she has gotten the VICTORY OVER SIN. Glory to God for victory. Thank God for —Rev. Jas. L. Foster, Superintendent of our Orphanage, has been at Southern Pines for several days for treatment of throat, with which he has had much trouble and anxiety, by a specialist.

NOTES AND PERSONALS

—After weeks it seems settled that Me. went against prohibition by a majority of 20. We would like to know how many good cash dollars those 20 votes cost the liquor dealers.

—Rev. A. B. Kindall, Springfield, Ia., has been tendered, and has accepted the call to the pastorate of our Burlington Church. Bro. Kendall, it is understood, will come South and take charge at Burlington about Nov. 15.

—At this writig—Tuesday A. M.—Rev. J. W. Holt is reported as improved and is able now to sit up some. His condition is more favorable. Rev. M. L. Wells supplied fro Bro. Holt at Union, Alabama, last Sunday.

—Rev. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., assisted Rev. H. E. Rountree, Waverly, Va., in a meeting the past week. Rev. A. M. Hanson is to assist Bro. Rowland in a meeting at the Franklin Church beginning first Sunday in October.

—Rev. L. E. Smith begins a meeting of several days with the Greensboro first church this, Wednesday, evening. Rev. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, is to assist him beginning the first of next week. This is a good pair of able men and consecrated Christian workers and great good should result from the meeting.

—Bro. Walters is pushing to successful completion our Winchester, Va., church, and his reports are inspiring, optimistic, hopeful. If a reader can find it in his heart, and within his reach financially, to help a good and worthy work now, Winchester is the place and Bro. Walter's heart will be made glad. His letters and reports have the right ring, and they appeal. In a private note, this is written: "The total amount raised on the building to date is $4134.75. This includes $750 received from mission funds. The building, when completed, with the lot will be worth about $12,000.00. We hope to dedicate at an early date—in October if possible.

—The brethren my indulge in their risibilities all they like about The Raleigh News and Observer's poke-berry juice, but none of them can have any doubt as to where Bro. Daniels stands on prohibition and the sale of another and more deadly juice in this good State. The polk berry showed where Bro. Daniels' heart was on the morning when news was received that Maine had gone right, and that is the main point. So if it turns out that Maine has gone wrong the "Old Reliable" is still holding to the faith, and up to date no man has successfully accused it of being on the dark side of any moral question. We therefore doff to the poke berry. What is a news paper for if it is not to stand up, be counted and let people know where to find it?

—We note with gratification that Kenly High School, Kenly, N. C., has opened with an unusually large enrollment and with most flattering prospects. Elon College folks have a part and a pride in this school, the present President of Elon, having taught there to great acceptance and success some years since, and having a host of life long friends connected with the institution. Prof. S. M. Smith, Mr. D. J. Sipe and other Elon graduates have taught there also and helped to make the school a success. The principal at present is Prof. S. G. Rollings, an Elon graduate of '08, and Mrs. Florine Peace, last year with Elon, is this year in charge of the refectory of the large dormitory. We do not know a high school in the State that has had more solid and successful growth, and Elon graduates have been largely responsible.

—President Harper is meeting with phenomenal success, during the meager time he has had to give to it, in raising money on the Special Fund for Elon College. He was with our Palm Street church last Sunday and among the brethren and friends in Greensboro Monday. Subscriptions were taken, and pledges signed up, for the two days to the amount of $800.00. This makes a total contribution to this fund from Greensboro of $2,100.00 and certainly bespeaks the liberality of our friends and membership there to this enterprise. This Special Fund is a necessity to save and maintain the present status and future development of Elon College, and the response from the brotherhood so far shows the deep concern for, and the abiding interest in, the College and what it is doing to give Christian training, and mental development, to our young men and young women.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Rev. I. W. Johnson has assisted Rev. N. G. Newman in a good meeting at Holland, Va., this week; Rev. M. L. Bryant has assisted Rev. R. H. Peel at Isle of Wight C. House; and I have been with Rev. H. H. Butler at Antioch, Isle of Wight County. All of these meetings were well-attended, manifested a good spirit, and resulted in converts and accessions. The number added at Antioch was twenty, with smaller numbers at other churches. The congregation is larger at Antioch than at Holland and the Court House and that makes the chances better for large additions. To give some idea of the possibilities of the Antioch congregation, it was divided into four groups of families to feed the people for four days of meeting; and each of the four groups contained twenty families, making eighty families in all. It is wonderful to see the dinners. Each group feeds one day and I suppose they fed a thousand people on Thursday and nearly as many on Wednesday and Friday. And such dinners: big Virginia hams; fresh shoat; pecks of fried chicken; great quantities of beef; great pans of cabbage, corn, tomatoes, butter beans, peas, irish potatoes, sweetpotatoes; jars of pickles, bushels of bread, iced tea, milk and cakes. Cart loads came in and the tables groan while the people feast. I think it would be a fair estimate to say those dinners cost $100 each. The Jews never had a better time at their great annual religious feasts than Antioch crowds enjoy. They come from far and near and rejoice together on the ground and in the church. Nothing brings people closer together than eating together. One of the charges the Pharisees and Scribes brought against Jesus was, "This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them." That was the way He got to their hearts. Some say, "these victuals ought to be sold and the money given to missions and church repairs or to increase pastor's salary." When Mary came in at the Bethany supper and broke the alabaster box of very precious ointment and anointed the head and the feet of Jesus. His disciples said: "To what purpose is this waste? This ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor." Judas said: "Why was not this ointment sold for three hundred pence, and given to the poor?" Judas was a little more accurate in his calculations; but he was the worst of the whole set. But Jesus said unto them: "She hath wrought a good work upon me. Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her." "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." I have no doubt churches have given many poor people good dinners who never had a first class dinner in their lives except on church grounds; and some of these poor people have been brought to Christ. A meeting was held once in a country church in eastern North Carolina, I am told, and they had only one convert and that was a poor ragged boy. "What sort of a meeting did you have?" "Not much; only one poor boy professed." That was the way preacher church, and people thought: but that boy became a great preacher and a Bishop in the Methodist Church.

I want to say "Amen" to Dr. Atkinson's eulogy on the life of Miss Jennie Herndon. I was the pastor of her parents at Morrisville, N. C., when Jennie was born; and when she began to talk she used to call me: "Mr. Preacher Staley," and we all thought she was very sweet and bright. I have known her all her lifetime and she has been a great comfort to her parents and she will continue to fill them with love and hope.

It is good news to hear that Bro. J. W. Holt is better and many hearts will continue to pray for his full restoration.

W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Dear Dr. Atkinson and Sun-ny family:

It being my great pleasure to be with Bros. Harrell and Newman on their Northfield tour, I have all the more enjoyed their articles in last week's Sun. But, really, it is amazing that Bro. Newman saw no drunk men in New York City. Yet, what else can one expect from a gentleman who saw "dignified attorneys and millionaires go wild with excitement," who saw cabs and street-cars running both ways," who visited a tomb which cost $600,000, who saw "children playing in an iron cage under the window suspended a hundred feet in the air, who counted the stories of a building until the neck and head grew dizzy and stopped in the twenties," who as a climax lived in the 1365th room of the thirteenth story of a hotel—and as an anti-climax saw a preacher whose salary is twelve thousand dollars per year. No wonder the drunk men could not be seen after such exalted looks! But there are a few drunk men in that mighty city. How sad and angry my heart was as one day I saw a limp, rum-soaked man picked up from beside a saloon door and thrown into a patrol wagon, to be hauled away as a dead beast. Would to God that the men who may vote, and those who hold the power of political office, would drive the saloon from the face of the earth. Yes, I saw one drunk man in New York City.

The Tidewater Sunday School Association met yesterday with the Rosemont church. Final arrangements were made for a banner contest between the schools. The school scoring the highest total of points in per cent of attendance, gain in enrollment, and amount given per capita for all purposes, will receive the banner for the next quarter. If any school wins three successive times, the banner becomes its property. The Association will meet with the Lambert's Point church next time, the first Sunday in January, 1912.

Rally Day was observed with the Portsmouth church Sunday. The attendance was 255. This school has adopted the Star system of recording attendance: the pupil must either be present or send a written excuse of reasonable cause for absence, or may send some new person as a substitute. Any of these secures the star.

Rally Day was also observed at the Third Church. The "Good-Will Circle" had arranged a pretty fern, flower, and golden-rod decoration.

All the pastors report good attendance on Sunday's services. The evening attendance at the Third Church was probably the largest in its history outside of any special occasion. The Third Church will commence a series of meetings on Oct. 8. Rev. W. P. Minton, of Goshen, Indiana, will have charge. Because of his stature, Bro. Minton has been called, "The Little Minister."

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 25, 1911.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Mary Hobby returned to her home in Raleigh last Wednesday, after a visit to her sister, Mrs. M. A. Atkinson.

Rev. J. S. Williams, Asheville, N. C., paid the College a visit on Thursday and made an excellent address to the students at Chapel service.

Prof. Amick occupied the pulpit of the M. P. Church in Burlington Sunday.

The Elon College Weekly has elected the following editors for the current year: Editor-in-chief, Russell A. Campbell; Associate editors, Miss Viola Frazier for the Psiphelian Society, Mr. W. L. Anderson for the Philologist Society, and Mr. C. J. Felton for the Clio Society; Faculty Editor, Prof. T. C. Amick; Alumni editor, Prof. A. Ligette Lincoln. The business Manager is Mr. J. C. Stuart; the secretary, Miss Mabel Farmer; the Vice President, Mr. J. A. Dickey, Jr.; assistant Business Manager, W. P. Lawrence.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Walker and children visited their sister, Mrs. Harper, on Sunday.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson filled the College pulpit to great acceptance on Sunday. He administered the Lord's Supper after the discourse.

Uncle Wellons is visiting friends and relatives in Franklin Co. Mr. Henry May, Lynchburg, Va., is expected to accompany Uncle Wellons on his return to the College. Mr. May is always a welcome visitor to Elon.

Prof. Brannock has moved his family to the Whitesell property and they are delightfully situated there. We are glad to welcome these friends to our community life.

The local church held its fourth quarterly conference on Wednesday night, immediately after the mid-week prayer service. The deacon's report showed the Church in harmony, fellowship, and good working condition. The treasurer's report showed funds in hand to settle pastor's salary and all Conference claims in full and sufficient funds in sight to pay for 150 book racks and 100 Christian Hymnaries. Miss Alene Patton was re-elected Secretary and Mrs. W. A. Harper, treasurer; the pastors were unanimously re-elected, being Revs. J. O. Atkinson and J. W. Wellons. The delegates to Conference are W. P. Lawrence, D. W. Brown, and W. A. Harper; alternates, Miss Jewel Michael, Dr. G. S. Watson, and Mrs. W. P. Lawrence. "We have had a good year" was the unanimous verdict.

Mr. J. Fletcher Somers, the efficient cashier of the Elon Banking and Trust Company, has accepted a position as head book-keeper of the Huffine Hotel, Greensboro, N. C. We are sorry to lose so excellent an official and citizen, but we congratulate the bank on securing a worthy successor in the person of Mr. H. D. Lambeth, who has been agent here for several years.

Mrs. Willis J. Lee leaves for her home on Wednesday of this week. Her presence on the hill is an inspiration and her friends who are everybody here, regret to see her leave us. Would it not be a beautiful thing for Brother and Sister Lee to make Elon their permanent habitation? It has always been the object of their affection and the recipient of the generous benefactions.

The total enrollment is now 221. Thanks friends for your support. You have achieved this success; yours is the praise. But there are doubtful ones yet. I am sure you will do your best. Thanks.

W. A. H.

—Rev. W. S. Long, D. D., pastor, writes that Pleasant Grove, Randolph County, N. C., will erect a nice house of worship. The church has recently enjoyed a wholesome revival and added nearly a half hundred members. It is good for any community when a better church building is contemplated and built. We join with Rev. N. G. Newman in enquiring, Why will many church members insist on living in fine houses and content themselves with worshipping in a cheap and shoddy house? God prospers those who try, and who do the best they can for Him.

Young People's Department.

Devoted to the interests of the Young People's Convention,
Christian Endeavor, Teacher Training and Organized Classes.

Edited by Charles A. Hines, Greensboro, N. C.

THE ORGANIZED CLASS—ITS MISSION.

Whatever may be the views of members on the subject, no organized class can afford to be selfish. It should be too broad for that. For this reason the class should at all times consider that it is a part of the Sunday school, be willing to give up some of its members for teachers and do any and all things that will make a better and more successful Sunday school and church.

The mission of the class is to reach men and bring them into the Sunday school and church; to keep older members of the church in the Sunday school for Bible study; to prevent the young men and young women from losing interest and dropping out; to give young people work to do in the Master's kingdom; to be of mutual assistance and good cheer to each other.

There are many things the organized class can do to assist the church and the Sunday school. In some schools this class provides the ushers; in another it agrees to canvass the church membership. As said before, the class should at all times be ready and willing to lend one of its members for a teacher—I use the word "lend" because you can still keep his name on your roll.

The class should be especially active in times of revival if there be unsaved members in the class make an effort to reach them. The class might hold private prayer-meetings of its own members. It might use personal work and plans in getting people to attend. If a man's class, it might provide a male quartet; if girls' class, solos and choruses. In many churches there is a great need of young people taking hold of the music.

The members can find much to do in the line of philanthropic work. No kind of joy will bring more joy or service or give the class a better name. Five dollars given to the poor or sick will do definitely more good than $25 spent on banquets or furniture for the class room. In the class, members should help one another. They should be as brothers, know each others needs and be ready to supply them.

Every organized class should spend the usual time each Sunday on the study of the Bible, and business must not crowd out this part of the class activity. If necessary hold business meetings in the week. The class should be interested in organizing other classes and in carrying forward the work which holds them together.

Big Brother of Sunday School.

The adult Bible classes should be the "big brothers" and "big sisters" of the Sunday School of which they are a part. This relationship may be shown by:

(a) Furnishing substitute teachers. A number of teachers' journals may be taken regularly by the class and distributed one week in advance to those who are willing to substitute. This helps them to be prepared and prevents excuses when teachers are needed.

(b) Providing recruits for the training class. Be ever on the alert to discover those specially fitted to enter a training class. Make it the best recruiting ground for workers, and when any one consents to accept such service, rejoice at this evidence of God's blessing upon the class.

(c) Keeping the class informed as to the work and needs of the entire school. In every way co-operate with the superintendent that the whole school may move forward in a unity that will bring large success to the kingdom.

Should Assist the Church.

A healthy and even spiritual life will be most surely cultivated in the class by enlisting all members in the regular services and enterprises of the Church. The following suggestions are offered:

(a) Endeavor to get the members to attend the regular preaching and prayer meeting services. Sometimes it will help the committee in this work if a record is kept of those who do attend.

(b) Organize quartettes and choruses and offer their help, as well as that of the Personal Workers' Leagues, in any evangelistic services.

(c) Occasionally have one or more of the adult classes of the school assume entire responsibility for the regular preaching or prayermeeting services. This has been found particularly helpful through the heated season, when the interest and the attendance are likely to decrease.

(d) Interest all in the regular missionary enterprises of the Church and denomination. Systematically disseminate information in regard to world wide evangelization.

Promote Bible Study.

A strong, healthful spiritual life is impossible in the class without an earnest personal study of God's Word on the part of its members. To encourage this, the following suggestions are offered:

(a) Request the members to bring their own Bibles. Provide Bibles for those who do not bring them, that each may have a Bible in his own hand. The very reading of God's Word is of the greatest value.

(b) Assign definite work to different members of the class. One may be appointed the Orientalist, another the Historian, etc., each to be responsible for his special features in the lesson. Questions for discussion may be prepared on the lesson by the members of the class and many other forms of assignment devised.

Sun., Oct. 8. Topic—New Work Our Society Might Do. Matt. 25:13-30. (Led by the executive committee).

This meeting is to be led by the executive committee, with the president in the chair. The members of the executive committee should sit at the front and all participate in the meeting. The president had best arrange a sort of program in advance. Each committeeman should speak in turn and suggest new work that his committee has undertaken or might do. Not only this, but suggestions should come also from members. Perhaps the committeeman have used all the schemes they have or no new work occurs to them, while the outsider may think of a number of things that the committeeman would not.

Look-out Committee. To this committee should occur a number of matters of new work for the society; new plans for obtaining members; suggest a membership campaign, or provide for the mid-week church prayer meeting by having one fourth of the members of the society go and assist in one meeting each month.

The Prayer Meeting Committee should have new plans for getting the members of the society to participate in the meetings. This is something that many socie-tics fail in doing. Some members dearly love to talk and are willing to take up the time of the backward member, but this is not the thing to do. Outtime a plan of giving some member something to do each time—either a quotation from the Bible or some author, a sentence prayer, or something to read. If this is adopted by the society, let the committee agree to see that the assignments are made.

The Social Committee should be ready with a bunch of suggestions, for the chances are it has not done anything during the summer. Now is the time to have two or three business and social meetings and get the members lined up for definite, aggressive work.

The Missionary Committee should suggest some special missionary meetings in the church, with addresses by men who are familiar with the great mission work now being undertaken, namely, "The Evangelization of the World in this generation." It should also suggest the idea of an every member canvass in the Sunday school, in the church and in the society, and get every one to agree to give a certain amount weekly for missions.

The music committee, the flower committee, the temperance committee, the Sunday School committee, the Junior committee and the good literature committee should all have good suggestions to make. Some of them might be made here. It is better, however, for the committee to study the needs of its particular society and make suggestions suited to it.

Every one should take the opportunity of pledging to do better and more faithful committee work. The time has come when committees must give time, attention and serious thought to the work of the society.

Some Thoughts for Committees.

A question box on the pledge, to be opened by a good speaker, will enforce the pledge. Ask the members to speak frankly about their failures and successes in pledge-keeping.

Sentence prayers are the best school of prayer, and no Christian Endeavor meeting should be without them. The leader—may call for them. Sometimes ask that all the members of the society offer a sentence prayer in order as they sit. This will open many mouths in prayer.

A soul-winning society will give an opportunity for Christian decisions often in the prayer meetings. Train the different members in this important service. Such a society considers its associate members its most important field of work, and does not rest till they are all Christians.

In many communities the social life of the young people has not risen above cards, dancing, and the theatre. There our Christian Endeavor social committees have a great public service to perform.

In seeking to substitute a better social life for the young, nothing numby-pamby will serve the purpose. The Christian Endeavor socials will never supplant the card party unless they are made more interesting.

The social committee must study hard and work hard, and rather have one first-class social a year than ten poor ones. In planning your socials, utilize all whom you can. People enjoy and value what they have helped to create. Trust to people's good impulses. Appeal to the best in them. In the end you will succeed, and your triumph will be great.

Committee work teaches persistence. You will meet with many hindrances, and gain strength in overcoming them.

Committee work in our societies teaches us how to do the larger committee work of the church, and trains up the church workers of coming years.

A good motto for any committee is Paul's words to Timothy: "Keep that which is committed to thy trust."

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE ABOUT IT.

Did you make a subscription to the work of the Young People's Convention? If so, the treasurer and other officers expect you to pay it. They need the money to carry on the work of the convention. They can't take up time and money writing and calling upon you for the amount. If you love the cause of the Lord, there should be no occasion for this. Please send the money in at once.

If you have not subscribed, now is the time to make a free will offering that will be appreciated and that will do great good in the cause. Send all contributions to Rev. L. I. Cox, treas., Elon College, N. C.

The following amounts have been paid to the treasurer since the last report: Sam Boggs, $1.00; Dr. E. L. Moffitt, $2.50; Mrs. O. B. Williams, $1.00; total, $4.50.

a realization of membership in the true, mystical body of Christ.

Culmination: Rev. 21: 1-2. "And I saw a new heaven, and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; And there was no more sea. And I John saw the Holy City, New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a Bride adorned for her husband." This gives us a view of the Church immediately after the great tribulation, coming down out of heaven; where she was caught up to meet her Lord in the air. A city is not composed of houses, streets, etc., primarily speaking, but inhabitants; the houses only being for the citizens to live in. If every man, woman and child were to leave Columbus, you would call this a wilderness, and not a city. This woman is adorned for her husband. She is arrayed in raiment of fine needlework, the wedding garment, fine linen, which is the righteousness of the saints.

Now let us all examine ourselves, and see for ourselves, and be sure that we are "Church Members."

A Church is like those out fishing: if they sit in the tent on the river bank and tell yarns and jokes, smoke and chew tobacco, they will never catch any fish. What they will have to do is to go where the fish are, with nets, hooks, lines and poles, and the RIGHT kind of bait, and then they will have no trouble catching them. The biggest trouble with our fishing is we string the fish as soon as we catch them, without cleaning them and scraping the scales off, and they spoil on our hands. They must be cleaned and then salted down. (Matt.5: 13)

THE PERIL OF NEW BLESSINGS.

Every new spiritual blessing from God is a fresh challenge to Satan. And Satan is never slow to accept such a challenge. The closer into the heart of God we are drawn, the more sensitive we find ourselves to the lack of God's presence in certain lives about us. Then we begin to be thankful that we are not as they are: spiritual Pharisaism sets in: and Satan has scored. But out of the failure God can wring a blessing for us, if we let it teach us this new peril of the more advanced Christian life. Our safety is to know that this temptation lies in wait for us, and to commit it to Christ before it strikes again, or even as it tries to strike. In every life we can see rare beauty if we let Christ look from our eyes. He who gives us the new blessings which invite new temptations can give us more than enough new grace for their dissolving.—Selected.

THANKS.

Mrs. C. C. Peel, of Elon College, N. C., desires to express her appreciation and extend her thanks to Bro. and Sister E. G. Forlines, of Nelson, Va., for that most excellent large ham they were pleased to send her at the last monthly appointment at Hebron. These people have never met, but Mrs. Peel about 16 years ago appointed me her representative, and I have always found delight in the position, and now Bro. and Sister Forlines have called upon me to represent them by taking the ham to Mrs. Peel. This also afforded delight. May the donors be abundantly blessed.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER. . .

It takes five forces harmoniously co-operating to that end to make a College great and powerful—trustees, friends, alumni, students, faculty. All five of these have their peculiar work and contribute their special item of helpfulness severally.

The trustees, by their reputation in other avenues of life, win confidence for the institution's administration. The friends, by their devotion, are largely instrumental in enlarging the borders of its influence and the scope of its serviceableness. The Alumni, by making good in the various professions and vocations of life, give the college a reputation it must have in order to permanent usefulness—for no matter how influential the trustees nor how large the friends, the public will not trust in the college whose graduates do not maintain the confidence imposed in them nor measure up to the high hopes entertained of them. The students make the tone of the College community and determine the complexion of the College life—they are also potent factors in securing a large student body. The faculty contribute scholarship and the ingredients that make character—development, at least that is what it is their high privilege and sacred duty to provide.

In all five of these particulars Elon has been exceptionably well blessed. No institution can have more upright, honorable or devout men on its Board of Trustees than Elon has. Her friends have always stood by her. We do not recall a drone among her list of Alumni and but one failure to achieve success and that for reasons of health. The students have created a moral tone and attained an excellency of life that are at once the wonder, charm and delight of all who have felt the College's thrill of life and breathed its spirit. Our faculty are not only scholars, they are also Christians, and give heed to the hearts as well as to the heads of their pupils.

Just now there is need for the earnest, unanimous co-operation of all these forces, the object being to round out the $26,670 of the Special Fund of $50,000 yet to be raised. No one realizes the stupendousness of this undertaking more than I, yet no one can fail to realize the necessity to raise this sum in order to serve the College and widen its field of usefulness. I know the love and devotion and loyalty to the college of all these forces—I know their spirit of sacrifice. I have faith in our friends of all these classes and believe they will open up their purses when opportunity is given and lift the burden of a debt that is crippling the institution that has done more for our Church than any other commissioned by our people. And, please God, they shall have the opportunity to show their loyalty and exemplify their love ere long.

I am glad to announce for the past week the following gifts to this fund: Mr. A. J. Faucette, Durham, N. C., $50; Mr. A. Gales Johnson, Cardenas, N. C.; $150; the Philologian Literary Society of the College, $300; the Psiphelian Literary Society, $250; the Clio Literary Society, $250; many friends and the two Organized Classes of the Palm Street Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., Rev. W. C. Wicker, pastor, $400. A total of $1,400. Thanks, kind friends, for these generous contributions. May your kind multiply and may your Christian liberality bring as rich fruitage in enjoyment to you as it will of helpfulness to the College!

W. A. Harper.

AN APPEAL.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:

I explained in the children's department that we have been compelled to have a deep well. It will cost us $165.12. This was necessary to get water for living purposes. We also have to pay one half cost sewer extension. This estimated cost will be $200.00 for us, and we must also have a larger range to accommodate 50 or 60, as our entire family represents 52 now, and while putting in this range we need to put in a large tank and kitchen sink with hot water connections. We also need two portable bath tubs as it is a job for 47 children to bathe in tubs and pans. This in all calls for considerable outlay and we are very anxious to keep from carrying long papers. We make this appeal and ask that 100 friends send us $5.00 each at once, so that all this may be carried with out paying interest.

Yours gratefully,

Jas. L. Foster, Supt.

IS THE RESPONSIBILITY OVER?

Most of our churches throughout the section in which The Sun goes have enjoyed a revival this summer, as the custom among the majority of the churches, is to hold the revival in the summer season. But is the work finished when the revival is over? Do church members feel that their religious duties are over until next summer, until your next revival?

Many laymen are willing to assist in a revival meeting, willing to speak to the unsaved, and prove themselves servants of God; but seem to be cold on the subject of Christ at other times. Dear reader, how many times have you spoken to that friend of yours about the love of the Saviour since your revival? How many times have you told your companions that the Master was precious to your soul and was your help in the hours of need? How many times have you spoken to that unsaved friend this year, save the time at your revival meeting?

If we would speak to men more about their souls when we are alone with them, rather than leave it off until the protracted meeting, we would have more influence, and do a great deal more good. Not only are we negligent in this way, but in speaking to those who have given their lives to the Savior, and are just starting out upon the voyage of a Christian life. We go to our friends and ask them to give their hearts to God, but so often never have a friendly and pleasant conversation with them after that about the welfare of their future lives and happiness; never ask them how precious they are finding Jesus to their lives. Some one has said that joining the army was not gaining any victory, but remaining in service ever ready, willing, and anxious to hear the call of duty, and going forth at the times of need to conquer the enemy. Should we think of planting a piece of corn and never go back to cultivate it, to keep it free from grass and weeds? Would you consider a man wise who would begin the erection of a building, and after doing much work, and spending a considerable sum of money, stop the work, with the building unfinished, exposed to the weather and storms, and leave it unbraced to go down to a complete wreck? This is the position, I think, of those who are just entering upon the journey of a Christian life; they need help, they need encouragement. Just a word is such a great help sometimes.

Now, why the distant feeling we so often have about mentioning the great and glorious name of the Savior?

"Somebody did a golden deed,
Proving himself a friend in need;
Somebody sang a cheerful song,
Brightening the skies the whole day long.
"Somebody fought a valiant fight,
Surely he lived to shield the right,
Somebody idled all the hours,
Carelessly crushed life's fairest flowers."

MARRIED.Loy-Smith.

On Sept. 10, 1911, at the residence of the officiating minister, Mr. Daniel W. Loy and Miss Catherine Smith joined for richer or poorer, for better or worse, their future destinies in the holy bonds of wedlock. It was a quiet marriage with only a few visible witnesses, but solemn because witnessed by unseen eyes. May they be faithful, and may Heaven smile upon them.

DIED.Baker.

Laura Virginia Baker was born Aug. 8, 1858, and died July 21, 1911, aged 57 years, 11 months and 13 days. The hand of death claimed her husband about six years ago, leaving here here with five sons, all grown, and two of them married. For several years she had been in bad health, but no serious danger was apprehended until a few days prior to her death. Sister Baker was for a number of years a member of the church at Palmyra. Funeral services were conducted here July 22, and the remains laid to rest in a cemetery near by. May God bless the bereaved.

Ellis.

On Sept. 2, 1911, as the sun was sinking behind the western hills, the sweet spirit of M. E. Ellis, the devoted wife of Bro. T. R. Ellis, took its flight unto the God who gave it.

Sister Ellis was a devoted member of Oak Grove Christian Church. It can well be said that a noble Christian woman has gone to her reward. She was a devoted wife and affectionate mother and a kind neighbor. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted husband, two loving children, a father and mother, one brother, one sister and a host of relatives and friends. We will miss her sweet association and good counsel.

Sister Ellis was about 29 years old at her death. May God be a Father to her two dear boys.

L. S. Parker.

Miller.

On Sunday, Sept. 3rd, 1911, Ella Hayes Miller, daughter of G. W. and Jane Hayes, and wife of Enoch Miller, departed this life.

She had been sick with dropsy over a year, and was a great sufferer much of that time.

During her sickness she had been moved to her parents' home, where she died. All was done for her that anxious and faithful hands could do. Her mother watched over her as none but a loving and patient mother could, but nothing could stay the hand of disease and death.

She was 36 years, 8 months, and 8 days old at death; had been a consistent member of the Christian Church at Shiloh for 26 years, having professed faith in Christ at the tender age of ten years.

Her death was one of peace and victory.

God granted her a clear mind and power of speech while dying, so that she could freely talk with her dear father and mother, and tell them of her prospects beyond this world.

She leaves a sorrowing husband, ten children; eight boys and two girls, father, mother, one brother, five sisters to mourn their loss. It was a touching scene at the burial to behold her little children weeping as they took a last lingering look on the face of their dear mother.

May the good Lord so lead the husband, children, father, mother, brother, and sisters, that they all may be prepared at death to meet the dear one gone before.

Funeral services conducted by this writer assisted by brother E. F. Cagle.

Iseley.

Katie Iseley, relict of the late Peter Iseley, departed this life August 27, 1911, at the home of her son, P. W. Iseley, near Hines Chapel Church, Guilford County, N. C.

Sister Iseley's maiden name was Boon, and she was born and reared in Alamance County and with her husband was a member of Shallow Ford Church. She was at her death 81 years, 6 months and 10 days old, having been born Feb. 17, 1830.

She was the mother of three children, P. W. Iseley and Mrs. Andy Friar, of the neighborhood of McCleansville, N. C., and Mrs. Russell Cobb, who preceded her to the spirit world by several years.

Sister Iseley was a consistent member of the church, a devout Christian, good neighbor, indulgent mother and faithful wife. After the death of her husband, which occurred Nov. 23, 1910, she seemed to be less satisfied to live, and her mind seemed to wander; but all the while she was tenderly cared for in the home of her son.

This writer extends to the bereaved his sympathy, and himself mourns the departure of a friend. God's blessings on the bereft.

Copeland.

Randolph Wise Copeland, son of C. C. and Mrs. Juliette Pierce Copeland, died at his home near Holland, Va., Sept. 2, 1911, at the age of 8 years and 11 months. He had been ailing for some months, but was ill only a few days. The funeral was conducted at the house by the writer in the presence of a large number of friends and neighbors, and the body laid away in the family cemetery near by. Randolph was one of a large family, but was none the less dear on that account, and his death was a sad blow to the fond parents and brothers and sisters. To all of these we extend our sincerest sympathy, and pray the Heavenly Father's blessing.

Whereas it has pleased our heavenly Father to visit again our family and call therefrom the spirit of our dear grandmother and

Whereas, in obedience to the Master's command, our dearly beloved grandmother fell on sleep on the afternoon of Sept. 6, 1911; and

Whereas, our dear one was a most worthy and loyal mother and grandmother, rich in the Spirit of her Lord, and noble in its practices; and

Whereas, dear grandmother was a faithful member of Union Christian Church, as far as her health would permit;

Resolved first, That in the passing of our grandmother, her family loses a dutiful, a worthy, a loyal and a true member, who cultivated the spirit of her Lord and practiced his teachings in a life so well spent for the Lord, to whom she bore a true devotion. We suffer sincerely by her transition, for her absence leaves a vacant seat in the home and a vacancy in our hearts.

Resolved second, That to the bereaved family we extend our sincerest sympathy, and point them in their sorrow to Him who loves to comfort the distressed, and heal the wounds of the afflicted.

Resolved third, That a copy of these resolutions be kept in the family of our departed mother and grandmother, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

My Dear Children:

All the children are at home at last and every one is busy trying to get cotton and peas in order that no days may be missed at school which starts about the 1st of October. We are anxious that every one shall do his best this year and to that end we are working.

Our Home is visited now quite often by the new students from the College who had heard but had never seen the Orphanage. We hope they will continue to come—get acquainted and interested.

Bro. Young and Sister Nannie Clements Stephenson remember our needs with substantial gifts this week and a Friend who desires his name withheld, gives us 30 yards unbleached domestic, 10 yards canton flannel, and 2 yards gingham. These goods are very acceptable, especially at this time of the year as good warm clothing is so essential to the health of our children.

Our deep well is clearing up and giving satisfaction. This week for the first time in many months we had no trouble with water for laundry. This kind of work will be lessened at least one third on account of the convenient well.

For every convenience added we feel very grateful to God for His goodness.

Very Sincerely,

Uncle Jim.

Semora, N. C., Sept. 15, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We certainly have had some hot weather this summer, but I am glad to see the fall coming, for I enjoy the cool air.

I went to Lebanon Sunday and certainly enjoyed your sermon. Well, papa is most through cutting and curing tobacco. He said he would be glad when he gets through, for he is getting tired of sitting up all night at the barn. Our melons are almost gone and I am sorry, for we have had lots of them this year, and you know it will be hard to stop eating them all at once.

I enclose ten cents.

Well, it is hard for little boys to give up melons, Malcolm, but it's time of the year now to stop, so let's think of next summer and be content.

Manry, Va., Sep. 11, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will send my nickel for September. I hope that the little cousins are well and are enjoying good health.

I will close with love to all of the little cousins.

Goodby,

Amy Morris.

All well and getting ready for school which begins about the 1st of Oct.

Dear Cousins:

We send our dimes; we are a little behind but will try to pay up next time. James gave us a bad scare last week. He left the supper-table and we could not find him any where. Dark was coming fast and we searched the house, the barn and everywhere we could think of and after about a half hour mother looked in the Laundry box on the back porch and found him fast asleep. How glad we were! He did not remember much about it next morning for I guess he was so sleepy, he must have thought it was his own little bed.

Lovingly,

Mary Lee, and Jas. L. Foster, Jr.

THOU AND THY HOUSEHOLD.

Is there a place, and a time, in your household for talk about things that are eternal, for discussion of events and issues of the other and better world? Is the theme of the better and higher life ever broached and debated? Has your family heard you speak often of the world to come and proper preparation for the life after this? Is there a family altar? Do you have family worship? Are you as a parent trying to train your children in the matter of righteousness and their soul's welfare, or are you leaving this, the most important of all family affairs, entirely in the hands of others? The household religion is first and fundamental with the child. The child may learn much at church, in Sunday school, at the day school, but he learns the fundamentals of life, that which weighs most, at home, in the family.

The Intelligencer recently said:

"Compared with the school and the church, the home is first and foremost as the teacher of principles, the custodian of traditions, the furnisher of ideals, the shaper of ends. What is lacking there is likely to account for the defects in the character of its inmates; what is habitually present there, as the essence of its thought and talk and spirit, is the basis of what they possess in moral values. There are exceptions, but in this way the rule is proved."

We do not know of a finer and more wholesome picture than that of a father gathering his family about him, at some period of the day, and holding family worship. This is going with the whole house to the very center and source of things. This is the father carrying his children to the very best, truest and surest. Family religion is the safe guard of the home.

Pity, a thousand pities, it is that we have left to church and Sunday school so much of our religious teaching and training, and to such a large extent dried up the fountains of purest sustenance and strength to the family. There is many a boy a wreck today because home religion, family worship, was neglected.

A QUESTION.

I have recently seen a statement that no negro has ever been known to be an infidel. Is it true? Will some one answer?

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Chapel Hill.

Brethren and sisters of the Conferences, please send up every dollar you can to me at the Conference which meets at Catawba Springs, for the work at Chapel Hill. We expect to commence putting material on the lot soon, and money will be needed to pay for it. If the brethren, sister and friends will do faithful work during the next year, we expect to have the home ready for dedication before the close of the year 1912. Turn your eyes Chapel Hillward, and send up the cash in double quick time.

Winchester Letter.

Our new church building is nearing completion. The floors are all laid, the wainscoting is up and the most of the inside painting is done.

The city force is busy laying a concrete pavement on two sides of the building. We had hoped to occupy the Sunday school room last Sunday, but a delay in getting material caused a postponement of our opening service until the first Sunday in October.

The pews are in the depot and the bell has been shipped from the factory.

We must call on our friends to rally to our support now. We are passing through the hardest financial strain we have had since the building was started. May God help those who love His cause and the Christian Church to come to our aid in this hour of need. We can but work and trust. The work is the Lord's and we feel that in some way He will enable us to go forward. He may want to send the helpful message through you. Pray over the matter and for us and then do as the Lord directs.

Cypress Chapel.

We had a gracious revival at Cypress Chapel. Everybody who loved the Lord got happy, 27 united with the church. I baptized 35. The Lord was with us from the beginning to the end.

Our meeting closed at Bethlehem on Friday evening. There were some 12 or 15 professions, 8 united with the church. Rev. I. W. Johnson did the preaching; it was good. He was at his best and everybody enjoyed the meeting. The Lord bless the people at Bethlehem.

We want all in Bethlehem to take and read the Christian Sun. Bethlehem, will you do it? I do not see why The Sun should not be in every home in my churches. We can do this—put The Sun in every home if all will do their duty. The Lord willing, I will bring The Christian Sun to our people at Cypress Chapel next fourth Sunday, at Bethlehem, second Sunday; at Antioch 3rd Sunday, and at Mt. Carmel the first Sunday in October. I have found that those who read The Sun are ready to help in every enterprise of the church when it is properly brought before them.

Columbus, Ga., Letter.

On Saturday before the second Sunday inst., I went to Wadley, Ala, to be with Rev. E. M. Carter in the opening services at the new church there, which he has recently finished. Bro. Carter preached the first sermon in the new edifice Sat., at 11 A. M., and I arrived in time for the evening service. Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock, Sunday school was organized. At 11:00 the writer preached to a full house on the "Principles of the Christian Church," after which the church was organized with about thirty-five members. A few days' meeting followed with fine interest and good congregations. Three more members were received, all of whom were baptized at the close of the meeting.

This church has made a most encouraging beginning. Its membership is composed of the leading citizens of the town, people of intelligence and of real worth. The building itself is a very neat structure. It compares very favorably with the other churches there. And better still, Wadley's church people seem to be of the co-operative spirit. All in all, Alabama Conference has just reasons to rejoice over the birth and future prospects of her youngest child. May God richly bless and greatly prosper this, our youngest church in the S. C. C.

Rev. E. M. Carter is, this week, engaged in protracted services at Lanett, Ala. He is being assisted by Rev. J. H. Milam. It is our prayer that Lanett may enjoy a gracious revival under the labors of these earnest men of God.

G. O. Lankford.

Sept. 18, 1911.

Walnut Hills Church, Dayton, Ohio.

Long ago it was said that all roads lead to Rome. Just now, and in fact for some time past, and it is to be so desired in the future, all eyes are looking toward Dayton. The part of our great city that is attracting special attention is Walnut Hills, in the south-eastern portion. This up-to-date and fast growing division is the home of from 4000 to 5000 of Dayton's best citizens. It is entirely a residential district, and lies elevated above the city and is beautiful for situation. The street toward which we call your attention is Edgar Avenue, and the place on that driveway is a large triangular lot, and the object on that lot which is at this time the cynosure of all eyes, is the church building now being erected for the use of our Walnut Hills congregation.

What of the building? It is a frame and stucco structure with a metal roof in imitation of tile. The dimensions are 38 x 53 feet with a 14 foot side wall and an arched ceiling. A tower with vestibule at the front is 12x14 feet, in the top of which swings a fine bell, the tones of which will call the people to the sanctuary. At the rear of the main building is an additional room, 17x24 feet, to be used by the Primary Department of our Sunday-school. At the entrance end of this building is a gallery room to be used by one of the Sunday school classes. The building as it stands upon the elevated ground has an impressive appearance. Many words of commendation and congratulation have been spoken.

The work on the building is progressing nicely. At this writing, Sept. 13, the roofing is about half completed, the flooring is being laid and the stucco men are hurrying their part of the work. The coming week the plasterers will do their part. An effort is being made to have the building ready for use early in October.

A brief history: The work at Walnut Hills was inaugurated about four years ago when a Sunday-school was started by a band of earnest workers from the First Christian Church, Dayton. About three years ago the congregation was organized, and two and a half years ago the present pastor took up his work with this people.

Twenty-seven members were added in the last Conference year, making the present membership sixty-six. In April of this year a double lot was purchased, expecting to build a house of worship next year. But it soon became evident that for the good of our work the opportune time to build was at once. This brought up a serious problem—the financial end of the venture—as the lot was only partly paid for. But the growing needs of the work demands of a neighborhood in which more than one hundred new houses were being erected this year, and the fact that we were early in the field and if we did not build some other denomination would come in and the work would be in a large measure crippled and possibly lost, brought us face to face with the situation. With faith that God would care for his work and hope that the friends of the work would come to our help we decided to build. We purchased the timber used by the First Church in their temporary building, and adding thereto we are now seeing the consummation of our plans, as told in a foregoing paragraph, "What of the Building."

The Outlook: We are optimistic, and one knowing the outlook for our church (denomination) in this part of Dayton cannot help but be almost hilariously hopeful for the future. Men of experience, conservative men, have said that the Walnut Hills work is not only a vital part of our denominational work, but that within a very few years there would be here a congregation not only large in numbers, but known for their aggressiveness and loyalty. Now you are interested we know and so we go on to

The Need. This is the part of the work in which every reader of The Sun should share—the providing for the payment of the debt incurred in the erection of the building. In one month from this time—October 20th—we shall need $2000. more than our congregation can take care of. Some of us have obligated ourselves to the extreme limit and cannot go farther. We come to the members and friends of the Christian Church and ask you to come to our help at once. Don't wait for a more convenient season. The time, the helping time, is NOW. Send us your contributions at once. Pastors, Superintendents, Teachers, Endeavor Presidents, etc., get your congregations, schools, classes and societies to take an offering for this work. Send us any amount from $1000.00 down to the mite. Give and it shall be given unto you, and you shall be blessed in your giving. Send money, check or postal note to the pastor and acknowledgement will be made in the columns of The Herald.

Pressley E. Zartmant, Pastor.

In Revivals.

Dear Editor:

I believe every pastor should report his work regularly for The Sun, but I have been so irregular that I suppose some one will say that I ought to practice what I preach. So I begin now to report my work for the summer. I have had good meetings at all my churches, and my work generally is in good condition, but I have not accomplished what I had hoped during my revival work. My first meeting was LaGrange, Ga., beginning third Sunday in June and continuing two weeks. Rev. E. M. Carter assisted me the first few days, the Rev. J. V. Knight came and helped me the remainder of the meeting. These brethren did good service and the people were appreciative of their work. The church was revived and the work was greatly strengthened on account of the meeting. I believe that LaGrange is destined to be one of the strong points in the Ga. and Ala. Conference. We ought by all means to have a strong man located at this point. The sooner the Conference takes this matter up and makes provision for it, the better it will be. Congregations are increasing and the interest is growing.

My second meeting was at New Hope in Ala. Here Rev. J. W. Elder assisted me, and did some excellent preaching, which was highly appreciated by the large audiences that greeted him from time to time. Here the church was much revived and 1 member added to the roll, two having been received since. This church is in good shape to do a great work. Every body enjoyed the revival and especially the sermons by Brother Elder.

My third meeting was at Beulah. Rev. G. O. Lankford assisted me at this place and did good preaching. We had a good meeting and a gracious revival in the church. One member was added to the roll. A number of members of this church have since withdrawn to unite with the church at Wadley which greatly weakens the church here. In fact the Wadley church is almost entirely composed of members from Beulah.

Only a little more than three weeks until conference meets. Let us all get ready. More anon.

G. D. Hunt.

ChIPLEY, Ga., Letter.

According to arrangements the meeting at Wadley began Saturday before last second Sunday. Bro. Lankford came Saturday afternoon.

Sunday morning we met at 10:30 and organized the Sunday school with thirty-nine members, and, at eleven o'clock the church was organized with thirty-six members. The meeting continued until Thursday; during which time we received three more members who were baptized

Thursday. Bro. Lankford was at his best and the meeting was good. The house is completed with an indebtedness of a little more than three hundred dollars. I was hoping this money would be in hand and we could have dedicated the house at the time of the organization. But this is to be done yet.

I am in a meeting this week at Lanett. Bro. Milam is doing the preaching.

Somelaw a mistake occurred in my last letter. I meant to say that I had three candidates for baptism at Mt. Zion from 40 to 60 years of age, but I was made to say from 4 to 60.

E. M. Carter.

A WORD OF APPRECIATION.

For the last six years, during the summer months, I have been solicitor for The Christian Sun. During this time I have formed a great many acquaintances and have come to know most of the Sun family. Indeed, it has been both helpful and pleasant to meet the members of such a kind family and enjoy their bounty.

The people have received me very courteously and have rendered me invaluable aid by their cordial welcome and many favors. A person who has never experienced it, hardly can appreciate the joy that fills a stranger's heart when he is welcomed into a Christian home to share its blessings and enjoy its comforts.

For all these courtesies and favors I wish to express by sincere appreciation and heart-felt gratitude. The people have made my summer's work pleasant and the memory of it will always be sweet.

I wish to thank especially Mr. J. A. Andes and family, Harrisonburg, Va., for their kind attention to me while I was sick in their home. I did not want for anything and could not have been treated better in my own home or in a hospital.

After finishing my summer's work I spent a week with Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Walters, Winchester, Va. Surely it is a great privilege to visit in a Christian home and see the husband and wife consecrated to the service of God and giving all their energy to advancing His Kingdom. Bro. Walters and his wife are doing a great work at Winchester and one that any member of our church would be proud to own.

Winchester is a historical town and therefore has many places of unusual interest. Washington had his headquarters there in the Revolutionary War and some of his relics are still to be found here. In the Civil War many battles were fought around there, it having been captured and recaptured by the Federals and Confederates between thirty and forty times.

Frederick County has the distinction of being the greatest apple growing county in the world. Farm land is worth from $150.00 to $100.00 per acre. God has certainly smiled on the people of Frederick County, and has surrounded them with all the bounties of nature and has given them a very productive and fertile soil on which to live.

—Frank Miller, an aviator, giving an exhibition at a county fair at Troy, Ohio, was burned to death in mid air Sept. 22, the gasoline tank of his engine having exploded.

—Senator Tillman of S. C. and of "Pitchfork" fame announces that he will stand for re-election next year to the U. S. Senate, unless his health further fails him.

—At a general election in Canada, Sept. 21, the proposed "Reciprocity" with the United States was defeated. Pres. Taft expresses himself as greatly disappointed at the outcome. So after all it seems that "Reciprocity" is about not to reciprocate.

—It is said that there is a considerable movement on foot by the "Insurgents" of the Republican party to nominate Senator LaFollette, of Wis., over President Taft for the presidency next time. Headquarters have been opened in Washington and a great demonstration is to be made in Chicago Oct. 16.

—Writes Rev. McD. Howsare, Memorial Temple, Norfolk, "Sunday, Oct. 1, is to be a big day with us. Our Sunday-school Rally occurs and we are planning to have 1,000 people present." Bro. Howsare will make Oct. 8 "Sun Sunday" at the Temple, for continues Bro. Howsare, "The paper is worthy of a larger circulation in our midst."

—President Taft, in a frank and free manner, at Peoria, Ill., told his audience that he was a poor politician, that his ambition had been toward the position of Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, but that as President he had tried to do his best though he was quite sure he had made mistakes.

Mr. Taft declared he was not allied with the extremists of his party, either conservatives or progressives, but had tried to take a middle ground between the two.

"But we middle-of-the-road people believe we are the real progressives," said the President, "because you do not make progress in great strides, you make it step by step."

—The feeling of superiority is a sure index to considerable inferiority. When one begins to feel and to manifest his superiority the hour of his ultimate undoing has struck.

WHAT WE STAND FOR.

For the Christ of Galilee,
For truth which makes men free,
For the bond of unity
Which makes God's children one.

For the love which shines in deeds,
For the life which this world needs,
For the church whose triumph speeds
The prayer: "Thy will be done."

For the right against the wrong,
For the weak against the strong,
For the poor who've waited long
For the brighter age to be.

For the faith against tradition,
For the truth 'gainst superstition,
For the hope whose glad fruition
Our waiting eyes shall see.

For the city God is rearing,
For the New Earth now appearing,
For the heaven above us clearing,
And the song of victory.

RADIANT CHRISTIANS.

Some faces are like the midnight. Clouds or scorn, hate and despair overhang them. They are darkened by an evil heart. Other faces are radiant with peace, joy and hope. The Bible speaks of the light of God's countenance. The same light is seen also in the countenances of His people. A pure heart makes a shining face, a cheerful voice and a radiant life. Such people are welcome in the Church, in the home and in every place. They bring comfort, encouragement and good cheer. They scatter sunshine everywhere. "Let your face be like the morning."—N. Y. THE INCREASING STREAM.

(Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely. Rev. 22:17: Golden Text for Sunday, October 8th).

I picked up this little chain of historical events the other day. Some two and a half centuries ago a young man in England was at work in a garden. There came by the garden fence a peddler with pamphlets and, having engaged the man in the garden with conversation, a pamphlet was soon put into his hands. The booklet was read and resulted in converting the gardener. His name was Richard Baxter, and is yet known in the world as the man who wrote "Saint's Rest," a copy of which came into the hands of Philip Doddridge and led to his conversion. Doddridge later wrote "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the Soul." This book fell by chance into the hands of William Wilberforce and led to his conversion. Wilberforce lived out a great life and wrote "Practical Christianity." This book fell into the hands of Leigh Richmond who read it and was converted. Richmond in turn wrote, "The Dairyman's Daughter," a copy of which fell into the hands of an indifferent minister, Thomas Chalmers and woke him up, stirred his spiritual powers to depths. In all Scottish history in all the Christian Church, there are few names to rival, for usefulness, influence and power that of wife was to undergo an operation at the Thomas Chalmers. The current broadened, the channel deepened all the way from the poor peddler at the garden wall to Chalmers, the man of might and majesty.

This is the nature of Ezekiel's vision. It is the nature of God's wonder working power. The kingdom and the power of God seem to have small beginning but they issue in the manifestation of unlimited, inexhaustible power. The stream that Ezekiel saw at and about the temple was small and insignificant enough, but it grows in volume and in power as it sweeps out toward the distant sea. It carries life, potentially, power in its wake.

We see the quiet, staid, lonely looking country church. Now and then, as occasion comes, a few from around foregather there. They sing and pray and hear preaching there. Their service seems shallow and simple enough. But it is the beginning of the current. It moves out into the lives of the men and women, boys and girls around about. It broadens and deepens as time goes and events change. It fills some heart with the freedom and fullness of its power. That heart, consecrated to God, gives itself to divine service altogether, feels the call to preach, moves out in many directions and results in bringing many souls to Christ. That is the nature of the life giving stream. That is the character of the current of God's grace. It is sufficient, and it increases in depth and in volume and in abundance as it goes.

The religion of Christianity is the most vital thing in the world. It is creative, it quickens, it sustains, it is opulent, it is abundant, it is inexhaustible.

THE YEAR OF JUBILEE.

This is to be a great year in missionary annals. It is the year of Jubilee, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning in foreign lands of woman's organized missionary work. The women of America who care for their sisters beyond the seas have wrought wonderfully, and are now preparing to give thanks, take fresh courage and rejoice over what has been done. They have a right to rejoice. You can scarcely find a church, in city or in country now, that hasn't its Missionary Society in one form or another, and their combined efforts these fifty years have been the means of accelerating all missionary endeavor and of bringing many souls, in foreign lands, from darkness to light.

The Sun is particularly interested in this celebration, however, because it celebrates at the same time the 25th anniversary of the organization of the Woman's Board for Foreign Missions of the Christian Church. This is the silver anniversary of our work on the part of the women in Japan and our good women—God bless them, leaders as they are in every good and noble work—are preparing to make a silver Anniversary Thank-Offering of $2,500 with which to erect a building for our Utsunomiya Christian Girls' School in Japan.

Now just count on our women raising that sum to help in this worthy undertaking. "An offering from every woman in the Christian Church is our aim," writes Mrs. Alice V. Morrill, President, 233 Conover St., Dayton, Ohio, who will furnish any information desired by any of our Ladies' Aid, or Missionary Societies.

What is this special silver anniversary offering to go for? Again I quote from Mrs. Morrill, "Our Girls' School is helping to supply Japan's greatest need—Christian womanhood and motherhood. It has been running since April, 1907, under direction of Mrs. Susie V. Fry." As soon as the building was ready "its first session opened with five pupils. The year past, Mrs. Fry had had the assistance of six Japanese lady teachers, one of them trained in America, and thirty-one students have been enrolled.

"The first building was a thatched roof Japanese house, small and poor, but the best possible under the circumstances. Now the School occupies a building partly foreign and partly Japanese. Mrs. Fry already has the applications of nine girls who desire to enter next April, for whom there is no room. The curriculum provides for the training of Bible women as well as for the regular course. This is the only Christian school in a province of nearly a million people, the government schools being anything but Christian in their influence."

To erect an additional building, then to this Christian Girls' School in Japan for the purpose of accommodating the increasing patronage is the object of this silver anniversary celebrations.

Already our churches are making ready. We note with pride and pleasure that our good women in Norfolk are preparing a program for their meeting which they propose to hold Wednesday, October 11, during the celebration in Norfolk by all denominations of the Missionary Jubilee. We most heartily endorse what a good sister from Norfolk writes, "A number of us are greatly interested in having our missionary work in the South enlarged this year, and better organized than ever before."

It is devoutly to be hoped that our good women, elsewhere as well as in Norfolk, will make a program to celebrate this year of Jubilee and make a special offering for our Christian Girl's School Building in Japan.

APPOINTMENTS.

In The Alabama, and in the Georgia and Alabama Conferences.

Sunday, October 29, 11 A. M., Rose Hill (Columbus).

Sunday night, Oct. 29, Richland.

I shall be glad if I may be permitted to reach all these appointments within the time named, and will appreciate meeting and greeting the congregations that may gather. If these appointments shall be publicly announced, and made known as widely as possible in the several vicinities interested it will be a great favor.

Gratefully,
J. O. Atkinson.

THE CHRISTIANS' BELIEF.

We have heard it advanced that, the people who are content to be called Christians only, believe so many things that there is no common standing ground amongst them; that they believe and teach nothing in particular. This is a very great and grave error. We have found members of Christian churches who believed many and sundry things, as is true of all thinking people everywhere; but we never have yet found any number of members of Christian churches who doubted the validity of, or called into question the scriptural truths enunciated in what is termed, The Five Cardinal Principles of the Christian Church, to-wit:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church. (Col. 1:18; Eph. 1:22, 23).
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church. (Isa. 62:2; Acts 11:26).
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice. (II Tim. 3:16,17; Ps. 119:7, 8, 11).
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership. (Matt. 7:21; Jno. 1:12, 3:15).
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all. (Rom. 14:4; Matt. 15:9. Gal. 5:13).

We have on sale in The Christian Sun office, Elon College, N. C., a small book entitled "The Christian Church" which contains these Cardinal Principles, and what the Christians believe and teach as touching these and many other scriptural matters about which there is common, if not universal belief amongst us. The book, post paid in paper binding is 25 cts. the copy; flexible cloth, 35 cents; cloth, 50 cts., manilla with the name of purchaser in gold, $1.25.

If one doubts, does not know, or really cares for, the faith, the doctrine, and the ground of belief, of the Christian Church, let such an one possess himself of this book and read it. It is worth while.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Old, Old, Story.

A young man in Durham, twenty years ago admittedly one of the handsomest and most popular young men of the town; good family connection, excellent social standing, bright, brainy, promising, wealthy—more than twenty thousand dollars to his credit. The last dozen years, an out-cast, under indictment, serving sentence, living from hand to mouth, when and as he might.

Last Friday found dead and stretched upon the floor, cold, forsaken, alone, in a deserted house of the city.

Strong drink did the dastardly deed, wrecked the life, and brought it to disgrace, to ruin and to an untimely grave. Once he was as strong as any young man who may perchance read these lines; but only meant to take the "social glass" now and then—and stop after a while.

The poor fellow has stopped now. The stillness of death has sealed his lips against any more of the deadly stuff.

Why will youths continue in this way? Death, disgrace, wreck and ruin await them in this path, but they still pursue it. It is an old, old story, but sad indeed and ever sadder.

Pellagra.

This disease has so far baffled the skill of physicians, its cause and cure remaining, for the most part, a mystery. There are cases pronounced cured. Whether these are permanent seems a question of doubtful answer.

The disease is spreading with alarming rapidity. Eleven Southern States which two years ago reported about 1,000 cases now report 10,300 cases. The disease was first discovered in this country in 1905. The United States public health service has given over one hospital and two officials to the care and treatment of pellagra cases. About the only literature the medical service has on the subject is that issued as bulletins by our government, we are informed. The eleven Southern States where the disease is so prevalent are Va., N. C., S. C., Ga., Ala., Miss., Tenn., La., Texas and Ky. There is said to be one village in N. C. with 3,000 inhabitants and among them 200 cases of pellagra. It is circulated, but not confirmed or denied, as we have seen that Durham with a population of 25,000 has 200 cases of pellagra. We doubt the accuracy of this report.

It is a strange disease and there seems to be, so far, no definite knowledge of its rise and rapid increase in the Southern States.

Awakening The Sleepers.

In the town of Marion, Indiana, they do say that the town Council have awakened, with a rather painful and sudden jar, the policemen of said town. They have in Marion a local option law which closed up the saloons and legally put the whiskey dealers out of business. Whereupon "blind tigers" sprang into unexpected existence. And the policemen winked at the violation of the law and refused to enforce the law against numerous and sundry violators. Which news was brought to the Council. Wherefore said Council assembled in regular and orderly session and did vote that "Inasmuch as the city policemen were not performing the duties of the office to which they had been severally elected, that the pay of said policemen be reduced to $5.00 per month; and further that when the policemen shall perform their duties in the enforcement of law, then shall they be restored to full pay." Reports are that said policemen are getting busy.

—Dare to do right.

THE BEQUEST OF PEACE—CHRIST'S GIFT TO TEMPTED AND SORROWFUL SOULS.

By Rev. J. H. Jowett, D. D.

"My peace I give unto you." These words gain immensely deepened significance from the circumstances in which they were spoken. When we put them into the surroundings they shine like a radiant gem with a foil of dark background. When the Lord spake these words He was not resting in the domestic love and quietness of the home at Bethany. The air was thick with rumors, and the betrayer had gone out, and was even now engaged in his treacherous mission. Even Peter's loyalty threatened to surrender to evil popular will. Crucifixion was not twenty-four hours away. Christ's enemies were at the very gate. It was in circumstances like these, turbulent and stormy, that our Lord quietly claimed to be in possession of deep and mysterious peace.

Not Mere Words.

"Peace I leave with you." The form of the speech is that of a customary salutation or farewell. "Whatsoever house ye enter let your peace be upon it." But our Lord's speech is widely different from the common convention. People had fallen into the habit of saying "Peace" as we have got into the habit of saying "Good morning" or "Good-by," and there was as little vital content in one as in the other. The salutation had lost its sanctity. It had become a formality of life. The customary speech was used just to break an awkward silence; the Lord's was used to renew and enrich the heart. The conventional speech was idly ceremonial; the Lord's was a gracious achievement. At the best, the popular speech was an expression of affability; the Lord's benediction was an invaluable bequest.

Right With God.

What is the nature of this peace? First of all it is rightness with God. When the Lord Jesus Christ brings His own peace into the hearts of men, they become inherently sound by becoming fundamentally at one with God. It is significant that the radical meaning of the original word is suggestive of union; two sundered things are brought together again. And the gift of peace means a recovery of healthy fellowship between the soul and eternal God. The gift of peace does not imply perfection. There may be a general "rightness" or healthiness of the body is consistent with an occasional chill or superficial scratch or pain. There may be a temporary derangement while the heart is as sound as a bell.

Our Lord acknowledged this possibility in His own gracious teachings. Men may be essentially right with God who are not yet by any means perfect. Even a man who has been bathed "needeth to wash his feet." And so peace consists essentially in this innermost "rightness" with God. The general life tends toward the highest. Its primary ambitions are fixed upon the good pleasure of God.

Independent of Circumstances.

Our Lord has this peace. It was His through all His changing days. It was independent of seasons, and He had it "in the dark and cloudy day."

This peace can exist in the midst of apparent defeat. It does not require success to assure one of its presence. We can have God's peace and yet be apparent failures in the world. For look at our Saviour himself. Look at His position when the words were uttered. The antagonism of the multitude was approaching culmination. Despite His wealth of gracious deeds He was everywhere met with deep and fierce resentment. Even His own disciples pathetically misunderstood His mission. After a training of three years, when He had daily led them into the realm of the Spirit and into communion with the Master, they had just been quarreling one with another, "Who should be greatest."

One of the disciples was the victim of greed, and he deliberately sold his Lord for thirty pieces of silver. The rest of the disciples were becoming fearful, and the mood of desertion was upon them. Crucifixion was at hand. What an apparent failure! From the worldly point of view everything had gone wrong. And yet, in spite of everything, the Lord retained His condition of peace. And so it may be with the Lord's disciples. The applause of men may not gratify our ears. No worldly garland may be put upon our brow. We may climb unto no high place in the world's esteem. We may stumble along a painful way, we may be continually jostled and elbowed into the rear of the competing crowd, and yet we may have fundamental "rightness" with God and share with Jesus the condition of heavenly peace.

Persistent in the Midst of Sorrow.

If Jesus Christ had this peace, then its possession does not make us incapable of sorrow. No; it would be more true to say that this peace makes us more capable of sorrow, for to be right with God is to be sensitive to His joys and sorrows, and to share them. The Master who spake about "My peace," wept over Jerusalem, and His heart was torn by the contemplation of the sins of the city. He wept by the grave of Lazarus as He called to mind the accumulated common sorrows of the world. He wept over the vagrant, aimless multitude, for what is "compassion" but a most refined and delicate form of grief? He saw the crowd was wayward and vagrant, purposeless, moving here and there in constant danger, and He pitied the crowd with a pity that redeemed it.

Thus the Lord had an infinite capacity for sorrow, and yet He was in possession of peace. It is even so with His disciples. The Apostle Paul used words which are seemingly inconsistent with one another, "What sorrow have I!" "What travail!" "How I agonize!" And yet he could also speak of "The peace of God which passeth understanding." He was fundamentally right with God, but the fountain of tears was not dried up.

Peaceful Though Tempted.

..And then it is evident that the possession of peace does not banish the possibility of temptation. Our Master, who claimed the possession of peace, was tempted on every side. He had the temptations that besiege the flesh and seek the unlawful gratification of appetite. He had the temptations which assail the mind and seek to entice it to mental presumption. He had the temptations which waylay the soul and seek to seduce it into illicit homage. And these temptations were repeated throughout His life. He was essentially at one with the Father, and yet temptations were never away from His door.

We are sometimes inclined to suspect the reality of our union with God by the number and prevalence of our snares. We are apt to regard our temptations as signs of our detachment from the Master. We may be at peace when temptations crowd the field. "Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies." God's saints have in all generations sat at that table, and their souls have been filled with holy laughter in the confidence of their God.

This wonderful peace is the gift of the Lord Jesus. In Him we have the forgiveness of sin. In Him we obtain the mystic union with our God. In Him we find the secret strength of holy continuance. All are "His and His alone." This peace is not the prerequisite of some particular temperament. It is not the refined fruit of prolonged culture. It is a legacy; "Peace I leave with you." It is a gift: "My peace I give unto you." "He is our peace."

"Not as the World."

There are two ways in which this gift of peace differs from the gifts of the world. In the first place, it differs in the matter of the gift. When the world seeks to give peace it addresses itself to conditions; the Lord addresses himself to character. The world deals with things; the Lord deals with kinship. The world keeps in the material realm; Jesus Christ moves in the spiritual realm. The world offers to put us into a fine house; the Lord offers to make a fine tenant. The world will introduce us into "fine society;" Jesus will make us at home with God.

In the second place our Lord differs from the world in the manner of His giving. The world always gives its best at the beginning. It offers gaudy garlands, brimming cups, and glittering crowns. "But knowest thou not it shall be bitterness in the latter end?" It makes an imposing fire, but we are speedily left with the ashes. It leads us to a showy feast, but we soon encounter aches and pains, blinds us with the "garish day;" then comes chill twilight and uncompanionable night. "Not as the world giveth give I." He keeps His good wine until the last. He leads us from grace to grace, from faith to faith, from glory to glory. "Greater things than these shall we see." His gifts grow deeper, richer, fuller, right through the eternal years.

GOD LOVES YOU IN SPITE OF YOURSELF.

My great victory was won through father-love. I was scheduled to speak in Northampton, England, and an audience of fifteen thousand gathered to hear me, attracted more by curiosity than by religious interest. Northampton is most difficult ground from an evangelistic view. The atmosphere is infidel; it is a hotbed of atheism. My reception was anything but inspiring, but I had a mission there, and I was in to win. It took me forty minutes to cover the ground ordinarily gotten over in five. When I mentioned the name of Jesus, they shouted and raved like mad men. The committee of clergymen managing the revival urged me to give up. But no; here were men who needed the Word of the Master, so I started to sing a hymn, and my choir followed. After forty minutes there was a slight lull, and I stopped my song and shouted, "God loves you in spite of yourselves!" and that was my text. I singled out an old man in the front row, and said: "Are you a father, sir?" He said he was, and I asked him how many children he had. "A daughter and two sons," he answered. "I have also," I said. And here was a bond of sympathy. "Are your sons good?" I asked; and the hung his head, and was silent. "Are they good?" I repeated; and he raised his head, and said, falteringly: "No; one is a drunkard and a thief, and has broken my heart." "You do not love your son?" I accused him. He looked straight into my eyes, and said, slowly: "Yes, in spite of it, I love him." "And God loves you in spite of yourself," I answered. Through a parent's love I snatched victory from defeat, and led a most enthusiastic revival in Northampton.—Gypsy Smith.

PORTO RICO.

Her People—Past and Present.

When Columbus discovered Porto Rico he found it inhabited by a copper colored race, short in stature, stout, peaceful in disposition, and lazy. Other characteristics were a flat nose, poor teeth, dull eyes, narrow forehead and a skull somewhat cone-shaped. These people lived in sugar cane huts with only one opening and were chiefly vegetarians. They wore little clothing and decorated the body with paint and feathers. When the Spanish came in 1508 under Ponce de Leon there began a mingling of Spanish and Indian blood. Ponce himself married the sister of Guaybana, a great chief of the island. This new race was called Mestizos.

In the year 1513 slavery was introduced and then began another mixture of Indians and negroes, and the children of this union were called Zambos. Later on negro women and white women came to the island and still another admixture takes place. All along the line white men married creole or black women. The color line was largely disregarded. According to census of 1899 the inhabitants of the island numbered nearly a million, 61.8 per cent. white and 38.2 per cent. colored.

Mr. Saboader states in his book that the Porto Ricans of today, being an amalgamation of Indian, negro, and white blood, have inherited the following characteristics: "Indolence, taciturnity, sobriety, disinterestedness, and hospitality from the Indian; physical endurance, sensuality and fatalism from the negro; and love of display, love of country, independence, devotion, perseverance and chivalry from the Spaniard."

Howsoever.

LIFE AT ELON.

The life of a College, as of every other place, is the product of its spirit. This is notably so of the life at Elon College. The delightful location of the College, in the famous hill country of Western North Carolina, makes it a desirable seat for an institution of learning. The buildings are ample, modern, home-like. The grounds are peculiarly charming in their native simplicity and beauty. The climate is mild, the water pure and invigorating, the healthfulness unsurpassed. Given these advantages and the spirit that controls actions and relations of faculty and students towards each other, and the only kind of life to be expected would be one of simple earnestness and buoyant hope. Students of former days look back to their days of preparation here as not only a preparation for life, but as in a very real sense life itself. With all the advantages of city life as to equipment, convenience, and accessibility and with consecrated teachers, in a community famed for its beauty and healthfulness, with a spirit such as inspires and moulds character of the noblest type, surely life under these conditions must be at its best—and it is. One needs only to be a student or resident here to wish ever after to make this place one's permanent habitation. W. A. Harper.

THE KIND OF STUDENTS DESIRED.

We wish only students inspired with such a spirit or capable of being inspired with it and so able to enter into and appreciate such a life. No toughs or rowdies will be accepted, if they are known; they will not be allowed to remain, if they come. We cannot undertake to become a reformatory prison. When persons needing to be in such institutions apply here for admission, they are refused, if we know them to be such; if they register and do not enter into the spirit and life of the College, their parents are asked to remove them quietly, both in our interest and their own. No hazing is allowed nor will it be tolerated. The students themselves would rebel against such a barbarous practice, so inconsistent is that relic of barbarity with the animating and controlling spirit of the College. But to young persons of either sex, thrilled with hope and with their eyes to the future, Elon extends the open hand and the warm welcome. We need them; they need us; we can be of mutual advantage to each other. No such young person has ever been refused admittance here nor denied the full privilege of the College, and no one, however poor, ever will be. Such young persons are to be the leaders of the next generation and we are anxious to help them to their destined place of leadership.

W. A. Harper.

—Rev. Stanley C. Harrell changes his address from Suffolk, Va., to Defiance, O. "I am very favorably impressed with Defiance College and the people I have met here. May write more about conditions later." Bro. Harrell graduated from Elon College, class, '09, and has taught successfully as principal of the High School at Holland, Va. Bro. Harrell is to teach mathematics at Defiance, we are informed, and pursue studies in the theological department.

NOTES AND PERSONALS

—Rev. L. F. Johnson and family, Raleigh, N. C., are on a vacation of ten days and are spending the time sight-seeing and recreating in New York.

—We learn from The Herald of Gospel Liberty that Mrs. D. P. Barrett, wife of our senior missionary to Porto Rico, is in quite feeble health. Many will pray for Sister Barrett's speedy recovery.

—Rev. H. E. Rountree was assisted in a ten days meeting at Waverly concluding last Wednesday night, by Rev. C. H. Rowland. The church was greatly benefited. There were three conversions.

—The editor is looking forward, with anticipations of genuine pleasure, to attending the sessions of the Alabama and the Georgia and Alabama Conferences, Oct. 17-27.

—Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., writes from Greenville, Ohio, Sept. 26: "Our reception here has certainly been very cordial. We are well and getting along well. Kind regards and good wishes to you and The Christian Sun family."

—Rev. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., is assisting Pastor L. E. Smith, Greensboro, in a series of meetings this week. This is Bro. Johnson's fifth week successively in evangelistic work, in addition to pastoral duties.

—Dr. Len G. Broughton, Atlanta, Ga., has established, in connection with his institutional church, what is said to be the first and only pellagra hospital in the world, that is, a hospital devoted entirely to the treatment of this dread disease.

—Rev. J. W. Bolton, Middletown, Ind., writes under date of Sept. 28: "Mrs. Bolton is improving and I think in another year will be well. We are nicely located here and have a nice work. Success to you and regards to old friends."

—Bro. S. B. Klapp reports a successful revival at New Center church, Randolph County last week. Bro. B. J. Earp assisted him. Nineteen joined the church at the conclusion of the meeting and were all baptized by immersion on Friday. Bro. Klapp reports his work in good condition.

—Rev. H. E. Rountree, Waverly, Va., has the sympathy of many friends. His wife was to undergo an operation at Belts' Hospital, South Boston, Va., Tuesday, 3rd, inst. Bro. Rountree is by her bedside. May Heaven spare this good and noble woman.

—Rev. W. T. Herndon, Durham, N. C., is open for engagement as pastor of one or more country churches the coming Conference year. Dr. Herndon is one of our most energetic and consecrated preachers and pastors and his labors have been abundantly blessed. Any church desiring a pastor will do well to secure Dr. Herndon's services.

—Norfolk, Va., is to celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of Woman's Organized Missionary work in Foreign Lands Oct. 10 and 11th. Great preparations are being made for this splendid celebration and large audiences are expected.

—The Golden Jubilee of Woman's Foreign Missionary Societies in North Carolina, and of all denominations, will be held in Greensboro, October 13-14, 1911. It is the fiftieth anniversary year of the work of American women in foreign mission fields, and is expected to be largely attended.

—We are gratified to be able to announce that Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, N. C., is much improved at this writing and is now able to be up and about the house some. He wishes to thank through The Sun the many brethren and friends who have enquired kindly about his condition and shown a solicitous interest in his condition.

—We regret exceedingly that Columbus, Ga., is to lose the ministerial labors of Rev. G. O. Lankford, who has decided to close his present pastorate there about the first of November. Bro. Lankford is a thinker, a growing and useful man, and has done efficient service at Columbus. He has accepted the pastorate of churches in and near Wadley, Ala.

—Brethren, you need not write it "Rev. Staley, Rev. Rowland, Rev. Butler" to this office. We have more respect for the brethren than to print such hybrid agglomeration about them. "Rev." attaches to the given, not to the family name, and shows a lack of appreciation, both of them and of our mother tongue, unless some prefix stands between it and the family name.

—"I am going to see to it that the importance of taking and reading the church paper is presented to every family in my charge. My people shall certainly have an opportunity to subscribe to The Christian Sun"—Rev. G. O. Lankford, Columbus, Ga., Sept. 28. Thank you, brother. And many others of our faithful pastors feel the same way, for which we are grateful.

—Rev. L. I. Cox is with Pastor T. E. White in a series of evangelistic services with the Ramseur Church this week. Bro. Cox has been unanimously called to serve Pleasant Hill Church, Alamance, another year and has accepted. This church is growing in good works and in liberality as well as in grace, its membership and contributions both increased the passed year.

—What if our churches, and church officials, and Sunday schools, and Endeavor Societies were to advertise as persistently and as vigorously as do the saloons and liquor dealers? The mails are flooded by day and by night, with literature on where and how to obtain "best liquors at cheapest prices." How we wish we had the postage on all the letters they have sent to this office and its editor only! We should certainly not have to buy stamps for months to come.

—We acknowledge with thanks and appreciation the following: "Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rice Lacy request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Irene, to Mr. Charles Grandison Rose, on Wednesday, October 11th, 1911, at 11 o'clock, First Presbyterian Church, Raleigh, N. C." We are wishing that Mr. Rose, the fortunate, may prove a son-in-law as worthy and as popular as the father-in-law-to-be, "Ben." Lacy, North Carolina's efficient State Treasurer.

—We chronicle in our obituary column this week the death of a well-known man and a good citizen, Bro. Sam Holt whose home was in Chatham County near Pittsboro. His county honored him with positions of trust and usefulness several times and his church loved him for his devout walk and godly labors. He was a son of the late lamented Rev. Jno. R. Holt of sacred memory and lived a life worthy of that good man.

—So our dear, good, old sister Raleigh is going to celebrate. There will be something doing worth-while. Count on that. It is a neat invitation, beautifully prepared, and reads, "The City of Raleigh requests the honor of the presence of the Editor of The Christian Sun at the ceremonies attending the Dedication of the Raleigh Auditorium Tuesday evening, October 17th, 1911, 8:30 o'clock." How we do wish that we could accept that invitation, for Raleigh knows how to celebrate and be royal always.

—Gen. Julian S. Carr announces that he will not allow his name to be used as a candidate for the United States Senate. General Carr is just now engaged in a higher and better business, we observe from the daily press. He is traveling this good State soliciting funds with which to build a Methodist Church in Washington, D. C. The General himself has given $5,000, and is receiving encouraging responses from the brethren wherever he goes. This, to our thinking, beats running for the Senate out of all hollow, and the results will be more abiding also.

—Here is a record to be proud of, and we are wondering indeed if any town in North Carolina, or in the South can beat it. From The Burlington News, Sept. 27,

"We are proud of the great work being done among the Sunday schools of Burlington. Last week we had an attendance at all the Sunday school of over 1,500 one fourth of the entire population of the city. No town or city in the state can beat this showing.

"Another thing, the attendance is increasing, and the man, woman, or child who will not attend Sunday school will have to move out. They are after them, hunting them up and are going to get them."

—President Harper is taking the field, as his time will allow, in behalf of the Special Fund for Elon College. Like charity, the President began at home, the three literary societies and two friends giving $1,000. The following Sunday and Monday he was in Greensboro and another thousand was secured. Last Wednesday he worked in Burlington and the good friends there gave $1025. in a day. There never was a fund more necessary than this and President Harper will do his best to complete it by or before the annual Board of Trustees' meeting next June. If he should have the good fortune to keep up his present pace and the friends respond as they are doing, this great and good work will be accomplished within a twelve months.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The "Southern Christian Convention" will meet, at a place to be selected later, on Tuesday before the first Sunday in May, 1912; but the delegates to that session of the Convention have to be chosen by the seven Annual Conferences composing it this year. By reference to page 51, chapter V, Section I, article 2, of the latest revised edition of "Principles and Government of the Christian Church," it will be seen that each Conference is entitled to one delegate for every two hundred members, and that they must elect an equal number of Elders and Laymen; but every Conference can send two delegates—one Elder and one layman even if it does not contain 400 members. A Conference with 2000 members would be entitled to 10 delegates—5 Elders and 5 Laymen.

This is written to call attention of active members of the churches throughout the Convention to this matter so that they may see that a full delegation is elected in the conferences this fall. It is important to choose the best men to represent the Conferences so that the Convention will be representative in the best sense. The last Convention in Suffolk, in 1910, was the best attended, the best manned and the highest grade of any Convention in our history; and 1912 ought not to fall behind that one. We cannot compete with some other denominations in numbers, but we are in a position to rival other denominations in the quality of church work. We are making progress, year by year, in the spirit and qualifications of our ministry and we are improving our churches and local membership. The more prosperous and more capable of our laymen do not take the interest in our Conferences and Conventions that these bodies need and deserve. Progressive and successful men feel that they cannot spare the time to attend a Convention; but if they will consider that the gospel has created the conditions that furnish business opportunities and prosperity; and that the church is the organized body of the gospel; then their obligation to the church and its official meetings would appeal to their confidence and their support. Religion involves many obligations besides the spiritual. The social obligations that rest upon the Christian home; the educational obligations that rest upon the Christian community; the civic obligations that rest upon the Christian State; the business obligations that rest upon the Christian nations; all these tell us, in well-defined terms, that leading men in the local churches owe the general cause part of their time, their experience, and their means. Here is an opportunity for our prosperous and progressive laymen to repay God and the Gospel in some measure for the peace, the wealth-producing conditions, the inventions, the laws, the literature, and the luxuries which they enjoy. The gospel has made the world wise and rich and the wisdom and riches of the world ought to sustain the cause of Christ. But it must not be inferred that the Gospel will fail by reason of neglect in this direction, for the greatest asset of the church is likeness to Christ. He was the poorest yet he enriched the world.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Rev. A. M. Hanson, the pastor of Third Church and the writer of the Norfolk Letter, is indisposed. He has been compelled to cancel his engagement to help Rev. C. H. Rowland in special meetings at Franklin this week, and has asked the undersigned to write the Norfolk letter. He reports services well-attended last Sunday.

Rev. McD. Howsare, pastor of Memorial Christian Temple, delivered an illustrated lecture on "Trip to Holy Land" at the South Norfolk Christian Church on last Monday evening.

Rev. W. P. Mentor, of Indiana, will assist the pastor in evangelistic services at Third Church, beginning next Sunday.

A farewell reception was tendered the pastor and his wife of Memorial Christian Temple on last Tuesday night. Mrs. Howsare left on Thursday evening for Ohio to attend the meeting of the General Mission Board. The pastor closes his work October 29th, preparatory to going to Porto Rico.

Rev. D. A. Keys will be assisted this week in meetings by Rev. H. H. Butler at South Norfolk.

Mrs. A. M. Hanson returned last Thursday from an extended visit with friends in Iowa.

The Memorial Temple Sunday school had its annual rally day observance last Sunday. Prof. S. M. Smith, whom the writer regards as the best Sunday school expert in the Southern Convention said at the close of the exercises that it was nearest his ideal of a Rally Day of anything he had ever seen. The attendance was at least 450. Emphasis was given to every department of modern Sunday school work. This school has the largest enrollment at present in its history.

The pastors of the Eastern Virginia Conference will meet next Monday, Oct. 9th, in the study of Memorial Temple for regular study. The book chosen for the year is "Old Testament Criticism and the Christian Church," by McFadyen.

Howsare.

THOSE WHO WILL HELP.

The following pastors have kindly consented to speak publicly of The Sun to their several congregations and endeavor to increase its circulation between now and Conference:

Revs. I. W. Johnson, M. W. Butler, H. E. Rountree, D. A. Keys, J. L. Foster, J. F. Morgan, G. M. Holder, C. C. Jones, W. G. Clements, C. W. Carter, L. E. Smith, W. S. Long, D. D., T. E. White, J. D. Wicker, J. S. Carden, T. B. Dawson, J. W. Harrell, A. M. Hanson, McD. Howsare, N. G. Newman, C. H. Rowland, E. M. Carter, C. M. Dollar, J. H. Hughes, G. O. Lankford, J. H. Milam, B. F. Young, A. T. Banks, J. Lee Johnson, J. W. Patton.

The secular paper and magazine are making fearful inroads upon the time and attention that should be given to the reading of the church paper, and of religious enterprises, and unless pastors and those who care combine to beat back the ever-swelling tide of secularism the church paper and all other church enterprises must suffer fearfully in time to come. Will other pastors to whom personal letters were recently addressed kindly reply as early as possible. Only about three Sundays now before Conferences begin.

Young People's Department.

Christian Endeavor, Teacher Training and Organized Classes.

WHY WE FAIL.

Every once in a while some one undertakes a Christian Endeavor Society or organized class, and after trying to get it to go for awhile, gives up in despair. Truly the last state of such a person is worse than his first. He will never again undertake anything new in church work.

When one has made a failure at anything he should always try to ascertain just why he failed. Was the fault with the organization or in members? Too many people believe that all is necessary is to organize a Class or Society; that it will then run itself. No greater mistake was ever made. The organization needs the continued efforts and best thoughts one can give it.

Every Christian Organization needs a leader. A leader is a man who points out what others are to do, and not one who tries to do it all himself. If you would hold people's interest you must give them something to do. There must be variety in the work and in the services. Whenever an organization gets into a rut and there is a sameness about every meeting, it all tastes of the can and you may soon expect your society to die of dry rot.

The way to make your meetings fresh and attractive is to get new ideas. These may be obtained—first, by giving a little thought to the organization yourself, and, second, by reading the best literature to be obtained on the subject. Try this, and see if the results do not show its worth.

IN OUR RALEIGH CHURCH.

The following article is from last Thursday's Raleigh News and Observer:

"Sunday afternoon at the Hillsboro Street Christian Church, corner Hillsboro and Dawson Streets, at 3:30, the little folks between the ages of seven and fourteen, will meet to be organized as a Junior Society of Christian Endeavor. This Society will be interdenominational as the seniors are, and any child of that age who may be interested is cordially invited to join, and the parents are also cordially invited to attend to see the work of organization.

The demand for Junior Societies has been as spontaneous as it is pressing. It is a natural and inevitable outgrowth of the Christian Endeavor movement.

Many pastors and churches have felt that while the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was admirably answering the needs of the older boys and girls, yet the younger boys and girls, who could not attend the regular weekly prayer-meeting held in the evening, were, in some degree, left out of the plan.

In thousands of churches this lack has been supplied by the introduction of Junior Societies of Christian Endeavor, into which the children are taken, and from which they are graduated, when old enough, into the Young People's Society.

The regular evening service of the Christian church will again be under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor on next Saturday night. All are cordially invited to attend, and see what Christian Endeavor really has accomplished in the training of young folks to handle the work. Services begin at 8 o'clock sharp, and regular Christian Endeavor services will held."

Sun., Oct. 15. Topic—

Suggestions for the Meeting.

1. Remember this is a memory meeting. No books are to be used, not even song books, except by the pianist. No slips of paper are to be used in a memory meeting, such as this. The plan will work well. Speak from memory.

2. This lesson will need some research work to make it really profitable, and that is the only sort you wish. Do your Bible reading during the week, study the Quarterly at home and leave it there, take only your memory to the meeting. Speak from memory.

3. The daily readings, the lesson analysis, the discussion topics all furnish ample suggestion for open meeting. The quotations from other pens will give inspiration to discussion. Study the eight reasons, and the four short addresses and speak from memory. Speak from memory.

Hr. Herbert H. Monninger gives the following eight reasons why he believes in the Bible:

1. Because it meets the needs of human life. Under all circumstances man can go to the Bible and find help. The Bible fits perfectly into human experiences.

2. Because of its unity. This book was written by some forty men widely separated by time, culture, training and language. In spite of the lapse of time and composite authorship, the book as a whole makes an impression of unity upon the mind of the student.

3. Because it is superior to all other books. There is no other book that is so widely or repeatedly read. Among books it is immortal. Few books outlive their authors. Within forty-eight hours after publication the revised version, two million and a half copies were sold.

4. Because of its influence upon the world. "By their fruits ye shall know them," is the safest foundation for judgment ever laid down. If you draw a line around the countries where the greatest freedom is enjoyed and the highest civilization flourishes you will find that you have included the countries where the people believe in Christianity, and excluded those where it has very little or no influence. Wherever the Bible has gone it has sweetened the home, exalted womanhood, sanctified the cradle, and redeemed men.

5. Because of the character of those who accept it. Business propositions are often turned down, merely because of the class of men who are promoting them. Who are the men of your community who believe the Bible and are endeavoring to live by it? Who are the men who are opposed to the Bible.

6. Because it reveals the plan of salvation. It is the answer to the soul's greatest question, "What must I do to be saved?" It brings peace and satisfaction to the most powerful as well as the most humble minds.

7. Because man unaided could not have produced the Bible. "I know that no man made the roses. I know that no man painted the sunset on the evening skies. In the same way I know that no man, nor set of men, unaided, have produced the Bible."

8. Because those who grow in holiness cherish the Bible more and more. "We outgrow friends, books, and schools, but nobody has ever outgrown the Bible.

Topical Analysis.

1. Because it is not partisan. It fits every person. It fits all ages. The nation that follows it grows.

2. Because it meets competition. It is read more and more. No other book has stood so long. It silences all criticisms.

3. Because of its transforming power. It lifts the fallen and degraded. Business follows Bible to new fields, education and enlightenment follow it.

4. Because of its ideals. The more bible, the higher our ideal. It reveals the Christ, the sinless One. It teaches service of love, gratitude.

5. Because it teaches industry. "Work and pray." "Endure hardness." "Delight in business, fervent in spirit." "Be steadfast, unmovable, abounding."

6. Because it tells how to be saved. The Bible reveals the plan of salvation. It promises rewards and condemnations. It pictures heaven and hell.

TEMPTATIONS.

By Miss Winnie Floyd.

(Published by request of Alabama S. S. Convention).

Blessed is the man that endureth temptation. James 1: 13.

Temptation and sin have been in the world since the beginning, with Adam and Eve in Eden. Someone has said that the tree that represents temptation stood in the center of the garden where all roads converged, where Adam and Eve passed each day.

So it is in man's life. Temptation stands in the center of our lives where we have to pass every day, and every man's weal or woe depends on the attitude he takes toward it. There are many attitudes we can take. We are all tempted, and will be as long as time lasts. We find there is a difference in temptations. Some people can stand where others fall; some fall before drink, some are tempted to steal, others to lie and others to swear and profane the name of the Lord.

The Bible says: "Resist the devil and he will flee from you," James 4: 7, and again: "For I will never suffer you to be tempted beyond that you are able to bear, but with each temptation will make a way for you to escape." Temptation is not sin. We have the promise that we have a way to escape, but temptation becomes sin when we willingly and wilfully yield to it, but, "He will make a way for you to escape."

Temptations come often as surprises. We are met by the tempter when we leave our closets of prayer.

God has a purpose in allowing us to be tempted. Just as man becomes physically stronger by exercising the body; so we become spiritually stronger by each temptation we meet and overcome.

We all belong to the class who have been tempted, for at some time in each life the tempter has come. Christ was tempted but He did not sin. Hear His words: "Get thee hence, Satan; for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." To us comes this message of hope; no matter how far from God we have wandered, or how great our temptations, God can save us and give us grace to resist every evil suggestion. Sin is that in man which must be forgiven and he cannot eradicate it from his nature. It is a state of poverty, a state of blindness, a state of universal disease, a state of total wretchedness, a state of imminent peril. It says to the carnal man: "Don't resist that temptation, but yield to it," and each time we yield, we harden our hearts to the grace that gives strength to overcome.

If we do not resist temptation, and if we fall into sin, then our influence is felt for the evil one and we become a tempter. This is especially true in regard to the young convert. He sees older church members indulge in things that are not right and there the devil gains a victory.

We all have our temptations and there are some who tempt others.

"There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able to stand; but will with temptation also make a way to escape; that ye may be able to hear it." I Cor. 10:13. We can overcome temptation by the study of God's word. The best way, as our frail barks go floating down the stream of time against the rocks of unbelief, through storms of trial when dark waves of temptation roll over us—is to take Christ for our companion and pilot, and let Him steer our craft clear of the breakers, out into the still waters of His strength and glory.

Instead of being tempters, we can help others to overcome temptation by letting the man or woman who has fallen deep into sin know that we are interested in them and their souls by going into their homes and talking and praying with them, thus causing them to feel that there is something in the Christian religion that the world has not and knoweth not of, until Christ is found in them. It is the place of the church to help the men and women, and on the other hand the church is responsible for placing before men and women temptations. Some good, moral people say the church has become so worldly and has departed from the way of true holiness and right living that they feel satisfied to stay out of the church until the church reforms and gets back to God and the Bible. To counteract this trend of feeling the church members must watch themselves closely, purge their hearts with the fire of the Holy Ghost, and if we would be soul-winners and remove temptation from our fallen brethren we must be filled with the Holy Ghost. "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation." So let us be valiant soldiers of the Cross. Stand steadfast and firm and putting on the whole armour of Christ, do battle against the sins and temptations of the world.

IN BEHALF OF THOSE WE LOVE.

We solicit the prayers, sympathy and liberal support of each church, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor Society. We feel that the Young People's Department of our work is a worthy one, and merits support. We need money. We trust that all our people have enjoyed the weekly visits of the Young People's Department in the Christian Sun, which we think, as many Sun readers express it, has been very helpful indeed, and has done untold good. We have a goodly number of Christian Endeavor Societies, and Organized Classes as a result.

"God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten son:"—do we not love our children—the young people, to the extent that we will give a dollar or two to help reach, enlist, interest and train them for the service of God. Wist ye not that they should be about our Father's business, as well as we!

The spirit of evangelism cannot thrive in any heart except in one on fire with love for God and souls. Therefore, my fellow laborers, under the authority and by the direction of the Young People's General Convention of the Christian Church, South, as Treasurer of said Convention, I wish to enlist your sympathy and your service.

The purpose of this Convention, as you know, is to promote the social, intellectual, and religious life of the church membership, especially among the young.

Therefore, my brethren, do you not desire to invest a little money where it will do good for yourself and others? Do you not want to strengthen the stakes, and enlarge the borders of our own beloved Zion? Do you not want to stand with those who stand for our principles and believe in doing things? Shall we not have the hearty co-operation of all?

My fellow workers, let us put the halm of God's love in our eyes so that the smile of sympathy may never be wanting to them whose hearts are hungering for a love that can change the heart of stone into a heart of flesh. It is not so much ours to reflect the love of Christ to a dying world as it is to impart it to those who need it. A looking glass may do the first, but only a heart that holds communion with His heart can do the latter.

This is the one thing needful today. Give us this love to back up the money contributed, and the kingdom will come in this generation from one end of our beloved Zion to the other, because with it will come all that we are and have, to be used in hastening that glad hour, when men, young and old, shall hear and feel the love of Christ.

There was never a better time to live. A clearer hope, a larger field of witness, serenity of faith, activity of work, joy of expectation, looking for the perfect reign of love, all down the twentieth century's life. God is with us in our trial and rest. This is the golden opportunity and in using it we hasten on the golden age—God help us.

L. I. Cox, Treasurer.

NOTICE! NOTICE!

Those who expect to attend the Alabama Conference, which meets with the church at Mt. Zion, Oct. 17, 18, 19; and, come on the train, will do the church and community a favor by notifying me at Roanoke, Ala., R. 1.

The station, Peavy, is about one mile from the church and trains are due there at 5:52 A. M.; 1:01 P. M.; 2:15 P. M.; 10:38 P. M.

If desired we will meet you at Roanoke, which is three miles from the church.

E. M. Carter.
Pastor.

Holy Neck, (Nansemond Co., Va.)

The missionary society met the third Sunday in September at 3 P. M. The new president and secretary, Bro. B. D. Jones, and Miss Jessie Piland, presided. The pastor spoke on some of the missionary features at Northfield. The collection was $12.60, and twelve new members were enrolled. We have recently baptized nine members for Holy Neck. On the fourth Sunday in September a Junior Christian Endeavor Society was organized with 37 members. Miss Marion Beale was elected President, Shirley Holland, Vice President, Will Vincent, Secretary, and Rowland Piland, Treasurer. There's a fine lot of young people here and a great opportunity for service.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago at the order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, liberal, generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Word has just been received here that Rev. Martyn Summerbell, Ph. D., D. D., LL. D., President of Palmer Institute, Starkey Seminary, Lakemont, N. Y., and non-resident Professor of Church History in this institution will give his course of lectures for the current year early in the month of December. Dr. Summerbell last year delivered a series of lectures dealing with the History of the Reformation of France, Switzerland and Denmark. The year before his lectures had to do with Martin Luther and the Rise of the Reformation in Germany. He has not yet announced his subject, or the department of Church History with which it will have to deal, but this information will be shortly given out.

This year also Rev. Frank S. Child, D. D., LL. D., Fairfield, Conn., and Prof. J. J. Summerbell, A. M. D. D., LL. D., Dayton, Ohio, will deliver courses of lectures in the Literary and History Departments. Dr. Child is non-resident Professor of Literature in Elon College.

Prof. W. P. Lawrence of the Chair of English and Prof. R. A. Campbell, Adjunct Professor of Latin, were in Ashboro last week attending the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Prof. Lawrence made a speech before the Convention and Mr. Campbell assisted with the music. They report a pleasant trip. Prof. Lawrence also addressed the Mission Society last Wednesday evening.

Mr. W. M. Pinnix, a former student here, and now a prominent druggist of New Bern, N. C., spent one day of last week on the hill.

The public school of this place opened today. Mrs. Smith, the Principal, expects a large opening, and her assistants are here ready to take their respective places. Miss MacKay is living in the Cable cottage, while Miss Griffin, who arrived Saturday, is boarding at the Dormitory.

Mrs. Sam Tate and Miss Mamie who have been in Norfolk since the recent death of Mr. Tate, have returned to the Hill. They arrived Saturday night.

Dr. Newman filled the College Pulpit yesterday and delivered a strong and helpful sermon on the text "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men."

At a meeting of the Faculty on last Friday evening, Dr. J. U. Newman was unanimously elected Dean of the Faculty for the coming year. Dr. Newman was Dean during the early years of the institution and proved such a glowing success in this capacity that the feeling here as well as elsewhere is that Dr. Newman is again coming to his own. An announcement of this fact to the student body Monday morning at Chapel brought forth a vigorous applause.

MARRIED.

Huffines-Mills.

At the home of J. W. White, near Happy Home Church, at 9:25 A. M., Sept. 17, 1911, this writer united in matrimony Mr. Wm. A. Huffines and Miss Mary Mills. They will make their future home at the Fair View Farm. May God bless this couple through life.

S. B. Klapp.

Richardson-Bain.

It was an attractive wedding which occurred Tuesday evening, September 19th, 1911, at "Green Level," the handsome home of the bride near Wakefield, Va., when Miss Gertrude Bain became the bride of Mr. Edward Marvin Richardson, of Dendron, Va. The marriage took place in the presence of relatives and a few friends. The parlor was beautifully and artistically decorated with ferns and palms.

The bridal party entered the room to parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's deryed by Miss Lillie Richardson, sister of the groom. The marriage ceremony was read by the writer. Little Misses Dorothy Hines and Katherine Hatch were ribbon bearers. Mr. and Mrs. Richardson left for an extended trip for Washington, New York and Niagara Falls. The popular couple will return to Dendron, Va., where they will live.

Their bridal presents were beautiful and many, some of which were very handsome, indeed. Miss Gertrude is the daughter of Mrs. E. A. Bain, and one of the most esteemed young ladies of the community. Mr. Richardson is a fine young business man, at present cashier of the Dendron Bank.

C. C. Jones.

King-Reynolds.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. J. J. Reynolds, near Merry-Oaks, N. C., on the 14th inst., when his only daughter, Beulah McKee, became the bride of Mr. John Richard King. The parlor was tastefully decorated, the color scheme being green and white. The bride's maids were attractively gowned in blue silk. Miss Etta Burt, of Trenton, beautifully sang "All I Ask of you is Love." The bridal party entered the strains of Mendelssohn's march, re-Wedding Warch, rendered by Miss Mamie Burt, of Holly Springs. The bride entered with the dame of honor, dressed in a blue traveling suit, with hat to match, and carrying lilies of the valley. The ceremony was performed by the writer. The attendants were Mr. Harry D. Gunter and Miss Ethel Beatrice Edwards, Mr. Hurley E. Davis and Miss Iola May Patrick. The happy couple left on a tour of the northern cities. The bride has a large circle of friends whose best wishes go with her through life. Mr. King has a position with the S. A. L. Ry., and his home is in Raleigh.

—The Johnstown horror of May 31, 1889, is vividly called to mind in another of like if not equal proportions at Austin, Pa., Sept. 30, when the dam of the Bayless Pulp and Paper Co., went out with a great roar of more than 400, 500.00 gallons of water about 2:30 P. M. About 150 persons are believed to have perished, 1,000 buildings destroyed and two entire towns are swept out of existence.

—Italy has formerly declared war against Turkey and hostilities have begun. The Italians seized Tripoli and have bombarded the Turkish seaport of Perve-sa. Turkey has asked the United States to take charge of her subjects in Italy, and Germany is looking after Italian subjects in Turkey. It is believed that the war will be of short duration.

My Dear Children:

Ere you read this letter, our little ones will be in school and having a time getting enough books, pencils (some of them lose a pencil every day or two) tablets, etc., to go round. Can any little cousin suggest means by which a pencil can be kept? We have tried various plans, but so far, all have proved failures and the problem remains unsolved.

Mrs. T. A. Jones gives us an interesting letter this week. It strikes the nail on the head and we are glad to get it.

She sends one dozen towels herself and two dozen from Ames, Browley and Hornthall, merchants of Norfolk, which she solicited and which are welcome articles always at our Home. We thank sister Jones for her kindness, also in sending $5.00 for the well and hope all will rally as she suggests to our rescue. Aunt Helen also knows our needs and comes to help with $5.00. Thank you, Aunt Helen. Come spend the day and drink some of that good water. We thank Bro. Ballentine for his gift on extension of sewerage, and kind words expressed in private letter for us and our work.

All are well with the exception of colds, stumped toes, and sore feet. We thank God for the good health of our children.

Our good friend, Mrs. Willis Lee, Drivers, Va., gave us five dollars with which to buy articles of clothing for our girls' comfort this winter. It was a timely gift and thoroughly appreciated.

The farm boys have all the corn cut, except the young which we hope to put in our Silo if we can get it done. We are now making hay and trying to get in winter feed for our horses and cattle.

Don't you want your name on the list of helpers as reported this week for our water supply and sewerage extension?

Yours hastily,

Uncle Jim.

Henderson, N. C., Sept. 24, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We have broken our record entirely this time. Well, we have lots of excuses. We were so busy playing (and scrapping) with our company the first of the summer, and mamma was so busy talking to the other mammas no one had time to write. We wrote you about Leon coming. Newman, S. E., and Joe Rabt Denton came too; we had a big time. And how our mammas did talk. We think grown people make more noise talking than we do playing.

Aunt Pattie Newman and Dan Long came in August, but this was at a sad time—when daddy was so ill. We are so glad to have daddy back home and we never want to hear of small-pox again.

We send one dollar for July, August, September and October.

Love to all.

Lovingly,

- Charles E. Newman, Jr.,
- Hannah Clare Newman,
- Helen Shivers Newman.

We are so glad and thankful for you, children, that "Daddy," is well again and is at home with his dear ones. How good God is!

Sanford, N. C., Sept. 22, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write my September letter and send my dime. I am late, but we have had such a sad time since I last wrote. You know I told you of little Carlynn Schobey's death in my last letter (sister's little boy). Now I will have to tell you of my other sister's husband's death. He died in Clio, S. C., the first of this month. He was brought here and buried. Now sister and her little girl, Wilmer, are here with us. Uncle Jim, she is the sweetest little girl I ever saw, but it is so bad she has no father now and her mother is in bed sick and I have to nurse her all the time.

Our school begins Monday, the 25th. I take music lessons. My teacher says I am learning fast.

I close with much love to all.

Your niece,

Annie Pearl Way.

I know you will love little Wilmer dearly, Annie, and try to make up for the loss of her dear father. We all sympathize with you in the death of your loved ones.

Willoughy Beach, Va., Sept. 19, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

You are the big—bigger—biggest beggar under The Sun. You will beg for anything from a horse and cart to a tallow candle. I have watched your Children's Corner, and you used to throw out gentle hints, but you find you have to knock us down. Flinging out hints will not do at all. You had to come out in full force and beg.

The very name, Orphanage, is so expressive in my mind that the old cousins, and young cousins, should come to your rescue without so much hinting or begging on your part. If I were in your position, to have to look out for fifty-two children, three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, and three times daily, I am sure I would beat you at begging. One good thing too, you are just as thankful for small favors as large ones; such being the case, I am going to send you five dollars and ask all the young cousins, old cousins, male, and female, to rally to the cause and help get Uncle Jim out of that deep hole, the well. Let us look in this week's Corner and see what next he wants. I almost hear the cousins say, Why doesn't she contribute monthly? Well I do, but to my Sunday school, Berea, Nansmond. But as you asked for a special donation this time this is my reason for sending a small one.

By the way, I said last year about this time I was going to send some more towels to the Orphanage—and two good friends, Mrs. W. J. Lee, and Mrs. Sue Jones, then in my home, remarked, "We have just sent a supply." It is about time they were in threads now judging from Uncle Jim's remark and question asked last year. Why were boys harder on towels than girls? No one answered that very easy question. Boys come in all hot, in a hurry and rush to the basin, wet their faces and hands, then dry them on the towel without much washing and the towel is so soiled it has to be thrown in the soiled clothes basket. The quiet, gentle little girls will come in, and get the soap, wash her hands nicely and simply dry them on the towel. It is hung up ready for use again. Now boys, don't think I have gone back on you by this explanation. You know they say boys are made of snapps and snails and puppy-dog tails, and girls are made of sugar and spice and every thing nice. Now, boys, I will send some strong towels for you and see if you cannot wash your hands clean and merit the good name of little girls. I have boys myself and that is why I know how they serve the towels.

Now be good, boys and girls, and study well and do your work well and we will all help Uncle Jim to look out for you this winter.

A Friend to the Orphanage.
(Mrs. T. A. Jones.)

Franklinton, N. C., Sept. 16, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am William Staley's little sister, and weigh nine pounds. I arrived at Grandma Staley's at nine-fifteen this morning and she gave me a dime to send to the Orphanage. Much love.

Your little niece,

Florence Harvey Cheatham.

Hearty greetings, little Florence! We hope "tiny baby" will soon grow and be able to play with brother. Grandma is good to give you dimes for our little children.

ALL GOD'S FLOWERS.

The flowers got into a debate one morning, as to which of them was the flower of God. And the rose said: "I am the flower of God, for I am the fairest and most perfect in beauty and variety of form and delicacy of fragrance of all the flowers." And the crocus said: "No; you are not the flower of God. Why, I was blooming long before you bloomed! I am the primitive flower; I am the first one." And the lily of the valley said modestly: "I am small, but I am white; perhaps I am the flower of God." And the trailing arbutus said: "Before any of you came forth, I was blooming under the leaves and under the snow. Am I not the flower of God?" And all the flowers cried out: "No; you are no flower at all. You are a come-outer." And then God's wind, blowing on the garden, brought this message to them: "Little flowers, do you not know that every flower that answers God's spring call, comes out of the cold, dark earth, and lifts its head above the sod and blossoms forth, catching the sunlight from God and flinging it back to men, taking the sweet south wind from God and giving it back to others in sweet and blessed fragrance—do you not know that you are all God's flowers?"—Lyman Abbott, D. D.

AN ESSENTIAL TRUTH.

There are professedly Christian people who are saying that the virgin birth of Christ is not an essential truth. Some theological teachers are making such a statement. They are telling their students that they can reject the miraculous birth of Christ, and yet be gospel Christians. One of this class, a professor in the University of Chicago, in a paper before me, says: "The narratives of the birth of Jesus do not belong to the common body of Gospel material, but are additions to it." He also says that "it cannot be ranked with the essential elements of the Christian faith." He quotes from a note, written by a woman, who gives advice to some young friends of hers about this subject. She says: "Can I suggest to them that to find the Christ may be easily possible, even though they fail to hold the belief in the miracle of the birth? After all, it is the life of Christ that we need." Such sentiments show that those persons suppose that they can deny the miraculous birth of Christ, and still believe enough in Him to be loyal Christians.

They assume that the doctrine of Christ's birth is a mere non-essential, and that, to reject it, does not hinder one from receiving from Christ every blessing which His atonement provides for believers. These persons are in great error. They are blind to the fact that Christ's virgin birth is one of the great fundamentals of the Christian religion. If Christ were not thus born, then he was only a mere man, no more divine than were the apostles, or any other man. If he were not miraculously born, then he was not sinless, but had a sinful nature, and therefore he could not have been the Savior of sinners. He certainly was not God in the flesh, if he were born as any child was born. The very deity of Christ was involved in his conception and birth. He said that he came down from heaven, and this means that he came in a supernatural way. Do not be deceived by the false statement that Christ's birth is not an essential truth. It is a vital doctrine.

SIMPLY CHRISTIAN.

It is the imperative duty of the Christian ministry to expose the frauds, affectations, barnacles and hypocrisies that have fastened themselves like parasites onto Christianity. One of the surest earmarks by which these can be distinguished is the names their devotees assume. They are hyphenated Christians—their name assuming that they are either more or less Christian. For instance, "Christian-Science," "Holiness-Christian," "Bible Christians," etc. Whenever a man assumes that he is anything more or less than simply a Christian he has confessed that he is not a Christian at all. A hyphenated Christian is a species that is not recognized by the Holy Scriptures. Let us be simply Christians—that is good enough.—Christian Indicator.

A Story on Giving.

A wealthy young man, studying in Switzerland, accompanied a professor on an evening walk. Seeing a farmer at work, who had taken off his shoes, the student said, "Professor, I should like to play a prank on that man by hiding his shoes, and then have the fun of seeing him hunt for them." The professor replied, "Let the man alone. A noble-minded person never plays tricks on poor people. If you want fun, permit me to suggest that you do him a secret kindness by placing a dollar in each shoe, and then watch and see what he will do." The student immediately followed the suggestion and placed a silver dollar in each shoe.

They hid themselves, and in a few minutes the man quit work, pulled on his shoes and rose to go home. Feeling something in his shoes he pulled them off again and found the two dollars. Looking about he saw no one. Thinking he was unseen he fell upon his knees to thank God. He fervently prayed: "O Lord, now I know that thou doest wonders to them that trust in thee. My wife lies sick at home, and the children need bread; but Thou hast sent me help in my need. I thank Thee from my inmost soul and pray Thee to bless the man who brought us Thy blessing."

The student, overcome by his feelings, confessed to his teacher: "Such a blessed experience as this deed has brought me I have never had in my life before."—Ex.

"The church has not yet discovered, still less begun to realize, the limitless possibilities of intercession."—Mott.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Big Oak.

Dear Bro. Editor:

Please allow me to say that we had another good day at Big Oak the third Sunday in September. On Saturday before, we held our quarterly meeting. The attendance was very good, notwithstanding the busy time with the farmers.

On Sunday the writer endeavored to preach to a house full of people and some outside.

But before preaching at 10 A. M. it was our pleasure to meet a large turnout of people on the banks of the Brown Mill pond, where we opened the doors of the church and received four more into the church, thus making 36 in all since the revival meeting at Big Oak.

From this church, in the presence of a vast concourse of people, we baptized by immersion ten young men and young women—five of each, and by effusion.

After preaching we administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, there being the largest number I ever saw commune at one time on an ordinary occasion. It was a good day for the Big Oak people. But we believe it is better still further on for them.

Antioch.

And also we had no less a good day yesterday, fourth Sunday in September, at Antioch—a large congregation to which we talked a while at 11 A. M. from the subject, "The Faith that Honors God and is Honored by Him in Return." as suggested by 1 Peter 1:7.

After preaching, there was communion service in which quite a number partook with thoughtful and prayerful solemnity—in obedience I trust to the not-to-be-forgotten injunction of Him who said "As oft as you do this, do so in remembrance of me."

From the Church we met to join in another baptismal service in "Carmel Lake" near Bro. O. M. Dorsett's. There was quite a gathering of people, many of whom took part in the prayer and song service before and after the administration of baptism by the pastor.

There was only one candidate, Mr. Thomas Goldston, to be baptized by immersion. He is the grand son of Brother O. M. Dorsett. "Tommie" is a splendid young man. Old and young have confidence in him. Would that we had many more such Christian young men. "Is the young man safe?"

T. B. Dawson.

Greensboro, N. C.

Salem Chapel.

We began our revival at Salem Chapel

the first Sunday in August and closed on Friday. The congregations were large as usual. Rev. J. L. Foster was there on Sunday and preached two good sermons. Rev. B. J. Earp was there all the time and did good work. His sermons were good. The meeting resulted in about 11 professions of faith. Several joined the church, and the church was very much revived. This church has in some lines done more work this year than in quite a number of years before. We have put in a nice carpet, a nice pulpit, a very good suit of leather upholstered pulpit chairs, fixing to put in one or two new heaters, and gave the Orphanage $30.00 in cash. The Sunday school is in the best condition it has been in for many years. Bro. Samuel, Supt., Miss Pattie Haizlip, Asst. Supt., Miss Sallie Samuels, Bible Class teacher; Selma and Lena Marshall, teachers, with other good workers. This is a church of great possibilities. At my last appointment there we had interesting services. Miss Jessie Fulton read an interesting essay on "The first missionary call." This was a good paper and well read. Miss Sallie Samuel read a very strong and timely paper on "Missionary Interest." This was a good and instructive paper. This is a church of great possibilities—so many capable young people. Some day Salem Chapel may be a great power.

Ingram, Va.

Our meeting began here the second Sunday in August and closed on the next third Sunday. We had large congregations all the time. Rev. P. T. Klapp was with us all the time and did nearly all the preaching. His sermons were good and very thoughtful. He had been pastor of this church for a number of years before and his friends were glad to see him again. Bro. Charles H. Butler and his wife, "the gospel singers," were here from Monday evening till Friday evening and led the song service. Bro. Butler is one of the finest gospel singers with his wife I know. Their singing was good, highly appreciated and very helpful. They will always find a welcome there. There were some 20 professions of faith, 10 accessions to the church, and 12 baptized, and the church was much revived. This is one of our best little churches, I mean small membership. We missed Bro. Carlton and family very much since they moved to Richmond, Va. The Sunday school is in a good condition with Bro. J. S. Henderson, Supt., Bro. R. L. Adams, asst. Supt., Rev. Ira Boyd, Bible Class teacher. Dr. Kent being one of the leaders in church and Sunday school. Well, we do not know his worth to the Sunday school, church and community till he leaves for the legislature.

Happy Home.

We began our meeting here on the 3rd Sunday in August and closed on the 4th Sunday. This was a good meeting. The largest congregations said ever to have been here. Some 12 to 15 professions of faith. 6 joined the church and 6 were baptized. The church was very much revived spiritually. Rev. B. J. Earp was with us all the time and did some good preaching for a young man. Rev. J. T. Overby of the Baptist church and Rev. Jno. Strader, of the M. E. Church, were both with us two days and preached one good sermon each. Our Sunday school is good. Bro. W. D. Wall, Supt., Bro. M. E. Lillard asst. Supt., with good teachers all make a good school. This is a strong church, but is unconscious of its ability. The next third Sunday is the time for our missionary meeting. This is a good people.

Christian Union.

The fourth Sunday in August was the beginning of our meeting here. This was the rainy week, yet we had a good meeting. There were some 11 or 12 professions of faith and 8 joined the church. The church was very much revived. There is a very small membership in this church but most of them are excellent people. Bro. B. J. Earp was with us all the time and did most of the preaching which was well received by the church and congregation. The church has been going through adversities for some three years; but we hope a brighter day dawns before them. We are now at New Center to hold our revival meeting.

Mt. Bethel.

Our meeting at Mt. Bethel took place from the first Sunday in September and continued till the second Sunday, with I believe, good results. A number professed faith in Christ and some were reclaimed and many greatly revived. Nine united with the church. Some of the oldest members said that the congregation on the first Sunday of the meeting was the largest they had ever seen there, a thousand or more.

Round Top.

We began a meeting at Round Top, near our home, Monday after the third Sunday in September, and continued two days and the rain closed us out. The results were one convert and one reclamation. All praise be unto Him to whom it belongs.

Holland, Va.

The annual protracted meeting at Holland church was held the week following third Sunday in September. Rev. I. W. Johnson did the preaching and led the meeting. There were about ten professions and four united with the church, three of whom were baptized at Norfleet's pond on the 25th inst. The meeting was a good one. The attendance was large, the singers faithful, and the preaching Biblical, practical and pointed, helping all who would toward higher and better things.

The fourth Sunday morning in September had been set apart for a special offering to raise a balance of $340 owing on the parsonage. The brethren were in the spirit of giving—gave quickly, liberally and cheerfully. The whole was raised in a few minutes and $47 additional to repaint the building. Every body seemed to feel good. The pastor is still feeling good.

Owing to rain the Missionary Society postponed its meeting till the fourth Sunday afternoon in October.

Wakefield, Va.

August and September is the revival season in this pastorate, and has been for some time, but since the Dendron people are doing some building our protracted service will not be held till Oct. The meeting at that place is to be held by Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., of Dayton, Ohio, and will begin Oct. 18th. Dr. Barrett is well-known in this part of our conference, as well as over the entire Christian church, and we are anticipating and praying that Bro. Barrett will be full of the Holy Spirit, as we feel he will, and that we may have a great meeting. Our protracted meeting at New Lebanon church was held the week following third Sunday in August, and a few days after the fourth Sunday. Dev. D. A. Keys, of South Norfolk, Va., did all the preaching and the spirit of God accompanied his sermons, which moved the church membership close to their Lord and caused the unconverted to cry out, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do." Brother Keys is one of the ablest men we have ever had in our field. He is truly a man of God, filled with the Spirit and preaches full salvation with pathos and love. He was also with us at Union during the meeting after the third Sunday in September. Union church being only about three miles from New Lebanon, we had more people than we could well accommodate during the services. The longer the brother was with us the better the people liked him, and the congregations increased every day, so much so that a multitude was out on the church yard. People stood in the windows and testified for Christ and His love in their soul. There were ten conversions at the last service, and the entire community seemed to be moved.

Five persons have united with the New Lebanon church, and five with Union. I am sure that the churches mentioned above were more revived than they have ever been by any visiting brother. We shall always remember Brother Keys, with the keenest sense of pleasure and good will.

Our Wakefield protracted service was conducted by Rev. C. H. Rowland, of Franklin, Va. Bro. Rowland is one of our most influential and esteemed brethren, and is well-known as a man of power and homiletic persuasion. And he proved it all while he was here with us. He was at his best and the people came, enjoyed and accepted his logical and Biblical sermons. We had a good meeting and we feel that great good was accomplished. Seven have united with the church and several more to follow. The revival services at Buton's Grove were conducted by the writer. We had all-day meeting, two services and dinner on the ground. Congregations were larger than we have had since the writer has been pastor there. We feel that God was with us and we had a good meeting. We had five conversions at our last service and four united with the church. Several others to unite later.

At our church business meeting held in Dendron, Friday night, Sept. 22, a letter was handed me which read as follows: "Dear Brother Pastor:—Please accept this check for $25.00, as a token of esteem and appreciation of your faithfulness, and as an expression of love and good-will. This is for the purpose of assisting in the purchase of a suit of clothes for yourself. From the Ladies Aid Society of the Dendron Christian Church, Mrs. A. C. Spratley, Secty."

I was so surprised that I could hardly believe myself, so I began to read the second time when the light of its meaning fell upon me, and I bowed low with the weight of appreciation in my heart as the tears flowed freely. I arose and read a few verses from I John 3:—"Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God"—and offered a prayer that God would bless the good women of our country. We have often said since we have been at work in this pastorate we have an excellent people. They are kind, thoughtful, and true to their pastor. We know that we are the children of God, and the writer is praying every day that he be kept by the heavenly Father and live worthy of such appreciation. Bro. J. T. Hargrave sent us a wagon load of fodder as a personal gift as his appreciation of our work among the Christian people, and the people of the community at large. We wish to thank all the good and kind people for these much esteemed gifts. May God bless them and us to work together that His kingdom be spread throughout this country.

DAY AND NIGHT.

By Frances M'Kinnon Morton.

I.

The day is ours. We love the busy, restless day;
It holds our meed of joy, our hours of work and play.
And yet the day is full of noise and garish light,
Indexing, all too clearly to our human sight,
The wall of difference men build about their lives—
The bitter want and cruel greed that drive
And follow men along the pathway of the lust
For gain, where souls are bartered for a bit of dust.
The peasant's hut, when in the light of day 'tis seen,
Beside the palace of the king looks poor and mean.
The day is full of toil, and evening shadows close
About a weary world that's weary for repose.
The day is doomed; no dawn, however bright,
But treads the path of yesterday unto the night.

II.

The night is God's. He spreads the darkness, calm and blest,
About his weary children like a robe of rest.
The garb of wealth, the cloak of rags are laid aside,
And in the quiet night there is no voice of pride.
The darkness folds with equal love the humble home
And the proud palace with its lofty tower and dome.
The night is full of peace and rest and folded wings,
And the soft breathing of a thousand sleeping things;
And o'er the slumbering world a host of kindly eyes
Are looking down through countless windows in the skies.
The darkness cradles faith, and through its hours of rest
We feel to-morrow pulsing in the midnight's breast;
For night is pregnant with the promise of the dawn,
And darkest hours break ever into glorious morn.

GOD'S MERCY

(He retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy. Mic. 7:18, Golden text for Sunday, Oct. 15).

We shall never be able to measure the length and breadth and depth of God's mercy. We try to do so, but all in vain. We have to measure mercy by that which the men and women about us manifest, and many of these are merciless while God is full of mercy. God wants to show mercy. God seeks a way of manifesting his mercy, not of withholding it.

In the Sunday school lesson of today we have a strange and wonderful display of God's mercy. The Israelites were captives, in an alien land under a pagan king, and justly so. They deserved by their own deeds and conduct to be there. They had disregarded all the commandment and pleas and warnings that a righteous God could give them; they had killed the true prophets of God and violated every law and statute laid down of a loving Father for their security and salvation. They had willfully, rebelliously, deliberately gone into sin and idolatry. The more favors that were granted them the more they sinned and the more openly did they rebel. On this account, after warnings were unheeded and pleas were of no avail, God allowed His chosen to be carried into captivity. For seventy years they had served as captives and bondsmen in a foreign land. Now the God of their father, not because they deserved it, but because of His own boundless mercy, gives them opportunity to return to their native Jerusalem and to once again become a nation and a people. In spite of their conduct God gives them another chance.

Surely God delights in mercy. God understood that these people had suffered enough and had now learned a valuable lesson. They were yet on teachable ground. God had taught them through suffering to hate idols and to return to the true worship.

Dr. Talmage once told of a father who had forgiven his wayward son three times and had come back the fourth time for his father's forgiveness. "No," said the irate and injured father, "I forgave you three times, but I will never forgive you again." And the son went off to the world again with a broken heart and died in shame and in sin. But God takes back His children the thousandth time as cheerfully as the first. "I am told," continued Dr. Talmage, "that the mercy of God is an ocean. Then I place on it four swift-sailing crafts, with compass, and charts, and choice rigging, and skillful navigators, and I tell them to launch away and discover for me the extent of this ocean. That craft puts out in one direction, and sails to the north, this to the south; this to the east; this to west. They crowd on all their canvass, and sail ten thousand years, and one day come up to the harbor of heaven; and I shout to them from the beach, 'Have you found the shore?' And they answer: 'No shore to God's mercy.' Swift angels, dispatched from the throne, attempt to go across it. For a million years they fly and fly; but them come back and fold their wings at the port of the throne, and cry, 'No shore! no shore to God's mercy.'

Indeed there is no limit to God's mercy. It embraces all who will, who accept, who turn, who desire to be saved, blessed and benefited by it. "O Lord our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth."

GOD'S ESTIMATE OF A MAN.

Jesus, the Christ, put the largest, richest and greatest institution in creation over against one life, and reckoned that one life of more worth than all the world. This was Christ's estimate of a man's worth.

I have seen a boy take a cigarette in his fingers, a material substance two inches long and a quarter of an inch thick, and say that that small bundle of matter was worth more than his life; and then proceed to sell his life with that estimate upon it.

God looked upon a man and deemed him of sufficient worth to evoke from heaven His only Son that He might come here and suffer and die to redeem the soul of that man. That is God's estimate, yet I have seen a man who looked upon a bottle no larger than could be carried in one's pocket and he said, "This bottle, with its fiery contents, is worth more than my life, and so I am going to give my life for what is in this bottle." That is man's estimate of his own worth.

God loved and respected and esteemed the soul of man so much that He stopped the whole machinery of Heaven after six days of labor, and said: "Let there be rest throughout the courts of heaven and the habitations of earth, for man needs it." That is God's care and loving consideration for man's need. I have seen men who said that the Sabbath did not make any difference and proceeded to work and worry and waste the day in wicked living. That is a man's estimate of his own worth, and upon this estimate, in this coin, he proceeds to sell himself.

What if we frail mortals could and would place the estimate upon our lives that our Creator placed upon them! He thought that one soul, just one man, was worth more than a whole world.

David, the sweet singer of Israel, tried to make the men and women of his day see how God regarded them; what a high estimate He placed on them. "Thou hast crowned him (man) with glory and honor. Thou madest him to have dominion over the works of thy hands; thou hast put all things under his feet." God esteemed man of so much worth and weight and influence that He crowned man with glory and with honor.

If men and women would only regard themselves as their creator regards them they would not, they could not sell their lives for a trifle, for a mess of pottage, for that which is worse than useless.

What is a man's life worth to him? God says it is worth more to him than all the world, than any and than all things that his eyes have ever seen.

More than all this. God has placed such a high estimate on man that He has conserved for man the very best through all ages, and destroyed all that is worst; this much for man's instruction, man's enlightenment and edification. Why has the Bible been saved through the rush of the ages and the wreck of empires? Simply because God had a care for my soul and for yours through all these ages, and He has been saving the Book, keeping it in His care, for us. He deemed and estimated, reader, that your soul, your single life was worth a thousand printing presses and millions of money and the labors of unnumbered generations of men. So He employed these, and more than all these, that He might get a copy of the Bible placed into your hands, and so teach your invaluable mind, your precious and priceless soul, the lessons of eternal life. God has wrought all this wondrous work to show a man of how much worth his own life is, to teach a man what his value is. What a price indeed has God Almighty put on each individual life! Of what priceless value indeed God has estimated the life of one, and of each, individual! If God had not cared for you do you think He would have caused to be spent for you, for your enlightenment and edification, millions of money, and years of grinding toil, that you might have a good book to read?

You may not know what a million idle, and worthless and wicked Greeks did thousands of years ago. But God has thought so much of you, has considered your instruction and enlightenment of such value that He has conserved in book, and readable form, the best that Plato thought, the purest that Aristotle wrote, the noblest that Socrates did.

Why haven't Luther and Cromwell and Calvin and Knox and Wesley and O'Kellen been obscured by oblivion and forgotten forever? Because God thought so much of you and of me that He saved the best in these good and great men for our instruction, enlightenment, edification.

The mind staggers indeed in trying to comprehend how high an estimate God has placed upon each one of us.

If God, the Creator, deems the life of so much weight and worth, shall we throw the life away for trifles, for follies, for frivolities, for shadows, shams and mere nothings? God of our fathers, forbid. Take all the gold, all the silver, all the precious metals of this whole world and place them together in a heap. Then beside their towering height and incalculable value place just one single individual, and God says that this individual is worth more than all that glittering, glaring, gleaming heap. Of so much worth does God consider just one immortal soul, one human life.

OUR WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

What are the women of our Christian churches doing for Missions? That is a question often asked, but never answered satisfactorily. True there are Ladies' Aid Societies in many, if not in most, of our churches, and they accomplish somewhat. But, as a distinctive missionary force and factor, what are our women bringing to pass? Are they idle as touching the great commission? God forbid. And yet, where is the work they have done, what results achieved, up to the present?

The editor of The Christian Sun is not the only one asking that question. Hundreds are asking it, but who can answer? The figures and the returns are not available, and so far as our records go the great hosts of our good women are doing nothing for missions, home or foreign.

There lies before the editor's eye now a letter from a good woman who feels the burden of this neglect and whose name we are not permitted to use. The letter begins: "There was something said in The Sun week before last about the organization of Missionary Societies among the women. Just before The Sun came, I was thinking over this matter, and have have for some time felt the crying need of development of this part of our work. Then I got the Annual and in the minutes of our last Southern Convention at Suffolk and found that a Board was appointed to prepare a constitution and submit same to the several conferences for approval. This Board may have done this work and I may not be aware of it; but if they have not, can't something be done. This lies heavily upon my heart."

And it lies heavily upon the heart of others of our good women. Turning to The Annual I find this record.

Resolution.

Whereas, there is at the present time no distinct uniform Missionary Organization for the women of the Southern Christian Convention; be it

Resolved, That a committee composed of women, one from each Conference, be appointed by the President at the present session of the Convention, said committee to be known as the Women's Board of Home and Foreign Missions in the South.

Plan of Organization. The duty of the Board when appointed shall be to prepare a constitution, submit same to the several Conferences, appoint a Woman's Missionary Board for Home and Foreign Missions. Signed, W. G. Clements, P. H. Fleming, Mrs. W. H. Canall, Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, L. F. Johnson. This is on page 25, Annual for 1911, containing proceedings for 1910.

On page 28 of the same Annual is this record: "This following Board for Women's Missionary Societies was elected: Mrs. McD. Howsare, President, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C.; Miss Bettie Stephenson, Roanoke, Ala.; Mrs. H. W. Elder, Richmond, Ga.; Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C.; Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C."

Then on page 29 is this further record "On motion, Mrs. McD. Howsare was elected Pres. of the Woman's Board."

It will be seen from this that not only do individuals amongst us see and feel the sore need of a distinctive missionary work on the part of our good women, but our forces in Convention assembled have spoken in no unmistakable manner.

What then is being done? What so far has been achieved in a definite way since the Convention adjourned in Suffolk Apr. 29th, 1910?

Is this great matter and movement to end in talk, in resolutions like so many other great and important matters of the King's business entrusted to our keeping. God forbid. There is food for thought and prayer here, for this matter lies heavily upon the hearts of some of our women. And the need is so very, very great. The women wait, and the work calls. Is nothing to be done?

A NOTE OF CHEER.

Good Doctor J. B. Weston, now well beyond his ninety years, but still active in the ministry and engaged daily as teacher and dean of the Theological Department of Defiance Christian College, Defiance, Ohio, sends this line of hope and cheer:

"Incidentally I want to say that I am pleased with all the signs of activity and progress among our brethren of the southern states. Your paper touches the pulse-beats of all the churches, and encourages their work; and at the same time has a kindly outlook for good elsewhere. Your church advance, your mission work, your activity in Elon College, all tell for good. Of course, the ideal is not reached. Many fail to respond as they ought. But there is apparent progress. May God help it on with accelerated speed. The same is true among our people all around. I think all our school and colleges have this year a good accession to their numbers. It seems to be especially so with Elon and Defiance. This is in itself a fore-promise of better things in the future. God has a great mission for us if we will be equal to the occasion. "God towards thee will do His part: Do thine."

Thanks, dear doctor. May all who are desirous and anxious take courage, look up, press forward. That God has a great mission for us none can doubt.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

Dr. J. U. Newman, who for thirteen years in the early history of the College, was acting dean, has been elected Dean of the Faculty for the ensuing year. This announcement brought forth a shower of applause from the student body, and the feeling is that Dr. Newman is just coming back to his own.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson preached the sermon yesterday morning from the theme "Whither art thou going?" Dr. Atkinson said that the world does not judge a man, if he is properly judged, by what he is nor by whence he came, but the question that is raised is whither away. Dr. Atkinson used as the text a command from Moses to his father-in-law, "Follow us and we will do thee good." Mr. O. M. Barnes, of the College, rendered the beautiful bass solo, "Shall I be Forgotten?" and Miss Pitt presided at the organ.

The State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. will be on the Hill this afternoon and will speak to the Young Men's and Young Women's Associations.

The College community was delighted on last Friday to have in its midst Mrs. E. L. Moffitt, and her sister, Mrs. J. K. Ruebush, '01, of Dayton, Va. These ladies attended chapel services on the morning of their arrival and had words of praise and cheer for the students.

The enrollment continues to swell. New students are coming in every day or two and our enrollment has reached 226 at this writing.

NOTICE.To Those Who are Interested in The Young People's Convention.

I am informed in a recent letter from our Treasurer, Rev. L. I. Cox, Elon College, N. C., that he, as Treasurer, of the Young People's General Convention is in sore need of funds, that is if we are to do business on a cash basis, and there is no other way for us to do it, if we are to carry out the purpose of the Convention. We owe, at present, quite a number of bills and have practically nothing in the treasury with which to settle the same. We must know how embarrassing it is for our Treasurer, to be constantly receiving statements and bills, to whom alone the creditors are looking for settlement, and he is absolutely unable to respond. As president, I would ask, as he also has asked in a previous letter, that all pledges made for the support of this work be paid in full at the very earliest possible date, which will greatly assist the Treasurer in payment of debts necessarily incurred. By so-doing you will greatly oblige the Convention.

If your Sunday School, organized class or Society of Christian Endeavor has not taken a special collection for the support of this work will you not do so within the next ten days and forward the same to Rev. L. I. Cox, Treasurer, Elon College, N. C.?

Will the Program Committees of the various Conferences, in formulating the programs for the coming session, please give space for an address on The Young People's Work? and I will see that the speaker is present.

L. E. Smith, President.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

Last week personal letters were written to the Presidents and Secretaries of all the Southern Conferences, to all the chairmen of the Educational Committees of these Conferences, to all the pastors, and to all the Secretaries of the local churches, on behalf of the Elon College Fund for this year. Most of the Churches have been bringing this fund up and it has been doing a great deal of good for the College, but some have, for one reason or another, chiefly, I think, because they did not realize the need of the College in that direction, failed to do their apportioned part. So these letters were written as an encouragement to the Conferences, pastors, and Churches that have been complying with the Convention's request touching this matter, and as an incentive to others to do their best this year.

In each of these letters we tried to make it plain that we did not wish the Elon Fund pushed unduly nor to the detriment of other funds. All the funds in the apportionment table are equally important and should be brought up in full, but some churches have cut the Elon Fund entirely out, chiefly because they did not realize the need of the College nor the ground on which the Fund is asked for. I hope that every church will this year do something for the College, but I hope also that it will neglect no fund entirely. I hope the time will come when every Church will be a banner Church, meaning by that term, that it shall bring up in full all the Conference apportionments.

The Elon College Fund, if paid in full, amounts to but $1,800, but this is the equivalent of an endowment of $30,000. On the College side we may place the fact that this year there are twenty-five ministerial students, twenty children of ministers, and two from the Christian Orphanage, a total of forty-seven, the tuition of which amounts to $2,350. This represents then a gift in service to the Church through its servants and wards of this amount from the College, whereas the church is asked to give the College for current expenses only $1,800.

But the chief reason for the Churches' giving this money annually to the College is that the College is the child of the churches, their handiwork, and must look to them for support. If we consider what the status of our Church was educationally, both in the pulpit and among the laity, before the College was founded. I think we shall have another solid reason for generosity to this fund. The College hopes to be the willing servant of the Church and looks to the Church for encouragement, counsel and support. The Church cannot afford to let the College suffer; the College cannot get along without the Church. The two are mutually helpful and inseparably interested. May we not quote the fine words of a great orator in reference to liberty and union and apply them to the relation between Elon College and the Christian Church South, in this form, "Elon College and the Christian Church South, one and inseparable, now and for ever?"

Together, brethren, let's bring in all the funds in full this year, and let us not neglect the Elon Fund, if we have ever done so before. Remember that charity begins at home, but it ceases to be charity if it ends there. W. A. Harper.

—The census reports issued from Washington show nearly a million bales more cotton ginned by October 1 than by the same time last year. The dry weather has caused early opening.

WORKING FOR GOD.

Every Christian is supposed to be a worker for God; and each one will, in some way and in some sphere, do work for Him. Let it not be thought that because a certain Christian does not take an active part in the affairs of his church he is not doing anything for God. In ways not conspicuous, he is so living that the cause of God is being served by him. But a higher thought is that the Christian should have a definite aim to work for God. He should ask Him for the necessary orders to do whatsoever will please Him. He should never do his own planning, but let God plan for him. A great preacher says: "When Brunelleschi built the cathedral at Florence he said: 'I am going to build for God. I am determined to build in His way.' Consequently it was necessary for Him to follow God's example—to be with that cathedral every step of the way. He saw the first shovelful of dirt taken out; he watched it every day; he saw the foundations laid; saw every stone, every brick put in place; every carving upon it. To the capstone at the top, that great architect followed every detail. The wonder of the world, it remains today, beyond even that of St. Peter's. It is because of the accuracy, the nicety of every form and line. A godly man does all of his work that way." I do not think that it is true of all really godly people. That minister's statement is too extreme; nevertheless, it should be the purpose of every Christian to work in accordance with the plan which God has for him. One may be a farmer, yet be a true worker for God. It is a great mistake to suppose that one engaged in a secular calling cannot well serve God. One can work with God on the farm. He can consecrate his toil to the service of his Lord. Are Christian farmers ever thinking of this fact? I am sure that if they would have this purpose in mind, God would prosper them as He does not favor those who work only for themselves. Whatever you do, let it be for God's pleasure, and not your own.

C. H. Wetherbe.

THE MINIMUM CHRISTIAN.

The minimum Christian! And who is he? The Christian who is going to be saved at the cheapest rate possible; the Christian who intends to get all the world he can, and not meet the worldling's doom; the Christian who aims to have as little religion as he may, without lacking it altogether.

The minimum Christian goes to church in the morning, and in the afternoon also unless it rains or is too warm or too cold or he is too sleepy or has a headache from eating too much dinner. He listens most respectfully to the preacher and joins in the prayer and praise. He applies the truth very judiciously, sometimes to himself, often to his neighbors.

The minimum Christian is very friendly to all good works. He wishes them well, but it is not in his power to do much for them. The Sabbath school he looks upon as an admirable institution, especially for the neglected and ignorant. It is not convenient, however, for him to take a class. His business engagements are so pressing during the week that he needs Sunday as a day of rest; nor does he think himself qualified to act as a teacher. There are so many persons better than he; he begs to be excused. He is very friendly to home and foreign missions and colportage, and gives his mite. He thinks there are too many appeals, but he gives, if not enough to save his reputation, pretty near it; at all events he aims to.

The minimum Christian is not clear on a number of points. The opera and dancing, the theater and card-playing, and large, fashionable parties give him much trouble. He cannot see the harm in this or that or the other popular amusement. There is nothing in the Bible against it. He does not see but that a man may be a Christian and dance or go to the opera. He knows several excellent persons who do. Why should not he? He stands so close to the dividing line between the people of God and the world that it is hard to say on which side he really stands.

Ah, my brother, are you making this attempt? Beware, lest you find at last that, in trying to get into heaven with a little religion, you miss it altogether; lest, without gaining the whole world, you lose your own soul.—Presbyterian at Work.

A HARVARD LETTER.

I left Burlington, N. C., September 9, 1911, to be gone one year. After a moment's stop in the pleasantest vale in all of old Virginia I traveled via Richmond, arriving at the nation's Capitol Sept. 14. Mr. S. M. Atkinson met me here, and we took in the city.

To describe Washington would be an impossibility; for every time you see it, you see it in a different light. It's like reading Hamlet. I wonder what George Washington would think were he to find himself on Pennsylvania Avenue this morning. Perhaps he wouldn't like so many bars and ten-cent theatres; but I am confident he would be tickled to drop a nickel in a slot machine and have his shoes shined by electricity or to stand on the corner and see his many children swarm by. It is doubtful if he could recognize some of them that have thrown away their eyes, wiped off their noses, and cut off their limbs.

This is a day of inventions, certain and sure. A news boy came through the train distributing small boxes of candy. Mr. Atkinson, taking these to be samples, devoured three. The news boy came back collecting. The candy couldn't be coughed up. Thirty cents had to be dug out. It was a trick, Mr. Atkinson says; but it looked more like an invention to me.

Washington is the cleanest city in the world, and perhaps the best laid off city. The chief things to see are: the Capitol, the Library of Congress, the Treasury, the State, War and Navy Building, Smithsonian Institution and National Museum, the Corcoran Art Gallery, and the entire city from the Monument. Of course one would naturally see the Home of our presidents, and would rest a few hours out at Mount Vernon.

About all these places we know more or less. There is one place that is not mentioned above which is worth a visit. It is the Dead Letter Office. Into this office come about 19,000 letters daily. Certain men open letters only, and they are very expert; others read. The letters that have any inside address are kept, those that have none are thrown into the waste basket. Each set of hands has its work. While some are opening letters and others reading and assorting, there are still others attending to the return of letters, to the ones having money, etc. While we were looking on two letters were found having currency in them. There is the enormous sum of $50,000 yearly sent to the Dead Letter Office, this is in currency; there is more than a million, counting checks and drafts. Most of this money, of course, is returned to the sender. There are more love letters than any other kind. This is following the natural order of things; for no doubt there is more of this lost than every thing else combined. Forty thousand pictures are lost every year, which means forty thousand disappointments.

Just a word about the Treasury and we will on our way. This is a place of especial interest to those who like money; that is, all of us. In the vaults of this building is deposited, required to be deposited by law, in silver and gold, $100,000,000. Twenty two men are on guard all the time, and several hundred men could be mobilized in an hour. Each piece of paper money is simply a promise to pay a certain amount of money in gold or silver. A bank note or a treasury note, then, is really not money, but like a check, a promise to pay in silver or gold. So, for every bank note or any kind of paper money, there is deposited in the Treasury at Washington the face value of that note in real money. Here's where all the mutilated bills go for redemption. I used to be afraid to get an old worn out dollar bill—afraid it would wear out on my hands—did not know that they went to Washington to be ground up and again be made into money. If any reader of The Sun should happen to drop a $10,000 bank note into the hog pen while he is feeding his pigs, and these pigs should take a liking to it, as most pigs are certain to do, and should tear it into fragments, be not dismayed. Just send the scraps to the Treasury and they have expert money women who will know all about it and have you a new $10,000 bill made. And they will do the same thing for you if it is only a $1 bill. And if you should be more dismayed because you had dropped one of these little $10,000 or less bills into the fire, still be not despondent, for Uncle Sam has those in the treasury that can read bank note dust and give you penny for penny for all that you have burned.

After three days in Washinton we migrated to New York. New York is a wonder. It cannot be expressed. It would be an interesting discovery if the Math Teacher in Elon College could ascertain that the variation in the earth's revolution is due to the immense weight of New York City being centered in such a small arear upon the surface.

In this city every body seemed to follow us. We stopped to look at a skyscraper, and in a few minutes a great crowd was around us looking up. If a man should fall flat on the side walks down lower Broadway sixty-eight people would run over him before he could possibly get on his feet. It is interesting to look at the crowds surge by. Over and on and under the ground they go—faces bespeaking every sentiment that is possible to human hearts. This is more interesting than Wall Street and the Cotton Exchange; more resting than the Libraries of Art and Literature; and as inspiring to higher ideals as is the beautiful tomb of Grant, which overlooks the historic Hudson. On the streets before your gaze meet and mingle all classes and all kinds: men of high and low purpose; old and young; and you wonder if there can ever be in them a heart of one accord. When will the religion of Christianity reach and redeem and save all these masses at the present rate of progress?

NOTES AND PERSONALS

—It is believed that, when corrections have been made and the official count given out, Maine will still be in the "dry" column by a safe majority.

—Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, N. C., whose condition has been reported as very serious, continues to improve and is able now to be up in his room much of the day.

—Rev. G. O. Lankford changes his address from Columbus, Ga., to Wadley, Ala. A successor to Bro. Lankford at Rose Hill, Columbus, has not yet been secured, we are informed.

—Italy and Turkey do not seem to be fighting much and it is believed they will settle their hostilities without much bloodshed. To that end all good people should have anxious solicitude, for war is awful, and is to be avoided always.

—The Dukes are kind indeed to Trinity College, and we doubt if it has begun to appear what they will do yet for this institution. On "Benefactor's Day," President Few announced gifts from Messrs. J. B., and B. N., the past year, amounting to $228,500.

—Last reports are that Mrs. H. E. Rountree, Waverly, Va., operated on at the Dr. Belt Hospital, South Boston, Va., last Wednesday, stood the ordeal well and though suffering much, is improving with all symptoms favorable to a speedy recovery.

—Durham comes with prompt denial, through its Board of Health, of the great number of pellagra cases erroneously attributed to it, saying "there are only 21 cases of pellagra in the town of Durham and only 32 cases are reported in the whole county."

—Every dollar asked by Conference of the several churches is sorely needed, and when one church fails to bring up its apportionment in full the work suffers to that extent. Every church doing its full duty now to raise all Conf. calls will tell a story of success and triumph the coming year.

—The Beattie family have secured permission, it is reported, to bury Henry Beattie, Jr., the convicted wife murderer, in the Richmond cemetery. Young Beattie of course hopes—the heart hopes even when there is no hope—but his aged father understands that hope is gone and his son's fate is fixed—in all human probability.

—Major C. E. Hemphill, the brilliant editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, is, on November 1, to become editor-in-chief of The Charlotte Daily Observer, and Mr. A. E. Gonzales, publisher of The State, Columbia, S. C., becomes publisher of The Observer. This is indeed a strong team and should make of The Observer a paper of unusual prestige and power.

—Mr. Charles U. Butler and wife, singing evangelists, are in a great meeting at Columbia, S. C. There are a hundred voices in the choir, great congregations attend and there are conversions at every service. But, and this will be hailed as good news by friends, we may write it "Rev." as Bro. Butler is to be ordained to the gospel ministry at Spartanburg, S. C., next Tuesday, 17th, inst.

—Suffolk is making proper preparations to entertain the forthcoming session of the Eastern Va. Conference which convenes Oct. 31. There are 43 churches in the Conference with a membership of more than 6,000 and conference calls for nearly $4,000. Suffolk may be counted on to entertain in cordial fashion as she did when our Convention met there a year ago last May.

—Pastor L. E. Smith, assisted by Rev. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va., conducted a successful revival with our First Church in Greensboro. There were some eleven or twelve conversions, and eight united with the church on Sunday. Pastor Smith has received 47 members during the year and has the names of eight or more for membership. He is praying for 60 for this Conference year.

—Rev. Howard E. Truitt, who graduated from Elon College last June, leaves for Harrisonburg, Va., to join with our conferences at work in the Virginia Valley. He will make a worthy and capable and efficient yoke-fellow with Andes and Walters and Williamson and the others. A conscientious and consecrated man, the work will prosper in his hands, and the churches in the Valley do well to secure his services.

—Last Saturday, Oct., 7, the Southern Power Company's electric lines from beyond Charlotte to Durham were put into active commission when electric voltage of sufficient power to turn factory wheels in Durham shot through these lines, a distance of 173 miles, from the Catawba River. Durham is to use 20,000 horse power generated at the Catawba River and transmitted over what is said to be the longest line for the transmission of electric power in the world.

—Rock of Ages, that beautiful and inspiring hymn which has been a source of strength and comfort to so many, was written by a leper. The author, Toplady, was visited the day before he died, by a physician who assured him he was better and that his prospects were brighter. "No," said Toplady, "no one can live after such manifestations of God's glory as I have seen." And he died the next day "hidden in the cleft of the Rock of Ages."

—Thanks to Bro. J. S. Truitt, Secretary, and Rev. W. L. Wells, President, we are in receipt of a copy, in neat and attractive form of the proceedings of the Twenty-Ninth Annual session of the Young People's Convention of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference held at Shallow Ford, Alamance Co., N. C., July 11-13, 1911. Any reader wishing a copy can secure it by addressing Secretary Truitt at Elon College. It has information that is valuable.

—Dr. A. T. Robertson, teacher in the Baptist Seminary at Louisville, is quoted as saying before the Baptist Alliance in Philadelphia: "Given, an open Bible, an open mind, and a conscience in good working order, and we shall have a Baptist." Which implies that Methodists, Presbyterians, Christians, and others haven't an open Bible, an open mind, a conscience in good working order, a statement much easier made than verified, and one sustained neither by logic, by history, nor by facts.

—Burlington, Graham and Haw River are now connected by street car line, the first cars having run over the lines, and successfully, last week. Messrs. J. H. Murray, John M. Cook and Junius Harden are the promoters and are receiving many congratulations on the carrying through of this great undertaking. The three towns named are rejoicing, with cause, and felicitating each other. Our only regret is that the line does not, as it should, come along to Elon College also. A few brief years may see this. Great er wonders have happened.

—Three of the brethren, Revs. C. M. Carter, H. E. Rountree and N. G. Newman, spoke Sunday, October 1st, to their congregations about The Christian Sun and passed the blank cards out as requested. As a result each sent us nice lists of new subscribers. If, that is it, IF all our faithful pastors will do as these three have already done The Sun's subscription list will increase by more than 500 before Conference. Brethren, will you not do this good, but very simple and helpful service? It means so very, very much in results.

—We send felicitations, congratulations and heartiest good wishes. This is the cause. "Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Brunk will give in marriage their daughter, Ella Ora to Rev. Leon Edgar Smith Wednesday afternoon, October 18th, 1911, at 2 o'clock. At home, South Boston, Va. The honor of your presence is requested." Now we should love to be there—but previous engagements, et cetera. Bro. Smith is the popular and beloved pastor of our Greensboro First Church, and Miss Ella Brunk is a woman of rare character and accomplishments, and Smith has won the victory of his life in gaining her hand and heart.

—The Elon College Christian Church has adopted, and put in for use by the congregation one hundred copies of the new Christian Hymnaries. By the way, this new edition of the Hymnary is meeting with marked favor and approval and is being rapidly introduced into our congregations generally. For what it contains it is one of the very cheapest hymn books on the market, 75 cents the single copy, 50 cents plus freight or express in quantities to churches. The Christian Sun office, Elon College, N. C., will receive and fill orders promptly, having recently received a consignment of 300 copies.

—Rev. B. F. Black, who has gone to Clifton Forge, Va., to be Secretary of a Railway Y. M. C. A. is thus spoken of by the Sunbury correspondent of the Suffolk Herald:

“Much good has been accomplished in Damascus church this year. Rev. Mr. Black has evidently proven himself to be a successful pastor. The church is now in better condition spiritually, financially, than it has ever been before. The people of this community regret very much indeed to see him leave. Last Sunday at eight o'clock he preached his farewell sermon to the community in the Episcopal church at Sunbury, N. C. A large congregation assembled to hear his farewell words, and to bid him goodbye.”

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

John D.

In spite of all his errors and evils, in traffic and in trade, one has to give Deacon John D. Rockefeller some meed of praise and commendation. I am not arguing now as to the balance sheet the recording angel is keeping with the Deacon, nor how things are going to come out in the final account.

I was thinking of the injustice many of us did the Deacon when he sent, under fire, fume and protest, an enormous pouch of gold down South here with which to fight the hookworm disease. Many of us said there was no hookworm here. Others vowed that John D. hated the South and wanted to give us some unwholesome advertising. Nothing daunted or dismayed, the Deacon pursued his course unperturbed, and the stream of good gold flowed on in this direction. Now what? The other day a Columbus County boy, sixteen years old, was carried into the place of treatment for hookworm on a stretcher. He had been in declining health for six years, weighed only sixty pounds, and was unable of course to walk, work or go to school. A microscopic examination showed that he was a victim of the severest type of hookworm disease. Treatment was begun. He rapidly gained 19 pounds, the quality of his blood increased from 14 per cent. to 60 per cent., normal, and can now walk, run, work, go to school and what not. That boy is an enthusiastic believer in the efficiency of some of the Deacon's wisdom and benevolence. After all, has John D. committed a crime, wilfully and maliciously, or has he taken advantage of laws and conditions created by his time and by his country? Put it any way you will, the Deacon is not the monster that he was once pictured to us to be, neither is his heart and conscience all bad. But we hardly know which he has been censured for the more, the way he made his money, or the way in which he has given it away.

Seeking Forgiveness.

It seems that some brother out in California made a profession of religion some time since and now writes the Mayor of New York that he once deceived the Mayor and wronged thereby another man; but now wishes to undeceive him. To this letter Mayor Gaynor is reported to have made reply as follows:

“Dear Sir: Your letter is at hand. You state that some years ago you were a witness before me when I was a Judge, and a false witness, and deceived me, so that I decided the case wrongly, and that you make this confession to me because you have become a Christian, and want forgiveness

“According to my views you have to do more than this to be forgiven. You have to make amends. Mere talk does not purchase forgiveness. Where anything is stolen or got unjustly it must be refunded before forgiveness can be expected, if the sinner is able to refund.

That is the way I understand it. So you had better tell me what the case was, so that I may look it up and see what loss the defeated party sustained, and then you must restore his money to him or make good his loss. If this be not your view I fear you are in error in supposing that you have got religion and are a Christian.”

There is doctrine which strikes us as sound and safe. And to our thinking the Scriptural text Matt. 5:23-24 justifies the Mayor's counsel.

“Make the Men Sit Down.”

Comes an article by way of The Wall Street Journal which interests us. The instance cited is that in which several thousand were present and food supplies were lacking. There was doubtless clamor and confusion. Then the voice of a strong Man, One who spake with calmness and authority, said, “Make the men sit down.” Whatever the process of feeding The Journal thinks it would have been worth while to be there just to have seen order restored out of chaos and confusion.

Our exchange thinks that this command has some bearing on the parallel events today. There is a perfect babel of voices about us and one wonders who is listening. Even the dignified President of the United States is out on a long talking tour. Everybody wants to talk; nobody seems to want to listen. There are grave problems in our times. There are combines, and tariffs, and trusts and corporations with all their greed and attendant evils. But nobody seems to be thinking seriously about them. Everybody is talking. Nobody listens. The hardest task in our time is not to work and toil and tug away at the daily grind. Never. The task of our day to which few if any will give themselves is to think. Working is easy. Thinking is difficult. Make the men sit down and get quiet.

—Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley of Spanish-American war fame died suddenly on a crowded street in New York October 2.

—Dr. W. W. Staley says the laundry business is larger in volume and expense than that of manufacturing. That is, it costs more to keep goods clean than it does to manufacture them. So cleanliness is as difficult a task, and as costly, as creation. One is reminded of this huge expense item when one reads that in Des Moines last month the school children used one thousand cakes of soap, thirty-two hundred roller towels and two thousand hand towels.

“The Americans are certainly a music-loving people. At present the musical standard of the American public, taken as a whole, must be pronounced a low one, though we rightly claim for this country a high rank in cultivation.

“We have the musical taste of the people for music, their strong desire to have the best, and their readiness to recognize what is best when it is presented to them.

“Nature has done her part generously; it remains for us to do ours.”

THE BARACA MOVEMENT.

By Marshall A. Hudson.

The question often asked, "Wherein does the 'Baraca Bible Class' differ from other so called adult Bible classes?"

It is estimated that nearly nine thousand differently named classes come under general head of "adult Bible classes," which of course includes "Baraca." There are many things about the Baraca movement which laeces it in a class of its own. Especially is this true with reference to the platform.

Every man who has reached the age of maturity is necessarily an adult, but he is a Baraca only as he becomes such by choice.

I fully believe that the platform, "Young Men at work for Young Men, all standing by the Bible and the Bible School," is of divine inspiration.

A good platform is essential in any well-regulated organization, and the closer its membership is guided by it, the better the results will be.

Our platform holds the same relation to the Baraca movement as does the United States Constitution to the people of America. Many times has it been assailed and many the efforts made to change it, but it remains just the same, a guiding star that keeps us from dashing against the rocks and holds us true to the principles laid down in the beginning by its founder.

It has stood the test of time because it has embodied in it the spirit of philanthropy and places Bible study as the foundation upon which to build a class.

As long as our classes work under this platform they will have no trouble about the age limit—"Young men" means young men, that is the kind we have always wanted. It is estimated that three-fourths of our young men remain out of the Bible school. As long as one of these remain out we all have work to do. I know of no better way to get them in than to follow the plan indicated in the phrase, "Young men at work for young men." Certainly this is the Bible plan. The fact that "no one can reach a man like a man" has been proved again and again. The sympathetic touch, the brotherly love, the man to man interest, all have their power. Since this is true, I am sure we can do no greater thing than to put our young men to work for each other.

If one would do successful work, it is well to have something good to stand by and something good that will stand by them.

In religious work, I know of no better thing to recommend to our young men who are at work for young men than that they go about their work "All standing by the Bible and the Bible school."

No one thing in the Baraca movement has contributed so largely to its success as the fact that we have always stood by the Bible and the Bible school. In fact, I think I can safely say it has been the thing that has made the movement a success.

Nothing in the physical, social and mental development is overlooked—but the Bible comes first. Place the Bible first and other things are easy; place the other things first and Bible study is hard.

Observation teaches us that the classes who give first place to Bible study are the ones who hold their membership the longest and who develop the largest number of Christian workers. If we stand by the Bible and the Bible school, our classes will not get too big for the school but will be an active part of the school, and will be the right hand helpers of church and school.

The value of the platform, "Young men at work for young men, all standing by the Bible and the Bible school," cannot be estimated, for eternity alone can tell.

It brings out the best in the man, and is helping to shape the destiny of our nation.

Some Object Lessons.

For an object meeting request the Endeavorers one week in advance to bring to the meeting each of them some object which will be shown to the society, and a lesson drawn from it. I suggest a few possible objects.

A fountain pen does not work well when it has only a little ink in it, but flows too rapidly and makes blots. It is like a head with too little sense in it.

A watch is best wound in the morning, because then the springs give their best tension to the working hours of the day. So the morning is the best time for Bible-reading.

A razor shows the value of rest regularly, for if one is used incessantly it loses its power of taking and keeping an edge; but it regains that power after a few days' rest.

If a new book is opened carelessly that back is likely to be broken, the glue and the stitches giving way. It is equally necessary to deal carefully and gently with one who is beginning the Christian life.

An exposed photographic plate must be developed in the dark room before it is brought into the light, or it is ruined. Thus the great thoughts of the Bible are not useful in your life till you have made them your own by solitary meditation.

A medicine case full of useful medicines is worth more to the traveler than a whole drugstore at home. Thus the Bible that is worth most to you is what you commit to memory and carry with you.

A pencil is useless as long as its lead is broken off; and who is to know that a Christian is a Christian if he does not in some way express himself?

An envelope may be directed, but it will not reach its destination without a postage stamp. So also your prayer will not reach heaven without the stamp of faith.

A spyglass, looked through the wrong way, puts objects further away instead of bringing them nearer. It is possible to go to the Bible in such a way, with pride and conceit and obstinacy, that the use of it actually throws heaven farther away from one.

A lump of coal, held in the hand and not placed on the fire, not only does not heat, but soils the hand. It is like a fine emotion that is not transmuted into action.

An alarm clock, if one disregards its summons a few times, ceases to have power to arouse one. It is thus with a conscience that is not heeded.—Daily Companion.

Short Addresses.

The historic fig-tree could not remain a purely negative quantity. There were two charges against it. First, that it bore no fruit, and, second, that it cumbered the ground. It was taking up room that might have been put to profitable use. So there are two charges to be brought against every man who is not living according to God's plan. Because one is not guilty of crime and lawlessness, he can not conclude he is not innocent. The disobedience of barrenness, inaction is real and whoever is permitted to live in that state is a mere subject of the merciful forbearing of God.

We are told in an Eastern allegory that a merchant, going abroad, gave to two of his friends, two sacks of wheat each, to take care of till his return. Years passed; he came back and applied for them again. The first took him into a store house, and showed them to him, but they were mildewed and worthless. The other led him out into the open country, and pointed out to him field after field of waving grain, the produce of the two sacks given him. Said the merchant: "You have been a faithful friend. Give me two sacks of wheat; the rest shall be thine."

Mr. MacKay, a missionary in Uganda, has told us in his diary how he dug for water on top of a hill, while the natives declared that water could only be found at the bottom. "When we got too far down to throw up the earth with a shovel," he writes, "I set up a trestle of strong trees; and with a rope and pulley and bucket, much to the astonishment of the natives, we hoisted up the clay, till we reached water just at the depth I predicted. The people had never seen a deep well before. It took more than a week to sink the well; but when I afterward repaired a battered pump which I bought in London, and they saw a copious stream ascend twenty feet high, and flow and flow, as long as one worked the handle, their wonder and amazement knew no bounds. 'MacKay, lubare, lubare, dala!' But I told them that there was only one Great Spirit, that is, God, and I was only a man like themselves."—Tarbell.

A WESTERN LETTER.

Having promised friends in Burlington, N. C., and the genial editor of The Christian Sun to let them hear from me through the columns of The Sun, I now undertake the pleasant task.

It was Tuesday, Aug. 29th, when we left Burlington for Greenville, Ohio. It was raining when we boarded the Southern for Cincinnati, going by way of Asheville, N. C. Quite a number of friends were at the station to see us off, and their good wishes were many. Some hearts were too full for utterance. They simply grasped our hands, pressed them firmly, and turned away. We knew the heart was speaking though the lips not a word. It is not an easy thing to break up home, separate family and sever relations as pastor and flock, after years of service, all in a day. It rained much of the way to Asheville, but still we had a delightful view of the mountains ere the sun went down and night settled about us.

At Asheville we changed cars, taking The Carolina Special for Cincinnati. The night was dark and the distance long, but under the skilful hand of the engineer and the efficient service of the conductor and other trusted men, our train pulled into the Grand Union Station of Cincinnati, on time Wednesday morning at ten o'clock. As I stepped off the Pullman, I said, "Thank you, Captain." I wished to let him know that we appreciated his courtesy and kindness to us. I had some business with the Big Four station Master, and this same conductor looked him up for me, told him my business, and then was gone. It is a pleasure to travel under the care of such men, and I believe that travelers ought to express to such men their appreciation.

We reached Cincinnati about 10 a. m., leaving there at 4 p. m., over the Cincinnati and Northern, for Greenville, arriving there about seven twenty. It was dark, but quite a number of our church people were at the station awaiting our coming, and they certainly did give us a hearty welcome. As I stepped off the train, a fine looking gentleman, with long white beard, grasped my hand and said, "Am I mistaken in the man?" I said no, and then told him who I was, and asked is this Bro. W. C. Mote? He answered in the affirmative. Then and there followed introductions and many hearty handshakes and many glad-to-see-you utterances. Bro. Overholser took us to his beautiful home where we were hospitably entertained till our household goods came on the following Friday. From Cincinnati they scattered us and our stuff so far as route was concerned. We reached Greenville over the "C. & N.," our trunks came in over the "D. & U.," and our household goods by way of "The Pan Handle." We took dinner one Friday in the parsonage at Burlington, and the following Friday we took supper in the parsonage at Greenville. I count that very good freight transportation. It is just a little more than a day's run by through passenger trains from Greenville to Burlington. Steam, electricity, and efficient railway service are certainly bringing the different parts of this great country of ours close together.

On Sept. 14th, the Church gave us a very enjoyable reception at the Church. The program was good, the attendance large, and the hearty good fellowship which prevailed was certainly delightful.

Since reaching Greenville, I have married two couples, conducted one funeral, preached six times, delivered one Sunday school address, and made forty-six pastoral calls. In my next letter I plan to tell something about our church here and its work.

Praying God's richest blessings to rest upon all parts of our beloved Zion, I am in the bonds of Christian fellowship,

Your brother,

P. H. Fleming.

Greenville, Ohio, Sept 26, 1911.

RUTS OR ROUTES—WHICH?

It is so easy to go in ruts that many careless drivers never go any other way.

Rut-drivers are the farmers who take all day and far into the night to go to a town five miles away; the doctors who laugh at hospitals and hookworm and pellagra, and employ in their practice the remedies suggested in the college lecture-rooms half a century ago; the preachers who present the faith once delivered to the saints with the outlook of the saints on life, without any reference to modern conditions, who draw their illustrations from books rather than from life, who look with suspicion upon, if they do not openly condemn, every new movement in the church; the Sunday school superintendents and teachers, the Christian Endeavor workers, the prayer meeting conductors, who have their backs to the future, their eyes riveted on the past,—veritable brakes, all of them, on the wheels of progress.

So prone are the thoughtless, imitative masses to get into ruts that they dislike the ocean with all its majesty and power, because in it there are no ruts.

Ruts always lead to the same place; routes do not. Ruts become second nature, automatic, require no exercise of thought or judgment; routes exact constant exercise of thought, discrimination, judicial ability, and lead to other than the usual results.

Ruts are easy; routes are hard. Therefore the conservative, non-progressive workers, the plodders, the muck-rakers, the wood-choppers, the water-drawers, in every line of activity fall into ruts; but the man who makes a route for himself, keep your eye on that man. He will make mistakes, but he will redeem himself and come out "on top" sooner or later. Give me the rut-loving, the rut-hating man. He will lead me to higher planes, to more charming heights.

Especially in the religious world is there need of route-loving rather than rut-following leaders. Deliver us from the monotony, the killing monotony that hangs like a biting frost over many of our religious services. We open our church services, our Sunday school services, our Christian Endeavor services, our prayer meetings, our conventions, our conferences in the usual way; every part of every service of them is in the usual way; the closing of them is in the usual way; may some power deliver us from the thralldom, the bondage of this usualness, this ruttiness.

Children do not like to go to preaching, because every service is like every other. Shall we change the children, or the order of service from time to time? They are restless during the often dreary opening and closing exercises of the Sunday school, because there is no variety there. Which can best be changed?

Why should the Sunday school forever open with a song, have two prayers, have the responsive reading from the quarterly always between the superintendent and school, etc., in unending and unbroken succession?

Why should a Christian Endeavor or other prayer meeting always begin with a song or two, have the Scripture invariably read by the leader, a few words of comment by him, a series of sentence-prayers, a song, a few Scripture references, another song, etc., without any variety?

Why should a conference or a convention always open with addresses of welcome by the mayor of the town and the pastor of the church, and a response by the presiding officer or some one designated by him?

For no reason except that it is usual, that it is easy to stay in the rut.

Christian workers, we plead with you for routes, not ruts, in religious work. Let's have variety, which, according to the adage, is "the spice of life," but which, rather, is life itself.

Ruts mean inadequacy, and lead to failure; routes mean adequacy, and yield a large fruitage of success.

Do you follow routes or ruts?

Which did Christ follow?—Prof. W. A. Harper, in The Christian Endeavor World.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Pastoral duties constitute a large part of the Christian ministry. This is both the hardest and the easiest work of the average minister. It is the hardest because of the ignorance of its meaning and place in the ministry and the lack of co-operation on the part of the people. Most people think of social visits instead of pastoral visits, and this makes it hard on the minister. It takes much of his time and wastes much of his strength. Now social visits are pleasant and profitable within certain limits; but the minister should be looking out for souls and not for socials. Besides this, reducing pastoral visits to social calls impoverishes the minister in the spiritual sense and cultivates pride among the people. They watch the pastor and if he passes their homes, and fails to call, they feel slighted though the pastor was going to see a dying saint or to pray with a needy sinner. That converts the pastoral office into a misunderstood embarrassment, and robs the people of the real help of his visits. The people ought to co-operate with the pastor in visiting the aged, the invalid, the sick, and the sinner. The well need not a physician, but the sick.

Pastoral duties are easy because the doors are always open to the minister and he is welcome alike in the mansion and the cottage. Age and childhood always love the minister. Conventionalities do not stand in his way. His position gives him the confidence of the people and, when he is sympathetic, he wins the hearts of those in trouble. I call the minister a "Carter." I mean by this, that he goes from house to house, has poured into his ears the sorrows, the afflictions, the troubles, the misfortunes, the losses, the hardships, the burdens, the secrets of people; then he carts them away as carters carry away the swill and the garbage. People in trouble must tell somebody their troubles; it is the safety valve of the heart. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." People must tell out their heartfelt sorrows and the sympathetic ear of the minister is an invitation to tell it to him. Did you ever tell somebody your trouble? You know it gave you relief; and it was doubly so, if you found sympathy and your confidence was not betrayed. Here is a great field for ministerial usefulness and ministerial strain. There is no end to this round of duty. To hear the aches and pains of the afflicted, the grievances and complaints of the neglected, the mistreatments in business and domestic infelicities, the excuses for absences from church and Sunday school, the criticisms of churches and church members, the indirect appeals for help, the pride and vanities of people is enough to break the health and heart of a real minister; but through all this there is a genuine sincerity, an unconscious hunger after God, a deep love for the church and the ministry, and a real appreciation of interest in their welfare that makes grass spring up in every bare spot, starts crystal streams in every dry place, and covers every grave with flowers.

The minister who spends all his time and energy in books and pulpits may be an orator; but the minister who spends much of his time about the fireside where aged pilgrims linger on the verge of life, where children romp and yell in their own rough way, where the sick suffer in patience and the strong man thinks and feels, will be more like the Master who "went about doing good."

W. W. Staley.

The Heritage of Family Prayer.

Family prayer omitted; children cheated. Perhaps fathers have not thought of that feature of the case. Merely for expression of one's own personal religion, men are apt to think that praying aloud is not necessary anywhere. They can be true and kind in the home and clean and upright in the world, and still say all of their prayers secretly.

But this does not touch at all the vital point about family prayer. Family prayer is not simply the father's prayer prayed in the hearing of the family; it is really the family's prayer. The family is entitled to it.

The question of family prayer is at bottom a question of children's rights. The father who omits it must face an indictment, not of personal irreligion, but of injustice toward his sons and daughters.—Ex.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago at the order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, liberal, generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

Those contributing since Oct. 2, 1911, are as follows:

Burlington, N. C.: W. J. Fix, $25; S. J. Moore, $25; F. L. Williamson, $250; D. M. Moore, $25; J. D. and L. B. Whitted, $50; Capt. W. H. Turrentine, $100; total, $475.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We are in a rush—trying to sow oats—shuck corn—finish our silo—pick peas and cotton—and go to school. Now this is a time! And with all this the regular duties of morning and evening of feeding and milking and, in the house, of cooking makes busy hands and moving feet.

With all the rush we are glad to make such a nice report this week. Thirteen Sunday schools make monthly offerings and three states are representel in our deep well. Newport News L. A. S. gives us a liberal offering for general fund and our faithful Bro. Johnson comes again, though he has sustained quite a loss. (See his letter.) We are very grateful to Dr. Lincoln of Lacey Springs, Va., and Dr. Haizlip, of Nederland, Texas, for their kind help, though far from us they know the need of good water and thus help us to pay for some. Thank you. How many will add their $5.00 to this fund next week?

We are hoping that our pastors will help us in presenting this urgent call for water to a few friends in each congregation. As you read Bro. Johnson's letter just imagine that the Orphanage had 100 friends like him, and Bro. Carlton of Durham, N. C.—how we would move our work and enlarge our plant to meet the necessities before us?

With love and best wishes to all.

Fondly yours,
Uncle Jim.

Dear Cousins:

As I haven't written The Sun I thought I would write this week.

Now I will tell you what I do. I wash dishes, bring in water, sweep the kitchen and make biscuits.

I am going to school now and am in the sixth grade, and I tell you I have a time studying.

I will close with much love.

Yours lovingly,
Myrtle Rodgers.

McRae, Ga., Sept. 25, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We are all well. We enjoy Sunday school. Mrs. Poll is our teacher, only forty of us.

Next Sunday is Orphan's day with us. M. E. Church Saturday is work day. We work for our money to give to the orphans here. We have orphan's day every quarter. Our Sunday school gives about $50 per quarter.

Enclosed find love and dimes for our North Carolina Orphans. Fondly, J. Newman Denton,
S. E. Denton, Jr.,
Jos. Rabb Denton.

So you find the needy, boys, wherever you go. God bless the little workers!

Graham, N. C., Oct. 4th, 1911.

Rev. J. L. Foster,
Elon College, N. C.

My Dear Brother Foster:

I herewith enclose you a check for two dollars for the Graham Sunday school for the months of August and September.

And I enclose you check for five dollars for my monthly donation for October. I am giving this donation when I feel it, having had a severe and heavy loss in the fire last week at Haw River, when our knitting mill was destroyed. My savings for several years went up in flames. But while it makes me feel blue and somewhat discouraged I realize that you as Superintendent of the Orphanage may have some blue days and meet with some discouragements too. So I take heart and freely mail you this check and hope that I may still be blessed with enough of this world's goods to continue to make this donation for the support of the little ones that have not been blessed as greatly as we. It always affords me pleasure to mail you my donation each month. Hoping that the Lord will continue to bless you in your great work and that he will put it in the hearts of many to lend you a helping hand and to cheer you on your way, I beg to remain as ever,

Yours most truly,
Chas. D. Johnson.

DIED.

Johnson.

R. H. Johnson, son of Wilkins Johnson and Eliza, his wife, was born Oct. 31st, 1839, and died Sept. 18, 1911, aged 71 years, 10 months, and 18 days.

He leaves to mourn their loss one sister, Mrs. Rebecca Glover, Waverly, and many friends. He had no home except with those in whose employ he happened to be. He was once married to Rebecca Savedge, who many years ago passed into her reward. He was once a member of Antioch church, Isle of Wight County, at which time he was regarded a devout Christian. At the time of his death he was living with Bro. M. B. Sharp who administered to his wants as faithfully as a brother.

He was one of the few veterans in this community who served in the Civil War, having spent the entire four years, fought in many battles and never received a wound.

He testified on his last bed that God had forgiven him his sins and he was satisfied with his lot. May his soul be at peace. His body was interred in the cemetery on the farm of Mrs. Jesse C. Harris about three miles west of Waverly.

Sept. 29, 1911.

Michael.

John Michael, departed this life September 25, 1911, at the advanced age of eighty seven years, nine months, and eight days. Mr. Michael united with Friedens Lutheran Church at the age of 18 years, and remained a member of the same till the time of his death. He was the last of a family of nine children. He leaves seven children, four sons, and three daughters, and twelve grand children, together with several near relatives and many friends who mourn his departure.

All of his children are members of the Christian Church at Apple's Chapel, at which place their pastor conducted the funeral of their father, and his body was laid to rest in the church cemetery, beside the grave of his faithful wife, who passed to the spirit land a little more than a year ago.

Brother Michael had made for himself a good name, and will be missed.

The Lord bless and comfort all the bereaved.

L. I. Cox.

Robinson.

Lulu Katherine Robinson was born Apr. 25, 1889, Died August 2, 1911, aged 22 years, 3 months and 7 days. The community of Dry Run Christian Church received a terrible shock when the news came over the wires that Mrs. Lulu Katherine Robinson was dead. She was the daughter of J. Harvey and Frances Hoffman, and just one week before her death was married to Samuel V. Robinson, a most excellent young man of the neighborhood. On the day following the marriage the couple left home well and happy to spend a few days in Washington, D. C. When en route she was taken sick, and upon reaching Washington was taken to a hospital. All that could be done was done to save the precious life, but appendicitis claimed its victim. She was brought back to her home in Powell's Fort and buried at Dry Run. A large number of people gathered to witness the funeral services and look for the last time on earth upon the face that had always before been wreathed in sunshine. Hers was a noble, beautiful life. It was my privilege to witness her conversion and receive her into the church several years ago. She has been a consistent church member and a true Christian. The message calling me to preach the funeral reached me too late, and in my absence a short and appropriate service was held by Rev. J. A. McInturff of the Progressive Brethren Church. Upon request of the family I preached a sermon in memory of her at my regular appointment at Dry Run on Sunday night, Sept. 3. A large congregation again gathered showing the esteem in which sister Robinson was held. All sympathize deeply with the parents, brothers, sisters, and broken hearted young husband, and others who feel so keenly her untimely departure. May the God of all grace comfort them!

FUNK.

Death was not an unexpected visitor at the home of Daniel G. Funk near Dry Run September 25, 1911, when his father, Jacob Washington Funk, being old and well stricken in years, quietly and peacefully passed into the great beyond. Bro. Funk was born December 23, 1833, making his age, therefore, 77 yrs., 9 months and 2 days. He was a remarkably strong man, physically, and never was sick until he began declining in health a few months ago. He is survived by three sons, viz., Daniel, Samuel, and Jacob, and by two sisters. His wife died about eight years ago. It was my privilege to receive him into the church at Dry Run about two or three years ago. He came to us from the Disciples, having united with them about six years ago, but as their organization went down we were glad to accord him a church home with us. Funeral services were held Sept. 26 at the Brethren church in Powell's Fort about two miles from his home and his body laid to rest by the side of that of his wife. We commend the bereaved ones to Him who saves and comforts.

A. W. Andes.

Moring.

At her home in Morrisville, Wake Co., N. C., Sept. 15, 1911, Mrs. Mary Jane Moring, wife of J. H. Moring. She professed faith in Christ in early life, was a charter member of Morrisville Christian Church, and an active member of the Ladies' Aid Society. She will be greatly missed by church and community, and especially among the sick where she was known and noted for acts of kindness. She leaves a kind husband and many friends to mourn their loss. She was at her death nearly sixty-six years old. She was laid to rest in the Morrisville Cemetery. Funeral sermon was preached by the writer.

W. G. Clements.

Holt.

Samuel Melton Holt, second son of John R., and Catherine Holt, was born April 4, 1836 and died September 23, 1911, age 75 years, 5 months and 19 days. He embraced religion and joined the Christian Church at Hank's Chapel, in his young manhood and lived a consistent, upright, religious life to the end, when he was able to say, "All is well." He served and suffered through the full term of the Civil War, and afterwards had the confidence and was honored by his fellow citizens to several important offices in his county.

He was first married to Miss Largenia Bland, and to them were born nine children: Mrs. J. M. Ferrell, Mrs. J. W. Griffin, Mrs. Will Eubanks, Mrs. P. L. Gardner, Mrs. Carroll and Mrs. Herbert Moffitt, two now deceased, Stella and Tommie, one son living, Clarence J. of Penn. He was married the 2nd time to Miss Julia Pritchard, of Chapel Hill, who mourns her loss with the children and many friends. He was buried with Masonic honors. Funeral by his pastor. God bless the bereaved ones.

G.R. Underwood.

MANNERS.

Courtesy may be one of the smaller virtues, but it is a virtue nevertheless, and one that makes life more pleasant and happy. It is close kin to kindness and has its springs in the love that "seeketh not her own." One cannot be too kind or too thoughtful of others. Strange to say, this lack of courtesy is often found in the home, among those who are supposed to love each other. There is no more excuse for being rude and unkind to one's brother or sister, mother or father, than to the stranger.

Parents should so influence and train their children that it will be easy for them to be considerate and thoughtful. Too often the young people are reared in an atmosphere of self-seeking and rudeness. The finer feelings and sensibilities become calloused, and the disposition hardened. There are those who think a child must go through a toughening process in order to become strong and independent. In a certain sense this is true, but strength and independence acquired at the expense of gentleness and courtesy is not to be desired. Gentleness and greatness are not incompatible. The expression of the Psalmist, "Thy gentleness hath made me great," is full of suggestive thought.—Friend's Messenger.

—Rev. J. V. Knight, a worthy minister, now a student in Elon College, is open for engagement, as pastor the coming year, with one or two accessible country churches. Bro. Knight would be glad to correspond with a church needing his services. He is capable, and meets with success in ministerial work. We commend him heartily.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.Wadley, Ala., Letter.

My fourth revival was held with Antioch church, beginning Saturday before second Sunday in August, and continuing eight days. Rev. H. W. Elder was with me and did the preaching from Sunday until the following Friday. Bro. Elder rendered valuable assistance and the church appreciated his efforts very much. This meeting has done more for Antioch than any previous meeting. Besides the church being greatly revived, 37 members were added to the roll. I spent a few days with Rev. C. W. Carter at Rock Springs the last of July, also a few days with Rev. J. D. Dollar at Corinth. I very much enjoyed my trip to these churches and good meetings were held at both places. I also spent one week with Rev. J. W. Elder in Clay Co. at Macedonia church, where we had a fine meeting. On account of sickness in Bro. Elder's home the meeting came to a close Thursday at 11 o'clock. At that hour I preached to the children. We had a most impressive service, and I believe it will do great good.

I trust all parties concerned will be ready for Conference. We are going to have the best Conference in our history, brethren. Come and see for yourselves. And don't forget to pray for the meeting, and the Lord will give us a gracious good time.

G. D. Hunt.

Virginia Valley Letter.

Perhaps any account of the children's day at Bethel would now be out of date, as the day has long since passed. However, it is worthy of notice even at this late date. The fifth Sunday in July was set apart and fittingly observed as Children's Day, by songs, recitations, and other exercises by the young people. It was pronounced by many who attended to be the best service of the kind ever held in the community. Miss Minnie Bowman, of Linville, had charge of the training of the children and presided at the organ. She is possessed of unusual ability along this line, and won for herself a warm place in the hearts of the children and older people as well. A large audience was present to enjoy the exercises and the bountiful dinner prepared by the good people of the community.

The Sunday school at Beulah held a picnic and Children's Service on Saturday, September 16. It was a very enjoyable occasion to all present. The children acquitted themselves remarkably well in view of the fact that they had spent but little time in getting up the program.

I am now getting about straightened out for the work of the new Conference year. I only have eight churches this year, viz., Palmyra, Joppa, Dry Run on first Sundays, Antioch and Linville on second and fourth Sundays, New Hope and Beulah on third Sundays, and Bethel occasionally during the week. Several of our churches are without pastors and we have no way of supplying them at present. The Executive Committee of the Conference is making an effort to secure a suitable man to take work in the Conference, but our efforts have thus far apparently been in vain. We are still hoping and praying that the right man may be secured.

I expect soon to begin my revival meetings. May God grant unto us a rich harvest of souls this year.

Oak Level.

The revival meeting at New Hope, Franklin County, N. C., was commenced second Sunday in September and continued until Friday night. The preaching was done by Rev. Neal Rowland, of Tex.; and, as every one knows, who has heard him, it was well done. There were about fifteen converts, and the church much revived. Notwithstanding the busy season, the congregations were fairly good. Other denominations worked in love with us.

The congregations at this church are usually good, the Sunday school large and the music fine. You may expect much from New Hope.

Oak Level.

Last Saturday and Sunday I was at this church. On Sunday I preached the funeral sermon of Bro. Erastus Williams. He had been a member of Oak Level for more than twenty years, and is greatly missed by all. The church is getting ready to send up all Conference funds in full, under all heads. We pray that every other church in Conference may do likewise. We want every church to have a clean sheet this year. The money is greatly needed.

Chapel Hill.

The building committee met Tuesday night, September 26th, at Rev. T. W. Strowd's, the work done was gone over and so on. A committee was appointed to arrange to have the sand put on the lot this fall; and another committee to decide on the plan of a building and make its report at a meeting to be held on Friday night, October 13. So it will be seen that something is being done.

Financially speaking, we are nearly at the top of the grade, and will soon be ready to start down the hill on the home stretch. Send or bring your contributions for this church to me at our Conference, if convenient. We want to dedicate the new house next October.

Martha's Chapel.

I was glad to be with this good old church on the second Sunday and Saturday before in September. On Sunday I preached the funeral of Aunt Nancy Holland. She was a beloved member of Martha's Chapel, and is greatly missed. She was a good woman.

I think Martha's from the way the friends talk will do nice work for Chapel Hill.

I heard nice things said of their pastor, Rev. G. R. Underwood.

Pope's Chapel.

I was at this church fourth Sunday and Saturday before. It was a pleasure to be there. They are doing the nice thing by Chapel Hill. They speak in high terms of Bro. Patton, their pastor.

Good Hope.

It was a pleasure to be with this little church. It gave more to Chapel Hill than I asked for. They love their pastor, Bro. Patton.

W. G. Clements.

Forest Home.

Our meeting at Forest Home began Saturday before the first Sunday in August with Bros. J. V. Knight and B. F. Young to assist. They both were at their best and did plain gospel preaching which was highly appreciated by the church and congregation. The church was greatly revived, but there were no additions.

Pleasant Grove.

The meeting began here Saturday before second Sunday in August. Rev. J. V. Knight did all the preaching. Bro. Knight is deeply interested and very effective. His plain preaching was highly appreciated by most of the people, but was of course too hard for some few; but we trust will be a blessing to them. The meeting closed Wednesday night following with one addition.

Corinth.

At our last appointment at Corinth we received five members, three of whom were baptized Sunday morning. We are in fine shape to begin our year's work here.

UNTO THE HILLS.

By Benjamin F. Leggett.

Look up to the mountain-land,
Imperial peaks that stand
Wrinkled and gray with time.
In strength of the hills sublime:
To molten billows that rolled
And cooled in the ages of old,
In the dim primeval morn
Ere the race of man was born.

Uplifted in misty air
What garments of light they wear!
On shadowless crowns and cones
The purple of royal thrones;
Patience, endurance, and song
They bear through the ages long,
In peace and repose they stand,
The peaks of the mountain-land.

And down through the gorges old
What melodies sung and told!
The babble of quiet streams
That murmur through woodland dreams,
Or brawl of rivers and rills,
The songs God set in the hills
To give to His praise a tongue
When the gray old world was young.

Lift up thine eyes to the hills
Where the dew of life distils:
When the dawn or sunset shine
Enkindles with blazon fine
On peaks of purple or snow
The altars of God aglow,
Unto Him lift up thy song
Unto whom the hills belong.

HIS GATES AND HIS COURTS.

(Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise. Ps. 100:4. Golden text for Sunday, October 22).

The highest single earthly privilege ever conferred upon man is the privilege of approaching God through worship. Because we of our day are permitted this privilege without let, hurt, or hindrance, and at will we little reckon at what a cost this high privilege has been purchased for us. Moreover, since it is familiar we do not appreciate and esteem it as we should. To enter into the courts of the most high God, to praise and to worship Him, is a privilege not always granted to man, and one too purchased at the price of struggle and sacrifice and blood and death.

The people of Judah and of Benjamin had been in captivity, strangers and wanderers in a strange land for seventy years. At last they are permitted to come back to their beloved city of Jerusalem. But, behold, how changed! The walls were torn down, houses were desolate, the temple itself was in ashes, the city was laid waste. How changed indeed. Yet these people were happy and their hearts were greatly rejoiced, because they had the privilege once more, and the prospect, of entering into the gates, even into the sacred courts of Jehovah, their God.

The entire lesson today is one of sunshine, good cheer, glad hope. The purest and surest optimism in this world is that based on the love and worship of God. Whatever had been their past, whatever was the debased condition of the present, whatever clouds and disappointment the future might have and hold, these people were intensely happy, unspeakably rejoiced because they had the prospect of entering the gates, coming into the courts of their God. Amid their physical discomforts and inconveniences, hostile people about them, and their city and houses desolate, listen at the song of their heart. "And they sang one to another in praising and giving thanks unto Jehovah, saying. For he is good, for his loving-kindness endureth forever toward Israel. And all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised Jehovah, for the foundation of the house of Jehovah was laid." When the heart is glad the arm is strong and the hands are busy. Israel's heart was glad. It was cured of idol worship. It was tired of bonds and aliens. It was worn with wandering. It was glad now to get back and to give expression to its deepest and sincerest and holiest impulses.

Israel is indeed glad, and their hearts are made to sing and shout.

There is no joy as sweet, no gladness as deep as that which comes from entering into the Gates, abiding in the Courts of the Most High God.

Paper Money.—Some may think, as certain uninformed ones thought a few years ago, that paper money is merely printed paper. How far of the mark this is when it is called to mind, as The Scientific American recently pointed out, that, The paper fiber is of linen from the far east the silk comes from China and Italy; the blue ink is made of German or Canadian cobalt; the black ink is made of Niagara Falls acetylene gas smoke; the red color in the seal is brought from Central America. The next time you finger a one, a five, or a ten you may know that at least five different nations, widely separated, contributed the finest and best of the kind they had to create that piece of currency.

Which represents, and may symbolize the best and noblest characters about us. No one life of real worth and value drew all its elements from any one source, but gleaned the best and wove it into their making. The world yields its best, from all quarters, to make a useful and valuable and noble life.

GRIPING HARD THE WORLD'S HEART.

The man—his kind grows beautifully less—who does not believe in foreign missions has a great deal to overcome in the circuit of his thoughts. He will have to get some sort of theory to explain why, year by year, men and women leave home and loved ones and all that one holds dear on earth, to go to foreign fields to live and die there among aliens and strangers, often in perils of life and health and security. Furthermore he would have to explain all the progress and civilizing influences that have been witnessed in foreign and pagan lands. And not this only; but more to this end: What makes close-fisted, money-getting business men, thousands of them, forsooth, walk up year by year and plunk down their hard-earned and much beloved dollars by the bushel for the sake of those in idolatrous worship beyond the seas? Surely there is somewhat in missions that grips the world's heart hard.

Take this as an instance. The other day a man gave to the American Board of Foreign Missions $1,000,000. The man will not even allow his name to be given to the public. Somewhat must necessarily get hold of a man's heart to make him give a million dollars.

And we people of America, and of other Christian countries are giving, together, millions every year; and the gifts increase and multiply. Instead of growing less they grow larger. Instead of men getting tired they become more enthusiastic and more determined in this matter of missions. And it has hardly begun to appear what men and women in this Christian land will do for the cause of missions, even foreign missions, within the next few years.

The cause of missions has begun to grip the world's heart hard.

There is a cause. And there is compensation. Man in his make-up and outlook is too large a being to be contented with any scope of land or country. In the sweep of his outlook, interest, sympathy, and affection he takes in the world. His mind and heart will be contented with nothing less. Why? Jesus the Christ removed the barriers and gave him the world for his field.

That is why the Christ founded the Church. It was to give man an outlook upon the whole world. He could not do that without the Church. To that time there was no world wide institution. The family was restricted by blood. The State was limited by political or geographical conditions. Christ gave the world the church in order that man might see that he was a citizen of all the world—that all the world was a part of himself. This larger vision, this worldwide view-point, grips hard the Christian's heart. It is the four quarters calling long and loud to him. It is not the call of the wild. It is the call of humanity's heart, of humanity's need and want and lack pressing in upon him.

Giving for missions is a Christian's response to this far and wide call. The heart hunger of the multitudes, for which multitudes he feels and finds himself responsible, appeals to him. He knows he is a part of this great whole, has membership and fellowship with those far off as with those near by, because all are purchased with a price and have access to this Fountain of life-giving waters.

This is the fact, the philosophy of missions. It grips the world's heart hard, it will grip it harder yet, as we come to understand that all men are to be one in Him, even as He and His Father are One. It gives every man to the world and gives all the world of men and women to every man.

—James B. McNamara, charged with wrecking the Times building of Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 1., 1910, went on trial for murder Oct. 11. There were twenty odd men killed in the explosion, and it is believed McNamara and associates, did the deadly work.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Organizations.

The spirit of organized effort, for religious, as well as for secular pursuits, is in the air. The last few years has witnessed, as never before, advances along this line. We note herewith a few of the most active and aggressive.

One of the latest is the Men and Religion Forward Movement, whose origin dates from a day spent in prayer and conference, at the Hotel Manhattan, New York, in May, 1910, by more than forty prominent laymen representing several distinct religious organizations. This organization grew out of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, and is an attempt to reach the millions of men at home—on this continent—with no definite religious affiliation and win them to Christ. Several teams of religious "experts" are touring the continent, having begun in September, and will spend an average of eight days in each of the leading cities of this country and Canada.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement was born in a prayer meeting in New York, November 15, 1906. It was a prayer meeting attended by less than fifty men. The purpose of the movement is to help the boards of foreign missions prosecute more vigorously their foreign missionary work. It is an appeal to business men to employ their business ability and acumen in securing funds for and in helping missionary interests.

The Young Men's Christian Association is well established, its history and purpose being seen and read of all men. It has passed the experimental stage, and sweeps on in its breadth of usefulness and service. Ten years ago there were 1,439 Associations in North America. There are now 2,017, a gain in the decade of 40 per cent. Ten years ago Association property was valued at $24,000,000. Today its buildings amount to $67,000,000, a gain of 173 per cent. Ten year ago there were 1399 officers in the Association; today there are 2,927, a gain of 109 per cent. In the decade the budget for Foreign Missions, $160,052, or 485 per cent.

Christian Endeavor was born in Portland, Me., Feb. 2, 1881. There are now about 150,000 societies with about 5,000,000 members in every land under the sun. This is a young people's work, its purpose being to enlist young people in avowed personal service and endeavor some way for Christ. Its movement is world wide, its growth phenomenal.

The Baraca Bible Class Movement began in 1899 in Syracuse, New York, upon the invitation of a business man of that city to some young men on the street to come in and study with him the Bible. This was a discovery rather than an invention, the secret having been found that if you make a place where men can come without being seen or heard and without anyone to disturb them they will come and study the Bible together. Baraca is a Hebrew word taken from 2 Chron. 20:26, and means "happy" or "blessed." The Philathea class for Young Women was born six years later, and this now having consolidated with the Baracas gives a membership of nearly one million, the largest Bible Class in the world.

The Gideons is an organization among traveling men whose object it is to place a Bible in every room in every hotel in America. It was organized in 1899 at Janesville, Wis. Up to July 20 there had been placed 108,466 Bibles in as many hotel bedrooms. Recognition by means of the emblem worn by the Gideons is a great feature of this organization also.

Besides these there are numerous and sundry Guilds, Brotherhoods, Leagues and Unions organized for one kind or another of religious work.

The effort and aim is to organize and set to Christian service the numbers of men and women, boys and girls about us. Whether these agencies, organizations, will quicken and deepen the spiritual life and activity of the Church is a question that yet lingers in some minds.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

Ye have heard that it hath been said of old of this Christian Church of ours that its members are stingy and illiberal of their means. I never for once believed this saying, and I cannot now ever entertain it. It is a gross and unwarranted slander. There never was a more generous, liberal, charitable people than these of our Christian brotherhood. Small, relatively, in membership and therefore, more limited in means, as compared to other religious bodies, our liberality and charity enable us to support Church institutions and enterprises on a par with those of the communions much larger in membership and stronger in purse than our own. For our Southern Convention to maintain an orphanage calls for about seven times the liberality shown by another and stronger Church in N. C., for such an enterprise. Our Christian Sun with one-seventeenth the constituency of a sister religious journal in N. C., has two-thirds as many subscribers. For us to raise $50,000 for Elon College is to do eleven times as much per member for education as one of our sister denominations did for their College when it raised the princely sum of $250,000. I feel safe in maintaining that no church in these Southern States can match our own when it comes to generosity, charity, liberality.

But how could it be otherwise? Men cannot be liberal in one department of their life and conduct and illiberal, uncharitable in another, under normal conditions. The liberality and generosity and charity so characteristic of our cardinal principles cannot but issue in these same Christian graces in other directions, in all the departments of our Church life and work. As long as we are true to our principles, we shall of necessity be liberal, free-hearted, charitable. Other churches may excel us in numbers and in wealth, but none does nor shall excel us in the Christian graces of giving, liberality, charity. I feel absolutely justified, therefore, in the statement that according to numbers and means ours is the most liberal brotherhood in all this land. The past has proved the proposition true, the present is demonstrating it, the future will give still stronger confirmation of its truthfulness. Our liberal principles cannot but make us liberal. Long live our principles and the Christian graces consequent thereupon.

PORTO RICO

The Homes of the People.

The Porto Ricans are a rural people; only about 21 per cent. dwell in cities and towns. There are no large cities. San Juan with 32,048 inhabitants is the largest city (census 1900). Ponce with 27,952 is the second city in importance but bids fair to become chief trading center.

The general plan of a Porto Rican town is as follows: A central plaza, and facing it all the public buildings, stores and hotels, and usually a Catholic church of imposing structure. In the immediate vicinity a few fine houses may be found but the great majority are small, cheap cottages and shanties.

A typical city home may be described as follows. It is two stories high, the shape is usually an oblong 30x125 feet, with a court one half the width and two thirds the length cut out of the side. On the second floor the parlor occupies the outside openings. These are called windows but are in reality, double doors with long shutters. Next to the parlor may be found bed rooms and dining room and back of dining room is the kitchen.

The hall way overlooks the court and usually has lattice work to protect it. There is no back yard as the buildings touch each other in the rear. The bed rooms have neither light nor ventilation. when the double doors are closed opening into the court. In the homes of the poor there is scarcely any furniture. The adults sleep on tiers of berths along the side while the children sleep on the bare floor infested with rats, roaches and fleas; there is no regular time for meals. Any time children and adults may be seen with sugar cane or a piece of dry bread. If a fire is needed a little charcoal is obtained and placed in an old tin can. A kettle is set upon the coals and the kitchen fire is complete.

The homes of poor peasants are built of poles for the frame, palm bark or leaves of the sugar cane for sides and a sugar cane thatch roof. Usually the earth serves for a floor.

The higher class live in better houses. As a rule they occupy the second floor. Portiers, rocking chairs, marble topped center tables and sofas are found in these homes. Usually the furniture is made from mahogany from Spain or wood painted black from Austria.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.

The Young People's General Convention of the Christian Church, South, has undertaken to deal in a practical way with a great problem, viz., the proper stimulating, conserving, and directing of the energy and talents of our young people. Had we as a church recognized a hundred years ago the latent undeveloped possibilities of the young people within our easy reach we would undoubtedly be far beyond our present humble position. But it has taken us more than a hundred years to discover the gold mine in our midst and put forth an effort towards its proper development. However, we are fairly launched now in our effort to utilize the young manhood and young womanhood in our church, and make it a blessing to the young men and young women themselves, to the church, and to God. The Young People's General Convention has held two biennial sessions. A department editor and corresponding secretary has been elected to push the work through the columns of The Christian Sun and in any other way he may be able.

But this work, like any other of importance, is not a machine run by perpetual motion. Somebody must run it and that somebody must be supplied with the proper fuel. The department editor and corresponding secretary is employed at a salary of $125 a year and necessary expenses connected with his office. Other officers of the Convention necessarily incur some little expenses in the prosecution of their work. How are these bills to be paid? A number of pledges were made at the last session of the Convention. The treasurer was authorized to canvass the Church south by correspondence and secure as many additional pledges as possible. Now brace yourself for the facts. On July fifth the treasurer wrote personal letters to those who had pledged at the last session of the Convention and only two or three have responded. He sent out more than two hundred letters to those who ought to be interested in our young people's work and only a very few have responded at all. What is the matter?

Is this work worth while? I believe every loyal member of the Christian Church will say it is. If it is worth while we must keep it moving. But half a dozen people can't do it alone, and ought not even if they could. If it is a good work let all help it along. Where are those who ought to be interested in this work, but were not at the Convention to say how much they would give? We ought to hear from a number at an early date, and if the work of the Young People's General Convention is to be kept moving we must hear from them.

Rev. L. I. Cox, Elon College, N. C., is the treasurer, and will be glad to receive your remittance.

A MAN WHO WOULD BE BISHOP.

Some one has written of "A Man Who Would be King." We would write of a man who would be bishop. He was a North Carolina man. There may be others—in other states. Indeed, there may be others in North Carolina, but let us confine our attention to this one now, if you please.

When we first heard of him, he was a young man in school. He was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. His teacher and many of his associates in school were Methodist Protestants. The time came when he must choose his life-work, and he decided on the ministry. Just what were the considerations that led him to this decision is a mystery that we cannot unfold, but it soon became known to the "boys" that Higginson expected to be a preacher and hoped to become a "bishop."

"But there are no bishops in the Methodist Protestant Church!" they told him.

"The Methodist Protestant Church is not the only church," was his reply.

He passed out from school, and when the Annual Conference of the M. E. Church, South, met at Winston (let us say), Higginson applied for admission. He passed the ordeals and was brought to the presiding bishop, who looked a little into his antecedents.

"Why do you leave the Methodist Protestant Church to join our church?" the bishop asked.

"Because I like your government better."

"And why do you like our government better?"

"Because you have bishops."

Higginson did not know much about bishops, but he fancied it would be very agreeable to him to be in a position where he could say to this man, Go, and he goes, and to another man, Come, and he comes.

The bishop soon saw through Higginson, but he had Higginson on his hands, and he must do something with him. He thought there might possibly be some outcome, and he resolved to put him where conditions were favorable for Higginson's best development. Of course he had the interest of the church at heart, and must choose a place where Higginson could do little harm, if he did but little good. So he said to Higginson—and Higginson heard every word eagerly:

"I have no field for a man of your precise abilities in North Carolina, but Bishop Blank informs me that he needs a man in the Rocky Mountains, so I think it best to transfer you to his jurisdiction. In the great West you will have opportunity for development such as North Carolina society does not afford."

Higginson knew as little about the Rocky Mountains and the great West as he did about bishops, and he saw splendid visions of great assemblies and of himself presiding and directing. Beyond this, he saw great conferences of ministers, all looking to him deferentially, and saw himself reading out the appointments he had made for them.

That was twenty years ago.

* * * * *

Recently we saw Higginson. He had gone West. He had met—not great assemblies, but little bands, in the midst of rough miners and lawless cowboys. He had tried to meet the demands of the situation, but somehow things were so different from what he expected that he never felt ready for the events that came. He was driven from charge to charge by the resistless desire for change that makes itself felt in bishops' cabinets and that surged with almost equal force in his own soul. He was willing to move on, but somehow his movements did not seem in the direction of the goal set for himself in his youth. The bishop's seat seemed, indeed, farther away and less to be coveted. He came to feel that it was not such a desirable thing to have the responsibility of saying where the other men must labor.

Completely disillusioned now, Higginson is back in North Carolina, no longer a member of any Conference,—just a local preacher. If he still has a desire to be bishop, he says nothing about it. It would be interesting to know what Higginson is thinking, but he has probably learned worldly wisdom enough to keep some of his thoughts to himself.—Methodist Protestant Herald.

A HARVARD LETTER.

The cities of Washington, Philadelphia, and New York have so many great places, a poor scribe is confused as to what is of most interest to his readers. It seemed to me that from the time I got to Washington until I arrived at Boston everybody was going my way. Great crowds followed me for more than a week and at times it was about all I could do to keep from being run over by the throng that pursued me.

A stranger in America, I believe, after visiting a number of cities, and then going to Washington, would recognize it as our Capitol City, if he were acquainted with American ideas, because of its cleanliness and the manner in which it is kept. There is a kind of desire, in the heart of every American, after a visit to Washington, to the end that if conditions and circumstances were favorable, he would like to live there. It is extremely attractive, to say the least of it, and the social atmosphere is different from elsewhere and it is positively inviting.

Philadelphia has a population of about a million and a half and resembles New York in towering buildings, the arrangement of the streets and the movement of its people more closely than any other eastern city. It is a city of historical renown, having once been the capital of the United States. But perhaps the single thing above all others that distinguishes Philadelphia is that it is the place where the convention assembled which later wrote the Declaration of Independence. Old Independence Hall still stands there in its antiquated form and almost all visitors go to see it. John Wanamaker has given Philadelphia additional glory because of his wonderful success both in business and in Sunday-school work. He owns a whole block in the main part of town which is the most beautiful square in the city.

But on to New York. There one soon finds oneself lost in the midst of a teeming population. Street cars, automobiles, elevated trains and subway cars dashing by in all directions, make human life cheap in that great metropolis. Of course much might be written about the massive structures, monuments, libraries and art galleries in New York. But all those great things do not interest the average spectator like the moving multitudes. It is quite obvious that there is a certain sort of unrest and dissatisfaction among the surging masses that is gradually wearing their lives away. Nearly every hour the newsboys are crying, "Extra, all about the latest murder." On Sunday morning I asked several parties if they could tell me the way to the church of the famous Dr. Jowett and none knew. One even smiled and said, "I have not been to preaching in seven years and know nothing about where the churches are." One hardly wonders, after a few days' stay in a large city, that the scores of people there are unconcerned about religion and the life after death. A spectator is certainly impressed with the great number of evil influences, as the bar rooms, newspapers, gambling dens, and theaters that are daily pulling humanity downward.

I visited the cotton exchange and I never before saw or heard anything like that. Long before one gets there one can hear men yelling and crying at the top of their voices. And as one approaches one soon sees men almost fighting each other for the next chance to gamble. The loud cries and yells remind one of an insane asylum. These are wild, mad men. I believe it is an insanity, but of a different sort from that in our State asylums. These men are mad in the ghoulish greed for gold. They are money mad, and in this madness make or lose a fortune in a few brief moments.

Many things have been written and said about the advantages and disadvantages of cities, but I believe they are now nourishing or will yet nourish the germs that will prove the ruin of this Republic. If cities breed civilization, they also breed a barbarism of their own more dangerous than the barbarism of remote fields and wild forests. Rome in the end fostered a barbarism more dangerous to the human spirit than that which shattered and then rebuilt her. Barbarism in rural districts is of a wholesome type, out of which civilization grows. It is to be hoped that the people, by a sort of blind instinct, will yet drift back to farms, and free themselves from the unrestful spirit of city life. Maecenas once asked, "What is that, O Virgil, with which man is not satisfied?" And the immortal poet replied: "Either monotony or multitude of anything produces nausea, excepting knowledge." Everything that assails the senses tires; ideas refresh and restore, and the farm offers the quiet and the solitude in which ideas find safe footing, take form and grow. The city may be the breeding place of money; but the country is the breeding place of men. And certainly the best type of manhood and of womanhood on this earth is that found in the quiet country districts, where men respect each other, esteem the State and worship the living God.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, conducted a very successful revival at Auburn last week.

—President W. A. Harper, and the Sun's editor, J. O. Atkinson, left on the early morning train Monday, 16th, for a two weeks visit to our Conferences and churches in Georgia and Alabama.

—Among the pastors presenting the claims of The Sun to their congregations and distributing subscription cards and sending us lists of new subscribers last Sunday were Revs. W. C. Wicker, J. S. Carden, G. O. Lankford.

—Orville and Wilbur Wright, of aeroplane fame, are at Manteo, N. C., constructing a new sort of flying machine. It was from near Manteo that the Wrights made their first flight in 1904 and again in 1908 startled the world by flying eight miles.

—Rev. J. V. Knight has been in a very successful revival at Randleman, N. C., the past week. Up to Thursday night there had been fifteen conversions and reclamations and the interest was increasing.

—It is not going to be long now till Thanksgiving. Begin now to lay aside a portion for your Orphanage. This is the one single time of the year when old and young, great and small, are called upon to make a free will thank-offering to this institution of pure charity.

—Suffolk Letter contains much of interest especially to all who will or should attend the coming Conference at Suffolk. This notice of ours, however, is useless, for every body who reads The Sun at all reads Suffolk Letter—or misses the best feature of the paper.

—Our Burlington church is looking forward hopefully to the coming, about Nov. 15, of their new pastor, Rev. A. B. Kendall. This good flock longs for an under-shepherd to take up and carry forward the work laid down shortly since by their former pastor, Dr. Fleming.

—We deeply regret to learn of the serious, it is feared fatal, illness of our dear brother, Rev. A. P. Barbee at his home at Garner, N. C. Bro. Barbee is a useful and beloved minister and prayers will ascend for his recovery if it be our Father's will.

—All honor to the modest, faithful minister who declined a fee of $10,000 offered him to unite in marriage Col. Astor and Miss Force recently and then declined later the offer of another $10,000 for having done his duty in declining the first $10,000. Such characters prove that not all the men about us are money mad.

—President Taft, in a public address last week, predicted that the Panama Canal would be finished during 1913 and the first ship would pass through the big ditch by July 1, of that year. The President declared that the canal is the greatest constructive work since the beginning of the Christian era.

—Rev. S. B. Klapp, we are pleased to note, has been unanimously called to serve the churches of his present charge another year, there not being a dissenting voice or vote. Bro. Klapp is justly grateful for this mark of esteem and appreciation. "I have done a hard year's work," he writes, "and I feel as active in the work as I did twenty years ago."

—It may interest his many friends of The Christian Sun family to know that Mr. S. M. Atkinson, who graduated from Elon College, Class '09, and who has worked so successfully in increasing The Sun's subscription list as solicitor, has entered the law department of the Harvard University and hopes in the due course of three years to join the Solons.

—Hon. Locke Craig, of Asheville, who was such a close competitor of Governor Kitchen three years ago has announced formally that he will be a candidate for the governorship. The press generally seems of the opinion that he will have little opposition and that next year is Craig year. But no man can tell the turn in the political tide twelve months ahead.

—President Harper is meeting with marked and marvelous success in securing subscriptions for Elon's $50,000 Special Fund. He secured pledges the past week amounting to more than $2,000. There will be rejoicing everywhere at this liberal response of our brotherhood to this needed and worthy call. We shall pull together, brethren, by God's help, and this great thing will be well done.

—The Editor, Rev. M. W. Butler, Newport News, Va., requests us to say that The Young People's Worker has been permanently discontinued and that the unexpired subscriptions will be filled out by some other young people's paper. Bro. Butler is to give all his time exclusively to pastoral duties, though he has not decided definitely what field he will serve. He has two or three under consideration. We trust our brethren will see to it that Bro. Butler remains in the South. He is one of our most loyal, consecrated and beloved preachers and our Southern churches need his services. He will remain pastor of our Newport News church till Dec. 1.

—The Charlotte Observer speaketh "About the only unfavorable thing one can say about the circus is that it keeps several hundred bales of cotton from being picked on the day of its appearance and permits about the same number of pockets to be picked." Wherefore we suggest to the esteemed Observer that it advise its constituents to do as does our friend, Dr. W. W. Staley, of Suffolk, Va., who makes it an invariable rule to go fishing on circus day, which indulgence surpasses a circus even as the ocean a mud-puddle in comparison. We happen to know, for instance, that in last circus day in Suffolk the Doctor at a nearby lake landed a "jack" twenty and a half inches long with a small perch hook and line at that. Yet there are people in the world—pity their taste, reader—who think that they must go to the circus to make life worth living. Poor, deluded mortals.

—Besides being an eminent lawyer, an efficient judge, and an orator of no mean ability, United States Judge Jeter C. Pritchard, of Asheville, N. C., knows how to put a moral proposition also as witness this recent utterance credited to him:

"That you cannot by law make an individual a good man, in one sense of the word, is true; but that you can by law remove such evil agencies as bar rooms, and thereby minimize the temptations that beset young men, is absolutely true. Experience teaches us that, were it not for the law it would be impossible to maintain our government and to protect the lives and property of our people. This has been so in all ages, and with all nations, and the time will never come when any government can exist without the enactment of suitable laws for the enforcement of its decrees and the maintenance of law and order."

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Christian Conference will meet with the Suffolk church on Tuesday, October 31st, and continue in session four days, closing Friday afternoon, November 3rd.

It has been fifteen years since the Conference met with this church, and we are anxious for this session to be great in the history of the Conference. To this end we desire delegates to come ready to remain the entire time of the Conference. There is no trouble in coming or going, as six railroads converge in Suffolk, and twenty-six passenger trains come in and twenty-six go out of Suffolk daily. From all the churches delegates can come to Suffolk on the forenoon of Tuesday and come to the church where a committee will assign homes to delegates and visitors. We want all who come to know that our welcome is cordial and ample, and we want our guests to go away feeling that they have enjoyed the Conference and Suffolk.

It would be a great convenience if delegates would send their names to C. A.

Shoop, chairman of entertainment committee, or to me, at least a week before Conference so the Committee can make assignments of homes before the Conference opens. Pastors can help in this matter by sending their own names and helping the delegates to send theirs. Any ministers or laymen who will be kind enough to attend as visitors would confer a favor by sending me their names and when they will come.

The business of the Conference will be transacted in the day, and the evening will be devoted to worship and preaching. We want Suffolk to share in the benefits of the Conference, and the preaching service at night will do the public good. The choir of the church will render music at night. This church tries to cultivate the social, devotional and spiritual life, and it offers a hearty welcome to all who come into its courts. We prefer to give the least and the largest place in our concern and our affection. In fact, our desire is to follow Jesus who was lowly and lofty, poor and rich, and always obedient. It is a Christian church or it is nothing. Its doors are open wide to all comers, and its table is spread for all believers. We will be glad to entertain the forty-two other sister churches of this Conference, and share with them in the annual harvest of our labors. Most of the churches have enjoyed good revivals and additions to their membership, and we all hope that they will send up reports with all the blanks filled so that the work can go forward.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Editor of The Christian Sun, will preach on Wednesday night of Conference, and Rev. A. W. Lightbourne, D. D., pastor of the church in Dover, Delaware, will preach on Thursday night. These two evenings ought to be great evenings with these two great preachers, and great music. These two evening ought to set us a note higher in our ministry for the coming year. In fact, the work of the year should be so thoroughly done that the business of Conference could be transacted in less time so that more time could be given to devotional meetings and preaching. It is an inspiration to preachers to hear preaching; and the Conference ought to set the standard of pulpit work for all of us. Ministers ought to hear the best and laymen ought to hear the best. It is so easy to drop into intellectual effort, commonplace platitudes, hortatory spasms; congregations are not keyed up to pulpit appreciation and the pulpit is not keyed up to its best throughout the year, and hence the service falls on us. Conference should start on the upgrade with a surplus of enthusiasm and spiritual aspiration.

NORFOLK LETTER.

The Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association met in its first after-vacation session to-day. Our new text book for study is McFadyen's "Old Testament Criticism and the Christian Church." We hardly expect to become so-called "higher critics," but rather to keep abreast of the movements of the day as related to Christianity. The Word of God is, indeed, a lively patient or the doctors would have exhausted its vitality long ago. When the most exhaustive critical studies shall have ended, the Book of Life will stand forth with even more glory and power. We were sorry that the sickness of Sister H. E. Rountree prevented his being present, also Dr. Staley was detained at home because of a funeral. Rev. W. P. Minton was a visitor. This ministerial association is proving an inspiration to many of us. It helps the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference ministers to get acquainted and to work together more effectively. Through the kindness of the Memorial Temple ladies and of the pastor, we were all royally entertained at dinner which had been spread at the parsonage. The brethren heartily entered into the feast.

Rally Day was appropriately observed at South Norfolk Sunday. A good day was reported.

Rev. M. L. Bryant received three members at Berkley Sunday.

At Bro. Harrell's church, Portsmouth, the brethren are hard at work raising the semi-annual interest payment. Bro. Harrell and his people are surely doing a splendid work, and only the grace of God and hard work can accomplish what they are doing.

Our meetings began at the Third Church Sunday. Attendance was very good at both services. The people seem willing to do their part. Rev. W. P. Minton, of Goshen, Indiana, is leading. He is an intelligent and consecrated worker. Pray for us in Park place.

Capt. C. M. Cruser who has been at the Protestant Hospital for some time is much better and hopes to get home soon.

A. M. Hanson.

(Arriving a little late this Letter, we regret, was crowded out last week.—Ed.)

THE N. C. AND VA. CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

I wish to call attention of the readers of The Sun to the importance of the work of this association. This is one of the most important enterprises of the church in local missions. This is a home enterprise. Here we raise our money and here we appropriate it to the most needy and important places in the Conference. This is truly the work of Home Missions. There has been too little Home Mission work in our church. The cause has suffered too long and too much. We have lost our influence and power in many places of importance, while other denominations with more of the spirit of missions have gone into these places and now have strong churches. I might mention Danville, Va., where we have a number of members and have had for years, and they are drifting into other denominations for the want of a Christian church; South Boston, Va., where once we had a church of hope, where I held a revival for Dr. Wieker in 1896 and added 11 members; but this church unfortunately went down, for the want of the right attention. In Reidsville, we have yet some good members of the Christian church. Here once we had a church and like other places, it too, went to sleep in 1890, and has not been awakened yet. I could call attention to a number of other places of vital importance where we ought to have a Christian church and we have not the means to support the work. Today we ought to have a strong church in Winston, it being one of the enterprising cities in the State and we have a number of members there. The call for Home Missions should be very loud and long enough to be heard and answered. This is a day of missions—a day of enterprise—a day of work. We need our best to the front for the best results. I wish to beg Sunday schools, Endeavorers, churches and all individuals who are interested in the prosperity of the Christian church, who can help—and all who will help, to take a membership in the Christian Missionary Association, the annual fee being $5, to be used directly in the bounds of this Conference. Think over this matter, pray over it, and ask the Lord to help you decide it and if you can, send in your name to Bro. W. N. Graham, Burlington, N. C., Sec., or by your delegate to Conference. I also call attention to all the present members of this body to please send in your annual fee to Conference, to our next annual session of this association at Bethlehem in November. Let us have an interesting session and increased interest. Let us be a growing missionary people, equal to others. I am sure we can if we will all pull together. Now all the pastors please look after this matter in your church and Sunday schools and all old members and see that fees are sent in.

THINK ABOUT YOUR WORK.

Every picture of a great battle that one sees displayed on canvass puts the great general in front of his army. This is done in order to give the hero a prominent place. There is always room for the picture of the general about the middle of the canvass and the artist puts him in at the point. The man who has seen service upon the plains of war knows that the picture is false—the general is the hero and truly entitled to all honor given him, but not because he rode several yards ahead of the firing line and made himself a target for the enemy and put himself in the way of his own men. The general who wins undying fame is the man who sits by day in his tent, and lies awake at night, planning, planning, planning.

The head of a great business house is not the man who can wait on the most customers, who can carry the greatest burdens or write the most ornately of any one in the building. He is the one who has the vision and the ability to organize, to plan, to build up, to extend the business and to judge men.

What I am driving at is this: It is the man who thinks that creates, enlarges, builds up and strengthens any business or institution. In the church we have too few men who give thought to their work. The president of the Christian Endeavor Society, the superintendent of the Sunday school and the pastor do not think about their work. The pastor gives a great deal of care to his sermons, but thinks little of his charge. The superintendent is at Sunday school 52 Sundays in the year, but he never takes an hour in the quiet of evening to plan—to think about the work. The president may appoint good leaders, but he will not have successful Christian Endeavor meetings unless somebody thinks and plans and prays.

We are too prone to follow the beaten path. The church and the Sunday school have always gone about things in a certain way, therefore, we too readily conclude that if it is not the only way it must be the best way. I have seen Sunday schools that are half a century old and today are following the same plans they did when the school was organized. I say I have seen some, but please do not conclude that because the plan has kept the school alive for fifty years it is a good one. The plan hasn't kept it alive; it has merely been unsuccessful in killing the school. The school just hasn't reached the end of the rut.

If we could get every Sunday school superintendent and teacher, every pastor, every president of a Christian Endeavor Society, in the Southern Christian Convention to give one hour a week to serious thinking and planning for our work, we would witness a revolution in a year. Suppose those officers and teachers would meet once a month and tell of what had occurred to them in those quiet moments.

If we are to succeed we must think more of our work. Try thinking of yours. Let's have a Thinking Hour.

THE ORDER CHANGETH.

Under the above head one of our religious exchanges says something to the honor and glory of the Adult Bible Class Movement. A part of the article is as follows:

"It is not so long since everybody was bewailing the preponderance of women in the churches and Sunday schools. Insensibly the scale has shifted. An exchange remarks on the frequency with which a certain hymn is heard to-day in our churches.

"'Ye that are men now serve him,' and a well-known editor of many Sunday-school papers writes urgently to a contributor to try to get in touch with organized classes of women, since there doubtless are a good many, although the men's classes largely outnumber them."

The Organized Adult Bible Class Movement has had more to do with bringing about this change of the old order than any other one thing. Not only the Sunday-school but the church as well has profited by the development of this great movement.

A BOY'S FAIR QUESTION.

"Now I'll tell you just what started me in the direction of the Sunday-school and made me a member of this class," said a man during the testimony hour of an Adult Bible Class.

"One Sunday, seeing that it was time for my boy of twelve years to be off for the Sunday school to which his older brother and two sisters had already gone, I said a little sharply to him:

"See here, son, why are you not off for Sunday school? You'll be late if you don't hurry."

"He began to protest, and asked why he had to go. I explained:

"Because it is a good thing for a boy to go to church and Sunday school—that's why, and I mean that you shall go."

"If it is such a good thing, father, for a boy to go to church and Sunday-school, why isn't it a good thing for a man?"

"I had no answer ready. What he said gripped me so I simply couldn't get away from it. The very next day a neighbor who is a member of this class, asked me to visit the class next Sunday. I came, and I haven't missed a Sunday since. My boys and I come to the church and school together every Sunday now. The question my boy asked of me is a perfectly fair question for any boy to ask of his father. If it is a good thing for the boy to go to Sunday school, why is it not a good thing for the father to do the same thing?"

There is no more pleasing sight than that of a father and his boys going to Sunday school together, and the Organized Class Movement has made this a common sight in hundreds of places in which the fathers of a decade ago sent their boys to Sunday school while they remained at home.

Notes on Missions.

The following European mission notes are from the pen of Amos R. Wells:

1. Christian Endeavor is doing great things for Europe. It is found in every European country, though it is strongest in Germany. A great world's Christian Endeavor convention has been held in Geneva, Switzerland. Large national unions are found in Germany, France, and Spain, and many other unions in other countries. The last Spanish convention was the greatest Protestant gathering ever held in the kingdom. Christian Endeavor flourishes also in Austria-Hungary, Finland, Sweden and Norway. There are societies in Greece, Macedonia, Bulgaria, Italy, and other lands.

2. Great Britain is, of course, included in our survey, it is to be placed at the head in Christian Endeavor, as it stands second to the land of the society's birth, having 12,000 Christian Endeavor societies, and holding some of the largest conventions ever held in the history of our movement.

3. There are in Europe no fewer than 13,000,000 Mohammedans, 3,295,000 of them making up half of Turkey, and 8,500,000 of them making up 8 per cent of Russia, while the rest are scattered everywhere. A fine chance for missionary work.

4. Mormons from the United States are very active in Europe, and entrap many of the young women and men with their crafty representations. We need to convert the Mormons for the sake of Europe as well as America.

5. Great multitudes in France have drifted away from Roman Catholicism into irreligion. Among these the Protestant colporteurs find a ready sale for the Bible, and they are glad to listen to the simple preaching of the gospel.

6. In Germany, supposed to be the home of harmful criticism of the Bible, the annual purchase of copies of the Word of God has risen from 12 copies to a thousand persons in 1885 to 19 copies to a thousand persons in 1907.

7. The widespread popular discontent which causes so many terrible riots in Spain is very largely a rebellion against Roman Catholicism. In the Barcelona riots, for example, nearly every Catholic church in the city was destroyed, together with thirty convents and monasteries.

8. It is the estimate of Joseph McCabe that during the last half century Roman Catholicism has lost no fewer than 80,000,000 members by withdrawal to other churches or by falling away into no religion at all.

9. One of the encouraging signs in the religious outlook in Russia is the large number of colonies established there by strong Protestants—Lutherans, Mennonites, and the like.

Short Addresses.

1. While the marching orders into all the world were given from the first, there were reasons why it took some time to reach as far out as Europe. In the first place, the foundation must be laid. A beginning must be made and a foundation built. This was done in Jerusalem. But the Jerusalem church worked too long at the foundation. Indeed, when it did go on, it was from necessity rather than election. While they doubted and debated over the Gentile and the Gospel, they came at last to see the call to the uttermost parts of the earth and to all races of men. Thus the second hindrance to the speedy spread of the Gospel was the slowness of the church to understand its orders.

2. The two faults above mentioned are the common faults of the church of all times past. Slow to see. Did not the Saviour have to deal with this in his own disciples? And worse than that, with them, was the slowness of the populace to grasp his teaching. We should not let this lesson be lost upon us. There are many causes that enter into slowness to understand. The chief cause is not stupidity. It is not dullness. It is prejudice. And this prejudice comes from a failure to inform one's self. Facts and figures and dearth to prejudice and slowness to understand. Missionary facts are what people need. The field and its deplorable condition; the gospel and its remedy for the conditions that ruin men. The second fault—working too long upon the foundation—is a peculiar state of mind to find in a Christian. It is rather a justification of one's self for not fulfilling the world-wide command—to claim, as many do, that a good foundation must be first laid. They abuse the truth of it.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.Henderson Letter.

I have been tardy in reporting the summer's work from my field. The cause for this has been mentioned in The Sun. After two months away from my work I am able to fill my appointments.

Fuller's.—We began our protracted meeting here the second Sunday in August. Dr. Herndon, a former pastor, was with me and did the preaching. The visible results were not so great as some former meetings, but this, I think, was due to the fact that the community is principally church people. There were a number of reclamations, some half a dozen professions and one united with the church. It has been decided to begin, at no very distant date, the erection of a larger and more modern house of worship at this place.

Liberty. (Halifax County, Va.) We held our meeting from the fifth Sunday in July in a grove not far from where the new church is now being built. Dr. Herndon and myself did the preaching. There were large congregations from the first service. Nineteen made a public confession and fourteen united with the church. I have other names to join at my next appointment. This church has one of the most consecrated and sacrificing memberships I have ever known. Beginning with a membership of sixteen less than a year ago, they are building a thousand dollar house of worship and expect to hold services in same this month.

Virgilina.

Rev. L. E. Smith came to assist in a meeting here first week in August; but had all the ministerial work to do after Monday, on account of my sickness. The crowds were never larger and Bro. Smith, from reports must have been at his best. I have not heard the number of professions, but fifteen united with the church and two have been reinstated. Among the members received is some of the best strength added to the church during my seven years service as pastor.

Henderson.

The meetings at Henderson and Liberty have been postponed. The former till February, next, and the latter the third week in this month.

I am under special obligations to my churches for continuing my salary during the two months I was out of the work and the numerous other kindnesses shown me and my family. The four weeks I was sick at Virgilina, and in quarantine together, I was well cared for in the home of Deacon Alfred Hayes. The physician came to see me twenty-eight times and presented no bill. The Woodmen of the World furnished a nurse during the most critical period of my illness. Friends of the town sent in a purse of something over twenty-six dollars. Had I been at home I could not have been cared for better. There are many names of those who were so very kind I would like to mention; but no one does my family feel under more obligations to than Miss Anna Apt, who, regardless of the risk of taking the dread disease, came daily to learn of my condition, and sent each day, both a telegram and letter to my home.

Liberty (Vance) has sent a purse of fifteen dollars, a nice pounding for the home, together with feed for my horse. In return for all these expressions of kindness it shall be my purpose to render more faithful and efficient service.

MARRIED.Stephens-Howell.

Mr. Craton Stephens and Miss Beatrice Howell were married Sept. 16th, 1911, at the bride's home in Suffolk, Va. Only a few of the immediate family witnessed the ceremony. Miss Beatrice is the attractive and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. B. Howell. Mr. Stephens is a railroad conductor and a native of Suffolk. They left immediately for an extended bridal trip. The Lord bless them all the way.

J. M. Roberts.

Jones-Barker.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at Lebanon Christian Church, Semora, N. C., on Oct. 4th, when Lelia Barker, daughter of J. T. Barker, became the bride of Mr. Walter J. Jones. The church was tastefully decorated, the color scheme being green and white. The bridal party entered the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March. "Melody of Love" was rendered softly during the ceremony. Mrs. C. H. Wells of Edgarton, Va., presiding at the organ.

The bride entered on the arm of her sister, Miss Hattie Barker, while the groom entered on the arm of his brother, Mr. Pell Jones.

The ceremony was conducted by Rev. Jas. L. Foster, pastor.

The groom is a successful farmer near Semora. Many kind wishes of their friends follow them on life's journey. There was a large gathering of relatives and friends to witness the ceremony.

Jas. L. Foster.

Pollard-Kernodle.

Mr. H. C. Pollard and Miss Blondie Kernodle, both of Alamance County, were united in marriage in the parlors of the Guilford Hotel, Greensboro, N. C., at 6:30 A. M., of October 14. A hurried automobile ride, from the preacher's home at Elon College, in the early morning hours, the bride and the groom elect, the minister and his wife, with the chauffeur, as passengers, proved a delightful prelude to this romantic and happy marriage. There were no attendants. After a hurried breakfast at the Guilford, Mr. and Mrs. Pollard left for a stop at Clover, Va., the groom's parental home and thence for Washington and a northern trip. Mr. Pollard is the very successful and exceedingly popular manager of the Osipee Cotton Mills and Company Store, and is held in high esteem as a citizen and business man both by his employers and the public. Miss Blondie is the charming daughter of Mr. John T. Kernodle of Alamance, and is a woman of marked character and accomplishments.

The souvenir ring ceremony of the Christian Church was used by the writer in pronouncing the words that made the two hearts one.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago at the order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, liberal, generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

My Dear Children:

We are so thankful for more friends who send us $5.00 for well. That hole is being filled, but hasn't reached the top yet. Mrs. Staley is a friend in need and one who signs himself "An Old Friend.. has certainly proved it in more ways than this.

Our silo has the top on and will soon be ready for the corn. We hope it will prove very successful.

33 of our children enjoyed the Greensboro Fair last week and in spite of the rain took in the day from 5 A. M. to 5 P. M. What a time! They will talk about it for a month. We are indebted to Mr. Garland Daniels, President, for free entrance to Fair grounds.

Very cordially,

Uncle Jim.

News Ferry, Va., July 28, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write again. I will be very glad when school starts again as I love to go somewhere every day; but it is fine to play dolls these hot days if I have some other little girl to play with me. Do the little girls of the Orphanage like to play with dolls?

I send 10 cents with much love,

Mary Annie Farmer.

You should see our little girls with their dollies, Annie. They love to sew for them and are anxious for every piece of cloth that falls from our scissors when we are cutting new goods.

News Ferry, Va., July 28, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I want to answer the baby's letter of the orphanage. I have been a baby a long time but I am not now. Our baby is one year old and his name is Sandy, but we call him Boss. I can hold him on Nancy (that's Uncle Albert's horse) and Mary sits behind me. We all want to ride every time she passes. That is fun to us. I am five years old and send five cents.

Love to all,

Albert Henry Farmer.

Now Albert, you must be sure to hold Baby "Boss" on tight, for if he should fall you'd never have any more baby at all.

Stanleyton, Va., October 3rd, 1911.

Here I come with my dime and 90 cents for back dues. I am busy harrowing for wheat.

I truly hope this will find you and the little cousins well. Will close with much love to one and all.

Your little friend,

Willie Smith

Have missed you, Willie, and truly glad you write again. Hope you are going to school soon. Hurry up the wheat.

Wakefield, Va. October 7th, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We are able to send but $1.00 this time. Some of our Band are sick, and some are away from home, so all have not sent up their dues for October. Walter Wicker, Sanford, N. C., met with us Saturday and gave a nickle to the Band. Walter and his mother and baby brother are visiting our pastor's family, Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Jones. Mrs. Wicker and Mrs. Jones are sisters. The first Saturday in each month is our regular time for meeting. We started out Saturday afternoon, in care of Mrs. Lincoln, bent on a chinquapin hunt and for the "saw dust pile" where we planned to have a big romp and tumble. We had not gone far until two things happened; first, we were met by an old negro woman who exclaimed: "Lor,' missus, is dem all you-se chillun!" Then a little farther one the rain began to fall and we had to retrace our steps. What a disappointed crowd! But we had fun, lots of it. Getting back, Mrs. Lincoln hoisted a tent in her yard, and we had reading and songs, and afterward a treat of candy and cakes. Twenty-three of us have agreed to stand by the Band for twelve months, if no longer. Next month we shall try to make up our shortage in dues for October. Some of us are making our own money.

Yours, for the Orphanage,

The Whatsoever Band.

A fine record, little Band. We could see the sun shining through many a cloud if we'd only look for it.

WOMAN'S MOST BEAUTIFUL GARMENT.

Honor, fame, public applause, may be sought by man; but, as for woman, let knowledge be her garment, virtue her girdle, and piety a crown about her head. This is to her appropriate panoply; and, thus equipped, she will claim no station above that which Heaven designed for her, nor will she hesitate to lend her hand, in cheerfulness, to the various household duties which are emphatically assigned to her. Graceful she may be, in the mazy dance; lovely, when her hand flings upon the air sweet notes of music; fair, when the bay entwines her brow; but lovelier, fairer, and more graceful, far, is she, when, with meek eye and cheerful heart, she plies the homely task, desiring no reward save an approving conscience,—no praise, save the smiles that beam from her own fireside.

where praising thee as the world goes round, we pray, in whatever language, whatever form,—that is nothing: they shall find, they who seek thee with all their hearts. Teach us to live by thy laws: thou art willing to repeat them every day and every hour, and show us how we can live by them. Teach this nation and all nations to live as Christ Jesus with thee, that we may all live with thee and thy kingdom come and thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Go with us every day and everywhere, that the sword may everywhere be sheathed and men need study war no more. May all rulers and priests know that they are thy servants, the servants of the living God, that each may help each other and by each other be helped, and may all be blessed. Amen.—Edward Everett Hale.

THE OLD SCOTCHMAN'S PRAYER.

I was pleased the other day with a story which an aged Scotch minister told me about an old Scotchman who, many years ago, was on his way to a meeting of the people of God held in a tent, or some such temporary structure.

The old pilgrim was poor and ill-clad, and partly deaf, but he trusted in the Lord, whom he served, and rejoiced in His kind providence. On the way to the meeting he fell in with another Christian brother, a younger man, bound on the same errand, and they traveled on together.

When they had nearly reached the place of meeting, it was proposed that they should turn aside behind the hedge and have a little prayer before they entered the meeting. They did so, and the old man, who had learned "in everything to let his requests be made known unto God," presented his case in language like the following:

"Lord, ye ken weel enough that I'm deaf, and I want a seat on the first bench, if you can let me have it, so that I can hear Thy Word. And ye see that my toes are sticking through my shoes and I don't think it is much to your credit to have your children's toes sticking through their shoes, and therefore I want ye to get me a pair of new ones. And ye ken I have nae siller, and I want to stay there during the meeting, and therefore I want you to get me a place to stay."

When the old man had finished his quaint petition, and they had started on, his younger brother gently suggested to him that he thought his prayer was rather free in its forms of expression, and hardly as reverential as seemed proper to him in approaching the Supreme Being. But the old man did not accept the imputation of irreverence.

"He's my Father," said he, "I'm weel acquainted with Him, and He's weel acquainted with me, and I take great liberties with Him."

So they went on to the meeting together. The old man stood for a while in the rear of the congregation, making an ear trumpet of his hand to catch words, until someone near the pulpit noticed him, and, beckoning forward, gave him a good seat upon the front bench.

During the prayer the old man knelt down, and after he arose, a lady, who had noticed his shoes, said to him:

"Are they the best you have?"

"Yes," said he, "but I expect my Father will give me a new pair very soon."

"Come with me after the meeting," said the lady, "and I will get you a new pair."

The service closed, and he went with her to her house.

"Shall you stay during the meeting?" said the good woman, as they went along.

"I would, but I am a stranger in the place, and have nae siller."

"Well," she said, "you will be perfectly welcome to make your home at our house during the meeting."

The old man thanked the Lord that He had given him all the three things he had asked for. The younger brother's reverence for the Lord was right and proper, but there is a reverence which reaches higher than the forms and conventionalities.—Selected.

THE HAGUE PROHIBITION CONFERENCE.

A Brief Report of Its Proceedings.

Temperance workers and prohibitionists from nearly one-half the countries of the world assembled in response to the call that had been issued by the International Prohibition Confederation for its second world's conference. The Prohibition Conference coincided with the successful thirteenth International Congress against Alcoholism, meeting in the spacious and beautiful Kurhaus at Scheveningen, five Hague, Holland, on September 11-16, 1911, and Prohibition was given frequent and favorable mention in the various sessions of that Congress.

The two special Prohibition Conferences were held at the Kurhaus on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, September 13th, and the prominent announcements which were made of these meetings attracted large attention.

The report of Mr. Edward Page Gaston, F. R. G. S., the honorary secretary, showed the wonderful growth which has been made by the Confederation, through its officials in many climes since the organization of this movement in London two years ago. In a sweeping review of the 39 countries in which the Confederation is actively represented by its vice-presidents, he briefly indicated many signs of progress and much reason for encouragement on the part of Prohibition workers everywhere. When the world as a whole is taken under survey it is simply wonderful when one realizes the advancement which is continually being made. One temperance and prohibition worker, who has traveled in various countries and has had a wide experience, remarked that it was the best report ever presented within the speaker's knowledge.

"We look forward to the day when the scheme of world-wide Prohibition will come to pass," said Mr. Gaston in closing his report. "We live for the time when in a great federation of peace and amity, all peoples will be agreed upon this as the fundamental basis and ultimate goal of every true temperance reform. This, as has been said, is the consummation most devoutly to be wished for. You who believe in it and long for it and work for it are not mere dreamers. You dream of that which is to come!"

The Roll Call of the Nations was responded to by the representatives from various countries, including Don Atfred Ecroyd (Spain), Fraulein Ottilie Hoffmann (Germany), Dr. Legrain (France), Fraulein Grewingk (Russia), the Messrs. Frank J. Sibley (U. S. A.), Larsen-Ledet (Denmark), P. Van der Meulen (Holland), Leif Jones, M. P. and Ald. Joseph Malins (England), Tom Honeyman (Scotland), and Adolf Hansen (Denmark). Many brief speeches sketched in outline news from afar, with inspiring notes of progress in many latitudes.

Endorsement was given to the Memorial Resolution which had been passed at the afternoon Conference, to be addressed to all the Governments of the world. The preamble in five paragraphs directs attention to the wide-spread misery and loss in many directions occasioned by the traffic in intoxicants of all kinds, and it closes as follows:

Resolved, that this Conference most respectfully but urgently appeals to the properly constituted authorities in every nation to take prompt and effective measures for the suppression of the manufacture, importation, exportation and sale of all intoxicants within their respective jurisdictions, and that in addition to such national action the various Governments be requested to arrange for an International Convention for giving effect to this International Prohibition Movement."

This resolution will be duly forwarded from the London offices to the rulers of every country of the world, and in some cases to their principal legislative officials.

Taken as a whole, the cause of Prohibition is now considerably more advanced than ever before, and there is no doubt that the workers from many countries who gathered at The Hague have gained a wider knowledge and truer insight into the principles and practical operations of Prohibition by their visit. A fine example of what may be done in this direction was presented by the impressive two days' convention held by the National Dutch Prohibition Society during the same week. This is one of the oldest temperance organizations in Holland, with 14,000 members and 300 branches. Its official newspaper, De Blauwe Vaan, has a paid circulation of more than 21,000 copies weekly. A wisely aggressive campaign is steadily pursued by the industrial classes largely making up its membership, looking to the time when Holland will be added to the list of promulgatory nations. The Netherlands Prohibitionists officially decided to translate and distribute throughout the Dutch-speaking countries of the world the leaflets of the Confederation on the principles and practical workings of Prohibition.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

New Center.

It was my privilege to be with Rev. S. B. Klapp in a revival last week at New Center, Randolph Co. The services began on Saturday and continued through the Friday following. With the exception of one service the congregations were large and attentive. On Sunday the meeting house was filled and the aisle was crowded with chairs, and still half the people had to remain on the outside. Also on Thursday, the day of the baptizing, the congregation was again too large for the house. As a result of our labors God saw fit to save some 17 or more souls, all of whom seemed to be very happily and truly converted. Nineteen joined the church and were baptized by immersion.

I have been supplying for Bro. Klapp at New Center this year and I find the people to be good, kind and hospitable. May the Lord bless them abundantly both temporally and spiritually.

Columbus, Ga., Letter.

For the past two weeks or more Bro. J. F. Hill, Jr., the efficient Secretary of the Ga. and Ala. Conference, has been a very sick man. While his condition is not thought to be serious, his relatives and friends feel anxious about him. Let many prayers be offered in his behalf that he may be speedily restored. Than Bro. Hill there is no more thoroughly consecrated Christian or loyal worker among us. May the God of all comfort abundantly bless him and his family in this time of affliction while the shadows are about them.

Mrs. D. P. Elder went last week to Opelika, Ala., to spend some time with relatives there. Her health hasn't been good for several months. It is hoped that this visit may greatly benefit her.

Rev. B. F. Young has been re-elected to the pastorate of North Highlands Church for another year. We learn that he has accepted.

Rev. J. H. Milam will continue as pastor at Girard. He is thinking of moving here. He was somewhat undecided the last time we saw him.

Next Sunday will mark the close of our labors as pastor of the Rose Hill Church and this is our last "Columbus, Ga., Letter." Immediately after the Alabama Conference, we enter upon the work at Wadley, Ala., the undersigner's future address, from which place we hope to continue to furnish an occasional letter to The Sun.

To our many friends in this city we now say good-bye. May the Father's blessing abide with you; may He "establish you in every good word and work."

Enre.

The week after the first Sunday in August we had our protracted meeting at Enre. Bro. R. H. Peel did the preaching and the Lord blessed his work. Bro. Peel was pastor of the church several years and all were glad to hear him again. The meeting resulted in many professions, with 15 additions. Enre has a large membership and the church has just closed, perhaps, the best year in its history. We have just repaired our church, and paid for it. During the year, however, we have lost several good members. Mrs. Silver Long died some time ago in the prime of young womanhood, leaving a devoted husband, mother, several brothers and sisters, and a host of admiring friends.

On October 5th, Mrs. Timothy Felton died at the home of her mother in Norfolk, and was buried at Enre's church on the 7th. She was about 18 years of age, and had been in declining health for one year. She is survived by her husband, mother, six brothers and five sisters. She was a good woman and has gone to her reward.

J. M. Roberts.

Oak Grove.

We protracted our meeting at Oak Grove the week after the 1st Sunday in September, without ministerial help. We had a good meeting, which resulted in 9 additions. We have a small membership, but the church is in good working condition. We have this year enlarged the church, and now have a very nice little church, with a seating capacity of about 300.

On the 1st Sunday in Sept. we lost by death our organist, Mrs. T. R. Ellis. Mrs. Ellis was about 28 years of age. She is survived by her husband, Bro. T. R. Ellis, two sons, mother and father, one sister and brother.

She was one of the most faithful church workers I ever knew. She was always at her post of duty. In her death the family has lost a devoted wife and mother, the community a true friend, and the church a zealous worker. The Lord bless the family and friends. May her virtues be imitated by all who knew her.

J. M. Roberts.

Berkeley Letter.

The revival season is now about over in this Conference, and the results have been most encouraging. The churches have been revived spiritually, added to in number, and strengthened in general.

Since my last letter I have assisted in meetings at Mt. Carmel, Isle of Wight Court House, and Bellville school house. I was with Rev. H. H. Butler at Mt. Carmel where we had six additions and several reclamations. The people of this community go to church. The house was crowded at each service, and when asked to stand in evidence that they were members of some church, nearly every one arose. If I mistake not there are about three hundred members of this church alone. The people are happy with their new church and love their pastor who, by the way, was born and reared in that community.

Isle of Wight Court House is another church that is fortunate in having a good pastor, a fine choir, a large membership and a commodious house of worship. Here we had preaching twice a day and dinner on the ground. There were twenty or more conversions and six additions to membership others to join later.

I greatly enjoyed the hospitality of these good people. The week following the first Sunday in October I preached at Bellville School House in Surry County. Bro. J. W. Cotton, of Dendron, has been superintendent of a Sunday school there for about five years. Taking this school house as a center there is a radius of about five miles with no church in it. One could hardly believe that to be true in old Virginia. It is thought by some of our friends that a church should be built in this section. Would it not be well for our people to look into this opportunity? Rev. C. C. Jones has preached there for some time and was with me part of the time in the meeting. There were several conversions, but because of no church home several placed their membership with other denominations, others requested to join Dendron Christian church. Some gave me to understand that should a Christian church be built there they would heartily support it.

My local work is moving along encouragingly, and in many respects this has been the most fruitful year since I have been pastor.

M. L. Bryant.

New Center.

Our revival began here the fourth Sunday in September and closed on Thursday P. M. This was said to be the best revival held here in years. The congregations were large all the time. We do not know the number of converts, but some 20 or more. There were 19 accessions to the church and 19 were baptized by immersion. There was a large number of penitents left at the altar. Revs. W. W. Lawrence and H. A. Albright were with us a part of the time and did good altar work. Rev. B. J. Earp was with us and did some of the preaching. His sermons were good. This is a good little church with many young people in its congregation to catch the good influence of the older members whose Christian life is noteworthy. I believe there is a bright future before this church. Christian Union is in about four miles of this church, where we had a good revival meeting August, and where the work becomes more hopeful than it has been in some years. These two churches have been co-operating and working together most harmoniously for several years. I preach at both the same day. This is the best plan where churches are not able to sustain a pastor and get his full time. May God bless the work.

S. B. Klapp, Pastor.

Sun Readers—Ether Church.

Dear Readers of The Christian Sun:

I am coming to you again in the interest of Ether Church. This is one of our most worthy enterprises, being the youngest church in the Western N. C. Christian Conference. On August 4th, 1910, I organized this church with 18 charter members. We have now more than twice that number. We have a good house of worship nearing completion, yet we are in need of help at once to finish this house for the Annual Conference, as the next session of the Western N. C. Conference meets here in November. This is something very unusual, for a new church to entertain Conference the first year after its birth. This young church merits your attention in a substantial way. We need help here financially and we need it at once. A more worthy and consecrated people you rarely ever meet than the good people of Ether, who have sacrificed so nobly to build this house of worship. Come to Conference and see what they have done. Who will help them at once? Will you, dear reader, you, you? Have we not a hundred readers of The Sun who will send in from $1 to $5 each to help finish this house before Conference? Who will be first? You can send contributions to H. Freeman, Ether, N. C.

I wish to acknowledge $1 from Pleasant Grove Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society, by Sister M. F. Cook.

I was at this church last Saturday and Sunday. The prospects here continue to brighten. The brethren and sister meau business. They will go to Conference with all apportionment paid in full. And I am praying that all the churches will do likewise. Let every one pray and work to this end. W. G. Clements.

DIED.

Bray.

Richard Pollard Bray, son of Richard and Tabbie Bray, was born June 15th, 1879, died at the Memorial Hospital, Richmond, Va., June 18th, 1911, at the age of 32 years and three days. Nov. 14th, 1900 he married Miss Lelia Murray, who survives him. At the time of his death there were five children, two boys and three girls. The youngest boy, an infant of a few weeks, died fifteen day after his father. At the protracted meeting at Union, Virgilina, in 1910, he made a public profession and I received him into the church and baptized him. His remains were brought to Virgilina and buried in Union cemetery.

Lynn.

Friends will be deeply grieved to learn of the death of Mrs. Willie M. Lynn, wife of County Commissioner I. H. Lynn, which occurred Tuesday afternoon as the result of heart-failure. The funeral was held at the old Lynn home in House Creek Township, conducted by Rev. W. G. Clements. She was a member of Six Forks Christian church.

Mrs. Lynn is survived by her husband and eight children, the oldest of whom is only 12 years of age. She was one of the best of good women and delighted in making those about her happy. When her death occurred, Mr. Lynn was in Raleigh attending a meeting of the County Commissioners. His wife had been sick with fever and last Sunday she spent the day at the home of her father, Mr. Isaiah Goodwin, the doctor having told her she could go. On the day she died she was up and later called to her son to bring her a quinine tablet. She took the tablet and put a fever thermometer in her mouth, to take her temperature. Her son waited a few minutes and then said: "Mother, what is your temperature?" He looked; the thermometer had fallen out of her mouth and his mother was dead. The thermometer registered 103.

Mr. Lynn heard of his wife's death as he was on his way home from Raleigh.

There is great sympathy felt for Mr. Lynn and the surviving children.

Needham-Yow.

At the residence of the bride's father, W. H. Yow, Sept. 24th, I united in matrimony Robt. Needham and Miss Roella Yow. A number of friends and relatives were present at the ceremony. May the union of their lives be long and happy. T. E. White.

FROM A VETERAN PASTOR'S PRAYERS.

Thou Lord of heaven and earth, our God and Father: We cry to thee. Our souls call out for thee. While our bodies are fastened here, set our immortal spirits free to rove with thee in holy fellowship. As thy children in Jesus Christ we dare to claim the freedom of thy universe as our heritage. We would move out into the wide distances—to come back, if thou so appoint, refreshed and strengthened, quickened in every fibre, for better living and more effective service. Show us the hidden things, so far as knowledge of these will fit our state. Unfold to our gaze the mysteries of life. We would know what word from thee the trees are speaking to us; what bird-song and sunshine mean; what message thou art sending us in the laughter of children, in the cry of want, in the voices of history—specially as these are condensed for us in Thy written Word, and in the faces of our fellows as the crowds flit by. Lord, cure our deafness. Thou Infinite One, in whom we live, set us free from the thick prison walls of self. Let us loose from this blackness of self-absorption, and grant us the wider view of generous sympathy and filial trust. Open our blind eyes to the poetry of the commonplace; to the tragedies of men and women who walk calmly by our side; to the transcendent glory wrapped up in the meanest human life. Cure us of our vicious habit of disparaging our fellows, of counting them dull and uninteresting, perhaps hateful, just because we do not understand. Lord, lead us out from our own narrowness, and make us thankful that the truth is wider than the measure of our mind, and thy love to all of us so wonderfully kind.—In S. S. Times.

"COUNT YOUR BLESSINGS."

(The Lord hath done great things for us; whereof we are glad. Psalms 123:3. Golden Text for Sunday, October 29).

The trouble with our busy time is that we do not stop to consider how great things God has done for us, and is doing. There are men, there may be readers of The Christian Sun, who are busy every day enjoying the blessings and benefits God has given them, and yet they do not stop a five minutes in a whole day to reckon these blessings, nor to thank God for them. Merchants will take time to make an inventory of their stock, see how many goods they have on hand, and count their sales of the month or year. Yet if asked to count the blessings that they had received from God they would say they hadn't time.

The Lord hath done great things for us indeed, hath given us health and strength and friends and loved ones and prospered us in our way. But little do we stop to see or consider the infinite abundance of these great things. Like the Israelites, it takes some captivity, some reverses, some hardship, maybe some severe affliction to bring us to our senses and to make our hearts glad and grateful.

I saw a man the other day who had been desperately ill, exceedingly nigh death's door. He was convalescent at last. "O, the Lord has been so good to me. He has raised me up, spared my life and I think I will soon be well," said the man emotionally and gratefully. Well, if that man was thankful that the Lord had spared him and had raised him up from a bed of long and sore affliction, how thankful indeed should I have been who had not even been afflicted, who during the time had enjoyed health and strength and happiness. Count your blessings, reader, for they are many and worth while.

These Israelites had suffered bonds and captivity many years. They had been in strange lands and subjected to many straits and trying ordeals. Now they are permitted by the goodness and mercy of God to return to their native land. True, they find that land only a mockery and a shadow of what it had been in the days of their prosperity there. Their beautiful temple is burned. The walls of their beloved city are torn down. Their houses are gone, their homes are desolate. Yet, this is home and here once again they may establish their altars and worship their God. How glad, how grateful, how rejoiced indeed their hearts were. God has been merciful and true and faithful, even if they had been ungrateful and faithless, and they now recognize this. Their hearts are made glad, and their lips sing praises. "Mercy and truth are met together; righteousness and peace have kissed each other," they sing. Listen further at their glad refrain: "Truth springeth out of the earth; and righteousness hath looked down from heaven."

Some times a man, having recovered from a long illness or disappointment, finds his affairs all gone to pieces, his store or farm neglected, his business a mere shadow of its former self. Yet how glad he is that he may go about again, maybe at the house of worship once more, may meet and mingle with his neighbors again. His heart is made glad despite the neglected conditions about him. The heart rises above these and sings praises to God for His goodness. "Oh! that men everywhere would praise the Lord for His goodness and for His wonderful works to the children of men."

IN THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE.
(Editorial Correspondence).

Roanoke, Ala., Oct. 20, 1911.

President Harper and the writer left Elon College at 5:45, Monday, A. M., Oct. 16. Breakfast in Greensboro, dinner (through) South Carolina (at 40 miles an hour.) supper at LaGrange, Ga. The distance from breakfast to supper was 449 miles. And judged by the way Pres. Harper ate supper it was even further than that. The difference between a fast train and a slow one is not rapidity, but a steady and continuous keeping at it. No. 37—the New York and New Orleans Limited—do not run faster between stations than do many of our local trains, but there are few station stops and "37" has made its fame as "fast-flyer" because it keeps running day and night, almost without stops, over the long trail of many hundred miles from New York via Atlanta to New Orleans. The men I know who have gone a long way in life and have a reputation of fast moves and great workers have made, and do maintain, their reputation not by rapidity with which they do things for an hour or a day, but by the quiet, steady, even continuous driving away at their tasks. Everything on No. 37 moves with tranquil quiet and rigid regularity. But the day counts and the continuous hours mark off the many, many miles.

There was a stop of five minutes at Greenville, S. C. I got a glass of buttermilk and President Harper got a hundred dollars for the College. Clyde Pritchette was the donor—I mean of the hundred dollars, not of the buttermilk. He was at the station. Pres. Harper had wired him an hour previous; he seemed glad to make the donation. He is in business at Greenville, and is prospering.

In the early morning hour of Tuesday we met Revs. H. W. Elder and E. M. Carter on their way to Roanoke to attend the Alabama Conference. We were entertained at breakfast in Roanoke by Bro. and Sister W. J. Mann and given a most cordial welcome to their happy and hospitable home. They are faithful members of the Christian church and though away from their home church they are loyal and true. Roanoke should by all means have a Christian church. It will have, one day, we are persuaded, for we have several members living here and they want and should have a church home in which to rear their children. Those who have moved into the town as parents may remain true to their home church, but their children will not.

The Annual Conference was to convene at Mt. Zion church three miles from Roanoke, at 10 A. M., Tuesday, but a steady downpour of rain delayed the opening session till about 3 P. M.

We were glad indeed to meet and greet our brethren and sisters with whose names and labors we were familiar, but whose faces, for the most part we had never seen. Among the earliest at Conference was Rev. J. H. Hughes, vice-President, who in the absence of the President, Rev. G. D. Hunt, convened the body and presided through the opening services. Bro. Hughes is a busy man and full of fruitful labors. He organized a church, Dinger's, in April. It now has fifty-four members and expects to build a good house of worship at an early date. Prospects for a strong church are flattering. He has a desirable lot and a large subscription list. We predict success for Bro. Hughes in this good work. Rev. J. H. Milam is a busy man whose face we were glad to see. He has recently moved from Jasper, Ga., to Phoenix, Alabama, and is to build a good, substantial church at the latter place. He has sold the old, inadequate building, purchased a lot and will build an ample house. The Elders, Dollars, and Carters are familiar names in the ministry here, some of whom we had met, the others we met with gladness. "Uncle" Tom Elder, as he is lovingly called by all, has grown feeble with the passing years and is on the superannuated list, but his life is a benediction and he is as much loved in this Conference as "Uncle" Wellons is in the N. C. and Va. Conference. Our venerable Bro. Knight we were glad to meet and hoped to meet

Bro. T. J. Edmonson, who, however, was not present.

Rev. G. D. Hunt is President of the Conference and has been for a number of years; Rev. E. M. Carter is Secretary; Bro. Beard, Asst. Secretary, and Dr. J. M. Welch is Treasurer.

The Alabama Conference is a business body. Business items receive first and foremost place. When the time is out for any topic President Hunt calls a halt forthwith, and the next item is gone into. We doubt if their annual sessions are long enough. There were really two days, and three could have been used to great advantage we think.

A conference is educational and deliberative, as well as executive, and it takes time for counsel and the maturing of wise, far-reaching plans. Bro. Hunt is a fine presiding officer, quick, deliberate, good humored, pungently witty. The business was dispatched in order and harmony, and we judge was well done. The churches of this Conference are building up in many directions. They are paying their pastors better than formerly, raising more for home and foreign missions, and doing more for education and all conference claims.

We shall write more of the Conference and its work later. This is a rather strenuous week with ye editor, meeting the brethren, making an untold number of new and good acquaintances and preaching two or three times every day. The brethren have received us cordially and speeded us on the way in the work.

President Harper is of course meeting with success on every hand and the brethren are delighted with his brilliant and illuminating addresses. They are glad to have their College President amongst them and are surprising him with their liberal responses to the worthy cause he represents.

Of the many kindnesses we are receiving at the hands of our dear brethren, Rev. C. M. Dollar, and his son, Rev. J. D. Dollar, in whose hospitable and happy home we peep these lines, a further and future letter will tell. The Alabama Conference is building and adding new churches rapidly and the years will witness a strong and great body of Christian work here.

The Covention needs the support of our people now as never before. Whether it will go forward or backward depends upon individuals. We want you to give of two things—your money and your time. Will you do it?

SUFFOLK LETTER.

I am thinking of young people of school age. The question of education is paramount with many parents. They think of education as the solution of the future for their children. They deplore the lack of opportunity when they were young, and their highest ambition is to educate those they love better than their own lives. The life-savers are not more heroic in rescuing imperilled seamen from the wreck than these parents in heroic efforts to send their children to school. I knew a mother who almost wrecked her own health to keep her only daughter in college. Her machine was running day and night. Many sleepless nights, many secret prayers, and many countless stitches paid the price of a diploma which was reward enough for all her maternal sacrifice. It was the "red letter day" of that home and that mother's heart when her daughter brought the diploma home. The mother's desire was for that daughter to teach school.

But the daughter soon married one unworthy of her education and prospects and almost broke that mother's heart. She took me into her confidence and told me the story of her sacrifice, her bright hopes, the course of her child, her ingratitude, and the family disgrace. Tears found great furrows in that wrinkled face along which to flow. The lips trembled, the voice faltered, and the bosom heaved as she told the story of her disappointment and her grief.

Education has its perils as well as ignorance; much that we call education is worse than none at all; and the great problem is not solved by buildings and grades, and longer terms. True education is the learning of those things that make the young wiser, better, and more useful. School life throws the young out with the worst as well as the best and the school itself must safeguard character as parents safeguarded character at home. The public school may be a blessing or a curse. If teachers are good in character as well as in scholarship, and if they make good manners and good character first, then they may help the next generation. One thing long desired is now history; the school rooms and pupils have improved immeasurably in cleanliness and deportment under the care of female teachers. Miss Grace Strachan, of New York City, has at last secured for female teachers the same pay as men; and if this spreads over the states it will make her name as famous as Dorothy Dix, Susan B. Anthony, or Frances E. Willard. I can well remember when rich folks did not care to send their children to free schools. Those were days of Academies and Seminaries; private select schools in which students lived as families. The public High School and higher grades of work have changed those conditions, made the public school the pride of communities and destroyed the boys Academy and the female Seminary of the private type. All grades of society now attend the public school and thus our education is thoroughly American. But are they thoroughly Christian? In some states the Bible is not allowed in the schools, and in many schools frivolous dancing and card-playing girls are at the desk as teachers. This is a position of such moment that young women who occupy the teacher's desk ought to stand for the highest refinement, the purest morals, the most exemplary character, and then they ought to be paid as much as men; and male teachers ought to stand for the same high things.

But the peril comes, often, when the young go off to school. When they leave the roof-tree, the fireside, the family dining room, the care of parents, the home church, then they are out for a voyage on a wide sea. If they fall into wrong hands they may be ruined. A few bad boys can corrupt a school; a few bad girls can taint young lives for all time. Here is ground that needs teachers of big heart as well as big brain. The college that is manned by a corps of strong souls that love the young, that watch out for character, that create a home atmosphere so large and so sweet as to embrace the student body in home-care, is the mold of men and women who will reflect honor upon the institution and bless the world.

W. W. Staley.

—The worst piece of literary news that we have read in months is to the effect that the wonderfully brilliant, but the unpardonably erratic, Marie Corelli has afflicted a long-suffering public with another book, her latest agony coming under the name of "The Life Everlasting: A Peal of Romance." As Mark Twain said of a certain author's books, we regard any library as good and worth while provided it hasn't in it any of Corelli's works.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

There is no reason why this should be styled the Elon College Letter this week save that the writer happens to get his mail there more often than anywhere else, for he is now in the land of Alabama nearly five hundred miles from home.

I shall not write of the trip from Elon to this section, for the Sun's editor has done that in his masterly way, but simply of my impressions of our Alabama brethren. I confess I have been disappointed in them. I had expected to find them so far different from our Virginia and North Carolina people that I could spin out many pages of eloquent depictions of differences, which would make interesting reading, an unusual thing for an Elon Letter, I fear. In this I say I have been severely disappointed—for they are like our own people in all essential ways.

They have greeted us to their hearts and homes in lavish hospitality. They have the same ideals of life and the same methods of attaining them. They talk and sing and pray just like our own folks. They are bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh. This is literally true in a physical sense of many whose ancestors came from Virginia and North Carolina and true of all in the spiritual sense. But how could it be otherwise? They believe the same Bible, stand upon the same principles, read the same church paper, love the same College and Orphanage as we ourselves. Men who think alike must resemble each other—for as a man thinketh so is he. So my disappointment becomes joy and gratification—joy at meeting in the flesh those in other lands according with us in spiritual matters and gratification that they are really like our own people. I rejoice that like principles of the faith make people like each other and look forward to the time when all the earth shall stand on the same platform.

The Alabama Conference was a revelation to me. The ministerial brethren who are its members are men of ability, vision, and consecration. The laity are devout, consecrated, progressive, alert for opportunity to serve their Church. Two new churches were received into fellowship; the church letters showed good gains for the Kingdom along all lines of progressive church work; the various reports were marked by practicality, vision, grasp of the real issues at stake. The discussions were characterized by the anxious endeavor on the part of all the speakers to arrive at the truth. Rev. G. D. Hunt is a gem in the president's chair and dispatches business with a master's hand. I felt at home in the Conference and several times found myself voting as if I were in the N. C. and Va. Conference. The brethren in Alabama may be depended on to carry forward the cause here to still greater achievements.

Dr. Atkinson is doing great preaching in his itinerary of the churches and is receiving a most cordial response to his most modest appeals for the Sun. Another column shows their great interest in the College.

This visit, to continue till a few days after the close of the Georgia and Alabama Conference, has enlarged my vision and deepened my love for the brethren here. The longer I stay, the better I like it. If ever I leave Elon, I think I shall come down South to dwell among these fine hills and these still finer Christian brethren.

AN AID TO FAMILY WORSHIP.

By Harold E. Wilson.

Perhaps you used to have family prayer in your home in years gone by. Or if not many years have gone by since you established that little home of yours, perhaps you started out bravely and conscientiously in those first blissful days to open each morning with some brief reading from the Word and a prayer for strength and guidance. You did not get out of the habit, if you are like some of the rest of us, because it was irksome or because you found no profit in it. It was a help. It did sweeten the morning hours, and—well, there is truth in the modern slogan: "Be sweet until 9 A. M. and the rest of the day will take care of itself."

Why, then, was the habit broken? Why do we hurry away in the morning to business with the Bible unopened and, if our conscience twinges, console ourselves by repeating:

Work shall be prayer, if all be wrought
As Thou wouldst have it done;

And prayer, by Thee inspired and taught,
Itself with work be one?

Let me see if I could tell you why it is. Perhaps you had difficulty in opening to appropriate readings. The chapters were long for your limited time, or they were not devotional in spirit. After you had read the Psalms through several times and most of the New Testament, it was hard to turn at random to just what you wanted. Possibly you followed for a time the daily readings suggested in the Sunday school lessons. But you found these often too brief to be of value, and frequently more historical than devotional. You skipped a morning when you had overslept, and another when a neighbor ran in just as you were through breakfast. Several lapses occurred, but each time you brought yourself conscientiously back to the family altar.

At last a wonderful thing happened. A lady boy came into your home straight from the Holy Land. Your home was never the same again. No longer could you say what you would do at a certain hour in the morning—or any other hour in day or night, for that matter. Every habit you had ever formed and many resolutions you had made—all were now trespassed upon. And perhaps other children have come, and other duties arisen, until now it is to sleep as late as you care in the morning, a hurried rising, a bolted breakfast, and away.

You see I am writing what has been rehearsed to me. "I would like to have morning devotions," said a friend to me the other day. "Is there no book of selected readings for each day of the year, with possibly a hymn and accompanying prayer?" He was a father of five lively children and I fancied what was in his mind. It is not easy to extemporize in prayer with patlers at your knee who do not always appreciate the value of silence. I was obliged to confess that I had never happened upon such a book, but mentally resolved to look up the matter. The result is that I have before me, and am using each morning in my own home, "The Church at Home," by Bishop John H. Vincent. It is not a new book, but is admirably adapted to its purpose. Each page contains an appropriate Scripture reading, hymn and prayer. Five minutes would be sufficient time to allow for a dignified and reverent service. Surely none of us but can find a way to set apart five minutes of each day to a practice of such value to all the members of our home. As Bishop Vincent says in his "Introduction," "Family prayer is an institution of priceless value where it is kept up conscientiously, seriously, regularly, and where it is indorsed by domestic administration and personal example. Where it is a part of a steady and genuine life, and not performed perfunctorily, it is full of power. The memory of it goes through life, hallowing every thought of home, reminding the wanderer of the days of innocence and devotion, and alluring him again to the Christ who was so long enshrined in the family circle."

Besides the contents of the book already mentioned, Bishop Vincent has included readings for nine special days and memory texts for every day in the year. The book is heartily recommended to those who have a desire to continue a custom sometimes beset with some difficulty, but which, if persistently pursued, brings manifold blessings.—N. Y. Advocate.

One of the great lessons of life is to learn not to do what one likes, but to like what one does.—Hugh Black.

THE CHRIST OF THE GOSPELS.

There is a fourfold picture, or a fourfold view, of Christ in the four Gospels, and each Gospel gives us a different aspect of the Great Manifestation. In Saint Matthew He is the Son of Abraham, He is Heir of the Kingdom, King of the Kingdom of Heaven. In this Gospel alone we read of One "born King of the Jews." "The Kingdom of Heaven" is preached, and the laws of the Kingdom are laid down in the Sermon on the Mount. This Gospel reveals to us the Kingdom, not as an earthly kingdom, nor as the Kingdom of God, but as the Kingdom of Heaven.

In Saint Mark He is the servant of God. He stands as the patient Servant and Sacrifice for others.

In Saint Luke He is the Son of Man. Here is man according to the mind of God—the pattern Man, perfect Manhood. As Man He is the Priest, "for every high priest is taken from among men." As Man He is Prophet, or Apostle, sent from God. As Prophet He is God's Messenger to Man, as High Priest He is man's Messenger to God.

In Saint John He is the Son of God. John omits all reference to the birth of Jesus as the Son of Man, and at once begins with these deep and strong words: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. All things were made by Him, and without him was not anything made that was made. In him was life, and the life was the light of men." Men beheld "His glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth."

Thus the four Gospels give us a fourfold view of Christ, and each emphasizes a different aspect of His life and of His work. In the Gospels we discover the claims of Jesus, His sinless life, His surprisingly simple sayings on profound subjects, His perfect system of moral ethics, His broad humanity, His vicarious death, and His resurrection and ascension. The death of Christ has a very special place assigned to it in the New Testament, and Professor James Denny asserts, and we fear with truth, that it has not the same place either in preaching or theology which it has in the New Testament, and yet the Cross is the supreme power over humanity.

But why the Christ of today? Is He not the unchangeable One? Is the Christ of today different from the Christ of yesterday? Yes and no. Things become greater to us as we know them better. Christ is the same, but knowledge has increased. He grows with the growth of our spiritual knowledge. We may have Christ and yet not know what we have in Him. The cry has been, "Back to Christ," and there has been and there is a "new feeling for Christ." To quote Principal A. M. Fairbairn, "He is today more studied and better known as He was and as He lived than at any period between now and the first of the Church." God may have other words for other worlds,

But for this world the Word of God is Christ.

—The Rev. T. Moore-Smith, in the New York Observer.

THE GRACE OF CHURCH GOING.

Church attendance may well be called one of the Christian graces. It is a mark of respect to God and His cause such as is not usually rendered in this age and land by those who did not highly regard him. It is a means of grace to those who observe it, so that those who are found regularly in their places in the house of God are almost sure to be the recipients of special spiritual blessings. It will be with them as it was with Eliezer, Abraham's steward, who had it to say that "I, being in the way, the Lord led me."

Church attendance is not all there is of Christian life and duty. There is no such thing as discharging our whole round of Christian obligation by simply appearing at the church service on the Sabbath. It is not claimed by any properly informed person that this is so. No physical or external performance is sufficient in quantity or quality to comprehend all that is involved in the full-orbed round of doing God's will and in all we do, living to God's glory. But it is a fact that they who neglect attendance upon public worship neither look upon themselves, nor do others look upon them, as living exemplary Christian lives.

The church service affords the opportunity for public and united worship. Those who worship the most sincerely and regularly in private are those who most thoroughly appreciate public worship and most grieve over being deprived of it. Those who are not in the habit of regular private devotion are greatly in need of the guidance and stimulus that comes in the church service. The forms and words of prayer in which they are led are for their instruction and assistance, and, if there were nothing more than this one element, it would be for the enrichment of the spiritual life of all to come and appear before God and be led in prayer by one who knows the form and spirit and words and meaning and power of prayer.

The church service, moreover, affords the opportunity for the preaching of the gospel of Jesus Christ. That community is a poverty-stricken community in which the word of God is not proclaimed. Coarse and rude and undisciplined and vicious it is sure to be or to become. Let men say what they will, gospel preaching is the supreme source of refinement and virtue to any people. The pulpit is the seat of power for the spreading abroad of the influences that bless and save a community. The preacher need wish no place of greater influence. If he preaches God's word, he is using the divine means for the saving of human souls. They who listen in reverence are sure to be enriched and transformed, if the preacher gives them the truth of God. They who attend church regularly are learning the best and highest things of earth and heaven. They who neglect wantonly are making themselves their own enemies and are standing in the way of the best things that can come to their families and to their fellowmen. Those who go to church regularly will prove to be in the long run, the leaders of their communities in all that means goodness of life.

Since habit is so large an element with us in the formation of character, we should be sure to form and maintain in ourselves and in our children the habit of steadfast, thoughtful and conscientious attendance upon the means of Grace as these are provided in the regular services of the church of Christ. Some worldly people say that they do not attend church because they were taken to church so regularly when they were young. This is probably as abject, mean and dishonest a thing as is ever said. It is not true. If they have broken away it is because they are worldly and sinful. Whoever is taken to church and started out right in life by Christian parents has much for which to thank God. If the habit is not formed early, it probably never will be, because the habit of neglecting God and his church has been formed. It is a terrible thing for parents to train their children in so deadly a habit as this. Let them rather say: "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."—Herald and Presbyterian.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. H. E. Rountree writes that Mrs. Rountree is improving and will be able to come home shortly.

—How about your church, will it be on the banner list? If not, what excuse shall you have?

—Those sending subscriptions to The Sun last week were Revs. S. B. Klapp, D. A. Keys, J. S. Carden. Thank you, brethren.

—We are prepared to supply any kind of Bible you wish. Look up our ad. in another column or write for catalogue and prices.

—Thanksgiving one month from today. Would it not be a good idea for you to begin to think of the many things to give thanks for?

—Who can send us a copy of The Sun for February 1st, 1911? By some means we failed to file this number. Do not all send at once.

—The forty-third annual convention of the American Woman Suffrage Association was held in Louisville, Kentucky, last week.

—Rev. Neal Rowland is conducting a series of revival meetings for pastor Rev. W. C. Wicker, Lit. D., at Palm Street, Greensboro, this week.

—What can be done to get more of our young men to take an active part in the church? They are strong enough; they are intelligent enough. But how shall we save this strength, this intellect?

—Enthusiasm and the personnel of the Deep Waterways Convention held in Richmond, Va., last week indicates a speedy improvement of the shipping facilities along the Atlantic Coast.

—We are in receipt of a neatly prepared Program of the forty-fifth annual session of the Ohio State Christian Association which is to be held with the church at Piqua, Ohio, October 24 to 26.

—Rev. L. I. Cox had good services last Sunday at Apple's Chapel and Monticello in winding up the year's business. Both of these churches will make a good showing at Conference, as will the other churches of his charge.

—China is experiencing a revolution of such proportion as to attract the attention of nations throughout the world. The United States has several war vessels in Chinese waters at Hankow to protect American interests.

—The Sun's editor who is attending Georgia and Alabama Conferences is expected Monday, October 30th, but will just stop long enough to see the mistakes of the office boy, then will leave for the Eastern North Carolina Conference.

—Rev. J. W. Wellons aided Rev. C. E. Newman, of Henderson, N. C., in evangelistic meeting at Liberty, Vance County, last week. A good meeting with fourteen members added to the church, is the report.

—The news of the death of Rev. A. P. Barbee at his home, Garner, N. C., October 18, will sadden the hearts of hundreds who have been helped to a better life by his earnest preaching.

—The Walnut Hills Christian Church, Dayton, Ohio, is to be dedicated Sunday, November 5. The dedication of two churches within a month of each other in the city of Dayton so long without a single Christian church, speaks of activity worth while among the brethren there.

—Are you acquainted with the Principles and Government of the Christian Church? If not, why not send to The Christian Sun office and get a copy, read and learn of the church yourself. Cloth binding, 50 cents; limp cloth, 35 cents; paper, 25 cents, postpaid.

—Every penny asked of the churches is needed. Your church may be in good condition every way, but study the condition of your neighbor and ask yourself if you can not help a little in building a church, starting a mission point of aid in some way to send the blessed gospel to those who are in need of it.

—We beg to call attention to the "Story of the Bible" as advertised in this issue. This is a neat and attractive book giving a full story of the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. It is illustrated with pictures throughout, which is interesting to the young reader. Send us your order today. It's the thing for a birthday present.

—The end of the first week of the McNamara famous murder case in Los Angeles, California ended without a single juror being chosen. Justice has a tedious and perilous road in the courts. There appears to be so much feeling in this case between capital and labor that the simple case of "guilty or innocent of murder," is almost lost sight of.

—Nearly the entire senior class and some from other classes, forty or more students in all, of the Colored Agricultural and Mechanical College of North Carolina, at Greensboro, were summarily expelled last Saturday for choosing to do Saturday work for individuals in the city rather than labor on the college farm as directed to do by the faculty.

—The First Christian Church, Dayton, Ohio, was dedicated Sunday, October 15. The building cost $18,000.00, more than $10,000.00 of which was raised on the day of dedication. Dr. W. H. Denison was the special preacher of the day and accomplished the Herculean task of raising so large a sum, and went at it with such a skill and momentum as to go beyond the required amount more than $300.00.

—The State Fair held at Raleigh last week was, perhaps, the greatest in ten years. The address of Governor Judson Harmon, of Ohio, the daily exhibits of aeronauts, the fine exhibits of machinery, especially agricultural, the great display of fine poultry, and the variety and excellence of exhibits of Floral Hall were among the best free attractions of the great fair.

—The death of Justice Harlan of the United States Supreme Court, October 14, removes an able, experienced, and conspicuous member from that exalted tribunal. Mr. Harlan had served on the Supreme Court bench for more than thirty years and was regarded generally as a judge of great wisdom and independence of opinion. There are many speculations as to who will be appointed by President Taft to fill the vacancy.

—We learn with deep regret of the death of Rev. A. P. Barbee, Garner, N. C., last Wednesday. We knew that Bro. Barbee had been in declining health for some time but there was hope of his recovery. Bro. Barbee was a useful and valiant servant of the Master and has left a record that speaks for good. We sympathize sincerely with his beloved wife. Our ranks will greatly miss the faithful labors of Bro. Barbee. More will be written later of the work he has done and the triumphant life he has lived.

—Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D., who recently went from the pastorate of the First Christian Church, Dayton, Ohio, to the pastorate of the Christian Church, Albany, N. Y., had a rather serious misfortune recently by falling down stairs just as he was about to start from his home to attend a meeting of the Mission Board at Dayton, Ohio, and incidentally to attend the dedication of the church of his recent pastorate. He was so painfully hurt that it will be, perhaps, weeks before he is able to resume his pastoral duties.

—Rev. McD. Howsare, pastor Christian Memorial Temple, Norfolk, Va., has been notified, so we learn through the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot of October 20, by the Mission Board of the American Christian Convention, that there are not funds in hand, as they anticipated, to send him as a missionary to Porto Rico, upon which work he meant to enter early in November. The first Christian church, of Eaton, Ohio, extended Brother Howsare a call some weeks ago, which he declined on account of the appointment to the Porto Rican Mission field. The Eaton church renewed the call Tuesday of last week, but whether or not Brother Howsare would accept was not known by the Virginian-Pilot correspondent.

—It is with deepest regret that we are called upon to chronicle the death of Rev. A. P. Barbee, which occurred at his home in Garner, N. C., last Wednesday morning, October 18th. Bro. Barbee had been in declining health for some time. He was a loyal pastor, a forceful preacher, and a kind husband. He was a man of high ambition and brought things to pass wherever he labored. He will be greatly missed throughout the whole brotherhood. We extend our sympathy and love to the bereaved ones. We hope to have a more complete account next week.

—Dr. Atkinson and President Harper left on an early train Monday morning of last week for Roanoke, Alabama, to attend the Alabama Christian Conference. Dr. Atkinson goes as a result of repeated requests from the brethren in Georgia and Alabama to attend their conferences. President Harper goes in the interest of Christian education in general and in the interest of the $50,000 special fund for Elon College. These two brethren will attend the Georgia and Alabama Conference this week and return in time to attend the four conferences in North Carolina and Virginia to be held during the month of November.

—Rev. Neal Rowland conducted a great revival at Berea, North Carolina and Virginia Conference, last week. There were forty or more professions. Seventeen had united with the church at the close of the services. This was one of Rev. A. P. Barbee's churches and Bro. Rowland was engaged to assist in the meeting. When the appointed time came Bro. Barbee was critically ill at his home at Garner, N. C., and died on Wednesday. Thus the death of the pastor in the midst of a revival at one of his churches caused peculiarly deep sorrow, and added opportunity for the work of the Spirit of conviction of sin.

—The following note is taken from the Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dayton, Ohio, for October 19:

"I read President Harper's address, the one delivered before the students at the opening of Elon College. It was surely most excellent. I scarcely took my eyes off the paper till I had finished it. If Elon really stands firm on the ground set forth by President Harper, the college is bound to be one of the greatest blessings to our Church, and I will ask nothing better than that our three girls and boy may some day graduate from Elon College.

—Mrs. ——. We believe that is the way hundreds of our fathers and mothers feel. If they can be assured that the College stands by the sentiments presented in President Harper's address, to which reference is made they will ask nothing better in the way of educational advantages than that they may have their children in Elon College. Let educators take the hint. Most parents desire to know not only that their children are being taught well in college branches, but they wish to know that the spiritual side of the life of their children is well cared for and well fed on true scriptural truth."

—Rev. H. E. Rountree, Waverly, Va., writing under date of October 13th, says, "Left the bedside of my sick wife yesterday. She is doing well and without any set-back she will be able to be brought home in two weeks."

NORFOLK LETTER.

Is that church letter of yours still in your pocket or is it in your trunk? It would be easy to tell of people who profess love for the church but who for one reason or another refuse to place their letter with the church which they attend. Perhaps you are one of those people. Several years ago you moved away from your church, but you still belong there as a member though you seldom, if ever, are able to attend. Now you enjoy the privileges of the church at your present home. How often have you considered that it is your duty to help promote the interests of the church where you are living now? You can help by placing your membership with it and so becoming an active member. Some pastors are partly to blame for the situation, though some of their members have moved so far away that they can no longer attend the "home church," yet too many ministers urge them, saying, "Please don't leave us. You were born and raised here, here you were married and here your membership is. Don't leave us yet. We need you. I want you to be a member here as long as I am pastor. You can attend the Christian church where you live now, but please keep your membership here." So they talk. A city pastor hears that nonsense till his heart is heavy. Do you know what the spirit of that sort of pleading is? In many cases it is pure selfishness. When members move from some other church home to your community, at once you desire them to join your church. Well, they ought to do it. They will be better off and be of more service to Jesus Christ if they do it, but the reasons are just as strong why members who move away from their "home church" to the city or elsewhere should affiliate with the church near which they live. It is a matter of grave concern to the cause of our Savior's kingdom when so many remain out of active membership when they might so easily help. Churches cannot prosper in the truest sense unless Christians who attend the services near their homes become active members. Where is your church letter? Some say to me, "O, I just hate to leave the old home church!" But you do not mean that as seriously as it sounds for you left the home church long ago. You live far from it. Seldom, because of distance, can you attend it. What then will you do with your church letter? It belongs in the Christian church which you are living near now. You can help the cause of our Savior by joining the Christian church near your present home. A Christian who fails to help when he can, injures the church and is responsible to Jesus Christ.

Rev. McD. Howsare, of the Memorial Christian Temple, exchanged pulpits with Rev. D. A. Keys, of the South Norfolk church last Sunday evening. Rev. H. H. Butler is assisting Bro. Keys in meetings. There were six conversions last week. Good attendance reported. Bro. Butler filled his own appointments Sunday, hence the exchange. Rev. M. L. Bryant reports the best audiences this fall thus far.

The Sunday school attendance at the Third Church reached high-water mark for a regular occasion, 118. The attendance at the special services conducted by Rev. W. P. Minton at The Third Church has been very good all week, but Sunday it was exceptionally large. In the evening some were turned away. There have been two conversions and five additions to the church. We were all glad to have Capt. C. M. Crusier present at the Sunday school session. He is much better.

SOME PORTO RICAN CHARACTERISTICS—PHYSICAL.

The people of Porto Rico are brown skinned with the exception of the pure whites and pure blacks. They are slender and of short stature, graceful in motion, and animated in conversation. The hair is black, and kinky where negro blood predominates. The natives have poor teeth. They possess little muscular strength which is due to lack of nourishing food.

In the country it is said that at least 95 per cent suffer with Uncinariasis. This weakens many of them incapacitating them from work. Physical debility arising from immorality are widespread.

Tobacco and rum are used extensively. Both boys and girls begin the use at an early age. The growth of boys is impeded by use of same. Sometimes it is said rum and tobacco are used to appease the pangs of hunger. Howsare.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER.

I am of the opinion that a magnetic personality and a specific preparation are the salient points of the Sunday-school teacher's equipment. In fact, personality is a momentous consideration in any business where two or more persons are concerned. To the merchant, proper personality is as essential as the capital invested. Many a merchant has failed simply because his personality did not suit his business. Doctors, lawyers, preachers and men in all of the professions have failed utterly. Why? The personality of the man did not meet the requirements of the job. All of you who read this have known the unsuccessful teacher: I like him, you like him, we say that he is a good man. We are forced by the moral law to love a saintly spirit wherever we meet it; but there is no law either moral or statutory that will keep one from getting bored during the hour of a monotonous service. A thousand churches, Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies have dwindled away, from live useful factors in the world, to mere breathing avoirdupois, while in want of some inspiring personality. Then if personality makes or breaks business men, and leaders in church and Sabbath school, surely also it must have its influence upon the Sunday school teacher.

Basing our conclusions upon what we have just said, we are bound to conclude that, unless an individual is suited by temperament for the teacher's work, no amount of preparation will avail. This being the case it is useless to prepare for something which our personality would hinder and abuse. Every one would like to be a good Sunday school teacher who can appreciate that high office, but all of us can't, so we that have not the personality to teach, must not impose ourselves upon others.

What I shall say hereafter will be to the man that can.

Four Short Addresses.

1. At one time John wished Christ to call down fire from heaven to consume a Samaritan village that had rejected Him, but came to understand that such fire comes from the bottomless pit, instead of heaven. On another occasion he sought a place of honor next to Christ in His kingdom. This honor was refused to ambition, but accorded to love.

2. John sat next to Jesus at the last supper, his head resting against the Savior's bosom. This was suggestive of the nearness to Christ of the remainder of his life. John was one of the three whom Jesus honored by allowing them to be present when He raised Jairus' daughter, the transfiguration, and the struggle in Gethsemane. And we are told that during two of these scenes he was half the time asleep.

3. John ran away with all the other apostles when Jesus was arrested, man of love and loyalty that he was. Later this apostle followed Jesus to the high priest's office, and to the cross. He received Christ's forgiveness when Jesus placed His mother in John's care. "It is said that John lived to be a hundred years old, bishop of Ephesus, and an exile on Patmos for the faith. When he was too weak to preach, it is said he was borne to the church and uttered these favorite words, "Little children, love one another."

4. Our topic, "Life Lessons for Me from the Life of John," affords us a good opportunity to study a character that is almost ideal. When we consider the apostles of Jesus, we find some personal characteristics peculiar to each one. For instance, Simon Peter was impulsive—ready to say too much and always ready to ask forgiveness. John, the beloved disciple as he is called, was just the opposite. His disposition was more that of a woman than of a man. There never was anything harsh in the utterances that he dropped. It is said that in all his writings he never used the word "hell." He outlived all the other apostles of the Lord. For years he was the leading light in the church at Ephesus. It is said that he was banished from the church at Ephesus to the Isle of Patmos.

In John's Life.

John was probably the youngest of the apostles, and he showed the impetuosity of youth as well as youth's fine enthusiasm.

An outdoor calling is no small aid to the inner life. John made the better fisher of men because he was a fisher of fish.

John was a follower of John the Baptist before he was a follower of Jesus. He took the light he had, and so was given more light.

James and John were called by Jesus "Boanerges," that is, "Sons of thunder." They were vigorous, headstrong, imperious characters. This quality in James may have led to his being the first martyr. In John it was afterwards tamed into the most loyal and lowly service of Christ.

Luke tells us that John rebuked one who was found casting out demon's in Christ's name, yet was not one of the disciples. John came to have a more catholic spirit, and to see that all who were not against Christ were for Him.

WITH THE VANGUARD.

Brother Waite Lambert writes us that a teacher's training class has been organized at Shiloh Church, near Moditt, N. C. We trust that this class will find pleasure and profit indeed in a thorough study of the work.

How about that organized class in your Sabbath school, and what is equally if not more important, how about the teacher training class? If your Sunday-school teachers do not study the two books of our church on teacher training they will be so much inefficient in preparation for their work. Books, in any quantities, can be obtained from our publishing house. Address Dr. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C.

The Sunday school of the First Christian Church, Greensboro, has announced Bible day for the second Sunday in November. The school will work for 200 attendance at the school on that day and everybody that is on time will be presented with a copy of the Psalms or Gospels. Your Sunday school will be made a much more life-like institution if you will observe occasions of this kind and make special rally days for attendance.

NOTICE.

All members of the Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern N. C. Conference will please send that annual membership fee of $5.00 to W. B. Mann, Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C., or to the Annual Conference at Catawba Springs; also all churches, S. Schools, Organized Classes, C. E. Societies are asked to take a membership through delegate to Conference.

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ARE LOOKING BACK MORE THAN FOUR CENTURIES.

By Edwin Whittier Caswell.

The first shall be last. Columbus, the first to lift the curtain hiding a hemisphere, is the last to be honored with a special day of commemoration and celebration. It is a healthful sign that Americans do not forget the noble men who were instrumental in making our nation a possibility and a power among the peoples of the earth. Monuments, memorial days and histories bring the present in touch with the past, uniting all men in one common brotherhood, adding to the wealth of the present and the accumulated learning, discoveries and attainments of all ages.

All men are inspired today by the influence of such pioneers in thought and invention as Homer and Shakespeare in poetry; Phidas and Raphael in art; Luther and Thomas and Kempis in morals; Newton and Kepler in science, and Columbus and Hudson in discovery. Like the pyramids, with their forty generations gazing down, inspiring Napoleon's army, the galleries of the past are filled with watchers, who are one with us in the great family of God, in our onward march through time to the goal of the eternities. Four hundred and nineteen years ago Columbus achieved a triumph that made him immortal among men. If he had realized that, instead of a few little islands, he had revealed to mankind a vast continent, ten thousand miles long and three thousand miles wide, which would become the home of the oppressed of all nations, the dwelling place of all races, the foundation of a mighty republic, which would inspire the creation of other republics among the nations of the earth, and become a mighty leader in missionary, educational and civilizing influences among all the peoples of the earth, such a prophetic, moving picture view of our centuries of progress would have ended Columbus' career on the spot, with the exclamation from his lips, "Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation!"

As it was, Columbus was a God-guided man. The inward voice was ever speaking to him, whispering with an unquenchable impulse, "Westward. Asia—Asia, Westward." China and India had been reached by voyaging eastward, but, with Columbus, "Westward the star of empire and of the cross" led his ambitious soul.

Almighty God, who had held back for ages from discovery the greatest continent of earth, knew that the fullness of time had come for the unveiling of the new world. Printing had been invented, making it possible for every man in the world to have a Bible. The new learning had arisen and permeated Europe. Luther and the Reformation was about to burst upon the world. The Huguenot, the Hollander, the Scot and the puritan, who had been in training among the purifying fires of persecution, were getting ready to become Pilgrims to a new country, where they could worship God in freedom and illuminate darkened lands with the true gospel light.

Who would doubt that God chose Columbus as surely as he did Moses and the prophets for great special work? Columbus had been trained on the seas as Moses was in the desert. He possessed, like Moses, an indomitable will, combined with the meekness of gentle patience, making him a divinely prepared man for his mission.

For eighteen weary years Columbus besieged the courts of Europe to aid him in his apparently wild enterprise. His great hope was in Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain. He appealed to them to aid him in his effort to recover the land where the Savior had lived and died, by promising the use of the vast riches which he hoped to acquire in his discovery. After a very long time, Queen Isabella provided the ships and the crew for the great voyage, so that she stands next to Columbus in the honor and the glory of the great discovery of America.

Columbus sailed on Friday, August 3, 1492, at 8 A. M., with one hundred and twenty under his command. He occupied three ships, the Santa Maria, the Pinta, and the Nina. Out into the Atlantic darkness he went, without maps or charts of any value, without a compass of an accuracy, in little, unseaworthy ships. What courage and heroism must have impelled him!

Those who still believed that the earth was flat, who knew nothing of the law of gravitation, prophesied that the vessels would soon fall over the edge, or the jumping-off place, into space, and be lost. Facing the fears and doubts of prophets of evil, and the perils of the unknown deep, westward voyaged Columbus for three long months. At last, at 2 o'clock in the morning of October 12, 1492, a light was seen flashing in the darkness. "What is it?" all exclaimed. "It can not be a star, for it waves like a torch upon a shore." Hark, the guns from the Pinta sound forth! They too have seen the first light of the new world. A star led the wise men to Jesus; a light led these other wise men to the land where Christ was to win his mightiest victories. This was a supreme moment in the history of the world, as well as in the life of a Spanish discoverer. Their joy was unbounded, and the news of their triumph soon spread throughout Europe. Other navigators followed in the wake of Columbus. Amerigo Vespucci, 1497; the Huguenots came in 1556, and the Puritan Pilgrims in 1620.

How often, after a wonderful climax of victory, a reaction sets in, which tests the soul of the victor more than all his previous struggles. Columbus, standing on the pinnacle of earthly glory, soon began to descend into the valley of humiliation, where he found awaiting him dungeons and chains, sufferings and sorrows, poverty and misery. Such has been the common lot of the great geniuses who have bequeathed the most remarkable inventions and discoveries to their fellows. Columbus was not only disgraced and imprisoned, but his name was not even given to the new world—another stepped in and took the prize. Generations following are more just with their heroes than are the living present. Enemies are always plentiful until a man departs from the earthly scene of action. Flowers are more often used for burial scenes than to beautify and delight the presence of the living. How blessed to know that the All-Father estimates each life at its real value, giving the true hero the proper niche in the great temple of the future.

In the Columbus celebration, the United States of America are looking back more than four centuries, contemplating the wonderful changes since the time of Columbus. If it were possible to enumerate all the advancements made in the progress of science, invention and discovery, all the developments in civic, national and political life, all the improvements in social, economic, moral and religious realms, then there would be no room for the spirit of pessimism on this continent, for all would see that today is grander than yesterday, and that tomorrow will realize the full victory for truth and righteousness in God's world. May we not all join in the noble sentiment expressed by the poet:

"Sail on, O ship of state!

Sail on, O Union, strong and great!

Humanity, with all its hopes and fears.

With all its hopes of future years,

Is hanging breathless on thy fate!

"We know what masters laid thy kneel.

What workmen wrought thy ribs of steel.

Who made each mast and sail and rope,

What anvils rang, what hammers beat.

In what a fog and what a heat

Were shaped the anchors of thy hope!

"In spite of rock and tempest roar,

In spite of false lights on the shore,

Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!

Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,

Our faith triumphant over fears,

Are all with thee—are all with thee!"

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES.

In last week's Sun, our editor writes on a subject that I believe will find a responsive chord in the hearts of our women—that of the organizing of Woman's Missionary Societies in our Southern Convention. Too long has the matter been neglected and let us hope that the hour has come when practical, aggressive steps will be taken in the matter. When we look around us and see what is being accomplished through the organized efforts of women of other denominations and how they are helping His kingdom come, we feel ashamed that we are content to sit in idleness and pained that we are not doing our part in the work. I do not believe it is because our women are lacking in energy or in love to the cause, but am more inclined to believe it is because nothing has been done toward organizing and initiating them in the work. We cannot afford to lag behind longer. We need to study mission subjects and mission fields; we need to give systematically to the work; we need to train our children in the work. We are not much interested in things that we do not put something into—whether it be money, time, or thought. Now why cannot that Board mentioned by our editor, make a report to our Conference—which soon begins and let our women get to work in earnest in this matter?.

THE UNNECESSARY OATH.

We think it is about time to say something in advice and warning against the growing use of profanity by ambitious writers of fiction. From editors and publishers everywhere we are hearing the same story. We like to think that in actual life the use of strong language is on the wane, that the man addicted to it is regarded not only as a violator of good taste, but as a bore. Yet in the vast amount of fiction that is proffered to magazines and publishing houses, he seems to be at his apogee. Apparently there a great many persons of literary aspirations who think that to write a Rex Beach style of story all that is necessary is to be sufficiently lavish with highly-colored oaths. Now, against this sort of thing we have every right to protest on the grounds of good manners and decency. We shall, however, confine ourselves to the purely literary aspect of the case. The profuse use of profanity is not merely inartistic; it stamps unmistakably the beginner and the ineffectual workman.—The Bookman.

THE STORY OF THE BIBLE,
From Genesis to Revelation. Told in Simple Language Adapted to all Ages, But Especially for the Young.

By Charles Foster..

704 Pages; 300 Illustrations, 6½ x 9 in.

(MORE THAN 700,000 SOLD.)

This book has been proved by the un-failing test of time and by its very general use, not only in homes, but in schools and institutions of learning, to be the best simple version of the Holy Scriptures published. It opens the Bible to the young, and to the average reader of mature years, in so charming and interesting a form that it changes what many have formerly looked upon as a task or duty into a pleasure. So fully and clearly does this book retell the Bible story that it is deservedly popular, and its influence is very great. With nothing sectarian, it is approved by various denominations. Adhering closely to the Scriptures, it retains much of their power, dignity, and distinction of style, with the pure and simple wording of the English Bible.

It is, of course, a truth admitted by most persons that of all the books in the world the one of first importance and greatest influence is the Bible, yet it is perhaps equally true that few read it through with the same ease and interest as other books. Undoubtedly, parts of the Bible are hard to understand; the order of events is sometimes confusing, and the versified form unfamiliar to the eye. Many persons, in fact, look upon the Bible as dry and hard to read; although its power, moving eloquence, and divine teaching are more inspiring than any records that have come down to us through the ages.

The "Story of the Bible" is a wonderfully complete, easy reading version in which style and flow of narration of the Bible itself is closely followed, freed from all that is obscure and all that might be misunderstood.

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago at the order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution their love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, liberal, generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

Sarah Alma Schoby died October 9th, 1911, aged 20 years, 10 months, 15 days. She was the daughter of K. B. Way, Sanford, N. C., and the wife of Arthur Schoby. She was married June 28th, 1908. Her only child, Carl Lynn, died August 5, 1911. When quite young sister Schoby gave her heart to God and united with the Christian church and lived as a true follower of her Lord until death. Her last illness continued for fifteen weeks. This she bore patiently, and with great calmness she passed sweetly and hopefully to her reward. Her parents, husband, and friends gave her the best attention possible, but nothing could stay the messenger of death. The funeral services were conducted by her pastor at her home in Sanford, N. C., and her body was placed in the cemetery of Buffalo Presbyterian church near Sanford.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We are grateful for so nice a report this week. Our Sunday Schools are helping greatly and many more should join in this splendid training in Church charity. The friends one by one open their hearts and purses and help us towards meeting the deep well and sewerage bills. Will you give us a prayer for our pure water and see if a $5.00 gift will not come in a few days. We are filling the big silo—and here we will ask a question—why is a silo like a hungry boy?

Wake up, children, and give us your letters?

Let a large number of letter come in for next week.

Yours for service,
 Uncle Jim.

Holland, Va., Oct. 16, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed find $4.25 for the orphans. from our S. S. Class. We are a class of boys and girls from 10 to 14 years old, and Mrs. Nellie M. Langston is our teacher. Some of our class are orphans, but we have some one to care for us. With love and kind wishes for the dear orphans.

Junior S. S. Class of Holland Church.

Glad to get this nice letter from these girls and boys and trust other classes will follow suit and send us the help they can.

Henderson, N. C., Oct. 9, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

School has opened, and we are busy trying to learn all our lessons well. I (Wallace) got on the honor roll the very first month.

We have been vaccinated. My (Archie's) arm was real sore, but Wallace has got to be vaccinated again as his did not take.

There are four cases of diphtheria next door to us. I hope we will not catch it. Mamma is going to put some asafoetida around our necks.

The weather is getting cool now. I guess you will "get busy" buying clothes and shoes for your children.

Enclosed find 40 cents, our dues for Sept. and October.

We are, your loving nephews,
 Archie, and Wallace Newman.

Hope you will escape all the trouble, boys, and both of you lead the honor roll at school the second month. the others what these meetings are doing Sanford, N. C., October 14, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write my letter and send my dime for October.

Uncle Jim, I think my last three letters were so sad. You know I told you of little Carlynn's death in August, than in September I told you of sister's husband, now I have to tell you of sister Alma's death. Carlynn's mother has been sick since he died, and now she has gone to be with him in heaven. She was sick 87 days. She told us many times that she was going to die and go home. She said she saw Jesus with her crown ready for her and she was happy so many times on her death bed, and when she was dying she looked up and smiled so sweet. She sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "How Firm a Foundation." She was a true member to the Christian Church, and was always there when she could go. Dr. Long preached her funeral Sunday at our home. Lots of our neighbors and friends were here to pay the last tribute of respect to her. Uncle Jim, it was so sad to part with her, but we know she will never have to be sick anymore. She never groaned nor made complaint in all that long time. We know she is singing with the angels around the gate and we can say "Thy will be done" and know he never makes any mistake.

Remember us in your prayers.

Lovingly,
 Annie Pearl Way.

You and your loved ones have our prayers, Annie, for in the past months you have been sorely bereaved. May God bless and help you all.

THE NATIONAL ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

We are glad to announce to the prohibition workers throughout the state that the battle is now on for national legislation to stop the interstate liquor traffic. A call for a national conference to consider the growing evils of the interstate liquor traffic, signed by 188 men of prominence in church, state and commerce, is being sent broadcast over this nation. This conference is to held at Washington, D. C., December 12-13-14, and will be composed of governors, ex-governors, attorney generals, ex-attorney generals, members of congress and of the various legislatues, and other officials in national, state, and municipal governments, together with business men, citizens, pastors of churches and others.

You have already doubtless read in some of the church or state papers this "call" with the 188 names signed there-to. We note that the following North Carolinians are in the list: Hon. W. W. Kitchen, governor; Hon. W. C. Newland, lieutenant-governor; Hon. R. B. Glenn, former Governor; Judge Walter Clark, chief justice supreme court; Hon. T. W. Bickett, attorney general; Hon. J. Y. Joyner, superintendent of public instruction; Mr. C. C. Covington, wholesale merchant and prominent business man of Wilmington; Dr. W. P. Few, president of Trinity College; Dr. Francis P. Venable, president of the University of North Carolina; Dr. Henry Lewis Smith, president of Davidson College and Dr. L. L. Hobbs, president of Guilford College. An examination of these names will show you that men of like prominence of other states have also signed this "call."

We have no doubt that this conference at Washington will be one of the greatest temperance gatherings ever held in this nation, and surely the national legislators must sit up and take notice when bishops, governors, senators, congressmen, attorney generals, supreme court judges and prominent men of every stage and station shall raise their voices against the present unjust interstate liquor traffic. We must believe that some solution, which will do justice to the various commonwealths of this nation that are fighting the liquor traffic, will be found, and that some law will be enacted that will allow the various state governments to exercise their police powers on all liquor within the bounds of the state, whether brought here under interstate commerce laws or not.

Now, what is your part in bringing about this legislation. No doubt you want to do it, and therefore we suggest a few things that you can do: first, write to your congressman and senator or see them before they go to congress next winter and talk to them about this matter, asking them to get active for this legislation; second, talk to friends about this matter and ask them to write to their congressmen and senators; third, write something to some newspaper about the injustice of this law; fourth, if a pastor, preach along this line; if a layman, ask your pastor to preach about it; fifth, write to the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League, giving them your views on this matter and enclose a check to help them fight for this cause; sixth, make up your mind at once to attend this conference if possible at Washington, and also suggest to your church that they pay the expense of a delegate there. Hundreds of pastors would like to go, who are not able to pay their way. What a fine Christmas present it would be for the church to present their pastors with a ticket to make this trip.

We cannot insist too strongly on a large delegation to this conference. If thousands will come together from the four corners of this nation in response to this call (and we believe they will) and generate such enthusiasm and convictions, as great gatherings always do, we believe congress will be inclined to give us the desired legislation. But if a hundred or two shall meet to discuss the matter, almost unobserved in our capitol city, the tendency will be to retard this legislation. Therefore, we beg you, at the point of sacrifice of time and money, to attend this gathering. You need not be sent as a delegate from any church or other organization, as the only credential you need is that you want to see this unjust interstate liquor traffic stopped. All the rights and privileges of this conference will be yours as a self-constituted delegate as much so as if you were a delegate appointed by the Executive Committee of the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League.

For further information concerning this national conference, write to the North Carolina Anti-Saloon League, Wilson, N. C.—R. L. Davis, Supt., N. C. Anti-Saloon League.

GOD'S IMPARTIAL LOVE.

There are some professing Christians who appear to think that God loves some Christians a great deal more than He does other Christians. If they themselves make an extreme profession of love for God, they imagine that He loves them much more than He does those who seem to have less love for Him. They deceive themselves. God has no special favorites. While it is true that He loves Christians with a pleasure which He does not have for unconverted ones, He is not partial in His love for Christians. But Satan tempts many a Christian to think that, in times of adversity, God does not love him so much as He does those who are mostly free from affliction and bereavement. The Christian, who has just lost a dear child by death, is tempted to believe that God does not love him or her much, else why did He allow the child to die? But such a temptation should not be entertained by any Christian, for it is an unjust accusation of God. He continues to love the believer, even in the greatest afflictions. His love for us is unchangeable. A leading preacher, in a sermon to his people, says: "We wonder why our children die, and other children live—why other people prosper and we do not; and the jealousy of the human heart leads us to believe that God does not hear, does not see, does not love. We have, it stated that God does not care for us, that He giveth not to one any more than to another. He treats every person equitably; gives to us that which is best for us, and His love is just as deep and large for every one of you obscure ones as though on this earth there were no other individual living." That preacher's text was the words of Christ to His disciples: "Even the very hairs of your head are numbered." Those words teach God's particular care for all of His children. They indicated His impartial love for every one who has put his heart in fellowship with Him. Do not imagine that God loves you any less because of your losses and sorrows; nay, He feels especially tender toward you while your own heart is made deeply tender by bereavement. Be reasonable! Consider the fact that all people must die some time—the young as well as the old. If you had no death in your family, you would not weep with others.

C. H. Wetherbe.

HIGH EXPERIENCES.

There are moments when the grace of God stirs sensibly in the human heart; when the soul seems to rise upon the eagle wings of hope and prayer into the heaven of heavens; when caught up, as it were, into God's very presence, * * * we seem to know Him and be known of Him; and if it were possible for any man at such a moment to see into our souls, he would know all that is greatest and most immortal in our beings. * * * That such solitary musing—such penetrating, even in this life, "behind the veil," such sudden kindlings of celestial lightning which seem to have fused all that is basest and meanest within us in an instant and forever—that these supreme crises are among the recorded experiences of the Christian life, rests upon indisputable testimony of evidence and of fact.—Canon Farrar.

Every soul must be alone and ought to be. One only degrades his friendships when he measures them by the number of liberties he takes, the number of privacies he rides over roughshod. In all friendship, one is to ask, not demand; the door can be opened from within, it must not be forced from without. The secrets of friendship—like those of the Lord—are always with those who fear. Those reverent of personality shall alone see either God or the best in man.—Henry Churchill King.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Norfolk Letter.

The special services at the Third Christian Church came to an end Sunday evening. Truly there have been "showers of blessing." Five have been converted, and fifteen additions to the membership represent the outward results. Many hearts have been made happy, the church greatly blessed, and the work in Park Place has prospered. Rev. W. P. Minton, of Goshen, Ind., returned home this morning. He has proven himself an efficient leader in evangelistic work. He knows how to induce other people to sing with the whole heart. Many have expressed themselves as having been much benefited by his sermons. I speak for the whole congregation when I say that we were very fortunate in having Mrs. Minton. He is a lovable, intelligent, and consecrated preacher. As the result at the Third Christian Church advances, my own feeling of responsibility increases. Never have I felt it as now. May the Lord help us to work wisely, and altogether to His glory.

The church began four years ago with a membership of seventy-five, it is now one hundred and six. Our great desire is that every member may grow in grace and personal power.

Because of a lack of sufficient funds, the Mission Board finds itself unable to send Rev. McD. Howsare to Porto Rico, as they had contemplated. Bro. Howsare will likely be recalled to the pastorate of the Memorial Christian Temple. He has received a telegram from the church at Eaton, Ohio, asking him to accept the pastorate there, beginning November 1. As yet he has made no decision.

A successful two week's revival meeting came to a close yesterday evening at the South Norfolk Christian Church. Rev. H. H. Butler assisted the pastor. His many friends were glad to have him with them. There were ten professions of faith and nine united with the church. The church has been blessed and quickened.

One member was received at the Memorial Christian Temple yesterday. All the pastors report growing congregations and increasing Sunday school attendance.

Many are looking forward to the coming Conference at Suffolk. Shall we not pray that it may be a most profitable gathering?

Raleigh.

A few weeks ago my Raleigh congregation granted me and my family a leave of absence to visit New York City, Washington and Winchester, Va. We spent most a week in the big city seeing. I cannot describe the sights we saw. One has to go and see for himself. We thoroughly enjoyed every hour of the time and could have spent many more to our satisfaction and delight, but we had to hasten on to fill an engagement with Rev. W. T. Walters, of Winchester, Va. Our date with him was for a week's preaching at Timber Ridge, West Va. This is one of our century churches. It lies in the path of the White Pilgrim. Perhaps he had something to do with its organization. The church is well built with red brick. It has a lovely interior, splendid auditorium and gallery. The grounds are perfectly lovely, all enclosed by costly iron fence. Several hundred saints are buried in the cemetery; among them two Christian ministers, Rev. Christia Siam, and Rev. Simeon Ward. Many of our best ministers have preached or served as pastors of the Timber Ridge church. A few of those remembered by the congregation: B. A. Cooper, Ben Seiner, A. R. and W. C. Garlands, I. N. Walters, H. Y. Rush, Jno. H. Joseph and Dennis Barney, J. B. Roberson, Harmon Hiram, J. P. Barrett, Peter McCullough and others whose names I have forgotten as they were given me by Deacon Alfred Anderson in whose home I was entertained for a part of one day. Many of the above named ministers have been entertained in said home. It is on the Cocopan river right at the foot of the Cocopan mountain.

The pastor, Rev. W. T. Walters, had been preaching for one week previous to my arrival. I found it very easy to follow him as he had prepared the minds of the congregation for the Word. I preached to the good people as earnestly as I knew how for a week. My sermons were received with a marked degree of appreciation. The church was greatly revived. Many precious souls were saved and blessed. Five united with the church. The people were appreciative and gave us a goodly purse to help us on our way. Our home was with the congenial family of W. A. McCurdy, who gave us every attention possible.

Winchester Church.

On our trip it was our happy privilege to visit our new church in Winchester, Va. We were more than delighted to see the handsome new building and to realize at close range what has been accomplished there in so short a time. The lot is an elegant one 66 x 126 feet on one of the best corners in the town. It is very nearly in the center of population, only three blocks from the new post office, city library, and municipal building, just opposite the historical headquarters of Gen.

George Washington. Our church building is one of the best in the town. Dimensions, 64 x 76 feet. It has a Sunday school room 30 x 52 and a handsome gallery. All the rooms can be thrown into one auditorium, making room for several hundred. The church is furnished with lovely quartered oak pews, circular, on an elevated floor with other handsome furniture and fixtures to match. The cost to date is about $12,000.00. It has the appearance of a $20,000.00 building. It is a mission worth while and should receive the support of every loyal member of the Christian Church.

It was our good fortune to meet a few members of the congregation, a more lovely people we have not met anywhere. There are eighty-nine members in the Sunday school, eighteen in Ladies' Aid Society, twenty in the Young People's Society. They are all deeply interested in the church work and looking forward with much joy to the day of dedication. Let me emphasize that this is a worthy little band and that they need our prayers and help.

Only a few men have accomplished so much in so short time as our friend, W. T. Walters. Hard work and liberal personal sacrifice has brought much to pass in Winchester. The Conference, the Mission Boards, and individuals should not forget that the servant is worthy of his hire. Brother Walters needs, and should have, a larger salary. He and his good wife have wrought much for us in Winchester and other places and should be rewarded for their faithful services.

Damascus.

I filled the appointment at this church last Saturday and Sunday for Bro. A. P. Barbee. He was too sick to be there. I baptized five for him Sunday morning. Of course the extreme illness of their pastor caused a gloom among the congregation. Otherwise, the services were pleasant. This is a working church and an excellent community.

Chapel Hill.

The building committee met at Bro. T. W. Strowds' Friday night, 13th, and went over the situation, which was quite encouraging. Arrangements were made to commence putting the sand on the lot in a few weeks. We met at Brown Shoals again on Sunday, 15th, at four, P. M. in a business meeting of the church. Delegates were appointed to Conference. A pastor called for another year, and two new members were received into the fellowship of the church. We think they will be valuable accessions.

Brethren and sisters, pray earnestly for the work at Chapel Hill.

W. G. Clements.

Randleman.

We began our revival with the church at Randleman on Saturday night before the second Sunday in October this being the second one for this church this year.

Previous to the meeting prayer service had been held in the homes and also at the church in behalf of the unsaved.

Indeed the meeting was a success in every respect. Congregations were large Lord continued to send men and women to the service who were anxious for their hungry souls to be fed.

The church was in working condition and did faithful work, both in the altar and in a personal way. And God well rewarded them for their labors.

Bro. Smith, of High Point, came down and spent a few days with us and did some faithful work in pulpit and altar, being at his best in his sermons.

This writer (their pastor) was compelled to leave on Monday to take up the work at Elon and left the service in progress.

When I left there had been thirty conversions and reconsecrations. A number of these were fathers and mothers whose silver locks say they have not long to labor in the service of God. A goodly number of these have given their names for membership into the church others will go to different churches of the town.

My next appointment finishes my year's work with these good people, but only to start on the new. The church having given me a unanimous call for next year.

The Lord has abundantly blessed our work here this year, having had fifty-five professions here during the year.

We are looking forward to a better year than has been this one. To God be all the honor and praise for the work done.

Bethel.

I began my special meeting at Bethel, Wake County, on the fifth Sunday in July, and closed on Thursday. The meeting resulted in one conversion and one addition to the church.

Christian Chapel.

My next meeting was held at Christian Chapel. The Lord gave us a good meeting. There were 20 or 25 conversions. Three joined the church. The church was greatly revived.

Pleasant Ridge.

We began our meeting at Pleasant Ridge on the third Sunday in August. Here we had a good meeting. Some 25 or 30 gave their hearts to God. Three joined the church.

New Hill.

We began our meeting here on the 1st Sunday in September. The meeting resulted in one addition to the church.

Hank's Chapel.

We began our meeting on the fourth Sunday in September and closed on Thursday. It was a good meeting. There were about twenty-five conversions. Five joined the church with more to join at my next appointment.

To the Lord give we all the praise.

—Did one man ever shoot another down in North Carolina except for self-defense? We have often wondered if the fellow who got killed would not also have claimed self-defense if perchance he had killed the other fellow, and had not been killed himself. Years ago antagonists had duels and confessed it. Now men have duels and the one who survives denies it.

Susan A. Stuart was born September 4, 1832, and died September 26, 1911. Age, 79 years, and 22 days.

She was married to Mrs. John Stuart, November 7, 1850, and was the mother of nine children, six of whom preceded her to the grave, leaving three to mourn their great loss. She joined the church when she was about twenty years old, and lived a consistent Christian until her death. She often said, in her last days, "I want to go home and be at rest." She was willing and waiting to be translated to her home above.

INTO THE FOREVER.

What may we take unto the vast forever?
That marble door
Admits no fruit of all our long endeavor.
No fawn-wreathed crown we wore,
No garnered lore.
What can we bear beyond the unknown portal?
No gold, no gains
Of all our toiling; in the life immortal
No hoarded wealth remains,
Nor guilt, nor stains.
Naked from out the far abyss behind us
We entered here;
No word came with our coming to remind us
What wondrous world was near,
No hope, no fear.
Into the silent, starless night before us,
Naked we glide,
No hand has mapped the constellations o'er us,
No comrade at our side,
No chart, no guide.
Yet fearless toward that midnight black and hollow,
Our footsteps fare;
The beckoning of a Father's hand we follow—
His love alone is there;
No curse, no care. —E. R. Sill.

THE LORD CARES.

(The Lord preserveth all them that love him. Psalms 145:20. Golden text for Sunday, November 5.)

Sometimes even those who love and serve the Lord get so gloomy and despondent that they doubt if any one cares for them. The Lord cares. He always cares. He never forsakes His people, or really becomes indifferent to any one who loves and trusts Him.

Queen Esther was in a precarious position. She feared the king, and with cause. But she loved her God. Mordecai must needs spur her on to action, not because she must needs match her fear of a pagan king against her love and faith in God for a particular, and a very desperate end. Queen Esther knew very well she was taking her life into her own hands to go, unbidden into the king's presence. It was a desperate undertaking. Did her God want her to do this thing? Would her God take care of her in this particular instance? Was it God's will that she should take her life into her hands and risk all in one single issue?

There were questions that Queen Esther had to ponder, and having pondered them she acted accordingly.

Furthermore, Queen Esther, even after a season of prayer and fasting, did not act hastily and recklessly. She resorted to all the tact, skill and ability that her wits could devise. She combined wisdom with devotion. She united tact with thorough consecration. She trusted, but she left nothing undone on her own account. She asked God to help her, but she did all within her reach and range to help herself and the cause she had espoused.

I suggest to those who may chance to read these lines to get their Bibles now and read the whole book of Esther. It is more illuminating than logic, more thrilling than romance, more fascinating than fiction. It is one of the very smallest books of all the Old Testament. It points a great moral and lays bare the loving loyalty and sincere sympathy and devotion of a true and a good woman's heart. Esther was not only a queen in name and by title, but in truth and by character. In exalted position, she used her power not to crush, but to save and to lift up her people.

The Lord preserveth all them that love Him. This applies not only to queens, and the people of the long, long ago. It applies to all sorts and conditions of men and women, even to as many as will love and trust Him today.

We may forsake God. We may withdraw from Him. We may wander far away. We may grow cold, indifferent, unconcerned about Him. But God does not withdraw from us. He is not indifferent to us. He is ever and always concerned in us. God cares. He wants us ever and always to share His benefits and enjoy His protection and His blessings. We may approach Him ever and always in prayer, and He will not turn a deaf ear to our plea. God still hears and answers prayer, and protects all who love and serve Him.

AMONG THE CANE, THE COTTON, AND THE CORN.

(Editorial Correspondence).

Cragford, Ala., Oct. 21.

I have not anywhere seen a land like this of north eastern Alabama. It is among the rolling, rugged, rough hills, such as you will find in the mountains of the Virginia Valley, or about Morganton and Hickory, not to say Asheville, North Carolina, and yet these peaks and slopes, and far-reaching hill sides with their intervening valleys are covered all up and down, top and bottom, with cotton. It is cotton, cotton, cotton everywhere. The people here have never planted quite so much and the yield was never quite so abundant. It certainly looks strange to see high hills and flat lowlands alike covered with cotton. Most mountain lands grow grain, fruit, grass, cattle. Not so here, unless the people prefer it. It is a light gray soil and though rocky, it is adapted to cotton. And the fields are white indeed. As the high hills loom up in the distance and slope away to low descents covered with the fleecy staple you feel that the climate is playing you a trick and that the land everywhere is covered with snow. It is a beautiful scene and one that I shall not forget, mountains and valleys, hillsides and ravines basking alike in a robe of spotless white in an atmosphere bracing and balmy, under an October sun that is mellow and rich and radiant.

And the ribbon cane grows here. I reckon that is the reason the people are so kind and cordial. They are kept sweet chewing this delicious stalk, and made healthful and happy by eating the wholesome syrup that is distilled from it. Our North Carolina cane and its syrup are not to be compared with this ribbon cane. It is not even of the same species, the former growing from and producing its own seed at the top, the latter growing from the joints of the stalk buried in the earth in early spring. And neither the size nor the syrup of the two are to be compared. I believe an editor could keep sweet—the thing seems impossible—if he could eat continuously of this variety. The people are beginning now, at the first signs of frost to cut and cart away the cane and distill the juice for table use through winter. I have never eaten a liquid quite so delicious.

Corn grows here in great abundance, likewise, and this has been a great crop in all particulars here. The harvest is abundant and the people are happy, save for the fear that the price of cotton will go even lower than it is.

At Cragford I am in the hands of our good brother, W. D. Mitchell, who, with his four or five sons is building a town here. I have just been wondering how much possible sweetness Bro. Mitchell's more than eight thousand acres of land contain, if a half acre contains enough to make two barrels of ribbon cane syrup! To look at the land you would not think it sweet, and yet cane grows on it and extracts unspeakable sweetness. Things are not what they seem. The earth is much sweeter than we give it credit for being. But Bro. Mitchell's busy, consecrated and wholesome life is of more value to this community than all the cotton and corn and cane that grows on his broad acres. And the same is true of every faithful Christian man in all this land. The values of any and every community must be reckoned not by the crops produced, but the kind of character created and developed therein.

President Harper and I have enjoyed the past two days the fellowship and good company of Rev. C. M. Dollar and his busy, wide-awake son, Rev. J. D. Dollar. We went to their homes and were accompanied by them to several appointments. They gave us every care and comfort, and cheered our hearts with their ready wit and hopeful, happy counsel. But it is a vain task to try to tell of individual kindnesses and particular favors.

The brethren and sisters here are a cordial and hospitable people, and love their church with a love that is contagious and buoyant. The Christian Church is safe and has a future that cannot be told, as long as it has such loyal souls and faithful members as it has in these parts. And they love every enterprise of the church. Let this incident tell the whole story. Yesterday when Presd. Harper had made a brief talk about Elon College a good woman, a widow, came with $5.00 in her hand and gave it for an institution she would never be able to patronize. Another dear, good soul handed him half dollar, though he had not solicited it, and it represented real love and genuine sacrifice to her. Presd. Harper is meeting with unparalleled success, for the people are responding in a most liberal and marvelous manner. He has already secured a thousand dollars in this one Conference and it will not surprise me if the brethren of this Conference swell the contribution to $1200.00 by the time he leaves it for the Ga. and Ala. Conference Monday. Put it down that the Special Fund of $50,000.00 for Elon College is going to be raised and that right early, if the other Conferences near by shall give with the love and liberality of this conference furthest away. It is praiseworthy and remarkable and beautiful indeed, is this spirit with which the people here are giving to the College. Such liberality and loving loyalty are bound to bear fruit and send a thrill of hope and inspiration throughout the bounds of our brotherhood. The brethren here have got a taste of what Elon College is doing in the life and labors of a few of their sons and daughters, three or four ministers in particular, and they want more, and are willing to do more.

The outlook in this Conference is certainly hopeful, and big in deed with promise for the future. They are waking up to their powers and possibilities. The missionary spirit deepens and broadens among them. New churches are constantly building and the work goes forward. I shall write much more yet of the work and its outlook here. J. O. A.

AT THE GEORGIA AND ALABAMA CONFERENCE, RIVERVIEW, ALA.

(Editorial Correspondence). Oct. 27, 1911.

I do not know which surprises me more here in Georgia, the cordiality of the people or the untold carloads of cotton to be raised and manufactured. I had not seen any cotton, in comparison, till I came to the hills of Alabama and the far stretching fields of Georgia, and the factories dotted in city, village and hamlet everywhere. The one factory at LaNett, Ala., only a few miles away, uses from eighty to one hundred bales of cotton every work day of the week, and that company owns a whole string of factories along this Chattahoochee river. The Indians, named the river correctly, I presume, for their tongue and time, Chattahoochee, the river of death, but it is now a river of life to thousands, both of men and cattle. Its roaring, rushing, turbid waters are made to generate power beyond measure, which power, in the form of electricity, runs windmills, lights streets, pulls street cars, and serves many another useful task.

But I am more interested in the work of our brethren in the Conference here now than in cotton, cane, or corn.

Rev. L. E. Smith, who is here and happy, with his bride of a week smiles and keeps us all in good humor while he presides over the Conference and dispatches the business of the body. Bro. Smith went from this Conference to Elon College and thence as pastor to our Greensboro first church, but the people here love him still and hold on to him as if he were their very own, as he is, except in the locality of his work. He was happily married a week ago to Miss Ella Brunk, of South Boston, Virginia, and congratulations and big dinings in his honor are abundant. Appropriately so, for Miss Brunk was a most excellent woman and was exceedingly popular at Elon College, from which she graduated in 1907. They will go to housekeeping in Greensboro, N. C. on their return there next week.

I regret to find Brother J. F. Hill, Jr., for some years the faithful and efficient Secretary of this Conference, in poor health. He was at his post of duty and assisted in the work by his son, E. E., kept the records and was ready with the work, but he is not a well man and his friends are solicitous about his health. This Georgia cane keeps him sweet, but he needs a rest and the bracing air of the hills to make him strong. Bro. J. H. Floyd, the treasurer, could not attend Conference, but Henry was there to collect the funds and write receipts, in his father's stead. The fathers here have a way, and to me a most commendable one, of training their children to be their successors in the church, and church work.

The dynamo of this Conference is Rev. H. W. Elder. He could take half a dozen brethren, on a summer day, under a big oak tree, and have a conference whose history wouldn't perish in a hundred years. Bro. Elder is a whirlwind, with wisdom and a soul in it. His power is invincible, his enthusiasm is contagious, and his energy is without limitations. It is a poor year indeed with him in which he does not organize, build and dedicate one, two, or three churches. About fifty or a hundred years from now the people of Georgia and Alabama will begin to realize what a truly great man is H. W. Elder. Bro. Elder goes and does things while the rest of us are talking about whether it is worth while to do things. For instance he is right now building a church a way out yonder at Kite, Ga. There is just one member of the Christian Church in that town, and Bro. Elder or any other brother would have plead in vain for a five years to get a conference home mission committee appropriate funds there; but the church is going up and within another six weeks the house is expected to be ready to worship in. Some time ago Bro. Elder took $200.00, went into Enigma, Ga., and built there a house worth $1,500.00 and was in the church worshipping, with a good membership and a good congregation in less than six months. He has recently organized a church at Manchester, Ga., and expects to build there at no distant date. How is it done? Well, there is no telling what God can and will do with a life, of zeal and energy, thoroughly consecrated to his service.

I was glad indeed to meet Rev. B. F. Young and Rev. G. M. Holder, of whom I had often heard, but whose faces I had not seen. These are loyal workers and consecrated brethren who are doing much for the spread of the gospel in these parts.

My stay here is made glad and exceedingly comfortable in the home of a generous-hearted and consecrated layman, Dr. W. T. Hodges. He and his amiable wife enjoy the company of preachers, and judged from the number of preachers entertained by them, the preachers are fond of them and their hospitable home. The genial Doctor had provided I know not how many fat, fine, o'possums and potatoes to match, and how President Harper matched them was a caution. I helped him, and the other ministers did, but preachers can't keep up with college presidents in great undertakings.

There is a great work in the Conference to do, and these brethren are doing it with a ready and willing hand. The ministers are consecrated and the work prospers.

There is yet work ahead and several days in these pleasant places before facing home and duties there.

President Harper is working wonders in behalf of the Special Fund, and the people are responding with a liberality and large heartedness that are a revelation to all of us.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The District Meeting of District No. 3 of the Alabama Conference will be held at New Harmony Christian Church, Randolph County, Ala., beginning Saturday, November 4, at 9 A. M. A good program has been prepared, running two days.

—The program of the Western North Carolina Conference which convenes at Ether November 14th has been issued and shows that the program committee has labored to make the forthcoming session a success. A copy of the program has been mailed to every speaker and to all members of the various conference committees, we are informed.

A PRAYER.

Speak to me, Lord, in the calm and early morning,

As, fresh from my slumbers, Thy presence I seek.

Teach me to walk 'mid life's cares and temptations,

And pure and unspotted my spirit to keep.

Speak to me, Lord, in the glare of the noonday,

When, weary and fainting, I stumble and fall.

Oh, speak to me then, lest in stress of temptation

The world and its baubles my soul shall enthrall.

Speak to me, Lord, in the hush of the evening,

When the hills echo back the sweet Angelus chime;

And up from the vale in the paths homeward wending

The sheep and the shepherd in quietness climb.

Speak to me, Lord, when the night shades have fallen,

And far overhead the stars twinkle and shine.

Speak "Pardon" and "Peace" ere I sink into slumber,

And light up my couch with Thy radiance divine.

THE SECURITY OF CHRISTIANITY.

The ark of God was never taken till it was surrounded by the arms of earthly defenders. In captivity its sanctity was sufficient to vindicate it from insult, and to lay the hostile fiend prostrate on the threshold of its own temple. The real security of Christianity is to be found in its benevolent morality, in its exquisite adaptation to human hearts, in the facility with which its scheme accommodates itself to the capacity of every human intellect, in the consolation which it bears to every house of mourning, in the light which it brightens the great mystery of the grave. To such a system it can bring no addition of dignity or strength, that it is part and parcel of the common law. It is now for the first time to rely on the force of its own beauty. Its sublime theology confounded the great Grecian schools in the fair conflict of reason with reason. The bravest and wisest of the Caesars found their arms and their policy unavailing, when opposed to the kingdom that was not of this world. The victory which Porphyry and Diocletian failed to gain is not, to all appearance, reserved for any of those who have in this age directed their attacks against the last restraint of the powerful, and the last hope of the wretched. The whole history of Christianity shows that she is in far greater danger of being corrupted by the alliance of power than of being crushed by its opposition. Those who thrust sovereignty upon her, treat her as their prototypes treated her author. They bow the knee, and spit upon her; they cry, "Hail!" and smite her on the cheek; they put a sceptre in her hand, and it is a fragile reed; they crown her, but it is with thorns; they cover with purple the wounds which their own hands have inflicted on her and inscribe magnificent titles over the Cross on which they have fixed her to perish in ignominy and pain.—Lord Macaulay.

OCCUPATION IN HEAVEN.

N. Summerbell said something like the following:

In heaven there will be no idlers. In Rev. 22:3, we read that his "servants shall serve him." And who would not be a servant of God in that good world?

Newton will find ten thousand times ten thousand worlds to visit and investigate. Rollin will find more reliable ancient history. Plutarch will find more eminent lives than Greece ever knew. The geologist will find God's footprints in deeper rocks than the old sandstone. Many worlds will give ample room for all to exercise their faculties, and to grow eternally. Some will be kings to govern new empires; some, priests to educate a new creation; some, singers to praise Him who sits on the throne and to adore the Lamb.

Some would perhaps at first desire years to gaze on God and Christ, being moved by intense gratitude for blessings received. For we believe heaven is the place of supreme good, and also of unbroken happiness; where the happiness is not limited by the need of self-denial, where no sin mars. There the body is revived to immortal life, and the soul enjoys the favor of God. The understanding is enlightened, and all faculties enlarged to receive the new treasures of knowledge.

What feelings one must have on entering heaven! One would look first for Jesus and his Father. Then would soon realize his freedom from all anxiety; no fear of pain; no thought of poverty; the cripple healed, with no thought of the pity felt for him that he must often have imagined on earth, or which was a part of his capital; the beggar made rich; the aged made young, the sickly well, the dead immortal. What a change! The last trouble over.

What wonderful opportunities then for carrying out plans that earthly conditions forbade, or death suspended!

Are you going to that place? Are you serving God here? If not, are you not a hypocrite to suppose you will enjoy heaven, or be God's servant there? Do you want Jesus to confess you? If so, have you confessed him? Should there not be some reciprocity? If you want to be in heavenly society, enter it now; get your name on the Lamb's book of life. While you are on earth get used to doing heavenly business.

GOD MEANS US TO BE HAPPY.

God means us to be happy;

He fills the short-lived years

With loving, tender mercies—

With smiles as well as tears.

Flowers blossom by the pathway,

Or, withering, they shed

Their sweetest fragrance over

The bosoms of our dead.

God filled the earth with beauty,

He touched the hills with light;

He crowned the waving forest

With living verdure bright:

He taught the bird its carol,

He gave the wind its voice,

And to the smallest insect

Its moment to rejoice.

What life hath not its blessing?

Who hath not songs to sing,

Or grateful words to utter

Or wealth of love to bring?

Tried in affliction's furnace

The gold becomes more pure—

So strong doth sorrow make us,

So patient to endure.

No way is dark and dreary

If God be with us there;

No danger can befall us

When sheltered by His care.

Why should our eyes be blinded

To all earth's glorious bloom?

Why sit we in the shadow

That falls upon the tomb?

Look up and catch the sunbeams!

See how the day doth dawn!

Gather the scented roses

That grow beside the thorn!

God's pitying doth seek us;

He leads us to His rest;

And from a thousands pathways

He chooses what is best.

LABOR UNIONS APPROVE RED CROSS SEAL.

Workingmen in Fight Against Tuberculosis, Endorse Sale of Holiday Stickers.

Direct approval of the campaign for the sale of Red Cross Seals has been given by the American Federation of Labor, according to an announcement made today by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

At the last annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, a resolution was adopted calling on all the members of the Federation to further the sale as much as possible. The resolution reads as follows:

"Whereas, The American Federation of Labor has in every possible way aided the movement for the study and prevention of tuberculosis throughout the United States and Canada, and

"Whereas, The American National Red Cross has been in the past and is now making an especial effort, through the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals, to secure funds to carry on the war against tuberculosis, and by means of the funds raised in this manner has been able to do much effective work in this direction, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that the American Federation of labor give its endorsement to the movement of the American National Red Cross, and encourage its members to further in every reasonable way the sale of these seals in their respective communities."

There are now four special methods by which consumptive workingmen in the United States are being cared for. In such cities as Albany, Elmira and Binghamton, N. Y., the unions support a separate pavilion or hospital. In cities like Hartford, New Britain and South Manchester, Conn., the workmen contribute towards the maintenance of a fund for the care of consumptives. The employees also contribute to these funds. There are also two national sanatoria for the treatment of tuberculosis owned and operated by labor unions; one by the International Typographical Union, and the other by the Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union. In Massachusetts, Illinois, and elsewhere, large corporations and manufacturers have agreed voluntarily to care for all their consumptive employees for a limited length of time.

"But as long as consumption kills one in every three workingmen between the ages of fifteen and forty-five," says The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, "more education, better shop and home conditions, and more hospitals needed. Red Cross Seals provide these things."

PLAGUE AT HOME AND ABROAD.

In the last fifteen years India has lost 7,500,000 lives from plague. The most afflicted province lost 1 per cent. of its total population in the last ten years. This disease is preventable and never occurs in a population under European supervision, such as the army and jails population of India. The malady depends for existence and propagation upon the infection of rats, from which it is conveyed by fleas to human beings. The eradication of either rats or fleas always puts an end to the plague. The preventability of plague is further demonstrated by the fact that the two outbreaks of the disease in San Francisco in 1900 and 1907, respectively, affected only 293 people, of whom only 85 died. In India, on account of the ignorance, prejudice, habit, and apathy of the natives, it is impossible to save them from this preventable disease that carries them away by the hundreds of thousands.

The Manchurian outbreak of plague last year is still fresh in our minds. We recall with a shudder of horror the loss of fifty thousand lives in that epidemic.

Now, is it not a strange freak of human nature that makes us stand aghast at the plague of Manchuria and India, and permits us to regard as something perfectly natural and as something for which we are in no way responsible the twofold greater loss of our own country from the white plague, consumption, which is as preventable as the black plague? The poor benighted Hindoo loses in the most afflicted part of his country 1 per cent. of the total population from black plague, and the civilized American loses over 2 per cent. of his total population from white plague.

Solomon said something about the eyes of a fool being in the ends of the earth and wisdom being immediately before him that had understanding. Is it not the part of visionary people to be more impressed with something farthest remote from their sphere of responsibility and activity than to find a far greater claim upon their citizenship at their very door? India and Manchuria may need help to eradicate their plague, but your country's need, your State's need, your county's need, is twofold that of India's. Is it not time for him who appreciates the responsibility of citizenship to ask himself in all seriousness, What is my duty to public health, to that broader patriotism that directs itself against the greatest foe of humanity, tuberculosis?

HEALTHGRAMS.

Dirty air is death.
Good air means good work.

Too much fresh air is just enough.
Fresh air is the best life insurance agency.

To prevent a cold, liberate the foul air in your room.

Taking in fresh air is better than putting on fresh airs.

Good ventilation is the first essential to the purity of the home.

Pure air makes pure blood, and pure blood makes you disease resisting.

There are thousands of cases of air starvation to every case of food starvation.

Bad air and a high temperature in the schoolroom are certain to produce a low grade of scholarship in the pupils.

Plenty of good fresh air will make the fires of life and health burn brightly; therefore, don't hibernate; ventilate!

NOTICE.

All persons expecting to attend the approaching session of the N. C. and Va. Christian Conference at Bethlehem church on November 21st, 1911, coming by railroad and wishing to be met by conveyance, should reach Elon College, N. C., November 21st, from the East at 6 o'clock A. M., or 11 o'clock, A. M.; from the West at 8 A. M. and should write L. D. Rippey, Altamahaw, N. C. From Elon College, N. C., they will be conveyed to church five miles to Altamahaw, N. C., the location of church. Altamahaw, N. C., is the place to which all mail intended for the Conference should be directed.

WAITING.

Teach me to wait, O Father,
When the days are dark and long,
When the hands that would work must be idle

And the plans that I make go wrong.
Teach me to wait and have courage,
Teach me to wait and be strong.

Teach me to wait, O Father,
When my hope seems all in vain,
When my hands with work grow weary,
And life is full of pain.
Teach me to wait with endurance,
To wait and not complain.

Teach me to wait, O Father,
For the joys that slip away
From the hands stretched out to grasp them,

Entreating them to stay.
Teach me to wait and have patience
To wait and hope each day.

DIED.Barbee.

Rev. A. P. Barbee, a former pastor of the Christian church of this place, died at his home in Garner, Wake County, N. C., Wednesday, October the 18th, in the 54th year of his age. His remains were brought to Durham for burial on the following Friday. A committee of Odd Fellows and Masons together with a number of other friends of the deceased, met the body at the station and it was borne to the Christian church where it lay in state from 11 A. M. until the funeral at 2:30 in the afternoon. During this time many came to view the form of their departed among the number were often found the widow with her orphan children who came with sad, yet grateful, hearts to look on the face of him who had sympathized with her in the trying experiences of life and had comforted her in sorrow's darkest hours. As they gathered about the casket the unbidden tear freely flowed, and in muffled tones were heard the words: "He was a friend to me."

By the appointed hour near five hundred sympathizing friends had gathered. Appropriate music was well rendered by the church choir which added interest to the services. Rev. E. R. Leyburn, pastor of the 1st Presbyterian church, offered the prayer, and Rev. Mr. Cunstale of the Methodist church, read the Scripture Lesson which was followed by a short address by the writer, after which Rev. W. G. Clements, of Morrisville, who had known the deceased since childhood, spoke of his life and its contribution to the church. Then the body was borne to Maplewood cemetery and laid to rest beside his former wife, who had preceded him to the spirit land a little more than two years.

He is survived by a widow, and one sister, Mrs. Sallie Herndon; to these we extend a pastor's sympathy and pray that the consoling grace of God may comfort their hearts.

Shaefer.

Brother John T. Shaefer was born Mar. 14th, 1828, and died October 17, 1911, age, 83 years, 7 months, and 3 days.

He was the son of Henry and Elizabeth Shaefer. The family moved to this country from Nausau, Germany, in 1856 and settled at the present Shaefer home where they have resided since that time except during the period of the Civil War at which time they lived in Richmond. Elizabeth, his mother, died in '64, during the war, and her body was interred at the cemetery there. Henry Shaefer, his father, died in '71, and was buried in the family cemetery on the farm where he had returned after the war was over. During the war John was the bugler of his company and answered every roll call. At the death of his father he came into the possession of the plantation and spent the remainder of his life there.

In the year 1872, in February, he married Miss Evelyn Francis Harris, sister to the late John T. Harris. To their union were born William H., of Wilmington, N. C., Hattie, now Mrs. Klepper, of Baltimore, John Wesley, of Washington, and Mamie, now Mrs. E. M. Harris, of Waverly. Katharine, his sister married a Mr. Miller, of Sussex. All these survive him.

He was very pious all his life and intensely so during his last years. He endeavored to train his children to the same way of living, and was not without success, for a good and noble set now live to reflect credit and honor to his name.

In early life he became a member of the German Luth. Church in Germany. When once settled here he united with the Methodist church at Coman's Well, near Sussex.

Although very feeble for several years, his death was sudden. Just a few minutes before he expired he was in the yard with the wheel-barrow to roll some dirt, but finding that the work had been done, he went into the house and sat down on the couch. Immediately he began to gasp and in a few minutes he was dead.

A good man has gone and left behind him an example of Christian piety which all may well emulate. He was a friend to his community, to churches, and not only his pastor but others; he was a friend to Jesus Christ.

God bless the bereaved ones and especially the widow in her old age that her last days may be her best and happiest ones.

McInturff.

Julia Ann McInturff was born August 2, 1830. On Oct. 2, 1911, at the age of 72 years, and 2 months, she departed this life, leaving in sadness her faithful husband, Bro. Levi McInturff, and four children. Mrs. Susan Nicholson, Mrs. Maggie Rush, Frank, and Mrs. Malinda Bowman. She also leaves one brother and two sisters. For nearly 40 years prior to her death she was a faithful member of Joppa Christian church, having been received into the church there by Rev. W. A. Dofflemyre. Her remains were laid to rest in the McInturff graveyard in Powell's Fort, and the funeral services conducted at Joppa. Truly a good woman from us has gone.

A. W. Andes.

Powell.

On August 22, 1911, in the home of her daughter, Mrs. N. I. Powell, at Auburn, N. C., as the evening shadows gathered, the hands of Mrs. Morjanna Flowers were forever folded from the tasks of life's little day, and the tired servant of God fell on sleep. Mrs. Flowers was born Sept. 1, 1837, and was nearing the seventy fourth milestone in the journey of life. She was the relict of the late Joel J. Flowers, of Auburn, and is survived by the following children: Mr. P. T. Flowers, Mrs. C. H. Johnston, Mrs. N. I. Powell, Mrs. A. G. Powell, and Mrs. D. R. Johnston.

If the history of Mt. Hermon church were written the story of her life would be largely told. In that church centered her love and labors. She was one of its charter members. Its services were her greatest joys. At one time she did not miss a Saturday meeting for four years. And it is a comfort to her loved ones that this pleasure was not denied her long by infirmities of age, her strength being sufficient in the last days. From the church her life radiated throughout the community. She led her husband to Christ. Like Hannah of old she brought her children to the Lord. She counseled her friends and neighbors' children in the ways of Him she served. Her home was never quite so radiant as when the pastor was its guest. And how dear to her gentle heart were the comforts of the pastor and the privilege of ministering to him as he rested there! But now, that home is closed. Its keeper has moved to a mansion in the skies. The old church will miss its faithful worshipper. But to the grave hard by in the little church yard many a grateful heart will go to revive old memories and bless God for the touch of a vanished hand on the head of a country child in the days long past and gone.

"Grace is deceitful, and beauty is vain: but a woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Give her of the fruit of her hands: and let her own works praise her in the gates."

Clements.

In North Wilkesboro, Wilkesboro, N. C., on the 2nd of October, 1911, little Nellie Blair Clements, aged about 8 months.

She is the daughter of J. L. Clements, Southern Ry. Agent at North Wilkesboro. She is now with her mother and brother in the spirit land. May God bless the father and sister who survive her.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

I once met on a Seaboard train an accomplished woman from Wilmington, N. C. She was returning from the Pan-American Exposition held at Buffalo, New York. She was a music teacher in her home city and passionately fond of music. She had heard the great bands and some of the world's best singers as well as great choral music at the Exposition. She had had the trip of her life and was full of what she had seen and enjoyed. But she let fall one word that left a deep impression on my mind. She said she heard so much good music that she would never enjoy music in her home city again. Church choirs would be so tame and concerts would be worse.

I said to her: "You touch the chord of much unhappiness in the world and much uselessness among men. By your own confession you have lost the sense of appreciation which contains the elements of usefulness and happiness." And I say now that the "sense of appreciation" is one of the most valuable assets in our possession. This woman should have carried from that trip to her home new inspiration for her work and a keener appreciation for home talent and home effort. No one community can furnish the world's best; but each community can furnish its own best; and the true sense of appreciation is appreciation of the best anywhere and in any degree. To enjoy the world's best in Buffalo, and then return to Wilmington to be critic and unhappy the remainder of her life was to make that brief trip a curse and not a blessing. But she is not alone in the world; many go from home, enjoy the best the ages have produced for a few days and then return home dissatisfied with home and home-life. It would be sad for a man to go to a great hotel and then sit down at his own table and complain. There is a big outer world where the largest things are exhibited and there is an inner world where life determines its own value, its own happiness, and usefulness. It is a pity when a woman tires of home and wants to live in society, and when Christians want to be full in the great congregation and starve at home for want of spiritual zeal. I want to see the largest, the greatest, and the best things in the world, and then I want to appreciate the smallest, the most commonplace, and the everyday things of the world. I want no big dinner to spoil my regular meals, no great house to take the place of my own little dwelling, and no great meeting to make my every day religion seem tame. Moses was as great in a tent as he was in Pharaoh's palace; and the greatest character in history "had not where to lay his head."

This letter is written for the satisfied and dissatisfied; for the satisfied that you may be thankful that you can be satisfied with your lot, and for the dissatisfied that you may cultivate the "sense of appreciation," for there is enough of good in every home, in every church, and in every life to furnish food for thought, support for the soul, and work for your talents and your strength. Seeking "a larger field" usually expresses a selfish heart. The best farmers of the world cultivate the fewest acres and the best workmen work on the smallest scale. Great results come from the co-operation of many workers doing one small thing well. This was the very reason why the disciples could not understand when Jesus washed their feet. They could understand when He calmed the sea, or healed the sick, or raised the dead; but they could not understand when he did the menial service of washing their feet; but He said, "Thou shalt know hereafter." It may require eternity to give full meaning to the things we fail to appreciate here; but it will be worth a lifetime of service and waiting to know the meaning and the value of little things here.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

The second week in the far South has been largely spent with the thirteenth annual session of the Georgia and Alabama Conferences. This body also has been a revelation to me. Here also I found myself voting on measures that touched our general interests as a people. The up-to-date-ness, the progressiveness, the hopefulness of the situation here are inspiring. The Conference is weak in numbers, but mighty in spirit, and the spirit is what counts in the final record of achievement, be it of a man or of an organization. I predict that the next generation will see two of the strongest Conferences in our brotherhood in the states of Georgia and Alabama. The future here is big with possibility.

It is sometimes charged that our brethren of the Christian faith and order are provincial, localized. This certainly is not true of these Conferences. They are some four or five hundred miles from Elon College, and have for that reason felt only partially the thrill and enthusiasm generated by the College in their work here, either among the ministry or the laity. And yet I have never heard stronger pleas made for Elon than those made by the Educational Committees and the leading ministers and laymen of the conferences. They have both made the Elon Fund a regular apportionment on the churches for the future, levying the full amount asked of them for that purpose by the Southern Christian Convention. Not only so, but in spite of low cotton, these brethren have responded to the Special Fund with such open-hearted, open-pursed liberality as to challenge the Conferences in Virginia and in North Carolina to do the heroic thing equaling them. The people of the Alabama Conference gave to this fund $1250; those of the Georgia and Alabama at this writing have given $975, with yet more to follow. And the brethren here wear a pleasing smile as a consequence of their liberality. Friends, there is no doubt after this display of loyalty and support on the part of these Christian brethren that the Special Fund will be raised. I have always felt that this fund would be forthcoming, but now my hope is renewed and my faith confirmed. It has been a sacrifice for many of these brethren to help in this cause, but it has been a willing sacrifice, the kind that always yields blessing. With the encouragement given the fund by these liberal, loyal, devoted friends, I return to the other Conferences sure that they will do their part, manfully, cheerfully, liberally to accede to the Convention's call to free the College from debt and place it on its feet and usher in for it a larger prospect and an expanding sphere of usefulness.

Gracious hospitality, generous welcome, liberal response to pleas for the College, the Sun, the Orphanage, and the other enterprises of the Church, unbounded Christian fellowship—these Christian goods abounding on every hand have made the two weeks spent in Georgia and Alabama an oasis along life's highway. With pleasant memories and glad in the satisfaction of numerous new-formed friendships, we return to our tasks with lighter hearts and stouter hands. It will always be pleasant to remember this initial visit and to treasure its sweet (not altogether of the sugar cane sort) associations deep in the sacred recesses of the heart. I am happy to have met our Georgia and Alabama brethren in Annual Conference, in the various churches and in their Christian homes, where hospitality, liberality and the other Christian graces abound.

FOR BETTER TEACHERS.

Perhaps the greatest single need of the entire church is more teachers and better equipped teachers in the Sunday school.

This need will not be supplied in a day or in a year, but it may be done within a few years. The solution of the problem in each Sunday school must be by that particular Sunday school. The leaders in Sunday school work have done all that they can do. They have provided literature and outlined courses of study that will make of a person of ordinary intelligence a reasonably well prepared Sunday school teacher. To use the expression of youth, "It is simply up to you," superintendents, teachers, and members of Sunday schools.

Our denomination has issued two books that are designed to give a two-years' course for teachers. The books are ready and waiting for your order. You can get the first book, or any number of them, by communicating with The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

Will you organize a class and have the members take this course, or will you continue in the old way? The course is designed to give the student a comprehensive understanding of the Bible, a history of Christianity, a history of our church, and acquaint him with the principles of our denomination, and the organization and government of our church; the history of the Sunday school, the institutional Sunday school, with the latest improvement in plans and methods of organization; something of the art of teaching and attracting attention of pupils of all ages. These and many more things are treated. No one can take the course, without being a better teacher, a better informed man and one of wider information.

We look forward to the time when every Sunday school in the Christian convention will have a class. Once the class is begun, it should be continued. As soon as one class graduates, start another. There is no reason why every adult in the Sunday school should not eventually take the course, even though he never attempts to teach. The information and knowledge that the two years' study will bring to the student will make him better qualified to be a member of the Sunday school.

Somebody in the Sunday school must undertake this work. Modesty is keeping everyone from making the attempt. Here is an opportunity for service. If the superintendent will not make the initiative, will you not go to him and ask for the privilege of organizing the class yourself?

One of the aims of the Young People's Convention is, "A teacher training class in every Sunday school."

Don't Interrupt Normal Class.

The Teacher Training class in the Sunday-school should not be used, under any circumstances, as a substitute class for supplying the places of absent teachers. Nor should it be used as a source of supply for the filling of vacancies when teachers give up their classes or when new classes are formed. The members of the class are receiving a regular course of instruction to prepare them for teaching in the future. For the superintendent to turn to the Normal class every time that a teacher is absent or a new class is organized is as poor economy as for a farmer to draw upon his barrel of seed wheat or seed potatoes whenever he needs a meal—when ready to plant for his new crop he will have nothing. For a student in the middle of his course to take a class for a Sunday is as absurd as it would be for a student in college to stay at home when he is needed to supply a vacancy in the public school. The student who does this mortgages his future for the sake of one day. Let the class complete its work of preparation, and then the school will have a corps of equipped teachers.—S. S. Journal.

A Working Class.

The following is from the Greensboro correspondence of the Charlotte Observer:

"The Baraca class of the First Christian church of Greensboro is one that does things. A few nights ago a business meeting of the class was held and it was decided to undertake the work of putting a new cement floor in the basement of the church. Nearly $200 was pledged by the class for this purpose, and when the floor is put in the class will cut off a part of the basement and fit up a nice classroom. Last night the members of the class went to the church and themselves tore up and removed the old floor in the basement. There were about twenty young men at work in the place and it took them only about two hours to do work that would have cost several dollars to have had done."

This is an illustration of what men can do when they are organized for service. Think of the many things men could do working together. The country churches could have Baraca classes that would make themselves responsible for keeping the church grounds in good order.

Suggestions for the Leader.

This meeting should be conducted by the temperance or good citizenship committee. Sing temperance songs, have temperance recitations, pray fervent prayers. Arrange a strong program. Advertise the meeting. The following and kindred topics may be assigned in advance to members.

1. Does prohibition decrease crime?
2. Does prohibition decrease drunkenness?
3. Why is moderate drinking unsafe?
4. Does the Bible justify moderate drinking?
5. Are officers as vigilant in enforcing the laws in prohibition territory as they should be?

Have some member give the history of temperance legislation in the state, county, or city in which you live. Have another contrast conditions under saloons give statistics as to amount of money spent for whiskey, and compare with that spent for education and articles of necessity in the home.

News From the Battle Line.

The saloon must go! There is no question about this fact; the only element of uncertainty is as to when it will go. It will be accomplished whenever public sentiment against the saloon is stronger than sentiment in favor of it. Each year sees the territory in which whiskey is legally sold lessen. The progress is by stages—first, local option, until most of the state is dry; then state-wide prohibition. Until two years ago there was only one state that had a constitutional provision against the sale of whiskey in the state; now there are several. Others have prohibition by legislative enactment.

About one fourth of the states of the union are wholly dry. In another half whiskey is sold in only a few counties and cities. In the remaining one-fourth of the states strong drink is sold in a considerable part of the state. About 75 per cent. of the territory of the United States is "dry" territory. More than 60 per cent. of the people of the United States live in districts or cities in which whiskey is not sold. One may travel for days and days in the south without being in a single city where there is an open saloon.

Figures show that prohibition brings a decrease of 50 per cent. in crime. Property values increase rapidly in prohibition territory. People are more industrious; they save more money and work more regularly.

Statistics show that crimes caused by whiskey cost the governments of nation, state and city more than the several governments derive in revenue from excises and taxes on strong drink. The whiskey sellers are bold enough to make the statement that they pay one-third of the nation's tax and but for them the government would be bankrupt. Such a statement is known by them to be false, for if it were not for their business the expenses of the government would be reduced more than a third. Answering such argument as is made by the saloon men, the Philadelphia North American recently said:

"This statement is at once an insolence and an insult. The sanctuaries of the nation are not built upon pillars made of kegs and barrels. Something besides the bottle stands between America and bankruptcy."

Temperance Facts.

The total consumption of liquors in the United States in 1909 amounted to 21.86 gallons for each man, woman and child, costing the unimaginable sum of $2,106,476,850. That is $23.92 for each person, or $110.03 for each family in the country. Think how much good might be done with the money that is now far worse than wasted!

Governor Hoeh of Kansas, reviewing the immense advantage of prohibition to his state, points to $100 per capita in the banks, one-third of the counties with no prisoners in the jails and no paupers in the poor houses, and one-half of the prisoners that have not lived in Kansas long enough to gain a residence.

Prohibition prohibits in Maine. In Boston there are 426 arrests for each 10,000 population; in Portland, Me., there are 84. Maine has more school teachers and newspapers in proportion to population than any other state. While Maine has 120 prisoners for drunkenness, Massachusetts had 2,010, or four times as many, in proportion to population.

A Recitation.

Let the following lines from Whittier's poem, "The Moral Warfare," be committed to memory and recited in the meeting:
Our fathers to their graves have gone;
Their strife is past, their triumph won;
But sterner trials wait the race
Which rises in their honored place,—
A moral warfare with the crime
And folly of an evil time.
So let it be. In God's own might
We gird us for the coming fight,
And, strong in Him whose cause is ours,
In conflict with unholy powers,
We grasp the weapons He has given.
The Light, and Truth, and Love of Heaven.

MAN FOR MAN.

This is God's plan for carrying on His work. So far as we can see, it is God's plan to convert the world through man's effort for men. He said: "As the Father has sent me, even so I send you."

There once was a man who came to Christ possessed of an unclean spirit. Christ cast out the evil spirit and restored him to his right mind. Then, in his gratitude, the man prayed that he might go with Christ. The wish seemed natural and right, but Christ said, "I have blessed thee, now be thou a blessing—go home to thy friends and tell them how great thing the Lord has done for thee." Two of John's disciples were pointed to Christ. They asked Him, "Master, where dwellest thou?" And He said, "Come and see." They spent the day with Him. But the blessing they received had all the force of a command: "Now, John, I have blest thee; be thou a blessing. Go find your brother and bring him to me." Or turning to Andrew, "Andrew, you have been with me today; now that I have blessed thee, be thou a blessing to thy brother Simon."—Ex.

Every life is a garden of flowers or weeds or mostly stones. Cultivate it. Cultivate love, truth, and all the virtues if you wish to be beautiful.

RELIGION IN THE FAMILY.

Begin, my friends, with your children. Speak cheerfully, but reverently, and solemnly, to them of the righteousness of God. Tell them that He is their Father, and tell them He is their Judge. Show them His face of compassion; show them His throne of tribulation. Teach them that He loves the good; teach them that He hates the lying, and lust, and iniquity. Take care, yourselves, to touch not the unclean thing, that your counsel to your sons and daughters be not a mockery. Shake off the first dishonest penny from your fingers, as the apostle shook of the venomous viper into the fire.

Stand in awe of your conscience; stand in awe of the King of kings. Expect and welcome from the ministry of Christ searching messages. Pray for prophets, who will rebuke you, as their ancient predecessors did Israel, for robbing man by any fraud, for robbing God by keeping back the offerings at His altar which He requireth at your hands.—Exchange.

A HARVARD LETTER.

Two hundred and seventy-six years ago, which subtracted from 1911 gives 1635. Harvard began its career as an institution. How long it lived in the mind of John Harvard before this date cannot be reckoned; for often in childhood are the beginnings of great institutions and lives. Of course Harvard has grown; its founder would hardly know it today; yet there is still here the democratic atmosphere and the cultured life in which it began its career and with which it was endowed. It is truly Harvard, truly American, and there is none other like unto it in the world.

Though many buildings are modern there are a few dating from other centuries, whose ivy-covered walls bespeak for them respect for age and history. Boston is known as a historic city, a city of culture, and perhaps to Harvard is she indebted for much of both these.

In sight of the College Square, which is not a square, but like many things misnamed, under a large elm, of which every school boy knows, George Washington took charge of the army and the fate of our country. The parks have monuments here and there marking spots of historical soil, which indeed makes us tread differently than when in newer climes.

Within ten minutes walk of the University, on the banks of the Charles' River, one comes to a little inclosed lot in which there is a stone bearing an inscription like this: "In the year 1000 A. D. the first settlement in America was made near this spot." Now it may be a fact that someone drifted to this part of America about this time, but we can't help from looking upon the monument with a doubt like Mark Twain had when he was traveling abroad and came across a slab marking the grave of Adam. One of Harvard's teachers of History spent his life in trying to find out where this tenth century settlement was made, and he got it near his University.

Out from here a little way we may ride by car to Lexington and Arlington Heights, to Bunker Hill; and when we are inclined to delightful exercise we may walk to the quieter scenes of Mount Auburn where lie our beloved Longfellow and Lowell. Many things, even past mentioning, much less describing, in one letter, are seen here—and all these conduce to make Boston historic and Harvard unique.

There are 4114 students enrolled for this term. They are a sum total of every class, creed, and almost every race. To write a "Who's Who at Harvard" would show that the man coming with all the honors of his college is but a little white pea among a bushel of others; and there is no doubt but that it reduces the personal esteem of many who wear scholarship and orators' medals.

Among the officers, of course, the first curiosity is to see the President. I had that pleasure within a few days of my arrival. I found that A. Lawrence Lowell was quite human; and so approachable. And I wish to say here that the biggest men of Harvard are approachable—are men of pleasant face and kindly feeling. It isn't a sign of greatness any more, if indeed it has ever been, for a man to lean back and look at you as cold and fixed as a marble statue; kindness and business go hand in hand, or should, and likewise pleasantness and scholarship. President Lowell, Doctor of Laws and master of the art of handling men, scholar and Americangentleman, was born in Boston fifty-eight years ago. He graduated from American gentleman, was born in Boston and was teacher of Economics in Harvard when he succeeded President Eliot. He is an author of several books, and a student of government.

In my work in English I come into personal contact with many of Harvard's leading instructors. Among the most widely known are: Professors Wendell, Robinson, Bliss Perry, Kittridge, Neilson, Baker, Webster, Greenough, and Cope-land.

Prof. Wendell has taught in Harvard 31 years. He knows English Composition. He guides several courses in the English department. His name is familiar wherever scholarship is found in literary circles the world over. He uses his cane with English dignity; smokes cigarettes with epicurean delight; and dresses as if he were newly in love. While lecturing he dangles his monocle from left to right with an ease and grace perfected by many years of practice; but mind you, for all this, there is no yawning in his company.

Next in order I would introduce one of the greatest interpreters of Shakespeare. Professor Kittridge. An author himself, he is remembered in the prefaces of many books, and is an authority in Middle English. His head is white, and, like many of the professors here, he wears a full beard, which also is white. He walks to and fro on his little rostrum, at times with cane in hand, and tells you what you have been blind to in reading our greatest poet. He takes a play word by word, and often parts syllable by syllable. He doesn't need notes or a book. There are about 150 in the class; but no one in the rear dares to stretch—especially since one gaped the other day and immediately received a pedagogic grind up. Professor Kittridge, like Barrett Wendell, is unique.

MARRIED.

At the home of J. C. Stout, near Ramseur, N. C., on October the 5th, 1911, at very pretty home wedding when Miss Fannie P. Stout became the bride of Mr. J. C. Carmac. The ceremony was performed by this writer, in the presence of a number of invited relatives and friends. May the blessings of God attend them through life.

L. I. Cox.

Capper-Johnson.

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride, High View, W. Va., at noon on October the 5th when Mr. J. W. Capper led to the marriage altar Miss Nettie Lee Johnson.

The ceremony which was performed by the writer, was witnessed by relatives of the bride and groom and a few intimate friends.

Immediately after the words were spoken which made them man and wife, the bridal couple and the guests were ushered into the dining room where a sumptuous dinner was served. After which Mr. and Mrs. Capper were driven to Winchester where they took the train for Jacksonville, Florida, at which place they will make their home.

The groom is a former resident of Hampshire County, W. Va., but spent the last few years in Jacksonville where he is tiler of the Masonic lodges of the State.

The bride is a daughter of Mrs. R. M. Johnson of High View, Hampshire County, W. Va., and was one of the most zealous workers in Timber Ridge Christian Church, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor, in all of which she will be greatly missed.

We join with their many friends in wishing them long life, prosperity, and happiness.

W. T. Walters.

Farlow-Huffines.

A quiet and pretty home wedding was witnessed by some friends and relatives, on October 11th, at 8 o'clock, A. M., when Miss Nellie Huffines became the bride of Mr. E. G. Farlow, of Wallace, N. C. The marriage took place at the home of Mr.

and Mrs. L. C. Huffines, of Guilford College. The interior of the home was tastefully decorated with beautiful flowers. The parlor, where the ceremony was performed, was nicely decorated with ferns and white roses. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Pinnix, of Kernersville. The wedding march was played by Miss Mattie Doughton, then the couple preceded by Miss Mabel Huffines, sister of the bride, and Mr. L. B. Farlow, brother of the groom in front of the preacher. The bride wore a beautiful navy blue traveling suit with accessories to match, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bride and groom stood on a rug made by the bride's great grandmother, which was made in England while she was in school a hundred years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Farlow received many handsome presents. The bride and groom then left for the groom's beautiful home in Duplin County, N. C.

A Beautiful Home Wedding.

On Wednesday, October 4th, 1911, at the home of the bride's father, Mr. John M. Ballard, near Darden, Isle of Wight Co., Va., at 7:30 o'clock, A. M., was solemnized the marriage of his beautiful and accomplished daughter, Miss Daisy F. Ballard, to Mr. William H. Jones, of Franklin, Va. The parlor was beautifully decorated with potted plants, evergreens, etc. The color scheme being green and white and it was indeed lovely. At the appointed hour, Mrs. Dr. T. B. Bradshaw, dressed in blue messaline with pearl trimmings, as matron of honor, entered the parlor closely followed by the bride, dressed in a travelling suit of blue cloth, and were met at the altar by the groom, attended by his best man, A. W. Ballard, brother of the bride, where the officiating minister, pastor of the bride, pronounced the ceremony in a most beautiful and impressive manner. Miss Elizabeth Ballard, sister of the bride, played the wedding march. After the marriage congratulations followed and sincere wishes for the happiness and prosperity of the newly married couple were given and they left for Franklin, Va., where they took the train on the Southern R. R. for a tour of the principal cities and places of interest in the South. They will return to Franklin about the 30th, where they will make their home. H. H. B.

Birdsong-Brickhouse.

The marriage of Miss Mary Lou Brickhouse and Mr. George Frank Birdsong took place Wednesday afternoon, October 25, at five o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Brickhouse. The lower floor was beautifully decorated with palms, ferns, and other growing plants, the stairway being entwined with smilax. An improvised altar was arranged near the conservatory, and over this an arch of smilax was erected. The ceremony was performed by Rev. McD. Howsare. The wedding music was rendered by Miss Rena Moses, and the bridal party entered the parlors to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march. The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage. She was attired in a tailored suit of navy blue broadcloth with hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Her attendants were Mrs. Ashby C. Miley and Miss Fanny Brickhouse. Their gowns were of canary colored messaline veiled in marquisette, with trimmings of fringe, embroidery, and gold lace. They wore black picture hats, and carried arm bouquets of pearl roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Silas A. Birdsong, of New York, as best man, and the ushers were Mr. J. Lucian Stubbs and Mr. Arthur D. Etheredge. Shortly after the marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Birdsong left for a tour through Florida.

The out of town guests were Dr. and Mrs. William I. Robey, of Washington, D. C., Mr. and Mrs. George Reus, of Baltimore, Mr. and Mrs. Silas A. Birdsong, of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Rosser P. Birdsong, of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Birdsong, of Suffolk, Miss Nannie Birdsong and Mr. A. S. Birdsong, of Suffolk, Mrs. Robert P. Rawls, of Suffolk, and Misses Margaret and Alice Wilson, of Cape Charles. H.

NOTES AND PERSONALS

We are glad to learn that Mrs. H. E. Rountree is able to be at home again.

—Rev. W. L. Wells assisted Rev. C. C. Peel in a meeting at Belew's Creek last week. This church called Brother Peel to serve for the ensuing year.

—Rev. J. W. Wellons is attending the conferences this year, as before, and takes a deep interest in all the work. His health is good considering his age.

—Rev. J. W. Holt, of Burlington, who has been confined to his room, was able to fill his appointment at Union Church Sunday, October 22nd.

—A new supply of Christian Hymnaries has just been unpacked in The Sun office. Price, 50 cents the copy in quantities, plus the freight or express, 75 cents the single copy by mail.

—We are in receipt of an invitation to the marriage of Miss Margaret Poe to Mr. George Chamness Davidson, Fayetteville, N. C., November 8th. Also to the marriage of Miss Alexis Smith Ball to Mr. Richard Andrew Jones, Portsmouth, Va., on the same date.

—Rev. McD. Howsare has accepted a call to The First Christian Church, Eaton, Ohio. We are sorry that Bro. Howsare decided to leave us, as he is a strong preacher and an influential pastor. Our best wishes and kindest regards go with him to his new field of labor.

Oct. 25, 1911.

My Dear Children and Friends:

Again we are favored with a good report. If we can keep this up for a few weeks longer it will enable us to pay up our running expense account, which has been running short. We are glad that the Sunday schools that help us are so liberal; if those schools that are doing nothing for the support of the Orphanage would join in with a liberal help it would make our living easy and prevent the hard experience which comes to us at times. We are grateful for any amount from any source.

We would be so glad if the friends would help us on the deep well and sewerage debts. Sister Atkinson is the only one this week to give $5.00 on well.

Sister Katherine Holmes, of Pleasant Hill Christian Church, Alamance County, N. C., by her will gives the entire savings of her life to the Orphanage. This gift is of more than ordinary interest. It represents the gradual accumulation of her pains-taking savings for more than 24 years as house keeper in the home of Dr. D. H. Albright, and amounts to over $600.00 in cash, and notes, besides the household and kitchen furniture of her mother's home, part of which will be sold and other parts will be brought to the Orphanage and used (one item is 28 quilts). From this fund will be paid her burial expenses and a tombstone to mark the grave of one who hath wrought so faithfully. She named in her will your Supt. as Executor to her will. Dr. Albright says of her, "She was industrious and saving in all her work; faithful to every duty assigned to her; and loyal to her church and devout in her life. She was a good woman."

During many years she cared for her aged mother from her earnings.

We are compelled to contrast Sister Holmes' life and her limited earnings and her loyal liberality with that of men and women who make thousands of dollars and gives pennies and dimes to the orphans; and yet in all these years she made not a thousand dollars and yet she has given over six hundred. Friends, think on this life and its results.

She was buried at Pleasant Hill, the services being conducted by the pastor, Rev. L. I. Cox, who will report the same.

We have been delayed two weeks in getting our Thanksgiving Envelopes. From now on they will be delivered at the Conference to delegates. The Valley Va., and Ala. Conferences will be sent to Secretaries as reported in 1911 Annual. We do hope that each church will seek, in this expression of their gratitude to God for His blessings upon them in 1911, to make the largest offerings they have ever made. It will not hurt any one to give liberally to feed and clothe an orphan child.

Cousins, we ask you to wake up and send us many nice letters!

Yours fondly,

Uncle Jim.

Holland, Va., Oct. 20, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I was sick this morning and did not get to go to school, so now I will write to you. I love to go to school but it is a long way for a little boy of seven years old to walk from here to Holland. We ride sometimes but when the weather is good we can walk all right. I send 20 cents. Ten is for little sister, and ten cents is for me.

Harvey Leonard Vincent.

Wonder if little Harvey wrote this letter himself. If you did, it is fine for a 7 year old boy. Let us know.

Mt. Clinton, Va., Oct. 22, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I have been quite ill since I wrote you last. Had congestion of the kidneys, but I am much better now. I went to school last week. I hope the cousins will stir up and write more letters than were in the last few papers.

Enclosed please find five cents.

Love to all.

Carlton Wampler.

That is right, Carlton. Our cousins need a "stirring up" sometimes and I hope your letters will remind them.

Mt. Clinton, Va., Oct. 22, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

This has been a rainy day and we did not get to go to Sunday school, so we are going to write to you and the cousins. I am going to send a new name. Jennings, my little brother, says he wants to join the band, too.

Please find enclosed our dime with much love to you and the cousins.

Eula and Jennings Wampler.

Glad to welcome little Jennings, Eula, and we want to hear more often from our W. Virginia cousins.

The following letter written by one of our girls to her grandmother will tell how she enjoyed the Greensboro Fair.

Elon College, Oct. 17th, 1911.

Dear Grandmother:

I will write you a few lines to let you hear from me. I am not well. I have got a bad cold and have got the headache. I did not go to school today. Hope this will find you well.

Mr. Foster took thirty-four of us children to the Greensboro Fair. I did not know that I was going till Tuesday night before we went Wednesday. I would have written and told you. We went on the five o'clock train that morning. It was raining right hard, but we did not get much wet. It soon cleared off. When we got to Greensboro we stayed in the depot till half past eight, then we went to the fair ground on the street car. When we got to the fair ground we did not try to stay together. Some of us little girls stayed together the most of the time. We saw the monkeys. Two were in a cage together; they had a swing in the cage. One would swing nearly all of the time. A man came with a looking glass and let them see themselves. It looked like it made them mad. Some of the little girls rode on the hobby horses. I did not ride on them. I saw some boys acting on a platform. They would put three tables on top of each other, then climb off of them. Then a boy lay on his back and held up his feet with a drum on them. He would turn it around with one foot and a boy got in the drum and then got on top of the drum and stood on his head. He would walk in the drum as he turned it. I saw the air ship go up. I did not walk much that evening because my toe hurt me. We had to go back to the depot about half past four. We same part of the way on the street car. Four of the boys did not come on to the depot as we did. Mr. Foster stayed at the depot and they came back on the 2 o'clock train that night. The boys were Willie Knott, Herbert Womack, Andrew Curling, and Thomas Andrews.

I will close for this time, hoping to hear from you soon.

From your little grand-daughter,

Mary Lon Mitchell.

Franklinton, N. C., Oct. 16, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Being William Staley's little sister makes me a person of some prominence here, though I am only of secondary importance. It is rather embarrassing for a stranger to go to a strange place where every one else is well acquainted. They inspect you closely and make so many remarks about you. They seemed to forget that I had ears because I could not speak their language. They gave me a hearty welcome and mother rejoiced over my being a girl. Brother made me glad by saying, "Yittle sister pretty." But every one else except Willie said I was not as pretty as William Staley, and you know little girls ought to be prettier than boys. Grandma said, "Another girl added to the string of girls." So brother and I can't decide whether I am "E pluribus unum," or whether he is, as he is one boy among many girls. Grandma said she loved me if I did look like my mother and wasn't so good looking as William Staley. Then I was sick a few days and cried and wanted to sit up and be rocked and sung to from 10 until 1 at night and grandma said I was a bad baby and she couldn't love me as much as she did William Staley.

Miss Florence Harvey, whose name I bear, sent me a lovely gold necklace and heart with F. H. C. on one side and 1911 on the other. That and a little medicine worked like a charm and then Grandma paid me the greatest compliment I've had by saying I was as good as William Staley; for they all adore him and say he is the best baby they ever say. I weigh 10 lbs., and am 22 inches tall. Here is my dime with love.

Florence Harvey Cheatham.

Well, little lady, you will win the day after a while. Be patient. You must remember there were "more girls than boys."

Franklinton, N. C., Sept. 20, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am so proud of my "yittle siter." I have been praying for one almost every night. Mother has always been so thankful I was a boy baby and now she seems just as proud of little sister's being a girl. She has blue eyes and light hair and is a sweet baby. I am still mother's angel baby, and little sister is "tiny baby." I am glad mother likes girl babies, too; for she used to think a boy baby was about the only kind. I wish my cousins Melissa and William Cook could see little sister Florence; for they always thought I was such a sweet baby. When she is larger, I'll take her to see them. I try to keep quiet when she is asleep to keep from waking her.

I say I am going to be a "peacher" when I am a big man, so I hope she will learn some "thongs to thing."

Miss Dregges, from Durham, is little sister's nurse, and I love her, too. When she goes out of my sight, I say "Mi Deggies, come back, have theat."

You ought to hear me say "preserves" to make grandma laugh and "back berries" to make Willie laugh. I call plum jam "pum dam." When they ask me who eats water melons, I say "gown folks."

I can sit at the table and eat nicely with the pretty "poon" Pon sent me. As soon as anything is on my mouth or fingers, I say "coth," (napkin) "wipe off." At the table I ask the folks to have biscuit, butter, thuger, etc.

You should have attended some of my and Boppa's concerts. Boppa would get on the floor and play with me. I made little "mu"sic on Annie's toy piano, and Boppa introduced me in such complimentary speeches about being a little master musician. Then he would give me a penny and tell the unseen audience how the money poured in unasked.

You should have seen me last month when I dressed up in a little skirt Willie used to wear, a darned bobinet dress mother wore and mother's little blue sash, and amethyst necklaee, my 2 rings and the diamond pin my feetheart gave me. I looked like a pretty little girl as I held Annie's tiny red parasol, sat in Mama's little rocking chair and had my picture taken.

Mother used to tell me she hoped I'd be as good as Boppa and he said I was as good then as he was. If I can only keep it up till I am a man. Mother prays that manhood's days may be as sweet and blest. I can walk all about by myself now and have a good time playing in the yard. I gained two pounds in the last month. Here is my dime for September.

Fondly,

William Staley Cheatham.

Hope you will be a preacher some day, William Staley, and "siter" can sing for you. Would not that be fine?

A Good Recommendation.

"Sir," said a lad, coming down to one of the wharves in Boston, and addressing a well-known merchant, "Sir, have you any berth for me on your ship? I want to earn something."

"What can you do?" asked the gentleman.

"I can try my best to do whatever I am put to," answered the boy.

What ever the present moment may bring, your knowledge that it is His will, and that your future heavenly life will be influenced by it, will make all not only tolerable, but welcome to you, while no vicissitudes can affect you greatly, knowing that He who holds you in His powerful hand cannot change, but abideth forever.—Nicholas Grou.

When we are faithfully and earnestly trying to do our best with life, keeping heart amid discouragements, looking ever for the bright sky behind the cloud, we are making souls fit for advancement in the Father's realm of service.—George A. Thayer.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Liberty, (Vance).

Our meeting was protracted from the third Sunday in October. The attendance was smaller than usual on account of the farmers being busy sowing crops and some other causes. Uncle Wellons assisted me and did efficient work. There were ten professions, a number of reclamations, and fourteen united with the church, making nineteen received during the year.

C. E. Newman.

New Hope.

Last Saturday and Sunday were the final business meeting and communion of the church for this Conference year. It was a pleasant occasion. The church goes to Conference with every blank in the letter filled in full. It has been a pleasant year. There has not been a discord during the year. The pastor was unanimously called back for another year. May God bless the people at New Hope.

I am praying that the Conference at Catawba Springs may be the best one we have ever had.

Oak Level.

We expect to hold the last quarterly meeting and communion at this church next Saturday and Sunday, and I expect Oak Level, like the other churches of my charge, to send up a clean sheet to Conference. We have had a year of love and fellowship. May God bless this church. It is a good neighborhood.

W. G. Clements.

Auburn and Six Forks.

Dear Readers: It has been my happy privilege to preach at these two small churches in the afternoons of the second and fourth Sundays in connection with my Raleigh work. We have held two meetings at Auburn and one at six forks with good results. Seven persons were received by experience at Auburn and five at Six Forks. The churches have met all their obligations in full; both will be on banner list at Conference; both have raised the full amount for Convention Missions. I have never served a more loyal people than the people of the above named churches. They are deserving and should have a pastor. I can not do for them what needs to be done. We need a strong preacher for country churches in this section. If any minister is interested in locating near Raleigh and would be willing to take a good country field and work it up, please write to me or my churches. The outlook for the Christian church is hopeful in this section.

L. F. Johnson.

Winchester Letter.

Our revival services at Timber Ridge were held from September 26th to October the 8th. Rev. L. F. Johnson of Raleigh, N. C., was with me for one week and did all the preaching. His sermons were strong and impressive. He and his good wife won a warm place in the hearts of the people. The church was strengthened and six accepted Christ as their Savior. Five joined the church. We hope to have Brother and Sister Johnson with us again.

At last our hopes have been realized and our prayers answered. We held our first service in our new church Sunday, using the Sunday school room. We had a very good congregation at the morning service at which time we formally received the charter members. We have seventeen on the roll with more to join later. Several new members were added to our Sunday school. At the evening service all available space was taken and many were turned away for want of room.

We shall dedicate November the 5th.

We have a property worth $12,000.00. It is one of the prettiest churches in the city with a seating capacity of 600.

We have raised over $4,000 and have provided for a part of the other. We need $5,000 on or before the day of dedication. We make this final appeal for a contribution to this good cause. A small donation from every one of our friends would mean much to us now.

The following amounts have been received:

Previously reported	$4184.78
T. M. Barr	5.00
Davis Johnson	10.00
W. T. Hottel	2.00
Sale of surplus material	34.38
D. L. Larriek	1.00
Mrs. H. P. Hook	5.00
George W. Sine	1.00
C. F. Dunlap	5.00
Cash collection	5.95
Miss Katherine Glass	5.00
T. L. Deaves	3.33
Mrs. Mary Moreland	5.00
Rev. Edward French	5.00
Ever Ready Society50
Ladies' Aid Society	18.15
Total	$4301.09

We are thankful for all these contributions.

Windsor Letter.

The third Sunday in September we began our annual protracted meeting at Isle of Wight Court House. Large congregations attended the services throughout the week.

Rev. M. L. Bryant did the preaching and his work was attended with spiritual power. The services were enjoyed by all who heard them. There were several professions and renewals and seven united with the church—six at the close of the meeting and one since.

This church is in good condition. The Sunday school is doing good work under the leadership of Bro. L. H. Whitely as superintendent.

The meeting at Barretts began the 4th Sunday in September. Here we had a good and interesting meeting. Rev. I. W. Johnson aided in the meeting. His plain, practical, gospel sermons were very much enjoyed.

There were several professions and renewals and four united with the church. The Sunday school is doing well under leadership of Bro. J. L. Hancock as superintendent.

The members have recently held a vocal class which has improved the singing very much.

On the fourth of October, at Ivor, Va., I united in marriage Mr. James Henry Skiles and Miss Elsie May Laine. After the ceremony they took the N. and W. train to Norfolk on their way to visit the groom's parents in N. C. They will return and make their home in Ivor.

R. H. Peel.

Franklin Notes.

It has often occurred to me that it is more difficult for me to write than my brethren. I want to write to The Sun, and see many things in my field that ought to be mentioned, but my pen will not go, and my typewriter cannot spell. It is a good thing to have people to serve that do not expect to be complimented. I know that mine are worthy of anything good, and no doubt would like to have a pastor enough account to say something.

We are just about ready for Conference at both of my churches, and will be ready before next Tuesday when the Conference meets with the church at Suffolk. This is finishing of my eleventh year at this place, and it is easier now to serve this people than when we began. Time passes very rapidly, and we feel that very little is accomplished in a year, but when we have done our best we feel sure that good results will follow.

We had meetings at both of our churches during the year. At Bethany we had Rev. Neil Rowland of Fort Worth, Texas, cousin of ours, to assist in the meeting. The congregations were large, and the preaching was strong and forceful. There were very few present who were not members of the Church, and there were no professions, but we believe a great work was done in the Church. The Church needs a revival, each year, and when the Church is revived a great work is done, whether there are any professions or not. Bro. Rowland lives close to the Lord, and the Lord has greatly used him in reaching many souls and bringing them to Christ.

The meeting at Franklin was to have been conducted by Rev. A. M. Hanson, Norfolk, Va., but he was sick, and Rev. N. G. Newman, Holland, Va., came to our help. Bro. Newman was at his best, and preached with great power. The congregations were good and much interest was manifested in the work. There were eleven professions and seven united with the Church. Bro. Newman is one of our best preachers, and is much loved by the brotherhood.

We were made sad when we read the death of Rev. A. P. Barbee. We have known him for many years, and have loved him. We bowed together at the altar and received the imposition of hands, and were ordained to the office of Elders in the Church at Mt. Auburn, N. C. He was a useful man, and was faithful until the end. May the Lord bless his companion, and loved ones.

C. H. Rowland.

Wadley Letter.

Since our Conference has passed and we are settled down to work again, I desire to give expression to a few thoughts, since coming into such close touch with our Editor and the President of our College. We feel that we have received a great inspiration from them. I feel that I can more fully appreciate the efforts they are putting forth to build up our beloved Zion. I pray God's richest blessings upon them and their work. Brethren, please come again.

Our Conference was a success in every way. It was a joy to our hearts, after a hard year of toil and labor in our Master's work to come together, and report the results. Let us rejoice that our names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life, and let us undertake greater things in his name and for His sake. The new Conference year is upon us, and before us lie its possibilities, and responsibilities. In order to meet these we will need the Divine Guidance of the Holy Hand. Let us not fail to seek His presence in all our work and success will crown every effort, and the Lord will receive the glory and honor.

Our work is very well provided for, for next year, and we hope to develop a stronger leadership among our people and do more for the Lord next year than we have done in the past. Our watchword is, "Onward, Forward, and Upward."

G. D. Hunt.

Newport News Letter.

By invitation of the Gulf Mills Christian church, Conshohocken, Pa., I spent last 4th Sunday with them, preaching for them twice and meeting their Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor Society. That privilege and pleasure were made possible through the kindness of the church here in consenting for me to take the trip. Prof. S. M. Smith, of the Naval Y. M. C. A., Norfolk, came over and preached for my congregation here at the evening hour. I am told that he preached well. I move that we give him a license. The Gulf Mills Church is located in a beautiful country, similar to the country about Charlottesville, Va. They have a nice church building of gray granite stone, with a Sunday school and class rooms connected with the auditorium by means of rolling partitions. The entire building is heated by a furnace and registers. The parsonage is just directly across the street, or road, and is built of stone and contains nine rooms. It is also heated by a furnace. I met an intelligent and good looking congregation. During my stay I was kindly cared for in the hospitable homes of Brothrs Geo. Nagle and Jones W. Pope, the latter returning with me as far as Phil. The former pastor, Rev. S. L. Baugher, has strong friends in the church and community, and left the work in very good condition, without debt, as we understand, and bills all paid. That speaks well for the retiring pastor and also well for the church membership, for quite often much is charged to the credit, or discount, of a pastor that justly belongs to the membership. Much depends on the kind of material we have to use as pastors. You can't make good brick of mud that contains more sand than clay, even if there should be a little clay in it. You can't build a strong structure of worthless timbers, even if there should happen to be a few good sound pieces in the lot. The same applies to churches and people. The moral is clear. Brother Baugher thinks he had good material to work, and the same thought impressed me, without any discredit to Bro. Baugher, for he deserves much credit.

One or two ignorant and evil-minded gossippers, ambitious for leadership, and envious of others may defeat the efforts of almost any pastor. Some land will produce more corn than other land; some pastures will feed more sheep and feed them better than others; some forests will furnish the lumberman more trees, and better trees, than other forests. Do you see the moral? Then look again.

We have recently had our Sunday school Rally Day here with the East End Church, and also our Mission Day. We think now that our finance will come up in full at Conference. Prayer meetings are well attended for a small church; of course not as well as they should be, but as well or better than the average church the size of ours. My work here with the East End church will close December 1st, as previously stated, when Rev. W. D. Harward will succeed me. I am trusting that a new pastor here will bring some new life and inspiration to the work. Next Sunday we will make a special effort for a better circulation of The Sun in this field, and we hope to at least emphasize and impress the subject—do some practical advertising for it. Pastors all over the field of our church are busy now getting together Conference funds, closing up the year's work, or closing up the work of the field for a new one.

TO A MAPLE LEAF IN AUTUMN.

(“We all do fade as a leaf.”)

How like to Man art thou!
Canst thou thy change foresee—
What leaf upon the bough,
What bough upon the tree?

It was but yestere'en
Thou wert a loyal part
Of Summer's solid green
That stirred the grateful heart.

But Night upon thee blew
With pale and frosty breath,
And left thy natural hue
Aflame in glorious death.

Or was there from thy birth
An ichor in thy blood,
Transmuting the dull earth
To Autumn's golden flood?

Thy going is not grief:
Thy splendor shall but make Soil for another leaf
That follows in thy wake.

I in my Autumn hour
Do envy thee in thine:
Thy joy-diffusing power,
The year's consummate wine.

The light of yonder tree
My keenest hurt doth salve;
Better the gold we see
Than all the gold we have.

When my green strength be stayed,
And frost shall summon me,
If like a leaf I fade,
O let me fade like thee!

EVERY SECRET THING.

(God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil. Eccl. 12:14. Golden Text for Sunday, November 12).

Belshazzar went too far. His indulgence swept him out beyond his depths. He became as a ship without a rudder, on a tempestuous sea. He was a mighty king and so could, without impunity, bid defiance to his fellowman. But he went beyond this. He bade defiance to Almighty God. And no man can do that with impunity. Now this is the sin and the curse of indulgence, of excess, of intemperance. It sweeps a man out beyond his moorings. It gets him beyond his depths. It takes away his anchorage and, ere he is aware, removes from his all safety and security.

No man expects to come to excess and indulgence. Every man who sins expects to be and remain, and in his own judgment, is moderate. But there is another judgment than his own in the matter, and he has not reckoned with that judgment. Invariably the man who sins thinks he sins some secretly, and that these secret sins are covered and will not count. But they do count. Every sin counts against a man, whether the sin be open or secret.

The great Jefferson in his representation of Rip Vanwinkle, frequently "swore off" from drinking. In a few days "a friend" would come along and offer Rip a drink. "I have sworn off," would be the invariable reply, "but I will drink with you and not let it count." Rip may not have counted it, but it counted all the same against Rip, and always to his undoing. The sin we don't count is the one that works our ruin. The indulgence we cover up is the one that ultimately uncovers us. We may think to conceal our sins, but our sins don't conceal us; they sling us into the open and flaunt us there.

Neither the monarch upon his throne, nor the peasant in his cottage can sin and secretly conceal his sin. The eye of God never sleeps, the mind of God never slumbers. God will bring every secret thing into judgment. God has spoken it, and it will be so to the end.

IN AGREEABLE PLACES.
(Editorial Correspondence).

Columbus, Ga., Oct. 30.

First of all, I am surprised at the breadth and beauty of this city of Columbus. I haven't seen anywhere a prettier town than this outside of Washington, D. C. And I am told that the same engineer that laid off and planned the streets and the parks and public places of Washington, laid off Columbus also. Whether true or not one can easily believe it for here the streets are wide, straight, long, skirted with spacious lawns and studded with stretches of beautiful shade trees. I am told that it costs the city $25,000 a year to keep its public lawns and grass plots mown.

We have two Christian churches in this city: North Highlands and Rose Hill, named from the localities in which they are situated. Both are brick, substantial, commodious and ample. The latter is the more costly and has a larger seating capacity. Rev. B. F. Young is pastor at North Highlands, and Rose Hill is seeking to secure the services of Rev. W. L. Wells, who graduated from Elon College last June. There is great opportunity here for growth and development and one should ask no easier task than to undertake the development of the work.

We were with Rev. H. W. Elder at his Richland, Ga., church and home. Bro. Elder has a live church and a happy home, and you can easily see that the whole town admires and esteems the man for the faithful service he has rendered here. He has the absolute confidence and respect of all, and is to Richland what Dr. W. W. Staley is to Suffolk, that is to say, a fact and a factor of the social, moral and religious life of the town. Bro. Elder has a family of intelligent and interesting children and a wife who is generous, gracious and hospitable.

The town of Richland was greatly stirred and agitated yesterday. At the hour when the people for the most part were at church two brothers, whose father was off at his farms on the Sabbath, fell into a quarrel and the younger had shot the older to death in their store on Main street, and the murderer had fled and in the afternoon was captured nearby and lodged in jail to await trial for his life. There was excitement, and deep regret on every side. The father's heart, when he heard the sad news and was brought to the scene of slaughter and death, was broken and bleeding; and there was sympathy every where exposed, but always with the assertion, "If these all had been in their places at church this awful tragedy had not occurred." The only place of safety and security for fathers and children in this nervous, reckless, restless age is the church, the house and the service of Almighty God. That family treads on dangerous grounds indeed that neglects and scorns the house of God and the place and hour of prayer.

Now that our work is finished, in a personal way for this trip at least, and our faces are turned homeward, I can say with all zeal and candor that the task here has been delightful and the burdens of the journey have been sweet. In the Alabama Conference and in this Ga. and Ala. Conference alike the work is hopeful and the field for service is simply unlimited in opportunity. I do not believe there is a finer field in all our land for home missionary effort, for the building and maintaining of Christian churches than in and contiguous to these two Conferences. I wish with all my heart that the Home Mission Boards of the two Conferences had a hundred thousand dollars and ten preachers each at their disposal for home missionary services only. All could be used to acceptance and great advantage. There are fields without number wanting churches and ready to welcome and to help.

In this connection it is worth while to note that both conferences are waking up as to their needs and opportunities in the matter of missions, and both have active, energetic, liberal missionary associations. Bro. C. W. Carter is president of the Association of the Alabama Conference, and Bro. H. W. Elder is president of the one in the Georgia and Alabama Conference. Both men with their assistants in office are doing what they can to cultivate the missionary spirit and awaken deeper interest in our mission needs and opportunities.

I hope to be allowed next spring to attend the Missionary Rally in each of these Conferences for I am told that in the Alabama Conference in particular this is one of the very best meetings of all the year.

President Harper has had most gratifying and unexpected success in securing money and pledges for the Elon College Special Fund, and those who subscribe for The Sun have met us with liberality and their number has been considerably increased during this very strenuous, but exceedingly pleasant sojourn of their grateful editor.

WHERE CONTRIBUTIONS ARE GENEROUS.

(Editorial Correspondence).

Suffolk, Va., November 3, 1911.

A swing of about 550 miles brought President Harper and this scribe from Richland, Ga., via Columbus and Atlanta, to Elon College just in time to catch the next train out for another night's ride of over 200 miles to Suffolk. Here the Eastern Va. Conference had been in session a day when we arrived. A large delegation was present and the work of the Conference progressed with the stroke of the clock. Rev. N. G. Newman is president and he work with the steadiness and precision of the hour, and his Conference moves and does its delightful, but voluminous work accordingly. I have only a brief moment at my disposal now and can only write of totals, tendencies and results. This is one of our largest Conferences both in numbers and in contributions. I do not recall the figures of previous years, but as the collectors read their report, I noted these items sent up by the churches to this Conference:

For Home Missions	$901.71
Foreign Missions	$641.00
Education	$143.00
Superannuated Fund	79.00
Conference Fund	$121.35
Convention Fund	$185.00
Elon College Fund	$786.35
Convention Missions	$822.00
Total	$3,679.41

There are other and quite large contributions by the churches of this conference and this total would be greatly enlarged if these were added; but those amounts were collected at Conference this year. We do not know whether this is larger or smaller than usual, but would take it to be something of an increase, as the churches of this Conference are busy and are growing in number and in liberality.

The points that the Conference is now interested in particularly in the way of help are Portsmouth, South Norfolk, Park Place, Norfolk, and Lambert's Point, all worthy, promising, growing rapidly. Col. J. E. West is the Chairman of Home Missions and he has the work in hand and his heart in the work. He is working wonders with his discreet handling of the home mission funds and the work prospers. Col. West's discussion of his report and the work done was illuminating, practical, pointed, and defined clearly what the Conference was doing and what it needed to do.

The Foreign Mission report was interesting and evoked good talk. Dr. J. P. Barrett was the speaker and his remarks were exceedingly timely and very illuminating. This Conference created a Woman's Mission Board and a work is to begin amongst the good women of the Conference that will tell in the future.

A feature of the Conference was a collection amounting to some $90.00 or more for a student from South America now preparing in one of our schools for the university. As soon as prepared he will return as a missionary to Brazil, his native country.

The great, climacteric event of the session was the magnificent service on Thursday night and the wonderfully brilliant and powerful sermon by Rev. A. W. Lightbourne, of Dover, Del. The singing by the Suffolk Church double choirs was inspiring beyond measure, the audience was large and attentive, and the preacher seemed filled with the message that he delivered and thrilled with the power about which he talked and preached and prayed. No ordinary man is Dr. Lightbourne. He goes to the depths of things and the vigor of his mind and the power of his preaching sweep all before them I do not recall when my soul has been more edified by a service of any kind.

Dr. Staley's was the great and good mind that planned the service and made it possible. He was the host of the Conference and though the busiest man of all did everything with precision, accuracy, and with wonderful results. I sometimes sit and wonder how in the world this man Staley thinks of so many sound ways of doing great things and then does them all so accurately and so well. He actually thinks, lives and plans about five years ahead of the rest of us.

The Suffolk people are the soul of gracious and generous hospitality. Living, cordiality, home making, these are fine arts with this people and one gets not only something good to eat in their homes, but that which is far better, enjoys good talk and sees happy home life at its best. More of the Conference anon.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

Apology is due the earnest friends of the Special Fund for no account of it in last week's Sun. The editor was not to blame, neither was this scribe. It was omitted by accident when the form was made up, and accidents are prone to happen, and especially in a printing office. We hope to avoid its repetition in the future.

It gives me great pleasure to give the final subscription of our two noble Conferences in the far South as follows: Alabama Conference, $1250.; Georgia and Alabama Conference, $1425.; a total from the two bodies of $2675, a "magnificent, majestic" sum, and thoroughly appreciated, but not more so than the gracious, lovable spirit in which each subscription was given. Thank you, Christian friends, thank you.

Our work finished in the Georgia and Alabama Conference, we took our farewell of that prince of church builders, Rev. H. W. Elder, our last sojourning place being his happy home, and boarded the train for Elon College, arriving there at 10:12 a. m., Tuesday. At 9:07 P. M. of the same day we were on the way to the 91st Annual session of the Eastern Virginia Conference, in Suffolk, Virginia. This gave three days with that most efficient of our Conferences. A finer body of men and women engaged in the Lord's work I have never seen, and thorough devotion to that work is the most nearly adequate expression known to men for the manner and spirit in which they despatch the Master's work. Of course, Rev. N. G. Newman was presiding, a perfect Hector in the Art, and Dr. Staley was both gracious host and profound contributor to the Conference. Where everything was excellent, it is impossible to point out individual merit—every participator in the Conference, whether minister or layman, deserves special mention, but the poverty of my pen precludes adequate individual characterization of what my ears were privileged to hear and my heart to feel—and so we pass them all over in silent commendation, which in this case is the most eloquent encomium we can pay them.

The Eastern Virginia Conference has ever stood flat-footed, four-square by the College and though liberal friends in its bounds had previously pledged many thousands to the Special Fund, yet so liberally did they respond to the plain statement of the College's needs that in three days these big-hearted brethren contributed $1150 additional and gave assurance that more yet should be forth-coming. Thank you, liberal brethren and friends. The Special Fund will be raised. The brethren are anxious to contribute and we have not the heart to deny them that most enjoyable privilege as well as inalienable right and Christian duty.

During the Eastern Virginia Conference my home was with Mr. W. H. Jones, Jr., cashier of the Farmer's Bank, as royal entertainer and boon companion, profound observer of men and events, devout trustee of the College, thoroughly interested in every forward movement of his Church, in all which matters his gracious wife is a sympathizer and helpmeet.

At this writing the Eastern North Carolina Conference is in session and caring for the work of the Master's vineyard with devotion, consecration, and success. Of course, the brethren thereof are responding to the Special Fund, but more of that and of the Conference later. My home is with Brother Jesse Franks, who welcomed the Conference in with choice language and gracious manner, and whose noble companion is now helping him to prove to me and the other fortunates domiciled here with me, the sincerity of his public greeting, a thing which needed no proof to those who have had the pleasure of being in the Catawba Springs community before. W. A. Harper.

THE ATTRACTION OF THE CROSS.

By Rev. B. S. Crosby.

Text: John 12:32.

There can be no uplift to moral beings but by attraction. A child may be taught to obey by constraint, but you cannot trust him. It is a happy day for the parents when obedience flows from a consenting will. Then, and not till then, can you risk him away from parental authority. And this spring of action must be found in human minds, or the atonement is unavailing and Christ hath died in vain. And there can be no elevation for moral being whom Jesus died to draw but by the power of attraction.

Jesus ate with, and dressed like the peasantry of Judea and Galilee, and the common people heard Him gladly.

But in the work of attracting unto himself the world, it was necessary to find one common ground of sympathy, possessed by all everywhere for all time. Jesus struck that one only universal and responsive note when he said, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." The reason why everyone is not awakened and inspired toward conversion, is because we fail to present Jesus in this altogether lovely character. No nation with a literature has been found whose hearers do not possess, in some degree, this characteristic of self-abnegation. While the world lives, its poets will not cease to sing into sympathetic ears the story of "Leonidas," and his three hundred at the pass of Thermopylae and Horatius at the bridge.

The permanency of attraction depends upon the extensiveness of the plan, and worthiness of the aim. I mean that it must be comprehensive, including all the instinctive conditions to be universal and perpetual in its effect. There is not attraction in failure. There must be absolute courage. But many a forgotten hero has possessed and displayed this alone. It must have the marks of absolute self-abnegation, of a purpose as comprehensive as the woes of the race, the success of which admits of a demonstration. And there are in every human soul, mortices which can only be fitted with these tenons, a hunger which this supply can alone satisfy.

Many events excite a passing interest, in rest which soon ceases to effect us. A remarkable touch-down in foot ball, that brings victory to a team by the suffering of a player, excites applause and deepens temporarily the respect felt for the victim who sacrificed himself for his team. But the effect wears away from the mind as the days go by. The plan was not large enough, the benefit was not great enough and comprehensive to be universal and eternal in its influence.

Jesus furnishes the highest attraction in the universe because of the noble purpose and the complete success, and the perfection of his self-abnegation. There was nothing in it for him, "God commended His love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us. He draws all men to Him by His "Attracting Power," because it appeals to a common and noble instinct in humanity, and because of the adequacy of the purpose for which he was lifted, because of the practicability of salvation. Little by little, yet more and more, as they comprehended Him in His sacrifice, do the nations become assimilated unto Him. Think of "Pasteur" running his virus of hydrophobia through the blood of four hundred rabbits until the disease, attenuated, ceases to be poison, and becomes an antidote for the very disease itself.

Think of every generation attracted by "His" sacrifice to become assimilated to the same spirit, and attracted as He attracted upon the basis of this common ground. Think of Dr. Livingston staying in the midst of Africa and its dark awful life, killing no one, hurting no one, helping every one, sacrificing for every one, until the wild tribes of the dark continent, and the still more brutal Mohammedans came to know the self-abnegation of the man. And converts will be easier made to Christianity for the next thousand years because of the life of Livingston lived out among them. We lift when we are uplifted. We draw when drawn to the example of Christ.

The bar of steel has no drawing toward the poles, and no affinity for other products of iron ore. But take a modern mallet and pound on the end of the bar, and lo, it is transformed into a magnet forever seeking to fly to the poles and to draw unto itself every particle of iron in the universe. The blows of the Cross upon the body of Jesus have put every mind in the universe that understands him, en rapport with him. Every mind that by knowledge comes within His magnetic influence is drawn toward Him.

I want to feel the drawing of Jesus until perfectly assimilated to His Holy character. I remember, when a boy, rubbing the blade of my unmagnetized knife upon a bit of magnetic iron. And then I could go around and lift nails, and particles of iron, by the magnetism of my own blade. Let us so touch Jesus that something of his own drawing power shall be communicated unto us, until others shall be lifted through the imparted Christly power we possess.

CHRISTIANITY.

Christianity is an every-day religion.

This fact should be ever present in the Christian's mind, and distinctly illustrated in his life. If it takes a thorough grip on his soul, it will be his every-day concern to have it sway his every thought and word and deed. These sentences from the Christian Guardian are well put and to the point: "Religion is for every day. Its blessings and benefits, its comforts and consolations, its guidance and its inspiration are for the commonplace men and women. It is something to take with one, something that will never be out of place anywhere, something that will add to life's joy its best touch of sweetness and will mix with all life's sorrows, hope and courage and power. A man who has every day religion in good, wholesome quantity can easily afford to be without a good many other things."—Christian Intelligencer.

A CRISIS IN A LIFE.

I shall never drink again; but one night in a New England train, and very ill, I met a stranger who pitied me, and gave me a quick, powerful drug out of a small vial, and my pain was gone in a minute or two—but alcohol was licking up my very blood with tongues of flame!

I should have got drunk that night, if I could.

I thought of everything—of my two years of clean life; of the meeting I was going to, vouched for by my friend and brother, D. L. Moody; of the bright little home in New York; of Mary and the boys; I tried to pray, and my lips framed oaths.

I reached up for God, and he was gone; and the fiercest fiend of hell had me by the throat and shouted, "Drink, drink, drink!"

I said, "But Mary—but the boys." It said: "To — with Mary! Come on to the saloon!"

It was not yet daylight Sunday morning when I stood on the platform at Pawtucket, Rhode Island, alone.

I flew from saloon to saloon; they were shut up; so were the drug stores; and all that day, locked in my room at the hotel, I fought my fight, and won it in the evening by the grace of God; but the people of Pawtucket never knew that the man who spoke to them that night had been in hell all day.

What would you take in cash to have that put into your life?

That is to be my portion until my dying day; but if merciful, patient time shall cauterize and heal the old dishonorable wounds, and cover them with repulsive but impervious cicatrices, yet because I had those wounds I am to be through my whole life considered a moral cliff-dweller, a creature of precipices where one false step ends all, and so denied full confidence of my fellow men—the highest grace of life to strive for, in this world; and I am told I have a Christian enemy or two who wait on tiptoe of expectancy and cheerful prophecy the sure, near coming of my final plunge back into the Dead Sea of drink.

Several years ago, at another time, after a long lecture tour in the west, I telegraphed my wife in Boston, "I will arrive home tonight at eleven."

The train was late, and long after midnight I came under her window.

The light was burning and I knew she was waiting for me.

I let myself in; there were two flights of stairs, but twenty would have been nothing to me; my heart was hauling away like a great balloon.

She stood in the middle of our room as pale and motionless as a woman of snow, and I knew at a glance that the sweet, brave life was in torture.

"What is it?" I cried; "what is the matter?"

And in my arms she sobbed out the everlasting tragedy of her wedded life: "Nothing—at any rate, nothing ought to be the matter. I do believe in you: I knew you would come home; but I have listened for you so many years that I seem to be just one great ear when you are away beyond your time; I seemed to have lost all sense but that of hearing when you are absent unexplained; and every step on the stairs is a threat and a pain, and the stillness chokes me, and the darkness smothers me. And all the old unhappy homecomings troop through my mind, without quitting one detail, and tonight I heard the children sighing in their sleep, and I thought I should die when I thought of you having to walk in your weariness and in this midnight through Kneeland Street alone."

She thinks that I will never fall, and would deny today that she knows any fear; but yet until the undertaker screws her sweet face out of my sight forever, that ghastly, unfomed, nameless thing will walk the chambers of her heart whenever I am unaccounted for.

By the mercy of God, which has given to you the unshaken and unshakable confidence of her you love, I beseech you to make a fight for the women who wait tonight until the saloon spews out their husbands and their sons, and sends them maudlin, brutish, devilish, vomiting, stinking, to their arms.

And you, happy wives, whose hearts have never wavered, nor had occasion to waver, and who, when your husbands fail to come on time can go to bed without a fear, and go to sleep with smiles on your lips, and sleep the long night through too peacefully even to dream, by the mercy of God, which gives you that, I beseech you, band yourselves to help, at least to cheer, the wives who, their whole lives through, must walk the rotten lava crust of burnt-out confidence—their very love a terror and a pain.

And you, good, calm, untempted men who never fell, who never tasted death for any man, and never mean to. I beseech you, cast a vote the next time for the sake of the drunkard, and try to make the stations on life's highway safe for storm-tossed men to stop at any day or night.—John G. Woolley.

THE CHRISTIAN MERCHANT.

Many people sneer at the idea that a man can be a Christian and at the same time be a thoroughly successful merchant. It is assumed that religion and business do not work well together. Never was there a greater fallacy. The truth is, the man who is a genuine Christian, and therefore is honest and thoroughly truthful, will have God with him in his business, and this means the best kind of prosperity. A Christian merchant may not succeed in becoming rich in money, but he does grow rich in the highest esteem of all who have dealings with him, and is wealthy in a reputation which extends far beyond his patronizing territory. He is rich in character and this is the best kind of riches. The man who supposes that he can be dishonest in business, and at the same time have the confidence and good regard of those who really know him, is a fool. What he gains by dishonesty will never remain a permanent possession. Such a man, when he meets any serious loss, has no sympathizers, even among other dishonest people. They feel that he is merely reaping what he deserves.

The brilliant editor of a religious paper says: "The earnest and faithful Christian merchant would no more think of permitting deception in regard to the goods sent out from his store or warehouse than he would think of betraying the Master he professes to serve. The Golden Rule would be the guiding principle in all his business conduct. He would himself suffer loss rather than that a customer should, in any respect, be defrauded in a purchase to the value of a single penny."

That is a true description of a true Christian merchant. Even unscrupulous people rather deal with such a man than to trade with a trickster. One of the most contemptible things that one can be guilty of is professing to be a Christian, and then in his business cheat his customers. Such ones should never be patronized. C. H. Wetherbe.

NORFOLK LETTER.

It is with sadness that the writer reports Rev. McD. Howsare's leaving today for his new field of service at Eaton, Ohio. There is always a sadness when friends part, but though we regret his leaving the pastorate of the Memorial Christian Temple, his many friends in the South pray that abundant success may be his at Eaton. Brother and sister Howsare have done an efficient work at Memorial Temple. They have labored faithfully and successfully. Sister Howsare will be much missed in the special events of the church where her faithful aid counted much. Brother Howsare has been an ever ready yoke-fellow wherever his services have been required in the Master's vineyard. There were large audiences at both services yesterday. Bro. Howsare preached two able sermons. The "farewell sermon" was preached in the evening.

Brother Harward who has been pastor of the Christian church in Madrid, Iowa, for the past two years, returned this week. He begins the pastorate of the Christian church at Newport News about December 1. Bro. Harward and family are now visiting at Park Place, Norfolk. Their friends were glad to have them present at the services yesterday at the Third Christian Church. "Uncle" Wellons of Elon College was also a welcome visitor at the morning service. He spoke some very appreciative words for Elon College. Come again. We are always glad to see you all.

Rev. D. A. Keys of the South Norfolk church, who has been supplying on Sunday afternoons at Lambert's Point, closed his work there yesterday. He will have charge of the Rosemont Church in connection with the South Norfolk work, beginning November 1. Rev. I. W. Johnson was a visitor at the Lambert's Point services. Bro. Johnson yesterday supplied for Rev. M. L. Bryant who was not well.

All the brethren report good attendance t yesterday's services. The audiences at the Third church were very good. The special services which closed last week are entitled to some of the credit. By the way, somebody made a mistake in last weeks' "Norfolk Letter" by saying that the Third Christian Church was organized four year ago "with 75 members and now has 106." It was organized with only 25 members and has now 106. The balance of our lot debt, $2,000, will be due the first of next May. We are at work getting ready to meet it. A. M. Hanson.

NOTES AND PERSONALS

—Rev. J. F. Morgan preached the annual sermon of The Singer's Convention of Guilford, Alamance and Randolph Counties at Pleasant Garden last Sunday.

—We are in receipt of an invitation to the marriage of Miss Willie Staley, the accomplished daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Staley, to Mr. Benjamin T. Holden, November 15th, Oak Level Christian church, Franklinton, N. C.

—The Sun office has a waste basket large enough to hold all communications sent without any name, and the fate of such articles is to occupy this basket until the following morning when they will enter into flames made for the business. Sign your name to what you write, though it sparkle with gems and diamonds of thought, and be arranged to please the eye of the typesetter and contain the best news in your community.

—Now we are counting what we have done during the year, looking back over the past and reviewing our year's work. How about the figures? Are they greater or smaller? If your church has made progress during the year, it should be encouraging for you to set your sails for larger ports than ever before. If your church has failed to reach last year's figures, your ambition should be to make up this deficiency and broaden out into fields of service and prosperity for His kingdom. What is the object of your church for the coming year?

—That is a wise provision whereby all our church are called upon to contribute a Thanksgiving offering to the Orphanage. The convention arranged that every Christian church in the South should take at its first service nearest Thanksgiving Day, and to send that offering to the support of the Orphanage. This is the only time throughout the whole year that the church is called upon to help the Orphanage. While it is some time before Thanksgiving, but these lines are written that you may begin to think about what you can do for this cause. How many will save only one penny a day from now until Thanksgiving for the Orphanage? Try this plan, my brother, and see how many others will join you.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The ninety-first annual session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference is now history. It took a whole year to prepare the material and four days to record what had been done. The Conference is the harvest of the church year. It takes more ink every year to write what this Conference does.

The attendance was large after the first day and many remained until the close. The personell of the Conference was the best I have ever seen. The spirit of the Conference was deeply reverent and devotional all the way through. Suffolk church it a privilege to entertain the delegates and visitors and if any were neglected it was an oversight and a regret. C. A. Shoop, B. D. Crocker, and W. H. Jones, Jr., the hospitality committee, endeavored to provide for all our guests and sought to make their stay pleasant in our homes. The good house-wives had set their houses in order and the welcome was wholehearted and sweet.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., editor of the Christian Sun; Prof. W. A. Harper, President of Elon College; Rev. J. L. Foster, Supt., of Christian Orphanage, "Uncle" Wellons, and Rev. W. L. Wells, of Elon College; and Rev. A. W. Lightbourne, D. D., of Dover, Delaware, honored us by their presence and help. President Harper delivered a fine address on education; Dr. Atkinson preached a great sermon on Wednesday night; Dr. Lightbourne brought a powerful message on Thursday night, and "Uncle Jim" told us of the Orphanage and left nearly seven thousand envelopes for taking the "Thanksgiving Offering." In the name of the Conference, I want to thank these good men for coming and helping to make this meeting rich in thought, aspiration, and purpose.

President Newman's address Friday night and his three Bible studies in Galatians on the other three days, were thoroughly prepared and earnestly delivered.

Outside of routine work, Wednesday and Thursday nights might be considered high water marks in the Conference. Dr. Atkinson preached the hour full of thought, heart, and inspiration, a soul-moving discourse between a fine chorus and a male quartette on Wednesday night and the congregation was large and appreciative.

On Thursday night a great congregation greeted Dr. Lightbourne. The senior and junior choirs combined rendered a great anthem and the preacher delivered a powerful sermon. His portrayal of the multiplication, development, and diffusion of the Gospel, and his climax describing its power, with outbursts of oratory ranging from zephyrs to storms, and from down to a world flooded with light, prepared the touching throng for a touching duet. This hour crowned the session with spiritual emotion and every preacher said in his heart, "I will preach better the coming year." We appreciate very much the visit of this peerless preacher and the help which his utterances gave to all.

Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, Dayton, Ohio, was also with us and still holds his membership in this Conference. It is an honor for this Conference to have one of its members the editor of the "oldest religious paper in the world." This was made possible by his editorial experience with the Christian Sun. No wonder the "Herald" and the "Sun" are so friendly, since Dr. Barrett has been the editor of both. They are not rivals; they are co-workers; and their editors are brotherly in the religious sense.

Well, the Conference is over and we will try to do our work for another year. I felt during Conference as if I would keep sweet and enthusiastic and spiritual and energetic for the whole year; but when I get back on a rainy Sunday, a small Sunday school with absent teachers, and a small congregation with sleepy auditors, I feel all the energy oosing out of me. And now, coming back to routine work is the test after all. All of those good reports have to be made up by the patient efforts of faith and persistent preaching of truth through winter and summer time. The glow of the good Conference begins to fade as the warmhearted men and women leave the church. What wonders could be wrought if our congregations had the zeal, the anxiety, the intense interest, the high ambition, and the hopeful spirit of leaders and preachers in the Conference room!

W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

There was an impressive service yesterday morning at the Portsmouth Christian Church when J. C. Ellis and S. P. Gordon were ordained deacons. May the Lord bless these brethren that they may fill their offices well. The pastor, Bro. Harrell, reports good congregations for the day.

Rev. M. L. Bryant conducted his services yesterday again, but is not fully recovered from his recent sick spell. At Lambert's Point Rev. M. P. Porter is reported as supplying until a settled pastor can be secured.

A prayer service was conducted at the Memorial Christian Temple Sunday morning. Delegates to the recent Conference at Suffolk gave their reports at the same hour. The Sunday school is reported as very good. In the evening, Rev. W. G. Smith and wife, returned missionaries to China, conducted the services giving interesting and helpful accounts of their work. Dr. Dennison being unable to accept the call to the pastorate of the Memorial Temple, the matter of pastor will be taken up in a meeting tonight. Rev. W. D. Harward will supply for them during November.

The Third Christian Church enjoyed a fine day. Four members were received by letter, and just before the communion service one person was baptized by sprinkling. This was especially impressive as it was the first service of its kind held in the church. Both the evening services, Christian Endeavor and preaching, were well attended.

Now, if the editor will permit, I wish to say an extra word. We have now lived in the South seventeen months. It has been sufficiently long to convince me that you all have many things to be proud of. Here in the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference (which is the only Conference I have become acquainted with as yet) you certainly have reason to be grateful for the spirit, intelligence, and loyalty of the men and women. As for the ministers, the fact that the majority of them are Elon College men, speaks well for the college. Yesterday I told my congregation they had every reason to be proud of Elon. As I learn more of the professors there, they show up as able, loyal, and cultured men. If scholarship is to be any consideration, Elon College has scholarship; and if ability, loyalty, and Christian character are of any consequence, they have that. You can make no mistake in attending Elon.

A. M. Hanson.

THE BEAUTY OF CHARACTER.

Spiritual beauty comes from the heart. A character may be strong, and even noble and grand, when its chief element is duty, the loyalty of the will to conscience, but in order that we may be beautiful, it must have both freedom and feeling; it must have sympathy and spontaneousness. The virtue of Jesus was always beautiful. It was not hard for Him to be good, and His goodness was never hard. His truth, His purity, His fortitude, His justice, were all filled with love. His royalty was humility. His moral strength was also human tenderness. He did not crush the bruised reed. His supreme goodness was ideal loveliness.

To be clothed upon with His beauty is greatly to be desired. Christians should not be content to be unlovely. No pruning away of infirmities can make us spiritually beautiful. No moral gymnastics can make our goodness graceful. The essential thing is that the loveliness of Christ be created within us by His Spirit; then something of His beauty will appear in our lives. The raiment of holiness is like that of flowers. In order to it being put on, it must be within. Then it develops into manifestation. Sanctimoniousness is a very crude counterfeit of spiritual beauty. No formal obedience can copy its grace. No moral cosmetics can confer its charm. It is the manifestation of abundant spiritual health. It is the fruit of the Spirit, "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." It is the result of being "rooted and grounded in love," of being "filled with all the fullness of God."—Northwestern Christian Advocate

DEATH IS LIFE.

Familiarize your mind with the inevitable event of death. Think of it as life! Gloomy though the portal seems, death is the gate of life to a good and pious man. Think of it, therefore, not as death, but as glory—going to heaven and to your Father. Regard it in the same light as the good man who said, when I expressed my sorrow to see him sinking into the grave, "I am going home." If you think of it as death, then let it be the death of sin, the death of pain, the death of fear, the death of care, the death of Death. Regard its pangs and struggles as the battle that goes before victory; its troubles as the swell of the sea on heaven's happy shore; and your gloomy passage as the eypress shaded avenue that shall conduct your steps to heaven. It is life through Christ and life in Christ; life most blissful, and life evermore.

How much happier and holier we should be if we could look on death in that light. I have heard people say that we should think each morning that we may be dead before night, and each night that we may be dead before morning. True; yet how much better to think every morning, I may be in the heavenly city before night; and every single night that the head is laid on the pillow, and the eyes are closed for sleep, to think, next time I open them it may be to look on Jesus, and the land where there is no night, nor morning; nor sunset, nor cloud; nor grave, nor grief; nor sin; nor death, nor sorrow; nor toil, nor trouble; where "they rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."—Dr. Guthrie.

There is no sort of wrong deed of which a man can bear the punishment alone. You cannot isolate yourself and say that the evil that is in you shall not spread. Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe. Evil spreads as necessarily as disease.—George Eliot.

Radiant Christians.

Some faces are like the midnight. Clouds of scorn, hate and despair overhang them. They are darkened by an evil heart. Other faces are radiant with peace, joy and hope. The Bible speaks of the light of God's countenance. The same light is seen also in the countenance of His people. A pure heart makes a shining face, a cheerful voice, and a radiant life. Such people are welcome in the church, in the home and in every place. They bring comfort, encouragement and good cheer. They scatter sunshine everywhere. "Let your face be like the morning."—Ex.

It is a fashion of these days to live in a hurry. So many things claim a share of our time. But there are a few things which hurry should not overlook—politeness, kindness, mercy, accuracy, reverence. Without these hurry may travel far and fast, yet gain no worthy goal.—Selected.

The strongest timber stands on Norwegian rocks, where tempests rage, and long, hard winters reign. The muscles are seen most fully developed in the brawny arm that plies the hammer. Even so, the most vigorous and healthy piety is ever active in a busy world, which has difficulties to battle with, which has its hands full of good works, which has neither time nor room for evil, but, aiming at great things for God and man, promptly dismisses temptation with Nehemiah's answer: "I have a great work to do, therefore, I cannot come down."—Bishop Mellvain.

Gifts.

Give! Though thy gifts be small,

Still be a giver;

Out of the little fountains

Proceeds the river;

Out of the river's gifts

Gulfs soon will be Pouring their waters out,

Making a sea.

Out of the sea again,

Heaven draws its showers,

And to the fount imparts

All its new powers.

Thus in a cycle borne

Gifts roll around.

And in the blessing given

Blessing is found.

And by and by my soul returned to me,
And answered, I myself am heaven and hell."

Hints for This Meeting.

1. An effective prayer meeting is one that starts out with a definite result in view, when accomplishes it.

2. The missionary committee or mission study class should conduct this meeting. Have a clear idea what you are going to do.

3. Plan to have special music, recitations, songs and prayers to interest the audience. But above all, plan to do something besides an interesting program. If you have no mission study class, begin one, small or large. Arrange an offering for missions or something.

South America is one of the largest and most important mission fields in the world. The next decade will witness great changes in the social and religious organizations of these people. Catholicism is the dominant religion. It may be asked why we shall send missionaries to nations that believe in Christ. But so far have the leaders of the Catholic church in the continent gotten away from the true doctrines of the Bible that the state of things in the countries of the southern continent of this hemisphere approach those of heathendom. Those who have studied the religions of the world know something of the faults of the Roman Catholic church, but here these faults are seen in their worst and most demoralizing forms.

As a rule, the priests in the Catholic church of South America are the most licentious and depraved of men. Men of intelligence will not permit their wives and daughters to attend church in some of the places. The priests do not allow the Bible to be read by the people. One of the tasks of the missionaries to South America is to scatter Bibles throughout the land.

Images and relics are worshiped in some of the countries. Illiteracy is far too general, and education must be one of the first steps in the evangelization of this country. The protestant churches of this continent should make the building of colleges and establishment of schools one of the first things to be done there. Education is a great enlightener and it will lift the veil that covers this people like a pall.

South America has twice as much inhabitable territory as North America. It is destined to be the greatest and richest continent of the entire world. Religion, education, capital and energy must go into the making of this great country. More people are going from Europe to South America every year than are coming to North America.

The governments of South America are modeled on that of the United States, but none of them are stable. Despite the proximity of the United States, European ideas prevail in South American countries. The countries savor of Latin and Spanish.

The people of South America come of fine stock. They are people capable of great progress. It will not take centuries and centuries to make them appreciate our religion, but instead it is the work of a few years. All that is needed is schools, distribution of Bibles and such instruction from missionaries as will set the men to thinking.

Little missionary work has been done in South America. The field is practically untouched. "It is ripe unto the harvest," but there are not the laborers, the money and the means to carry forward the work. There is a great opportunity for any denomination.

Poem for the Meeting.

"From snow-capped Andes mountains
And their Pacific strand,
Where the Inca empire's fountains
Roll down their golden sand
From earth's most mighty river,
And loftiest peopled plains,
They call us to deliver
Their lands from priestcraft's chains.
"Cape Horn will hail the story
Whose echoes southward roll,
Alaska share the glory
That spreads from pole to pole,
The ... centered on the equator,
The New World's loftiest strain
Proclaims Christ Liberator.
O'er all the world to reign."

Our Church's Opportunity.

The report of the committee on Foreign Missions at our last Southern Christian Convention made this reference to South America in its report:

"An independent mission work has been carried on for six years at Georgetown and vicinity, British Guiana, by J. A. Johnson and others. Last spring, Rev. S. A. Howell, of Newport News, Va., by invitation of the Mission, and under the authority of the Afro-Christian Convention, visited Georgetown, ordained Rev. J. A. Johnson, licensed five preachers, and organized the mission on the principles of the Christian Church. They have two regularly organized churches and three missions, but as yet have acquired no church property. Bro. Howell also visited Barbadoes and organized the mission already in progress there. This is reported as doing well under the care of Elder E. Bernard. This work is not under the auspices of our Mission Board, but is mentioned here as a matter of interest and information, for it may be the pointing of the divine hand to 'a great and effectual opening'."

Thus it will be seen that the Christians have the entering wedge. If our people will give of their means much can be undertaken in this large field, which is so full of promise.

TEACHER TRAINING.

Article II. The Man Who Can Teach.

The substance of my first article was that a magnetic personality and a specific preparation are the salient qualifications for successful teaching. I also said that what I should say this time would be to the man that can. Now, some one may enquire who is the man that can. It may be you, my reader, or it may not be you. If you are a good judge of human nature, if you are a close observer of the things about you, if you are a good mixer, if you are apt at illustrating—in other words, if you have a knack at making men happy and interested in the things in which you are interested, you have the ability to make a successful teacher. Many a teacher is enthusiastic, but his enthusiasm is not contagious. You ask me why all enthusiasm is not contagious. I do not know. It may be such enthusiasm is not sympathetic. There are notes on a piano which if struck together will produce a discord. Yet every note has a companion with which it will harmonize when they are sounded together.

The successful teacher knows the feelings in himself which will harmonize with those of his class, just as well as the pianist knows the keys on the piano, which will harmonize. Did you ever become highly enthusiastic over something, and discover that you were the only one interested? It's only a step from the individual to the universal, but if you cannot make that step, you are duty bound to give over the idea of teaching a class. One often hears some such remark as this: "That fellow is an interesting character." It takes an interesting character for a teacher of any sort. If you are an interesting person, you are a teacher already. The only thing left to be done is to make an acquaintance with the things to be taught. The teacher needs to know a great deal in four respects: first, in respect to the teachings of God given to us through his word; secondly, as regards himself; thirdly, in reference to each member of his class; and, lastly, he must know his lesson. As to the manner in which this knowledge may be obtained, I think that the would-be teacher may depend upon his own initiative for that.

Let me say in concluding, to any who aspire to this transcendent calling, if you have the marks of one who may be successful in the teacher's profession, get all the preparation you can.

To you who cannot teach, be the next best thing to a good teacher,—a good scholar. Don't try to be something for which you are not adapted, and which would not be satisfactory to you or your fellow man.

THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

The Alabama Christian Conference met with the church at Mt. Zion, Roanoke, Ala., October 17-19, 1911. On account of a continuous rainfall all the morning the conference was not called to order till 3:00 P. M. President Hunt failed to come the first day and the conference was called to order by Vice-President Hughes. After devotional services by Rev. G. O. Lankford, the roll was called and delegates for the various churches were enrolled.

The organization was completed with the following officers: President, Rev. G. D. al services by Rev. G. O. Lankford, the roll Secretary, Rev. E. M. Carter; Assistant Secretary, J. F. Beard.

Those visiting our conference were Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Editor of The Christian Sun; Prof. W. A. Harper, President of Elon College; and Rev. H. W. Elder, of the Ga. and Ala. Conference, also Rev. B. F. Young and J. F. Hill.

Second Day.

The business of this day was the reading and adopting of the minutes of yesterday. Vacancies on Standing Committees were filled and a committee on Christian Endeavor was added. The reports of the committees; Executive, Moral Reform, Standing of the Churches and Ministry, were all read and considered.

Two new churches were received into conference: Dingler, organized by Rev. J. H. Hughes; Wadley, organized by Rev. E.

M. Carter. Wadley has a good house, valued at $2,000; and Dingler has a subscription amounting to nearly enough to build a house. The prospects were never so encouraging as at the present for a larger and a more substantial growth, for the work in the two states.

Then next came the reports of Committees on Education, Religious Literature, Christian Endeavor, Sunday schools, Foreign Missions, and the Mission Board. All these show that the conference is gaining in the essential things that go to make up a strong work. The Mission Board was empowered to do work at the inviting points, such as seem advisable. The churches were asked to take special interest in the Mission Rally. This rally meets every spring and considers mission topics and is doing a great good, not only for the mission interest but for the work as a whole.

The next session of the conference will be held with the church at Beulah, Wadley, Alabama.

E. M. Carter, Secretary.

ANOTHER REPORT.

The annual session of the Alabama Conference of the Christian Church, held at Mount Zion, three miles west of Roanoke, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of last week, was a decided success. The president announced at the close that this was the best session that he had ever attended.

On account of rain, the body did not convene till the afternoon of Tuesday, when organization was effected by the re-election of the following officers: President, Rev. G. D. Hunt; secretary, Rev. E. M. Carter; treasurer, Dr. J. M. Welch. Rev. G. O. Lankford was elected vice-president. About 75 delegates were present. Among the visitors in attendance were: Dr. J. O. Atkinson, editor of The Christian Sun; President W. A. Harper, of Elon College; Rev. H. W. Elder, president of the Georgia and Alabama Conference, and Mr. J. F. Hill, secretary of the same body.

Two new churches were admitted to the body—Wadley and Dingler. The reports were encouraging and finances good. The social feature was most enjoyable.

The sermon of Dr. Atkinson, of North Carolina, at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning, upon the subject, "God's Measurement of a Man," was a strong deliverance. At night the Missionary Association was held. Its object is to stimulate Home Mission work. The meeting was addressed by Revs. G. O. Lankford and C. M. Dollar, Dr. Atkinson and Prof. Harper.

Thursday morning the reports of the committees were read and discussed. The writer had the pleasure of hearing an able discussion on the subject of education, by President Harper, of Elon College. Among other items of business transacted was the election of G. O. Lankford, E. M. Carter, Walker Pearson and J. W. Payne as delegates to the Southern Christian Convention. W. H. Floyd and W. D. Mitchell were elected as members of the home mission board. G. D. Hunt, G. O. Lankford and C. M. Dollar were named as the executive committee.

An inspiring scene was witnessed before the close of the last session. While Dr. Atkinson was making a short speech for the orphanage, located at Elon College, he was surprised by a voluntary contribution being thrust upon him in a spontaneous uprising.

The next session of the Conference will be held with Beulah church, at Truett, near Wadley.

—Last week Rev. W. C. Wicker mailed out the program of the Eastern North Carolina Conference to the various committees and others interested in the session. The program is well prepared and shows that those to whom the work was entrusted knew their business. We predict a most successful session of this conference.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago by order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, and generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

HOMEWARD THOUGHTS.

Dear Friends of The Sun Family:

Perhaps some of my friends know that I am back in

“The Old North State,
 Where the weak grow strong,
 And the strong grow great,”

While I gained some last year I felt that it was wiser to come back to this climate this winter, where I would feel surer of retaining what I had gained, and I hope, where I will grow still stronger. (and great, in the sense of efficiency in service, at least.)

I left Roanoke, Alabama, the 18th day of October, the second day of our Ga. and Alabama Conference, having got just a glimpse of our genial Editor, and Prof. Harper, as they passed through Roanoke on their way to Conference. It made me nearly sick to think I had to leave before conference, but circumstances made it impossible for me to attend.

I left Atlanta, Ga., Wednesday night at 12:00 o'clock, arrived at Greensboro at 2:30, feeling that I had reached the limit of endurance, I was so worn with travel and suffering from ear-sickness. I came on to Elon College that same afternoon and gave my friends there a surprise, and spent the night very pleasantly. I came on to Raleigh the next morning, and in the afternoon, out to McCullers, where I have a position as principal of the school located in this village. Our school opened on Monday, the 23rd. with a goodly number of pupils. While our work is a pleasant one, I have, as yet, met very few of the people, but I do not feel that I am among strangers entirely, because there are so many people here of whom I have known through my college friends, and in connection with church matters. I hope to see again many of my “tar heel” friends this winter.

Every day that I teach I am made more conscious of the heavy obligations and rich opportunities of the teacher's position and while my heart sometimes yearns to be more directly engaged in Christian work, for which I have sought to prepare myself, I am grateful to be able to work, that I find myself constantly praising God for His mercy, love and grace, and am waiting busily and patiently until He shall lead me into other fields of service, should He see fit. I am happy to do and hear His will, either at home or abroad, in the school room or in the mission field, anywhere where I may serve my fellowmen and honor my heavenly father.

Bettie Stephenson.

McCullers, N. C.; Oct.

Last Saturday, October 27th, I buried Bro. Geo. T. Whitaker's little babe, at Youngsville, N. C. Its life was very brief. May the all-wise Father give grace to the bereaved parents.

Last Sunday, October 28th, I was with Rev. A. T. Banks near Clayton, N. C., and dedicated to the service of Almighty God the church at Amelia. Had a fine service. Bro. Banks is doing a good work and is spoken highly of and loved by his people.

Today I laid, Masonically, the corner stone of the M. E. Church, South, at Red Springs, N. C., for the Grand Lodge of A. F. and A. M. and delivered an address. There were eleven lodges of this state and one from South Carolina represented.

My churches all go up to Conference banner churches. I have a very pleasant field and a most congenial people to serve. I love my people and have reason to believe they feel the same toward their pastor. I return to Westworth, Pope's and Good Hope. The latter two increase their pastor's salary.

May the good Father bless, abundantly, all these dear people.

My Dear Children:

This is the time for Conferences and Thanksgiving. Will every one set to work giving themselves and asking the help of friends, that we may make this offering the largest in the history of our institution. Cousins, get to work, for every penny counts and is not to be despised. Christmas is only a few weeks off too, and how about helping Santa out with ribbons, stockings, handkerchiefs, etc.? I am sure this would make him laugh till his sides shook. Try it and see.

Bro. Mills, you see, is helping liberally this week and in his own cheerful, happy way says "maybe more will follow soon," and these "Unknown Friends"—surely God will bless them every one. Thank you, one and all, who help to lift our cares and give our Home more of the comforts and necessities of life. Sincerely, Uncle Jim.

Thank you, brethren, for these donations:

C. E. Mason, Elon College, $1.00 worth of lumber for the silo.

D. Goodman, Clothier, Burlington, 18 caps.

C. V. Sellars, Burlington, 1 meal scoop.

McRae, Ga., Oct. 26, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I have just had a frolic with Joseph Rabb. He is one year old to-day. He has but two teeth, so could not have a birthday dinner. I go to school two hours a day. I love to go. We send dimes and love.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Here I come again late, but I have just been having such a time. I would neglect writing. I have been in the country and spent two weeks with my uncle and aunt. Then came home and stayed awhile, then we went to Norfolk for a few days. Came home and to-day my papa took little brother and me to Norfolk again. I am going to school now. I'm very young, not seven, but they took me in and I am delighted at going to school. Will try to be more prompt in writing. I send 30 cents for brother and myself. Love to you and all the cousins.

MY LITTLE GIRL.

There's one little girl that you don't know,

She's ever, always, on the go,—
 My! how she cries when she stubs her toe!

And she's my little girl.

Her nose is stub, and her hair is red;
 She gets real cross when she's not fed;
 She would sit up when she should go to bed,—

For she's my little girl.

But when she sails to "By-a-Way" land,

And her eyes grow dim from the sandy man,

My heart's held fast in her chubby brown hand,

Since she's my little girl.

Old Father Time's a-traveling fast;

His stride is long as the days run past,
 I pray he'll spare me my sweet little lass
 For she's my little girl.

Give folks their houses, and men their wealth,

Fine ladies their dogs,—and hats large as a shelf—

If you'll only grant me my dear little elf,
 For she's my own little girl.

—Carlyle Summerbell.

DIED.

Holmes.

Catherine Holmes was born July 19th, 1856, and died October 13th, 1911; age, 55 years, 2 months, and 22 days. "Miss Kate," as she was familiarly known, professed faith in Christ in early life, and united with the M. P. Church at Flint Ridge. About twenty-four years ago, soon after the death of Dr. D. H. Albright's wife, she became the care taker of the home, and remained in Dr. Albright's home till the time of her death.

Soon after going to Dr. Albright's to live, she moved her church membership to Pleasant Hill Christian Church, and remained faithful and true till death. She loved her church, and all the enterprises of the church, especially the Christian Orphanage. She left all her estate, by will, after paying all debts, and burial expenses, etc., to the Christian Orphanage, which amounts, possibly, to four or five hundred dollars. She was a good woman. Funeral and burial services from the church, Pleasant Hill, by her pastor. The Lord bless and comfort the bereaved.

L. I. Cox.

Harris.

At her home near Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond County, Va., October 5th, 1911, Mrs. Mildred H. Harris, beloved wife of Bro. W. T. Harris, aged about fifty-five years. They lived happy together for about 32 years and the Lord blessed them with 8 children, one son dead, seven children living, 2 sons and 5 daughters. She was a good Christian woman, a devoted wife, a loving mother, and a faithful friend. She was a true and faithful member of Bethlehem Christian church and will be greatly missed in her home community and church. She leaves a devoted husband, 7 children, 2 sisters, 3 brothers, and many friends. Her funeral services were conducted at the church by her pastor and her remains were laid to rest in the Church cemetery to await the second coming of her Lord. Bro. Harris and the children have the deepest sympathy of their many friends. The Lord bless them all and give them sufficient grace to sustain them in this their sad bereavement.

H. H. B.

Skinner.

At the King's Daughters' Hospital, Portsmouth, Va., Sept. 18, 1911, Mr. Joshua S. Skinner, aged 72 years and about 6 months. He was taken sick at his daughter's, Mrs. Maggie Norfleet, of Portsmouth, Va., on Friday and was taken to the hospital and died on Monday, living only about three days after he was taken sick. He was a true and faithful member of Cypress Chapel Christian Church and died a triumphant death, in Jesus. His funeral service was conducted by his pastor at Cypress Chapel and his remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery. He leaves to mourn their loss four sons, three daughters, two brothers, two sisters, nineteen grandchildren and many friends. The Lord bless and comfort them all with the blessed hope of meeting again where separation can come no more.

H. H. B.

Costen.

At his home near Cypress Chapel, Nansemond Co., Va., Sept. 17, 1911, Edward H. Costen, aged 50 years. He made a profession of religion during the recent good meeting at Cypress Chapel and united with the church on Friday before the 5th Sunday in July and was baptized on Sunday morning and died trusting in Jesus. He will be greatly missed, but our loss, no doubt, has been his eternal gain. He leaves a devoted wife, eight living children, three sons, five daughters, two brothers, L. J. and V. W. Costen of Suffolk, Va., one sister, Miss Etta Costen, and many friends. His funeral service was conducted at the church by his pastor and his remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Milteer.

Near Savage Crossing, Nansemond Co., Va., Oct. 4, 1911, Miss Mary Ann Milteer, aged 74 years and 6 months. She asked her friends to pray to the Lord to take her home to Heaven and begged all to meet her there. She had lived to see all of her folks gone except Mr. Neverson Milteer, of Whaleyville, Va., Mr. Henry Baker, of Savage Crossing, and Mrs. M. E. Holland, of Newport News, Va., and many friends. Her funeral service was conducted by the writer at her home and her remains were laid to rest in the old family burying ground.

H. H. B.

On his way home to see mother, near Zuni, Isle of Wight Co., Va., on Sunday evening, Sept. 17th, 1911, Joseph J. Dunaphant, aged 19 years, four months and 15 days. He leaves a mother, one brother, one sister. His funeral service was conducted at the grave by the writer, and his remains were laid to rest. The Lord bless the dear bereaved ones.

H. H. B.

Clements.

Little Nellie Blair Clements at her grand mother's home in North Wilkesboro, Oct. 2nd, aged about 8 months. She was the daughter of J. L. and Nellie Clements. She was a sweet little babe. She has gone to the spirit land to live with her little brother and mother who were waiting her arrival.

Grandfather.

Rolston.

Captain John H. Rolston was born Mar. 18, 1832, and died Sept. 28, 1911, aged 79 years, 6 months and 10 days. Deceased leaves to mourn, four sisters: viz., Mrs. Ellen Cromer, Mrs. Hannah Myres, Mrs. Fannie Zirkle, and Mrs. Josie Lineweaver. He is also survived by his widow who for several months was almost constantly at his bedside to minister to his every need. For several years he has been in declining health, and for several months was almost helpless. Captain Rolston served a while in the Civil War, where he acquired the title of "Captain," which he wore ever afterward. He was a man of some means, and was a prominent man in his community. In his will he left $300 for Antioch Christian Church. He was not a member of any church, but signified his readiness to go. Burial services were held at Antioch. Funeral by the writer.

A. W. Andes.

Gwaltney.

Jasper F. Gwaltney, son of B. F. Gwaltney, of Waverly, died October 15th, 1911. He came to his end by the firing of a pistol in the hands of his wife who, with murderous intent, according to confession, deliberately called him into her presence and fired the bullet through his brains which ended his life without a moment's warning.

At the time of his death he was 31 years of age, enjoying health and many friends. He was manager of the Luenberg Tribune, of Kenbridge, for which he received a handsome remuneration. He was located at Kenbridge where his paper was published. He had not lived with his wife for sometime prior to his murder. Insanity is given as the reason of her crime. She is now in a house of detention awaiting the trial.

He was married in May, 1901, to Miss Ilva V. Hobbs, of Prince George County. To their union were born two children. One of them is dead and the other, a little girl of about eight, survives him. He leaves to mourn their loss his father and mother, three brothers: Ernest, Waverly; Byron and Hinton, at home; three sisters, Florine, Mrs. W. H. Morris, of Manchester; Launa, Mrs. George Morris, Disputanta; and Ima at home; and a host of friends. His body was brought to Waverly and interred in the cemetery here.

From early life he was a member of the church at this place. Having been away from here a long while (many years) he has not been a communicant here, but there was nothing known of his character contrary to the vows he solemnly took when he gave his heart to God. Peace to his ashes, and God's comfort to the bereaved ones.

H. E. Rountree, Pastor.

Oct. 27, 1911.

Parker.

Mrs. Virginia E. Parker, widow of Cornelius Parker, near Great Bridge, Va. On September the 18th, 1911, the Lord took her home. The funeral was conducted at her home by A. C. Jordan, assisted by J. W. Harrel. She was stricken with paralysis, and lived three weeks; but in all her suffering she found great comfort in the religion of Jesus Christ. Her death brings deep sorrow to her many friends, and her loved ones. But grace sustains and enables them to bow submissively to God's will. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church about 30 years and will be greatly missed in her church and by all who knew her. She loved her church, her friends, and was devoted to her children. She was about 50 years of age, and leaves to mourn the loss 5 children, three boys, and two girls; three grandchildren, one brother, and one sister.

We feel that death was her gain and our loss. God bless and comfort the bereaved family.

"I came to Jesus as I was,

Weary, and worn, and sad;

I found in Him a resting place,

And He has made me glad.

I looked to Jesus, and I found

In Him my Star, my Sun,

And in that light of life I'll walk

Till traveling days are done."

G. T. Hall.

Ellis.

The angel of death entered the home of Mr. T. R. Ellis, September 2, 1911 and bore away the spirit of his wife, "Evelina," to join the heavenly hosts around the throne. Be it Resolved:

1st. That Oak Grove Church, where she was faithful, and Sunday school and foreign missionary society, sustain a great loss and expresses appreciation of her unselfish life.

2nd. That we try to imitate her in punctuality, and the readiness with which she took a part, often the lead in all church work at Oak Grove Christian Church, where she was a true member since its organization.

3rd. That we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well, for we feel that our loss is her gain.

4th. That we extend to the bereaved husband, mother, father, sister and brother, our tenderest sympathy and that we manifest to her two motherless children a watchful love, commending them all to Him who has promised, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

5th. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy spread upon the minutes of each organization here represented, and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Alabama Letter.

Under the above heading I shall furnish The Sun an occasional letter during this conference year, as items of interest may reach me from the various parts of the Conference.

A word by way of reference to our recent annual session might be of interest to those who did not have the privilege of attending. To such I would say that the past session was, in many respects, the best meeting this body has had. In the opinion of this writer, we have never had a larger or more interested representation. The fellowship was delightful, the reports pointed, the speeches and addresses inspiring and forceful, and the business was conducted in a manly, dignified way.

The Conference was greatly rejoiced to have Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Pres. W. A. Harper pay (we mean pay, for we had long felt that the editor of The Sun and the president of the College owed us this much of their time) us a visit. And now that you have been to see us once, we shall expect you again a year from now. Pres. Harper said at New Hope that he used to visit a certain place and "the oftener he went the better he liked it, and the better he liked it the oftener he went." So, brethren, the oftener you come the better we like you and the better we like you the oftener we want you to come.

It was my privilege to attend the District Meeting at Forest Home last Saturday and Sunday. Saturday the congregation was rather small, due to the inclemency of the weather; but we had a good day's service. Sunday was clear and bright and a goodly number assembled to enjoy the worship of the day. Several helpful addresses on Sunday-school topics were heard in the early part of the day. At the eleven o'clock hour "Uncle Tom" Elder preached, his subject being, "Consider your ways." His sermon was enjoyed.

Now that the Conferences in Georgia and Alabama are over, I am on the field at Wadley ready to begin the work of the new conference year. Mrs. Langford and Dwight Hillis, who have been visiting the former's parents for several weeks, are expected today. We are looking forward to a good year's work in the vineyard of our Master.

Western Letter.

Greenville, Ohio. We arrived at Greenville August 30th, and set about at once getting ready for house-keeping and the taking up of pastoral work. Our church building here is a substantial brick structure with eight Sunday school rooms, and auditorium. It is well heated by two furnaces, nicely carpeted and well lighted. The carpet, which I think, cost about four hundred dollars, was a gift of Mrs. Frank McWhinney who lives just across the street from the church. She also gave to the church the nice $3,000.00 parsonage which we occupy. It is on East 5th St., and about one and one half blocks from Broadway, and about two blocks from the church building which stands near Broadway. These are certainly valuable and highly and appreciated gifts.

Our preaching services are well attended both morning and evening. It is a great joy to tell the wondrous story of Christ and His love to large and appreciative audiences. Indeed it is a great joy to tell the story to a single soul. Some of Christ's greatest sermons were preached to an audience of one. Two members were received into church fellowship on the third Sunday in October. On October 1st, I conducted the funeral services of Mr. Luvern M. Landis who died in Montreal, Canada. His remains were brought to Greenville for interment. He had not been home for about two and a half years. He was the only child of his widowed mother. His sickness was of short duration. His mother had arranged to go to his bedside and was to start the very day the message came that he was dead.

The Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Greenville Christian Church are engaged in an active campaign for The Christian Missionary. They have an all year program of monthly meetings. It is a nicely printed booklet with list of subjects and names of those who will discuss each subject. On October 16th, among other subjects discussed were, "Personal and Social Purity," "White Slave Traffic," "Mission Study—Italy." We have an interesting Sunday school. It is a "front line school" and has enrolled in all of its departments, four hundred and twenty-two. We have birthday offerings in the Sunday school—a penny for each birthday—and the occasion is always one of much interest. The "Bible Readers"—individuals who are reading the Bible through chapter by chapter—six chapters a week—make an interesting feature of the school. Just before closing the school every Sunday morning, the "Bible Readers" are asked to stand up, and all who stand are questioned by the Superintendent on the reading of the past week. We have completed Genesis and we are now reading Exodus. It is a good plan, very interesting and instructive, and I wish others might try it.

The Forward Movement, "Men and Religion,"—a movement to win men and boys for Christ and the Church and to enlist them in service for others, is claiming considerable attention in this section as it is in many other parts of the United States. It is not a new organization, I am glad to say, but it is an effort to federate the organizations of men and boys and to enlist individual male members of the church in real active, earnest Christian service. The originator of the movement is a Darke County, Ohio, man—Mr. Harry Arnold. His father, Rev. Mr. Arnold, of New Madison, Ohio, addressed an audience of men on the subject—"Men and Religion"—a few Sundays ago, at Greenville. I wish that the Conferences of the Southern Christian Convention might take up the subject and push the work. It is a great field for service; and I wish to suggest now, that in our next Southern Christian Convention, that one of the subjects on the program, be "Men and Religion." I hope for those assembled in Conference this fall great peace and joy in the Lord. Men, it seems, sometimes little think, care, or know what waves of influence they set in motion for or against an individual by speaking good or ill of a man or a cause. If there is a kind thought which I can think, let me think it now; if there is a kind word which I can speak, let me speak it now; if there is a kind deed which I can do, let me do it now; tomorrow may be too late.

P. H. Fleming.

Mount Hermon.

We held our last appointment before Conference the Third Sunday in October. The people were in fine spirits. We finished raising all the Conference apportionments and pastor's salary for the year. We are ready for Conference with some additions for foreign missions. This is a good kind people to serve. I feel like the church is taking on new life and planning to achieve greater things in the near future. They have made some improvements on the interior of the building this year and are discussing the idea of doing some work on the outside. I have served this people as pastor three years and while I leave them there is treasured in my heart a feeling of love and good wishes for the church as a whole. Thanks to every one who has contributed in any way to the happiness and success and support of the work here since I have been their pastor.

Plymouth.

Having written a few weeks ago an account of the work at this place. I come now with another encouraging word. While we have completed the improvements of which I wrote the last time we are still soliciting funds and material for the completion of the work. We have raised all the Conference apportionments for the year. The church promised $65 for pastor's salary. They have paid $81.85 and they say they want to make it $100.00 by Conference. This is better than they have done in fifteen years. Hurrah for Plymouth. They have a Sunday-school they say shall not go into winter quarters. Praise God for that. I am looking for great things to be done at Plymouth in the next year. This is the fourth year that I have served this people and have accepted a call back here for another year.

Amelia.

Last second Sunday was the last regular appointment here before Conference but we met last Sunday the fifth Sunday, inst., for the purpose of dedicating the house to the Lord.

The church has been organized twenty-six years by Dr. W. T. Herndon. It was organized in a free school house, near the present location of the church, which was known as Swiney Old Field. When the church was organized and made application for admission to the Conference it took the name of Amelia in honor of Sister Amelia Austin, a charter member and who still survives and was present Sunday. After a few years of its organization the church decided it could erect a building. They began to solicit funds and material. They had a goodly amount of this raised until interest seemed to die. The lumber remained piled one the lot until the most of it rotted. New interest and enthusiasm was raised and they went to work again to erect a new building with earnestness. Now they have a nice comfortable building complete, nicely painted on the outside, a nice Kimball organ, and new carpet on the aisles, altar and pulpit.

There was a large congregation present

Sunday and good attention. Bro. J. W. Patton preached the dedicatory sermon. It was appropriate, practical and spiritual. It was a source of inspiration to all who heard it. While the church here has had its discouragements there is a brighter day for it now. It has an almost ever green Sunday school. It has a membership of about sixty. It pays $75.00 for pastor's salary this year and has promised $100.00 for another. The work is pleasant and encouraging here. We have raised all the Conference apportionments here. There is a little more due on pastor's salary but hope to be a banner church at Conference.

My work has all been pleasant this year and I trust profitable to the Lord; to whom I give all the praise.

A. T. Banks.

THE LARGER PRAYER.

At first I prayed for Light:
Could I but see the way,
How grandly, swiftly, would I walk
To everlasting day!

And next I prayed for Strength,
That I might tread the road
With firm, unfaltering feet, and win
The heavens' serene abode.

And then I asked for Faith:
Could I but trust my God,
I'd live enfolded in His peace.
Though foes were all abroad.

But now I pray for Love,
Deep love to God and man:
A living love that will not fail,
However dark His plan;

And Light and Strength and Faith
Are opening everywhere;
God only waited for me till
I prayed the larger prayer.

—Edna Dean Cheney.

Rev. W. C. Wicker is recording secretary and Bro. J. D. Ballentine the efficient and accurate treasurer.

We did not hear the church letters read and so cannot say as to the work of the churches in the Conference the past year.

On Sunday Rev. C. E. Newman preached at the 11 a. m. service and Rev. W. G. Clements preached in the afternoon. Bro. Newman was assigned to preach a foreign missionary sermon, and his discourse was listened to with deep interest and close attention. It was much enjoyed, but on account of Bro. Newman's recent illness we presume, it did not contain any thought hearing on the subject of foreign missions. Bro. Newman is a clear thinker and an agreeable speaker and his host of friends were glad to greet and to hear him again.

Rev. W. G. Clements preached in the afternoon on the subject, Home Missions and his remarks were wholesome, pointed, and practical. Bro. Clements' heart is in the missionary work and his enthusiasm is contagious. Two good collections for missions were taken during the day, one at the morning, another at the afternoon service. It was a good day and highly enjoyed by the great congregation that gathered from many quarters. Rev. J. W. Wellons administered the communion at the close of the morning service and this was partaken of by a large number of communicants.

On Monday Presd. Harper made a great speech before the Conference in behalf of Elon College. It was great because the man's heart was in what he said and, as a consequence, other hearts were moved. The people listened while the heroic efforts of the faithful were recounted and the occasion full of inspiration and sacred emotions. The members of Conference present responded with more than a thousand dollars for the Special Fund. Many present had already given and this liberal response revealed still further the deep love for Elon College and the abiding faith in its future. The present canvass President Harper is making reveals an interest in the College and a care for its progress and success that is nothing less than wonderful.

The subject of missions received due consideration in the Conference and a Woman's Mission Board was appointed in this as it was in the Eastern Virginia Conference. Our people are simply not acquainted with the needs, demands and opportunities of the mission fields at home and abroad. There must be a campaign of enlightenment and instruction before we rise to the measure of our might in this matter of missions. If we knew more about missions we would do more for missions.

Rev. J. L. Foster's fine address about the Orphanage moved many in this good behalf and a liberal offering was taken for this charity. You may put it down that the response to the Orphanage will always be in proportion to its demands. This is real charity and a charity wisely managed is ever and always liberally supported.

The Conference hopes to erect at Chapel Hill a handsome house of worship by its next annual session, and there seems to be no good reason why this hope should not be realized. If we cannot build and maintain a good church at this point we would as well go out of the business of church building and maintenance. The need is pressing, the field is inviting, the outlook is promising and the membership there is already large and capable. The Conference at this session ordained two very promising men to elders' orders, Rev. J. Lee Johnson, and Rev. A. T. Banks. Two were licensed as probationers, W. B. Fuller, and J. C. Stewart. All four of these men are now students in Elon College and the two ordained have had successful experience in ministerial labors. The four are men of promise and the Conference is to be congratulated on the prospects before it in the labors of these young men.

The Conference was a season of personal joy and delight to the writer. Catawaha Springs is the church that received him in youth on profession of faith, and here his first attempt to preach was witnessed and heard in sympathy and patience. There were familiar faces and many cordial handshakes gladdened the heart. And now after almost four weeks of continuous talk and travel and labors more or less abundant, a day's quiet and meditation and recreation at my good friend's, J. Beale Johnson's happy, hospitable home, and a two hours successful fishing in his glorious fish pond make life seem worth while and fling a halo over all the trials, tasks and hardships I ever had. Peter is not the only man that ever went fishing and found a new and resurrected Blessing. J. O. A

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Railroads.

Let those who rant and rave about the railroads make a passing note about what this Southern system of ours is doing in New York just now to advertise and show up to best advantage the products of forests, farms, and orchards in the South. The Southern must have expended several thousand dollars in collecting and displaying material from all parts of the South, showing what this section can and does produce in field and in garden. Each day of the Fair at Madison Square Garden there is a lecture about the South and its industrial opportunities and resources by the Industrial Agent of the railroad. Of course the railroad has somewhat in view. But to secure this advertisement the States of the South would have to pay several thousand dollars, and it is needless to say it will be worth many times this amount in days to come. Frequently it occurs that the very best social and moral conditions are brought about in the search for economic results. At any rate those who care to know for themselves realize that railroads are not enemies to the common weal and that their progress and prosperity depend upon the material, mental and moral development of the communities which they traverse.

—Women's Work.—The dear women of our churches are exulting. There is cause. This is the year of jubilee for the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Just twenty-five years ago this work among the women for the causes of foreign missions began. The past year they have raised for Foreign Missions, $939,257.55, missing a round million dollars in one year by a little less than $61,000. This is an increase over last year's gifts of $195,267.24. This has not hurt work in the home field, but has helped it, especially in the matter of increased contributions. There is a campaign of enlightenment and information going on among the good women as touching the matter of Foreign Missions and we predict that the next quarter century will show wonderful things done by them in their missionary endeavor.

—The North Carolina and Virginia Conference meets at Bethlehem, Alamance, next Tuesday November 21. As reported by the pastor in The Sun of week before last, visitors coming by rail should get off at Elon College, whence conveyances will be provided for all who notify the chairman of the committee on transportation. It is six miles from the station out to the church and so it is worth while to notify the proper one of your intended coming.

—The exercises attendant upon the inauguration of Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., LL. D., as President of Union Christian College, Merom, Ind., are to be held Friday, November 17th, 1911, at 2:30 P. M. in the college chapel. A banquet is to follow at 7:30 P. M.

THE DESECRATION OF SACRED THINGS.

By Rev. C. H. Rowland.

The general impression prevails that God created the universe on such a vast scale for the display of His power and the glory of His grace in man's redemption. But we know it was purposed in the heart of God that created things should blend their music in one harmonious voice. Many, by sin, are now out of harmony with heavenly music, and God is using many means to bring man into harmony.

It is believed by many that the means used to accomplish moral reform are not effective. We know that the forces are working slowly, but they are working surely, for we read, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall he rooted up." While we know that there is a great work being done, yet there is a greater work to be done. This work of reform must be done, "precept upon precept, precept upon precept: line upon line, line upon line: here a little, and there a little."

The corruption in the hearts of men makes them desecrate sacred things. The evil of strong drink will make a man ignore all the circumstances of his position, and sacrifice his own dignity. He will jest about sacred things, and violate common decency. We have an example in Belshazzar, the king. He drank to drunkenness before his subjects, and brought the harem into the banqueting hall. He insulted and defied god, while he and the motley crowd drank from vessels sacred to God, and in their revelry praised other gods. His doom was written by the Divine finger on the wall where the light made it clear to the king. The king was slain that very night, and the curtain falls, and he must account for the desecration of sacred things.

It is, perhaps, the most obvious fact of human existence that the majority of men and women live in and for the physical part of their being, and think that they have a right to abuse their bodies in any way they choose. We know that this is the wrong conception, for we read, "and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body he preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." God would not have man injure himself in any way. Between stoicism and epicureanism stands the Lord accepting neither, rejecting both. As against the epicureans He stands for the rule of the Spirit over man's body, and not the rule of the body over the Spirit. The ministry of Christ began to the bodies of men. Disease, a physical consequence of sin in the world, was healed by His touch and word.

Dr. Scofield says, "And the body of man is what sin has made it. The home and servant of the spirit and the soul, it has obeyed sin in the lusts thereof. Doomed to die, though the spirit and soul cannot. The body is filled with the seeds of disease, the heritage of weakness, suffering, and decay. Jesus Christ begins by making this problem of man's degradation of spirit, soul, and body through sin His own especial and exclusive problem. He entered humanity as a pure stream enters a foul pool, clearing it, but also renewing it. He put honor upon all the primal instincts and passions of man while insisting that their only true development lay along the lines of purity and holiness. And his redemption brings the whole being into balanced symmetry and beauty."

There are many sacred things that we thoughtlessly desecrate besides the body. We shall mention only a few. The Church, which is the Sanctuary of the Lord, may be desecrated by irreverence, frivolity, and secularizing it. We ought to be reverent when we are in God's house. Yet, in saying that, we do not signify that we are to come up to Church under any sense of dread or restraint. But we are to come remembering that we are not coming to a neighbor's house, or friend's, but to God's house, and therefore we ought to be devout and reverent.

There is a pressing need for reminding young people of their obligations to their homes. The home is sacred, and the old commandment to honor father and mother should be remembered. The Bible, which we accept as the word of God, must be revered. We may desecrate the Book by jesting about it; by distorting its meaning. It is easy to neglect it, but it is dangerous. "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

There is the Lord's day, or the Christian Sabbath, which is given as a day of worship and rest. "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy, six days shalt thou labour, and do all thy work. But the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God." We so often desecrate the Lord's day by Sunday visiting; by attending to unnecessary secular things; by spending the day in revelry. We know that the humble and reverent attitude of the soul puts us right, not only with the Sabbath, but with everything that is good and true in this broad universe.

One of the crying needs is a public conscience. One who has a public conscience is loyal to his fellow-countrymen. We do not plead for more love for our country, but more love for our countrymen. It is easy to scream ourselves hoarse about our country, and then not love our countrymen. We find a great deal of love for the country, and church, but no particular interest in humanity. Many professed Christians are not willing to bear their part of the public responsibility. There is a want of truthfulness in listing taxable property. He has a public conscience who is always loyal to them, so that in no loves his fellow-countrymen, and seeks their welfare in every way possible: who case will he take advantage of them, or serve himself at their expense.

We need moral reform in order that we may get rid of political parasites. Political power is often used for treacherous and selfish ends. Knowledge of the law is sometimes used to fill the pocket, just as the mean bank clerk uses his knowledge of the combination to get at the treasure. To have a public conscience and be religious is, in God's name, to be good to our fellow men.

Some one has said, "Time is the broad bed of a great river. Public sentiment is its muddy stream running over the low flats of human nature, with its mean passions and its selfish ideals. But Christians are the gracious tributaries whose waters, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lamb, and by the sunshine of the hills of heaven, and kissed by the freshening flowers of grace and life, pour in their rivulets of Christ-like thought and feeling and save the world's public opinion from rotteness and death."

(Before the E. Va. Conference under Report on Moral Reforms.)

ALABAMA LETTER.

The first session of the district meeting of District No. 1, convened with New Harmony church last Saturday and closed Sunday. The session was not largely attended except by the people of the community, but the meeting was one of great interest and, we trust, highly beneficial. The writer preached his initiatory sermon as pastor here, on Saturday at eleven o'clock. We had a gracious service. The afternoon was most pleasantly spent in the discussion of topics of vital interest. Sunday morning, the superintendent, Bro. E. B. Lashley, conducted Sunday school, a goodly number being present. After Sunday school several talks were made on the Organized Class Movement. At eleven o'clock Rev. J. H. Hughes preached a most helpful, instructive sermon, which was enjoyed by those present. The work at this point has begun under encouraging circumstances.

Beulah entertained the District Sunday

School Convention last Saturday. We learn that the representation was not very large, but a good session was held.

The churches of the Alabama Conference are supplied with pastors for this Conference year as follows: Rev. J. W. Elder goes to Macedonia and New Home; Dev. J. D. Dollar will serve Rockstand, Forest Home, and Corinth; Rev. J. H. Hughes takes Dingler and Noon Day; Rev. C. W. Carter is in charge of Christiana, McGuire's Chapel, Rock Springs, Bethany; Rev. G. D. Hunt continues his work at Antioch, New Hope and Beulah; and this writer is to serve New Harmony, Pleasant Grove and Wadley. Mt. Zion, Flint Hill and Sardis have not secured a preacher yet. We trust that these points may be enabled to get pastors in the near future. This, we feel sure, Mt. Zion will do. As to Flint Hill and Sardis, both points are in a very precarious condition. It is therefore not at all probable that they will have regular preaching this year.

Rev. C. M. Dollar retires from active service, on account of impaired health. Bro. Dollar is one of our most able preachers and we regret to see him retire. We are hoping that a year's rest may restore him to vigorous health and give him back to us in regular, active service.

Rev. C. M. Carter hasn't accepted any work yet. He has Rose Hill, Columbus, Ga., under consideration.

At the recent session of Conference, Rev. J. H. Milam was granted a certificate of transfer to the Ga. and Alabama Conference. May the Lord bless him in this field. Bro. Milam has worked in the Georgia and Alabama Conference the past two years and has been used of God for the accomplishment of good.

IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

(How Homesteads Are Taken and Held.
By a Former Teacher in Elon College.)

Today has been spent by me in reading some "Suns" and Heralds and Elon Weeklies. This has been an excellent day for reading and meditating and I have verily enjoyed the articles read. I had read some of them before, but I read them hurriedly, for I was so glad to get them. Before I arose this morning I could hear the rain pattering on the roof. Low places are now full of water. The sun peeping out from below a cloud is now shining and sending his bright rays in through the west window. Truly, I am glad to see the sun, for I want a clear day tomorrow. It is to be the greatest day for me in South Dakota. Why? I am to make final commutation proof on my 160 acres of land. I was to prove up yesterday, but the commissioner was called to Rapid City. I have to take two witnesses to affirm that my statements are true. One witness is a homesteader in the same section; the other lives three miles from here, but has often seen me on my claim, for he has done work here. My land is one mile long and 1 quarter wide. There is a creek running through the north end. I am more fortunate than many are, for I have a few trees and a good well. I have the north forty fenced and expect to have the remainder fenced before another month. I have a very good garden considering that I never made one before and also that some have nothing growing because of the drought. I have a small three-roomed house and a little hole for a cellar. I expect to build another room this spring, then I can rent the house. Many families here live in one room 10 x 14. When I read your article about your visit to the Lee Homestead, I wondered what you would think of our small houses. Your description was so good and the comments concerning the owner's hospitality were so pleasing that I wanted to visit them. According to reports Mr. Beale Johnson surely has a lovely home, and I have often wanted to see it. But most of all that I want to see in the "South" (Not in the "Southland") are my good and true friends. Some time I am hoping to make a tour of the south and I think the time is not far distant. I believe more than ever that our southern Christians are wide awake and I wish for one and all everything that they need to make them what they aspire to be.

I had a S. S. in a school shack for fifteen months. At present I am teaching school seven and one half miles north. This may be my last trip home for a few weeks. I did not want to attempt to keep up the S. S. as I do not have to come to my claim every week after I prove up. Some are on their claims very little and prove up, but I began by being on mine every week and I have kept it up. I have kept an account of every night's absence and where I was. I have been away teaching, but my near witness can testify that I returned every week.

It is now 8:30 and is nearly dark. Tomorrow morning I have to arise early, get the team up and start about eight o'clock for my witness and then ride to Quinn, a distance of fifteen miles. The woman at my boarding place will have dinner ready for us.

I shall conclude and read some more from the "Suns." I have not seen a person today and have heard no one's voice except my own when I tried to sing a little or talked to the neighbor's dog that stays here when I am here.

OUR ORPHAN CHILDREN.

The annual proclamation by our President, calling upon all people to give thanks to Almighty God for His manifold mercies and blessings during the past year should draw the minds of our people more than ever to the needs of the great work which is being done for the dependent orphan children of our state.

This work is growing each year and the number of applications for admission of destitute, homeless children, who have been deprived of their natural protector, is constantly increasing. Most nobly have our people responded to the increased needs, caused by advance in cost of living and expansion of the work. We look with pride at the various institutions where these little ones are being cared for and trained for greatest usefulness to God and the world. There is every reason to believe that the investment which has been made has already paid rich returns in an educated, Christian manhood or womanhood of former inmates, who, but for these institutions, would have remained in ignorance and want.

The needs of the work are constantly increasing as the cost of living advances, the number cared for grows larger, and their education and training takes a broader scope; therefore, in order to do the greatest good to the greatest number these institutions must have increased and larger gifts. In the good state of Georgia a plan has been inaugurated to get all friends of the work to give one day's salary or wages to aid this cause. The result was an offering of $150,000. Will not each of our readers follow this example and give their income for one day out of three hundred and sixty-five and thus help the homeless children of our state? We desire to publish a list of those who will make this contribution. What we desire is to get each man or woman who feels it in their heart to aid this cause to adopt a systematic plan of giving and thus realize the blessedness of helping this worthy cause. Will you do it?

There is no sort of wrong deed of which a man can hear the punishment alone. You cannot isolate yourself and say that the evil that is in you shall not spread. Men's lives are as thoroughly blended with each other as the air they breathe. Evil spreads as necessarily as disease.—George Eliot.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—After next week we hope to settle down to normal conditions as to editorial matter in this office. The Conferences have claimed us for six weeks, and the writing has been on the wing.

—That is wholesome news indeed from New York to President Harper that the Francis Asbury Fund at its recent annual session gave Elon College $1,500, to be used as the College Trustees may deem proper.

—His friends will regret to learn of the rather serious illness of Rev. J. W. Wellons at Elon College. Bro. Wellons took his bed more than a week ago and at this writing shows little sign of improvement.

—Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, N. C., has recovered from his severe recent illness and is now meeting his appointments regularly. He is in better health than when taken ill and is to carry the same work next year as this. It is a source of gratification that this good man and faithful servant of God has been spared to go forward with his work.

—Of course everybody at the Eastern Virginia and the Eastern N. C. Conference was glad to see Dr. J. P. Barrett, Editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty. By the way, we venture the assertion that Dr. Barrett has more children named for him than any man of our Christian ministry. I think I know close to a hundred "Barretts," "Pressleys," and "Dr. Barretts," and it would be astounding to know how many yet there are that I do not know. I take it of course that it was all because he was once editor of The Christian Sun, whereat we rejoice and take fresh courage.

 The children in the home ought to share in the blessings of good reading. Get for them Mrs. Burnett's Missionary Stories. The children ought to know in their early days something of the struggles of the missionaries on the field, and something of the triumphs of the Gospel in other lands. Mrs. Burnett's book is just the thing to serve a good purpose. The book is neatly bound in red cloth, and sells for 35 cents per copy, postpaid. Order it from The Christian Sun. It is full of fine stories on missionary topics that will certainly entertain, interest and instruct the children.

—Rev. M. W. Butler goes from our church at Newport News, Va., to Conshohocken, Pa., to accept the pastorate of the Christian church there about December 1. Bro. Butler is a consecrated man and a good preacher. We wish him good success in his new field of labor and trust that he will not be long in returning to the South to which he rightfully belongs.

—Does your church use the Christian Hymnary? If not, why not? It is one of the best books published by any of the denominations, and we believe the cheapest book of church music with which we are acquainted, no matter by whom published. If your church is not using it, get at it quickly. For terms, prices, etc., apply to The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C.

—One of the most interesting and loyal brethren we met while in Alabama recently was Bro J. W. Patterson, Opelika, Ala. His mother was the first charter member to join Pleasant Grove church, Chambers County, Ala., and Bro. Patterson was carried there when a child of two years old. His mother trained him to love and reverence the church. At eighteen he professed faith in Christ and became a member. He lives far from his church now, but remains true and loyal to it, making pilgrimages there as often as he can. He is now a member of an organized Bible class in Opelika, in a Methodist church because no Christian church is near, which class numbers 108 and there is no member under 40 years of age. The Christian Sun has been in the home of Bro. Patterson all his life, first at his mother's, later in his own home. He came all the way to Columbus, Ga., to meet and greet The Sun's editor and to give President Harper a contribution to the College. Bro. Patterson believes in his church and is interested in all it undertakes.

—The editor of The Christian Sun is not in politics and has no desire whatever to take a hand, but he wants here and now to pledge his unqualified endorsement of the platform now laid down and nailed tight together by Col. Wade Harris, of The Charlotte Evening Chronicle. The Colonel wants the Torrens land title law, and the dog law—or a law to protect sheep against worthless curs—and Col. Bob Phillips, of the Greensboro News, wants added a plank for the construction and maintenance of better public roads. Now brethren you are talking sense and we are with you to the last ditch. But mark our words: When the candidates begin to run next year they will wear themselves out talking trusts, corporations and tariff, things they are as powerless to control as they are the color of the eyes of the man in the moon, and never a word about these practical, these at-home, these moral and religious issues that really signify for a better State and community. We have had trust-busters, and tariff-squealers for these twenty years till after election day, and then they are as silent as the tomb till another election.

—Last Saturday, November 11, was a pleasant day indeed to many of us at Elon, made so by a jolly, good natured, happy throng of picnickers from McCullers, N. C., and vicinity. The Philathea class of Wentworth church, under the management of Mrs. George M. McCullers, conceived the idea and made the trip and the day possible. The party numbered about fifty, inculding the Superintendent of the School, Bro. John Sorrell, and his assistant, Bro. Geogre McCullers, their wives as chaperons and several men and women of the community. The party had a private car attached to the regular morning train, which arrives at Elon at 11:30, and leaves about 5:00 P. M. The college cornet band greeted the party at the station with a lively air, and the student body turned out almost en masse to give the visitors glad welcome. President Harper threw open the spacious dining room of West Dormitory and college girls served hot coffee, and made the dinner hour a happy and cheerful one. The visitors brought a magnificent dinner, a great spread indeed of an infinite variety of good things to eat. We have not sat down to a better dinner nor with a jollier party in many a day. The visitors spent the hours in viewing all departments of the college, in going through the Orphanage and visiting friends and places of interest in the village. All too quick the hour for departure had arrived and the people at Elon were happier and richer for the good and glad day. Everybody at Elon hopes sincerely that Mrs. McCullers and her fine class and good company will come back again and gladden our hearts with their good cheer, their splendid behavior, their merry chat, and their elegant dinner. No party ever came to Elon that made a finer impression and gave to the community a gladder day. We could wish that such pilgrimages to the college could be made by classes and Sunday schools frequently.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 6, 1911.

To the Editor:

I arrived in this city Saturday and was soon in the hospitable home of Pastor Wm. T. Walters.

The purpose of my visit was to be present and take part in the dedication of the new Christian church. It is located near the heart of the city on the corner of Braddock and Clifford Streets, and only three blocks from the Post Office and Public Library. The building is 76 x 64 with a tower 13 feet square. The main auditorium is 52 x 32; the main Sunday school room is 30 x 23 feet; and the Primary room is 34 x 14. All three rooms open into one auditorium on occasion. The pews seat 375 and there are 200 chairs in the two Sunday school rooms, making the total seating capacity 575. The building is heated by steam and lighted by electricity, and the floors are neatly carpeted. The walls are of stone and red brick, with cathedral glass windows, and a good bell hangs in the tower. The interior bears the marks of the painter's brush and the pulpit furniture is neat. The acoustics are next to perfect and the house in all its appointments compares favorably with the best churches in the city.

The main service was set for 2:30, P. M. People came in by private conveyances from Timber Ridge church, nearly twenty miles away, and others came by rail down the Valley. At the 11:00 A. M. service about 300 were present; at the afternoon service more than 500 were present; at the evening service about 250, making more than a thousand during the day.

The afternoon was set apart for an offering and the dedicatory service. The following ministers were present: Rev. J. H. Lacy, pastor of Presbyterian church; Dr. J. P. Hyde, M. E. Church, South; Rev. C. D. Taylor, pastor M. E. Church; Rev. Wm. H. Carter, pastor Baptist Church; E. B. Jackson, Baptist Evangelist; Rev. J. H. Barney, Christian; Rev. A. R. Garland, Christian; Rev. A. W. Andes, Christian, the pastor and myself.

The day was perfect, the congregation was great, the occasion auspicious. Now the membership is only seventeen; but the city is sympathetic and kindly disposed toward the new movement. Many of the members of other churches in Winchester came from Christian churches in the surrounding country or their parents before them did and that disposes them kindly toward the Christian church.

The lot on which the church stands cost $2,700.00, and the building and furnishings cost $10,813.00, making the total cost of $13,513.00. There had been paid on the property $4,468.00, leaving a balance of $9,045.00. It was a part of my duty to raise what I could out of that audience. Remember that only seventeen in that great congregation of more than five hundred were members of this church. We had to depend on members of other Christian churches and members of other denominations, as most of the seventeen had done already what they felt able. The result of the offering for the day was $1,008.00 and more than half of it in cash, $615.00 being the exact amount in cash. This sum of $1,008.00 subtracted from the unpaid balance of $9,045.00 leaves yet unpaid $8,037.00. The result of the offering did not justify the dedication of the church and hence the dedicatory service was indefinitely postponed. This was a keen disappointment to pastor Walters, but the universal verdict was that the offering was great and the postponement wise.

Timber Ridge Church, twenty miles away in the mountains of West Virginia, has been the most liberal contributor to this enterprise and the good people of that good church will do more. Two members of that church, E. R. Johnson and L. S. Johnson, gave one hundred dollars each yesterday and drove twenty miles besides.

A. B. Richards and Alva C. Richards, father and brother of Mrs. Wm. T. Walters, the pastor's wife, gave one hundred and twenty-five dollars, and one hundred dollars respectively, and they are not members of the Christian church; though brother Richards told me yesterday that all his family would unite with this new church. He has means, a large family, and a liberal heart.

When the entire history of this daring undertaking is studied, the small number with which brother Walters began, the short time in which he has been engaged, and the great results accomplished, it all stands to his credit and the credit of the brave souls who have stood with him. It amazes one to see how they erected so good a church, and equipped it with electric lights and steam heat and such neat and substantial furniture at a cost of $10,813.00, in addition to the $2,700.00 the cost of the lot. The money has been wisely spent and the needs are still very great. Any liberal-minded person or church disposed to help a needy and worthy enterprise could hardly do better than to send a contribution by check to Rev. Wm. T. Walters, Winchester, Virginia. He would receive it thankfully and apply it on the debt.

When this church is out of debt, it will be the natural focus of the Virginia Valley Central Conference. The city itself stands in the center of Frederick county in this fertile valley. In addition to wheat, corn, hay, cattle, it is fast becoming a great apple-producing section. I understand the annual shipment is about a quarter of a million barrels of fine apples. Lands sell from a hundred to two hundred dollars per acre. People move and more leave the country and settle in town. Some of them will naturally find a church home in our church. People go to the city like the products of the forest, the orchard, and the farm. Already the Conference feels proud of the Winchester church and never in the history of the Conference was so much money raised in one day in one church as in this church yesterday.

The pastor is protracting the meeting and I have consented to remain and preach for him till Wednesday night.

That no one of three great preachers, Rev. Drs. Lighbourne, Atkinson, and Barrett, could be present yesterday to lead the work was a great disappointment; but earth and the occasion with His light and His love.

W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Yesterday evening the rain took a hand in affairs, but services went on as usual. Brother Harrell reports a good day at Portsmouth. Last Thursday evening the Portsmouth church had charge of the banquet given by the Y. M. C. A. of that city.

Rev. M. L. Bryant has found it necessary to rest awhile from his Berkeley work. Overwork compelled him to seek a short vacation which he is spending at his father's home near Harrisonburg in the Virginia Valley. Bro. Bryant, your friends are hoping that a couple of weeks hunting and farming will make you feel "as fine as silk" and enable you to be back as spry as ever.

Mrs. Escott, wife of Major Escott, of the Salvation Army, spoke at the morning service at the Memorial Temple. In the evening Rev. W. D. Harward spoke. Prof. S. M. Smith was present at the Christian Endeavor service and spoke there. The Temple adopted resolutions concerning Rev. McD. Howsare's pastorate. They will be published in the next letter.

In spite of the rain last Thursday evening the Brotherhood Bible Class of the Third Christian Church enjoyed their first social gathering for the fall and winter season. It was held at the pastor's home. A series of five athletic contests were held, each member present enrolling in three of them. The "Chariot Ride" was one of the chief attractions and was greatly enjoyed. The Brotherhood class has arranged to have a social gathering each month. Next month a debate will be one of the features. Ice-cream, music, cake and apples closed the evening's pleasure.

COLLEGE NEWS.

We are happy to announce this week that the Francis Palmer Board of N. Y. has again shown its liberality toward Elon College. On last Saturday President Harper was informed that at a recent meeting of the Board, it voted Elon College $1,500. Whene announced to the Hints for This Lesson.

You are anxious to have a most delightful meeting for "Thanksgiving." All of you will be needed to have the "most delightful" meeting. The leader should begin early to plan a good strong program, and all the members should help by doing what has been planned. It takes more than a president to have a successful society; it takes more than a chairman to make an active committee; and it takes more than a leader to have a good meeting.

Topics for Discussion.

1. Why do we have Thanksgiving day?
2. Tell of the origin of the day.
3. Why does the government recognize it?
4. Is it a national or a religious holiday?

Topical Analysis.

1. Peace comes by obeying Christ.
2. The world can give no lasting peace.
3. The Gospel is a message of peace.
4. Blessings rest upon the obedient.
5. Storms pass away when Christ comes.
6. Is Christ dwelling in you?
7. Is your society a blessing to the church?

ABOUT THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving day carries us back to one of the Jewish Feasts. When all the crops were gathered, all the tribes journeyed up to the mecca of their nation and religion, Jerusalem, to spend a week acknowledging God's goodness. In this busy day, we think we cannot give so much time to a period of thanksgiving and service, so we take just a day. Even at Christmas only a part of our people take more than a day, while those engaged in the service of big corporations or public work do not get even a single day.

Among the Americans, Thanksgiving day had its origin in 1621. This was at the end of the first harvest, after that brave band of pioneers had landed from the Mayflower. Governor Bradford gets the credit of making the first proclamation. We know not what the Jamestown colony had done, but our good opinion of them leads us to believe that they must have had similar services.

The period of the first American Thanksgiving was a week, and was mutually enjoyed by the Pilgrims and King Massoit, with ninety of his braves. Many souls of the Mayflower had been harvested by the "grim reaper." A thousand doubts, misgivings, hardships and dangers had befallen them. A writer of the time says that "the barley crop was good, but the peas were not worth gathering." The cold of the long New England winter was upon them when that week of Thanksgiving came. Still they found much to be grateful for, and their expressions of appreciation of God's infinite goodness were something more than mere lip service. If they had much to praise God for, surely we can give thanks from the depths of our hearts for so many bounties.

Thanksgiving was irregularly observed by the colonists, "as unexpected prosperity or unlooked-for aid in adversity moved them to special acts of praise." In 1874 it became national, but was not observed regularly except in New England. In January, 1895, President Washington set aside February 19 as a time of special thanksgiving and praise. In 1863 President Lincoln issued a proclamation for a day of the kind in the autumn and since that time the occasion has been regularly observed. It is now considered a stated holiday for the last Thursday in November.

Says one writer: "It is a great thing for a great nation, intoxicated with the hum of the wheels of industry and charm-by the glitter of gold, to close the throttle and sit still in the cab for a day; and meditate upon and render thanks to God for all His mercies." May all Christian Endeavorers regard the day so highly.

For the Christian Endeavorers.

1. And we exhort you, endeavorers, admonish the disorderly, encourage the fainthearted, support the weak, be long-suffering toward all.

2. See that none render unto any one evil for evil; but always follow after that which is good, one toward another, and toward all.

3. Rejoice always; pray without ceasing; in everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you.

4. Quench not the Spirit; despise not preaching; prove all things; hold fast that which is good.

5. Abstain from every form of evil.

6. And the God of peace himself sanctify you wholly; and may your spirit and soul and body be preserved, entire, without blame at the coming of Jesus Christ.

7. Faithful is he that calleth you, who will also do it.

FARMING FOR THE MASTER.

Why not plant a thousand acres for Christ, in the Southern Christian Convention next year?

This article is to suggest to pastors, officers and members of country churches a plan of service that will be wholesome, interesting, practical and of untold helpfulness to the cause of our Lord and Master.

About two-thirds of our members live in the country and their families are engaged in the cultivation of the soil. Most of the number are owners of their own homes, but this plan will work whether one is landlord or tenant, or both.

On every farm, why not set aside a certain plot of land, say one-fourth of an acre, or two acres, or even more, and agree to give the crop raised upon it to the church of Christ. There is no farmer in our country too poor to do this. If he is to obey the scriptural injunction, he will make the plot of the church, one-tenth of his entire crop.

If the finance committee, deacons or pastors of the church will take up this matter and get a good-natured rivalry between ten or more of the prominent members of the church, it will, I verily believe, spread to every family represented in the church. With proper encouragement such a plan ought to double the income of any church in one year.

Imagine the enthusiasm and spirit that it would bring to the church to have the families represented in it, raising some crop that could be given to the work. It would be well in the outset to limit the amount each family could have, and in no event should a man be allowed to let his zeal cause him to undertake too much. Let the size of his plot for the church be governed by the amount of land he cultivates.

This suggestion will probably be hailed as a dream—as something impracticable. But I ask in all seriousness, why is it not practicable and something more than a mere dream? The idea is not wholly original. It has been suggested by reading of its trial on a smaller scale by Sunday school classes, young men's organizations, etc.

If the church, or a laymen's league, is not willing to push the plan, this would be a splendid opportunity for an organized class or C. E. Society to get in some work. Let this suggestion be taken by some organized class. Get every member to agree to give a certain amount of land to the Lord's service; then agree to give it just such cultivation and care as he would give some crop planted for himself.

What would the harvest be? Something more than bushels of corn, pounds of cotton, or dollars and cents. There would be something of the man's self in the gift that would follow it like a benediction and help the work the dollars was to do. A certain amount would be for the expenses of the local church and a proportionate part for the extension of the kingdom throughout the world.

Imagine a week-day meeting at the church of the Laymen's League of Blank chapel to receive the reports by the farmers or their children as to the Lord's crop. Every one would be so happy over the service rendered that he would have no envy against the man whose acre had produced the most money.

This movement ought to be advanced by the laymen, for if the ministers attempt it there will be somebody ready to say it is a plan of theirs to get more money. Why not take this upon yourself, members of the finance committee and deacons? Give it a trial; it can certainly do no harm.

Say to your members, "How much will you plant," and you will relieve yourself of asking them, "How much will you give?"

During the first year of the trial members of the church should not let up in their cash gifts to the church and wait until the end of the year to pay with their crop. Get a year ahead, so that the crop may be marketed in the winter and be for the church's expenses the ensuing year.

With Bethlehem Sunday School.

Rev. J. V. Knight and Mr. J. S. Truitt visited the Sunday school of Bethlehem church, near Elon College, the first Sunday in this month in the interest of organized class work. Mr. Knight delivered a strong and very practical address on the subject. Following this the two visiting brethren met with the several classes and talked over the matter of class organization. There is one organized class of young women in the school and this is doing excellent work. Miss Lillie Kernode is president. Miss Nora Price has organized a class of boys and this organization is full of promise.

Brother Knight is one of the Conference secretaries that is at work. Which one of the others will be next to report visits made?

CONFIDENCE IN OTHERS.

Very much of the progress and prosperity of any community depend upon men's confidence in each other. Now if all of the people in a particular community were untruthful and dishonest, there would be a most deplorable and disastrous state of affairs. All kinds of businesses would very seriously suffer. No high and healthy progress could be made in any direction. It is the people who command the implicit and wholesome confidence of their fellows that are the true salt of society. Upon the strength of their word, others proceed to say and do certain things which they would not say and do if it were not for such confidence. And yet a risk is always run in one's placing utmost confidence in the respected veracity and supposed integrity of even those whom he has long regarded as being thoroughly reliable. In the country in which I reside, there was a bank of long standing, whose cashier had been in its employment for more than thirty years. All who dealt with him, besides very many in that city, had the fullest confidence in him, and because of this, a large amount of money was entrusted to his care. Suddenly it was discovered that this man was a defaulter, and to such an extent that the bank failed.

At this juncture the cashier committed suicide. Very naturally, the whole city was profoundly shocked, as were also many people in the county, and elsewhere. It was very hard for the man's friends to believe that he ever would destroy the ground of their confidence in him. For more than thirty years his character had appeared to be so well established in uprightness as to lead people to think that he never would do a dishonest act. And this is only one instance among many thousands of a similar kind. A very notable one appears in the case of Dr. Frederick A. Cook, who had asserted that he reached the North Pole on April 21, 1908. Multitudes of people had large confidence in him, and therefore in his assertions. Men who had long and intimately known him, confided in him completely. How astounded they were when it was known that he had deceived them! But all of us may have all confidence in the unchangeable and veracious God. It is un-student body this morning, this brought forth tremendous applause.

Saturday the College community was permitted to be host to the McCullers Sunday school, of McCullers, N. C. The school came in a special car attached to the 11:28 train and numbered fifty strong. They returned to their home at 5:00 in the afternoon and seemed to have a pleasant time. We were very glad indeed to have them with us. One of the amusements offered the visitors was a basket ball game between the varsity quint and the second team.

A most instructive and helpful Christian Endeavor service was held last night. Misses Annie Bagwell and Nellie Fleming led the meeting and it was participated in by a great many, some making strong appeals, others citing statistics showing the awful evils of intemperance in the United States alone. Misses Barnes and Clements sang a beautiful duet, which added much to the spirit of the evening.

President Harper and Dr. Atkinson have returned from the Georgia and Alabama Conference. They also attended the Eastern N. C. Conference and the Eastern Virginia Conference, at which places the Special Fund was given a warm reception and was increased in a substantial way.

Uncle Wellons returned home from the Eastern North Carolina Conference and immediately took his bed with a deep cold. He seems to be a little better at this writing, but as yet he is not out of his room.

Two new students enrolled this week. This brings the total enrollment up to date to 233. Others are yet to come in during the fall term. Let the good work keep on.

Rev. J. F. McCulloch, Editor of The Methodist Protestant Herald, Greensboro, N. C., preached a most excellent sermon before the student body yesterday. We are always glad to welcome the Doctor in our midst and trust that he will come again to us in the near future.

On last Sunday Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., Editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty, was on the hill and preached to the student body and villagers. Dr. Barrett is always a welcome guest of the College and it would please us greatly if he would make his visits a little more frequent. He returned to his home on Monday following.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago by order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

The previous letter was written in the midst of the Eastern North Carolina Conference's thirteenth annual session, the first I had ever been privileged to attend. Once before it had been my pleasure to attend a closing session of this earnest body of Christian workers, but this time I had the good fortune to see the first, last, and all the intervening sessions, and I thoroughly enjoyed each one.

It was a pleasure to me to meet the lay-brethren of this Conference. The ministers I had known before, but unfortunately had a personal acquaintance with only a few of the pillars of the Church among the laity. I found them loyal, large-hearted, progressive in the Master's work. The last session was to me the most impressive of all the sessions, for it included the memorial services in honor of Rev. A. P. Barbee, a member of the Conference and pastor at the time of his translation of the entertaining church. Fine words of deserved praise were paid that fine soldier of the Cross by his brethren in the ministry. Only one layman participated in extended remarks, but his tribute from the heart stirred his audience, because as was evident from the first word he spoke the speaker loved Brother Barbee and honored him in a sense that his ministerial brethren could not. Brother Barbee was his pastor. But the second impressive scene in that closing memorable session was the licensing of two young men to preach the gospel and the ordination of two promising licentiatees as elders. My heart said within me as these young men were being commissioned for their work immediately after the memorial services to Brother Barbee that God truly calls home the workers, but the work goes on. God had called home one laborer during the year, but He had put four in his place. I believe that is always God's will, for His work to grow, and the only reason why it does not grow more rapidly is that we do not trust Him enough. Every report of every committee is worthy of special mention; but I am not writing the Conference minutes and so refrain from individual reference to any of them. It was a great body of great men engaged in a great way about a great work—the work of the kingdom of God—and that is praise enough for all.

Of course the Conference rallied to the Special Fund, ministers and laity both vieing with each other in their endeavor to swell the total to large proportions, which they succeeded in doing, contributing $1,825 to the cause and promising more when I should be able to visit the churches individually, the largest individual subscription being given by Capt. W. T. Young in the amount of $500.00. It is a pleasure to give the brethren a chance to help the College when they respond so liberally, and I am persuaded that they give liberally because they realize what the College has done for our Church, but chiefly because the members of our Brotherhood are the most liberal to their church enterprises of any people in the land. I am glad to be privileged to count myself one among so liberal, loyal, generous a people. But I must not close this epistle (Mr. Editor, I think it should be so styled rather than a letter, because a letter treats of one theme only, while an epistle allows larger latitude; you know what I mean, for Editors know everything, and if that is not the word, please insert the correct one) without thanking the Philathea Class of the Wentworth Sunday-school, Mrs. George McCullers, teacher, for bringing a most agreeable company of fifty to spend the day picnicing here Saturday. We were glad to have you, enjoyed your company, were inspired by your fellowship, are richer by your having come, and shall hope to have you do so again.

And I am sure that every friend of the College will join me in thanking the Board of Trustees of the Francis Asbury Palmer Fund for their generous appropriation to the College at their recent meeting in New York City of $1,500 for the current year. This Board includes in its membership some of the strongest friends the College has and they always show their friendship in a substantial way. The College hopes to make a record this year that will, as in times past, justify the confidence this handsome gift exhibits. Thank you, kind friends.

W. A. Harper.

Mrs. W. A. Massie died in her home, Youngsville, N. C., September 12th, 1911, in the thirty-second year of her age, leaving a husband, four children, and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss. One dear child preceded her to the grave. Our sister embraced religion in early youth and joined the Christian church at Oak Level. She was married to Brother W. A. Massie January 7, 1897. She was a gentle and affectionate wife and mother and gave abundant evidence of her piety throughout her life and died in great peace. May our loving Savior comfort, bless, and ever direct the greatly bereaved husband and dear children.

My Dear Children and Friends:
 The Annual Thanksgiving has been proclaimed by our President. What shall it mean to us? A day for hunting of rabbits or birds, or carousing, or shall it mean a day of grace and gratitude? We are still the strong men and women of life made thus by His love. Thanksgiving should be a day of restful meditation and prayer. It should be a day when our hearts are in conversation with God; giving Him our gratitude for His overflowing goodness unto us. We have had bread and meat to eat, clothes to wear, air to breathe, and water to drink, and most of us have had good homes to enjoy. Now what gifts of gratitude will we make to God's poor for all His goodness unto us? Our Southern Christian Convention has set apart this Thanksgiving Offering for the support of the Christian Orphanage, which needs very much your hearty and liberal support. What will your thank offering be—a nickle, a dime, 25 cents? God has given you hundreds, and to some thousands of dollars, and now will you not measure to Him in the same coin and give dollars for this worthy charity and thus make your own heart glad and help us who are at the Orphanage?

The many friends at the Eastern N. C. Christian Conference gave us a liberal help on our general expenses. We are grateful to them all—quite a number of these friends are from Catawba Springs where the Conference was held and whose Sunday school every month sends from 2 to 3 dollars. We had a splendid Conference and the home congregation seemed to enjoy it. The Thanksgiving envelopes have been sent by mail to the Valley Va., Conference (to the Secretaries), the Alabama Conference, and by express to the Ga. and Alabama, and the other Conferences by the delegates and pastors. We hope as the churches get these envelopes that the offering will be taken at once—giving an opportunity for every one to give liberally for it's from these voluntary offerings we get our Orphanage living—we have no assessment on any church—just as you give so must we live. We have 47 children present in our home and now between 15 and 20 applications—some of them very worthy.

We are glad to report on the deep well, in addition to amounts already reported:

Nathalie, Va., November 6, 1911.

Dear Unele Jim:
 I am a little girl ten years old and wish to join your band of happy cousins.

I joined Liberty Christian Church last July and enjoy going to Sunday school and preaching very much. We had services in our new church for the first time fifth Sunday in October. Rev. C. E. Newman is our pastor.

We expect to complete our house of worship except the painting, at once.

I go to school and like it very much. I am in the fourth grade.

Enelosed find my dime.
 Your little niece,
 Agnes Whitt.

A nice letter, Agnes, and you are very welcome to our Band of Cousins. We are in need of workers and every dime helps so much.

Stanleyton, Va., Nov. 6, 1911.

Dear Unele Jim:
 I will write my letter and send my dime for November. I am going to school now and am busy trying to learn all of my lessons well. I like my teacher fine. Her name is Miss Holmes, from Luray.

I will close with much love and best wishes for you and all the little cousins. From your little friend,

Willie Smith.

Dimes and letters are very acceptable at this time, Willie, so you must keep up yours and hold up your end of the line.

Sanford, N. C., November 6, 1911.

Dear Unele Jim:
 It is my time to write again, so here is my dime for November.

Unele Jim, I am siek, not able to sit up, so sister is writing for me. I have been siek for a week, and have had to be away from school. Hope I will be able to go soon as I do not like to stay away long at a time. Hope all the cousins are well and having a good time.

I close with love to you and the cousins.

Your loving niece,
 Annie Pearl Way.

Guess you'll soon be well again, Annie Pearl, as it doesn't take little folks long to get up. They do not like to stay in bed, and we hope all goes well with you now.

MISSION BOARD PROCEEDINGS.

The Mission Board of the Christian Church met in annual session in the C. P. A. Chapel, Dayton, Ohio, Wednesday, October 11, 1911 and adjourned the following Wednesday.

The minutes of the Mission Council meetings and Corresponding votes were read and approved.

The Foreign Mission Secretary, the Home Mission Secretary, the Treasurer, the Publisher of the Christian Missionary, the Secretary of the Book and Literary Department, the Auditors, made their reports and recommendations and they were referred to their proper committees.

Communications from churches, missionaries, conferences, missions, individuals, with appeals from new fields were read and referred to proper committees.

The following resolutions were adopted:

That during the past year we have raised for Home Missions $9,537.50 and $19,530.98 (including special offerings toward the ten thousand dollar fund) for Foreign missions being an increase in the former of about $1,000, and in the latter of about $5,000.

That this falls far short of the goal fixed by the Troy convention, namely, $15,000 for Home missions and $25,000 for Foreign missions per year.

That our work urgently needs the amount fixed as a goal and we earnestly plead with our people to be loyal to the recommendation of their convention and the needs of the work and arise to their glorious privilege.

That we apportion for the Home field $6,700; for Porto Rico, $3,300; for Japan, $10,000 (including medical bills reported).

That the Treasurer's bond $10,000, be renewed and that we appropriate $30 for that purpose; also $10 for the clerical work of the Recording Secretary; $10 for auditing; a sufficient sum for the expenses of the Board and Council meetings.

That the salaries of the officers for the year be the same as last year.

That we appropriate $50 to the Laymen's Missionary Committee appointed by the A. C. C. at Troy for inaugurating the work of the committee.

Adopted the financial reports of the officers, and the auditors as follows:

We, the undersigned, beg leave to report that we have carefully audited the books of your Treasurer for the year ending September 30, 1911, and find them correctly kept. We have also examined his vouchers and all legal papers and collaterals in his possession and find them and all moneys properly accounted for.

The books as kept by your Home Mission and Foreign Mission Secretaries agree with the books of your Treasurer.

We recommend that the Home and Foreign secretaries keep a complete record of all receipts for their departments excepting their salaries, including what may be paid them by the Treasurer and amounts paid to the Treasurer and of all other disbursements and to preserve vouchers for same as far as possible.

That we urge our officials to lay emphasis and bend their efforts this year toward the raising of funds. To this end that they spend much time in the field and to make this possible that we appropriate $500 for office help.

That the debit balance against the literature account be disposed of as follows:

That $46.94 be charged to home missions, and that the balance of $200 be charged equally to the home and foreign funds; and that the $35.50 charged against the Craigville Missionary Institute be charged equally to the home and foreign funds.

That the Treasurer be authorized to negotiate such temporary loans for the Board as may be necessary to meet the actual current expenses during the year.

That the Foreign Mission Secretary be instructed to continue the effort to secure the remainder of the $10,000 pledged at the Troy convention.

Appropriations were made for the following fields: Winchester, Va., Columbus, Ga., So. Norfolk, Va., Portsmouth, Va., Third Church, Norfolk, Va., Chapel Hill, N. C., Lambert's Point, Norfolk, Va., Raleigh, N. C., Lynn Mass. Manchester, N. H., Bangor, Me., Eastport, Me., Toronto, Ontario, Coshocton Ohio, Columbus, Ohio, Walnut Hills, Dayton, Ohio, Romeo, Mich., Indianapolis, Ind., Lebanon, Ind., Olney, Ill., Louisville, Ill., Winterset, Iowa, Lake City, Iowa, Wyoming Conference, Washington Conference, New York Eastern Conference, A. J. Holyaway.

That we appropriate $25 to the Home Missions Council at the discretion of the Home Mission Secretary.

That the Home Secretary is authorized to appeal for a special fund for the work in Wyoming.

That in regard to the application of J. H. Benner of Tennessee, it is our opinion that it is inexpedient to begin work within the state at this time.

That in regard to the appeals from Kentucky the Home Secretary gather information and visit the field personally and that definite plans be made looking to work there next year.

That the policy of the Board in regard to frontier missions be to concentrate all our efforts, except in case of severe emergency upon the two fields of Wyoming and Western Washington, and that the effort in these states be to build up connected fields, rather than isolated points.

That we recommend the Boston work to the Woman's Board of Home missions; also that the appropriation to the Boston work, for the coming year be limited to the amount contributed by the Woman's Board this year, unless readjustments make an increase necessary, provided that the amounts contributed by the Woman's Board be not counted in the Home Mission appropriation.

That the Home Secretary or some representative of the Board personally inspect the colored work, including Franklinton. That the Home Mission Department cooperate with the Board of Control in raising funds and creating interest in the Franklinton work; and that definite aid be planned by the Council for next year for the work of the colored churches and conferences.

That a committee be appointed by the Board to formulate a plan for a Building Fund, the same to be submitted to the Board by correspondence. When adopted, the Home Secretary shall prepare and send out literature, secure pledges, and as rapidly as possible proceed to raise a fund for that purpose.

That the Home Secretary continue in a more definite and systematic way, the instruction of the churches in better financial methods and plans of church work. That the duplex envelope and the new financial plans be kept before the people and that literature on these subjects be freely distributed.

That the Home Secretary be authorized to attend such meetings of the Home Mission Councils, Federation of Churches, or the various commissions working with these bodies, as may be necessary to keep in touch with the larger aspects of the work in which we are engaged.

That the Home Secretary be directed to visit churches receiving aid each year if possible, and to lend aid to their work. The Council is authorized to provide to aid such churches in securing evangelistic services, or in otherwise increasing their efficiency.

That the Mission Council be authorized to increase the Home Mission appropriations, or to transfer any unused appropriations, or provide for emergencies in the Home Mission fields, provided that the entire expenditures for the year 1912 aside from special funds shall not exceed $6,700.

That our people be asked to at once make it possible for us to secure the $1,800 promised on condition that another $1,800 be raised by the brotherhood for the completion of the $6,000 required for the Ponce P. R. church, so long and so much needed, and that in faith in the brotherhood we at once begin the building.

That the Foreign Secretary be instructed to call for $200 to complete payment for the Arus, P. R. chapel.

That the Board express its appreciation of the help rendered by Rev. W. C. McLeod to our mission in Porto Rico while he has been employed in the public schools of that Island, and for his willingness to sever his connection with school work and assume the responsibilities of a missionary; and that we express our gratification at his manifest success as an educator and we recommend that he be encouraged to continue his school work rather than undertaking the more exacting work of an evangelistic missionary; and we furthermore recommend that he be released from his commission voted last year but not made effective.

That in view of our inability to appropriate adequate means for a missionary worker to Porto Rico, according to the plan submitted by the Mission Council for correspondence vote, and to this session by the Foreign Secretary, we do not add to our force of missionaries in that island. Provided, however, that if the Porto Rican mission shall need assistance in emergency, the Mission Council may send such assistance temporarily as its wisdom may dictate; and, further, that the Board assure Rev. McD. Howsare, who has held himself in readiness to go to Porto Rico, of its complete confidence in him, and regrets that we have not sufficient funds to allow sending him to that island according to the contemplated plan. That we heartily thank him for his ready response and willingness to undertake work in Porto Rico.

That the resignation of Rev. E. C. Fry as Treasurer of the Japan mission, be accepted, and that Rev. C. P. Garman, temporary treasurer, be permanently appointed.

That we regret that at the present time it is impossible to grant the request of the Japan mission for a personal visit by the Foreign Secretary.

That the Foreign Secretary be authorized to make a call for money to purchase a building site whenever the Japan mission shall decide where to erect a chapel with the $800, reported available for building purposes.

That the Board express its sympathy with the desire of the Japan Christian School for boys, but that our inability to undertake such an enterprise at present be communicated to the brethren through the mission.

Inasmuch as the building, equipping and maintaining of a girls' school in Japan is out of proportion to the present or prospective missionary income of the Board, we recommend the discontinuance January 1, 1912, of our Girl school in Japan. We regret most keenly the necessity for the above action and express our appreciation of the whole souled interest and sacrifices made by Mrs. E. C. Fry, the principal of the school. While we cannot hope to discharge our debt to her we trust that she may feel compensated in the results of the work she has already done.

That it is the sense of this Board that the Japan mission carefully consider the advisability of making some affiliation or combination for parts of our theological work for the year that will help to lessen the Japan budget for the year, and that the work of some station or out station be omitted, if found necessary, to keep within the bounds of the appropriation.

Your committee finds a number of items in our foreign work that are causes of rejoicing. Among them are that Rev. and Mrs. R. K. McCord have returned to Japan field; that our senior missionary, Dr. A. D. Woodworth, is on the way to the field again; that a neat chapel has been erected at Aruz, P. R.; that the Women's Foreign Board has been the recipient of a legacy of $1,900, for some permanent work; that one person has given nearly $3,000 to our work this year, the greater part of it being for the Porto Rico Building Fund. The same person stands ready to give at least $1,200 more if the brotherhood meets the conditions by Nov. 1, 1911 and arises and build; the Japan mission reports a fund of $800 for a chapel when the brotherhood provides a building site; the Tokyo Theological school has enlarged the scope of its work and thus becomes a standard theological school and is winning the approval of the Japanese brethren; that a nucleus for a church has been secured in a growing residential suburb of Tokyo; that the Santa Isabel work has been firmly established in spite of the tremendous Roman Catholic opposition and gives promise of still larger things.

On the other hand, we find some phases of the work that cause us much misgiving and pain, and which require much careful thought and Divine guidance.

We have been greatly encouraged and helped in our work by the gifts of the brethren towards the $10,000 fund for foreign missions begun at the Troy convention, but very much regret that the entire fund was not completed by $2,138.46, which handicaps us for the ensuing year to that extent, and we urge the brotherhood to so enlarge their giving as to not only make up this shortage, but also make it possible to strengthen our work in this "Decisive Hour of Christian Missions."

That we approve the policy of the interchange of medical services on the foreign field recommended by the "Committee of Reference and Council" representing the Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

That the Foreign Secretary be instructed to write to the Good Hope mission of South Africa telling them that our present work makes it absolutely impossible to promise any financial assistance, but that we gladly welcome them to our fellowship and to any inspiration that brotherhood involves.

That the recommendation of the Foreign Secretary concerning the British Guiana work be adopted as follows: In view of evident needs of the brethren in British Guiana, and our present inability to give them financial aid, it seems to be wise to inform them of the actual conditions here and hold out to them any hope through their affiliation with the Christian denomination in this country.

That the Southern Christian Convention be asked to send a delegate to the International Conference on the Negro, to be held at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, April 17, 19, 1912.

That we commend to our brotherhood the Laymen's Missionary Movement, the Men and Religion Forward Movement, and kindred efforts which have as their aim greater efficiency in religious work and more generous giving toward the extension of the Kingdom.

That the Treasurer be asked to continue the practice of sending monthly financial statements to the members of the Board; and, further, that at the close of the Mission Council meetings, the Secretary send a resume of the proceedings to the members of the Board not in the Council.

That the next session of the Mission Board begin Wednesday, October 23, 1912, at ten a. m.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Howard's Chapel.

We are hoping to meet all our Conference apportionments this year and trusting that Rev. L. I. Cox, or some other good preacher, will serve us next year. I trust that Conference will see to it that our little church is not without a pastor next year.

Will the editor or some one else answer through The Sun the following questions:

1st. Where was Daniel when his companions, the three Hebrews, refused to worship the golden image, and were cast into the fiery furnace? (Answer. No one knows and any reply would be conjecture. It is safe only to say that Daniel was away at the time, but had he been present he would have firmly taken his stand with the three of his brethren, furnace or no furnace.—Ed. Sun).

2nd. Does the Christian Church as a denomination believe that if a person is saved by accepting Christ and joining the church the person is saved for all time though he commit sin daily and hourly? If so where is the Scripture for the belief. (Answer. No. It would be a queer Scripture that would teach such a doctrine. "The soul that sinneth it shall die."—Ed. Sun.)

3rd. Did Jesus repeal the keeping of the ten commandments? If so give Bible verse. If He did not repeal and expected us, led by His spirit, to keep them, please give Bible authority. I ask purely for information. Yours, W. B. Madison. (Answer: Jesus did not come to repeal (destroy) but to fulfill. Matt. 5:17: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law (the commandments): I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill." Jesus made the commandments plain, clear, pointed, powerful, and summarized them in two to wit, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." Matt. 22:37-40. Now in the first of the two Jesus condenses and combines the first four of the ten commandments; and in the latter He condenses and combines the last six of the ten. Jesus did not repeal. He only fulfilled, completed, made plain and possible and easy.—Ed. Sun.)

Winsdor, Va.

About the middle of August, I went to the mountains of Virginia and moved, to my delight and benefit, about in several places of that lovely, inspiring, and romantic country. The mountains, gorgeous with splendid scenes, were fully and freely traversed. The deep, long ravines, with their towering, rocky walls, under which gushed clear springs of cool water delightful to the traveler as he panted in those hot days for cooling streams. Tired with climbing the rugged way he could stop and refresh himself abundantly both with the water and the ozone, which was so freely supplied, until he felt invigorated to scale higher heights, and see more and more of the admirable works which invited him still onward and upward. So enchanted was I with such endless beauty that I laid down my pen, forgot it, in a way, and contemplated with untiring thought the incomparable things of God and His everlasting glory until my mind was busy reading what He had so divinely written on the realms of nature and the pages of time. As I have been away much of the time in other parts, this mainly accounts for my absence from The Sun. I have so often thought of its editor and readers with much interest, and expected they were doing well.

I returned in time to attend the Conference in Suffolk, Va., to my interest and delight. My first home during my stay there was with Mrs. M. C. Riddick, who entertained me in a most cordial manner. There I met friends of other days whom I was exceedingly glad to see. Then I was transferred to the palatial home of my much esteemed friends, Mr. and Mrs. John King. A few years ago they lived in Winsdor, and I was their pastor for some years, and they were even then my friends, and I have all the time since felt a deep interest in them. During those years Bro. King was exceedingly kind to me and supported me very liberally with his means. Glad am I to know that they have had success in every way. They deserve it and have merited it. Their home is beautiful indeed. It is tastefully arranged and elegantly furnished, well heated and ventilated, and decorated in the most tasteful and modern way. Its inviting exterior and attractive, neat and commanding interior at once lend a pleasure to the delighted eye. Its colonial style, spacious halls and elegant rooms, easy winding stairways, stately columns, ample porches, and fine location all conspire to make it a most desirable and lovely home. As Sister King is an artist herself and Bro. King a very fine business man, they were fully prepared to help design and build in the most modern and convenient style. Long will some of us remember the bountiful dining given to several of their admiring friends on Thursday of the Conference. I can only say it was superlative. The hosts were exceedingly entertaining, the guests delightfully pleasant, and every thing moved on so well while each one appeared happy, on the splendid occasion. May each of this dear family live long to enjoy their happy home here, and then be permitted to live in their more beautiful heavenly home.

A few hours were most pleasantly spent with Mrs. Dora Kilby and her kind family. They were also very kind to me in former years.

The Conference was well attended and every thing appeared to move on well. Of course the entertainment of delegates and visitors was most hospitable, liberal and kind, and all were impressed with the greatness and goodness of the people. As to the work and workings of the body others will give a more extended account of its proceedings. The city of Suffolk being so conveniently located it was a most accessible and suitable place for the meeting.

THE EFFECTUAL FERVENT PRAYER.

The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. James 5:16.

It is worth while to read straight through the book of Nehemiah. It reveals a man of character, a real hero, a man of power, a man of prayer. I should have said, to make the meaning clearer, it reveals a man of great power because he was a man of much prayer. This man Nehemiah was a praying man, and Saint James must have had him and his achievements in mind when he wrote the golden text, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

Here is Nehemiah in a foreign land, living in ease, plenty, and luxury. He was in high favor with Artaxerxes, being an attendant with light duties and princely favors. His present was secure, his future promising. So far as personal privileges and high honors were concerned he had nothing to ask, nothing to desire. But Nehemiah hears a message that makes him sad and sends him to his knees. He learns that Jerusalem was in a pitiable plight and that his people there were in distress. Easily could Nehemiah have said "I am only one and can do nothing against so many odds. The task is too great and my efforts cannot avail." But Nehemiah, the man of God, was not looking for an excuse. He was looking for an opportunity. Nehemiah must first convince a pagan king. He must then have treasure and protection. He must then make a long journey through a hostile country. He must then arouse his brethren at Jerusalem. He must then beat back their enemies without. He must then deal with deceitful and treacherous enemies within. All this and more confronted Nehemiah as he viewed the task from the king's court and his high place there.

Only faith in God can nerve a man to a task like that. Only prayer, prayer, prayer can sustain a man in undertakings like these.

Here and now note the fact that the boldest, bravest, most dauntless men of courage and of valor have been and are men of prayer. It is no matter of sentiment or childishness to seek God's guidance in prayer. Nehemiah wanted to find favor in a pagan king's eye. Philosophy would have said, "Study the king's character and watch his habits, approach him at the psychological moment." But the faith said, "Go to your knees in prayer to God and stay there till the assurance comes." Nehemiah followed the teachings of faith and prevailed. How could prayer to God affect a pagan king's mind and disposition? Well, human philosophy can't explain the thing. And that is the beauty and the benefit of prayer. It brings to pass things that cannot be explained. It surmounts insuperable difficulties. It entangles inextricable knots. It over comes deep and dark difficulties. It makes possible that which is impossible, and brings the power of God to bear upon man's tasks and undertakings. In this life of dangers, difficulties and short sightedness, oh! my brother, how you and I need to pray, pray, pray. This is the open avenue to wisdom and to the Throne.

GREAT DAY AT BURLINGTON CHURCH.

Burlington people are rejoicing that their new pastor, Rev. A. B. Kendall, has arrived and many Elon College people, the Sun's editor among the number, went down last Sunday to rejoice with them. It was a glad and happy throng. The spacious Sunday school rooms to right and left and rear were thrown open and the spacious building was well filled. The music was appropriate and inspiring, the addresses of welcome were cordial and eloquent, the response by the new pastor whole hearted and sincere, and the whole occasion was one of spiritual uplift and gratitude. The Burlington people are rejoiced in securing Bro. Kendall and if he does not feel welcome and at home it is none of their fault.

The following installation program was carried out. Organ Voluntary. Doxology. Invocation. Response by Choir, Lord's Prayer in Concert, led by Rev. J. W. Patton. Anthem. Scripture Reading. Prayer, led by Dr. J. U. Newman. Offering. Hymn No. 1 (Christian Hymnary). Sermon, by Rev. J. O. Atkinson. Hymn No. 731. (C. H.) Scripture (a). The Lord's Messenger (b) The Faithful Minister. Prayer led by Rev. J. W. Patton. Pledge of congregation and pastor. Addresses of welcome on behalf of the church, by Hon. W. H. Carroll; on behalf of the Ministerial Association of the City, by Rev. Mr. Morgan, of the Baptist Church; on behalf of city, by J. H. Vernon, Attorney-at-Law. Response by Rev. A. B. Kendall, the new pastor. Hymn No. 743, (C. H.) Announcements, by Capt. J. A. Turrentine. Benediction, by the Pastor.

The great congregation that greeted Bro. Kendall on his first Sunday must have gladdened his heart, and Bro. Kendall's fine appearance, pleasant greeting and happy response were enough to make his newly found people rejoice. It was indeed a good and a great day for our Burlington people, and their work so well carried on for sixteen years by Dr. Fleming goes forward, being entrusted, we think, to capable hands and willing hearts.

THANKSGIVING.

Next Thursday, November 30, has been proclaimed by President Taft a day of individual and national Thanksgiving. On that day the people throughout the United States have been invited to assemble in their churches and places of public worship and by prayer, praise, worship and gifts to charity, render appropriate thanks to Almighty God for the manifold blessings of the past year. The poor, the needy and the unfortunate are to be remembered and thanks to God, the Giver of all good, are to be expressed in gifts to the orphan, the widow, the homeless and the hungry. Gratitude is the noblest of Christian graces and those who are incapable of showing it are unworthy of any good thing.

Every Christian Sun reader should, by word of mouth and deed of hand and gift of substance, give some meed of thanks to God on next Thursday for His blessings and His benefits.

In our Christian churches we have a special object of charity, our Orphanage, and envelopes have been sent out to all churches such as can contain an offering to help this needy and altogether worthy institution. On Thursday next, or at the first service next thereto, give your gifts of thanks to the Christian Orphanage.

THE KING'S BUSINESS.

(Editorial Correspondence)

Ether, N. C.
Nov. 16, 1911.

The Western North Carolina Conference finished its forty fifth annual session in this thriving village with a largely attended and enthusiastic meeting tonight. We missed sorely some of the strong men who belong to and usually attend the Western. Dr. D. A. Long, Dr. J. U. Newman, Dr. P. H. Fleming: but younger men of ministry and laity were present and in their fine addresses and wise counsel wrought valiantly in healing the breach, and carrying forward the King's business. There is deep consecration and loving loyalty in this conference. There is no quibbling. There is no wasting of precious time in different issues and impossible situations. A sense of seriousness pervades the body and every body pulls together for the common good. There is a feeling of freedom among the brethren that makes fellowship sweet, and the whole body moves with might to the accomplishment of one end, and the good of the cause, the building up of God's Kingdom. Not a discordant note is struck and harmony prevails throughout. The house in which Conference sits is new, comfortable and commodious. It has not been dedicated yet, there being a balance to be raised, and the smell of recent timbers and fresh paint tells that the handsome building is not many months in use. I have a secret notion that my good friend and royal brother in Christ, Deacon Hiram Freeman has had much to do with building this splendid church and has put many a secret prayer and hard earned dollar into its construction. I met on the cars not very far from Ether a very intelligent and prominent physician, Dr. Asbury, who in conversation remarked that "Hiram Freeman is one of our most substantial citizens, a Christian gentleman a capable and deserving man. I thought as much but was glad to hear my opinion confirmed in such a substantial manner. Now here is the pith and point of it all. When I see these successful and prosperous citizens in a community giving liberally of their substance to the Lord and devoting much time, thought and energy to the church. I wonder that there are young men who are trying to grasp all that the world has and leave the Lord and His service entirely out of their daily thought and task. "Mr. Y. gives a hundred dollars a year to the church. He ought. He is able. He has the wherewith to give." That is the speech of the world. Now why has Mr. Y. the wherewith? How came it that he is able? Nine tenths of the time Mr. Y. has been contributing of his time, thought, and substance as the years have come and gone and the Lord has prospered him and made him able. This is the teaching of the Word and is true.

Rev. L. I. Cox was president of Conference and Bro. Cox carries intelligent zeal, deep interest and thorough consecration into everything he undertakes. He is a successful pastor and leads his people to achievements good and great in the name of the Lord. He has power that comes of piety and fervency that is born of devotion. Through the whole conference session he carried on his mind and heart every interest and enterprise that the body must needs consider. In all of our Conferences we haven't a more effectual presiding officer than Bro. L. I. Cox. And if Rev. J. W. Patton had lived in the days of Ezra and Nehemiah he would have been called a scribe. His hand writing makes a typewriter useless and superfluous. He is secretary and loves to write Why by the time Conference adjourned this recorder has his minutes in fine shape and beautifully copied for the printer, reports, tables and all. Of course Capt. J. A. Turrentine is Treasurer of the Conference. When he quits being treasurer I hope that Conference will pension him for life and have him to come to every session as long as he lives. I was down at Suffolk in their splendid church at Conference some weeks ago and Dr. Staley remarked publicly that Capt. J. A. Turrentine, of Burlington was a charter member, and I believe only one living, of that church. Then I was at our Burlington church second Sunday in this month to assist in closing up the Conference year's work. Capt. Turrentine was in charge, made the announcements and was looking after the unfinished business, being I suppose Senior Deacon. At the Western Conference Capt. Turrentine made a plea for some aid for the church at New Providence, Graham, saying that was his church. I immediately asked the privilege of Conference to enquire how many churches Capt. Turrentine had anyhow and in how many different States and localities were they situated. "I am proud of all I have got and wish I had some more," was the quick response. What a source of pride, peace and pleasure it must be to a man, a busy active layman in particular, to reflect, as his years grow brief and the shadows lengthen that he has been instrumental in helping in building and in sustaining churches.

I was late in getting to conference and did not hear church and ministerial reports read but was told that the work showed progress and development the last year.

The report on ministerial education was fine, showing several additions to the number of candidates recommending the ordination of licentiate, Rev. J. F. Morgan which recommendation was adopted and appropriately carried out on the last day of the Conference. Bro. Morgau is already pastor of several churches and is in school at Elon College. The report on Home Missions urged rebuilding a church at Asheboro, which building was blown down some years since, and made liberal appropriation of its funds for this purpose. In a recent census of Asheboro 60 persons, above 4 years of age experienced a preference for the Christian church and Sunday school, and no church house there. We have men and women of loyalty, prominence and intelligence there and great is the pity that the matter of rebuilding has been so long delayed.

On another page of the Sun this week is the fine address by Rev. T. E. White delivered at the opening of Conference. It is practical and to the point, and the whole session of Conference followed this lead. The addresses, resolutions and plans adopted for education, missions, the Orphanage

Sunday schools. Christian Endeavor and the other enterprises were of a high order and will bear fruit. This Conference is abreast of the other, Conferences and goes forward with the King's business.

CHURCH BLOWN DOWN. A Worthy Plea For Help.

Here is a letter that explains itself and is certainly an appeal that should, and we believe will be heard and heeded by our brethren and sisters far and near. Please read it line by line to the last, for Rev. H. W. Elder never calls for assistance save of the most deserving. "Kite, Ga., November, 12, 1911. Dear Bro. Atkinson: I am very sad this holy Sabbath day. We were planning to enter our new church here the second Sunday in December, but our plans are all gone to the winds. We had the outside of our church building practically ready for the painter. Had just received bills of lading for our windows and doors. We had just about finished flooring and had begun ceiling. Today about 12 o'clock we had a terrible storm which blew the house entirely down. It lies a heap of smashed timbers completely demolished. We had labored, pulled, pushed, sacrificed to our limit. But we must rebuild. By the blessing of God and the help of the good people are willing to try again. It requires courage and grace, but we have put our shoulder to the task and we must not give up. We had planned not to ask any aid, but in our present plight we are driven to appeal for help. If we could get some help now it would greatly help and encourage us, and it would be greatly appreciated. I am sorry to have to make this appeal. Even by saving the timbers it will cost about $300 to get back where we were before the storm struck. I was standing almost in front of the building when the storm struck. It blew me down and as I looked up I saw the building falling. We hope to start back on the work tomorrow. Any contribution made may be sent to J. S. Stephenson, Cashier Citizens' Bank, Kite, Ga. Pray for us. Yours, H. W. Elder."

We submit that no worthier plea than that has appeared in these columns in many a month. Bro. Elder is the church builder. On this church in the flourishing town of Kite, Ga., he had labored and sacrificed heroically, even serving much of the time with coat off and with saw and hammer as builder. How his heart was in the work those who had seen him lately knew. Reader, mail a contribution of some kind to J. S. Stephenson, Treas., Kite, Ga. It is needed and is worthy, and you will never be the poorer.

PORTO RICAN CHARACTERISTICS— MENTAL.

We find Latin mental traits in the Porto Ricans. They are excitable and demonstrative in conversation, speaking loudly and emphasizing their words with varied and suggestive gesticulations. In conversation their excitable natures lead them to reply before the one speaking is through and it is said sometimes that when a group get into conversation all seem to be talking at once.

The Porto Rican orator is verbose and finds his native tongue rich in adjectives with which to embellish his sentences.

The thought of responsibility does not weigh heavily on the minds of this people. They love pleasure and are light hearted.

An air of self confidence is manifest. The Porto Rican feels he is able to do anything anyone else can, a thing, however, that fails in the testing.

These people are uncompromising in temperament, and unable to tolerate the opinions of others.

Their minds are acute and instruction when received proves them apt pupils.

Labor is undignified in the minds of the Porto Ricans. The women of social standing must do nothing that can be done by a servant.

The common laborer if asked to carry your satchel to the depot will return with a colored boy while he himself receives the pay and walks beside the boy to the depot.

Such an idle life leads to other temptations, and we find them possessed of the gambling habit. The element of chance enters into much of their dealings one with the other.

Howsoever

AN ADDRESS BEFORE THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE.

By Rev. T. E. White, Ramseur, N. C. Brethern of W. N. C. C. C.:

I wish to express my appreciation of the high honor conferred upon me at our last Annual Conference to deliver the address at this time. It was suggested then that I should address you along the line of the work of Conference, and I shall endeavor to follow that suggestion, even though the embarrassment is greater than should I attempt to preach a sermon.

What I have to say may seem very common-place to those who are well acquainted with our work, but some of you are perhaps members of Conference for the first time in your life, and that all may be made familiar I beg the well acquainted to bear patiently with me as I call attention to matters of deep interest to be considered at this session.

The purpose of the Conference is for the transaction of such business as may advance the interest of the church and the cause of God. The Western N. C. C. C. is composed of thirteen ordained ministers and 33 organized churches. Our aim is to certainly be nothing less than a banner Conference of the Southern C. C. To do this means loyal pastors and loyal people that we shall wisely and that our brotherhood shall co-operate willingly in the execution of the plan. Our Conference is composed of such a large representation from the brotherhood that our churches have no reason to complain at the various requests of this Conference. But we shall never get very far by simply adopting good resolutions. It becomes us as a Conference composed of Ministers and brethren to put our heads together and do our best for the cause of Christ. Our plans should be well known to the churches at home, and they ought to possess loyalty enough to execute every one of them. Represented as we are our plans are binding to the conscience.

If we are criticised for having done so little, let us rejoice over what is left of us, namely: the privilege of representing and doing our full duty.

Last year's report showed an increase in membership of 56. This year's report will show a much larger increase in membership. And, after all, the real motive is the salvation of souls. Our membership of 2,568 paid to all purposes last year $5,232.74 or $2.03 per member. Our churches paid pastors last year $1.12 per member. For Home and Foreign Missions combined 14 cents per member. We did not pay 2 cents a member for the support of our orphanage; and we did not pay 2 cents a member for Ministerial Education. It is hoped that we have made progress this year. We shall at this time look backward and forward. As the work of the Conference is largely done through the various committees; and as we have no tabulated committee, perhaps the first business of Conference should be to appoint such a committee, and let the report of the committee be prepared while the Church Letters are being read. This will give us the backward look for the past year, and will greatly aid other committees in preparing work for our future plans.

I call attention to the meagre support our Conference gave to Convention Missions last year. We gave only $64.78 and this year we are asked to raise $525.00. There seems to be a misunderstanding among some of our brethren about this, and an opinion is some times expressed that we are not under obligations to answer the call. The Southern Christian Convention began Home Mission work in 1904 by making a call to the Conference of the Convention. Some of the Conferences have responded nobly, and through this fund the Home Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention has helped at various places, such as Raleigh, Portsmouth, Henderson, Columbus, Ga. Third Church Norfolk, Winchester, Va. and possibly others. That we have received no aid from this fund within the bounds of our Conference, is no reason why we should not respond willingly to the call. Everyone familiar with our history knows that the funds invested in the churches of our cities have been abundantly blessed.

As we have no committee on church music the attention of the committee on Religious Literature is called to consider the sad lack in so many of our churches of the use of the Christian Hymnary. We are not patronizing our own publications and it is best suited to our needs. If he who writes our national hymns wields a greater influence than he who writes a nation's laws, the hymn that we use in our church services should be used with the greatest care. That there may be uniformity in the selection of hymns among our churches, and that we may be loyal to our publications, the Christian Hymnary ought to be used in all of our churches.

The church rightly cares for the Sunday school. The committee for this department has an important task. From last year's reports, 768 members of our churches were not enrolled in our schools. When we consider that children and others who are not members of our church make up the membership of our Sunday schools, a still larger number of the membership of our churches are either in some other school or what is more probable not in any school at all.

The committee at our last conference wisely recommended the use of our own literature in our schools. It is painful to state that some of our schools have ignored this resolution, and use other literature than our own. It is poor policy to buy a mill and carry our corn to another mill than our own. Loyalty to our church demands that we use our own literature when it is best suited to our needs and as good as the best.

Besides using our own literature our schools should have some definite object that goes beyond our own school to give life and vigor. The Christian Orphanage at Elon College is suggested as a worthy object. The sources of income to our orphanage are four. Children's offerings

Sunday school contributions, Thanksgiving offerings and special gifts. From our last report our Conference did not contribute 2 cents per member to this worthy enterprises. Why may not all of our Sunday schools make special contributions to the homeless and helpless? To do so would bring a double blessing. It would give life to the Sunday school and be a blessing to the orphanage.

We are far from the privilege offered us in preaching the gospel to the heathen. And to preach the gospel to all the world is the business of the church. We contributed a fraction more than 10 cents a member last year to our Foreign Work. The contribution of our entire support would not by any means support an American missionary on any of our fields. Our Foreign Mission Board recently were embarrassed by not having funds enough to send a new missionary to the fields. The demands of our Foreign fields are worthy and urgent.

To Elon College our Conference owes a debt of gratitude and lasting and loving loyalty. Some of our people seem to be misinformed as to the funds for the ministerial education and the Elon College fund. The first has for its object to aid worthy young men in obtaining an education for the ministry. The money is loaned, and notes for the payment are taken by the Conference. When we remember that not many wise and rich are called to preach the gospel, but the ignorant and poor, the worthiness of the fund is easily seen. The second, The Elon College Fund, is the aid given to the college. People seem to forget that the College in return for this aid gives her service in preparing young men for the ministry, without charge for tuition. For example, we now have four students in college from this Conference receiving free tuition and the Conference will again be repaid by loyal service. Our State institutions in pleading for larger appropriations argue the helpfulness of the institution in the education of the young men and women of the State. And our college is entitled to the convincing argument that she gives helpful service to the church.

Our thoughts cannot fail to be directed at this time to the vigorous efforts to raise $50,000 for Elon College, and the ready response some of our Conferences are giving. The question is asked, why this amount? The answer is found in the word growth. The College has grown. The number of students and the influence of the College have doubled. It was necessary to meet the demands, to issue bonds and erect another building. This has been done and now represents real value to the church. Elon College is ours, and as we give for improvement we still have; and while we give and have we are at the same time strengthening and blessing the church. The time is ripe for us to show our liberality and loyalty, and it is expected that the Western N. C. C. will do her duty.

The committee on apportionment has a difficult task in apportioning the amount to be paid by the several churches. Not having first had knowledge in every case it is possible for some of the churches to be asked to contribute an amount too small while others are asked to contribute an amount too large. The membership roll, as shown by the church letters, is not a safe guide in every case. Some of the churches have been discouraged because of their apportionment, and have done but little. If this committee can get the facts from the churches failing to comply with the conference requirements, they might arrange their apportionment so as to encourage them to do considerable more than they are now doing and finally become Banner Churches. Our aim should be that all our churches become Banner Churches.

The Home Mission committee at our last session was asked to have printed a sufficient number of Duplex Envelopes for distribution among all of our churches to aid in more systematic giving to the Lord. The committee tried hard to inaugurate the plan, but the enormous cost of the envelopes made it impossible for the committee to put the plan into operation. The question of giving, of laying by in store every one, as the Lord prospers is still an unsolved problem among us. A few are bearing the burdens while a multitude are doing almost nothing at all. It is hoped that this session of Conference will inaugurate some plan to enlist the sympathy and help of our entire membership.

Also a resolution was adopted a year ago that the Home Mission Committee should take up the question of forming pastorates among the local churches so that pastors could devote their entire time to said pastorates. A beginning is being made in this direction, and I believe that the plan is appealing favorably to a number of our churches. The time may not be ripe at this time as it is a question largely for the individual churches. The need is being felt, however, for churches are having difficulties in securing pastors, and pastors have difficulty in arranging their work. For the sake of the pastors and the churches, and for the best interest of our work, the pastorates ought to be formed. If we can do nothing more at this time than to group the churches temporarily with the view of later making it permanent we will be making a long step in the right direction towards helping the churches in getting better service. As a matter of fact our pastors have grouped the churches already, and will the coming year serve the various groups. But the trouble seen in the grouping: The territory of their labors will be found in two or three Conferences, and much of their labor necessarily will be lost. It behooves us to do the best for our churches and the support of our pastors. Under the present arrangement our Conference will not keep strong pastors for our people.

Too much attention can hardly be given to our young people. Our young men are shouting on base ball fields, and are too silent in our churches. A great power is going to waste that ought to be utilized for the church. And the young people are not wholly to blame, for our churches are not offering them sufficient encouragement in taking their crosses and following the Lord. A few do all the praying and talking. A few are leaders in the Sunday school, and a few are following at a long distance according to their own religious experience, and disinterested in the cause of the church. To meet the great need that must be apparent to all, and which I have tried to describe, the Society of Christian Endeavor, wherever it has been organized, has been of untold blessing. It puts the religious life of all members to the test, and creates watchfulness and prayer. It pledge its members to loyal service to Christ and the church, and it gives every member something definite to do. A live society in all our churches would solve many of our problems and bless our Conference.

I have called the attention to some of the questions to be considered at this Conference, and which will be discussed at length when the reports are read. It is earnestly hoped that every member of the Conference will be present till the close and with willing hearts let us lay hands to the task before us, that our cause may prosper, and that God may be glorified.

—The agitation for good roads goes on beautifully. Agitation, organization, realization is the scientific order we believe. That which this Southern country needs above all else for material progress is good roads and we are glad the first steps in the direction of securing them have been taken so soundly and safely. This week the American Association of Highways is having its first session in Richmond, Va., and the attendance and talk are all that could be desired.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—At this writing the condition of Rev. J. W. Wellons, Elon College, N. C., is not so favorable and his friends and physicians are solicitous.

—Of course it was left for Dr. Staley to say the best, biggest and truest word about Elon College, and the Special Fund, and he says it this week in Suffolk Letter.

—Thus The Evening Chronicle, "It is time for Beattie to throw away his cigarette." Beg pardon, Colonel, he can't. The cigarette has already thrown him away, having only reserved the final leave taking for November 24.

—According to statistics recently issued there are 157 pastorless Presbyterian churches in North Carolina. Statistics for other denominations would likely show corresponding number of vacant churches. More ministers, more ministers, is the cry on every hand.

—On Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 30th, remember the Orphanage with your gifts. You will be given an opportunity on that day or on a Sunday near that day to contribute something for this good cause through your church—the only call through all the year on the churches for the support of the Orphanage.

—President Finley of the Southern Ry. announced November 13th that, in recognition of the value of their service and their loyalty to the interests of the company, the management had authorized an advance in the salaries of its clerical employees heretofore receiving $70.00 per month, or less. This advance is to be effective from November 1st, 1911.

—Rev. M. L. Bryant, Berkley, Va., being in poor health, has gone to the Valley of Virginia for a few weeks' rest, his address while there being Harrisonburg, Va. Bro. Bryant has worked beyond his strength of late months and we regretted to find him so worn at the Eastern Virginia Conference. We trust that the mountain climate and rest will restore him speedily.

—Miss Willie Staley, youngest daughter of Dr. W. W. Staley, was married at Oak Level Church, Franklin County, N. C., last Wednesday, to Mr. Benjamin Holden, attorney and mayor, Louisburg, N. C. Miss Willie graduated from Elon College in the class of 1904, and has been a successful teacher since. She is a woman of unusual intelligence and ability and we congratulate Mr. Holden on his success in winning her to become the companion of his home and heart.

—Rev. M. W. Butler is to aid Rev. A. W. Andes, Linville, Va., for ten days, at the close of which he goes to take up his new pastorate at Conshohocken, Pa., Dec. 1. Bro. Butler writes, "I have hesitated to leave, again, my State and Conference, but there seems to be a divine providence in it, and if the Lord is leading, it must be right." The best wishes of a host of friends and admirers will follow Brother Butler, and for all success, in his new field of labor.

—We were glad to meet at Burlington last Sunday, Rev. A. B. Kendall, who changes his address from LeGrand, Ia., to Burlington, N. C., and becomes pastor of our Burlington Church. Bro. Kendall looks stout and strong and handsome enough to have been born and reared in the South, and the fact that he was not is no fault of his, a loss which he is atoning for by bringing his bride of a week with him and so beginning life in earnest here. A hearty welcome to Burlington and to the South, Bro. Kendall.

—With this one drop of ink we express our best wishes, heartiest congratulations, and grateful appreciation for being remembered with a neatly engraved invitation: "Mr. and Mrs. Abram Holland request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Goldie, to Benjamin Columbus Britt on the evening of Tuesday, November 28, 1911, 8 o'clock, 1444 West Washington St., Suffolk, Va." Miss Goldie made a fine record and a great host of friends as student at Elon College, from which institution she graduated in 1906. Mr. Britt is a successful business man of Franklin, Va., and is to be congratulated.

—Rev. Daniel E. Millard, D. D., Portland, Michigan, in renewing his subscription to The Sun, writes: "I do not intend to let The Sun cease making its weekly visits to my home. To lose it would be like losing an old and highly esteemed friend. I can't afford to part with it now that I am approaching my 83rd birthday, which occurs next March, and the 59th anniversary of my ordination, which occurs December 9th." "Uncle" Millard is well known and much beloved among the children, of whom he is especially fond, and for whom he often writes in our columns. Fifty-nine years in the Gospel ministry means more for the good of mankind than can be told in words, and we trust that Doctor Millard will have many more years added to this record before he is called up higher.

—"Franklinton, N. C., November 13th, 1911. Dear Brother Atkinson: Inasmuch as I could not meet you at Conference, I enclose check (cashier's) for my renewal. The Sun has been a welcome visitor in our home for more than thirty years, and it continues to shine brighter and brighter every year. I would that we could do more for its support. I am as ever, your friend, J. J. Allen." Now that is business, real brotherly, kind hearted, courteous Christian business. There are seven hundred and sixty-three other good brethren who could not see us at Conference this year, and the time for whose renewal has come. Will not every one of this good and generous number take wholesome counsel of Bro. Allen's conduct and favor us as he has done? That would be fine and would help us at this end of the line wonderfully.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The more I study the history and value of Elon College, as a denominational asset of the Southern Christian Convention, the more profoundly am I impressed with our obligations to its maintenance and improvement.

I do not share in the often repeated declaration of great sacrifice on the part of the founders and supporters of the institution. I am convinced that every willing and thoughtful donor has been doubly repaid for his interests and gifts; and I am still more convinced that the church herself never made so good an investment of men, money, and confidence. For every man who has spent himself in the daring enterprise the college has produced many his equal; for all the money put into the property and its conduct much more easily has money been forthcoming for other enterprises; for the faith in 1888 that launched the undertaking and stood by it under discouragements. Through punies the faith of the church has been enlarged for Orphanage, and Home and Foreign Missions. In fact we have more men, more money, and more faith than when we began this herculean task of building and supporting a first class college. We have learned what corn growers of the South have learned, that doubling the crop per acre does not lessen the productive value of the soil, it increases the value and productive quality of the soil. When I see that Wm. T. Young, of Youngsville, N. C., has given $500 on the special fund for the college I am rejoiced above measure, and I say to myself, "Our people are coming more and more into their own in this great grace of giving." As the college has grown his thoughts, his interest, his liberality have grown; hence it is easy to see that the college educates beyond the number of its matriculates. It not only educates the young in school, but the young and old at home.

Yet many church members do not give thought, prayer, money, nor encouragement to the President in his faithful, earnest, persistent, and successful effort to complete the raising of $50,000.00 which Dr. Moffit had begun during his incumbency of that high office. If I knew how to pen a message of sense, and tipped with such interest as to awaken the ability of our church membership in this great work, I would be as happy as President Harper is when a new name is added to his long list of donors to this special fund. Read over his list of donors and see what is being done, what the preachers are doing, and then ask God to impress you what you ought to give; then see or write Harper and subscribe to this great fund.

See what the "Francis Asbury Palmer Fund" is doing for Elon; $1,500.00 last year and $1,500.00 this year. That is equal to 5 per cent of $30,000.00. Then remember that Mr. Palmer gave $30,000.00 himself and you will get some idea of his substantial help to the college. Had he lived to visit Suffolk Church and Elon College in company with Dr. F. S. Child as he promised me during my incumbency of office of President, no doubt he would have given more; but his gifts really saved the institution and put it on its feet. His name and his generosity are as much a part of the college as the stone and bricks in its walls.

W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

As many will recall, the Sunday school convention which met last July with the Liberty Spring Christian Church voted to meet with the Tidewater Sunday School Association next July. The understanding was that the place of meeting should be either at Ocean View or with the Portsmouth Christian Church. If at the former place, then it should be in connection with a week's Sunday school Chataqua and Young People's Institute. It has been found desirable to meet at Ocean View if the proper speakers and Sunday school experts can be secured, and if the week's Chataqua and Institute can be financed. A committee consisting of Prof. S. M. Smith, Rev. J. W. Harrell, Rev. D. A. Keys, Mr. J. H. Blanchard, and Rev. A. M. Hanson met today in Portsmouth and took steps which will decide whether the plan can be made a success. If the matter can be put thru successfully, it will prove of great and lasting inspiration to our work in Virginia. The program, if fully determined upon, will contain speakers of national prominence. It will require faith, prayer, and works to do it, but we hope it will become a reality.

The pastors report good congregations and services yesterday. At the Memorial Temple and at Portsmouth, Baptist ministers in attendance upon their General Association now meeting in Norfolk, filled the pulpits morning and evening. Lambert's Point is considering the advisability of calling Rev. E. J. Bodman, of Ravena, New York. Bro. Bodman is well-known to a number of our people here and would undoubtedly make a very desirable pastor in the Eastern Virginia Conference. We hope he may be secured.

Bro. Kitchen supplied for Rev. M. L. Bryant Sunday morning, and in the evening one of the ministers from the Baptist Association preached.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Memorial Christian Temple concerning Rev. and Sister McD. Howsare:

Whereas, Our late pastor, Rev. McD. Howsare, has been, in the providence of God, called to labor in another part of Christ's vineyard, and has, in consequence thereof, relinquished his office as the under-shepherd of our flock to assume his new duties; therefore, he it resolved:

1st. By Memorial Christian Temple, in conference assembled, that while we yield to the call from another field for the services of one who, by this people has been tried and found true, we do not the less feel the loss to our own church and community in the removal from our midst of our beloved pastor and his devoted wife.

2nd. That Rev. McD. Howsare has, by able leadership and marked ability, faithfully served this church for two years, during which time many important tasks have been undertaken and accomplished for the Master; and by courtesy and kindness, by purity of life and doctrine, secured the love of this people, which will follow and be with him in his new field of labor.

3rd. That Mrs. Athella L. Howsare, his capable and accomplished wife and help-meet, by her lofty Christian character, by consecrated tact, by unselfish service, and untiring devotion to the work of the Kingdom of God in this field, has greatly endeared herself to the hearts of this people, whose fervent prayer is that she may during her future days be continued a channel of blessing.

4th. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Rev. McD. Howsare, a copy be recorded upon the minutes of our Church Book, and a copy be sent to each of the denominational papers, The Herald of Gospel Liberty and The Christian Sun, for publication.

—China is in a state of political upheaval and it seems that the Manchu dynasty must go. China is not ready for republican form of government, but that her people are determined on some sort of constitutional government there can be no doubt.

Miscellaneous Business and Adjournment.

J. W. Harrell, Pres.

—The Suffolk, Va., Christian church, at the recent session of the Eastern Virginia Conference, asked that body to increase the sum of its annual offering to the enterprises of that body from $750.00 to $900 and thereby is an example for all churches—as soon as you know you are able to increase your support for the Lord's work, do not wait to be urged to do it, but do it on our own motion. We well remember when the whole of the Eastern Virginian Christian Conference was giving practically nothing. It was the custom in those days (in the eighties) to do nothing for others and very little for ourselves. The preachers laid little or no stress on the support of the general work by the local churches. When the first efforts were made, looking to the support of the general enterprise, the preachers rarely paid any attention to the matter. Then the Conference laid a fine on each preacher who failed to take the collections. Among those who paid the fine in those days was the young pastor of the Suffolk Christian church. How different it is today! Now this church under the care and leadership of the same pastor (Dr. Staley not only pays its annual assessments of $750.00 in full, but comes up of its own motion and asks that the sum be increased to $900. That is progress in a good work.

RAISING SUNDAY SCHOOL CORN.

The following article from The Sunday School Executive is so well along the line of our article last week and so full of suggestion that we pass it along without comment, hoping some Sunday school in the country will profit financially and spiritually by giving it a trial:

"The thought came to the superintendent of a Sunday-school in a country schoolhouse that as the members lived on farms they would be glad to grow some corn for the school. So he bought a few pounds of a well tested variety. This he divided into packets, giving each member a packet with the request that it be planted and cultivated. He explained that the longest and best ears grown from the seed were to be brought to the Harvest Home service the following Fall, and that the tallest stalks were to be measured and reported to the school. As an incentive he would give rewards to those having the best success.

The superintendent was gratified at the interest the boys and girls took in planting the kernels of white corn and in watching it grow. The members of the Senior class, the teachers and the superintendents planted their packets too, and the whole school engaged in growing the "Sunday school corn," as it came to be termed. When the corn began to mature the interest intensified and foot races came into play to test the length of ears and stalks.

The Sunday on which the Harvest Home service was held was a perfect autumn day and the members and friends of the school filled the room. The decorations included autumn leaves, flowers, flags, and the school colors—white and green. The teacher's long desk was filled to overflowing with offerings of fruit and vegetables, among which there was a basket of the longest and best ears of corn grown by the members. A special feature was the song and exercise, "'Neath These Rustling Banners," in which several boys carried corn stalks. When the rewards came to be made, it was found that a member of the Boys' Intermediate class had grown the longest ear, measuring twelve and one half inches, and the stalk second in length; a member of the Boys' Intermediate class raised the longest stalk, measuring thirteen feet and two and one half inches, and the ear second in length; a girl of the Junior class raised the ear third in length, and a boy of this class the stalk third in length.

THE NEW CHRISTMAS.

Last year's Christmas tree—where is it? Its green, pungent needles dried and dropped off, and its skeleton was broken up to kindle the fire. Last year's decorations, if they were kept at all, are tarnished and faded. Last year's program was much like those that went before it. Is the Christmas celebration really worth while? Once in a while this is the feeling that comes over some of those on whom the burden of preparation for the Christmas festival must fall. The way out of it is to get the children's point of view. Listen to their eager talk; hear their half-suppressed shrieks of delight over their endeavors to keep Christmas secrets; notice how a spruce tree is transformed, beautified, glorified in their eyes when it becomes a Christmas tree—nobody can keep from having the Christmas thrill and inspiration, if he mingles with the children. Every Christmas is a new Christmas then. Some one lately asked a Sunday-school superintendent if he didn't get tired of preparing for Christmas year after year. "No, indeed; never!" was his surprised reply; "why, there isn't a child in my primary department that is as eager to have Christmas come around as I am. I like it for its spiritual meaning. I like it for the joy which it brings to the children, and I like it because it keeps the spirit of childhood fresh in my own heart." Where that spirit prevails every Christmas will be as bright and welcome as the sunrise.

Subject—Lessons from Paul—II Tim. 4: 1-8. (Consecration Meeting).

- M. His conversion, Acts 9:1-20.
- T. His labors, II Cor. 11:22-33.
- W. His earnestness, Rom. 9:1-3; 10:1.
- T. His devotion, Acts 20:31-36.
- F. His independence, Gal. 2:12-21.
- S. His one theme, Gal. 6:14-18.
- S. The topic.

Paul.

- I. Early Life.
 1. Born a Jew and a Roman citizen.
 2. Was Pharisee of the tribe of Benjamin.
 3. Grew up in schools with good instructors.

4. Was leader of persecutions against Christians.
5. Enthusiastic, ambitious and energetic.
6. Was converted while persecuting the church.
 - II. After His Conversion.

1. Began to preach Christ immediately.
2. Began preaching where he had persecuted.
3. Was a special apostle to the Gentiles.
4. He was ever enthusiastic in his work.
5. Was stoned, shipwrecked and imprisoned.
6. Carried Gospel to Europe—foreign missions.
7. Wrote fourteen New Testament books.
8. Labored more abundantly than all the rest.
9. Suffered martyrdom, as the chopping block.
10. He was faithful—a crown awaited him.
 - III. Reflections for Us.
1. He was always in earnest.
2. When he saw he was wrong he changed.
3. He did his duty regardless of consequences.
4. He followed Christ all the way.
5. I wonder if I can say as much.

Hints for this Lesson.

1. Have some concert feature in the meeting, the Lord's prayer, a favorite Psalm or other scripture. The concert feature might be near the close.

2. Leader, keep your hand on the reins of the meeting; a nod here, a bright smile there, a look of animated attention from you, will alone almost make the meeting a success. Have something for associate members to do.

3. Have chain prayer concerning the example Paul gives us. Have some member begin, and close, yourself. Arrange for roll call and response of quotations from Paul's instructions to the young men, Timothy and Titus.

Something of His Life.

Paul was a native of Tarsus, a city of Cilicia, and a citizen of the Roman empire. He was of Jewish nativity and was schooled in the doctrines and teachings of his people. His early education was that of other boys of the city, but when a youth he went to Jerusalem and became a pupil of the eminent Gamaliel, who was a profound scholar, though more liberal in his views than the more orthodox of his race.

After his Rabbinic training he returned to Tarsus to learn a trade. It is probable that he continued his studies in the Gentile schools, for which Tarsus was noted. From Cilicia he went back to Je-

Jerusalem, where he became prominent in the councils of the Jewish church, and apparently was chosen a member of the Sanhedrin. Though in Jerusalem for some time and about the same age of Christ, he was probably not at the capital during the ministry of Jesus, for he seems never to have seen the Great Teacher. He knew, however, of the Messianic claims of Christ and was clearly conscious of the opposition to Judaism involved.

He threw himself into the fight against the new faith, and with his characteristic impulsiveness and determination did all he could to stem the tide of Christianity and exterminate the believers. He consented to the death of Stephen, if he did not actually participate in the stoning. This he followed up with an inquisition that made him conspicuous among his fellows.

In the year 34 or 35 A. D., while on his way to Damascus, he went through a supernatural vision that brought him under deep conviction of his sin. Out of this experience he came a Christian disciple, convinced of the Messiahship, distinctly conscious of having been commissioned to preach the gospel among the nations of the earth. He did not immediately begin preaching, but retired to Samaria for two or three years, where he engaged in study and preparation for the work.

His first preaching was in Damascus and Jerusalem, but he was soon called to the Gentile nations. He went first to Antioch and there had Barnabas associated with him. After a few months he returned to Jerusalem, where he entered into a controversy with certain of the Sanhedrin regarding the question of whether or not certain forms and ceremonies were necessary to salvation. Paul believed that justification was by faith and not by ceremony. He finally won and the Jews accepted the Gentiles who professed to be Christians as such. Paul continued his missionary work in all the neighboring countries. He touched all the more important cities of that time and region and probably preached the gospel to more people than any man who has lived in all the tide of time.

Paul was often disconsolate, though his work in the main is now considered marvelously successful, as compared with other apostles of his day or missionaries of later years. He swung far afield in his doctrine and preaching from the church at Jerusalem, though his views of Christ's teachings seem far more in accord with modern views than did the majority of other early preachers and leaders.

In 56 A. D., after some years of successful work in the principal cities of his day, he returned to Jerusalem. He was then called upon to show his belief in the ideas of the home church by conducting certain ceremonies. This he did, but was misunderstood and came near losing his life. He was soon after arrested and remained in jail or in custody of officers for two or three years. He was before Felix and Festus, then Agrippa. Appealing to Caesar he was carried to Rome, from whence he wrote several of his epistles. He was eventually released, only soon to be re-arrested, tried and sentenced to die upon the block. While in prison the second time he wrote the remainder of his epistles.

There are many things in the life of the man that call for comment and give food for discussion and an interesting meeting.

He was a man of education and culture. Learned in the old scriptures, upon his conversion he studied zealously the doctrines of Christ. His conclusions, based upon his study and his visions, were unlike others of his time. Some of his views have been accepted by the church as unquestionably right. Others on matters of church polity were subjects of variance throughout the ages that have followed. He was a profound and sympathetic man, but not a metaphysician.

He was enthusiastic. He was daring. He cared not for the beaten paths; he preferred to travel the undiscovered territory. He accepted no man's views; he followed his own convictions. He was sensitive, but unflinching when duty demanded bravery.

China.

We had been feeling as the editor of The Charlotte Chronicle about the situation in China, till we found in that paper the following point:

"The Chronicle has been shy on its talk on China, because it knows nothing about it, and it never undertakes to discuss a matter in which it stands in comparative ignorance. The Christian Herald, however, is pretty good authority and it gives us a line on the situation from a religious and civilized standpoint. It says that this generation has witnessed no greater transformation than that which is now taking place in China. It is surely a modern miracle to see an empire of 300,000,000 souls changing practically in a day, from a despotism to a constitutional government. For over two and a half centuries the Manchus have ruled with increasing corruption, selfishness and injustice. In no country on earth have the people borne with patience so many grievous burdens. Their land has stood still while other nations were pressing forward to a higher destiny. But the change, long delayed, has come at last. The Manchu rule has gone, and with it that ancient badge of Chinese servitude, the queue, and the old feudal military organizations, and all the clumsy glitter-and-tinsel stage trapping of the Manchu throne. It is a new, progressive China that emerges, after shaking loose from the old rubbish heap—a nation that will soon be in line with modern ideas on all that vitally concerns its social and political life."

—Newspaper reporters are to be barred from the Beattie execution and Virginia papers will be prohibited by law from printing the details. That is good. The bare announcement: "Henry Clay Beattie, Jr., was electrocuted at noon today," would be sufficient, but watch the enterprising press reporters. They will reel it out by the column as easy as falling off a log.—Charlotte Chronicle. And the gullible will read and gloat over all they write as if fact and not fancy.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago by order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, and generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

I have enjoyed so many rich and rare privileges during the past six weeks that I can truly say that the lines have fallen to me in pleasant places. A kindly invitation from Dr. Moffitt to visit his home on the way took me off to the Western North Carolina Conference about seven hours earlier than had been planned, but added much indeed to the enjoyment of the occasion. Dr. Moffitt is a very busy man, but, as ever, not too busy to take thought for the Master's work. His attention in that regard and that of his family as well is as now centered in the erection of a Christian church at Asheboro, and I believe I have no doubt of its successful completion within the year.

Conference, the forty-fifth annual session, was held with the seventeen months old Ether Church, which, judging from the grace, ease, and comfort in which it entertained the body is destined one of these days to be host to the Southern Christian Convention. My home was with Brother Eli Freeman and he entertained me with lavish hand and unstinted heart. I succeeded in establishing my reputation, while in his home, as a consumer on a large scale of wholesome edible products. Dr. Atkinson, when I was by accident late for a meal, remarked that it made no difference, since I did not count. "He may not count elsewhere," said my queenly hostess, "but he certainly does at the table." Why may not he who counts thus count in other directions also? From which statement and consequent query we take courage, renew our hope, and press on, at least in one department of human endeavor.

Conference was not only royally entertained, but it was itself royal. It was my first opportunity to attend this body throughout, though I had been privileged to be in one session a few years before. I was delighted with what I saw and heard. There was harmony from first to last—the harmony, not of death, but of life, progressive, aggressive, achieving life. The reports were good and exhibited a fine grasp of the Master's work as well as courage to undertake it. The Conference was not characterized by set addresses, but by earnest pleas and consecrated consideration of ways and means. Several times during its deliberations I had the feeling that this body could appropriately be styled, "A committee of the Whole on Ways and Means in the Master's Work." Rev. L. I. Cox presided and Rev. J. W. Patton scribed, while Capt. J. A. Turrentine cashiered; which means that the Conference was becomingly officered. Dr. Atkinson was there, in all his glory and the abundance of his inheritance as a church member. Dr. Moffitt was there in the most eloquent, earnest address he has yet delivered on Elon's behalf. Dr. Long preached to great acceptance. Brother Albright and Brother N. W. Lawrence with Brethren S. B. Klapp, H. F. Wolfe, T. B. Dawson, W. H. Hayes, T. E. White, our yoke-fellow of former days, with many others, were there with whom it was pleasant to renew and form acquaintances.

But the most pleasant thing in the entire session was the ordination of Rev. J. F. Morgan to the office of elder in the church. It was a glorious occasion, full of uplift and spiritual aspiration. It was good to be there, and those who were so privileged will not soon forget it.

Of course the brethren responded liberally to the Special Fund, and cheerfully, which made their response more lovely. These devout Christians gave $1,475.00 to this enterprise and rejoiced in the giving. "Yes; we must take care of Elon," said many a brother to me as he was signing his name, "we must take care of Elon, because it has done so much for us as a Church." Such liberality, with such spirit and devotion, cannot, will not, go unrewarded.

W. A. Harper.

COLLEGE NEWS.

The installation of the new pastor at the Burlington Christian Church on last Sunday was duly observed and attended by the students and friends on the Hill. The regular eleven o'clock service of the College was suspended and quite a number attended the service in Burlington. Dr. Atkinson delivered the sermon.

Dr. W. C. Wicker preached in Haw River yesterday.

Uncle Wellons who has been ill for the past week does not improve as rapidly as his physicians would like. He is constantly attended by his nurse, and everything possible is being done for his comfort and his early restoration to health and strength.

Karl Jansen, the Swedish Impersonator, appeared at the College last night, in the interest of the Athletic Association.

President Harper has returned from the Western N. C. Conference and reports a most pleasant as well as successful trip. His appeals were liberally responded to as will be noted from the Special Fund column which appears on another page.

Prof. S. G. Rollings, of Kenly, N. C., entertained a few of his college friends and acquaintances on a week-end house-party, November 17-19. Those who attended from the College were Misses Viola and Grace Rollings, Mr. R. A. Campbell and A. L. Lincoln.

Miss Ethel Clements spent last Sunday with her parents at Morrisville, returning to the Hill Sunday night.

An engagement of much interest to former students of Elon College and friends in general has been announced at Ashboro, N. C., when Miss Clara Moffitt, sister of former President Moffitt, will become the bride of Mr. C. C. Howell, of Jacksonville, Fla. These young people are both graduates of the College. The wedding is to take place January 19th, 1912.

My Dear Children and Friends:

Thanksgiving time is almost with us. You may be reading this letter on Thanksgiving Day. Hope each one of you will contribute as God has blessed you to our cause which is a deserving one.

We were delighted to have the Philatheas Class of Wentworth Church, N. C., visit us last Saturday. They came to Elan, about 50 in all, and our doors were thrown open for we were glad to see them. Mr. George McCullers kindly brought a big apple for each child, also Miss Florence Stephenson brought a bag of apples and bananas. Guess our little ones will not soon forget these kind friends.

Mrs. Macy Read of Mt. Auburn Church kindly sends two coats and a dress and Mr. C. A. Ballentine, Fuquay Springs, N. C., donates cane seed, while Mrs. W. B. Cottle, of Lubec, Maine, has filled a barrel of comfortable clothes and sends with her best wishes, and Mrs. McNally, of Elon College, contributes a welcome addition to our clothing for little girls.

Your good ready made clothing, friends, will come in well these short days, when there is not much time for sewing, but, as we have said repeatedly, "all gifts are appreciated."

Yours for Christ's cause,
 Uncle Jim.

Wadley, Ala., Nov. 7, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

After spending about two weeks at Grandfather Stephenson's mother and I came to Wadley, our new home. She thinks we are going to like all right, but I believe I had rather stay with "Ba-Pa," for he lets me ride to the wood pile in his wheelbarrow and go with him to the barn to feed his pretty white chicken.

Here is my dime with love.

Dwight Hillis Lankford.

Well, little man, you can visit "Ba Pa" again and perhaps he will give you a white chicken to take home with you.

Wakefield, Va., Nov. 9, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We heard you were in Suffolk last week. Wonder if you will ever come to Wakefield. We hope so. We enjoyed reading in The Sun about the good woman who gave all her life-time earnings to the Orphanage. Surely if she could do so much we ought to be willing to do a little. Our offering for November is $1.35, some for back dues. We would like to send more, but our mite will do good for the orphans, and for us, too, if given in the right spirit. So many have not learned that it is blessed to give. When we all learn the real meaning of that, we will give more largely.

Goodbye till next month.

The Whatsoever Band.

Right you are, little Band. Do you know the "Blessed" chapter. Our children know and some of them love it very much. They like to recite it in concert.

A CONDITION OF RECEPTION.

While very much of skepticism is being indulged in by a large number of professing Christians, aside from multitudes of others, it is eminently necessary for the true ones to keep insisting upon the Bible requirements of personal faith in God as an essential condition of one receiving the great blessings that he needs.

Reflect upon the fact that Christ made a constant practice of demanding faith in Him as one condition of ones receiving healing from Him. When two blind men went to Him to receive sight. He ask them this question: "Believe ye that I am able to do this?" They replied positively that they did believe. It is most certain that they would not have received that great blessing without a trusting faith in Christ's ability to give it. And Christ insisted upon a personal compliance whether it pertained to a reception of physical or spiritual blessings. He said that one would be saved by Him if one believed on Him. He that believes shall be saved. This was the universal rule then, as it ever has been since that time. He who would not have faith in Christ was deprived of any and all favors that he might ask for. And why was Christ so insistent upon a personal compliance with this condition? Because for one thing he knew that there was a great inclination in human nature to indulge in unbelief. He knew that it was from unbelief that Adam and Eve fell from their state of innocence. Eve believed in Satan's words more than she believed in God's word, and this resulted in her ruin. And ever since that day there has been a proneness in fallen man to disbelieve God's word. Hence the requirement by God that sinful people should have decided faith in Him, and also in Christ. Another reason is that sinners must be saved by faith, and never by their works. God must have the glory and not man; therefore sinners cannot become saints by spiritual evolution, but by simple faith in the Divine Son, the crucified Lord, to whom shall be the glory for ever and ever.

C. H. Wetherbe.

OUR MISSIONARY MEETING.

Dear Brother Atkinson:

I have had the "Grip" or the "grip" has had me for the last ten days, so that I have been unable to attend to my work.

I failed yesterday or today to get to Antioch. I preached last Sunday at Beulah, but was not really able to do so. Glad to say however that I am better now and hope to be able to fill my appointments in the future, if it be my Lord's will. I had the pleasure of attending the Sunday in October, and enjoyed the meeting very much indeed. In fact I believe that we did the right thing in dividing the churches into districts, provided our people will take an interest in the work. It will not be burdensome and we can increase our working force much faster, than in the old way. Now it behooves every church to attend the meetings, and learn of these vital questions, that pertain to the church interest as they are discussed at the meeting.

We thereby learn more of each other and of each others' needs. No church can be alive to its every interest and treats carelessly these fraternal gatherings. Our District Meeting will be held at New Hope 4th. Sunday in November and Saturday before. We most earnestly desire to see our brethren from the different churches come and take part in this meeting. Let us pray for a good time. G. D. Hunt.

A PLEA FOR THE CHURCH MISSIONARY ASSOCIATION.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference will hold its annual meeting with the Suffolk Church, on December 5th, 1911. This meeting will consist of a morning and afternoon session, chiefly given to business, but will be full of interest and vital importance to the conference work. The Association is a mighty factor in the home mission work of the conference and deserves the hearty support of individuals, churches, Sunday Schools and societies of all kinds of the conference. The conference could not do the mission work that it is doing today, without the aid of the Association.

If the Association were eliminate retrenchment would be necessary at once. We would have to abandon several promising points or so cripple them that they could not do successful work. Who would have us to do less for home missions than we are doing? Who would even have us to go backward, instead of going forward? Who would even have us to simply hold our ground. None of these would satisfy us, but our aim would be "go forward." Shall this really be our aim? What think you?

Now, the Conference can go forward with its home mission work only by a proper support of the Christian Missionary Association. The churches, Sunday schools, societies, and individuals must come up with their memberships. At present more than half of the churches and Sunday schools of the conference are not represented in the membership list of the Association at all. Why is this? Is it inability or simply negligence? Who is to blame? Where does the trouble lie? Lets find it and get to work.

APPEAL.

Dear Brother Pastor or Superintendent we beg you to see that your church or churches, shall be represented by at least one membership at the December meeting of the Association. Do not neglect this. The Association needs your support. It will not be able to sustain the work in hand unless you come to its assistance. Can we account on you?

Yours in behalf of the Association,
J. W. Harrell.

Winchester Letter.

As Dr. Staley has already told of our opening service in our new church, at which we expected to dedicate, it is not necessary for me to go into details about the service. Dr. Staley preached a strong sermon on Sunday morning, much to the delight of the congregation. It was a great day for us even if we did not dedicate. It brought our work before the people. We appreciate the interest taken in our work by ministers of our own and other churches as manifested by their being with us on that occasion.

We had hoped that it would not be necessary for us to make any more general appeals for money, but after providing for a part of our debts, we find that we have about $400 in outstanding bills that should be paid immediately. If we can raise this amount now perhaps we shall not be in quite as great a strain again. We must have this $400 soon. It may be that you would like to be one of a thousand to give $1.00. We have received two hundred and forty-five one dollar contributions. We would like to have 755 more. Our meeting is no win progress and is being very well attended. Some special interest has been manifested of which we will write more later.

The following contributions have been received:

- Previously reported,$4,301.09

Greensboro Letter.

The fourth quarterly conference of the First Christian Church was held Thursday evening. Reports of the officers and departments showed the church to be in a healthy condition. During the year 50 members have been received into the church, while there has been a loss for various causes of 19, leaving a net gain of 31 members for the year. The pastor's salary and conference assessments will be paid in full. About $75 will be given to foreign missions as a of the Laymen's movement in the church.

Two new deacons were elected: Brethren C. C. Johnson and John R. Foster. Officers of Sunday School next year: Charles A. Hines, superintendent; B. B. Phillips, assistant superintendent; Miss Effie Lowe, secretary-treasurer; Miss Lilly Foster, assistant secretary. S. A. Caviness was re-elected treasurer. Bro. L. M. Clymer is standing secretary of the church. Rev. L. E. Smith was some time ago unanimously called to be pastor of the church again next year.

The report of the Sunday School was the most encouraging feature of the meeting. It showed a gain of nearly 50 per cent in the average attendance of the Sunday School in the last four months. This is due in a large measure to the work of the Baraca and Philathea classes. To the Baraca class of the church, with S. A. Caviness as president and John R. Foster as teacher, has recently put cement floor in the basement and divided it into a class room at a cost of about $200. This will mean better things for the school.

The church will use the Duplex envelopes next year. The aim is to raise increased pastor's salary, conference assessments and $100 special foreign missions solely through the envelope system. The church this year raised something like $2,000 for all purposes.

The ladies aid society is doing splendid work. Mrs. C. C. Johnson is now president of this organization.

NOTES.

Beginning the third Sunday in August our protracted meeting continued until Thursday night following, and resulted in eleven accessions to the church at Bethlehem. Rev. W. G. Clements assisted me in the meeting, did most of the preaching and did it well. The church was revived by the message as delivered by him and will gladly hear him again. I came home from this meeting sick, and took my bed, and for about two months was unable to do anything, but at this time I am again able to fill my appointments, for which I feel very thankful.

The fifth Sunday in October I began a meeting at Long's Chapel and continued until Tuesday. Three professions and the church much revived resulted from this meeting. Rev. C. C. Peel did the preaching, endearing himself to the congregation by his earnest, forceful message. I have been recalled by the churches of my charge for next year, and am anxious that my health may be sufficient to enable me to render the service required in building up the Master's kingdom.

J. W. Holt.

Cash This Time.

Last Friday, November 10, my friends at Long's Chapel sent me a load of good things to eat, and yesterday at the close of the service at Union, Brother W. J. Graham interrupted long enough to present the pastor a purse of forty-one dollars and seventy-five cents. This was contributed by friends as an expression of sympathy and regard in view of the pastor's recent sickness. The names of the contributors and amounts are as follows: Dr. C. M. Walters, his wife and two daughters each, $2.50; J. M. Wallace, $4.00; Mrs. J. M. Wallace, $1.00; Miss Adeline Wallace, $1.00; Mrs. L. H. Aldrige, $1.00; A. Graham and wife each, $1.00; W. J. Graham and wife, $1.50; W. T. Perry, $1.00; T. R. Hughes and wife, $1.50; J. P. King, 50 cents; N. F. Fosters, $1.00; G. R. Maynard, $5.00; W. M. McCauley, $1.00; E. W. Wilkins, 50 cents; Alice Maynard, $1.00; Annie Wilkins, 25 cents; Selma McCauley, 50 cents; Della McCauley, 25 cents; Mr. L. H. McCauley, 25 cents; J. D. Wilkins, $1.00; Nannie Kernodle, $1.00; J. A. Graham, 50 cents; E. W. Graham, $1.00; W. J. Turner, $1.00; Mrs. R. T. Kernodle, $1.00; J. G. Rasco, 50 cents; A. L. Perry, $1.00; W. L. Browning, 25 cents; J. H. Wilkins, $1.00; L. A. McCauley, 25 cents.

My wife and family join me in grateful acknowledgement of this kindness on the part of our friends. May heaven's richest blessings crown their lives with the richest portion of many good things.

J. W. Holt, Pastor.

A LIBERAL DONATION.

My congregation at Longs' Chapel sent by Brothers H. C. King and F. P. Rogers, a load of good things, Nov. 10th, 1911. In this load were 5 bushels of wheat, two sacks of flour, 13 chickens, 2 opossums, corn, sugar, canned fruit, soda, coffee, soap, and cash, the whole amounting in value to about $22.00. I find the following names on the packages: A. O. Huffman, J. B. Rogers, Benjamin Hester, Wm. Garrison, F. P. Rogers, J. W. Johnson, Ed. Wyatt, Sallie and Hattie Rogers, Newton King, D. Haley, G. T. Hurdle, E. Long, H. Montgomery, Allen Dickey, Annie Johnson, H. C. King, W. A. Smith, G. W. Webb, D. Montgomery, C. H. Roney, Baxter Smith, Henry Hall, Brice Hall, Herbert Roney.

How much this kindness is appreciated by myself and wife cannot be expressed in words. It makes us feel that even in our affliction there is something worth living for. An oasis in the desert is not more refreshing to the weary traveler than this great kindness is to us, coming as it does after long and severe suffering to both of us. My heart craves more than ever for health and strength to serve these dear friends. My pastoral relations with them have been pleasant in the past and I feel that it will be more so in the future. May God abundantly bless them for their kindness to us.

CONFEDERATE BALLS.

We do not think that it is well to give public balls for the entertainment of Confederate Veterans.

Three Bishops in North Carolina, twenty-one Presiding Elders and nine Editors of the Religious Papers of the State have signed this statement.

Let the dancers stay away from our meetings. Let us Veterans talk, sing and pray and help each other toward God and Heaven.

Chaplain N. C. Division Confederate Veterans.

MARRIED.

Westmoreland-Scoggin.

At the home of Bro A. W. Scoggin in Guilford County, October 15, at 9 o'clock, Mr. Harrison Westmoreland and Miss Ella Scoggin were united in marriage. May their lives be long and happy.

Scoggin-Barker.

On the same day at 3 o'clock at the home of Brother J. H. Barker, Mr. William Scoggin and Miss Martha Barker were married. May their lives be long and happy.

DIED.

Farmer.

Mrs. Parthena A. Farmer was born April 8, 1830, and died November 3, 1911, being thus advanced in her 82nd year. Her husband, James Farmer, died in 1871. Three sons and one daughter survive, and the life of faithful service in community and in church that these are leading tell of the holy influence of this godly woman. She was a charter member of Pleasant Grove Christian church, Halifax Co., Va. She was buried amid a beautiful offering of flowers and floral designs, and a host of sorrowing friends were present to pay their sad tribute of respect to the memory of her who died as she had lived, a faithful follower of her Lord and Master. The interment was in the family cemetery near News Ferry, Va., the funeral services being read by Bro. C. B. Riddle, in the absence of her pastor. Our sympathy to the bereaved ones.

J. O. A. Peele.

Miss Indiana Peele departed this life at the home of her brother, W. Q. Peele, Holland, Va., October 31st, 1911, in the 61st year of her age. She leaves, besides the brother mentioned, a sister, Mrs. Lamb Gardner, Holland, Va. and a brother, Johnson Peele, of Georgia. Miss Indiana made a profession of religion in early life and joined the South Quay Baptist Church, Nansemond County, Va., and remained a loyal and devoted member till her death. In her long illness she spoke often of death and always with a Christian faith and bright hope beyond. Having no family of her own her life was spent largely in ministering to others till failing health closed the activities of an industrious and useful life. In the absence of her pastor the funeral services were conducted by the writer at Holland Christian Church and the remains buried in the family lot, at Holy Neck Church.

THE PICTURE ON THE SOUL.

Over in France the leading bank has an ingenious way of getting the picture of the man who is suspected of being a wrongdoer. Behind the desk of the cashier there is a photographic studio. Of this the visitor knows nothing. At a signal from the man at the desk the artist flashes the camera upon him and his picture is taken, and he leaves behind a record that he never can get away from.

Stop and think for a moment that somewhere in your soul a faithful Artist is moment by moment taking pictures which never will be blotted out. Every beautiful thing you look upon, every lovely picture, every splendid thought, every sweet face—all are stamped there never to fade away. And this is just as true of the things which are not pure and lovely. Ah, what a thought this is!—that this Artist working behind the scenes is faithfully picturing upon the sensitive plate of your soul all that ever come before the eye of your mind. Not a thing escapes; and wish it as you may, the story is told, and it is told forever.

God help you to keep on the soul He has given you only the record of things good, pure, true, lovely and of good report! How can this be done? Only by living a life so high, so pure, so consecrated to Jesus Christ that He will give you visions of beauty and shut out the thought and the very appearance of all that is evil.

Do you know any man or woman who sometimes says things that are likely to bring a blush to your cheek? Keep just as far away from that person as you possibly can. It may cost you something to do this sometimes. By going out from the presence of that one you may bring criticism upon yourself, but God never will criticise you. He will love you all the better for it; and in the days to come men will creep up to you for help and strength, for they will know that you have a power which will make you strong and tender to protect them.—Christian Work.

UNDER BALMY SKIES.

(Sketches and Recollections.)

It has been some weeks now since my visit to the Georgia and Alabama Conferences, but pleasant recollections abide, and a sweet taste in the mouth, possibly from the cane chewed, more likely, however, from the cordial hospitality enjoyed. At any rate not half we saw has been told in The Sun even of that which is worth telling, and worth reading, too, if told aright. I am thinking still of the balmy skies, the gracious October days, the inviting sunshine, the happy and wholesome atmosphere that made every day seem the best day, while sojourning in the land of cotton, cane, and corn.

Southern Georgia and north-eastern Alabama are certainly favored regions, and if the people are not prosperous, progressive and happy it is all their own fault. Nature has done her best for them, and the climate is all that could be desired.

One of the largest audiences, the largest with the possible exception of that at Conference, that I found was in our new and commodious house of worship in the growing town of Wadley. Rev. E. M. Carter labored there last year and brought the building to successful completion. He has builded well and the splendid house reflects credit upon him and all who were associated with him in the good work. Dr. J. M. Welch and Bro. Walker Pearson were able assistants in the work, and with counsel, loyalty and liberality cheered the pastor's heart and pushed the work forward. Rev. G. O. Lankford has moved, with his family, to Wadley and he has assumed pastoral charge of the church and will carry forward the work so well begun and conducted thus far by Bro. Carter.

Not far from Wadley, out at New Hope in the country some eight miles away, I stood with uncovered head and uplifted heart at the last resting place of Rev. J. D. Elder, "Uncle Doc," as history has him, the man who did so much to establish firmly our work of this and the adjacent Conference.

They have a monument to his memory out there under the oaks and cedars and his ashes must rest well in the silent sacred shades there. He deserves both, if ever man did, the monument and the rest. It has been recorded many a time, but let it go in print again here: J. D. Elder, born June 15, 1835, died April 11, 1901. Joined the Christian Church Aug. 1, 1858, ordained to the gospel ministry October 1860. He preached 5,000 sermons and travelled 50,000 miles (mostly on buggy or some private conveyance). Hundreds were converted and added to the church under this man's ministry, and even now goodness and greatness of his work have just begun to appear. The real founder of our churches in these parts was his father, Rev. W. M. J. Elder, who was born October 5th, 1801, and died in 1870. His body sleeps peacefully here and I feel myself on sacred grounds indeed in this silent place of the truly great and glorious dead. There is now the third generation of preachers in this remarkable family of Elders. They have the right name. Rev. W. M. J. Elder was the father of Rev. J. D. Elder, the church builder and promoter. In turn Rev. J. D. Elder was father of Revs. J. W. and H. W. Elder. Both of these men are great in pulpit power today and well maintain the great name their father and grandfather transmitted to them. Bro. H. W. Elder is yet a comparatively young man, but I think he has some sixteen or more church organizations and substantial buildings to his credit already. Of all our Southern preachers I do not now recall one who has built and brought to permanence and success as many churches as Rev. H. W. Elder. If we had ten men like H. W. Elder the church houses and membership among the Christians would well nigh double in ten years. These Elders have consecration, devotion, loyalty born in them and cultivated to a high and holy degree.

From this New Hope church came our Dr. J. W. Manning of Norfolk with whose name Sun readers are familiar and who is doing so much to help in building up our cause at Park Place, Norfolk. Rev. G. D. Hunt is the able and beloved pastor and great congregations gather here to hear him expound the Word. I spent the night very happily in Bro. Hunt's hospitable home and then he made me pay for every indulgence I had enjoyed by driving me across the country more than thirty miles, and seeing to it that I preach to large audiences three times, besides an address or two, and two or three social calls, all in one day (Sunday). Bro. Hunt is a busy man himself and makes others get busy who come about him. But his pungent wit and exceeding good humor keep one in a happy frame of mind and the hours speed by.

A monument to the home mission efforts of the Ga. and Ala. Conference is Rose Hill church, Columbus, Ga. The membership is not large, but it is loyal, devoted and true. I am glad that Rev. W. L. Wells, who graduated from Elon College last June, has gone to take charge of this work. It ought to succeed and build up into a strong, vigorous body. The house is ample, modern, and inviting; the membership intelligent and interested and the location good and promising. The field of usefulness is broad and ready. Bro. Wells has an opportunity which it is believed he will improve. Next spring the Conferences are to hold Missionary Rallies, and the editor even now indulges the hope of attending and meeting again again the many brethren whom he met and learned to love on this recent visit.

The Passing of A Great Man.

In the death of Joseph Pearson Caldwell at Morganton, N. C., in the early morning hour of November 22, this good State loses one of its best known and beloved sons, and the news-paper fraternity its most brilliant and eminent member. He was the founder and builder of The Charlotte Daily Observer and his illustrious pen gave that paper a place and prestige in the hearts of the people that will not pass in a generation. Mr. Caldwell had been in declining health for three years and wholly unable in that time to do any work, but respect for the work he had done and love for the man who had wrought so well deepened and broadened as the years of his retirement lengthened.

This man, whose mind soared higher and went deeper than most, was as courtly as a prince in bearing and in manner, yet as gentle and as loving as a child in disposition and in heart. If ever I have met and grasped the hand of a true gentleman, I put J. P. Caldwell down as that one. He knew how to be a gentleman. It was natural with him.

There was a frankness, a sincerity, a genuineness about the man that made him at once respected and beloved. I reckon that in our day no man had friends who loved him more devotedly than did Mr. Caldwell. You scarcely knew which to admire more about the man, his brilliant mind, or his great, warm, tender heart. He was master of a style that was lucid, yet chaste, dignified, but not stiff, elegant, but not indifferent, charming always, but not superfluous. He was a truly great journalist, a friend to humanity and absolutely fair to every man and issue that came within the scope of his treatment.

God rest his noble soul, for it lived here to brighten many lives and to help many who were struggling upwards.

The burial was at Statesville and many distinguished friends gathered there to do honor to his good and great name.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

The 86th Annual session of the N. C. and Va. Christian Conference was saddened by the absence on account of sickness of its oldest ordained minister, Rev. J. W. Wellons. He had missed only one other session since 1852, that session being in 1862 when he was within the federal lines at Suffolk, Va. Conference honored itself in sending him its sympathy by the hand of its secretary, Prof. W. P. Lawrence.

While all were sad over the absence of Uncle Wellons, there was universal rejoicing at the presence throughout the session of Rev. J. W. Holt, whose life had been so long despaired of. Brother Holt was re-elected president and presided like a king with absolute fairness to all. His sermon as president on the Church of God was full of thought and the old-time fire and consecration of Brother Holt. Just before adjournment by a rising vote Conference expressed its appreciation of the good services of its president during the session.

Every report of every committee and address (speaking of course in the third person) delivered during the general discussion pending the final vote on each report deserves special mention, but space forbids. I cannot, however, refrain from saying "amen most emphatically to Dr. Atkinson's powerful address under the Religious Literature Report and to Rev. C. C. Peel's earnest plea for his Alma Mater under the Education Report.

A most impressive scene was that when under the Education report Dr. Atkinson, the chairman, called to the front the five young men at this session of Conference joining the Biblical class as candidates, while Rev. P. T. Klapp offered special prayer on their behalf, praying that God would make them useful servants of His.

Of course the brethren responded liberally to the call of the Special Fund and despite the fact that the brethren of many leading churches had already been approached privately before the Conference met, the subscription was the largest yet taken during the sitting of a Conference, the sum total being $2,475.00.

I wish to call special attention to the liberal response the citizens of Elon College (see Special Fund donors this week) have made to the Special Fund. This is an expression of appreciation on their part of the liberality of our friends abroad to the needs of the College. The professors of the college do not appear in this list since they subscribed to the fund during Dr. Moffitt's administration as president and are included in the grand total before reported. There are two or three others whose names will be later added to this list, who could not be seen at this time. This generous sacrifice on the part of the people who know the College best betokens confidence in the success of the movement and should be an incentive to those of our friends in other places to do their best in this hour of need. I think we all feel that this money will be raised, but it will not be done unless it becomes to each of us under our Master's leading our individual duty to help carry it to ultimate consummation. Thanks, kind friends, thanks.

THE FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION OF THE KINGDOM.

In Three Parts—Part I.
Christian Stewardship.

Faith, temperance, love, obedience, patience, forgiveness—these and kindred Christian graces engage the thought and thrill the heart of the followers of Christ. And they are worthy themes for discourse and meditation—worthy ends to be sought and practiced. Any man who essays to lift up his voice in regard to any such principle of the faith will receive sympathetic attention.

But what about giving? Is that not also a Christian grace? Paul makes it very plain in 2 Cor. 8: 1-7, that giving is a Christian grace on a par with faith, utterance, knowledge—as we will glean from his own words to this effect: "Moreover, brethren, we make known to you the grace of God which hath been given in the churches of Macedonia; how that in much proof of affliction the abundance of their joy and their deep poverty abounded unto the riches of their liberality. For according to their power, I bear witness, yea, and beyond their power, they gave of their own accord, beseeching us with much entreaty in regard to this grace and the fellowship in the ministering to the saints; and this, not as we had hoped, but first they gave their own selves to the Lord, and to us through the will of God. In so much that we exhorted Titus, that as he had made a beginning before, so he would also complete in you this grace also. But as ye abound in everything, in faith, and utterance, and knowledge, and in all earnestness, and in your love to us, see that ye abound in this grace also." And if there were any doubt on the matter the fact that the Bible speaks more than twice as often of giving as of faith and love ought to settle the question forever. The Christian world needs to appreciate this fact.

I have known men who would pray for the millennium to come and yet would not pay a mill toward its coming. We must pray, but we must also pay. The most profitable praying for the kingdom is that which issues in personal praying. Alexander the Coppersmith did Paul a great deal of harm and his logical, if not his licentious descendants have continued to this day to do great hurt to the enterprises of the Church and to retard the growth in spirit of the Master's followers. A recent offering in a large city church contained more than 1,100 coppers, but these would have been displaced by mills were the government still coming them. And while nickel-layitans have advanced a few steps in the spirit of the gospel, they too need to open their purses and consecrate their money as well as their hearts to the Lord. Purse-consecration and heart-consecration go hand in hand. Religion that does not get into a man's pocket-book has not done its perfect work. How many are laying up treasures in heaven, where moth and rust do not corrupt and where thieves do not break through and steal? Which will go further toward entitling a man to a dwelling place in the mansions not made by hands, eternal in the heavens—charity or miserliness—money given in His name or invested for personal gain in this world's goods?

Giving—the spirit of sacrifice—is the spirit of the gospel. It is as much a form of worship as praying or singing or preaching. And if done in the spirit of worship, as an act of worship, it will bring as much peace of mind and satisfaction of heart and spiritual joy in the inner man as will any other form of worship. We can worship God in our gifts as well as in our prayers, our songs, and our sermons. To give and groan is to lose the spiritual joy of giving—to be a real gift it must be cheerful, and should be done with a smiling face and beaming heart. When we get to the point where we enter into giving in the spirit of the atonement, it will not be necessary to sing while we pitch in our pittances into the collection basket to extend the border of Zion. Is this device resorted to to draw the groans of those who contribute to soothe their anguished hearts? Let us do away with the song while the congregation is worshipping in giving of their substance to widen the paths of the gospel host.

The first, foremost, fundamental fact for us to get before us is that God is absolute owner of everything. Whence came we? Are we creatures of our own handiwork, or where we fashioned by God? Let the Scripture speak. "God created man in his own image." Gen. 1: 27. We are God's by reason of His having made us. Not only so; but we cannot sustain our lives of ourselves. Our absolute dependence is plainly evident in the question in Matt. 6: 27 to this effect: "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit to his stature," or as the Revised Version has it, "which of you by being anxious can add one cubit into the measure of your life?" We are God's not only by creation and preservation, but also by redemption. "Know ye not that your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit which is in you, which ye have from God? and ye are not your own; for ye were bought with a price: glorify God therefore in your body." 1 Cor. 6: 19-20. And in 1 Peter 1: 18-19, we find it written, "ye were redeemed, not with corruptible things, with silver or gold, from your vain manner of life handed down from your fathers, but with the precious blood, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot, even the blood of Christ.

God not only asserts His ownership of us ourselves, but of everything else. We can own nothing, if the Scriptures are true. We are tenants at His will. We speak of our owning so and so, but what we really mean is that we have so and so under our temporary control—that so and so is in our possession, but ownership and possession are far different things. God has universal right of eminent domain over all our possessions. In the celestial sense, there can be no terrestrial ownership—God is supreme owner of the universe and all that in it is. From Genesis to Revelation this eternal truth is persistently reiterated. Gen. 14: 19 describes God as possessor of heaven and earth. In Deut. 10: 14 we read "Behold the heaven of heavens is the Lord thy God's, the earth also, with all that therein is." "The silver is mine and the gold is mine saith the Lord of hosts." Haggai 2: 8. "For every beast of the forest is mine, and the cattle upon a thousand hills." Psa. 50: 10. And for a more extended statement of the same truth; see Deut. 8: 10-18. "And thou shalt eat and be full, and thou shalt bless Jehovah thy God for the good land which he hath given thee. Beware lest thou forget Jehovah thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his ordinances, and his statutes, which I command thee this day: lest when thou hast eaten and art full and hast built goodly houses and dwelt therein; and when thy herds and thy flocks multiply and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied; then thy heart be lifted up, and thou forget Jehovah thy God, who brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage; who led thee through the great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents and scorpions, and thirsty ground where was no water, who brought thee forth water out of the rock of flint, who fed thee in the wilderness with manna, which thy fathers knew not; that he might humble thee, and that I might prove thee, to do thee good at thy latter end. And lest thou say in thy heart, My power and the might of my hand hath gotten me this wealth. But thou shalt remember Jehovah thy God, for it was he that giveth thee power to get wealth; that he may establish his covenant which he swore unto thy fathers, as at this day."

The second, sequential, sacred fact for us to face is this: that God's ownership involves man's stewardship. If God is owner, man is steward. If the one is true the other is—must follow as the day the night. And man's stewardship relates not only to money, but to everything else, to our life itself, with all its possibilities, capabilities, and elemental forces. In the passage on Christian stewardship so often quoted there is no reference to money and in it we are to account for all things. 1 Cor. 3: 21-4: 2. "Wherefore let no one glory in men. For all things are yours; whether Paul or Apollos, or Cephas, or the world, or life or death, or things present, or things to come: all are yours; and ye are Christ's and Christ is God's. Let a man so account for us as of ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God. Here, also, it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful." It is a much more serious thing to be a steward of "the mysteries of God" than of money—and a preacher ranks higher than a financier. We cannot escape our stewardship, nor the consequences of it. 1 Peter 4: 10 makes it plain that the law of stewardship applies to all. "As every man hath received the gift, even so ministers the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God." And no grander summary of its universal scope was ever penned than that of Paul in the letter to the Romans "And having gifts differing according to the grace that was given to us whether prophecy, let us prophesy according to the proportion of our faith; or ministry, give ourselves to our ministry, or he that teacheth to his teaching; or he that exhorteth, to his exhortation; he that giveth let him do it with liberality; he that ruleth, with diligence; he that showeth mercy with cheerfulness." Romans 12: 6-8. Note that giving is here placed in the fourth place in the enumeration of the special forms of Christian stewardship, just after preaching and just before ruling, six forms only being mentioned by the sacred writer at this time.

Stewardship involves three things: occupancy, responsibility, accountability. A steward is one entrusted with something, to do something. The faithful steward always occupies. There is a difference between occupancy and possession. Occupancy is active, dynamic. Possession may be a static condition, a mere fact. This is well brought out in the parable of the pounds. The pound was taken away from the slothful servant justly and given to him that had ten pounds because the command had been "Occupy till I come," not "Possess till I come." Occupancy means the right use of the talents committed to our care—the right employment of things entrusted to our stewardship. What a marvelous change would come over the Christian world, were it suddenly to realize the full import of this great truth.

But responsibility in stewardship is also involved. The parable of the talents teaches the truth. Each man was responsible for his talent or talents committed to him. It is so in this life. The law holds us responsible for our trusts. Public opinion hold a man responsible for doing the thing he undertakes or ought to undertake and praises or condemns him according as he meets his responsibilities or neglects them. My stewardship of God's goodness to me involves my responsibility for the right use, my punishment for the abuse, of the same. We cannot escape our individual responsibility.

But occupancy and responsibility are not enough to exact of a steward. Accountability is also involved in his office—accountability not to his own standard, but to the standard of the one conferring on him his stewardship. For the Christian, stewardship in all things means the doing of the will of Christ. There is no better way to find out that will than to search the Scriptures. Where they speak, we may with certainty act, otherwise we cannot be sure that we are right. "The Holy Scriptures are the sufficient rule of faith and practice," declared our forefathers of the Christian faith and order, and we, their descendants, cannot improve on that principle. When we know what the Bible teaches on any point, we have the standard of accountability—which to the Christian is the only safe, sure, sensible standard. What is the Biblical standard of giving? That is the question involved in the stewardship of that portion of the world's goods entrusted to us by our Heavenly Father. How much ought I to give to His work, the enterprises of His Church? What does the Bible teach? To-morrow's paper, under God, shall undertake to answer that query.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. Chas. Underwood Butler and wife, singing evangelists, having finished a successful revival at Brunswick, Ga., are engaged at Live Oak, Fla., in a series of meetings till Dec. 7.

—Rev. W. L. Wells went two weeks ago to become pastor of our Rose Hill church, Columbus, Ga. He writes "I am liking my new home very much and think I shall like it even better when I become better acquainted."

—If your church did not have a Thanksgiving service on Thursday, 30th, bear in mind to put aside your thanksgiving offering and send it to the Orphanage at your first regular preaching day thereafter. Bro. Foster has tried to supply envelopes for this offering to every church and enough for every member of the congregation to have one.

—The Woman's Board of Missions for the Eastern Virginia Conference, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., Chairman, is to meet at ten a. m., December 5th, pastor's study, Suffolk, Va., for the purpose of drafting constitution, adopting by-laws and laying plans of work for women's missionary societies in the bounds of said Conference.

—We acknowledge with grateful appreciation the receipt of the following: "Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Abram Holland invite you to be present at the marriage of their daughter, Mary Norfleet, to Mr. Arthur Cecil Odend'hal on the evening of Wednesday, sixth of December, 1912, at 7:30 o'clock at their residence, Holland, Va. At home after January 1st, Kingsboro Apartments, Norfolk, Va."

—Under date of Nov. 21, Rev. W. T. Walters writes of the work at Winchester Va.: "I am still continuing the revival services. The congregations are good and some special interest has been manifested. The people here are kindly disposed toward our work." Bro. Walters was selected by the ministerial association of Winchester to preach the union Thanksgiving sermon, the churches of the town uniting in one service for that occasion.

—Rev. David E. Millard, D. D., Portland, Mich., sends us an article for The Sun written in his own hand and entitled "The Simplicity and Saving Power of the Gospel." Dr. Millard was born March 16, 1829, and is now well on into his eighty-third year. In his rearing they did not have typewriters for even now Dr. Millard's hand is almost as legible and as steady and as precise as a machine. How wonderfully well preserved are some men, both in body and in mind, of our time. Evidently these men in their rearing took time to be steady, to maintain the even tenor of their way, and to cultivate the nobler and more stable virtues.

—The simplest, and at the same time, most comprehensive treatment from any source we have seen on tuberculosis is in pamphlet form covering only five printed pages and issued as the Virginia Health Bulletin, Vol. II, No. 12, Dec. 1910. We are indebted to Dr. J. E. Rawls, Suffolk, Va., for sending us a copy which we carefully preserve for reference. It is a Tuberculosis Catechism for Beginners. The Truth About a Dread Disease in Simple Form, Recommended for Use in Public and Private Schools. It is to the point and teaches a layman the facts about this dread disease.

—The Monitor, of Palestine, Ill., Nov. 22, carries the fine face of our friend, Rev. D. A. Long, D. D., and also his inaugural address delivered at Marom, Ind., on Nov. 17, the day of his inauguration as President of Union Christian College. The address and cut of Hon. John C. Chaney, of Sullivan, Ind., are given in the same issue. ex-Congressman Chaney having delivered a masterful speech on the day and occasion named. The Monitor speaks of the occasion and the two addresses in particular terms of highest praise. We would judge that Dr. Long has started off well as president of Union College, for by training and native ability he is capable of doing great work in the high position which he has been called upon to fill.

—We have just received orders from two mothers for Bibles as gifts to their two sons each for Christmas presents. Of course each wants the name of the boy inscribed in gold on the front. This costs only 20 cents per line of three words. What better present can a mother give her son or daughter for Christmas than a nice, substantial, well bound Bible with the name of the receiver in gilt? We are pleased to fill these orders, saving money to the purchasers by giving only the best even far below the publisher's price. Look at our advertisement of Bibles in another column and send order accordingly. Unless there is absolute satisfaction the Bible may be returned and money will be refunded at our expense.

—And so the Burlington people mean business with their new pastor, Dr. A. B. Kendall, and bride. Just as they were moving into the parsonage to begin house keeping Monday, P. M., Nov. 20, more than a hundred liberal souls of the church went with their donations in kind and packed the larder and dining room of the parsonage. They say it was a pounding right such as a minister enjoys (but an editor knows nothing about).

It was a happy hour and we felicitate pastor and people. We love to hear tell of the good work. By the way, we learn from many good sources that our Burlington people are favorably impressed indeed with their pastor and his good wife. Happy indeed is that people whose pastor wins their esteem and leads them on to higher spiritual growth and development.

—The editor is glad to hear from our good brother, Rev. S. P. Sailer, that the work in Boston, Mass., that he went there from Norfolk to undertake is prospering and is much more hopeful now than heretofore. Congregations have doubled, prayer meeting attendance tripled, Sunday school attendance almost doubled, Christian Endeavor force more than trebled, and church contributions last year and this nearly $1,000 over that of the two previous years. The resident church membership has been increased four fold. Bro. Sailer has labored under great difficulties and disadvantages in building up the work and that too at no small financial sacrifice to himself and family. His address is 79 Clark St., Lynn, Mass. By the way, on our recent trip to Ga. and Ala., some of our brethren said that the best and most beloved man amongst us who had been that way was Rev. P. S. Sailer, who visited our churches in those parts creating an interest in missions and stirring the churches to greater activity along many lines. There is in our ranks no more consecrated and conscientious man as touching this matter of missions than Rev. P. S. Sailer. God bless him in his great and good undertaking.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

November 23, 1911, was red letter day in Suffolk. The laying of the cornerstone of the new $75,000.00 Post Office on a $12,000.00 lot, at the corner of Main and Bank Streets, was the occasion. The day was next to perfect, the throng, including 600 public school children, who sang Dixie, Yankee Doodle, and America, was orderly and attentive to the exercises.

Addresses were delivered by C. A. Shoop, President Board of Trade, Welcome; E. M. C. Quimby, Post Master, a brief history and showing receipts last year $26,000.00; Hon. Alva H. Martin, Republican National Committeeman of Norfolk; and Hon. E. E. Holland, Congressman from 2nd District of Va. These addresses were all pleasant, appropriate, and in praise of Suffolk's growth, prosperity, and future. Six railroads and one waterway make it a great distributing center. More than fifty mail trains a day puts it in quick touch with other cities. It is the Peanut Center of the world. Many successful manufacturing industries furnish labor and create wealth. Large wholesale business is carried on here and Banking facilities are first class and ample. The Farmers' Bank of Nansmond has the high distinction of standing first on the roll of honor of all the Banks in the United States. A $100.00 share of its capital is worth on the books nearly $4,000.00, and could not be bought at that price; and its footings reach nearly $3,000,000.00. Suffolk's business activity and prosperity made it possible to have this building now under construction of N. C. granite and Indiana sandstone. The design is beautiful, commodious, and convenient. It is said to be one of the best architectural creations in the country.

Suffolk is also erecting a $40,000.00 High School building and rebuilding the plants destroyed by fire last spring and summer. Her development from a town into a city and her large business proportions seem to be steady, healthy, and prophetic.

The church relations of all the denomination are cordial, fraternal, and co-operative. This is one of Suffolk's grounds for pride and thanks. We are disposed to say as Paul said of Tarsus, "I am a citizen of no mean city." It seems that religion suffers by the substitution of decency for piety; otherwise Suffolk could claim distinction as a religious city; but, in the main, the gospel is believed, respected, and supported; growth in grace is not so certain of its position.

There are too many clubs, societies, organizations in these modern times; while business is concentrating, society is dissipating its energies. There are, in many places, too many and too much organization in the churches. There will come and there should come a reaction in this matter of organization. Creating offices cannot create energy nor spirituality. You can make so many positions that there is no merit or honor in them. The great matter in religion is allegiance to Christ by a new birth and out of that new life will spring the activities that win sinners unto Him.

The Christian Missionary Society of the E. Va. C. Conference will meet in Suffolk December 5th.

COLLEGE NEWS.

Uncle Wellons, who has been ill for several weeks still lingers, but his condition is somewhat improved and it is earnestly hoped that he will soon be restored to his accustomed health and strength.

Dr. Atkinson was the preacher at the 11 o'clock service on Sunday and delivered a powerful sermon.

The children of the Graded School of the town gave an entertainment in the chapel Saturday evening. The program consisted of dialogues, recitations, songs, and drills, and was highly entertaining. Mrs. Smith, the Supt., and Misses McKay and Griffin, her able assistants, deserve much credit for the manner in which the children acquitted themselves. The entertainment was for the benefit of the school library.

Rev. J. S. Williams, pastor of the M. P. Church at Asheville, N. C., was a pleasant visitor on the Hill for a few hours last week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kernodle, formerly of this place, but now of Durham, N. C., spent Thursday night with friends here.

Mrs. Thos. N. Chandler, of Virgilina, Va., is spending some time with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. S. Watson.

An improvement worthy of note is being made in the water supply at the East Dormitory. A large pipe is being laid from the pressure tank to the Dormitory in order that a system of shower baths may be installed for the men of the College. A suite of rooms is being equipped with showers, lockers, dressing rooms, etc., and will add much to the comfort and convenience there.

President Harper is still meeting with success in raising the Special Fund. The brethren are responding liberally and cheerfully and the fund continues to grow.

Prof. W. P. Lawrence attended the N. C. Historical and Literary Society at Raleigh on Tuesday of this week.

Arrangements are being completed for the holiday in store for the College students next Thursday. Dr. Atkinson will lead a Thanksgiving service in the Chapel at 11 o'clock, and a special offering will be taken for the benefit of the Orphanage.

On Thursday evening the annual entertainment of the Philologist Literary Society will be given. Quite a number of visitors are expected to be here and a joyous time is looked forward to. The following is a program of the Society entertainment:

Oration Walter C. Hook.
Snap Shots W. Staley Wicker.
Oration Olive D. Poythress.
Debate—Query: Resolved, That the Initiative, Referendum and Recall are Desirable Agencies for the Safeguarding of Democratic Rights.

Affirmative: Alcazo L. Hook, Marvin S. Revell. Negative: John G. Truitt, Junius H. Wright.

President—J. Sipe Fleming, Secretary—C. Titus Rand.

Marshalls: Odies B. Williams, Chief; Marion C. Barbee; Frank J. Malone; Willie T. Scarboro.

A SPECIAL OFFER.

Would not many Christian Sun readers like to have in their home "Lives of Christian Ministers," that large, ample, comprehensive, well bound volume, published by Prof. P. J. Kernodle, A. M.? The price of this volume is $2.50. Some copies yet remain unsold. We have perfected an arrangement whereby we can supply this book with The Christian Sun a year for $2.50, plus 25 cents postage on the book. Now, to all Sun subscribers who will send us this amount, a total of $2.75, between now and January 1, 1912, we will send The Christian Sun one year and "Kernodle's Lives of Christian Ministers." This applies to new and to old subscribers alike, provided of course the old subscribers remit all back dues. All orders should be sent with cash to The Christian Sun, Elon College, N. C. This offer only holds good to Jan. 1, 1912.

NORFOLK LETTER.

An interesting missionary program, entitled "A Photograph Album," was held at the Memorial Christian Temple last Tuesday evening. Persons dressed in costumes represented various countries. Refreshments were served, so combining in one both the educational and social interests of the church. The Temple has always been a missionary church. For that it has every reason to be happy. The missionary church is on the winning side of a mighty crusade, the crusade to win the whole world to Jesus Christ. In "The Outlook" for November 25th is an article entitled "John R. Mott." It is full of encouragement for those who believe in the world conquering purpose and power of Christianity. There is food for thought in one of the closing paragraphs: "The personality of Eastern races is more varied, flexible, and profound than that of the West. For instance, the capacity for passionate devotion, for uncalculating obedience, for suffering, of the typical Moslem races is unlimited. If Christianity should get possession of their resistless qualities, it would take on a vitality never before known. Carry the same thought to the races of the Middle East which have developed such marvelous faculties of meditation and speculation. If Christianity should be interpreted by them, it would take on an emotional aspect that must make our phlegmatic Wes-

KEEP AGE AND YOUTH APART.

The plan of the international society is to have Christian Endeavor organizations suited to the needs of various ages. To this end there are three branches of Christian Endeavor societies. These are called the Senior, Young People's and Junior.

The Senior society is designed for those people who are grown—fully matured in mind and body. Its meetings should probably be held once a month, having the usual officers and committees and looking after the welfare of the church and the comfort of the older members. This organization should have its social meetings, its business meetings and definite work, but its prayer meetings should be the prayer meetings of the church.

Take the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor as the principal and oldest branch of the work. It will have its officers and committees, will hold frequent social and business meetings. Its prayer meeting is to be separate from the regular church prayer meeting; this organization will have a prayer meeting of its own.

The Junior Society is for the children, boys and girls from eight to fifteen years of age. The leader of this organization should come from one of the other two societies, but all the officers should be from the children. More about program for the meetings, prayer meeting topic etc. may be had by reference to the various publications of the society.

Christian Endeavor has failed in many churches because the above order has not been observed. I know a society in which there were members from 12 to 60 years of age. The organization died in a few months. There were a number of bright boys and girls in the organization when it began its work, but they would not express the things they felt in the presence of so many of their elders. The elder people run the thing and one by one the children and young people dropped out.

The organization would mean great things in any church if the three divisions above outlined were put into use, proper officers chosen and the members availed themselves of the much good literature published.

If in your church you decide to have only one society, fix some limit upon ages—make it either a society for grown people, young people, or children, but in no case for all. It is just as fatal to lump all ages together as it would be to have a Sunday school with only one class.

Suggestions to the Leader.

For a candlelight meeting see that every one is provided with a candle. Those that cannot get candlesticks will have squares of board upon which the candle is fastened by the melted grease. Burn the ends of the wick before the meeting. Put out all the light in the room except that on the organ. As the leader takes part he will light his candle. The members will now take part in order as they sit, beginning in front, each lighting his candle from that of the one who has just spoken, until the room is a blaze of light.

In the open meeting have just as many take part as can be enlisted. Plan with them before the evening of the meeting. Keep your presence of mind, and fill in your program where necessary, without attracting the attention of the meeting. Have special music.

Discussion Topics.

1. Discuss the lesson text.
2. Quote other strength texts.
3. How may we get this strength?
4. How must this strength be used?

Gems from the Poets.

I cannot live without Him,
Nor would I if I could;
He is my daily portion,
My medicine and my food
None can with Him compare—
The chief among ten thousand,
The fairest of the fair. R. L. Allan.

Some Short Addresses.

1. In all the departments of life it is the quiet forces that effect most. The sun's rays fall all day long, silently, unheard by human ear; yet there is in them a wondrous energy and a great power for blessing and good. Gravitation is a silent force with no rattle of machinery, and yet it holds all the stars and worlds in their orbits and swings them through space with unvarying precision. 'Tis in the lightning, not in the thunder peal, that the electric energy resides. Thus even in nature strength lies in quietness; and the mightiest energies work noiselessly.—J. R. Milner.

2. "I can." That means determination. It means faith. It means the full strength of one's powers, for they come into full service only for him who dares. Let no one fear the coming of egotism. Egotism is not akin to confidence, determination, faith. It has been said that "God helps those that help themselves." This is a proverb. Some may deny it. But it is a dangerous thing to quarrel with a proverb. It is a child of experience. Deep down it may be, and difficult to find, but there hidden away in the proverb is the truth. So there is truth in the proverb "God helps those who help themselves." Where is it? May it not be in this: he can only help those who will permit him to help them? The man who brings in line all his powers puts himself in a position where God can help him. So "I can" has underneath it a deep philosophy as well as first of all the word of God.—Ex.

3. "I can't." That spells defeat. It is not hard to see that one who is sure he can not do a thing is weakened in every means in his command, to begin with. In any thing that requires strength, precision, quickness, skill, the one who comes to the task in the spirit of "I can't" is impaired in the powers that hold the keys to all the above objects. "I can't" trembles; the nerves are unsteady. The courage is weak. Nothing will work as it should. No power will come forward with the strength of which it is capable under favorable circumstances. "I can't" is not loyal to one's capabilities. "I can't" robs one of his resources.

"I have no sharer of my heart,
To rob my Saviour of a part,
And desecrate the whole.
Only betroth'd to Christ 'am I,
And wait His coming from the sky.
To wed my happy soul."

"It is easy, in the world, to live the world's opinion; it is easy, in solitude, to live after your own; but the great man is he who, in the midst of the crowd, keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude."

"Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but cabbage with a college education."

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

Holy Neck.

The third Sunday in November was a good day at Holy Neck. The congregation was large, two members were received into fellowship, and a collection of $39.50 was taken for improvements on the parsonage. The Missionary Society met in the afternoon. A short, but interesting, program was rendered by the children. About a dozen new members were received and between $8.00 and $9.00 collected on dues. The Society also took a membership in the Christian Missionary Association.

Greenville, Ohio.

We had a good day yesterday. A nice Sunday school and interesting services both morning and evening. The Sunday school offering was $14.82. Prof. W. M. Jay, of Defiance College, was with us at the morning service and delivered an interesting address on education. It being Defiance College Day with the Greenville church, an offering was taken which amounted to nearly $50.00. The exact amount, I think, is $47.31. I wish that all of our Conferences might line up with some one of our schools and that each church might take a special offering for the school of its special care; this in addition to our general educational offering for schools and colleges.

This method is being followed to some extent in the Conferences of the Southern Christian Convention where the church is raising $50,000.00 for Elon College, $24,515.00 of that amount was raised in cash and pledges by President E. L. Moffitt, who retired from the presidency last June, and President elect W. A. Harper is now actively engaged in raising the remainder. This plan of a special educational offering is being pursued by the R. I. and Mass. Conferences, and in our work here in Ohio, Ind., Ill., and in some other Conferences and States. Such a course would not only bring all of our schools before the church in the general educational offering, but it would bring some one of them before each church in a special way.

Valley Letter.

My rather long list of revivals for this year was begun by holding my first at New Hope. Our meeting here was better than last year in attendance and interest. One promising young man was converted and added to the church. Congregations are steadily increasing at this point and the outlook is hopeful.

My next meeting was at Joppa in Powell's Fort. Here I was ably assisted by Miss Minnie Fawman, of Linville, who presided at the organ, and also did good personal work. She deserves credit for the part she took in helping to make this the best meeting I have ever had at this place. Congregations were the largest, music the best, and interest the deepest I have known there during my pastorate of five years. There were eight conversions and additions to the church.

It was my privilege to attend the (intended) dedication of our new church in Winchester first Sunday in November. The announcement that a sufficient amount of money could not be raised to dedicate the church was quite a disappointment to all. However, we have reasons for encouragement with what was done.

Our people should rally to the support of the work there and pay off the indebtedness as quickly as possible. We are able to do it. Are we willing? Brother Walters and wife have labored hard and sacrificed much to make our Winchester church a reality. It means much to us as a denomination and as a Conference to have a church in Winchester. We can well afford to make some sacrifice in order to free it from debt.

It was also my privilege to be with Brother Walters three nights in his meeting at Winchester toward the latter part of the week following the dedication Sunday. The interest was increasing from night to night. Was very sorry I could not remain with them longer.

I am now in a good meeting at Linville. Rev. M. W. Butler and wife, from Newport News, Va., are assisting me.

Alabama Letter.

Almost every town in the land has some vacant houses, but Wadley is an exception to that rule as every residence here is occupied. We haven't a large town, but a full town, it being necessary in some instances for two small families to occupy the same building, just as Bro. J. H. Hand and wife and this writer and family are doing. This good brother and wife, "Uncle James and Aunt Susan," as they are affectionately called, very kindly opened their doors to us until the first of January, at which time other arrangements can be made. We only wish that January were a more distant date, that we might longer share the delights of this good Christian home. Uncle James and Aunt Susan are cheerful and happy in the daily enjoyment of the comforts that the religion of Christ alone can give. It is indeed an inspiration to sojourn here with these aged pilgrims for a little while and to hear them speak confidently and with all expectation of the joys that shall soon be theirs. Tired of life? No. They are happy here in contemplation of that larger happiness that shall be hereafter. Uncle James is now well on towards his seventy-eighth birthday, and Aunt Susan has already passed her four score and three years. Their days hastens to a successful end; already the sunset is tinged with gold.

Our town was shocked and saddened yesterday by the sudden death of Mrs. Sallie Thompson. She was a consecrated woman, a devout member of the M. E. Church, South, from which the funeral was held today at ten o'clock. Interment followed at the Elliott Cemetery.

The writer was at Pleasant Grove last Saturday and Sunday, this being the first appointment there for the new Conference year. Two gracious services were held. Here we have a great field for development. We are hoping for a good year at this point.

Rev. G. D. Hunt has recently had an attack of lagrippe which lasted him for several days. On this account he failed to reach Antioch the second Sunday. He was able, however, to meet his congregation at La Grange the past Sabbath. Bro. Hunt was accompanied home Monday by Mr. J. E. B. Williams, a most loyal member of the La Grange church, who visited relatives here for a few days.

The Alabama Conference extends the glad hand across the Georgia line to Rev. W. L. Wells, of tar-heel fame, who takes charge of the Rose Hill church, Columbus, Ga. Now, Bro. Wells, that you are not so far away, we shall expect you to come over into Alabama to visit and help us.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago by order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted and generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

tern faith seem like dry skin and bones. Or pass onward, still onward, to the stolid masses that have accepted the restrained teachings of Confucius and Mencius. Not only by faith, but by training, these multitudes have become possessed of a marvelous ethical habit. It is fixed within them as no other moral feature was ever incorporated in a race. Right living, according to precept and precedent, is not simply a feature of life; it is life itself. All thinking, feeling, willing, crystalizes automatically into conduct. If Christianity should ever come completely into the life of the Chinese and express itself through such invariable and disciplined habits, it would amount to an entirely new revelation or discovery of the meaning of religion." Truly the harvest is great, and happy are they who are bringing in the sheaves.

Rev. W. R. Harward and family move to Newport News this week where his pastorate with the East End Christian Church begins Dec. 1. Rev. M. L. Bryant is still on a vacation at his father's home, and is reported as feeling some stronger.

Our prayers are that he may soon have full strength and so return to his work with joy.

Yesterday at the Third Christian Church the pastor completed a series of three evening sermons to young people. The subjects were, "Our Dreams," "Our Friendships," "Our Education."

Next Sunday night a series of four from the book of Matthew will begin:

1. "The Miracle of the Birth of Jesus Christ."
2. "The Miracle in His Ministry of Healing."
3. "Never Man Spake as This Man, or Jesus, the Example of His Teachings."
4. "The Miracle of the Resurrection."

Monday, Nov. 27, 1911.

—President Harper of Elon College, though he has served only two months, is making a reputation as a money raiser, being fair to rival President McReynolds of Defiance College. He has just returned from the conferences (two) in Georgia and Alabama, where he was expected to do little more than introduce the college and raise possibly $500, and some thought that would be remarkable success, and yet he returned after only two weeks of visitation among them having raised nearly $4,000.00. He seems to be gifted of giving unto the people a desire to give. It is said that he does not beg, and has but little to say of money publicly—he merely offers the people an opportunity to give and they accept it cheerfully. He is raising $50,000 to clear the college of its indebtedness, and now lacks less than $15,000. His many friends believe that he will quickly raise it, though when he began the effort many shook their heads doubtfully. Now the smile of assured success gives place to the one time feared failure.

Dear Children and Friends:

We are having some frosty mornings and the boys are bringing in some fine rabbits. They caught four one morning; another morning they got one rabbit and two opossums. They were very much delighted. They are talking Thanksgiving now and hope for themselves a great day. They will have holiday and of course that means a good time for a boy. The rains have been so often we have not sowed any more wheat, and if it keeps raining every few days it will be little wheat we will raise. We have most of our corn out and the crop is very short—about half of our expectation.

We are glad to have received the nice help while at the Western N. C. Conference. These special gifts help us out.

Thanksgiving for 1911 has begun.

Sister Rebecca Pierce, of Franklinton, N. C. is the first. For many years she has been prompt in sending $1.00 Thanksgiving offering. Think of it—she is nearly ninety years old (87, we believe). How many men and women stronger and more able to give than she, and yet many will not give half what she has done. She gives regularly and cheerfully. Oh, that thousands may do as Sister Pierce has done!

O'Kelly's Chapel is the first church to send in Thanksgiving Offerings by their pastor, Rev. J. V. Knight. We trust that all churches will take the Offering and make it very liberal—we need your help: we have no assessments and it is your free-will offering that shall help us close up 1911 with a clear sheet and a liberal balance for 1912 for a good starter? Come on children, churches, schools and friends for a great rally 1911. Make the offering $2,500.00? Yours for work,

Uncle Jim.

Elon College, N. C., Nov. 22, 1911.

Dear cousins:

We are having some very cold weather these days, though it isn't too cold to pick cotton. I am eleven years old. I go to the graded school and am in the third grade. My teacher's name is Miss Affie Griffin. We are looking forward to a good Thanksgiving this year at the Orphanage.

I will close wishing you all a good time, too. Lula Brown.

Portsmouth, Va., Nov. 13, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl ten years old. I am going to school, and am in the fourth grade. I have three little sisters. I am enclosing five cents for the cousins.

I will close with love to you and all the cousins. From your little niece,

Blanche Saunders.

You must have been studying hard. Planche, to be in the fourth grade. Welcome to our Corner and may you prove a faithful member.

Manry, Va., Nov. 10, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write my letter for November, I am sorry that I haven't written before.

I am going to school every day now. I haven't missed a day. I hope the little cousins are well and are having a nice time.

Enclosed you will find ten cents. Love to all the cousins.

From your niece,

Amy Morris.

And now you are waiting for a big Thanksgiving, aren't you, Amy? You will have holiday and I hope a happy time.

Franklinton, N. C., Nov. 16, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

It was Grandma who said I was "another girl added to the string of girls." Grandma gave me a dime also to send you. I weigh eleven and one fourth lbs. I am only two months old, but have already had as many nurses as brother. You must not think it is because I am naughty any more; for Willie says I am the sweetest tiny baby she ever saw, because I laugh so much. She said William Staley was interested in her songs and speeches, but was as solemn as a judge and that even now he has the hiccoughs when he does laugh.

Every one here has been more or less excited this week and we have had two more girls in the house—Nannie and Mary Lou. Guess you have heard that Willie and Ben were married yesterday afternoon. Dadda's youngest sister, Pearle, was married yesterday morning. My cousin, Bessie Joyner, was married last evening in Franklinton. Boppa christened me last evening and baptized me with some of the water brought from the Jordan River in 1895.

Aunt Annie, Mary Lou and Boppa sang "The Sweet Story of Old," and 819 and 821 in the Christian Hymnary. I wore as a bib the lace handkerchief that grandma and her sister, Aunt Annie Mitchell wore on their wedding days. I behaved very nicely and trust the prayers for me may be answered.

Lovingly,

Florence Cheatham.

We join with your loved ones, baby Florence, in praying God's richest blessings upon your little life. May He make you a good and noble woman.

Franklinton, N. C., Nov. 20, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

The sixth of September I went with Annie and Degges to Aunt Annie Mitchell's to see my cousin, Jack Moore, who has since moved to Victoria, British Columbia. I also had a nice time that afternoon walking around in some stores in Franklinton for the first time. In Mr. Vann's store, I asked some one to "turn electric fan." They didn't understand me until I pointed toward it, as no one there thought of my knowing what that was. I hadn't seen one since I left Roxboro in June. Mr. Hunt turned it with his hand as there is no day current in Franklinton.

When Miss Hayes left October 2nd, I went with her and Annie to Franklinton to meet papa and enjoyed the ride back with him. He was distressed at one of my September accomplishments—stammering, and gave me a lesson in correcting it. I have tried hard to stop in order to please him. I told him that I had a little sister to show him and that her name was "Florence Harvey Bell."

September 3rd, I picked my first cotton and had it tied in a handkerchief and when papa was here told him I had a sheet of cotton on scales. He asked how much it was worth, and I said $2. So he gave me two pennies. He told me in August when my appetite began to improve that he would have to charge me $2 a month for board and since then every thing in the financial line with me has been $2. After supper, August 30th, I helped papa and "Miss Pattie" shell butter beans, the first I ever shelled, and the 31st I helped them shell peas, so he said I was worth my board.

Papa calls me "Mr Climber," when I climb over him and Mr. Walker, when I stand up and walk. I like those names so well that I sometimes pray "God bless Mr. Climber."

I had scarcely made the wish in my September letter when it was fulfilled; for two days later Aunt Minnie surprised us by bringing Mary Melissa and Wm. Cook to see us.

"Geatma" sends a dollar in my letter for her Thanksgiving offering. Here is a dime, "Gamma" gave me. Much love.

William Staley Cheatham.

You should see our little ones pick cotton, Wm. Staley. They will get some money too for picking, but they pick in bags and not in "handkerchiefs."

VISIING THE SUOTH.

Dear Brother Atkinson:

After a very pleasant trip to Norfolk and return, then a week attending State Conference, I have at last found time to breathe a little freer and I want to tell you briefly of my impressions of the Sunny South. In the first place it was not sunny, while I was there, as it rained nearly every day. But the good people whom I was privileged to meet while there made up for the absence of sunny weather, and my short stay among them was pleasant indeed.

I had often heard of the splendid hospitality of our Southern people and now

I know by experience that what I heard was true.

I was very deeply and favorably impressed with the work of our church in and around Norfolk. The pastors are wide-awake, capable men who, under the blessing of God, are holding high the standard of the Christian ministry and are pushing forward the Master's work.

If each of you Southern pastors has as loyal a band of workers as has Brother Hanson of the Third Church, the prospects for the Christian Church, South, are indeed bright. It has been my privilege to meet a number of our people, but never have I met a band of people more devoted to their church and showing a more pleasing spirit of unity than that of the Third Church. In so many churches today one finds at least a few folks who are constantly stirring up strife by exhibiting a selfish spirit toward fellow church-members, and as a rule it doesn't take a stranger coming into their midst very long to find this out. But at the Third Church there was no inkling of such a condition. Everybody seemed willing to do or not to do, as the good of the church might demand and I believe that is one of the secrets of their splendid growth.

Brother Hanson is doing a splendid work. He has the interests of his people and the cause of Christ at heart and with this equipment for service and a loyal people back of him, I feel safe in saying that in a few years the Third Church, of Norfolk, will be one of our strongest churches. Such devotion to their church and such earnestness in service on the part of pastor and people are bound to bring results.

My short visit among them is a source of very pleasant recollections and my prayer is that the Lord may continue to work in and through them as individuals and as a church, that His kingdom may become more and more firmly established.

Yours in Christ,

W. P. Minton.

MARRIED.

Williamson-Forlines.

On the evening of November 20, 1911, this writer, at his home, united in matrimony Mr. H. W. Williamson and Miss Etta Forlines, both of Mecklenburg Co., Va. These young people decided to attend Conference, and to take their friends by surprise by being married away from their home. The groom is a rising young farmer of his community, is son of Deacon J. J. Williamson of Hebron church, and himself is treasurer of same church, while the bride is the daughter of Deacon E. G. Forlines of the same church, and herself is organist.

Both are active in church work, and deservedly popular where known because of their many amiable traits of character.

Their many friends will join the writer in wishing for them a long and happy life, crowned with heaven's benedictions.

C. C. Peel.

Holden-Staley.

On Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 15th, 1911, Oak Level Christian Church was crowded with interested spectators, the occasion being the marriage of Mr. Benjamin Thomas Holden and Miss Willie Staley, both members of Oak Level church. Mr. Holden is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Holden, of Youngsville, and Miss Staley is the youngest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. W. Staley, of Franklinton. Mr. Holden is the popular mayor of Lewisburg, N. C. He is a general favorite among a host of friends. He has twice been chosen State Senator by the Fourth District, and is one of Louisburg's most prominent attorneys. A member of the firm of Spruill and Holden.

Miss Staley is a brilliant and talented young lady, winning friends wherever she goes and is a graduate of Elon College. They were married by the bride's father, Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D.

The church was artistically decorated with trailing cedar and ferns. Just before the bridal party entered, Miss Mary Lou Pitt, teacher from Elon College, sang sweetly, I Love and the World Is Mine.

The bridal party entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's March as follows: Ushers—Mr. Edward S. Ford, of Louisburg, and Mr. Will Holding, of Wake Forest, cousin of the groom; Mr. Edwin Cook, of Louisburg, and Mr. Henry D. Mitchell, of Franklinton, cousin of the bride.

Then came the groom with his best man and brother, Mr. Stephen Holden, of Youngsville. Last to reach the altar was the bride with her sister, Miss Annie Staley, as Maid of Honor.

During the ceremony, Miss Nannie Carlton, of Richmond, presided at the organ and rendered softly Mendelssohn's Spring Song.

When the words that made them one were said and the benediction pronounced, the happy pair left the church while Miss Carlton played Mendelssohn's Wedding March.

The presents were many and handsome. Among them was a handsome check from the parents of the bride.

The happy pair left immediately after the marriage for Jacksonville, Fla., Cedar Keys and other points South.

DIED.

Clem.

Sophia Clem was born October 7, 1827, died October 29, 1911, aged 84 years and 22 days. For a number of years before her death Sister Clem was blind and in feeble health. It was only two or three years ago that she became a Christian and united with the church at Dry Run.

It was my privilege to receive her into the church and administer the ordinance of baptism by immersion. From then until her death she continued steadfast in the faith, and although deprived of much of this world's happiness, was happy in the love of Christ, and in the thought that His amazing grace was able to save her even at such an advanced age. Deceased had been a widow about six years. Four children preceded her to the grave. She leaves 3 children, one brother, and other relatives to mourn their loss. Funeral services were held at Dry Run, October 31.

A. W. Andes.

Munch.

Virginia Munch was born February 26, 1853, and on November 12, 1911, was called to her home above, at the age of 58 years, 8 months, and 17 days. About 30 years ago, during the ministry of Rev. W. A. Dofflemyre she was converted and was received into the Christian church at Dry Run, where she remained a faithful member till death. She was a woman of exemplary Christian character, loved and respected by the entire community. Her life was above reproach and filled with good deeds. Deceased was never married. She leaves two brothers, Daniel and Jacob, and four sisters, Irene, Mrs. Catherine Ritteraur, Mrs. Mary Smith, and Mrs. Charlotte Bayer. A short service was held at the home of Mrs. Bayer, where the deceased spent the last years of her life, and also at the grave. Interment was made in the Munch grave yard, near Dry Run.

A. W. Andes.

Winstead.

Thomas A. Winstead was born August 15th, 1861, and died Nov. 19th, 1911. Age, 50 years, 3 months, and 4 days. He was a son of Henry S., and Mary Winstead. He married Bettie S. Oliver February 27th, 1889, to which union were born five children. Louise and Harry were born Jan. 1st, 1890—the one died Jan. 1st, the other, Jan. 4, 1890. The following children survive their father: Willie S., Myrtle L., and Oscar H. Winstead. The widow with these children, relatives, and friends mourn their loss.

Mr. Winstead had attended the services at Lebanon and dropped dead on the railroad about 100 yards from his home as he returned from services. He had complained of pains about his heart for some time and had otherwise complained.

It seems that sudden deaths are increasing rapidly. Death is always sad; but a sudden death is more so. Not a minute's warning—and gone into Eternity!

These instances are great warnings unto us—'for in such a moment as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh.' May God's providences and blessings be continuously upon the wife, children, and friends.

The burial services were conducted from Lebanon Christian church, Semora, N. C., in the presence of a large congregation of friends, relatives and neighbors. He was buried in the new part of Lebanon Cemetery. Services by

Jas. L. Foster.

Kallay.

November 11, 1911, Gustave Kallay, infant son of J. J. Kallay, of this place, died after several months of illness. Its body was interred in the town cemetery Sunday afternoon, November 12, to await the resurrection. Brother Kallay came to America from Hungary six years ago and has lived in Waverly the past two years.

The loss of his child is very keen, but the little flower of the home has become an ever-blooming flower of eternity. Brother Kallay says he is a Christian—then, he has a tie to eternity now which binds him closer, and more in eternity to live for. May their loss eventually be their gain.

H. E. Rountree.

Plummer.

Alfred Plummer, age sixteen years, died Friday, Nov. 3rd, 1911.

He was a great snifferer, having been ill all summer. The funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon from the church and the body was borne to the cemetery here for interment.

He leaves to mourn their loss his devoted father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Plummer, two brothers, Edward and Robt., the latter not yet seven years old; and one sister, Anna, not yet five. The family moved here from Ohio about five years ago and since that time have ingratiated themselves in the esteem of all those whom they have met, as well as gaining much prominence in higher circles.

They are members of the Friends

Church. There being no church of that faith here, they have affiliated with us, both in Sunday school and church. Alfred was a member of the organized class of boys of our school. He will be greatly missed. He was an amiable boy. He was quiet, meek, and unassuming in manner, and of a spiritual turn of mind. Only twelve months prior to his death in a meeting held here he confessed Christ as his Saviour, and in fact, his confession seemed to be but the public acknowledgement of what he had been in his life as a boy.

Death brings sorrow and trial indeed, but he who bears such with Christian fortitude is brought to Christ, the Son of the Living God. The mere turning of tear-stained eyes toward the place of his dwelling shall be accepted by Him as if we had spread out stronger wings and outstripped the eagle in its flight to His presence.

May we all be made stronger and better and to see the way more clearly by the light of those whom we believe precede us in the presence of Jesus. Be comforted, parents. God cares, and He will care for you.

H. E. Rountree, Pastor.

Harrison.

Mrs. John David Harrison departed this life at her home, 1617 Hight St., Portsmouth, Va., Nov. 18, 1911, aged 44 years, 7 months, and 21 days. She leaves a husband, a mother, Mrs. Malinda Butler, two sisters, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Holland, and Mrs. Laura V. Joyner, five sons and five daughters. She was a daughter of the late Jethro Butler of Isle of Wight County, Va. The remains were brought to Isle of Wight County and the funeral was conducted by the writer at the home of Mr. Jason Holland. The burial was in the family graveyard nearby. The deceased was a member of Portsmouth Christian Church. This was a very sad death and we extend our sincerest sympathy to her suffering loved ones. May they ever rest in the Heavenly Father's keeping.

N. G. Newman.

Little.

Saturday, November 19th, 1911, Brother James Henry Little died, having spent 83 years, 9 months and 13 days in this life. His wife, Katharine P. Little, died fourteen years ago, since which time he has lived with his only son, Binns Felix. He had only two children born unto him; Ealla, A. R., who was born in 1852 and died the following year; and Binns Felix, who survives him. His last few years were spent in weakness and waiting for the coming of the Lord. His remains were interred in the town cemetery Sunday afternoon, November 19th, 1911, in the presence of a great concourse of relatives and friends. Peace be to his ashes.

He was converted at Spring Hill church in the year 1874. The same year he united with the church and was baptized. The day he was to have been baptized, I am told, the incident of the mill dam bridge took place. It is recollected by many who were there and by others who heard of it that as the crowd was gathered on the dam by the water, on the bridge and elsewhere just before the baptizing was to have taken place, the bridge suddenly gave way and fifty or more people were literally spilled into the water, and but for the good work on the part of many some would have been drowned. Brother Little was a candidate that day. The baptizing was postponed.

When Waverly church was organized, Brother Little and wife withdrew from Spring Hill and united here where they each held their membership till death.

I am glad I have the privilege to offer to his loved ones, and his many friends, the consolation of his repeated confidence in his future peace. "I am ready to go. I don't know why the Lord is keeping me here; it must be for some purpose, but I long to be taken out of my suffering and go to rest." Many times during the past year or so, he has voluntarily introduced this subject in our conversation. I was with him just two evenings before he was called and he again reassured me of his longings to be at rest and his expectation to be with Jesus.

H. E. Rountree, Pastor.

Barbee.

Whereas an all wise Providence has seen fit to remove from this earth our esteemed brother and pastor, Rev. A. P. Barbee, be it Resolved:

That we bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all thing well, yet we deeply feel this act of Providence.

That we sincerely regret our dear brother was called hence from his labors of love among us and we in this manner express our appreciation of zealous labor, and that our community has sustained a great loss, our Church a willing worker, and a most devoted friend.

That we extend to his bereaved family our deepest sympathy, assuring his devoted wife of the love and protection of the church.

That a copy of the above resolutions be inserted in the minutes of Hayes Chapel Christian Church, and that a copy be sent to the bereaved family and the Christian Sun for publication.

"THE ABOMINATION OF DESOLATION."

False religions are an abomination. So-called liberalism, that puts heathen religions on a par with Christianity, is not liberal at all; it is simply blind, ignorant, and stupid. The horse, the dog, the parrot, know no difference between religions; but that does not make them liberal. They simply lack spiritual sight; they have not been born of God.

False religion is an abomination, in warring against the people of God; in sacrificing victims; in worshiping dead men; in worshiping live men; in changing the worship of Apollo and Hercules into the worship of so-called saints; in making a pope infallible, that is, a god; in turning science into religion, a science falsely so-called, tracing all life to an unproved germ-cell, the creature of a credulous heathen man.

Such abomination makes desolate. Such abomination destroyed the temple of God at Jerusalem; the Jewish nation, which could not believe that Jesus was the Son of God; the first Christians, who have always been persecuted.

False religion makes desolate, by turning men from God to a pope; by turning men from Jesus to Darwin; by turning men from Christ to a priest; by turning men away from the Bible to traditions; by turning men away from Christian liberty to loyalty to prelates; by taking away the wine from the communion; by teaching that none are saved but the baptized; by taking away that religion which converts men and turns them into the children of God by a spirit birth, thus leaving them as mere animals to die and rot.

Oh! the desolation of false religions! J. J. Summerbell.

THE STRENGTH OF MY LIFE.

(The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid? Psa. 27:1. Golden text for Sunday, Dec. 10).

What is the strength of your life? If you are doing anything worthwhile, somewhat is your strength above and beyond yourself. A man does not accomplish in his own strength. He must rely upon strength greater than his own. With all the dangers and difficulties about him Nehemiah had never finished his great task of rebuilding the broken-down walls of Jerusalem unless God had given him prudence, patience, perseverance, a prayerful heart and divine guidance. God enlarged Nehemiah's strength and clarified his vision for the tremendous task appointed him.

In the lesson of today we have the deceit of foes and the treachery of supposed friends brought out and laid bare. It took a wise man with a keen perception to discover the traps set for him and then keep clear of them. God opened Nehemiah's eye that he might see, enlarged his understanding that he might perceive, his real enemies whether without or within. Nehemiah was therefore a wise and also a brave man. God made him wise, and increased his strength.

The one who studies this lesson will know that it is not the hardest thing to make sacrifice and put forth effort in behalf of a good cause. The hardest thing is to make sacrifice when people are trying to frustrate your efforts and make to none effect your gifts and your deeds. The very people whom you would help are often the very ones who would play you false and do you greatest hurt and harm. Helping those who do not want to be helped, protecting those who do not want to be protected, sacrificing for those who do not want your sacrifices—that is the bitter pill ever and always. Nehemiah's most treacherous and dangerous foes were within the walls which he himself was straining every nerve to rebuild for the protection of the city. Often those whom we would help are our severest critics, our bitterest foes.

But when a man relies as absolutely on God as did Nehemiah he has nothing to dread or fear. In the everlasting arms there is absolute safety and security. It strengthens a man's arm, stoutens a man's heart, increases a man's courage, takes away a man's fear and clarifies a man's vision to rely upon God, to make a draft daily on God's strength, and to rely upon Him for help and guidance at all times.

He is the source of all true strength and the giver of all genuine wisdom. We need not fear, when we are consciously relying upon God. He is our strength and the light of our eyes.

THE LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT.

Let us bear in mind this Movement is not dead. We might as well hear in mind another fact or so about it.

The Movement is no spasmodic or temporary sentiment. It is as deep seated as love and as far reaching as eternity. Mark this word: the Movement has come to stay till its great work of evangelizing the world shall have been accomplished. The business men of Christendom have taken hold of missions in dead and determined interest and they will no more let this go than they will let the commerce of the nation go, nor the banking interests of the community die. The church has proven to business that missions are as important as commerce, trade, banking, or any other enterprise, and the Laymen's Movement means that business men have taken hold of missions in a business-like manner.

There are two other facts that may be put down by those who care to know and keep up.

The foremost is that this Movement has accomplished wonders. It is just five years old, but may high heaven bear witness to those amazing results. In these five years the gifts to foreign missions alone in Canada and the United States have increased from $3,980,000 to $13,350,000 annually, a gain of about 50 per cent. Besides this about $5,000,000 has been raised the past two years in "specials" for various foreign missionary equipment. Now this increase came to one object of the Movement. Home missions and development of the work of the church have received like if not even greater impetus by the Movement.

And the second fact to be noted is the manner in which this thing has been done, the methods by which the work was accomplished. These are told in a word: The individual has been given a chance. There has been a canvass from house to house, person to person, and each has been given an opportunity to contribute.

This is the secret of money raising in the church—give each individual a chance.

—Be of good cheer.

AFTER CONFERENCE, WHAT?

Conferences are over and of course each one was the best one in its history. This is as it should be. Each one should be better, or it will be poorer. A Conference cannot stand still and live. There were some good reports of churches to Conference, and others not so good. Now these lines are written especially for the benefit of those "not so good." Ninety-nine times out of a hundred there is just one reason why a church does not carry up a good report to Conference. It does not start in time, and so hushes along without any plan of work. A large per cent of the churches wait till a month or two before Conference and then count on the few faithful to raise the entire sum for Conference. What a pity and a shame.

I believe that every church member, great and small, nearby and far off, rich and poor, has one inalienable right, and that is to be approached in person or by letter at least four times a year—in a city, once per month—and given the privilege of contributing somewhat for the church and its claims. Brethren and beloved, give the church member a chance—not only the faithful few who happen to be present and easy of access, but the callous, the indifferent, the absent, the unconcerned. Approach every church member at least four times a year and give him the gracious opportunity of contributing as the Lord has prospered and you will see somewhat of a change take place.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement has taught us this much, namely, that large sums of money will be obtained for charitable, church and missionary purposes when the plan of individual approach is adopted. Ask the individual, not the congregation, for your Conference apportionment. Ask those who do not come once in six months as well as those who come every month, or six times a month. Brethren, give the individual a chance.

After Conference, what? Just this: map out a good plan of work now and for the coming year, and begin now to work your plan. This for raising your funds and also for increasing your church membership and developing the work.

"HOW COME?"

How come a Thanksgiving football game? Who originated the idea and what for?

President Taft issued a proclamation advising the people to meet at the places of worship, render to Almighty God thanks for His abundant blessing the past year, and remember the poor and needy with gifts of gratitude and so forth. How does a Thanksgiving football game fit in with that proclamation and with the thought of giving thanks?

Do please somebody tell us, How come a Thanksgiving foot ball game?

THE ANNUAL.

The printers promise us the Annual this year before Christmas and it seems now that they will live up to their promise as most of the copy is now in type and all of it is in the hand of the printer. It promises to be the completest one issued so far, and this is Volume 40. It will contain full reports of all our Southern Conference proceedings, with detailed accounts of money raised the past year, members received, etc., and a full church and ministerial directory. It will be neatly bound and will contain about 160 pages. The price is as usual, 20 cents the copy. Send your orders with cash at once to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, ELON COLLEGE, N. C., and a copy will be mailed you as soon as published.

A TRUE AND TRAGIC ACCOUNT OF A THANKSGIVING FOOTBALL GAME.

(From Associated Press Dispatches). Newport News, Va., Dec. 1.—Charles Benson, the seventeen-year-old left halfback of the local high school team, who had his neck broken in the game against Fredericksburg College in Fredericksburg yesterday, died at the Mary Washington Hospital tonight at nine o'clock.

The boy was paralyzed from the neck down and was operated on this afternoon and the fractured cervical vertebra removed in a attempt to relieve the pressure on the spinal column, but without success.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

Lessening the Number of Homicides.

The people of the good State of Virginia must be very much gratified at the conduct, within the recent months, of her courts and her executive, in their dealings with a case of revolting crime that became the topic of conversation throughout the country. No country in the world has as many homicides as the United States and the number is on the increase. One of the principal reasons assigned for this unenviable record is that our courts are slower in meeting out justice and our executives are readier to stay the execution of sentences than in any other country in the world. On this account Virginia has given a good example of late in dealing out justice, where justice was deserved, in spite of a hundred contradicting influences. We agree most fully and heartily, therefore, with this statement from The New York Christian Advocate;

"If all homicide trials were conducted with the spirit and method of that in Virginia which has attracted the attention of the world; if all juries were as honest and as sensible as that jury; if every State has a Supreme Court that could not be swayed from its duty, and a Governor who could withstand the combination of puerility, abnormal sympathy, countless letters from all parts of the country, and the demands of the ultra-religionists who wished to give the criminal three months to make his peace with God, the number of murders would be lessened by seventy-five per cent."

The Burden of Dollars.

To everybody, save the thief, the robber, and the degenerate, wealth carries a weight of obligation and a burden of responsibility. Dollars represent power and power not rightfully used recoils and becomes dangerous. No one knows this, no one feels this, more than the man of a conscience who has dollars piled up for his disposal.

A man who talks frankly of this matter, and reveals the situation, is Mr. Carnegie, who by a recent gift of $25,000,000 to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, reveals out a sum of $200,000,000 that he has given away in lump sums. Mr. Carnegie assigns as one of the chief reasons for his giving away so much now is that he wants to lift from the shoulders of his wife the burden of his wealth after his death. It will be remembered that Russell Sage died leaving it to his wife to dispense his millions. Mr. Church, one of Carnegie's close personal friends and a trustee of his funds, says:

"I have heard him (Mr. Carnegie) express deep sympathy with Mrs. Russell Sage and say that he would never entail on Mrs. Carnegie a burden of wealth so crushing. * * * He has already provided for every philanthropy that appeals to his own sound judgment and has frequently begged his closest friends to suggest otherwise channels for the employment of his fortune."

Let it not be thought the men of means are care free, "independent," indifferent, unconcerned. The man who has dollars, if he has a conscience, cares, and no one knows better than he that he is as much responsible for the way and manner in which those dollars shall be distributed and disbursed as he was for the way and manner in which they were obtained. And the man who has acquired them honestly will be honest, sincere, candid with himself, his fellows and his God in the distribution of them. Dollars do not make a man "indifferent." They heap up responsibilities upon him and enlarge his opportunities for serving the better his day and his generation. A man is as accountable to God in the distribution of his dollars as he was in the making of them.

The Beginning of a Great Preacher.

That God works in a mysterious way and brings mighty events to pass out of small beginning is exceedingly well illustrated in the life of Rev. A. C. Dixon, who recently left one of the largest congregations in America to go to London to become pastor of the Spurgeon Tabernacle there, supposedly the largest single congregation in the world. The Charlotte Observer recently erroneously remarked, in writing of this wonderful preacher, that he was born in Duplin County, North Carolina. We are glad now that the Deacon made this blunder in counties for it calls forth this simple and striking account of Mr. Dixon's birth place and of his beginning in the ministry, from Mr. L. B. Weathers of The Cleveland (Co.) Star, Shelby, N. C.:

"He (Mr. A. C. Dixon) was born on Buffalo creek four miles east of Shelby, being the son of the late Rev. Thomas Dixon, Sr., the father of prohibition, in this section and perhaps in North Carolina. Dr. Clarence was here when his father was buried and in his sermon in the First Baptist Church he told of how he took to the ministry. His father was conducting a protracted meeting at one of his country charges. The meeting was so fruitful that the old gentleman did not wish to close at the appointed time. It ran on into his appointment when he was to begin a series at New Prospect. The morning dawned on the opening day so the aged minister told his son Clarence to go over and inform his flock that he could not be with them that day; that he could not close such a great revival right at that time, but that he would be over in a few days. Clarence was a stripling of a youth. Barefooted and scantily clad he mounted a bareback mule and rode over to New Prospect to deliver the message.

"A handful of country people had gathered from the surrounding neighborhood to hear the pastor and it was a great disappointment when Clarence told them that his father could not come that day. Rather than be disappointed, those Gospel-thirsty men and women prevailed on Clarence to attempt a talk. They had confidence in the ambitious lad and after

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

Thanksgiving week has been spent in many places, pleasant places, all of them. I am beginning to think there are no other kind.

One hour spent in Siler City with Brother J. R. Parks yielded fine fruit for the Special Fund. Brother Parks has always been Elon's friend and loyal supporter.

Sunday was spent with Pastor C. C. Peel and his Belows Creek congregation. I had known these brethren before, having attended Conference there two years ago. Brother Peel preached an excellent sermon at 11 o'clock a. m. and followed it by inspiring remarks relative to the College. The congregation was visibly touched and responded with the handsome subscription of $30.00—a magnificent sum for a border church, young in years, but not so youthful in good deeds and the generous spirit of its members.

Tuesday, full of rain and mud, was divided, like ancient Gaul, into three parts, Mebane, Chapel Hill, Durham. How nobly the friends here responded will be seen by reference to the Special Fund list of donors. Chapel Hill will be visited again, as some of the brethren could not be seen on this trip.

Thanksgiving Day was spent at the College. As usual the annual dinner was much enjoyed. It was preceded by a great discourse by Dr. Atkinson and followed by the annual entertainment of the Philologist Literary Society. This was the 13th annual public entertainment of the Society and was well worthy of its predecessors. The Initiative, Referendum, and Recall was discussed with thoroughness and complete mastery of the facts and principles involved. The orations and other features of the program were excellent also. The judges, who were Hon. E. S. Parks, Hon. J. H. Vernon, and Rev. L. E. Smith expressed themselves as well pleased. So were we all.

We were glad to have visits during the Thanksgiving from Trustee K. B. Johnson, Cardenas, N. C., Mr. H. P. Cline, Charles Town, W. Va., and Mr. W. L. Beale of Handson's, Va., besides greeting with pleasure many of the Alumni and old students too numerous to mention.

Friday night it was my pleasure to enjoy an oyster supper with Miss Mabel Pugh's Sunday-school class at Morrisville, N. C., and be entertained in the home of Rev. W. G. Clements. These friends also responded to the Special Fund liberally.

I am now on the wing, greeting the brethren and being encouraged on the way. I have never been the recipient of such kindness, so unstintingly showered upon me—but these favors are not so much to me personally as to the representative of Elon College, an institution dear to the hearts of our people, loved by them devoutly, sacrificed for by them heroically, and destined at the hands of loyal, consecrated constituency, under the blessing of God, to do a great, good work for our Brotherhood. So mote it be. Amen." W. A. Harper.

CHURCH FINANCES II.

The Biblical Standard of Giving.

In the very beginning of our investigation of this theme we need to get distinctly before us this truth: God does not need our gifts so much as we need the spiritual blessings that will come of our giving to Him and His work. The covetous soul is a small, shrivelled soul. Covetousness is the opposite of sacrifice, of giving. To rid our hearts of selfishness, our spirits of covetousness to which the flesh is heir, we need to give, and for that reason God has ordained that we should in this way assist in working out His plans in the world. Christ said, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." But we can serve God with mammon, and it is our inalienable right and high privilege as well as Christian duty to do so. But what does the Bible teach on this point?

We are not told that Adam and Eve made offerings unto God, but we would infer that they did, for we find Cain and Abel bringing of their substance to honor God. Just why Cain's offering was unacceptable we do not know,—perhaps it was too small an offering considering his prosperity, perhaps it was not of his best, perhaps he brought it with the wrong motive. The point for us is that the first children born in the world acknowledged their debts to God and set about paying them. But we would get no standard from them. The first time that a definite standard of giving is mentioned in the Bible is when Abram paid tithes to Melchizedek, the great prototype of our Lord in his priestly character and work, and the second time is when Jacob vowed unto the Lord one-tenth of all that he should bless him with, (Gen. 28, 22). Thus did tithing antedate the law. Recent research has revealed the fact that the tithe was also practiced by many heathen nations of antiquity.

But what did the Hebrew law teach on this point? The general law of the tithe is found in Lev. 27:30-32, and reads as follows: "And all the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land, or of the fruit of the tree, is Jehovah's; it is holy unto Jehovah. And if a man will redeem ought of his tithe he shall add unto it the fifth part thereof. And all the tithe of the herd or the flock, whatsoever passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto Jehovah." Numbers 18:26 shows that it applied also to the priests: "Thus speak unto the Levites and say unto them, When ye take of the children of Israel the tithes which I have given you from them for your inheritance, then ye shall offer up an heave-offering of it for the Lord, even a tenth part of the tithe." The tithe referred to in these passages was a permanent enactment for the support of the temple and the priesthood, and was known as the tithe-terumoth. But the Jews were subject to two other tithes also. The first is the tithe for the feast of the Tabernacles, which was the Jewish Thanksgiving occasion and applied only to corn, wine, oil, and the increase of the flock. We find an account of it in Deut. 14:22-27, as follows: "Thou shalt surely tithe all the increase of thy seed, that which cometh forth from the field every year. And thou shalt eat before Jehovah thy God, in the place which he shall choose, to cause his name to dwell there, the tithe of thy grain, of thy new wine, and of thine oil, and the firstlings of thy herd and of thy flock: that thou mayest learn to fear Jehovah thy God always. And if the way be too long for thee so that thou art not able to carry it, because the place is too far from thee, which Jehovah thy God shall choose, to set up his name there, when Jehovah thy God shall bless thee; then thou shalt turn it into money and bind up the money in thy hand, and shall go up unto the place which Jehovah thy God shall choose: and thou shalt bestow the money for whatsoever thy soul desireth, for oxen, or for sheep, or for wine, or for strong drink, or for whatsoever thy soul asketh of thee, and thou shalt eat there before Jehovah thy God, and thou shalt rejoice, thou and thy household. And the Levite that is within thy gates, thou shalt not forsake him, for he hath no portion nor inheritance with thee." The second was the tithe laid at the end of each three-year period for the benefit of the poor and fatherless and widowed, including the Levite, as we find recorded in Deut. 14:28-29, which reads thus: "At the end of every three years thou shalt bring forth all the tithe of thine increase in the same year, and shalt lay it up within thy gates; and the Levite, because he hath no portion nor inheritance with thee, and the sojourner, and the fatherless and the widow, that are within thy gates, shall come, and shall eat and be satisfied; that Jehovah thy God may bless thee in all the work of thy hand which thou doest." These three tithes must be kept separate and distinct, else great confusion must cloud the whole subject of Christian giving and especially of the Hebrew practice of this grace. The tithe-terumoth instituted among the Hebrews by the founder of that race, Abram, was enacted into law by the Lord through Moses on Mount Sinai. The other two tithes were special enactments of the law and with it passed away. We celebrate our Thanksgiving day in another way than by levying tithes on corn, wine, oil, and flocks, and we have instituted orphanages and various sorts of homes to care for our own poor and our fatherless. The only way we have of supporting the ministry and maintaining the Church and its enterprises is by giving, or tithing, as the old Hebrew did.

These three tithes, the tithe-terumoth or that for support of the temple and the priesthood, the tithe for the feast of Tabernacles applying only to corn, wine, oil, and flocks, and the poor-tithe due every fourth year, were obligatory upon the Hebrews throughout the period from Sinai to the birth of Christ, and are according to the view of their rabbis still obligatory upon them. We find, however, that they were not always faithfully observed, and with dire consequences to themselves. One of the most powerful of the minor prophets charges up many evils to the neglect of the people to pay their tithes and calls the failures to do so robbing God. But hear Malachi (3:8-12) speak for himself: "Will a man rob God? yet ye rob me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee. In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with the curse; for ye rob, even this whole nation. Bring ye the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, neither shall your vine cast its fruit before the time in the field, saith Jehovah of hosts. And all nations shall call you happy; for ye shall be a delight-some land, saith Jehovah of hosts."

But what of the teaching of the New Testament on this point? Did the law—all of it—not pass with the new dispensation? Are we not under love rather than under the law? These questions might be very comforting, but for the last one—for surely a man will not do less for love than the law required. And so even without any direct Scriptural warrant, I would feel safe in saying that the tithe is the minimum standard of Christian giving under the New Testament dispensation. I would also have you recall that the tithe antedated the law and had its origin in the heart of man.

But Christ specifically commends tithe-paying. In his indictment of the scribes and Pharisees this is made plain: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithes of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightiest matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone: Matt. 23:23." This gives Christ's sanction to tithe paying as much so as his conversation with the rich young ruler does to the ten commandments, and also teaches us a great moral truth, that a man cannot buy his way into Heaven.

But as in other matters, the New Testament is in advance of the Old Testament also in the matter of giving. It is true that the old Testament provided for free-will offerings but it gave no standard for them and designated no method beyond individual caprice. The New Testament is very plain and specific on this point. Its standard of giving is given in I Corinthians 16:2. "Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him." This is the standard of giving under the dispensation of love, the tithe of course being the minimum. It shows that our gifts should be systematic—"upon the first day of the week" that is, upon our present Sabbath. If we were to do this, how easy it would be to pay our pastor quarterly in advance and to meet all Conference requirements without a struggle! Nor can the objection be raised that country churches do not have weekly service. The point of the injunction is not that offerings are to be paid, but laid up in store, each week on the first day. We can take it to the Church and pay it over once a month, once a quarter, or once a year, but we ought to lay by us in store for that purpose on each Sabbath. Suppose we try it for one year and see how things will work out.

But this standard shows another thing, that giving is obligatory upon every one. "Let every one of you lay by him in store," that is the Biblical ideal. In how many churches is this standard attained? According to this ought a father to say, my family will give so and so? Do we not often hear it complained that only ten or a dozen out of a hundred members have to do all the paying? Brethren, we ought never to rest until every member of the Church contributes to the support of the Church and its enterprises. It may take more time and effort to get the few pennies that some will be able to give, and it may be that we would rather pay it ourselves than to go after it, but can we afford it, in the face of the plain command of the Scripture to the contrary? It is always better for a Church to get ten men to give than for one man to give as much as ten men of his ability ought to give.

But in the third place, our gifts according to the New Testament standard are to be proportionate, "as God hath prospered him." That is the hard part—that is where it hurts. It may be more of a sacrifice for me to give ten cents than for many of you to give one hundred dollars. Many of us expect a man to give as he loves the Lord or according to his official station in the Church, but the Bible says "as God hath prospered him." We are willing to grant that we should give systematically and individually, but when it comes to giving proportionately,—well, what about that? And this proportionate part should not be reckoned according to the gifts of the most liberal man in the Church or the community, but according to a man's gratitude for what God has done for him in proportion to his prosperity, never falling below the minimum set in heathen lands, adopted by Abram, reinforced by the authority of the law, and specifically enjoined upon us by Christ.

If this standard were adopted, ten men in moderate circumstances could support a minister in moderate circumstances for all his time and two or three others per church could provide all the funds necessary for all church enterprises. I know a few who practice the tithing plan and they are happy and prosperous. God has wonderfully blessed them. I never knew of but one man who gave the double tithe during all his life, but he died a multi-millionaire, and was one of the best loved men of his day. His money went to establish colleges, found orphanages, and do the work of the Lord—one dollar out of every five he ever made—but he prospered and has left a name honored among his fellows. That man was Francis Asbury Palmer, one of the best friends the Christian Church ever had.

Yes, we live under the dispensation of love, but we ought not to be content to do less for love than the old Hebrews did at the bidding of the law. What father will not do more for his child for love than the law requires? The Scripture tells us that "God so loved the world that he gave." We must so love God that we shall carry out the Biblical standard of giving, which, with the tithe as the minimum, enjoins us to give systematically—"Upon the first day of the week," individually—"let every one of you lay by him in store," and proportionately, "as God hath prospered him," remembering that the Lord Jesus said "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and that "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." "Freely ye have received, freely give." But the greatest gift we can give him is that we should give our selves. 2 Cor. 8:5.

a song and prayer he mounted the front door steps and began. I have forgotten what he said his text was but anyhow he aroused the people with his simple interpretation of a well-known lesson and they asked him to come back next day and continue the meeting until his father could come. The lad preached the next day and the next and with each day the attendance and interest grew. From that day on he has been preaching. His first sermon was at New Prospect in the King's Mountain Baptist Association.

"I do not know where he was ordained. New Prospect was organized by his father and he was its pastor for 60-odd years. He was the only pastor of the church until he died and now the remains of that wonderful old man lie buried there. His portrait hangs behind the pulpit."

A wonderful old man indeed was this old gospel preacher, and his influence is being felt now in the world as never before. God works in a wonderful way.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Rev. J. W. Wellons is much improved and is now allowed to sit, for a short while three times a day, propped up in bed.

—Rev. L. E. Smith, pastor Greensboro First Church, came in for a great and good pounding last Friday evening. This church never does things by halves and Bro. Smith is happy.

—Send in your order to The Christian Sun for Peloubet's Select Notes on the S. S. Lesson for 1912. We can save you 25 cents from the publisher's price and deliver the book to you for $1.00 the copy.

—The dawn of peace has hardly arrived. They are fighting like mad in China and bloodshed is deplorably abundant. No one knows the end of the strife and upheaval that now obtain there. Moreover, the Secretary of the Navy of the U. S. A. has outlined a program which calls for the building of other and heavier warships for our purposes of offense and defense. Turkey and Italy have not cooled off yet, and the war dog, if not turned loose, is doing some awful growling. All of which is regrettable in the extreme.

—What do you think of a good woman working at 75 cents the week and saving on that wage over $700 in good cash to give the Orphanage at her death? With that sum the Orphanage will begin its permanent endowment, will only spend the income and keep for all the years to come the bequest as a memorial of her, and all like her who live and labor and sacrifice that the homeless and the needy may be well cared for. The Trustees have voted that only the interest, none of the principal, of any bequest shall be spent in maintenance and current expense. In this way we hope to build up an endowment that will mean much in future years for the Orphanage.

—The Executive Board of the Christian Orphanage Trustees was in session last Friday and accepted six more orphan and needy children into the home. This makes 53, and there were many other applications. The Board firmly believes two things: 1st, As long as we take only the needy, deserving and real objects of charity, and, 2nd, As long as we conduct the Orphanage on a discreet, careful plan, there need be no fear of numbers. The Christian church is able and will take care of its share of the hungry, homeless, parentless boys and girls. We of the Board do not fear numbers half like we fear our own inability to manage the Orphanage economically and discern carefully the needy and deserving from the impostor and undeserving. If our management appeals to the brotherhood, then by God's help the brotherhood will do the rest.

—The Woman's Mission Board of the Western N. C. Conference, Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Chairman, Burlington, N. C., has arranged to meet at Greensboro First Church at 12:30 o'clock, December 13th. The other members of the Board are Mrs. T. E. White and Mrs. T. A. Moffitt, both of Ramseur, N. C. We learn that the Woman's Board of the N. C. and Va. Conference is arranging to meet at same place and time. This Board is composed of Mrs. L. E. Smith, Greensboro, N. C., Mrs. M. F. Cook, News Ferry, Va., and Miss Lillian Aldridge, Union Ridge, N. C. The Woman's Board of the Eastern Va. Conference is called to meet to day—Tuesday, 5th—at the Suffolk, Va., Christian Church. We have not learned when the Board of the Eastern, N. C., Conference meets, but we presume at some early date. Mrs. L. F. Johnson, Raleigh, N. C., is Chairman. Thus our women are beginning a work which many feel should have begun two decades ago. If our good women get thoroughly aroused on the subject of Missions there will be something doing along that line of weight and influence.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

All Elon College students and many other friends of Miss Goldie Holland will be interested in her marriage on the evening of November 28th, 1911, to Benjamin C. Britt, of Franklin, Va., at the family residence corner Washington and Brewer Place, Suffolk, Virginia.

It was a tableaux wedding in the back parlor. Before the doors were opened her sister Virgie, as pianist, and Mrs. Hatcher Eley, violinist, rendered "To a Wild Rose," "Cavaliere Rusticana." As the performers struck "Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus," the ushers, J. D. McClenny, J. E. Holland, J. H. Britt, W. V. Leathers, and T. O. Reed, opened three doors that brought the tableaux scene, embowered by yellow and green ferns, smilax, palms, and chrysanthemums into full view of the expectant friends who stood waiting and watching in the surrounding rooms. Master Jack West held the license and little Antoinette Darden the wedding ring. Miss Mamie Holland, the bride's sister, was maid of honor and bore a sheaf of yellow chrysanthemums. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the family.

The bride wore a tailored suit of dark blue cloth, with hat and gloves to match, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

The bride and groom left via Richmond for Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston and, upon their return, will reside in Franklin, Virginia.

Miss Goldie will be missed from the Suffolk Christian Church Choir and many friends in the church and Sunday school, but Brother Rowland will welcome her into his choir in Franklin.

More than a hundred presents graced the tables that bore the precious remembrances of far and near friends. Silver and cut glass in many forms, pictures and needle work, rugs and chairs made the display beautiful and valuable, intrinsically, and invaluable, sentimentally.

When I stand at the marriage altar and see two lives pledged to each other till death "do part," I am impressed with the sacredness and destiny of such union. Then I think that the only allegiance worth the name is absolute surrender to the obligations involved. God accepts no divided service. "Give me thy heart" is the sole condition of childship to Him; and all human experience proves that half-hearted service is unhappy and unsafe. Marriages, with reserves, end in doubt or falling away. "Therefore shall a man leave his father and mother and cleave unto his wife;" and, therefore, "come ye out from among them and be ye separate, saith the Lord."

Ruth had the right idea of religious life without knowing it, except in her heart. That is what the church needs to-day—the spirit of the song, "I surrender all." With a church surrendered to Christ, as husband and wife surrendered to each other, there would be spiritual conditions so full of service and power as to win the world to Him. I am satisfied that we live such a half-hearted and selfish life as to rob ourselves and God. Beyond us, yet within our reach, are soul-experiences, by full surrender, of which we know little now. The "seen" obscures the "unseen," and we shut ourselves up in the now instead of looking by faith into the future where all spiritual life shall forever mature. I am conscious and you are conscious that we drag our anchor and retard our progress; if we could only lift anchor and move as the Spirit fills our sails!

Well, it may be said in truth for all that human life finds its best in the home and the church and one of these cannot exist without the other, for they are both rooted in and nourished by love. W. W. Staley.

NORFOLK LETTER.

Rev. James L. Foster of the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, was a Norfolk visitor yesterday and spent a very busy day. In the morning he preached at the Memorial Temple, in the afternoon he went with Bro. J. W. Harrell to Berea at Great Bridge and spoke there, in the evening he preached for Bro. Harrell in Portsmouth. Offerings were taken for the Orphanage not only at these churches, but at others as well.

Rev. D. A. Keys had a very good service at South Norfolk. He received one new member and baptized four by sprinkling.

Rev. I. W. Johnson, of Suffolk, preached at the Memorial Temple in the evening, and Rev. J. T. Kitchen, of Windsor, supplied for Brother Bryant at Berkley.

Various churches are at work on Christmas programs.

Last Wednesday evening Thanksgiving services were held at the Third Christian Church. Rev. C. Brown Cox, recently of Burlington, N. C., but now the pastor of the First Lutheran Church, Norfolk, preached. He gave a good discourse on the theme, "Thanksgiving for the Communionplace."

The following item appeared last Saturday in the Ledger-Dispatch:

Series of Sermons.

"Who Do Ye Say That I Am?" Tomorrow night, Rev. A. M. Hanson, the pastor, will begin a series of six sermons at the Third Church in answer to this question of Jesus. They will be based on the book of Matthew, and are the result of a careful study in that book in an effort to find a comprehensive answer to Christ's question, "Who Do Ye Say That I Am?" The subjects are:

Dec. 3.—"The Miracle in the Birth and Protection of Jesus."

Dec. 10.—"The Supernatural in Christ's Healing of Disease."

Dec. 17.—"The Revolutionary Elements in the Teachings of Jesus."

Dec. 24.—"The Extraordinary in His Death and Resurrection."

Dec. 31.—"Son of Man," Sane or Insane?

Jan. 7.—"Who Do You Say That I Am?" A. M. Hanson.

"CHRISTMAS IS THE BIRTHDAY OF ONE WHO NEVER GAVE THE WORLD A DOLLAR."

In the December Woman's Home Companion, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, pastor of the Broadway Tabernacle in New York, writes a great Christmas sermon. One of the eloquent passages in it follows:

"It is worth remembering that Christmas is the birthday of Jesus, the Man who never gave the world a dollar. He bestowed upon mankind not a solitary material gift. He carved no statue, painted no picture, wrote no poem, composed no song, fashioned no piece of jewelry, built no edifice, founded no city, erected no triumphal arch; but He stands in history as the great Giver. Silver and gold He had none, but such as He had He gave to men, the gentle touch of a sympathetic hand, the golden glow of a genial mind, the healing love of a generous heart, the bracing energy of a courageous spirit. Paul calls Him God's 'Unspeakable Gift.' The best thing God is able to give us is not gold or silver, or costly stones, but Himself.

"It is when we give of the things of the spirit that we escape from the realm of embarrassments and burdens. Into a spiritualized Christmas we every one can enter, the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the small and the great.

"In preparing then our Christmas presents, let us get ready to give some of the things which Jesus gave. Along with the many gifts which have prices, let us give a few which are priceless. Let us give thought to some one who needs it, sympathy to some one who craves it, praise to some one who deserves it but does not get it, kindness to some one whom the world has overlooked, affection to some one who is starving for it, inspiration to some one who is fainting because of the lack of it. One's Christmas does not consist in the abundance of the things which he receives or gives away, but in the spirit of good-will which fills his heart."

Our Public Schools.

At Raleigh last Thursday evening before an audience of some four thousand people Mr. Charles L. Coon, principal of the Wilson, N. C., Graded Schools, and President of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly, which Assembly he was then addressing at its President, was howled and hissed down before he finished his address. We haven't read Mr. Coon's address, all of it, for it looks too long for us; but report is that the howling down occurred because Mr. Coon was criticising, in a rather severe manner, the public schools, and the manner and method of conducting them, and dealing with them, in this good State. Not having read all of the address we are not prepared to say just how severely Mr. Coon criticised the public schools; but to our thinking the strongest condemnation of our public schools is that any one can make is to simply use the cold facts and bare figures about them, and if Mr. Coon was any severer in his condemnation than these facts and figures, then we are not surprised that he was howled down and hissed out. For instance, the average length of school term in days per year in the U. S. is 155. In the North Atlantic States the average is 179 days the year. In the Western States it is 161 days. Now the average in North Carolina is 101 days. Two States in the Union are good enough to save us the ignominy of being at the bottom of the column, South Carolina and Arkansas, which are three days behind us. That is to say North Carolina is 50 per cent below the average of all the States in the matter of educating her youths in the public schools, and nearly 100 per cent behind the New England States. So, with all our "educational talk" and all the campaigns waged in behalf of "common school" education we are not yet giving the boy in North Carolina the chance by 50 per cent that he gets in other States. If Mr. Coon made any severer criticisms than these facts indicate, it was time to howl him down, for we cannot conceive of severer criticism than the cold, bare facts and figures in the matter.

—Congress assembled at noon Monday, Dec. 3, in its sixty-second regular session. The House is largely Democratic, the Senate is Republican and a long session seems evident.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL.

In connection with the Christian Endeavor lesson for December 7th, would it not be well for the society to consider some plan to obtain a number of regular, systematic givers to foreign missions in the church? Not only is this a work Christian Endeavorers can do, but it is a work that every official board might undertake and should undertake if the church is not giving regularly to foreign missions.

It is a shame and a disgrace that men will call themselves Christians and not give to the salvation of others. The true follower of Christ desires to carry others with him. The man who attempts to follow Christ without saving others will soon discover that he is not a follower of Christ, for the Master doesn't go that way.

I suggest that the society appoint a missionary committee of five, and let this five divide the members of the church into five groups. Each committeeman will then become responsible for one group and will agree to canvass and collect from them each preaching day, Sunday school meeting or Christian Endeavor meeting a weekly, semi-monthly or monthly gift to missions.

It is true this a work for the church to do, but if the church doesn't do its work then the responsibility falls back on the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor society or some other auxiliary.

Is it estimated that every $2.00 given to foreign missions saves a soul. Who is a member of the church and willing to give enough each year to save at least one soul in the foreign field?

Start a mission study class in your church. Give your pastor a subscription for the Christian Missionary. Learn something about the call to the harvest and the few laborers and little means, and it will loosen your purse strings.

NOTES ON THE WORK.

The editor of this department has had a number of calls recently for Christian Endeavor literature. He has sent to those who asked for it such literature as he had at hand. It is suggested that every pastor, society secretary or person interested in organizing a Christian Endeavor Society should write to the United Society of Christian Endeavor, Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., and get a catalog of Christian Endeavor supplies and samples of literature. Also subscribe to the Christian Endeavor World. One cannot make the society a going institution unless the best of literature is used. Get the catalog, go over it carefully; order freely, for the literature is cheap; read the matter and then put the suggestions into practice.

The Christian Endeavor topic treated this week should be of interest to our people this week. We are doing work in Porto Rico, and the two brethren, Barrett and White, with their wives, helpers and others, have started the work of the Christian church well. The foundations have been laid, whether or not we shall raise the superstructure of a Christian church in Porto Rico depends upon our people. We cannot do it unless money is given by our people.

Read in the annual and Christian Missionary of our work in Porto Rico.

C. E. TOPIC FOR DECEMBER 17, 1911.
A Missionary Journey Around the World.

XII. Missions in the West Indies. 2 Cor. 12: 1-15.

Daily Readings.

- Dec. 11. Power for the Needy. Matt. 9:6-8.
- Dec. 12. Life for the dead. Jno. 5:24-26.
- Dec. 13. Liberty to captives. 2 Cor. 3:16-18.
- Dec. 14. The dry bones. Ezek. 37:1-12.
- Dec. 15. The acceptable year. Luk. 4:18-19.
- Dec. 16. Harvest at last. Gal. 6:9-10.
- Dec. 17. The Topic.

Hints for This Meeting.

1. President open the meeting with an announcement of the topic, prayer for the leader and the meeting, then introduce leader.

2. Leader announce hymn, followed by reading of the lesson and story of the daily readings. Quote in concert the golden text of the Bible, and little talk, "The Life Text."

3. Have a rough blackboard map showing relative location of the lands being studied. Have some one give a short address concerning the same.

4. Have missionary hymns full of light and life, not just "happen so," hit and miss fashion. Think and pray over the topic and its preparation for this meeting.

5. Let the leader be from the missionary committee, or better, the mission study class. If you have no mission study class, begin now; it will put life in the society.

Quote in concert the golden text of the Bible, John 3: 16, if the members do not know it, have them learn it. Follow with short address, "The Life Text."

John 3: 16, is the greatest text in the Bible, because it tells the most about the nature of man, that is he is a sinner; and the nature of God, that He loves sinners; and the nature of Christ, that He is the Saviour of sinners; and the future of the unrepentant sinner, that it is perishing; and the future of the Christian, that it is eternal life. It would be impossible to find a life situation that would not be illumined by this sun of text of all the Bible.

Discussion Topics.

- 1. Tell of what has been done in the West Indies.
- 2. How can our society aid West Indian missions?

The Spanish-American war, our temporary rule over Cuba, our permanent annexation of Porto Rico, have made every American more interested in the Antilles than any other mission field. Some of the people who live there are of our nationality, and many of us have relatives in this field. The islands are only a few miles from the mainland of our country. There is every reason for our being supremely interested in the natives.

The climate of these islands is tropical. The result is that of most tropical countries, much of the population is indolent. Living in a land of great fertility, where tropical fruits are in abundance, the people do not need to worry about things to eat. As for apparel the scantiest possible is used by the grown ups, and, many times, none at all by the children.

To understand the religious situation one must consider the make-up of the population. More than two-thirds of it is what is known as the native Cuban. A small percentage of this class is of considerable intelligence and ability, and in some cases the Cubans are rich men with large estates. There are the merchants, tradesmen and other middle classes. Finally there is the big class of indolent, ignorant, shiftless natives.

Of those foreign born the Spaniards are in the majority. Among them is more intelligence, but at the same time there is often as much of the vicious as in the less intelligent natives. These people need the church as much as the most ignorant of the aborigines that roam the country half-naked.

The Roman Catholic church has held sway in this country for four centuries. No stronger arraignment need be brought against Catholicism than to repeat the condition into which that church has brought the people of Cuba and Porto Rico. Truly the last state of these people under Catholic dominion is worse than the first. The priests in the church were men themselves depraved. Many fathers would not allow their wives and daughters to attend mass in these houses said to be devoted to the worship of God, but which were in fact given over to the carnal.

Ten years ago in all Porto Rico there was but one Protestant church. Today the number of churches and stations probably exceeds a thousand. This means that all the towns and cities are occupied, though, of course, there is much of the country districts that is still untouched. In Cuba all of the principal places have the gospel of Christ, but there is still great work to do to cover the entire country.

In these islands the work is different from what the missionary work is ordinarily. Instead of winning the men from false God, we must win them from the false worship of the true God. The Catholic church has taught them of God, but has given them by example of the lives of their priests a false conception of what the life of a follower of God should be.

Americans have practically built up a public school system in Porto Rico during the past ten years. They range from high schools downward, are free to all, and are eagerly attended. School libraries, school banks, and municipal playgrounds are being established.

Since our war with Spain Americans have built roads in Cuba, stamped out yellow fever, introduced election laws that will give an opportunity for pure politics, revised the criminal code so as to safeguard personal rights, advanced free education, and established religious liberty. The missionaries are active and successful uprooting superstition and planting the knowledge of the truth.

Christian Endeavor flourishes in the West Indies, especially in Jamaica, where there is a large union that holds important conventions.

READ THIS AND RESPOND.

The Young People's Convention is endeavoring to do a great work for the church. It will not be able to accomplish this unless our people pay the pledges they have made to the work, and those who have not pledged give something.

The writer realizes that a newspaper appeal is about the most ineffective way of reaching folks, and yet it is the easiest way. We cannot take the money out of our pockets, but we can ask you for it, and you are bound to feel that you are missing an opportunity for real service if you fail to respond.

We are called upon frequently for literature and help in organizing societies and classes and are unable to send all the literature, we would like to for the reason that we haven't the funds with which to buy it.

Now, brethren, will you continue to allow us to be hampered in our work? Do you not feel that it is OUR work, as well as ours? Do you not wish it to prosper?

Kindly mail that $5, $2 or $1 to Rev. J. I. Cox, Treas., Elon College, and help the work long.

A Note of Thanks.

Please allow us space to thank the good people of Timber Ridge Christian Church for a two-horse load of good things to eat brought us by sisters Janie Johnson, Beall Garvin and Bessie Lafollette. Our pantry has never been quite so full before. In addition to the eatables there was a dress for Master Alfred and a broom.

May the Lord richly bless every one who contributed and help us to be more deserving of such acts of kindness and generosity by leading us in paths of greater usefulness. We would like to give the name of every contributor, but the list is so long we fear it would take up too much space. We want to thank one and all and to assure them that every gift was appreciated and enjoyed. Sincerely,

Rev. and Mrs. W. T. Walters.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago by order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted and generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

COLLEGE NEWS.

Thanksgiving was duly celebrated by all on the Hill. At the eleven o'clock service Dr. J. O. Atkinson preached the Thanksgiving Sermon, and certainly appeared at his best. At this service a Thanksgiving offering was taken for the Orphanage and a liberal response was forthcoming. On Thursday evening the Philologist Entertainment was given to a large and appreciative audience.

One of the chief attractions of Thanksgiving Day was, of course, the West Dormitory Dining Hall. The Hall had been tastefully decorated for the occasion and all was made ready for the feast which was expected. President Harper presided as the toastmaster and a number of witty and snappy toasts were responded to. Among the guests of honor at dinner were: Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, Rev. and Mrs. L. E. Smith, Mr. H. P. Cline, Sr., Rev. J. W. Patton, Mr. W. L. Beale, Miss Grace Rhodes, Miss Sadie Fonville and others.

Uncle Weilons who has been confined to his room with bronchitis for several weeks seems to improve slowly, but he is cheerful and it is expected that he will be out in the near future.

President Harper on Friday of last week went to Eastern Carolina in the interest of the Special Fund. At Youngsville he was overtaken by an attack of grippe and was forced to return home. At this writing it is impossible to predict what the outcome will be, but the best is hoped for by all.

Mr. D. F. Parsons, of Dendron, Va. was called home last week on account of the sudden death of his father.

Mr. W. F. Warren, class '10, who is now principal of the Reidsville High School, was on the Hill for Thanksgiving.

Examinations are looming up in the near future. Already the examination schedule has been posted and students who are wise are preparing for a systematic and thorough review.

Prof. W. P. Lawrence acted as a judge of a Declamation Contest at Trinity College last week. This was an interscholastic contest between the high schools and preparatory schools of equal rank in North Carolina and Virginia. The Professor reports a very pleasant time.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

District Meeting.

Dear Bro.: Have been to all my churches since conference except Antioch. I think my work is starting off very well. I am expecting to do a good year's work and am looking for success in a large measure. I am not satisfied with past achievements, but shall endeavor to do more the present year than any previous year.

Last first Sunday we had a good service at Beulah. On Saturday before the District Sunday school convention convened with this church. An interesting session was held, though the attendance was small. At our next meeting we are expecting to elect two of our number as deacons.

We had a very good service at La-Grange, third Sunday and Sunday night. We are expecting to accomplish more here this year than last.

Our District Meeting was held with New Hope church last Saturday. We had a good meeting, though all the churches in the district were not represented. Thus closes our District Meetings for the fall season. We are very well organized now for the work and I look forward to a more systematic work next year. Our next District meeting will be held with Antioch church some time in the spring. I am to go to Rockstand next Thursday to attend Thanksgiving services. I wish all of our schools and churches might observe this day. Truly we ought to be thankful to our kind heavenly Father for the blessings of this year.

McNamara awaits the decision of the court as to his penalty. It was one of the most horrible murders on record.

"DON'TS" FOR THE SPEAKER.

Grenville Kleiser has issued a list of "Don'ts for Public Speakers." These, he thinks, should be of suggestive value to every one having occasion to speak before an audience. He says:

- Don't apologize.
- Don't shout.
- Don't hesitate.
- Don't attitudinize.
- Don't speak in a high key.
- Don't pace the platform.
- Don't distort your words.
- Don't exceed your time-limit.
- Don't indulge in personalities.
- Don't emphasize everything.
- Don't praise yourself.
- Don't tell a long story.
- Don't sway your body.
- Don't be "funny."
- Don't fatigue your audience.
- Don't speak with closed teeth.
- Don't drink while speaking.
- Don't fumble with your clothes.
- Don't be sarcastic.
- Don't "hem" and "haw."
- Don't stand like a statue.
- Don't clear your throat.
- Don't fidget.
- Don't over-gesticulate.
- Don't wander from your subject.
- Don't address the ceiling.
- Don't be monotonous.
- Don't put your hands on your hips.
- Don't be violent.
- Don't rise on your toes.
- Don't forget to sit down when you have finished.

In brief: Stand up so that you can be seen. Speak up so that you can be heard. Shut up so that you will be liked.

THE BEST INVESTMENT FOR $1.75

There is no other way to spend $1.75 and get as much in lasting pleasure for every member of the family as for a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion.

For the boys there are the fine articles by experts in athletic sports on the best practice in foot ball, the knack of pitching, new "kinks" in swimming and sprinting—everything that interests the active high minded boy. For the girls there is encouragement for all wholesome activities indoors and out, from dainty dishes to dainty dresses. For the household there is good advice about gardening, handy contrivances, ways of stretching the nickels and dimes.

This reading is all in addition to the treatment of stories, articles by celebrated men and women the unequalled miscellany the invaluable doctor's article, the terse notes on what is going on in all the fields of human endeavor.

It will cost you nothing to send for the beautiful announcement of The Companion for 1912, and we will send with it sample copies of the paper.

Do not forget that the new subscriber for 1912 receives a gift of The Companion's Calendar for 1912, lithographed in ten colors and gold, and all the issues of the remaining weeks of 1911 from the time the subscription is received.

Only $1.75 now for 52 weekly issues, but on January 1, 1912, the subscription price will be advanced to $2.00.

My Dear Children and Friends:

This is Thanksgiving Day, and while services are being held at many places, we trust, we are writing this letter, and sending out much other mail. The Thanksgiving offerings are coming in very nicely, but the amounts are not as large as we hoped for from the churches—many thus far sending only a few dollars. We do hope that an earnest effort will be made to have the entire congregation make an offering. Give as the Lord has prospered. He has given you dollars and hundreds of dollars. Will five cents or 25 cents satisfy your appreciation for the year's blessings?

Our children are having a great day by the liberal gifts of Bro. Jno. A. Mills and family, $15.00, and J. T. Rowland (with his annual box.) All these brethren are of Raleigh, N. C., and Capt. W. J. Lee, of Drivers, Va. 5 gallons oysters, by their cash and kindness we have a bountiful Thanksgiving dinner and 47 hearty and hungry children (dinner a little late) know what to do with good things to eat. They are having a full holiday and we trust their hearts may appreciate divine blessings as their bodies appreciate the good gifts of friends. We had after-dinner speaking and several of our children expressed themselves in language of gratitude for "the good dinner" and all other blessings.

Our friends far away are remembering us nicely and we are expecting great results from hundreds of our churches in the next few weeks. We ask this because of the extra expenses we have had this year, which have been reported from time to time. When you take your offering, please send in promptly.

We have received the following donations: Mrs. B. M. Jones, Holland, Va., sends 1 box towels, handkerchiefs, collars and neckties.

We are grateful for all these gifts; they make the children happy, save us money, and give valuable service. Ours is a very large family and we can use anything that would be serviceable in your home.

May we hope for $1,000.00 next week?

We wish our friends the joy of many happy Thanksgivings like this one has been to us.

Gratefully yours,

Uncle Jim.

Franklinton, N. C., Nov. 24, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

It has been some time since you have heard from us, but we have not forgotten the orphans. Enclosed find $1.00 for Thanksgiving. Our offerings are small, but we are going to school, have to help mother, make up beds, sweep, dust, wash dishes and nurse baby. Little Mary Francis is four months old and weighs 17 pounds. Twenty-five cents for her.

Your little friends,

Janie Pearce,
 Rebecca Pearce,
 Eugene Pearce,
 Mary Francis Pearce.

Welcome, little Mary Francis, and thanks to sisters and brother, too, for their dues. Mother has lots of helpers.

Dendron, Va., Nov. 27, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

It has been some time since we have sent in any money. Hope you haven't forgotten us. Feeling it is never too late to do good, will send the amount which I now have in hand, which is $9.77. Hope it may reach you in a good time.

The Little Workers.

I see you have not been idle, "Little Workers," and we are delighted to receive this amount now when we are needing money so much.

Sanford, N. C., Nov. 27, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

O yes; you didn't know the little "tot

Sunday when you spoke to me. Guess there is a little change now, as I am six feet high—just think of that. So here is my dime.

Your niece,

Calie McNair.

You'll have to put an iron on your head, Callie, or you will make Uncle Jim feel old.

THE SIMPLICITY AND SAVING POWER OF THE GOSPEL.

By Rev. D. S. Millard, D. D.

On a certain occasion the disciples asked Jesus why He spake in parables. He answered, "Because it was given unto you to know and understand such teaching, and it is for this reason I speak in parables." It was then, as it is now, the heart can be more easily reached by the simple comparisons of life, and the more attractive they are made the more certain is their effect on the human heart.

Jesus would speak to men in a way that would reach the spirit within them. Therefore He gave the truth in such a manner as to leave it alive in the soul. He unfolded it by simple illustrations which they who heard Him could understand, and which all who study His Word can understand also.

God's truth is of priceless value. The Bible, especially the New Testament, reveals it unto men. Jesus is the revealer. That which the soul needs is found in His Gospel. If, with believing hearts, we study the Word, we shall know the truth, and if we "follow after the truth," we shall follow Christ, who said—"He that followeth me shall walk in the light."

The more we do of that which we know to be the will of God, the nearer we shall be to Him and the greater will be our joy. There can be no abounding joy to any heart living beneath a dark cloud of unbelief. Unbelief that says, "I know not God; I have no experimental knowledge of Christ; I know nothing of the way of salvation; I am in utter darkness concerning the future." Sad, indeed, is the condition of a soul in such darkness! How different the feelings of the man who can say, with the assurance of a true and living faith, "God is love; He is my father; His divine heart goes out after all, even the low and sinful; He would not that any should perish, but that all should come to Him and live." "I know my Redeemer liveth, and in Him do I trust." Here are fountains of joy, here are helps to uprightness and purity; here are promises of blessings which extend beyond the present life to the life eternal.

Reader, go to the Word of God with a devout heart and an unprejudiced mind, and at the same time with a willingness to be led by its teachings, and it will reveal to you inexhaustible fountains of joy. They are open now and the Spirit and the bride say, "Come." Here to penitents is pardon, and here to trust and prayer are rest and peace. We read, "The pure in heart shall see God." In spiritual vision they see Him now, as faith looks away to brighter scenes and fuller joys in the friendships and loves of blessedness and eternal home above.

Faith is not a mere sentiment. It is the unchanged and unchangeable basis of all true religion. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." That is, accept, without reserve, the testimony of the Scriptures concerning Christ. This is the faith that brings light and peace and joy to the soul—the faith that saves. Let us hold it up to the world, and count not the means, time or faculties ill-expended which may advance or establish it more firmly on earth! Such faith "adds charms to earthly bliss,

And saves us from its snares;
It yields support to all our toils,

And softens all our cares"
"Wide it unveils the heavenly world,
Where endless pleasures reign.

It bids us seek our portion there,
Nor does it seek in vain."

Portland, Mich.

—Bro. T. J. Green, of Ramseur, N. C., who was admitted to the class as a candidate for the ministry by the Western N. C. Conference at its recent session is to enter Elon College after the holidays. Bro. Green was at the College last week and purchased a nice home here into which he will shortly move his family to reside while he is taking his college course. Bro. Green is a prosperous and successful citizen of Randolph, but feels impressed to preach the gospel and so gives up a lucrative business to follow the divine call. This is sacrifice indeed, but great sacrifices often precede and help prepare for great and effectual service.

—Put it down that an editor is not always and every time forgotten, especially if that editor will preach some. Last week the good and generous people of Pleasant Grove church, Halifax County, Va., handed to this scribe a crisp $20.00 note with which to buy for himself an overcoat. My! we were grateful and gleeful and happy. Let it not be said any more in Israel that even an editor is not loved by some, at least. We have decided that this is a great and happy world.

—We judge from recent utterances in The Herald of Gospel Liberty that former Agent J. N. Hess, of The Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, is sending out letters and circulars to Christian churches and Sundays schools, solici-iting orders for Sunday school supplies furnished by some house with which he has connected himself since giving up his position in our House. This is indeed a surprise to us as we had counted Bro. Hess among our loyal brethren and convinced that he gave up his position willingly and gratuitously. At any rate Bro. Hess no longer represents our House and an order should be sent for supplies to The Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio.

—David L. Bruce-Brown, a young American millionaire, established a new world's record for automobiling on the race tracks at Savannah, Ga., Nov. 30, when he went over a race course of 411.36 miles at an average speed of 74.45 miles an hour.

—Hon. Champ Clark, Speaker of the House of Representatives, delivered a notable address before the Teacher's Assembly at Raleigh, Nov. 30. An audience of about 5,000 greeted him and the papers report that a great address was delivered. He did not talk politics, as he was speaking to teachers and he himself was several years a school teacher.

—A frightful freight wreck occurred on the high bridge of the Southern Ry., at Haw River, Thursday, p. m., Nov. 30. One of the engines tumbled down into the deep abyss pinning under the fireman who died some hours later. The engineer jumped and had a narrow escape.

—Speaker Champ Clark, in an address at Raleigh, last week, said that the present revolution in China started July 4, 1776. That there are now 26 republics and American made them all.

MARRIED.

Good-Sine.

A quiet marriage was celebrated at the Christian Parsonage, November 29, at 8:30 P. M., when Mr. Luther C. Good and Miss Pearl E. Sine were united in matrimony by the writer.

A few friends were present to witness the ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Prof. and Mrs. E. C. Sine. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Good and is a cooper by trade.

Seldon-Eaton.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Eaton near High View, W. Va., Nov. 22, at high noon, when Mr. Henry F. Seldon led their eldest daughter, Miss Goldie May, to the marriage altar. Quite a number of friends and relatives gathered to witness the ceremony which was performed by the writer. After the words were spoken which made them one, the company were invited into the dining room to partake of the good things from a loaded table.

The bride is a talented musician and is organist at Timber Ridge Christian church, where her father leads the choir.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Seldon. Both young people are members of Timber Ridge Church and have a host of friends who join in best wishes for their happiness. W. T. Walters.

Holt-Thompson.

Wednesday P. M., November 29, Mr. William Stark Holt, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Holt, led to the marriage altar at Pleasant Grove Church, Halifax Co., Va., Miss Fannie Dunman Thompson, daughter of Mr. R. D. and Mrs. T. E. Thompson. It was a solemn, impressive and beautiful church marriage. Mrs. M. F. Cook had charge of decorating the church and her work was beautifully done. A large company gathered and the scene was one of rare excellence and picturesque design. There were eight couples as attendants; Jesse Robertson with Miss Kate Hawkins; E. R. Farmer with Miss Annie Holt; Richard Holt with Miss Phebe Holt; Chas. Powell with Miss Nannie B. Farmer; Frank Farmer with Miss Nannie E. Farmer; Ed Thompson with Miss Besie Ballou; James McDowell with Miss Nannie Wilson; Ed Powell with Miss Rossie McDowell. Mr. Archer Buntin was best man and Miss Mary Farmer maid of honor. The bride was led to the altar and given away by her father, Deacon R. D. Thompson, Sr. Miss Nan Walker presided at the organ, rendering Mendelssohn's Wedding March, and played softly, while the ceremony was being said, a selection from Fred Baker. Miss Lizzie Boyd sang sweetly "The Hour That Gave You Me," before the bridal party entered.

Miss Thompson, the bride, has been organist at Pleasant Grove for some time and the groom is an active member of choir and church. They have a host of friends who wish them all happiness along life's journey. Ceremony by the writer.

J. O. Atkinson.

Boyd-Osborn.

A beautiful marriage was solemnized in Ingram church, Nov. 23, 1911, at 4:00 p. m., when Mr. Thomas C. Boyd led to the altar Miss Emma Sue Osborne. Mr. Boyd is a very popular and successful farmer of Ingram, Va., and Miss Osborne is one of the most popular and interesting young ladies of that community. The church was most tastily decorated with swinging lines of ever-greens and chrysanthemums with beautiful arches and the altar was banked with ferns and potted flowers. The attendants came in order down the side aisles: Mr. Phil Oulds and Miss Hester Kent, Mr. Roy Davis and Miss Esther McDowell, Mr. Jim Tune and Miss Sadie Boyd, Mr. Tom Osborne and Miss Eva Osborne, Mr. Alvin McDowell and Miss Lizzie Boyd, Mr. Jim McDowell and Miss Olia Bane, Mr. Tom Dawson and Miss Annie Boyd, Mr. Fuller Bane and Miss Annie Osborne; then came the groom with his brother, and the bride came, leaning on her father's arm, down the main aisle, while Mrs. Charlie Walton sweetly rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march, meeting in the altar in front of a bank of potted flowers and ferns.

After the ceremony a large number of guests drove to the Osborne home and were invited into the spacious dining room which was beautifully decorated with ferns, chrysanthemums, oak leaves, and was illuminated with electric lights. The table was heavy laden with the richest nuptials. The bridal presents were numerous, beautiful and costly.

DIED.

Jackson.

At his home, Winchester, Va., November 27, L. W. Jackson, aged 68 years. He was reared in the Friends Church and held to that faith until his death.

Funeral services were conducted from the Cemetery Chapel by the writer in the presence of a large gathering of friends. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

Sanford.

Jennings Sanford, the son of Bro and Sister J. P. Sanford, was born April 1st, 1906, near Virgilina, Va., and died July 23rd, 1911, near Stems, N. C., age, five years, three months and twenty-three days.

The little fellow was always delicate, but had a bright mind. His afflictions strengthened the parents' love with tender sympathy and drew towards him the kindness of others. A few weeks before his death he would surprise his mother with questions like these: "Mama, how come we all have to die?" "Mama, if I die, will I live again?" He was sick only two days. The day he was taken sick he said, "Mama, I am going to die."

Sister Sanford was, before her marriage, Miss Cora Sandford and is well known to Elon College students of a few years ago as one of the best students in the institution and a splendid Christian woman. I have been her pastor for seven years and found her true to her church and Christian profession. Her husband is a prosperous farmer of Granville County, N. C. Rev. M. D. Giles conducted the burial service at Robert's Chapel. My prayer is that some day father, mother, the one brother and three sisters may meet Jennings in the better land.

C. E. Newman.

Fuller.

Mrs. Elizabeth Fuller (nee, Miss Reams) was born July 1st, 1832, and died Nov. 6th, 1911, age, 79 years, 4 months, and six days.

At the age of 13 years she professed faith in Christ and joined Ebenezer M. E. Church. In 1864 her membership was transferred to Oak Level Christian church and she remained a consistent member of the Christian church till death.

In 1851 she married William Thomas Fuller, who died suddenly in 1894. There were twelve children in the family only three living. Seldom have I known one to pass through a greater series of troubles than did Sister Fuller in the declining years of her life. Yet her faith was strong in her Saviour and enabled her to bear her afflictions with Christian submission. Her life was a useful and busy one.

Besides the two sons and one daughter surviving, there are twenty-six grandchildren and five great grandchildren. One of her grandsons, Walter Fuller, a student in Elon College, was licensed to preach on the day of his grandmother's burial.

In my absence, Rev. R. C. Stubbins, of the M. P. Church, conducted the funeral at Liberty Christian church on the afternoon of November 7th, and the burial was in the church cemetery.

C. E. Newman.

Thomas.

Sister Fannie Thomas, one of the oldest members of Pleasant Hill Christian Church, has obeyed the final summons. She was born April 14, 1836, and died December 2nd, 1911, aged seventy-five years, seven months and eighteen days. She was a faithful Christian, and said that she was only going home.

The funeral services were conducted by her pastor from Pleasant Hill church, Sunday, Dec. 3rd. A large congregation was present to witness the funeral and burial of this good woman. Peace to her ashes. L. I. Cox.

In memory of Isaac Jones, who died Nov. 22, 1910, at his home, "Georges Bead."

As memory serves us, this year seems but as a day, and the sadness of the hour still remains. But though he had fought the fight, finished the course, and won the victory over sin and death through Christ Jesus our Lord, we feel that the results of the good seed sown by him while here below are yet to bring forth an abundant harvest by his noble example. "What he had written he had written," and this beautiful life stands for itself, a noble heritage; a stand for the faithful discharge of duty, worthy of emulation.

I love to think of his love for the sunny South, his patriotism in the trying days of the old Confederacy and his devotion to his old comrades of his soldier days. It was pathetic to see him, when only a few weeks before the end, upon the death of one of his old comrades, the late Jason Holland, a noble veteran of Company K, 41st Virginia Infantry, he was unable to attend the funeral. The death of this old comrade seemed to turn his attention but the more heavenward, feeling assured that he must soon follow. No more will they "Tent on the old camp ground," for they have "passed over the river to join the army of the Great Commander in Chief and unite with the heroes who have gone before. "There shall be no night there;" neither shall there be any more war.

Hereditarily he held a love for the nautical, and demonstrated this by his adaptability and love for the watercourse on which he lived, taking great interest in the tortuous Blackwater in all her varied conditions. The cypress tree at the foot of South Quay bridge stands a living memorial of him. It bears the high water mark of 1896. This he did, not for himself, but as a matter of record, and information to others in the future. "And there was no more sea;" but, "He shewed me a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God."

His fidelity to his church adds to his glorious example, and his pew at Bethany Christian Church was never vacant at a service if it were possible for him to attend regardless of weather conditions; and, the memory of boyhood days rushes upon me as I recall how he hurried us off for church service in days past and gone.

Not a man that courted popularity, or yielded to public opinion, but a dear father who stood for the right, and lived a life in the community and around the fireside, which we would be proud to imitate. His earthly career has ended, but his example lives on. "He who lives in the hearts of others is not dead."

"Sleep, father, sleep; you won not only rest,

But rich reward for duty nobly done;
Sturdy and staunch as yonder mountain crest

You fought the fight, the glorious victory won,
Stilled that true heart, and hushed thy gentle voice;
Cold now that once strong, tender, helpful hand,
Yet though we mourn, the angels must rejoice
To welcome you, so strong, so true, so grand."
—His Son, T. S. J.

PREPARING FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

It behooves every Sunday school teacher to prepare well the Sunday school lesson. No one can teach more about any lesson than one really knows about that lesson. This, furthermore, is a self-evident proposition, to wit, that no one can prepare the lesson who hasn't good tools and implements to prepare with. These tools can be had, the very best, and at comparatively little cost.

There are on our table now three helps, accorded by all who know to be of the very highest type of workmanship. We advise every Sunday school teacher to provide himself with one or the other of these three treatises on the lesson for 1912.

Pelebuet's Select Notes.

All Sunday school teachers know of the excellent report of this book which has come to be a standard in its particular field. The volume for 1912 is well bound in substantial cloth, has 369 pages beside a beautiful frontispiece in colors, contains three maps in colors and besides illustrating every lesson with picture designs, has a very beautiful color design at the beginning of each quarter. The texts of the lesson are given both in the authorized and revised versions, and the comment on each lesson is ample, comprehensive, illuminating. We have not had time to examine all the lessons, but what we have examined reveals the fact that this work measures up to its usual high standard of excellence and ranks among the very best to be had by way of comment on the Sunday school lesson. Pelebuet's Select Notes on the International Lessons for 1912. The Life of Christ in the Synoptic Gospels. By Rev. F. N. Pelebuet, D. D., and Prof. Amos R. Wells, A. M. Published by W. A. Wilde Co., Boston, Mass. $1.25.

Tarbell's Teachers' Guide.

This ranks among the most brilliant and illuminating works now published on the Sunday School Lesson. It is an attempt to help every grade of Sunday school teaching. There has been spared neither effort nor labor to make this work fresh, vital, comprehensive and suggestive. It essays to assist every teacher from the primary to the Senior Bible Class, and supplies a fund of information adapted to teachers' needs. The volume is beautifully bound in cloth, contains 466 large octavo pages, with maps, illustrations, etc. The price is $1.15, post paid. Tarbell's Teachers' Guide to the International Sunday school Lessons for 1912 by Martha Tarbell, Ph. D. Published by Fleming H. Revell Co., N. Y.

The Gist of the Lessons.

This is a convenient vest pocket edition of a treatise on the lesson for 1912, by Rev. Dr. R. A. Torrey. It is bound in leatherette, carries a calendar for 1912, and contains 156 well filled pages. It is a condensed account of the lessons in Dr. Torrey's best style and is certainly very helpful and quite convenient to carry. This is the thirteenth year Dr. Torrey has brought out a volume of this nature and he has made his work very popular and readable. This book is well bound, and is durable. The Gist of the Lesson, by R. A. Torrey, published by Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, 25 cts the copy post paid. If The Christian Sun may be instrumental in supplying any of these excellent hooks to Sunday school teachers and workers, we shall be glad to do so. Or they may be ordered of the publishers.

Sidney, says a writer in the Delineator, was walking on the beach with his uncle John one day, when his uncle told him if he would find two pebbles exactly alike he would give him a dollar.

Full of glee, Sidney began searching. By and by he ran to his uncle, crying, "O Uncle John, I've found one of them!"

"I love little children, and it is not a slight thing when they, who are fresh from God, love us."—Charles Dickens.

A WASTED DAY.

A wasted day! no song of praise
Wells up from depths of grateful heart,
Yet others long to hear our lays,
The souls that dwell in gloom apart.

A wasted day! no kindly deed,
No cup of water, cool and sweet,
We bear to other souls in need,
Nor lead some pilgrim's straying feet.

A wasted day! no victory won,
The sword lies idle in its sheath.
If deeds of valor be undone,
How can we wear the conqueror's wreath?

A wasted day? Forbid it, Lord!
Glad service would we render Thee,
To mourners speak a cheering word.
Bless Thou the deed, though small it be.

Time is too short for wasted days,
Then let us leave no task undone.
Nor fail to lift to Thee our praise,
For by Thy help the goal is won.

—Anon.

church member everywhere at large, has the right to be waited on at least four times a year, in person if possible, by letter if impossible, and given the individual and specific privilege of contributing something to the support of church and pastor. And no church has done its duty to its membership until it has done this very thing. There are lukewarm, unconcerned, indifferent church members to day in uncounted number who have grown away from their church and care precious little for it for no other reason on earth than that the church has shown an equal unconcernedness and indifference to them. They have turned their back upon the church, but the church is equally guilty of turning its back on them.

A large percent of us have been thinking that the indifferent and absentee church member does not want to be approached and appealed to. Very often the exact opposite is true, and the one thing needful for bringing that indifferent or absentee member back to activity and regularity is to be told by some one in the name of the church, appointed for the purpose, that the church is in need, is trying to raise funds and wants his or her help here and now. Money getting from church members is not hurting the churches. It never has hurt the church. But the opposite has; or the attempt to get all the church needs from a few. If you want to arrest a church, hold it up from progress and development, just depend on the few, look to the few, and neglect the many. Your task will certainly be effectual. The church lags because it does not give the careless, the indifferent, the absentee a chance. See to it that the man who does not come to church once in six months or a year has the same privilege of giving that the one has who comes regularly. You will then see something happen in church finance. Give every church member a chance to give. This is a right that belongs to all.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Drug Habit.

Well, here is a singular and significant fact indeed. China in particular, and a few other nations in general, are striving with might and main to check the desperate and deadly opium habit. To that end a conference of the nations was called at The Hague to begin sessions December 1 to take counsel together as to what could be done to help China and some other pagan countries out in the struggle to be free from opium habit. It comes about that our Government appoints Dr. Hamilton Wright on its commission of five to go as representatives of this Christian nation on this philanthropic mission to The Hague. Furthermore, this same Dr. Wright bears the unique distinction of being the greatest authority on the drug habit in all America. Whereupon said Dr. Wright, upon his superior knowledge and acquaintance with the facts, avers and avows that the United States, and not China or any other, consumes the most opium in one form or another. Dr. Wright goes further and says that we actually use more smoking opium than six great nations of Europe whose population aggregates 155,000,000 against our 90,000,000. And our consumption of raw opium is growing now twice as rapidly as is our population. Much of this opium is used in drugs and nostrums containing narcotics of various and sundry kinds.

We knew that the drug habit was growing amongst us and that the use of narcotics of various kinds was on the increase; but we were not prepared for the astounding and humiliating confession that we were using more opiates and narcotics than any nation in the world, than even poor, prostrate, weakened opium cursed China with its teeming millions. It is time the doctors and the preachers were crying aloud and sparing not the awful and the growing drug habit.

Entertaining Religious Bodies.

Editor Johnson, of Charity and Children, wants Baptist folks to pay their own board and keep while attending the annual session of their Convention. Last week the Convention met at Winston-Salem and Bro. Johnson estimated that it would cost the good people of the town between $2,500 and $3,000 to take care of the Convention's members, and "this burden ought not to be laid on them."

We are glad to say that the Convention did not follow Bro. Johnson's suggestion and go upon the pay plan. Why man, we are losing out fast enough, heaven knows, from the manner and method of our good Southern hospitality. We need somewhat to increase, nothing to decrease, our customs in this particular. Must we estimate everything under the sun in dollars and cents? What if it did cost Winston Salem $3,000 to entertain a body of men engaged in the King's business, if those self-same men quitted themselves like men, and we presume they did, then the interest in church work, in charity, in education, in missions that those men created and left behind in Winston Salem cannot be estimated in dollars and the citizens of the town are the gainers, not the losers. Bro. Johnson simply cannot estimate in real values as to what that Convention meant to the town in which it was held.

I wonder if Bro. Johnson would have us preachers and editors, when out on the King's business, pay for our board and keep in a brother's house in which brother's church we were going to preach or speak next day. This may be the New England way, but excuse us of the South. When this writer was a student at Harvard he was asked to go several miles into the country to preach on Sunday. The Saturday night was spent in the home of one of the leading men of the church. Both the man and his wife sang in the choir on Sunday and took active parts in trying to make the service a success. We went back to the same man's house for dinner after preaching Sunday. On leaving the place of our entertainment about 3 p. m., Sunday, we chanced to inquire what was the charge for our lodging and board for the night and two meals Sunday. "$2.00," was the prompt reply. I supposed it was the custom there and it may be a good one, but we did not feel like it then and somehow don't feel that way about it yet. Bro. Johnson, we beg to differ.

WHAT IS HAPPENING.

—Very many things.

—People are shopping very heavily for Christmas.

—Two years ago the Post Office deficit was $17,479,770. Now for the first time since 1885 the annual financial statement from this Department shows a surplus. That is saving somewhat.

—The National Republican Convention is slated to meet in Chicago about the last of next June. The three candidates now prominently urged for nomination to the presidency by this Convention are: President Taft, Senator La Follette, Ex-President Roosevelt.

—There was a terrible mine explosion near Briceville, Tenn., Dec. 8, when about 100 miners were entombed.

—Ex-Governor Brown has been named, in a State primary, as Democratic candidate for Governor of Georgia. Brown and Hoke Smith take it turn about, and just now Smith is away attending the Senate, of which he is a member, in Washington.

—The Revolutionists seem to be victorious in China and it is now believed that the present Manchu dynasty will be swept out of power and the government will be entrusted to other and more liberal hands.

—The Baptists of North Carolina have decided on raising an endowment of $150,000 for Meredith (their woman's college) at Raleigh.

—Mr. Ashley Horn, of Clayton, N. C., has given $10.00 for the erection of a monument to the Women of the Confederacy to be placed on the capitol grounds at Raleigh.

A FOREIGN MISSION SERMON.

(Preached by Rev. C. E. Newman before the Eastern N. C. Christian Conference, at Catawba Springs, Nov. 5, 1911.)

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Matt. 25:40.

The Savior has just given a picture of the final Judgment when he, the Son of man shall come in his glory and sit upon the throne of his glory to judge the nations of the earth. Let us contrast the picture with the scene enacted when the Savior was divested of his glory and stood before a throne upon which another sat to pass judgment upon Him. When instead of being surrounded with holy angels it was a howling multitude bent on the crucifixion of our Lord.

He tells us that when He shall come in his glory, accompanied by the holy angels and sit upon the throne of His glory all the nations of the earth shall be gathered before Him and there shall be a division of the good on the right hand and the bad on the left. To those on the right hand will be said, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." He who when upon this earth had not where to lay His head will have a kingdom to give and that kingdom is heaven, the future home of the righteous. This is the reward awaiting those who are faithful in this life.

Upon what the reward depends:

It depends upon our feeding the hungry, giving drink to the thirsty, showing kindness to the stranger, clothing the naked, visiting the sick and going unto those in prison. Strange indeed it is that the Master in making mention of deeds to inherit the reward names only the apparently insignificant ones. So small were these that those who had done them had forgotten the same. Surely the great acts of philanthropy of this modern Christian age will be worthy of some mention in the final day of reckoning. Why, then are only little deeds mentioned? I think it is because these are such things as all can do. The church from its early history has had an interest in the temporal welfare of mankind. And I think such service is none too exalted for the humble and none too low for the most highly favored. From the lesson we have in the Judgment scene, we learn that Christ would have us serve Him through service to our fellowman. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Mr. Vandyke, in his story of "The Other Wise Men," beautifully illustrates the text. In the days when Augustus Caesar was master of many kings and Herod reigned in Jerusalem, there lived in the city of Ecbatana, in the mountains of Persia, a certain man named Artaban, who, together with his three companions, had read in the ancient prophecies concerning the star that should come out of Judah and the scepter that should rise out of Israel. They had searched the ancient tablets of Chaldea, and computed the time of the year. In that year they had studied the heavens and seen two of the greatest planets draw near together. A new star had appeared which shone for one night and vanished. Again the planets were meeting. The night of their conjunction had arrived. Artaban was watching at home and his three brethren were watching by the ancient temple of the Seven Spheres at Barsippa, in Babylon ten days' journey away. It had been agreed that if the star appeared again, they were to wait for him ten days and together they were to set out for Jerusalem to see and worship the Promised One, who should be born King of Israel. Artaban had made ready for journey. He had sold his possessions and purchased a sapphire, a ruby, and a pearl to carry them as a tribute to the King. From the roof of his house he watched Jupiter and Saturn as they rolled together like drops of lambent flame about to blend in one. And as he watched the mysterious star appeared. He bowed his head, he covered his brow with his hands. "It is the sign," he said; "the King is coming and I will go to meet him." All night his horse had been saddled and bridled in her stall. Early in the morning the Other Wise Man was on the high-road leading westward. Artaban must lose no time if he would keep the appointed hour with the other Magi. He passed along the brown slopes of Orantes; crossed the plains of the Niccan and passed the fertile fields of Cancubar. He traveled over many a cold and desolate pass, down many a black mountain gorge, and across many a smiling vale; over the swirling floods of the Tigris and the many channels of Euphrates till he arrived on the tenth day at nightfall beneath the shattered walls of populous Babylon. His horse was almost spent. Gladly would he have gone to the city for rest and refreshments for himself and her; but it was a three hours' journey yet to the Temple of the Spheres, and he must reach there by midnight if he would find his companions waiting. So he halted not, but rode steadily across the stubble fields. A grove of date palms was reached, near the further end his horse scented danger. At last she stood still, quivering in every muscle, before a dark object.

Artaban dismounted and the dim starlight revealed the form of a man lying across the road. His humble dress and outline of his haggard face showed that he was probably one of the Hebrews, who still dwelt in great numbers around the city. His pallid skin bore the marks of the deadly fever which ravished the marsh lands in autumn. As Artaban turned to leave, a ghastly sign came from the man's lips, and with his long fingers he gripped the hem of his garment. How could he linger here and fail to meet his companions! Certainly this man had no claim upon him. "God of truth and purity," he prayed, "direct me in the holy path, the way of wisdom which Thou only knowest." He took the sick man to a little mound, he unwound the thick folds of the turban and opened the garment above the sunken breast. He brought water from one of the canals nearby and moistened the sufferer's brow and mouth. He mingled a draught of those simple, but potent, remedies which he always carried in his girdle—for the Magi were physicians as well as astrologers—and poured it slowly between the colorless lips. Hour after hour he labored till at last the man's strength returned and he sat up and looked at him. "Who art thou," he said, "and why hast thou sought to bring me back to life?"

"I am Artaban, of the city of Ecbatana, and I am going to Jerusalem in search of one who is to be born King of the Jews, a great Prince and Deliverer of all men. Here is all that I have left of bread and wine and here is a portion of healing herbs." The man raised his trembling hand solemnly to heaven and uttered a prayer for the success of the journey. And then told Artaban that he had nothing to give him in turn only he could tell him to look not in Jerusalem, but in Bethlehem, for the Messiah.

He hastened on; but the sun had arisen before he came in sight of the Temple of the Spheres. There was no trace of his companions to be found. Artaban dismounted and climbed to the highest terrace and looked out to the westward. There was no sign of the caravan of the Wise Men. Under a cairn of broken bricks he saw a piece of papyrus. He caught it up and read: "We have waited till past midnight and can delay no longer. We go to find the King. Follow us across the desert."

Artaban sat down and covered his head in despair. "How can I cross the desert with no food and a spent horse?"

He went to the city, sold his sapphire, purchased a train of camels and provisions for the journey.

Next we see him as he moves on by day and night across the desert. Till at last he arrived at the garden and orchards of Damascus. Then in sight of the snowy peaks of Hermon and the cedars of Lebanon. Down the valley of Jordan and on by the blue lake of Galilee. At last he arrived at Bethlehem just three days after the visit of the three wise men. The streets seemed deserted. From the open door of a cottage, he heard the sound of a woman's voice, singing softly. He entered and found a young mother hushing her baby to rest. She told him about the visit of the wise men and Joseph and Mary and the child. How the strangers had disappeared as mysteriously as they came and the same night Joseph and Mary had taken the child and fled and the report was they had gone into Egypt. Since that time a spell seemed to hang over the city. It was said that Herod's soldiers were coming to levy an additional tax and the men had gone with their flocks to escape the same.

The young mother placed the baby in its cradle and set food before the stranger. Artaban accepted, and as he ate the child fell into a happy slumber and a deep peace seemed to fill the room.

But suddenly there was a great noise in the streets, a clangor of brazen trumpets, the clash of swords and the shrieks of women. "The soldiers! the soldiers of Herod! They are killing our children." The young mother's face grew pale. She clasped the child to her bosom and crouched motionless in the darkest corner of the room.

Artaban went quickly and stood in the doorway. The soldiers came hurrying down the street with bloody hands and dripping swords. The captain of the band made as though he would thrust him aside. Artaban stood motionless. He took the ruby from his girdle and gave it to the captain to leave the house in peace.

The next that is seen of Artaban he is among the throng of men in populous Egypt, seeking traces of the household that had come down from Bethlehem. Traces were found, but so dim that they vanished before him continually.

He continued to travel from place to place among the people of the dispersion. He passed through famine-stricken countries where the poor were crying for bread. He made his dwelling in plague-stricken cities where the sick were in helpless misery. He visited the oppressed and the afflicted in the gloom of subterranean prison, and the crowded wretchedness of slave markets. While he found none to worship, he found many to help.

Three and thirty years of Artaban's life had passed and he was still a pilgrim and a seeker after light. His hair, once dark, is now like wintry snow. His eyes once flashed like flames of fire were dull as embers smouldering among the ashes.

Worn and weary and ready to die, but still looking for the King, he had come for the last time to Jerusalem. He had often come to Jerusalem before, had searched its lanes, crowded hovels and black prisons without finding any traces of the family of Nazarene, who had gone from Bethlehem long ago.

On this occasion the city seemed to be in a stir of excitement. The great crowds seemed to be moving along the street that led to the Damascus gate. Artaban joined himself to a company of Northern Jews, who had come up to keep the Passover, and inquired the cause of the tumult and where they were going. He learned they were going to Golgotha, outside the city walls, where two famous robbers were to be crucified and with them another called Jesus of Nazareth, a man who had done many wonderful works among the people, for which they loved Him much. But He was to be put to death because he had given himself out to be the Son of God. Could this be the same, thought Artaban, who was born in Bethlehem thirty-three years ago? Ah! thought he, the ways of God are stronger than thoughts of man. It may be that I shall at last find the King and come in time to offer my pearl for His ransom. So the old man followed the multitude with slow and painful steps. A troop of Macedonian soldiers came down the street dragging a young girl with torn dress and disheveled hair. As the Magus passed to look in pity, she broke from the hands of her tormentors and threw herself at his feet, and begged him to save her from worse than death. She told him that was a daughter of the true religion as taught by the Magi, her father had been a Parthian merchant, and she was to be sold for his debts.

Artaban trembled. It was the old conflict in his soul that had come to him in the palm grove of Babylon and in the cottage of Bethlehem. Twice the gift which he had consecrated to the worship of religion had been drawn to the service of humanity, and this was the third trial. He took the pearl from his bosom. Never had it seemed so luminous, so radiant, so full of tender lustre. He laid it in the hand of the girl. "This is thy ransom, daughter! It is the last of my treasures which I kept for the King."

Just then the darkness of the sky deepened, shuddering tremors ran through the earth, the walls of the houses rocked to and fro, stones were loosened and crashed into the street. The soldiers fled in terror. But Artaban and the ransomed girl crouched beneath the walls of the praetorium. The earth again began to quake. A heavy tile loosened from the roof fell and struck the old man on the temple. He lay breathless and pale as the blood trickled from the wound. The girl bent over him, fearing he was dead, and as she did there came a voice small and still, like music sounding from a distance, in which the notes are clear, but the words are lost. She turned to see if someone had spoken from the window. Then the old man's lips began to move as if in answer; she heard him say "Not so, my Lord; for when saw I thee an hungered and fed thee? Or thirsty and gave thee drink? When saw I thee a stranger and took thee in? or naked and clothed thee? When saw I thee sick or in prison and came unto thee? Three and thirty years have I looked for thee; but I have never seen thy face, nor ministered unto thee, my King."

He ceased, and the sweet voice came again and she heard it very faint and far away, but now it seemed as though she understood the words: "Verily I say unto thee, inasmuch as thou hast done it unto the least of one of these, my brethren, thou hast done it unto me."

Then calm radiance of wonder and joy lighted the pale face of Artaban, a long breath of relief exhaled gently from his lips. His journey was ended. His treasures were accepted. The Other Wise Man had found the King.

Message for the church:

The last of the nations of earth are included in our Lord's commission to the church: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." The heathen world is an hungered, they have not the bread of life; thirsty, they have not the life-giving water. Strangers to grace, because the church is slow in giving them the opportunity to be taken in. They have not the blessings of Christian civilization and enlightenment, they are sick and in prison because of idolatrous superstitions and gross immorality. Oh, Christ! if we would find the King, see Him in His beauty, enter into the richest inheritance of the kingdom prepared from the foundations of the world, we must be up and doing. For in obeying the great commission of our Lord there is a work that each can do. He shows us the field. The Church must furnish the men and means. This is the highest work of the Church, although it is to be done for even the least of the people of the earth, is the service Christ would have us render unto him, for "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—Superintendent of the Durham Graded Schools, Prof. W. D. Carmichael, and one of the most widely known teachers in the State, has resigned from the classroom to take a position with the American Tobacco Co., Jan. 1.

—The Government is indicting the Chicago meat packers for violating the criminal provisions of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. The trial is in progress in a Chicago court and several distinguished meat dealers are involved.

—Brethren, please don't desecrate and belittle the event and the time by writing it Xmas. That is a travesty on the best of good names that should not be perpetrated by any sane person. Write it full and free—Christmas, or not write it or observe it at all.

—Our Woman's Missionary Boards are doing their work and are planning to organize a Missionary Society in every church and a Mission study class in every Society during the year. This will mean much for our cause when carried out.

—The U. S. Navy Department has issued an official statement, since the battleship Maine in Havana harbor has been cleared that that ill-fated craft was blown up by explosives from without, this is, by the Spaniards. Well, on that supposition Uncle Sam long since licked the Spaniards to a stand-still anyhow.

—The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference leads them all, collecting each year in cash about one thousand dollars. All the other Conferences save one we believe (the Eastern N. C.) have their Missionary Association and are doing somewhat, but not as much as the one named. It is older and has the benefit of a successful experience.

—Rev. C. C. Peel, Elon College, is helping collect some for The Christian Sun and is endeavoring at the same time to lengthen The Sun's subscription list. We will appreciate any renewals or subscriptions given him, for the time of the year has arrived when last summer's bills must be paid. They are after us, and we are wishing and working for a liberal response on the part of our subscribers.

—The Annuals for 1912 will soon be ready. Price this year as last, 20 cents the copy. They will contain all our Southern Conference and Christian Missionary Association proceedings.

—The Methodist Conference, the Christian Conferences, the Baptist State Convention, and several other religious bodies of large membership in North Carolina have spoken out in protest and opposition to secular papers in the State carrying whiskey advertisements in their columns. It is time, for some of our largest dailies fairly flaunt the whiskey ads, especially on Sundays and Thanksgiving.

—"Reverend and Mrs. A. F. Iseley request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Effie, to Mr. Albert Carl Green, Thursday, December 21st, 1911, at 12:30 o'clock, at their home near Burlington, N. C." Which being received signifies that Mr. Green is about to lead to the altar one of the most brilliant graduates and successful teachers and interested church workers Elon College ever gave a diploma to. Miss Effie has a whole host of friends among Sun readers who will wish her all the happiness to which her noble character and great accomplishments entitle her.

—The Sun's editor had the privilege of preaching in the Presbyterian Church, in the thriving town of Asheboro, N. C., last Sunday, and of calling into counsel the members of our flock scattered in that thriving town. There were twenty-five of them present and several others in the town not present. The question uppermost in their minds now is, Shall we build a church house, where, of what size and kind? For some years this flock has been without a place of worship, a cyclone having destroyed their building, and now they want a place of worship and a preacher. They deserve both and by their united efforts great and good things will come to pass in Asheboro. There are loyal and faithful souls there who deserve the best and can with due effort and consecration to duty get it.

—We see from a condensed statement to the State Corporation Commission of Virginia, that the Farmers' Bank of Nansmond, Suffolk, Va., had on Dec. 11, 1911, total footings of $2,764,970.73. The deposits were $1,867,562.10. The surplus and undivided profits amounted on the date given to $742,031.96. The loans totaled $2,079,943.28. And so forth. All of which means W. H. Jones, Jr., Cashier, Edward E. Holland, President, Geo. W. Truitt, Vice-President, and their able assistants and co-workers have built upon a capital of $20,000.00 the most wonderful and thrifty banking business found in this country. This means brains, energy, character, for it requires all three and in no small measure, to handle other people's money successfully, safely, and with that ever increasing public confidence that these figures portray.

—"I enjoy reading The Christian Sun very much indeed. I take other papers, but I think more of The Sun than all others. It is, and has been, a great help to me. I think that every family in our Church ought to read it." (Miss) Elsie Bray, Natbalie, Va. Thank you, Miss Elsie. I think with you that every family in the church ought to take and read their church paper. The family that does not is certainly the loser.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference held its one day annual meeting in the Suffolk Christian Church December 5th, 1911. There was a forenoon session and an afternoon session. About one hundred memberships were represented by about forty persons. The collection amounted to $970.00 which was $155.00 more than the collection from membership dues last year; and this increase represents ten and one half new members. We hope to add new members before the next annual meeting.

This Association gives more money and represents more talent and interest than the Conference did twenty-five years ago, and this is one mark of progress. The Conference is now far ahead of herself as compared with years long gone; but it must be kept in mind that there has been a corresponding advance in business, in education, in earning capacity, and in liberality. The Fathers did their part as well as we do ours, and filled their place in the kingdom as nobly. We are proud of their zeal and loyalty as well as of our business and practicality. In fact, we may be in danger of substituting what we do for what they were instead of making it an addition. What the age needs is the quality of sincerity in devotion that characterized them, with the liberal and practical service which our age makes possible. The Association work is in addition to what the Conference does for Home Missions.

The Association appropriated $400.00 to East End, Newport News, on pastor's salary; and $400.00 to Portsmouth on church debt.

The Association will meet next year with South Norfolk Church, Rev. D. A. Keys, pastor; and the same officers were re-elected: Rev. J. W. Harrell, President; Rev. R. H. Peel, Secretary; and B. D. Jones, Treasurer. Efficient officers become more efficient when continued in office and no one seems to aspire to office this association.

When all phases of the work are considered this last meeting is considered the best in the history of the Association.

This is most gratifying to the officials and members and encourages all to work harder in the future.

It is surprising to see what can be accomplished by liberal and willing co-operation in any good cause. The time for individual effort and individual credit has passed unless one represents millions; but the work of many small contributors, done by an institution or organization, is even more ideal. Where the tithing system is operated in churches no envelope bears the name of the contributor. Each person tithes for himself between God and his conscience, puts his contribution in a blank envelope and places the envelope in the collection plate. There are no large and small contributors in such cases; when all give a tenth, all give alike, one as much as another.

Almost any system of giving is good for the main thing is systematical giving. Systematic giving is thoughtful giving and thoughtful giving leads to worshipful giving.

While the C. M. A. was in session, Rev. Dr. J. O. Atkinson was aiding Mrs. C. H. Fowland, Mrs. W. H. Dick, and Miss Margaret Brickhouse, Woman's Mission Board of E. Va. C. Conference, to draft Constitution and By Laws for the Woman's Missionary Societies. This was in pastor's study. So good work goes on.

COLLEGE NEWS.

The eleven o'clock service was conducted on last Sunday by the Rev. R. M. Andrews, recently pastor of the M. P. Church at Henderson, N. C., but now editor of the Burlington News. Mr. Andrews preached a highly entertaining and practical sermon and most favorable comment was heard on every hand for him. We trust that he will come to us again.

Uncle Wellons is much improved from a recent attack of bronchitis which held him down. He has dismissed his nurse and is up and about his room.

Mr. E. T. Hines, of the class of '10, now principal of the Jefferson Academy at McLeansburg, N. C., spent Sunday here.

Examinations are near at hand. On next Friday the ordeal begins and continues until the following Friday. This is done in order that students can arrive home by Sunday before Christmas day.

On last Saturday evening the students of Music under Miss Wilson gave a delightful Musicale in the College chapel. The following is a program:

Prelude, Piano Solo, Miss Verna Garrett.

Only Dreaming; Two Rases, alto solo, Miss Grace Rollings.

Spirit of the night, Piano solo, Miss Hattie Bell Smith.

Our Boat; The Birds That Sing; Go Pretty Rose, Vocal duet, Miss Annie Bagwell, Miss Mabel Farmer.

An Incident, Piano Solo, Miss Pearl Tack.

Serenade, Piano Solo, Miss Ruby Michael.

Even Bravest Hearts—"Faust" Bass Solo, Mr. O. M. Barnes.

Prelude, Miss Estelle Butler, Piano Solo

Spring Nights, Soprano Solo, Miss Pearl Fogleman.

Butterfly, Piano Solo, Miss Ethel Barrett.

When the wind comes in from the sea, Vocal duet, Mr. R. A. Campbell, Mr. O. M. Barnes.

Spinning wheel, Piano solo, Miss Frankie McNeill.

Guitar song, "Marriage of Figaro," 55 Baritone Solo, Mr. R. A. Campbell.

Castagnette, Piano Solo, Miss Maibelle Pritchette. A. L. L.

WAVERLY, VA, NOTES.

Thanksgiving was generally observed at this place. The merchants closed their places of business at 12:30 P. M., and during the afternoon the streets were quiet. There was hardly the sound of a gun in the community.

At 7:30 in the evening union services were held in the Methodist Church. The altar was most tastefully and exquisitely decorated with harvest products, mounted turkeys, pea-cocks, squirrels, rabbits, and partridges, which had been done by the hands of good ladies. Addresses were made by the Methodist and Christian pastors. It was planned that the other pastors of the place should also take part, but unfortunately they could not be present. The music was rendered by members of the choirs. The house was nearly full of attendants and the services were very impressive.

It does one and all much good to express themselves in thanksgiving for kindnesses bestowed. Something is wrong when it is not done. Benevolence is done a great injustice when gratitude fails to recognize her.

It is said that the Supreme Being once held a banquet in His azure Hall to which He invited all the virtues. They were all there, both great and small, and all seemed in good spirits conversing politely as became such near relations. But the Supreme Being noticed two Virtues who did not seem to know one another. He took one by the hand and led her over to the other, saying, "This is Benevolence, Gratitude." For the first time since the creation, and that had been a long time, these two Virtues had met face to face. And yet I wonder if these two virtues have not gone on much of the time as though they had never met.

We all alike, if not equally, have shared in the bounties and blessings of the year. Do we all render unto Him any thanks for such blessings? I fear that there were so many on that day, hunting or seeking for pleasure, or following the games, etc., compared with the few who did really thank God, that God must have said, "Were there not ten cleansed, but where are the nine?" Let us all now give thanks and render to God the vow of David: "I will bless the Lord at all times, His praise shall continually be in my mouth."

That was a good resolution. It was a happy condition of heart and mind. The blessedness of a constant indwelling of praise and thanksgiving can exist in him only whose heart is after God's own. "At all times." "Continually." They are words that mean more than our minds can grasp at the first thought. Some people worship God spasmodically. The most of them do, perhaps—just once a week and then in a half-hearted sort of way. They are the ones who are never satisfied. Christianity to them is only a title. But he who can render unto God at all times real thanksgiving possesses peace and finds a real pearl almost everywhere in everything.

But one says, "It is easy enough to talk about such good graces and the continual consciousness of the Lord. It is easy to praise Him when everything is good and happy, but it is not so easy when the test and trials, and misfortunes and sorrows of life come. How about it then?" Listen to David: "They that trust in the Lord shall not want for any good thing."

"This poor man cried and the Lord saved him out of his trouble."

Thinking this way, it is no wonder he made such resolutions. They seemed good to him. He was so close to God, really, I think he could not help it. Is it not something to be desired?—a life of constant victory? Do you believe He can make your weakness strong? Will you trust Him?

"Commit thy way unto the Lord and He shall bring it to pass."

NOTES AND COMMENT.

The year of 1911 is dying. Its privileges, its opportunities, its successes and its failures will soon be a matter of history. The experience of this year will be worth in the new just whatever we make it. The things we have left undone can be soonest remedied by doing now what should have been done sooner.

As we look back over the year, we involuntarily ask ourselves what progress have we made in business or profession. To the modest man it usually seems that no progress has been made, and certainly the ambitious has not attained all he desired. I wonder if those of us who hold offices in the church and its auxiliaries consider so seriously whether or not progress has been made in the church work.

Suppose we take time this month to mentally inventory what we have done in the church during the past year. Have we done all that we could, or as little as we could conscientiously get off with? Has the church, the Sunday school, the Christian Endeavor, the organized class, the missionary committee made any progress, or is it doing the same small things in the same weak way that it did a year ago?

What about those resolutions that you made last New Year or when you were elected to office? Are they laid away and dusty, or were some of them put into practice? Have you made any plans for the next year, or are you merely making resolution? Have you obtained any new books or literature on the subjects of your work? Have you taken an hour to pray and think upon the school, the class or the society and make application of new thought and new methods? My brethren, if you are doing none of these things you are untrue to your trust, yourself and your God.

Where to Get Information.

I want every president and corresponding secretary of a Christian Endeavor Society in our church to write to the United Society of Christian Endeavor, 600 Tremont Temple, Boston, Mass., and obtain a catalog of Christian Endeavor supplies and literature. Let the executive committee go over this catalog and buy helps for the various committees and departments. The cost will be small. Send for the catalog today. A post card will bring it. Your society cannot grow unless you keep in touch with the best in the work. Ask also for samples of topic cards, etc.

I hope every Sunday school superintendent in our church will write to the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, O., and to the David C. Cook Publishing Company, Elgin, Ill., and get catalogs and price lists of literature and supplies. There are so many things that will be useful in the Sunday school that we do not use. Some Sunday schools do not even use the color cards for the children's classes. Nearly all do not use the big color sheet, which should be before every primary class every Sunday. Hardly a school uses the Cook monthlies for teachers, officers and members of organized and unorganized classes, yet these monthlies are teeming with information. Every superintendent in the United States ought to read the Sunday School Executive, published monthly by the David C. Cook Publishing Company, which is as big as a magazine and costs only 50 cents a year.

Friends, we cannot accomplish all that we should accomplish until we keep in touch with the best and newest ideas in Christian Endeavor and Sunday school literature.

Especially attractive are some topic cards just issued by the United Society of Christian Endeavor. For a small cost you can have names of leaders, officers and committees of your society printed upon them. Send for samples.

"Will A Man Rob God?"

If we were to accuse church members and church leaders of being more careless of their financial obligations than business men, we would expect a howl. Is it true? Grocers say that 94 per cent. of their accounts are paid by those they trust; dry goods dealers say about the same thing. In the lines of men's clothing, hardware, furniture, and fuel about 96 or 97 percent of those given credit pay.

Experience teaches that in church subscriptions and obligations from one-half to three fourths pay. Would not a charge of the kind above referred to be true? If money pledged to a new church is to be paid in the future or in installments you must count on from 10 to 25 per cent. shrinkage. And this among church members!

Some of our brethren pledged sums to the work of the Young People's Convention. They are leaders in our church. They pay their grocery bills, perhaps. They are honest with their fellowman. Are they honest with God?

"The usefulness of these remarks lies in the application of the same," as some one has said. Were you one of those who agreed to give to the work of helping God's young folks and have turned the deaf ear to the calls of Rev. L. I. Cox, Elon College, N. C., our treasurer? If you are, stop a minute and see what you think of yourself. Are you fair to yourself, our officers, our young people, our Master?

NOTES ON C. E. TOPIC, DEC. 24.

Subject—Christ, the Gift that Transforms

. . . The World. . . II Cor. 9:15; Luke 1:46-55. (Christmas Meeting.)

Hints to the Society.

1. Urge upon the member their pledge to do whatever Christ would have them do—or at least to try to do it. And do they not know that Christ would have them join His church?

2. Work with the pastor in his soul-winning endeavors, asking him what young people he thinks are nearest to the Kingdom, and would like to have your help reaching.

3. Form a class in methods of personal work for souls, and in the use of the Bible for that purpose.

4. Make each committee a soul-winning committee, and to that end make sure that every committee contains at least one earnest evangelistic member.

5. Form a personal workers' band, meeting every other week for reports of the personal work done by each member, and for consultation and prayer.—Amos R. Wells.

Discussion Topics.

1. Mention some of our gifts to God.
2. How may we best use the gift of God?
3. What difference has Christ made to us?
4. The daily readings will help this meeting.

Points From Eloquent Pens.

1. The Christmas idea is the gift idea.—F. E. Clark.
2. The kindness of Christmas is the kindness of Christ.—Maltbie B. Babcock.
3. A good conscience is a continual Christmas.—Benjamin Franklin.
4. Your best self you will find on Christmas day.—Russell H. Conwell.
5. This day shall change all griefs and quarrels to love.—Shakespeare.
6. I will honor Christmas in my heart, and try to keep it all the year.—Charles Dickens.
7. God never deals out to men just so much as they need and no more.—Alexander McKenzie.
8. One of the marvels of the Christmas gift is the way it sets those that receive it to giving in return."
9. "The coming of God into the world or into a life of necessity is a gift, for who could earn or purchase it.
10. "Gifts for which we must beg are not gifts at all, and the Christmas gift is urged upon us by the giver."

About Christmas.

In the darkest period of Herod's reign, when the Jews were despondent and sick at heart, through repeated and protracted captivity, and hope was cherished in the breast of but few, who like Anna and Simeon were "waiting for the consolation of Israel," an event transpired in Bethlehem which gave promise of a brighter day, and was destined to color and influence the future incidents of the world.

With the advent of this new King, there was ordained a new form of government. Other rulers might seek to extend their territory and maintain their throne by might and main, but his was to be a silent, quiet conquest, ultimately overcoming the kingdoms of the world, yet without the force of arms or military display, "Peace on earth, good-will to men" being the rally words of his campaign.

The character of the kingdom of heaven was forecast in the announcement of the birth of the King of shepherds rather than to the great ones of the earth. The shepherd was of the humblest rank, and was the farthest removed from the grandeur and pride of earthly rule.

Wise men came from the East to Jerusalem confidently inquiring, "Where is he?" The wisdom of all future ages, recognizing the great need of the world, has repeatedly emphasized the significance of this question. For no other character has so moulded the thought, and shaped the destiny of human beings as the babe that was sought by the Magi.

The song of the angels was the earnest of the heaven-born joy that has come into the hearts of millions of earth's weeping and sorrowing ones, through the life and teaching and ministry of the blessed Saviour king. This song was a prophecy that is even now being fulfilled as human hearts are filled with the peace that passes all understanding.

By short-sighted earthly standard, the babe Jesus might have been regarded unfortunate in the environment of his birth, but after all that child is blessed whose early years are close to nature and who has but modest means to support his reasonable wants. The child of the rich is handicapped quite as certainly as the child of the beggar.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.Alabama Letter.

The District Sunday School Convention was in session at the M. E. Church, South, last Saturday. With one exception, every school in the district was represented and the session was pronounced a success. Mr. Watson was re-elected President.

Rev. C. W. Carter was at Christiana Saturday and Sunday. He reports good congregations and two gracious services.

Bro. Carter is one of our busy, earnest, consecrated men. He is greatly loved and highly esteemed by his people.

Mr. W. M. Hand, with his family, together with two sons-in-law and their families, will go this week to Tifton, Ga., where they expect to make their home in the future. Bro. Hand and wife have been members of the church at Beulah for many years, the former having been a deacon for quite a number of years. They will be greatly missed. The best wishes of their community and of the people of Wadley as well, will follow them to their new home in Georgia. Bro. Hand, we trust you may soon have a Christian church in the place you have chosen for your future home.

We have been informed that Rev. J. H. Hughes, with his family, moved from Corinth to Dingler's Chapel last week. Bro. Hughes is both pastor and teacher at this place. Here he expects to build a church during this Conference year.

The writer has received and accepted a call to the church at Langdale, going there for the initiatory service as pastor, the fourth Sunday in last month. Prospects for a good year's work are bright.

Rev. O. L. Millican, who has been pastor of the M. E. Church, South. for the past year, returned today from the annual session of the North Alabama Conference, which was held at Florence. Bro. Millikan goes to Lincoln next year. While pastor in Wadley he has greatly endeared himself to the people of the town. It is with deepest regrets that we see him go. Rev. Mr. Godby becomes pastor in his stead.

Today this writer's heart was gladdened as he was privileged to grasp the hand of Rev. J. H. Harris, an active, brilliant, consecrated minister of the North Alabama Conference of the M. E. Church, South. Meeting this brother today recalls memories that are intermingled with joy and sadness. Nine years ago—how swiftly they have flown—this writer entered school at Truitt, with the purpose of preparing himself for the Christian ministry. Among the newly-formed friends and class-mates were the names of J. H. Harris and J. C. Colley. Since that time J. H. Harris has studied, preached, attended school, grown until today he is among the foremost preachers of his Conference. (It doth not yet appear what may be accomplished through thorough consecration, unflinching faith, and with an undying devotion to duty). During this nine years this writer has been trying to do what he could, four years having been spent at Elon College in earnest, though imperfect, work in preparation, and four years in telling, though not in a faultless manner, the story of our Saviour's love. In this great joy has been found. But a little more than five years ago—as I write it, let me now in silence clear my eyes of tears—J. C. Colley, while a student at Elon College and the writer's room-mate, boon companion, and closest friend and fellow-helper in the Master's work, was suddenly and unexpectedly taken away. While he had not completed the college course on earth, God deemed it wise to promote him to larger service and higher study in the University of Heaven. For him who was, in life, a type of highest and holiest manhood, this writer often sighs. Yet I know that even now he lives with God and is infinitely happy all the while.

Conshohocken Letter.

I closed my work at Newport News Nov. 14th, and left on the 15th for Linville, Va., where I went to assist Rev. A. W. Andes in a series of revival services. I remained with Brother Andes at Linville, and two evenings at Antioch, until the 1st, inst., when I turned my face towards Gulf Mills Christian Church, Conshohocken, Pa., where I assumed the duties of this pastorate yesterday. On my way to Linville, my companions were Mrs. Butler, the Christian Sun, Herald of Gospel Liberty and Pentecostal Herald. Bro. Andes and his people were exceedingly kind to us and brought us under obligations. The meetings were in progress when we reached there and continued with increasing interest till the close. Rev. A. W. Andes, Rev. M. L. Bryant, Bro. Williamson and the writer with Mrs. Butler, took dinner one day with Rev. H. C. Moore. There were five preachers and three preachers' wives present. Brother Moore married a couple while we were there. He is not yet an old man, is a good preacher, an excellent brother and would fit well in some of our needy pastorates. At present he is engaged in business at Harrisonburg. Brother Andes is a hard working pastor and is bringing things to pass in his field, and moves among his people with ease and becoming dignity. We spent the night with Brother and Sister Roe Hosaflook whose great kindness brought us under obligations. Then besides we were kindly cared for in the homes of Brothers C. D. Maphis, J. A. Payne, Jacob Gill, Brother Lankford, Miss Minnie Bowman, the organist, and others. At the close of the Linville meetings, Bro. Andes took us over to his father's, where we spent a delightful stay. On that trip I preached twice at Antioch where a series of revival services were in progress. We were kindly cared for on our last night over there at the home of Brother Tate, from whose good home Bro. Andes took us early Wednesday, a. m., for Harrisonburg, where we took the train for Conshohocken, by Newport News, and Old Point. I stopped over one night at Richmond and spent a while with Prof. P. J. Kernodle. He is building up quite a large printing business there, has a fine equipment and is kept busy. He is one of our most loyal brethren, of a self-sacrificing spirit.

It was indeed a temptation for me to stop over longer at Newport News and see more of my old friends there, but business items, one or two calls consumed the time. Bro. Harward will find some as faithful, loyal souls there as can be found in any section of our brotherhood. I can never forget, nor fail to remember gratefully, the many great kindnesses some of the people there extended us while their pastor. When I took up the work there they had seventy three members that I could finally locate and during my pastorate I extended the right hand of fellowship to just seventy-three. As nearly as I can remember, in the absence of figures, the house was painted, a balance of about $124.00 on building debt paid, the church room solidly completed and walls papered, granolithic sidewalk built on two sides of the church, finished paying for organ and kept current expenses paid. I am not reporting these items because I think they are in the least flattering, but simply to give facts as they are. We were warmly received here at the Gulf Church last Sunday by a splendid congregation. Rev. John Blood president of the Annual Conference came over to be with us and extend a word of greeting in behalf of the Conference. The effort to make us feel at home succeeded quite well. Until our household goods arrival we are stopping with Sister Margaret Stiteler, whose gracious greeting and welcome, and tactfulness make us feel quite at home. Union revival meetings between the Gulf Church, Freewill Baptist, Holiness Christian, and Missionary Baptist, were in progress when we came and this week are being held at the Gulf Church the pastors preaching alternately with a union choir. We hope soon to be located in the parsonage in front of the church and then we will write again. There were several conversions in the Linville meetings, four the evening we closed, and some additions, which we leave for the pastor to report. M. W. Butler.

Norfolk Letter.

Norfolk is having great weather. Last week we had a touch of the winter, today it is almost summer time. If variety is the spice of life, Norfolk has its share of it.

A card from Rev. M. L. Bryant reports him as improving and hoping to be able to take up his work soon. Can any one explain why the strength one loses in preaching is often regained by rabbit hunting and mountain climbing? Probably it is not as much in hunting as it is in the being out-of-doors. God has filled the out-of-doors full of health and strength, and happy is the man who appropriates it for his good.

At the Memorial Christian Temple, Rev. J. T. Anderson, of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, preached in the morning; Rev. H. E. Rountree preached in the evening.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Third Church has arranged for a series of four social events: one for young people, one for the married people, one for small children, and one for larger children. The first one was held last Thursday evening, and proved a success.

At the Third Church, the Ladies' Missionary Society had their first program last Wednesday afternoon. The pastor gave a talk on the country of Japan. Mesdames S. M. Smith and A. M. Hanson sang "Beautiful Japan." The Sunday-school is showing a gain over last year at this season. Fifteen hundred dollars has been pledged on the two thousand necessary to pay the balance of the indebtedness on the lots.

The Ministerial Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference met at the Christian Church in Portsmouth today. At noon they were served a fine luncheon by Mesdames Cole and Harrell. Ten of the brethren were present and enjoyed the Conference and study. The next meeting will be in February at Suffolk.

Rebuilding.

Dear Bro. Atkinson:

We are hard at work on our Kite, Ga., Church. We hope before this goes to print to be back where the storm caught us. We hope the storm will not overtake us again. I have been here two weeks and will remain another. We hope to have equally as good house the second time as we did the first, if not better. We gladly acknowledge the following contributions to the call made in The Christian Sun:

A Pounding.

Thursday evening, Thanksgiving, a cart was backed up to our back door and emptied of its contents. A hundred and seven pounds of sugar; three cans of coffee; a half barrel of flour; two and a half gallons of canned peaches; one gallon and a half of canned tomatoes, one gallon of canned apples; one quart of pears; two bushels of sweet potatoes, the most of them weighing three or more pounds each (the man who raised these potatoes had many that weighed nine pounds); two chickens; 1 ham; collards; huckleberries; preserves; grapes; molasses; peas and peanuts; chocolate; plenty of soap; cereals; prunes; and a $5.00 bill, etc.

In the meantime one brother had sent a turkey, another a string of birds, another some oysters, etc.

This was more than a "Pounding." I hardly know what to call it. I understand there were many who knew nothing of it. They have sent in their regrets and expect to bestow their gifts later.

We appreciate such offerings of kindness exceedingly, not so much for its real value, as for the feeling it expresses toward us by the people. We prize very highly the endearment existing between us and the people here, and we are praying every day that we may draw closer to one another especially in the Lord's work. It's a happy pastor who can feel in his people both a strong personal friendship and a hearty co-operation in spiritual things—a people who help carry both the burdens of his living and that of the church.

Friends, we thank you.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Rountree.

Columbus, Ga., Letter.

In the afternoon of November 16, I landed in the city of Columbus, Ga. I would have reached here in the forenoon but the train I was on was wrecked in about thirty miles of Columbus, and we were delayed about five hours. The good people of the community prepared a meal for us, but just as they came with their baskets of generosity and hospitality our wrecked train was cleared and we sped away. Which teaches that a kindness however generous and well intended, may be too late to do any good.

It was not my intention to have so much to say about my experience in the wreck. But it was a miracle that we did not have a serious wreck. I feel that the hand of Providence was with us, and we were all very thankful that the wreck was no worse and no one was hurt.

A few words about my new field of work. I am favorably impressed with the city of Columbus. It is beautiful. It is one of the best laid off towns that I have seen. The streets are broad, with beautiful grass lawns and rows of shade trees between the side walks and the middle street. The grass lawns are well cared for. The city authorities seem to take great pride in beautifying the lawns.

I find the people here very friendly and sociable, and they seem to delight in doing all they can to make a stranger feel at home. I have been here about three weeks, during which time I have met a great many good people, and I am becoming much better satisfied with my location. I am enjoying my church work. I find this field a very hard one, but I am not looking for an easy place. I am willing to do what I can for the Lord, and we all ought to be willing to do that, for He has done so much for us. This field is undeveloped, but I believe that it can be developed by hard and persistent effort.

The church is in a beautiful location, in the midst of a nice and refined class of people. It is true that the membership of the church is small, but I find them to be willing workers and loyal to every enterprise of their church. I have preached here three Sundays, morning and night, and I am glad to say that both Sunday school and church attendance have been larger every Sunday, and we give all the praise and honor to God.

Bro. Cox has been elected as our S. S. Superintendent and he is doing earnest and faithful work.

Bro. Lankford, the former pastor of Rose Hill Church, I find, has many warm friends here of all denominations. I find that he is a hard man to follow, for the people here consider him a good man and a most excellent preacher, and it was their regret that they had to give him up. Our best wishes and prayers go with Bro. Lankford into his new field of labor and we trust that God may use him for the salvation of many souls.

I, as his successor, feel the deep need of the earnest prayers and hearty co-operation of all the brethren that God may use me here for the good of His cause and for the upbuilding of His kingdom.

My Dear Children and Friends:

We are glad to have such a large offering this week and from all parts of our country. From the North, West, South, and East come the cheerful letters bidding us God speed in the Orphanage work. Many letters with liberal amounts and beautiful words of gratitude to God for His blessing in 1911 and sharing with us their profit. The indications are now most favorable for the largest offering we have ever received. Many of our home churches are not as liberal as they have been in the past; we do hope all will rally and give us a great help in paying off our debts. Miss Lessie Pugh, of Morrisville, N. C., begins a fund for large kitchen range with a Thanksgiving offering of $5.00. Very soon we shall have to order the range: who will help us? Raleigh Church sends the largest cash offering yet received: $43.82, besides great donations in cash and kind for the children. The faithful "Little Workers," of Waverly, Va., do not forget us and this time their thanks are expressed in a $25.00 check.

Our aged brother, Rev. Elisha Thornburg, of Osborne, Kan., thinks of us in $1.00 cash, annually, and prays God's blessing upon both the gift and the orphans. We are profoundly grateful to friends, churches, Sunday-schools, classes, and all for the helpful gifts.

The Supt. had quite a busy day first Sunday in December—at Memorial Temple, Norfolk, Va., 11 a. m., Berea, (Norfolk Co.) at 3 p. m., and at Portsmouth 7 p. m. and 8 p. m. This was a full day, and we trust good was accomplished for the glory of God and for the support of the orphans.

The following donations have been received:

Mrs. E. J. Brickhouse, Norfolk, Va., $5.00, for Christmas gifts for the children. Sister Brickhouse is a liberal friend to the orphans.

Gowan Medical Co., Durham, N. C., 1 dozen bottles, 50 cent size, "Gowan's Pneumonia Cure." This is almost a necessity with children in the winter with colds and we keep it on hand. We recommend it heartily and we are grateful to this splendid company for their liberality to the orphans.

Bro. John H. Barrett, Charlestown, W. Va.: One large box of new cloaks, coats for ladies, girls and children, caps, etc., all new. Of course some changes will have to be made in some garments, but this is one of the finest gifts we have had for a long time. We are very grateful to Bro. Barrett for this liberal gift. May God bless and prosper him!

Little Rebecca Harden and Master Geo. Harden, one barrel fine flour and our boys and girls are enjoying it. Thank you, dear children.

Bro. C. V. Sellars, Burlington, N. C., one-half dozen photographs of Ruby Curling, Lucile Blanchard and Earl Cates, so that we could have cut made for our letter heads, showing these faces.

Sister Bettie M. Jones, Holland, Va., 1 box of beautiful articles, which Mrs. Foster has put aside for Christmas gifts for children.

Now for a great report next week! Give us the largest amount ever reported in one week!

Uncle Jim.

Elon College, Dec. 4, 1911.

Dear Cousins:

I guess you all would like to know how we at the Orphanage enjoyed our Thanksgiving dinner. Mr. J. A. Mills, of Raleigh, sent us fifteen dollars to buy things for our dinner. Mr. John Harden, of Raleigh, also sent us five dollars. Uncle Jim asked all of us at the breakfast table what we wanted most, and I guess if you could have heard what some of the children said you would have thought they were very hungry indeed. I shall undertake to give a list of what we had for our Thanksgiving dinner. We start with turkey, of course, then roast beef, 'possum, creamed irish potatoes, chicken pie, pumpkin pie, cheso custards, orange and cocoanut cake, cranberry sauce, celeriery, malaga grapes, oranges, apples, ambrosia, sweet potatoes, pickles, corn bread, and biscuits. Mr. Thornton Rowland, of Raleigh, sent us a box of good things, which we certainly did enjoy. This is the best Thanksgiving dinner we have ever had before. I hope each one of you cousins had as nice a time as we did. I will close. From your friend, Lela May Cannada.

Henderson, N. C., Dec. 3, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Enclosed you will find our dues for November and December, and before we write again, Santa Claus will have been to see us. Both of us want air rifles, and just anything else that he wants to bring us. We want to learn to shoot, but mama says she is afraid we will shoot something we ought not. We promised her we would not. So I hope she will not send word to "Santa" not to bring us each one.

Wishing you a very merry Christmas and happy new year. Good-by until next year.

Archie and Wallace Newman.

Well boys, we wish for you a most happy time even if you do not get air rifles. Guess mama and Santa know best.

McRae, Ga., Nov. 29, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Tomorrow is Thanksgiving. We have our Indian suits ready. Papa is going to make a wigwam tent for us. We know that you and Aunt Myrtle will give the boys and girls a good time. We want Santa to be good to you all, too.

Our love and dimes.

John Newman Denton,
S. E. Denton, Jr.,
Joseph Rabb Denton.

What a time you must have had, boys! We had a most delightful dinner. The boys played ball in the afternoon and the girls had a good time, too.

Henderson, N. C., Nov. 29, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Not quite four weeks to Christmas. We little ones talk about Santa Claus every day and want so much. We expect to take a trip Christmas and we anticipate that next to Santa Claus.

Helen feels sorry for Jos. Rabb if he has only three teeth and can't eat a birth-dinner. She has eight teeth and can do justice to any kind of a dinner—if the food is suitable for a baby.

Uncle Jim, Charles says he will not be a farmer. He had four rows of cotton across the garden. On account of dry weather and low price of cotton, it brought only $2 cents. Says he thinks he will preach and teach school, too.

Enclosed find our monthly dues.

Lovingly,
Charles E. Newman,
Hannah Clare Newman,
Helen Shivers Newman.

You should see our pile of cotton. Guess we'll hold it, Charles, till prices are better. Do you think it wise?

Sanford, N. C., December 1, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am still in bed sick, so I will have to get mother to write for me. I have been sick for five weeks with typhoid fever, but am so glad I am getting better now. Doctor said today I had no fever, and said I could have something to eat. You can't tell how glad I am—I am so hungry. I can't think of any thing only something to eat. I will always be sorry for anybody that is sick or hungry; I am so thankful I had a good Doctor and father and mother to wait on me. Hope the children are all well at the Orphanage. I send my dime and love to you all.

Yours respectfully,

Annie Pearl Way.

So sorry to hear of your illness, Annie Pearl, but glad to know you are on the road to recovery. You are blessed indeed.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 2, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We have neglected writing this year, but we haven't forgotten the Orphanage.

You will find two dollars and twenty cents enclosed, one dollar and twenty cents, our dues for the year, and fifty cents each for a Thanksgiving Offering.

With love for the cousins.

Your little nieces,
Jessie and Pauline Penny.

It is very nice of you to remember us at this time, girls, and we hope to hear again soon.

Wadley, Ala., Dec. 5, 1911.

Columbus, Ga., Nov. 29 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

We will write your our first letter and send of Thanksgiving Offerings. We love the name, Orphans' Home, for our papa stayed at one four years. We go to Sunday school every Sunday and love to go. We are later than we intended to be, but will wish you all a merry Christmas.

Lovingly,

Willie Lee, Eldred J., James S., and Alie Kate Knight.

We love to hear from you children from Georgia and hope the coming year your letters will come often.

—Be of good cheer.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

When the Elon College Letter of last week was concluded, I was, as a stated therein, "on the wing" in Eastern Carolina, the flight to include landings at Oak Level Church, Youngsville Henderson, Zebulon, Wilson, Kenly, Liberty (Vance) Church, Selma, and perhaps other points. But the wing got broken and further flight was prevented. I was sick in Morrisville, got worse in Raleigh, and was so unwell upon reaching Youngsville that after recuperating a day in the home of Brother W. T. Young, I returned to the College. I wish to thank Brother Young and his family for the kindness shown me in their home. If you have to be sick away from home, try to make it suit to be in this Christian family.

On Wednesday of this week I was able to spend a few hours in our neighboring town, Gibsonville, and received a liberal subscription for our fund, not a one of the donors being members of our Church. These friends appreciate Elon's worth and are therefore glad to help her along at this critical time.

See what a noble, generous thing the Ministerial Association of the College has done for the Special Fund, and the most noble part of this generous act consists in its voluntariness. Not a word was said by way of suggesting this action to these young men. Preachers are the most liberal body of Christian workers I know. With small income, but Spirit filled, as living examples of the Gospel of sacrifice, they preach, there is never a call refused by them. A stingy preacher—such a combination does violence to history as well as results in an impossible hybrid in language, all of which tends to prove what my experience in raising money has previously so often forced me to conclude, namely: that men do not give according to their ability, but according to their will-ability, that is, according to the spirit that is in them. That explains the act of the woman commended by our Lord as well as the liberal response of the Christian Church to Elon's Special Fund. I am glad of having had the opportunity to learn this great truth.

I am now on the wing again, bound for a week in the Garden Spot of the World, according to man accounts, I mean, of course, the Valley of Virginia.

My first stop will be at Winchester, whence, with my good friend, Rev. W. T. Walters, as pilot, I shall climb some hills and descend into some valleys and incidentally offer the brethren in these parts the opportunity they rightfully claim of helping in the grandest, most stupendous task, in a financial way, our Brotherhood, has ever undertaken. I cannot refuse them the opportunity to help.

This journey completed, the Special Fund must rest until after the opening in January. Superlative duties connected with the closing up of the fall term's work and with the opening of the winter term, Jan. 3rd, demand my presence in the office. I wish to take this opportunity to thank Dean Newman for his unstinted service in the office this fall, Prof. Lincoln for his most valuable work as Bursar, and each of my colleagues in the Faculty for his or her noble efforts to make the term just closing successful and happy to us all. Nor must I pass by the student body—a most noble, most loyal set. To work with such loyal yoke-fellows—that is a high privilege and a rare pleasure indeed. W. A. Harper.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago by order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper is now in the field and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted, and generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

DIED. Miller.

The death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hayse, Nov. 29, 1911, and took their grandson, little Wade Miller, son of E. J. Miller, of Asheboro, N. C. Wade was a very bright and sweet child, though never very strong in all the 17 months of his little life. His mother passed away just about three months before—what a meeting that must have been when mother gathered in her arms her little babe, one of the twin sons she left behind. We laid the body of the little darling beside his mother on Thanksgiving day. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. A. Albright. The teacher and pupils of Shiloh Academy sang, "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." May God comfort the father and brothers, sisters and grandparents who loved him and cared for him so tenderly. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

—The first official estimate of the cotton crop of 1911-12, given out by the Government puts the total at 14,885,000 bales of 500 lbs. each. This estimate, published Dec. 11, makes the present crop the largest yet, that of 1904, the banner crop up to that time, being 1,447,000 bales less. There are many unofficial estimates that place the crop at 15,000,000 in round numbers.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS.

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed. And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius Augustus was governor of Syria. And all went to be taxed, everyone into his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; because he was of the house and lineage of David: To be taxed with Mary, his espoused wife, being great with child. And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered: And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you: Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us. And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in a manger.—St. Luke's Gospel, 2:1-16.

GOD'S OUTSTANDING PROMISE.

Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. Mal. 3: 7. Golden text for Sunday Dec. 24.

How merciful, how considerate, how compassionate is our God. We turn from Him, we violate His laws, we disobey His commands, we are ungrateful for His blessings, thankless are we for His benefits; yet with all this He comes with outstretched arms and says, even with a voice full of commiseration and pity. "Return thou unto me and I will return unto you." Surely God is full of loving kindness, and His merey is beyond human understanding. Again and again and again had Judah broken every law given for their safety and security; as a nation and as individuals they had proven themselves unworthy of a Father's tender solicitude; they had defied the laws of the Almighty and had gone off after strange gods; yet our God loved them and His gentle and loving plea was, "Return unto me and I will return unto you."

The lesson of today shows how defiant these people were of the laws of God and how ungrateful they were for all His benefits. God's goodness allowed their indulgence till the evil day came, then, through the mouth of His prophet He cries, "Ye are cursed with the curse; for ye rob me, even this whole nation." And then the nation was surprised indeed that they were accused of robbing God. Wherein and wherefore had they robbed God? Then listen at the reply, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye rob me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee?" He had the answer, "In tithes and offerings." God had given them abundantly. He had blessed them in basket and in store; He had prospered the labors of their hands and multiplied the increase of their fields and vineyards. Yet they failed to give God the tenth of their income as was the law. Their offerings were given, if at all, with a meager mind and a stingy hand.

I wonder if any Christian reader rests under the curse of God on this account? Are you robbing God? Are you withholding that which rightfully belongs to Him? Do you rob Him in tithes and in offerings? A tenth of what we make should be given with a ready and willing hand and heart to the cause of church and chrity.

There is no reason why this law should not be carried out now as it was in the days of Malachi. And there is no more reason why God's curse should not fall on the man who robs God now than there was in the days when the prophet of God enunciated the law of God and the curse in breaking it.

But look what a promise follows: "Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be food in my house and prove me now, saith Jehovah, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there will not be room to receive it."

A man does not lose anything by giving a tenth of all he makes to the Lord. Here is God's word of promise that he will not and cannot break.

I could wish Sun readers no happier new year's resolution than this: During the year of our Lord 1912 I promise to give to the Lord at least one tenth of all I make. God awaits such a new year resolution as that, and will seal it with His blessings.

THIS GOOD TIME.

Christmas is always new. Everyone is as fresh, as fragrant, as wholesome, as novel as the last. It never grows old. It never becomes a season of dullness, deadness and indifference. It is as vigorous as life and as wholesome as sunshine.

This is because it is the Child's season. Childhood is always fresh, fragrant, care free, joyous and gay. Everything is new to the child and the child is new to everything. So, if we would enjoy Christmas, really get into its spirit and become enamored of its atmosphere we must become as children again. A grown person enjoys Christmas only as he comes back to the joy, the abandon, the frolic, the reverence, the obedience, the novelty, the healthfulness and wholesomeness of childhood. And this is the Master's teaching. "Except ye become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Christmas teaches us to become as little children; fling away our cares, forget our burdens, forgive our foes, rejoice with our associates, be glad for the day and the time, fill the house, even mother's and father's house, with frolic and with laughter. We become children again. Why? Because Christmas is the annual celebration of a Child's anniversary. On this good day, at this glad season we write in celebrating the birth of the Child through Whom joy, gladness and goodness have come to this world and to our homes and hearts. How happy indeed we all should be and should strive to be at Christmas time. For through the birth of Him whose anniversary we celebrate has come the largest contribution to the joy, wholesomeness and happiness of mankind that the world has ever seen or will ever see. And the current of this contribution will widen and deepen and broaden through the ages, till all men everywhere shall come to feel its quickening power and healing strength.

But herein shall we keep the glad season aright, and only herein: That we do somewhat to gladden the hearts, lighten the burdens, and increase the joys of those who are round about us. When we have done this we honor and we magnify the name of Him who gave us this glad season. Jesus the Christ wrought ever and always to make others better, brighter, happier. And we serve Him best by serving best our fellow-man.

And this we shall do in this good season, for in seeking our own greatest happiness we make others happy.

The children (yes they are grown up and gone away now, but they are children yet at Christmas time) will return home to see father and mother, and there will be a family reunion. The tide of life will run high and the cup of joy, of visited and visitor, will be full. Sons and daughters will come home from school, and those who have been busy through the year, will lay down their yard sticks, their hammers and their pens, and will "go home" again to be glad there, and to make those glad who are there. The merchant will quit his merchandise and farmers will let the fields and wheels of the factories will cease their revolutions for the time. All to make glad and to be glad together that we may appropriately make merry over the birth of the Child, even over the Babe of Bethlehem. This is indeed the glad and gleeful season.

REACHING THE UNREACHED.

Christianity has upon it yet a great task. We doubt if its greatest strain, and the severest trial of its strength, have yet been reached. It is easy to speak of evangelizing the world in the present generation, but the task itself is beyond human computation. For instance, it is computed that if each missionary in the foreign field succeeds during a lifetime in evangelizing 25,000 persons—an unthinkable task—the total number reached would be 325,000,000. There would still remain 675,000,000 people unreached by the gospel.

This means that Christians should not be discouraged, but should redouble their efforts, increase their energies and sacrifice to bring the unsaved to Christ. For the unsaved are perishing, the unreached are going down to death and darkness; and we go to their rescue at a snail's pace indeed.

We have been given the light. We are living in the full glory and benefit of that light. Unless we be selfish and meager and mean indeed we will carry that light forward till it lights up the remote parts of all the earth. Those that sit in darkness need the light so very much. And their need is the challenge to us.

CONSCIOUS OF HIS PRESENCE.

It is possible, yea, it is very real to many, to live daily in the conscious presence of God. Why not? He it is that has made us. In Him we live, move and have our being. From Him cometh all our hope, help, strength. Out of Him flow all our blessings and our benefits. Why should we not be conscious daily of His presence, of His mighty, majestic and uplifting power.

Surely in these days when all the world is full of gladness, joy and merry making we may be conscious of the presence and power of our God. Right now do we celebrate the advent into the world of His well beloved and only begotten Son. All our Christmas toys and joys, pleasures and privileges mean this: we are celebrating the birth of Lord Christ. We are rejoicing now that at this season of the year He came into the world, bodily, individually, personally. Surely it is possible for us, that God Himself takes the delight of a Father's love in our praise, prayers and pleasures now.

If we will we may feel and know that God is with us. By doing what we sincerely believe He wants us to do and by being what we realize He wants us to be we may be conscious of His blessed presence and His glorious life giving power.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Charlotte Way.

We took occasion to say in these columns recently that unless Charlotte was the very biggest, best, brainiest and busiest city in North Carolina then somebody would have a great deal to answer for in the day of judgment, for Charlotte papers and Charlotte people were claiming everything that was good and great for their town. Since spending a Sabbath in that city we are inclined to think that the sins along the line indicated are not as gross nor as great as a non-resident might suppose. We are of opinion now that the recording angel is going to deal very leniently with those who, living in Charlotte, boast of their city's push, purposes and progress. Charlotte is great and to spend a Sabbath there is a joy to the heart. Her churches are magnificent, liberally supported and largely attended.

I believe it would be difficult to find anywhere a city of similar size that has as many and as beautiful church buildings, planted right in the very heart of the business and commercial section, as you will find in Charlotte. Sky-scraper and church steeple are twins in Charlotte, so far as proximity is concerned, and the one is as magnificent in its appointment as the other is majestic in its equipment and design. Work and worship evidently go hand in hand, side by side in Charlotte, or these places of push, and these of prayer, belie their mission and their location. Why Tryon St., a hustling business thoroughfare, is just linked and lined with splendid church edifices.

And right here is Charlotte's really great Y. M. C. A. There is not a club in the city equal to this in size, cost, membership and activity. The cost of the lot on which the building was erected was $21,000 and it would sell for twice that or more now. The cost of the building and furnishing was $124,000. And this outlay of $145,000 but little portrays the worth and the value of this institution as an asset of the city. There are 1200 members of the Association and in this number are included the city's rich and the city's poor who want improvement and are seeking to know and to do better things. There are baths, gymnasiums, work rooms, secretaries' apartment, a quiet reading and writing room, a great library. Bible class rooms, a hall for public worship and 11 men, secretaries and assistants, giving all their time and effort to promote the interests of this institution. They have one of their number as a missionary in China, and others do untold work in carrying the gospel message to those who need it in and about Charlotte, while the work done in teaching the Bible and assisting in the church and charity work of the city is abundant. It was a pleasure and a privilege indeed for this writer to be allowed last Sunday afternoon to fall in with this company of Christian workers, and to speak at 5 o'clock to its well-filled auditorium of intelligent and earnest men.

We are not surprised at Charlotte's pride and progress. As long as her splendid citizenship shall throng her places of worship and attend, in eagerness and attention, to her earnest and consecrated preachers, as was the case last Sunday. Charlotte will have occasion to indulge in pardonable pride, and her people will be prosperous and happy. For happy and blessed indeed is that people whose God is the Lord.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES.

Examinations began on Friday of last week and the College community is the busiest it has been for some time. From the fine grade of work done in the various classes this fall and the thoroughness of the preparation the students seem to be making for the final testing time, the grades ought to be high this time.

One of the most pleasing items of our budget of good things this fall has been the unprecedented good health of the student body. The local physicians think this is due in no small degree to our excellent water supply. Dr. Shore, of the State Board of Public Health, in reporting on the sample of the water sent him from an East Dormitory spigot about two weeks ago, states that it is absolutely without pollution.

Dr. Atkinson delivered a great sermon before the 1,300 members of the Charlotte, N. C., Y. M. C. A., Sunday. The Charlotte papers on Sunday carried his genial face and on Monday spoke in loud praises of his discourse. Elon is glad at times to lend the outside world the pulpit power of the good Doctor, for others also enjoy his preaching.

Rev. C. O. DuRant, of the North Carolina Conference, M. E. Church, South, who for four years has been a resident of our village, goes to Newport, N. C., next year. He leaves here Thursday of this week. On Sunday at 11 and also at 7:30 o'clock Brother DuRant occupied the College pulpit and preached two powerful sermons. The sermon of the evening occasion was written and will appear in the College Weekly and also in The Christian Sun. We are always glad to have visiting brethren preach for us and during the past year have enjoyed visits from representatives of seven different denominations.

The November Number of the Elon College Bulletin, which is always given to the Teachers' Normal Course, is now from the press and is being mailed to the friends and prospective students. It is the work of Dr. Amick, the director of the Normal Term, and is a very creditable publication indeed, giving full information in regard to the cost of this term, of the courses of instruction, and other valuable information.

Rev. J. W. Wellons, who has been sick for the past month, is up and can go to his meals. He has not ventured out of the Dormitory yet, but hopes to be out for the Christmas service in the chapel.

Mr. Karl Lehman, Field Secretary for the United Society of Christian Endeavor for the United States, paid our people a much appreciated visit this past week and delivered some powerful addresses. He makes a strong impression for his work wherever he goes. Incidentally the Elonites succeeded in making a very favorable impression on Mr. Lehman, which appears in another column.

CHURCH FINANCES, PART III.

Methods and Results in Christian Giving.

(By Pres. W. A. Harper, of Elon College, before the N. C. and Va. Conference, and published by request of that body.)

The Revelator gives us just two classes of Churches with reference to Christian giving: the rich poor churches and the poor rich churches. The Church of the latter class is described for us in Rev. 3: 17-18: "Because thou sayest, I am rich, and have gotten riches, and have need of nothing; and knowest not that thou art the wretched one and miserable and poor and blind and naked. I counsel thee to buy of me gold refined by fire that thou mayest become rich." This was a rich church, was the church at Laodicea, yet the wireless message from heaven declared it to be "wretched and miserable and poor and blind and naked." Why? Because it was stingy in its gifts for the propagation of the kingdom. Have you ever seen a church like that?

The rich poor church is portrayed for us in Rev. 2:9-10: "I know thy tribulation, and thy poverty, (but thou art rich), and the blasphemy of them that say they are Jews and they are not, but are a synagogue of Satan—Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." This fine compliment does the Spirit pay the church at Smyrna—poor, persecuted, blasphemed against, yet rich in sacrifice, monetary and personal, for the kingdom! May the number of such churches multiply and replenish the earth! But in order to this end, we must have definite plans and ends.

The good has been the enemy of the best too long in the financial administration of the kingdom. It is well and good to pay the preacher in full and to bring up our Conference apportionments, but it is better to have these matters attended to in a business-like way according to the Gospel plan. In the previous paper it was shown that the Biblical standard of giving was that our gifts should be systematic, participated in by all, and proportionate to our several ability. No system of Church finances which fails to accomplish all these ends can be said to be complete or even satisfactory. The good should come to be the enemy of the best. The end of giving is not to get the needful money primarily, but to develop in each the Christian graces consequent upon Christian giving. Let us keep this clearly before us in outlining our system of Church finances.

The first requirement of a sound financial policy is a budget of expenses. The church in open business session should consider what sum of money should be raised to meet all obligations during the year. We never lose anything by keeping the facts before the church. If the church votes upon itself such and such a burden in a financial way, it will be all the more likely to satisfy those burdens. Many churches seem afraid to give out in detail the financial burdens of the church. This is always a mistake. If you cannot trust your members with the facts, you certainly cannot hope for a ready and full response to your appeals for funds. Confidence begets loyalty and loyalty leads to liberality. The people must have the facts. A budget is necessary.

In the second place there should be a personal canvass of the congregation by a committee charged with that duty, and each one should be given the opportunity to say what amount he will subscribe weekly to each item of expense included in the annual budget and to designate whether he will pay this weekly, monthly, quarterly, or yearly and whether he will pay it to the treasurer in person or through envelope on the regular meeting days. If the envelope system is used, it will be necessary to provide each member with envelopes and a neatly printed card on which he may designate the items covered by the money in the envelope and also the total amount included in it. The Duplex Envelope System, Richmond, Va., is perhaps the best general system on the market, samples of which may be had for the asking.

In the third place our church treasurers ought to be more business-like in their system of accounting for moneys paid to them than they are. I think they should issue receipts, preserving stubs, for every penny they receive. It would be far better for them to keep carbon duplicates of their receipts than to keep stubs, using some of the many devices employed in department stores today. A separate account should be opened in a ledger with every contributing member and there should be a cash book, showing cash items under head of receipts and of disbursements. For his own protection, the treasurer should insist that the secretary count over with him all the money from the public offerings and check with him all money on subscriptions received by the envelope payment plan and the proper receipts should be issued in the secretary's presence, receipt for money given aside from the regular subscription plan being issued to secretary, with whom for this purpose an account should be opened in the ledger. Furthermore the treasurer should pay out money only on the order of the Church, taking receipt for each payment. I have known many churches to be rent asunder, especially when repairs or other constructive work was in progress, because of a little lack of business methods. The treasurer and the church will both be in far better condition by reason of business-likeness in handling the Church finances. These principles apply as much to treasurers of Sunday-schools, Christian Endeavor Societies, Organized Classes, Ladies Aid Societies, and so on, as to church treasurers. No man who handles church money should be satisfied with a less business-like system of accounting than that exacted in the world of business round about him. The ambition of every financial officer in the church and its auxiliaries should be the avoidance of even the possibility of suspicion or of criticism.

Another hard problem to solve in connection with systematic, individual, proportionate giving—that is to say, according to the Christian standard, is arranging for gifts for children. But there are many ways to settle this matter. In every case the child should make his individual subscription and should pay it from his individual income. That means that the heads of families must institute some plan by which their children shall earn money, more money than the subscription in each case calls for, else the gift cannot be proportionate. From the very first the child should be encouraged to subscribe the tenth of his income, and also to save the other nine-tenths. This will teach him liberality and also parsimony, terms by no means contradictory or paradoxical in the Christian sense. Parents should, of course, provide plans for the children to earn the money, such as work in the yard, chopping wood, doing chores, running errands, and so on. This will be real training up of our children in the way that they should go and I am sure that when they are old they will not depart from it. We need more such training.

Many times during our investigation of the theme of these papers reference has been made to the Christian graces consequent upon giving—the reaction of the gift on the giver. Action is always equal to re-action in the physical world. There is no doubt that the same principle holds good in the spiritual world. The spirit of sacrifice, which is the spirit of giving, always has a benign effect upon the one practicing it, expands his soul, enlarges his spiritual horizon.

The first good that comes of Christian giving is the liberalizing tendency it has on the life and conduct and the attitude toward all the issues of living of the giver. Strictly speaking we ought not to speak of money for the church and its enterprises as a gift, for we are stewards and are but rendering our due account.

We owe God the tenth and it is as real a debt and just as obligatory as a grocery or fertilizer bill. Until we have paid more than the tenth, we are simply paying our debts to our Maker. What we pay over the tenth, we might with more show at justification regard as a gift, but not even then in the strict mundane sense of the word. But whether we regard money invested in the Lord's work as a gift or not, the effect of the investment is unmistakable of the investor. It liberalizes his views, his life, his conduct. You cannot be liberal in one department of life and illiberal in another. Liberality is as the yeast which the woman hid in three measures of meal, it leavens the whole lump, the entire man. Not only does the Lord love the cheerful giver, but everybody else does, has to, because liberality of life, consequent upon liberality of purse, is a magnetic, lovable quality in any man.

Giving also enlarges the vision. Our vision is largely determined as to its extent and quality by our gifts. He who gives only to local enterprises has only a local vision. He who includes in the sweep of his generosity the ends of the earth will have a horizon that is world-wide. I know nothing that will cure nuck-raking and expand narrow hearts so easily as giving to missions, foreign missions in particular. A man may give to his local church or even to home missions by reason of a certain sort of refined selfishness, but when he gives to foreign missions, it is because of his love for the down trodden. His vision is accordingly broadened and widened and enlarged.

Giving also gives us joy in our possessions. How many rich men have we known or heard of who were unhappy! Wealth is not always a synonym for happiness, contentment, peace of mind. The surest way to enjoy the prosperity God grants us is to give some of it to make someone else happy and to spread His kingdom. "We enjoy our candy so much better when we share it with our playmates," said two little sisters to their mother. "Yes," said their mother, "it is more blessed to give than to receive good things." How much more our nine-tenths would mean to us, were we to give the other tenth to bringing joy and peace and sunshine into other lives than our own!

It makes us Christ-like. The life of Christ centres around the cross. His was the sacrificial life, the life lived for others. A good man said to me the other day that he loved to give to religious causes, because Christ had given so much for him. This is the proper, the Christ-like spirit. If we give from proper motives, we shall become Christ-like in spirit. We can never give so much to His cause as He gave for us, but we can give as He has prospered us, and rest satisfied in the assurance that we shall be like Him, for we shall see Him as He is.

It will lay up for us treasures in heaven. It is sometimes said that man comes into the world destitute of material things and that he must leave all his possessions of earthly character behind him when he departs for the other world. I deny that as a necessary fact in human life. Many men do necessarily leave all their earthly possessions in this world when they die—they are low-visioned, selfish, stingy souls of earth, but others give their material possessions here an eternal value by investing them in doing God service and in uplifting man. The only money we can carry to heaven with us is that which we give away for Christian ends, dedicate to God's service. It becomes treasure laid up in heaven for us. How large, my brother, is your bank account in heaven?

FIFTY THOUSAND—NOT DOLLARS, BUT SOULS.

By Rev. J. Ernest Thacker, D. D.

I am quite sure that every one in our beloved Church would like to see every cause of the Church well supported, and every appeal for money met with liberal response. I feel, too, that the entire Church will be glad to see an appeal which is not for money, but for the salvation of souls. With the hearty approval of the Assembly's entire committee, we sent out through the Church papers an appeal that our Church work and pray for at least fifty thousands additions on profession of faith for the year ending Mar. 31, 1912. This is to renew the appeal, and to make the following suggestions, which may be carried out by all of our churches and their entire membership.

1. Pray—A popular English poet said: "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of." "Pray without ceasing."

2. Invite and lead others to Christ. "Let him that heareth say come."

3. Seek the convicting, converting, comforting and consecrating power of the Holy Ghost. "It is not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

4. Proclaim and preach the Gospel. "It has pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." "The Gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth."

5. Let each and everyone engage in personal work, "Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore hear the Word of my mouth, and give them warning from me. When I say unto the wicked, thou shalt surely die, and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul."

6. Co-operate with all the efforts of the Church. For this is the philosophy of all things—"Christ is head over all things to the Church, which is His body."

7. Evangelistic—We wish especially to suggest that evangelistic possibilities. (a) Every Home Mission field could have a series of meetings conducted by the pastor, the Presbyterial Evangelist, or a visiting minister. This was done this summer by some of our Presbyteries, with splendid results. One Presbytery reported one hundred and fifty thousand, another one, one hundred additions, by this special work.

(b) Each self-supporting church could hold a series of meetings. If the pastor wished a helper, he could invite some evangelist, or evangelistic pastor to do the preaching. Our committee has arranged such meetings, and is always glad to do so for any church desiring its help.

(c) Promote a union evangelistic service in your community. If there is no sensationalism, and there are no objectionable methods used, a union meeting is generally best. It gives so many more people to work and sing and pray. It makes possible to reach so many more souls for Christ. It gives a spiritual atmosphere in which to work, because one church isn't having a concert or a sale, while another is trying to win souls. The workers can do as much good for eight or ten churches with the same time and effort as for one, and even more, for in unity there is not only strength, but inspiration also. "One shall chase a thousand; two shall put ten thousand to flight." When the mind and the heart and effort of the entire community are concentrated on the work of soul-saving, it is much easier to get the non-church people out to the service. It removes the church critic's excuse, "That churches are fighting one another, instead of loving and co-operating with each other."

If every minister, officer and lay-member of our great Church will make "soul-saving" the primary object of their lives from now to March 31, 1912, it seems to me that we might expect the fifty thousand to be saved and brought into the Church, and find a reflex influence that would help every cause of our Church, and bring to our own souls a deeper joy and sweeter peace than we have ever experienced—In Presbyterian Standard.

NOTES AND PERSONALS.

—No paper next week! It is the printers' rest week.

—Rev. H. F. Wolfe changes his address to Liberty, N. C., having recently moved his family there, he being pastor of our church there.

—"A little child shall lead them." Christmas is the child's season, and the children then lead us to joy, gladness, and unselfishness.

—Dr. Holmes often makes us laugh at his keen wit, but he wrote with a philosopher's pen when he said, "Sin has many tools, but a lie is the handle that fits them all."

—How best may we serve Christ? By serving our fellowman. How best may we honor Christ? By doing an unselfish deed in His name, for His glory. This is the season of all the year when that deed is called for. Now we celebrate the birth of the Christ child.

—Rev. S. L. Baugher writes that he is enjoying his work as pastor of the First Christian Church, Portland, Ind. "This is a beautiful city, people social and kind, but sin abounds here and there is little respect for the Sabbath day. We have a good Sabbath law here, but the mayor will not enforce it.

—My! but how we wish there were ministers amongst us who would follow the lead of one cited by the Congregationalist. "How did you happen to take the Congregationalist?" asked the editor of a business man who was reading his church paper on the train the other day. "My pastor asked me to, in the first place, and then I liked it so well that I have kept on taking it ever since." That is the way many a layman could be got to take the church paper, if the pastor only would. Verbum sap.

—We are giving elsewhere a note from Mr. Karl Lehman, Field Secretary of Christian Endeavor for the United States, a man of travel, wide observation, culture, refinement and experience. When such a man as that pays the tribute he does, and that too altogether unsolicited, to Elon College there must be somewhat indeed in this institution altogether out of the ordinary and exceedingly praiseworthy. We regard Mr. Lehman's testimony about Elon College the finest we have ever had, considering the high authority from which it comes.

—A brother from a distant State writes, "It is reported here that the Christian church denies the divinity of Christ, and that her preachers do not believe in the Trinity." We do not know what the Christian Church denies or affirms, nor do we know who has the authority to deny or affirm in this name; but we are prepared to aver, avow and affirm that the members of Christian churches with whom we have ever talked, or whom we have ever heard or seen discuss the matter, believe in, teach, talk and preach the divinity of Jesus Christ; and those who do not, we should think would naturally go into the Unitarian church, since the doctrine belongs to that church and that alone, so far as our acquaintance goes.

—Unless we are ought of the way and altogether biased in our judgment and prejudiced in our views The Sun this week carries the finest ode to Christmas we have seen in any paper. We refer to the prose-poem, the musical lay written by Dr. Staley in another column under the caption of Suffolk Letter. We had just finished looking through several papers for Christmas carols when Dr. Staley's letter came and we did not find anywhere, not even in The Youth's Companion Christmas Number such an ode as this from the pen of Dr. Staley. Read it to your family on Christmas day and then clip it for your scrap-book. If it is not a masterpiece of literature, poetry, song and art combined, then we are deceived in our honest judgment. It is the feature of this week's Sun.

THE ELON SPIRIT.

It has been my privilege to visit a great many school during the six years that I have been a Christian Endeavor Field Secretary, and I want to say that Elon is absolutely the finest I have ever seen for a real, true, Christian spirit. Everyone—faculty and student body alike, seem to unite to make this spirit what it is.

It was a source of real pleasure to have fellowship with you during my recent visit. I shall never lose the impressions of those two days.

Your literary society halls are elegantly and appropriately furnished—save perhaps that looking glass—but maybe there is a better reason than one would suppose, upon first thought, for its presence in the Philologist hall.

Everywhere I go in North Carolina I see the marks of Elon College work. I am so thankful for your loyalty to Christian Endeavor. May Elon long continue to be the blessing that she now is.

As I have opportunity I shall always be glad to say a good word for Elon and the Elon spirit.. Your sincere friend, Karl Lehman.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Christmas celebrates a simple event of world-wide import, which centuries cannot lessen. No one can tell the significance of the birth of any child, much less the value of Bethlehem's babe. Centuries pointed to his coming and centuries have proclaimed the "good tidings" to millions since. That manger scene has found its way not only into the New Testament, but into the art of the world and into the heart of mankind. The lullaby at the cradle of infancy, by Christian mothers for nineteen centuries, has been the echo of the song of the heavenly host over the Judean hills that night when the angel appeared to the shepherds. From that night until this, motherhood and children have come more and more into the light and love of mortals. That event changed the calendar of time, made a new era, and opened the world to progress. It has increased the world's joy, multiplied the world's industries, and quickened the activities of mankind. That simple story of that peasant babe has crept into every home in Christendom, flooded every baby life with pleasure, and made midnight the dream of glad mornings; and it comes round every year with increasing splendor.

It would be futile to undertake the endless task of enumerating the additions which Christmas has made to labor, business, social happiness, and religious worship and service. Think of labor employed in the manufacture, transportation, and sale of "Christmas toys," to say nothing of fruits and candies, nuts and cakes, brought from all lands at Christmas time. Think of the crates and baskets, sacks and boxes, dainty cards and books, calendars and pictures that must be created, transported, and sold. Over this vast globe people have been busy for months, moving toward this one center that started in the manger. Think of the letters and papers, the postals and postage; the greetings and visits. See the crowded trains, the crowded stores, the busy hands and feet and brains at work, and all for Christmas! What would these busy millions be doing now, if there were no Christmas? I dare not answer. The thought is bewildering. The imagination trips in following the train of thought suggested by Christmas.

But that's not all. The preparation for home-coming of tired men from a year's toil, of children from the routine of school, of young mothers with their babies! The domestic glows with new fires and happy faces and silent hearts. Tears of joy fill up the wrinkles of age, and the voice becomes resonant again with the overflow of glad emotions. Those family reunions are like angel visits to parental weariness, and likewise men coming to bow at the shrine of home. Nothing is too precious for such an occasion. That is involved in Christmas! Burdens of years fall away on such occasions and the memory of such seasons enriches experience. Panish Christmas! It would be easier to blot out the Judean hills that heard the angels sing, "Glory to God in th highest, on earth peace, good will to men."

Listen! The chimes peal forth the Christmas praise. The church doors swing open and the devout worshippers enter. The organ thunders, the choir lifts the voice, the temple is full of praise in grand anthem. Who built all those temples? Who wrote those anthems? Who built those great organs? The babe in Bethlehem inspired all this and more. The painter, the writer, the musician, the prayer, the sermon, all make us think of the "babe lying in a manger." Pull back the white linen and let us see that face never to be marred by sin! Let me hear once the beating of that heart never to be stained by an evil thought! Put the white linen back over that little face, for there is no other like it. Is that brow to be pierced by thorns? Nothing but sin could do that.

Who will dare make Christmas the occasion of revelery, dissipation, and rude voicé? Who will forget the origin and significance of this great holiday? Who would rob childhood of its Santa Claus, the toiler of rest, the creditor of his due, and the worshipper of his quiet and communion with God? Adjourn Congress, shut down the mills, close the stores, silence the school bell, shut up the ledger, stop some of the trains, and open the heart. The stockings are on the wall, childhood sleeps. The house is still. Hark! the morning breaks and the music of bare feet and happy voices fills the world with joy.

W. W. Staley.

ELON COLLEGE LETTER.

I enjoyed immensely my visit to the Valley and the opportunity it afforded me of renewing old acquaintances and forming new ones. The weather was ideal for the time of the year, one day only being severe enough to call into services a buggy stove. Here, as elsewhere in our Brotherhood, I found loyal hearts and loving sympathies for the College and large appreciation of its place of usefulness among us. Dr. Moffitt and I, in our work for the Special Fund, nearly one-half of which he raised during his incumbency of the Presidency of the College, have been greeted everywhere with lavish hospitality, cheering fellowship, and liberal responses to the needs of the institution. It is easy to get the brethren to give of their substance for the object of their affections, and that Elon certainly is. To every one, whether the subscription was given to Dr. Moffitt or to me or to those who have generously assisted us, who has subscribed to this Special Fund I wish at this time to record Elon's profound gratitude for this generosity and to state that those into whose hands loving hearts have entrusted the working out of her policy will do their best to keep her true to the great interests that have made her what she is. Friends, we thank you.

The Special Fund must rest now until after the work in the office incidental to the closing for the holidays and to the opening in January has been attended to. All during the fall term we have been in constant communication with prospective students and some have already signified their intention to be with us. Many, however, are undecided as yet where they will go after Christmas. Here is an opportunity for the friends to do the College a great favor—for a word from you at this critical time will often settle the matter favorably to Elon's interests. Our friends have not failed to speak these words so far this fall and that is why we have had such a delightful session of it, and I am sure their deep concern in our behalf will lead them to keep right on in their noble, loyal support of the institution they love and which Karl Lehman declares in another column is the best he has seen in six years of experience as Field Secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor for the United States, and Mr. Lehman's compliment came without any suggestion from any one connected with Elon. Such a testimony will but confirm our people in their faith in Elon and but quicken their zeal for serving her wherever opportunity affords. If you know of any student we can possibly get to come after Christmas, will you not, kind friend, speak the good word and then let me know, for I shall be in the office for that purpose from now till Jan. 3? Thank you.

Just as soon after Jan. 3 as the work of opening the Winter term will allow it is my hope to take the field again on behalf of the Special Fund and to give the friends who have not had the opportunity they deserve the opportunity of helping Elon to be a greater, better Elon by reason of being out of debt. It will not be right to deny those friends that opportunity, which I am sure it will be as great a pleasure for them to accept as their gifts will be of profit to their Church College. Giving always blesses the giver. "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

May everyone who has contributed to this Special Fund and all who shall hereafter do so and all who feel it in their heart to wish to do so have a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

W. A. Harper.

NO CHRIST, NO CHRISTMAS.

The two are inseparable. The babe Christ wields as much influence as the man Christ. Grown people, as well as children, are peculiarly touched by infant life; so Jesus the babe appeals to all. The story of the stable and manger never gets old; does not lose its interest nor power. The company around that ancient manger will be larger this Christmas than ever before. Not only will there be "wise men from the east," but they will come from every clime, and lay at His feet the best their country can give. This army of wise men and "shepherds" is causing "the kingdoms of this world to become the kingdoms of our Lord, and of His Christ," slowly, but surely. No wonder that "Mary kept all these things and pondered them in her heart," for she was standing with her babe in the center of the world's real existence. What a blessing to be such a mother!

"Christmas," how much it means! what holy memories cluster around it!

NOTES AND COMMENT ON THE YEAR'S PROGRESS IN CHURCH MOVEMENTS.

The year of 1911 has been one marked with wonderful advances in matters religious and spiritual. Only a few of them can be touched upon in this column. The greatest single outstanding feature is the universal changing in the attitude of men toward the cause of Christ. When one compares present day conditions with those of ten, or even five, years ago he finds that a larger per cent of members taking part in the work are men—not because the number of women is smaller, but for the reason the number of men is so greatly increased.

Three things are responsible for this increase in working men in the cause: first, the organized men's Sunday school class; second, the men's mission movement, and, third, a healthy growth of sentiment favorable to the church and a higher estimate upon the organized church as the only safe means of promoting civic righteousness, as well as personal piety. Since the organized class movement was begun Sunday school attendance has been increased by the thousands and hundreds of thousands. With the men have come their wives, their children, their friends. What is beg enough for holding men will keep the ambitious youth and the confiding woman.

The great Christian Endeavor Convention at Atlantic City fully demonstrated the fact that this organization has a greater hold than ever upon young people, while the future stretches out ahead with every promise that greater things await it in the unborn years. It is to be sincerely trusted that among the new societies and members that will be enlisted in the year 1912 there will be a goodly number from the Southern Christian Convention. There is strength in numbers. Good church work may be done without organization, but more effective and intelligent service can be rendered by uniting with a band that has definite organization, fixed plans and purposes and abundant helps and literature of a most intensely interesting character.

The Golden Jubilee of woman's foreign missionary societies celebrated this year throughout the United States was an event of more than passing interest. Conventions celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of the women's foreign mission society movement were held in many of the country's principal cities and in every state. It was with regret that we found only one society in the Christian Church in North Carolina represented at the jubilee for this state. This was the Burlington society. As a result of the meeting the Greensboro women are organizing.

The Laymen's Mission Movement is carrying forward its work. In many of the states there are state secretaries and an effort is being put forth to organize every county and get the mission committee in every church. Following this comes the Men and Religion Forward Movement, of which much has been seen in our religious papers and of which much more will be said in the first five months of the New Year.

In our S. C. C. progress can be reported. Our people are opening their minds to the newest and best in religious movements. Increases in contributions for all purposes were reported at our conferences. The Sunday schools are better organized, better teachers are the result of teacher training and more active young people are being trained in the Christian Endeavor societies. Perhaps the greatest single advance has been in organized classes. I haven't the figures at hand, but the number of classes organized in the convention during the year has been encouraging.

Mr. Karl Lehman, the well known Christian Endeavor worker, was in the state last week. He spoke in Greensboro, Raleigh and elsewhere to good congregations. In a letter to the editor of this department, Rev. Mr. Johnson, of our Raleigh church, says that Mr. Lehman had a great day in Raleigh on Sunday, 10th. He says that the society of the Hillsboro Street church is doing splendid work, and expresses the hope that our church will get in the lead of the work that the organization will do in the South.

It's the little things that count. Every primary teacher should have at her desk the dates of the birthdays of her pupils, and when the birthday comes send them some simple reminder. It will endear them to the Sunday school. Everybody loves to be remembered and appreciated. Children are not an exception.

—Trust in the Lord and do good.

Comment On The Topic.

What is more important for our society than that this meeting should stir the officers and committees to do better work for the Master? Therefore let the prayer meeting committee or the leader try to turn the meeting in this direction by asking some representative of each committee, preferably the chairman, and each officer to express at the meeting a series of good resolutions that he would like to have adopted by his committee or by the society, and embodied in the Christian Endeavor work of the coming year.

To this end the secretary may be instructed to call the roll of officers and committees, and the responses may be somewhat as follows:

President: I am resolved to spend more time and thought upon the society, and seek more earnestly to get all the members to working for the Master.

Vice-President: I am resolved to aid the president in his work more faithfully than in the past.

Secretary: I am resolved to make my reports better, and to see what more I can do with my pen to advance Christian Endeavor.

Treasurer: I am resolved to urge the privilege of giving more than ever before, and persuade the society to increase its gifts for all good causes.

Lookout Committee: My committee is resolved, I hope, to work more earnestly and pray more fervently than ever before, that more persons may enter our society, and that all our members may be more faithful to their promises.

Prayer Meeting Committee: My committee is resolved, I hope, to labor more zealously to implant among the members of the society the spirit of the Saviour this coming year, and advance His blessed Kingdom.

Missionary Committee: My Committee is resolved, I hope, to do what we can this coming year to broaden the sympathies, deepen the knowledge, and intensify the activities of this society, so that we may hold up the hands of our proxies on the mission fields, at home and abroad.

Other Suggestive Helps.

1. "It is not the amount of service we render which secures for us the divine approval, but the disposition which holds us in readiness to do whatever our Lord requires. In the parable, they who worked but one hour, received the penny because they were waiting and went to work as soon as they received the invitation. They also serve who only stand and wait."

2. "There are two ways of enlarging our work. One is by cultivating twenty acres this year instead of last year's ten. Another is by more assiduous and intelligent cultivation, doubling last year's fruitage from that same field. We believe the second process to be more in harmony with divine ideas of spiritual husbandry, and commend it to ambitious presidents of Endeavor societies, superintendents of Bible-schools and pastors of churches."

3. "Paul seemed to be consumed by a spirit of sanctified acquisitiveness for souls and other trophies for his Master. We would have thought the harsh experiences of his first missionary journey would have extinguished his zeal for extending boundaries; but the second was farther reaching; and the third in planning, seemed to encompass the known and even the half known world. God forbid that age should chill our enthusiasm, contract our endeavors or narrow our sympathies."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL HAS COME BACK.

Not so long ago it was the fashion to belittle the Sunday-school. A man would tack the phrase "Sunday-school" to some cheap sneer at goodness and think himself both witty and keen.

Some politicians said, "Politics is no Sunday-school picnic," or some business men would say, "Sunday-school seruples don't go here." The man out for "a good time" would say to his hesitating companion, "What's the matter with you? You're not in Sunday-school any more." And so on, and so on.

Even the church did not quite see the worth of Sunday school. Remember the leading official who didn't think much of the revival, because it reached scarcely anybody but a lot of Sunday-school children? Have you forgotten the days when parents hustled their children off to Sunday-school without knowing or caring what happened to them there?

But all this is changing. The Sunday-school is coming into its own. The sneerer must find something else to use as point for his feeble wit. The Sunday-school is becoming one of the country's biggest institutions, and one of the best, as well.

The churches are putting more and more money and thought into the Sunday school. Some of them appropriate as much for Sunday school purposes as they do for the paid choir. The Sunday-school folks themselves are putting vast sums into the support of the work.

There is a new science of the Sunday-school. It is being studied by thousands of people, at their own expense. Teacher-training classes are becoming as plentiful as prayer meetings, and some of them are better attended.

Christian people are awake to the fact that the fate of the church of tomorrow depends almost wholly on the Sunday school of today. The Sunday school is the greatest by far of all the church's recruiting grounds. A Sunday school revival means more, in the long run, than a midnight mission.—Dan B. Brummit.

THE GREATER VISION.

Dear Dr. Atkinson and Sun Readers:

Recently so rare a privilege was accorded me that I would like to tell The Sun family about it. I went as a delegate from the Christian Biblical Institute to a Convention of Seminary Students and Professors held at Oberlin College. The visit to the college was of itself the occasion of no small amount of pleasure. Oberlin is one of the largest as well as one of the oldest and most influential colleges of this section. It is in the center of a typical college town and scarcely has one alighted from the train ere he catches the spirit that seems to pervade everything there. He feels instinctively that he has left behind the rush and hustle of commerce and industry. There is a spirit of quietude, dignity, and scholarship that seems to rest upon everything; making one feel that it is an unusual opportunity to come in contact with the life of the professors and students of such an institution. Especially striking was the impression made by the chapel service our Convention was permitted to attend. We were seated back of the choir where we could command an entire view of the great auditorium and look into the faces of the student body. Mr. John R. Mott addressed the students, the great burden of his message being a plea to those young men and women to consecrate their lives, no matter where their paths should lie, to the promotion of Christ's kingdom among men and the pulling down of all those things that debase men; in their places to plant those things that ennoble and uplift. And as we saw that company, two thousand strong, representing the flower of American youth hanging upon every word and applauding every sentiment, we felt that the coming of His kingdom would be hastened by that service.

But I must pass on to the work of the Convention and the things it emphasized. Its purpose was to discuss the problems that face the Church today, and to find if possible what the seminaries can and should do to meet and solve those problems. The Convention was informal. There were no set speeches or speakers. A syllabus of the questions and problems to be discussed had been prepared, and those interested and best informed on the subjects led the discussions and every one gave his mite. One of the striking things of the Convention was the spirit of unity and brotherly love that ruled all the discussions. Had you been there you would have thought it a meeting of one harmonious denomination or as was generally the case you would have forgotten all about denominational lines. And it came as a surprise to all when we were told at the close of the Convention that it was representative of twenty-seven schools of theology and eighteen separate and distinct denominations.

One of the great questions discussed was how to meet the dearth of candidates for the ministry? "How to win strong men for the Christian ministry?" was the way it was expressed. The difficulties of pastoral work, the small salaries, etc., were passed over rapidly. These were held by one speaker in the same light that I remember Dr. Staley to have presented them once, as the things that keep out the fellows looking for the easy places and money making opportunities. It was the universal opinion that the situation was to be met only by appeals to the "pure, high and large motives that cannot be exhausted;" that ministers should avoid the apologetic attitude and to so magnify their calling as to win the enthusiastic admiration of able men; that ministers should hold up the fact to young men that the ministry offers the greatest opportunities for social service, and that it calls for the strongest and best in men.

An then there was the discussion of the Mission Work. In this Mr. Mott led and gave us an idea of missions never to be forgotten. He is without doubt one of the best informed and most influential men in the missionary world. He has traveled the world over in his study of the various phases of the work and whatever he says or does is in the light of the world-idea. As he talked to us the line of demarcation between home and foreign missions faded away, and we also were lifted to the world view.

China, Japan, Africa, and in fact all that we know as the foreign field was so portrayed that the miles of sea and land that divide us faded away and all nations became our neighbors and all men our brothers. Our duty with reference to missions caught a new meaning and a new glory as he presented it.

There were many soul-stirring messages that I would like to be able to present, but I fear my letter is too long already. I cannot, however, close without speaking of the closing message that came from Dr. Ross, of Montreal, Canada. He spoke from the words of Paul, "Have I not seen Jesus Christ our Lord?" From these he presented the necessity of the Christ vision, holding up the Christ as the one great power of righteousness and peace, the giver of eternal law of love and the second coming of whom is to mark the consummation of the ages.

In every particular it was a meeting fraught with a prophecy of the greater mission the Church of tomorrow is to fulfill. Stanley C. Harrell.

In Memoriam.

Since the last session of this Association, two of our charter members have been called from labor to reward. We desire to record this sad fact in the proceedings of this session, for we feel that the worthy example of these fellow-workers deserves this recognition of their efficient service. In view of the fact that suitable resolutions have been passed by other bodies composed in large part of the members of this Association, we offer the following joint resolutions of respect in memory of Capt. T. R. Gaskins and Col. A. Savage. Resolved 1st, That in the death of these two brethren this Association has lost two faithful and worthy members.

2nd, That we record our gratitude to God for their worthy example and valuable service.

3. That we commend the loyalty, diligence and honorable lives of these co-workers to those who are to continue the work of the kingdom.

4th, That we express our sympathy to the families of the deceased brethren, and pray the Father's blessings upon them.

5th, That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon the records of this Association, and printed in the Christian Sun.

AMONG THE CHURCHES.

New Hope.

I met a good congregation at New Hope, my first appointment, 4th Sunday in November. It was mostly young people. I missed many faces that were familiar to me when I preached there ten years ago. Bro. J. B. King has a fine choir of young people and made some fine music. They always have fine music at New Hope. I think there is a fine future for this church. So many young people there.

Pleasant Union.

The 1st Sunday in December I went to Pleasant Union. Met a good congregation and had some excellent music. Received a new member into the church from another church, an excellent bass singer and a fine young man. He will add much to the choir, which is already good under the management of J. D. Long. We took our Thanksgiving offering for the Orphanage, which amounted to $14.20.

Pleasant Hill.

The second Sunday in December I met a fine congregation at Pleasant Hill, Johnson. There we have an excellent choir managed by Johnnie Barber. We have a nice organ there, presented to us by Bro. K. B. Johnson. Mrs. Nolie Barber played for us Sunday, which added much to our enjoyment of the music here.

We received two members, Bro. Ezra Dixon and wife, from another church. Bro. Dixon is an excellent leader of music and will doubtless be a great help to us.

We took our Thanksgiving offering, which amounted to a nice little sum. This church is located in a fine community in one of the finest cotton sections in the South. The people made more cotton than they could gather. One of our members here made 100 bales of cotton and 125 barrels of corn on his farm. Himself and his tenants made probably 100 barrels more. This church bids fair to be one of our first in the future, if nothing hinders its progress.

Mt. Pleasant.

I met my people at Mt. Pleasant, Hoke Co., at my first appointment this year. They were in good spirits. This is one of the best working little churches that I have ever attended. They pay their pass for every appointment. The last appointment in the old year they paid all the salary and some over on the new year before the new year commenced.

We have made some repairs here: put a new roof on the church, and are now making preparations to paint the church.

J. P. Wicker.

Liberty.

On December 8th, the members of the Christian church and the good people of Liberty gave the pastor a pounding. It was quite a surprise to the pastor and family. And though the pounding was severe, we have happily recovered without any scars.

We highly appreciate the good will and cordial reception given us. Gatherings of such character are the impulses that encourage us in life's struggle.

After most of the people had left some of the ladies and gentlemen were looking over the different articles on the table. When lo! a distressing sound was heard. This was followed by another; then the already overburdened table sank to the floor with a crash. But we are glad to announce that the broken table has been resurrected and strengthened for a greater burden than ever. H. F. Wolfe.

Winchester Letter.

Our revival services were well attended and some interest was manifested. There were four conversions and additions to the church. Rev. A. W. Audes was with us three nights during the meeting and won a warm place in the hearts of our people. The interest in our work is increasing. Our regular church attendance has more than doubled and the attendance at the Sunday-school has increased over 50 per cent. In my note of thanks to the good people of Timber Ridge for their generous pouncing I omitted mentioning a purse of $2.10 in cash which accompanied the donation. I was glad to have the privilege last week of being with Rev. A. W. Andes in meeting at Antioch. It is a pleasure to be with this loyal people. The Lord blessed us with five conversions during my stay. Bro. Andes, who is a strong preacher and a faithful pastor, is held in high esteem by the congregation. I am with Bro. R. L. Williamson at Bethlehem this week. I served this church for several years and it is quite a pleasure to be with them again.

We were glad to have Prof. W. A. Harper, the energetic president of Elon College, with us at our last appointment at Timber Ridge. He did the speaking in the evening service much to the delight of the large congregation present.

Owing to the financial strain in paying for the Winchester church our people did not do as much as they would like to have done for the special fund.

In behalf of the church I want to thank every one who has contributed. We are badly in need of a few hundred dollars to meet outstanding bills. If you want to give a Christmas present in the way of a contribution to the Winchester Church, it will be used where it will do good and where it will be thankfully received. W. T. Walters.

Another Pastor Pounded.

On the evening of November 28th, we were agreeably and very pleasantly surprised by the members and friends of the Portsmouth congregation, when they came in and took charge of our home for a short while and left many useful things for the larder and made ready for Thanksgiving. They left cranberries, turkey, lard, ham, sugar, cocoa, pickles, oatmeal cakes, flour, fruits, etc., and most assuredly we had a Thankgiving dinner, which was greatly enjoyed. We feel very grateful for this kind remembrance on the part of the people we serve and wish to thank each one for their gifts. We trust that we shall be able to show our appreciation by faithful service. Heavens blessings rest upon each of the donors. J. W. Harrell And Wife.

SPECIAL FUND

To Clear the College of Debt—A Challenge to the Liberality and Loyalty of our Brotherhood.

Six years ago by order of the Southern Christian Convention, the Board of Trustees of the College borrowed $47,700 with which to build a new dormitory for girls and install a steam heat, electric light and water plant for the College. These improvements were absolutely necessary to the life and development of the College, and now it is equally necessary that the money to pay this debt be raised before the bonds by which it is secured fall due in 1916. It is a challenge to the heroic, to the loyal, and the liberal spirit of our Brotherhood to do this great thing. Our people are moved in this direction as never before and are determined, by the grace of God, to clear the institution they love of debt and so enlarge the sphere of its usefulness and power. In this endeavor President Harper in now in the field finishing the work in this regard begun by former President E. L. Moffitt, and is meeting with much encouragement. The Christian Sun will carry each week from now on a list of contributors to this fund. The plan as outlined at the Suffolk Convention is to get the friends to subscribe so much a year for five years, thus making the raising of the sum easy and a response within the reach of all. No worthier cause than this ever offered itself to a large-hearted and generous people, and the money given to this end will do good for ages and ages to come.

Dear Children and Friends:

With such a full corner my letter will be brief. Just a line to say we certainly are grateful for the gifts already sent (money or what money will buy) and those we feel sure are on the way for a good Christmas for our children. We always welcome Uncle Millard's contributions with pleasure, and he sends a line about Christmas this time. We wish for him a happy and most delightful season.

With lots of good wishes for one and all.

Cordially,

Uncle Jim.

Holland, Va., Dec. 8, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am so glad it is almost Christmas. Last week papa took Jack and Will, little sister and me to Salisbury, Maryland. It was Thanksgiving and we had a nice

I love to go to school. I am not a very big boy, for I was just seven years old last June, but I am in the fourth grade. You asked when I wrote last time if I wrote my letter myself. Yes, sir. I love to write letters.

My teacher is Miss Sadie Holland, and I think she is nice. Nathaniel Newman is my desk-mate, and I love him.

I send twenty cents; ten cents is for little sister, and ten for me.

Your little boy,

Harvey Leonard Vincent.

You are well advanced, Harvey, Guess you "work while you work."

Portsmouth, Va., Dec. 9, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I have been reading yours and the cousins' letters in The Sun and enjoyed them very much. I wish you a merry Christmas and a happy new year. Find enclosed five cents for December.

Your loving niece,

Blanche Saunders

Glad you enjoy the Corner, Blanche. Help us make it merry with nice letters.

Portsmouth, Va., Dec. 9, 1911...

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl six year old and am in the first grade. Hope you can read this.

Enclosed, five cents; to join the cousins. With love from your niece, Doris Saunders.

Certainly we can read it, Doris. You do well to write so nicely.

Stanley, Va., Dec. 8, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will write my letter and send my dime for December. We are having some cold weather, but I don't mind that. I have not missed a day in school yet. I truly hope you and all the little cousins are well. I will close wishing one and all a merry Christmas and a happy new year. From your little friend,

Willie Smith.

Thanks, Willie. If we do not mind Santa will have snow yet, through which to drive his reindeer.

Bennett Creek, Va., Dec. 5, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

Last spring my grandfather gave me a pig with the understanding that I was to send half the money to the Orphanage that I got for it. I sold the pig for $8.00, so send $4.00 to the Orphanage.

Wishing you all a happy Christmas. I am, Fondly yours,

Richard Odom.

Thanks, Richard, to you and Grandfather, too. Guess thanks are due "piggie" too for getting so fat.

Lanet, Ala., Nov. 25, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am an orphan myself, and when I was first married I raised six orphan children. I can sympathize with the orphans.

Wishing you all a merry Christmas and a happy new year, I remain as ever,

Yours in Christ,

Mrs. Susie P. Walker.

Thanks for kind sympathy, Sister Walker. You ought to know what it means to be left alone.

Lanet, Ala., Nov. 25, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am an orphan myself, aged 38 years, and my wife is also an orphan. And my sweet little girl, Lillie May, age, two yrs., and 9 months, is very near an orphan. I can sympathize with the orphan.

Yours in Christ,

W. F. Walker.

Thanks for kind wishes, brother. May God be with you.

Lanet, Ala., Nov. 25, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I will be three years old February 19, 1912. I am as happy as a pig. I wish you and the children a fine Xmas and a happy new year. Wish I could see you all. Write to me. Your friend, Lillie May Walker.

Guess Santa will have a good time at your house, little girl. Look out for him.

Hebron, Va., Dec. 4, 1911.

Dear Uncle Jim:

I am a little girl thirteen years old. I am in the seventh grade and my teacher is Miss M. L. Hope. I have two brothers and three sisters. I enclose ten cents. I will close with love to you and all the cousins. From your little niece, Lucille Fulgham.

Glad you join us, Lucile. Get brothers and sisters to join us also.

Dear Children:

As Christmas will be here quite soon, I presume you are already anticipating the pleasure you will have when it comes. You in the South have more mild weather than we have in winter, and as we have snow much of the time, and you do not, there must be, it would seem, a difference in the sports indulged in by the children there and here. So, thinking the Southern Cousins would like to know some of the sports their Northern Cousins have, on Christmas and other winter holidays, I will try to tell you in rhyme of—

Pleasures Anticipated.

Ho! Christmas is coming, hurrah, hurrah!

We'll hang up our stockings for "Santa" to fill;

We'll get out our sleds and a coasting go,
And won't that be jolly when sliding down hill?

Or, just for a change, we'll speed to the pond,

Now frozen so hard, 'twill bear up a crowd,

And as with playmates we skate round and round,

We'll make the air ring with our laughter loud.

Then out on a sleigh ride we surely must go,

Our sleigh drawn by horses with tinkling bells.

The wild wind may blow, but we'll drive through the snow—

Our steeds speeding fast o'er hills and through dells.

Perhaps, when passing through a huge bank of snow,

Our fun-loving driver may upset the sleigh,

Then into the "drift" we'll laughingly
go:

Nor can we complain—for its part of the play.

The dinner bell rings, and with quick steps we'll go—

To a banquet indeed of food rich and rare;

Fresh from the ride and with cheeks all aglow,

With zest we'll partake of the sumptuous fare.

But never in feasting and fun alone

Should we think of spending this hal-low'd day,

Made sacred by the birth of God's dear Son,

To whom we owe all that true love can pay.

By remem'ring the poor with a generous gift,

That will cheer sad hearts, for awhile at least.

We'll relieve present want and a burden lift,

That will bring in return sweeter joy than a feast.

Uncle Millard.

FRIENDSHIP.

We should never allow a friend to slip out of our lives if we can help it. True friendship is too rare and sacred to be lost, much less lightly thrown away. There may be slights given, even intentionally so, but they should be quickly set aside and forgotten. And as to misunderstandings, they arise from hidden influences of life, and from conflicting circumstances over which we have no control. Very frequently the slights we receive are imaginary, or else unintentional. In either case they give no ground for offense. But even if they are intentional, they should be pardoned with the first pang they inflict. Some lost friends through their inattention, failing to observe courtesies which cost so little and mean so much in all the relations of life. Sometimes the fad to find fault causes us to discard the truest friends; while others, through lack of patience or fickleness of soul, deliberately swap away old friends for new ones. The true philosophy of flawless friendship is to keep all your friends and add new ones to their number. At any rate, and in all cases, jealously guard your friendships, both old and new, and secretly cherish them through thick and thin. Both life and friendship are too precious to be wasted. Stick affectionately to your friends, especially to the One who sticketh closer than a brother!—Selected.

MARRIED.

Turner-Howell.

At the residence of Mr. C. W. Bailey, in Windsor, Va., Nov. 29, 1911. Mr. Richard Thomas Turner and Miss Mary Elizabeth Howell were united in marriage. May their lives be long, happy and useful. R. H. Peel.

Haslette-Milteer.

A quiet, but interesting, marriage was solemnized at the home of C. B. Milteer, near Holland, Va., on the evening of the 6th, inst., when his oldest daughter, Annie Louise, became the bride of Robert Everette Haslette, Holland, Va. Miss Ellen Young sang, "O Promise Me," and Miss Blanche Haslette rendered Mendelssohn's March. Misses Johnnie and Annie Howell, Mary Norfleet and Erma Milteer were the attending bridesmaids while the happy couple stood beneath an evergreen arch in the presence of a number of relatives and friends, and, plighting their troth to each other, were pronounced husband and wife by the writer. The groom is the son of James A. Haslette, and his late wife, who was Jennie Rawls. The bride is the daughter of Charles B. Milteer and his wife, who was Betty Everett. Both are members of Holy Neck Church, and the bride has for several years been the faithful organist. May happiness and usefulness crown their wedded life. N. G. Newman.

White-Riggan.

December 6th at 2:30 P. M., at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Mary Roxie Riggan became the bride of Brother J. T.

White, Treas. of Spring Hill Church. Miss Riggan is the last of three daughters of Mr. J. B. Riggan, of Surry County, and Brother White is a prosperous farmer of Sussex County. The groom was a widower with two children.

The ceremony was solemnized in the presence of a few friends and relatives of the parties. Miss Susie Cooper, of Carleys, Va., presided at the organ and played Mendelssohn's Wedding March while the bride and groom were being ushered in to the altar which was beneath an arch in the north corner. Messrs. Chas. Riggan, brother of the bride, and Roger White, nephew of the groom, acted as ushers. The happy pair plighted their troth while the solemn sweet strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus was played very softly, and Miss Ora Lee sang "Believe Me."

The party left for an extended tour of perhaps a month, after which they expect to be at home to their friends at Mr. White's home near here.

H. E. Rountree.

Waverly, Va., Dec. 8, 1911.

Yow-Brown.

On the 30th of November, 1911, Matthew Claud Yow and Effia Lena Brown were happily united together in the holy estate of matrimony, at the bride's home. It was a quiet home wedding. The groom, son of W. H. Yow, is quite a worthy young man. The bride is the accomplished daughter of H. F. Brown, of Coleridge, Randolph County, N. C. May much happiness, peace, and prosperity attend them.

H. A. Albright.

Pierce-Savage.

At the home of the officiating minister N. J. 207 Chestnut St., Suffolk, Va., Nov. 7, 1911, Mr. John Hurley Pierce and Miss Annie Mary Savage. The happy young couple have the best wishes of their many friends. They are both members of Bethlehem Christian Church and are good workers in the S. S.

H. H. B.

Parker-Ellis.

At No. 207 Chestnut St., Suffolk, Va., Nov. 12, 1911, Mr. John H. Parker of Cypress Chapel, Nansemond Co., Va., and Miss Mattie Mand Ellis of Bethlehem, Nansemond Co., Va. May their lives be long prosperous and happy.

H. H. B.

Brinkley-Rountree.

At the home of the bride's father, Mr. Frank Rountree, Cypress Chapel, Nansemond Co., Va., Nov. 22, 1911, Mr. Clifton Brinkley and Miss Mattie Rountree. They are members of Cypress Chapel Church and are active members of the Sunday school and also of the choir. The bride's brother is at Elon College preparing himself to preach the gospel. May their lives be prosperous and happy.

H. H. B.

Johnson-Brock.

At the home of the bride, Isle of Wight Co., Va., Dec. 21, 1911, Mr. Cephas Johnson and Mrs. Ella Brock.

Pope-Byrd.

At the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Percie Atkins, 1207 East Washington St., Suffolk, Va., Dec. 10 1911, Mr. Emmet Lemuel Pope, of Isle of Wight Co., Va., and Miss Ethel D. Byrd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Byrd of Nansemond Co., Va. The Lord keep and bless them abundantly.

H. H. B.

Ware-Bevill.

A quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Budd, near Benaja, N. C., on Dec. 6, 1911, at 11 A. M., when Dr. Sterling A. Ware and Mrs. Fannie Bevill were united in marriage by the writer. Only a few close friends were present to witness the ceremony. The groom and bride are both devoted Christians, and have many strong friends in this community, who wish for them much happiness and a long life.

DIED.

Britt.

Mrs. Anguish Britt departed this life at her home near Eagle Springs, N. C., Dec. 2, 1911, age, 57 years. She had been a member of Dover Baptist church thirty years. She leaves a husband, a son and a daughter to mourn their loss. The remains were brought to Big Oak Cemetery, funeral service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. F. Morgan. She was a woman of exemplary Christian character, loved and respected by the entire community. May the heavenly Father keep them.

D. E. Cole.

Miller.

On the morning of the 29th of November little Wade Miller, seventeen months' old infant, son of Enoch I. Miller, of Asheboro, departed this life to join a dear mother who had preceded him about three months. The burial took place at Shiloh on the 30th. The little boy was laid by his mother to await the judgment day. Jesus says, "Suffer little children to come unto me." Burial services conducted by the writer.

Jenkins.

At the Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., Nov. 7, 1911, Mrs. Laura Jenkins, the beloved wife of Mr. K. E. Jenkins, of Isle of Wight Co., Va., and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Barrett, of Windsor, Va., aged 33 years, 8 months and 9 days. She made a profession of religion when quite young and united with Antioch church and was true and faithful to the end. She was greatly esteemed and beloved by her many friends for her many amiable traits of character. She will be greatly missed in her community and church, but no where so much as in her home. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted father, mother, two brothers, two sisters, husband, two children, one son, one daughter, and many friends. Her funeral service was conducted by her pastor at Antioch and her remains were laid to rest in the old church cemetery. The Lord bless and comfort the dear bereaved ones with the blessed hope of meeting again beyond the river.

H. H. B.

Cones.

Suffolk, Va., Nov. 9, 1911, Mrs. Sarah V. Cones, wife of Mr. Junius A. Cones, aged 65 years, 7 months and 18 days. She was a good Christian woman, a member of Suffolk Church. She made a profession of religion when quite young and united with Antioch Church and after they moved to near Bethlehem they united with that church and some few years ago she with her husband moved to Suffolk and they united with the Christian Church in Suffolk and was true and faithful to the end. She leaves a devoted husband, one brother, Mr. Lemuel Babb, one sister, Mrs. Mary J. Spivy. Her funeral service was conducted by the writer assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley and Rev. R. A. McFarlan of the Baptist Church, and her remains were laid to rest in Cedar Hill Cemetery to await the coming of her Lord.

H. H. B.

Babb.

Near Nurney, Va., Nov. 16, 1911, Mr. Geo. W. Babb, aged 77 years, 2 months and 7 days. He was an old Confederate soldier, went through the four years of the Civil War, brave and true to the end. He believed in the golden rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you." He had a great many friends and will be greatly missed. He leaves a devoted wife, seven children, 23 grand children, one brother, Mr. Robert Babb, of Holland, Va. His funeral service was conducted by the writer at his home and his remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground. The Lord bless and comfort the dear bereaved family.

H. H. B.

Hozier.

At her home, Berkely Ave. and Stafford St., Norfolk, Va., Dec. 3, 1911, Mrs. Martha Ann Elizabeth Hozier in the 73rd year of her age. She was well known, highly esteemed and greatly beloved. She made a profession of religion when very young and united with Cypress Chapel Church. She was a daughter of James Benjamin and Nancy Harrell of Cypress Chapel, Nansmond Co., Va. Some forty or fifty years ago she moved to Berkley and was married to Mr. William Wilson Hozier. Her husband died Jan. 8, 1878. They were blessed with two sons, David Thomas, who accidentally shot himself and died in the year 1877. William Benjamin died Oct. 17, 1884. She was a very active member of the First Christian Church, Norfolk, Va., for more than 43 years. She was identified with all the societies of the church and was liberal to all the calls from less fortunate of the community. She will be greatly missed in the church and city, but their loss has been her eternal gain. She leaves to mourn their loss one step-daughter, Mrs. E. G. Belote of Jacksonville, Fla., two nephews, J. T. and J. A. Harrell, of Nansmond Co., Va., and many distant relatives and friends. Her funeral service was conducted by the writer at the First Christian Church of Norfolk, Va., assisted by E. W. Cowling, rector of St. Thomas P. E. Church, and her remains were laid to rest in Magnolia Cemetery to await the coming of her Lord. H. H. B.

Parsons.

Andrew Dallas Parsons, residing at Kendridge, Va., died December 1, 1911, age, 68 years. On the following day, Saturday the second, he was buried in the old Boothe Cemetery in Surry County to await the resurrection morn.

He formerly lived in this community and was the son of a great slave-owner, of pre Civil War times, near Spring Hill Church. The old home is still imposing and beautiful and is in a most excellent state of preservation.

In early life he united with the Spring Hill Church and later was a deacon of the church. Six years ago he moved to Dendron and transferred his membership to the church where it remained till his death. At the time of his death he lived at Kendridge, Va., where he was employed with the Virginian Railway.

He leaves ten children: Mrs. G. B. Cox, Wakefield; Mrs. Chas. Stallings, Dendron; Mrs. J. D. Emory, Dendron; Mrs. Grace Laffoon, Roanoke; Cleveland Parsons, Lynchburg; Garland, of Waverly; and Dennis, of Elon College, who is studying for the ministry. The other three, Raymond, Jennie and Lizzie, lived with him at Kendridge.

May God's providence accompany the children and all the bereaved ones and comfort their sad hearts.

H. E. Rountree.

Horne.

At her home, Zuni, Isle of Wight Co., Va., Dec. 7, 1911, Mrs. Josephine Horne, beloved wife of Mr. John Robert Horne, aged about 57 years. She was a true and faithful member of Tucker Swamp Baptist Church. Her funeral service was conducted by the writer at her home and her remains were laid to rest in the old family burying ground. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted husband, four children, two sons and two daughters, Robert A. and William H. Horne of Zuni, Va., and many friends. May the blessed hope of meeting again in the beautiful home beyond the clouds comfort the dear bereaved ones. H. H. B.

Cox.

Herman Cox, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Cox, was born Sept. 21, 1911, and died Dec. 7, 1911. This little child has gone to be with Jesus. "For of such is the kingdom of God." It was sad indeed to the parents to part with their only child, taken so unexpectedly from them; but Christianity sweetens the bitterest cup and makes believing parents smile through tears when heaven holds out the blessed hope of meeting loved ones again.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, and the body was laid to rest in Pleasant Ridge Cemetery.

T. E. White.

Graves.

Mrs. Mary E. Graves, relict of the late Dr. Jesse D. Graves, was born Nov. 26, 1839, and died, almost suddenly, Dec. 7, 1911. She was a daughter of George and Maria Foust of Alamance County. Of this family three are still living: Thos. C. Foust, Graham, Mrs. John Whitsett, Greensboro, and Miss Maria Foust, Greensboro.

She was married March 26, 1854, to Dr. Jesse D. Graves, and they lived happily together for forty years, till death separated them. To this union were born seven sons, all of whom are living except Robt. Geo. H. lives in St. Louis, John C. and Jesse A. in Kaufman, Tex., Chas. H., in Carthage, N. C., Ralph L. in Portland, Ore., Thos. S., at Kemp's Mills, N. C.

She lived with her son, Thos. S. Graves, who, with his wife, made her last days happy. She was partially deaf, but was always present at Shiloh Christian Church when services were held, and was a reverent and devout worshipper. She read the best literature, enjoyed the visits of her many friends, and found pleasure in corresponding with her children.

She professed faith in Christ at an early age and was a member of Cala Presbyterian Church. Her faith in God was strong, and she showed her faith by living a noble life and filling it full of good deeds. If she had an enemy, he was ashamed to let it be known. The community, with her children, rises up and calls her blessed.

The funeral services were conducted in the Concord M. E. Church by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. L. Melton. The choir sang sweetly, "Asleep in Jesus" and "Nearer, my God, to Thee." The text used was Rev. 14:13. From the church we went to Concord Cemetery and laid her remains by the side of those of her husband. The number of friends and relatives attending the funeral was large, and the floral offerings covered her grave like beautiful snow. T. E. White.
