- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

A happy New Year to all CHRISTIAN SUN readers!

To

REV. J. W. WELLONS, D. D.,
Man, Minister, Veteran of the Cross.
This issue of The Christian Sun is DEDICATED

REV. J. W. WELLONS—AN APPRECIATION

The last part of the above heading is so familiar to an editor. "An appreciation!" What does it mean? This is a question that we have asked ourselves as we have read "an appreciation" after the name of some dead friend and loved one. Why not an appreciation for a friend who is living? If we really appreciate our friends, let us appreciate them while they live—and let them know that we appreciate them.

Such is our thought in connection with "Unele" Wellons. A few weeks ago he sat in our presence and talked freely about going "home;" about his willingness and readiness to go. A few feet from us lay the cut shown on the front page of this issue, and as we turned to it, the impulse was to use it on this occasion and to dedicate this issue to our beloved friend, since the date of this issue comes on the birthday of this veteran of the Cross. The cut that we are presenting is Brother Wellons' favorite and was given us more than a year ago to be used after he had gone to his "long home." So often he has talked over his going freely with us, and that is why we make mention of it here.

This week's CHRISTIAN SUN is a surprise to Dr. Wellons. His first knowledge of these tributes to him will be on Wednesday morning, January 1 (his ninety-third birthday) when a copy of THE SUN will be placed on his breakfast plate. Greetings to you, our good brother, as you read this issue! The brotherhood greets you, and as your junior by sixty-three years, your friend by friendship, your servant by office, your comrade by calling, we extend to you the greetings of all readers of THE SUN!

"THE CHURCH PAPER AND THE CHURCH PEOPLE"

During 1918 we have been running on page 16 of THE SUN notes taken from our mail and placed under the above heading. Be it understood, kind friends, that the printing of these extracts has not been for any public praise and appreciation of what THE CHRISTIAN SUN is now—far from it. And we ought to say here that again and again we have instructed our book-keeper who prepares these items for us, to cut out all that was particular personal concerning our work.

There is a reason that we print these. Here it is: The most of these people whom we quote never write to the Church paper. They may not have the gift to write as others do. Yet they are a part of the publication, they have stood by it and are today warm friends of THE SUN. They desire to give testimony and they are entitled to be heard. They are speaking of their paper, of their Church, and from their hearts. And again, it brings the brotherhood together, names are recalled, fellowship received and often memories pleasant come back.

These expressions from the friends will be continued during 1919. However, they are to change their position, and instead of being grouped, will go to aid the printer in making his type long enough for a column as seen in this issue. Continue these briefs, dear readers, for they are welcome.

We also welcome suggestions from the brotherhood and items of interest such as can be used as brief notes. All together to make THE SUN the best yet during the New Year!

DEPARTMENTS IN THE SUN DISCONTINUED

Readers will notice that the usual departments in THE CHRISTIAN SUN have been discontinued. The following letter sent to all department editors will explain itself, and in the meantime give the Church our plan and program for the New Year:

Dear Friends:—

I have tried out the departments in THE CHRISTIAN SUN for a year, and the result is not so attractive and popular with the readers as we had hoped for the following reasons:

First, I find it difficult to get material for the departments of sixteen pages. After the vided for there is little room for other contributions—and so often I have articles that I cannot classify in any of the departments. (I have on hand now applications for three more departments).

Second. So often it occurs that the matter for a certain department is received too late. In this case I must, without notice, provide material for that department, leave out the department or shift it to some other place in the form and allow more time for the copy to come in.

Third. The extra expense of arranging the matter. The headings cannot be shifted to a different page each week without the expense of time and the use of printers' material. This is why that I have endeavored to keep the departments to one page, for all matter over one page will either push out some other material or will have to be carried to some other page further on in the paper. The latter method prevents the last pages from being made up until the first ones are completed.

Fourth. The Sun has no managing editor to always be on hand to dictate the arrangement of matter and cut the type in case of necessity. This has imposed an extra burden upon the Editor by compelling him to be present when the forms are made up.

Fifth. No one can tell how much space an article will take until it is set in type. The printer cannot stop when enough type has been set for a page, for in so doing he may leave out the things that are essential. So often it occurs that the matter intended for a department fills more than a page and must be cut after type is set. The Sun is charged with the duty of setting the type that it cannot use as well as with the duty of not using it. If I had the financial backing, this of course, would not stand in the way.

Substituting for the departments in the 1919 CHRISTIAN SUN will be used a series of attractive hand-set headings, once set to stay set. They will be as follows: Editorial, Notes and Personals, Christian Education, Missionary, the Christian Orphanage, the Forward Movement, Field News, Miscellaneous, etc.

All matter received for publication will be edited and marked for one of these headings and arranged in the paper to suit the convenience of the type. Of course the same editorial privileges will be exercised as to eliminating when necessary. All contributors of weekly topics are asked not to use more than a page—less if possible. I would also like to suggest that you, as far as possible, prevail upon others to contribute articles bearing on the topic so near to your heart. When one man discusses one thing all the time, using the space allowed and allotted to that subject it gives little inducement for others to write along that same line. It also leaves the impression upon the average reader that few persons are interested in that subject because of their expressions toward it.

The printers begin on THE SUN Thursday morning and have it all ready by Saturday noon except two pages. During the past year I have, so often, been forced to rush "copy" from my mail to the type-setter with little time to read it. I am, therefore, asking that all weekly contributors get their material to me not later than Wednesday noon. There will be no waiting for regular matter or shifting to make room for it if received late unless the nature of the contribution so demands it. The plant in which THE SUN is printed is working under such pressure, the demands being so great upon its type setting equipment that this schedule is put up to me by rigid necessity and the only escape that I have is to pass it along. I have certain days allotted to my work and must conform to these hours.

I shall seek during 1919 to eliminate as far as possible all reprint matter from the publication. I even hope to make the "fillers" original, for I believe that our Church is not so much concerned about the quotations from Ruskin, Drummond and other writers of the "Old Age"—as it is about the things that confront us today. I, therefore, trust that all matter will beat with new life and be filled with the new spirit. We are in the age of reconstruction and our part, our whole part, must be done.

I have thought it best to write you in detail concerning my plans, feeling that you would be glad to know them so that you could co-operate with them—and I know that you will.

"Brevity is the soul of wit" and "variety is the spice of life" and I am a firm believer in both. May these adages be our mottoes for the coming year.

Thanking you for your splendid co-operation and with anticipations of its continuation, I am

Yours very sincerely,

ANOTHER BIRTHDAY—SEVENTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

This issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN comes out on the paper's seventy-fifth birthday. January 1, 1844 Rev. Daniel W. Kerr presented to the Christians in the South a sixteen page monthly—THE CHRISTIAN SUN. With the exception of the time of the Civil War, THE SUN has been shining for these years. It has paved the way for religious teachings in the Southern Church, brightened many corners, brought joy and happiness to thousands and united a people to and for the undertaking of a large task for the Kingdom's good. May she shine all the years to be!

If we have the record correct, the following constitute the editors of THE SUN during the last 75 years:

- Rev. D. W. Kerr—1844-1850.
- Rev. H. B. Hayes—1850-1855.
- Rev. W. B. Wellons—1855-1862.
- (No paper during the Civil War, 1862-1865).
- Rev. W. B. Wellons—1865-1875.
- Rev. J. T. Whitley—1875-1877.
- Rev. W. T. Walker—1877-1879.
- Rev. D. T. Dunbar—1879-1881.
- Rev. J. P. Barrett—1881-1894.
- Rev. W. G. Clements—1894-1895.
- Dr. E. L. Moffitt—1895-1898.
- Dr. J. O. Atkinson—1898-1916.
- C. B. Riddle—1916—

Are you so satisfied with your pastor's salary that you would be willing to post the amount over the Church door?

The Church would be better off if a few bon-fires were made of the old sermons.

GREETINGS

REV. J. W. WELLONS AS A MINISTER

James Willis Wellons, D. D., is ninety-three today.

He was born in Sussex county, Virginia, January 1, 1826. He was a welcome New Year's gift to a religious home. He was born again in his eleventh year, and united with Barrett's Christian church. He soon exercised his gifts in public prayer.

He had a struggle within on his call to the ministry. Before he knew it he was giving exhortations in religious meetings. Then came the impression that he ought to preach. This was the only thing he kept from his mother. He did not tell her his feelings lest she and others might persuade him to preach; but the impression remained and he waited for the Lord to direct his decision. In this he was wise. When he did unbosom himself to his mother, she wrote his brother, William B., who was already a preacher. A letter from his brother advising preparation caused him to abandon the study of medicine, to which he was inclined, stating that the family had believed for three years that God had called him to the ministry. The matter was now settled. He was to be a preacher of the Gospel.

He entered the Graham school in January 1853, at the age of 27. He remained in that school for two years when his health failed. He united with the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference in 1854. He entered upon active work that year and preached at Shallow Well, Zion, Moore Union, Pleasant Grove, Park's Cross Roads, Pleasant Ridge, Shiloh Union, Shady Grove, Brown's Chapel, Acorn Ridge, Providence, Graham Court House, and two school houses. Some of these churches had pastors and some of them had none. His labors were greatly blessed, hundreds were converted, and hundreds united with the churches. He began his work with a promise of eighty dollars, but he received two hundred and fifty dollars. Subsequent years increased his usefulness and his remuneration, receiving each year more than was promised. I cannot pursue this part of his history, as I have a few words on his chief value as a minister.

First, his call was genuine and God makes no mistakes. There was no persuasion, no gilded fields held before his mind, no easy steps, and no large pay. His call is a good example for the young.

Second, he did not mix the ministry with other associations. He made the full surrender and trusted God for results. Absolute confidence in God, the consecration of the whole life to the one thing of preaching the gospel is an essential qualification for success. His pay was small, his position was humble, but his work was a success.

Third, he was of the evangelistic type and the Spirit gave power to his message. Old and young came under conviction when he preached. His sermons were simple, with apt illustration; his appeals were tender and winning; his instruction to penitents seemed to illumine the soul. No man in the Southern Church has won so many souls to Christ or added so many members to the church. More than six thousand souls were converted under his ministry. "Ye shall know them by their fruits."

Fourth, the gifts that made him an evangelist made him a pastor beloved. Clean in habits, friendly in his disposition, sympathetic in his nature, social in his intercourse, he found his way, easily, into the confidence, affection, and homes of the people. Doors swung open to his magic touch, and hearts opened to the gospel from his lips and his life. With poor health in his younger years, God has crowned a clean life with ninety-three years of usefulness that ought to inspire young ministers by an example guided by a divine hand.

W. W. STALEY.

GROWN OLD GRACEFULLY

Some times length of years and breadth of experience make one narrow of vision, and contracted in judgment. This is the reason why many older people think things are all wrong and going to the bad, if not done just as they were taught, or as they would have done them. Very many good old people can have little patience with the visibility, initiative and aspirations of younger people. Growing old gracefully is the art of fitting in with the thought, the energy and activity of the time in which one grows old.

Our dear brother, Rev. J. W. Wellons, is an exponent of this art. It may be said of him, and truly, that he has grown old gracefully. That is, he has carried grace, grit, gumption and graciousness into old age. He has shown us how to be old and yet to be a man of the times, alert, willing, eager, zealous for every good and great theory, thought and aims, whether it be of his own creation or not. He is not a burden; he is a blessing and a benediction. He is not a terror to the young; he is a joy to growth, and a source of light and life to any company of which he is a part.

What a wonderful life he has lived, and is yet living! Devotion to church, to duty and to God has made him great. Thousands love him not more for what he has done than for what he is. The greatest sermon he has ever preached, and the greatest message he has ever delivered, is the manner of his well-ordered and devoted life. He is that, and he lives that, which the rest of us preach and talk about, and wish ourselves and others to be. No one who knows him doubts in the least that he has truly fought the good fight and that henceforth there is laid up for him a "crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give at that day; and not to him only but to all who, like him, love His appearing."

J. O. ATKINSON.

REV. JAMES W. WELLONS, D. D.

Rev. James W. Wellons, D. D., was born in Sussex County, Virginia, January 1, 1826, and is now a vigorous thinker at the advanced age of ninety-three. The universal esteem in which he is held is abundantly attested by the salutation applied to him by all, "Uncle Wellons," not out of respect to his years, but in appreciation of his pious life and vital concern to everyone.

Dr. Wellons was licensed in 1854 and ordained to the Gospel ministry by the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference in 1856, and during sixty-four years that have since elapsed he has missed only two sessions of his Conference—one due to his being behind the Federal lines during the Civil War, the other due to serious illness—a record that we doubt can be matched. He has never missed a session of the Southern Christian Convention since 1854, and but one session of the American Christian Convention, and then on account of sickness. His strict attendance on his Conference sessions and his Church Conventions, has not been perfunctory, but arose out of the vital response of a devoted heart to duty, and no man has exercised a more powerful influence nor proven a worthier counselor than he. The beauty of his life is now seen in the sweet and gracious spirit in which he rejoices to see younger men taking the place of leadership so long conceded to him—sweet and gracious beyond the portrayal of language, because so sublimely sincere and absolutely unaffected.

Dr. Wellons had preached as a local preacher by the authority of Barrett's church, Southampton County, Virginia, for two years before he came to North Carolina and accepted license by his present Conference, but up to his twenty-sixth year was an interested layman, being a deacon, and also secretary and treasurer of the church. It was at the earnest solicitation of his fellow-laymen that he first gave serious thought to the ministry. They recognized his rare gift for that important calling, and sixty-six years of devoted service has given abundant proof of his divine appointment to this work.

When Elon College was being agitated and initiated, he was an uncompromising advocate of the idea. He was a member of the Provisional Board that located the college where it is, and offered the first prayer, for its growth and progress, on the present campus. From that day to this, he has been a member of the Board of Trustees and of the Executive Board and has never missed a session of either. He is now one of its wisest and most trusted members.

Uncle Wellons has little of this world's goods, but he has left what he has to the permanent funds of the college that is in a very real sense the wife of his heart. He has been too busy in the King's business to establish a home and take a wife. Elon is his bride, and he is as fond of her as a gallant knight ever was or could be of his fair lady.

It is an honor to know an love this noble man.

W. A. HARPER.

HE IS MY FRIEND

It has been my good fortune to know Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D., all of my life. He was one of the first preachers I ever knew, and he has influenced my life in many ways. I never caught him indulging in melancholy, sitting around grumbling, but he went about cheerful and happy, and made me feel how blessed it is to be a Christian. His life has been an open book, and many young preachers have been inspired to high and holy things by his exemplary life.

On this, his ninety-third birthday, thousands will call him blessed because of the fact that he helped them to get rid of the shackles of sin. It was said that William Wilberforce would go to God with the shackles of eight hundred thousand West India slaves in his hands, and we believe that our Brother has filled his hands with many shackles he has removed from lives bound in the shackles of sin. He is leading many to heaven because he has heaven's sunlight on his face. He is my friend.

C. H. ROWLAND.

NEW YEAR GREETINGS FOR REV. J. W. WELLONS

May Brother Wellons live many more years to work for his Lord. Thousands have been converted to Christ through his ministry. I have been with him in many good meetings, one being in Norfolk, Virginia, after which he reorganized the first Christian church. He is truly a great and good man. May the richest blessings of Heaven continue with Brother Wellons.

H. H. BUTLER.

A TRIBUTE TO "UNCLE WELLONS"

A life full of years, lived maintaining high ideals, serving faithfully in the highest calling, the gospel ministry, contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. I pen these lines in appreciation of his long life of service in the Church that he loves; because he has been preserved to this good age. May his last days be bright and full of joy in view of the welcome by the Master to the joys on high.

RE-EMPLOYMENT OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

The United States Government, through its Labor Department, is initiating a plan by which the returning soldiers and sailors shall find opportunity for employment immediately upon their return home. Organizations are being set up in every community throughout the land under the auspices of the Government. These organizations will be Employment Bureaus for the discharged troops.

The churches can serve this excellent cause by appointing committees to co-operate with these bureaus in behalf of their respective groups of soldiers and sailors as they return.

One hundred and thirty-one judges in the United States are to get a fifteen hundred dollar raise each in salary.

The Reformed Church has launched a "Forward Movement." So has the Friends' Church.

The measure of a man is his doings and not his capacity to do.

God can use men that men cannot use—and men are using men that God wants to use.

Give us the man who can laugh—who can really laugh. There are enough of clouds without cloudy faces.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

GREENSBORO

I arrived in this city to take charge of the work November 15, 1918. On my arrival I found things in a rather peculiar shape. The city was closed against all services for the public, and of course all church doors were closed. The cause being a second epidemic of influenza. I had nothing to do but wait for the opening which within itself was a big job. I had often wondered how a man would feel if he went on a new field and the folks would not let him preach; now I know. Yet with closed doors the church furnished plenty of work to do, since it had been hard hit by the first and second epidemic. Our doors remained closed until Sunday, December 8, at which time we held our first service which was well attended, considering the great amount of sickness among the members of the church.

In spite of the scare and many other difficulties, I have held two Sunday services, morning and evening. These services have been well attended and the congregations are on the increase each Sunday. All church work of the city has been completely demoralized. The loss by death has been great. The city has lost some of its most prominent business men. The loss in our own particular field has been very great.

There are some advantages and disadvantages here. First of all, the work is badly disorganized. Not having a regular pastor since July, and the two epidemics have completely disorganized the working forces of the church. I am conscious of the fact that the work, (like all other city work) will be difficult for a while. Yet there is nothing too difficult for our Christ who is able to do more for us than we are able to think, or ask. Then in the death toll we have lost some of the leaders in the work, and it takes time to fill these vacancies in the church, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor Society.

In the second place, there are several advantages. The church is located near the center of possibly one of the cleanest cities of the South. The people with whom you come in contact are, generally speaking, clean, clever, kind, and very generous in many ways. I have been from home to home since I came, and at no time have I failed to receive the most courteous replies when asking for information.

Then the church folks, though compelled to remain most of the time at home, have given me a very hearty welcome. I find among our people a longing to return to the church services again. Even some who did not go to church much are anxious to get in. There is a spirit of anxiousness that we are very glad to see. It inspires me to forget my trials, difficulties, and press on into the work. I am conscious of the fact that this church had been under the leadership of some of the very best men of our church. Of all these men, the church speaks very highly.

Brother minister, do you have a member of your church in this city who has not united with the church here? If so, won't you please send his or her name and address to me? Better still, send their church letters along, and write them that you have done so. It is a shame that so many of our church folks move to the city, and are completely lost from the church. Give me their names and they will have a hard time if they do not line up with our work.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

A CHURCH SECRETARY WITH A RECORD

In the month of January, 1889, or just twenty-nine years ago, Brother M. W. Hollowell of Deep Creek, Va., was elected secretary of Berea Christian church of Norfolk county, Va., of which church the writer now has the pleasure of being pastor. During the twenty-nine years that Brother Hollowell has served as secretary of his church, one hundred and forty-four business sessions have been held. Only seventeen times in twenty-nine years has he been absent from the business meetings of the church. In other words, he has attended one hundred and twenty-seven times out of the one hundred and forty-four meetings that have occurred. The seventeen absences that he has recorded against himself represent seventeen impossibilities; for each time he has not been present there was an unavoidable cause.

Thus it is seen that our brother is faithful in that which has been committed to him. But he is more than faithful; he is efficient. Just as his record of attendance speaks of his faithfulness to duty, so does the work he has done give evidence of his efficiency. Through faithfulness he has become efficient. As a result, he now has recorded in one large volume an accurate account of all the meetings that have been held during the time he has served as secretary. In fact he has in this one volume the records of the church since its organization in 1871. Forty-seven years since the church was organized with an account of every business session neatly and accurately kept, and now recorded, these facts speak in no uncertain way as to the type of church secretary who makes such a thing possible.

Brother Hollowell deserves very high commendation for his faithfulness and efficiency, but the facts here given and the statements here made are not intended merely as a compliment to our good friend, but are passed on in the hope of calling attention to the need in many of our churches of arousing those who are in the various offices to do their work and do it well. Every office in the church from sexton to pastor is important enough to demand not good service, but the very best, highest service which it is possible to render. It will help our church forward in a wonderful way when the officers in our local churches learn to do their work definitely, accurately, and without needless delay.

FIRST CHURCH, NORFOLK

This has been a splendid year for this church. Interest has been very good in all departments of our church life, and the outlook for the coming year is hopeful.

During the past year we have paid off a large part of the debt on our Sunday school room, overaid our apportionments to Conference, given more than $375.00 to the mission fund in the interest of which Dr. J. O. Atkinson has been working, even though we have not had a visit from him. We have given the Christian Orphanage aside from our regular monthly offering of the Sunday school, $300.00, or probably a little more. In addition to these we have received into our church 35 new members, and splendid work has been done along spiritual lines in all the auxiliaries of the church.

We begin the New Year with a prayer and an earnest desire that we may be enabled to do more for our Master than we have ever done before, and we desire the prayers of the brotherhood in our behalf.

SOCIAL SERVICE AT ATLANTIC CITY

The Commission on the Church and Social Service of the Federal Council met in connection with the Executive Committee, December 10 and 11. The Executive Secretary, Dr. Worth M. Tippy, reported the work of the year, which was largely done in co-operation with other organizations, such as the Red Cross, the Joint Committee on Social Hygiene, the Joint Committee on War Production Communities, and others. This feature of co-operation is increasingly characteristic of Federal Council methods, thus avoiding duplication of effort, and adding greatly to the efficiency of all the agencies.

A Committee on Rural Fields has been formed, with Rev. E. DeS. Brunner as Secretary. He has also become the Executive Secretary of the Commission on the Church and Country life, thus bringing that Commission into active relations with the Social Service Commission. The staff of the Commission has also been increased by adding a "Research Secretary" who has done much valuable work.

The plans of the Commission for the coming year include three lines of educational effort. There will be an endeavor to promote the application of the principles of Christianity to society, with emphasis upon the problems of industrial democracy and social reconstruction. Churches will be given assistance in social organization, with especial reference to community service. And an attempt will be made to relate the churches more closely to the social activities of the national, state and municipal government. As far as possible use will be made of the existing denominational agencies for this educational work.

The Commission urged full freedom of discussion and service in the churches. Recognizing the necessity in war time of the limitation of certain rights of speech and action, it was urged that with the coming of peace these must be fully restored, and that especially in the churches there should be no restriction upon the advocacy of the claims of social and economic justice.

The Church Forum, or popular meetings under the auspices of the churches for the free discussion of current social and religious questions was recommended, both for community purposes, and as a valuable variation of the Sunday night service. The Commission hopes to co-operate with the Christian Educational Association and other agencies in working out proper Forum programs, and in making available information concerning Forum methods.

The immense amount of social effort made necessary by war conditions has given the churches a new impulse toward this form of service. As the special agencies are discontinued, their tasks will be taken up by the regular organizations of the churches. The various social groups will find their field greatly enlarged, and they should be prepared to meet their new responsibility.

A WAR LESSON

By Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D.

Now that we can "rest arms" for a time, war lessons are myriad. These should never be forgotten. They are of a kind not growing out of philosophies but clinically produced by ample demonstration. Industrial, political, social and religious life may share alike in their benefits.

None is more prominent than the necessity in all matters of absolute dependence upon God. It is doubtful if the world has ever been more general in the practice of prayer or more intense in its spirit. Men not previously noted for a devotional spirit have freely confessed that apart from God no victory was possible, or even if possible, it would be undesirable. Days, seasons, and objects were designated sacred to prayer. The daily stopping of all activities at our national capital for a brief petition at the whistle of the prayer siren expressed the prevalent national spirit.

Another example of this spirit is found in a prayer movement known as The National Women's Prayer Battalion. Its founder and executive secretary, the Rev. Eva Ryerson Ludgate, was so impressed during a visit to England by the attitude of English women toward prayer, that when this country entered the war she felt she could do no greater things for her country than to "strengthen the third line of defense," by reminding the women that God would comfort their need.

The call of this organization for prayer in behalf of the new world order is as follows:

1. That the kingdom of God may be established among the nations.
2. That the divine spirit may guide the deliberations of the peace conference.
3. That the nations may enact laws that will afford no less protection to our youth in times of peace than in times of war.
4. That the Church, in this day of opportunity, may more perfectly represent the spirit of our Lord Jesus Christ, in its life and service.
5. That the ministers may have inspiration and courage for the great tasks which lie before them.
6. That the young men and women of the world may enlist for Christ's service with the same eager devotion that led them to answer the call for the preservation of the world's liberty. Its covenant reads:

I covenant with God and the members of the International Prayer Battalion to pray for the peoples of the world, that they may be worthy of the civtory for Democracy which has been achieved at so great cost.

I will pray for the soldiers and sailors who are guarding the peace for which they and their immortal comrades fought, and for all those engaged in the service of reconstruction.

Not only will I pray for the world, but I will do all in my power by my daily life and example to bring in a newer and brighter day.

From many sources have come calls for prayer and testimonies of benefits derived from the movement. Miss Ludgate says:

"As I write, I have before me letters from women of three different nationalities; the first is from a woman of noble birth who lives in Holland. She writes: 'Do pray for us; situated as we are, we see daily such terrible suffering; indeed we could not live it if we did not believe we were in the hands of God.'

"The second letter is from an English woman who has worked for years in the Young Women's Christian Association in London: 'We must pray. Prayer has sustained us through the dark years of this war. And whatever may be before us in the reconstruction period, we will find strength and wisdom as we need it, if we only pray.'

"The last letter is from a woman who is neither educated nor of noble birth; her story is very briefly told. She is a young wife and mother whose husband has been overseas for a year. She is working very hard to make ends meet. She says: 'never thought I would pray in my kitchen, but I do. Sometimes when my heart is so heavy I cannot bear it another moment, I kneel down and just talk to the Heavenly Father, and soon I receive the strength I need to go on.' That is what the world needs more than any other one thing: 'Strength to go on.' We cannot generate this power within ourselves—it must be God-given.

"I brought home from England one year a motto which reads, 'Prayer Changes Things.' The Church needs to reaffirm this. The war has brought the world to believe there is power in prayer, and if we at this time lay the emphasis on prayer, we can make religion not a thing apart but the very heart and soul of the great world reconstruction movement.'"

While the first Battalion was organized for women only and was to last for the duration of the war, the name has been changed and the movement is developing a world construction program. It is now called the International Prayer Battalion and will in the future work in a spirit of helpful co-operation with the churches. Albany, N. Y.

MEETING OF COMMISSIONERS OF CONFERENCE UNION

The commissioners representing the three Christian conferences in North Carolina met here today to discuss the preliminary basis of the union of the three conferences into one, to be known as the North Carolina Christian Conference.

The commissioners from the North Carolina-Virginia Christian Conference were Revs. P. H. Fleming, J. O. Atkinson and W. A. Harper; from the Eastern North Carolina Conference, Hon. K. B. Johnson, Dr. W. C.

Rev. J. W. Wellons, Dr. N. G. Newman, and J. Dolph Long, Esq., attorney, sat with the commissioners throughout their deliberations. The move for the union of the three conferences began on November 22, 1917, in the North Carolina-Virginia Christian Conference in its session at Haw River, N. C., where a resolution was passed inviting the other two conferences to join with it, and created its three commissioners to present the matter to the other two conferences and secure the approval of the Southern Christian Conference for the merger.

The Southern Christian Conference gave its consent to the measure on May 3, of the recent year. On November 27, the Western North Carolina Conference voted to unite, and on December 4, the Eastern North Carolina Conference took similar action, and the meeting held here today composed of the nine commissioners from the three conferences was the first united step in the progress of a united conference for the State.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, Rev. W. C. Wicker, and Rev. L. I. Cox, with Attorney Long, were appointed to draft the charter for final approval at a later meeting, and the nine commissioners were constituted incorporators for the new conference.

The officers for the purpose of incorporation are President, Rev. T. E. White, Sanford, N. C.; Vice-President; Rev. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, N. C.; Secretary, President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.; Treasurer, Hon. K. B. Johnson, Cardenas, N. C.; Executive Secretary, Rev. L. I. Cox, Elon College, N. C.

As soon as the charter has been granted by the Secretary of State the temporary officers will call the incorporators together and a permanent organization will be affected. It is hoped this can be done quite speedily.

One of the problems facing the conference was as to the standing committees and boards of the conferences, and it was decided to constitute the boards for the first session of the new conference out of all the members of the corresponding boards in the three conferences.

W. A. HARPER, Secretary.

REV. H. JENNINGS FLEMING ORDAINED

Rev. H. Jennings Fleming, son of Dr. P. H. Fleming, was ordained at the Burlington Christian church last Sunday. The ordination sermon was preached by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, who used as a theme: "A Man, a Message and a Mission." The candidate was presented, after the sermon, by Pastor J. W. Harrell, the charge was delivered by Dr. Atkinson, the scripture read by Dr. Fleming, the Bible presented by Rev. P. T. Klapp, the certificate of ordination presented by the candidate's father and the prayer offered by Rev. J. W. Wellons. The service was sacred, sweet and solemn.

The Church conducts all kinds of surveys. Why not a survey to find out how much money the people have that has been dedicated to God?

MISSIONARY

MISSION BOARD RECORDS

We are very glad that you are having the opportunity of extending the Kingdom as Chaplain and feel that we are honored in having one of our members thus serving our boys at the front and also the cause of liberty and democracy.

Your brethren of the Mission Board wish you God-speed in your great work and express the hope that when your work is over with our soldier boys you will return to us all the better equipped for hardship in redemption work in the home land."

The Board met several times in conference with the Executive Board of the American Christian Convention and the Sunday School Board. The Board made the following memorial to the Executive Board of the American Christian Convention:

"That a definite date be set for an Every-Member-Canvass in all the churches of the denomination, and that we adopt the slogan 'As much for others as for ourselves; and that all the departments of the American Christian Convention co-operate in the organization and campaign for this canvass.'"

"We rejoice with our brethren of the Southern Christian Convention that they have so splendidly achieved their goal of raising $100,000 for missions, home and foreign.

"We wish to congratulate them on their move for greater efficiency in the Kingdom by incorporation of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, and express our appreciation of the enlarged objective of $50,000 set before them. We hope and believe that they will be blessed in their unselfish and sacrificing service, and that the Christian church and the Kingdom will be enlarged by this increased bounty and efficiency of service."

The Christian Missionary

We especially commend the Christian Missionary for its very efficient service. We are pleased to note the increase in the subscription list in these days when so many papers and magazines have found it necessary to discontinue publication. In view of the special service rendered by the Christian Missionary in the field of publicity we recommend that the price of the subscription be continued at fifty cents per year.

That the size of the Christian Missionary conform to the government requirement but in no case the amount of space for matter be lessened.

That Dr. M. T. Morrill be asked to continue as Editor-in-chief of the Christian Missionary and that he be asked to nominate to the Mission Board such persons as he desires to have co-operate with him as departmental assistants.

That we especially commend the book of Dr. J. G. Bishop, "The Christians and the Great Commission," and ask our people everywhere to further its circulation believing that our future work will be helped by knowing the way we have come.

Believing that nothing is so valuable in publicity as the personal touch, we recommend that the Secretary of each department do as much field work as his time will allow.

The Home Mission and Foreign Mission departments considered all matters pertaining to their respective departments, and made reports of their actions to this board which on motion were adopted.

All unfinished business was referred to the Mission Council. After reading and approving the minutes the Board adjourned Thursday night, December 19, 1918 with prayer by Dr. J. G. Bishop.

WARREN H. DENISON, Sec'y.

(Minutes of the Foreign Mission Department will appear next week.)

M. W. Hollowell—This is my 39th renewal. I have been reading THE SUN for forty years, and should the Lord let me live so long as dear Dr. Wellons, I expect to read it forty more.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Dear Friends:—Our financial report still climbs upward and we are glad. We pass the $13,000.00 mile post in this report, but we have not reached our goal for the Thanksgiving offering.

Ninety-seven churches have responded to the call and with the individual offerings have raised $4,342.33. Oh! where are the 165 churches that have not fallen in line? It is our earnest prayer that each church will make this offering this year. I have been hoping and praying that we could be able to report each one on the banner list when we close our report for this year's work.

If these churches could know just how hard I have worked this year and the many sacrifices I have made in order to pull this institution out of debt I feel sure I would have their sympathy and they would be glad to make this offering to give me the joy and happiness it would bring to just have them on the banner list. Will some one in each one of these churches make himself or herself a committee to see to it that this offering is made and send it in by at least the middle of January? Perhaps the pastor or the Sunday school superintendent will be glad to see that this is done. It would be the joy of my heart to see each church on the banner list this year. Friends, pastors, Sunday school superintendents, will you see that this thing happens? Then I will have some good news to tell you when I close my report for this year's work.

Our little folks have had a real happy Christmas and have been filled with joy and happiness by the many presents sent in by a number of churches. It is our happiness to see them happy and our joy to see their hearts full of gladness.

Now, my friends we just lack $657.67 being at our goal of $5,000.00 for our Thanksgiving offering. We must reach it. You must see that we do reach it. As your superintendent, I have given you a faithful year's work and I do ask that you see to it that I reach this goal. I have reached each one set since I have been in this work and have gone over the top. I must not fail in this one.

You have been loyal indeed and I am very grateful to you and you have all the credit for what has been accomplished during the two years past. I have just been the servant of the church and have tried to be faithful in discharging the duties entrusted to me and the good Lord has been good to me and has caused you to rally to our support in the work.

LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—As we are expecting old Santa to be good to us we enclose one dollar to help him a little at the Orphanage. Wishing you and all the orphans a happy Christmas.—Virginia, Elinor, Annie and Robert Wells.

We are glad you remembered us at Christmas time.

It was real good of you. We trust old Santa was good to you.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—Our grandmother Iseley gave us a nicker a piece to give the orphans for Christmas. Best wishes for a Merry Christmas to all.—Edward, Rena Maud, Earl, Virginia Frances Iseley, Virginia Iseley, Margaret and Annie Lee Green.

It is fortunate for little folks to have grandmas. I spent many pleasant hours with mine when I was a little boy and she would give me good things to eat and tell me stories of her girlhood days. Those were great days to me and they are to you.—“Uncle Charley.”

NOTES

Write it 1919.

If you are going to make a New Year's resolution, make one that you can keep.

Are we moving forward in the Forward Movement, or are we "just talking" it? Which?

Elon College opens January 7. Will your family be represented in the enrollment?

Dr. D. A. Long writes from Dover, Delaware, that he is liking and having plenty of work to do.

Superintendent Johnston gives us a fine report this week. Note that it is to be continued.

Mr. Jobe Walker, father of Mrs. W. A. Harper, died at his home near Burlington, December 28.

The holidays put us one day late with THE SUN this week. That explains the delay of one day in your paper, kind reader.

Help us to make THE CHRISTIAN SUN for 1919 all that it should be and can be. All together financially and in other ways.

How do you like the new headings in THE SUN. See reasons on editorial pages why departments were discontinued.

We have been too busy during the last few months to send out statements to many of our subscribers, but we will have to do it in a week or so. Why not let your renewal come along without a reminder?

Editor Barrett of The Herald of Gospel Liberty has just taken a short vacation. Dr. Barrett, we do not know how to rejoice with you for such has never come our way since taking hold of the quill driving business.

Remember that we have Tarbell's Guide, also Peloubet's Select Notes and can send either by return mail. The price is $1.35 delivered. This has been the price of each for years.

Rev. H. Jennings Fleming, a student in Vanderbilt University, spent the holidays with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. P. H. Fleming of Burlington. They also had their sons, J. Sipe and J. Holt, who are in the navy, with them during the holidays.

Brother J. V. Knight calls attention to an important matter in his letter. All too many people move from the rural sections to the city and cease their church activity. They seem to feel that when they leave their home church their obligation ceases. Let all of us look well into this matter of importance.

Mrs. T. A. Jones, Norfolk, Va., one of THE SUN's truest friends, sends $5.00 as an offering to the Worthy Aid Fund to send THE SUN to those who are not able to take it. That is the real Christmas spirit—the spirit of giving that others may be blessed and benefitted. Mrs. Jones adds her appreciation of the paper.

Last week we failed to mention the passing of Mrs. J. N. H. Clendennin of Graham. Mrs. Clendennin was a most loyal member of her denomination. She was the only sister of Dr. D. A. and W. S. Long. The burial service was conducted by Drs. Staley and J. U. Newman as reported by Pastor F. C. Lester in his obituary note of the deceased.

Brother J. M. Darden writes Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston as follows:

"I am in receipt of the photograph of the Southern Car No. 34640, which was shipped from Suffolk loaded with supplies for the Orphanage, with the children, the matrons and yourself grouped in front of the car.

"This picture is worth all of the trouble and work I did in loading this car as I can look into the faces of these dear little orphans and tell how happy they were over the car. Then it is a good sight to see behind them a car of food for them to use during the cold winter.

"I shall have this picture enlarged, framed and presented to each one of the churches that donated towards loading the car. I would like for you to give Mr. Riddle one of these pictures and ask him to print it in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. If there will be any charge for the cut I will pay same."

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

BOOKS ARE NEEDED FOR OUR MEN IN HOSPITALS AND OVERSEAS

The Library War Service of the American Library Association, which is charged with the duty of providing books for soldiers, sailors and marines and for civilian war workers, authorizes the following appeal.—Herbert Putnam, General Director.

To the Superintendent, Board of Education, President, Professor, Trustees, or Custodian of Books:

This is an appeal to you to send books to the men of our Army and Navy and to all who are working with and for them.

You have many books you no longer need, books discarded or set aside. Please gather these up and send them to your nearest public library, which will send them at once where they are needed.

Do not delay. The need is pressing. The war has taken from their homes, their occupations, their friends, recreations and all familiar things, millions of our boys and young men. They need books for recreation. These have been furnished by the millions through our public libraries by gifts from thousands of homes. Still more are needed and are being gathered daily. Do not think that because hostilities have ceased the need for books for our soldiers overseas is ended. On the contrary, it is even greater than when they were keyed up by the stimulus of active warfare. Thousands of our armed forces abroad will have to remain there for a long time to come. The time of the men must be filled with other activities if the morale of this great body of troops is to be maintained. Part of their time will be occupied by the schools which the Government, in co-operation with various welfare agencies, is establishing. They will need books for recreation and diversion in their leisure hours.

Besides these special books which the American Library Association must furnish in large quantities for the use of the trade and technical schools for our men in France—books that must be bought with the funds which the public has subscribed for the maintenance of Library War Service—at least five million more books of all kinds are needed at once.

Many of these boys, millions of them in fact, are without even the rudiments of an education. Many cannot speak English, much less read it. Many have had only a few years of schooling. They are aroused and stimulated by their new life. They want to be better educated when they leave the Army and Navy than they were when they entered. And so they need books. They need grammars, dictionaries and books on English and books of literature and books on literature. They need geometries, trigonometries, and books on chemistry, botany, biology and all the sciences. They need books on drawing, painting and all the arts.

In many cases the old books are just as good for their purposes as the newest ones.

Books on logic, ethics, mechanics, sociology, plumbing, agriculture, roadmaking, the Ancient Romans, the climate of Patagonia, spavin in horses, metaphysics, or any other subject of possible practical or theoretic interest to any kind of person at any point in his career, are of possible value.

If you have such books, unused, you know that you cannot sell them for any sum that will pay for the book-keeping and correspondence connected with the transaction. Yet are they not a load on your conscience?

Then give them to your country. Ask your Board for a blanket instruction to dispose of them. Cut red tape. Present them to the American Library Association, now collaborating with the United States Bureau of Education in an effort to meet the educational needs of the Great Army engaged in the Great War.

By a careful survey and an illuminating experience the A. L. A. Committee has discovered that, while the book that amuses, refreshes and inspires is undoubtedly needed, the book that informs and instructs is no less desired.

It seeks to provide the book for every soldier's need, and it expects to find a need for almost every discarded book you may be able to provide.

Therefore, send all you can spare. This is a pressing need. All the librarians in the country have been at work gathering books for nearly two years. They know how to sort them out and where to send them. The national organization of librarians has raised money and built library buildings in cantonments, and sent books into hospitals, shipyards, munition works and into Y. M. C. A. huts and Salvation Army quarters and Naval Bases and Aviation Schools, and in fact to hundreds of Army and Navy centres of work and training of every kind. It has a picked body of men and women at work in the selection and distribution of books, and knows how to do it.

More than fifty ship tons of books go every month. They go in boxes which, when their lids are unscrewed, become units in shelved books cases. They are labeled and pocketed and ready for circulation. Instructions for amateur librarians accompany them. And a card surmounting each overseas case says:

"These books came to us overseas from home,

To read them is a privilege;

To restore them promptly unabused a duty.

—"John J. Pershing."

To get the books you have available into the hands of soldiers promptly, first gather your books together and find out how many there are that can be turned over for this purpose. Then notify your nearest public library. Every public library in the United States is a receiving station for books for Library War Service. If there is no public library in your community, send a notification of the number of books you have to contribute to Library War Service Headquarters, The Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., and instructions will be sent you how and where to ship the books by Quartermaster freight to the nearest A. L. A. dispatch office.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Warren H. Denison, D. D., Superintendent

The Women's Mission Boards Heartily Behind the Forward Movement

The Woman's Home and Foreign Mission Boards of the Christian Church have undertaken a worthy task in connection with the Forward Movement. The Boards in annual session after consultation with the Superintendent of the Forward Movement voted unanimously to undertake the following goals for the present quadrennium:

1. Devotion—600 new pledged intercessors.
2. Evangelism—(a) 100 new Missionary Societies; (b) 2,000 new members in the Missionary Societies.
3. Religious Education—(a) 150 Missionary Societies studying the Women's and Foreign Mission Study Books each year; (b) 600 increase in number of Christian missionaries taken; (c) a Woman's Mission Board thoroughly organized in every Conference.
4. Missions—$80,000.00 for the Quadrennium.
5. Benevolence—(a) Teach tithing and principles of stewardship; (b) Urge individuals and churches to support missionaries and mission stations.

Our new Forward Movement song was sung for the first time at the Forward Movement rally at Dayton, Ohio, December 18. A splendid audience made it ring. There were thirty Christian ministers present and many of our strong laymen from a distance of thirty miles. The members of the Executive Board of the American Christian Convention, the Mission Board, and the Sun-School Board were present too. Of course you will recognize that it is to be sung to the familiar tune of "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Its six verses bring out "Forward" and the five points of the Forward Movement.

Our Forward Movement

By Nora Van Zant Thayer, Dayton, Ohio

Forward, Christian Churches, to the world wide call,
Hold aloft your banner, Brotherhood for all,
Get in line for service, join the mighty throng;
Forward, now, together, with a courage strong.

CHORUS—

Forward, Christian people, with the Truth unfurled,
Till the name of Jesus, sounds through all the world.

Forward, Christians, trusting in your Father's care,
Read His Word so precious, lift your hearts in prayer,
For He marketh ever, e'en the sparrow's fall;
Take to Him your burdens, He will share them all.

Forward, Christian workers, there is much to do,
Here are fields now ready, laborers are few,
Souls are waiting, longing, for the story old;
Christians, lift your voices, until all are told.

Hear the trumpet sounding, hear the call for men,
Go ye forth as leaders; to the church proclaim,
That her task, unfinished, waits for teachers, true,
Ready with their talents, God's great work to do.

"Unto every creature"—the glad tidings send,
"I am with you always, e'en unto the end."
Glory, hallelujah, praise the Lord and King,
Through the countless ages, Christian voices ring.

Forward, then, ye people, for our cause now plead,
Only one-half million will supply the need,
Heart and mind and treasure, they belong to Him,
He'll restore full measure, give to you again.

Have you started that Christian Endeavor Expert Class? Now is the time. Start it with the New Year.

Has your pastor begun the series of sermons yet on "The Forward Movement"?

Will you start the New Year with the Family Altar in your home?

Are you reading the Forward Movement articles in The Sunday School Herald?

Why not join the "Quiet Hour" with the opening of the New Year? Will you?

You will never regret it if you start the New Year by tithing. It will be one of the great blessings of your life. Do you take The Tither, published at Burlington, N. C.? It will pay you to do so.

Are you and your church after a net gain of ten per cent in your church membership this year?

The Forward Movement asks for an active Evangelistic Committee in each church and conference. We regard this as very important.

What methods are you using to train your church membership in soul-winning?

THE CHURCH'S DUTY TO THE RETURNING SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

In the midst of the demobilization of the army and navy and the return of the soldiers and sailors to their homes, the pastors are asking themselves what they can do for the boys. The General War-Time Commission of the Churches, anticipating this anxiety on the part of the ministers, has prepared a statement in which many proposals are offered to the pastors and the churches throughout the country. This statement has been sent out from the office of the General War-Time Commission directly to the ministers throughout the nation.

PHARAOH OPPRESSES ISRAEL

Golden Text: He will save the children of the needy, and will break in pieces the oppressor. Ps. 72:4.

This is the first lesson for a New Year. What are you going to do with it? Are you going to study it in the same haphazard way in which you have done it in times past? Are you going to read the lesson responsibly in your class, and ask the printed questions, and feel that you have done your duty as a teacher? Will you take the larger portion of the time discussing the historical and geographical questions, and allowing a few hasty moments for summing up the great spiritual truths? God forbid! "We are living, we are dwelling in a grand, an awful time" and you and I, as co-workers with God must take advantage of that fact. We must prepare ourselves to meet the responsibilities of our class. We must study in order that we may win the divine approval of God, and show ourselves workmen that need not to be ashamed. You will find suggestive thoughts for each grade in the quarterlies, while the Teachers and Officers Journal contains teaching thoughts for all grades. If you love your local church, your denomination, and your work; if you believe that this business of working together with God is the finest and grandest business in the world, then shall we not plan to make this year a splendid Forward Movement of all our Sunday school forces for Christ and His Church?

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR SOCIETIES

I heartily thank my friend and brother, Dr. Atkinson, for his most flattering lines in THE SUN of Deember 18, introducing me as corresponding secretary and treasurer of the Board of Religious Education of the Southern Christian Convention. Now, the Doctor is a mighty good man and means well, but is liable to make mistakes, sometimes. When the tenth man appointed by the Convention could not be located, and the time for organization could not continue to be postponed, I was appointed to take his place, and a meeting was called and held in Raleigh, at which time Rev. J. W. Harrell was elected president; I. A. Luke, vice-president and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, secretary-treasurer. Later, when Dr. Atkinson tendered his resignation, I agreed to assist him and act as secretary-treasurer, but not as corresponding secretary, inasmuch as the seal and home office of this Board is to be at Elon College.

For several days now I have considered the work, thought of its possibilities and endeavored to outline a plan of action. These are my conclusions: We all must get in line. Dr. Harrell is president of this Board and head of this procession. He is entitled to some consideration, hard work and a reasonable portion of the criticism that is soon to come our way. Therefore, if you have any bills against this Board, send them direct to Dr. Harrell who will O. K. them and your treasurer will promptly pay them with borrowed money. If you wish inside information of any kind or desire to do some real Sunday school work, see or write the president and he will direct you into the right channel. If you have anything for publication or anything that should come under the various duties of corresponding secretary, do not fail to see or get in direct touch with Dr. Atkinson, for he, too is entitled to some of the honors, misfortunes, etc., of this organization. Keep him busy. And again, if you have any money, however small the amount, that you want to put in a live, wide-awake proposition that will be of real service to the present and future generation, by all means send it direct to your humble treasurer who will promptly give you credit and send you receipt for same.

We cannot afford to have a treasury containing only borrowed money—a word to the wise.

What do you think of a company of soldiers having only a captain, corporal and sergeant marching and the the private loitering along or resting by the wayside? This cannot be seen in army life and it must not be so in our Sunday school work. It is important that all of us get in line. This means you, and you and you.

Since the three Conferences of North Carolina are about to consolidate why not the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Conventions consolidate? We should put on record next July the biggest Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention that has ever been held in our denomination. We can do it. Are you willing to help now and help then? It does not matter how small your school or society is, we want every school and society represented. Let us know where you are so we can locate you. All that we are asking of you is that you do your duty. Think it over, talk it over in your Sunday school and society and volunteer your services.

I shall keep a record of all persons and Sunday schools who report their names and addresses, and who will agree to make a donation or appropriate one Sunday's offering in each month toward this general work. Every cent of the money will be spent to organize, keep alive, and promote Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies in the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention until we have sufficient funds to expand our work. You will be proud of the fact next July if your Sunday school, yourself, or both, get on the honor roll. Get in line and let me hear from you and I will whisper the good news to our president and other officers. Don't put this off until tomorrow. Follow the impulse of the heart and follow it now. If the cause appeals to you, say so and if it does not, say nothing. Get in line and do your duty.

MARRIAGES

FRANKS-JONES

A quiet, but very pretty, marriage took place in the balcony of the Hotel Guilford, Thursday night, December 19, 1918, when Miss Anna F. Jones became the bride of Mr. Willie S. Franks, of Alamance County. The young couple, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Kernodle, of Gibsonville, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Ross, of Alamatahah, and the bride's brother, Marvin Jones, motored to Greensboro where the words that made them man and wife were read by the writer.

Immediately after the marriage, the parties returned to their home in Alamance County. Both are members of Berea Christian church, and among the leaders in the work there. They played together in early childhood, and have always been intimately associated with each other. Their many friends will rejoice to know they are locating in the old home community, and will continue their work in the community circles. The very best wishes and prayers of their former pastor and many friends follow them to their new home.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

LYTTON-ALEXANDER

A second marriage immediately following the Franks-Jones, took place in the Hotel Guilford, Thursday night, December 19, 1918, when Miss Eula B. Alexander, became the bride of Mr. M. H. Lytton. The young couple came over from Statesville, N. C., where each were prominent in the business and social life of that town.

Mr. and Mrs. Lytton returned to Statesville on the morning of the 20th and will make their home there where Mr. Lytton has a very thriving business. Their many friends were agreeably surprised when they reached their former home. Success and happiness follow them wherever they may go.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

The New Year is yours. How are you going to use it?

MITCHELL

On December 4, 1918 G. W. Mitchell departed this life at the age of 77 years. For many years he held his church membership with one of our churches in Chatham county. He leaves a wife, one daughter, and two brothers. The funeral was conducted from the home in West Durham and the interment was made in a community cemetery just out of Durham. May God's richest blessings attend those who mourn.

R. F. BROWN.

WILSON

Jacob Wilson, one of the deacons at Woods' Chapel Christian church, died December 14, 1918 at the age of 60 years, 8 months, and 5 days. Brother Wilson was a good man and held in high esteem by all who knew him. His death came rather suddenly, and was a shock to his many friends. Surviving him are his widow, one son, and three daughters. Funeral services were held at Cedar Grove church of the Brethren, on Sunday, December 15, 1918. May our Heavenly Father comfort the bereaved.

A. W. ANDES.

TATE

Miss Luna Catherine Tate was born February 8, 1891, and died December 13, 1918 at the age of 27 years, 10 months, and 5 days. In this death a splendid young woman has gone from her earthly afflictions to her heavenly reward. She possessed many noble traits of character, and was a general favorite among all who knew her. It seems a pity that such a life could not have been spared longer to be a blessing to those about her, but it becomes our humble duty to say, not our will but Thine be done. Miss Luna was a faithful member of the Antioch Christian church. She is survived by her mother and two brothers. Funeral services were held at Antioch, December 15, and the remains laid to rest by the side of her father in the church cemetery.

A. W. ANDES.

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, William Walter Wicker, a faithful and much beloved member of Sanford Christian church and Sunday school, has bravely fallen upon the field of battle in France, fighting for the cause of freedom, Therefore be it resolved by the joint committee of the Sanford Christian church and Sunday school,

First, That in the death of Brother Wicker we have lost a faithful and true member.

Second, That while we keenly feel our loss, we bow submissively to the will of God, who doeth all things well.

Third, That we will cherish his memory, and that we will extend unto his family our sympathy, and for them, offer our sincere prayers.

Fourth, That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy sent to the family, and that copies be offered to The Christian Sun and Sanford Express for publication.

PROGRESS OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

The Commission on Christian Education held a meeting at Atlantic City, December 10th and 11th, in connection with the meeting of the Executive Committee of the Council. Forty-three persons were present—the largest number in attendance at any recent meeting of the Commission.

The purpose of the meeting was to effect a reorganization by which the work of the Commission may be brought into closer relationship to that of the various educational agencies of the churches. According to this plan of reorganization, the Commission now is made up of representatives chosen by the Commission of Church Boards, the Missionary Education Movement, the Sunday School Council, and the World Sunday School Association together with members appointed at large by the Federal Council, representatives of the Theological Seminaries, Christian Associations, International Sunday School Association, the Young People's Societies, the Sunday School Union and other similar bodies.

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY"

The Mission of the Church

HE mission of the Church is to carry out that command of the Master, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel," and when the Church ceases to do that, or even falls short of that task and undertaking, it needs a new baptism of the Holy Spirit and a restoration to the faith one delivered to the saints. The command is to go and not to parley over trivial matters: the territory is all and not a little section where proselyting may be carried on; the injunction is to preach and not to scheme, and that which is to be preached is the Gospel and not sectarianism.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THE Y. M. C. A. AND ITS WORK

Recognition of the self-sacrifice and willingness to face death on the part of men who put aside their business to serve in the war zone, under fire if necessary, as Y. M. C. A. workers is being given by the Red Triangle organization in the form of certificates of honorable discharge to those volunteers who were not sent overseas. In a statement announcing this, the personnel division of the National War Work Council Y. M. C. A. sets forth the particular need of specialists instead of general hut secretaries, developed by the War Department's speed in returning the American Expeditionary Forces. The statement follows:

"The Young Men's Christian Association as one of the larger organizations that have been serving our military forces overseas finds itself confronted, following cessation of hostilities, with the necessity for a radical revision of its program. The character of much of the work required under present condition is quite different from that called for while men were entering, leaving or in the trenches.

"Immediately following the armistice it was thought that a large increased force would be needed, and a call was made for more men. Later when the return of the arm from Great Britain was put into effect immediately, and the early demobilization of the American forces in France was begun, it was found that entire classes of men heretofore needed in considerable numbers by the Y. M. C. A. would not be required.

"The 'Y' now has over 5,000 workers in France alone. Hereafter the requirements will be limited to certain specialists and experienced leaders. This change of program will assist very materially in conserving the gifts of the nation. Educational work will be largely increased for the armies of occupation, and to an even greater extent than before an all round Red Triangle program will be maintained. This will limit recruiting to specialists.

"Many men, some of whom already had reached New York on their way overseas, have had to be returned to their homes because the particular form of work for which they were chosen will not now be needed. They will add to the number of men in every community disappointed because they did not get overseas but entitled to equal honor with those whose unselfish and patriotic desire has not been thwarted. All will receive certificate of honorable discharge in recognition of their patriotism."

COLD CHURCHES

This is a season of the year when the matter of church warming is a part of the worship. No one can worship best who is cold and uncomfortable. "Fires from the altar" will not keep your feet warm. A cold church building is dangerous to health as well as uninviting to worshippers. Keep the house of God comfortable.

AN ESSENTIAL AT THE PEACE CONFERENCE

The Peace Conference is to undertake great things. We consider it the greatest gathering in political history. We have nothing against the men who are to represent the nations of the earth. We believe that they are men of fine character and splendid conduct such that will greatly reflect upon the future world history.

The one essential thing for the Conference to consider is that the defeating of Germany alone will not bring world peace. The obedience of all nations to the principle of brotherly love is the one thing very necessary toward a world peace.

THE DEAD LINER AND THE WORN OUT

There is a great difference between the minister who is worn out and the one who has reached "the dead line" because he has ceased to study, or followed some hobby until he can no longer attract people with it. Not every minister who retires is worn out; it may be that he has rusted out. There is a difference.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When storm and strain and stress bear down upon a man he prays.

All of us agree that the Christian life is a growth, but few seem to believe in the cultivation of it.

It is the thinking that really makes us old. Years alone will not humble and quench the young spirit.

We have no patience with the chronic grumbler who is always telling how some one has treated him unfair.

Signing a card is not a conversion. Conversion is its own definition—it changes us from one life to another.

Christian unity cannot come until men can agree that the business of a denomination is to save the world and not itself.

The world is finding out that there is more in the right kind of a leader than in the success of any one party. Can the Church not profit by this. God is the leader. Let all follow.

You can talk all your life about your creed, but the world looks for the deed.

If the author who wrote the song "Let the lower lights be burning" had said, "I'll keep the lower lights burning," he would have changed a command to action—and that is what the world needs.

The church that keeps its minister's nose on the financial grindstone can never hope to have the souls of its members lifted up very near to a throne of grace.

A LEAGUE OF NATIONS

(A Statement Issued by the Executive Committee of The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America)

The war crisis of the world has passed, but a world crisis is upon us. "Are we to lapse back," asks Lloyd George, "into the old national rivalries, animosities and competitive armaments, or are we to initiate the reign on earth of the Prince of Peace?"

"Shall there be a common standard of right and privilege for all peoples and nations," President Wilson inquires, or shall the strong do as they will and the weak suffer without redress?"

The time has come to organize the world for truth and right, justice and humanity. To this end as Christians we urge the establishment of a League of Free Nations at the coming Peace Conference. Such a League is not a mere political expedient; it is rather the political manifestation of the Kingdom of God on earth.

The Church of the Living God rightfully calls for the creation of agencies adequate to enforce law, to keep order throughout the world and to preserve the rights of the weak and helpless. Selfish and lawless nations must be restrained. Security and fair economic opportunity must be guaranteed to each by the united power of all. "The impartial justice meted out must involve no discrimination between those to whom we wish to be just and those to whom we do not wish to be just." These are matters fundamental to the rule of the Prince of Peace.

The world is now so small, the life of nations so intertwined, the mastery of nature's titanic forces so complete, and the power of selfish, economic or nationalistic groups to enslave whole peoples and to bring tragedy to the entire world so dangerous, that the re-establishment of the old world-order of irresponsible states has become intolerable.

We must have a governed world in which the security and rights of each shall rest upon the combined strength of all. Humanity must be organized on a basis of justice and fair dealing. The law of brotherhood must supersede the law of the jungle.

A League to attain these results must be democratic in spirit and in form. It must be capable of continuous adjustment to the advancing life of separate nations and also of the world. It must be directed by the enlightened conscience of mankind. The heroic dead will have died in vain unless out of victory shall come a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness.

The Church has much to give and much to gain. It can give a powerful sanction by imparting to the new international order something of the prophetic glory of the Kingdom of God, if it be not the triumph of God's will in the affairs of men, "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit?" And what is this vision of a world-federation of humanity organized on a basis of justice and fair-dealing, for the effective and impartial maintenance of peace, if it be not an international expression of the Kingdom of God?

The Church can give a spirit of good-will, without no League of Nations can endure. Nations have been held together by the vivid perils and gigantic tasks of war. New bonds must be forged that will still hold them together. This is the special function of the Church.

The Church can give the driving power of Faith, without which no great ideal can be realized. To doubt is to fail; to believe is to conquer.

The Church can give the driving power of Faith, without less opposition from selfish nationalism. Its missionary enterprise will prosper as never before, freed from the blight of un-Christian conduct of the nations of Christendom.

The Church will, moreover, recover its international character and consciousness. National churches will find themselves linked in a world brotherhood. A new era of fellowship and co-operation will dawn.

The League of Nations is rooted in the Gospel. Like its objective is "peace on earth good-will toward men." Like the Gospel its appeal is universal.

Let us implore our Heavenly Father, God Almighty that the Peace Delegates of the Nations may be guided by the Divine Spirit and enlightened by the Divine Wisdom to the end that they may embody in the new fabric of the world's life His righteousness, loving and holy will.

We call upon all Christians and upon all believers in God and lovers of man, to work and pray with whole souls, that out of the ashes of the old civilization may rise the fair outlines of a new world, based on the Christ ideal of justice, co-operation, brotherhood and service.

FROM OTHER SANCTUMS

The Macedonian Call
(Christian Advocate)

If we will listen, we can hear many Macedonian cries coming from across the seas: "Come over and help us." These cries come from cold, hungry, distressed brothers and sisters of ours in the larger sense, living in lands where only a few years ago sweet flowers bloomed; where fruit blossoms in thousands of orchards in the springtime sent out their fragrant odors foretelling the coming of luscious fruits to be gathered in late summer and early fall; where fertile fields brought forth their plentiful increase as a result of the diligent toil of industrious farmers; where sleek cattle grazed in green meadows and fat hogs fed on the broad fields of growing clover; where the hum and rattle of industry were ever to be heard in forge, factory, and shop; where happy and prosperous people dwelt in picturesque villages, thriving towns, and splendid cities. Today these people need our help, need what we can do for them in a physical way, and need and want what we can do for their souls. Shall we answer the calls, be a blessing and receive a blessing?

Qualified For Christ
 (Sunday School Times)

God's "favorites" are those who let Him do the most for them. It is a distinction open to any of us. A Christian man who enjoys an unusually intimate fellowship with God recently wrote to a friend: "If, as some one has said, our wants qualify us for Christ, then my qualification are unsurpassed." Each of us is eligible to enter the class of the debtor of the parable who owed his Lord ten million dollars and was forgiven. If we will but see it our sins were as gear as those of the sinful woman who anointed Jesus in the Pharisee's house. And Christ has cleansed them! But more than that: Having shared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us, God stands ready with Him to give us freely all things. The richest Christians are the poorest, those with greatest needs, those with largest capacity for receiving free gifts of grace.

Safe Only On Your Knees
 (Pittsburgh Christian Advocate)

Principal George Adam Smith tells a tale of how, in his early Alpine-climbing days, he was climbing one of the Swiss Alps on the sheltered side. Though they did not know it, a great wind was blowing, and as they climbed to the topmost erag, the guide, who had been leading the way upwards, stepped back, as his wont, that the traveler might have his foot upon the top. Dr. Smith sprang to the top of the peak and was almost blown back over the edge by the wind. The guide seized him and brought him down to his knees, crying in his ear: "Down! Here, on the summit, you are safe only on your knees." So with the heights of our gladness, when life is splendid, and the world is full of glory, we are safe only upon our knees.

 (Christian Observer)

There is a temptation to preachers at the present time to make their message from the pulpits savor more of current events than to sound forth clearly and convincingly the call of the glorious Gospel of Jesus Christ to men everywhere to repent and turn to God. The principles that animated our nation in entering the war were undoubtedly founded upon truth and righteousness as set forth in the Word of God, but when the people gather in God's House to worship Him, they desire to hear the soul-stirring truths of the Gospel presented in all their power. The ministers, as well as the members of the churches, have been loyal in their support of the government in the present war. There must be, however, a constant recognition that the greatest need of the human soul is to hear and know and obey the Word of God.

PREACHING THE DOCTRINE OF HELL

(Lutheran Church Work and Observer)

The preaching of the doctrine of the punishment of sin has unquestionably fallen into disuse, as compared with its prominence in the preaching of a half century ago. But there is a hell prepared for the devil and his angels and it ought to be affirmed that all those who follow the devil and walk in the ways of ungodliness, adding iniquity to iniquity, will find that the broad way upon which they are walking leads inevitably to that very place. Men, accordingly, should be instructed, warned, and admonished on this subject. More and more it seems that scientific men are preaching this doctrine in their own way. Said one of these scientific men recently, "If the preachers quit preaching the consequences of sin the doctors will have to take it up." Physicians stand aghast when they are brought face to face, as they are in their professional work, with the direful physical ravages of sin. They are not disinclined to speak of the fearful ravages wrought by man's depravity. These men see the necessity of placing every safeguard around the youth of our land especially, and warning them of what is certain to ensue as the fruits of sin.

At a meeting of one of the American Medical Associations a few months ago one of the leading physicians present, in an address on the subject of "Health as a Moral Issue," said: "If there is no hell it is an oversight." If this is the attitude of physicians, who deal with the bodies of men, what ought to be the attitude of preachers who deal with the souls of men? This awful doctrine ought to be preached, but preached in the right way. It is not surprising to us that some reaction followed against the old-time method of presenting this doctrine and the erudities of some modern evangelists. God is not guilty of an oversight. There is a hell and it ought to be preached in all of its awfulness. But there is a right way and a wrong way to preach on this subject. The right way, in our judgment, is indicated in a paragraph taken from the late Dr. Archibald Hodge's "Popular Lectures on Theological Themes." In his treatment of the subject of final rewards and punishment, Dr. Hodge says this:

"There is nothing on earth more outrageously vulgar and profane than the coarse and careless shouting out of threats of damnation against heedless sinners by an orthodox ranter. When we declare the terrible judgment of our Lord against our fellow sinners of our own flesh and blood, who by nature are no worse than we are, we should do it tremblingly and with tears."

During the year ended July 31, 1918, the mills of the United States consumed 6,566,489 running bales of cotton. This consumption comprised 6,296,756 bales of domestic upland cotton, 85,939 bales of sea-island cotton, and 183,794 bales of foreign cotton. In addition, 1,118,840 bales of linters were consumed. The stocks held in the country on July 31, 1918, aggregated 3,450,188 bales of lint cotton and 439,917 bales of linters.

REASONS FOR TITHING

By Rev. W. A. Ayres

ONE-TENTH of the income of God's people consecrated to the service of Christ would effectually solve the financial problems in all our churches, and in the work of his kingdom throughout the world. It would not only relieve the great and constant strain, but would actually double if not quadruple, the work now being done.

Some are giving a tenth, and a few even more. We rejoice that the number of such givers is increasing. But many tithers having small incomes, and millions of others giving but a small fraction of a tithe, brings the average down to one-fortieth instead of one-tenth for God. If all gave the tenth we might build four times as many churches and parsonages and schoolhouses annually, and support four times as many pastors and missionaries.

With such tremendous possibilities before us, why do we not all give a tenth? Do we love money more than we love Christ and the souls and we might help to save? Many surely do not clearly understand the principle of tithing nor the teaching of the Scriptures concerning it; they have never thought it through for themselves. Prayerful attention is therefore called to the following reasons for tithing:

1 The Old Testament Teaches It

This teaching is very clear and positive. For the first voluntary (gospel spirit) instances of it we have these records: Abraham gave tithes to Melchizedek (Gen. 14:20). Jacob pledged tithes to God, (Gen. 28:22). These are clear instances of tithing before the law was given or the Jewish nation had an existence.

As Dr. O. P. Gifford says: "The law did not create tithes; it recognized them." Also: "Before law commanded tithes, tithing was wrought into the nature of things."

For the law of the tithes, see Lev. 27:30-32; for its purpose, see Num. 18:20, 21. "But," some one may say, "that old Mosaic or Levitical law has been abrogated." No! the tithes has no more been abolished than the Sabbath. Both existed before the Mosaic law.

Mr. J. P. Hobson, a lawyer, says: "If the tithe, therefore, was the law before Moses, the fact that it was incorporated in the Levitical law, and that this law has expired, would not abrogate the tithe, but the expiring of this law would leave it as obligatory as it was before the latter was promulgated at Sinai."

WOMAN AND HER WORK

The foreign department of the Y. W. C. A. needs forty-nine secretaries who will be sent to China, Japan, South America and India during the year 1919.

Nine women, representing nine nationalities, sat down to a tea together in an International Institute recently. These Institutes conducted by the Young Women's Christian Association, are bringing all the women of different tongues together and uniting them in a common language, in common interests.

This is an age of specialization. The Y. W. C. A. is the only organization that specializes in girls regardless of race, country or color. It is extending a charm string all around the belt of Old Mother Earth, every button on the string being represented by a girl, and girls standing side by side, with the same hope, interests and ambition, from every civilized country on the map, and some that we might, perhaps, think are not civilized.

A speaker had told eloquently of what the women had done in France, England and America in winning the war. Then she passed on to what they are doing now in the work of reconstruction, paying eloquent tribute to the nurses who served side by side with the men, regardless of difficulties and danger, and who are remaining at their posts. She sat down. Then the preacher prayed, and in his prayer he asked God's blessing on all the men who had served at the front, and were still serving. He did not mention the women! The Y. W. C. A. secretary who had made the speech was dazed. Doesn't the world know this was also a woman's war?

GREETINGS TO THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORKERS

I have great pleasure in sending this word of greeting for the New Year to the workers in our Woman's Missionary Societies, and with this greeting I send sincere appreciation for the good accomplishments of 1918, handicapped as we were on every side.

And 1919—what challenge it offers us! The new era of enlarged missionary work is before us. We must do more this year than ever before. Shortly we will announce the goals for the various Conferences and in true womanly style we shall expect each Conference to go happily "over the top."

I send my very best wishes for a fruitful and serviceable year in Christian effort to every worker and each Society.

MRS. W. A. HARPER,
Pres. Woman's Board S. C. C.

THE CHRISTIAN ANNUAL

The final copy for the Christian Annual reached me January 3, 1919 and by the time this note reaches the public the type matter on the publication will be completed. Practically all the press work has been done. The printers hope to have the Annual ready by the latter part of next week.

As voted by the last session of the Southern Christian Convention, the price of the Annual is 25c the copy, delivered. Conference secretaries will do me a favor by sending at once a mailing list showing distribution of the number of copies taken. Each Conference has already voted to take a certain number of copies and it is not necessary that bill be sent to each secretary. If each secretary will send with his mailing list an order on the treasurer of his Conference for the number of copies taken by his Conference it will save me unnecessary work and will be appreciated.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Dear Friends:—

This report brings us within $496.74 of our goal of five thousand dollars for our Thanksgiving offering. Less than five hundred dollars to raise and two more weeks to reach it. Just one hundred churches have responded to our call. One hundred and twenty-two to hear from yet. Will the 122 churches respond in the next three weeks? I will close this year's work on January 22, and trust we will have gone over the top by that date and all the churches have in their reports. I would be delighted to get each church on the Banner list this time. It would be a joy to me and would do the church good to make this offering. See to it that your church gets on the Banner list.

Our children have had a very happy Christmas and the churches have been real kind to them.

The First Christian church of Norfolk sent a box containing two presents for each child which delighted each one. Also a box of oranges and a 25-pound box of candy.

The Portsmouth church sent a box containing towels, hose, handkerchiefs, and many things that are useful to us in this work.

The Portsmouth church sent a box containing many useful things for the children.

Mrs. Bowden's Sunday school class sent a box containing one-half dollar for each child. When we gave them the money all the little children wanted to go to the store right away, so Mrs. Wicker (one of the Matrons) went with them and it was a busy day for the merchants and it was very gratifying to see the wise selections many of them made in buying little articles that were real useful to them.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Thompson, of the Bethlehem church, sent a box containing thread, ginghams, percale, toboggans, etc.; Mr. L. D. Rippy, two pumpkins; Mrs. C. M. McCray, can fruit; Lottie McRay, 2 pair hose, 5 cans fruit, bunch lace; Mrs. J. H. Massey, Durham, N. C., 4 books; W. N. Goodwin, New Hill, N. C., 5 pair shoes, 1 pair pants, 4 dozen boxes matches; Concord Christian church, Va., one barrel containing can fruit, syrup, sack of butter beans, sack of cabbage, a peck of apples, etc.

For all these contributions we are profoundly grateful.

LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: I am sending you the first dime I ever earned. I am four years old and I made my dime piling up wood for Mrs. Nicholas next door. I did not know I would make any money, I saw the wood needed to be piled, so I just piled it. I was surprised when she paid me.—Ralph Bain Newman.

"He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay again." I see you have loaned the first money you ever earned to the Lord and I truly hope it will come back to you in future years with a big interest.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I have to do everything that Ralph does, so mamma will give me a dime to send. I love to work, too, but no one ever pays me. I love the work so well that I sometimes haul the wood back to the wood pile after my brothers have put it on the porch. I am jealous of Oliver Young. I was Uncle Johnny's baby before he came. Maybe Helen and George will write next time.—Leon Wesley Newman.

You are a working boy. I am fond of little boys who are always busy. I have a little boy at home who is so busy that he keeps me busy when I am at home.—"Uncle Charley."

Thousands of our returning boys will spend many weeks, perhaps months, in camp before they are returned to their homes. It will interest the mothers and fathers to learn that these boys have had the first pangs of home-sickness alleviated by the sight of the hostess in the Hostess House who was the last to whom they waved good-bye when they marched away, and who was still on the job to welcome them when they returned. "Felt tough to think I couldn't go on home," said one boy, "but this place comes so near to it, I'm not kicking. Looks just like it did when we went away, and you don't look a day older." The hostess laughed; she was receiving many of such compliments, and she knew what they meant. So much had been crowded into the boys' lives since they left that they fully expected every one they met on returning to look years and years older.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

POUNDED! POUNDED! !

On the night of December 17, 1918 the door bell of the Graham Christian church parsonage rang and the pastor opened it to be greeted by little Chas. D. Johnston, Jr., who said that Santa Claus had told him to leave some things at the home of F. C. Lester. He was invited in and following him came a large number of the good people of Graham and New Providence Christian churches. They were led not to the parlor, but to the kitchen. When they were through presenting, our pantry was supplied with more than twenty-five dollars worth of good things to eat, such as meal, flour, ham, chicken, eggs, potatoes, jelly, canned fruits, etc. The Ladies' Aid Society also presented a quilt. After a brief stay the visitors all retired leaving the pastor and his family both happy and grateful.

But this seemed to be not enough for there was another church to be heard from. It was Thursday of Christmas that I attended a Christmas tree at Haw River Christian church. After a nice little program given by the small children and the presentation of the gifts and treat to the members of the Sunday school, some of the brethren led me to one corner of the church where they presented me with more than a barrel full of nice things for the pantry that had been brought in by the members and friends of that church. This came as an absolute surprise. There was about twenty-five dollars worth of this "pounding." I should like to give the name of each one who contributed, but that would be a list too long.

To one and all who had a part in either of these "poundings" I express my grateful appreciation.

F. C. LESTER.

POUNDED

Just before Christmas Mrs. Arthur McIver called me over the telephone and asked me to come to their home that evening. On my arrival I found a number of the Shallow Well people had gathered to enjoy seeing me stare at a table covered with cans, jars, boxes, packages, and paper bags filled with all sorts of good things. No one but a preacher who has had a similar experience can imagine the joy that came to us as we unloaded the packages, spelled out the givers, and put them away. To the good people of Shallow Well, we thank you.

We are also grateful to Mr. S. H. McDuffie and others of Grace's Chapel and to members of Sanford church for kindness, expressed in useful gifts.

Mr. & Mrs. T. E. WHITE.

ANOTHER POUNDING

Our Saviour said that it was more blessed to give than to receive. Since it is God-like to give freely and human-like to desire to receive, we mortals often feel that we are happier when we receive gifts than the givers could possibly be. Truly has this writer felt, many times, that he was exceedingly happier because of having received many gracious gifts for himself and family during the past year than his many good friends—members of his churches and others—who gave them, could be. For instance, after the hail storm had destroyed our garden at Holly Springs last July, several of the members and friends of Plymouth Christian church gave us three dozen cans of tomatoes and other vegetables.

Of course, the "pounding" the Pleasant Union people gave us some time ago has already been mentioned in THE SUN; but the fact that those kind people promised a salary of one hundred dollars and gave one hundred and fifty has not heretofore been published.

Besides these things, individual members of Plymouth, Pleasant Union, Center Grove and Antioch (Chatham) churches and others in those communities, have made their pastor's heart glad various times during the past year by giving him butter, fruit, vegetables and other good things to take home.

However, the last time the writer was made to feel that it was more "happy" to receive than to give, was the fourth Sunday morning in December, 1918. It happened at Youngsville, N. C. As it was a rainy day, had only a congregation of seventeen, besides the janitor, that morning. The writer tried to preach to that little company about Heaven's richest gift to man—the gift of a Saviour. As he talked of the Heavenly Gift, he could see in front of the pulpit, a table loaded with packages containing such things as sugar, salt, soda, raisins, butter; and canned peaches, pears, pine apple, cherries, blackberries (white) and snap beans. When, after the services, two of the members informed their pastor that the abundance of good things on that table was intended as a "pounding" for him from his Youngsville members, he couldn't command words capable of expressing the gratitude and happiness that were his. Certainly, it is more blessed to give than it is to receive; but when such things happen to one as have been mentioned above, we frail creatures of the dust can scarcely understand how human givers can be any happier than human recipients. If those who have been so kind to this writer the past year were any happier in the giving than he was in the receiving, they must have been mighty happy people.

May the Giver of all good gifts richly reward each and all of them; and may He enable His humble servant to be of some real Christian service to those whom he endeavors to serve as their pastor.

A GOOD BEGINNING

The Mission Secretary of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference, Rev. L. I. Cox, has sent in his first month's report to the Home Mission Board, and it is full of encouragement. It has taken considerable work to get started. The report shows nine active memberships, seven at $10.00, and two at $5.00 per member, secured for the Christian Missionary Association. Also $10.00 for Home Missions.

Ten individuals and one local church have agreed to pay the salary and all necessary expense of the Secretary for one-fourth of his time during this year. I take this opportunity of saying to those generous givers who are making it possible for us to have a Secretary for a part of his time, that the expense is necessarily more for the first month than we may expect for any other. Yet our Secretary has, in his first month, secured more in cash and membership pledges than twice his salary and the expense of stationery and printing.

I trust that every pastor in the Western Conference or every pastor who has a church within our bounds, will arrange with our Secretary and have him to visit the churches. The Secretary has a message that the churches need, and the churches have a presence that the Secretary needs. Let both come together and each help the other.

HENDERSON LETTER

Since we came here on November 13, 1918, there has not been much to report in the way of public services. We found the influenza still raging, and the churches of city and county closed by order of the Health Board. On the first Sunday of December the closing ban was lifted as to the morning services, but the Sunday schools are still closed, and no night services are yet allowed.

While the members were not permitted to assemble in a reception meeting, we have met quite a number of our people, at church and in their homes; and if we are to judge from the acquaintance thus formed, we anticipate pleasant relations with the people here, and expect much good to be accomplished in the Master's name and cause.

I also serve as pastor at Fuller's Chapel, which is about five miles from Henderson. It has not been our privilege to go there, but hope soon to do so.

A number of the members of Henderson and Fuller's Chapel have remembered us with part of the good things with which they are blessed. These acts of kindness were received with deep appreciation, and made a substantial contribution to our pleasure.

There is not as much sickness here as when we came, and we hope that soon the church activities will become normal.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

THE RAMSEUR PASTORATE

We left the good people of Henderson and Fuller's Chapel November 13, 1918, with whom we had labored for six years, to enter upon the duties of the Ramseur pastorate, which includes the churches at Ramseur, Park's Cross Roads, Pleasant Ridge and Shiloh. We arrived at Ramseur November 21, 1918 receiving a welcome that is hard to express.

We were met at the station by Brother Herbert Brady with his automobile and brought to our home, which had been arranged by a committee appointed by the churches. We were received by three young ladies with smiling faces, giving a welcome that would make a king feel good and honored. On coming in the house behold, we found our furniture all unpacked and put up as if we had done it ourselves. After a few minutes we were escorted to the dining room and there we found a most sumptuous supper already prepared and hot on our own dining room table. Those three young ladies dined with us and it was a pleasure to have them. After supper several of the members here came in. We had a good social time till 10 o'clock when they left us alone for the night.

On account of the epidemic of Influenza we have not been able to have services at all the churches. We have been to Pleasant Ridge and Shiloh one Sunday each and here last Sunday night. We have not been to Park's Cross Roads yet. We hope to have regular services after this and to get things lined up for a great year's work.

We have installed the envelope system in the Ramseur church, and expect to lay plans to use them in all the churches next year. We are expecting great things for missions, devotion, evangelism, education and benevolences.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The routine of life affords a field of study as well as a field for work. Universal experience keeps routine ever before us, for most of daily toil is of that kind of service. The clerk in the store with yardstick and scissors, and the opening and folding of goods, runs one constant round; but the variety in customers and the constant change in faces and voices relieves the monotony of the daily task. The cook in the kitchen with pots and pans, wood and ashes, water and grease, dishes and spoons, cloths and soaps, to say nothing of meal and meat, cereals and eggs, soda and salt, turnips and potatoes, furnishes ample chance for routine duties. It is not one day, but every day. There is little Sunday in the kitchen. The parlor is the Sunday-room. Few kitchens keep Sunday. We forget that the ignorant Jews gathered enough manna on the sixth day to last the seventh day. It does no credit to this day to say, that the Israelites in the desert kept the Lord's day better than the great cities of Christian civilization. Goodness is not necessarily learned; it is the obedience of the life of the word and will of God.

When Naaman came to Elisha and was directed by the prophet to, "Go and wash in Jordan seven times, and thy flesh shall come again to thee and thou shalt be clean," Naaman was wrath, and went away, and said, "Behold, I thought He will surely come out to me, and stand and call upon the name of the Lord." So he went away in a rage. Then his servants spake unto him, and said, "If the prophet had bid thee do some great thing, wouldst thou not have done it?" Then he went and dipped himself seven times in Jordan and he was clean. So many people want to do the big things and not the little things; but it is the little things that count. It is one thing to play the piano in the parlor; it is quite another thing to clean the pot in the kitchen. It is one thing to dine with a deacon; it is another thing to sup with a sinner; but Jesus did both. He took upon Himself the form of a servant; and He rendered the help of a servant.

Some Christians are prominent at the great meetings of the Church; but those who maintain the regular services by faithful attendance and systematic contributions perform the routine duties of the Kingdom, and wash their robes in the blood of the Lamb. All garments are made by a stitch at a time, whether the stitch is made by steel fingers or human hands. It is the drop of water added to drops of water that makes the flood; the roaring river is the chorus of the rivulets whose hidden beauty creeps along the path of the mountain and among the willows in the meadow. It is the constant flow of the tide that carves its artistic lines on the beach and builds mountains of sand. Do not think your place in the home or the church too small. Think of what the Psalmist says: "I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." It is equivalent to saying, "I had rather be an obscure Christian than a prominent worldling." How many would thus choose? We want to do the big things; but it is the little things that cleanse the leper and feeds the world.

It is better to be a good sexton than a poor preacher; and it is better to be a good member than a poor official. Jesus made Himself of no reputation, though He could have made a reputation by doing great things. His work was little and simple. He labored among the poor and needy. He went about doing good. His teachings were greater than His works. The nations will never be free till they know Him and the power of His resurrection, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." Truth always builds up great things from small things, as oaks from acorns; and great people are not above the routine of daily life in all the spheres where human service helps to save the world.

W. W. STALEY.

DR. ATKINSON AT SALEM CHAPEL

The little country church at Salem Chapel stands in an open grove of majestic oaks; the cemetery near by. The pastor had prepared the little band of worshippers some time before the coming of the great apostle of missions. He came as teacher, editor and orator. Atkinson has the art of saying the right thing in the best English. He is tall and graceful. He is always bright and happy as a May morning. He faced our little congregation with the same degree of satisfaction as he did a large and rich one. Missions, missions, his heart was in every word and every sentence was filled with sincerity. What he said was always to the point and just enough. It was not the traditional way of begging for money and passing the plate for a few paltry dollars. His facts from the Bible and history made the logical climax plain as the stars of Heaven, that it was our Christian duty and glorious privilege to give and to labor for the cause of missions.

With the exception, perhaps of service, there is no more expressive word in the English language than missions. The loftiest matter that ever blazed upon a warrior's shield, or glittered upon a nation's arms, is the word service. Before Brother Atkinson left the good people of Salem Chapel gave in cash and pledges about $1,000.00 to the cause of missions.

DANIEL ALBRIGHT LONG.

UNITED CONFERENCES

THE CHRISTIAN SUN of January 1, 1919, brings the news that the three Christian Conferences in North Carolina have united. United and for what? It will eliminate two-thirds of the officials of the three separate Conferences. As these officers serve without salaries or nearly so, but little will be saved. Additional cost in attending the sessions of Conference will be greatly increased. The representation will be reduced owing to longer distance to travel. A larger body will be more efficient, it is claimed. Why not for the same reasons unite all the families, all the farms and all kindred enterprises, all the counties, all the states, into one county, state and nation? Yet nearly every session of the State Legislature creates new counties; new families are being established continually. The federation of Germany gave us the world war. The federation of states tends to work autocracy which is the bone of evil and religious freedom, and the more so when the measures by which it is accomplished are clandestinely executed. The original paper which inaugurated this union movement was carried by a vote of eight or nine with only one majority just an hour or two before the final adjournment in November, 1917 at Haw River, N. C. Why was not the matter allowed to come before the Conference at Reidsville, N. C., in November, 1918? I do not question the right of the Conferences to unite, but I do not think fair play has been shown. Why not let the people—the local churches—speak after a full presentation of the matter has been given them? I would not charge the manner in which this matter has been handled to ambition for ambition is sure to make or break something. The poet says, "By it the angels fell," and Caesar lost his crown, and an emperor has lost his. Then I say with the poet, "Fling away ambition." I enter my protest against the manner by which this union has been effected.

COLUMBUS, GEORGIA

Our Rose Hill church held a very interesting and helpful Watch Night Social, with a good attendance. The Duplex Envelope system is being introduced, which means the Every Member canvass too; the floors of the social rooms and the floor of the auditorium have been stained; new carpet placed in the aisles and on the platform. A very interesting Christmas entertainment was enjoyed by all present.

In December the Georgia and Alabama Conference held a short, hurried session in the North Highland church, this city. It has been postponed on account of the influenza epidemic.

NOTES

We regret to learn that Dr. J. H. Wilson, Dover, Delaware, is in feeble health.

Peloubet's Notes and Tarbell's Guide. We have them and can send by return mail.

A letter from Chaplain B. F. Black says: "I have written to 87 preachers and two of them have replied. They seem interested."

We chronicle with sadness the passing of Mrs. T. A. Jones, Norfolk, Va. Possibly the last letter she wrote was one to Dr. Atkinson in which she said: "Kindly hand the enclosed $5.00 to the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to send the paper to some worthy persons who are not able to pay for it." THE SUN never had a more constant reader or truer friend.

City Attorney, John H. Vernon, Burlington, N. C., died January 5, 1919, following an attack of Influenza and pneumonia. He was sick for several weeks and was, it seemed, on the road to recovery when a change came and he soon passed away. Mr. Vernon was a public spirited citizen, a man deeply interested in the work of his Church (the Baptist) and will be greatly missed. And for nearly three dozen times, from the effects of the "Flu," the hearse has moved slowly up the long street to the "city of the dead" taking off our best citizens.

Among the boys recently dying in France as members of our Church were Mr. Herbert H. Barber, a member of Shallow Ford church, and Mr. W. F. Odom, son of Mr. R. B. Odom, Bennett Creek, Va. Both these young men attended school at Elon College and their decease will be mourned by their many friends. Brother Barber graduated in the Class of '18 and Odom was scheduled to graduate this year, but left college to join the Colors. He will be remembered by former students as "Happy" Odom—a name rightly bestowed by his fellow students on account of his sunny disposition. To the parents we extend much sympathy.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT DEAD!

As we close our forms this (Monday) morning, news is received that Colonel Roosevelt was found dead in the bed this morning.

Theodore Roosevelt was born in New York, October 27, 1858 and was the twenty-sixth president of the United States. He graduated from Harvard in 1880; he also held degrees from notable institutions. He was a member of the New York Legislature in 1882-1884; resident of New York Police Board 1895, 1897; Assistant Secretary of the Navy 1897-1898 and resigned to organize the Rough Riders; Governor of New York January 1, 1899 to December 31, 1900; elected Vice-President of the United States March 4, 1900 and became president upon the death of William McKinley, September 14, 1901, and was elected president November 8, 1904 by the largest majority ever accorded a candidate up to that time. In 1906 he won the Nobel Peace prize of $40,000. Roosevelt was the author of many books, and a great politician, being in the last year or so a critic of the present administration.

Stewart of Birmingham, Alabama; Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler, General Counsel of the Anti-Saloon League of America; and Hon. Wm. H. Anderson of New York City.

Among prominent men of the State on the program are W. B. Cooper, State Senator from Wilmington; W. L. Poteat, L.L. D., President of Wake Forest College; W. T. Shaw, manufacturer of Weldon; Hon. O. M. Mull, representative from Cleveland and the law partner of Congressman E. Y. Webb; William Allen Harper, L.L. D., President of Elon College; Hon. W. O. Saunders, representative from Pasquotank; Hon. J. D. Eckles of Buncombe; Judge John A. Oates of Fayetteville; Rev. R. L. Davis, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League; Rev. L. S. Massey, Editor of the Raleigh Christian Advocate and Dr. W. S. Rankin, Secretary of State Board of Health.

It is expected that many churches, Sunday schools and other organizations will send delegates to this Convention, and that hundreds of citizens throughout the State who want to break up the blind tiger and blockade business will attend. All who attend have the rights and privileges of the floor as well as those sent as delegates.

DR. WELLONS SENDS THANKS

My dear Brother Riddle:—

I was never more surprised than I was on New Year's morning (my 93rd birthday) when Dr. Harper came to my room, before I had got up, and brought six or eight copies of THE CHRISTIAN SUN to me. I do not know how to express my surprise and gratification for that issue being dedicated to me, for I was not thinking of such a thing.

The issue contained articles from yourself and six other ministers, but I feel that all of you said more than was due me. I only wish that I was worthy of such such compliments. I try to live keeping my spiritual life and physical condition in readiness to meet the Master at His coming to take me to my spiritual home.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

THE NEED FOR CHRISTIAN COLLEGES

A small Christian college in New England, which recently celebrated the centennial of its birth, has never had, in the one hundred years of its existence, an attendance that exceeded one hundred students, yet its record of graduates shows 542 clergymen, 70 foreign missionaries, 102 college professors, 32 college presidents, 9 governors of states, and 15 members of congress.

De Pauw University, a Methodist institution, also numbers among its graduates 448 ministers and missionaries, 107 editors and journalists, 146 college professors, 57 college presidents, 5 governors, 15 members of congress, 2 cabinet officers, and a host of other public servants and useful citizens. These two illustrations, cited by the Methodist Episcopal Board of Education, are typical of what Christian colleges have been doing for civilization in the United States and foreign lands.

Careful tabulation shows that one Christian university sent more men and women into the foreign field than all the state universities of the country put together. The Student Volunteer Movement reports for a period of five years: foreign missionaries from Christian schools and colleges, 82 per cent; from state and city universities and schools, 13 per cent; miscellaneous, 5 per cent. From "hay-stack prayer-meeting" even until now the Christian college has been the dynamic of the missionary enterprise.—From The Missionary Review of The World for December.

ITEMS FROM ELON COLLEGE

The work of the winter and spring terms is to be resumed on Wednesday the 8th. The registration books will be open on Monday and Tuesday but the real rush, as is always the case after Christmas will be on the 8th.

As far as information reaching the registrar's office is concerned the prospect for the return of the students is quite bright. Sickness in a few homes will prevent some from returning, and one student, Miss Blanche Lee, has died during the holidays.

The greatest drop off will be in the S. A. T. C. men. It is expected that about fifty per cent of these men will return and resume their studies. The College would be glad for all of them to return and has agreed to give them credit for academic studies for the year's work if they should return after Christmas and pass their studies in the winter and spring terms. However, the prospect is that not more than fifty per cent of these men will resume their studies after Christmas.

The young men of the civilian population last fall and the young ladies seem to be planning to return in about the normal proportion of previous years, and withal the enrollment looks encouraging in view of all the circumstances.

The college has just published a forty-eight page bulletin which is styled "The S. A. T. C. Number." It is privated in the national colors and dedicated to "The Elon patriots in the world war with grateful esteem and honorable pride." This bulletin has before it the following purpose as quoted from the introductory paragraphs: "This bulletin is printed for its historical significance. The story of the Elon Students' Army Training Corps is told within, without vaneer or garbishment of any sort."

Careful examination of the bulletin reveals the fact that the thrilling tale of the S. A. T. C. is here told with strict fidelity to facts. It gives the complete history of the unit including the courses of study, and every detail of the work during the sixty-eight days of the unit's life.

Appended are two addresses by President Harper as interpreting the spirit of the college in entering into the S. A. T. C. arrangement.

On the concluding page of the bulletin is found this paragraph: "Students who were in the government service last fall will receive the same credit on the fall term's work they missed as they shall make on the winter term's work. This will enable them to complete the year in college. This applies to those who would have entered the Freshman class as well as those who have been students here before."

There will be no military training at Elon College this spring. The College was asked to apply for all R. O. T. C. and did, but today the application was withdrawn. Elon is glad as an S. A. T. C. College to have done her part toward breaking the Kaiser's spirit.

MOSES THE LEADER OF ISRAEL

Exodus 3:1-4:117.

Golden Text—Moses, indeed, was faithful in all his house. Heb. 3:5.

Additional Material For Teachers—Ex. 12:37-42; Num. 12:3-8; Deut. 34:10-12; Acts 7:17-36.

Primary Topic—God speaks to Moses.

Junior Topic—Moses called to be a leader.

Intermediate Topic—A champion of the oppressed.

Senior and Adult Topic—The World's Call for Leadership.

Additional Material—Same as for teachers.

God took eighty years to make Moses a leader. He sent him to school in his mother's house, and in the court of Pharaoh for forty years. Then He gave him forty years of wilderness life, solitude and silence, ungenial surroundings and heartaches. But with it all Moses remained keenly alive to the happenings around him. He did not draw into a shell because his endeavor to help his brethren was misunderstood. He saw and aided the Midianitish maidens at the well, and forty years later a burning bush attracts his immediate attention. He lived to see, to help and to learn. What about your work as a teacher? Did you take up the Teacher Training work during that "drive" last fall? What books have you read, what observation work have you done, what Teachers Helps do you take? God wants leaders today. The call for leadership has never been so loud and so insistent as now. Are you hearing it, and are you heeding?

Has your hymn book a selection of "Opening Exercise" in the back? Has it a number of selected Psalms for responsive reading? If so, do you ever use them? The responsive reading in the quarterly is very good, but it was never intended for use through the entire Quarter. Select your responsive reading and your hymns with care and thought in order that you may have one complete and perfect lesson, every part directed toward the same thought.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WORK

Rev. C. M. Dollar used to say the way to manage our young people in the church was to give them something to do and encourage them to do it. This opinion was shared by most of us. Many efforts were made to employ and encourage our young people. Sometimes they were asked to fill places on important committees. Sometimes to represent the church at important gathering when older and more experienced persons should have gone. All this was done mainly to encourage them, to make them feel they were a part of the church and that the church was interested in them and wanted to lead them into service for the Master. This was all an effort in the right direction but failed in many instances because backed up by no system upheld by no organized effort and in many instances the young were asked to do things beyond their ability. Consequently they sometimes became discouraged at the very things they were asked to do as an encouragement. Now no doubt the venerable Dr. Clark wrestled with these same problems as most pastors have. One day a bright idea came to him, it was the vision of the Christian Endeavor Society. This Society helps to solve the problem of giving employment to our young people of learning them to work in the Master's Kingdom. Dr. Clark's argument that there was no way to learn an individual to work so well as by giving him work to do for he says that you cannot teach a man to swim out of water. So this movement has grown from one little society nearly thirty-eight years ago to more than one hundred thousand societies at present. It has found a home in all Christian lands. It has even pushed its way with the church into the benighted heathen lands and wherever it has gone has carried sunshine and joy. Yet notwithstanding this fact many of our churches are still without Endeavor Societies. Many of our people are still strangers to this movement. Now comes the announcement, "A Board of Religious Education," has been incorporated to promote Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work. A part of their first year's program is a Christian Endeavor Society in every church of the Southern Christian Convention. I am proud of this Board and glad of its program. I am especially anxious to see a Christian Endeavor Society in all our churches. I believe the young people of our country churches are entitled to the best. I pray God's blessing upon this Board and their work.

Their vows were witnessed by only a few friends and relatives. The contracting parties are very popular in the social circles of Durham and are very useful members of the Christian church. We wish them long lives of usefulness and prosperity.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, God in His all-wise providence, has seen fit to call from labor to reward Brother Anis Harrison Liskey, our vice-president and active co-worker; therefore, we, the members of the New Hope Christian Endeavor Society wish to express our gratitude for the service he rendered while with us, and while we shall miss him in our meetings and deplore the loss to our services, yet we pray that our Heavenly Father will help us to bow in humble submission to His Divine will and to strive more earnestly to emulate the example of our deceased brother in faithful attendance and active service. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That in his death the Society has lost a consecrated worker, the church and Sunday school a faithful member and the community a worthy citizen.

2. That we extend to the bereaved family our deepest sympathy and, in we would commend them to the God of love and mercy.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread on the records of the Society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun and the Harrisonburg papers for publication.

UNDERWOOD

During the mist and rain on December 24, 1918 in the city of the dead at Concord Christian church, the infant of Rev. I. T. Underwood and wife was laid to rest in Mother earth. May the Lord, wise and good comfort and bless in the time of need.

How brief the stay, as beautiful as fleeting,
The time that baby came with us to dwell;
Just long enough to give a happy greeting,
Just long enough to bid us all farewell!
Death travels down the thickly settled highway,
At shining marks they say he loves to aim;
How did he find, far down our lonely by-way,
Our little one who died without a name."

L. L. WYRICK.

WHITE

Charles Nyack White, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., at Wilmington, N. C., died of pneumonia October 28, 1918, at 3 o'clock P. M., at Jas. Walker Memorial Hospital. The announcement of his death came as a distinct shock to his friends and cast a deep sense of sadness among the many people in the city who knew him and held him in high esteem because of his excellent character and for the magnificent service rendered by him during the epidemic of influenza.

From the beginning of the scourge he worked faithfully and untingringly to relieve the suffering patients stricken with influenza and pneumonia. As volunteer ambulance driver of the above named hospital, he carried numberless people to the hospital and was without doubt the means of saving the lives of many patients who would not have been able to reach the hospital had he not worked so relentlessly up until the very day he was forced to go to bed, himself stricken with influenza.

Mr. White was only twenty years old, a boy in years but a man in discretion and in the amount of service rendered the community. Although almost a stranger in the city, he did not hesitate to give his service in behalf of the people whom he had never seen before, and his memory will ever be kept green in the hearts of all who knew him. He devoted his time to relief work, rendering invaluable aid to the Red Cross and the hospitals.

Mindful of the unselfish devotion to duty and the embodiment of the true Red Cross spirit, his was the supreme sacrifice as truly as if his life blood had been poured upon the battle fields of France. "Greater love hath no man than this—that he lay down his life for his friends."

The above is a clipping from the Wilmington Daily paper, and in our judgment pictures most beautifully the life and character of our noble young brother.

When we stand over the lifeless form of a dear young friend taken all too soon, as we think, we wonder at the mysterious workings of an all wise Providence. We cannot understand why one so gentle, unselfish and good, and in the midst of his usefulness should be removed from the scene of his earthly labors, but we must remember that God is too wise to err and too good to be unkind and that He calls those whom He loveth. Why should not His jewels shine in His own home, even though ours be made dreary? These sentiments express the emotions of our hearts as we meditate upon the unselfish and beautiful life of our noble young brother.

The memory of his noble and unselfish young life in sacrificing his life blood for others, will linger with us as we make the pilgrimage of life, and inspire us to emulate the beautiful Christian virtues that adorn his character.

Resolved, that we extend our heartfelt sympathy, to the bereaved parents, brothers and sisters and his many friends in their great loss.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of our school, a copy be sent the family of our young brother and a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.

Citizenship

CITIZENSHIP is a term that world builders and world thinkers and reformers must study. All too long it has been confined to strict observance of the laws of the land without respect to the laws eternal and abiding. The things of earth and the things of heaven are so connected that citizenship in the full and true meaning of the word must embrace a loyal connection with both worlds. True citizenship not only prompts a man to defend his country but prompts him to help enlarge the Kingdom's work, for the kingdoms of earth shall become the kingdoms of our God.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.

EDITORIAL

BEATING THE PASTOR

"The janitor can beat the pastor any time," said a man in THE SUN office last week as he read the short editorial on "Cold Churches." He went his way and we went ours.

Again and again the words of our visitor come to us. Did he mean it? And so again we pondered and began to analyze it. The janitor can beat the pastor in the preparation for the service. He can have the house warm and comfortable, or if in summer, he can have the house well ventilated and arranged so that fresh air can be had. It is the poor ventilation that puts people to sleep—when it is not poor preaching.

So the janitor serves God in his work and as well as he does in his worship. "It is better to be a door keeper in the house of the Lord than to dwell in the tents of the wicked."

THE MINISTERIAL STUDENT AND THE CHURCH PAPER

We have noticed for years a certain thing in the Church that has to us become interesting and ought to concern every member. Our love and appreciation for the Church paper dates back to boyhood. Well do we remember the time and place where THE CHRISTIAN SUN used to come. We look back to a few years ago when we looked forward to the coming of THE CHRISTIAN SUN with the greatest delight.

We have always loved THE SUN. We say loved because that is what we mean; we more than like it. When in college, and when the paper was edited and printed at Elon College, we became accustomed to the mailing day of the paper and knew about the time it was carried to the post office. We confess with no apology that at least two or three times have been the trips to the post office in one afternoon with the hope of finding THE CHRISTIAN SUN in our box. It was a delight, a joy—and it is yet. After reading the "copy" one or more times, reading the proofs from one to three times and standing by the printers until the last page is made up, we do with delight go to the mailing room and get two copies for our files and a copy for private use with almost the same delight as if the pages were new.

And we say all this that you, dear reader, may understand why that we have noticed a certain thing of which we started out to speak about. That thing is this: The ministerial students who have stood by THE CHRISTIAN SUN during their college days have been the men who have graduated from college, ordained to the sacred office of an elder in the Church, and have since that time been making good. These are facts that are not fiction. They can be backed up by proof after proof. It is a temptation not to call names. We can name them by the half dozen of our acquaintance who have entered Elon College, joined the ministerial class, and are today not to be located. These facts have been brought to our mind recently in a more emphatic way because of our recent reading the "copy" and proof of the Christian Annual. Young men whom we once knew as fellow ministerial students in college are reported by the Educational Committee of the various conferences as being unconcerned about their work, and in many cases their whereabouts not even known. In practically every instance we recall that these young men had very little interest in their Church papers while in college. When a young man offers his services to his Church he ought to show with that offer an interest in the various enterprises of his denomination, and especially the publications of his denomination, because these things keep him in vital touch with the issues of his Church. We believe, and do hereby recommend, that the Educational Committee of each conference make this one important question in the examination for entrance to the Biblical class and for license: "Do you read your Church papers regularly?" It is high time that the Church awake from its slumber and cease to throw down its requirements so low that most any fellow can join the ministerial ranks.

A young man in training for the ministry ought to read every issue of as many of his denomination's papers as he can. There is no excuse why he should not because they are at his disposal in the college library. A course on Religious Journalism would not be a thing amiss in our colleges. (And certain elements in the course would lighten the burdens of an editor).

Let us bestir ourselves in seeing that young men who are offering themselves to the Church as preachers and teachers have an abiding interest in the publicity enterprises of their denomination. Those under whose control they are had better put them to a test than have the world do it. The diseases are many and there are remedies sufficient. May our doctors prescribe.

AN APPRECIATED LETTER

Among the good letters received during the last few days is the following which we very much appreciate: Dear Brother Riddle:—

I have just returned from a visit to Ramseur, N. C., and during my stay there I was talking over some things that were religious and some that were not with my grandmother, Mrs. A. J. Elliott, who is now eighty years old. During our conversation she asked for THE SUN, after receiving it she said: "This is the first paper that I read when a child, and it has been in our home each year since. I count the days from one issue until the next, and if I am to make any more sacrifices in order to have THE SUN I am willing to do so."

It gives me great pleasure, old college mate, to send you a check for my subscription if for no other purpose than to be a pleasure to my dear grandmother and a partial help to you. I wish you all the success that is possible for an editor to have, and should you ever venture within the boundaries of Franklin County, I extend to you and yours a sincere greeting.

Yours truly,
W. C. Poe.

NATIONAL JUNIOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WORKER COMING

Miss Grace Hooper of Nebraska, National Superintendent of Junior Christian Endeavor, will be in Burlington and Graham on January 21.

Miss Hooper is a brilliant young woman and an exceptionally fine speaker. She has traveled extensively and is the best authority in North America on religious work for children in Junior Christian Endeavor Societies, Mission Bands, Epworth Leagues and B. Y. P. U's. It is hoped that she will get a great hearing in our cities.

Miss Hooper's schedules of meetings in these cities include a Junior Rally for all the boys and girls at 4:00 P. M., in the Burlington Christian church, a conference with the Junior leaders after this rally and a great Young People's Rally at 7:45 P. M., in the Graham Presbyterian church. To these meetings everybody is cordially invited.

We ought to make this day a memorable one in our cities for religious work for the children.

Miss Hooper comes to us with the endorsement of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, the All-South Christian Endeavor Extension Committee, the State Christian Endeavor Union and the personal commendation of many religious workers of world-wide and national reputation.

An offering will be received at the evening rally for the work of the State Christian Endeavor Union.

Brother W. E. McCleeny, Suffolk, Va., seems to be pleased with THE SUN from this note in a recent letter to the Editor: "I must congratulate you upon your paper for the past few weeks. You are doing your part, and if the preachers will give you the news from the field, it will be an excellent paper, and by so doing the interest of the local churches will be greatly increased."

Brother Alva H. Morrill, Woodstock, Vermont, writes: "Here is my check for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Your new heading arrangement is an improvement. You Southern brethren are outdistancing us of the North."

WHY OCCASIONALLY?

So many of the brethren do not write to THE SUN except occasionally. Why not often, even if the note be short, for that is the kind that is read? No pastor should mind spending a few dollars for postage and stationery in order that his people may be represented in the Church organ. But why write about local matters all the time? Why not let the readers of THE SUN have a few quotations from some of your sermons? And why not a sermon occasionally? A sermon does not have to be long enough to fill half the paper. If this be the case the Sermon on the Mount was not a sermon. Let us have the news so that what is in THE SUN cannot be found elsewhere until it is reprinted from it. Readers like a paper that gives them something that they cannot find elsewhere.

RANDOM PARAGRAPHS

The last time that I wrote "Random Paragraphs" dates back to a time beyond the "Flu," and since that has hindered so many of you from doing what you had hoped to. I am sure that you will understand my silence.

In college days I read of a man—one of the great poets—who carried his pencil and paper in his hand and jotted down all his best thoughts. That is a good idea and should be followed by many of us lest we have the gems of thought that come to us.

There is a man who sweeps the streets in my town. I meet him each morning on my way to the office. His happy "good morning" gives me cheer and I have the greatest respect for him. The sound of his scrape on the pavement is a song of no mean sound.

And there is another man whom I often meet. He is never well and the day is too—well something, first one thing and then another. Excuse me, Mr. Grumbler, I pity you.

I asked a man the other day if he believed in tithing and he replied that he had been thinking about it. That is a good step in the direction of doing anything. Thinking precedes action.

It is a pleasure to edit a paper when friends are so kind and loyal. Thank you, good friends, for such loyal support.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

FAMILY WORSHIP

In things social, as well as in things individual, God calls upon men to have faith in him, and in His wisdom appoints a way in which those who do trust Him may give outward and tangible expression to their faith. No man lives to himself alone. The blessing and progress of the world are inseparable from the united experience and co-operation of groups of men and women. The unit of these groups is the family. Accordingly when God proclaimed through Moses the Ten Commandments of His moral law, He gave orders that they should be faithfully observed and promulgated in every household, saying: "These words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart; and thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up. And thou shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes. And thou shalt write them upon the posts of thine house and on thy gates."

Abraham was called the "friend of God," and Jehovah himself thus defined the strong bond of friendship of friendship between them: "I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord." Joshua, the great commander, who brought God's people into the land of promise, revealed the secret of his greatness in his challenge to them toward the close of his life: "Choose you in this day whom you will serve; . . . as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

In the New Testament especial care is taken to make mention of the fact that the noble tradeswoman, Lydia of Thyatira, was a believer in family religion, for upon hearing the precious news of the gospel of Christ, she was baptized, with all her household. It is also recorded of Cornelius, the Roman centurion, that he feared God, with all his house. Moreover, where can the assurance of our Lord, that where two or three are gathered together in his name he is in the midst of them, find more frequent or more natural fulfillment than when father and mother and children come together at the family altar day by day to meet with God?

Lord and insistent have been the complaints of a lack of young men for the ministry, of a disregard for the sacredness of the Lord's Day, of the meager attendance of worshippers in the Lord's house, of the conspicuous silence of elders and deacons, and of the other men who are sometimes found in the week day meetings of God's people, when there is a call for prayer. The humble, faithful setting up of the family altar in every Christian home and beginning the day there with God would revolutionize the moral and spiritual condition of the world in both Church and State. All history will verify the truth of this statement.

God has promised, "Them that honor me I will honor;" and the pages of history show with perfect distinctness that the world's greatest men and women, the world's greatest benefactors, the world's truest, purest, best spirits have come from homes in which the family altar was reared and honored. Students for the ministry may be reaped in schools and colleges; but they are sown in Christian homes; and where, because of lack of family devotion, there is a meager sowing of the seed, it is hopeless to expect, no matter how great an effort may be put forth, to reap large and satisfactory harvests of workers after home has been left behind.

God's order for a prosperous and happy people is, first, prayer in secret, then the prayer of two or three united; first, the praying Christian, then the praying family, then the praying Church, then the outpoured blessing on the Church and family and community. That grand old missionary, John G. Paton, speaking of his father, says: "In his seventeenth year began that blessed custom of family prayer, morning and evening, which my father practiced probably without one single omission until he lay on his deathbed, seventy-seven years of age; when, even to the last day of his life, a portion of Scripture was read and his voice was heard softly joining in the Psalm, and his lips breathed the morning and evening prayer, falling in sweet benediction on the heads of all his children, far away, many of them over all the earth, but all meeting him there at the throne of grace. None of us can ever remember that any day ever passed unhalloved thus. No hurry for market, no rush to business, no arrival of friends or guests, no trouble or sorrow, no joy or excitement ever prevented at least our kneeling around the family altar, while the high priest led our prayers to God and offered himself and his children there. And blessed to others as well as to ourselves was the light of such an example."

It was good in God's eyes that Abraham should bring up his household to know and fear him; that Joshua should serve the Lord himself and lead his household in that service; that the father of this glorious missionary should worship God in the bosom of his family for sixty years, every single day; and it is good in God's sight for all Christian parents to do likewise.

Two principal objections are urged. The first is the lack of time. Some family prayers may take a long time, but the best are brief. Ideal family prayers do not call for the reading of long chapters or the making of long prayers. "I remember," wrote a devoted and gifted Christian woman, "being very much impressed by a scene in a home where I chanced to be a guest. The father was a business man with large interests depending on him, and at least four of the family daily had to take an early train to the city. When I heard the hour announced for breakfast and saw the

"HOLDING THE ROPES"

I did not know till the other day where we got "Holding the Ropes" from. Here is its derivation, I am told, "We saw there was a gold mine in India," said Andrew Fuller, in 1793, after listening to the stirring words of John Thomas, who had been pleading for India, "but it seemed almost as deep as the center of the earth. Who will venture to go and explore it?" we asked. "I will go down," responded William Cary, "but remember that you must hold the ropes." We who are at home are the rope holders. Our missionaries have gone down for us. Their safety and their efficiency are with us. I wonder if we pray for our missionaries as we should, and do all we can to hold the ropes while they go down?

WHAT IS BEING DONE?

I wonder what is being done to reach the three objectives set for ourselves by the Southern Christian Convention at Franklin, Va., last May? Unless something is done, it will have been of little or no use for the Convention to have debated and adopted the matter. And the closing of the war has made the attainment of these objectives more essential than has been realized.

Briefly stated the three goals are these:

1. The securing of one hundred new recruits giving all their time and strength as ministers and missionaries to advance the kingdom of our blessed Christ in the world.

2. Along with these we have set out to improve our financial system by adopting in every church, the Every-Member Canvass with the envelope system of collections.

3. That to make the envelope system easy and the financial problem a pleasure and not a burden, we are to teach Church members the law by tithing and get them to adopt the same.

As to the first goal: Are we taking this matter seriously? Have we realized that we must have workers to take the place of those who have gone out from us or who by age or death can no longer prosecute the work of the Church? God will give us the needed workers to carry forward the kingdom when we human beings lay the matter upon our hearts and beg Him to supply the same. One of the mightiest religious and even evangelical factors in the recent war was the Y. M. C. A. This organization secured its recruits by well-planned and persistent efforts. The Church will secure its recruits when it likewise adopts well-planned and persistent efforts. We may not reach the matter as rapidly as did the Y. M. C. A. but we may do so as effectually. There must, however, be effort and prayer and the expression of the real need before the response will come. It is doubtful if God ever supplies any human want until the need thereof has been felt and expressed. All through the ministry of Christ while here on earth, individuals and situations were relieved and made fit and proper only when human beings realized and expressed the need. A notable example of this was when Christ was asleep upon a pillow in the ship that was likely to sink. The winds were furious and the waves boisterous and the ship was filling. But the Master of men and waves moved not to relieve the situation until appealed to by human beings who sorely felt the distress of their direful situation. I am wondering what is to hinder every pastor in the Christian Church from announcing to his congregation the need of ministers and missionaries and then ask the people of the congregation, after the need has been set forth, to unite in prayer with him to God that He will give the workers. This kind cometh but prayer. If we meant what we did at Franklin, it is certainly time we were proving the same by our deeds.

The second objective is certainly a necessity. There is abundance of money in the hands of Christian people with which to carry forward the Lord's work. And the only reason why that money is not available is because of the poor or indifferent management in securing the funds. The Every-Member-Canvass and the envelope system have been tried out and they have not been found wanting. They have solved the financial problem so far as I have learned in every Church where they have been tried. Give them a good trial in your Church and you will, I believe, see a revolution there in the financial situation.

And then the third objective is by no means to be neglected. The real joy of giving is never realized until adopted for oneself the law of the tithe. God never had any law enacted or taught in His Word for the cramping, the harm, or the impoverishment of His people. The law of the tithe is no exception, and the people who have practiced it through the years have not become poorer, but richer. There is a reason for this. Any individual who adopts this law will keep a closer accounting with himself for funds received and expended and will know at the end of the year what he is doing. When the time of giving comes he is not pinched or strained as those are who have not adopted the law but simply gives from the tenth that he has laid aside for this purpose. If Christian people generally would adopt the law of the tithe, there would be enough money in the Lord's treasury with which to send the gospel to every nation, community and peoples on earth within ten years. We are not going to have permanent peace in the world until it is made and kept in the name of the Prince of Peace. And if Christian peoples will give of their men and money in the next ten years one-half of what they have had to give for our war the past two years, this world will be taken for Christ and the kingdoms of this earth shall become the kingdoms of our Lord. Can't we, Brethren and Beloved, pull together and pray together and strive together for the carrying out of the plan so wisely adopted by our Convention and the achievement of the objectives which the Convention so timely set? May our Father's wisdom help us, and His blessings be upon us as we go about His work as becometh faithful servants.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

THANKS, THANKS

To my many friends:

I thank you all for your kind remembrances of more than fifty Christmas and New Year cards and letters on my ninety-third birthday. Also for the many nice presents, among which was fifteen dollars in money. I wish I could write to each separately but there are too many. At this writing I am in my usual good health but cannot walk very much because of the lack of strength in my lower limbs.

A POUNDING AND A PURSE

Just two or three days before Thanksgiving, this writer received a telephone message ordering him to stay at home for the afternoon, this message stating that "company" was coming. Not knowing what else to do, the coming of the "company" was awaited with all the patience it was possible to summon under the circumstances. By and by the ringing of the door bell announced the arrival of the short while expected guests, whose names, whose number, and whose mission in coming were not revealed until the door swung back its welcome to five ladies who had come to represent Berea church in charging upon the pastor's pantry with a generous quantity of good things for our table. This was a genuine, good old-fashioned country pounding, such as the Berea people like to "pull off" on their pastor.

On Sunday before Christmas two friends at Rosemont, representing other friends of this church and Sunday school, sprung another surprise for the pastor and his family when a purse amounting to $58.50 was handed the undersigned. Accompanying this remembrance, or rather as a large part of it, was a written statement expressing the church's appreciation for the relationship that exists between pastor and people, which statement can not be forgotten soon.

For these evidences of love and good-will towards us, on the part of the people whom we are trying to serve, we fail to find any words sufficiently strong to express our appreciation. Such kindness and consideration moves our hearts with the desire to do our utmost in the interest of the pastorate where we labor.

NO LONGER IN NEWPORT NEWS

More than a year ago an announcement was made concerning my willingness to assist the boys in uniform who were stationed in Newport News, Virginia. This I did on condition that pastors, parent and church secretaries would notify me of the arrival of their friends in that city. It is the present need of that work that calls forth this note.

While in that city I did all I could to find the boys and render any assistance possible to them. While doing so I was amply paid for all the service I rendered by the many friends made among men from all sections of our Church. Some of the letters from mothers of these men expressing their appreciation of my service, would make the heart of any man leap for joy. God bless every one of them and bring their boys back home again. Thanks to every one who sent a name.

Since the boys are returning, letters are again flooding my office concerning these men. I am using the Church papers to notify all parties concerned that since I have taken charge of the First Christian church, Greensboro, N. C., I am more than 200 miles from Newport News, and can no longer give any time to that face of the work. This will save expense of correspondence to both you and my office work.

SUFFOLK LETTER

(A letter from Chaplain Rev. B. F. Black)

My dear Doctor Staley:—

I am settled down at last and am happy in my new found task, though I had to search for it. After covering five hundred miles of rail, seeing something of Brest Tours, Le Mons, Angers, Nantes, am now here. I have walked where Caesar's legions trod two thousand years ago, seen the hand-work of the slaves in the days B. C.—walls, towers, catacombs. I have slept in a place erected in the tenth century. Have seen the chateau which was begun in Caesar's day, also the lookout tower and fortifications made in those days and during one hundred years were walls and motes.

I have spent nearly ten days in a Chaplain school in Chateau, where the gates now stand ajar and the motes forever dry. The sound of the bugle announcing the coming of God and Master has long since died away.

The lake, a part of defense, is no longer the lounging place for sweet maidens; lillies no longer perfume the air. Every peasant will tell you the love of the country. Today the remnant of departed glory is held together by a Count—who married a Chicago lady and with $40,000.00 of her father's money bought "all this I have said." Poor deluded—no undeluded lass. Yet a countess-to-be of fourteen is quite American.

The school of Chaplains covers from Seattle, Washington, to New York. Chaplains from the front rest here, some gassed and some crippled, many of whom will have to stay at some base hospital or camp for further service. They have done their bit and the gas will from two to five years do its deadly bit. Yet it is all in the big game we are playing.

I am nicely fixed here. Happy in the service of my country and in His name. I move from 7:00 A. M. to 11:00 P. M., doing my bit. I walk from five to eight miles daily. Have the best of health now. Go days without water—only coffee or tea at meals. How would you like a funeral every day? Suppose you had fifty, or suppose you were called to assist in a procession of one hundred and fifty? Would you enjoy going in and out of a meningitis ward, or pneumonia, or scarlet fever or diptheria? Oh, well what is the use to ask the question? "Stand not upon the ordinary going, but go." You leave your nerves and fear of death in the hotel before you sail.

I think of you all daily and look on the wall at the "Bonnie lasses" and count not the days to my embarking but rather steel myself for each new day's task with but a single thought. You are too far off to know; your newspaper is but a scrap of paper.

The U. S. A. is here two million strong. Cities grow up in a day. There is everything here except a cotton mill. Plenty to eat and wear. Our boys are delivering the goods and "going west" without a murmur. I have not had a line from the United States, but hope to get letters now as I am settled and Uncle Sam can put his finger on me. I know my dear ones are in good hands so why should I worry? Regards to all.

DEATHS FROM DIPHTHERIA TO BE INVESTIGATED

The State Board of Health of North Carolina has centered its guns, to use the figure of the day, upon another disease—diphtheria. For several years typhoid fever, tuberculosis, malaria and other easily preventable diseases have been objects of the Board's attack. As a result of a continued warfare on the causes of these diseases the State's death rate has been reduced till now it one of the lowest in the Union. Deaths from typhoid fever alone have decreased from 839 in 1914 to 502 in 1918. In other words, 337 lives during the year 1918 were saved as a result of the Board's warfare on typhoid fever.

The Board has decided that 400 deaths from diphtheria a year, particularly since the prevention of this disease has been made so easy and put within reach of all the people, are entirely too many and should not be. Therefore, it proposes to adopt a new policy in dealing with this disease. The plan to make a careful investigation by a trained epidemic ologist of each death from diphtheria for the purpose of placing the responsibility of the death. The Board holds that whenever a death occurs from this disease, some one has blundered, some one failed to give the antitoxin in time.

Before inaugurating this new policy of dealing with deaths from diphtheria, the Board made provision whereby the people of the State are to be furnished diphtheria antitoxin practically free of cost. The charge for the package, irrespective of its size, whether it contains 1,000 units or 10,000 units, is twenty-five cents, which is the cost of the syringes and the package and not the antitoxin.

UNCLE SAM'S INSURANCE

To the Soldiers and Sailors of America:—

Approximately four million officers and men of the Army and Navy are now insured with the United States for a grand total of almost thirty-seven billion dollars.

You owe it to yourself and to your family to hold on to Uncle Sam's insurance. It is the strongest, safest, and cheapest life insurance ever written.

For your protection Uncle Sam has established the greatest life insurance company in the world—a company as mighty, as generous, and as democratic as the United States Government itself. Just as Uncle Sam protected you and your loved ones during the war, so he stands ready to continue this protection through the days of readjustment and peace.

The privilege of continuing your Government insurance is a valuable right given to you as part of the compensation for your heroic and triumphant services. If you permit the insurance to lapse, you lose that right, and you will never be able to regain it. But if you keep your present insurance—by the regular payment of premiums—you will be able to change it into a standard Government policy without medical examination. Meantime you can keep up your present insurance at substantially the same low rate. The Government will write ordinary life insurance, twenty-payment life, endowment maturing at age 62, and other usual forms of insurance. This will be Government insurance—at Government rates.

The United States Government—through the Bureau of War Risk Insurance of the Treasury Department—will safeguard you and your loved ones with the spirit and purpose of a Republic grateful to its gallant defenders. To avail yourself of this protection, you must keep up your present insurance. Carry back with you to civil life, as an aid and an asset, the continued insurance protection of the United States Government.

Hold on to Uncle Sam's insurance.

THE RAINBOW FAIRIES

Two little clouds one summer's day
Went flying through the sky;
They went so fast they bumped their heads,
And both began to cry.

Old Father Sun looked out and said,
"Oh, never mind, my dears;
I'll send the little fairy folk
To dry your falling tears."

One fairy came in violet,
And one in indigo;
In blue, green, yellow, orange, red—
They made a pretty row.

They wiped the cloud tears all away,
And then, from out the sky,
Upon a line the sunbeam made,
They hung their gowns to dry.

Burlington's new Christian church is about enclosed and the work continues.

It looks as if we are not about to have a "winterless" winter. We have had so many things during the last year with the less on them.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

The Forward Movement Rally

As soon as it was decided that the Executive Board of the American Christian Convention, the Mission Board, and the Sunday School Board would be holding meetings at the same time in Dayton, Ohio, we planned for a Forward Movement rally at the First Christian church, December 8. The banquet took place at 7 o'clock and some seventy-five sat down to the splendid dinner provided by the ladies of the church. The orchestra, the male quartett, rendered splendid music. The Forward Movement song was led by Rev. Pressley E. Zartmann; Rev. R. H. McDaniel, the author of "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," sang that song that has been sung in almost every church. There were thirty ministers from the Christian Church, and a large number of churches within a radius of thirty miles were represented. Rev. E. D. Hammond brought fourteen of his laymen from his pastorate thirty miles away. Rev. Hiley Baker brought fourteen from Eaton church some twenty-five miles away. The auditorium was decorated with Forward Movement mottoes and slogans. A committee from the United Brethren Forward Movement and another from the Methodist church interested in the Centenary were present to get suggestions and learn of our program.

The speakers were Rev. Dr. F. G. Coffin, the President of the Forward Movement Committee who brought the opening message of the evening and set forth the imperative need of the Movement in these wonderful times in which we are living and briefly outlined the Movement. President W. A. Harper sent a message on the first point of the campaign—Devotion—which paper was read by Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, N. C.; Mr. Hermon Eldredge, our Religious Education Secretary, came from Camp Upton and spoke on "Religious Education." Mrs. M. T. Morrill spoke on "Missions" in a most telling way. The Superintendent closed the evening messages and showed how we just must meet our goal of a half million dollars for the work of the Church and the Kingdom, and expressed his confidence that our people are ready to go forward together in this plan which seems to be surely Providential in its plan and time. We believe that our Forward Movement program is the answer of the Christian Church to the Divine call of God. He urged the thirty ministers to build church programs around these points, and to see that their conference and institute programs were so constructed, and asked them to hold similar rallies in their churches with groups from several churches present. We hope our pastors will plan for just such rallies in many sections. Pastor Howsare and his people did everything possible to make the meeting a splendid success. The spirit was fine, the attendance large and many pledged themselves to the Forward Movement work.

We expect soon to have a Sunday school Forward Movement program ready to announce. We are now working it out with the Sunday School Board and we are already asking our Sunday School Superintendents and their Sunday School Councils to prepare to take it up at the very announcement of the program.

We are thoroughly convinced that one of our great needs in the Forward Movement work is to work out a definite church program in each congregation. We would urge every pastor with his church officials to work out a definite program for his congregation. Make out a tentative program, work to it, center the minds of the Church on it, prepare for it. It will greatly help. Some of our workers are doing that very thing with great profit. We are expecting to tell you about it soon. Incorporate all five of the Forward Movement fundamentals.

Have you realized that the Christian Church of which you are a part is responsible for no less than one million souls who have no Christian light as yet? All this aside from those who have not found Christ but know about Him in our many fields at home and abroad. We are responsible for giving the light to a million who have never yet heard. Have you ever felt your responsibility in the sight of God? Has not God called you to go? Has He not called you to give? Has He not called you to pray? Yes, to pray, that is the hardest of all.

Things Are Being Done

Rev. Fred Cooper, Clemons, Iowa, says: "I have been giving my people sermons on the Forward Movement, and have been working to get the church better organized for work. I have gotten the official board to agree to the budget system. Am making the Every-Member canvass."

Rev. Raymond G. Clark, Neb., says: "I want to tell you what a joy it was to preach a series of five sermons on the Forward Movement. The points seem so logically arranged, the goals set forth are within the reach of every willing church. They are inspiring to ambitious people. Mine are pleased. Am sending you prayer covenants. We are putting on the Every-Member canvass this year. All bills are paid, pastor paid in advance, and money in the treasury."

The First Church, Dayton, Ohio, observed "Religion in the Home" Sunday in December and the Superintendent preached a sermon on that theme. He also presented the Sunday school Forward Movement program to the Sunday School Council meeting of teachers and officers and church officers.

Rev. A. W. Sparks, Argos, Indiana, asks, "As Secretary of Sunday Schools both of the Northwestern Indiana, and the Indiana State Conference, I would like to know how I can best use my office to further the Forward Movement? I want to do my utmost to make the Movement win in Indiana as elsewhere. I am now preaching a series of sermons on the Forward Movement." With that kind of a spirit the Forward Movement cannot but be a great help to the churches and accomplish its purpose.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Dear Friends:—We are still climbing toward our goal of five thousand dollars for our Thanksgiving offering. We now just lack $279.40 being at the mark. We must reach it. Too near now to give up. We believe our people are too much interested now to fail in this undertaking. We must close up the books for the year and have from now till the 22nd, to reach this goal; my next letter could not reach you before that date, so this will be my last appeal for the Thanksgiving offering for the year 1918.

I have a little secret I am very anxious to tell you and want to reach this goal first. If you will push me up to it by the 22nd I will let you know the secret.

We have more than one hundred churches that have not made this offering. It is my earnest desire that each church take a part.

Now to make sure we reach the goal I am going to ask that ten men mail me a check for $10.00 each. Twenty men mail me a check for $5.00 each and seventy-nine women mail me check for $1.00 each. Let these checks be mailed on January 20 so they will reach me by the 22nd. When you read this letter and you are anxious to reach this goal, and I know you are, make up your mind which one of these amounts you feel that you want to give and then call up your neighbors and ask them to join in with you and mail their checks too and by this earnest co-operation right at this critical time—right at the end of the race when we want to reach the goal. I feel sure we can get enough friends of the Institution interested to put us across the line.

I received a letter from a good sister this week enclosing check for $10.00 saying that we must reach the goal. How encouraging those words were! They put spice and energy in our being to not give up but to put forth greater efforts not only to reach the goal set but go over the top.

Now my friends, let us all make one more effort. All make one hard pull for the next week. All pull together with earnest co-operation and make this undertaking a success.

I have faith in your earnest co-operation. I believe you want to see me reach this goal. I know it will bring you happiness as well as myself to see that our church can do things.

Now for our final effort to go over the top.

MONEY—SPENT OR MISSPENT?

The "Baptist Commonwealth" points out that according to Dr. W. E. Biederwolf, of the Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America, in a report made last year, we spend our money for various objects, as follows: All missions, twelve million dollars; chewing gum, twenty-one millions; millinery, ninety millions; soft drinks, one hundred and twenty millions; candy, two hundred millions; theatres, seven hundred and fifty millions; jewelry, eight hundred millions; tobacco, one billion, two hundred millions; intoxicating liquors, two billions. About $450 for luxury and appetite for every dollar given to missions.

The importance of Sunday schools, churches and all other organizations working with the North Carolina State Board of Health in its efforts to save baby lives is seen from the fact that 11,745 infants under five years of age die in North Carolina every year; over 2,600 of these result from diarrheal diseases, while over 2,000 result from congenital debility, lack of care, and other conditions due to the ignorance of the mother during the first month of the baby's life. These diseases and conditions are for the most part preventable.

WITH EYES OF FAITH

By Frances M'Kinnon Morton

O young New Year, just come today
To lead us out an unknown way!
A strange new path before you lies,
And hidden dreams are in your eyes.

The way you go you will not tell,
And what you bring is hidden well.
But keep your secrets, brave New Year;
The heart that trusts shall know no fear.

With eyes of faith we calmly look
Upon your new, unopened book;
Since God, who holds almighty power,
Is guardian of its every hour.

In ten months of 1918 the Ballard School of the Young Women's Christian Association in New York gave 1,856 business courses; 1,155 volunteers passed through its volunteer clearing house; it enrolled 9,636 in war work; served 202,792 in its cafeteria; there were 20,039 registrations in its employment department, and 10,120 in physical education.

Mrs. K. B. Way—I have been taking THE SUN for eighteen years, and it gets better all the time. Let THE SUN shine on.

scurrying about in the rooms upstairs to be ready at the appointed minute, I said to myself: 'There will evidently be no family worship in this home, yet this is one of the best men in the world.' I was mistaken. The moment the bell sounded through the house—and it sounded on the second—the large family came trooping in; even the baby was there. But instead of seating themselves at the table, they knelt, the servant in waiting kneeling with the rest. The father, on his knees, read from a pocket Bible this verse: 'Blessed is every one that feareth the Lord, that walketh in his ways.' Then he prayed: 'Father, we thank thee for the rest of the night and the peace and promise of the morning. As we each go on our appointed ways, may we go in the fear of the Lord and in the confidence that He will guide our steps. May we be faithful in our work, doing it always with the thought of thine eyes upon us and with the love of the Master whom we serve strong in our hearts. And this we ask for Jesus' sake. Amen!' This is not the highest ideal of family prayer. God's mercies are too rich to be properly acknowledged in two minutes, with only one verse of Scripture and no song of praise. But acceptable and blessed worship may go up to God in two minutes."

There is an old-fashioned but fearfully true warning in the ninth Psalm about the fate of those nations that forget God. Let us have a nation-wide rearing of family altars, lest we forget. This is God's own antidote to forgetfulness, and it is infallible.—John G. Gebhard, D. D., in the Mission Field.

LITTLE RED CROSS WORKERS

Not long ago the Red Cross chapter in Bay City, Mich., received a hurry-up call for one hundred and fifty-dunnage bags. Troops were about to move and, through an oversight, their equipment was not complete. The bags had to be made and sent within forty-eight hours. A request for help was sent over the town, and the stores were searched successfully for the right materials.

Among those who quickly responded and came to the chapter work-rooms to help were two little girls, sisters, about ten and twelve years of age, each eager to lend a hand and do something for the boys who were going to the front. All day long the fingers of the women and the little girls were fairly flying. Bag after bag received the last stitch, until scores were piled up, ready for shipment.

Closing time came, and the woman superintending the making of the bags counted those completed and announced that if every one of the workers would come early the next morning and work all day the bags would surely be finished in time for shipping by evening. Two erstwhile little girls, the little sisters, were waiting for her at the door as she departed.

"We are awfully sorry, ma'am," said the older of the two, "but we can't come back tomorrow. You see tomorrow we have to—." And, without finishing the sentence, she looked back wistfully at the pile of bags.

"It is too bad you can't come back," said the superintendent, "but I want to thank you, and we all thank you, for the work you've done today. You two have been a wonderful help, and that pile of bags wouldn't be nearly so big if you hadn't been here. Good-night."

The next morning, when the superintendent came down to unlock the work-rooms for the day, she was astonished to see the two little girls standing in the cold by the locked door.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you!" she said. "I thought you said you couldn't come."

"Oh, we know those Red Cross bags just had to be finished for the soldiers," exclaimed the little one, with glistening eyes, "and we got up at three o'clock this morning and got the washing done early!"

A SOLDIER'S STOCKING

Rosabel had knit almost around before she discovered it; then her brow puckered into an impatient frown. What was one dropped stitch, anyhow? She kept right on knitting stubbornly. Isabel's stocking was an inch longer than hers already. She couldn't afford to ravel any out. One little stitch way up in the leg wouldn't matter much; no one could see it.

Perhaps it wouldn't matter at first, but Rosabel knew that it would matter a very great deal after a while, when the stocking was being worn—that the tiny hole would eat its way clear to the top.

But eliek, eliek, eliek her needles went on keeping time with Isabel's, and every moment it seemed harder to ravel back to the dropped stitch.

The twins were each knitting a pair of stockings for the soldiers. Grandmother, who had come to visit them, was showing them how. They were very proud of being able to do something to help their country in time of need. Already they had finished one stocking and were well started upon the second. They knit an hour each day, and it was surprising how fast the stockings grew; but the longer they got the more miserable Rosabel became.

"Won't the soldier who gets these be glad? Won't his toes be nice and warm? I wonder if it is very cold in the trenches?" Isabel said. They had been chatting merrily, but now Rosabel was strangely silent.

"I'm going to write my name on a little slip of paper and put it in the toe of mine," Isabel said proudly. 'Isabel Blair; age, twelve years.' Don't you think the soldiers would like to know who made them? I'll be so proud of mine."

Rosabel hung her head miserably. Pride in her work was marred by the knowledge of the dropped stitch. When they were finished she pinned her pair together, so the dropped stitch would not be discovered, and went away where she could not hear grandmother's praises. It seemed almost like telling a lie to accept praise when she did not deserve it.

That night father read to them about the sufferings of the soldiers, of the cold, wet trenches and of the long, frozen marches when their feet left bloody stains upon the snow.

After they had gone to bed Rosabel lay and thought and thought until she could stand it no longer. She got up and went into the sewing-room and found her stocking; then she sat down and unraveled it round by round until it came to the dropped stitch; then, after she had knit a little, just to know that she had started right, she went back to bed and went to sleep.

When grandmother knew, she said that that stocking was worth more to Rosabel than it would be to the soldier who was to wear it, for it gave her the opportunity to prove that she had the courage to acknowledge her mistakes and to rectify them, too.—The Child's Gem.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE STUDENTS' ARMY TRAINING CORPS

Letter of Transmittal

Major Ralph Barton Perry,
Committee on Education and Special Training,
Mills Building,
Washington, D. C.

Dear Major Perry:—

I am greatly pleased to hand you herewith three copies of our estimate of the S. A. T. C. here as requested, and I am mailing under separate cover three copies of a bulletin we have issued in commemoration of the S. A. T. C. on our campus.

If there is any further service I can render you in this connection, or in any other, it will be a pleasure.

With every good wish to you, I am

Yours sincerely,

Report

Name of Institution—Elon College.

Type of Institution—Denomination Co-educational.

Location of Institution—Elon College, N. C.

Report made by—W. A. Harper, President.

1. We enrolled the same number of students in 1917-18 as in 1916-17; it is possible that we should have enrolled our full 400 students in 1918-19.

2. During 1917-18 201 men enrolled at Elon College and 112 were inducted into the S. A. T. C.

3. I suspect that 85 per cent of the S. A. T. C. men would have enrolled at Elon under normal conditions. Perhaps the estimate should be higher than this.

4. I suspect that we will lose 50 per cent of the S. A. T. C. men. This loss will come from the Freshmen. It was their first experience in college and not liking the military discipline they thought this was the spirit of the college, and so, as I have said about 50 per cent of them will not return.

5. (a) We were among the first colleges in this section to have the influenza epidemic; a few over 300 cases were reported with only three deaths. We did not even stop our recitation work for half a day because of it. However, the epidemic, of course, interfered with our work somewhat.

(b) Late inductions did not interfere with the work because the men were here and in classes even though they were not inducted.

(c) No students were withdrawn from the unit here for officers' training camps.

(d) Extra military duties during the month of October greatly interfered with the academic work, but this was the fault of the Commanding Officer and not of the system.

6. We found no difficulty in meeting the suggestions of the Committee in respect to the academic program.

7. We could detect no difference in interest on the part of the students in their academic work as compared with peace times after Captain Lord reached Elon, but during the time that Lieutenant Wilson was in charge the S. A. T. C. men were given to understand that the academic work did not count for much and there was a notable dropping off.

8. Our faculty was thoroughly sympathetic toward the combination of military interests with the academic work, and we found the combination worked out well in practice.

9. The academic work done by the members of the S. A. T. C. was of sufficient value to warrant credit for a degree here. Of course, some of the men failed to make their work for one reason or another, but for the most part the work was satisfactory and credit will be given.

10. "Supervised study" made us all its friends.

11. The course on the issues of the war was highly satisfactory. It was a capital idea to require this course.

12. The relations between the academic and military authorities here were strained and unsatisfactory to us during the time that Lieutenant Robert I. Wilson was Commanding Officer. He seemed to think we were a camp, that the college traditions counted for nothing and we were constantly in conflict with him. When Captain Franklin T. Lord came a new spirit reached the campus and from that time on military training became popular here.

13. The effect of military discipline upon the general morale and conduct of the student body was salutary.

14. The same is true with reference to its effect upon the physical condition of the men.

15. It is difficult to say just what effect the S. A. T. C. will have upon the future educational policy of Elon. The "Y" hut is here to stay, and the weekly movies that go with it. There will also undoubtedly be a course that will make history practical and modern, and a larger emphasis on science. Entrance requirements too will be modified but to what extent it is unsafe to predict at this time.

16. In case of a similar national emergency I feel sure the S. A. T. C. will be found helpful, but the military authorities who are sent to command at colleges should be given to understand that they must co-operate with the college authorities and assist in maintaining the traditions and ideals of the institutions. This is the only criticism that we could possibly make on the S. A. T. C. during its short stay here.

17. In case of universal military training I feel sure that colleges would give full credit for the men who are in their course when the year for military training arrives. I know this college would be glad to do it.

18. There were 112 men in the S. A. T. C. here. In the Army and Navy in addition to this we supplied about 600 men, and a few of our women went to the Red Cross service and as yeomanettes. I am not able to say how many of the Elon men were commissioned, though the highest rank of any commissioned officer from our college was that of major.

19. I am sending under separate cover three copies of the S. A. T. C. bulletin which we issued on commemoration of the S. A. T. C.'s presence on our campus.

In conclusion permit me to say that this college was glad to have been able to serve the country through the S. A. T. C., and we shall always look back to the S. A. T. C. here with satisfaction.

W. A. HARPER, President.

FROM OVER THE SEAS

NOTES FROM THE MIDDLE FIELD

By E. C. Fry, Utsunomiya, Japan

(Reprinted from The Christian Missionary)

Our Southern District Conference (held twice a year) met at Utsunomiya October 8 and 9. Eleven ministerial members were in attendance. The reports from the different fields mentioned baptisms nearly everywhere and other indications of general progress. Dr. Woodworth gave a lecture on the Book of Leviticus. A new member, Brother Kimura, was received, and farewell words were spoken to Dr. Woodworth, soon to leave for America on furlough. We closed with a communion service conducted by Brother Garman, the sermon being by Brother Takahashi.

Our Japanese brethren have a Forward Movement, somewhat like the one in America in some ways. It was arranged for its special meetings at Utsunomiya to be held on the two evenings of the District Conference. Col. Iijima, a member of our Naka Shibuya Church, was one of the speakers. There was a very large attendance, bringing out many not in the habit of coming and more or less difficult to reach.

In general, the occasion was another milestone of progress.

Ninomiya was a famous Japanese sage of the last century, noted for his ability to improve the moral and economic conditions of apparently hopeless communities. He once lived at Moka, in the house we now hire for our preaching place. Pastor Irokawa's study is the very room similarly occupied by that great man.

At the close of the sermon at Moka, Sunday, Sept. 16, Rev. Irokawa baptized two of his sons, Makoto and Heishiro. The service was naturally a most impressive one, the father's heart being full. Makoto, the older of the boys, was on the point of leaving home for the first time, to enter the employ of wholesalers of fertilizers at Tokyo.

Pastor Abe, of Ichinoseki, has specialized quite a little in Sunday school work and recently made a round of our churches in that interest. I had the pleasure of attending the meeting he held in our Utsunomiya church.

Christianity has promise of the life that now is as well as of that which is to come, developing man's ability, reliability, and desirability. This is especially shown in the recent history of our Yaita Church, which was composed mainly of a fine group of young men. They have been called to various positions of responsibility, Tokyo, the Philippines, and elsewhere, and within a short space of time that entire group has scattered. Just now the Yaita Church has but two resident members aside from the pastor and his family. Our success has become our temporary ruin. However, there is a good Sunday school, street preaching is continued, and enquirers and others come to church. Brother Muraoka has the grit and grace to "do it all over again." Pretty much the same thing, including a good recovery from the setback, happened at Moka a few years ago.

Brother Kimura has organized a Young Men's Christian Society, meeting monthly at our Utsunomiya church. It has about twenty members, students in the Commercial School, who also attend a weekly English Bible Class. Mr. Takita, a Christian teacher in that school, has been very helpful about both. Four have already received baptism and two more are ready for it.

At the October meeting of the Utsunomiya Christian workers (six different denominations), the subject of Christian union was mentioned. It is a live question in Japan, a large Laymen's Conference, perhaps the first ever held in this land, having put it emphatically at the front. However, in the governing general bodies of various Japanese Churches opposition to radical measures has developed, and not much is to be expected immediately.

There were baptisms at both Utsunomiya and Otawara on September 22, the candidate at Otawara being the wife of a member of the national parliament (the equivalent of an American congressman). Seven students in the Government and Girls' High School, and the wife of a Middle School teacher were the candidates at Utsunomiya.

We have hired a new preaching place at Otawara, but neither location nor building is altogether ideal. At Kurobane an average of about one hundred come to our meetings, advertised to be held in a room twelve feet square. It has an open front, but the approaching winter will increase the difficulties. It should be a part of our general plan to buy land and erect a building in every town we propose to work permanently.

H. P. Hilliard—I don't see how I could do without THE SUN. I enclose renewal.

MARTIN

Joseph Edward Martin, son of John W. and Sallie Martin, of Eclipse, Va., was Born December 27, 1901, and died December 22, 1918. He was ill only a few days. Pneumonia was the cause of his death. His parents and four brothers and three sisters survive him. "Eddie," as he was called by his friends, was a bright, cheerful young man. During his illness he realized that the end was near, and assured his family that he was ready to go. The funeral service was conducted by the writer. He was a faithful member of the M. E. church. Peace to his soul. The comfort of the Lord be with the family.

I. W. JOHNSON.

WILBOURN

Sister Cynthia Wilbourn passed out of this world of toil into that of rest just a few days before Christmas, 1918. She had been blessed of the Lord to see many days upon the earth, being at the time of her death, ninety-four years of age. Sister Wilbourn was one of the charter members of Wake Chapel Christian church, where she was a member at her decease. She was the oldest member at her death. In all her long life there was never a blot against her as a consistant church member that I know. I wonder if she did not, in great measure, fulfill the fifth Commandment. May the blessings of our Father rest upon those of her friends and loved ones remaining.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT—YOUNG

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from the ministerial ranks of our Conference, our much beloved and highly esteemed brother, Rev. B. F. Young; and, whereas in the removal of Brother Young from labor to reward, our Conference has lost a consecrated preacher, his churches a tender sympathetic shepherd and his family a loving and devoted husband and father.

Therefore, be it resolved by this Conference assembled:

1. That, we bow in humble submission to the supreme will of God.

2. That, we commend to his wife and child; also his churches, to our gracious Heavenly Father, who is able to comfort and console in this dark hour.

3. That, we strive to emulate his virtues and cherish his good deeds and loving disposition among men.

4. That, a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes; a copy presented to his dear wife and a copy printed in The Christian Sun.

G. D. HUNT,

C. W. CARTER,

Committee.

By order of the Alabama Christian Conference.

OUR NATIONAL PRINTING

Uncle Sam is the world's greatest printer and publisher. An article by Henry Litchfield West in The Bookman contains so much information concerning this important branch of our Government that we give a summary of it.

This enormous business has been only about two decades in developing.

During Washington's Presidency, Congress set aside $10,000 for "firewood, stationery, and printing." A national printing office was suggested in 1818, when the cost of the public printing had risen to $65,000 a year, but nothing came of the idea at the time.

In 1840, when again a Federal printing office was proposed, the Senate opposed it vigorously as a method "abhorrent to the genius of our free institutions." So Congress kept on electing "official printers" from time to time.

When the work became most unsatisfactory, Congress tried giving the job to the lowest bidder. That failing, in 1852 Congress established the office of superintendent of printing, and among the unsuccessful candidates for the post was Horace Greeley.

The Civil War greatly increased the Government's printing, and Congress bought for $135,000 the four-story printing office of Cornelius Wendell, with twenty-six presses and twenty-six tons of type.

Now the Government Printing Office represents an investment of more than $10,000,000.

It is by far the greatest establishment of the kind in the world, either public or private.

Among the nations only three others—France, Austria, and Holland—carry on government publications. Even Great Britain hires private printers.

The Government Printing Office has thirteen and a half acres of buildings. It keeps busy more than 5,000 employees.

It works all day and all night. Its hundreds of typesetting machines set about 2,000,000,000 "ems" of type every year—more than any six of the largest book publishers in the country turn out.

It spends more than $2,000,000 every year for paper alone. It buys every year thousands of rolls and packets of gold leaf for lettering. Its office pay roll is more than $34,500,000.

It electrotypes or stereotypes more than 15,000,000 square inches a year. It turned out in a recent year 48,647,371 wire stitched publications, 9,633,524 paper-backed and 2,600,938 bound books.

The bound books it published last year, if placed end to end, would reach 400 miles.

It can receive, set in type, proof-read, stereotype, print, bind, and deliver a book of more than 2,000 pages within twenty-four hours.

The great war placed unprecedented burdens upon the Government Printing Office, but it bore them nobly. For instance, when the selective draft law was enacted, the Government had to have immediately—and received—25,000,000 registration cards. When it became necessary to advertise the Liberty Loan, the Printing Office delivered in three days one million posters printed in two colors.

And all this extra work was done in addition to the regular task of printing the thousands of publications of the Government departments, including the large legislative daily, The Congressional Record, which alone requires 3,000,000 pounds of paper a year.

Surely the Government Printing Office, though little is said about it, is one of the institutions of which every American has a right to be proud.—Christian Endeavor World.

Seeing is Believing

Well Named

Cash

Corporal Bilkins had arrived in France after a few days in England. "How much money have you got left?" asked Corporal Wilkins. "Well, I've got four shillings, a quid, two farthings, nine pennies, a franc, half a pound, four sous, and fifty centimes; but 've only got two dollars in cash."—Camp Dodger.

They Were Acquaintances

"Yes, sir," boasted the hotel proprietor, "that dog's the best rat-catchin' dog in the country."

Even as he spoke two big rats scurried across the office door. The dog merely wrinkled his nose.

"Rat dog!" scoffed the traveling man. "Look at that, will you?"

"Huh," snorted the landlord, "he knows them. But you just let a strange rat come in here once!"

Prozy Giving

Bessie had a new dime to invest in ice cream soda.

"Why don't you give your dime to missions?" said the minister, who was calling.

"I thought about that," said Bessie, "but I think I'll buy the ice cream and let the druggist give it to the missions."—Christian Herald.

The School Board Should Furnish It

Johnny handed the following note from his mother to the teacher one morning:

"Dere Teccher:—You keep tellin' my boy to brethe with his diafram. Maybe rich children has got diaframs, but how about when there father only makes one dollar and fifty cents a day and has got five children to keep? First, it's one thing, then it's another, and now it's diaframs. That's the worst yet."—Selected.

That Boy!

For four consecutive nights the hotel man had watched his fair, timid guest fill her pitcher at the water-cooler. "Madame," he said on the fifth night, "if you would ring, this would be done for you." "But where is my bell?" asked the lady. "The bell is beside your bed," replied the proprietor. "That the bell!" she exclaimed. "Why, the boy told me that was the fire alarm, and that I was not to touch it on any account!"

In The Code

The letter from the front read: "I traveled six hours from Paris, and am twelve miles west of Baby Sparks. Plumbers always forget to bring them. Carpenters carry them in a wooden box. But none of these are as singular as my headquarters." After a bit of reflection the wife guessed her husband was in Toul. "Baby Sparks" puzzled her till a friend asked if she knew a family named Sparks. She did; the baby was named Nancy, and upon examining a map she found Nancy to be exactly twelve miles from Toul.—Life.

LET'S BOTHEE

Let's bother ourselves a little bit
With the troubles of other folk;
Let's bother ourselves to help them
bear
The weight of their daily yoke.
Let's bother ourselves to help them
sing
And help them laugh and smile;
Let's bother ourselves with how they live
If just for a little while.

Let's bother ourselves, though oft we say,
We haven't time to do it;
Let's bother ourselves for our fellow-men

I'm sure we'll never rue it.
Let's bother ourselves to help them
out
When they're in distress and trouble;

Let's bother ourselves to make their care
Blow by like an airy bubble.

Let's bother ourselves; it may not count
But the fact that we took some thought
For the way they lived and the way they strove
And the battle of life they fought,
Will have its bearing on our own lives
And make it finer and sweet
To face the storms that sometimes round
Our own bared temples beat.

Let's bother ourselves a little bit
To be as true and kind
As ever we can to the weary heart,
The troubled body and mind.
Let's bother ourselves to utter a word
Of kindly cheer each day
As down through the toil and trust of life
We struggle along our way.

Money the Acid Test.

After all, isn't money the real test? It is doubtful if anything else on earth measures a man (or a woman), as does his (or her) money.

Once upon a time I asked a man for some money for missions—money with which to reach and to save this ruined world for Christ. "Not a penny," was the reply. "May I inquire why you will not give a penny?" "Well, because I believe God will save the heathen in His own good time." I asked that man if he really had the faith to believe God would save the heathen in His own good time. He said that he had such faith. I asked him then if he was willing to pray that God would save the heathen in His own good time. He said he was, and that he did so pray. "Now, how much money are you going to give that God will save the heathen and the rest of the world in His own good time?" "Not a dollar," was the ready reply. "Then," said I, "your talk is mockery of God." Your faith does not cost you much. You can have that in your easy chair at night when your day's hard work is done. Your prayer does not cost you much. You can offer up that on Sunday when the week's work is over. But when you are asked to give that which really costs you something—your money for which you toiled hard in the heat and cold and that which stands for effort, energy, sacrifice, self-denial—when you are called upon to give that, then you say, No. God will have the best, or He will have nothing. The man who will not back up his praying with his paying cannot expect God to hear him, for he offers God that which costs him little or nothing but withholds from God that which really costs him something.

Your money is your coined character. When you cast your money into the Kingdom you cast that there which stands for something and is something, namely, your energy, your time, your wisdom, your strength and your self-denial. This is why Christ took note of the poor widow—she cast into the treasury her living. And that is why Christ said, "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." (Matt. 19:6).

You may back up an enterprise with your words; but words are cheap and often do not mean much. But when you put your money in, does it not show that you have put your mind, strength, heart in also? After all isn't money the real, the acid test? I think so.

WILL YOU?

Will you join me in praying daily that the Lord will give from your community, your church, your home a worker as minister or missionary to help win this wicked world to Christ, and so hasten the day of that permanent peace through the coming into the world of the Prince of Peace? Please do.

Our Southern Christian Convention is now calling for 100 life recruits who will give their whole time as ministers or missionaries. "This kind cometh not but by prayer." Your church, or community, gave, was it half dozen or a dozen young men, to make the world safe for democracy? How many will it now give to help make the world safe for Christ? If we gave so many in love of country to fight and to kill, can we not now give some to help fight the battle of the Cross, and to make alive in the name of the Prince of Peace?

God will call them to His service if we really feel the need and ask Him to do so.

God never supplies a human want until there is felt and expressed a human need. Christ was asleep on a pillow in a ship that was likely to sink. He arose, rebuked the wind, and made the whole sea safe for sailing, only when human beings realized the danger and prayed for help. And even now the same Christ is ready to supply all needed power to save this world, when we human beings realize the need and go to Him for help. Will you join me in praying daily that God give us the hundred ministers and missionaries? Please do.

The Fireside

THE fireside is a place where friendship grows, where the family forms its real circle and where each member receives equal welcome; the fireside is a place where the cares of the day are rehearsed, the burdens shared and the joys and sorrows entered into; a place where the chatter of children is sweet music to the ears of mother and father, and where children return and find a welcome that can be found in no other place. The poets have the fireside praised and millions of men and women find there a wholesome recreation from their toil. PROHIBITION MEASURE GOES OVER THE TOP

The National Prohibition Bill has been ratified by thirty-eight states and the manufacture, sale and importation of liquors must cease. The thirty-eight ratifications seal the prohibition amendment to the Federal Constitution. More than half the territory of the United States is already dry through state and local action and now the whole United States is to go dry.

We consider this measure one of the greatest in this age. Had there been no dry territory until this time the applause would have been as great as it was when the recent armistice was signed. But gradually prohibition has cleared the way and the rejoicing has been gradually in one state and then another.

There will be those who will continue to say that prohibition does not prohibit and that the ratification of the amendment to the Federal Constitution will be of no avail. This is what a few characters have been saying all these years, but in spite of what they have said prohibition has marched on; bar-rooms have left; the grog shops have been pushed out into the far distance, and the man with his liquor appetite has been, by necessity forced to eliminate the awful habit. Yes, prohibition does prohibit and the greatest testimony to this statement is given by the police forces in all the cities where whisky was once sold. The policemen will tell you that where one arrest is made now for drunkenness ten to twenty arrests were made when whisky was sold in the open bar. Those who claim that prohibition does not prohibit do not believe their own statement, and if they do, their statement is denied so fast by public proof that the only escape that they have from public sentiment is to join the ranks of decent men and women and ask for forgiveness of their evil.

BROTHER HINES MAKES A PROTEST

Brother Charles A. Hines, city attorney for Greensboro, and a member of our First church at that place, enters a protest against a protest sent up by the Baptist Convention in session in Greensboro last week. We consider Brother Hines' article pertinent and to the point and take pleasure in reproducing it below as it appeared in the Greensboro Daily News:

To the Editor of The Daily News:

The author of the resolution adopted by the state Baptist convention today "denouncing" the war department for permitting the Knights of Columbus homes in army camps is in an indefensible position, it seems to me. He demands that persons of all religious beliefs and all denominations be treated alike, and yet criticises the war department for doing this very thing.

It is true that the Y. M. C. A. is interdenominational, but it is certainly Protestant. No Catholic or Jew can be a voting member of the association, and, as I understand, none but Protestants were accepted as secretaries or war workers by it. When the war department permitted the Protestant Y. M. C. A. to go into camps, it could not in justice deny equal privileges to non-Protestant men's religious organizations.

Because the President and secretary of war are Protestants, and because a majority of those affiliated with churches in the United States are Protestants, we are not justified in law or morals in denying equal privileges to those of other faiths. If the history of the last four years (and six thousand years before) teaches us anything, one of the things it does teach is that no faith, religion or creed can override and persecute those of a different faith and escape the punishment it so richly deserves for its bigotry. May the Protestants of the United States never have visited upon the world scorn and infamy that have come to nations and peoples both in ancient and very recent times on account of religious intolerance. NEWS FROM THE PEACE TABLE

At the time we write this note the public press gives out the news that there is a movement among a few that the doings of the Peace Conference be kept secret. Mr. Wilson is not in favor of such a policy and we do not believe that Mr. Lloyd George is. This has been a question of consideration since the Conference was proposed, and the average citizen has considered that the peace parliament would be an open forum to the newspaper men of the world. That is the crystallized sentiment of the American people—and Mr. Wilson knew it before he left this country. We believe that Mr. Wilson will stand by his convictions and contend for a conference that the citizens of the world can know about.

We believe that what the average citizen wants to be assured of is that there will be no more war. We believe that it is the desire and the hope of every true American that justice will be done to every nation at the Peace Conference. If we correctly understand and interpret the American spirit, the spirit of democracy, we understand it to be that the world shall know exactly what takes place at the Peace Conference.

We have sent our boys to the front and accepted sad intelligence in many cases for their return; we have purchased Liberty Bonds that the Government may have financial backing to carry out its program and prosecute the war; of our means we have contributed to the Red Cross to alleviate the suffering and minister to the wounded; we have shared in our homes our every dish with the allied nations, and in brief, the American people became a unit to stamp out autocracy and to establish democracy. It was fifty men behind closed doors between the days of June 24 and July 5, 1914—fifty men in secret session—that threw the entire world into the greatest war that was ever known. The average man fears secrecy, secret councils, and the League of Nations will never mean to the people what it should mean, if it is formed behind closed doors and under guard. The rank and file of the peoples of the world will not follow their leaders with the same eagerness if those leaders do not stand ready and willing to let the world know what they are doing.

DETERMINATION

There was once a man in the State of Massachusetts who ran for governor sixteen times and was defeated. Unflinching in his purpose, never flagging in his efforts, the seventeenth time he ran he was elected by a majority of one vote in a total of over two hundred and fifty. Can you equal such determination anywhere? Destroy the nest of a sparrow every few days if you will and see how she builds it again. Every time that you destroy that down cradle that mother bird works with renewed energy to remake a nestling home for her young. Do you call that determination? Have you ever seen the little ant diligently and determinedly rebuilding its subterranean palace when day after day it was destroyed? That little creature knows not the word failure. Where is there a better illustration of determination? Have you ever watched the determined waves beat and break upon the solid rock day after day, year in and year out? Slowly, but surely, does that Gibraltar yield before those uncompromising billows of storm and calm.

It is determination that turns the wheels of progress. It finds beautiful cities, erects majestic temples, spans yawning chasms, tunnels solid rock and opens up lines of commerce and communication. The essential and comforts of life are the fruits of determination. All of our great inventions must render homage to her shrine.

It was determination alone that raised the great and incomparable Napoleon from the rank and file and placed crowns upon his head and nations at his feet. Determination was the sword with which Hannibal of Carthage carved his name high upon the table of fame. Determination, fired by ambition, bade the mighty Caesar cross the Rubicon and become the master of Rome, and later the whole civilized world. It was determination to stick to principles which they believed that were just and right that caused the Pilgrims and Huguenots to seek a new land, forsaking home, and leaving friends and loved ones behind them. It was that self-same determination, infused into the blood of succeeding generations, that won the American Revolution of 1776. In the early sixties it was determination that enabled those men and boys in tattered garments of gray to hold another gallant army many times stronger than itself at bay for four long years and challenge the admiration of a cold and sullen world. Determination to sacrifice everything to right and duty lost to John C. Calhoun, the presidency of the United States, but it crowned him the greatest of American statesmen. It was determination that impelled James A. Garfield, a poor country boy, to burn the mid-night oil night after night in order to lead his class at college, and in after years it placed him in the President's chair. All of Thomas A. Edison's great inventions, in his own words, "are the results of perspiration and determination." Do you remember that heart breaking Bible scene where Christ prayed in the garden of Gethsemane for strength with which to endure that trying ordeal? It was determination which caused Him to yield His life on the Cross.

To young men and women everywhere our plea is that you have a determination; one that is filled with a zeal for work and baptized with a spirit of the times and love of Christ. Without a goal and a determination to reach that goal the youth drifts into a realm where he goes with the tide and lands into the land of failure.

SOURCE OF LIFE

The other day President Wilson visited the little town of Carlisle, England. It was there where his mother was born and where his father was once pastor of the village church. In an address in the old church Mr. Wilson said, among other things: "It is from quiet places like this all over the world that forces are accumulated that presently will empower any attempt to accomplish evil on a great scale."

In the President's words we find one great truth—that in the common places, the quiet places, are found the sources that furnish the moral backing for every great issue. In the little communities and hamlets men have gathered for rest and worship and meditation for centuries, and from these places great men have gone out to bless and benefit the world. It is in such places, and by such people, that the whisky traffic has been overthrown, autocracy stamped out and democracy enthroned.

GETTING MEMBERS OUT OF THE CHURCH

Did you ever hear such a thing? Perhaps you have not heard of such, but you have seen it. So eager are all of us to get men and women into the Church, but little do we think that we oftentimes get them out of the Church.

The lives we live may get our fellowman out of the Church. Some business deal with our neighbor may cause him to stumble and leave the Church.

Let us not only insist upon men becoming Christians and joining the Church, but let us help to keep them Christians and in the Church.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

"I WAS SICK, AND YE VISITED ME"

By Edward W. Rushton
(In New York Christian Advocate)

It was during my stay at one of our great military camps that the Spanish Influenza swept among the soldiers. The vast base hospital became crowded and I was called to serve as chaplain to the sick, and for the days and nights that followed those hospital wards were as truly front line trenches as were the lines in France.

Boys, brave hearted and true, gave their young lives heroically while they fought death to the very last breath. To these soldiers the Word of God brought the story of the Great Physician, and He spoke peace to tired minds and weary hearts. It was a joy to read them and to place the Testament by their pillow with a lesson marked to be read on the morrow. From the many incidents that thronged the hours, let us pass to the crowded wards, walk among the cots and tarry by the bedside while the sick and lonely lads speak to us.

In The Pneumonia Ward

The pneumonia wards were the scene of our night watches, for there the boys were slipping away so swiftly and the cry of delirium, as the sick soldier stared wild-eyed and spoke with struggling breath, was for "Mother, mother, why don't you come, my mother?" And your heart nearly broke as you tried in your rough way to speak in the place of the one he wanted. Yes, the names of mother and home were the words that burdened their burning minds.

I stood by the side of one who labored so hard and suggested a bit of Scripture and a prayer. Almost too far gone for words, he nodded his appreciation. After the prayer, amid pauses and heavy breathing, he said courageously, "Chaplain, I'm a Christian. I'm going soon, but I'm ready and it is all right." As I, with eyes none too steady, turned away to the next cot, I saw the sick boy pull the sheet over his face and then the cot quivered as he quietly and alone sobbed his loneliness. Before leaving the ward I returned to him and said, "Good night, my boy. Perhaps you will sleep better now." Poor lad! That courageous heart! "Chaplain," said he, "I don't mind going—only it is hard—so far—from home." Then he said, "Are you going away?" I told him that I would be on duty all night. "I'm glad," he added, and then with eyes lifted toward me—eyes that burned a message more than words could express—he continued, "Will you stand by me, chaplain?" I have a lad at home, and I thought what might be in the years ahead for my boy, and I answered that homesick dying soldier just as you would have answered—and a few hours later I "stood by" as he went out.

In response to a suggestion of prayer, another boy said, "I don't know anything about religion, for my folks did not believe in it. But I married a Lutheran girl two years ago and she kept on going to church, and I went with her after a while. Since I joined the army and now in the hospital I have thought much about it, and when the war is over, I'm going back home and join her church. See that letter?" he added, pointing to the foot of his bed. "The orderly wrote it for me today, and in it I told my wife that when I come home I'll join with her."

I took up the letter and said, "This is fine, my boy, but do you want to do something even better? Will you permit me to tear open this letter and write one more page, and tell that good wife of yours that here, this night, in the base hospital, you found and accepted her Lord and Saviour as your Saviour too?" After explaining the way by faith to salvation, he found Jesus, and I wrote the few lines for him and mailed the letter. As I left, his lips and eyes were as near a smile as the fever and pain would permit, and he said, "I'll—sleep—better—now." Yes, dear boy, he did, for the next morning the nurse told me that an hour before dawn he fell into that sleep of perfect peace. It was worth while to take that Testament to him.

Going from cot to cot was hard, and when the pressure became too great, I would slip out onto the open-air porch to gather myself together, and to look into the face of the stars and ask God for just the kind of message the men needed. Returning from such a trip, I passed a cot by the side of which sat the "nearest relative"—a half sister. She said, "He is just like a baby to me, see, he is only eighteen years of age, just a baby to me, for I brought him up from childhood. Perhaps your prayer will not do him much good now, he is so near the end, but O sir, it will help me so much." May God bless every heart that has gone down to the water's edge with a loved one and then returned alone.

"Hold on Tight"

In the semi-darkness of the ward during the early hours of the night, the captain turned away from a boy and said that the lad had a fighting chance if a home message could be obtained to help pull him out of his deepening loneliness; for in fighting pneumonia so far from home and alone, he was about to let go. Word was wired to his home, and far off in the Southland, as the father was rushing North, the message caught him in time for a reply. What a joy it was to that boy, alone, lonely, sick unto death, and discouraged, when the words were read to him, "Hold on tight, Bob, I am coming. Dad." The boy opened his weary eyes and as though he heard in a dream, whispered to read it again. How he followed it, "Hold on tight, Bob. I am coming. Dad." Then he awoke to its meaning and cried, "If he said that then he will be here sure, for I know Dad." And Bob held on tight all night, all the next day, and all the next night until his father held him in his arms; and the two fought on together and won. A few days later the captain said that the message from home had accomplished more than medicine to lure the boy back toward health; and the father, whose eyes gleamed with the flashes of a hidden fire that had burned deep on the sacrificial altar of his heart, thanked God that the supreme offering had not been asked.

A father and mother had journeyed from the hills of Arkansas, and had reached their soldier boy three hours before the end. They told how they sold, in order to make the journey, their mountain patch, their cabin, even the old family mule. They had six dollars left, and the return journey ahead of them. But they said it was all they had in the world to be by his side as he fell asleep, for their boy was their only treasure. I am glad that there is a Book that tells of a Land where death, heartache and war never come, and where those whom we have loved and lost for awhile shall be joined in the family circle never to be taken away. No wonder that every boy in the army says that his mother is the best mother in all the world; and that is just as it should be.

The wards are dotted with patients who were brought over from the stockade, that cluster of barracks hedged by a ten-foot barbed wire barrier under the patrol of sentries whose gums flash their glistening bayonets. These prisoner boys have brought upon themselves penal discipline because of violated regulations and misdemeanors; but in the hospital they are simply soldier lads who are sick and with no token of sentence other than the presence of the guard who seems out of place as he stands day and night with gun and bayonet at the foot of the cot. When that last sickness comes prisoner and guard are just boys, so human, and with souls so alike.

As one prisoner boy went on through the last hours of his life, his guard stood by the bedside and in his boy-like way, somewhat crudely, helped the sick soldier to make up his decision to accept Christ's hand for the dark journey ahead. Later, when the delirium came, that guard placed his gun against the cot, and with touch as gentle as the trained orderly and nurse, held and comforted that boy who was slipping away as prisoner to a life free and good. With roles reversed I thought of him as a Saint Paul in khaki.

The Blood on The New Testament

I returned to that camp when the overseas wounded men were brought back, and in that same hospital I met a convalescent hero who was interested as I went among them distributing the Word of God. This soldier slipped his hand under his pillow and brought out a Testament that he had carried through action. He said, "Look here." And I saw the edges were stained a sticky crimson. "This is my blood," he added, as he told of his wound and of how his blood had colored the Testament. How proud he was of it, and would not give it up for anything. I said, "Of course, you are a Christian boy," but he replied, "No, I am not a Christian, but I will not give up this Book because this is my blood on it."

I took the prized Book in my hand, and as I fingered those red edged pages, I said, "This is truly a treasure. Think of it! The Word of God dyed-with your blood!" In the meantime I had turned to the nineteenth chapter of John and read the story of the Cross to the close of the thirty-fourth verse, where "a sword pierced His side and forthwith there came out blood." Said I to my soldier, "Your blood is on the page edge, but on the inside these pages are crimson with the blood of Jesus the Son of God, slain on Calvary for each of us. Think of it, boy, your blood and His blood together on these pages!" He said, "I never saw it that way. I'd better take Christ." And he did. For him that Testament stained on the battlefield of France with his own blood took on the eternal value.

What would you say to the desperately wounded men who say, "No, we are not the heroes, for the heroes are over there sleeping under the crude wooden crosses in the soil of France. They had wounds like these—and more—and then gave their life. No, we are not the heroes; they are, sir." And you never cease to marvel at the humility of heroism.

That blind soldier who turns so restlessly on his cot, what of him? He thinks and dreams of home and loved ones, and cries out in the midnight that shrouds his every hour, "My God! To think that I shall never see their faces again!" Thank God that the long trail awinding into the land of his dreams may lead, through His grace and merey, his stumbling steps to that Land where dreams shall melt into reality, where blind eyes shall see the joys of an endless life, and where broken bodies, weary minds, and heavy hearts shall be revealed in glory like unto the son of God.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

FROM BROTHER PATTON'S FIELD

Influenza and inclement weather have, of late, militated much against my church work.

Last Sunday I was at Mt. Auburn. We had a good service. It was Communion day.

The day before, Brother John A. Wilson made me a present of $15.00 in cash. He and his family are faithful member of Mt. Auburn. Brother Wilson is a liberal payer on the pastor's salary and other purposes. The $15.00 was not on pastor's salary.

Next Sunday I go to Shallow Ford, near Elon College. I am expecting a good meeting. This is my old home church where I made a profession and first joined the Church.

I have been to Hines' Chapel twice since Conference. I go there on the first Sunday. I served this church some twenty-five years ago. This is a good people with great possibilities.

I go to Hank's Chapel on the fourth Sundays. At my last appointment, Brother R. N. Farrell of Pittsboro, took me to the church. It rained, but with chains on the car we made it. Brother Farrell, his wife, and myself composed the congregation. We held a service.

May Heaven's richest blessings attend all these congregations and may much and lasting good be accomplished.

J. W. PATTON.

REIDSVILLE

Our work at Reidsville for the new Conference year, seemingly, has been greatly handicapped on account of Influenza. Services were held the fourth Sunday in November, which was the first Sunday after Conference and we were not allowed to hold another service until the first Sunday in January. Our prayer is now that conditions may be such that we can hold services regular from this time on. Our plans are this year to hold services with the Reidsville church three Sunday mornings in the month and every Sunday night. The third Saturday and Sunday of each month I will preach at Happy Home Christian church.

In a business meeting of the church last Wednesday night church officers were elected for the year and plans laid for our year's work. We have gotten out our church envelopes with which to raise our church finance, and we have reasons to believe that this system is going to bring in for this year the required amount. We are planning to make this year count for the church and for the Kingdom.

Myself and family are well pleased with our new location and work. Our church people, and those of other churches, have been and are, exceedingly kind and courteous to us. They give us such a cordial welcome into their homes and we believe into their hearts; we cannot help but love them. Before Christmas many of the members graciously remembered us with good things for the pantry. For almost a month they kept us supplied with fresh pork and sausages. At Christmas time one good, big-hearted man and his wife sent us one-half barrel of nice flour. Some other members sent us a nice ham, and another member presented us with a nice pig, or rather a shoat. To one and all of these generous hearted people my wife and I want to thank most kindly for these gifts and expressions of their appreciation of us. We feel obligated to render unto this church and people a better and more faithful services. Our prayer is that God may bless them both in temporal and spiritual blessings.

My dear Brother Riddle:

I would like to have space in our valuable paper to return thanks to Brother J. I. Branch and family of Auburn, N. C., for butter, eggs, sweet potatoes and a nice ham. May God's blessings abide with Brother Branch and his family, and may his son, Marvin, soon be back home. He is in France in the interest of his country. We hope he will soon be back to his post of duty in his church.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Three great human achievements are working their way into fact through victory over traditional prejudice, social custom, and national ambition. These three are, Woman's Suffrage, Prohibition of the liquor traffic, and Peace. It would require too much space to trace the history of woman's suffrage in this letter. In England at an early date Bentham recognized the injustice of the law toward women, but considered prejudices too strong to be combatted; but since 1848 the agitation for equal rights with men has continued in this country, and gathered strength, till now fifteen states have conferred upon women the right to vote, and in twenty-one states they can vote for the President. No serious results in social, political, economic, or moral conditions have resulted from suffrage conferred. Their position is that, "taxation without representation is tyranny;" and that was the position of the Colonies which set the Colonies free. Her contention is just and her victory is thereby assured.

Thirty-five sovereign states have already ratified the constitutional amendment for prohibition, and it is almost certain that the six more necessary to make it apart of the Constitution, will soon ratify; and it is intimated that England will not be more than three years behind the United States in this great movement for human welfare. How did this great temperance movement start? In the temperance crusade in Ohio which culminated in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1874. The Anti-Saloon League, which has done so much for prohibition, was not born in the District of Columbia till 1893. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union was the mother of the Anti-Saloon League—a young mother only nineteen years old. She was the virgin mother of this League of America. No wonder the statue of Liberty in New York harbor is the figure of a woman; no wonder the figure on temples of justice, holding the scales, is the figure of a woman; no wonder the pronouns applied to the great ships that plough the great seas is feminine.

Woman has been the great sufferer from the saloon and her spirit of indignation and her trust in God have inspired the states and nation to the abolition of the saloon. Social customs must yield to social justice and social welfare. Women and children are of more importance than customs founded on appetite for intoxicants. "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world;" and the heart that bleeds under oppression will throw off the tyrant. The saloon must go!

Peace is in the air. War has done its worst. Ambition has run its course. Tyranny is dead. The honorary pall-bearers are at this very moment seated in a room in Versailles, and the monument to be erected over the grave will have written upon it: P-E-A-C-E. No more will great nations sacrifice their sons and crush the hearts of their daughters with war suffrage and prohibition enter their protest against the slaughter of men, and throw all their majestice force on the side of peace. This peace should embrace not only "freedom of the seas," but "freedom of land" as well. It will be a glad day when a passport from the United States means safety in travel throughout the world; when all nations can do business with all other nations, and when one common interest binds the whole world together as gravity binds all matter into harmonious bonds. That will be a glad time when suffrage, prohibition, and peace can be painted as the three sisters of a transformed world.

W. W. STALEY.

TWO ITEMS FROM BROTHER J. O. WIGGS

Dear Brother Riddle:—

You editors and preachers are always saying something about poundings. I want to tell you that you haven't so much on me. My Sunday school knows how to do the job, if it did practice it on me, simply getting their hand in for Brother Morgan at the proper time. Last Sunday morning after I had made my announcement in Sunday school and was about to ask him if he had anything to say, expecting him to say something about "Missions" he touched me on the shoulder and asked for a few moments, then brought out a handsome travelling bag and simply took me off my feet. Of course a fellow "don't know what to say," so I said it. I know how you fellows fell when you get held up in that way. Words are inadequate to express appreciation.

I have noticed frequent expressions from our members about having subscribed to THE SUN or been readers from early childhood and have been impressed with the thought that someone has been derelict in duty in hiding our light under a bushel. I am like Paul "as one born out of due time." In my early life I knew nothing of the Christian denomination but as far back as I can remember I have been impressed with our Saviour's prayer in John 17:11-23, and when I learned that there was a church teaching that doctrine I determined that if I ever had an opportunity I would join it. Therefore I am a member of the Christian church and naturally a reader of THE SUN, not because of early associations nor because of the fellowship of its members but from choice because I believe in its doctrine. I believe if our teachings were more widely known we would embrace a much larger membership and I hope that we will continue to spread our teachings abroad.

THE TITHER

I am glad to announce that THE TITHER started last June has met with a favorable subscription list and nearly every week new names are being added. It is very encouraging to me that so many of our own people have subscribed to the publication.

Mr. Karl Lehmann, a member of the editorial board, contended for a publication that we could put out for fifty cents, but other members of the Board did not agree with him, feeling that such a price would not maintain the paper. Many persons have expressed themselves to the effect that they would be glad to aid in the subscription campaign if they could make it a side issue with their regular Church paper and an adjunct to it. Yielding to this demand, THE TITHER is to be fifty cents the year instead of one dollar and the number of pages reduced from sixteen to eight. This takes place with the January Number which will be mailed this week.

Those who have subscribed at the rate of $1.00 the year will be credited accordingly and the paper continued until they are notified. Those of THE SUN who desire to take THE TITHER can add fifty cents to their renewal for THE SUN and a copy of the paper will be forwarded at once.

C. B. RIDDLE, Editor.

We have a few more copies of Peloubet's Select Notes, and also a few copies of Tarbell's Guide on hand. Order now. The price is the same as in former years and there will be no reduced price in selling any copies that should be left on hand.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Mission Boards

The Forward Movement program for the Women's Mission Boards and Societies has been worked out and adopted. Read it carefully and begin at once to work it out in your church and society. We are counting on all our pastors to heed the instruction of the apostle, "I entreat thee also, true yokefellow, help those women which labored with me in the gospel." A church or pastor that does not have a missionary society loses a great blessing.

Mr. Sunday School Superintendent

The Forward Movement Sunday School program has been completed and adopted by the Sunday school Board of your denomination. It will be published soon. Brother Superintendent, we hope that you will call a Workers' Conference at once and lay it before them and ask its adoption and get at the program at once in your school. We are expecting every school in the Christian Church to be working at the Forward Movement program at the same time. It has six great outstanding items and it is the plan to major the emphasis on each point for three months. The entire program should be worked at the same time in general outline but for a definite three months the great emphasis is to be placed on a given definite part of the program. Beginning with April first all our schools should be ready to start in on the program with a vim and determination to get all the help and inspiration that comes in a united movement.

Have you ordered some of the books that the Forward Movement has recommended for your help in the several points of the campaign. The quicker you read them the more interested you will become in the Movement. Six books have been suggested on each of the following points: Devotion, Evangelism, Religious Education, Missions, Benevolence, Church Methods. They may be secured of the Christian Publishing Association in price from three cents to one dollar and thirty-five cents, postpaid. There are some very valuable books that will be of great assistance to you in your church work.

Evangelistic Program

We will soon be able to announce the Forward Movement Evangelistic program and outline of work. What a call our Forward Movement has set before us in the winning of fifty thousand to Christ in this campaign. The Forward Movement is not a call in itself alone, it is the call of God to take this world for His Son and we are to do our part in this great campaign. Every Christian should be a soul-winner, and every church should be organized for soul winning, an all-the-year evangelistic campaign. Will 1919 see a net increase of ten per cent in your church membership? Keep that aim before your soul, and before your church.

Rural Church Program

Below we give some of the things that one of our pastors, Rev. C. G. Nelson has worked out in his own church. Brother Nelson is one of our successful pastors in the rural communities and lives at Gresham, Neb., and submits this program:

Urge members to sign Prayer, Family Worship, and Forward Movement Covenants; 75 per cent of Sunday School enrollment present at Sunday services; 25 per cent increase at mid-week prayer meetings.

Evangelism—Decisions each year; observation of Decision Day in the Sunday school; occasional invitation at regular Sunday services; pastor plan a series of evangelistic sermons to be given either during a special week of service or at regular Sunday services; evangelistic campaign with evangelist either in your own church or in union meetings; personal work by the members.

Religious Education—Sunday school organized according to Sunday School Standard of the Christian Church; teacher training class to prepare new and better teachers; send delegates to religious conventions; recognize the day school, by visiting, having children to help with program, and by baccalaureate service; send students to your denominational colleges; have special religious and social programs; boost for Lyceum, Chautauqua, and Farmers Institute Courses.

Missions—Teach, preach and urge both Home and Foreign Missions; organize study classes and have special programs; take some definite mission work to do.

Benevolence—Teach and practice giving and sacrifice as set forth in the Bible; use the Budget System and every member canvass, have weekly offerings; all benevolences and bills paid up to date; make frequent reports of all money raised and expended; remember our part of the $500,000.00 goal of the Forward Movement.

Now do not say that these suggestions are all theories, for most of them are proving successful in an open country community, and every one of them are proving successful in rural communities. Do not make the mistake of adopting this whole program at once by a church that has run along for years without a program, for you would probably utterly fail. I would suggest that you try only one of the five fundamental points the first year or even less, then add more next year and so on, till you have the whole program. Thus, by careful planning of definite work to advance the Kingdom of God, in each rural church, we are expecting a great blessing through the Forward Movement of the Christian Church.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

This report brings us to within $203.28 of our goal of $5,000.00 for our Thanksgiving offering. The 22nd will close this year's work and we will make our final report for the year 1918. Let us hope and pray and work that we may reach this goal. Let friends of the little orphan children make some sacrifice to help us reach the goal.

The following boxes have been received and not previously reported: Washington Street Sunday school, Norfolk, Va., two boxes of presents for the children and the Ladies' Aid Society, one box of oranges.

Urbana Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, President, Urbana, Ill., one box clothing for the children.

Ladies' Aid Society, Chapel Hill church, one box containing table cloths, towelings, napkins, hose, hoods, shoes, etc.

Waverly, Va., Christian church, one box containing gingham, handkerchiefs, hose, boots, soap, etc.

Travora Cotton Mills, one bolt white canton flannel containing 54 1-4 yards.

For all these contributions we are profoundly grateful. The churches have been good to us and have been very liberal in their contributions to help make the little children happy and we have tried to acknowledge each box or package sent in, and if we have overlooked anything it has been an error of the head and not of the heart. In receiving so many packages and not always present when they come in, it is right hard to keep track of each one and sometimes one will be overlooked and not reported. If we have made any mistakes we will thank you to call our attention to it and we will gladly correct any error that may have been made.

SOCIAL EVANGELISM

A church held a great meeting.

It won many, many it did not win.

It did an unheard of thing; it investigated why.

The Gospel was the power unto salvation, they said.

Yet that power had failed to reach many.

It had been powerfully preached and winsomely sung.

Evidently something was needed besides preaching.

They had talked with and prayed for many in vain.

Evidently something besides personal work was needed.

They found few men past thirty-five had been won.

They concluded the man must be saved while a boy in the Sunday school.

But they found few boys fifteen in the Sunday school.

And they found many boys in the town.

They found another town getting them with the Boy Scouts.

And another with the Junior Y. M. C. A.

And another with organized baseball.

And others in other ways that the boys liked.

And they said we will get them too—and they did.

All it needed was a man and a plan.

So they added a social service to their evangelism.

—From "Social Evangelism," a pamphlet by Alva W. Taylor, Commission on the Church and Social Service, Federal Council of Churches, 105 East 22nd Street.

QUOTED FROM THIS ISSUE

And you never cease to marvel at the humility of heroism.

Every Christian should be a soul winner, and every church should be organized for soul winning.

Teach and practice giving as set for in the Bible.

Woman has the great sufferer from the saloon and her spirit of indignation, and her trust in God, have inspired the states and nation to abolish the saloon.

MEETING OF THE AMERICAN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION

The American Christian Convention is scheduled to meet April 29, 1919. The place is Conneaut, Ohio. It is hoped that a large representation will be present. Our Southern brethren will, we feel, do their part in helping to make the Convention useful in every way.

DR. MORRILL TO DEFIANCE

Dr. M. T. Morrill, who has served the Church efficiently as Secretary of Foreign Missions for twelve years, changes his address from Dayton to Defiance, Ohio. Dr. Morrill resigned his position some time ago to accept a position in the Theological Department of Defiance College. Success attend him in his new field of service!

J. W. Payne—I have been reading THE SUN for more than thirty-five years and am not willing to give it up. I love my church paper and all that is for the good of the Church.

NOTES

Mrs. J. O. Atkinson has been ill for the past several days, but improving, so we learn.

Dean M. H. Staey, of the University of North Carolina, is critically ill with Influenza.

Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Harper have been sick with Influenza, but are better now, we are glad to announce.

Rev. R. S. Stephens, Dover, Delaware, was on January 13, elected Chaplain of the Senate of his State.

Solicitation from the pulpit for the Church paper is a very poor method. Personal work is the thing.

We regret to hear that Mrs. Fred Bullock is ill in a hospital in Suffolk, but trust that recovery will be soon.

We have many subscriptions that will expire February 1. They are marked on the label 2-1-9. Look at yours, and if so marked, favor this office with a remittance, please. Thanks.

Rev. W. B. Fuller, Y. M. C. Secretary, Camp Forest, Ga., writes: "I consider the uniting of the Conferences in North Carolina the greatest forward step in years."

The Methodist Protestant church, Burlington, has a membership of 443 and 122 copies of the Church paper go into this membership. This note is worthy of place and space. Three years ago only twelve copies of the Church paper were being taken by the congregation. The pastor is Rev. J. E. Pritchard.

Rufus Heritage, Graham, N. C., and Howard Burke of Burlington, were out auto riding at a late hour last Saturday night and ran against a telephone poll in front of the Burlington Baptist church. Heritage was killed instantly and Burke is badly wounded and may die. The young men, we are told, were drunk.

The mailing on the Christian Annual began last week and will be completed this week. We have printed a few extra copies and shall be glad to get orders. The price is 25 cents, postpaid. We desire, however, to call attention to friends who have an opportunity of purchasing them from their own conference. In this case orders should be placed with your conference, since the conferences appropriate the money to pay for the publication. There are those in remote places, out of the reach of their conference, and for these we printed a few extras.

Dr. Thomas C. Amick, Elon College, N. C., head of the Department of Mathematics and a member of the Methodist Protestant Church, sends us this good letter which we appreciate: "I wish to congratulate you on your success in editing THE CHRISTIAN SUN. You are making a fine Church paper, and I feel that your Church appreciates both the paper and your work. I trust that every issue may bring you rich rewards in blessings from the good THE CHRISTIAN SUN is doing." Our predecessor, that prince of preachers, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, reminded us once that we must not let our modesty stand in the way of publishing a great many things. On this advice we allow the above note to appear. Dr. Amick, though not a member of the Christian Church, is a loyal friend of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

THE HEALTH BULLETIN

To Bring Relief to Defective Children

To see that the school children of North Carolina shall be given treatment necessary to their proper physical development is the field of work that the Bureau of Medical Inspection of Schools of the State Board of Health has chosen for its future work. This Bureau, of which Dr. Geo. M. Cooper is Director, has announced that it has only one axe to grind, one hobby, one obsession, and that is that every defective child in the State shall be given the physical treatment it needs to give it an even chance in life.

Get Thoroughly Well to Avoid Tuberculosis

Get thoroughly well of "Flu" before going back to work, is the advice that the State Board of Health is giving all influenza patients. The Board feels that unless the people are made to realize the dangers that often follow influenza, that many an unsuspected case of tuberculosis will develop. Not only weeks but months are some times required for a complete recovery from influenza.

State Preparing For Soldiers' Return

To see that the returning soldier and sailor does not meet conditions that will cause his demobilization to become his demoralization, is to be the first peace responsibility of any community, says the Government. The first reconstruction work that any city, town or community undertakes after the war should be to protect the soldier from the social vices, from which he has been more or less free in the army. The War Department has announced that it is returning the soldiers to their families and to civil life uncontaminated by disease, and that it holds the community in which they live responsible for their further protection and welfare.

Better Health to Come Out of The War

One of the many good things that will come out of the war, thinks Major General William C. Gorgas, U. S. A., is that health work in this country in the future will not be the uphill business that it has been in the past. He thinks that the health training of the four million men that have been under arms during the past two years has so profoundly impressed them with the importance of keeping well to keep efficient, and with the necessity of observing various sanitary measures to maintain health, that when they get back home they will be desirous of applying these measures to their home communities as far as it is possible.

THE HIDDEN NEST

Cuddledown was a beautiful cat. She had a cold little nose and a warm little tongue and the softest, silkiest fur. When she was teased—and that never happened unless she was teased—she said “Meow!” very sharply and scratched “Meow” too with her sharp little claws. But when she was happy—and that was nearly always—she sang “Purr, purr” in the coziest way, as she cuddled down to sleep. So the children called her Cuddledown.

Now Rob and Jenny were very fond of Cuddledown. If they wanted to romp, she was ready for a game with a ball or a string. How she did run and jump! She could outbounce the ball any time. And no string could twist itself into as many knots as she could make. Besides she could untwist herself, while the string couldn't. And if Rob and Jenny preferred to curl up on the window seat with a book, Cuddledown was perfectly happy to curl down between them for a nap.

But of late something had come over Cuddledown. She said “Purr” as prettily as ever, to be sure, and she ate her food with remarkable relish, being careful to wash her paws and her face afterwards and to scrub well behind her ears. O, Cuddledown was nothing if not thorough! But when Rob and Jenny spoke to her, she seemed to be thinking about something else. And she was much too busy to play! For hours at a time she disappeared, and no calling through the house or hunting about the grounds could find where she was hidden.

One morning the children were gathering eggs. They visited all the nests and were coming back past the barn, when they saw a hen hop off the ladder that led to the loft. “Do you suppose she's made a nest in the hay?” asked Rob.

“We'd better see,” said Jenny.

So the children set down their basket and climbed to the hay mow. It was quiet and sweet-smelling there, and through the high windows the light shone dimly. Rob and Jenny crawled over the hay, looking for a nest. And they found it too!

“Perhaps it's a mouse,” returned Rob.

The squeaking rose suddenly in a clamor of tiny sounds. And the next minute the children were down on their knees by a cozy hollow filled with four tiny, furry, talkative kittens.

“So that's the secret Cuddledown has been keeping from us,” laughed Rob.

“O, the cunning, darling things!” cried Jenny.

The babies seemed to be found. They allowed themselves to be picked up and admired. They even purred a little inside their wee little throats. And how funny it sounded!

“But I don't see why Cuddledown hid them,” said

Jenny. “She ought to be proud. I should think she'd want to show them to everybody.”

The babies squeaked again excitedly. There was a soft rustle in the straw, and Cuddledown appeared. She arched her back and rubbed her head against Rob and Jenny and purred so loudly that it was almost like real talking. “Of course, I want people to see them,” she probably said. “I was waiting till they were old enough. Aren't they beautiful children?”

To make them even more beautiful, she began scrubbing the babies with her pink tongue. It made a pretty rough wash cloth, but the babies enjoyed it—all but the ears. For Cuddledown was nothing if not thorough.

“We don't blame you for not wanting to play with an old string,” said Rob.

“You must let us help play with your babies,” added Jenny.

Cuddledown looked at Rob and Jenny purred more loudly than ever. “That will be delightful,” she seemed to say. “You are right about my babies making beautiful playthings. Come as often as you like.”

The playthings didn't say anything. You see, they were busy falling asleep. But they stayed awake long enough to wink at Rob and Jenny. It's fun having your playthings wink at you!

“That's the nicest nest we ever found,” said Rob and Jenny.—Abigail Burton, in Presbyterian.

LOOMS OF TIME

Life's shuttles are shaping;

Pray, what shall I bring

To fill out the pattern?

And what shall I sing

As I stand at the looms

That ceaselessly ring?

The best that I am now—

Yes, that will I bring.

Bright hope for the better—

Yes, that will I sing.

And I'll tend well the looms

That ceaselessly ring.

Ottie Hinsley—I enclose two dollars for my renewal. I could not do without THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

O. T. Hatch—I have been taking THE SUN for forty-five years. Find enclosed $2 for my renewal.

J. R. Miles—We think there is no paper like THE SUN. Long may it shine in our home.

A. B. Taylor—We enjoy THE SUN very much and can't do without it. We appreciate the struggle you have had to keep the paper going these times.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

(We give below two reports on Christian Education—one by the Eastern North Carolina Conference and the other by the Western North Carolina Conference. These reports are reprinted from the Christian Annual. Reports from other Conferences will follow in later issues of this paper.—Editor The Sun).

REPORT ON EDUCATION

(Eastern North Carolina Conference)

Christian Education is a dominant force in modern civilization. The world war has demonstrated that education without Christianity is a dangerous weapon, with Christianity as a guiding spirit it is an undomitable force for good. Our national leaders called upon the Christian forces of America to promote the sale of Liberty Bonds, to furnish Red Cross workers, Y. M. C. A. secretaries and chaplains to keep up the morale of the men on the battle fields and in the trenches.

When the American people began to look daily to God in prayer for the triumph of liberty and human rights, the Allies forces began a drive that never ceased until victory was won. If we, as a nation, wish to serve God in this day of large opportunity we must enlarge our interest and services and sacrifices for Christian Education.

We renew our pledge to support Elon College in all its undertakings for greater growth and usefulness to the denomination. We approve the action of the Southern Christian Convention in its purpose to increase the permanent Endowment of Elon College by raising $125,000.00 and pledge the President of the College our loyal support in this undertaking.

We pledge the College our patronage and co-operation in all its efforts in promoting the educational interests of the Church and commend its work to the favorable consideration of the general public.

Brother D. F. Carlton, a ministerial student, has been at Elon College this fall pursuing his studies, but his physician recommends that he must stop for a while on account of his nervous condition.

Rev. B. J. Howard, a licentiate of this Conference, has been pursuing studies at the University in connection with his work as pastor of this Church and is making commendable progress. He did not think wise to undertake the full examination for ordination now but will continue his studies under the direction of your Committee.

Rev. Joseph E. McCauley is at Elon College pursuing his studies to good purpose. He has been serving one church in the Western Conference during the past year. He will serve two churches in this Conference this year. He requests a loan of $50.00 towards his expenses at College. We recommend that his request be granted.

Brothers E. H. Rainey and R. S. Rainey, members of the Biblical class who spent several years at Elon College have failed to report to your Committee for two years. We recommend that their names be dropped from the roll of ministerial students and that the College proceed to collect tuition for their education.

We also recommend that this Conference collect the note from R. S. Rainey due for a loan from the Educational Fund, also that all other notes due this fund be collected.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION

(Western North Carolina Conference)

1. This is a new day. We are living in a new age, one which is to conserve the best that the past ages have produced, and do a reconstructive work of world import for the Kingdom. Every agency of the Church must readjust itself for this larger, unified task. We think and plan no longer simply in denominational terms and interests, but in world terms and the interest of humanity. The spirit of the Master is brooding upon the chaos of a new world creation. Only that Church or institution imbued with the purpose, spirit and method of Jesus can claim immortal life and share in the glory of sacrificial achievement.

In our Church Elon College stands in the fore-front, because its aim has always been to be of the greatest service to the Church. It has been fortunate in all the presidents whom the Church has given it. It is specially so today in having a man of large, modern, consecrated vision, abounding energy, and remarkable executive ability; able to wisely direct her into this larger sphere of service. She is to be the officers training camp of the Church, the cantonment of the expeditionary forces which our Church is to send on its evangelizing mission to the uttermost parts of the earth.

Loyalty to the mission of the Church means loyalty to the College.

2. That a letter of transfer be granted to Rev. J. F. Morgan to unite with the Eastern Virginia Conference, and to Rev. J. U. Newman to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

3. That W. J. Edwards continue his studies under the direction of the President of Conference, as outlined last year.

4. L. W. Fogleman has served two churches the past year, and we recommend that he continue his work as a licentiate.

5. W. C. Martin, a licentiate, has served two churches the past year. We recommend that he continue his work as a licentiate.

6. R. O. Smith, a member of the Biblical class and now in school at Elon College, came before the Committee and duly examined. We recommend that he be licensed.

7. That Rev. A. T. Banks be enrolled as a member of this Conference when he shall have received his letter of transfer from Eastern North Carolina Conference.

MISSIONARY

AN OPEN LETTER

Elon College, N. C., January 11, 1919.

To the Members of the Woman's Boards in the North Carolina Christian Conferences

Dear Friends and Fellow-Workers:—

I am sure you have already learned that the three Christian Conferences in this State have united. They have left with us women the decision as to whether we will unite into one State conference or not.

I write this letter as the Secretary of the Board of the North Carolina-Virginia Christian Conference, and also as President of the Woman's Board of the Southern Christian Convention.

The Board of the North Carolina-Virginia Christian Conference met in Greensboro yesterday and requested me to issue a letter inviting the members of the three Boards in this State to meet in Greensboro on January 25 at 11:00 A. M., to consider the question of union and perfect plans. I trust that every member of each Board can be present, and I will thank you to accept this form letter as a personal one and write me at once that you will be present.

If for any reason any Board member cannot be present I request that she send me a written statement of the home work up to date, and express in her letter her opinion in regard to the question of union of our Woman's Boards.

It is particularly desired that the treasurers have an itemized statement up to date, and that the secretaries furnish a complete list of all societies and their officers.

We have not adopted our budget for next year. It is hoped that we can do this at the Greensboro meeting.

The Elon Society will be very happy to have any of the Board members who can do so to visit Elon either on the way to or from Greensboro.

Kindly let me hear from you by return mail.

Yours sincerely,

Mrs. W. A. HARPER,

President of the Woman's Board of the Southern Christian Convention.

P. S. Any Society desiring may send a delegate to this meeting or express its opinion in writing.

OUR WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETIES

It is not enough to plan or organize a Woman's Missionary Society in a church. That is only half the battle and hardly that. The next thing is to keep alive and active the Society, after it has been organized. So many Societies, I think, make the impression that they are only organized to collect dues and raise money. This is the not primary object of a Missionary Society. A Missionary Society exists for a far holier and nobler purpose than that of raising money, as essential as this may be.

My conviction is that one great reason why so many Societies lag, or drag along and die, is because they try to make money-getting the chief, if not the sole, object of their existence. There are at least three objects that come before that of money "raising." First, that of deepening and improving the spiritual life of the individual members of the Society.

Second, the learning and teaching of missionary facts, needs and obligations.

Third, Developing in the homes, and in the community of the members the real missionary spirit and ideals.

If these three facts are put foremost and borne in mind by individual members of each Society, the money will come all right, and the Society will be a real live and active one.

But one may wish to know how these facts may be kept foremost and in view. I have it in mind to write for THE CHRISTIAN SUN a series of five articles on "How to Create and Keep a Live and Active Woman's Missionary Society in the Church." I could wish for the sake of the Societies now organized that these five articles, to appear in the next five issues of THE SUN might have a careful reading by our women who really wish to improve their Societies.

We will never be a missionary people till our women, the wives, mothers and sisters, have become at heart and soul missionary. This is the center, this the foundation. We must have live, wide awake, active Woman's Missionary Societies in the churches. Let's try this good year of 1919 and see if we cannot, to a degree, reach this goal.

IS OUR GOAL TOO HIGH?

In asking for a hundred recruits in our Southern Christian Convention as ministers and missionaries the next five years, we are exceedingly modest in comparison with that which many Churches are undertaking. I see that the Methodist Episcopal Church is asking for 53,000 new recruits as ministers and as missionaries. The Dutch Reformed Church has set for its goal one candidate for the ministry from each of its congregations. As said in a previous article, when we of the Christian Church get the need of these recruits upon our hearts, the Lord will hear our petition and give us answer in abundance. This kind cometh but by prayer, but Brethren and Beloved, we shall certainly not reach the goal unless we are much in prayer for this great end. If your home, your church, or your community gave a volunteer to the war, why not now give a volunteer to the Church to become co-worker with God in helping to reach and to save this wicked world for Christ?

A WALL OF DEFENCE

That which seems to man to be a source of ruin turns out to be in the hands of God a source of salvation. This is another way of saying that man's extremity is God's opportunity. The sea confronted the Israelites and seemed to be their immediate destruction. Under the power and blessing of God, it turned out to be their salvation and the hosts of Pharaoh were drowned in its depths while the waters were a very wall to the Israelites both on their right hand and on their left.

When Jesus was on earth, He looked upon sin and the multitudes who went in as an overwhelming flood to destroy the work He was seeking to do but as a field of unlimited opportunity. Looking one day upon the multitudes, He was not overcome by the vast amount of work to be done in the Father's name, but cried out on the other hand, "The fields are white unto the harvest."

We of the Christian Church often look out upon the unconquered fields and the overwhelming floods of sin and sorrow and suffering and we wonder if our Church will ever be able to stem the tide. Trusting in God and going forward with His work the very elements which seemed to threaten us will but afford fields for service and for conquest. I never fear the Kingdoms of righteousness because the numbers and the elements in that kingdom seem few and weak in comparison with the numbers and elements in the world of sin. My only fear is that the children of light will not be as wise and as aggressive as the children of darkness and will not exercise that faith which always results in ultimate victory.

The fact that after one hundred years we have done so very little in world conquest for Christ and today see so very much to be done, should in no wise disconcert us. We have every reason to be encouraged if we will seek to do our duty and do it with our might what our hands find to do. Jehovah did not cause the sea to go back by a strong east wind nor make the sea dry and the waters divide until Moses, a human being, had stretched out his hand over the way. God commands down to this day that faithful men stretch out their hand over the sea and when they do a power becomes manifest even to the salvation of those who are crossing the sea and of those beyond whom they seek to reach. The pagan world with its untold multitudes in idolatry, in superstition, in squalor, in ignorance, seems to be the Red sea in insurmountable danger and difficulty to the forward march of God's host. This is the very reason why missions so stimulated the faith and increased the power and efficiency of the Churches and denominations are missionary. They dare to take God at His word and as Ralph Waldo Emerson says, "advance upon chaos and the dark," trusting God to guide them in the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night. The reason why missionary peoples conquer the many obstacles at home and solve their many problems and achieve such success in growth and development at home is because they dare like Moses and the Israelites to obey the voice of God, to stretch out their hands across the sea and look for the lands that lie beyond, which hands though unseen are the promise of God. Missions have always constituted the chief challenge to the people of God and the people of God who have not been missionary having no peculiar challenge to spur them, on and no program to engage their best effort, have made little or no progress. It is inconsistent with the plan and purpose of God as taught from Genesis to Revelation and never in all the will and world of God to prosper a non-missionary people. Missionary peoples build and sustain homes for the helpless, institutions for the untaught, places of refuge for the needy, while non-missionary peoples or anti-missionary peoples have no hand or no heart for these God-given enterprises. This Christian Church will some day come to be a mighty factor in the world but before it can do so, it must stretch its hand by God's help across the seas and advance upon chaos and the dark.

Widower—I suppose that when you recall what a handsome man your first husband was, you wouldn't consider me for a minute?

Widow—Oh, yes, I would. But I wouldn't consider you for a second.—Orange Peel.

"Typographical errors," said William Dean Howells, "are always amusing. When I was a boy in my father's printing office in Martin's Ferry, I once made a good typographical error. My father had written 'The showers last week, though copious, were not sufficient for the millmen. I set it up 'milkmen.'"

"I have been thinkin' 'bout gettin' married," said a member of his flock to Brother Williams. "You reckon I could git a marriage license for a dozen watermelons?"

Brother Williams had been connected with the Carolina Life Insurance Company for several years and won success. Elmer always made good, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. A colonel wanted a man-servant so he inserted an advertisement in a local weekly. One of the applicants who answered was an Irishman.

"What I want," explained the colonel, "is a useful man—one who can cook, drive a motor, look after a pair of horses, clean boots and windows, feed poultry, milk the cow, and do a little painting and paper-hanging.

"Excuse me, sor," said Murphy,

"but what kind of soil have ye here?" "Soil?" snapped the colonel. "What's that got to do with it?"

"Well, I thought if it was clay I might make bricks in me spare time." —Everybody's.

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY"

The Cross of Convenience

CONVENIENCE seems to be a cross on which we daily crucify afresh our Master. Our pity too often expresses itself only in tears and our passion for duty all too many times ceases with enthusiasm. A more convenient time with purse may be out of harmony with our pity, and the service to self may not accord with our passion to serve our fellowman. The crumbs from our table will not feed the needy world. The breaking of the alabaster box should not be withheld until our own heads are under it.

- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

THE SUN CAMPAIGN

Each year we have asked pastors and people to help in a special effort in the securing of new subscribers for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. These efforts have not been in vain, and they will never be so long as the people co-operate so beautifully as they have in the past years.

We have decided on February and March as the time for special effort for the paper. This will give pastors of church charges ample time to reach all of their churches.

There will be no special offers, reduced rates, or propositions. As printed in THE SUN each week, the price is $2.00 the year or six months for $1.00. We are trying to give our readers value received and feel that no special offers are needed.

And now brethren, we want to give you a little experience about the special offer subscriptions. Here it is: Two years ago we enrolled about 200 persons for three months at 25 cents each. Less than six of these renewed, and we are not sure that they are on the list now.

We must teach the people that THE SUN is the paper of our Southern Christian Convention; that is worth the price and should be in every home. The get "something for nothing" method will not work with a progressive paper and people. We believe that the thing to do is to give a paper well worth the price and educate the people to it. But some one asks the question, "Why didn't the two hundred persons remain on the list, or at a larger per cent of them? The question is easily answered. They were looking for a bargain and not the Church paper. When their time was out the bargain was not renewed and neither was the subscription.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN ought to be in every home of the Church. It is not impossible to do this one thing. There was a time when some of us thought that certain drives and campaigns were impossible, but during the past two years we have seen and demonstrated things in a different light. May we not undertake for our Church paper what we have done for the Government and for the institutions behind the great war?

We call upon pastors and friends everywhere to help us. What shall our goal be? Let some one suggest this and it will be printed next week. Who will set the goal?

UNION AND UNITY

There is much to be done—much adoing—about union of denominations. The function the plan and idea so far as the task is to undertake the bringing men into the Kingdom. But there may be union and not unity. The spirit of the Master is the only thing that will bring men into union and Christian unity.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"The deacons will now take the offering," says many a parson. Notice that he says "take." The word may not be wholly out of use and meaning in the sentence, for if you get money from some one you have to take it.

Ice cream suppers, oyster stews, cake raffles, tea parties and contests may develop the social side of a man, but they will never teach him how to give. These things will never cause a man to worship God with his means. Such things appeal to the stomach, but real giving (not paying) appeals to the man's heart.

One of the foremost laymen in the Presbyterian Church some weeks ago was asked to write on church finance and his experience in giving. He announced that he had tithed his income for twenty-one years. His salary when he started was less than three hundred dollars the year. Last year it passed seventy-five thousand dollars. It had grown gradually for all these years.

With much pride, a man told us the other day how he had given a whole dollar to aid in the Lord's work. He took pride in speaking of his liberality (?). That man was not altogether the blame. He had farms and fields and cattle, a tenth value of which would have been a thousand times the dollar that he had given. He had never been taught to give. He had been taught to "chip in" a nickel and "help out." We must teach our children the spirit of giving. Some of the old fellows are too hard and chronic to reach now. Occasionally you can blast one and get his feet set in the right direction.

ROOSEVELT MEMORIAL DAY

Sunday, February 9th

The American people are called upon to observe Sunday, February 9th, as Roosevelt Memorial Day. This comes at the request of a committee of prominent citizens, among whom are Ex-President Taft, Cardinal Gibbons, Senator Lodge and Ex-Governor Hughes.

The churches will do well to take the lead in planning community services for the fitting observance of the day. As this is Inter-Church Campaign Sunday, a demonstration of the united leadership of the churches in the community is especially opportune. Theodore Roosevelt was not only a great American, but he was a fearless champion of the right in many of the moral conflicts of our day.

In refutation of the report circulated by the brewers shortly before Colonel Roosevelt's death, which was so worded as to leave the impression that he sympathized with the forces opposed to national prohibition, there was published in the New York Times of January 20th, a letter which he wrote to Dr. Ferdinand C. Ingelhart on December 19th. In this he congratulates Dr. Ingelhart on the "success that is crowning your long fight against alcoholism," and goes on to say "the American saloon has been one of the most mischievous elements in our social, political and industrial life."

One feature of the Roosevelt Memorial service that every church should observe will be the singing of the Ex-President's favorite hymn, "How Firm a Foundation."

INTER-CHURCH FEDERATION IDEA GROWING IN MANY CITIESNews Items Show Progress of the Movement

The pastors and lay representatives of the churches of Rochester, N. Y., are organizing a federation of churches. The Rev. Samuel Tyler, rector of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church, was chairman of the committee in charge of the preliminary meeting. A constitution was approved and a representative committee of ministers and laymen will submit it for ratification to all the churches. Secretary Guild met a group of business men at a luncheon at the Genesee Valley Club. These men guaranteed the underwriting of a budget for two years of $7,500 a year. A committee was appointed to find a secretary to be employed as soon as the federation is completed organized.

The St. Louis Federation has called Secretary Arthur H. Armstrong of the Federation at Toledo, Ohio, to be executive secretary and he has accepted this call. This federation, which has been so successful in the past, has organized its work on broader lines than ever before. To assure the financial support of the central administrative work, one hundred business men are being asked to make pledges of $100 a year for a period of years. Nearly the entire number of pledges are already secured.

The Federated Churches of Cleveland held a notable series of conferences in December. The different departments of the Federation had charge of the different events. Some of the best known men and women of America were present, to discuss the great after-the-war problems. A leaflet is being printed setting forth the program for the present year, as recommended by the different departments.

When the epidemic of influenza resulted in the closing of many churches throughout the country, the publicity departments of the leading federations made splendid use of the Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning issues of the daily papers, meeting the emergency by publishing Scripture Readings, prayers and short sermons for "Home Worship on Churchless Sundays."

Rev. F. G. Belmer has become the executive secretary of the Akron Federation of Churches. His address is 713 Second National Bank Building, Akron, Ohio. Secretary Belmer comes from St. Louis, Mo., where he was extension secretary of the St. Louis Presbytery and Chairman of the Federation Committee on Comity.

The Chicago Federation of Churches held a two days' conference for the discussion of the program for the coming year. A number of commissions prepared very strong reports containing definite recommendations which were approved and committed to the Executive Committee of the Federation. As the conference came to realize the magnitude of the program and the success of the leadership of the President, Dr. Herbert L. Willett, an enthusiastically supported recommendation was made that the Executive Committee of the Federation earnestly request that while remaining as president, Dr. Willett accept administrative charge of all the work of the Federation at least until October. It is hoped that he can give at least one-half of his time to this great task in this time of emergency.

Newark, N. J., has under consideration the organization of a Federation. Secretary Guild has been in conference with the leaders. Secretary Pearson recently gave three addresses before different audiences upon the work being done in Indianapolis.

Many cities which do not have church federations have become interested in forming such an organization. The secretary of the Commission on Inter-Church Federations has not been able to meet, personally, many of the calls for assistance made during the month of December. These calls have been met by the able assistance of Secretary M. C. Pearson, of Indianapolis, Secretary E. R. Wright, of Cleveland, and Secretary C. R. Zahniser, of Pittsburgh.

The successful launching of the State Federation of Pennsylvania is now assured. At a recent meeting in Pittsburgh one-third of the entire annual budget of $10,000 was subscribed, practically completing the balance needed to finance the organization.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

HAPPY HOME

Last Saturday and Sunday I filled my first appointment at Happy Home Christian church. While I was in the community I was well cared for in the home of Brother J. H. Richmond and wife. I find that this is splendid family of people who are thoroughly interested in their church.

The congregation on Saturday was small, but we feel that good was accomplished. On Sunday the congregation was fairly large and we had an interesting, and we trust, a profitable service.

At the close of the service the church voted the use of the envelope system to raise the church finance. We consider this a step forward. There is no reason why the country church could not use this system just as effectively as the town church. Give it a fair trial and it will bring in favorable results every time.

TEN ADDITIONALS TO THE FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, GREENSBORO

Yesterday, (January 19) was a great day for the First Christian church, Greensboro. The occasion was, "Go to Church Sunday." The services had been previously arranged, and a steering committee of thirty-two placed in the field to assist the pastor to work up the congregation. Large posters had been placed by the Ministerial Association of the City, announcing the special services for the day. This, together with the splendid committee of thirty-two, brought audiences to the First church that broke all records for regular service of the church for many years.

The services in addition to being largely attended, were characterized by the finest spirit of fellowship among the folks. The congregations lingered after each service in order to chat with each other before leaving. Ten members were added to the church during the day, and one decision in the evening service. My heart was made to rejoice many times during the day by expressions from men of the church—who express high hopes for the work here.

The Men's Bible Class, Ladies' Missionary Society, Philathea, Young Men's Class, and the Christian Endeavor, all are taking on new life, and from the outline of their work one would judge that great things are to be put across.

One of our greatest needs is for the people of Greensboro holding membership in other churches of our denomination to line up with the work. Again I appeal to the ministers of the Southern Christian Convention who have members in this city to send their names and addresses to me. Our Church had just as well have them as the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterians. If you will send the names our church will do the rest.

RALEIGH CHURCH

Our Raleigh congregation is much rejoiced that Rev. George D. Eastes is to come to them permanently beginning the first Sunday in February. But for the Influenza epidemic and sickness in his own family the new pastor would have begun his work there some time since. In fact, he has already been present for one Sunday's service and for mapping out and planning with the officials of the church the work for the present year.

The writer was in the Sunday school and preached for this congregation twice on Sunday, the 19th inst. It was not generally known that there would be preaching services and yet there were nearly one hundred present for the eleven o'clock service and nearly that number at the evening hour.

I have nowhere found a more enthusiastic, a more determined and a more loyal congregation of worshippers than that of our Raleigh church. They certainly love their church and the cause of their Lord. I doubt if in all our Zion you will find a company of men and women more zealous for the Master's cause, and more interested in every enterprise for prayers, growth and development than you will find in the Raleigh Christian church. Brother Eastes will have him not a large, but a solid and united and faithful and true band of tried souls who will do their best to make his pastorate a success and the work a joy and a blessing.

Rev. R. L. Williamson, the former pastor, is held in highest esteem and the brethren are deeply sensible of the good work he did, and appreciate fully his life and labors amongst them.

The Sunday school is one of the liveliest, most wide-awake and enthusiastic I have found anywhere. Prof. L. L. Vaughan of the State College Faculty is superintendent and Deacon C. H. Stephenson is leader of choir and orchestra. They have music and they have "pep" in their school—and it counts.

Altogether Raleigh is in a prosperous and most hopeful condition and they anticipate great things the present Conference year. It was a joy to be with them in their worship.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Of all the times in the history of Christianity when Christian people should be true to Christ and faithful in service, this is the time. The world-war has shaken up the whole world. All nations are in a state of agitation. Autoeracy is ended, but anarchy looms large in propaganda and revolution. Diplomacy is great, but it is not sufficient of itself to bring order out of chaos and to stabilize crude nations. The spirit of Jesus can remove the hostile antagonisms of races and nations and bring permanent peace and universal prosperity. There can be no universal prosperity without universal peace.

There are two methods by which peace can be established. The first is, for Christian people everywhere to live their religion above reproach. No milk-and-water personal piety will help the world into peace. Honesty, virtue, and good will are necessary to human welfare; and these must rest on faith in God. Business conducted on honest principles would construct a national prosperity as lasting as human needs. There is business enough for all, if fair play has its place. There are consumers enough in the world to buy all the products of field, and factory, and store; there is work enough for all who are willing to labor; and the more friendly all co-operate in the world's business the more demand for wares. Competition may be the life of trade, but dishonesty is the death of trade.

Virtue is more than innocense; it is innocense plus personal will. The child is innocent; the man is virtuous. Social impurity undermines physical health, religious character, and human values. The world can never be restored to God by impure men and women. The social world is as much a part of human progress as the business world. Rome went down in her social pollution, with Pompeii as the center of corruption. It was the Sodom of Rome. The dance hall is the school room of social impurity. It is the distinct business of Christian people to produce virtuous society; all amusements and engagements that tend toward impurity are un-Christian and negative personal religion.

God is a New Testament grace. It was a part of the Advent song of the heavenly host. It is the basis of human friendship and religious co-operation. It is the arsenal of the army of the Lord. No man can fight the good fight without good will toward men. It requires divine help to fashion the life by these elements; but the times demand honesty, virtue, and good will.

The other big thing is "Missions;" not simply a few resolutions and a few dollars, but a whole Church engaged in prayer, in service, and in systematic contributions for the evangelization of the world. It is not only the biggest task in the world, but the best task in the world. It is the only enterprise large enough to develop the whole Church and the whole Christian. The base study of one missionary field furnishes scope for great minds, and love for the people of one field would make one more like Christ. The opportunity to give is as endless as human ability. It is not the task of one generation, but of many generations. There are crude civilizations with millions of people who cannot be brought to their best in centuries. Christianity must establish itself on a personal inner basis, and then express itself on a world-wide campaign of missionary enterprise. The doors will open, as never before, when the Peace Conference completes its gigantic task, and the Church must enter in with a gospel untainted by selfish purposes and unstained by worldly alliances. And our Church must not be left out of the victorious army that is to conquer the world for Christ.

THE HOME DEPARTMENT OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Having been elected by the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday School Convention as Superintendent of the Home Department I have given the subject considerable thought and am more and more convinced of the importance and possibilities of this Department. Looking at the Sunday school in its broad sense as truly a Bible school—a part of the church following specific plans of study and teaching God's word—it is obvious that each and every department is but a part of a great plan with that purpose in view, following out its own peculiar methods of reaching the untutored and presenting to them the great truths of His eternal truth. Organized primarily for the purpose of reaching those who because of circumstances could not attend the regular sessions of the Sunday school, and having them enrolled as members, considering that among that number are those most needing a knowledge of God's word—the mothers—into whose hands the first and greatest responsibility of training rests, how important it is that they be given every help and encouragement possible. The future of the Church and nation is in their hands. Truly it has been said, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." Oh how important, that that hand should be guided by God's truth! But how can their hands be guided and inspired by God except they know, and how can they know except they be taught? At most the Sunday schools has the child only one hour in each week, but get the mother into the Home Department and helped to study God's word one hour at home and we more than double our influence upon the child. Add to that the father and it needs no mathematician to calculate the effect upon the future manhood and womanhood. The greatest sin of our day is not strong drink, nor is it gambling, nor other like evils but ignorance of God's word. Those evils are but a result of that ignorance. We have a slight knowledge of God historically—gathered from hastily glancing at His word—but of His love gathered from a sincere study of His truth. We know all too little. I find that many of our churches have no Sunday school. Why it it? Unable to get a leader to superintend. Unable to get teachers, and many other difficulties are offered as excuses, but the real trouble, is in our lack of knowledge and "where ignorance is bliss." Some are afraid to know too much. We have not been studying and planning for the future. The Home Department offers us an opportunity to start now on a systematic plan to build for the future. Take Duet. 6:6-9 as a guide. Let God's word be emblazoned everywhere, all the time and ere long one can say, "I know not God." My appeal, therefore, is that the pastor of each church, not having one will organize a Home Department for the systematic study of God's word, designate some one to visit the home (if unable to do so himself) and encourage, instruct and help the members to a greater knowledge of His truth. To those churches who have a Home Department, redouble your efforts, pray for more enlightenment, and that God may open your eyes to your opportunities and responsibilities and increase your strength and knowledge of His truth.

Having accepted the superintendency of this Department, I am at the service of any one interested to help in any way possible in this particular field of usefulness. I would like to visit every church in the Conference and present the work personally but being unable to do so I take this method of reaching you and would like to have report from every church stating whether or not you have a Home Department if so facts concerning it—if not, will you try to organize one. "Now is the accepted time." "Study to make thyself approved unto God."

Yours in His cause,
J. O. WIGGS,
Supt. H. D. E. Va. S. S. Convention.

NOTES

Note that Rev. L. E. Smith changes his address from Huntington, Indiana to 4312 Colonial Avenue, Norfolk, Va.

Attorney D. R. Fonville, who has been in France since March engaged in Y. M. C. A. work, is to return this week. Mrs. Fonville left early this week for New York City to join her husband.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson spoke to the Baracas of the Front Street M. E. church last Sunday at 10:00 o'clock and at 11:00 o'clock preached for the congregation at Burlington Christian church. He was heard gladly at both services.

THE SUN'S Editor was glad to have with him for dinner one day last week Mr. W. E. Lindsey, Chapel Hill, N. C. Brother Lindsey is one of the loyal members of our Chapel Hill church and is deeply interested in every enterprise of his denomination.

The Sunday school of the Burlington church voted last Sunday morning to send and support a missionary to Japan. The school has had this matter under consideration for some time and came to a definite conclusion about the matter last Sunday.

Mrs. J. J. Lincoln is spending some time in the home of Dr. P. H. Fleming. Mrs. Lincoln is one of the Church's splendid workers.

Rev. L. E. Smith writes: We arrived in Norfolk Tuesday of last week. The people here have certainly given us a most royal reception. The majority of the members of the Official Board met us at the station. After a hand-shake around we were then piloted to the Victoria Hotel where we were comfortably housed until our goods came on Friday. When the car arrived they took charge of us and the car and moved us bodily to our home where we will spend the winter. When we found ourselves in our new home we found our pantry simply loaded with all kinds of eatables, and presently the dining table was spread for supper and a sufficiency for the coming day. It is good to be a minister and to have the privilege of administering to His people. I shall appreciate greatly your interest and prayers as we undertake the work in this most difficult field." Brother Smith's address is 4312 Colonial Avenue, Norfolk, Va.

JOINT MISSION BOARD MEETING

We clip the following from the Greensboro Daily News of January 26:

The Woman's home and foreign mission board of the North Carolina Christian conference was organized yesterday in the First Christian church, by the union of the three former boards operating in the state. These former boards were known as the North Carolina and Virginia, Western North Carolina, and the Eastern North Carolina boards, following the bounds of the three annual Christian conferences in the state. These conferences have recently united into one body, known as the North Carolina Christian conference and the action of the woman's board followed.

The personnel of the three boards party to the union, was as follows: N. C. and Virginia—Mesdames M. F. Cook, L. M. Clymer, C. R. Clark, W. A. Harper, R. J. Kernodle, J. G. Anthony, and J. H. Farmer; Eastern N. C.—Mesdames A. T. Banks, A. F. Smith, J. A. Kimball, J. Byrd Ellington, R. L. Williamson, K. B. Johnson, and Miss Alline Staley; Western N. C.—Mesdames W. H. Carroll, Edward Teague, J. D. Kernodle, W. R. Sellars, and G. R. Underwood. Each of these board members expressed herself as favoring the union, either in person or in writing and action was unanimous.

The session yesterday was called to order by Mrs. M. F. Cook, of the local society. After devotional services by Rev. J. Vincent Knight, Mrs. W. A. Harper was called to the chair and presided throughout the conference. During the afternoon session a stirring address was made by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, mission secretary of the Southern Christian conference.

Officers of the new board were elected as follows: President, Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington; vice-president, Mrs. A. T. Banks, Ramseur; secretary, Mrs. W. A. Harper, Elon College; treasurer, Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington; superintendent young people, Miss Bessie Holt, Burlington; superintendent cradle roll, Miss J. G. Anthony, Greensboro; superintendent literature and mite boxes, Mrs. M. F. Cook, Greensboro; superintendent boys' work, Mrs. J. W. Patton, Greensboro. These officers constitute the executive committee, with Mrs. Carroll, Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Sellars as central executive committee.

It was decided to organize 20 additional societies during the year to secure 20 new life memberships in the board and to raise $2,500 as the minimum. It was also decided to make July the rally month in the churches and the central committee is to prepare a special program. The board decided to hold its first conference on October 5-6, the place of meeting to be selected by the central committee.

The reports of the officers of the three boards showed $1,500 was raised last year. The organizations were as follows: Women's societies 34, young people 10, willing workers 5, cradle roll 10, boys 2.

THE CHURCH PAPER AND THE CHURCH PEOPLE

Mrs. Ben T. Holden—Best wishes to you in your good work and congratulations on the improvement in the paper.

W. J. Cole—I cannot do without THE SUN. I appreciate the struggle you have had to keep the paper going. I do not see how any church member can do without his church paper. Long may THE SUN shine in our home.

Mrs. Nannie Royster—Fourteen years ago when I made a new home for myself, I made a new one for THE SUN also. I did not feel like I could do without it.

C. E. Byrd—With the very best wishes for THE SUN'S success.

MISSIONARY

HOW TO CREATE AND KEEP A LIVE AND ACTIVE WORKMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY—(IN 5 CHAPTERS).

Chapter I. The Place of the Bible in the Missionary Society

The greatest of all missionary books is the Bible. The greatest and best of all missionary libraries is the "little library of sixty-six small books, usually bound together as one great Book, which has been the inspiration of every missionary and missionary worker since the world began."

It is presumed that every Missionary Society uses the Bible, reading a portion from the meeting page either at the opening or some time during every meeting. But too often this reading is done in the most indifferent and perfunctory manner, merely as a matter of form and without any definite purpose or expectation of accomplishing anything. We get the idea that when the Bible is read a sort of holy service has been performed, and no matter how, the good results will surely follow. This is a grave mistake. No part of the missionary meeting should be planned with more thought, care and consideration than that of reading the Scripture lesson. The fact that the Bible is inspired should cause the one who is to read it to do so most impressively, having made the selection most carefully and prayerfully, and then seek to apply most forcibly its teachings.

I read recently two instances that will each illustrate how the Bible should not be read in the missionary meeting. They are related in Belle M. Brain's "Holding the Ropes":

"The writer recalls a missionary meeting where the Scripture lesson, selected hastily at the last moment, was read in so perfunctory a manner that less than half an hour later, when a test was made, not a single person present was able to tell what had been read! It was one of the most striking missionary passages in the Bible, yet it had made no impression whatever.

"On another well-remembered occasion a missionary worker of no little prominence was asked to read the Scripture lesson at a missionary conference. The passage selected was obscure, with seemingly no bearing whatever on the cause of missions. As he made no comment and drew no parallels, his hearers are still in ignorance of the lessons he intended to convey. Selecting inappropriate passages is, unfortunately, not an uncommon failing. The writer recently heard of a leader of a children's mission band who opened her meeting by reading an entire chapter from the book of Lamentations."

Not infrequently the missionary meeting, if held in the church, is opened with reading in concert, from the back of the hymn book, some short psalm in no particular sense missionary in spirit or in purpose.

The Bible deserves better treatment at the hands of any one who cares a bit about missions, and its reading at the missionary meeting may be made, and should be made, one of the most helpful, impressive and inspiring portions of the whole program.

There are several ways in which the Bible may be used most tellingly in the meeting, a few of which can only be pointed out here for want of space.

1. To be effectual the Scripture lesson should not be lengthy, but pointed, pithy and practical. On this I want to quote again from Belle M. Brain: "Some times a single text, just one brief verse, followed by a few pointed remarks, will make a deeper impression than a whole chapter aimlessly read. For example: Carest thou not that we perish? (Mark 4:38). These words of the disciples to the Master on the Sea of Galilee may well be taken as the cry of the forty million heathen who die every year in foreign lands. Forty millions will die during the ensuing year. They are passing away at the rate of one hundred thousand a day. Every tick of the watch sounds the death knell of a heathen soul. With every breath we draw four souls pass away never having heard of Christ. Carest thou not that these perish?"

Would not such a well chosen verse—and the Book is just packed with them—with some such brief pointed comment, be likely to have more effect in the devotional meeting than reading a whole chapter aimlessly and indifferently chosen and read?

2. Often two brief texts brought into juxtaposition may be made most helpful and impressive. This is given as a fair example: "I must be about my Father's business." (Luke 2:49). "The King's business requires haste." (1 Samuel 21:8).

Such a reading would inject into the meeting some idea of a real and solemn and important business, and then would carry home the thought that there was no time to be lost about it. If we can keep the idea prominent that a missionary meeting is for business, one of the most important of all the things we will ever engage in while we are in the world; and then that it is a business of such import as to require immediate and personal and zealous care and attention, the missionary meeting will not be drag and the interest will not die.

Or another example: "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." (John 2:5). "See that ye refuse not Him that speaketh." (Hebrews 12:25). Now Jesus said unto us, as His most sacred and imperative command, Go ye into all the world and preach my Gospel to all the nations. Shall we who are here today refuse Him that speaketh these words? We, all of us can go, for Christ gave no impossible commands. We can go either in prayer, or in purse or in person.

3. Another method of Scripture reading in the missionary meeting is to use a text and then relate a missionary story connected with that text. There are several small volumes that give stories from the life and deeds of missionaries as they were especially related to certain texts of Scripture. Some of these are: "Modern Heroes of the Mission Field;" "Modern Apostles of Missionary Byways;" "New Acts of the Apostles," etc. One member could be selected to read the Scripture lesson at the meetings, say for six months or a year. Such a member could, for a few dimes, order one of these books and make the matter of leading the devotional service, particularly the Scripture reading, a matter of care, prayer and consideration.

I am fully aware that in this brief space I have only suggested a few of the ways, by no means all, in which the Bible may be made a live wire for the missionary meeting; and if this is done in any Society, a long step forward has been taken in making that Society a live and an active one for effectual missionary work.

THE FOREIGN MISSIONS CONFERENCE OF NORTH AMERICA

By Warren H. Denison

The twenty-sixth annual session of this Conference will no doubt go down in history as an epoch making session. It was held at New Haven, Conn., in the beautiful Taft hotel and was presided over by Rev. Canon S. Gould, M. D., of Toronto, Canada. It is composed of the Foreign Mission Secretaries and representatives of the Foreign Mission Boards and other allied organizations doing foreign mission work.

Something over 300 representatives were present representing forty foreign mission boards, and fourteen other allied organizations such, as the American Bible Society.

The Christian Church representatives were Rev. E. K. McCord, Missionary to Japan; Miss Mary A. Rowell, Treasurer of the Woman's Board for Foreign Missions; Rev. Donald P. Hurlbert, Mission Secretary of the New England Christian Convention, and the writer.

Among the speakers were such noted Christian statesmen as Drs. John R. Mott, Robert E. Speer, Charles R. Watson, W. I. Haven, President W. H. P. Faunce, Principal Alfred Grandier of Toronto; Miss Margaret Burton, Dr. W. E. Browning, Dr. S. M. Twemer and many other missionaries and noted workers. I have named only a few of the speakers for the meeting lasted three full days and evenings. There were 37 missionaries present. The general theme was that of the "Basis and Ideals of the New Internationalism, and the Contribution of Foreign Missions to It."

The greatness of the opportunities and the need for world-wide missions since the war have become so tremendous; the call for missionaries, funds, equipment, and literature is so imperative, that again and again we were called to our knees in prayer, and challenged to make the redoubled effort of our lives to arouse our pastors, our laymen, our churches, to hear and heed, to pray and give and go as never before. Will you, friends, of our Christian Church, listen to this feeble appeal of one who is unable in any adequate way in this short space to bring before you the view of the world as we have seen it in picture, in vivid description of scores from the fields, and of the Board Secretaries?

The great action of the Conference and which was often referred to as one of the greatest religious actions of modern times was the unanimous action approving "The Interechurh World Movement of North America." In December at a general call one hundred and thirty-five representatives of the Home and Foreign Mission Boards and allied agencies met to consider the advisability and feasibility of a united campaign. A committee of twenty was named to outline a plan and submit it to the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, the Home Missions Council, the Council of Church Boards of Education, the Sunday School Council, the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions and the Council of Women for Home Missions.

There is to be a General Committee of one hundred representing all foreign mission agencies, with state and local community organizations of all the Christian forces in interechurh committees.

It is to be a united Home and Foreign Mission campaign including all benevolent interests outside of the local church.

A survey of the home and foreign fields is to be made to find what ought to be done by the combined churches to meet the needs for at least the next five years. There is to be a strong educational and publicity campaign to carry the facts down to every Protestant church consisting of regional conferences, conventions and training conferences to appeal for the sources of spiritual power, life and money to meet the opportunities of this new era. There will be a united financial campaign probably in the spring of 1920 to secure funds to carry out this world program.

Think of what it will mean for all the foreign mission boards and agencies of North America all united under one leadership making a united campaign for a world program of missions. There was not one dissenting voice or vote, but hearty approval. All persons present were asked to make nominations of persons from whom one hundred suitable persons might be selected to form the General Committee. Let us hail the great step, let our Mission Board and Forward Movement and all our churches be heartily in this united move. Let us begin now, for it is confidently expected that every board and agency will give hearty approval.

THE POLICY BEING REALIZED

It is more and more evident that the foreign missionary policy adopted by the Mission Board more than a year ago was well considered and wise, for it is working out splendidly. At the Board meeting held in December three new missionaries were placed under appointment—Rev. and Mrs. W. Q. McKnight, to go to Porto Rico; Miss Martha R. Staey to go to Japan.

At the present time, therefore, the Board is undertaking the following enlargement of our foreign work:

- Sending a new missionary family to Porto Rico.
- Sending a new woman missionary to Japan.
- Building a new mission home in Tokyo, Japan.
- Building a new school building for kindergarten and similar purposes in Dogenzaka, Tokyo.
- Building a chapel at Kannari, Japan.
- Building a chapel at Santa Isabel, Porto Rico.
- Repairing our buildings damaged by earthquake in Porto Rico, and there were three of them.

Now, this is a large program for our people, as you will realize if you will follow this article patiently for a few minutes. Owing to the enormous rise in prices, it has been necessary to increase missionary salaries to a minimum of $1300. The sending of a family to Porto Rico will require, besides the salary, travel expense, some outfit allowance, house rent, some equipment to work with, travel expense on the field, and probably a good many unforeseen items.

Sending a missionary to Japan will require expenditures similar to the above.

The land and building for the new mission home in Tokyo will cost us not less than $10,000. If it were to be in a small city, the story might be different; but this is at the headquarters of our work and the capital of the empire, where the location will be strategic and property will continually enhance in value.

We have land, and must now erect building at Dogenzaka for the kindergarten and other activities the Germans are inaugurating. We have a good start toward the building, which will likely cost more than $6,000, and will be a bee-hive of Christian work.

For many years the people at Kannari, Japan, have waited for a chapel. There is a nucleus for the building; a good sister has promised $500 soon, and when there is $600 in hand the mission is to proceed with the building. Two or three hundred more will be required.

Under the leadership of Miss Carrie Robison the Young People's Department of the Woman's Boards is raising money to build a chapel in Santa Isabel. About half the money is already in hand, leaving a little more than $1,500 still to be raised. The building will cost not less than $3,000.

We are proceeding at once to repair the damage done to our mission home and the Ponce church and Salinas chapel by the recent earthquake. The amount of that bill can only be conjectured now, but it is estimated at not less than $1,500. This work must be done immediately because property deteriorates so rapidly in the tropics unless it is properly cared for.

Thus it will be seen that the Mission Board is pushing the matter of equipment and enlargement of missionary force as much as our resources will admit of. For a number of years we have been equipping our missions, and that was a work that made no great show or appeal to the public; hence a good many of our people grew restive and imagined that we were at a standstill, or worse, were retrograding. The facts are, we have been progressing all the time. Within a few years the ideals of foreign missionary work have been greatly expanded and changed in emphasis, and we have been working as far as possible in harmony with these changes. Both our equipment and means have now reached the point where we can make larger ventures.

One practical aspect of the work should be brought to the attention of all our people. To make the new program a success we must have larger missionary revenues. The past year enables us to hope and dare to believe that the coming year will witness hearty backing up of the Board's plans, more funds placed in the mission treasury, and more work done for the Kingdom.

The Christian Church is going to be a missionary Church, and of course you are going to help it become such.

THE CHRISTIAN AND HIS MONEY

By Rev. G. Campbell Morgan

The Christian belongs to God—spirit, soul, and body—in all powers and possibilities.

All that the Christian has is to be used with an eye single to the glory of God in the accomplishment of his purposes.

These things being granted, the method of getting will be safeguarded. No person devoted to Christ will be able to follow any calling, or take up any business which is harmful to himself, or to others, merely for the sake of obtaining money. The method being thus conditioned within the sphere of loyalty to the will of God, the use of money will also be so conditioned. It is at this point that so many mistakes are made. Very much money that is properly made is improperly spent. The purpose of spending is too often that of ministering first to the desires of the self-life, then occasionally—and alas too often meanly—gifts are made to God. This is wholly wrong.

Applying these principles, how should a Christian deal with his money? Of whatever income he obtains, he should say, "This belongs to the Master. I am to discover by honest calculation how much I need for the proper maintenance of my life and home, that both may continue to glorify God. All the rest is to be devoted, as he shall direct, for the extension of his kingdom among men." Upon the receipt of the income the following items should be carefully and prayerfully considered:

1. Necessary for food to the glory of God.
2. Necessary for clothing to the glory of God.
3. Necessary for shelter to the glory of God.
4. Necessary for mental culture to the glory of God.
5. Necessary for recreation to the glory of God.
6. Necessary to minister to the poorer members of my household to the glory of God.
7. All that remains for God's work.

Such a distribution of income would make a great difference in eating and dressing, in home, in mental culture, in recreative indulgence, in sympathetic industry, and the church would not have to beg for assistance for its missionary enterprises from those who are living in rebellion against the kingship of Christ. Spasmodic giving would be impossible, and the high and glorious ideal of partnership with God would become an every-day reality. This method, moreover, would maintain the ideal of stewardship, and would demand a periodic readjustment of expenditure, according to the rise or fall of income. Here, as everywhere, no outside interference must be permitted, but there must be a constant and unceasing submission to the direction of the King. This will be carried out or not, according to the power which rules by love in the heart. If the love of the Lord be dominant, the delight of devotion will be permanent. If the love of money holds sway, the shameful meanness of giving will continue.

Don't say collection. Call it an offering. Giving of our means to the support of the Kingdom should be too sacred to call it a collection.

THE WAY OF A MAN WITH HIS MONEY

By Leon Wood

ONE is tempted to say, with uplifted hands, "It is too wonderful for me; I cannot understand it." For men seem to have ways with money as various and vagarious as they have with women, and nobody knows what will be the course of events whenever there is a man with money any more than whenever there is "a man with a maid." The outcome may be either poverty or riches, a happy home or a summer scandal.

In either case, possibly, possession for a time leads to the presumption on the man's part that he owns the money or the maiden, and then he proceeds to "do what he will with his own."

He himself is a personality, created to have a dominion; the money is stored personal value, and the maiden is regnant personality. Personality inheres in all three factors. Let us observe closely, for we surely may expect something to happen wherever personality is present.

In "doing as he pleases" there naturally follows profit in the form of increase. He accumulates a fortune or a family. And these are in "his own." So he says in his exultation, "See what I have gotten!" He forgets the potent power stored within the money, and he overlooks the sovereign soul of the maiden.

One day his friend says: "Come on, Jim; let's go fishing!"—and Financial Affairs flings back, in spite of his longing for relaxation: "Can't do it, Bill; business before pleasure."

That night he tosses sleeplessly, for somehow he knows he is not "his own man." How can he "own" his money? or "manage" his business? It galls him to feel the goad—just as though he had not been called a "captain of finance," and a "master of the money market."

In the deepest part of his conscious soul, where he has never heretofore ventured, he knows that his money owns him. It compels him, regardless of health, home, friends and larger self-expression, to do service for its engagemnt, not for his own development. And he has not even been aware of his shameful servitude. A sense of disappointment and defeat oppresses him. His self-respecting spirit revolts.

Sleep finally smooths from his face the lines of a grim determination.

Next morning he feels lank and looks lean-faced.

"James, we're going to the woods for a week. Can't you come along with us?" wistfully said his wife. "You need a vacation."

"I wish I could, wifey, but I guess I'll have to gather some big dollars to pay for the fun. Business won't run itself," he says grimly, finality in tone and manner.

"Yes, but you don't run the business; it runs you," she flashes back.

He is silent. The night's wrestling is on again with redoubled violence. Is he a majestic spirit, or merely the servant of time and place and things?

Now he feels his midnight's resolution gathering for a supreme decision, and presently he hears himself saying:

"All right; I'm yours for a week."

Up in the woods he sleeps and reads and thinks. Often when apparently reading, he is gazing into the shifting shadows and away into the hazy distances—slowly thinking—thinking of Big Business that is eternal, ever-changing, but not quoted on 'change.

The sixth day, after a long walk through the thickets and among the trees, he and his old sweetheart sit dreamily luxuriating in every comfort of indulgent nature.

"I'll do it," he said, without preliminaries.

"Do what, Jimmy?" she inquired softly.

"Acknowledge Him in all my ways!" very slowly.

"Which means—?"

"Money first. Money always has been first with me, and I guess it will have to go before me into the Kingdom. This week has made some things clear that our pastor has been saying, 'It's been a glorious week!'"

* * * * *

They whispered in the market place that James Conroy Pennoyer was slipping a cog or two in his driving power—in his "efficiency." What cared he? He had made his declaration of independence.

THE WAY TO SUCCESS

Just two men can, if they will, revolutionize the finances of any church; one a live, up-to-date pastor who believes in, practices, preaches and teaches tithing; the other a live, up-to-date layman who, in a congregation of 100 families, will be responsible for the purchase of an average of about $10.00 worth of tithing literature within a period of six months.

Multiplying these two men in each church by an equal number in all the churches in the United States and continuing the tithing propaganda would, within two years at least, substitute affluence for mendicancy in all our missionary treasuries. Better than all, the gain would be both permanent and increasing. So much for the money side of tithing.

And Yet

If I could have the privilege of inducing 100 young people between the ages of ten and twenty, all without regular income, or 100 adults between the ages of thirty and forty, all with regular income, to adopt tithing as a rule of life, I would without a moment's hesitation select the young people.

Why? Because the primary object of tithing is distinctly not to get money; it is to build character, and youth is the time for that.

The cornerstone of all character building worthy of the name is a deeply implanted sense of responsibility to God. Teaching that responsibility in theory only may be, and very often is, evanescent. Reducing it to practice by tithing which can be done by the youngest makes it permanent. The money, while later in coming into the missionary treasuries, would be in very much larger amounts when the young people reach the age of thirty and over. But that is a secondary consideration; character comes first.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Dear Friends:

This report is the final report for the year 1918 and closes our year's work. We are happy to say that we have reached each goal set for the year and have gone over the top.

The first of the year we set our goal for the Thanksgiving offering at $5,000. You made it $5,402.40.

We set for our total amount for the year at $11,000.00, you made it $14,173.12.

While we have labored under some difficulties we have been happy in the work because you stood by us so loyally and have given us your hearty co-operation. You have seen to it that we reached each goal set. And while it becomes necessary that we close our books for the year this week, it will not bar any church from taking the Thanksgiving offering and mailing it in now as we will have a place for it and would be glad to see each church make this offering.

I want to thank each pastor, each Sunday school superintendent, each teacher and each individual for the hearty co-operation you have given me during the past year. I only wish I could see you personally and tell you face to face how much I appreciate it. By your loyalty and hearty co-operation you have made the success of the work here, this year, possible. I pray that God will richly bless each one who had a part.

We are glad our Church is beginning to realize that it can do things.

I believe I promised you I would tell you a secret in this letter if you would see to it that we reached the goal of $5,000.00 for our Thanksgiving offering. You have been so good to see that I got over the top I am happy to tell you. Here it is:

The Christian Orphanage is Out of Debt.

LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—When I put on short dresses, I was promoted to Corporal and was known to my little friends as "Corporal Jr." I expect to be made Sergeant soon, for I have two little teeth almost through. My cousins, Ralph and Leon Newman, would be truly jealous if they could see Grandpa Newman teaching me to dance when his graphophone plays "Dance-a-Baby-Diddy."—Oliver E. Young, Jr.

Your father will feel very proud of his soldier boy when he returns home.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am writing you the first letter in this year. I hope the little cousins will have a good time this year. I like your picture very well and would like you better. Enclosed find 10 cents for January.—Mills Wellons Staylor.

You sent in the second letter this year. Oliver E. Young got ahead just a little. I hope you will write often this year.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—We have had a wet time with snow. Sunday the snow fell fast and everything was covered with snow several inches thick. I have snow-balled some since the snow fell. I hope the little children are having a good time. Enclosed find 10 cents.—Willie Staylor.

I can beat you snow-balling. You will have to come to see me when it snows.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am sending my dues for December, January and February. Santa Claus came to see me Christmas and I hope he went to see all the Orphanage, too.—Raymond Shorpe.

Yes, “Old Santa” came and made all the little children happy.—“Uncle Charley.”

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION

(Virginia Valley Conference)

There is danger in the excitement and busy activities of the war, of us neglecting to “keep the home fires burning,” and thus losing at home as much or more than we have gained abroad.

The school and college is having a struggle for existence. Many have been forced to close their doors. We are glad to note that our own Elon College has been able to maintain its maximum enrollment of 400 during the past year.

The young people of this generation will need an education to meet the demands of the times. Elon College offers all the advantages of the regular denominational college. It maintains a high standard of Christian ideals, and is well worthy the support of our people.

We recommend that Rev. W. C. Hook be ordained at this session of Conference.

We recommend that Brother J. B. Shiflet be admitted to the Biblical class, and enter Elon College this fall as a ministerial student.

W. T. WALTERS,
A. W. ANDES,
B. J. EARP,

Committee.

REPORT ON EDUCATION

(Alabama Conference)

The educational sentiment of the Church of today is that real, true education does not consist in colleges and universities. No life can be deep and full that is not religious. Hence the paramount idea, not to depend upon our God-given principles to make of us a mighty people, but with those Heaven-born principles we must have for their propagation a well-trained and fully equipped leadership to make them effectively known to the world. If our Conference would desire for herself a larger place in the great work of the future, she must look well to the education of her leaders. There is to be a general revolution of the educational system of our land. The state institutions have failed in the past to provide further than for the mental and physical development. The church can better care for the spiritual with the educational of the mind and body. While the heart is far more important than the head, yet the one cannot work so successfully without the best possible training of the other. Then our own Conferences of the South need a school. We need to come face to face with the issue, and provide for the education of the finest and best asset of the Church—its young people.

We offer the following recommendations:

That, we endorse the Truitt School for patronage until we can locate permanently.

That, in compliance with the request of the Southern Christian Convention, we observe the third Sunday in February or the nearest day to that on which regular service is to be held as “Life Work Recruit Day,” in the interest of Christian Education. No collection.

That, no one shall be ordained to the full work of the Gospel ministry until he shall have completed the seventh grade work of the public school. And then he shall take the prescribed Theological Reading Course as adopted at the Dinglers Chapel session of this Conference, 1916. If there be a reasonable chance for a collegiate education, the ordination shall be deferred until such a course shall have been completed.

That, we assess $25.00 for Ministerial Education next year, and $100.00 for Elon College.

That, the license of C. D. Dunlap, which was granted him, March the thirtieth of this year, be discontinued, and that he surrender them to the Committee. Also that of J. M. Clifton.

That, the license of A. H. Sheppard, S. R. Waldrop and J. C. Knight be continued for another year.

That, E. T. Strickland be licensed as a probationer to preach the Gospel.

That, of the funds now in the hands of the Treasurer, we buy one hundred dollars worth of War Savings Stamps.

E. M. CARTER, Chairman.

The world is talking reconstruction, and there is something to it. It cannot be denied. Let us hope that there will be a reconstruction in giving. We have played the haphazard methods long enough. Let us get down to business and the Bible and give as we are taught.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

"LORD, TEACH US TO PRAY"

You say you are busy this morning,
In the maelstrom of family cares,
And husband must rush to the office,
So there isn't a moment for prayers.

Then children are sent to the school-room,
And the grind of the day thus begins,
With no word from God's Book to remember,
Nor the echo of strengthening hymns.

What wonder the burdens are heavy,
And the hours seem irksomely long;
What wonder that rash words are spoken,
And that life seems discordant and wrong.

Pause for a little each morning,
And again at the close of the day,
To talk with the Master who loves you—
Remember, He taught us to pray.

MAKING THE HOUSE OF GOD ATTRACTIVE

Rev. M. J. Honsberger, Newton, N. H., has done a splendid piece of work in making the buildings and grounds of his church attractive. In this brief way he describes it for our readers. Do not think that Brother Honsberger is not alive to the work of the church, too. While the church, it is right out in the country and has only about eighty members, it has full time preaching, a Sunday school, Christian Endeavor, Junior Endeavor, Ladies' Aid Society, Missionary Society, and contributes to all the calls of the church. So while he is beautifying landscape he is also beautifying souls. He speaks not of his work in the church but this is just to show what can be done in the country to make the church house and grounds attractive. How about the lawns, paint, window panes, doors, equipment of your church? Read what he says:

Making the Church Grounds Inviting

It is our aim to make the grounds around the church buildings ideal and inviting. This idea may be called an innovation in decorating; for it is usually all done with in the buildings and the grounds left uncared for and in an uninviting condition. We worked on the theory that the exterior of the church property should have a voice so that it might speak through trees, shrubs, vines, flowers, bird life and song, every day to those who passed along the highway of commerce burdened with the responsibilities of life.

To begin with the buildings were well located, on rising ground, with ample room on the front for lawns. They were also well separated, so this gave us a splendid opportunity for carrying out what we had been thinking of for years. On our arrival here eleven years ago we at once began to make our ream a living reality. Walks were laid and built, loose stones were removed, the grounds fertilized, the lawn mower freely used, trees, shrubs, vines, and flowering plants set out. These were procured in the valleys and mountains of New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine, and Massachusetts. Now after eleven years of hard work a beautiful green lawn, with flowering shrubs, vines, perennial plants, and bulbs are blooming from early spring till late fall to greet the eye and gladden the heart, and the old gravel bank is a thing of the past. Bird houses were built and placed here and there on the buildings, telegraph poles and trees, and they were soon occupied by the feathered songsters and they assist the minister in proclaiming the gospel of hope and gladness. More than fifty blue-birds alone were brought up on the grounds last year and we suppose that somewhere in the Southland they are helping ministers this winter with their Newton song. A splendid lawn tennis court was built back of the parsonage and vestry with a twelve foot wire fence around it and the soil was used for grading purposes on the front lawns and has greatly beautified the property. The tennis court gives the young people of the parish an opportunity for recreation midst beautiful surroundings, and it also helps to keep the pastor young. It is hoped that these material things will lead both old and young to see what Jesus saw in birds and flowers, and help them to surrender themselves to the service of the Master, and to mankind.

THINK IT OVER

When things look blue,
As they sometimes do;
When you hit Fate's line and you can't break through;
When the dark is deep
Where the shadows creep,
And ghosts of trouble break up your sleep—

How would you like to trade your hand,
Facing the German host,
With the fellow Out There in No Man's Land, Hooked to the Listening Post?
How would you like to trade your job,
Swapping it wrench for wrench,
With the fellow feeling the big gun's throb
Out in the first line trench?

When things get tough,
Where the break is rough,
And you slip and skid as they call your bluff;
When you're out of gear
Where the world looks drear
And you curse your luck with a sigh or tear—

How would you like to make a trade,
Swapping your troubles dire,
With the fellow storming a barricade,
Raked with machine gun's fire?
How would you like to trade your turn,
Making an even swap,
With the fellow watching the rockets burn
At the last call—"Over the Top"?

The Best Things in Christian Endeavor. Titus 2:11-14; 3:8. (Christian Endeavor Day).

AS MUCH FOR OTHERS AS FOR SELF

One of our Sunday schools sent me through its Treasurer last week $2.83 for "Missions," saying: "This was our Sunday school collection last Sunday." This school has decided to take me at my word and put the matter to the test. I stated in print, also in public speech that if any of our Sunday schools would give one Sunday a month collection to the Orphanage, and one Sunday a month collection to Missions, and then did not as easily raise enough money on the other Sundays to pay its own literature and pay its own current expenses as it did before, I would personally at the end of the year pay the deficit. I wish other schools would put my word and this matter to the test. I believe that both in our church work and in our Sunday school work we should do as much for others for ourselves. When we simply raise enough money in Sunday school to pay our own literature we haven't really given anything. We have put our mites together to buy something for ourselves cheaper than we could have bought it had we paid for it separately.

It seems to me to be the finest and best sort of program for any Sunday school to adopt—as much for others as for ourselves. Let the collection, First Sunday of the month say, go to the Orphanage. Let the collection second Sunday of the month, go to Missions. Then let the other two Sunday collections go toward purchasing the Sunday school supplies. That puts the school in the right attitude toward others and towards God in the matter of entering into His program and coming to be co-workers together with Him. I believe any school trying this will find current expenses paid more easily with two Sundays per month collection than with four Sunday per month. Let other schools try—and then see what happens.

CRAVEN-YORK

A quite, but very pretty marriage took place in the pastor's study of the First Christian church, Greensboro, Saturday, January 18, at 8:00 P. M., when Miss Golda Craven, became the bride of Mr. Claude W. York of this city. The marriage took place in the company of a few invited friends of the marriage parties. Mrs. York is a very popular young lady of this city. Mrs. York is a member of the First Christian church and has many friends here. The many friends of both bride and groom will be glad to learn that they are to make their home at 1260 Gregory Street. Congratulation and best wishes to them.

WALTON

Nannie Willie Walton was born March 24, 1892 and died December 8, 1918, at her home near Ingram, Va. Although she came of Presbyterian parentage, she joined the Ingram Christian Church in her childhood and remained until her death one of its most loyal members. On November 22, 1911 she was married to Robert Henry Walton. To this union a daughter, Hattie, who is now a most charming little girl about five years old, was born. For several years Mrs. Walton served on many of the committees of her church and engaged actively in all of its enterprises. Naturally she had a charming personality and with her Christian graces succeeded in almost everything she undertook. She is survived by her husband, her daughter, three sister, Mrs. Fitzgerald Bass, Mrs. J. M. Rawlings, and Mrs. Geo. W. Penton; two brothers, P. W., and J. D. Olds, and her mother, Mrs. Phil Olds. She was laid to rest by her pastor and sorrowing friends, assisted by Dr. T. S. Wilson, pastor of Oak Level Presbyterian church; and Rev. R. W. Grant, pastor of Mt. Zion Baptist church. May the Master's love abide with the bereaved.

1. We profoundly feel the loss of our oldest member, who always contributed willingly and liberally of her means to help in all good causes, and who was always truly loyal and true to her church and her Societies.

JONES

Mrs. Mamie Savage Jones, beloved wife of T. A. Jones, Norfolk, Va., was born near the present village of Driver, Nansemond County, Virginia, October 9, 1855, and departed this life January 1, 1919, after a brief illness. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted husband, three sons, A. Lynton, Norfolk, Va.; Ralph, an officer in the United States Navy; Carlton, a captain in the regular army now in France, and Louise, wife of Lieutenant-Colonel Williams, U. S. A., also in France.

Deceased was the daughter of the late lamented Col. A. Savage, a distinguished soldier of the Confederacy, and wife Sarah Lee; sister of the late lamented Capt. P. H. Lee, Nansemond County, Virginia. She came of courageous and heroic stock and in her career of more than sixty-three years not only lived up to the splendid family traditions but reflected honor upon the name she bore.

In early girlhood days she joined the Christian church and to her dying day was loyal, faithful and true not only to her church, but to all its interests, enterprises and undertakings for good. She was a charter member of Memorial Temple, Norfolk, though in her last years held her membership in the church of her girlhood days, Berea, Driver, Va. In her going away one of the most amiable and generous Christian characters I have ever known has been transplanted from earth to heaven. Her friends and loved ones are numbered by the hundreds. She simply lived, labored, loved and thought in terms of others. Her home was a joy to all who went to share its charming hospitality, and her presence in any circle was a blessing and a benediction. The spirit of the Master, that unselfish, and sublime spirit of love to God and deep concern for the welfare of others, was manifest in all her conduct and attitude. I recall that the writer of Acts said of Dorcas: "This woman was full of good works and alms—deeds which she did." And these words are as true of Mrs. T. A. Jones as they are of the Bible character.

She has forever inspired her noble life in the hearts not only of her broken hearted husband and bereaved daughter and sons, but in the hearts of hundreds of others who loved her for the true and beautiful life she lived, and for the triumphant death she died. Her benevolences and charity led in many directions. The Christian Orphanage had no more interested or devoted helper; The Christian Sun no more loyal and enthusiastic reader, and supporter; and Elon College no worthier or warmer friend and advocate. In fact every worthy and Christian enterprise and movement had her sympathy, interest, support and prayers. She believed heartily in missions and was a liberal contributor to the Christly work of sending the Gospel to those who had it not. Her city, her church, and the various charitable and benevolent enterprises which she loved and liberally supported are the richer for her years of sympathetic interest and devotion, and are the poorer for her going.

God comfort the sorely bereaved ones who mourn her going but will forever cherish her sweet, sacred and hallowed memory. Her wearied body has fallen on sleep, but her splendid and beautiful life gives her loved ones and friends the blessed assurance that God now rests her noble soul.

BOLAND

James A. Boland of Burlington, N. C., was born March 18, 1852 and died January 9, 1919, from influenza followed by pneumonia. He was first a member of Union Christian church, but after moving to Burlington he transferred his membership to the Burlington Christian church. He leaves to mourn their loss a devoted companion, one son, one brother and two sisters. The funeral services was conducted from the house and interment made in the city cemetery.

SAUNDERS

Mrs. Josephine Saunders died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Freeland, Burlington, N. C., January 1, 1919 aged 76 years, 6 months and 25 days. The end came suddenly as the result of a stroke of paralysis. She was a member of the Christian church, but on account of afflictions she was denied the privilege of attending the service during her last few years. She leaves to mourn their loss an only daughter, three grandchildren and one grand child. The funeral service was conducted from the home and the body was shipped to Goldsboro, N. C., for interment.

BLALOCK

Mrs. Dora Booker Blalock, wife of J. M. Blalock, McCullers, N. C., R. F. D., died Monday, January 20, 1919, from pneumonia following Spanish Influenza. She was fifty-seven years old. A husband and eight children—three sons and five daughters—survive her. The deceased was a faithful member of Plymouth Christian church and lived a consistent Christian life. A few minutes before her spirit took its departure, she told some one that she was hovering between life and death; but she did not know why she clung to life, for she was going to a "far sweeter place." Her remains were buried in the Blalock family burying ground, Tuesday. The funeral was conducted at the grave by the writer, her pastor.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

WARD

John L. Ward, the four-months-old son of Sister Poly Ward of Haw River Christian church, died January 16, 1919 and was laid to rest in the Haw River cemetery the day following. Services were held in the home by the writer. Comfort be to those who mourn.

HERITAGE

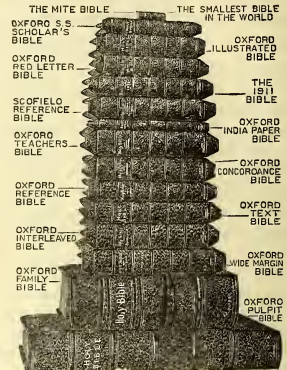

Between eleven and twelve o'clock on the night of January 18, 1919, Rufus B. Heritage, the youngest son of Brother A. R. Heritage, Graham, North Carolina, was instantly killed in an auto wreck in Burlington. He and a friend were going into Burlington at a very rapid rate when the car struck a post. The other fellow narrowly escaped death. Brother Heritage was only a little over twenty-three years old. Burial services were held by the writer in the home where a large number of friends had gathered to "weep with those who weep." The body was laid in New Providence cemetery by the side of his only brother, who died last fall with influenza. A father, mother, five sisters, and a number of friends remain to weep. May the Comforter be very real to those who feel most keenly their loss.

CANCER TREATED SUCCESSFULLY AT THE KELLAM HOSPITAL

The record of the Kellam Hospital is without parallel in history, having restored, without the use of the knife, Acids, X-Ray or Radium, over ninety per cent of the many hundreds of sufferers from cancers which it has treated during the past twenty-two years. We want every man and woman in the United States to know what we are doing.—KELLAM HOSPITAL, 1617 W. Main St., Richmond, Va.

THE CHRISTIAN SIN

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY"

Bearing The Cross

BEARING the Cross, we believe, is an idea that has been misrepresented. Somewhere we have seen a picture of a man bearing the Cross. He was burdened and the road on which he was traveling was rugged. Indeed it was a cross, and not very inviting to the sinner if that be the kind of work that bearing the Cross of Christ meant. Bearing the Cross is not a burden to the Christian. Bearing does not necessarily mean heaviness. "My yoke is easy and my burden is light," says the Master. Then let us teach and preach that doctrine. .

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

OUR ORPHANAGE AND ITS ACHIEVEMENT

The announcement in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN that the Christian Orphanage is out of debt has no doubt brought joy to the entire Church. It is the fortune or misfortune of all such institutions to be in debt at times. But in any way that the matter is reviewed such is usually the case. For such an institution to be in debt certainly welds itself to the hearts of the people. The people have an interest in things which they have interest in.

The pennies, dimes, and dollars that the people have contributed to help feed the children of the Orphanage and meet the institution's indebtedness have been the means that united the people and the institution. "Where your treasure is there will your heart be also."

In this week's issue Brother Johnston explains far better than we can why there should be no slacking in the giving to the Orphanage. Read his message on another page. The institution has not been able to go forward because of its financial handicaps. Let us now give the Orphanage an opportunity to meet the demands upon it and go forward.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN CAMPAIGN

As stated in last week's issue February and March are to be months of special effort and interest for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We asked some one to name the goal. Brother W. D. Harward does that. He places the number at 500—a very conservative figure. That is less than ten subscriptions for each pastor in the Convention. You have about the right idea, Brother Harward, and we hope that all the brethren will bear you out in the goal and decision.

Last week we mailed to pastors a letter, and enclosed therein a stamped envelope for reply, and asked each one to say how many new subscribers that he would endeavor to get. Brother L. I. Cox is the first to reply. He says: "I believe THE SUN worthy of the best effort on the part of each pastor. It is truly his helper. I pledge my best efforts and hope to secure at least ten new subscribers." This is not only the first, but the only reply that we have received at this writing (Monday morning). Of course all will reply and rally to the cause.

We have been talking and adopting about THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We have said that it ought to be in the homes of the entire Church, but saying that it ought to be there, just voting on some conference report, will never put it there. It will take a little going out and going in; it will take a little personal work, a little effort and energy. May we not do this thing now! Truly the pastor's work is lighter and better when the Church paper goes into the homes of his membership. His calls do not fall upon deaf ears because his members have read and informed themselves. All together! All together now!

"HOW TO KEEP A MISSIONARY SOCIETY ALIVE AND ACTIVE"

We publish this week the second of a series of articles by Field Secretary Atkinson on "How to Keep a Missionary Society Alive and Active." These articles, we sincerely trust, will be read by every subscriber of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The go to the heart of the matter, as we see it; and if followed, will bring a new day for the missionary interests of the local churches.

We are glad that Dr. Atkinson added "and active" as a part of his topic, for some missionary societies may be alive and not active. So far as the Kingdom's good is concerned, there is little to be gained if a society is alive and not active. This is not only a day of real living, but a day of action. We plead and pray that these articles will have a wide reading. And suppose that you are not a member of some missionary society, why not read them anyway? Try one and see how you like it.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATIONAL DAY

As a reminder to pastors and people, the third Sunday in February was designated by the recent session of the Convention to "Christian Education Day" or "Life Work Recruit Day." Full information of this can be found by turning to page 12 of the Christian Annual. We make this note as a reminder and will write on the subject next week.

SISTERS, BUT LIVED APART

The other day we were talking to a Methodist Protestant minister about the similarity between the Christian Church and the Methodist Protestant Church. In the course of our conversation we remarked to him that the two Churches reminded us of two sisters who, from birth, had lived in different households. The two children of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Christian Church being the older of the two children. The Christian Church was founded and formed in 1792 and the Methodist Protestant Church had its beginning in 1824.

We have hoped for years that these two bodies might unite. As we see it the union would be a most fitting one. These Churches occupy different territory, with a few exceptions. And where both denominations do exist the equipment, if united, would not lapse. We believe that the Kingdom's work would prosper more effectively by the union of the Churches.

Methodist Protestant Herald, please print.

INTERESTED IN MISSIONS

Our people are undoubtedly getting interested in missions. We give this week more than the usual space to that subject. Last week this topic took two and one-half pages of THE SUN, and yet all the material in this week's paper was carried over from last week. We are today (January 31) preparing "copy" for our issue of February 12 and have on hand four articles on the subject of missions. And this is nearly two weeks before that issue will reach the public. We rejoice because of the awakening and trust that we shall always have plenty of material on the subject.

INFLUENZA ON THE DECREASE

That influenza is on the decrease in the State, despite the fact that outbreaks continue to occur in different localities, is seen from a recent report of the Vital Statistics Department of the State Board of Health. According to this report, there were 3,923 deaths less in November than in October and 533 deaths less in December than in November. In other words, the number of deaths decrease from 6,055 in October to 2,133 in November, and to about 1,600 in December. This steady decline is thought to be due partly to the fact that people are becoming more informed as to the ways and means by which the disease is spread, and are perhaps more careful in their practices of personal hygiene which, after all, is a great factor in preventing the disease.

A SERMON BY A FARMER

A writer—"E. J. K."—in the Kansas Industrialist, preaches a splendid sermon in twelve small paragraphs. The article is worthy of place on this page and we gladly reprint it:

A Farmer's Creed

1. I believe in red clover, in white clover, in sweet clover, in cowpeas, in soybeans, and above all, I believe in alfalfa, the queen of forage plants.
2. I believe in a permanent agriculture, in a soil that grows richer rather than poorer from year to year.
3. I believe in 60 bushel corn and 40 bushel wheat and shall not be satisfied with less.
4. I believe that the only good weed is a dead weed, and that a clean farm is as important as a clean conscience.

5. I believe in the farm boy and the farm girl, the farmer's best crop and the future's best hope.

6. I believe in the farm woman, and will do all in my power to make her life easier and happier.

7. I believe in the country school that prepares for county life, and in a country church that teaches its people to love deeply and live honorably.

8. I believe in community spirit, a pride in the home and neighbors, and I will do my part to make my own community the best in the state to live in.

9. I believe in better roads, and I will use the road drag whenever the roads are ready for it.

10. I believe in happiness. I believe in the power of a smile, and will use mine on every possible occasion.

11. I believe in the farmer. I believe in the farm life. I believe in the inspiration of the open country.

12. I am proud to be a farmer, I am proud to be a farm bureau, and I will try earnestly to uphold the worthy name.

HEALTH SUNDAY SET FOR FEBRUARY 23

Letter From Surgeon General Blue to The Churches

The observance of Health Sunday in the churches has been again postponed on account of Sunday, February 9th, being selected as Roosevelt Memorial Day. The Bureau of the Public Health Service is now asking the churches to set aside Sunday, February 23, for a presentation of the campaign which has been begun by the Federal authorities against venereal disease.

In this the Government again appeals directly to the churches as such, in the following message from the Surgeon General:

"The Government of the United States is asking the churches of the country to take an active part in meeting a great national emergency.

"The War made it necessary for the nation to face frankly and courageously the menace of venereal diseases. Now the war is over and the period of demobilization has begun. Drastic measures must be taken to prevent during this period those conditions in civilian life which made these diseases the greatest cause of disability in the Army.

"In the Army and Navy a program of law enforcement, medical measures, education, and provision for wholesome recreation, was adopted. This program brought results. The venereal rate was lowered below that of any army of any nation in the history of the modern world.

"Now that the war is over, the cities and towns through which the soldiers and sailors will go and to which they will return upon demobilization must be made as safe as the camps from which they have come. The fight against this menace to our national vitality and to our homes must be vigorously continued.

"It is the social responsibility of the communities, of which the churches of every denomination are a part, to continue the work carried on in time of war in order that the world may be made safe not only for democracy, but for posterity.

"It is suggested that the above communication be read from the various pulpits on Health Sunday, February 23, 1919.

"RUPERT BLUE,

"Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service."

Literature concerning the observance of the day has been sent to all of the clergymen of the country with a return card to the Public Health Service for ordering all literature under six appropriate groupings, viz.: pamphlets for young men, for the general public, for boys, for parents of children, for girls and young women and for educators. The ordering and circulating of this informational literature is one of the vital features of the day and should be carefully attended to in each congregation.

RANDOM PARAGRAPHS

"What is the price of THE CHRISTIAN SUN," said a man the other day as we met in a store door way. "I am a Methodist Protestant," he continued, "but the Christian Church seems near to me." And said I to him, "I feel close akin to the Methodist Protestant Church.

Put in a word for the Church paper even if you do not get immediate results, for the fruits of such were clear to me the other day when a man flagged me down on the street with a two dollar bill and subscribed for THE SUN.. It had been two years since I talked with him about it.

Democracy has before it the reducing of the percentage of illiterates in the United States. If democracy is for the individual he should be trained so as to be a citizen who will reflect the spirit of democracy.

There are a great many fellows big as a bushel who do a lot of pint-cup thinking.

I have been reading about a book, "The Living Pulpit." I wonder why the author desired to call it a "living pulpit?" He must have had in mind that some pulpits are dead.

I see in my exchanges that some fellow is always hammering on some editor about something. I frequently have this experience, but never lose sleep over it. I do my best and know that I do, and so take a good laugh and say: "If they were in my place, and I in theirs, I wonder which place would be placed and which place would be replaced."

* *

North Carolina pays eight cents per capita for university education, Virginia four cents, Georgia seven cents, and Alabama two cents. No wonder we have so many illiterates in the South.

The brightest face that I have seen today was a man whose church—a country church—was considering the matter of having preaching every Sunday.

NOTES

How do you pronounce Bolsheviki? Here it is: Bol-she-ve-ke. Look for an editorial on the subject next week if space permits.

Rev. D. F. Parsons has returned to Vanderbilt University to resume his studies. For a year or more he has been engaged in Y. M. C. A. work.

President Harper is to be in Dover, Delaware, at the People's Christian church on the fourth Sunday in February and the first Sunday in March.

The Burlington church has invited the first session of the North Carolina Conference to meet with it next November. It is understood that the invitation will be accepted.

Brother G. R. Maynard, Watson, N. C., called at THE SUN office last Saturday and contributed $2.00 to the Worthy Aid Fund to be used in sending the paper to worthy people.

Rev. L. I. Cox, Elon College, in sending four renewals for THE SUN says: "My work is starting off nicely this Conference year and I am happy in my new field of labor."

Brother A. A. Lynch, Mebane, N. C., a dear and devoted friend to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, came in last week to leave his "best wishes." We are always glad to have our friends call.

Brother F. C. Lester, pastor of the Graham and Haw River churches, was a caller at THE SUN office last week. He says that he is going to back up the campaign for new subscriptions for THE SUN.

We are informed that Rev. C. E. Geringer, Jonesville, Virginia, anticipates taking regular church work when his school closes in May. Churches needing a pastor at that time have the opportunity of his services.

Beginning next week we will write editorially on the "Peace Conference." So far we have said little because we had to have time to make a study of it from a source more reliable than the secular press.

The Sunday school and Christian Endeavor matter did not reach us this week. We do not know why. We trust that the Board of Religious Education of the Convention will see that we have something for SUN readers each week.

Rev. W. B. Fuller, Y. M. C. A. Secretary, Camp Forrest, Ga., expects to return to regular ministerial work at an early date. He has not decided upon his field, and churches without a pastor can get in touch with Brother Fuller at the above given address.

The North Carolina Christian Conference was duly chartered January 27. The first meeting of the officers of the new Conference will be held on February 6, and soon thereafter history and minutes of new body will be issued giving in full the plans and work to date.

Rev. W. D. Harward, Dendron, Va., writes: "I think that at least five hundred new subscriptions should be secured during the time of THE SUN campaign. You may count on me to bring this matter to the attention of my people." Thank you, Brother Harward, thank you.

We are indebted to Brother J. A. Fogleman, Liberty, Route 3, for a nice sack of flour. We are not so fortunate as Brother Williamson and wife and Brother Harward who tell of poundings in this week's paper but we are just as grateful for remembrances from our subscribers.

Rev. L. I. Cox held services at Hopedale, a mill town in Alamance county, last Sunday afternoon and began the organization of a church at that place. At night he preached at the Burlington church, presenting the claims of the Missionary Association of the Western North Carolina Conference.

Under "Book Feviw" this week will be found some splendid things about Dr. J. G. Bishop's book, "A Biblical View of the Church." We have read a part of this good book and find its contents well worth time and price. We need in this age, of all times, to see the Church from a Bible standpoint. Later we will give a thorough review of the publication.

Brother John R. Foster, superintendent of the Burlington Sunday school, said in his talk last Sunday that a young man, a member of the Christian Church but not a member of the Burlington church, called on him last week and left $5.00 to be used in defraying the expenses of Miss Stacey, whom the Burlington Sunday school has decided to send as a missionary to Japan. We mention this to show what an abiding interest people take in things of that kind.

COST OF THE ANNUAL

The total cost of issuing and delivering the 1919 Christian Annual amounted to $614.24. The total income amounted to $571.54—a gain of $42.69. Three-fourths of this gain went back to the credit of the Convention in the account of the Publishing Agent and one-fourth, or $10.69 went to me for editing and looking after the mailing of the publication.

C. B. RIDDLE, Editor and Publisher.
February 1, 1919.

Mrs. J. F. Renn—THE SUN is very dear to me as it has been in our home for many years.

Mrs. W. B. Bagwell—Find check for renewal to THE SUN. Its weekly visits are so inspiring and helpful.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

SUFFOLK LETTER

A sexton is more than a janitor. A janitor is a door-keeper, a room-keeper; a sexton is an under officer of a church. In England he has a life-job; in America a term-contract-job. The sexton has charge of the buildings, furniture, utensils, and keeps all in order. He cares for heat, ventilation, opening and closing of doors, and cleaning up the premises. He provides for the physical comfort of the congregation. In some cases he digs graves and attends funerals. He may seem to the thoughtless to occupy a low position; but rightly understood and rightly performing his duty he is an important factor in worship. He has the best opportunity to make friends by making people comfortable. I offer felicitations to all faithful sextons in city and country churches, and I may be pardoned if I offer a few suggestions to those sextons who have not thought of the high position to which choice, necessity, or circumstances may have exalted them.

It is said that "cleanliness is next godliness," and a clean church may be counted as a good example of cleanliness. The sexton who keeps his church clean sets a good example for housekeepers and Christians. "The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin;" and the broom and duster of the sexton cleans the house of God from all dust. It is no small matter to keep a house clean. That has been the task of the housekeepers through all the centuries. We live in an atmosphere of invisible dust that creeps into home and church; and we live in an atmosphere of evil that creeps into our lives. A clean church suggests a clean congregation, and worshippers should not complain at the neglect of the sextons while their lives are more defiled than the church. The congregation can help the sexton keep the church house clean, and the sexton can help the congregation to keep their clothes and their lives clean. "Help us to help each other, Lord," might be a good prayer for sexton and people.

Heat is very important to comfort in winter and ventilation very important to comfort in summer. This requires special attention for funerals. It is so often the case, in country churches especially, that church fires are started on a cold, wet, winter day, just before the people enter the church. This makes the most uncomfortable atmosphere, as it releases the moisture in the stagnant air, and is worse than no fire at all. Fires should be started a sufficient length of time before the service to release the moisture and dry it out of the rooms, so that the church will be a place of comfort. It is sad indeed to sit in a cold church at a funeral. It is worse than out of doors in the fresh atmosphere, no matter what the temperature is. If any sexton reads this, I hope that he will count it a Christian privilege to keep his church comfortable for funerals as well as for Sunday worship. Building fires for invited guests was always inhospitable; and it is no less so in the house of the Lord. Hospitality is a good characteristic of a good sexton.

A church yard is a part of the church premises and should receive attention as well as the house itself. A home is judged by the outside and so is a church and religious life. The psalmist says: "I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness;" but a sexton is more than a door-keeper; he is a church-keeper, a comfort-keeper, a health-keeper, and one might say, a soul-keeper. He opens the house of the Lord, he closes the house of the Lord, and he deserves a place in the upper temple.

W. W. STALEY.

GOLDEN DEEDS

One of the great blessings that God has given to man, is the power to do golden deeds—deeds that bless humanity, that cheer the saddened heart, and thrill the soul with joy. I find myself thanking God very often these days for the many golden deeds of which I have been the unworthy recipient; deeds that have meant more to my life than can ever be expressed, and deeds without which, my life would have been different. However, whatever good there may be in me, or the small amount of good I may have done, I attribute to the great kindness of God, and the inspiration that has come to me through the golden deeds of my friends.

When but a boy, I had gone forward to the altar of prayer to endeavor to find the Christ. I was struggling to know Him, and as I waited and prayed mother came and performed one of the many of her life of golden deeds, she put her arms around my neck, and spoke in words similar to these: "Frank, can't you trust Jesus, and we will go home and tell papa what God has done for you?" My heart answered Jesus and mother, "yes," and I became a new boy, and father knew.

I went away to school, and one day father wrote me a letter in which he said: "I want you and all my children to be better than I have been; I want you to make a man of yourself." I had always wanted to be like father; I knew he was the greatest man in the world to me, and had never dreamed I could ever be the man he was, and then came his letter. What an ideal! It was one of the golden deeds of his that has meant much to my life, for it taught me that every boy, with the training his father gives him, plus that which he may secure himself, ought to be a more useful man than his father had been, because of the greater opportunities that the boy has.

While in school I was constantly being blessed by deeds that were golden. Once my money gave out, and it looked as if I would have to leave school, and Rev. J. W. Patton, one of my most esteemed friends, gave me a month's board, and under his leadership, a number of others did the same. I remained in college, and I thank God for these men.

During the "Flu" epidemic in Norfolk I was among the first of its victims. For nine days I was confined to my room, with none of my relatives in the city I felt sorry that I was seemingly about to be a trouble to some one, but there was one who was anxious to bless my life by her deeds that to me were golden. Her name is Mrs. J. W. Mereer, in whose home I was rooming. For nine days she nursed me as tenderly as my own mother, and when I offered to pay her, she said, "No, you do not owe me a cent." Then I knew again that golden deeds are not to be purchased with money.

These are only a few of the golden deeds that have blessed my life, and I have given them with the hope that they may inspire all who may chance to read of them, to not forget to do the golden deed of kindness, which blesses both the person helped and the person who does the deed of love, and make the world a better place in which to live, by bringing sunshine into lives that are dark; joy into hearts that are sad, and a thrill that lifts mankind into a state of sublime happiness, and fills the life with the spirit of gratitude and helpfulness.

PASTOR AND WIFE POUNDED

We had been reading about other preachers getting pounded, and had heard slight threats for ourselves, but we thought that perhaps we might escape, but it was not to be. When these good people begin thinking about doing anything they soon put their thought into action. We have found that they had been thinking.

While we were sitting quietly enjoying the peace of the fire side Tuesday, Jan. 21, suddenly the quietness was broken by a stir at the front door which was occasioned by a crowd of about forty people who had come to "besiege" the parsonage; and entering with boxes, packages, and other "weapons" of peaceful siege, they marched without resistance to the dining room which they captured. When we could summon sufficient courage to follow we found them standing around a table filled with good things to eat, with many things lying around. Then we realized that we were the "victims" of an old fashioned pounding.

To mention only a part of the good things brought would make a list too long for this article. Suffice it to say that there was enough to supply most of our culinary needs for many weeks. Words could not express (if indeed they could have been spoken which was impossible, as we did not regain our speech for some time) the feelings of gratitude and appreciation that filled our hearts.

We mention some of the thoughts that strove for utterance. First, there was a feeling of our unworthiness of such thoughtfulness and kindness. Then there was a sense of our gratitude that we can never express. We made some resolutions, too, which we hope and pray may be kept. We resolved to try to do more for the Master and for these dear, good people and to be truer to the trust imposed in us. May the Lord bless them in things temporal and may He give them the riches of His grace in their hearts and lives.

JUST A HUNDRED VOLUNTEERS

Just a few weeks past this writer received a letter from our Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, concerning the hundred volunteers for the ministry and mission fields. I did not place it in the waste basket, nor use it to kindle fire, but I have read it twice. I have the letter in my office, and the contents on my heart. I am going to keep it.

When I read that letter I made a short prayer. Here it is: I said, "Lord, send me after at least one of these volunteers, and I'll do my very best to bring him in for the work." I am still on the lookout, and I know Christ will help me to find him. Our Church in the South needs at least two hundred to go from this field. How I wish the Church as a whole would come together and pray mightily for them!

Here is a thought that came to me while praying over the matter. We have a goodly number of Woman's Missionary and Christian Endeavor Societies in the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention. The main object of these Societies is training Christian workers; and somehow I think each Society, with the assistance of its pastor, ought to lay the matter upon the hearts of its members and expect definite results. I believe a step in that direction would add greatly to our list of workers. How about trying it out?

Our people in the South are beginning to awake to the mission cause, and we are badly in need of additional workers in every Conference. I believe every church in the Convention with a membership of as much as two hundred ought to follow the recent step of the Burlington church. The churches ought to support a missionary, and how great it would be to have that missionary come from the local church! Suppose we try out the above plan? How about it, Missionary Societies? What say you Christian Endeavorers? Are you willing to lay this matter before your Societies? If you are Jesus will be there to assist you.

UNION (N. C.)

Notwithstanding muddy roads and swollen streams we had a nice congregation at Union last Sunday. We had a good service and much interest was manifested in the forward step that is being considered, which if carried out, will mean much to church and pastor. A committee of eleven was named to consider among other things the advisability of having services every Sunday. The committee was asked to consult with the membership as to wish and ascertain what could be done and report to the quarterly meeting on Saturday before the second Sunday in February. The committee is to meet at the church at one o'clock p. m., on Saturday before the second Sunday and get its report ready for the quarterly meeting which convenes at two o'clock that afternoon. Union is one of our best churches in this section. It is composed of excellent people who are capable of great things for Christ and the Church.

Services every Sunday would mean great things for the Sunday school, the Missionary Society, and the general growth and uplift of the church. It would bring the community and the church into a closer fellowship of service and worship. It would be a great thing for our young people in developing and training them in service for Christ and humanity. The church has a great many young people in its fold and congregation and in them there are great capabilities and possibilities for the church if the church will only undertake great things for Christ and give the young people of the church and community a chance to do great things for Christ and His cause.

Let each member make the matter a subject of earnest prayer and do in the matter as he believes God would have him do. I pray God to guide us; and I ask that His will be done. It is earnestly desired that every member who can possibly do so attend the quarterly meeting on Saturday and the Communion service on Sunday. To friends who have shown me special kindness, I return sincere thanks.

NOTICE

On account of Influenza the Musical Institute of the Eastern North Carolina Sunday School Convention published to be held at Catawba Springs church February 20-22, will not meet until further notice.

GEO. M. McCULERS.

There is very little to report from this pastorate. No revivals have been conducted since conference. All churches in the pastorate have been closed because of Influenza. Most of the county and high schools have been closed. The fact is Page county has suffered much because of this epidemic. Many churches and schools are closed at this writing.

A new church has been built in this pastorate, and is now nearing completion. The new church (Mt. Lebanon) is not one of fancy, but is built plain and substantial. The best lumber that could be secured has been put into the building. The outside work is all completed, the doors and windows in, and the inside work is being done slowly, but carefully. We have secured two new members for the new church since conference, which makes a total of thirty-two that have been received during the sixteen months we have been pastor. We are hoping and praying that the Influenza will soon blow over so that we may get back to our post of duty. We intreat the prayers of the Brotherhood.

WINCHESTER, (VA.) LETTER

With the coming of the year, there seemed to come new life into our church work. The epidemic of Influenza was a great hindrance to our labors during the fall. We had quite a number of cases among our church people but no deaths.

On New Year's night we called a meeting of our members at the parsonage and in an informal way called for suggestions for the betterment of the work and the laying of plans for the coming year. Notwithstanding the fact that the weather was inclement, there was a good attendance and a great deal of interest. I feel that the meeting is going to prove a decided help to the church. There were a number of advanced steps planned, some of which I will explain later. Two I want to mention here: The members decided to assist the pastor in visiting and trying to interest the members who seldom come to the services; steps were taken to pay off all the notes held by the banks against the church. There are three, one for $42.50 which the Ever Ready Society, composed of young people, will pay; the second for $120.00 which the Ladies' Aid Society will pay and the third for $870.00. We have $200.00 of this on hand and $200.00 more subscribed, leaving a balance of $470.00 to raise. We want to pay this before our Conference meets in August. We will appreciate an early settlement of all unpaid subscriptions and any help that our friends can give us in the way of contributions toward liquidating our debt at this time.

We have raised over $800.00 on the debt since our report to the Conference in August. Four new members have been received into the fellowship of the church this month. Rev. Gypsy Smith, Jr., is to hold a union revival in Winchester, February 5 to March 2. Our Sunday school rendered a splendid program at its Christmas entertainment.

Upon returning from an evening meeting, on January 9, which was the writer's birthday, the pastor and his wife found that the members and friends of the church had come in and taken possession of the parsonage and had brought with them a generous donation; in fact a big pounding, which we are still enjoying and which we shall ever remember. In addition to this friends in the Winchester, Timber Mountain, New Hope and one from Woods Chapel, whose names are too numerous to mention, have been supplying with us with good things for our table which we have eaten gladly and appreciated greatly. The Lord has been good to us through these friends and we pray for strength to render a larger service to Him and the churches and that we may make ourselves more worthy of such tokens of friendship.

In addition to the work at Winchester, the writer is holding services this year at Timber Mountain, New Hope and Beulah. The people seem interested in the services at all these places but sickness has hindered the work greatly during the year. Brothers N. M. Hasler and J. E. W. Bryant have been ordained as Deacons since beginning our work there. The work is pleasant at all our churches and we find it a pleasure to labor with the good members in them.

The following amounts have been contributed on the debt of the Winchester Church:

Previously reported, $11,127.41.
Mrs. W. T. Walters, $4.00; I. N. Painter, $5.00; Ever Ready Society, $5.87; Alva C. Richards, $125.00; Rev. J. O. Atkinson, $20.00; Ladies' Aid Society, $21.52; Rev. A. W. Andes, $10.00; C. M. A. E. Va. Conference, $100.00.

Subscriptions paid on One Cent a day:

C. H. Barr, $3.65; Mrs. C. H. Barr, $3.65; Mrs. Joanna Yeakley, $3.65; W. T. Walters, $3.65; Mrs. W. T. Walters, $3.65; Arthur S. Anderson, $3.65; E. W. Cather, $3.65; Mrs. E. W. Cather, $3.65; Mrs. B. R. Richards, $3.80; Miss Goldie Edwards, $3.25; Total, $11,455.05.

In behalf of the church, I thank all who have had part in these contributions.

A MESSAGE FROM REV. B. F. BLACK

A friend sends THE CHRISTIAN SUN the following paragraphs selected from a letter from Chaplain B. F. Black which we are sure SUN readers will enjoy:

The glad news of the 11th of November swept the world as no other news or message has done in all the centuries—save one—for all seemed to have been swept from the even tenor of their daily lives by the fiery tail of the mad comet, war. The predictions by the great and near-great of the possible calamities that awaited our little world when Halley's comet seemed to be coming our way were left to the devil-deluded Kaiser to hand to a world gass and hellish mixtures, falling meteors red hot with death-laden breath. On land and in sea, in air, man made for fellow a man molten liquid hell for men to wade through and swim out of. If not these, then hunger, separation, heart-hunger, anxiety, with pangs more deadly than the vipers sting.

Why not rejoice? Rachel is being reconciled. The mother of nations has paid the price. They have stood afar off. The sayings are kept in their hearts.

Poor France is one vast new sepulcher, while Belgium, Flanders, Alsace-Lorraine, are but blood-stained altars where human sacrifice has been made the god of war with all of the cruelty that human genius and hellish aptitude could conceive.

Skeletons now, once the flower of the allied world, stagger from the confines of prison cells. From a country, too, blooming as a rose garden where no blight of vandalism has swept—yet where passion and the spirit of rapine, double-dyed vandalism and quadrupled by baser passion, incarnate has assumed the form of human kind. They, the prison warders of our murdered dead. And living skeletons defy the heavens by calling upon God and the Kaiser to stand by them until the world should bow to the Lord of the Fatherland and call them blessed. Is it possible that this herd is made in the image of a righteous God?

PLEASANT HILL AND LIBERTY

I preached at Pleasant Hill last Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning and at Liberty that night. Good congregations at both churches. The "Flu" is abating and the Sunday schools are going on in their regular work.

OUR CONVENTION, THE WAR, THE WORK, AND THE WORKERS

The Southern Convention in session last May felt sorely the need of workers—ministers and missionaries. It voiced that need in this vote: "That we set as our objective for which to labor and to pray 100 recruits as ministers and missionaries giving all their time and strength to Christian service for the home and foreign work."

The war is over. It is now up to the Christian forces of this world to so preach and spread the Gospel of the Prince of Peace that there can never come another bloody and cruel war. Will we do it? It is a task that requires men and women, brave, heroic, God-fearing and God-serving men and women. Are we to have them? Well, it depends upon us. If we feel the need and lay that need before God, He will give the workers. Here is our commission and the ground for it: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." (Mat. 9:37, 28).

J. O. ATKINSON.

POUNDED

I was in Wakefield, Va., on New Year's night to attend the union prayer meeting, held at the Christian church. At the close of the service, deacon J. H. Harris instructed me to drive my car to the rear of Mr. J. S. White's store, where he had been serving as salesman.

For several minutes three men were kept busy loading the car with the good things that the members of the Wakefield church had brought together for their pastor and his family.

We wish in this public way to express our sincere thanks to all of these good people and desire that we may render a more efficient service as we labor together with them. Members from the other churches in this field have also remembered us with many good things to eat. We are thankful to all of them.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

THE PAST AND FUTURE

Dear Friends:—The year 1918 was the best year the Orphanage has ever had, financially, and we hope it has been the best in many other ways. You have made it possible for us to meet the high prices and pay all our bills and pay off the entire indebtedness. You have also made it possible for us to reach each goal set since we have had charge of the work. Since we have had charge of the work one of our chief aims has been to get our beloved Institution out of debt and on a sound financial basis. You have been so loyal and so generous that you have let us accomplish this aim.

During the past two years, having one object in view, we have not said much to you about our many needs in the Institution. While we have paid off the indebtedness, we as a Church, ought not think for a moment that our work is done and that we are at a resting place. We are just ready to begin work and to do greater things than we have in the past. We ought to make the year 1919 our best year.

I asked you to make the year 1917 "Our Banner Year" and you did. Then I asked you to make the year 1918 "The Best Yet Year" and you did. Now I am going to ask you to make the year 1919 "Our Best Year" and you will.

Let us get an idea of what we want to accomplish during the year 1919:

First. One of our great needs is a home for small children. We already have the house and by spending some where about two hundred dollars in putting in bath, etc., and papering we can get it in condition for a home for the small children.

We have a number of applications now on hand for children less than five years of age, and it is necessary, if we take them, to put them in a home to themselves with a matron to have charge and look after their many needs. Shall we refuse these little helpless children a home or shall we open our hearts and make it possible for them to have a home and a kind matron to be a mother to them?

Second. Our buildings need repairs. It will take several hundred dollars to make such repairs as is badly needed and ought to have been made sometime ago. Painting is to be done, sleeping porch to be finished so it can be used and give more children room, and a number of other things to do.

Third. Our rooms need refurnishing. Much of the furniture put in when the Orphanage was first opened has become very much impaired and ought to be replaced with new where it is absolutely needed. Our mattresses are worn and soiled and we will be compelled to replace many of them this year.

The springs on the beds that have been used since the Orphanage was first opened have become almost useless and are uncomfortable for the little folks to sleep on.

These are some of our needs for this year. I assure you that we will be as economical as possible and will not spend a dollar where we can get along without it.

We have fifty-two children in the Institution now with eight more pleading for a home and I hardly see how we can refuse them under the circumstances. Let us all pull together during the year 1919 and see how much we can do for the Master's Kingdom in lending a helping hand to our little orphan children.

Next week I will set the goals that we will try to reach during the year 1919. Look out for next week's letter and make up your mind to do your very best to reach each goal set.

Sorry you are sick. Trust you will soon be well. You must be one of the faithful cousins this year.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am a little boy fifteen months old and my grandpa Albright has been showing me your picture and some of the little orphans that were sent to him. My auntie has been telling me I must send a little mite to help the dear little ones who had no mamma and papa, and she is doing this for me. When I get to be a big boy I can write you then. Find enclosed $1.00 for the Thanksgiving offering.—James Henry Craven.

You are a splendid little boy. It was so kind of you to think of the little orphans and give some of your money to help care for them. You must write often.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclose find twenty cents for January and February. I am a year and a half old today and weigh twenty and a half pounds. Do you think I'll be as big a man as you? With best wishes for all the little orphans.—Lester B. Frank.

MISSIONARYHOW TO KEEP A WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY*ALIVE AND ACTIVE*Chapter II—Prayer in the Society

In the previous paper the use of the Bible in the Society was discussed. In this let us consider the place of Prayer in the Society. To one looking for something novel and untried for the Society, any discussions of the Bible and prayer will seem trite and commonplace; yet it is by proper use of the commonplace that solidity is secured and sound growth is assured. No building is safe, and no Society is secure, until a sure and sound foundation is laid. The Bible and prayer are the sure foundations of any Missionary Organization, and by proper use of these the vitality and vigor of the Society is assured.

That prayer is essential to the life and power of the Society is evident from the four following quotations:

"Of all the forces God has placed at our disposal for winning the world to Christ the greatest is that of prayer."—Belle M. Brain.

"Every step in the progress of missions is directly traceable to prayer. It has been the preparation of every new triumph and the secret of all success."—Arthur T. Pierson.

"Everything vital in the missionary enterprise hinges upon prayer."—John R. Mott.

"Every element of the missionary problem depends for its solution upon prayer."—Robert E. Speer.

But to say that prayer is essential in no manner indicates that "offering a few words of prayer," or "repeating together" the Lord's Prayer, at the opening or closing of the Missionary Society, insures the life or guarantees the power of the Society. Such a "prayer" may, and often does, hinder the growth and help to kill rather than make alive the Society. I agree with one writer on the subject who declares that the Society is often opened or closed with prayer not with any special or definite purpose or object in mind, but with a sort of feeling that it is the proper thing to do, and not to do so would offend both God and the members.

"An almost superstitious feeling seems to prevail, that if the heads are bowed for a few moments while a brief petition is offered, or the Lord's Prayer is 'repeated in concert,' all will be well, and the Society may safely proceed to other business." Prayer offered under such conditions is not praying at all; it is the rather yielding to the demands of a refined superstition.

On the other hand the writer recalls having attended a session of a missionary meeting some time since in which the prayer was the most potent feature of the whole program. The one who led the prayer, led it, and led all the rest of us into a praying frame of mind. Every woman in the audience prayed. She had to. The whole atmosphere was charged with the spirit of prayer, devotion and supplication. The leader with reverently bowed head prayed for definite, named, and specific objects, and then told us what, and for whom, to pray.

The writer felt then and has felt ever since that no Missionary Society could lag or die, it mattered not whatever else it might do or leave undone, if it prayed like that Society did it would live and grow and flourish like the green bay tree. Such a praying society can no more lag, "dry up," or die, than can the "river of water of life" that proceeds out of the throne of God and the Lamb and whose waters are for the healing of the nations.

I mention only a few of the many ways that prayer will help, and powerfully, in the Society.

First—Be Definite in Prayer

One reason why many timid souls in the Society will not, and feel that they cannot, lead in prayer is because there is a thought in mind that one who leads a prayer or prays in public must pray for everything in general and the whole world in particular.

Praying is, and should be, as natural and as definite as a hungry child's petition to the mother for a piece of bread. If any one can ask a parent or a neighbor for a favor why can such an one not ask the finest Friend she will ever have on earth or in heaven for that which is needed and desired?

Pray for specific things, or for a specific thing. Any Missionary Society whose members believe the promises of God may "pray workers into the field, money in to empty treasuries, and heathen souls into the Kingdom of God." Else why did Lord Christ say: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he will send forth laborers into his harvest?" (Mat. 9:38).

Be definite in prayer. The dying prayer of John Hunt is a model of this sort, "O let me pray once more for Fiji! Lord, for Christ's sake bless Fiji! Save Fiji; save the heathen in Fiji." Not much logical arrangement or rhetorical flourish about that prayer; but it was the expressed desire of a hungry heart and a yearning soul—and that prayer was heard and answered to a remarkable degree.

Second—Have Agreement in Prayer

Let the Society decide before the close of a meeting what it will pray for at the next meeting. Remember the promise of the Master: "If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father." (Mat. 18:19). If the members of the Society actually believe that promise of our Lord let them put it to the test. In this way it may be done: Let the Society select certain definite objects to pray for, enter into a covenant to pray for these both publicly and at home, and speak to one another about the desirability of achieving these objects. Under such conditions the power of prayer in the Society would be increased a hundred fold.

Third—Pray in Faith

It is the prayer of faith and expectancy which prevails. We are to "undertake great things for God, and expect great things of God." Pouring out the soul in a whole mixed multitude of petitions is not prevailing prayer. If you do not know what you desire, it might frighten you if God were to hear or undertake to answer your prayer. First form in your own mind that which you very much desire of your heavenly Father, and then tell the Father of that desire, with the expectation that He will give "thee the desires of thine heart."

Remember that in prayer we are dealing not with man but with God. It may seem incredible to you that a prayer offered in your Society, your town, your home, may be instantly answered in Tokio, Hong Kong or Santa Isabel; but the God to Whom we pray is Omnipresent and Omnipotent, and distance is no hindrance.

"Through the divine telegraphy of prayer" writes Belle M. Brain, "which needs neither wire nor key, but simply a heart in tune with God, the remotest soul may be reached in an instant time."

Real, zealous, fervent, soul-yearning prayer in any Society will go a very long way in making the Society a live one in the Church and a power for God and righteousness in the community.

MT. AUBURN—MISSIONARY REPORT

The Woman's Missionary Society of Mt. Auburn adopted the plan of systematic study of our Church and Mission Fields two years ago. Our text-book this year has been "The African Trail," by Jean Mackenzie. Our meetings have been held regularly on Thursday before the second Sunday in each month. With the help of the monthly programs in the Christian Missionary we have had some very interesting meetings. Our average attendance has not been very large but we have enjoyed the meetings and have learned more about the work. We hope as time goes on more of the women will come.

Our active membership numbers seventeen. Our Home Department members number forty-three, (an increase over last year of eight). These are interested in the work but can't attend regularly. Most of them pay $1.00 a year, while some pay more.

The Cradle Roll with Mrs. J. B. Ellington as Superintendent, has done well the past year. With only a membership of eight or ten, they have raised $6.24.

The Willing Workers number twenty-five. At the beginning of the year, they, with the Cradle Roll undertook to buy one hundred cement blocks for the Santa Isabel church in Porto Rico. At their four Mite Box Openings this year they have paid in $23.90. They have paid for one hundred and twenty blocks.

There is one point we always try to emphasize, and that is cheerful giving to Christ—not to the Society—not because we must—but because we love Jesus and want to show a little of our love for Him in this way.

Here are the figures for the past year:

Cradle Roll for Santa Isabel	$ 6.24
Willing Workers for Santa Isabel	23.90
Home Department for Barrett Home	36.30
Woman's Missionary Society for Barrett Home	32.05
Dues of W. M. S.	16.55
Literature Fund	2.01
Franklinton Church	10.00
Total.....	$127.45

As half of our dues are paid to Home Missions and half to Foreign Missions that makes our total to Foreign Missions $106.97. We ask God's blessings on what has been accomplished and will try to move forward to do more for our Lord and Master who gave the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES PAYABLE ONLY TO FIRST OWNERS

That war savings certificates are payable only to the first owners and that stamps are not to be offered or accepted in trade, is a recent notice given by Secretary Glass of the Treasury Department.

In pursuance of this notice, postmasters have been directed by the Post Office Department not to cash war savings certificates on which the names of the owners have not been entered or have been erased or changed except in case of death or disability. Postmasters have been further instructed not to pay war savings certificates presented by persons or firms known to be buying or publicly offering to buy war savings stamps from the owners, unless positive evidence is submitted that the certificates were originally issued to the person or firms presenting them for payment. This is in keeping with the law that makes war savings stamps non-transferable.

WHAT OTHERS THINK OF BISHOP'S "BIBLICAL VIEW OF THE CHURCH"

Second Edition

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, N. C., Mission Field Secretary, writes:

"Dear Brother Bishop:—I have read with growing interest and appreciation on the second edition of your Biblical View of the Church. Every student in the Christian Church preparing for the ministry should read this book. Its plan is well laid and its execution is admirable. It goes to the very heart of problems vital to Bible and ministerial students, students in particular. I enjoyed the first edition which was worthy of its great and good author, but the last edition is a very improvement of the first. It should have wide reading and close study. It will result in great good in years to come. I enclose a dollar for the copy you send me, and also thank you for same."

Rev. D. M. Helfenstein, D. D., of Orient, Iowa, Former President of Palmer College, writes:

"Dear Brother Bishop:—Your book, A Biblical View of the Church, places the Christian Church under obligation to you for this excellent contribution to their literature. It is true you speak your convictions of truth, as an individual, but as a church we will be glad to count this in with our 'Church Literature.'

"Personally I want to thank you for this gift to the Church and to the world. I hope that every school of the Christian Church will adopt it as a text book. I hope all our ministers will secure and read it, especially our young ministers."

Rev. L. F. Johnson, pastor of our Vanderveer Park Christian Church,
Brooklyn, New York, writes:

"I am making splendid use of your book entitled Biblical View of the Church. Several of my men have read it already, and have expressed words of appreciation and praise for the Book. I am going to start the book going among the Ladies of the Congregation soon. I hope they will appreciate it as the men do."

Price $1.00, postpaid. Mail orders may be addressed to the author, J. G. Bishop, 1231 West 5th Street, Dayton, Ohio, or to the Christian Publishing Association, C. P. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.

Elbert A. Herndon—I cannot get along without THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It has been a welcome visitor in our home since before I could remember, and I am now nearly 76 years old. Have been taking it myself more or less ever since the surrender in 1865. I feel that I haven't so many more years to read this valued paper but may God's choicest blessings ever abide on its Editors, present and future, and may God's children be made stronger for having read it through the years.

“THE VICTORY CAR”

The above cut shows the car load of good things recently sent the Christian Orphanage through the efforts of Brother J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va. This scene is enough to make happy all the churches and individuals who contributed to its capacity. The children are happy—all with an apple. Brother Johnston has his, too. We doubt if Southern car No. 34640 will ever be loaded again with such a variety and representing so many hearts.

NOTES

Littleton Female College, Littleton, N. C., had a $50,000 fire last week.

What layman in the Church will set out to secure as many subscriptions to THE SUN as some minister? What layman will make the challenge and what minister will accept it?

The question has been asked, “What churches will the North Carolina Conference include?” The Conference will include all the churches now within the bounds of the Western, Eastern and North Carolina and Virginia Conferences.

See that the Annuals of your Conference get into the homes and not behind the pulpit, as we frequently see in visiting the churches.

E. M. Gunn—We enjoy reading THE SUN.

We have a splendid article in type—The Peril of Ecclesiastieism—which awaits our readers. Be on the lookout for it as soon as space permits.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson is in Eastern Virginia at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lee. Mr. Lee is feeble at this writing.

In the passing of Prof. M. H. Stacey, Dean of the Faculty and acting president of the University of North Carolina, the State loses one of its finest educators.

Mrs. E. T. Alford—I wish you could know how much my three little folks enjoy reading and hearing THE SUN read.

Mrs. E. W. Wilkins—May THE SUN ever remain true to its name—a shining light for the Christian—and may it continue to shine brighter and brighter, until every home in the whole Brotherhood realizes the value of its light.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Rev. Warren H. Denison, Superintendent

The Superintendent has been in the field meeting the pastors and speaking to the churches and workers in groups on the Forward Movement. He visited the Vanderveer Park church, and the Hungarian Sunday school in the church of the Evangel in Brooklyn. Those are two of our home mission points and they are fields of large opportunity. Our Vanderveer Park church of which Rev. L. F. Johnson, D. D., is the successful pastor, is in one of the best fields that the writer knows for a large work. It is in a needy field, well built homes and we are in on the ground floor. Those who invest in Forward Movement funds will be doing a great work for that is one of the great needs of the $125,000 which is to be raised for home missions, in the Forward Movement campaign.

In the same way the Hungarian Sunday school is well worth while and one need not be present long to see the good work that is being done for those bright boys and girls. That is another of our worthy home mission works. Every dollar invested in that work will do great good. We held a conference with eight ministers and eight laymen from the New Jersey Conference and the Forward Movement was heartily approved and the workers pledged each other to go back to their churches and work it out thoroughly. This group of workers began at this meeting to plan for a Field Secretary in their conference to help strengthen the work there and plan for larger things in the Kingdom. In those three meetings were represented three distinct types of necessary home mission effort; the planting of a strong city church in an unchurched, growing, desirable community; the development of a work that is of large importance among the foreigners in our country; the strengthening and the encouraging of the weak churches that have had losses and difficulties but are very much needed to meet the needs of the community. The need of just such a field secretary is very urgent in several of our conferences and will be one of the most practical, sensible, and effective ways that we may do Christian work that will count. The $125,000 of the Forward Movement campaign for $500,000 is an absolute necessity, and it is needed now. That is the share that the Home Mission work will get.

It was a great pleasure to visit the Irvington, N. J., church of which Dr. W. H. Hainer has been the pastor for more than thirty years. Publicly and privately the strength of that great congregation was pledged to the Forward Movement. Dr. Hainer is the President of the New Jersey conference and will do all in his power to bring the message to all the churches and urge them to enlist in the Movement at once.

It was our pleasure to visit in New England the following churches: Providence, R. I., where Dr. W. G. Sargent is the strong pastor, the Assonet church where Rev. D. P. Hurlburt, the Mission Secretary of the New England Convention, is the successful pastor, and the Fall River (Franklin Street) church which is at present without a pastor since the resignation of Rev. C. E. Fockler. At the Fall River church there was a union meeting of several of our churches to hear the plans of the Forward Movement and a fine congregation was present. They will need a strong pastor in that important city in that field of large service. How great is the need of strong, trained, well equipped pastors to man our strategic centers and build large programs for the advancement of the Kingdom. At Fall River we had a conference with seven of our ministers and a number of laymen from the Rhode Island and Massachusetts conference. A strong resolution of co-operation was passed and a loyal pledge for pushing the Forward Movement was adopted. Plans of work were considered and the earnestness shown was indicative of large results in that conference for the growth of the work. We also visited three churches in the New York Eastern Conference, Albany where the President of the American Christian Convention and the chairman of the Forward Movement, Dr. F. G. Coffin, is the beloved pastor; Ravena where Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., is the successful pastor, and the church at Hunter's Land in which the writer spent his childhood days where Rev. C. W. Cook has been the pastor for quite a number of years. It was a delight to be with the membership and pastors of these churches and bring the message of the Forward Movement.

At the Home Church

It was my glad privilege to spend Sunday the 26th at the little home church. It is few in numbers, out in the open country, in a thinly settled community. It has sent out at least five ministers into our work: Revs. G. R. Hammond, E. D. Hammond, M. W. Borthwick, B. S. Crosby, W. H. Denison. It has among its few members some who are devoted and loyal. The writer spoke on the Forward Movement at 10:30 and at 1:30 and the people enjoyed a lunch and social hour between. We suggested to the people that during the noon hour that they would have the opportunity to make pledges for the $500,000 fund and that it would be our delight to have the church from which the Superintendent had gone out to make generous gifts for the work, in the beginning of the campaign. Without any begging, but voluntarily $715 in cash and pledges were received. Some how we believe that the amount will yet come up to an even thousand dollars by some who have not given and some who will increase their gifts. If all our churches will do in the same proportion according to their ability there will come a new day to the Christian Church which has a special and divine mission in the world.

In addition to the visitation of these three conferences and speaking in nine of their churches and attending conferences of workers in two of the conferences we attended the Missionary Education banquet in New York and the three days session of the Foreign Missions Conference at New Haven, Connecticut. Those were great days with great issues but we will have to speak of them at another time.

“How would you like to sign up with me for a life game?” was the way a baseball fan proposed.

“I'm agreeable,” replied the girl, “where's your diamond?”—Indianapolis Star.

MARRIAGES

WEATHERLY-NEVILLE

A quiet but pretty marriage was solemnized at the home of Rev. W. G. Clements, Morrisville, N. C., January 27, 1919 when Miss Myrtle Angier Neville became the bride of Mr. William Burke Weatherly. Only a few witnessed the ceremony. The couple motored down from Durham and returned immediately after the ceremony where they will make their home. May God's blessings rest upon this union. W. G. C.

JACOBY-HOLT

Amid the soft glow of myriads of candles and artistic decoration of white and green, Cecil Grady Holt of Burlington, N. C., and Cornelius Jacoby of Washington, D. C., plighted their troth on Saturday evening January 18, 1919, at the Burlington Christian church. The wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Robert Barnwell, pianist, and Misses Malone and Boyd violinists. Miss Rawlin sang sweetly "Because" and "O Perfect Love."

There were four maids, becomingly attired in pink and yellow messaline with chiffon draperies, carrying shower bouquets of Narcissus and ferns. These were followed by four groomsmen in full dress suits. The dames of honor were gowned in white georgette and carried pink carnations. The maid of honor, Miss Besie Holt wore blue crepe de chine with silver lace. She carried Kiliarymar roses. The ring was carried in the heart of a rose by little Mary Robertson.

The bride wore a gown of white crepe de chine with satin and pearl trimmings. Her veil was caught with orange blossoms. She carried bride's roses. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for an extensive southern trip. Upon their return they will make their home in Washington, D. C., where Mr. Jacoby holds a position as construction engineer for the Southern Railway. The bride is an accomplished young woman and leaves many friends here who will follow her with all good wishes. J. W. HARRELL.

OBITUARIES

BURCH

Alma Gladys Burch, daughter of the late Charlie Burch, passed from labor to reward January 27, 1919, aged twenty-three years, seven months and thirteen days. At the time of her death she was teaching school at McLeansville, N. C. Her home was at Troy, N. C. She was stricken with Spanish Influenza a week previous to her death and this later developed into pneumonia. Burial services were at Bethel Presbyterian church, Guilford County, N. C., conducted by the pastor, Rev. G. L. Whiteley assisted by Rev. Charles Whiteley of West Durham. Deceased leaves a mother, two sisters, one brother and many friends to mourn their loss. She lived a sweet Christian life and was loved by all who knew her. May God comfort the bereaved ones. Our loss is her heavenly gain.

J. R. MILES.

MORAN

Mrs. Sarah E. Moran, widow of the late Samuel Moran, departed this life January 5 1919, aged seventy-seven years, seven months and seven days. She leaves to mourn their loss one son, P. E. She lived the life of a consistent Christian and we bow in humble submission to the will of God for our loss in her gain. Funeral services were conducted at the church by Rev. W. M. Pike. Z. H. COTNER.

TICKLES

A glue factory stands near a certain railway. Its charms are not for the nose, and therefore a lady often carried with her a bottle of lavender salts. One morning an old farmer took the seat beside her. As the train neared the factory the lady opened her bottle of salts. Soon the whole car was filled with the horrible odor. The farmer put up with it as long as he could, then shouted, "Madam, would you mind puttin' the cork in that ere bottle?"— New York Tribune.

In Tennessee they tell of a judge, well versed in law, but self-educated, who had to contend with the difficulties of orthography all his life. He lived in Knoxville, and used to spell it "Noxville." He was educated to the point of prefixing a K; so thoroughly, in fact, was the lesson learned that a few years later, when he moved to Nashville, nothing could prevent him from spelling it "Knashville."—Congregationalist.

"Umbrellas Recovered," reads a sign in a Fulton street window. Any one recovering the last three of ours may keep one for his pains.—New York Evening Post.

"I see they are going to put conscientious objectors to work on the farms."

"Gee whiz," replied the farmer, "We've had enough of that sort of help hanging around our farms already."

CANCER TREATED SUCCESSFULLY AT THE KELLAM HOSPITAL

The record of the Kellam Hospital is without parallel in history, having restored, without the use of the knife, Acids, X-Ray or Radium, over ninety per cent of the many hundreds of sufferers from cancers which it has treated during the past twenty-two years. IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY

A School of Morals

THE home is the first and best school of morals. This school is not being given a fair chance. The hurry, hurry, American spirit is robbing it of its teaching forces. Long hours, the quest of riches, and the strain of our economic system all have a tendency to shorten our moments by the fireside and lessen our opportunities for companionship and meditation. Christian forces pay little attention to the remedying of the situation, but endeavor to heal the wounds of its victims.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

SENDING LABORERS INTO THE HARVEST

In all denominations there has been a falling off of ministers and missionaries during the last few years. Church leaders have been diagnosing the problem. They do not all agree as to what the cause or causes are, neither do they agree as to methods and means of recruiting ministerial ranks. In our own communion there are differences of opinion. Some believe that the man is called of God without concern upon the part of any individual or individuals. There are those who contend that we must pray them into the work.

God does not call all men in the same way. No one theory as to getting men into the ministry will suffice. It is noticeable that our opinions on this subject follow along the line that we have experienced. Not every minister can relate the same experience—in fact very few are alike. We believe that we have a right and a privilege to counsel with, and suggest to, men concerning the ministry, but we do not, as we now see it, have the right and privilege to advise young men to enter the ministry, unless they feel impinged.

The Convention has set aside Sunday, February 16, as a time when our ministers and Christian workers should place the matter of recruiting of ministerial and missionary forces. The ministers, we are sure, will call attention to the need of new recruits and lay-the matter of the Kingdom's interest upon the hearts of the young people.

No young man or young woman should be influenced to take up active Christian work under pressure or overdrawn enthusiasm. The work is a vital issue and not a thing for today only. We should be very careful to explain the importance of adequate preparation. So many enter the ministry and find the task of preparation too great, and so either give up the work or go out unprepared, which means a check in the progress of the Church.

In this connection we deem it wise to reproduce on this page an article by President W. A. Harper which appeared in print something over a year ago. It is the situation viewed from the standpoint of a layman. Read it:

A CALL TO THE MINISTRY

The Real Question of Issue

Our Educational Board is right in its plea that our young men should consider the Christian ministry as a life-work. Emphasis needs to be placed on the claim God rightfully has on every man for his services, and too great emphasis cannot be placed here. But while this is the duty of the Board and of the churches, it should be remembered that the paramount question in each individual man's mind should be, not Shall I enter the ministry? but Can I keep out of it? No man should enter the ministry if he can get the consent of his heart to do anything else. It is not quantity, but quality, that is needed, and the attitude I have suggested as leading to an ultimate decision will yield just that very result.

God Calls His Own Prophets

It is, then, not the selection of the ministry as a life-work, but the understanding of God's will respecting life-work for the individual that is most vital concern. As a Church we ought to hold up the claims of the ministry, but God must select His own prophets. We must not make the mistake of selecting a Matthias, when God needs a Paul. He calls men into the ministry, not we, and this must never be lost sight of, even momentarily. The proper attitude for each individual is to be open-minded, ready to be convinced of his duty, and submissively anxious to be of service in advancing the Kingdom of God. The real duty of the Church is to bring home to each soul of its membership the clarion call of God to His ministry and to secure from each a reverent consideration of his personal response to such a call, knowing that the call, if valid, can proceed only from the great white Thorne.

The Place of Friendship in the Call

The question immediately arises as to what constitutes a call to the ministry and what are the indicators that can assist the individual to arrive at certainty in respect to his call. One very strong indication in this direction, it seems to me, would be the voluntary advice and counsel to a man's associates. They know him thoroughly and their desire, based on his life with them, should cause any man to ponder well his duty to enter the ministry. The minister will have his place in this advice and counsel, but he should consult others before advising too surely in any case.

The Life's Influence an Indication

A second indication would be the influence a man's life is exerting in religious circles. If he is put forward as a leader and looked to with confidence, that would in itself suggest a larger sphere of service, especially, if these marks of trust and confidence came unsought and in early life.

The Life's Vital Interest Should Have Weight

One's own taste and temperament will be another pointer. Do I love the worship of the sanctuary? Do I rejoice in the things of the spirit? Is my vital concern in spiritual rather than material issues? These questions will help wonderfully in settling the matter.

But the Spirit's Witness Necessary

But the final consideration must be in every case the witness of God's Spirit in my own heart that it is His will for me through preaching to point men to the way of salvation. The writer is a layman and is so because he has never felt that witness. He is glad to serve in a layman's place the great interests of the Kingdom, but happy is that man whom God has chosen to stand in holy places and proclaim the unsearchable riches of His Grace! There is no higher happiness! In the face of such a call, every other interest must yield. "Woe is me if I preach not the Gospel," and joy, joy, joy unspeakable if I follow my Father's call and do His will! May every young man who reads these lines place himself in God's hands and trustingly await His guidance!

The Preparation It Will Require

A call to the ministry will require not only such witness as we have just suggested, but also thorough preparation. There are cases where the preparation must be limited, as when the call comes late in life. I have known such men to be of great service without the thorough preparation I suggest. But a young man ought not to be content to begin his ministry without adequate preparation. If God has called him early, it is that he may fill a large place by having opportunity to prepare for it. The times demand a superior type of spiritual leadership, and that too should encourage special effort. If a man is not willing to pay the price of his call, he may well consider whether he has really been called.

The Reward That Will Crown The Life

One final thought shall conclude this brief discussion—the thought as to the reward awaiting the called and prepared minister. I said minister rather than ministry purposely, for the ministry, as such does not appeal to men particularly, but the individual minister does. The deference, the reverence, accorded the minister, due to his place of leadership and the vital interests he faithfully represents, will surely compensate any sacrifice exacted in his accepting the call and making the preparation. But greater than any deference, deeper than any reverence, will be the satisfaction in his own heart of having been enabled to be to men and women the gateway into the Kingdom, the everlasting Kingdom of the Christ.

ELON AND HER ENDOWMENT

In this week's issue we present from the view point of many members of the Church words of commendation concerning Elon's endowment fund of $125,000.00. These men and women speak for the whole Church. They voice the sentiment of every true and loyal member of the denomination. On page twelve will be found an address to the churches by the President of the Convention and members of the Board of Trustees. They state specifically and definitely why Elon should have an additional endowment of $125,000.00. The Southern Christian Convention in session at Burlington in 1916 approved of the idea, and in the Franklin Convention last May the plan was adopted by unanimous vote of that body.

A few years ago the College raised a special fund of $50,000. This fund was a result of special effort and initiative on the part of the College. The raising of $125,000 as an additional endowment of our College differs from the $50,000 fund in that it is approved and undertaken by the Church at large.

It would be futile for us to point out why this fund is needed; that is told again and again on pages 4, 5, 6 and 7 of this issue. The Church has never undertaken such a fund in the interest of education. That alone ought to be a sufficient impulse to encourage every member of the denomination. This is a day of big things, big undertakings, larger responsibilities. The problem of education is weighing heavily and mightily upon the leaders of the Church and upon every home. From millions of homes the cry for a larger and better opportunity is going up from sons and daughters. We must meet their call and their cry; we must give them a chance to meet the problems of their day. We can best give them an education by endowing and equipping our college above financial reproach.

By turning to pages 12, 13 and 14 readers will find suggested goals for the various churches in the interest of this endowment fund. Note that these goals are only suggested and are based on the Elon College Fund as apportioned by the annual conferences. They are not apportionments or assessments but what the committee feels that each church ought to give in the interest of the cause. The amounts indicated are to be paid in five years. For example: A church that is asked to contribute $500 can contribute the sum of $100 per year and raise this money in any manner and method that it so desires.

Let us keep in mind the following facts:

1. Elon College needs this money to carry forward the educational work of the Church.
2. The Church needs the educational influence and force of the College.
3. Let us pray for larger things and then pray that these larger things may come.
4. We have placed the burden of raising this sum of money upon the heart of President Harper. He needs our prayers as well as our financial support.

The raising of this fund will mark a new day for Elon College, a new day for the cause of Christian education in the Christian Church. Prayerfully and with earnest hearts let us go to the task.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

ONE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS

A campaign to raise one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, in addition to the present Endowment Fund, for Elon College, has been duly authorized by the Southern Christian Convention, sole owner of the College, and the Board of Trustees of the College. The reason for this Fund is a double one. It is a necessity for the maintenance of the Institution, and the requirement for a standard college of two hundred thousand dollars endowment makes the necessity imperative.

The usefulness of Elon College in Christian Education is a moral reason for this forward step in placing the Institution on a sound financial basis and keeping it on-a-par with other colleges. Its reputation must be maintained and its services strengthened. A Church without a college would be like a state without a public school or a university.

The atmosphere of a Christian denomination is created by its schools, and this campaign not only deserves the endorsement of a few but the substantial support of the whole Church. Every member of the Church with means and good earning capacity should subscribe liberally to this Fund as soon as the opportunity is given. Hesitation weakens effort and success is attained by wholehearted and prompt response to conviction. This is no small matter as to importance or undertaking. It has my hearty endorsement and will have my best subscription.

W. W. STALEY, President,
Southern Christian Convention.

THE COLLEGE DESERVES AND NEEDS THE HELP

I notice that there is a movement on foot to secure an endowment fund for Elon College. I am very much interested in this enterprise and hope that it will succeed. Would be glad if you would insert in your paper an announcement to that effect, stating my position in the matter, viz: As a member of the Christian Church, former student of the College, and a citizen of Alamance County I give my endorsement to Elon's campaign to raise one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars as additional endowment. I hope the movement will succeed; the college deserves as well as needs the help.

HEARTY ENDORSEMENT

There was a plan that was called to the attention of the Southern Christian Convention at Franklin, Va., to raise endowment fund for Elon College I heartily endorse the plan to begin active arrangements early this spring to raise the required endowment fund for Elon College.

A TIME TO ACT

We are in the midst of a great educational awakening. The hour is pregnant with the spirit.

Large sums of money are being poured into the endowment funds of our colleges and universities. The spirit of the times is to give where great need manifests itself.

The Methodist Church concluded a campaign for $35,000,000 for educational enterprises last June. Other Churches are doing likewise.

The Southern Christian Convention, in a recent session, voted to increase the Endowment of Elon College by raising the $125,000.00. Shall we show our approval of this most worthy undertaking and pledge our support?

Elon, in a very definite sense, is the child of the Church, and has made a most valuable contribution to the Church. She has supplied our pulpits and furnished us leaders in every department of church activity. To her we shall look for recruits for the ministry, missionaries and leaders for the future. If we would maintain our supply of workers we must support and maintain our college, and if we would have workers of the greatest efficiency and power, such as the times demands, we must maintain a high standard for our institution of learning.

Elon College is the centre of Christian Education for the Southern Christian Convention. It is an indispensable factor in the work of the Church. Elon is looking to the Church for financial support. If the Church fails, the College fails, but we believe the Church will not fail in this undertaking.

Elon has grown and developed in its short history, but funds are needed to continue its growth and development. The institution demands greater accommodations to meet the increased enrollment. With the increase in students comes the demand for enlarged equipment and more instructors. We of the Christian Church should feel the obligation resting upon us to equip and man our college to meet the demands of the times.

The $125,000.00 additional Endowment is greatly needed and the people of the Christian Church should count it a privilege to furnish it. If we as a Church would render a great service, in this day of enlarged opportunity, if we would occupy a great place in the Church of the future, we must look well to our schools. The hope of any Church as it faces the future lies in her educational institutions.

Money invested in Elon College will be a permanent investment, and will continue to work for God after we have passed to our reward. The opportunity is now being given to the people of the Christian Church to make an investment which will gladden hearts and strengthen the cause which is dear to our hearts.

ELON STANDARDIZATION ENDOWMENT

If those who go to college had to pay the cost of their keep and teaching while there only the very rich could go. Tuition and other college charges are but a fraction of the actual cost of higher education. The State, as well as the Church, recognizes this and appropriates tens of thousands of dollars annually from the public treasury for the higher education of her sons and daughters. And this is not counted waste nor loss because every one in Church or State who receives the benefits of a college education becomes an asset, and if at all worthy, pays back more to the public than it has cost the public to help educate him.

It has cost the Christian Church several thousand dollars good money to help pay the tuition and upkeep of men and women attending Elon College; but who will say that the Church as such has not received back either more in enhanced valuation of intelligent, educated manhood and womanhood than it has ever paid out in dollars? The value of one well educated man or woman in Church, community, or pulpit, cannot be estimated in dollars.

The Christians of the Southern Christian Convention are as worthy of a well equipped college as any other people, for we need the assets and benefits of such an institution. And the only hope of maintaining and developing our College is constantly increased funds.

I favor the Standardization Endowment fund of $125,000 for three specific reasons, among many others that might be mentioned:

First, the young men and the young women in the homes of our membership both need and deserve the added advantages that such an endowment will bring.

Second, The College, to go forward on the great mission we have appointed it, and to keep pace with the best, must have the Standardization Endowment.

Third, the largeness and the scope of our activities, our influence and our undertakings as a Church are broadening every day, and the bigger, better Elon as the training camp for our forces is a pressing necessity.

We can if we will, and God helping us we will do this great and needful thing.

J. O. ATKINSON.

NOW IS THE TIME

I heartily endorse the campaign to raise the $125,000 endowment for Elon. We need a larger endowment to keep our College abreast with other denominational colleges. We need it to enable us to enlarge our equipment so we will be able to meet the increasing demand on our College and give the student body service equal to any college and I feel now is the time to start the campaign.

NECESSARY FOR A HIGH STANDARD

In response to letter from President Harper relative to the $125,000.00 endowment fund for Elon College, from my view point this fund is necessary to carry forward the great educational work undertaken and to maintain the high standard already attained. It has always been a source of pleasure to me to contribute what I could to Elon, and I have never regretted the $1,000.00 contributed to the Special Fund. I hope that this present fund will prove a great blessing to the institution, and I know that it has already proved a blessing to me by having made the contribution mentioned.

While we have no children to be educated, yet I know that this institution will prove of untold blessings to generations unborn.

LET US DO OUR BEST

I do very heartily endorse the campaign for $125,000.

It is just the little difference between the good and the best that makes the difference between the artist and the artisan. We have done well in the past, now let us do our best in this campaign.

May God's blessings rest on the launching of this great work.

LET US HELP COMING GENERATIONS

Elon College is the educational center of the Christian Church in the South. The people of the Christian Church have built it and made it what it is. But because it is what it is does not mean it is what it should be. It has done and is doing a great part in the Christian Church, but with the whole-hearted support of the brotherhood, Elon is destined to do "greater things than these." Now to do greater things, it must have our sympathy our love and our hearty co-operation in a financial way.

No college that we know is self-supporting. Elon is as near or nearer than any college in the State. Other denominational institutions have a large endowment fund to take care of the growth of the institution. Shall we not have as much love for our own college? The Trustees of Elon have asked Dr. Harper to raise $125,000, for Elon's future usefulness. Let us help the coming generations.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

Holly Springs, N. C.

DUTY AND EXHALTED PRIVILEGE

As one of the patrons of Elon, and also one of her greatest admirers, I want to congratulate the Board of Trustees on the big step forward in the endowment fund. It is the duty and exalted privilege of every church in the North Carolina Christian Conference to win the flag for "over the top" subscriptions. My earnest wish is that the Ramseur church shall not fail to reach the goal.

MRS. T. A. MOFFITT.

Ramseur, N. C.

MUST GET BEHIND IT WITH OUR DOLLARS

Everywhere it has been our privilege to go, we have found men who knew something of Elon College. They talk about it, and speak highly of what it is, what it has done, and what it is destined to do in the coming years. There is no man who is loyal to his Church but what likes to hear someone who is a stranger speak highly of some auxiliary of the work that has been a blessing to humanity. That Elon has been a great success no one will deny, for thousands have been blessed by the great work of the Institution. Millions will be blessed.

Now the question of our love for the College is before us. Its President tells us that additional endowment is needed. The Southern Christian Convention voiced this sentiment, and said raise an additional endowment of $125,000, but what says the Church? The endowment is not only needed, but must be raised, before our work can go forward as it should in the future years.

One of the greatest needs of the College is a Chair of Theology for those looking forward to the ministry and mission field. Our Convention last May instructed our Mission Secretary to call for one hundred volunteers for the ministry and mission fields. These must be educated and there is no better place to do it than at Elon College. The Convention also provided that the additional endowment take care of this work. The cry for a course of this kind has been heard for many years, and now we are given an opportunity to make the work possible.

If the rapid growth of Elon is to be continued, we must get behind it with our hard earned dollars, and prove our loyalty to it by permitting our love to express itself in dollars and cents. Let us think of the 5,585 students who have been blessed by the influence of the College, and the great blessing the Institution is bringing to the now unnumbered thousands; and then we will forget that it takes money to run the College, and this endowment will be easily raised.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

Greensboro, N. C.

PREPARE FOR THE FUTURE

I heartily endorse the Endowment Fund for Elon College. Studying the future of the College as compared with the results of the past twenty years, we as members of the denomination ought to do so now, while money is the cheapest commodity we have to encounter with, make the future secure, and from the great value of a Christian education to young men and women, we should make a greater sacrifice at this time.

We who have had the fruits of Elon College put before us know what it has done in the beginning. The future can be made brighter year by year, if our prayers are honest and our faith by works are put in it.

L. M. CLYMER.

Greensboro, N. C.

A LARGER PROGRAM AND EQUIPMENT

In a recent Red Cross Magazine, there is a cartoon of Uncle Sam, laying aside his fighting clothes and trying to don his "before the war" outfit. But it is no fit. He has outgrown them. Things that once pleased his fancy, have taken second place. "Our own little affairs" have shrunk and something bigger, better must take their place.

Now can our institutions of learning and uplift settle back to where they were a year or so ago? Larger interests, enlarged vision call for a larger program and equipment and if they do not arise to these demands they will be forced to drop back for shame and lack of self-respect.

So Elon College, the guiding spirit of our own Southern Christian Convention, must be filled up for further and larger service. The thought is not to be entertained that our people will not furnish her with the equipment necessary to maintain her position and standing among the colleges of the South. The hour has struck. We must not fail her.

MRS. C. H. ROWLAND.

Franklin, Va.

THAT $125,000 FOR ELON COLLEGE

The close of the war and the days of reconstruction are going to mean the launching of an era in which there will be almost unlimited opportunities for the young people of this generation. These openings will call for trained men and women. School and colleges should flourish for the next ten years as never before. The opportunity of the denominational college will be better than ever.

To meet this condition and supply the needs of those who come our college must have a full faculty of a high standard and be well equipped in every way for its work. At the present high cost of living, and of all material used in connection with the college, we shall need more funds.

Our people have learned to give during the war and we should have no trouble in raising the $125,000 additional endowment for our college. Elon College is A-1 college now and we need this amount to keep it so. Let there be a hearty response to Dr. Harper's appeal when he opens the campaign for this fund.

W. T. WALTERS.

DESERVES OUR BEST EFFORTS

I heartily endorse the raising of $125,000.00 additional Endowment Fund for Elon College.

It is certainly a worthy institution and deserves our best efforts to contribute everything possible towards its success.

ALVA C. RICHARDS.

Winchester, Va.

THE ELON COLLEGE ENDOWMENT FUND

According to the report of the Board of Education submitted at the last session of the Southern Christian Convention the Endowment of Elon College is $88,216.98. To meet the requirements of the departments of Education of the United States and of many individual states, Elon must have an endowment of $200,000.00, or it cannot be rated as a college. The present endowment, therefore, needs to be increased; and the amount now to be asked is $125,000.00. It is to be hoped and expected that every church shall have a part in this most worthy and, thus far, our greatest endeavor for Elon college.

The announcement of a campaign to raise the additional endowment does not come to us as a surprise, for the Board of Trustees at the Burlington Convention in 1916 were authorized to undertake the campaign. The reason it was postponed is due to the campaign of the $100,000.00 for missions, which to our great joy has already been raised. The Board of Trustees and the enthusiastic advocates of the additional endowment willingly and unselfishly acquiesced in the request of the Convention's leaders not to launch the campaign till the $100,000.00 for missions had been raised.

The additional endowment of $125,000.00 ought to be a willing gift, it seems to me, to our College. She not only needs it, she deserves it. It is unreasonable and selfish to expect our College to do the work we require her to do and not heed the reasonable and unselfish requests she may make. She has returned with good interest every dollar she has received, and in every enterprise of the Church is found in her influence and help. She has been, and is, the good Samaritan to the churches of the Southern Christian Convention, taking our young people from farm, factory, and shop, tenderly caring for them and fitting them for usefulness in life. These, and there are thousands of them, will ever arise up and call her blessed. And these, with a greater number still, who, while never coming directly under her care, have felt her influence for good, will, I believe, rally to her support and make this her greatest request easily and quickly realized.

Last year was the best year financially for the Orphanage that we have had in the history of the Institution; and during the entire year our people were called on to contribute to many different causes to help win the war. I am glad to say that our people were as loyal as any people could be to the calls of our government and contributed as never before that we might win in that mighty struggle and have a world that would be a fit place in which to live. But with the many calls and demands upon our people I am truly glad to say that the little orphan children were not forgotten but were kindly remembered in many ways. I am informed that the other Orphanages in the State had a good year, too.

It does seem to me that as the war is over and our people will not be called upon during the year 1919 for so many things, that the contributions for the little orphans should be greater than ever. Should we not do greater things for their benefit this year than last? The year 1917, we set for our goal ten thousand dollars, ($10,000.00), and we went over it. The year 1918, we set our goal eleven thousand dollars, ($11,000.00), and we reached more than fourteen thousand dollars. We ought to do more this year than last and really ought to set the goal for the total amount for this year $15,

000. But we would rather run over the goal set than to fail to reach it. It always takes away the "pep" to fail to reach a goal and makes us feel discouraged. So we want to keep within the bounds which we feel sure we can reach and will set the goals for this year two thousand dollars ($2,000.00), more than last year and then you can run as far over as you feel that you want to go. We have three goals for the year 1919:

We want to raise for our Easter Offerings,	$2,500.00
We want to raise for our Thanksgiving Offerings,	5,500.00
We want to raise from Sunday school and Special Offerings,	5,000.00

Total to be raised for the year 1919, $13,000.00

This is just two thousand dollars more than the goal set last year and it seems to me that we ought to reach each goal set without any trouble. Now let us begin to plan to do our best for this year and see that our Orphanage grows in its work and many more little children who are now knocking at its doors for admittance be not turned away.

Get your Sunday school on the list of monthly contributors and don't be satisfied until you see that this is done. We are going to make a hard fight this year to get each one on the list. We hope and trust that the pastors and Sunday school superintendents will see that this one thing is accomplished.

It will do your Sunday school a great service if you will get it on this list. The way to have a live Sunday school or a live church is to have a working one. A busy one. Doing something, accomplishing something. Rendering a service to the poor and needy, the widows and orphans.

Let our motto for this year be: "Our Best Year" for the Orphanage cause.

Our good friends still remember us. The Ladies' Aid Society of the Haw River Christian church sent to us a beautiful quilt for the comfort of the little fellows.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

THIRD CHRISTIAN CHURCH, NORFOLK, VA

My dear Bro. Riddle and Christian Sun Readers:

It has been some time since you heard very much of me. For about seven years, I believe, we have been located out of your section, but now that we are back near I am in hopes that we may see and hear more of each other. We have been on the field now about three weeks, just beginning to get acquainted and an intelligent introduction to the situation. There is certainly no question about the Third church having a great opportunity. In fact the opportunity here is much greater than I thought before coming. This means as a matter, of course, that there is a hard piece of work in store for somebody. It will mean lots of faith, lots of grace, lots of prayer, and lots of sacrifice. If you can find time to think of us when you pray we shall greatly appreciate it and shall be blessed.

The former pastors had no doubt planned wisely and worked faithfully. I happen to know two of them personally—the Rev. A. M. Hanson and Rev. G. D. Eastes. Finer spirits or more consecrated hands never gave themselves to the Gospel ministry. And no doubt but through their prayers and efforts together with the complete co-operation of the good people, this church has been made what it is today and in the beginning of my pastorate I wish to acknowledge their work and worth here. May God richly bless them daily in their respective fields.

I find a fine spirit of co-operation among the people, a willingness to forge ahead, and a consecrated determination to make the Third church take its proper place in the city and in the Kingdom. With such co-operation and assistance, obstacles move easily, tasks are completed without delay and the future opens to us. There is a joy in service and a blessing in sacrifice.

Special services have been arranged for the coming Sabbath. A missionary service at 11:00 o'clock in honor of our missionary to Porto Rico, Miss Olive G. Williams. The formal installation service comes at 2:30 P. M. A number of our own ministers and some of other denominations will take part on the program. All friends of the church are cordially invited to be present.

Yours in Christ,

L. E. SMITH.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The February-March campaign to increase the circulation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is a wise endeavor and should receive the co-operation of the people. Few church members stop to consider the value of the Church paper. It is called the "organ" of the Conventions, that is it is "the mouthpiece of the denomination." Without such "organ" it would be a dumb church. It is larger than the greatest preacher, the greatest educator, or the greatest Institution. The splendid report of Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston for 1918, that it was the best year of the Christian Orphanage would have been impossible without THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The Institution calls through THE SUN, thanks through THE SUN, plans through THE SUN. The same is true of Elon College, the Missionary enterprise, the Women's Societies, and even Conferences in their meetings and work. It must live, if the Church is to live.

The subscription should be increased by full-year permanent subscribers. A thousand new subscriptions ought to be added to the permanent list. That number would put THE SUN on a basis to pay expenses, and it ought not to pull all the time against a deficit, as it has been doing for a year. An average of five new subscriptions to a church would assured a clean thousand. It would be an easy matter to get three months, six months, and yearly subscribers, and donations to make up the balance; but these have been secured heretofore; but they are temporary; the only thing that really counts is personal subscriptions by the full-year, paid in advance. Advance payments are the most satisfactory not only to the paper, but to the subscriber. It is nothing more than cash payment; and any one knows that it is easier to pay for a pair of shoes when they are new than after they are worn out.

The constituency of the Convention represents five thousand families on the basis of five to family, but for church membership it is more than that number. Four thousand subscribers would not be too many to expect from a membership; and that number would place THE SUN on a firm financial basis and double its usefulness. Your two dollars and your prayers will help to reach the goal. Are you willing to pay the two dollars to place THE SUN fifty-two times a year in your home? You cannot spend two dollars in any other way that will do as much good.

I read somewhere that "great men are hospitable to ideas from whatever source they come," and a church paper is the cleanest sheet from the press. It is the rarest thing that THE SUN contains anything that is not pure and uplifting. When you read THE SUN next week, ask your neighbor to subscribe for a year. The pastor cannot see all the members, but the readers of THE SUN can. Here is a chance for you to help THE SUN and some member of the church. Somebody will come into your mind as you read these lines, an that is the person you can win to THE SUN family.

W. W. STALEY.

A SOURCE OF HOPE AND INSPIRATION

The decision of our Burlington Sunday school on Sunday, January 26 will be far reaching in its scope and influence. It was no spasmodic movement, nor the doings of momentary impulse. For years the missionary spirit has been cultivated, and has been growing in the minds and hearts of members of this school and congregation. The school has had for years a superintendent of missions whose chief business it is to keep the school advised in missionary matters and lecture for five minutes before the school every Sunday on missions. Brother John R. Foster, one of our Orphanage trustees, brother of Jas. L. Foster and a successful business man of Burlington, held this position for years and had much to do with bringing the school to its present missionary interest, zeal and enthusiasm. For the past few months Mr. W. M. Brown, a graduate of Elon College, former Principal of Lexington schools, now a resident of Burlington, has filled to great joy and acceptance the position of Lecturer on Missions before the school, and the verdict in Burlington is that no school has a lecturer who who can say more on missions in few words than Brother Brown. And my recollection is that since the early days of the pastorate of Dr. P. H. Fleming the congregation has been supporting a native Bible woman in Japan, and succeeding pastors have aided in keeping alive the missionary spirit planted years ago. The present pastor, Rev. J. W. Harrell, D. D., is noted for his missionary zeal and his vision of world-wide evangelization. His whole heart was in the movement which culminated on January 2 in the school's voting practically unanimously to support a missionary in Japan, at an annual salary of $750.00. For a Sunday school to vote upon itself a task of that magnitude, when it, with the church, was in the building program that is taxing the membership to most unusual proportion, required zeal for the cause, faith in God, and a courage worthy of the heroic souls who have labored and prayed that this very thing might come to pass. This example of our Burlington school will be followed by other schools, and in a few years, if God wills, we shall have Sunday schools and churches all over our Convention supporting one or more missionaries in the foreign field. May God hasten this glorious day with its holy achievement.

One whose heart is rejoiced beyond words at the great deed of the Burlington Sunday school,

J. O. ATKINSON.

TREASURER EMERITUS

Brother D. S. Farmer has resigned his position as treasurer of Pleasant Grove church. He regretted very much to have to do this, but on account of his rather poor health and the many responsibilities devolved upon him he found it necessary. The church reluctantly granted him his request and accepted his resignation.

By unanimous consent of the church he was made treasurer emeritus for life. For eighteen years he had held this most responsible position and paid in behalf of his church several thousand dollars to the five pastors that have served during that time.

May God richly bless Brother Farmer for his record is an enviable one! His brother, Pleasant W. Farmer, is his successor.

THE PERIL OF ECCLESIASTICISM

Professionalism in Church Leadership Has Wrought Havoc Abroad—Why The Prussian Church Failed

(William T. Ellis in The Religious Rambler)

Professionalism in religion is a peril like unto Prussianism in statecraft. Both have their roots in the same principle. Both are doomed by the present world upheaval.

To approach this delicate and difficult subject as it exists in America, and as it is related to general religious conditions as affected by the war, one may discreetly begin as far away as Russia. All the world is totaling up its account with poor Russia, since we are now about the slow business of salvaging so much as possible of the remnants of that pitiable nation. While Russia has failed in all departments of her national life, her most culpable collapse has been within the realm of religion. If the Russian church has functioned, the people of the land would not be in their present sorry plight; and the allies would not have had to pay so heavy a toll for Russia's recreancy.

What Ailed the Russian Church

Ecclesiastical politics paralyzed the Russian church. Her people are innately religious. No other land, unless it be India, can compare with Russia in spiritual questing and devotion. From it, before the war, came more pilgrims to Palestine than from all other nations combined. Muscovite mysticism is famous. Outside of a small revolutionary and "intellectual" group, irreligion was scarcely known among the millions of the czar's subjects. When revolution befell, no hand of violence was laid on the church.

But the priesthood as a whole stood apart from the popular movement. They had been a part of the ramifications of the autocracy. Politics was the breath of life to the higher ecclesiastics. Court favor controlled the important offices. The church was a tool of the state; and a tool often used for nefarious purposes. The masses had a long bill of grievances against the clergy, who had done police work, had fostered superstition, had condoned ignorance, had blessed injustice, had been silent upon moral questions, and had themselves been crafty and avaricious.

The Church Missed Her Chance

Still, with incredible patience, the people bore with the church. They looked to it for comradeship and leadership in the new search after liberty. It was hoped that at the great Moscow conference the church would establish herself upon a democratic basis, and enter upon a new era of ministry and enlightenment. At the time of the conference, the people were like harried sheep, bleeding and with their fleeces torn off. All the impulses of religion would seem to operate to send the church out to the masses, in a mighty ministry and shepherding.

Nothing of the sort happened. The church was blind to the crisis, except as her own dignities and prerequisites and rights were concerned. She revealed herself as ruled by a company of church politicians to whom emoluments meant more than ministry or message. Today the Russian church stands discredited, a tragic exhibition of the baneful effects of professional ecclesiasticism. The deep religious instincts of the people still continue, and may be utilized for the saving of Russia; but that is another story. The important fact for present consideration is that when war's testing blast came, the church collapsed because her leaders were ecclesiastics.

ties instead of shepherds and prophets. Some day a new Tolstoi will tell the story, in all its ghastliness.

Ecclesiasticism in the New-Old East

Less intensified and dramatic than the case of the Russian church, but likewise illustrative of the paralyzing effect of ecclesiasticism, is the plight of the ancient Armenian and Nestorian churches whose centers are in the neighborhood of Mt. Ararat. These bodies have had a continuous history for fifteen hundred years. The second of them once was the most glorious exponent of missionary Christianity, its outposts reaching to Peking. Now, however, both churches are bodies so dominated by the spirit of professionalism and church politics, that they admittedly can be saved only by a revolution or a revival. Already they show signs of feeling the breeze of vitality that is sweeping the world.

Prussia's Perversion of Piety

If the Russian church was complaisant and self-seeking and despiritualized, what shall we say of the Prussian State church, the degenerate child which boasts Luther as an ancestor? Arid scholasticism, which had seriously infected the entire Christian world, and formal ecclesiasticism, have for decades characterized the church in Germany. All the world has seen how servile it has been to the impious claims of the kaiser.

Introspection and self-condemnation have marked the course of British churchmen; but this note has not echoed from Germany. Instead, the ecclesiastic-ridden state church has found apologists for every German deed of evil, from the violation of Belgium to the sinking of the Lusitania and the rape of Russia. No ecclesiastical sensibilities have been hurt by the kaiser's mad claims to special partnership with God. Blasphemy is an unknown sin to these lick-spittle ecclesiasties, who outrival their imperial master in their distortion of the most elemental teachings of religion, for pan-German purposes. The land of Luther has gone far from the days when he hurled defiance at kings and electors.

As It Is In America

Perhaps a rough definition of ecclesiasticism is in order, as we come to look upon the type in America. The ecclesiastic is the professional proponent of churchism, sectarianism, or denominationalism. He makes his living and finds his career within the real realms of church politics and activities. Usually, he is a clergyman; but all clergymen are not ecclesiastic. Most who become such are unconscious of their own deterioration. Indeed, very few are. The tendency to become an ecclesiastic is strongest among the higher officers of the religious bodies. Men whose own salaried positions and personal power are made secure by their ecclesiastical activities are the commonest recruiting ground for the type. By no means all bishops and board secretaries are ecclesiastics; those who escape this fate, however, must possess a vital religion.

Ecclesiasticism intentionally or instinctively, puts personal or denominational advantage above the larger interests of Christianity. It makes a business of religion. Ceaselessly, it is bent upon building up an institution. Craft is a familiar tool to its hand. It has the wisdom of the serpent, if not the harmlessness of the harmlessness of the dove. So it cultivates the rich and powerful, since it desires to be rich and powerful itself.

It delights in closed doors and whispered conferences; and it is so "practical" that it prefers to settle affairs by private consultation, rather than open discussion. Doctrines and forms and institutions are dear to it; and if it could, it would endow everything religious than now exists, for ecclesiasticism is the high priest of "things as they are."

Smooth, sophisticated, subtle, ecclesiasticism is worldly wisdom in vestments; it is the world within the church. There is no very great difference between the ecclesiasticism of 1918, which penalized the progressive and reforming young preacher, and the ecclesiasticism of 30 A. D., which condemned a certain radical young Nazarene. Both represent prudence and self-interest gone to seed.

War's Swift Jolt

If I have at all understood the new tides of the times that are sweeping around the world, and the fresh, fearless facing of facts which characterizes the soldier, then it is perfectly clear to me that ecclesiasticism and all that it connotes is due to receive some startling jolts in the coming months and years. For ecclesiasticism represents a ruling class, a privileged group, a cast of professionalism verging upon autocracy. It smacks of aristocracy, and not of democracy.

Soldiers who have sloughed off without an effort the conventional accessories of religion, but who have entered into a new and deep appreciation of what is vital in faith, may make short shrift of that professional ruling class in the churches which is an obstruction to progress and to the simpler expressions of Christianity which the soldiers love. If the men who come back from the trenches take any part in church affairs it will be to promote simply and sincerely and essential unity. They care nothing about historic bodies. Most of them would be content to see one comprehensive, elastic organization, like the Y. M. C. A., represent all religion—though this is neither likely nor desirable. A return to first principles, with an uncomplicated organization, an elemental creed, and a great and helpful fraternity, would satisfy the soldiers. They believe in a church of human brotherhood, with Christ at its head; and its "leading members" the busiest and humblest servants of all.

Many notes, editorials and items of interest crowded out this week.

Be patient friends—we had enough matter this week for two issues and did the best we could.

Several contributions concerning the Elon College Endowment Fund reached us too late for this issue. They will appear next week.

Mr. Edward Teague, known to many SUN readers, died at his home in Burlington on February 8. He was in his 86th year and a member of the Friends' Church. A good man has gone to his reward.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Headquarters, 27 C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio

Four-Minute-Men

During the War, the Four-Minute Men appointed by the government, did a wonderful service. They brought the needs of the government directly to the people in a most forceful way at every public gathering with a freshness and earnestness that intensely interested the people and caused their hearty response to the call of the government.

The various Forward Movements that are now in progress in the several denominations, in the same way, are using strong men and women to bring to each congregation the direct news of their denominational movements from Sunday to Sunday.

Our Forward Movement desires a corps of Four-Minute Men. We ask that every church, through its pastor, or otherwise, appoint a Four-Minute Man for its congregation. The man, or woman, should be one of the strongest and best workers and an influential speaker, and it will be his duty to bring, each Sunday, a four-minute message to the people concerning the Forward Movement work of the Christian Church. The pastor should grant him or her no more than four minutes of the time when the announcements are made to present, in the most forceful and interesting and concise way, the latest and best Forward Movement information and items that it is possible for him or her to secure. He will keep the congregation informed of the progress of the Movement. His name is to be sent to the headquarters office, where it will be placed on file, so that all the literature issued by the Movement will be mailed to him.

The work of the Four-Minute Men will be most important, and the pastor or official board should exercise good judgment in the selection of such a person.

The Pastor's Place in The Forward Movement

The Forward Movement of our Church is designed to inspire, strengthen, help and lead our pastors in the wonderful days upon which the world has already entered. The Forward Movement seeks to put at the disposal of all our pastors, the most practical and helpful information concerning the whole task of the Church, including the best and most suggestive methods of work involving the activities of the local church and reaching out to the whole program of the Kingdom of the entire Church of Jesus Christ.

The Movement seeks to put a premium upon pastoral initiative. In the Christian Church it is especially clear that the pastor is the center of all the church life. His experience which he develops in the work of his own church, when put at the disposal of others, constitutes the most valuable asset of our Forward Movement.

The Forward Movement, therefore, asks every pastor to share his experiences and plans and victories with his brethren through the church papers, institutes, conferences and with other groups of our church workers.

The Forward Movement suggests and often urges upon every pastor a full and hearty compliance with certain principles, methods and forms of activity. It does, however, recognize and most thoroughly appreciate his individual leadership and power of initiative.

The Forward Movement asks every pastor to reorganize his church for practical purposes and build his church program around the five fundamentals of the Movement, as they are the fundamentals of the Christian life and fundamentals of the Church life. But that request is only in order that he may distribute his responsibilities among the congregation of which he is the leader.

We believe that our pastors, practically without exception, are in hearty sympathy with the Forward Movement of our church in these wonderful days. Their loyalty and interest and initiative are most highly appreciated.

League to Solicit Life Recruits

One of our College Presidents has suggested that in the Forward Movement Department of our Church papers, we open a column for the names of those who volunteer to become members of the "League to Solicit Life Recruits." We gladly accept his suggestion and shall be glad to enroll in our office any volunteers for such efforts and report through our Church papers as securing life recruits is one of the great points of our Forward Movement.

From a recent survey of our Church, it has been established that we need at least fifty Life Recruits, educated and trained, coming out from the top of our schools; this aside from those who enter and only partially prepare themselves for life Christian service. It is a very good service to try to win the strongest, noblest and best young lives in our homes, Sunday schools and churches to enter upon lives wholly given to Christian service. We are hoping that a large number of volunteers, both ministers and laymen, will enter upon such work in their fields.

Easter Additions to The Church

On Monday, April 21, the day after Easter Sunday, we ask every pastor in the denomination to report the number of persons received into his church on Easter Sunday. We ask the number and the conference to which the church belongs, as we wish to gather an accurate statement of the number of members received into each church and each conference on Easter Sunday.

We ask that there be no delay, but on the next day after Easter we be given the definite information, and this we want if there is only one member received into your church. More and more Easter is coming to be a day of large in-gathering into the church. In many, both city and country, a special effort is made to make this a day of great in-gathering into the church.

Please bear the importance of this request in mind and let us hear from you without further delay, the number of members received into the church of which you are pastor on Easter Sunday. We do not wish the names, only the number, the church and conference of which it is a member.

THE ELON STANDARDIZATION FUND
An Address To The Churches

Dear Brethren in Christ:

It had been the plan of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, acting upon the recommendation of the Southern Christian Convention, to launch the Campaign for $125,000 additional endowment in October 1917, and everything was in readiness for the beginning when it was thought in many quarters that we ought not to divide interest in our first great campaign for missions by conducting a parallel drive for funds for another cause, however worthy or necessary.

In response to that sentiment entertained by many of our leaders, Elon postponed her campaign till the $100,000 for missions was raised. That was done early in the fall of 1918, but conditions of health in the country have impelled us to wait until the third Sunday in February to begin our Campaign for a larger and better Elon as "the Officers' Training Camp of the Church, the Cantonment of the expeditionary force which our Church is to send on its evangelizing mission to the uttermost parts of the earth," to use the fine phrase of the Committee on Education of the Western North Carolina Conference.

We have selected the third Sunday in February to begin our drive, because the Southern Christian Convention has set that day aside as CHRISTIAN EDUCATION DAY* in our Churches, and it is fitting that we should initiate its advent by a memorable undertaking. On this day also let every minister preach on "CHRISTIAN EDUCATION and THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY." Let us pray that God will give us not only a clarified vision of the needs of our College on this day, but the twenty splendid young Life Recruits so sorely needed in the opinion of our Convention in our program for the advancing Kingdom.

With confidence we address this message to our people, with confidence emboldened because of their generous response to the call of missions so magnificently crowned with success as well as because of the deserts of our College and its thrilling record of achievements. "Few Colleges," says the Report on Education of the 1918 session of Eastern Virginia Conference, "have such a reputation as Elon, won in so short a time and under such a financial strain."

In the twenty-nine years of her history our College has justified every confidence and realized every hope of our people. She has supplied our pulpits with a trained and consecrated ministry and our pews with devout and earnest lay-workers, "Her Alumni," to quote the Eastern Virginia Conference report again, "have proved themselves in school, in business, in Church, and in war." Elon's future is bright, brilliant, radiant with prophecy of enlarging service to the Kingdom, provided proper support is granted by our people, her founders and stay.

With confidence, let us say again, we therefore address this appeal to our Brotherhood, feeling assured that every Church, minister, layman, lay-woman will respond nobly to our call, which we do not hesitate to assert is imperative in its necessity at this time. The day is past for small things and paltry gifts to our College. It has in poverty achieved recognition, but larger income from permanent funds are unconditionally necessary now in order to retain the standards already won. We feel satisfied that our people will receive President Harper and those associated with him with open hands and glad hearts, ready to respond cheerfully to the necessities of our prosperous and progressive College. We commission him and them to this work of the Lord among us. It is His work and ours, not theirs. They are to be our agents in this forward step. Let us in the speedy conclusion of this drive take the "sting out of stingy," by a generosity worthy of our great Church and her liberal principles. Let us rejoice and be glad in this challenge to our faith and our vital Christian character.

We have carefully fixed the minimum goal which each Church should reach in order for this campaign to succeed (and succeed it must, under the blessing of God). Churches should aim to go "over the top" in their subscriptions, because there will inevitably be shrinkages, and the whole sum is needed. Our plan is to issue a proper recognition flag to every church that goes "over the top," with stars added every time the quota is doubled. Appropriate recognition also will be granted individuals whose gifts by reason of their liberality or sacrifice merit them, but announcement of these will be made later. Our people have become accustomed to such recognitions in the Liberty Loan, Red Cross, United War Work Fund and other drives during the war, and will readily endorse the inclusion of them in our "Elon Standardization Fund."

Just a word in conclusion as to the name of the fund. We call it "THE STANDARDIZATION FUND" because the departments of Education of the United States and of many individual states, with the concurrence of such educational organizations as the National Educational Association and the Association of American Colleges have said no institution of higher learning can longer be rated as a College that does not have a paid in endowment of $200,000 at the very least. It will require $125,000 additional endowment for our College to meet this requirement and so we call this "THE ELON STANDARDIZATION FUND." To the work: let us erect our standards high and make our College safe in the esteem and recognition it has attained.

Praying God's rich blessings in abundance on every subscriber to the Fund and on the College that God may continue to direct it into becoming emphasis on its worthy and inspiring motto: "Christian Character first and always at Elon," we bid the campaign God-speed and summon every man to do his full duty, confident victory shall perch on our advancing standards.

*If for any reason service is not held on the third Sunday, the pastor is requested to preach on CHRISTIAN EDUCATION and THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY at the next service held thereafter. The value of this united preaching campaign cannot be overestimated.

*These goals are based on the Elon College Fund as apportioned by the annual Conferences and accepted by the churches as equitable for many years. We can do it, if we will. We can do it, and WE WILL.

WHAT IS YOUR SUNDAY SCHOOL DOING?

I wish all our Sunday schools would catch, and get the meaning of this great message from that prince of Sunday school workers, Marion Lawrence: "No Sunday school can live within four square walls. To attempt it is suicidal. The Church, Sunday school, or individual, for that matter, whose Christian life is self-centered, has already started on a fatal decline. There is absolutely no exception to this rule."

It is doubtful if Marion Lawrence ever spoke truer words. Yet there are hundreds of schools attempting this impossible thing—trying to live within four square walls. They meet from Sunday to Sunday. Go through the lesson, take the "penny" collection, adjourn and go home. Just so there is enough from the penny collection to buy the literature for the school all are satisfied.

Such a school is a drag. It has a hard time "holding its own." Its attendance, this year is about, or hardly as great as that of a year ago. Now get Marion Lawrence's further declaration: "That Church, Sunday school or individual, with a world view of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ and which recognizes responsibility thereto, will grow in spirituality and power. We have forgotten all too long that the way to have plenty at home is to 'make a little cake' for God first. The more our Sunday schools know about missions, the more they will desire to help the cause. The more they help, the greater will be their interest in their home work."

In brief, as we catch a vision of the far need yonder, we catch a vision of the deep need here. The chief reason why many of our schools mean such very little to their own church and community is because they are doing so very little, and caring so very little, for the churches and communities—far removed from their own.

I want to give one other statement from the greatest of our Sunday school teachers and leaders: "It is my candid judgment that twenty-five years of sane, systematic missionary instruction in our Sunday schools will forever do away with the great debts carried by our missionary boards, multiply by millions the money poured into their treasuries, and increase ten-fold the number of missionaries who are carrying the Gospel to those who need it in the homeland and foreign countries."

What is your Sunday school doing? What is it undertaking to do? Trying to live within its four walls? Trying to live and take care only of itself? Well, according to Marion Lawrence that is a suicidal policy.

SMITH-BRADSEN

On Sunday afternoon, (January 19, 1919), Mr. James Smith and Miss Annie Bradsen motored to the parsonage of the Durham Christian church and were united in marriage by the writer. There were only a few people present to witness the mutual vows. Mrs. Smith is a member of the Durham Christian church. The happy couple have the best wishes of their many friends.

R. F. BROWN.

BROWN

Mrs. Nannie J., wife of Mr. Henry Monroe Brown, departed this life January 30, 1919, being 62 years, 7 months and 23 days of age.

She married Mr. W. E. Heath in 1877. He lived about 2 years thereafter. There was one daughter, Mrs. Ella Heath Wyrick, now living.

In 1886, she, Mrs. Nannie Isley Heath, married Mr. H. M. Brown. He died two years ago, November 2, 1917.

There are of these children, two girls and three boys. The girls and one of the boys, William Brown, married. They are all living.

Mrs. Nannie Isley Heath Brown was a daughter of the late Lewis Isley, of near McLeansville, N. C., who was an active and prominent member of Hine's Chapel Christian church. He died some fifteen years ago. His wife preceded him some thirty years.

Mrs. Brown was the tenth of a group of brothers and sisters, to depart this life. There is one left, Mr. Thomas Isley, to mourn his loss. A noble band of men and women, who by their Godly parents, were taught to love the church; live for God, and be a blessing to man. A better woman than Sister Brown is hard to find.

Her body was quietly laid to rest in the cemetery at Hine's Chapel. Funeral conducted by the writer, her pastor.

J. W. PATTON.

GLASGOW

Mrs. Sallie K. Glasgow, wife of Mr. G. Ollie Glasgow of North Danville, died early Sunday morning, February 2, at the Hilltop Sanatorium after a lingering illness of four months. Death was due to tuberculosis of the throat.

Mrs. Glasgow was born in Halifax county where she spent her early childhood. At the age of ten she came to Danville where she has lived ever since. By her sweet spirit and Godly life she became endeared to all who knew her and her death has caused deep gloom throughout the entire community. During her illness and especially during the last few days of her life she suffered greatly, but she always maintained an uncomplaining attitude and showed a regard for others which was an inspiration to those who ministered unto her.

Mrs. Glasgow was a member of the Third Avenue Christian church of Danville and up until the time of her illness was a regular attendant at the services of the church and Sunday school. She was our humble disciple of the Master and her holy influence exerted much weight on those among whom she lived. She was also a devoted mother and her family was always her chief concern.

She is survived by her husband, G. Ollie Glasgow and four children, Elmer, Kathleen, Adelaide, and Emmitt. She is also survived by five sisters and one brother as follows: Mrs. J. S. Siveter, Mrs. S. J. Cole, and Mrs. J. C. Elliott, all of Danville; Mrs T. J. Landrum of South Boston; Mrs. L. J. Allen of Richmond, and Mrs. M. W. Hart of Hopewell.

Funeral services were held in the Christian church, the writer and Rev. O. A. Guinu officiating. The services were simple but impressive. The church was crowded with loved ones and friends and the floral designs were numerous and handsome. Interment was made at Lee Moutou cemetery.

May God bless and strengthen the members of the family and may the Holy Spirit comfort them in their loss.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

LIBBY

Died January 27, 1919, Mrs. Lena Libby, daughter of the late J. C. Thomas of Isle of Wight, after nearly three weeks of intense suffering. On Wednesday, January 10, her clothes were ignited by contact with a hot stove and before the flames were extinguished she was burned from head to foot. She leaves two daughters, two sisters and a brother. She was a devoted member of Isle of Wight Christian church.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—LIBBY

Whereas, through the kind providence of our Heavenly Father the soul of our sister and classmate, Mrs. Lena Libby was on January 29, 1919, mercifully released from her poor suffering body and wafted to that Home above, and

Whereas, in her departure this class loses a faithful student, her church a consistent and faithful member and her children a loving mother,

Be it Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to our Father's will.

That we strive to follow her example in her devotion to her church, her faithfulness to this class and her love for her children and friends.

That we offer her bereaved children and family who mourn, the sympathy of our hearts, and pray that they, and we may have a firmer faith in the love of our Father who was so merciful to her in her hour of sore distress.

That we forget not the orphans when we commune with God and ever bear them up on the wings of our faith.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved children, and a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.

Adopted by LADIES' BIBLE CLASS, Trinity Methodist Church, Smithfield, Va. February 2, 1919.

HOBBS

Infant of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Hobbs of Greensboro, N. C., died January 30. The little flower bloomed only for a short time, until God took it back home. It was seventeen days old. The remains were laid to rest in the city cemetery after a short service at the home of Mr. Hobbs, conducted by the writer. God bless the bereaved parents, who have lost two of their children within a period of three months.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

BROWN

Mattie Lee Craven Brown was born January 10, 1886 and died January 18, 1919. She joined the M. E. Church while yet young. Afterwards she joined the Friends' Church of Asheboro, North Carolina, where she remained a member until death. Sister Brown gave assurance of dying with peace in Christ.

She was married to John M. Brown March 15, 1908. Three children survive. Funeral was conducted by the writer.

L. W. FOGLEMAN.

FREEMAN

Augustus Burpee Freeman, son of Manley Freeman, departed this life February 3, 1919. The deceased was 31 years old. His health had been somewhat delicate from a child. A few years ago he contracted tuberculosis, which caused his death.

Burpee professed faith in Christ at the age of seventeen years and united with the Christian church at Shady Grove. When the church was organized at Ether he moved his membership there.

He was a faithful son, a devoted husband, a loving and compassionate father and a consecrated Christian. While living he was not only thinking of making his own life happy, but his great ambition was to make others happy. He was anxious to finish his course of study in the Theological Seminary that he might enter a broader field of Christian service. His spirit has returned to God who gave it. Though we cannot have him with us again on earth, his example will live long in the hearts of those with whom he was acquainted. The influence his quiet, peaceful and consecrated life has had upon others can only be revealed in the judgment.

The remains were laid to rest in the cemetery at the Christian church at Ether.

Rev. J. R. Comer conducted the funeral services. A father, mother, brother, sister, his wife, who was the daughter of Mr. J. A. McLeod of Vass and a little son are left to mourn their loss together with a host of friends.

May God's choice blessings rest upon the bereaved ones.

THE CHRISTIAN SIN

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY"

Days of Reconstruction

THE days of reconstruction are laden with opportunities that fling themselves to the door of every man, woman, and child. The world program has been torn asunder and is now in the re-making. Soon it will begin to crystallize and changes will be more difficult to make. Now is the time to begin whether it be in material or spiritual development. A man can be a better servant if he is in tune with his time and not ahead of it. Renounce, renew, and reconstruct now and become a part of your own civilization.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

THE RESPONSE OF THE BRETHREN

Some days ago we asked the ministers to help us undertake a special effort in connection with THE SUN for February and March. We do not have room to quote all these letters, not even a part of them. They were liberal in every way save one, which was without explanation. Many, very many, pledged a definite number and the others pledged their heartiest co-operation and best efforts for the securing of the largest possible number. It is indeed gratifying for such a splendid co-operation and it certainly does bring cheer to this sanctum, for we are endeavoring to edit THE SUN and at the same time finance it.

The reason why we are calling upon the ministers first is because they are coming in direct contact with the people and are best situated to present the claims of THE SUN. However, this does not mean that we do not ask and invite every member of THE SUN household to take a part in this worthy undertaking. (And now if the ministers will close their eyes we will write this: Wouldn't it be fine if the laymen, during these two months, were to send in more subscriptions than the ministers?) We earnestly request all friends of THE SUN to help us out. We need, and the paper deserves, a larger circulation. But most of all the members of the Church need the paper. It does not make any difference how many papers a man takes he ought to take his Church paper first. We trust that those engaged in the work with us will make this a definite point. Then too, we shall be glad if the people are informed that $2.00 does not pay the total expense of the publication. This means that the Convention pays a part of each subscription. The deficit on THE CHRISTIAN SUN since last May has amounted to about the same as the Editor's commission. Two dollars the year would about meet the expense of THE SUN if the Editor could do his work for nothing.

Brother Harward says we ought to get 500 and Dr. Staley said in last week's Suffolk Letter that we ought to make it a thousand. How many of this number will you get? How many?

A TRIBUTE WELL BESTOWED

We have always been a believer that many young men pick out some fellow as a model and follow his example. How exemplary we should be! And most certainly we believe that "the good men do is not interred with their bones," to us a thought of Shakespear.

The other day a good and great man died—Dean M. H. Stacy, Chapel Hill, N. C., and Prof. Francis P. Venable, an ex-president of the University, paid this fitting and well worded tribute to the deceased:

In the death of Marvin Hendrix Stacy the University has suffered one of its greatest losses. I was his teacher in his student days. I appreciated his high manly qualities, admired his strong character, and in the later days of friendship grew to love him. Mentally he was highly endowed. He grasped a subject readily, thought deeply, made his decision after careful weighing, and then was firm as a rock though just and sympathetically considerate to those who differed with him. It is not strange that such a man was a force for all that is best in the life of the University from his college days through the years of his apprenticeship to those of mature accomplishment and gathering honors. He was one of the best teachers in the faculty, sparing himself in no detail of pains and time and repetition, getting the best work out of his students. And they appreciated the labor spent upon them, the unruled patience, the even-handed justice and the insight into their difficulties.

He was admirable as an administrator, clear, convincing and eloquent as a speaker, a man of few words but they were well weighed, to the point and not to be misunderstood. Quiet, simple, unaffected, a thoroughbred gentleman in the highest sense, I never found in him the trait of self-seeking, rather I had to argue him out of a sort of self-depreciation.

He sought no new honors nor advancement, telling me once that the thought of present duty was enough for him and I realized that duty had for him the one clear call unmarred by thought of self, unstained by pride of achievement. Such sweet, gentle, true natures are rare. They constitute the finest, the highest among men though not always so applauded. Such are the salt of the world.

We gladly print this that it may help some one. We print it that some young man may decide what kind of a tribute that he would like to be written of his life and works. The question is with you, young man, as to what your friends will say about you when you are gone. Begin now to make your life count for something.

NO CONFLICT

There is no conflict between the drive for Elon College and the drive for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The more people you get to read THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the easier it will be to get people enlisted in every enterprise of the Church. Information is the true forerunner of every undertaking, and that is what THE SUN is endeavoring to do—be a forerunner for the Church.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE ANNUALS

During the last few days we have had several inquiries about what to do with the Annals on hand. This matter ought to be made uniform. Some years some of the conferences authorize the Annals to be sold and again there is nothing said about it. Last year there was returned to this office a number of Annals accompanied by a letter to the effect that they could not be sold. In some cases they were to be given away. If you are in doubt about the matter, turn to the proceedings of your conference and see what it says about the matter. You can find it, for it is there. Look the matter up. By all means get the Annals into the hands of the people, especially in the conferences where they are given gratis. Attend to this matter now.

SOME CORRESPONDENCE

Dear Brother Riddle:—

I am in receipt of the Annual you sent me and in looking over same I am surprised to find no report from Ambrose, Ga. Our letter was sent to Brother H. W. Elder and he told me he instructed the Secretary to send same to you. This makes two years that no report has been printed from our church while we have sent each year our church letter to the Conference. We have always raised all Conference assessments, and more. Two years ago we paid $25.00 more than asked for. Our Sunday schools last year raised $100 and contributed $65.00 to the foreign home and $35.00 to other Sunday school causes. I regret to know that our church letters have been so carelessly handled and misplaced. You can say that Ambrose church raised all Conference requirements for the past year. We raised last year $600.00 for all purposes. With best wishes.

Yours sincerely,

T. J. HOLLAND.

Mr. T. J. Holland,

Ambrose, Ga.

My dear Brother:—

I have your letter regarding the omission of the Ambrose church from the records of the Annual. I assure you that all matter received from your Conference was printed. Of course the original church letters did not reach me, but were, by your Conference secretary, condensed to table form. I regret the omission but it was not within my power to have it included.

With cordial good wishes, I am

Yours very sincerely,

NOTES

Brother W. J. Edwards changes his address from Cole's Store to Coleridge, N. C.

Rev. J. W. Holt was kindly remembered recently by many members and former members by supplies of meat, money and provisions.

We note from the Ledger-Dispatch, Norfolk, Va., that the Third church has adopted resolutions against the open Sunday in Norfolk. A commendable stand!

Brother J. F. Coghill, Henderson, N. C., sends two new subscriptions to THE SUN. He writes: "I wish that members of the Church would take THE SUN. I am going to do all I can for the cause."

Rev. R. F. Brown, Durham, N. C., writes that he is endeavoring to get fifty new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. A splendid goal! May many others follow his example.

Rev. George D. Eastes changes his address from Portsmouth, Va. to 10 North East Street, Raleigh, N. C. Our best wishes go with him in his new undertaking at the Capital city.

Rev. L. I. Cox, on February 12, sent us five renewals and five new subscriptions. He also included $11.00 for Bibles sold and entered an order for more to the amount of $29.00.

Rev. J. V. Knight writes: "I have planned an evangelistic campaign for April. I will do my own preaching. I have secured the services of the Berge Sisters of Baltimore from April 20 to May 9 if we decide to hold that long. SUN readers are requested to pray for this meeting."

Rev. F. H. Peters, Greenville, Ohio, sends $2.00 for a year's subscription to THE SUN and says: "It has been something of a disappointment to me that we were not permitted to be associated with the people in the South as we expected when we planned to locate in Norfolk. The fine spirit of the people here is in some sense a compensation."

Rev. M. W. Butler, Conshohocken, Pa., writes congratulatory regarding THE CHRISTIAN SUN among other things says: "THE SUN came to my father when I was a very small boy and I have been reading it ever since, and have been a subscriber myself for past thirty-eight years, if I remember correctly. It was one of the means of my conversion; and coming into the Christian ministry."

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

FROM ONE OF ELON'S FORMER PRESIDENTS

February the sixteenth, nineteen hundred and nineteen will, for all future time, be a memorable day in the history of Elon College, and of the Christian Church. And knowing our people as I do, I feel sure that it is to be made memorable in a most delightful and gratifying way. It is to mark the launching of a campaign that is to add one hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars to the invested funds of Elon College. I say that it "is to," and not "ought to."

1. Because Elon College is very close to the hearts of our people—and that means easy access to our purses.

2. Because our people are progressive, and we know that there can be little progress without sufficient means for expansion.

3. Because we realize that Elon cannot longer be classed as a "standard college" without a productive endowment of at least $200,000.00—and our people will not be satisfied with anything short of the required "standard."

4. Because we realize that every dollar invested in Elon College in the past has yielded rich returns to our people of the Christian Church, to our country, and to the Kingdom.

5. Because we have confidence in those who are to have charge of the campaign, under the splendid, enthusiastic leadership of President Harper. They don't know how to do anything but succeed.

Of course, the $125,000.00 will be raised, but it ought to be done quickly; and to do this, every loyal member of the Christian Church must do his part, and do it now.

The need is great, the time opportune, the cause worthy, the promise large. May the response be ready and full-measured.

Ashboro, N. C.

E. L. MOFFITT.

ENCOURAGED BY DR. LIGHTBOURNE'S LIFE

The deep interest of the late Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, founder of the Peoples' church of Dover, in Elon College, encourages me to believe that the campaign to raise $125,000.00 additional endowment for that institution is a worthy cause. I sincerely trust that the Church will respond liberally to the call.

WESLEY WEBB,

Secretary State Board of Agriculture.
Dover, Delaware.

DUTY OF EVERY LOYAL MEMBER OF THE CHURCH

As our Convention, and all our Conferences have voted their endorsement of the Elon College campaign for $125,000.00 additional endowment, (the amount required to rate said college as a "Standard College"), and feeling sure that these bodies would not have acted favorably in this unanimous fashion, unless the occasion warranted such action, I am therefore, inclined to the opinion that it is the duty of every loyal member of our Church, whether pastor or layman, to heartily support this campaign. I give it my hearty approval and trust that the President of this growing institution, and training school of our Church, will have no trouble in "going over the top" with flying colors.

C. H. STEPHENSON.

Raleigh, N. C.

WILL GIVE IT NOBLY AND GLADLY

No lover of the Christian Church of the South can ever estimate the value of Elon College. She is in reality a central power house from which flows to all parts of our church trained talent.

She has met the demand upon her nobly in the past; but a growing Church must enlarge its source of power. No denominational College can do its best work without some financial backing besides its current income. Elon needs the increased endowment and the Church will nobly and gladly give it.

H. W. ELDER.

Richland, Ga.

WE MUST REACH THE STANDARD

What the Christian Church is today is, almost wholly, due to education. Without education, as I see it, is to remain non-missionary; and a non-missionary Church is non-progressive. We of the Southern Christian Convention want to make progress in Christian work. Therefore, we want to hold our college second to none. In order to do this, as set forth by the Department of Education of the United States, we must reach the standard and raise Elon's required endowment.

E. M. CARTER.

Wadley, Ala.

FOR THE WHOLE CHURCH

I learn through Dr. Harper that there is soon to be launched a united campaign in interest of Elon. I write to give my whole hearted endorsement to this campaign. As I write I find myself trying to imagine what would be the present condition of our Church, North, South, East and West, had it not been for the invaluable and heroic service rendered by our institutions of learning together with their sacrificing faculties. Elon has rendered a peculiar service to the Southern Convention. She has raised her ideals, trained her ministry, inspired her laymen and nerved her to the tremendous task of the Kingdom. Dr. Atkinson is doing a most wonderful work, giving our people a chance to express themselves in the larger things of the Kingdom, work that would have been practically impossible without Elon in the field as a preparing and a steering force. Elon is the willing servant of the Church. She has no doubt made possible the efficiency and the continuance of that that she serves. She now needs a more hearty support of the Church that she may be enabled to render a much larger service to the Kingdom.

This campaign was to be launched in the churches February 16. Its purpose is to increase the permanent endowment of the College $125,000.00. Elon now has an educational standard, fully recognized by the standard educational institutions of the country but she must lose this recognition unless her endowment is increased to the above figure. I know that when our people realize this fact, what it means to us and to the future of our Church, that they will rally to Elon and give and continue to give until Elon's high standard and efficient service is guaranteed. I wish for you, Dr. Harper, the most phenomenal success of your life in your endeavors to raise this fund.

L. E. SMITH.

Norfolk, Va.

THE ELON STANDARDIZATION FUND What My Mail Reveals

The gratitude of my heart will never adequately be expressed for the encouraging words that have come to me on the eve of launching the campaign for $125,000 additional endowment. The chorus of unanimous approval stoutens the heart and quickens the zeal for the active pushing of the campaign.

In addition to the splendid array of endorsements which Editor Riddle received and has printed or will print in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, thirty-one (up to Wednesday the 12th) dear friends have written me they will pray for the cause, and one of them significantly adds: "When the Brotherhood really gets to praying, the task for you will be easy, for true prayer means action."

A layman, living in a distinctly rural community, writes: "I am heartily in favor of keeping Elon abreast with the leading Colleges."

A city pastor writes: "I trust the drive for the endowment fund may be a great success."

A Civil War veteran and former member of his State's General Assembly writes: "I think the plan a good one and you will raise the fund if the people unite."

A veteran country preacher writes: "I hope the drive will be a success in every particular."

A licentiate says: "I am anxious to do all in my power to help forward the Kingdom."

A retired minister says: "Let me assure you of my hearty co-operation, so far as opportunity presents itself."

A layman in a country church without pastor says: "We are ready to do our part."

A Christian Woman Speaks Her Heart

But the finest of the fine is this inspiring letter from one of our Christian women, wife of one of our most generous laymen, written voluntarily out of a heart of love and loyalty, the type of a host in our Church.

She says: "Elon has for a long time had my prayers and tears, quite a few prayers and many, many tears. I have surely seen for two years that the war would deplete her students and finances. The first installment of the S. A. T. C. at Elon nearly broke my heart. I really felt that a public dance or a Sunday ball game in her sacred precincts, would cause the brick in the walls to cry out. I know now that either was impossible, and I am truly glad that the College is back again on her old footing with the spirit of the former Elon still presiding. As to the Standardization Fund, you will get the required amount. There are thousands of members of the Christian Church that are willing to back up their prayers with their money and the endowment is sure. The Lord is still leading; and for our beloved Elon there shall be another Red Sea crossing and the springing up of the blessed wells of Elim and the Palm Trees. You have our sympathy and prayers in this wonderful undertaking. You have only to speak that we go forward."

The Church has spoken, the Brotherhood has approved, and under God's blessing we do go forward, forward to a larger and better Elon.

But do not forget, dear friends, that the initial item in our drive is for those twenty life-recruits, twenty strong young lives for Jesus and the service of His Church. Shall we not be earnest in our prayers and willing in our efforts to find them during the month February 16—March 16?

Beginning at Jerusalem

Elon's College pastor, Dr. N. G. Newman, believing earnestly in the Scriptural way of doing things, has decided to put on the drive for funds here for the $125,000 campaign on Sunday, the 16th and the week following. It is right and proper that the beginning should be made at headquarters. Let the Brotherhood pray earnestly for divine blessing on the campaign here.

Finally

Brother Riddle editorially said a great thing last week—that the Church has laid this drive on me. Any man is honored to have anything laid on him by so splendid a body as the Christian Church. These letters out of the hearts of our people show they are sharing the responsibility with me. It is the cause of our Church and of our College that is being presented, and with our people behind it as they are, God can but grant us the rich success our hearts so earnestly seek from Him.

I am grateful to one and all.

W. A. HARPER.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

VALLEY LETTER

Our revival meeting at Timber Ridge was greatly interferred with by the presence of Spanish Influenza in the community. However, there was some interest manifested, and seven conversions and nine additions to the church. At my last appointment there another young man gave his heart to the Lord and united with the church, making ten additions to the church there since Conference. I have been much encouraged with the work at Timber Ridge since taking charge there about a year and a half ago. I have received only the very best of treatment from every one. The prospect for the growth of the church there looks good. Some of the members seem to be getting a larger vision of the things pertaining to the Kingdom. To be sure there are others who need an awakening.

What a great thing it would be for all our churches

if only all our people would wake up to the responsibilities and opportunities that are theirs. During the past few months people have shown much loyalty to country, and have willingly made sacrifices they never thought before that they could be induced to make. Now, why should we not be just as loyal to the church and to God? And why should we not be just as willing to make sacrifices for them as we have been to sacrifice and give and talk for our country? Oh, that we might wake up, and let all that is within us bless His holy name!

HIGH POINT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

On Saturday night, February 1, 1919, a small portion of the membership met in the first quarterly meeting at 7:30 o'clock. Those present manifested much interest in the progress of the church and gave expression of their desire to see it go forward. One of the things passed upon was to have a "Go to Church" Sunday. The day was not appointed but a committee was selected to set a date and notify and solicit the delinquent members living in the city. We are hoping this will be a good day and trust that each member will help to make it so.

This is my first time to try to serve this church, and as pastor I desire the co-operation of each member. The Spanish Influenza was very prevalent when I took charge. The congregation was small but has increased some since the epidemic abated.

May—the Lord bless and inspire the faithful, arouse the delinquent and cause them to enter the front ranks for Christ and the church, is our prayer.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Lieutenant J. N. H. Clendenin served in the calvary with honor, during the entire four years of the Civil War. He was married to Bettie C. Long, daughter of Jacob and Jane Long, July 31, 1862. Her maternal grandfather, John Stockard, represented Orange County in the North Carolina legislature for seventeen consecutive terms. Her father was a sturdy Piedmont farmer with a peerless wife, devoted to religion and education. Mrs. Clendenin had seven brothers, John H., who died on his farm in Missouri; Dr. W. S., the founder of Elon College; Joseph who was killed in the battle of Chancellorsville; Dr. D. A., scholar and educator; Hon. J. A., lawyer and member of North Carolina legislature; Dr. George W., eminent physician, deceased; B. F., superior court judge. Her life in the paternal home was reflected in the manners and aspirations of her brothers. A teacher herself the spirit of learning took deep root in the family.

Mrs. Clendenin was the mother of seven children: Mrs. J. F. Peterson; Mollie, deceased; Mrs. N. G. Newman; J. Frank; Mrs. Charles M. Lance, deceased; Mrs. C. C. Thompson; and George L. The family tree has, also, nineteen grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

I lived in the home with Lieutenant Clendenin and his wife on a farm in 1866. Upon his return from the surrender of Lee to Grant, at Appomattox in April 1865, he took his hand from the handle of the sword and put his hands upon the handles of the plow; and he has served his country and his God in peace as he did in war. That was one of hard work and great pleasure, a year that developed the blood-relationship into life-friendship.

This faithful husband and wife celebrated their golden wedding on July 31, 1912, an occasion as sweet as their bridal day, enriched by the good wishes and gifts of family and friends. But December 11, 1918, Mrs. Clendenin entered into rest, and on the thirteenth we said: "earth to earth; ashes to ashes; dust to dust," and laid the flowers on the grave while their fragrance mingled with the sweet songs sung by loving and sympathetic friends. More than eighty years had imprinted her life-service on many hearts. Her spirit still lingered in Graham and the Christian church. Modesty, sincerity, refinement, and purity characterized her long and useful life. Her neighbors praise her. One of her last acts was to have her husband take her to see an old lady more shut-in than herself. Her thought was of others, and her labors for others. She had the spirit of Him who came not to be "ministered unto, but to minister." Christian mothers, it seems to me, will be in the number "when I make up my jewels." Jesus seemed to have that idea on the Cross, when He said to John: "Behold thy mother!"

No mortal has such opportunity for leading the world to Christ as a Christian mother. She has the first opportunity. That is all important. "As the twig is bent, the tree is inclined." She has the longest opportunity. The years of childhood in the home are the longest years in one circle of formative conditions. It is a soul-calamity for mothers to neglect these years. She has the most responsive opportunity. Childhood is the most impressionable period of life and should be used to implant character in the young life. Mrs. Clendenin used her opportunity with spiritual skill and set it with deep affection. The family and the community are richer and better because she devoted her life to God and to others. No society allurements diverted her motherly heart from training her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. All scientific rules for rearing children drop into oblivion compared with the genuine example of a devoted Christian mother.

What Our Workers in the Field are Doing

Rev. F. E. Rockwell, Madrid, Iowa: "The Forward Movement program will be pushed by me both in my own church, and with all the vigor and influence I may have in the conferences of the Western Christian Convention. It is a comprehensive program that embraces the five essentials to permanency, power and progress for the Christian Church."

Rev. F. H. Peters, Greenville, Ohio: "We are starting the Forward Movement here. The official board has voted to make it the basis of work and is making plans for carrying this out. I am preaching a series of sermons on its five features."

Rev. Nomen McClain, Swayzee, Ind.: "I want to join you in what I hope to be an army of ministers and laymen in a general campaign for the Forward Movement."

Rev. E. D. Hammond, Lebanon, Ohio: "The first fruits from the trip by fourteen laymen took to the Dayton Forward Movement rally is a series of sermons on the Forward Movement and a new home and foreign missionary society with thirty-one members, and plans for a rally of the three churches of my pastorate February 18."

Rev. W. H. Martin, Mellott, Ind.: "I am enclosing prayer covenants. I am preaching a series of Forward Movement sermons. Dr. Hershey will preach on the Forward Movement for me two Sundays."

Rev. H. A. Smith, Warren, Ind.: "I am sending you the names of the chairmen of my special committees on the Forward Movement. I have a special committee in our church on each of the five points of the Movement."

Rev. G. O. Lankford, Berkley, Va.: "The Forward Movement program idea is already beginning to tell in our Church. This month we are having four simultaneous cottage prayer meeting on Wednesday night instead of the usual meeting at the church. In one meeting alone last night we had forty or more persons present. I have not yet heard from the other three. We are having a great experience this month as we emphasize religion in the home."

The Pastor's Place in the Forward Movement

The Forward Movement is presenting to every pastor, through his own church committee, a Church program of activity culminating in a series of spiritual achievements and financial achievements, worthy of our Church in the light of this new day.

All the five fundamentals have been carefully studied and wrought out by a strong committee of twenty-four. The Forward Movement has been officially launched in respect to a general and united feeling of our brotherhood and in response to the action of our Church boards, by the American Christian Convention.

The program is the result of the united experience of the large committee. The program and the methods have been arrived at, after most careful study of the needs of the Church, and in the light of the challenge that God is giving to His people. Every pastor is therefore, asked to join heartily in the detailed suggestions offered by the committee, in the light of general loyalty to the church of which he is a part.

We have a loyal body of ministers, whom we believe will enter heartily into the program. Each pastor is asked to adapt his individual church program to that part of the Forward Movement, during the period of the campaign.

One has said: "What the cylinders are to a gas engine, organization is to the church; organization alone, means cylinders without gas and engine without power, dead and useless. Gas without cylinders means explosion without power."

Our Forward Movement pastors are asked to adjust the cylinders of the church life to the larger load which the church must carry. We, therefore, suggest that our pastors regard the Forward Movement divine in its inspiration and purpose and that they give themselves to its full promotion in church, conference, and convention. That they get a clear realization of its spiritual objectives of lifting our church to its rightful place of vision as to opportunities and responsibilities.

Another List of Preachers

Rev. A. W. Sparks, Argos, Indiana; Rev. F. C. Lester, Graham, North Carolina; Rev. Nomen McClain, Swayzee, Indiana; Rev. E. D. Hammond, Lebanon, Ohio; Rev. John A. Dillon, Rush, New York; Rev. L. E. Dull, Mansfield, Illinois; Rev. J. J. Beisiegel, Bluffton, Indiana; Rev. S. L. Beougher, Hartwick, New York; Rev. J. E. Fry, Merom, Indiana.

This is the third list, so far, that we have published showing the loyalty and co-operation of our pastors with our suggested program. They are all preaching series of sermons on the Forward Movement.

Have you begun to tithe yet? Thousands and tens of thousands in all denominations are beginning it this year.

Have you started your mission study yet? Now is the time to begin it.

Please do not forget to send in the names and address of the Four-Minute Man, appointed in your church.

MISSIONARY

HOW TO CREATE AND KEEP A LIVE AND ACTIVE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN THE CHURCH (IN FIVE CHAPTERS)

Chapter 3. Music in the Missionary Meeting

There are certain essentials to the life, growth and power of any Missionary Society. Two of these have been treated in previous papers, namely, the Bible and Prayer. The writer now names another element as fundamental and is essential to the life of the Missionary Society as either of those already presented, namely, Music.

Will the reader bear in mind that the writer does not contend that any sort of Bible reading, because it happens to be Bible reading, or any sort of prayer, because it happens to be in the name, form and attitude of prayer, or any sort of music, because it happens to be some form of hymn, psalm or song, are essential to the life of a Society, or will guarantee to keep the Society on its feet and going. The writer does mean to contend, however, that the proper sort of Bible reading, the right motive and conduct in prayer, and sufficient care for the singing will certainly hold the Society together with a grip, and start the Society off in its meetings with a power and momentum, that will prevent paralysis in the proceedings, and produce a warmth of feeling and fellowship that even an unconcerned and indifferent membership cannot chill. There are three reasons, amongst others, why at every meeting of the Society there should be music.

First. No medium has been found among mortals, through which courage is so thoroughly awakened, and the heroic in the heart is so appealed to, as through Music. This is why war regiment has its band of musicians, and after the last words of the general in command have been spoken, before going into battle, the music starts up. Even cowardly hearts become courageous, and brave souls heroic, under the impulse and inspiration of music.

Now, I submit that the very thing which causes many a Missionary Society to lag and die, is a lack of courage, a want of the heroic that makes one dare to go and do against all odds, and difficulties, even the odds and difficulties of a chilling indifference and a killing unconcernedness.

Every Missionary Society when it meets for a session, whether in the home, in the open or in the Church should select and use in a manner herewith described some of the grand old missionary and heroic hymns. This should be done whether three members are present or thirty. The smaller the number the greater the need of inspiration, courage and uplift.

Second. The second reason why every missionary meeting should have music is that music is the language of love. When Moses could no longer hold the wayward Israelites in unison by law, he taught them the "Song of Moses and the Lamb." He who writes a nation's songs is mightier than he who writes a nation's laws, philosophies tell us. That which knits a nation's heart together is not the national constitution, but the national airs and anthems, we are assured.

Now, this one grand and sublime object must ever be kept to the fore in the minds and hearts of all members of any missionary Society, namely, that since God loved the world we too must learn to love a world. It is the language and lesson of love we are trying most of all to learn in a missionary meeting. Music stirs the deepest emotions of the heart, and awakens to highest and holiest impulses. Such emotions and such impulses are needed in the missionary meeting, if it is to be a live and active one.

Third. The third reason for giving heed to the music in the Missionary Society is, music is not only a medium through which the human heart is stirred to deeds of daring, and of universal fellowship, but also to high and holy aspirations. How many are the souls who have been led not only to do something for missionaries, but even to become missionaries, through the singing of a hymn! The writer read recently of how a young man in the choir, possessed with a fine voice, and serving his church and community indifferently, until one evening in singing with the choir the closing hymn, a stirring missionary hymn, he heard through the words of the song the voice of God calling him to the mission field. That young man never slept that night till he had fully resolved, "God permitting, I will be a foreign missionary." And he was one. His holy aspiration found expression and bold resolution through song.

I read also another instance. A young lady had thought of being a missionary, but had not made the full surrender. The hymn, "I Surrender All," was announced in the missionary meeting. She could not sing it. Her soul was in agony while others sang the words, which she knew she could not truthfully utter. But shortly she won the victory, and in quiet found that peace with God that man cannot give nor take away. Then in a few days she returned to the meeting and with a joy that she had never known before said, "I surrender, I surrender, I surrender all." The service of song had brought her to face life's crisis, and she faced it.

Now, the writer does not argue that any sort of songs or singing will do for the meetings of the Society. Only the best that can be done in song and through song should be had at the meeting.

In attempting practical suggestions for music in the he thinks fully the limitations and difficulties under he thinks full, the limitations and difficulties under which societies frequently have to meet. Nevertheless he hazards what seems to him three practical suggestions, one or the other or all of which any Society that really cares and will try, may adopt.

First. If there are too few at the meeting, or if the voices are not strong enough, for congregational singing, let a member read the words, or better, let the few present read responsively or in unison, the word of some stirring, familiar missionary hymn. Even the words of a familiar song will often set the tune to singing in the heart if the voice is silent.

Second. Prof. Amos R. Wells, the greatest Endeavor man and missionary propagandist, makes this suggestion: "Choose a missionary hymn that shall be sung at all the missionary meetings for the year—not some flippant song, but some grand old hymn of faith. It should be committed to memory, and at the beginning of every missionary meeting the entire company should rise and sing it with fervor." Any Society with a little care may follow that, it seems to me.

Third. Connecting the hymn to be used at the meeting either with the passage of Scripture out of which it grew, or better still, with some great missionary event, as nearly all the grand old missionary hymns now are so connected will help the singing and give it zest and flavor. The writer wishes space permitted here to tell some of the missionary incidents that hinge about such hymns as "From Greenland's Icy Mountains," or "I Gave My Life For Thee," or "Christ for The World We Sing," or "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," or "All Hail The Power of Jesus' Name."

But any member who will interest herself in the music of the Society, and one should be appointed in every Society for this one purpose, may easily secure a book for a pittance which will give stories about missionary songs and singing that will interest the whole Society and through the music do much to keep the whole lump leavened and every meeting of the Society an inspiration and a joy.

J. O. ATKINSON.

P. S. Suggestions on questions from members of Missionary Societies are urgently requested by the writer.

A VANISHING OPPORTUNITY

(By Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D., Albany, N. Y.)

It is altogether patent that the war has brought, and is still bringing, an array of opportunities and obligations for which the Church, motivated and equipped as at present, is unequal. Things have been moving at a frightful momentum. The Church, if it were so disposed, could not dodge the rush of events released by the war, nor overtake them when once passed. An age has been compressed into a day, while a single hour has encompassed activities as far reaching as those of some former generation. The demands for a keen insight into the meaning of events, a hair-trigger conscience for their moral impositions, a ready diplomacy, a statesmanship in administration and a boundless sacrifice have been, and are, an absolute necessity of the Church's function in these war days.

The supreme test of purely military ability was on three months since. The supreme test of the readiness, strength and adaptability of the spiritual force of the Church is on at this moment. Until the signing of the armistice, the objectives of the war set by patriotism, national loyalty and the appeal of the great task aided the war purposes of the Church. Motives of patriotism and Christianity have a common soil for growth. Since the armistice, there is a very noticeable weakening of the force of these considerations. Morale is sustained among our troops at home and abroad with greater difficulty. Discipline is less severe. The moral welfare of the soldier is less guarded by municipalities and volunteer community service. While programs of helpfulness are still employed, it is with a decreased insistence. The soldier is left more to his own devices and the lure of lucre-mad, commercialized vice appears at a time when he is less strong. He is "killing time," chafing under restriction, eager for diversion and reckless from ennui now that the big job "over there" is done. There is also a hegira of religious workers from among the soldiers from the same considerations. It is now less spectacular and more plodding to be a religious worker in a military camp. The thing which inspired in the beginning is receding to the rear. Only the strongest impulsions from contact with the Christ will keep camp workers pursuing their tasks with the same tirelessness as formerly. On the whole, there is the threat of a serious slump in the persistence of present conditions.

What opportunities are offered and what obligations are imposed in this period of transition from war to peace! These soldier boys, as no other single group, will determine our future American life. Their spirit and motive will be registered in community life far beyond numerical warrant. Their sacrifices will be credentials unquestioned; their scars will be badges of authority. None will grudge them this prestige—it will be willingly accorded. We are only anxious that such rights shall be exercised with holy purpose. The Church with more than ordinary urgency should be preparing both them and itself for this new responsibility. This can be more easily and effectually done while the men are together in camp than later. An esprit de corps of national application can be created. Religious workers in the camps and adjoining the camps, as well as correspondence with boys in service, can all assist in this preparation. Who does not sense such an obligation at this crisis time is not reading the mission of the church into the opportunity of the day.

The Young Men's Christian Association realizes this opportunity and the danger of its non-use and is putting this motto conspicuously about the camps:

"When you go back home, tie
Up to the church; you need it
And it needs you."

There is another great matter to enter the consideration by the Church. We have long been lamenting the paucity of workers. This condition has become more aggravating with the progress of time until at the present the situation is actually acute. Through the war some changes have come in the lives of those who have been in the thick of it. They may have had personal experiences with God or a contract with men which has given them a new sense of the stewardship of their own lives. Their old ante-war occupations, in many instances, will not be open to them. They face the necessity of making a new choice of life work. Certainly, under these conditions, God will be calling some of them to a life of purely Christian service. May He not call through us, or may we not at least be the Elis to these Samuels to say at the psychological moment, "If He call thee, thou shalt say, 'Speak, Lord, for Thy servant heareth.'" Circumstances have never combined to make opportunity more favorable for impressions toward life service for God than now. Should not the Church be flooding the camps with literature along these lines, not permitting the men to escape decision concerning them? A day lost now may be an opportunity lost forever.

An unfortunate fact stands beside this great opportunity and that is this—while the opportunity has been enlarging, the inclination of the church has been apparently decreasing. We did great things for the boys while they were going out in preparation for the eventualities of the war. We should be no less active for their influence and welfare in the days of peace. Too often our greatest desire now seems to be to get them back to our homes, just to have them with us. The deeper meanings of the hour are escaping attention from very many who ought to be regarding this as the great day of opportunity for both the future of the men and the Church.

May we not each accept these many obligations as personal duties from which there is no release until they are faithfully performed.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SOME TITHING TALK

If we can have $194.00 to report in our next letter we will reach our first thousand dollars in the month of February. That would be fine. I hope we can do it.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Godwin, Stuart, Iowa, sent us a check this week for $78.01. These good friends tithe and this is the tithe money. What if all our people would tithe their income? How easy it would be to run our colleges, churches and orphanages. I feel sure our income would be so liberal that we would be able to establish our home for little children in the next few months and have our Orphanage grounds dotted over with the sweet little tots who are in need of a home.

Who would not be interested in the little tots? When you visited Elon it would be one of the places you would want to visit.

I received a letter this week from a kind friend of the Orphanage in which she said: "I am glad to see the stone start to rolling which will open the doors of the Christian Orphanage to the small children. There is nothing that appeals to my sympathy more than a small child without a mother." A check was enclosed to back up the sympathy. I had to refuse to take a small child last week because we are not prepared to care for children under four years of age. Our people ought to open their hearts and see to it that a home is prepared for the admittance of these little children. How many of our people who love the little helpless babies who have been left without a mother, and often the case without a father, will contribute toward a home for them? "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He repay him again." Where is the person who was ever made poorer by lending a helping hand to the poor and needy? Why can't we lend unto the Lord one-tenth of our income? Why can't we trust His promise? Let us try it and see if we are not blessed in many ways.

I had the pleasure of visiting the First Christian church in Norfolk some time ago, and while talking to one of the good members of that church he made this suggestion which I think is a good one, and would have mentioned it before this date but for the fact that we wanted to close up our year's work first and mention this idea at this time. His suggestion was that our Orphanage had no endowment and why not start one by asking our people to contribute "Liberty Bonds?"

to start an endowment for our beloved Institution? Now, I think this a splendid idea and I know our people within the bounds of the Christian Church could donate enough Liberty Bonds, and be the happier for the doing, to make a nice endowment for the Orphanage. I noticed in the papers sometime ago where one man in North Carolina donated to one Orphanage in this State Liberty Bonds amounting to $5,000.00. I wonder how many members in the Christian Church would like to make a contribution of this kind?

The Standard Christian College

Depicting the Basis of the Elon Standardization Fund

By President W. A. Harper

"Few Colleges have such a reputation as Elon, won in so short a time and under such financial strain."—
Eastern Virginia Conference.

THE STANDARD CHRISTIAN COLLEGE Standardization a Modern Characteristic

Ours is the day of standards. Railroads long since were standardized, with greater efficiency and economy for themselves and the public. The coinage of the nations when standardized wrought a notable advance over the previous confusion and injustice. Big business is standardized, and that is why it is big. We adopt standards for our Sunday Schools, our Christian Endeavor Societies, our Churches. We are perhaps approaching the day when the food each man can legally consume will be reduced to a standard—a day hard on the fats, but glorious for the leans and the in-betweens.

It Is Not An Unmixed Blessing

Standards have advantages and disadvantages. It is a well known fact that railroads are slow to adopt improvements for safety or service. The law has frequently compelled them to inaugurate changes in the line of their own efficiency. Many a patent improving a commodity, or a process of manufacturing, has been bought up and then shelved, in the interest of immediate returns. Big business, standardized business, is conservative and many times averse to innovations. Standards often fossilize. They more often tyrannize. Salvation for standardized institutions is to be sought through the employment of a body of experts giving their entire time to evolving improvements and then only with a Board of Directors looking to long-time rather than short-time profit. The Carnegie Steel Corporation has practiced this plan. A premium was set on initiative by the wily head of this amalgamated business giant. The Armour and Co. experts take rank with the great scientists of the world. John D. was wise in the same direction. That is why the by-products of the packing and oil industries are more valuable than the meat or the oil. These experts have made it possible for John D., if he chose to do so (but he won't, my word for it), to pay you five cents a gallon to use his oil, if you would not take it on other conditions, and yet to grow fabulously rich on gasoline, acetylene, and the thirty other different "enes" of the industry's by-products. These experts have made it possible for beef and mutton and pork to sell for less today, in war times, in the wholesale market than a half-century ago, because they have taught the packers how to save every vestige of the animals slaughtered, even to the squeal, which is safely preserved in phonograph records and sold to a gullible public.

Some Things Cannot Be Standardized

We standardize our professional men by requiring them to have a State license. Our ministers are standardized by being first admitted as candidates, then licensed as probationers, and finally ordained to the full gospel ministry. There is even talk among the eugenists of standardizing husbands—a proposition strenuously opposed by the stronger sex, and with good reason. The unmarried one says it isn't fair to subject them to tests their fathers could not have passed. It will be a good thing not to make this standardization business retro-active—a good thing for the American home, which in spite of the lack of standardization is the noblest institution of our social order. So far there has been no suggestion of the standard woman. Her style changes so often it would be useless, say those who regard the militant suffragette and the society belle as the true representatives of the gentler sex. But those of us who know the loving heart of noble womanhood assign a different reason. We know that some things are too precious to be pared down to uniformity. Personality, individuality, difference is their engaging charm. And such is woman, the last of the Creator's handiwork and His masterpiece.

A Multiplicity of Standards For Colleges

Colleges too are being standardized, rated, and praised or condemned as they attain or fall below the standards set. Each State has its standards. The U. S. Government has also embarked in the College classification business. Denominational Colleges are rated by their controlling bodies. The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and The Rockefeller General Education Board have other standards still. Each individual College has its own traditions and its own ideals. In the multitude of such conflicting wisdom surely there is safety. But where shall we find it? What is a College?

The Vital Worth of The American College

The word "College" is used about as indiscriminately as the word "professor." A group of young men were frequently in a crowded train heard to refer to a certain professor, as a great and noble leader. "And what does this professor teach?" queried a sitter-by. "He is the head professor of the College of Barbers in _____ town," came the instant reply. We have colleges and professors of dentistry, of manuring, of dancing, of horse-shoeing, of business, of palmistry, of dress-making, of _____, of _____, ad infinitum, and also ad nauseam. What then is a College? The College is, in its true significance, an American development in the realm of higher education. In England, the Colleges group themselves into a university, but in our country the College is or should be a separate institution, standing like a noble arch over the entrance from high school into the busy work of the world or through a winding path to this same work by the way of the university or professional school, following the completion of the College curriculum. It is our country's noblest contribution to the progress of human development and the liberalization of the human mind. The late Professor Hugo Munsterberg, of Harvard, born and educated in Germany, but a remarkably appreciative man of every promising institution, in speaking of the American College said: "I believe in its mission and, in spite of the pressure from the high schools below and from the professional schools above, I believe in its essentially unchanged future. I see in the College the most characteristic expression of the American genius, the most important condition for the healthy development of the national life.....the College is the soul of the American nation."

Its Important Place In Our Educational System

The College, of which this German student of our life and institutions speaks this eloquent and deserved praise, stands in the educational system as the crown of the high school and is the doorway to complete professional equipment. It is the guardian of the liberal arts. Its business is not specialization nor the practicability so clamorously demanded by this materially obsessed day. Its function is to give those who resort to it fellowship with all and a splendid individuality peculiarly their own, to vouchsafe to them wisdom with self-mastery, to add to their days by "hastened living" as has been said, by which is meant to place at their disposal the rich and helpful experience of the race in its upward progress, so that they may be saved the high tuition rate of that relentless school, to enable them to realize the best possibilities of our human nature, the equip them with the foundation principles and inspire them with the spirit of that unselfish leadership so lamentably lacking in the war-ridden world of this inhuman time, to teach them vigorously to apply first to themselves and then to others, including society and its institutions, the sublime principles of the obligation of the privileged and talented to serve altruistically the interests of those whose lot is hard by reason of the lack of privilege or talent, to discipline themselves, to be joyous in honest and honorable work, high in ideals, enthusiastic in the service of human progress, with emphasis on social rather than personal gain.

Our Democratic Life Cannot Dispense With Its Service

Such is the high and holy calling of the true College. Such an institution democracy must have, since in a society so constituted there is no imperial autocrat to call men from selfish pursuit to altruistic endeavor. Democracy must fail with the spirit of individualism unrestrained by an institution somewhere in its social organization giving its future leaders the impulse to sacrificial service. No institution has yet been devised that can in any real sense offer itself as the competitor of the College in this realm. The complete and unanswerable verification of this position can be demonstrated in every community, where College graduates and men of large intellectual achievement elsewhere educated live and work side by side. The College man's unselfish service is the College's unimpeachable justification. True it costs money to erect and maintain Colleges; true it takes time to master the curriculum before university or professional training. But it is also true, in the experience of mankind, that the College is worth all its costs in money and time, that its dividends far outweigh its cost from every standpoint. Ill-advised and low-visioned is the tendency therefore to exalt the high schools into Junior Colleges and to debase the universities to the point of accepting the graduates of such schools to full standing in their graduate and professional departments. And greatly in error is that mad haste of American youth to find a short-cut from high school to specialization by eliminating from its life-equipment the American College, which is the soul of the nation, and the liberalizer and energizer with noblest ideals of every youth earnestly seeking for truth at her shrine.

The College Must Be True to Its Place And Ideals

This brings me to say that the College must remain a College. No inordinate desire for mere bigness, no insatiate ambition for matching the universities and special schools with multiplicity of schools and departments must for one moment becloud the issue. The College must be prepared to justify itself as such and content to remain such. It will absolutely divest itself of all tendencies toward spread-englishism. Let it keep true to its place, and the nation's soul will be saved from the canker of materialism as well as from the dry-rôt of mere intellectualism, the Seylla and Charybdis these of higher education in this twentieth century. The true College will leave graduate work and professional specialization to the universities and special schools. It will give itself to the teaching of language, literature, sciences natural and social, philosophy and history, with the ideal constantly before it to produce men and women of character, (and so it must teach the Bible), able to think independently and initiatively, to discern the laws of life and society, to see things in proportion and in that beautiful symmetry so abundant in God's world, to be considerate, appreciative of the great intellectual and spiritual achievements of the race and zealous to share them with all men, testing things by the scientific method, viewing them in the historical spirit, equipped with the philosophic mind and the aesthetic appreciation, crowned and glorified by the presence in all the texture of their life and in its every attitude of that most needed item of our American life—the social consciousness, the identification of the self with the race, the recognition of man's brotherhood, of humanity's oneness in essence and aim.

Its Inner Soul Cannot Be Standardized

Can such an institution be standardized? Shall we inaugurate slavish uniformity for our Colleges and render their faculties and administrators mere puppets in the ceaseless grind of an imperious system? Remember the College is dealing with life, the priceless gift of God. Life cannot be standardized. It is never possible to fossilize the living. There is individuality, and there must continue to be. In a sense, our Colleges therefore cannot be standardized. But in another sense they can be. Their spirit is their own. It moulds their students and is the splendid heritage of a noble past plus the cherished aspirations of a hopeful future operative in unison in the fateful present, fashioning the soft clay of the impressionable life for time and for eternity. What a frightful responsibility rests on our Colleges! These things are too sacred, too tender, too elemental for standardization. They are truth and they are life.

But In Other Respects It May Be Standardized—Some Instances

But sympathetic students of our educational system are convinced that Colleges can be standardized in other directions. With reference to entrance requirements, students with less than fifteen units will not be accepted, and only three conditions should be granted, the same to be removed before the beginning of the Sophomore year. Four years of two semesters each, with one hundred twenty semester hours of hour-recitation work, should be required for a degree. The minimum College to be able to do efficient work should enroll one hundred students, have a president, a librarian, and eight professors, have invested in its plant $350,000, with a productive endowment of $432,000, and an annual budget of $32,000. As the enrollment increases all other items will increase in a proportion that may be described as geometric progression or as resembling an inverted pyramid, for it is a well-known fact that higher education becomes increasingly costly per student as the institution giving it increases in numbers. A college of five hundred students, for example, according to the Association of American Colleges, should have a faculty of fifty, a budget of $166,750, a plant valued at $985,000, and a productive endowment of $2,215,000. According to this same authority, a college of 1,000 students should have a faculty of ninety-seven, a budget of $442,500, a plant worth $2,400,000, and a productive endowment of $6,250,000. The number of students in a class should also be standardized. The number of recitations a student may take is also a proper item for standardization as well as the number of hours a professor shall teach per week. The minimum salary for a College professor is regarded by the standardization specialists as $1,500 a year. Colleges should also be standardized according to the professional equipment and teaching experience of the faculty members. Several states have refused to grant recognition to any College lacking less than $200,000 of productive endowment, with a plant valued at less than $300,000, and with fewer than six full time College teachers. This minimum is the basis of the present campaign to raise $125,000 additional endowment for Elon. This is explanation of the name given the fund, THE STANDARDIZATION FUND.

The Consequence of Such Standardization

The Colleges should welcome such sympathetic study of their needs and their constituents should gladly supply them their lacks. It is safe to predict that in the next generation we shall have fewer Colleges and better ones. The standardization propaganda is making mighty strides in the realm of higher education. The fierce light of publicity is to be turned on in all its brilliancy. Every weak spot in every College will be revealed, and mercilessly held up to public scrutiny. Those Colleges whose friends refuse to supply the funds necessary for minimum efficiency according to the standardization tests will for a few years lead a precarious life, wilter, and die. Sad is the thought, because many Colleges not meeting these tests in former generations, by dint of sacrifice on the part of their administrators and faculties, have wrought a noble work in manhood and womanhood. But new conditions arise. The standardization hour has come. A discriminating public will diligently compare the College seeking patronage to the standards set for its enrollment and by the judgment of that gauge will grant or without support. The hand-writing is on the wall. "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin," which being interpreted and applied will read to many a noble College in our land, "The Standards have been set. Your friends withheld their support. You have been found wanting. You must die." But there is also a ray of hope, bright and promising, in this standardization issue, the hope that seeing the needs and realizing the deserts of their College in view of the standardization tests, many an institution now fighting in a life and death grapple with threatening bankruptcy will be rallied to by generous hearts and so enabled to go forward to larger achievement and nobler service. Many a College in that trying hour will no doubt have sensed in the normal round of things the announcement of its own speedy dissolution, a dissolution sure and inevitable but for the spiritual rulership of God in the world. In that hour for many such a College, men of God, trained for service at their shrines owing their all to these noble institutions, will be powerful with God as Isaiah was in his intercession for Hezekiah, and in answer to their petitions in agony of heart to the Great White Throne, fountains of generosity will open, length of days be granted, larger usefulness guaranteed, and the College itself brought into a new spiritual experience because in its weakness it learned to lean on the Everlasting Arms. Who doubts that Elon shall be among the number so blessed? No man who trusts God and loves his Church can hesitate for a moment. Elon shall be made safe in this crisis hour.

But The College Must be Distinctively Christian

And this brings me to the third remark of this paper—that the Standard College must be Christian. Note that I said, must be. The task before the College, briefly summarized concretely in the phrase "the making of a complete man" or abstractly conceived as the production of character, requires that the things of the spirit shall be given due recognition throughout its life and organization. Education and religion cannot be divorced without direst consequence to the individual man and to the nation. Religion is essential to the adequate fulfillment of the cherished ideals of the standard College. Christian education—it is our hope, and without it there is no hope. Christian education has so far saved our American civilization from utter ruin—Christian education, whose atmosphere is a healing, nurturing spiritual balm, whose breath is prayer, whose life is faith, whose rule is love, whose inspiration is service, whose joy is willing sacrifice. Four years spent in such a College can but fulfill in the soul the purpose of the Master when he said: "I have come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

Times may change. New standards may arise. But God is still God, and man is His child. The education which ignores that fundamental relationship is fundamentally defective. "Education that trains men without religion," to borrow the expressive sentiment of the Duke of Wellington, the man of iron who yet knew God, "but makes them clever devils." Better ignorance and Christian trust, better no Colleges and a due appreciation of God in His world, than all the wealth of the Rockefellers and the Carnegies collected in a place of learning and the spiritual essence of life left out.

For Such a College The Need is Urgent

But for the College that is standard in its equipment and personnel, and that is Christian in its inner heart, spiritual in its attitudes and in its aspirations—for this sort of College there is an abiding need, a never-ending necessity. Such an institution will make a nobler contribution to humanity than President Wilson sought for our nation to make the world by its entrance into the recent holocaust of bloodshed and slaughter. That noble statesman wishes the world made safe for democracy. The Standard Christian College will have before it as the goal of its hope and aspiration, to keep the forces and leadership of life safe for Christ and so fundamentally and truly to render the world a fit place for the unfolding of true democracy, recognizing each man as a brother and God as the Father of all. Any man can well be glad to serve with his life or his means an institution presaging such salvation for society and its organized activities. The educational need of our day and also its prophetic hope is—The Standard Christian College.

The Standardization Fund is now fundamental in the life of Elon. The Christian Church has never yet failed to do her duty by her institutions in any crisis of life. God will not let the spring of her liberality fail now. "We can do it, and WE WILL."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL'S BIGGEST PROBLEM

According to W. C. Pearce, Field Superintendent for the International Sunday School Association, the Sunday schools' biggest problem just now is how to regain in attendance what they lost the past year. One denomination lost from its schools in one year 125,000 pupils; another lost 70,000; and the schools of Illinois alone, according to the State's Sunday School Association, lost 17,902 members in the year 1918. Mr. Pearce says if the present rate of decrease continues the Sunday school will be extinct in one generation. The total loss of all schools in America in 1918 is put down at between 300,000 and 400,000.

It is significant that with this decrease in attendance at Sunday school has come a very marked increase in juvenile crime. The city of Chicago handled over 30 per cent more cases of delinquent boys and girls last year than the year before. To quote Mr. Pearce again, "The religious forces of the world face their most serious crisis, just as governments are doing. From the church standpoint it is a matter of whether the Bolshevism of unbelief lack of restraint and atheism shall sweep the world. Religious indifference is always accompanied by social decay."

One of the causes of the great slump in Sunday school attendance is the abnormal condition brought on by the world-war.

But there is another cause. Sunday schools, like day schools, and like individuals, need new visions, new tasks, new duties, new experience, new undertakings..

Today there is no greater task before this Christian brotherhood than that of reaching this whole wide world for Christ. If wars in future are to be prevented then the evils that produce war must be uprooted and destroyed. Why should not the youth in the Sunday school study, at least one Sunday school period of each month, the great and vital question and problem of missions?

Throw a little "pep" into the slow life of your present Sunday school by proposing that every class in the school study missions one lesson each month—and see what happens. Let the young and the old learn something of the heroes who are out on the firing line, and the needs and possibilities of taking this wide world for Christ.

EDITORIAL

BOLSHEVISM

During the past several weeks we have heard no little about Bolshevism. The secular press has been full and aflame with all kind of reports and rumors. We say rumors because some of the reports have been untrue, while in many instances enough has not been told.

We have gathered our information from sources that are reliable, sane and sober and not from any hurried newspaper note.

1. What is Bolshevism? The name comes from the Bolsheviki of Russia. The Bolsheviki is a great movement to get control of national affairs. It is autocracy in an enraged state; it is autocracy gone wild.

2. What is their Platform? We quote the "planks" in the platform of the Bolshevist movement:

- "1. The church is separated from the state.
- "2. Within the limits of the Republic, it is prohibited to pass any local laws or regulations which would restrict or limit the freedom of conscience or establish any kind of privileges or advantages on the ground of the religious affiliation of citizens.
- "3. Every citizen may profess any religion or none at all. Any legal disabilities connected with the profession of any religion or none are abolished.
- "4. The proceedings of state and other public legal institutions are to be accompanied by any religious customs or ceremonies.

"5. The free observance of religious customs is guaranteed in so far as the same do not disturb the public order and are not accompanied by attempts upon the rights of the citizens of the Soviet Republic. The local authorities have the right to take all necessary measures for the preservation, in such cases, of public order and security.

"6. No one may decline to perform his civil duties, giving as a reason his religious views. Exemptions from this law, conditioned upon the substitution of one civil duty for another, are permitted by decisions of the people's court in each individual case.

"7. Religious or judicial oaths are abolished. In necessary cases a solemn promise only is given.

"8. Acts of a civil nature are performed exclusively by civil authorities, such as the departments of registration of marriages and births.

"9. The school is separated from the church. The teaching of all religious doctrines in all state and public, as well as private, educational institutions in which general subjects are taught, is forbidden. Citizens may teach and study religion privately.

"10. All church and religious societies are subject to general regulations governing private associations and unions, and do not enjoy any privileges or subsidies either from the state or from its local autonomous and self-governing institutions.

"11. Compulsory collection of payments and assessments for the benefit of church or religious societies, or as a means of compulsion or punishment of their co-members on the part of these societies, is not allowed.

"12. No church or religious society has the right to own property. They have no rights of a juridical person.

"13. All the properties of the existing church and religious societies in Russia are declared national property. Buildings and articles specially designated for religious services are, by special decisions of the local or central state authorities, given for free use by corresponding religious societies."

A second reading and careful study of this manifesto will aid the reader in forming a more accurate opinion of what it means and for what it stands. There are several clauses that look liberal, but screened behind the seemingly liberal policies the daggers to stab religious bodies are found. The oath is abolished, the teaching of religious subjects forbidden in any kind of school or institution. Churches cannot own property, thus making them subjects of the State or of some individual.

The name Bolsheviki means the majority, but not majority in the sense that Americans term it. By majority with this class is meant the ruling class, which excludes the peasants, the poor class of Russia. Eighty-four per cent of the Russian people belong to this class which one can immediately see would give the power to a few, thus forming an autocracy.

We notice that Mr. Ford's new paper, "The Dear-born Independent" exhibits a cartoon which suggests a "cure for Bolshevism." A table is loaded with good things to eat with the words "three times a day," written across it.

Now, we admire Mr. Ford as an automobile manufacturer, though we do not own one of his "famous" machines, but Brother Henry is in the wrong if that cartoon represents his individual opinion about the aim of the Bolshevist movement. Joy and happiness are not the fruits of a well filled table. The spirit of Bolshevism is the heart and not the stomach.

Next week we shall write of crimes of this movement and its dangers.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

It is known to the reading world that the Peace Conference has been in session for some weeks. The city in which it is being held is Paris, the capital of France.

We must not think of this assembly's mission is to finally and formally accept Germany's surrender. Its work may finally embrace this, but that is not the real mission of the Peace Conference. The Conference is not only to arrange for final peace from the recent war, but endeavor to keep peace and avoid future wars. It would be a great relief to human hearts if we really knew that no other wars would ever be waged.

Let our opinions be what they may about the world issues of the recent war. One can easily see the hand of Providence as it has stretched itself across the horizon of time. The Y. M. and W. C. A. reached their best state of efficiency when their services were most needed to alleviate the suffering millions on war-torn battlefields. It looks as if these things were born and fostered to meet and aid a world struggle.

The League of Nations was talked about and advocated long before our conflict with Germany. Many eminent men a few years ago thought that such a step was worthless, out of reason and of no necessity. It now seems that its need has been seen.

The Peace Conference is one thing and the League is another, though the Peace Conference is to work out the plans and approve the League. The League of Nations is to be the result of the Peace Conference.

Never in the history of the world has such a Conference met. It will no doubt be the destiny of many world movements. Christian people ought to pray earnestly that right may prevail, and that those in charge of the Conference may be divinely guided.

In brief the covenant of the League is that all nations joining shall submit to certain rules and regulations, thus bringing the nations of the earth together on a definite ground and to carry out a unified program.

In the next issue we shall write on the Articles in the covenant of the League of Nations.

THE PASSING OF KINGS

There is in sight the end of all earthly rule by kings. If memory and history serve us correctly, the first king of earth was Enshagsagana; and if the sign posts of history do not mislead us, the falling of the Kaiser will be the last "fall" of any kingly ruler. True it is that others of the land are occupying positions as "kings," but theirs will not be a "fall," but a replacement by condition and time. We believe that the last "king" has been dethroned.

The nations have outgrown the need of kings, emperors, czars and sultans. No nation has really prospered under the rule of overlords. Communities suffer when an individual tries to have all things his way. An institution of any kind will ultimately suffer if one man is dictatory over all its plans and programs. And this may happen when a good man is doing the ruling, for it destroys fellow feeling, obligation, initiative, for one man assume control and causes the masses—the people—to be "hands off."

A country or an institution with an imperial government finds itself hard pushed to succeed, and when it falls—for fall it must—its subjects are without power and training to act because they have been denied the capacity of these things. This is why uprisings, riots, and disturbances follow the falling of an imperial government. The people are left at the mercy of unsettled minds. What they need is leadership to take the situation in hand.

Autocratic power is against the teachings of Jesus. Power in the spirit of Christianity is service and obligation. Autocracy wants to be served; democracy, the spirit of Christianity, wants to serve. It wants to lift up the meek and the lowly.

The Peace Conference, let us hope, will forever abolish the things that tend to give power to one man to make millions helpless and keep them in a subjective state.

A FINAL CALL TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS REGARDING ARMENIAN AND SYRIAN RELIEF

The schools of our churches have been co-operating with the American Committee for Armenian & Syrian Relief in the effort to raise $2,000,000 from the Sunday schools of North America to help the starving orphans in Bible Lands. The money is now coming into headquarters in New York in a steady stream, but it will take the full help of every school to reach the quota that has been set.

Rev. E. T. Cotten sends a list of new subscribers and adds that he is going to give some one a race for the largest number.

If your label indicates 3-1-9 that means your subscription will expire March 1 and you should renew this week or early next week.

We are receiving many encouraging letters from pastors and other workers for THE SUN. Many new subscriptions are being received.

The initial offering at the Burlington Sunday school on February 16 for the support of Miss Martha Staey, Haverhill, Mass., as a missionary, amounted to $65.67.

We are informed that the subscriptions to the Elon Standardization Fund received on the hill at Elon has amounted to $14,650 and the canvass not completed.

We have on hand two nice pulpit Bibles. One sells for $12.00 and the other for $10.00. For acceptance by March 10 we offer these Bibles at a discount of 10 per cent.

We shall be glad to have your subscription to The Tither. The price is only fifty cents the year. Last week we enrolled over 125 new subscribers from all parts of the country.

Continue to let us have good articles for publication, but do not get impatient if they do not appear in the next issue after you send them in. Few readers realize that we are today (February 21) preparing "copy" for the issue of March 5. And yet we have material on hand now that will not get in until the issue of March 12. This is written as an explanation only.

Rev. H. E. Rountree, now stationed at Portsmouth, N. H., as Chaplain in the Navy, will soon be relieved of his duties owing to demobilization of national forces and will be open for an engagement. Brother Rountree is a graduate of Elon College, has served some of our best churches. His experiences in the Navy, together with several years' experience as pastor, fully qualifies him for a responsible place.

Editors were once called "quill drivers."—This was because they wrote with pens made of goose quills. These lines are written with a quill made and furnished THE SUN'S Editor by Dr. Daniel Albright Long, who once used this kind of writing implement. In the new age Editors are called "pen pushers." In the ages to come they will be "drivers" and "pushers," provided—

On February 2 Rev. L. I. Cox was instrumental in organizing a church at Hopedale Cotton Mills, Alancance County, with thirteen charter members. The organization is planning to build a house of worship at an early date. The members have pledged something over $500.00 and about $150.00 of this has been paid. The community needs the church. Brother A. H. McIver, formerly of our Durham church, is treasurer of the organization. Any friend or friends desiring to give aid to this church can send the same to Brother McIver, Burlington, N. C., in care of Hopedale Cotton Mills. We trust that many will send Brother McIver a check.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

THE POUNDINGS CONTINUE

Recently we were given one of those great surprises about which other ministers have been writing to THE SUN. It was the kind of shocking surprise that leaves a pastor and wife speechless for a while.

We have been working in this field only eight months, and during these months the members of three churches—Isle of Wight, Mt. Carmel, and Windsor, especially the last—have been trying to obtain a house for us in Windsor. But with all of their efforts no house has been obtained, so we have been living in Suffolk, the first and only place which we were fortunate enough to find a house.

But in the face of such a difficult situation the Windsor people desired to give us another sign of their good will toward us; so on one of our visits to Windsor, we were invited into a room containing lots of packages of various sorts and sizes. When we were told that all of them were for us, our feelings were too big for expression, our surprise too great for utterance. Such a pounding filled our hearts with gratitude too deep for words. We were compelled to make two trips with our little Ford to convey all of those good eatables home.

We feel our appreciation to the people who pounded us and gratitude to God, the giver of every good and perfect gift, such that we resolve to show our thankfulness in more efficient service rendered for the Lord.

INGRAM

We are hoping that the second Sunday in March will be a good day with the Ingram church. Dr. J. O. Atkinson is expecting to be present to bring his wonderful message on missions at that time. Dr. Atkinson began his campaign at Pleasant Grove now more than a year ago and was very happy in the results. I am praying that he may have a good hearing and a full and ready response to his appeals. When the whole denomination gets behind the great cause of missions it will be doing its duty and making good its most glorious privilege. When the roll of churches are called; when the larger results and the better harvests are beginning to be reaped will Ingram, or any other church, have to remain behind? Let the answer for one and all be Never! If I did not believe our blessed Master's commands were as fresh and imperative as they were in the days of Paul I could not believe His love to be as abiding as it was when He said: "Come unto me... and I will give you rest." Believing as I do that He is the same Savior today I am impelled by His love to give the best hours of my life and the first and choicest fruits to Him.

SUFFOLK LETTER

After all, life is a compound of experience, history, and hope; and one might add, service. These are interwoven with family groups and make up much of human joys and sorrows. The atmosphere of home ministers to the moral health or sickness of most mortals. There is no good reason why family life should not carry with it permanent relations and affiliations. It is a sad picture when outside parties determine the course of children which should be determined by parental influence. A Christian home is the garden of the Lord in which tender life is cultivated and trained for the King and His children. No portrait is so important on the wall of home as that of ancestors whose character was worthy and has its reproduction in the new generation.

On the thirteenth day of September, nineteen—eighteen a beautiful Christian spirit passed out of a long-afflicted body which had been tenderly cared for in a Christian family. On that day Miss Nellie Chapman, eighth daughter of Cornelius and Hammel A. Chapman, joined her only brother, Charles Hammel, in the better home. The home of this family is near Isle of Wight Court House, Virginia. When I first visited that home, it consisted of father, mother, one son and ten daughters. Two links have been taken out of that golden chain since then, and the chain of two links started in heaven. I witnessed the profession of the father and some of the children and their entrance into the Christian church at Isle of Wight Court House.

Nellie was a rare spirit with a charming alto voice. Her voice in songs of praise made many hearts happy and many tears of joy steal down the cheeks of worshippers. In the Sunday school and church she was dearly loved. Back and forth between home and church, like a shuttle, she wove a web of influence that will not fade or wear out. Her works do follow her.

Her bodily affliction was long and trying; but quietly she waited in patience till the end came. Her last months were spent in Lakeview Hospital in Suffolk with some member of the family always at her side. When the end came she was carried back to her church for the last rites of love. The large congregation felt the community loss and the heart of the church throbbled with deep emotion as the choir sang the songs she loved to sing. Then the loved form was laid to rest in Central Hill cemetery, and the bereaved ones went to their homes. Everybody said she was a dear, sweet girl, so useful in Sunday school and church. Such is life, love, and home. The whole gamut of the soul is touched by life, love, and home. The closest institution to heaven is the Christian home; and the nearest institution to hell is a wicked home. The sweetest memory of a departed one is that she was a Christian and the bitterest memory of a departed one is that she died without hope. The summit of all summits is the mound over a Christian grave; and the crown of all crowns is the flowers that cover such a grave. Such was the grave of Nellie Chapman. Giddy people may waste their time and energy on the varieties of the world, but wiser spirits will seek to make their calling and election sure.

NORFOLK CHURCHES AND FRIENDS

Saturday, February 8, found the writer with the Woman's Board for Missions of the Eastern Virginia Conference in session at Franklin, Va. What a splendid day it was! Great and good plans were laid for the future, and there will be fruits from that day's session. Among the items on the program adopted was that the Board would raise $1,200.00 a year beginning with the present year, with which to support a missionary; this to be in addition to the regular work the Board is now doing. Owing to the influenza epidemic last fall, the women of this Conference did not hold their annual session, but it was decided to hold a session early in April to lay plans for the remainder of the year.

Sunday found the writer, with Brother J. F. Morgan, pastor First church, Berkley, Norfolk, Va.. Brother Wiggs, the long time and wide awake superintendent, was in charge of the Sunday school. It was suggested that the school study missions one Sunday per month, at the regular Sunday school recitation period and the school may adopt this.

There was a splendid audience present for the eleven o'clock preaching service. It was easy, and a privilege also, to speak on missions to that congregation. Brother Morgan has the missionary vision and his fervor is contagious. His evening congregation was even larger than that of the morning, and attentive to the missionary message. In canvassing, next day, for missionary funds not a member seen declined to donate or subscribe and the pledges soon mounted up to $1,775. Since then Brother Morgan has sent in other subscriptions of $200.00 and he hopes to reach $2,000.00—only lacking one $25.00 subscription now. The writer has not anywhere found a people more ready, willing and anxious to give to our growing and needy missionary fund than these of our good Berkley church.

Sunday afternoon Brother L. E. Smith was installed as pastor of our Third church. Both Brother Morgan and the writer were present and had some part in the delightful exercises. It is needless to say that our Third church people are more than delighted with their new pastor and his amiable wife. Both people and pastor's family are happy. There is a great task ahead of this church and the feeling is everywhere prevalent that Brother Smith is capable of grappling with the great problem and solving it. The writer expects to see the Third church, Norfolk, honored before many months in one of the handsomest and most inviting buildings anywhere to be found in our Convention. The Third church deserves it; they are anxious; and by God's good help they are willing and able.

It was a day of delight in Norfolk. Our Christian cause goes well and is in capable hands there.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

WASHINGTON

February 11, 1919.

My dear Mr. President:—

I am gratified to know that the friends of Elon College, and it has friends wherever its large contribution of service is known, are planning a campaign to increase its endowment fund.

I have been in intimate touch with your institution since it was founded and know the character of its work and the worth of its product. It has been one of the light-houses in the educational life of our part of the country and I know that a dollar invested in larger provision for the education of the youth who may enjoy its advantages will bring large dividends and dividends which will not terminate with any period, but endure for all time.

Sincerely yours,

JOSEPHUS DANIELS.

*Dr. W. A. Harper,
President Elon College,
Elon College, North Carolina.*

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

Washington, D. C.

February 15, 1919

Dr. W. A. Harper,
President, Elon College,
Elon College, N. C.

My dear Dr. Harper:—

I have heard with much interest of your plan to launch your campaign for $125,000 additional endowment for Elon College. I have no doubt that you will succeed in raising the required sum. I regard Elon College as among the best and most useful educational institutions anywhere, and I am sure that this is the feeling among all of the people of North Carolina. I wish you to know how much I am interested in the future of your institution and to express my faith that our people, of all denominations, who are so much interested in the cause of education, will give you earnest and cordial support in your plans for even larger and wider usefulness.

With feelings of high personal esteem, and with every good wish, I am,

Sincerely yours,

F. M. SIMMONS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, U. S.

Washington, D. C.

February 15, 1919.

Dr. W. A. Harper, President,
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Sir:—It has come to my attention that you are conducting a campaign to further enlarge the endowment of your college. In this matter I trust you will be entirely successful, as I feel that your institution is doing a most excellent work along educational lines.

I consider Elon College one of the most potent forces of the South in Christian education, and wish you that unlimited measure of success, which the high ideals of your institution so richly deserves.

Yours very sincerely,

R. L. DOUGHTON.

(Congressman Doughton is not a member of the Christian Church, but he selected Elon as the college for his son.—Editor.)

A FORWARD STEP DEMANDED

I note with pleasure and interest that it has been decided to make the campaign and raise the funds necessary to increase the permanent endowment of Elon College. This is a step forward absolutely demanded by the best interests of the College and the Christian Church.

The record of achievement of Elon College and the position she has gained in the educational world is such as to arouse our pride and demand our support. Much of this has been done in spite of the serious difficulties of inadequate means to take full advantage of its enlarging field of usefulness. It deserves to be relieved of the embarrassment of the lack of or uncertainty of an income sufficient to maintain and advance its standards in keeping with the standards of our best colleges. And the call now made to the constituency which it serves we are sure will meet with gratifying response.

D. R. FONVILLE.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT

I am pleased to announce the election of Miss Helen R. Steward, A. B., A. M., of Bryn Mawr College, as teacher of history and Dean of Women in Elon College.

Miss Steward has had four years experience in Illinois Woman's College, Jacksonville, Ill. Her testimonials are excellent. They describe her a scholar of large attainment, of pleasing personality, and deep interest in the best things of life.

Miss Helen Taft, daughter of the former president, says of her: "I remember Miss Steward myself well. When she was at Bryn Mawr she was president of the Graduate Club and one of the most attractive and agreeable of the graduate women. I think you will find her admirably fitted in every way to be your Dean of Women."

Miss Steward began her work at Elon on February seventeen.

W. A. HARPER, Pres.

THE OPPORTUNITIES OF THE MINISTRY

Much is being said in this time about the call to the ministry. Much also is being said about the rewards of the ministry. I would for this once rather that the young men and women of the Church should look steadfastly at its opportunities.

I do not hesitate to say that no profession offers such opportunities as the ministry. When taken in the large and ultimate sense, the ministry embraces all that is good in the other professions less the self-interest that necessarily invades them. The minister is physician, lawyer, business man, teacher—all for his people. They go to him when they can go to no one else, and his advice is without money and without price.

But in our day the opportunities of the ministry are accentuated because of the circumstances of our life. The problems that cry for solution, the minister alone can solve. How will labor and capital ever become reconciled except a prophet sent from God speaks the message, prefaced with "Thus saith the Lord?" How will the nations live together in peace unless spiritual guidance be furnished and whence shall this guidance come? How shall the disunion of Christian forces answer their Lord's prayer in the oneness of His people unless the ministry point the way? Science and religion are arrayed against each other. Who can make science the handmaid of religion, an asset and not a liability, unless it be God's elect? How shall the religion of Jesus Christ be wrested from ecclesiasticism and made the servant of the everyday life of man? How shall men learn the pervasiveness, the immanence of spirituality and forget the now too prevalent notion that it is a matter of times, places, and seasons? They will never know unless they are taught, and they will never be taught without a preacher.

The ministry is the salt of the earth. It is the light of the world. It will not only save men, but it will brighten their lives with the illumination of Heaven's brilliancy come to earth. God bless the ministry and fill it with strong, true prophets rightly dividing His word of truth.

W. A. HARPER.

MISSIONARY

HOW TO CREATE AND KEEP A LIVE AND ACTIVE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN THE CHURCH

Chapter IV—Have An Objective

In three former chapters the fundamentals of every Missionary Society that would live and be active have been treated, namely, Prayer, the Bible, Music.

We shall bear in mind now that these are fundamentals, and on that account are essential. But foundations, however well laid, are not enough of themselves, if we are to have a complete structure. Every building requires frame work and covering, and these are no whit less essential than is the foundation.

Now the writer conceives that the frame work every well organized Woman's Missionary Society is that of having a given, and a very definite, objective—an end in view, some thing or things to be accomplished.

In one of his inimitable stories Rudyard Kipling describes a very beautiful and noble ship which his vivid imagination constructed and sent to sea. But sea-worthy and comely as the great ship was, it had a hard time and rough sailing on the billows until every part of that ship one day discovered just what its function was, and what its designer intended it should do and be. Then that ship settled down to business, defied the waves, and rode bravely and proudly to its intended haven. In each part's discovering what it was there for, and what it meant to all the other parts to be just where it was and perform its function, that ship, says Kipling, found itself. No Missionary Society has safe and sure sailing, and is certainly very tame, rather doubtful and hesitating, and never defiant of dangers and difficulties till it finds itself—till each member discovers what she is there for, and what it means to the other members for her to be there. And no aimless Society, nor any members thereof, can find themselves until an objective has been specifically fixed and agreed upon.

A Missionary Society is a mighty good thing to have in the church, home and community, but just to have a Missionary Society for the sake of having one, and because others are having one, is not sufficient. In fact it is a short-sighted, not to say silly policy to have a Society on that account. Even as good a thing as a Woman's Missionary Society may be a very poor sort of a thing to have, indeed a selfish sort of thing to have. If a Society is to live and to grow it must have something to live and to grow for—it must ever have some objective in view.

As briefly as possible the following may be safely posited as objectives, or as making toward an objective.

First. To interest those not interested in world-wide missions. This, it seems to the writer, is the supreme objective, and should not be lost sight of by any members of the Society. In every community, in every church, in every Society and in well-nigh every home there are those who are not yet interested in reaching this wide world, and saving this ruined race, for and through the blessed Christ. In your attempt, however weak, to interest others in missions you will yourself become more deeply interested in this the biggest business that God or man has ever undertaken.

"Believers in Christ," says Belle M. Brain, "are not, as a rule, won in masse; neither are believers in missions. In both cases they are best 'hand-picked' Christians are frequently urged to keep prayer—lists of those they hope to win to Christ. Missionary workers would do well to keep similar lists of those they hope to interest in missions. If each worker would win one other worker to the cause each year, the evangelizing of the world would soon be an accomplished fact."

It may be the one you seek to interest is a possible member of the Society, or a possible contributor to your Society, or best of all, a possible life recruit, a real missionary. In either case you are following the very best line of self-education, namely that of learning church doing.

It is not a bad idea, now and then, for every Society to resolve itself into "A win one Society"—each member going out to get some one else to become a member. Remember that our growing depends often upon our going.

Second. To increase our own knowledge about the needs in mission lands.

We never can do much for any cause until the need is laid upon our hearts. God had the power to evangelize China, India and Africa a hundred years before Morrison, Cary, or Livingstone were born, but He did not release that saving and evangelizing power until these human beings felt the sore need of the great task, and from the depth of their knowing minds and anxious heart cried out, "Lord earnest thou not that we perish?" Felt and expressed human need is the one essential medium of communication between God's power and man's dependence. When we acquaint ourselves with human needs we open up the avenue, all the way from heaven to earth, from God to man, for the relief of that need. Let the Society learn missionary needs if it would be a power in God's hands as a missionary force.

Third. To have some goal for our giving. Each Society should by all means seek to get and to give for something. Where our treasure goes there will our heart go also. One reason why some Societies have such little heart in their work and for their task is because they put such very little of their treasure into it. Have a goal to achieve in the giving.

J. O. ATKINSON.

OTHER HEROES ALSO

All honor to the brave and fearless sons who have fallen on the fields of France to make the world safe for democracy. They have gone to their death like men and have made the supreme sacrifice for their country.

And then there are other heroes. We shall not forget them either. The ages on ages to come will not forget them. I was reading today the resolve that held one such to his heroic cause, and the motive that prompted his brave life. It was a missionary who laid down his life on the Congo, and this was his resolve:

"In this enterprise of winning Africa for Christ there must be, I know, much of what the world calls loss and sacrifice, and it may be that many will fall in the blessed work of foundation building only; but what of that? To have any share in this noblest of all toil, however humble or obscure, be it only heaving wood or drawing water, is, surely, honor and privilege any servant of Christ must count and long for. I desire to go to this work feeling yet more intensely day by day, as the days pass on, that to live is Christ, and to die is gain; and if He should ordain for me early death, after a few years of humble, obscure, pioneering work only—well, it must be right; for it means early and complete satisfaction. Then shall I be satisfied, when I awake in Thy likeness."

Samuel Boggs—Find enclosed my renewal. I just can't get along without THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

A CHALLENGE

We did not reach our first thousand in February as we had hoped to do, but we did not lack much.

Our good ladies are taking an interest in re-furnishing our building and it is real good of them. We can always count on the ladies. We received a letter last week from a good sister who said that the Ladies' Aid Society in her church would furnish one room. We have Ladies' Aid Societies enough in our Church to re-furnish our building and they would be the better for it. If the ladies will furnish the building I will see to it that the men do the painting, that is much needed, and the repairs on the building.

Let us get busy and see who the next will be to take a room. Our Orphanage work ought to grow and our people ought to begin to see the great work that is to be done for the Master through this Institution.

I had the pleasure last year of visiting some of the large Orphanages of the South, and as one superintendent was showing me around the premises he would come to a splendid building and tell me that a good sister had given that as a memorial to her little daughter who died a few years ago, or that some man had given it as a monument to some member of his family.

I remember at one of these institutions I was carried through a hospital building handsomely equipped with everything needed in a building of that kind with a trained nurse to care for the sick, and the superintendent told me that one person gave that as a donation to the institution.

I wondered how many persons in our Church would like to build a monument of this kind? A monument that would give the little helpless children a kindly hand to train them to be useful in life. A kind and sympathetic mother to lay her hand upon their fever brow when sick and nurse them back to health again. Where is the man or woman who has been greatly blessed in this life with plenty and to spare, who would like to build a monument of this kind?

Last fall when we had such a scourge of the "flu" and thirty-four in bed at one time what a blessing it would have been if we had only had a hospital where they could have been cared for.

I met a man on the train a few days ago and our conversation drifted to the subject of tithing and as he was a tither and it was real interesting to hear him tell of his experience in tithing. How he had been blessed and in many unexpected ways! He was a man of great faith and believed fully that God would always carry out his contract to the letter, provided we carried out our part. If we could get our people to tithing and lend some of their income to the Lord how our work would grow in all its branches!

"IS TITHING WORTH WHILE?"

Ross Avenue Baptist Church, Dallas, Texas, Chas. D. Fine, S. S. Supt.—Organized 1908 by 62 poor working folks. Have administered $75,000; never had a collection in the church, nor a pay social, nor any schemes to raise money; just completed handsome building. Teaches tithing as standard, but not a "law" in sense of test for communion.

FOREIGN MISSIONS AND RECONSTRUCTION

(A paper read before the Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Conference at Eure's church, November 21, 1919, by Rev. W. M. Jay, and ordered published in The Christian Sun by vote of conference.)

Now that the great world war proper may be said to have come to an end, all minds and hearts that are at all interested in the results and effects of the war are turned to the even more momentous problems of the days and months and perhaps years of the reconstruction.

For the period of reconstruction upon which we are just entering is fraught with a great perplexities, as great possibilities and as great responsibilities as the period of the conflict now just ended.

The chief responsibility of the war was to see that the war once begun was won on the side of right and that victory should come to those who were the real victors. This largely depended upon the factors of strategy and strength both physical and spiritual.

But the responsibility of the work of reconstruction is to determine now not only what is best for the present new order of affairs but what shall be a glorious and fitting inheritance for future generations.

We are charged with establishing such a peace as will make wars impossible and render needless great political upheavals, yet leave every possibility for a healthy progress and development along all avenues of life. This process of reconstruction will be many sided. It will be political, economic, social, racial ethical and religious.

It is just a phase of the spiritual or religious process of the reconstruction that we are chiefly concerned with in this discussion. The work of Foreign Missions as it may be influenced by the reconstructive processes.

It is not our intention to speak in any prophetic or visionary sense but from the point of view of what appears to us as a great need and possibility viewed partly from the religious work and accomplishments during the period of the war, and still in vogue, and also from the point of view of the extension of this work to a program covering the whole broad field of church work.

Since the scope of the present war has extended to nearly every part of the non-Christian world, and since the principal nations in this war have been nations whose religious faith is Christianity, it is of interest to note not only to what extent these non-Christian peoples shall be influenced in their religious life but in what direction shall they be influenced; whether it shall be an inspiration of a new hope in Christianity with an unselfish motive, or a reaction against Christianity as a warring faith with a selfish motive, as was certainly evidenced by some of the so-called Christian nations in the war.

As we view the situation the Church has an Herculean task before her in carrying out the great commission of the Master, "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations," but with never so great and favorable an opportunity to accomplish its task as now presents itself.

In 1910 when Dr. Mott wrote his book, "The Decisive Hour of Christian Missions," he said in his last chapter on the "Possibilities of the Situation": "It is indeed the decisive hour of Christian Missions. It is the time of all times for Christians of every name to unite and with quickened loyalty and with reliance upon the living God to undertake to make Christ known to all men and to bring his power to bear upon all nations. Doors open and doors shut again. The nations are still plastic. Shall they set in pagan or Christian moulds?"

If that was the visions of Dr. Mott in 1910 that deserve our has grown a hundred times more decisive and critical at this present time.

The nations of Europe and Asia and Africa are far more plastic now than in 1910. In some cases the social economic and political orders have not only weakened but have crumbled and given away.

Is Christianity ready with its new forms to receive the costs that shall be made out of the chaos of the present world situation? The war has been won on a Christian basis. The aims and motives as repeatedly expressed have been of the highest ethical order. In every Conference, commission or tribunal these same lofty ideals should be carried out regardless of the past.

The Church should be ready or immediately get ready to launch the greatest missionary movement to reach the ultimate parts of the non-Christian world it has ever undertaken and not only the greatest it has ever undertaken but a movement sufficiently great to accomplish the task.

The war despite its torments, its horrors and bloodshed has been replete with its lessons and morals.

The Church has not been unmindful of some of these. When called upon to create a spiritual atmosphere and to supply the spiritual needs of a vast army in its making, both in the cantonments and foreign camps, the Church and all its auxiliary organizations rose up a mighty army in themselves to supply this vital need of the army.

Religious lines were not entirely obliterated but they were so completely dimmed that they stood but little in the way of the religious forces operating in the army, and navy. Ministers resigned their pastorates or secured leave of absences from their churches, laymen gave up important business and professional occupations to give their services to the Y. M. C. A., and kindred organizations in the camps.

Even Protestant, Catholic and Jewish distinctions, which perhaps were left most distinct, did not stand in the way of at least a co-ordination of the work of these bodies and to a very large degree a hearty co-operation to the same end.

You did not see in the camps and cantonments Y. M. C. A., Y. M. H. A. and K of C huts built side by side and close to each other competing with each other in the work they were doing; proselyting and aggravating old religious sores, but they were so placed where they could serve the greatest number and render the greatest service with no discriminations allowed except as the boys themselves made their preferences.

But what has this to do with Foreign Missions and Reconstruction? It means that if ever the task of winning the world for Christ in this or any other generation is accomplished, it must be done in this same harmonious, co-operative spirit as manifested by the Church in meeting the war work needs.

The Church of Jesus Christ must present a united front in order best to accomplish this great Foreign Mission task.

We have seen how the Churches in a united effort have been able to command all the millions of dollars that it has asked for and the people have responded nearly every time with a fifty percent over-subscription.

This meant a great effort and lots of work, but the results were well worth all the effort.

I believe that the Christian people would be just as enthusiastic under the leadership of a united Church to go "over the top" in providing the necessary millions of dollars for the execution of a world-wide program of Christian missions.

Local option has served well its day and just as the prohibition question has become nationalized and internationalized so must the Mission effort of the church be nationalized and internationalized in its program of work.

Denominational and Federated Missionary movements have so cultivated the soil of both Home and Foreign Missions as to give ample evidence of the success of the work, and to show that the fields are already white unto harvest. Will the Church rise unitedly to its supreme task in this grand hour of opportunity and reap the harvest for the Master? The doors stand wide open now to Christian missions.

Already splendid prospect of this unifying effort are manifesting themselves. The great Presbyterian church has issued a call to all the Protestant churches of America to send representatives to a meeting to be held in Philadelphia December 3-6 for the purposes of considering the proposal of organic union. Fourteen denominations have already accepted the invitation.

On November 15 three separate Lutheran bodies were united and incorporated in the United Lutheran Church of America.

Other steps in organic union have been consummated in the recent past.

At the present time the Most Rev. Meletios Hetaxikis archbishop of Athens and Primate of Greece, is in this country to learn as much as possible about Protestant Church institutions.

He told the Administrative Committee of the Federal Council of Churches that the Greek people felt very sympathetic toward the Protestant churches,—that co-operative movements seemed possible; and that the Greek Church and Protestant Church had many things in common.

He expressed a warm sympathy for Protestant Missions in the East, especially among the Mohammedan element and believe that in the main the Greek church would welcome a conference with Protestant Christians while any such conference with Roman Catholic bodies was very much in doubt.

Some one has said that W. C. T. U. and the Anti-Saloon League are the Church in action. This is at least a very practical view of the matter and surely no discredit to the Church.

On the very day that this Annual Session of Conference was convened (November 19), there was also assembled in the city of Columbus, Ohio, delegates from all over the world for the purpose of launching a movement for world-wide prohibition. It was also in Columbus, Ohio, five years ago that this same organization launched the movement for nation wide prohibition in the United States. This has been practically accomplished and a dry nation by 1920 is practically assured.

Perhaps no more important step could now be taken in the interest of Foreign Missions than the world-wide overthrow of liquor traffic. No one knows, better than the Missionary on the field, the destructive work and influence of this evil among the natives whom he is trying to help and uplift. For while he is preaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ and its saving power, some one else, and perhaps one of his own countrymen, is following in his wake, by setting up a saloon with its damning power.

There are a great many other vices and evils contributed by our Western civilization to these non-Christian nations which have not only hindered the progress of Christian missions but have counteracted much of its work.

A writer in the "Church Missionary Review" has this to say of the modern education given the youth of India. Quoting Herbert Spencer, the writer says: "The growth of intellectualization in advance of moralization has done enormous mischief." This writer contributes most of the unrest and discontent in India to our purely secular educational systems given to them. "For be it remembered," he continues, "that while there is no moral or religious teaching in the Government schools of India there is none in the home either."

As Panditi Ramabi puts it as stated in Dr. Mott's book, "The majority of the higher classes are getting Western secular education which is undermining their faith in their ancestral religion but they are not getting anything better to take the place of the old religion in their hearts and are therefore without God, without hope, without Christ, going down socially and morally and becoming very irreligious."

It would seem that a system of education such as characterizes our Western civilization, has the power to uproot the faith of the old ancestral worship, if it were tempered with the moral and spiritual teachings of the Christian religion these people would not only be intellectualized, thus being influenced to give up their old religions, but would be supplied with a knowledge of the unmortual hope and a faith in Jesus Christ that would fill that aching void in their religious life.

With a united front at home and all Christian forces harmoniously co-operating, many of these obstacles in the past can be overcome and a united effort on the foreign field will be the result and no longer will the challenge come back to us from those we are trying to convert, that the reason Christianity makes such slow progress among them is because we are not like our Christ.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Headquarters, 27 C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio

The Pastor's Place in the Forward Movement

No one has greater responsibilities nor larger opportunities in the Forward Movement than the pastor. He can hinder a great blessing from coming to his church or he may be the channel through which his church may be the recipient of great power.

Our strong preachers and men of vision have already seen what possibilities the Forward Movement has for them, and the blessings for their church if they give themselves heartily to the spirit and purpose of the Forward Movement.

The pastor is asked to organize his church on the Forward Movement basis and to appoint a four-minute man, and send his name at once to headquarters. It will be a fine thing if this Four-Minute Man can be formally set apart at a Sunday morning service. It would greatly add to the effectiveness of his work. This Four-Minute Man with the pastor will be the key men in each congregation and they should get to every family and member of the church with the detailed information concerning the Movement.

Literature and information may be secured from the Headquarters, also from the Herald of Gospel Liberty, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the Christian Vanguard, the Christian Missionary, the Sunday School Herald, the Teachers and Officers' Journal, the Sunday School Quarterly and the special leaflet literature.

We are depending on the pastors and the Four-Minute Men to thoroughly inform the congregation of the Movement, their part in the Movement and the opportunities given them, and to urge it and push it as men do in the great drives for the Government, and as enthusiastically as the men are doing in the other denominations.

The pastor and the Four-Minute Man should enlist the Superintendent of the Sunday school, the President of the Missionary Society, President of the Christian Endeavor Society and the most able, active and consecrated men and women of the congregation in the Forward Movement. The Four-Minute Man at each service should speak right to the point, full of information and enthusiasm and carry the conviction of the Movement. In this way he will be able to lead the people of any congregation to a realization of their obligation and duty, and would enlighten the people as to the Forward Movement program and the realization of its fulfillment.

A Rural Church Program

We are glad to give this week a Rural Church Program, offered by one of our strong pastors, who has given his life to the rural church work and when he speaks on rural church programs, it is well worth listening to.

Rev. W. P. Fletcher is President of the Ontario Conference and Rural Superintendent of the Ontario Sunday School Association and a member of our Mission board.

We are glad to offer his Forward Movement Program for a Rural Church, hoping it will be suggestive to many of our rural churches.

Forward Movement Program for a Rural Church

First of all let the pastor call a meeting of the Sunday school superintendent, the church clerk, the president of the Christian Endeavor, indeed his whole church cabinet, and then make a careful survey of their church field. Every rural church should actually know the field it seeks to cultivate. Let us know who in our territory are going to church and who are not. Who are going to Sunday school and who are not, and probably we shall find to our horror that we are not cultivating one-quarter of our farm. When you have the facts, and be sure that they are facts, then call a meeting of the full church and lay bare to them the need of going forward.

1. DEVOTION—Start a campaign of prayer and Bible study. Establish a Home Department in your Sunday school and seek to get every family studying the Bible. Then seek to get them to take the next step and establish a family altar in every home. Arrange for a Go-To-Church Day, get other churches to join with you if you can. Do not play on this job; put it across and that means more prayer and organization. Then get back into prayer meeting, a real meeting for prayer where the people really agree together as touching that which they desire.

2. EVANGELISM—There is still a place for the old fashioned revival. Methods, of course may change, but the old plan of every one in the church seeking to save the lost. But do not depend too much on the public appeal. Go to your neighbor, your friend, your scholar, your child during the day with a personal appeal, and then make the evening rally the place for registering decisions. But also seek to get the Sunday school teachers to see that they have been a failure unless their teaching leads to decision for Christ.

3. RELIGIOUS EDUCATION—Seek to get your present staff of Sunday school teachers and officers to as far as possible become experts in their work. But that is but one side and the least important of Teacher-Training. Get the young men and women of your Senior Department of the Sunday school to begin at the age of seventeen the great process of equipping themselves for future success in the church and Sunday school. Get your Endeavorers to take up the expert course in their work. If it be at least equal importance to train the heart as the head, let us put ourselves to this job, or the head is going to run away with the heart as in the case of Germany.

4. MISSIONS—A missionary superintendent in the Sunday school. Missionary five-minutes in each session of the school, or a complete missionary program at least once a quarter. A study class for the Juniors. For instance, take them "Around the World with Jack and Janet." A study class for the Young People and the Adults. Adopt the Duplex and Every-Member Canvass System. Adopt some definite appealing missionary policy for the whole church and see that you carry it across every year.

5. BENEVOLENCE—Preach giving. Warn against the sin of covetousness or stinginess, the sin of all sins condemned in the Bible. The missionary of the past has fearfully failed here. Nothing but sacrificial giving will save many a soul from callousness, materialism and death. Teach stewardship, tithing, systematic giving. Pay up every church debt. Equip the rural church and support with at least as much thought and cost as you support the secular school system, or improve the grain growing stock raising facilities upon the farm. Surely to save the soul and life is a worth-while job.

The Forward Movement Sunday School Program

Are you already planning to start your Forward Movement Sunday School Program, beginning April first? Start the first item of the program and make your Sunday school a standard school according to your denomination and the International Association.

Each school is expected to work at the whole Sunday school program and to specialize in part, upon the different items for three months each. For instance, if you lack one or more parts to make your school a Standard School work to this point between April first and June thirtieth.

By June 30, we should have a large number of standard Sunday schools throughout our brotherhood.

Write to headquarters for Sunday school programs if you have not yet received any.

OBLIGATION VERSUS ACCOMMODATION

"Doth he thank that servant because he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not: So likewise ye when ye shall have done all these things that were commanded you, say: We are unprofitable servants: We have done that which was our duty to do." (Luke 17:9-10).

THIS is but one of many passages of New Testament scripture which teach that stewardship is matter of obligation and not a matter of accommodation. This moral and spiritual obligation applies to finance as well as to prayer and personal work. The law of God permits no man to stand as a benefactor to his heavenly Father, and he who takes that position is condemned by the above passage of scripture.

Since God owns everything which He has created, including man and his money, he has a right to all the benefits which we are to bestow. "Whether therefore ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. 10:31). We all come short of this ideal stewardship, therefore instead of being entitled to a vote of thanks from heaven, our best gifts and service should be offered in the spirit of apology, because God is not getting his dues.

Stewardship is a debt and not a donation, and any system of Church finance which reverses this divine plan is not scriptural. The free-will-offering system of Church finance is a tradition of man which makes the Word of God of none affect. Our offerings should be paid as dues rather than donations to God, lest we pose as benefactors to our heavenly Father and make Christ and his Bride objects of charity.

Christ reproved that old Jewish tradition known as the "Corban" theory of stewardship which taught that it was a gift whenever the father was profited by the son. It dishonored the parent to have a child pose as his benefactor. (Mark 7:10-13). Most Churches today have adopted the "Corban" system of financing the kingdom of Christ.

We make the word of God of none affect by a financial tradition which says; "It is a gift by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me." The tithe system does away with that tradition, for the sacred tenth is paid as a debt and not as a donation. Tithing is a matter of obligation and not a matter of accommodation. It is an acknowledgment of God's claims upon us and our substance.

After his financial claims have been honored in tithing, then free-will offerings may be added for good measure without subscribing to the Corban tradition, but to make donations the foundation of Church finance is to make the Word of God of none affect. Children must not pay their father's bills. (II Cor. 12:14). Christ must support his own Bride with his own tithe money, and not be indebted to charitable men.

"He that provideth not for his own is worse than an infidel." (I Tim. 5:8). Benevolences are scriptural and serve a noble purpose in getting those who are fortunate to aid the unfortunate, but Christ and his Bride are not unfortunates and must not be treated as objects of benevolence. Children do not donate money to their well-to-do parents. Christian stewards should not donate funds to the Landlord of whole earth.

Our give-what-you-please system of Church finance has placed a wrong construction upon the fundamental law of stewardship. It has placed the money-giver in the position of a philanthropist toward God when he should have taken the attitude of servant of Christ. The average money-donor in the church has so lost sight of the meaning of stewardship that he feels that his own financial rights are superior to any of the claims of Christ upon his income.

God has ordained that offering money to Christ shall constitute an act of worship by setting forth God's ownership and philanthropy. The payment of tithe rental sets forth God's ownership, and his giving us the use of the nine-tenths sets forth his philanthropy. On the other hand the donation system divides the worship of God's house by offerings which bestows credit and praise upon the contributors.

True tithing is offering the first tenth or the first fruit of all our increase, thus making God first and self secondary in our business life. Any act which honors the God-first principle is an act of true worship, for the God-first principle is the first law of heaven. Our "give-what-you-please" tradition or custom is a self-first law of finance and is self-worship.

Cain started this system of finance by an offering which made self-first and God last. His offering was a donation given as a matter of accommodation. Abel had the eye of faith to see that the owner of the earth had a right to the first and best and so he offered the first fruit of his increase which was acceptable unto God. Abel's offering was that of a faithful steward who realized his financial obligation to his heavenly Landlord. Blood was not required in such stewardship offerings, but God required that the gifts of men be offered in the spirit of worship.

MISSION STUDY IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

There are several ways in which the school, or any class in the school, may study missions, and yet keep up with the regular lesson. The writer's opinion, from the experience of many schools, is that the best and most practical method of coming at it, is for the school to have one Sunday in each month as "Mission Study Sunday." On that Sunday let the school proceed as on other Sundays in all the opening exercises, reading the lesson in concert, or in class, as on other Sundays. As soon, however, as this is over, class roll is called and the class is ready for recitation then for the whole study period of thirty minutes, let each class of the school, or as many classes as have decided to do so, take up the missionary lesson for the day that was assigned the month previously. A book may be had for 35 or 40 cents that will do for a class for six months or a year, and adapted to any class of the school.

In answer to an appeal sent out recently to all our Sunday school secretaries, many of our schools are adopting this method, and many others will do so, we are assured. No people can become a real missionary force and factor in the world until they know something from actual study of missionary needs and opportunities. And there is no better place to teach and learn missions than in the Sunday school.

It is certainly a joy to learn that so many of our schools are beginning to study missions. It means greater and better things for us in future.

A Happy Sunday School

A month ago our Burlington Sunday school voted to support a missionary at a salary of $720.00 a year. This meant that the school must contribute as a special missionary offering of $60.00 per month. The third Sunday morning of each month was decided upon as the time to take the offering. There was a feeling that the school would hardly contribute the full $60.00 on the first Sunday of the experiment; but there was hope, and there was prayer that it would come after a few months to do so. But God always does better by us than we expect when we pray earnestly and trust Him. Now read this from Pastor Harrell's letter, written on Monday, February 17: "We had a great day Sunday. The best I have seen since we came to Burlington. There was a new note in the Sunday school and church services. When we had the results of the voluntary offering for the support of our missionary our hearts were made glad indeed. Our fondest expectations were surpassed. A smile of gladness passed over the entire school when the Secretary read out $65.67 for our missionary. We believe this is an indication of what may be expected from month to month. The third Sunday has been designated as mission day in our school and upon that day the offering will be taken each month."

Surely this was a cause of gladness and a source of joy to our good Burlington people.

The resources of God are available only to those who undertake the program of God.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR A BLESSING TO THE HOME

Among the many beautiful testimonies as to what Christian Endeavor had meant to the various members of the Society in the church of which I have the honor of being pastor, which testimonies were given in the society prayer service on February 2, as we were celebrating the birthday of Christian Endeavor, one has so impressed me that I want to pass it on.

It was the testimony of a man of very few words, but a man who loves his church, his home, and his Savior. A man who never misses a service at his church, if it is possible for him to be present. His testimony was that he was grateful for Christian Endeavor because it had been such a blessing to his family, in that it had brought the members closer together, made them love each other better, and the home had been brightened, and sweetened through the influence of our Christian Endeavor society.

The man who gave this glowing tribute to the work of our Christian Endeavor Society was Brother Jackson Harris, one of the loyal members of our Society, and a staunch member of the First Christian church. If parents would, like Mr. Harris, attend a Christian Endeavor Society with their children, my prediction is that there would be many more happy homes than there are at present. Then for what Christian Endeavor means to our home, and to our individual lives, and to the cause of our Christ, let us give it our hearty support in every way possible, and in this way we will be able to brighten many lives and homes that may now be grouping in the fog and gloom of a misdirected, or misguided life.

CANCER TREATED SUCCESSFULLY AT THE KELLAM HOSPITAL

The record of the Kellam Hospital is without parallel in history, having restored, without the use of the knife, Acids, X-Ray or Radium, over ninety per cent of the many hundreds of sufferers from cancers which it has treated during the past twenty-two years. We want every man and woman in the United States to know what we are doing.—KELLAM HOSPITAL, 1617 W. Main St., Richmond, Va.

Twenty Strong Men Needed Immediately

That is what our Convention said

Why?

That the Christian Church may have ministers to do its part of the Kingdom's work.

For several years now the number of candidates for the ministry has been gradually decreasing. Elon is anxious to train the men, but cannot unless they be sent.

How?

We must pray the Lord of the harvest and He will give us the men.

Let us do it.

STRONG, FORWARD LOOKING YOUNG MAN, have you considered the opportunities of the Ministry? GOD NEEDS YOUR LIFE.

1. To save men from sin.
2. To evangelize the non-Christian lands.
3. To harmonize labor and capital.
4. To bring universal peace to the world.
5. To reconcile science to religion.
6. To break down ecclesiasticism.
7. To help answer Jesus' prayer for the oneness of His followers.
8. To help Christianize all the relations of life, including the social order.
9. To be the interpreter of God in His world.

Great and exalted work—this!

Is the spirit stirring your heart to action? Quench not the Holy Spirit.

Let the Church

Be much in prayer that God may find us worthy of the needed laborers and send them to us.

Report all decisions

To Pres. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C., who will do all in his power to arrange for the training of the men.

Faults—Perfection

REAT and good men have through all ages severed their connection with parties, organizations, and religious bodies because of faults and failures of such. A man ought to have a right to his convictions about things. It does not become any man to keep himself connected with things that are not right, but few of us would belong to anything if we waited for perfection. And leaving an organization of any kind is no way to remedy its faults. Strive to place something better where faults abound. Condemn not the whole on account of any one defective part.

EDITORIAL

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS—THE COVENANT

There is no political prompting which impels us to discuss the League of Nations. The issue is world-wide, touches every group of men, every individual, and is, if properly carried out, for the safety of all mankind. The issue touches religious life and church programs on every hand. Every denomination ought to be intensely interested in the outcome of the Peace Conference and the League of Nations.

For lack of space we cannot print in full the twenty-six Articles that constitute the Covenant of the League of Nations. The following are the essential ones in an abstract form:

Freedom of the seas is promised.

All future international treaties must be registered with the society.

Old treaties inconsistent with the society will be abrogated as soon as the society comes into official life.

War or threat of war, whether between two nations members of the society or not, is declared a matter of concern to the society, and the powers reserve the right to interfere in all disputes that cannot be settled through ordinary diplomacy.

The first meeting of the society of nations shall be summoned by the President of the United States.

There shall be full and free interchanges between the nations in the society upon military and naval programs.

A permanent commission shall be appointed to advise the society on disarmament and on military and naval affairs generally.

Plans for a permanent international court of justice shall be worked out by the executive council.

The society shall consist, in addition to the delegates from the various powers, of the executive council and a permanent secretariat which shall be maintained at the seat of the society.

Each high contracting party shall have one vote, but shall not have more than three representatives at any one time.

The expenses for maintaining the secretariat shall be apportioned among the powers.

Admission to the society (outside of the signatory powers) requires the assent of two-third of the States represented.

Armaments shall be reduced to the lowest point consistent with national safety.

There shall be self-government for parts of the Turkish Empire.

There shall be freedom of religion for peoples in territories under mandates.

Contracting parties shall "endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women, and children" in all countries.

Amendments may be made to the constitution.

The day when a nation could go to war with another nation and not bring a vital issue to the whole world is past. We have come to realize that a war with one nation is a war touching all society. This is a growth of conscience. It is the broadening of the idea that the man who lives next door to us is not our only neighbor. It is a sign that there is being awakened in the consciences of mankind that injunction of Jesus to make disciples of all nations. It is a fulfilling of that true word of God that we are our brother's keeper, and that all are brethren.

The man who commits murder insults society at large as well as the home he saddens. The nation that takes up weapons to kill, and does kill, infringes upon the rights of other nations as well as the nation in immediate danger. This was what caused America to go to the aid of the allied nations against murderous Germany. No nation can fight with a higher motive than, to liberate mankind without the desire of "a strip of land or a stretch of sea."

The compact that nations are to sign (if the League is formed) means this: That they (the nations) are to league themselves together to avoid war. All nations in the League are to be kept informed as to the impending issues, work together for international relationship that will bind themselves together, maintain and approve an international court, agree to submit their troubles to a council and counsel with each other on all national disputes.

The League of Nations is to have sufficient machinery to bring a nation to justice. In short it will have sheriff and a court, and a nation will be tried just an individual is tried. And should a nation, either member or not a member of the League, declare war upon another nation without the consent of the League will have a hard time.

As we see it the League of Nations is one of the greatest things the world has undertaken. Its plan now may not be infallible—it may take years to work out its best platform, but it deserves the support of every peace-loving citizen. Those who condemn it have not offered anything better. Their criticism stands as destructive until they make constructive by a better plan.

BOLSHEVISM—ITS CRIMES

This sentence appeared in our editorial on Bolshevism last week: "The spirit of Bolshevism is with the heart and not the stomach." See if this is true.

On February 12 Dr. George A. Simons, who returned from Russia last October, after many years of residence in Petrograd as superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Mission, testified before a Committee of the United States Senate as to the crimes of the Bolshevik rule.

We quote direct from the records of the Senate Committee:

Murders Number Thousands

Dr. Simons told of witnessing the murder of two young men in front of his office in Petrograd, the killing taking place a few minutes before Ambassador Francis, who was his dinner guest that night, arrived at his home.

Asked to estimate the number of persons who had been murdered by the Bolsheviks Dr. Simons replied that it was in the thousands, but that no man could at this time even approximate the number of the victims.

"The Bolsheviks never investigate. They kill on the spot, as a rule," he added.

Dr. Simons cited the case of two brothers. One was wanted by the Bolsheviks to answer a certain charge. They were unable to find the brother, sought, so they killed the one against whom there was no charge or suspicion.

Blackmail and graft were everywhere recognized, said Dr. Simons. If a person could get the money, he said, it was generally possible to buy even one's life from the present regime. However, few had the money and the killings went on. He said that twelve men entered his home and tried to blackmail his sister.

"What about the criminal element in the present regime?" Senator King asked.

"There is a large criminal element in the Bolshevik regime," was the answer. "The fact that the criminal has a big part in the movement is proved by the destruction in a public bonfire of court records, the destruction of prisons and the liberation of all criminals, who are sympathetic with the cause. We know it to be a fact that some of the worst criminal characters in all Russia hold positions under the Bolshevik government, while others are helping as agitators, while under the damnable system they call nationalization the criminal is actively co-operating."

Girl Victims of Atrocities

"What of the treatment of women and girls?" Senator King asked.

"That is a terrible question to answer. I might cite case after case in answer to it. Let me cite one of the worst.

"A few days before I left Petrograd, in October last, a woman of the highest culture, a woman more than fifty years of age, and a teacher for years in a famous imperial institute for the education of young girls, called on me. She was in hysterics. 'Why have I lived to see all this?' she sobbed.

"Then she told the story. The institute in which she taught is one of the finest buildings in Petrograd. She said that the Bolshevik authorities had barracked hundreds of the Red Guard in one wing of the building and in doing so issued orders that all girls of and between the ages of sixteen and eighteen years were to remain in the building.

"I wish," the poor woman exclaimed, as she tried to tell the rest of the horrible story, 'that I had died before this thing happened.'"

"And," said Senator Wolcott, "was the result not of the act of irresponsible guards, but of the Bolshevik authorities?"

"Yes."

"In other words," said Senator King, "these poor little girls were the victims of the lust of these unspeakable creatures?"

"Yes, of the dirtiest pigs the world has ever seen. So vile no words can describe them."

We deem it our duty as a trustee or steward of the press to place such things before the people in a time like this when conditions are adjusting themselves. In our own land such movement have friends. Such a movement is liable to cause more serious trouble than it has caused. The world wants peace—lasting peace. World leaders are endeavoring to create a co-operative order in which to live and enjoy lasting peace.

Public sentiment is the strongest law in the land, and it behooves Christian men and women everywhere to create a sentiment against movements that take law and order into their own hands.

In this country we have many things that are in the first stages, and the Church has upon it a task to see that moral justice is carried into the things of the new order.

THE "CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS"

In response to numerous requests, committees from the General War-Time Commission of the Churches have made a careful study of the attitude of the Government toward the "conscientious objectors." In their study of the situation, conference has been had with several groups especially concerned in the question, with the War Department, the Department of Military Morale, and various other authorities. The report as adopted by the Executive Committee of the General War-Time Commission of the Churches is as follows:

"1. It is our firm conviction that no government has made a more serious effort to deal fairly with conscientious objectors and to allow freedom in the exercise of the individual conscience than has the United States in the present war.

"2. It seems clear, however, that a considerable number of men have been treated with undue severity, in a few cases even with brutality, by certain of the military authorities. We are glad to know that the War Department has now taken steps that have relieved the situation. The cases of brutal treatment have been due, in the main, to the policy of certain army officers, who believed the conscientious objectors to be insincere and who held unreasonable and extreme views as to what is required by military discipline.

"3. The great majority of conscientious objectors were declared by the Government after investigation to be honest and sincere in their convictions. The majority also accepted non-combatant service in the army or other work of a non-military character.

"4. There are at the present time approximately 400 conscientious objectors in the military prisons in the United States, serving sentences of from five to thirty years, including both men who believe all war to be wrong and those who believe this war to have been unjustified. There are also in local jails or Federal prisons several hundred others who have been convicted under the Espionage Act for making statements contrary to the war policy of the Government."

"5. Now that hostilities have ceased, we believe that these imprisoned conscientious objectors who are beyond question sincere should be granted amnesty at the time of the signing of the Treaty of Peace. After the war is over and the danger of a division is past, the best interest of democracy will not be served by carrying out further punishments against those who honest convictions differed from the majority during the days of the war. To punish them further in times of peace would set an unwholesome precedent in a nation that has always emphasized the principle of the freedom of individual conscience.

"6. We believe further that the whole question of the treatment of political offenders in time of war should be reconsidered by Congress under conditions which make an unprejudiced judgment possible, and that a distinction should be made between those whose offense is loyalty to their own conscience, however mistaken the majority may believe that conscience to be, and those who have been guilty of criminal offences."

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

DURHAM LETTER

In the midst of varied and singular experience our church has enjoyed a steady advance. Although our doors were closed for more than four weeks our hearts were open and responsive to the many calls of sympathy, and our vision was clarified and we have been able to look into the most commonplace affairs of life. It is true we have done nothing worthy of special mention. Neither have we been so heroic that we are entitled to the Croix de Guerre; but our achievements have been satisfactory, and in some respects exceeded our high Lopes.

During the year the church and all of its auxiliaries raised $3,258.06, besides the many special class offerings in the Sunday school for the poor and other purposes. We also raised in cash and subscription about $2,500.00 on the home and foreign mission fund, of which Dr. J. O. Atkinson is champion, and have a number of paid-up memberships in the Home Missionary Association. But we would not be misunderstood. Money is not a test of achievement, but it is essential. Money is a blessing when used as a servant, but a curse when hoarded and hailed as a master. It is powerful when placed on the altar of God and humanity; it is pitiful and impotent when allowed to remain in the safe unused and undedicated.

We are expecting fruitful results from the service which was held in our church last Sunday (February 16). The writer presented "The Lord's Labor Problem" and was gratified, and felt amply repaid for his efforts, when he saw eighteen people stand and say they were willing to give their lives to the ministry or the missionary work if God should call them.

R. F. BROWN.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Will and Lizzie married young. Their youthful love matured in life devotion. Three children added strength to their union. One died in infancy. Willie and Mary remain to comfort the bereaved mother. W. E. Brinkley had served as Chief of the Suffolk Police force for many years, and had won the love of his associates. His official career had been faithful and tragic. Several times he had been wounded in the discharge of his duty; but no danger deterred him from the performance of his obligation as the custodian of public order. He had the gift of a detective, the courage of a soldier, and the human feeling of a tender citizen. He gave his life to the cause of temperance, being shot by a colored man with illicit whisky. Both were carried to the same hospital and Chief Brinkley pled for good treatment of his slayer while he himself was dying. Both of them died and answered at the same judgment. That is the tragedy of the liquor business—that good men must die in the discharge of public service.

Few chiefs in any city had such loyalty among the members of the police force as he had. They all knew that he was true to the community and to them. He trusted them and they trusted him. He treated female prisoners with marked consideration. It became necessary, at times, to arrest women who were cheek-flashers; and he would rent a room for such prisoners at the hotel and spend the night in the lobby on guard, rather than put them in the lock-up; yet he never failed to bring to the court any who were charged with crime. He combined the elements of stern justice and tender mercy.

In his home he was affectionate and faithful. No want was neglected and no service was omitted. His home was his citadel. Here his heart found rest from crimes and criminals. His wife and children rise up and call him blessed. He assured his companion that he was not afraid to die. He was a member of the Suffolk Christian church. Often public duty required his absence from worship; but religion often expresses itself in serving the community. The policeman who tramps all night in the storm to guard the safety of life and property is not valued as he should be by those who sleep in comfort. The unseen servants of society are often forgotten by men; but they rank high on the ledger of human values. The keepers of order in a city are worthy of our prayers and our gratitude. The night-watchmen guard the mills and the shops that keep labor and markets.

Chief Brinkley's wife, who was the late Deacon Junius S. Carr's daughter, has been one of the sweet singers in our choir and has comforted many weepers by her solos at funerals. This bereavement may deepen her feelings, sweeten her tones, and enrich her songs of praises. Many lives have been made more useful by great sorrows. The crushed rose releases its fragrance.

December the third, 1918, the great throng gathered in the church—city officials, church members, citizens in large numbers, friends and family—all in one common sorrow. The whole community felt that a martyr lay under that pile of flowers. The value of his life had hardly dawned upon us till they reported that W. E. Brinkley was dead. His virtues, his value, his service loomed up with new beauty, new worth, and new importance.

W. W. STALEY.

THE NEED FOR MORE MINISTERIAL STUDENTS

Allow me to call to the attention of the readers of our church paper a paragraph taken from the "Report of the Board of Education," which was read and adopted by the Southern Christian Convention during its April 30, 1918 session:—

"A few years ago the College counted in one year forty-four ministerial students. This year we enrolled only twenty-two, and but seven of these came from our own church. We regard it a solemn duty to urge upon this Convention that it take reassures to replenish the leadership of our pulpits. Our ministry is our hope. Without ministers our noble cause must lie prostrate. No more vital question faces this session of the Convention. The College is anxious to train men, but the Churches and Conferences must send them up."

There is enough couched in that paragraph to bring every true member of our church to his or her knees. From 44 to 22, and only 7 of them from our church!

Think of it! Meditate upon it. Pray over it. When the kingdoms of the earth wanted political liberty they mobilized armies upon armies to gain it at whatever cost. Now when the whole earth is in need of that freedom which comes by the Truth shall the Kingdom of Christ be handicapped on account of the lack of men? Brethren, we are God's recruiting officers aided by the Holy Spirit we must secure the needed army. Let fathers and mothers, brothers and sisters, ministers and laymen pray the Lord of the harvest,—let us be in earnest.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

News Ferry, Va.

HOLLAND, VA.

We gave up the work of the Y. M. C. A. in Richmond, Va., September 15, 1918, having received and accepted the call to the pastorate of the Holland and Holy Neck Christian churches in the Eastern Virginia Conference.

We arrived on the field September 17, and without formalities proceeded to occupy the parsonage. Our household goods had arrived a short time before and had been placed in the parsonage.

I have moved my family several times but this is the first time that we ever moved into a house and found a large pantry well stocked with hams, flour, lard, sugar coffee, potatoes, cornmeal, tea, rice and various other articles of diet.

Hooverizing was evidently overlooked in stocking the parsonage pantry, presumably leaving the matter of Hooverizing to the pastor and his family in the use of the stock, which was carefully done.

The work at both churches started off with bright prospects but just as suddenly were we enveloped in the scare of the Influenza which has to the present time handicapped the work very greatly. During the first attack Holland and surrounding territory were worse off from the scare than from the "Flu," there being but few cases, but in the second wave of the plague the whole field has yielded to the attack which is only now abating in an appreciable degree. Fortunately we have suffered but few deaths. Yet since coming to this work we have officiated at twelve funerals.

Holland and Holy Neck are two strong rural churches and each church is blessed with splendid lay talent and a still larger talent leadership which if brought to the front will greatly strengthen the work of each place.

Both churches may be likened the horse that does not realize its strength and hence is held in by a very small rein. The people are generous and willing to follow a leader. They have a desire to be front rank churches which gives the pastor ample work to keep something worth while before them.

As an example of the generosity of these people we cite the instances of the World War Work Drive when Holy Neck responded to the amount of $905.00; then came the Thanksgiving Offering to the Orphanage which amounted to $197.00, a part of which was contributed through Mr. J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va. One hundred dollars was given to the Armenian and Syrian Relief; on another Sunday a charitable offering of $32.00 was given to one of the needy members of the Church. In like manner the Holland church gave $364.00 to the War Work Fund; $171.00 to the Orphanage; $23.00 to one of its members whose home and all contents were recently burned; and at our next regular service an offering will be taken for the Armenian and Syrian Relief Fund.

The new church at Holland to cost about $25,000 is to be a modern brick structure. It is already under roof and plastered and will be completed some time during the summer. At present the congregation is worshipping in the school auditorium.

The pastor is preaching a series of sermons on the Forward Movement and making good use of the Forward Movement literature. Splendid interest is being manifested. At Holland we have a Christian Endeavor Expert class of 12 members which has given new life to the Society.

W. M. JAY.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Some of our pastors are placing the Forward Movement program and hand design on their stationery. That will be helpful.

Are you using the Forward Movement song in your church and institute work? It will help.

A number of our pastors are preaching on the five points of the Forward Movement Campaign and following the Sunday sermon with the same one of the points at the mid-week service so that there is opportunity by the people for special prayer and discussion of the theme after the pastor has preached upon it. That is fine.

Forward Movement Rally at Lebanon, Ohio

The rally of the Bethany, Gemtown, and Fellowship churches in the large hall at Lebanon Ohio was a most delightful occasion, February 18. A supper preceded the Forward Movement program. The orchestra furnished splendid music for the evening. Pastor, Rev. E. D. Hammond was in charge. Rev. McD. Howsare spoke on "The Forward Movement's Challenge to the Men of Our Churches"; Mrs. Athella M. Howsare on "Our Women Utilizing the Forward Movement in their Work"; Rev. J. F. Burnett, D. D., on "The Place of Prayer and Money in the Forward Movement"; The Superintendent on "The Forward Movement and the Christian Church." The fine attendance, the intense interest, the delightful fellowship and the strong messages all made the impression most helpful and those churches are determined to be a very part of the Forward Movement. A good delegation from the Franklin church was present too. The Forward Movement song was used.

We urge our pastors and workers to arrange Forward Movement rallies in all the conferences.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

ELON COLLEGE STANDARDIZATION FUND

A standard college is one that has been tried by the proper test. It is one that meets an established rule or model.

To standardize is to make to conform to a rule or standard. As to scholarship, faculty, physical equipment, and number of students, Elon College has met the established rule or model laid down for a standard college; but according to certain rules laid down by some States, a standard college must have at least $200,000.00 endowment. To meet this financial rule as laid down by certain States, Elon needs an additional endowment of $125,000.00; hence the Board of Trustees decided to ask for $125,000.00 to met this requirement and other needs of the College; and they asked Dr. W. A. Harper, president of the College to take charge of the campaign for raising the said amount. He has wisely and cheerfully accepted the responsibility. I do not say task—let us make it a joy.

It is not for any one man or set of men or women that this $125,000.00 is to be raised; but for the College, for the Church, for humanity, for the Master Teacher—Jesus of Nazareth.

As a member of the Board of Trustees, its secretary, and as a minister and member of the Christian church, I bespeak for the representative of the College in the raising fo this Standardization Fund, a courteous reception, a prayerful hearing, and a hearty and liberal response.

P. H. FLEMING,

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION

(Eastern Virginia Conference)

The world war has demonstrated the necessity for Christian education. Culture has failed in Germany as it failed in ancient Greece. True education embraces head, hand, and heart; and the principal thing is heart. Science is of the head; art is of the hand, and character is of the heart. Science deals with law, art with matter, and character with spirit. These three enter into education, but the greatest of these is spirit. Human sympathy has more value than human knowledge. Knowledge is power, but love is salvation.

The motto of Elon College, "Christian Character First and Always," challenges the faith and support of this Conference. Her alumni have proved themselves in school, in business, in church, in pulpit and in war. The four hundred stars on the service flag twinkle with patriotism, while her unit is training for war against wrong. Few colleges have such a reputation as Elon won in so short a time and under such financial strain.

We recommend to the churches of this Conference the Institution, and earnestly request that men and women subscribe liberally to the Endowment Fund of $125,000.00 which the Southern Christian Convention and the Board of Trustees have authorized President Harper to raise the coming year.

We recommend the ordination of Rev. Edward Thomas Cotten, who has served Isle of Wight C. H., Windsor, Mt. Carmel and Mt. Zion churches during the past year, and has been recommended for ordination.

Rev. D. F. Parsons, Army Branch of Y. M. C. A., Chattanooga, Tenn., who was licensed by the last Conference, and Revs. L. L. Lassiter and J. M. Roberts have paid their indebtedness in full, and have thus set a good example for others who have been aided in their education by the Educational Fund.

The following names are on the list as Biblical students, but none of them have indicated to the Committee their plans or purposes: C. W. Rountree, G. L. Huber, Floyd D. Ballard, Wm. A. Brinkley. Such indifference discourages and retards progress in ministerial education, but it should not lessen our effort in the good work.

The Committee recommended the licensure of Wilbur H. Baker of Newport News church, as a war measure and under the advice of the church and pastor, J. V. Knight, and Executive Committee, gave him certificate of licensure in December 1917.

REPORT ON EDUCATION

(Georgia and Alabama Conference)

The Church is facing a splendid opportunity and a fearful responsibility. The masses are being educated and in order to hold them to the Church, we must have an educated leadership. We need this in the pulpit, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. We need men and women not only trained in literature, but with special training for their religious work. We can not secure this in our high schools nor State schools. We must look to religious institutions for this training. We heartily recommend Elon College to our people and hope to see more of our people patronize it. We still cherish the hope that some day, not far off, we may have a school nearer our work here. We make the following recommendations:

1. That we raise $75.00 another year.
2. That Brother C. W. Hanson be ordained to the office of an Elder.
3. That the names of Elders and Licentiatees who fail to report for two consecutive years be dropped from our roll.
4. That Brother W. D. Wilkerson and Miss Ophelia Miles be licensed for one year.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION*

"Jesus Began Both to do and to Teach." Acts 1:1.

Three questions concern us at this time.

1. What is Christian Education? Christian education is more than any course of study or curriculum. It is education based on the fundamental principles of Christianity, and these are the fundamental things in the life and teaching of Christ. Reduced to the final analysis they are two—the right relation of a man to God as Father and the right relation of a man to man as brother. It is education by Christian people in a Christian atmosphere and for a Christian purpose.

2. What Will Christian Education Do? It furnishes a foundation that makes all education worth while. It is the philosopher's stone that transmutes all baser metals into gold. All professional or technical education having as its basis the relation of man to God and his fellowman as exemplified in Christ, becomes Christian.

Christian education gives a man the right intellectual attitude—the right attitude toward truth because the right attitude toward the Author of truth. This gives inspiration to scholarship and makes possible its achievements. It gives the right moral attitude. Man's mission is to serve his brotherman. The right moral attitude alone can make possible the fulfillment of this mission. It furnishes the right spiritual attitude—the attitude of Jesus toward his Father, that is love, homage, obedience and trust. It unites man in fellowship with God and opens up the unlimited possibilities of earth and heaven.

3. Where can Christian Education be Obtained? There are three possible sources—the home, the church and the school. The home, the most potent of all institutions, has great limitation here. Many are godless or un-Christian. Others are too ignorant to impart religious instruction. There are others, both intelligent and Christian, that find any systematic instruction impracticable amid the complexity and strain of modern life.

The Church has a free hand with its own but its achievements in Christian education have not been commensurate with its opportunity. Much of its instruction has been dogmatic and denominational rather than Christian and its chief end has been to hold the young to the communion of their parents. The Sunday school is the Church's one organization devoted to religious instruction and this is usually Christian. It reaches the largest numbers, at the right age, and holds them for a long period. Its great limitation is that it has them only one hour in the week. It takes a man forty years to get as many hours instruction in Sunday school as he gets in college in four years.

The public school is more nearly universal than any other institution. It includes all children, compels attendance through the vital period, and has strong control; but law, as well as custom and tradition, forbid all religious instruction. For the same reason the higher state schools cannot become centers of propaganda for Christian education. Universal Christian education is yet an unsolved problem. Potent influences, however, are at work in the educational and religious world and the idea, like Banquo's ghost, will not dawn. Never to be forgotten among the influences of the past and present for Christian education is the Christian college established by Christian men on Christian principles, and taught and administered by Christian men for a Christian purpose. Limited to the few and reaching them when comparatively mature it has been the great source of supply for the Kingdom's leaders. From it has come the ministers who fill our home pulpits, the missionaries in the foreign fields, our Christian educators and other Christian leaders and teachers. These are the men and women who have kept alive the idea of Christian education and whose influence has leavened American thought until the demand for Christian education is becoming universal.

This is a great hour in the history of the Christian college. At great labor and sacrifice it kept the fires of learning burning upon its altars when there were no other institutions to do it. Our present great educational system is the result. To education it even united the Christian idea till its leaven has leavened the lump. It is beginning to see of the travail of its soul. It is the day of its achievement and victory. It is no time for the Christian college to lower its flag. Let the Christian college celebrate its victory by raising its flag to the top mark as a signal for the gathering of loyal souls to its aid that it may be freed from the impediments of the past and equipped for the opportunities and responsibilities of the future.

A WORTHY UNDERTAKING

Elon College will have the good wishes of all churches and college people in its efforts to secure $125,000 additional endowment. It would be impossible to give the colleges of the State too much support. They form an indispensable part of the educational life of the State.

Elon under the aggressive administration of Dr. W. A. Harper has taken a new stride and is doing an eminently useful work. Money invested in better equipment and facilities for Elon will be money put at a vital point in the life of the people.

The denomination behind Elon College is not one of the larger denominations of the State, but its aspirations towards the higher things make it as worthy as any of the name which it takes as its mark of identification.—Editorial, News and Observer, February 19, 1919.

THE CALL TO THE GOSPEL MINISTRY—AND AFTERWARD

The true minister is born, not made; he is called of God as Aaron was. This call cannot be defined with words perhaps, but who has it understands it, and feels that it is a life-long call.

God makes no mistakes in calling men to the ministry; and to every one thus called there comes much more of an impression than can possibly come from any dream or vision which simply holds up to the dreamer the letters "P. C." which, if seen, are more likely to mean "plant corn" than to "preach Christ."

The person whom God calls to His ministry feels emphatically as Paul did when he cried out, "Necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel!"

This "necessity" does not always lead one in the direction of the finest church building, a so-called influential congregation, and a large salary; in fact, it quite often leads toward some "Jacob's well" where there is only a very small congregation, and where the salary is barely sufficient to buy the necessary bread. But all who are fortunate enough to be led in that direction will, when they lift up their eyes, see that the fields "are white already unto the harvest."

The real Christian minister is one who has made some preparation for his work; and his work means to him—only in a higher sense—what the lawyer's, farmer's, store-keeper's means to him.

Preaching is responsible business, and it seems so strange to me that there is such an increasing demand on the part of the churches for very young men as preachers. In all other professions ripeness and maturity are called for; but too many churches are demanding blossom instead of fruit. God bless the young men! they have done, and are still doing noble work; but what a tremendous pity it is that they have to grow old, and have matured ideas, for them, in many localities they will not be wanted. But whether a minister is old or young, preaching is responsible business.

Clearly defined ideas of God and man are necessary to success, and he who gets the largest number of his fellowmen to turn their faces Godward, and keep them in that direction, is the most successful minister. The God-called minister is a preacher; not an advertisement, not a drawing-card. His work is to preach Christ and His gospel. Sensational themes, preaching simply to please the people, or to show one's self off, only reveals the shallowness of the man who does it, and his unfitness for the sacred office he occupies.

Scolding is not preaching; a scolding pastor is the worst kind of a scold; but, evidently, some ministers think that vinegar costs less than sugar; at least their sermons are seldom dipped in the sugar barrel.

The minister as a preacher will be criticized; some people want long sermons; some short; some want the fiery kind, or else they will be out of their element, not only in this life, but in the world to come; others want watery sermons; others, purely sensational; others, the opposite; some want to be yelled at, other whispered to. Criticism there will be, because there are some people in the world who are so made up that they will not do as they please if they think they will please some one else by so doing; and I am obliged to admit that these dear people are not all on the outside of our churches.

Christ's method of preaching is the method to follow. His preaching shows that time is as important as eternity; that men need something in this world as well as in the next. He preached so that old and young, learned and unlearned, received something helpful.

Preaching should stimulate thought; sermons should be limited as to time, but never finished. We cannot measure a real sermon by the clock; some men preach now in thirty minutes than others do in six months.

The wise preacher will work for, and become interested in, and the hard cases in his community; "they that are whole need not a physician," the Great Preacher said, and it is well to have a definite object to aim at before firing the gun.

The Christian minister must be a pastor. Calling, or visiting, is very necessary, and not always pleasant. By the time one goes into a dozen homes and listens to all the ailments which are common to man—from the heavy feeling at the base of the brain to the rheumatic stitch at the toe joint—he feels the need of grace to sustain. But to whom shall these things be told if not to the pastor? What is the pastor for?

The pastor receives secrets, and must keep them; he must be sociable; he must refrain from gossip, some of the members of his church will have a patent on that!

The minister's work, like a woman's, is never done;

the more he does, the more he will see to do, and the more anxious he will be to do it.

The Christian minister is a clean man, is not afraid of soap and water, the clothes brush, shoe blacking and kindred articles. Brown hands are no disgrace, but hands to which the soil is never a stranger are. This cleanliness means inside as well as outside; how a minister can present his "body a living sacrifice" when it is saturated with tobacco juice or tobacco smoke, is a problem I confess I have not sufficient wisdom to solve. Hence, I believe the time has fully arrived when ordination should be refused to any person who thinks more of tobacco than he does of the Christian ministry.

The minister should be clean in his speech; fun, wit, humor, rightly used, are so far removed from the low, dry-goods-box, language, that there is no comparison.

The Christian minister is natural in his work; there is some little excuse for a monkey which imitates, but none for a minister. God wants and the world needs men, not imitators. How many sensible people have turned away in disgust because of the airs put on by ministers! Because a man wears a long coat, a long hat, and a face longer than either, it does not necessarily follow that God has put into his make-up the material which produces a successful minister. Sanctified common sense is just as necessary as a consecrated heart, and the minister who tries to work his heart without his head will always be unnatural, and partly, if not wholly, a failure.

The position of the Christian minister is very different from what many think; he is not his own by any means. He must be ready at all times, and under all circumstances; he must be ready to answer all calls at all times, along various lines of work and, no matter how trying the circumstances, or how much he is hurried, he is expected to do his work promptly and cheerfully. He must rejoice at the wedding—whether he is sure of a fee or not; must weep at the funeral, and say nice things over some of the worst sinners the world ever saw; must be calm and careful at the bedside of the sick; must never be late at the church services or other appointments; must never "talk back" if slandered or abused; must never manifest a dislike for the "cross-grained" of his parish; must never be discouraged—his members appropriate that privilege; must preach good sermons, whether he has time to prepare them or not; must fill all vacancies caused by the absence of others in the various meetings of the church; he must be in sympathy with all improvements of the community, and in a thousand ways make himself generally useful.

He must buy books, keep himself well clothed, also his family; must pay all bills due, whether he gets his salary or not; must have his home furnished so that his people will not be ashamed of its appearance; he must give to the various calls which are religious or otherwise; and then sometimes some well-meaning people wonder why their pastor does not have money enough to buy a farm, or build a new church, or endow a college, or why his wife and children are left destitute when he dies.

But God is calling men today to His ministry, and the men so called are responding heartily and cheerfully, for they "reckon that the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in" them later. It certainly is a constant joy to know that one has been "called of God, as was Aaron," and has responded to the call.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

FIFTY CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS FAILED

We are very happy to have reached our first thousand dollar mile post for this year and have gone beyond it. Brother S. C. Hobby of Raleigh mailed us a check for $50.00 this week. Brother Hobby always remembers us each year with a check to help care for the little orphans.

We would like to get every Sunday school on our list of monthly contributors this year. I wish I could enlist every Sunday school superintendent, every teacher and every secretary as an Orphanage worker.

More than fifty churches and Sunday schools in the Southern Christian Convention did not contribute a penny, last year, toward the support of the orphan children. Still last year was our best year, financially, for the Christian Orphanage in its history. Suppose that each delinquent church and Sunday school had done its part how much more we could have done in this work?

This year we want to get this fifty on our list and we will do all we can to get them there. I would be happy and delighted to be able to report to you at the end of this year that each church and Sunday school had made contributions to help in this work.

Brother superintendent, will you see that your Sunday school makes the monthly contribution? Let us have pride enough in our church and Sunday school to want to be on the banner list.

Our friends still remember us. The following contributions have been sent in recently:

Mrs. M. E. Boyd and Miss Sarah Boyd, Richmond, Va., 9 yards table linen.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Carlton, Richmond, Va., 7 yards table linen.

Ladies of Liberty Sunday school, 4 dozen cans fruit. Junior Willing Workers, Sarem church, 1 nice quilt. Ravina Sunday school, Ravina, X. Y., 1 box containing clothing, books, dresses, etc., for the children.

For all this we are profoundly grateful.

THE CHILDREN WRITE

Dear Uncle Charley: Here comes a little boy who wants to join the band of cousins and help the little orphans. My Sunday school teacher has been telling us about them and we feel sorry for them. My teacher is Mrs. Glass. I attend the Christian church. We like our pastor, Rev. L. L. Wyrick. We were delighted to have Rev. L. I. Cox with us Sunday night. Enclosed find thirty cents, my dues for February, March and April.—Richard Bost.

We give you a hearty welcome to our corner. Hope you will write each month. Help us keep the corner full this year.—Uncle Charley.

Dear Uncle Charley: Here is my dime for February. I was twelve years old February 11. I hope the cousins are well and having a good time. It is fair here but the wind is blowing fierce around the corner of the house.—Willie Staylor.

You are beginning the new year all right. I am counting on you to help brighten the corner this year.—Uncle Charley.

Dear Uncle Charley: I will send my dime for February. I was promoted to the third grade and am eight years old. I hope you and all the cousins are well.—Mills Wellons Staylor.

You are a smart little boy. I am going to come to see you some time and tell you how proud of you I am.—Uncle Charley.

Mrs. T. W. Chandler—THE SUN this week (February 19) is indeed inspiring and filled as it is with plans and visions of greater things for our Church, delights the heart.

Mrs. J. L. Pointer—We all love to see our dear SUN shine in our home. It is a welcome visitor.

Miss S. R. Byrd—I am sure you have no subscriber who wishes you more success with our dear SUN than I and if at any time I am where I don't receive its rays, I'll subscribe at once.

Thomas Whitt—THE SUN gets better each week and I do not want to do without it.

MISSIONARY

HOW TO CREATE AND KEEP A LIVE AND ACTIVE
WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY IN THE CHURCH (IN FIVE CHAPTERS)

CHAPTER V. HAVE A PROGRAM

In the previous chapters it has been shown that the live, active Woman's Missionary Society will have, and must have, a proper regard for the Bible, Prayer and Music, as fundamentals; and, in order to build and grow, will set for itself an objective. These all have been likened in our thought to the foundations and frame work of a building. Carrying out further that figure the building must have also a covering. The program is the covering, the shelter, the protection. You can no more have a Society without a program than you can have a building without a covering.

Unless you have a roof and shingles on your building, it is open to all sorts of weather, and being exposed, soon begins to decay and go to pieces. A Society without a program is exposed to every temperament, disposition, caprice and mood that one or two members may happen at any time to have, and soon begins to crumble and fall apart. If a Society really means business it should make for itself a program from time to time covering several weeks, months or a year.

Now every program should be built upon two fundamental ideas, or rather upon one idea with two fundamental facts in it, namely: That a Missionary Society is a body and as such, like every other body, must have both food and exercise. Spiritual growth goes upon exactly the same method as physical growth, and certainly no physical body develops and flourishes upon food alone. Exercise is essential. Do not many Societies ignore this fundamental fact, and suffer its tragic consequences? I fear so.

The following is quoted from Belle M. Brain, that versatile writer of "Fifty Missionary Programs," and author of many other helpful missionary volumes: "Food of the best quality," says Miss Brain, "served in the most appetizing manner, is provided in abundance, but rarely, if ever, is there exercise enough to make it digest well. For this reason many a society that might be large and active is small and weak, and in a state of lethargy from which it seems impossible to arouse it." It is not sufficient for the Society to simply meet from time to time to study, to read, to pray, to sing. These are good; but they are food, and that only. Possibly your Society from too much food is becoming sleepy; from lack of exercise is suffering inertia, perhaps even now has indigestion.

Let me quote Miss Brain again, "In the old days God greatly blessed the work of willing hands and put a high value upon it. * * * In the building of the tabernacle there was need not only of gold, silver, and precious stones, fragrant woods, sweet spices and anointing oils, but of the blue and purple and scarlet, the fine linen and the goat's hair which wise hearted women spun with their own hands. In the building of the spiritual Kingdom of our Lord today there is a place for the work of the hands as well as of the heart and brain."

Your Society must have a program, and that program must provide for exercise as well as for food. The following order should be observed in building the program: Devotional (which includes Bible reading, prayer and music); Self-improvement and individual inspiration (which includes mission study, discussion of methods, making contributions, paying dues); Exercise, (which includes the actual doing of some missionary deed either for the home or foreign work).

If the Society will lay upon itself a program which involves those three thoughts for every meeting, there will be life, vigor and activity.

This is not as cumbersome, neither is it as impossible or as impracticable as at first it might seem. The writer imagines now he sees some anxious sister reading these lines, and hears her saying, "Well our Society has a hard time living now, and in fact hardly can exist as it is, without trying to branch out and take on all these new and complicated notions our Field Secretary is trying to hamper us with." Whereas the real fact is that many a Society is dying because obsessed with complexities. The most complex and mysterious and abnormal thing in the universe is a body trying to live and grow by caprice, by hap-hazard, by unnatural processes. These we call in physiology freaks of nature, abnormal growths, unnatural bodies. The Society that is just trying to live any sort of way is having a hard time of it; it is traveling a rough and rugged path, if travelling at all. God Himself never built a body except by the best possible of well ordered programs; and even the wisdom of good women cannot improve on God's method of successful building, growth and development.

Sufficient in previous papers has been said of two parts of the program, namely, the devotional and self-improvement; commonly involved in the "opening exercises" and the mission study. Brief space is left now for the active part of the program. Let every program contemplate doing something.

An artist learns how to paint by painting; a musician learns music by singing; the architect designs by drawing; and we learn missions by the same process. We come to know missions by being missionary. There is no other method.

If your Missionary Society is having a hard time in just trying to exist, give it something to do and see if life does not quicken. What can it do?

First. Are there no orphans to whom your Society might send boxes?

Second. Do you know of no missionaries at home or abroad to whom you might send a fine "pounding" of clothing for the family, table-linen, needle work for the busy wife and mother in the missionary home?

Third. Do you know of no families in your community where some token of esteem and consideration from your Society would do good, carry cheer, hope, sunshine and help?

Fourth. Has your Sunday school a good missionary library, all the books that it needs for the children to take out and read on the stewardship of life, money, of talents? Why not put on your Society's program of action the item of building up a missionary library for your Sunday school—giving to it the books you have studied and read in Society, and others that you know about? This writer could fill all this page with suggestions for the doing part of the program; and if any Society wishes something to do and can think of nothing, just let its members for once lift up their eyes unto the hills whence cometh all our help and say separately or in concert: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do," and see what happens.

Try the tonic of an active, vigorous program for your Society a while, and see if God does not breathe into it the breath of life so that it shall become a living soul.

Our Father's blessings upon our dear, noble, faithful women who are trying, God help them, in their modest way to build up and keep alive the Woman's Missionary Society. They are sowing seeds whose fruitage they themselves will never know but the generations to come after will feed thereon and live.

J. O. ATKINSON.

NOTES

What do you think of Brother Crampton's article?

Dr. Frank S. Child is at Elon College this week delivering his annual series of lectures.

Many subscriptions to THE SUN expired March 1. Let each subscriber whose label reads 3-1-9, renew promptly.

Out-of-town callers at the SUN office last week were: Rev. J. S. Carden, Durham, N. C., and Brother L. M. Clymer, Greensboro, N. C. We are always glad to have our friends call to see us.

Dr. P. H. Fleming leaves this week for Dover, Delaware to spend a month with the Peoples Christian church. His pulpit at Union will be filled next Sunday, March 9, by the SUN's Editor and on the fourth Sunday in March by President Harper.

We are grateful to the ministers who are sending us renewals and new subscriptions to THE SUN. So far the work of our campaign has not yielded very satisfactory results but we hope that the work in March will suffice for the whole period.

Sunday, March 9, is Mission Day throughout the entire Church. It is requested and hoped that the cause will be presented in all sections of the Zion. This does not conflict with any program already in use, but is only the day set apart for the whole Church to consider the mission interest of the denomination.

Mrs. J. H. Pierce—THE SUN has been in our home for over fifty years and I want it to shine as long as I live. I cannot do without my church paper.

A RECONSTRUCTION PROGRAM FOR OUR CHURCH

My article in The Herald of February 6, "The Call to Christian Service," has been misunderstood from two sources. At least one dear friend interpreted it to mean that I desired to eliminate God from the call to the ministry. I welcome this opportunity to state again, what I have stated so many times elsewhere, that God calls all men to His service. As I see it, absolutely none is excused. Now, whether a man or woman shall become a minister of the Gospel depends on other things than this call. It depends in part on one's fellows, and they are under obligation when so impressed to present the call to the ministry to any person whom they believe to be qualified to serve God effectively there. The strongest men of this day are holding back from the ministry for lack of this encouragement on the human side. They are red-blooded men, virile, forward-looking. They set great store by the ministry and feel themselves unequal to its claim. Properly approached these men will become the Samuels and Pauls of the next generation. And may I further say that many of the men who have offered themselves to the ministry without being sought out by their fellows have proven by their unfitness in service the error in their having been divinely summoned to the ministry?

An iconoclast of a few weeks ago declared that the trouble with the ministry is that it is called by the celestial suffrage and not the people whom it is to serve. He would have been Scriptural if he had said, the call to the ministry is both human and divine. One's fellowmen are one's interpreters to one of God's will. There will be exceptional cases, such as was Paul's, but they will be only for exceptional men, and what the Church needs is an increasing number of men ready to serve, though not qualified to mould the Church for centuries as did Paul. May I add finally on this point that of the men whom God has led me to approach on this theme and who became ministers not one has failed to rejoice my heart by his service?

The second source of misunderstanding is that my article is too circumscribed in its scope. "Do you think we have done enough for the men in service, when we have presented to them under God's leading the claim of His service?" queries a friend.

"Certainly not," I reply. I was in the article referred to discussing a special problem, and hoped I had made plain that our COMMISSION ON MANNING THE FIELD would give us the full program later. However, the golden days are going fast. Without thinking of exhausting the theme, I have decided briefly to outline some of the other things we should include in our reconstruction program.

We should of course co-operate with every welfare agency, governmental or voluntary, designed to promote the morals and purity of our discharged soldiers and sailors and of our own community's citizens.

We should take part in every welcome to the returning men, but in addition no man in any congregation should return without the Church's taking public recognition of that fact. I think each Church should have its own welcome service when demobilization is over, and some sort of memorial service should be undertaken if members of the congregation have made the supreme sacrifice.

Every church should have an employment committee to help every returning man get quickly located in service upon his return. The United States Employment Bureau touches only a few large centers of population and the larger industries. The Churches might well in union provide for each county, at the county seat, a bureau, but the local church too needs its committee on this humane errand bent.

Our Chaplains, when they return, should be a chief concern. We have a Committee on Chaplains. This Committee might very well make its field of further service to bring chaplains and our churches together, and I am not so sure but that we should raise a fund to support these brethren, on condition that they lecture under the control of the Committee, until they are located in a suitable field.

We should adapt our evening service at least to meet some of the aspirations of the returning men. Would it not be well to place some of them on a committee with others to help outline the church's program locally? The Federal Council recommends motion pictures of the proper kind and the open forum for these services. One thing is certain, the old type evening services is largely doomed. A few magnetic orators can no doubt hold it to its traditional ideal, but such instances will be sporadic.

The main thing is to approach these men sympathetically and not patronizingly. Seek their service and lead them to become the friends and supporters of the Kingdom, just as they have so heroically been of the cause of human freedom.

Finally, our Church as a denomination should at its adjourned A. C. C. session this April present a welcome to our returned heroes, worthy of them and of ourselves. And this welcome should perpetuate itself in enduring style, preferably by the erection of a great Church in some large city, as Washington, D. C., making the erection a denominational-wide enterprise. The different Conventions and Conferences might well too erect such memorials in their contiguous territory, subscribed to in a smaller area.

By all means, and foremost, let us not, as giving soul and ultimate purpose to all these things we may do for the men, neglect to present Christ to them as personal Savior and to hold up the Kingdom's claim as fundamental in every man's life.

W. A. HARPER.

(Editorial Note: Since the Herald of Gospel Liberty is taken more or less in practically all sections of the Southern Christian Convention; also since we are crowded for space, we print the above without printing the article referred to. A copy of the original article was not furnished The Sun for publication.—C. B. R.)

RIGHT-TO-THE-POINT REMARKS

Render to God the things that are God's.

Giving a tenth is a trust—a trust in the Lord.

No honest, careful man will be financially embarrassed by tithing.

The person who gives one-tenth enjoys his nine-tenths so much more.

To spend money rightly is one of my first tasks as a Christian.

Tithing is the only God-given plan for financing the work of Christ's Kingdom.

My money is mine, only in trust. It belongs to God just as I do.

If the Lord has given you a horn of plenty don't toot it; tithe it.

Heathen nations observed the law of the tithe before the days of Abraham. We should not do less.

Not the tithe, but the tither,

Not the gift, but the giver,

Not the money, but the man,

THE CHURCH PAPER COMING INTO ITS OWN

According to the prophets of the present day, this war is going to turn the church upside down, give us a new brand of religion, and make the mossbacks in theology take a back seat.

Out of the wrecks of the past and the creations of the present, we hope that the church papers may secure more recognition than pastors seem disposed to give them. We have never been able to follow the line of reasoning that prompts a congregation to organize its membership into classes for the study of missions, both home and foreign, and tax themselves to support a preacher who is to teach them the Bible and train them in building up the church, yet at the same time they neglect the church paper that combines all of these various kinds of work, and that follows the members into their homes and speaks to them at all times. One would suppose that this important ally would be welcomed and used to the fullest extent. On the contrary, among the stereotyped beliefs of the past is the one that a Church paper is a luxury in a home, and not a necessity, and that even if you do take it, you need not read it. Of course the church paper is largely to be blamed for this view, because the church paper of the past was dry reading, and even now there are some that are "nearest of kin to those of the past. We claim, however, that of kin to those of the past.

We are glad to learn that in the $3,500,000 drive for benevolences the Stewardship Committee recognized what few pastors do, that a Church paper in every home would be a fine piece of constructive work, and that it would do much to establish on a firm foundation their work.

The Third Presbyterian Church of Fort Wayne, Indiana, has gone even further than our committee. They have decided to put the church paper into every home in the church, and have made provision in their annual budget to pay for the same. We do not believe that we are oversanguine when we predict that such will, in time, be the policy of every wide-awake church.—Presbyterian Standard.

IT IS MORE BLESSED

(A Recitation).

Give! as the morning that flows out of heaven;
Give! as the waves where their channel is riven;
Give! as the free air and sunshine are given;

Lavishly, utterly, joyfully give—
Not the waste drops of thy cup overflowing,
Not the faint sparks of thy hearth ever glowing,
Not a pale bud from the June roses blowing;

Give, as he gave thee, who gave thee to life.

Almost the day of thy giving is over;
Ere from the grass dies the bee-hatched clover,
Thou wilt have vanished from friend and from lover;

What shall thy longing avail in the grave?
Give as the heart gives, whose fetters are breaking,
Life, love, and hope, all thy dreams and thy waking;
Soon, heaven's river thy soul-fever shaking,
Thou shalt know God and the gift that he gave.

HOW TO STUDY MISSIONS IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

There are four practical methods now employed in getting missions studied and taught in the Sunday school. It does seem that every school, and every class in the school could and should adopt one or the other since the chief business of the school is to learn missions, teach missions and be missionary.

First. On one Sunday in each month let every class in the school, (after the regular scripture lesson of the day has been read in concert) devote the whole recitation period to the study of some suitable missionary book. Our Publishing Agent, Rev. C. B. Riddle, Burlington, N. C., has on hand, or will secure, books suitable to every class in the school and the books are not expensive. This should be known as "Mission Sunday" and the offering of the classes on this day should go to missions.

Second. A certain portion of each recitation—say ten minutes each Sunday—can be devoted to the study of missions. This gives some time to lesson study and some to mission study each month, and a certain part of each Sunday's offering can go to missions.

Third. Have a missionary superintendent whose business it is to lecture, say five minutes each Sunday, to the whole school on the subject of missions, and bring the missionary idea before the whole school as he may and can. He can suggest special offerings for missions.

Fourth. Have a missionary committee in the Sunday school whose business it shall be to plan missionary programs, prepare missionary days and rallies for the school; and take special offerings for missions.

The writer much prefers the First plan mentioned, that of "Mission Sunday" once per month when the whole school gives the whole recitation period to the one theme of "winning this wicked world to Christ." God knew the crying needs of a whole world and gave His Son to redeem it. We will give ourselves, our sons, our daughters, to helping "save the world to Christ when we, too, shall know and understand the needs of the world for the blessed Gospel.

Then surely every school should have a missionary library. The writer will take pleasure in helping any school select books for its missionary library. Some of the very best, most thrilling, inspiring, and heroic books of the present are those telling of the wonders and miracles of the mission field; of what God is doing out there, and of the great and good and brave men and women who are being so wonderfully used of Him to win a world to a saving knowledge of our Christ. These are not dull books; they are books of action, deeds, daring, fearless courage and noble conquest.

Get a missionary library into your Sunday school, even if only a few volumes to start with.

If you wish further facts about mission study in Sunday school, how happy the mission secretary will be to help.

BIGGS

Miss Alice Biggs was born June 18, 1891, and was taken to her eternal home February 14, 1919. When she was about 14 years of age she professed faith in Christ and united with the church. She did not long enjoy the privilege and pleasure of attending her church, however, as the hand of affliction was laid on her about ten years ago, and she had been a sufferer ever since. But it is sweet to know that her afflictions did not cause her to lose faith in her Savior nor the assurance of her salvation. Only a few days before her death she expressed her readiness to go if it should be the Lord's will. She was laid to rest at Fuller's Chapel.

She leaves one brother, Ira Biggs, and two sisters, Mrs. C. L. Taylor and Mrs. G. P. Taylor. May her good works follow her, and the influence of her life continue to lead others to her Savior.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

HARRIS

After several years of declining health, and a few months of suffering, Brother Robert T. Harris died February 15, 1919, lacking 1 day and 5 minutes of 5 months after his wife. He had been to the hospital for treatment but found no relief. He came quietly to the end. He had lived in the same quiet manner in which he died.

Brother Harris spent his entire life in the community of Waverly, Va. He joined the church early in life. He was a charter member of the Waverly Christian church and remained a consistent member till his death.

On December 17, 1874 he married Miss Mahala Alley, and to this union 7 children* were born E. Mertie, J. Kemper, John Alley, and Robert Hinton; Mrs. Mary Lillian Holloway who died 3 years ago; Mrs. Lola Graham Faison and Miss Laura Harris.

His was the quiet Christian life. He loved his home. He was faithful in church attendance till health failed. He was 65 years, 1 month and 6 days old. Thus our men and women of mature years are passing beyond. The beautiful How-told of the high esteem in which he was held. Funeral services from the home and burial at Waverly cemetery in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends. Services by his pastor.

WICKER

Mrs. Anna Belle Wicker died at her home on East Main street, Durham, N. C., February 14, 1919. She was in her 64th year. The last two years of her life were spent in Durham. She formerly lived in Lee county and was a loyal and lovable member of the Zion Christian church. She was known by a large circle of friends in her home county as well as in Durham, and hence her death brought sadness to many hearts, because all who knew her loved her.

She had been in declining health since Christmas, but her death came suddenly. Many times the writer visited her and always received a blessing by so doing. But she is gone, and a large number of friends are left to think of the loss sustained by her going. She was a devout Christian, a congenial friend, and a loving mother.

Surviving her are three sons and two daughters Lacy P. and J. F. Wicker of Greensboro and Delaney D. Wicker with the A. E. F. in France and Mrs. E. D. Kelly, of Moncurd, and Miss Ida Belle Wicker of Durham. A brief service was conducted from the home by the writer, after which the remains were carried to her home church for burial. May the Spirit comfort the bereaved.

R. F. BROWN.

TEAGUE

Sixty years ago a bright, industrious young carpenter came from his country home to a little village in the woods known as "The Company's Shops," of the North Carolina Central Railroad. This young man, Edward Teague, was born June 30, 1833, in Chatham County, North Carolina, near Cane Creek. His father was John Teague, and his mother Ann Hornaday Teague. He was married to Lucy Ann York, on November 1, 1858. Children of this union: John P. Teague, deceased; Miss Dora M. Teague; Banks E. Teague, of Burlington; Clarence W. Teague, of West Durham; Mrs. W. T. Williams; of Chester, South Carolina, Maurice E. Teague, of Brooklyn, New York, and Charles Howell Teague, who died in infancy. Our departed brother moved to this place about sixty years ago, and lived here continuously, until he was called from labor to reward, about four o'clock Saturday morning, February 8, 1919. In 1878, he united with the Friends' Church, during a revival meeting conducted by the late Elder Daniel McPherson.

Second marriage occurred August 6, 1906, to Mrs. Ada A. Isley.

In all the relations of life, Edward Teague showed himself to be a true man, a devoted husband, a loving father, and an agreeable neighbor.

As a friend, he worked and prayed for peace; yet the last letter he ever wrote, was to Roy Fonville, of Burlington commending him for his bravery and patriotism.

His mind was clear through all the days of his life. And when the golden sun of his life of service was resting sweetly, and invitingly, upon the silver mountains, and he could only speak to Dr. Page, and his own devoted wife, and loving children, in a whisper, never did a sign or word of complaint, come from this man of God. And when the mist of the Jordan gathered on his brow, he "fell on a sleep" as quietly, and peacefully, as a babe folded in the arms of a loving mother. Well did the Psalmist say: "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace."

In Numbers XXIII: 10 you find these words, "Let me die the death of the righteousness, and let my last end be like his." In Job III: 17 you find these words, "There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest."

Our departed brother was a man who had a lambent vein of good humor running through his entire being, yet no citizen of Burlington ever heard him tell a story that could not be repeated in the presence of refined ladies.

Many exemplary men have I known within the three score and ten years of my life; but none who was more devoted, outwardly and inwardly, to the service of God, I have not known. He needs no eulogy from any one.

"Green be the grave above thee
Friend of my early days,
None knew thee but to love thee,
None named thee but to praise."

D. A. LONG.

DICKERSON

W. H. Dickerson was laid to rest in the family burying ground near Epsom, N. C., January 19, 1919. He was forty-one years old and had been a member of Liberty (Vance) Christian church for a number of years. He leaves his wife and seven children. The church and community have sustained a considerable loss in his decease. But the family is the greatest loser after all, for no one else can take the place of father in the home. May the Lord's grace sustain them.

G. J. GREEN.

WRENN

Sallie Lou Wrenn, infant daughter of Clarence O. Wrenn and Mamie (Newman) Wrenn, deceased, was laid to rest in Liberty cemetery January 29, 1919. Left by its mother when only a few days old, like a flower it shed its fragrance on those who cared for it and then went to her. Mother and child are united in Heaven while we are left to mourn their departure. What will be sweeter than meeting these little ones on the other side? This will be the reward for our service.

G. J. GREEN.

ELLINGTON

Lucy Daniel Ellington, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Ellington, and granddaughter of Mr. Dave Weldon, was buried in the Weldon burying ground near Epsom, N. C., January 23, 1919.

The after-effects of influenza was the cause of her death. She was a dutiful child and was greatly loved by her kin and her little friends. Though "absent from the body and present with the Lord" she still lingers on earth in the hearts of those who knew her.

SERVICE FLAGS

Have been in array for many months. The war is over, but they continue to float in the breeze and decorate the windows of our homes.

The Meaning

Of all this is that we are proud of young men who have had an opportunity of serving mankind in the liberation of the peoples of the world. Freedom from the sword has come. The next great war must be upon

Sin and Unrighteousness

And must be conducted by the best and strongest men to be found. Has the call come to you to enlist in the evangelizing of the world? The task is heroic. Here are a few of the things to be done.

1. To save men from sin.
2. To evangelize the non-Christian lands.
3. To harmonize labor and capital.
4. To bring universal peace to the world.
5. To reconcile science to religion.
6. To break down ecclesiasticism.
7. To help answer Jesus' prayer for the oneness of His followers.
8. To help Christianize all the relations of life, including the social order.
9. To be the interpreter of God in His world.

Great and exalted work—this!

Has the call come to you? Will there be a service flag in your home to indicate that you have gone out to help make the world a better place in which to live?

Let the Church

Be much in prayer that God may find us worthy of the needed laborers and send them to us.

Dr. Staley Challenges The Brotherhood

All of us have known for years that Dr. W. W. Staley is the embodiment of loyalty and devotion to our Church. The pregnant word in his vocabulary of life has been sacrifice. He even sacrificed his home-life for the progress of the Kingdom.

He now challenges the Brotherhood on behalf of the Elon Standardization Fund, offering to be one of five or ten to give $50,000 to this fund. Where shall we find his like again? He served Elon College for eleven years without compensation, as its president. He has been its expert counsellor through the years since he retired from its presidency, and now on its behalf he makes this magnificent challenge to the men of our Church whom God has blessed with means and with generous hearts.

Shall the Church meet our brother in this crowning instance of generosity, the gracious fruiting of many years of previous sowing of Christian liberality?

Let us pray that God will raise up the other four men to meet Dr. Staley's challenge, or the other nine, as it may please Him.

EDITORIAL

AS WE WERE THINKING

‘Burdens often help rather than hinder. In the winter the forest at times is usually laden with snow and ice. Every sprig is bent—and thus tested. The stormy wind is ever testing the forest. The consequences of all this is that the trees come forth with renewed energy, have their roots planted deeper into the earth. A choppy sea makes the captain see that his ship is secure.

Those who claim that the Bible is a back number are those who know more about the Bible from heresay than they do from experience and the study of it. And that reminds us that all criticism of the Bible is destructive, because nothing better is offered. There is nothing better for them to offer.

There is now going the rounds a soft, soupy, silly, senseless criticism of the Church by those who are looking for something “new.” The strange thing to us is how a man can appreciate the “new” unless he has experienced the “old.” We admit that the Church is not perfect, but its criticisms come from those who help the Church—the least.

It is not more laws that we need but an execution of those we now have. In fact we have so many laws that the dread of their conflict often defeats justice. Washington ought to be a modern city. There our President lives, the highest law-making meets, and in brief the scales of justice are supposed to be kept there. But Washington has the open Sunday and many other things to her discredit. She, as well as many other places, needs a stronger public sentiment to back up the laws already on her books.

We know some local churches that have the “Changing Fever.” They seek a pastoral change every year—and usually get it. They do not give their pastor time to begin any constructive work. The persons who constitute this class ought to change brands of flour, soda, lard, and other things each time they buy. They ought to carry out to the letter their logic.

Elon’s campaign for $125,000.00 additional endowment is an undertaking supremely great for the Church. All too long have we laid too little stress on our educational needs. Educated leadership is the supreme need of our day, and this leadership should be Christian. The Church colleges now of all times need support and the country needs them.

Some time ago a good lady wrote the Editor asking what would become of those who are indifferent about the church and would not attend it. That all depends upon how long they continue to do this. A church and a community ought to make a program of service and worship sufficient to enlist the indifferent of the community. A community may scorn at some of its inhabitants and at the same time scorn at its products.

We fear that many good men and women of the land do not rightly interpret the mission of the Church. So many express themselves as if the only work of the Church is to evangelize. Not by any means. The Church has for its task to nourish as well as to evangelize. Great revivals often seem like failures in a few months afterwards because the local church failed to carry on that which was started.

Commencement season is approaching and schools, colleges, and seminaries are on the lookout for some one to preach the commencement sermon or deliver the address of the occasion. Remember that the minister you get does not make a charge, but don’t let that keep you from doing your duty by him. Don’t ask him how much his fare cost, his hotel bill, but keep in mind his time for preparing for the occasion, his extra expense, his supply in his own pulpit, if he is away over Sunday, and make him feel like you have appreciated him.

It is easy to criticize the other fellow—it is a difficult thing to see his way, though he may be right. Praying for a man is much better than cataloging his faults. We are all human. Let us forgive and forget. Take it for what it is worth, criticize it if you may, but we deem Mr. Wilson’s words at the opening of the Peace Conference Christian: "I may say without straining the point that we are not representatives of Governments, but representatives of peoples. It will not suffice to satisfy governmental circles anywhere. It is necessary that we satisfy the opinion of mankind."

CONFERENCE OF RESOLVES AT THE PORTSMOUTH CHURCH

This event held last month created quite a little interest among the churches of Norfolk and Portsmouth for the reason that nothing like it had ever been heard of before. The pastor, Rev. Henry W. Dowding has withheld reports awaiting a suggestion of what the results might be.

A description of the "Conference of Resolves" follows: A Committee was asked to visit every organization of the church and request them to meet in business session, to draw up a set of resolutions pledging their loyalty and support to the church and in a special manner for a period of six months, during which period they further resolved to do special work or make some larger contribution to the work and to cause one copy of the "resolves" to be spread upon their minutes the other to be read by a duly appointed delegate at the Conference.

A Program Committee was asked to prepare a program in two parts, the first part to consist of high class vocal and instrumental music by outside talent, with an intermission of thirty minutes for refreshments, the second part—more music and three short addresses by local pastors, the entire conference lasting three hours, from seven until ten P. M.

The outstanding features were the procession of each organization into the church, each bearing a badge and singing a verse of some familiar hymn, then all uniting with the audience in singing the stanza, "We Are Not Divided, All One Body We." The reading of the carefully prepared resolutions by a delegate from each organization (the delegates going to the front) and the salutation of the three flags—Church, National and Service—placed at different parts of the church.

As to immediate results, it did for the local church what a more general conference does for a number of churches. It brought all the organizations together and presented the combined working force in one single gathering. It called attention of the public to the many sides aspect of a city church. It impressed each society with its relation and importance to the whole and created a friendly rivalry between them. It is impossible to call attention in this article to the score or more resolutions made by the various societies. We desire, however, to say that a resolution made by two societies to have twenty-five per cent of their members present at each weekly prayer service has resulted in the attendance being nearly doubled. Another resolution by the "Loyal Helpers Bible Class" resulted in the Class asking the pastor to preach a series of sermons, which they agree to advertise, pay expenses of and attend in a body. One taken by the "Men's Bible Class" results in increased attendance and the establishment of "a sinking fund". The Ladies' Aid Society is busy keeping its pledge to visit a certain number of church members each month and increase its membership twenty-five per cent in six months. The Senior Endeavor Society has pledged to pay the printing and advertising bills of the church. The life of the church has been renewed along all lines.

One very important provision is the appointment of a General Secretary to meet with the different organizations from time to time and keep them in touch with their pledges and also to arrange for a "Conference of Results" to be held in June. The secretary is Mrs. J. C. Ellis, 510 Mt. Vernon Avenue, Portsmouth, Va., who will gladly furnish details to other churches.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

DR. LIGHTBOURNE AND THE PEOPLE'S CHURCH

The test of real greatness is in the construction of a work that will survive you. I did not think I was mistaken in my judgment respecting my late lamented friend, Dr. A. W. Lightbourne. Now I know I was not.

I have been to his church two years and more after his translation and find it not the work of a leader merely, but of God. The People's church of Dover, Del., sustained a signal loss in Dr. Lightbourne's untimely taking off. His son, Victor, succeeded him, but he too is gone now, having heard his country's call and answering it in allying himself with the "Y" overseas religious work. Some of the men "over there" have regretted that preachers were sent out by the "Y." It is safe to say that none will regret that Brother Victor was sent. When Dover was asked to furnish a "Y" man, every eye turned toward him, and he could not resist.

His going left the People's church shepherdless. They have had supply preaching since he left, but no pastor. The "flu" epidemic has been raging and pastoral service has been especially needed. Yet in spite of all discouragements and hardships, the Church is serene and hopeful and undismayed. Had Dr. Lightbourne been just an ordinary man, the seed of his sowing could not have survived such misfortune, separated as the church is from our other work. A great man labored there and wrought an enduring monument.

But I have other reason, too, to justify my estimate of Dr. Lightbourne. Not only by the church he founded survived, but it is not localized. It has vision and outreach. For while I was in Dover, I presented the Elon Standardization Fund and this Church, apportioned $2,000, gave $4,200 and more will follow. It was fitting that they should in their generous response perpetuate the name of their great leader, and so they called the fund they raised "The Dr. A. W. Lightbourne Fund," given in his honor by the following members of the People's church: Wesley Webb, E. E. Benson, W. S. Hardestle, Wm. J. Benson, Margarette G. Stevenson, J. R. McGonigal, E. E. Clements, W. V. Cosden, R. H. Lewis, Georgia A. Carroll, John D. Hawkins, Mary T. Smithers, James H. Hazel, E. J. Faucette, W. C. Moore, John B. Hutton, J. A. Richard, A. G. Massey, John B. Wharton, James B. Keith, John W. Caulk, Eugene Raughley, Sophia Jackson, W. J. Massey, Mrs. E. L. Jones, H. E. Lynch, J. H. Taylor, Wm. Dyer, R. E. Lewis, Mary Mills Wolcott, W. D. Clements, E. L. Hardesty, Mary Lasher, and T. V. Keith. Thus the People's church has perpetually identified itself with our College and done honor to their founder. God can but honor such a church.

For two Sundays and the intervening days I was their pastor, a new and unique experience for a layman, but rich in blessing to me. I visited the sick and aged, attended funerals in homes of sorrow, broke bread around the festive board in the quiet of happy families. My cup ran over. "My Dover pastorate" will fill a large place in memory's gallery of rich and choice experiences. Never breathed a finer people than those of Dover. God bless them!

My Sundays there were filled to the bursting with good things. (Class meeting at 9:30; preaching at 10:30; Sunday school at 2:00; Brotherhood at 6:45; preaching at 7:30, and it was good for me to be in all of these. The Class meeting for the reconsecration of the leaders, with song, prayer, and testimonies, and the Brotherhood for the cleaning up of the town and the relief of need and suffering, were the two services that especially gripped my heart. The People's church has a program of service in its Brotherhood, and that program is given a spiritual basis in the Class meeting. Is that not fine? Is it not scriptural? And it is succeeding.

I noticed the fall of former leaders in the congregation there—Brothers T. J. Stephenson and Henry Ridgely, Professor J. E. Carroll, Dr. J. H. Wilson and others have gone to their reward, but God has raised up younger men worthy to be their spiritual successors.

Dr. P. H. Fleming, Burlington, N. C., has agreed to serve the church one month and the congregation anticipates rich blessing from his ministry there. He will be greeted in his new field by Brother Jacob Long and family, former parishoners of his in Burlington, now residents of Dover and affiliated with the People's church.

I shall hope to visit Dover again soon.

W. A. HARPER.

P. S. While in Dover I met Dr. R. S. Stephens and Rev. Wilson C. Moore, two of our ministers. Both of them are busy and serviceable in the Master's work. Dr. Stephens is chaplain of the Delaware Senate. Brother Moore is a prodigy in ability to work and a benediction in spiritual influence.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Mother is the sweetest word in human language, and the only word of endearment that touches every human heart. It is the one sweet word husband uses when he puts the finest meaning into his soul and calls his wife, "mother." That word is the magnet that holds family units together to make home. Home can never be the same without her presence, her voice, and her love; but the memory of mother is a song in the night of sorrow and a star in the sky of hope.

Mrs. Thomas A. Jones left her sweet home in Norfolk, Virginia, on the last day of December, nineteen eighteen, and spent the first day of the New Year in heaven. She was the daughter of Col. A. Savage, and her mother was Sarah Lee, sister of Captain P. H. Lee. On both sides her ancestors were distinguished for bravery in war, success in peace, and great service in the Christian Church. Mrs. Jones combined the courage of her father, the meekness of her mother, and added the charm of her own genuine life. "Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

The second day of January was the day we buried her from the dear home long enriched by her presence and her love. The flowers made the casket a thing of beauty, fragrant with sweet odors.

Mrs. Jones was famed by three virtues. She was an artist in home-building. Ancestral reputation for home-life flowered out in her home with a simple beauty so genuine that family and guests "felt at home." This is no mean art, and it is both ancient and modern. There is no place on earth equal to the Christian home; and one found it under the roof where she was mother.

Hospitality seemed natural in her life and it was Christian. The door into her heart was as wide as the door into her home. It seemed to be a luxury to her to entertain her friends, their friends, and strangers. Her table seemed to be a perennial feast. The atmosphere within that home seemed to contain the freshness of Christian hospitality. Guests breathed it, enjoyed it, and respected it. Her religious influence was felt in her summer home by the sea as really as the breezes that come in from the ocean.

Her Christian life was a genuine as her domestic life. From a child she had known nothing but to trust in Jesus, and she had crowned her years with faithful service. The Christian Church was a part of her life. Her thought, her prayer, her money, her service lay on the altar. She looked for opportunity, she found work and she did it with her whole being. All the institutions of the Church had her sympathy and her help. The beauty of the character, the strength of her purpose, and the devotion of her life, must remain in the life of her husband children as the inspiration of their faith, the service of their lives, and the hope of reunion in that house not made with hands.

She had afflictions which would have discouraged weaker souls; but nothing seemed to reduce her strong faith, her cheerful disposition, or her bright hope. Like a crushed rose, her life seemed sweeter when tribulation harrowed her soul.

Her pastor, Rev. I. W. Johnson, D. D., had an engagement the day of funeral, and I served.

DR. FRANK S. CHILD AT ELON COLLEGE

Dr. Frank S. Child, pastor of the First Congregational church, Fairfield, Conn., delighted the faculty and students with a visit on March 2 and 3. For reasons of health Dr. Child has not been able for some years to deliver his annual course of lectures.

Dr. Child preached on Sunday from the words, "The Children of this World are Wiser in Their Generation Than the Children of Light." He showed how Christian people fail in the very important equality of shrewdness or wisdom in their use of the Bible, the Sabbath, and also in their attitude toward the future life, etc. The sermon was strong, beautiful, and withal graced by a spirit enriched by the experiences of the passing years.

On Monday the Doctor spoke in the auditorium giving one of his unique word pictures of the quaint cranes, and matchless landscape beauty of Mentone, France, and the Riviera. We were all charmed and at the close felt a strong impulse to embark for those regions.

On Monday afternoon Dr. Child visited, in company with others, the historic Guilford Battle Ground and was delighted with the many fine monuments and historical associations that gather about the place.

Dr. Child's coming to us is both a joy and blessing. Our love and prayers follow him, and we trust he can come oftener in the future.

POUNDING OR DONATION

In the South we would call it a pounding; but in Pennsylvania they call it a donation. It seems about as near akin to a Southern pounding as the winter is to a Southern winter, but we will just let the people call it as they like.

On the evening of February 26 the good people of Washington Valley church came to the parsonage and brought flour, meal, beef, bacon, pork, eggs, butter, maple syrup (the genuine), potatoes, cabbage, canned fruit, a nice pair of shoes for the pastor and a cash purse.

We are grateful to these kind people for the real value of the articles brought and for the spirit that prompted the action. After the people had spent a pleasant evening together, refreshments which the women had deposited on the dining room table, were served. Before we separated, Mrs. B. S. Mitchell presided at the piano and we sang together, "Praise God From Whom all Blessings Flow," and had prayers together.

While we have had many hindrances since coming here two months ago our work is moving on quietly. Our congregations have improved since the "flu" epidemic has subsided. We have spoken several times along the line of the Forward Movement and hope to adopt a specific program at both churches in the near future.

We have some loyal members in both the churches and we are hoping for a fruitful year in our church work.

A DAY IN THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

One of the most enjoyable days of my life was spent Friday, February 28, in the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, N. C. I went down in answer to an invitation from Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston, and spent most of the day in the home with the children. I came away feeling that I had never spent a more enjoyable day. Without the slightest suggestion from any one, or Brother Johnston's knowledge of it, I wish to speak of the work there, hoping the whole Church will read these lines and think much of the great work there.

That a wonderful work is being done, no one will deny. Brother Johnston is the right man in the right place. Its a great work to raise over $27,000 in less time than twenty-five months. Yet, it has been done for our Orphanage, and has been done in such a way as to educate our people to the work of giving. The Church is better, greater and richer by having had a part in this work of Christ. It is a fact that men do not mind giving when they know their money is being spent for a noble cause.

The spirit of that home was the thing that was most impressive to me. In fact it is home. I do not have words to express my own feelings concerning the spirit of the home. I tried to watch the attitude of Superintendent, helpers, and the children of the home. A more beautiful spirit of co-operation I never saw. The rule of those in authority is that of a father or mother for their child; and those children obey orders because they love to do so, and not because they are afraid. I talked with several of the children who had been there a long time, and some who were new, and in every instance they told me they were satisfied, and having a good time. The largest child in that home is Superintendent Johnston. I make this statement, because of his attitude toward the children. He loves them, and it goes without saying that they love him. I, somehow, wish I could go on into details and tell more of the home, but space will not admit, and I close with a word to anyone who might read these lines. Any money, time or energy we as a Church may spend will bring a hundred percent in the dollar returns to us. The work of our Institution is getting the very best services that the helpers there can give, and is soon to be in first-class working order, for the debt is now removed and the money will go to build new things for the Institution. Come, let us give it our very best support.

AN OFFER

Being much interested in old people who are unsaved, I desire to say that I shall be glad to preach for any church that has any such persons living within reach of it. I am only in my ninety-fourth year, possibly the oldest man many have ever heard preach.

"AIDED"

Preachers have been "pounded" and "potatoed" and have had "suits" brought against them, but this preacher has to report that he and his wife have had the good fortune, recently to have been "aided." It came about in this way: One afternoon twenty members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Dendron Christian church came to the parsonage well armed, not to do us injury but to help us, and this they did by leaving many good things to eat, too numerous to mention. I would say to any preacher who has not a Ladies' Aid Society in his church to try to get one organized. I am glad to say that ours at Dendron is running on a biblical basis, so far as finances are concerned any how, and do not have to run on lemonade, ice cream and oyster stews. We did not expect them to come to us as they did in this helpful way but as they did we want to express in this public way our sincere appreciation of their kind remembrance.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

GOV. BICKETT COMMENDS ELON'S UNDERTAKING

I am much interested in the effort about to be made to raise the sum of $125,000.00 for the benefit of Elon College in North Carolina. I know something of the work of this College, and consider it a splendid asset to the intellectual and spiritual life of the State. It does clean, conscientious work, and the young men and women who attend the college go out into the world and make the very best of citizens. I commend this college to the kindly consideration of any one who may be disposed to invest a part of their means in a way that will accomplish great and permanent good.

(Signed) T. W. BICKETT.

FROM CONGRESSMAN STEDMAN

I can only say that in my opinion the campaign of Elon College and its work in behalf of education entitles it to the high consideration of the public and I sincerely trust that the campaign will be a complete success. There has been no time in the history of our country when it was more necessary to look after the education and careful training of our young men.

(Signed) CHARLES M. STEDMAN.

ENDOWMENT FOR ELON

The friends of Elon College have undertaken to raise $125,000 as an endowment fund for the college. Already the plans have been laid, and there is much enthusiasm among the workers and it is confidently believed that the fund will be raised. This campaign has been authorized by the Southern Christian Convention, and the entire Church is behind the movement.

This sum will be raised because the people of the Christian Church have a way of making a success of their undertakings, as is evidenced by the oversubscription of the big missionary fund last year.

We feel that Burlington and Alamance county should have an especial interest in this work. The college is located in our county and has been a wonderful influence for good. It is the only college within our county, and we feel a just pride in the work being done. It is almost a local institution, and we believe there is no citizen who does not feel a personal interest in its success and future.

We have been familiar with the work done by this college for 20 years. We have watched its wonderful growth during these years with a great deal of interest and have been gratified to see it grow bigger and better as the years have gone by. Its influence has been felt here, and it has been a blessing to our community.

We feel that in raising this endowment fund Burlington and Alamance county, outside of the Christian Church, should have a part and we believe that the friends of the college would appreciate very much a manifestation of our interest in a practical manner and no donation could be given to a more worthy or useful cause.

Exerting as this great institution does, a wonderful influence for good, the college has given to our community a higher standard, an elevating influence that has been felt, and in order to make it stronger and more useful this endowment should not only be raised but our local people should determine to supplement this endowment by a voluntary fund that would show our appreciation of this institution.

We hope that plans will be undertaken to the end that Burlington and our county will demonstrate how kindly we feel toward this college, and how much we appreciate its work.—Editorial Burlington News.

DOVER AND ELON SET THE PACE

The drive for the $125,000 Standardization Fund began at Jerusalem, that is, at Elon on February 16. It is right that it should have begun there. Scripturally that was proper. The quota at Elon was $3,750.

In the drive Jericho (which would have been Burlington or Greensboro) was temporarily skipped and the next point visited was "the uttermost parts of the earth," that is, the most outlying territory of the Convention, the People's Church of Dover, Del. How the heart rejoices to tell the story of the generous hearts and true there. The quota was $2,000. They went "over the top" with a shout and gave $4,200. Fine!

Elon and Dover have set the pace for the Brotherhood. The fine words of endorsement in THE SUN had forecasted the unity of the brethren for the success of the drive, and these two vastly different congregations have amply justified every hope. God bless Elon and Dover, our pace setters, and all the other churches that shall shortly "follow in their trail."

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Dear Friends:—Sometime ago the Lowell church, (Ala.) mailed me a check for $11.66 for its Thanksgiving offering, and by an oversight it was credited to Lanett, Ala. I am sorry this error occurred but however careful errors will sometimes be made. I am always glad to make any correction when my attention is called to it.

Our financial report this week is the smallest it has been for a long time. I truly hope that as soon as the "Flu" blows over and our Sunday schools all get in action again that our income will soon reach the point where we can feel safe in taking the little children who are crying to us for help.

I received a very encouraging letter from Sister Mary F. Roberson, Oblong, Ill., this week with check for $10.00 to help give the little babies a home. We have two of the sweetest little girls here now—one has been with us for several weeks—the other just came and if you could hear them sing "Jesus Love Me," it would touch the tenderest places in your heart and you could not help but just open your purse and give that the others who are not much younger and perhaps just as sweet might have a place too that they could call home. Jesus loves them too and has blessed you bountifully for the past few years that you might divide and help give these little ones a home. Will you hear their cry?

I want all the little cousins to write me a letter for the month of March and I am going to send to each one, who writes a picture of one of our little girls who sings "Jesus Loves Me."

Your Superintendent will be glad to visit any church from now on through the spring and summer. If you would like for him to visit your church please write and name the date you want him to come, and if he has no previous engagement, he will be glad to pay you a visit and tell you something of our Orphanage work. We think it best for you to name the time as you know the conditions and the time best to come for your church. Will be glad to hear from you.

I will thank each Sunday school secretary to mail me the name and address of the superintendent and secretary of your school so I may make my list complete for this year. See to this right away.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Here comes a little girl who wants to join the band of cousins and help the little orphans. I am sorry for them. My Sunday school teacher, Mrs. Glass, has been telling us about them. I hope they are well and happy. Enclosed please find my dime for February. With lots of love to all—Irene Patton.

We are real glad to have you join our band of cousins and give you a warm welcome. It is real good of your teacher (Mrs. Glass) to tell you about the little orphans. If all our Sunday school teachers would feel the same interest in our work here and hold the orphan cause before their Sunday schools it would not be long before we could take the babies who are pleading for a home here.—"Uncle Charley."

Mrs. W. P. Betts—I have no home church in Batesburg so I have put my letter in the Methodist church while I stay here, but I still want THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

PROCEEDINGS

Union of The North Carolina and Virginia, The Eastern North Carolina, and The Western North Carolina Conferences

Into

The North Carolina Christian Conference

HISTORICAL DATA

The North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, in 92nd annual session at Haw River, N. C., on November 22, 1917, passed the following enabling resolution, looking to the union of the Western and Eastern North Carolina Christian Conferences with itself into one body of Christians in the State of North Carolina:

"That it is the sense and desire of this Conference that, for the best interest of our cause and the Kingdom, there should be a consolidation of our Conference with the other two Christian Conferences of this State.

"That we memorialize the Southern Christian Convention at its next session to permit such consolidation, if desired by either or both of the other Conferences.

"That we petition the other two Conferences to unite with us in this movement for a consolidation.

"That the Conference elect three Commissioners to take this matter under advisement and present the same to the next session of the Southern Christian Convention, of the Eastern North Carolina; and of the Western North Carolina Christian Conferences."

The Commissioners elected were P. H. Fleming, J. O. Atkinson, and W. A. Harper.

On May 3, 1918, the Southern Christian Convention in its 23rd session at Franklin, Va., adopted the following resolution:

TO THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION:

"Brethren:—We, the undersigned Commissioners elected by the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference at its last session to memorialize the Southern Christian Convention now in session, and the other two Conferences in North Carolina regarding the formation of one Christian Conference in North Carolina out of the present three, or out of any two of them, do hereby petition the honorable body now assembled, permission to undertake the work; and that permission be granted the said Conferences—the North Carolina and Virginia, the Eastern North Carolina and the Western North Carolina—to unite; provided said Conferences, or any two of said Conferences shall vote to do so.

"We further ask that the aforesaid Commissioners be authorized and empowered by this Convention to take the matter of the union up with the three Conferences, and effect a union of the three, or any two of the three that shall vote to unite."

(Signed)

P. H. FLEMING,
W. A. HARPER,
J. O. ATKINSON,

Commissioners.

It was the intention of these Commissioners to present the union proposition to the Eastern and Western Conferences in their November 1918 sessions, and to report the results to the 1918 session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, meeting after them. But the epidemic of Spanish Influenza necessitated the postponement of these Conferences, and the North Carolina and Virginia Conference met before they did. Under the circumstances, the Commissioners submitted the following report, which was adopted and they were continued to pursue the matter further:

"We, your committee to memorialize the Eastern and Western North Carolina Christian Conferences on the question of Christian Union, report that these bodies have not met, and so we cannot now report.

"We request that this matter lie open and that this committee or another be constituted to make further report at our next session.

"We should further add that the Southern Christian Convention gave its consent to effecting the union of these three Conferences, should they desire it."

P. H. FLEMING,
W. A. HARPER,
J. O. ATKINSON,

Committee.

The Western North Carolina Conference met at Shiloh Church, Randolph County, in its 52nd. annual session on November 26-28, 1918, and on November 27 passed the following order, upon recommendation of a special committee, electing Rev. T. E. White, Rev. L. I. Cox, and Dr. E. L. Moffitt as Commissioners:

"Whereas, the Southern Christian Convention in its last biennial session gave its consent to the union of the Western North Carolina, Eastern North Carolina and North Carolina and Virginia Conferences to unite into one Conference, we, your committee of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference, therefore recommend:

"That we unite with the other two forming one Conference to be known as the North Carolina Christian Conference, including all the churches in the above Conferences."

T. E. WHITE,
J. W. PATTON,
L. I. COX,
E. L. MOFFITT,
W. H. WRENN,

Committee.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference met in 25th annual session at Chapel Hill, N. C., December 4-6, and on December 4 voted to accept "the invitation of the other two Conferences to enter into the union." Dr. W. C. Wicker, Hon. K. B. Johnson, and Rev. A. T. Banks "were appointed as Commissioners to represent this Conference in organizing the new North Carolina Christian Conference," so runs the record of its printed proceedings.

PRELIMINARY COMMISSIONERS' MEETING

On December 26, 1918, the nine Commissioners named above met at Elon College and decided to apply for a charter. Hon. J. Dolph Long was present as attorney and gave valuable advice to the Commissioners. Drs. J. W. Wellons and N. G. Newman were also present as visiting brethren.

The following were appointed a special Committee to draft the charter and present it for ratification on January 23, 1919: Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Rev. L. I. Cox, and Dr. W. C. Wicker, with J. Dolph Long as attorney.

The Commissioners of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference gave notice that they would seek the approval of their Executive Committee before signing the charter.

NORTH CAROLINA AND VIRGINIA CONFERENCE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE APPROVAL

On December 28, 1918, the Executive Committee of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference met in Graham, N. C., with a full attendance consisting of P. H. Fleming, N. G. Newman, and J. W. Holt. At this meeting permission was granted the Commissioners appointed at the Haw River and Reidsville sessions to sign the charter, merging this Conference and the Eastern and Western Conferences into the North Carolina Christian Conference. The official report follows:

"Notice is hereby given that on December 28, 1918, with all members present, the Executive Committee of the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference met in Graham, N. C., and gave approval to the union of the three Christian Conferences in North Carolina, authorizing its Commissioners, P. H. Fleming, W. A. Harper, and J. O. Atkinson to take such legal steps as may be necessary to make this action effective. Rev. J. W. Holt voted in the negative and desired it to be so recorded."

MISSIONARY

THE GOOD WOMEN GO FORWARD

The Field Secretary is in possession of the following which explains itself, and will carry joy and inspiration to many hearts:

Dr. J. O. Atkinson,

Sec. Mission Board S. C. C.,
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Sir and Bro.:

The Woman's Board of the Eastern Virginia Conference in annual session here today decided that the time has come when the women of this Conference should support a missionary and to this end we voted to raise the sum of $1,200.00 the present year for the first year's salary of the missionary. It was decided to defer till our annual meeting in October the naming of the missionary and the field. The Board does this in addition to its other work, and thus makes a beginning which it is our hope and expectation to continue and further develop in the coming years.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. C. H. ROWLAND, Chairman.
Mrs. I. W. JOHNSON, Secretary.

Again and again a thousand thanks to the good women for their great work.

J. O. ATKINSON.

HIS MISSION MONEY WILL BE PAID

Leaving off names and places I have this letter from a good brother: "I regret very much that I did not send you my pledge of $20.00 last year on my pledge of $100.00 for missions. It seemed that my obligations were such that I could not get the amount. I am trying a new plan which I know will work all right. I began the first of the year to tithe my income, and in this way I feel sure I will have a plenty to meet all my church obligations and charitable causes, also enough for my last year's pledge and this year's pledge. You will be hearing from me in a month or two with check covering my pledge."

That brother's pledge will be paid. I never fear or feel uneasy for the man in meeting his church obligations if he tithes. I would give one hundred cents on the dollar for all our mission pledges, if all who gave them would accept and strictly follow the law of the tithe. It pays.

J. O. ATKINSON.

MISSIONS A CHARITY OR A DEBT—WHICH?

By R. H. Glover

"I am debtor. . . . So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you." (Rom. 1:15, 15).

In these forcible words the great Apostle expresses his own personal missionary conviction and resolve. He confesses himself the heathen's debtor. He owes them the gospel. Even though he has already done more than any dozen other men of his time, he lays no claim to merit, nor considers that he is conferring any favor on the Romans in making an added effort to take them the gospel. It is his duty, his debt, and he is only seeking as an honest man to discharge it.

Now if it was for Paul a debt, can it be something less for the rest of us? Yet how few appear to treat it so! The majority of professing Christians regard missions with utter indifference. They wonder by what strange freak of nature certain pious people choose to go and live among yellow or black folk rather than stay at home. And it is to be feared that very many even of those who profess a degree of interest in this work conceive of it merely as charity.

Is there any essential difference between regarding missions as a charity and as a debt? Let us see. Here comes a ragged, unkempt creature, holding out his cap to me. I recognize him as a beggar. So I pull out a coin—a nickel, a dime, anything—and throw it to him. That is CHARITY. It is cheap; it is easy; it feels no responsibility; it is purely a matter of personal choice. But now another man steps up and hands me a paper. I open it and find it a bill of debt, perhaps for $100. Do I presume to deal with this man as I did with the first, by flinging him the first coin that comes handy? Not by a good deal. This is a very different matter, for it is a DEBT. I am bound to face it seriously, and do all in my power, even giving my last dollar, to wipe it out.

Applying now this illustration to missions, what have we?

Missions viewed as a Charity: Secondary, optional, little concern or prayer or effort, spasmodic, insignificant giving.

Missions viewed as a Debt: Primary, obligatory, earnest concern and prayer and effort, systematic, sacrificing giving.

Charity foots the list of your expenditure and claims your spare cash. Debt heads the list, if you are honest, and cuts out everything non-essential, until it is fully met. You give a little of the interest on your money to charity, but you dip deep down into your principal and give all, if need be, to pay your debts.

I visited a church and met a number of its leading members, all earning liberal salaries. They professed great interest in missions. On inquiry I found that the church was giving $25 a year to the cause. I went on to a Convention, and a colored washerwoman brought up her yearly missionary offering of $200. What made the difference between these two standards of giving? Simply the viewpoint. The church treated missions as a charity, the woman as a debt, and both gave accordingly. To them it was one among a score of equally important (or unimportant!) things; to her it was the one supreme thing. They played at missions as a sort of diversion; she worked at missions as the business of her life.

Christian reader, in which light have you regarded this work—as expressed, for instance, by your prayers, your gifts, your efforts to go? Has your conscience been convicted of a debt you owe the heathen, or have only your emotions been stirred at times with a weak feeling of pity for them?

Oh, let me repeat it—WE OWE the heathen the gospel; we are their DEBTORS:

(1) Out of gratitude for our own salvation, realizing that only "by the grace of God I am what I am."

(2) Out of loyalty to Christ, since He commanded, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

(3) Out of compassion for heathen suffering and sorrow.

(4) Out of the realization that in the gospel we have the only hope for their souls' eternal welfare.

May God convict His children of their debts, and make them ready, as much as in them is to meet them! Then, at last, will there be no lack of missionaries to go, or intercessors to pray, or money to send.

TEACHING TITHING IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

I met a very successful professional and business man not long since who attributed much of his success, both in his spiritual development, and in his financial prosperity, to the fact that firmly believed in tithing and scrupulously practiced it. And he became convinced that tithing was wise and biblical during his youthful days in the Sunday school.

If teachers could convince their pupils in the Sunday school that tithing was the divine law of giving, and was the only wise law of business and religious book-keeping, much indeed would be accomplished both for the business of the future, and for financing the Kingdom.

J. O. ATKINSON.

THE EXPERIENCE OF A TITHER

The Missionary Review of the World gives this interesting item from a tither's experience and accounts: "I went into a mercantile business, known as the 'five and ten cent business,' in Browie, Texas, in 1894, and in January following my pastor and I agreed to tithe for one year. Before the year was out I said, 'This suits me, and I will tithe, not for one year only, but for life.' The business prospered from the start, although begun in a small way. Having only about $700 capital, doing a strictly cash business, both in buying and selling, of course our business was limited. Yet the first year our tenth was $100; the second year, $154; third year, $360; fourth, $388; fifth, $330; sixth, $662; seventh, $556; eighth, $150; ninth, $556; tenth, $1,040; eleventh, $650; twelfth, $1,223; thirteenth, $1,221; fourteenth, $1,143; fifteenth, $2,742. I have tried the Lord in this business way, and I would no more quit tithing than I would quit providing for my family."

J. O. ATKINSON.

A MESSAGE FOR EVERY SUNDAY SCHOOL OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN THE STATE

It is now ten weeks since I published through THE SUN to the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies of the State of North Carolina the plans and purposes of the newly elected Board of Religious Education. As Secretary-Treasurer of this organization I appealed to the Christian workers of the North Carolina Conference not only to send in honor roll contributions, as we are now working on borrowed money, but to offer suggestions as to how we may most effectively do the thing this Board has set out to do. Now there are ninety-four schools in the North Carolina Conference that have neither sent a penny or a word of encouragement. It is evident that these schools either have not seen the appeal or have neglected to answer it, either of which indicates that many of our schools are not awake to their full possibilities for progress and growth.

Please take this message to heart. It is your responsibility, be you a teacher, officer, or member, and only in so far as you co-operate with the Board can its work serve a good purpose, and better the Christian statues of the State. When you, readers of THE SUN, and workers everywhere feel that you owe us not only interest but support. Read this to your school; raise a contribution for this school; but if this is impossible write me how you feel regarding the matter and this will be a great moral help. With all the schools and societies pulling together we can look for the greatest Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention this summer that this part of the country has ever seen.

Yours for immediate service,
C. H. STEPHENSON,
Secretary-Treasurer.

BEALE-WILLS

A pretty marriage was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenza Bailey, Windsor, Va., Thursday evening, February 27, 1919, when Miss Mary Estelle Wills became the bride of Mr. Raby R. Beale, both of Franklin, Va. The bride was attended by her cousin, Mrs. W. D. Joyner; the bridegroom, his brother, Mr. Lelian Beale. The ring bearer was little Virginia Bailey.

The ceremony was performed promptly at 6:30 o'clock by the writer in the presence of a splendid company of relatives and intimate friends. Mrs. B. B. Herrin played the wedding march. Mrs. E. T. Cotten sang the solo, "I Love You Truly."

The bride was attired in a reindeer coat suit with hat and gloves that harmonized and carried a beautiful bouquet of roses. Immediately after the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Beale left on the Norfolk and Western on their bridal tour.

E. T. COTTEN.

BROWN

Oscar Brown departed this life February 20, 1919 at the age of forty-five years and eleven days. He joined the church at Union Grove when about fourteen years old and has ever been a faithful and active member, having been elected deacon in 1911.

He leaves a wife, three children (girls), an aged mother, four sisters, three brothers, besides many other relatives and a host of friends who lament his passing.

But the life he lived and testimonies he left behind are sufficient evidence that their loss is his eternal gain.

After service by the writer and high tributes to his memory by his pastor, Rev. L. W. Fogleman, and others, his body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Union Grove February 22, 1919. He will be much missed not only in the church but in the community.

May the Comforter ever abide in the hearts of his loved ones.

T. J. GREEN.

KEARNEY

January 19, Mrs. Dora Kearney, wife of Robert N. Kearney, was buried at Piank Chapel Methodist church. She leaves her husband and four children. Mrs. Kearney was a faithful wife and mother. She performed to the full limit of her strength the part that fell to her lot in life. She did not profess one thing and live another, but lived more than she professed. With her life, was not a theory but an activity. She proved her faith by her works.

G. J. GREEN.

WHITE

Mrs. Eckie White was born December 18, 1848. She died January 26, 1919. Her husband, Lonnie White, died in 1889. She was a faithful and devoted member of Oak Level Christian church. Though too feeble in recent years to attend church, she never failed to bear her part of its financial burdens without having to be asked to do so. She was buried in the family burying ground at her home near Franklinton. A large attendance at the service was evidence of her standing in the community. She is survived by three sisters.

G. J. GREEN.

PREDDY

Many have already learned with sorrow of the death of Bob Preddy, who passed from this life on February 9. He lived all his life near the town of Franklinton and was laid to rest in the family burying ground near his home. He leaves three daughters and five sons, two of whom are soldiers in France, and doubtless have not yet learned of their loss. Mr. Preddy was a highly respected citizen and leaves an impression on the community. His companion is still living.

G. J. GREEN.

FERGUSON

Mrs. Frances Ferguson was buried at Pope's Chapel church February 26. Paralysis was the cause of her death. She was sixty-nine years old and had been a member of Youngville Christian church for a number of years. She leaves her husband aged ninety-four, one daughter and seven sons. To see this daughter and these seven sons at the grave of their mother made one feel that her life had not been idle; and the strength of character expressed in their faces impressed one with the thought that her labors had not been in vain. Surely she has gone to receive her "crown of life."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY

The Revival of Giving

GENERATIONS are chapters in the history of the world. Some chapters in a book are more interesting than others. An unselfish author welcomes a better treatise on the subject that he has just finished. An unselfish citizen desires the coming generations to be better than his generation. Our own shortcomings can best be mended by planting the right kind of seed to be harvested from in the next generation. The present generation is only beginning the revival of giving for the Kingdom's progress. To live in the next generation will be to see the full fruitage of present day endeavors. A few men are preaching and teaching the gospel of stewardship. Their kind is multiplying, but it will take more missionary work along that line to answer the Lord's Prayer ".....thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven....."

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

OBITUARIES

We doubt if many readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN realize what a problem it is to handle the publicity of a Church paper that is doing five or six times more than it did ten years ago, and at the same time with the same number of pages. We are conscientiously doing our very best. In order to properly divide space, a little over a year ago we were compelled to limit marriage and obituary notices to one hundred and fifty words unless paid for at the rate of one-half cent per word. Few of our exchanges are so liberal as this. A number of Church papers have the limit to fifty words, some sixty, and very few go beyond one hundred. Exceedingly few Church papers make a charge so small as one-half cent per word.

So far as the Editor is concerned, personally, it does not differ but there has been entrusted to his care and keeping the interests of the official organ of the Church. We consider it a sacred and solemn trust. If we could not feel in the preparing of each issue of the paper that the work was not as sacred and lofty as standing behind the pulpit, we would today send our resignation to the Executive Committee of the Convention. More and more we are brought face to face between decisions for the larger good and interests of the Church and the things that might please a few. We know that it is impossible to please everybody. Christ could not do that, and though the devil wanted to, he failed.

Our policy as to obituaries is the best that we can do with the space we have. Our good friend, The Biblical Recorder, Raleigh, N. C., writes to the point on this subject, and so timely are Dr. Johnson's words that the reprinting of them seems to us to be in order:

The Recorder management is greatly embarrassed to know what to do about publishing obituaries. There are many deaths in the State because of the epidemic which has prevailed, and the number of obituaries is greater than ever before. Those who have glanced at the page of obituaries for the past several weeks have observed that the notices are longer than formerly. We have now on hand obituaries that have been on file several weeks because we have not had room to publish them. We make a charge of a cent a word for every word over sixty. This is scarcely sufficient to cover the bare cost of publication. We would be glad to give space without charge if we could afford to do so.

It will be remembered that the Baptist State Convention some years ago, decided to abolish the report on obituaries for the reason that the report had grown so long it occupied too much space in the minutes, and in lieu of the obituaries, a memorial service is held at each Convention, when tributes are paid to brethren who are known throughout the State.

This is a very delicate matter, and we have hesitated to say anything about it in these columns lest we might deepen the wounds in hearts that are already bleeding. But we do not believe these notices are read by any except those who are interested in the one who has been called away. If a brother has been engaged in work which has given him a wide acquaintance, many might read a notice of his death. This is no reflection upon the one who is known only locally. Some of the purest and best saints on earth are not known beyond their own communities. Their "witness is in heaven" and their "record is on high."

May we ask in all kindness, and in deepest sympathy with those who sorrow, that the writers of obituaries will make their notices as short as possible. When the main facts can be stated in sixty words we shall greatly appreciate it.

A NEW YEAR FOR A NEW WORLD

For The Easter Week of Prayer, April 13-20, 1919

To the Churches of Christ in America and to all people throughout the Nation:

We live in a new world. Old things pass, better things appear and the nations seek light and larger growth. The team-work of the Nations for the war was superb and Christians now face open doors unsurpassed for number and worth. Compelling desires to be and to do are challenged by plans and purposes more daring than men and women ever before matured. God leads and His will must be done.

In keeping step as one body, to honor Christ and His Kingdom, we are all heartened. Victory began when the allied armies had one General, and it begins for us in city or town, in church or community the day we unite to seek Christ's Captaincy, before we plan or move.

Quickened by the redemption of Jerusalem and the blessing of God upon the Moslem and the Eastern world, our appeal for prayer and praise widens since Jew and Gentile, Eastern and Western, are all concerned in the greater aims and hopes for humanity.

Help us our Father to do Thy will and to follow fully Thy plans and methods. Teach us to think in terms of world-need and establish in righteousness the nations now disordered and confused. Give us courage to tread unfamiliar roads and keep us free from unclean alliances. Make the experiences and discipline of today make more worthy the citizenship of tomorrow. Re-ignite our smouldering fires, quicken our spiritual hunger and give us holy unrest with present attainments. May our work be done with deepening desire and joy to the praise of Him who ever lives to intercede for us.

NOTES

The annual series of revival meetings are being held at Elon College this week. Pastor Newman is doing the preaching.

"The First Century Call to Twentieth Century Men," is Dr. Atkinson's topic for his lectures on missions at Elon College this week.

Brother Chas. D. Johnston calls the attention of the good ladies to an important item this week. Don't worry, Brother Johnston, they will respond.

Brother J. D. Gunter, Sanford, N. C., dropped in to see us one day last week. He is one of THE SUN'S most loyal friends and says that he cannot understand why a man will not subscribe for and support his Church paper.

We note from The Richland News that Rev. H. W. Elder has been pounded graciously by the Ambrose, Georgia, church. The splendid outlay of good things includes seven hams. We are writing this note before breakfast, and how the thought of that ham does make us hungry!

We chronicle with sadness the passing of Brother D. S. Farmer, News Ferry, Va., on Thursday, March 13, at 3 P. M. Brother Farmer had been in poor health for about a year, though his last sickness had not confined him to his bed but about ten days. He was in his 56th year, a loyal and devoted member of his local church, Pleasant Grove, (Va.), and a useful man in his denomination. He was a loyal supporter of every enterprise of his Church, and reared a family to follow his own footsteps. We counted him among our closest friends. He lived close in fellowship to his brethren and friends, and all who knew him called him "Brother Sam." The funeral took place at Pleasant Grove March 15, service being conducted by Pastor Truitt and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, a former pastor. A good man has answered the call to brighter clime.

David McClenny—THE SUN has been coming to our home for forty-five years and we don't want it to stop.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

ELON COLLEGE, N. C.

Elon College has again been delighted and edified by a visit from Dr. Martyn Summerbell. He preached on Sunday the ninth, morning and evening using as his themes, "A Study in Influence," and "Christian Usefulness." These were great messages, strong in vital truth and spiritual power. The evening sermon was especially enjoyed by the audience.

Six lectures from the following themes were given, two each day: "Personal Freedom in America;" "America's Noble Ideals;" "America's Patriotic Spirit;" "Making the Kaiser;" "German Provocation to America;" and "The Collapse of Kaiserism."

To each of these great and interesting themes Dr. Summerbell had given a patient and careful study and brought us the rich results of his labors. No brief analysis could do them justice. The results speak best. We felt a greater appreciation of our personal liberty and greater admiration for America's patriotic spirit and lofty ideals. We understood more clearly the causes producing the great war and the forces bringing about the collapse of Kaiserism.

Of the many strong speakers coming to us each year none brings a riper scholarship or a richer and more varied experience. His coming is always a benediction and we await his return with eager anticipation.

Mr. J. M. Darden, a prominent and successful business man of Suffolk, Va., spoke to the Ministers Association in the dining hall of West Dormitory on the evening of the 12th inst. The speaker was introduced by Dr. J. O. Atkinson in his usual pleasing style. Mr. Darden's address was a strong and forceful appeal to the young ministers to make good in this great day of need and opportunity, declaring that with a pure heart and an energetic brain and hand man could achieve whatever society needed and God willed at his hand. The discourse was aptly illustrated by examples from current history and observation, and was marked by a spirit of earnestness and deep religious conviction.

Brief and timely remarks were made by Drs. W. A. Harper and J. U. Newman, and by Revs. G. O. Lankford, R. F. Brown and F. C. Lester.

A violin solo by Prof. Bryan and a duet by Messrs. Lindley and Sides added much to the interest of the evening. After refreshments all joined in "Blest be the Tie That Binds," and Dr. J. W. Wellons closed the service with prayer.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Believing, being, and building are three good words for Christians to ponder. Without faith it is impossible to please God;" but one must not be "carried about with every wind of doctrine." Paul says, "I know whom I have believed." He believed in a person. "Believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they be of God." Belief is the exercise of faith, and faith is "the gift of God." God bestows faith upon men, but men must exercise that gift and this human exercise of faith is belief. Men must believe on the Lord Jesus Christ to be saved. God gives voice, but men must sing "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned." Believing is at the base of life. Jesus not only had faith in God, but he had faith in men; and He thus set us an example. The race is hindered in its progress by lack of faith in one-another. That lack of confidence interrupts peace, causes war, and keeps nations apart when they might co-operate with advantage to all.

Being is also an essential in Christian life. Believing is not sufficient of itself. "The devils believe, and tremble." Faith must produce being. What one is in his real life determines the value of character. Good and bad are determined by what the thing is in itself. The value of an egg is determined by the egg itself. No market can make good eggs. No society or church can make good men. Men are good or bad in themselves. Men and women make the church and not the church the men and women. There were saved men and women before there was a church. The main thing is to be good by the help of Him who is good, that is God. And one can be good in bad environments. Noah was a good man in a bad age. It is a subterfuge to put one's wrong-doing on conditions. The age did not corrupt Paul. Virtue consists in overcoming evil; we "overcome evil with good." Kindness subdues where force fails. Personal character is the mightiest force in a human society. Joseph had it. Hatred, lust, prison, had no power over him. He was like a great rock in the midst of a stream. Evil forces surged around him, but did not move him. What the world needs today is rock-like character built on Jesus Christ by a personal faith that knows Him.

Building is only another word for doing or working. Spiritual life cannot be held within the domain of believing and being. Sound faith and being good without building would die. "Faith without works is dead." The real Christian is a working Christian. A city that has faith and character will build—will grow. This is a working world. It is easy to imagine a stagnant river as an idle Christian. Jesus said: "My Father worketh hitherto and I will." And in the parable He said: "Go work in my vineyard." "Work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work." But what is the work to be done? The work of building the church; not the house alone but building up the congregation of believers in the Lord. It is character-building. This can be done by precept, by example, by confidence, by creating a spiritual atmosphere in the church and the community. Environment can be made so it is harder to do right or easier to do right, and the reverse of that, so that it is harder to do wrong or easier to do wrong. This is not a sermon. It is simply a letter. It is for you. It is a letter to help you. Please answer it by a better life.

W. W. STALEY.

FAMILY REUNION AND OTHER ITEMS

The "flu" has nearly disappeared from Liberty and Pleasant Hill. I preached at Liberty the fourth Sunday in February and at Pleasant Hill the first Sunday in this month. Last Sunday I preached at the residence of Brother Clay Teague and attended the family reunion and dinner in honor of mother, Laura Ann Teague, widow of Christopher Teague. She was eighty-five years of age March 5. Her parents were Braxton and Mary Ann York. Her parents had fourteen children, all dead but two, Mother Teague and a brother in Indiana. The following are her children—Boys: Dolph, Eugene, Clay and Edward. Edward is dead. Girls: Rosetta Workman, Henrietta Solmon, Florence Euliss and Della Fogleman.

The long table, built for the occasion, out in the yard, was loaded with choice articles of food and surrounded by her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. Neighbors and friends were there to rejoice with her and receive her benedictions. It was a very joyous occasion.

Before I left I asked her if she still took THE CHRISTIAN SUN. She said, "Of course I do. I just would not know how to keep house without THE CHRISTIAN SUN." Then she added, "Brother Riddle is very good in sending me papers to read, in addition to THE SUN. He knows how I love to read and is very thoughtful in remembering me."

I have just received a telegram from the pastor of the Christian church at Graham informing me of the death of Brother John Longest, and requesting me to aid at the funeral. Brother Longest leaves a wife and nine children. Mrs. Long and I will leave on the next train.

Judge Patterson, of this place, was taken quite sick one week ago. The doctor has been with him every day since. No improvement for the better up to this time.

CHURCH UNION TAKING PLACE

"Nothing succeeds like success." While in many quarters the pros and cons of church union are being debated, in others church union is going on at a rapid pace.

During the past nineteen months, twenty-two unions and federations have taken place in Vermont. Nine towns of that State have been left to the care and charge of one Protestant denomination. As a result fourteen ministers have been released for service elsewhere and fourteen preachers are receiving better salaries. Average church attendance has increased. Town and communities heretofore divided on non-essential church differences, now co-operate in Christian service; large numbers of "out-siders" have been enlisted in Christian service; and $1,900.00 have been released for home mission work elsewhere.

Soldiers returning to these Vermont towns will find conditions similar to those in the army in this particular, Christians uniting their forces for the good of all.

J. O. ATKINSON.

RALEIGH LETTER

In order to give CHRISTIAN SUN readers all the facts regarding the work of the Raleigh church, it will be necessary to go back a few months and record a little ancient history. The purpose of this letter is to give an account of the work already done in 1919 and the plans that are now being shaped to continue this work under the direction of the new pastor, Rev. George D. Eastes.

Brother Eastes was to have commenced his work here the first of the year, but owing to the illness of Mrs. Eastes, he did not get started promptly. In reality, therefore, he has been with the church only during the month of February and the two Sundays in March which have already passed.

During even this short period, however, it is evident that the work is going forward, and the church is planning for much greater things. The weather has kept the attendance lower than would have ordinarily been the case, but on Sunday evening, March 9, the first pretty Sunday evening since Brother Eastes came to Raleigh, the auditorium was entirely filled.

Throughout the membership there is a great increase in interest and it will probably be helpful to other churches, and interesting to friends of this church, to know just what is responsible for this.

First of all, interest has been increased by the fact that we have a new pastor. The people want to hear him—and be it said to the credit of Brother Eastes, they want to hear him twice. This means bigger and bigger congregations as the weeks go by.

Second, we have put on an advertising campaign. A contract has been given each of the two local newspapers for a five inch, single column space every Saturday for a year. This is used in announcing the sermon subjects for each service. In addition to this, small posters have been typewritten and placed in the display windows and other prominent places in the business part of the city. Last Sunday, the moving picture shows of the city were also provided with slides announcing service and these were shown at every performance Saturday and Saturday night. In addition to all this, arrangements have been made for reporting all the services to the local papers, and indications point to the probability that they will be liberal with their space.

At the last meeting of the Business Board, a plan of church organization was adopted, and the pastor is to name chairmen for the various committees which are to be created. Among these committees will be one on missions, one on music, one on evangelism, one on finances, and one on publicity. Others will probably be included.

At this meeting it was also decided to set up a goal for the work of 1919, which is as follows: First, that we clear ourselves of debt and become self-supporting with a pastor's salary of $1,800 a year; and second, that we double our membership.

With these goals in view, and with the work now seeming so encouraging, I trust that I will have great things to report to SUN readers in the coming months.

P. T. HINES.

Raleigh, N. C.

A CALL IN ORDER

It has been some time since I have written anything for THE SUN to let the people know about our work in Alabama.

Owing to the fact that our preachers are few in number, it has been a difficult matter for some of our churches to get a pastor, though I think they are all arranged for now except New Home church. I understand that they are without a regular pastor.

I think that the Convention's call for one hundred new recruits for the ministry is in order and should be heeded by every praying man and woman in the entire Convention. It seems to me that the time has never been when the field was whiter to harvest than at the present time and as we see and feel so keenly this need in the Master's vineyard let us pray the Lord of the harvest and he will send more laborers into His vineyard. Not only do we need new recruits in the ministry, but one of our greatest needs in some of our churches in Alabama is more men and women whose lives are on the altar to take the lead in the work of the Sunday school and song services. Another great need is a consecrated church membership to follow their leader. Jesus Christ said, "I am the Way," and in another place he said, "Follow Me." His was the way of service and sacrificing for others. The Son of Man came not to be ministered but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many. So let us all be Christ-like in our lives that the world may stop and take notice that we have been with Jesus.

J. D. DOLLAR.

LOSING LIFE TO FIND LIFE!

Selfishness is a big obstacle to spiritual growth and progress. "Except a grain of wheat fall in the earth and die, it cannot yield fruit." Losing in order that he might find was the great motto of Jesus Christ, "I lay down my life that I might take it up again. If I have power to lay it down I have power to take it up again." He lost the Heavenly life that he might gain it again not only for himself but for others, yea he gave, lost his own dear human life that he might save other lives.

We, his followers, must get self in the background and invest something, give life in order to receive life. Life is a process that is mysterious, none but God and Christ know exactly what it is. But we are given this much truth on the hypothesis that life is progressive. It takes life to make life.

We speak of the life of a nation. Its citizens constitute the elements of the nation. The life of a school or institution is its faculty, pupils, influence and productions. In community or town the inhabitants compose the life. A church has life or it is dead. Its active, live members is the life. Something must be invested on the part of its individuals if it counts for much. What have you or I lost for the cause of the Church of God? It is worthy of our all and can reward eternal life and blissful joy. It always pays double-fold and interest.

L. L. WYRICK.

Elon College, N. C.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE WAR

It seems to me, previous to this last war, Isaiah expresses the condition of affairs which existed throughout our so-called Christian America. (?). In chapter 53, verse 6: "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way."

Man had fallen away from his church, from his Sunday school and prayer meetings. Living after the flesh, or worldliness, which leads toward death. Romans 8-6. The real cause is the neglected prayer. The good women, thank the Lord, have kept up their weeks of prayer—and the poor neglected wife and mother, praying for the wayward or club-going and society seeking husband, has kept them nearer together. So many mid-week prayer meetings we have attended to find a few faithful women, the pastor and maybe one or two other men.

The Civil War came on and was possibly a chastisement, as if our Father would say, "Children, you have already gone too far, won't you return to Him who has done so much for you?" You remember our great President called his people to prayer. It is very plain to those who believe that God heard and answered. We saw our need and knew to whom to go in the time of trouble. "The Lord is good, a stronghold in the day of trouble and he knoweth them that trust in Him."

There seemed to be on the part of our people a casual, "I thank you," as it was on the part of the children of Israel. When God spoke to them through Moses near Mount Sinai, they said, "All thou hast said we will do." But not being a heartfelt repentance they soon returned to their worldliness and demanded of Aaron that he make them a gold calf.

The war was indeed destructive and caused much bloodshed, but it seems not to have been a sufficient lesson. Then came the great world's plague, Influenza, which has taken many more lives than the German bullets. First and second attack and in some places the third. Are our people ready to listen and heed? Do we recognize the fact that it is the great love of God, our Father of Heaven and of earth?

Now brethren and sisters, may I implore you to return to your closets and when the door is shut, tell the Lord we have sinned, and beg Him to forgive and save lest a worse calamity befall us. His promises are secure—they have never failed. Just take time to read Romans 12:1-2, "Be ye careful for nothing (over anxious) but in everything prayer and supplication and with thanksgiving. Let your requests be made known unto God. For the peace of God which passeth all understanding shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." Then turn to your Bible and read the last words of Isaiah 53:6, not quoted in the beginning of this. "And the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all." Shall we not love Him? John 15:7. "If ye abide in me and my word abide in you, ask what you will and it shall be done unto you." Isaiah 12:2—"Behold God is my salvation; I will trust and not be afraid, for the Lord Jehovah is my strength and my song and he is become my salvation." First Corinthians 15:57-58.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

FROM DR. LONG, ELON'S FOUNDER

Dr. W. A. Harper,
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Brother:—

I want to assure you that my whole heart is with you in the great and important step you are about to take. I am confident that when the matter has been properly and intelligently presented to our people that they will respond generously and meet all that is required.

The whole brotherhood has become convinced of the vital importance of the college and its value as an institution in our Church, and it should be a great pleasure and joy to have an opportunity to contribute to its permanent establishment.

I shall aid you as far as I can. May the good Lord bless you and the college.

As ever, very truly,
W. S. LONG.

THE ELON STANDARDIZATION FUND The Plan

We are now prepared to announce our plan for the conduct of The Elon Standardization Fund campaign. We believe that the Church will endorse our judgment as wise and proper, and co-operate with us wholeheartedly in the drive. Our confidence in the method, based on experience in other churches and in the various war-fund drives, is firm, and so is our confidence in our Brotherhood. "We can do it, and we will."

We are to associate with President Harper in the field work five men of proven ability. These six brethren are to push the field work for funds as rapidly as they can until June the first. June is to be our final drive month, during which every church not already visited will be canvassed, utilizing local workers just as far as possible in the grand finish.

We have reasons for this decision. Two campaigns right together conducted in just the same way will lack the variety that produces zest and enthusiasm. A long drawn out campaign is expensive. The College needs its president on the Hill to direct its affairs, and particularly during the summer months in the campaign for students ought he to be free from other cares. The co-operative drive we suggest is free from these objections, and the team-work it will necessitate is prophetic of great good to our cause. Then it will teach us that this drive is ours, not Elon's. Remember, brethren, we own Elon College and it is our duty to care for it at whatever cost.

The churches that will by our plan be called upon to give up their pastors for a few months will we feel sure be honored in the sacrifice such generosity will entail. Our Christ teaches sacrifice, He also illustrated it, and the church that follows in His trail never loses, but gains immeasurably. Other denominations have laid such requisition on their leaders, with blessed response and gratifying results. Our people will rise to the occasion.

A Few Details

The minimum subscription is to be $100, or $20 the year for five years.

An individual who gives at least one thousand dollars may perpetuate his own name or the name of a friend in the establishment of a fund, whose interest the Trustees shall use for the general purpose of the College.

An individual, church, or organization that gives $25,000 may endow a professorship in the College Faculty.

Liberty Loan Bonds and War Savings Stamps (at their redeemable value) will be accepted in payment of subscriptions.

Any church that reaches its quota will be given a beautiful recognition card, handsomely printed in Maroon and Old Gold, the Elon colors, for display in its place of public worship. Any church that doubles its quota will have a golden star affixed in the white field of this recognition card, and additional stars will indicate still further doubling of the quota.

Let the Brotherhood be earnest in prayer that God may give us speedy and pronounced victory in this great drive to place our College on a solid financial basis.

The Campaign Leaders

In accordance with the plan printed above, there will be associated with me in the drive as campaign leaders: President T. E. White, of The North Carolina Conference, Sanford, N. C.; Rev. G. O. Lankford, Berkley, Va.; Rev. R. F. Brown, Durham, N. C.; Rev. E. M. Carter, Wadley, Ala.; Dr. N. G. Newman, Elon College, N. C. I bespeak for these brethren the earnest prayers of our people and that ready response which has made the raising of funds for our college a proverbial joy.

We six will give ourselves to the field work as rapidly as we can loosen ourselves from our local situations. We will be assisted by many others, who cannot go into the field as such. We feel sure the sacrifices the churches are making in letting these brethren off will be met by a generous response in liberality wherever they go. Elon is ours and we shall demonstrate our devotion to her by doing this thing in great style.

One other item. I am sure you have enjoyed the final page of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Rev. C. B. Riddle has agreed to use this page during the campaign for its benefit. He will prepare the copy and see to its display. Brother Riddle is one of the best publicity men in the country and this generosity of his will be appreciated and enjoyed by all.

Pray that this work may go forward in the Master's chosen way.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

(Rev. W. H. Denison, D. D., Superintendent)

The Superintendent will meet with the workers of the Northwestern Indiana Conference at the conference mid-year institute March 18-20 to consider the Forward Movement work.

He will also meet the workers of the Warren, Indiana church and the churches within reach of Warren at the Warren church, Friday afternoon and night, March 21 for conferences and for a Forward Movement rally.

He will meet another group of workers at Huntington, Indiana, March 23 and 24.

At all of the gatherings he is exceedingly anxious to meet the pastors, Sunday school superintendents, the Four-Minute Men and key workers in the churches in the interest of the Forward Movement.

The Four-Minute Men's names are coming in every day from the churches. Have you sent your name in yet? We want four-minute men in every church right away.

The Prayer Covenants are being signed and sent in nearly every day. Have you signed yours yet? Have you sent in any from your church? It is very important and their effect is felt in many churches. A number of pastors are reporting increased interest, double attendance at prayer meetings and a spiritual uplift in the church.

Rev. E. C. Geeding, Atwood, Ill., says: "I am enclosing names of Four-Minute Men. Next Sunday evening five of the young people will read papers or give a short address on the five points of the Movement. I have finished my series of Forward Movement sermons. My church is moving forward."

Rev. D. M. Helfenstein, D. D., Orient, Iowa: "We observed the first three weeks of February in harmony with the Forward Movement. I feel there was a quickening of the spiritual life, and a deepening of the interest in the things of the Kingdom. I am sending you the name of our Four-Minute Man."

Rev. A. O. Jacobs, Olney, Ill.: "We have adopted the Forward Movement plan here and we are making a canvass and drive for church membership from now until Easter. Our prayer meeting attendance has been doubled and all of the services have increased."

In October the Southern Indiana Wabash Conference will celebrate its one hundredth anniversary. The program will be built around the Forward Movement program. Our last session was built around the five points.

The Indiana and Illinois state conference will hold a joint session in June and the program is arranged on the Forward Movement fundamentals.

Church Programs

Many appreciative words are spoken for the list of church program that have been given for the Forward Movement. They have been very suggestive to our pastors and church officials and a goodly number of our ministers have outlined a definite church program around the Forward Movement fundamentals.

We have given a number of rural church programs.

We are pleased to give this week a city church program as has been carried out by our Durham, North Carolina church under their splendid pastor, Rev. R. F. Brown. It may be suggestive to many city churches.

ABRAHAM SACRIFICING ISAAC

(Sermon by Rev. A. W. Andes, Harrisonburg, Va.)

Text: Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of. Gen. 22:2.

No doubt during the recent call to arms for freedom's sake, many a fond parent has had the heart-breaking experience of saying good-bye to a loving son, knowing that the enemy might slay him on foreign soil before time for his return home. How sad such a parting is some can only guess at while those who have had the experience know but cannot express. While I am sure such good-byes are sad beyond expression, I think Abraham's trial must have been still sadder. In Abraham's home is an only son whom he loves as devotedly as ever a son could be loved, and through whom he expects, according to the plain promises of God, to be a great blessing to the world. No doubt, as the days go by and Abraham sees the unfolding of the life of rich promise in his son Isaac, his hopes grow still brighter, and the ties of affection grow stronger and stronger around the hearts of both father and son. The peace and love of this happy home are suddenly startled by the voice of the Lord that said to Abraham: "Take now thy son, thine only son Isaac, whom thou lovest, and get thee into the land of Moriah; and offer him there for a burnt offering upon one of the mountains which I will tell thee of." How the words "offer him there for a burnt offering" must have driven the dagger into the heart and the hopes of good old father Abraham! But the Lord had spoken, and that settled it. Early next morning everything is ready for the journey, and they are off. What a sad journey it must have been for Abraham! What could have been the nature of the conversation with Isaac during those three days of traveling together? Finally the journey is ended and Abraham builds an altar, lays the wood on it, and binds Isaac his son, and tenderly taking him up lays him on the altar. Oh, how hard it must have been at that moment for Abraham to seize the huge knife and hold it aloft as he looked down into the dear face of his own son lying helpless on the altar, and think that in the next moment he must see the dying agonies and hear the dying groans of that dear boy! But love to God, and obedience to Him have gained the victory, and the hand that holds the knife is about to make the fatal plunge, when hark, an angel's voice breaks the awful silence saying, "Lay not thine hand upon the lad, neither do thou anything unto him; for now I know that thou fearest God, seeing thou hast not withheld thy son, thine only son from me."

Let us in meditation stand by Abraham's altar, lay our hand upon his shoulder, look into the calm happy face of the old patriarch and learn once for all time that God must be first always in our love, that our obedience must be perfect, and that our faith must be unshakable even in face of the severest tests that can ever come to us. Just there let us breathe a prayer that God will help us learn these lessons.

Having learned them we are now prepared to build a few altars and make some sacrifice ourselves.

On altar number one we will lay our Isaac of Love for the World. We are commanded in I John 2:15 to "Love not the world, neither the things that are in the world." But there are many worldly agencies bidding for our love. Here are the useless luxuries that afford an attraction and perhaps a momentary pleasure. Here are the prospects of getting rich and piling up a little of this world's goods to rest in ease upon after a while. If we have learned to put God first in our love and obedience we will bind this Isaac of Love for the World and lay him upon the altar. And then instead of planning only how to accumulate wealth or shine in society or live easy we will plan how we may serve the Lord best, and do the most good in the world. Living and planning thus may mean that we shall have to deny ourselves many things the earthly appetite craves; it may mean years of preparation for life's greatest duties; it may mean the expenditure of money in school before the money is earned, but what matters all that if our Life's journey is directed by a high and holy ideal, and our God with an abundant reward awaits us at the journey's end? Can you look into the face of this Isaac and proceed quickly with the sacrifice?

On altar number two we will sacrifice our Isaac of Biased Opinions. Ofttimes our opinions of Bible doctrines are moulded by our own desires. For example, some people do not believe in missions because they do not want to. If they believed in missions they might feel under obligation to give a few of their dearly beloved dollars for mission work. But if they can only shut their eyes to plain Bible teaching they can keep the dollars, and erroneously think they feel better. But if we were in heathen darkness and other nations had the gospel we would believe in missions, because the good things would then be coming our way. Likewise, some people do not believe in tithing. But if the Lord had promised an additional dime for every dollar we made it would be an easy matter to get people to believe in that kind of tithing. Common honesty should compel us to abide by plain Bible teaching, and not try to twist such teaching to suit our own carnal desires. Too often our Isaac of Biased Opinions is allowed to play an important part in our choice of a life work. We too often allow ourselves to believe that the calling that promises most from a worldly standpoint is our God-given mission, and that the vocation promising most of hardship and sacrifice is for some one else. Deciding upon our life work should be done without asking our own worldly desires or ambitions any questions; but looking to the Lord in sincere and ceaseless prayer, settle upon that course that promises to make us the greatest possible blessing to the world. Young man, before settling this matter do not fail to consider well the ministry as probably the course of greatest usefulness for you to take. Is our Isaac of Biased Opinion and Carnal Desire well bound and safely laid on the altar?

Around altar number three I see a crowd of parents. But what are they doing? Are they laying their children on God's altar? Alas, not all of them are. Some want their children to shine in society, or make plenty of money, or win worldly honor, while others are satisfied if their children simply keep out of the clutches of the law, and get along through life most any way they can. What are they preparing their children for? Oh, simply to reach the goals just mentioned. Is it not a sad fact that these are the highest and only ambitions of many parents for their children? They have never prayed that the children might be useful in God's service; that they might some day shine as bright stars on God's great honor roll; that they might be brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, and be great in God's sight, even though obscure in the estimation of the world. I believe the scarcity of efficient church workers and ministers is due more to the wrong ideals of parents for their children than to anything else. The child is usually, to a certain extent, directed by the parent into the ways the parent desires the child to go, whether to money-making, pleasure seeking, or serving the Lord. If parents could only be induced to lay their children on God's altar instead of on the world's altar, a few years would reveal to us all the good church workers, God-fearing ministers, and consecrated dollars needed for the successful prosecution of the King's business. Oh, parents, parents, upon which altar have you laid your children? If you lay them on the world's altar and they amount to nothing really good and worth while don't blame any one but yourself. And if they bring you trouble just remember where you laid them and repent of your mistake. But the sad part about it is that it may then be too late to mend matters much. Lay them on God's altar in infancy and nurture them there.

I hear some saying, we have laid our children upon God's altar. All right, that is fine. Now let us see what kind of wood you have piled around them. Here is one good father who has laid his son on God's altar, and then piled around him the daily papers, the farm papers, the lodge papers, the latest fiction, etc. No church paper there, no Bible teaching there, no religious books there, no course in his own church school there. How do you think that boy will likely turn out? I have a question for that parent: Why don't you lay close to the heart of that dear boy the Bible, your church paper, some good religious books, and a course in your own church school? Here is the common answer: "Well, we are now taking about all the papers we are able to pay for, and all we have time to read." And as for an education that takes too much time and money or there are schools closer home and cheaper than our denominational college. I don't know what to think of such a parent. Consecrate the child to the Lord and then give him everything except the things he needs to direct him in the right way. Verily, there is a great deal of gross inconsistency in many Christian homes. If money and time are limited why not provide only such reading matter for the home as will cultivate the best spiritual atmosphere possible? And in selecting a school why not select the one with the best religious influence instead of one that is almost Godless and may crush out the spiritual life? If our boys and girls are ever to be religiously inclined and become faithful servants for the Master they must be fed upon the mental and spiritual food that will cause development in that direction. So there are two sins of which parents may be guilty. One is to sacrifice the children upon the world's altar, and the other is to make a pretense of laying them on God's altar, and then not helping prepare them for lives of usefulness in His service.

Before we take our eyes off of Abraham as pictured to us in the chapter from which our text is taken may we all gather around God's altar, and lay ourselves upon that altar, and lay our children there, and our money there, and all that we have and are, there, and then our pulpits will be filled with spiritual preachers, our pews with faithful worshippers, our colleges will be supported and patronized, our missions will flourish; coming generations will rise up and call us blessed, God will be honored and pleased, and we shall rejoice in his smile of approval forever and ever.

Mrs. Tom Cobb—I trust that we may succeed in sending THE SUN in every home that doesn't take it, for I know if they once take it they would not be without it.

FROM CHARLES G. TRUMBELL

(Editor Sunday School Times)

"The day is coming," writes Mr. Trumbell, "when the Sunday school that has not sent some of its members to a home or foreign mission field, while at the same time numbering still others in its membership as volunteers pledged to go, will be ashamed and self-condemned. The reason why Sunday schools generally have not yet reached this high but practicable standard is because most Sunday schools do not know what the Sunday school is, and what is the real end of its effort.

For example, the Sunday school is often spoken of as the church of tomorrow, or the child of the church, or as a branch of the church. All of these definitions are misleading.

Again, the purpose of the Sunday school is commonly spoken of as Bible study. And the great end of the Sunday school is usually said to be soul-winning. Both of these statements are not only inadequate, but positively harmful in the narrowing, stultifying limitations that they impose.

The Sunday school is not the church of tomorrow, nor a branch of the church of today; it is the church engaged in the most important work that God commits to man. As the church teaching, the Sunday school is the church at work carrying out the Great Commission; making disciples, or learners, of all men.

Bible study is, of course, only a means to the end that the Sunday school has in view. And that end is not soul-winning; the church would be a body of babes, untrained and useless, if it were true. Soul-winning is vital; but soul-winning is the first step, not the last, in Sunday school effort. Yet many a teacher really seems to think that he has done about all he needs to do for a given class if he has brought the members of that class to an open confession their Savior.

What, then, is the end of Sunday school work? Character training for service in the extension of the Kingdom. Not a selfish salvation, a saving merely of our own self-centered souls; but a salvation for one great purpose only; power to win others to Christ, and to train them up in Christ."

"This then," continues Mr. Trumbell, "may fairly be said to be the chief and sole purpose of the Sunday school, the implanting of the missionary spirit so as to give it control of the life of every pupil."

No one is better equipped for defining correctly the Sunday school and what its purpose is than Mr. Trumbell who has given his great talent and consecrated ability to Sunday school work on a large scale.

MAY

Mrs. Louie May, wife of Mr. K. S. May, was buried in the family burying ground near her father's home, eight miles from Louisburg, N. C., March 1. Mrs. May was an excellent woman as evidenced by the many words of appreciation uttered by her neighbors in the hearing of the writer. She was plain, unpretentious, sincere, a rare personality, and faithful to life's duties. She belonged to a family of unusually high moral serving, their word being as unquestionable in their community as if were on sacred page. Her father, J. Oliver Inscow, and her mother, Bettie Inscow, into whose home much sorrow has come within the last two years, still survive her. She leaves also one sister and three brothers, two of whom are in the United States Army in France. One other brother died at Camp Sevier near the beginning of the recent war. Of her immediate family there still survives, husband and three children.

MCCANE

Henry Walter McCane, son of Alfred Perry and Ellen Apple McCane, Caswell County, N. C., was born July 10, 1865 and died February 28, 1919, aged 54 years, eight months and eighteen days.

The father of the deceased was a Presbyterian Scotchman and the son followed the faith of the father. His mother was the daughter of the late Rev. Solomon Apple. When a young man he married Miss Kate McAden, Semora, N. C., and settled in Newport News, Va., where for years he held a position as a mechanic in the ship yard. A short time ago he accepted the position as manager of the Warwick Company farm with the hope that his failing health would improve. In the fall he had influenza from which pulmonary heart failure developed, resulting in his death. He is survived by a wife, three sons and three daughters. The remains were interred in the Lebanon church cemetery, March 3, in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends. Services conducted by the writer. May a strong faith in the personal God comfort the husbandless and fatherless.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

AN URGENT NEED

I suppose in orphanage life there will hardly ever be a time when we will not have a need to be supplied. We often need articles very badly and do without them and are denied the comforts they would bring. We often need some articles more than others.

We now have a need that must be supplied, and one that we cannot do without much longer; and if our friends could visit us and see for themselves they would realize that I am stating facts. We have been fighting against the high prices and have made all kinds of make-shifts to put off supplying this need till prices might be adjusted to a lower level and we have waited patiently. We need sheets, about one hundred of them, for double beds. We need them now. We also need one hundred counter-panes or spreads of some kind for the beds.

When we call on the good ladies to supply any need we have we always get a very liberal response. Sometime last fall we were very much in need of table linen and we asked our good ladies to supply that need and the response was beautiful. We now have a nice white cloth on each table and a reserve supply for changing. I feel sure all who had a part in supplying that need feel glad that they had the opportunity of contributing. I am going to ask the good ladies of our churches to supply the sheets and counter-panes and I feel sure they will be glad to do it. Just think how easy it would be to supply this need if just one good woman in each church would make it her business to see the women of her church and make up enough money to buy just a few sheets and counter-panes and mail to us by parcel post. How easy and quickly this need could be supplied and what a change we could make in the looks of our beds!

This is an opportunity you have to make a nice clean bed for some little orphan boys and girls where they can rest and sleep sweetly and dream of mother who one time in their sweet lives sang them to sleep and tucked the cover around their little form and placed a good night kiss on their tender cheek, and prayed that the guarding angel would watch over them during the night.

Of this sweet happiness and tender love, many of them are denied, as mother has closed her eyes in death and her tender caresses are theirs no more to enjoy but while you cannot take the place of mother in their little lives you can supply this need and bring to them the comfort and joy these blessings will bring.

You now have this opportunity and privilege to render this service and I feel sure you will be glad to make use of it. I am counting on you and feel sure in the next few weeks this need will be supplied.

Lessons From The Flowers

SPRINGTIME brings us the flowers and the flowers bring us messages that are many. They call and challenge us to a higher and nobler life. They are the emblems of purity and their fragrance fills the air, which reminds us that we should fill the earth with goodness and break the alabaster box of love that it may spread in all directions. The brevity of the life of their bloom reminds man of his numbered days. Flowers grow beautifully in filthy places and this reminds us that from ours sins and selfishness God can lift us up and make our lives beautiful and sublime.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

THE CHURCH AND HER PROGRAM

(Extracts from a sermon preached recently in the Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., by The Sun's Editor.)

The Church has always had a program—the program of Jesus Christ. Men have never differed on that point but, inhuman like, they have waged wars over the presentation and interpretation of that program. It is not law alone that brings men into conflict so much as it is the result and the interpretation of law. If the world war has been a blessing in any way it has blessed the Christian forces of the land by bringing them to see a program of unity, a program for the salvation of the world—a new program, a unified program.

The recent war was often called a religious, a righteous war, but it was not the first to be called that. Through all ages men have fought for religious freedom but in many instances men have made that freedom a prisoner in their own hearts. They have not heeded the injunction, "He that saveth his life shall lose it, and he that loses his life shall save it." Ideas shape themselves into ideals and it is the ideals that we differ from each other about. It was the ideals of Germany that came into conflict with the ideals of a Christian nation. We were as sure of which would win as we are sure that the stars are in the firmament.

Things have been shaken up very much during the last four years. Democracy has been on trial and Christianity has been tested. Democracy triumphed and Christianity has proven itself again and again. But just as we found threat-barren places in Democracy we also found weak places in the Church. Take heed that we say "weak places in the Church and not in Christianity." Out of the turmoil and upheaval the spirit of Christianity has come like a flame from a burning volcano. In every world conflict has come out a shining light in the path of men and a joy to all who have sought and practiced its teaching. We have no fear of Christianity—its application is that which concerns us.

The narrowness of the Church's program has given birth to hundreds of humanitarian organizations that are within the scope and work of the Church. The spirit of Christ will have an outlet, and if the Church, the one supreme organization by and for Christianity, fails to give it its largest expression, it will seek an outlet through some other avenue. Christianity is a principle, and therefore, cannot be hemmed or hedged about. We hear it said that the young men back in the trenches will think more of the Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A. than they will of a Church. If they do, it will be on account of the Service that these organizations have rendered the young men.

The future Church and its program must be so vital and faithful to the life and teachings of Jesus that it will not be difficult to distinguish men of the world from men of the Kingdom's interest. All too long we have been satisfied with Sunday display of our Christianity—we must live it seven days to the week. The prayers of a man who has mistreated his employees will not lead them to a throne of grace on Sunday morning. The invitation of a fellow workman will not get his comrade into the Sunday school if that workman has been dishonest six days in the week. The pious soul on Sunday will not suffice the other six. So many of us conserve the wick and oil during the week and burn it to a smoking flame on the Sabbath.

To many who have joined the Church there has been a sad disappointment. They have been expecting to get something out of it and they have not. The reason is simple: They have put nothing into it. They have sought to draw dividends where they have not invested; they have sought to reap where they have not sown; they have asked before they have given.

A QUESTION FOR CONSIDERATION

It is no spasmodic thing that our people are being called upon to give greatly and graciously—it is the result of growth and demands of the Kingdom. And the beauty of it is that people grow in grace and financial ways when they give. It liberates their spirit and activities. But here is the question for consideration: Has the time not arrived when we need to make a drive for a definite setting aside of a certain part of our incomes for the cause of Christ? All denominations are rapidly doing this thing. When we have raised our mission fund, our educational fund, and reached the goals set in all other lines, the start will only be made. We must teach the masses to give systematically that great results and steady growth may continue to come to the Church.

THE SUN CAMPAIGN

During the last few days the campaign for a larger subscription list for THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been moving along very nicely. So far we have not announced just what has been done. We endeavor to be optimistic all the time (and it certainly takes that to edit and finance a Church paper) but the work in February and March, unless radically changed within the next week, will fall far below our expectations. The following ministers have been active in the work, and according to their work for new subscribers they stand on the list in the following order: J. E. Franks, E. T. Cotton, L. I. Cox, R. F. Brown, T. E. White, L. L. Wyrick, J. L. Foster, W. D. Harward, J. Lee Johnson, I. T. Underwood, W. L. Wells, B. J. Howard, C. E. Newman, D. A. Long, A. W. Andes, and J. F. Morgan.

The above names are given in order from the highest number to the lowest. There are two names on the list that have the same number and then another group of three having the same number each, and still another group of six that have the same number each. We leave it to the brethren to guess who they are tied with and to work out the tie. Our report for the period will include the work done on the fifth Sunday and up to Wednesday, April 2. This will give ample time for all work done during March to reach this office.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE

An experiment in the form of a Sunday School Institute was inaugurated in Alamance County last summer by the Board of Religious Education of the County Sunday School Association. The original plan was to have a regular school for one week for the benefit of officers and teachers of the Sunday schools. An able faculty was secured. All plans were ready for the execution of the work when the epidemic of Influenza struck the country. The work was postponed from time to time, always with something to conflict. It was finally decided to put on the Institute beginning with Sunday, March 16, with the same faculty except for each faculty member to lecture on his or her subject and to omit the class work. One session was held each evening for a period of one week. The members of the faculty secured were: Mr. J. Norman Wills, Greensboro, N. C.; Mr. J. M. Broughton, Jr., Raleigh, N. C.; Dr. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, N. C.; Prof. C. C. Ilworth, Burlington, N. C.; Miss Martha Dozier, Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. Chas. L. Van Noppen, Greensboro, N. C.; Mr. Gilbert T. Stephenson, Winston-Salem, N. C.

These specialists in Sunday school work brought rare messages that filled every auditor with a vision for greater things in the Sunday school work of the County. Practically all sections of the County were represented at different times.

As a result of the Institute the Board of Religious Education decided to take steps and employ an all time secretary to look after the Sunday school work of the County just as the Superintendent of Public Instruction looks after general schools. The Board, together with the County Association, is of the opinion that the time has come when such a step is necessary. It is being worked out in many counties in North Carolina and Virginia and is certainly worthy of consideration.

OF WORLD INTEREST

As we go to press the news reaches the country that Hungary has proclaimed an armed alliance with Russia and proposes war against the entente. The following notes taken from the daily press of this (Monday) morning, March 24, may be of some interest:

London, March 23.—The Budapest government is reported to be signing a proclamation acknowledging a state of war between Hungary and the entente, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Vienna.

"The dispatch adds that the Czechoslovaks government is preparing to issue a mobilization order."

"Copenhagen, March 23.—A dispatch from Budapest dated Friday said that time order was being maintained by the troops and the national guard. The revolutionary government, it was stated had issued a prohibition against the carrying of arms, making the penalty for disobedience five years penal servitude and a fine of 50,000 kronen.

"Other dispatches announce that order prevails in the country districts around Budapest."

THE EDITOR'S SIDE LINE

If an editor could close his work when he closes his office for the day it would not be quite so bad, but his work cannot be confined within four walls. We make it a rule not to report all the services we hold and the things that engage us on the Sabbath unless they are in churches of the denomination. Last Sunday was not altogether typical of our work, but many are not far from it. On that day we met our Bible class at 10 o'clock, preached at the Webb Avenue M. E. church, Burlington, at 11 o'clock; met the Board of Religious Education of Alamance County at 2 o'clock, heard Judge Stephenson in the final session of the Alamance County Sunday School Institute at 3 o'clock, met the County Sunday School Association at 4:30, preached at the above named church again at 7:30, and at 8:45, by invitation, made a "talk" to the colored organization of the M. E. church of the city. Pen points are not the only things worn out by an editor of a religious periodical.

The coming of spring gives renewed life and vigor to every living creature. It is just another way that God changes the scene and gives rest to his children.

If you appeal to the real man to join the church on the ground that it is a rest room you cannot win him. Men want something to do.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

THE CHAPEL HILL FIELD OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH Chapel Hill

The work here is encouraging to say the least. We received three valuable additions to this membership at last Sunday evening's service. The Sunday school is alive with interest and is growing, under the superintendency of Brother W. E. Lindsey. One Sunday in each month is devoted to the study of missions and the offering of the day is given to the same cause. Brother E. L. Daughtry, a graduate student in the University, and teacher of our Men's Bible Class, was the interesting speaker to the school on this subject last Sunday. We are also giving (investing) one Sunday's offering to the Orphanage. Our school offers testimony for the "Give and Grow" idea. The Christian Endeavor Society is doing well. Brother D. J. Rose, a medical student in the University, is its president.

Now, dear reader, allow me a word about "pounding." The Chapel Hill and Damascus people are perpetual pounders. Instead of all coming together once or twice in a year, as is the old custom, it is every few days that we are reminded of their thoughtfulness and devotion by a load of wood being dumped on our woodpile and the driver refuses to take pay, or a sack of flour, a ham, (yes, a real Orange county ham), a bag of potatoes, eggs, chickens and other things carried to our kitchen and we have to hurry to even say "thank you." Each seems to know his "time," and the plan works like a charm.

Damascus

This church maintains its reputation as an old stand-by. Its spiritual life proves itself in its responsiveness to the many calls of the needy. They paid on pastor's salary last year $75.00 more than was promised at beginning of year, and the same amount is promised this year. A live Sunday school, under the leadership of Brother Bonnie Crabtree, survives the the "flu" and winter weather.

Martha's Chapel

This, badly scattered membership is not without a majority who are loyal. Our first quarterly meeting of the year was held recently, at which time mention was made of the fact that our Church needed a new roof, and with less than a dozen male members present, more than $70.00 was raised in about five minutes. More was raised on Sunday, so the roof is assured. This church also paid its pastor more than it promised last year, and votes a $50.00 raise in salary for this year. We received one new member here at our last appointment.

O'Kelly's Chapel

We have been to this point only twice this year. The congregation at our last appointment was encouraging. We are hopeful of results at this place.

Brethren, pray that among these people I may prove myself a workman that needeth not to be ashamed.

B. J. HOWARD.

"NOT WITH US"

"John answered and said, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followed not with us and we forbade him, because he followeth not with us." Luke 9:49. Mark reports him as saying, "We forbid him because he followed not us." Mark 9:38. Jesus said, "forbid him not." This was the same John who a little later, with James, wanted to call fire down from heaven to consume the inhabitants of a certain Samaritan village, because Jesus was not allowed to pass through on his way to Jerusalem. Jesus again gives a rebuke when he says, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of."

This same John was also with James in the request that they made of Jesus, that they might sit, the one on the right hand and the other on the left, in his Kingdom." The rebuke comes again in the words, "Ye know not what ye ask."

Think of a man with this spirit going out to forbid a worker for Christ against the devil, and for the simple reason that, "he followed not with us."

But there came a time in John's life when he saw things in a different light and had a different spirit, a spirit of helpfulness: It had come when Peter and John were going up to the temple to pray, as recorded in the third chapter of Acts. That was on the other side of Pentecost. Selfishness and the Holy Ghost do not abide in the same life, at the same time. As to a man filled with the Holy Ghost there will be something of higher consideration than, "politicking" in religion.

SUFFOLK LETTER

I am thinking just now of the kitchen and the cook. These are two essentials in the home. The parlor is more prominent, where there is one, but the kitchen is more essential. The piano costs more, but the range is more useful. The pictures on the parlor wall may attract more attention than the pans on the kitchen wall; but they do not serve human necessity as well. The guests sit in the parlor, but get their dinner from the kitchen. There is too little thought given to the size, ventilation, and furniture of the kitchen. The kitchen should be large enough for comfort and convenience and the furniture should include all possible helps. It is vanity to spend a thousand dollars on drawing-room, and a hundred on a kitchen. Yea, more, the husband overlooks fair play when he has an elegant office for his business a shabby kitchen for his wife.

Think of the work of a cook. Three times a day for three hundred and sixty-five days in a year means ten hundred and ninety fires, meals must be prepared and dishes washed and pans, too. In most kitchens as many fires must be built and as many buckets of water must be brought in. In many kitchens it is too cold in winter and too hot in summer; yet the cook must prepare the meals. In addition to the work, there must be the plan for the meal first. What shall it be? How shall it be prepared? When shall it be served? How long shall it wait for thoughtless eaters? It is one round of repetitions for which few are ever thanked. As many complain as praise. It is the largest number of workers in the world. There is no other group or class of workers as large as the number of cooks in the world, and they get less pay. Most of them are housewives, mothers at families, performing their task with a devotion and fidelity more bravely than the soldiers in war. Yet little is thought, and less is said, about these millions of women who feed the world. Much is said about farmers feeding the world. The cooks feed the farmers and all the world beside the tillers of the soil. Many of them hack wood with dull axes, build fires with wet wood, draw water with poor rigs and cook in smoky kitchens; and then get good meals and keep cheerful. There is as much grace as grease in many kitchens, and more religion than in many parlors and offices. Many prayers have gone up to God over the bread tray or the frying pan, and many sacred altars are close to the kitchen stove. Here is the mint where love is coined into biscuit and steak, doughnuts and pies, pickles and preserves. Here is where mother thinks of papa at work and children at school, and plans for dinners and suppers to please both, never thinking of herself. Thus the kitchen toilers are in an endless chain of service for those they love. The kitchen chimneys are more than the factory and steamer smokestacks, with the locomotive added in; and the smoke rises from furnaces just as essential to the life of man and the business of the world.

Henry Grady went to his boyhood country home in Georgia after he had made his reputation by his great Boston speech, and requested his mother to cook him some cakes as she did when he was a boy; and then let him say his evening prayer at her knee again before he went to bed at night. No newspaper praise was as sweet to this great man as that revival of childhood in a country home. No state dinner can equal the kitchen meal on a winter day in the home where love builds the fire, cooks the dinner, and serves it with a mother's hands. All hail! to the cooks of the world.

INGRAM AND PLEASANT GROVE

Dr. J. O. Atkinson's visit to Ingram marked a new day in our midst and although the weather was most inclement and only a handful heard the most inspiring message which he brought us, over six hundred dollars in cash and subscriptions were added to his past achievements.

On the next Sunday afternoon President Harper met the church in a call meeting and delivered a message full of fundamental principles on "Lessons we have learned from the war." Dr. Harper impressed his audience with his clear, forceful, and forward-looking ideas making it easy for him to go "over the top" by getting $1,900.00. Brother J. H. Osborne, although he himself is a Baptist with his children members of the Christian church, established a $1,000.00 fund in memory of his deceased son, George A., who was a beloved Elon student. Ingram was glad to rally to both of the above causes.

Pleasant Grove

Within the last six months we have lost here four leading and substantial members by death but we trust we have not been afflicted in vain. Our spiritual natures have been deepened and our forces have been turned afresh toward the Bulah Land.

Dr. Harper came along with large vision for and faith in Pleasant Grove. He transmitted a part of it to us in his fine address delivered Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour. In a few days following he was responded to by the Pleasant Grove people in terms not of $3,750.00 as was our apportionment, but in terms of $15,000.00. Brothers P. W. and A. B. Farmer gave $5,000.00 each, establishing thereby a $10,000.00 Farmer Fund in memory of their beloved brother, D. S. Farmer. May God bless each one who so nobly gave.

ELON COLLEGE

Dr. J. O. Atkinson delivered a series of lectures on missions here 16-19 inst. The general theme was "The New Internationalism," or "World-wide Evangelism." The separate themes were "The Problem Stated," "Separation," "The Task Worthwhile," and "Service." The doctor poured into these all the eloquence and enthusiasm of his ardent soul and both delighted and inspired his hearers. May their fruits be seen in the days to come.

A play, "The Dream That Came True," by Miss Flowers' expression class on the 19th inst. brought together a large crowd and gave them a delightful evening. The play had a fine moral and was well rendered throughout.

The revival services have begun with large attendance and fine spirit. Rev. J. V. Knight is leading the singing this week. Rev. O. D. Poythress will lead next week. The pastor is doing the preaching.

N. G. NEWMAN.

RALEIGH, N. C.

Rev. George D. Eastes was formally installed as pastor of our Raleigh church last night. The service was well attended, was solemn and impressive. The new pastor was welcomed to the city in an impressive address by Mayor Jas. I. Johnson; to the ministerial association by Rev. J. L. Morgan, president; to the church by Prof. L. L. Vaughan of A. and E. College,

Rev. J. Lee Johnson gave a most impressive charge to the church and the writer gave the charge to the pastor. The orchestra of the church furnished splendid selections, and several selections by the choir were impressive. The closing prayer and benediction was by Rev. J. E. Franks. Raleigh people are already in love with their new pastor and are rallying to his call to service.

March 20.

E. B. Bailey.—It gives me lots of pleasure to have THE SUN visit in my home. I wish it could shine in every home.

A TALE OF INSPIRATION

Trustee D. S. Farmer of the College, after a lingering illness, crowned by a triumphant transition to the home of the soul, was laid to rest on Saturday, March 15. With many another sorrowing friend I was present at the impressive funeral service. Dr. Atkinson preached a rare sermon, one that stirred every heart with desire to meet the larger days ahead in the becoming and liberal spirit. Brother Sam was worthy of the large concourse that assembled under threatening weather conditions to do him honor, of the beautiful floral offerings that graced his grave, of the words of praise that fell from every lip, of the tears that stole down the cheeks, expressing the sympathy of all with the bereaved family. He was characterized by large faith, rare humility and generous sacrifice for the Kingdom's sake. His kindness to the colored people on his farms was eloquently attested by their tears, as they looked for the last time upon his mortal remains. Their tears are a sacrament to us all. It is great satisfaction to have known and loved this man of God.

And now for the tale of inspiration. On Sunday morning his family expressed the desire that I proceed at once with the raising of the endowment fund in Pleasant Grove church. The deacons, of whom Brother Farmer had been one, held a meeting and voted to raise $5,000 in the church aside from what Brother Farmer's family would give. This was readily done, and then in honor of their brother, Brothers A. B. and P. W. Farmer each duplicated the church's donation, giving $5,000 each, making the church's total $15,000 and entitling Pleasant Grove to three seals of gold on her recognition card. In addition Brother Farmer himself left a bequest to the College he loved. The pastor, Rev. J. G. Truitt, is one happy man, and so is Dr. Atkinson, the former pastor. This rare liberality is challenge to the whole Church. It is tribute to Trustee Farmer that his people have thus honored his memory.

Another tale of inspiration is that related to Ingram's drive. The Mission Secretary was there Sunday before and was given a hearty subscription and gracious welcome. They oversubscribed their quota to the Elon Fund, too, evidence that missions do not hurt Christian Education nor vice versa. This little band of the faithful have made it forever impossible for any church to say "we gave to missions; we cannot give to Christian Education." All can do it, and all will.

Two tales shall grace this paragraph. Danville and Reidville both mission points, both in debt, both struggling heroically to establish themselves. Without the inspiration of a public service these two infants of the Kingdom by an exploit of rare sacrifice doubled their quotas and earned a golden star for their recognition banner. Sure, by now we shall be agreed that money invested in mission churches pays good dividends.

And Sanford and Turner's Chapel have subscribed their quotas under the able leadership of Rev. T. E. White, thus placing every church so far visited on the banner list and many of them far "over the top."

Finally, Dr. Staley's challenge is stirring the hearts of our people. In a private note he made the statement that his offer was not according to his ability but according to his interest in the cause with the hope of stimulating our people to drop the paltry way of supporting the Kingdom and to give till the windows of Heaven are opened with blessings too large to be received. In all the history of our brotherhood no such sacrificial offer has been made as this leap of faith on Dr. Staley's part. He has brought us to a new day freighted with enlarging possibilities for the Kingdom's growth.

Surely this is a tale of inspiration. Surely God is in this work.

NOTES

The Franklin, Virginia, church will be dedicated the fourth Sunday in April.

Many subscriptions will expire in April. If your label is marked 4-1-9 your subscription is in the list.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson is away on a trip for several days in Georgia and Alabama in interest of the mission cause.

Rev. R. L. Williamson writes that he has had influenza and that has hindered his work for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Don't forget to move up your time-piece one hour Sunday morning, March 30. If you fail to do this you will be one hour late with the time over the country.

Sister M. E. Rowland, mother of Dr. C. H. Rowland, has passed her 85th birthday. She has been an invalid for thirteen years. For the last four months she has been confined to her bed. Though an invalid her life is full of sunshine. To know her is to love her.

On page 6 of this issue will be found an article by Dr. Harper that is full of inspiration. Some men die that others may live, and this has been our thought since receiving that article for publication. Brother Sam Farmer's body is dead, but he still lives. What a source of comfort and strength to his loved ones and friends! Surely the Church is entering upon great things.

Mrs. L. H. Brantley—Hoping you much success in your good work. I have been taking THE SUN so long that I would feel at a great loss without its bright pages.

Mrs. L. S. Vaughan—I have taken THE CHRISTIAN SUN many long years and cannot now do without it.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

MAN POWER AS A MINISTERIAL QUALIFICATION

By George C. Enders, Dean Christian Divinity School

The final means winning the great war was not the tank, nor the submarine, nor the aeroplane, nor the machine gun, nor poison gas, nor high explosive. The determining factor in deciding that great world struggle was MAN POWER. This is the verdict of those who are in a position to speak with authority.

In the present great struggle, in which our very civilization is at stake, in the contest between the evolutionary and revolutionary forces set free by the war, in the stupendous task of reconstruction, there is no force so potent as MAN POWER.

If we are to believe the great cloud of witnesses returning from the war zones, the success of the Christian work done in the armies was due not to denomination, or creed, or ritual, but to MAN POWER. And a host of these witnesses are insisting that the one thing needful, the one vital necessity, in the church work of the future will be MAN POWER.

In view of this broad and general emphasis, it would seem that a study of man power as a qualification for the minister would be of timely interest and value to the members of the Christian Church. It is for this reason that the present study is undertaken.

Just what do we mean by "man power?" Our ideas on this subject are apt to be vague, indefinite. We know there are various kinds of power in the world, such as horse power, and steam power, and electric power, and so on. But evidently by man power we mean something different. Evidently by man power we mean PERSONAL POWER.

"But," you ask, "what is personal power? In answer, let me say, that personal power is the one thing almost universally sought. It is the philosopher's stone. It is the pearl of great price. To have it in high degree is to be highly successful; not to have it in any degree is a calamity. By personal power I mean simply PERSONAL INFLUENCE. Not the bad kind. By personal influence I do not mean that strange magnetic influence which we call prestige which bedazzles the intellect and bewilders the reason and makes us do or say things, which we afterwards learn are not in harmony with our own best interest. But I mean the good, inspiring, constructive kind. I mean the up-lifting effect of a strong and good personality.

As a qualification for the minister of the Gospel personal influence is all important. It is, broadly speaking, the sum total, or the result of all other qualifications. Without personal influence, preaching, teaching, pastoral work are of little value. Personal influence backs up the logic and eloquence of the pulpit, vitalizes the instruction of the Sunday school class, and puts genuine life into pastoral work.

If personality or personal influence is of such inestimable value, it is important that we should make, if necessary, the most pains-taking search to find its sources, and, if possible, to learn how it may be secured.

Much of what we call personality is hereditary. It is ours by inheritance. It is born with us. And it is so closely associated in our thinking with bodily form that many regard personality as inseparable from, if not identical with the physical body. A large, well-proportioned body is a valuable asset to personality. But care must be taken not to overestimate its value. The question may well be raised whether an impressive physique is an absolutely essential part of ones personality. If so, then one can not build for himself a strong personality when nature has given him an insignificant or deformed body. This question perhaps can best be answered by a study of the personal influence of two great ministers, Phillips Brooks, and Henry Van Dyke.

Bishop Brooks had a large, well-poised, well-proportioned body. He stood six feet three, inches, and weighed three hundred pounds. It goes without saying that he was an unusually strong and impressive personality. Few now can realize the very wonderful and very powerful personal influence he had upon thousands of people. And doubtless to most of these his large physique was a vitally essential means to his influence. And so it was in his case. But contrast with him the personality of a man like Henry Van Dyke, whose body is scarcely large enough to make a vest-pocket edition of Phillips Brooks. And yet who will say that the personal influence of Van Dyke, as poet, teacher, preacher, statesman, is less than that of Brooks. I once heard Professor Van Dyke deliver his great lecture on Tennyson. A week later I asked a friend how he liked the lecture. His reply was, "I can not tell yet. Van Dyke lifted me up so high I have not gotten back to earth yet."

Illustrations like these could be given without number, proving conclusively, first, that personality is not dependent upon bodily form, and, second, that the personal influence of no two persons can be analyzed into the same elements. This means that every personality is unique and that the elements of which it is composed are largely acquired. God through nature gives to each an individuality, but out of it each must make his own personality. It is the primal purpose of the college and the divinity school to aid the ministerial student in acquiring the strongest possible influence of personality.

In the educational process by which personality is acquired or developed there are three fundamental elements. These are knowledge, discipline, and personal association. There is little danger that the importance of these factors to personal influence will be overestimated. It matters not how richly the minister may be endowed with natural powers. These are the raw material only, and of little value unless properly developed.

Other things being equal a minister's personal influence will be directly proportional to the amount of his knowledge. In no other calling in life may so large use be made of learning. All knowledge has for him a practical value. There is no department of learning with which it will not be advantageous for him to be familiar. Finding it his province as a theologian to explain the ultimate meaning of things, it is necessary that, to an extent at least, he understand the things themselves. Called upon to administer to people of all occupations and professions he must at least be familiar with the knowledge which pertains to the work of these persons. This does not mean that he should know as much about everything as specialists know about some things, but it does mean that he should know enough about the various subjects of human knowledge to enable him to show an intelligent interest in them and to save him from making false statements in regard to them.

But while knowledge of facts is all-important to personal power it is not all-sufficient. Much of personal influence is due to discipline, whether received as the result of routine work performed in willing obedience to accepted regulations in school or in society, or whether it comes from the varied experiences of life; its joys and its sorrows, its victories and its defeats, its Mounts of Transfiguration and its Gardens of Gethsemane. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth. The undisciplined soul will have little personal power to lead another soul to Christ.

To these two factors of knowledge and discipline there must still be added the personal element of association. Without coming into living association with living personalities, human and divine, a strong personality is impossible. Let the minister, therefore, know man, the crown of creation, not only as he reveals himself in poetry and history, in philosophy and religion, but also and especially as he is in himself. Next to knowing God, and His Son Jesus Christ, the greatest being to know is man. He is the wonder of wonders and the miracle of miracles. Well might Shakespeare exclaim; "What a piece of work is man. How noble in reason, how infinite in faculties, in form and moving, how express, how admirable! In action how like an angel; in apprehension how like God! The beauty of the world; the paragon of animals." And yet how few men do we really know. It is a sad, a melancholy fact that we are comparative strangers in this world. Our actions are often misinterpreted and our words not understood. We have a speaking acquaintance with many, but most of us can number on the fingers of one hand the persons whom we really know, and the number who know us is often smaller still. Hence our personal influence is far less than it might be. And if human association is so important as an element in personal influence, of how much more importance is association with God and His Son Jesus Christ?

Man power, or personal influence, is, therefore, a very broad ministerial qualification. It includes nearly, if not quite, all the other qualifications. It is unique in character, and largely the result of acquisition. It is more powerful than horse-power, electric power, or explosive power. In fact it is the most potent force in the universe, for it is the means chosen of Jesus Christ by which His kingdom is to be established. Defiance, Ohio.

MISSIONARY

MINUTES OF THE WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE

The Woman's Mission Board of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, met in the Ladies Parlor of the Christian church in Franklin, Va., on Saturday, February 8, 1919, with the following members present:

Mrs. C. H. Rowland, president, Franklin, Va.; Mrs. M. L. Bryant, corresponding secretary and treasurer, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. W. V. Leathers, superintendent of Young People, Holland, Va.; Miss Mary Andrews, superintendent of Cradle Roll, Suffolk, Va.; Mrs. W. D. Harward, superintendent of Literature and Mite Boxes, Dendron, Va.; Mrs. I. W. Johnson, secretary, Suffolk, Va.; and two visitors, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Field Secretary of Missions, and Dr. C. H. Rowland.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, at 9:40 A. M.

Prayer by Dr. Atkinson.

Minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

Mrs. Rowland read the report she sent to the Annual Conference as follows:

This has been one of the most successful years of our work. We have 56 organizations in 27 churches of the Conference. Our goal for the year was $2,500.00; the amount raised for all purposes was $2,902.42. On account of the Influenza epidemic, our annual meeting which was to have been held at Portsmouth, has not convened, but the present Board expects to meet soon and formulate plans for the coming year. We are exceedingly desirous to reach the women in every church in the Conference and ask the co-operation of the pastors and leaders to this end.

It was suggested that since we did not have the annual meeting last October, on account of Influenza, we had a meeting on April 10, 1919.

Moved and carried that a spring meeting be held on the above mentioned date.

Mrs. J. L. Foster was elected second Vice-President. Mrs. Rowland appointed Mrs. W. D. Harward, committee to find a place for the April meeting.

Mrs. Leathers reported a new Young People's Society, organized at Windsor, Va.

Moved and carried that the Young People's Societies raise $500.00 to buy blocks to help build the Santa Isabel church, and that the Willing Workers raise $150.00 to support an orphan at Elon College.

Moved and carried that $4,000.00 be the minimum goal for the year from all departments of the work.

Mrs. Leathers read a letter from Mrs. Demison, asking for $500.00 for the Hungarian Mission in Brooklyn.

Moved and carried that all Societies that did not take the Thanksgiving Offering for the Barrett Home be requested to take an Easter Offering for this purpose.

The Board decided that the time has come when the women of the Eastern Virginia Conference should support a missionary, and to this end, we make as our objective $1,200.00 to be raised during this year, the missionary to be decided upon at our regular annual meeting. The Societies were apportioned as follows:

Berkley, $25.00; Bethlehem, $75.00; Berea, (Nansemond), $50.00; Damascus, $50.00; Dendron, $50.00; Franklin, $25.00; Holland, $50.00; Holy Neck, $50.00; Liberty, $50.00; Ivor, $25.00; Memorial Temple, $25.00; Mt. Carmel, $50.00; Newport News, $25.00; Oakland, $50.00; Portsmouth, $25.00; Rosemont, $25.00; Spring Hill, $10.00; Suffolk, $350.00; Third church, $25.00; Waverly, $50.00; Wakefield, $25.00; Windsor, $15.00; Union, (Southampton), $25.00; Isle of Wight, $25.00; Cypress Chapel, $25.00.

Mrs. M. L. Bryant was appointed to write to each Society and notify them of their apportionment.

The following churches having no Societies are to be written to, and asked for $10.00 each for the support of said missionary: Antioch, Barretts, Berea (Norfolk) Centerville, Eures, Hobson, Johnson's Grove, Mt. Zion, Lamberts Point, Oak Grove, Sarem, South Norfolk.

Miss Mary Andrews, Superintendent of Cradle Roll, gave the following report:

Total.....$46.52

Number of Rolls in Conference.....	11
Number of new Rolls since last report	5

New Rolls at Berkley, Dendron, Holland, Holy Neck and Ivor. No report from the Berkley, Holland and Memorial Temple Societies.

It was decided to hold the annual meeting with the Portsmouth Society on October 23, 1919.

Adjourned to have lunch with the Young People.

Afternoon Session

Called to order by the President at 2 P. M.

The following books were recommend for Mission Study Classes:

For Women's Societies—"The Path of Labor," and "Women Workers of the Orient."

For Young People's Societies—"The Price of Africa," "The Gospel for a Working World," "Ancient People at New Tasks."

Mrs. I. W. JOHNSON, Sec.

WOMAN'S BOARD MEETING
North Carolina Conference

The Central Executive Committee met in Burlington on March 7, with all members present. Miss Bessie Holt, Superintendent of Young People, was also present. Mrs. W. R. Sellars reported progress in securing life memberships. She expects to secure the full twenty shortly and to go over the top.

Mrs. W. H. Carroll reported that she had written all prospective churches and their pastors and had had only one response. We wonder why pastors and church secretaries refuse to co-operate in the missionary work.

Mrs. Harper reported on the prospect of the Missionary Rally Day Program and the printing of the minutes.

Miss Holt outlined her plans for aggressive work among the young people.

The secretary was requested to write the other officers of the Board, urging them to redoubled efforts in their departments.

Mrs. W. A. HARPER, Sec'y.

SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

The Seaside Chautauqua and School of Methods of the Christian Church will hold its sixth annual session at Virginia Beach, near Norfolk, Va., beginning Tuesday, July 29, 1919.

The strong programs of the previous sessions will be continued. The strong speakers, Christian work specialists and visions of Christian leadership will make it worth while for those who wish preparation for the great days upon which we are entering. Every church and Sunday school in the Christian denomination should have some members present.

For information write S. M. Smith, General Secretary, Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Norfolk, Va., or the undersigned.

WARREN H. DENISON, Pres.

27 C. P. A. Bldg., Dayton, Ohio.

Editor Lehmann states a very important principle. Begin with the children—that is the place.

No wonder the church is being criticized for its slow speed. The investments in it are not large enough.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SOME QUESTIONS

We are at a loss to know just what to do. We have taken in as many children as we feel ought to be in the building. We have more than a dozen applications on file. All of them urgent. A number of them for small children—bright little boys and girls. We are compelled to say no to their pleadings and refuse to give them a home for the lack of room. We are willing to work still harder and make greater sacrifices in order that these children may not be denied a home. Will our people sacrifice, too, and come to our rescue that room may be provided for the helpless? Will our Church make the Easter offering large enough to enable us to provide more room? The "flu" epidemic has subsided and many little helpless orphans have been left in its wake. Many in pitiful circumstances calling to us for help. What will we do about it? Will we, as a Church, make some sacrifice that they may have help?

During our Thanksgiving offering campaign, the "flu" epidemic was raging and many of our churches were closed, and the churches that did have services had small congregations and in many instances the collections were small. May of the churches did not make an offering at all. Now the "flu" is abated and it will soon be time for our Easter offering and I wonder if we could not make a special effort and raise enough money from that offering to open up the home for the little children?

If our people will make a special effort and begin to lay their plans now and then work the plan, I feel sure we can do that thing. Then when you visit the Orphanage and see the home for little children full of bright, sweet faces how glad you will be that you had a part in giving them a home. "He who gives lives; he who does not give does not live. Let us keep on giving and keep on living."

We had the very great pleasure of spending the second Sunday with Brother T. E. White and attended services at Sanford, Shallow Well and Poplar Branch churches. We were delighted with the sweet spirit we found in these churches and the kindly sympathy they have for the Orphanage work. We presented the Orphanage work the best we could and trust the interest will still grow and that greater work will be accomplished in the future.

We were very kindly entertained in the home of Brother J. D. Gunter, Sr., and found it a great pleasure to be in his home and associate with his splendid family, and could not help but feel that a man who has such an interesting family must be one of the happiest of men.

Dear Uncle Charley: Having teeth is not much fun, is it? I almost wish mother would buy me some false ones. Love for all the little cousins.—Oliver E. Young, Jr.

If you are having trouble with your teeth, you have my sympathy. But they will be real helpful to you after you get them.—Uncle Charley.

SOME STRANGE CUSTOMS THAT PERSIST IN INDIA

(Related by a Methodist Missionary)

Up a winding stair we go into a tiny room. It has no outlook but courtyard of the house. It is well closed in, secluded from all outer things. Here is a young pupil—a Mohammedan girl. Must she stay within these closed doors always? Yes, until she marries. And then she will leave these closed doors, only to go behind others just as tightly closed!

Here is a little girl of eight, just taken away from one of our schools, where she was getting on so well! She has to be in "Purdah"—secluded—now. Why? Because she has reached the mature age of eight, and must no longer be seen by anyone outside! Now begins for her the closed-in life, which will go on until she dies, unless—what? Unless she should, in the providence of God, join the freed ones by and by.

We are invited to tea in a Hindu home. Suddenly our hostess gets up and leaving us, hides behind a door. Why? A man servant has brought in the tea and he must not see her face! Yet she is the mother of married sons and daughters! "This is our custom," the son says, smiling.

FORWARD FOR EVANGELISM

The time has come for a new emphasis upon the first duty of the church. We are being summoned to new activities in all directions; but first of all is the need for a more effective presentation of the claim of our Lord for an immediate decision and consecration to his service.

When the great war broke upon the world, men's hearts failed them. Religion seemed to be discredited. The church seemed to have lost her power. Men asked if, after all, Christianity was a failure, seeing it had not kept men from flying at each other's throats.

But the issues have cleared. It is becoming plain that the religion of Jesus Christ has not lost its power. Rather, has every sanction of our religion received new confirmation. The doctrine that "Might makes right" is forever discredited. Justice and righteousness are seen to be more powerful than fleets and armies. Summoned to the defense of the weak and helpless, and to the maintenance of pledged word and ideals of freedom and enlightenment, the unprepared nations developed an irresistible strength. Out of the wreck and ruin of war is rising a new world order. God is in His heaven. All will be right with the world.

Out of this new confidence there is coming a new appeal. Spiritual values are seen to be the supreme things. Never before could we so assuredly insist upon the great fundamentals of the Kingdom of God. In the sober mood induced by sacrifice and suffering, with the testimony that has been borne by men and women who have cheerfully surrendered their all for the good of all, we can call men to a like dedication of themselves. God demands our allegiance. The Cross of Christ is the symbol of the only life worth while. Surely in this hour of unequalled opportunity, the Church will not fail to make her message clear and strong and tender and insistent.

The opening months of this new year should mean much to us. We should not wait until the great motives have lost their freshness. Our hearts have been stirred to sacrifice and helpfulness and loving ministry. We have heard the call of the Christ in the opportunity to feed the hungry, clothe the naked, relieve the sick, deliver the prisoners, and help the bewildered and distressed of a half world. Now is the time to urge upon men that they recognize it as His call, and undertake the continuation of this ministry in His name. Only so will the great motives become permanent in our lives. The present impulse may pass with the first response; but the heart touched and changed by the Love of Christ will continue to manifest His spirit.

Therefore, let us press anew the claim of our Lord for surrender and confession. Let us say to our neighbors and friends, "Let us go to the house of the Lord." Let us lay the foundations of the new social order in a definite acknowledgment of Jesus Christ as Lord of our lives.

Ministers, church officers and church members can join in certain definite things, which will further these aims. Why not make these our special objectives for the next few months.

First, definite prayer for a revival of religion in the hearts of all of our members.

Second, definite plans for personal appeal to those who are not open Christians to accept and publicly acknowledge Jesus Christ.

Third, meetings of every congregation wherever possible, with especial appeal for a deeper Christian life, a public confession, and union with the church.

Fourth, prayer groups of three or more, for definite intercession on behalf of the church, and for individuals. These may be neighborhood groups, Sunday school classes, Church committees, or groups of friends. Utilize whatever organization or grouping there is at hand.

Many of our churches have suffered interruption of church services on account of sickness. Some have had their attention distracted from the regular worship by war activities. Many of the churches of our own brotherhood are without pastors. All the more is there need of this special movement. Let no one wait for some one else to lead the way.

If you love the Lord and your fellowman, you can lead in this work. Let the Evangelistic Campaign begin now, and begin with you. We need at once a strong evangelistic effort—a soul-winning campaign in all the churches. Where pastors are not available let a few laymen go together and hold meetings. Let there be much praying and planning and personal evangelism, until the whole church is aflame with soul-winning passion. It is exceedingly important that every pastor, church officer and member give heed to this message.

OLIVER W. POWERS,

Secretary for Evangelism and Social Service.

JOHN MACCALMAN,

Chairman of Commission on Evangelism.

Superintendent of the Forward Movement of the Christian Church.

THE SUN CAMPAIGN

During the last few days we have been very much encouraged by the many good reports of THE SUN workers. The list is climbing rapidly and we are grateful for the efforts of all who have given aid. Some of the pastors have not sent anything from their fields of labor. Let all put forth an effort between now and March 31.

HOW YOU CAN HELP

Order your books, Bibles and church supplies from the Convention's Publishing Agent. Seventy-five per cent of the profit made on all sales remains in the work to help support THE CHRISTIAN SUN. And also bear in mind that you can buy a book from your Publishing Agent at the same price as you can get it from the publishers.

THE TITHER

We have mailed to a number of SUN subscribers a copy of The Tither. This is an invitation for you to subscribe. We shall be glad to have your subscription. The price is only fifty cents.

THE GARDEN GATE

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It isn't a gate; it's a motor car!
I'm traveling fast, and I'm traveling far.
I toot my horn, and I turn my wheel,
And nobody knows how grand I feel."

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It isn't a gate; it's a great big ship!
I'm off to the pole on a 'sporing trip.
I'll ride a white bear, holding on by his hair,
And I'll hurry him up with a whale-skin whip."

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It isn't a gate; it's a big ballon!
I'm going to sail till I reach the moon.
I'll play with the man as hard as I can,
And I'll stir up the stars with a great horn spoon."

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It's not a gate; it's"—off runs he,
His mother is calling: "Come in to tea!"
It's a wonderful gate, but it just isn't able To turn itself into a supper table.

SNOW STORIES

There had been a November snowstorm and the woods and fields were white and still. All the summer-birds had gone, while the pine grosbeaks, the snowflakes, the cross-bills, the siskins, and the other winter-folk were yet in the far North. This morning there was not even the eaw of the erow from the cold sky. As I followed the unbroken wood-road, it seemed as if all the wild-folk were gone or asleep.

The snow told another story. On its surface were records of the life which throbbled and passed and ebbed under the silent trees. Just ahead of me were long lines and traeries of footprints with a tailmark between. In and out they ran among the dry stalks of lobelia, yarrow and tansy, showing where the white-footed deer-mice had frolicked and feasted the long night through on the store of seeds left on the plant-stalks, underneath and around which their little tunnels ran beneath the snow. These are the same little raseals which swarm into my winter camp and gnaw everything in sight. One of my friends one night left a new felt hat on the window-seat. The next morning there was a little circle of neat round holes gnawed around the crown of the hat!

Today among the mouse-tracks was a faint trail only just visible, made up of what looked like a string of exclamation marks with a tailmark showing between them. It was the track of the masked shrew, a little plush-covered animal, the fiercest fighter of all the wild-folk. If he were the size of a dog, no one's life would be safe in country districts. The large deer-mice and meadow voles, and even the gray Norwegian rat, give him a wide berth. That night, the snow said, the shrew was a most unwelcome arrival at the dinner of the Merry Mice Association. At first their trails all ran together in a maze of tracks. Where the trail of the shrew touched the circle, there shot out separate lines of deer-mice tracks like the spokes of a wheel, with the paw-marks far apart, showing that the guests had all sprung from the table at the approach of the stranger, and dashed off in different directions. The shrew-track circled faintly here and there, then started off in a lonely trail, ran for some distance and—stopped.

The sword of Damocles, which hangs winter and summer over the head of all the little wild-folk, had fallen. The shrew was gone. A tiny fleck of blood and a single track like a great X on the snow told the tale of his passing. All his fierceness availed nothing when the great talons of the flying death clamped through his soft fur. An X on the snow is the monogram of the owl-folk, just as a K is of the hawk-kind. The size of the mark in this case showed that the killer was one of the larger owls, probably the great horned owl, that fierce king of the deep night woods whose head, with its long eartufts or horns, I had seen peering from his nest of sticks on the mountainside in a high treetop, as early as February. On wings so muffled with soft downy feathers as to be absolutely noiseless, he had swooped down in the darkness and broken the tiny bubble of the shrew's life.

Now the trail wound upward toward the slope of the Cobble, a steep, sharp-pointed little hill which suddenly thrust itself up from a circle of broad meadows and flat woodlands. By the road the snow had drifted over a low patch of sweet-fern in a low hummock. As I plodded along I happened to strike this with my foot. There was a tremendous whirring noise, the snow exploded all over me, and out burst a magnificent cock-patridge and whizzed away among the laurels like a lyddite shell. When the snowstorm began he selected a cozy spot in the lee of the sweet-fern patch, and had let himself be snowed over. The warmth of his body had made a round, warm room, and with plenty of rich fern seeds in easy reach he was prepared to stay in winter quarters a week if necessary.—Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Sunday School Times.

The war taught us to give. The conditions brought about by it placed us on a new basis for thinking of others. May the spirit continue!

Giving with the getting left out is the spirit of the Master.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

IN THE FIELD

The Superintendent presented the Forward Movement program at the Phillipsburg, Ohio, church March 6.

The Mt. Vernon, Ohio, Christian conference institute met at Coshocton, Ohio, March 11. The entire program was a Forward Movement program. The speakers were Rev. R. H. Long, President; Rev. H. R. Clem, Secretary, and the Superintendent. The ministers and laymen gave close attention and got a vision of the possibilities of the Movement for their conference. The executive board passed a resolution pledging co-operation in every way.

The Superintendent will present the Forward Movement work at the Northwestern Indiana Conference institute March 18-20, and will meet the workers of the Warren, Plum Tree, Majenica and Six Mile churches at Warren, Indiana, for a workers' conference and rally March 21.

He will speak on the Forward Movement at Huntington, Indiana, March 23, meet the executive board and trustees of the Eel River, Indiana, conference the 24th and hold a rally at Huntington that night.

The Executive Committee of the Forward Movement will meet at Dayton, Ohio, at the headquarters March 26.

The Superintendent will visit the Urbana, Illinois, church March 30 and conduct a campaign there.

The Quadrennial Convention

Every delegate to the American Christian Convention should be present at that convention. The work of the present quadrennium will center around the Forward Movement and every member and laymen who can possibly do so should be there to carry back to his section the inspiration, information and plans of work for the quadrennium.

This is the Way one Pastor and Church Do It

Dr. W. H. Hainer is pastor of the Irvington, New Jersey, church and president of the New Jersey conference. Dr. Hainer is pastor of the largest Sunday school enrollment of any church in the denomination. He says: "I am glad to report that our church has decided to go into the Forward Movement to the full extent. After my first sermon on the Five Points of the Movement, I asked if they would express their willingness to back up the Movement and every individual in the congregation rose to his feet."

Have you read "Money the Acid Test"? Every member of the Christian Church ought to read that splendid book. It costs only sixty cents postpaid, and is worth many times that amount.

WARREN H. DENISON, Supt.

Recently we heard of a man who said that he felt better when he gave to his local church. Later we learned that he contributed five cents per month and he is able to pay one hundred times that much. If five cents would make him feel better, we wonder how he would feel if he tithed his income. He would get well.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS TAKE UP THE WORK

In response to a letter sent recently to the secretaries of the various Sunday schools, many schools are beginning both to study missions and also to take a missionary offering once a month. Those thus far taking the monthly offering and remitting the same to the Mission Treasurer, J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C., are the following: Chapel Hill, N. C., Reidsville, N. C., Wentworth, Sunday school; McCullers, N. C., Beulah Sunday school, Wadley, Ala., Linville, Va., and the New Providence Sunday school, Graham, N. C.

Others are writing that their schools will fall in line. Sooner or later we believe that every Sunday school in the Southern Christian Convention will be studying missions in one way or another and most of them making a missionary offering. The writer repeats what he has said to some schools personally that any school which will give an offering a month to missions and fails because of that to have sufficient funds with which to conduct its affairs and pay the local expenses, he himself will make up the deficit out of his own purse at the end of the year. His firm conviction is that any school which will give half to others will certainly have enough out of the other half for self. The school which will take up one offering per month for the Orphanage and one for missions is in a good way to progress and prosperity, and will have funds in its treasury with which to buy its own literature and to do its local work. The writer stated in one of our schools not long since that at least half of our Sunday school funds should go to other purposes than for local Sunday school expenses, and it chanced that there was in the school that day a member of a Baptist Sunday school of the community. This member stated to the writer after the school had adjourned that her school did not use any of the money it raised to purchase its own literature, but that was made up by individuals on the outside, and all funds given by the classes and through the regular channels of the Sunday school went to other purposes than to the School. I think we teach a lesson of selfishness, possibly without being aware of it, when we raise money in the school and spend it all on the school. A Sunday school as well as an individual may be selfish and become self-centered. As much for others as for self should certainly be the slogan of every school.

But the writer is even more anxious that our schools study missions than he is that they now begin to give for missions. Several secretaries have written us that their funds are needed and they cannot now begin to contribute to missions. Such schools can certainly begin the study of missions as the books for this purpose are well adapted and certainly cost very little. A book costing, say thirty-five or forty cents per copy, to be studied once a month, would last six months or a year. There are now books prepared for every member of the class from primary to old people's, and it does seem that every Sunday school could give some time to the study of the greatest problem that the Bible teaches, and the greatest task ever committed of God to man. If the Sunday school is unwilling to give its session once a month to the study of some missionary book, why not spend five minutes or ten minutes of each Sunday in every class discussing, teaching, learning some missionary problem. If there are those unwilling to do either of these, why not have a missionary committee, or a missionary lecturer or a missionary superintendent who from Sunday to Sunday will devote five minutes of the hour to talking about and explaining to the Sunday school items of missionary moment and concern. We will become a missionary people only as we learn about the missionary problem and there is no better place to teach and to learn this problem than in the Sunday school.

J. O. ATKINSON.

THOMAS

John Wesley Thomas died March 17, 1919 in his seventieth year. He was a charter member of Center Grove Christian church and had filled the office of deacon since the organization of the church. Every pastor of this church, now living, will feel a loss in his death, and remember him as a good man and faithful to his church. His faith in Christ was like the faith of a child. His cup often ran over, and he shouted aloud the praises of God. He was powerful in prayer, and many have been the times when congregations felt God was near.

He married Flora Elizabeth Knight, and they had eight children. Four died when small. Bertha, who reached womanhood and married Alexander Eddins, died several years ago. Chas. E. lives in Greensboro, Ira, in Elizabeth City, and Arthur lives at the home. He was greatly afflicted in his last years. He lived with his son, Arthur, and he with his other brothers did all they could to make his afflictions easy.

He was buried at Center Grove by the side of his wife, and his funeral was conducted by the writer, who feels the loss of a cherished brother.

T. E. WHITE.

FARMER

Brother David Samuel Farmer died at his home near News Ferry, Va., March 13, 1919, being 56 years, 8 months and 13 days old. He married Miss Mary Virginia Lovelace on December 16, 1885 from which union the following children survive him: Joseph Pleasant, Nannie Baker, Mrs. A. C. Hall, John Lovelace, David Samuel, Jr., Emily Esther, and Archer Duncan. He is survived by three brothers Joseph H., Archer B., and Pleasant W., and one sister, Mrs. Minnie F. Cook.

With perfect control of mind and emotions Brother Farmer announced to his family Thursday morning after breakfast that he was dying. He called each one to his bedside and gave them parting words of counsel, and endearment too sweet and sacred for public print. Although those with whom he lingered in the last moments were prostrated in grief and sorrow he made them feel as though they had accompanied him to almost within the gates of Heaven itself.

Brother Farmer was a leading spirit in his church and community and his leadership was wise, gentle, and thoroughly Christian.

Drs. J. O. Atkinson, T. S. Wilson, and the writer conducted the funeral services. Dr. Atkinson preached the sermon, which seemed inspired for the occasion, so appropriate was it May God richly bless each member of the bereaved family.

A Divine Voice

LISTENING to a divine voice is the privilege of all men, and yet how few do it! The men in all ages who have been alone with God have been the men who lifted their generation to a higher spiritual life. God is seeking a chance to whisper messages in our ears, but they are so often filled with things of the world that He cannot reach us. What a privilege it is for us, and what a pity that we too often miss it! There was never a time that the words "Take time to be holy" were more fitting than now. God is calling, loudly calling, all of us to tasks sacred and solemn. Listen to the voice divine.

OUR FUTURE EDUCATION

During the last four years there have been injected into the curricula of our colleges and universities as well as high schools, certain educational reforms. We have been dealing in these changes largely with the training of mechanics. We have been in a rush to turn out a finished product ready to meet some problem caused by the world war. Military life has found its way into the educational institutions and the beat of the drum and the presence of marching orders have placed their stamp upon educational life. Efficiency has been somewhat of a watchword and we have searched the entire military vocabulary seeking expression as to the onward march of education.

Education is a slow process and while the war and world conditions have taught us many lessons about our educational work, we fully believe that we should not lose sight of the real arts in education, literature and sciences as the fundamentals. We are of the opinion that the greatest men of our land are those who have been privileged to sit at the feet of teachers who emphasized the well rounded soul: The mastering of some of the choicest selections in literature and language work makes its stamp upon a life that is telling to the world. We make a plea for the teaching of the Bible as never before in all our institutions where the law does not prohibit it.

Physical training had just made its start when the world war came. Physical training is now going to be a part of every standard educational institution. We have learned long ago that a great mind largely depends upon a great body. The laws of health are also going to be recognized and taught. It is very difficult to outstrip the man who has a healthy body, a trained heart and mind and is well grounded in the fundamentals of education. May the day of education and instruction be outstripped of fads and fancies and filled with the things that make man's life happy and helpful, and a well rounded Christian citizen.

NO HONOR

We heard a Sunday school superintendent say recently that it was no honor to hear a superintendent say that he had not missed his school in two, three, or five years. And this man who so spoke is the superintendent of a Sunday school that has a teaching and official force of 120. He knows his business. Here is the point: The man who stays at home all the time never has a chance to find out what other people are doing. Don't get it into your head that you know it all, fellow Sunday school man, for there are some up-to-date workers in the country. Get in touch with them.

RAISING THE FINANCES OF THE CHURCH

It is a common error that many local churches have dropped into of paying no special attention to the finances of the church during this season of the year. They feel that they will have ample time after the announcements begin to appear that Conference is soon at hand. This is a mistake because it robs the people of the benefit of a good system and teaches them in the wrong direction. We have always contended that the best time to begin to raise finances of the church is the first Sunday after Conference and not the last Sunday before Conference.

A NEEDED EDUCATION

While our people are growing along the line of giving there is still a needed education in this particular field of work. We sincerely believe that if we had started a campaign of education along this line of giving twenty-five or fifty years ago that our Church would be ten or fifteen years ahead of its present work. And this reminds us to say that we believe that we can do no greater work than to teach our people in every possible way the spirit and the joy of systematic giving. The Church must continue to grow and prosper. It depends entirely upon the attitude of the people as to how fast it will grow and how well it will prosper.

ELON STANDARDIZATION FUND

We are delighted to announce that the Elon Standardization Fund is meeting with splendid success. The hearts and minds of our people are rapidly opening to the joy of giving. After all, what we have and what we are does not belong to us, but to God and the dedication of these things to the service of God is our best opportunity and our greatest privilege.

THE NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Let us all bear in mind that the three conferences in North Carolina have merged into one and it is now the North Carolina Christian Conference. Let us so speak and write it. Let us also prepare to attend the initial session of the enlarged Conference. The place for meeting is Burlington, North Carolina and the time is November, next.

SEND YOUR PASTOR

The American Christian Convention is soon to meet. What about sending your pastor? If he deserves the trip you ought to send him, and if he does not, his going may make him worthy of such consideration. Begin now to raise a budget to send him. It will help the church far more than it will help him, for he will be able to impart new ideas and plan more largely. If you want to think well of your pastor do something for him and this is a good time. Remember that the date is April 29. Begin today on the matter.

HE IS RIGHT

A man stepped into THE CHRISTIAN SUN office the other day to arm himself with a copy of some reliable Sunday school book so that he could get a more intelligent view of the lesson. "I am the teacher of an organized class," said he as he proceeded to speak of his work, "and my strong point in favor of the organized class is that the best work of any kind is done through organization. When you organize men they get interested in each other. No man was ever brought to Christ without some one getting interested in him." He is right. We must get interested in the individual before he can lead him to a better life. You cannot compel a man to get interested in you, but you can get interested in him and win his interest for you and the cause you represent.

THEN AND NOW

There was a time when the health of a family or an individual concerned the outside world but little. Such is not the case now. Health authorities are educating the people to the point that the health conditions of one family or one citizen is a thing vital to all the people. Business men are beginning to realize that people who do not care to keep themselves or families well are not as safe to have financial dealings with as citizens who protect their health. Wealth and happiness depend largely upon health. Being our brother's keeper has a larger significance and broader meaning than we often think.

THE CHURCH UNION PROPAGANDA

(Biblical Recorder)

We do not feel panicky about the proposed organic union of all the churches. We have no idea that such a union can be brought about upon any basis that has yet been proposed. When Christians get ready to unite on a Scriptural basis, Baptists of all people, will be most eager for it. Until then, we see no danger, if our people will hold to the New Testament as their guide. A distinguished brother who has had an unusual opportunity to study the views of several denominations, said this to the writer some time ago: "The approach of our people to the Word of God is more direct than that of any other denomination. There are fewer non-conductors between the Baptist mind and the Bible than is the case with any other people."

So long as we maintain this attitude toward the Bible we are on safe ground. But it is well for us to keep informed as to some of the modern movements which have as their aim the elimination of denominational distinctions, and the forcing of all the denominations into a conglomerate organization, which, in the very nature of things, can have no definite, clear cut convictions as to the teaching of God's Word.

The latest thing along this line which we have seen, came out in a rather unexpected place. Dr. W. A. Harper, president of Elon College, wrote an article for the News and Observer some time ago, in which he held that there should be more religious instruction given in our State schools. If we understand Dr. Harper, he favors the teaching of religion at our State colleges by the several churches in the college community. His idea, if we get it clearly, is to let the churches employ a teacher who shall teach religion according to the views of the denomination which employs him. He recognizes that, according to our form of government, the State cannot teach religion, and this is his method of having the churches do an important work from which the State is estopped.

It is not our purpose to discuss the suggestion of Dr. Harper, but to call attention to a reference he makes, we suppose with approval, to the following deliverance of the Church Council Board of Education. The Board was discussing the plan suggested by Dr. Harper, and giving several advantages that would accrue from it among which is the following:

"10. Working together at a common task is the surest and safest method of bringing about the organic union of the churches. This organized co-operation of a group of denominations to provide Christian education, training for Christian service and to develop loyalty to the organized church, will not only promote the spirit of unity in the co-operating agencies, but will train large numbers of students to propagate the same spirit and plan in their home communities. Leaving these students adrift in their religious life without personal allegiance to any denomination operates to delay the proper unity of the churches."

So here is "the cat in the meab tub." The Council of Churches would seize this opportunity to further their pet scheme of bringing about organic union of the churches. And yet there are those who seem to be totally blind to the fact that there is any movement of any kind which is trying, in the most remote degree, to bring about church union.

Let Baptists stand where they have ever stood, on the Word of God as the only basis for union which we can consider. Dr. Shakespeare, of England, may be ready to surrender, but Southern Baptists are not. Some other denominations might merge with others, but our principles are too dear and sacred to be bartered away.

Sunday school and Christian Endeavor matter failed to reach us this week.

AS AN ENGLISH WOMAN SAW IT

(This private letter from an English woman, who was in London on November 11, Armistice Day, tells rather more vividly than anything we have yet seen the reaction of the citizens upon that day of days.)

I must tell you something of the wonders of Armistice Day. November 11, at 10:56, as I was just arriving in London, I heard the guns begin! All the office windows round Westminster were flung up, and the cheering began (that wonderful cheering that rolled back and forth through London like the sound of waves all day afterward). I rushed into the Court Hall where some twenty men and four women were just mustered, the clerk beginning to read the minutes. "Gentlemen, do you hear the guns?" I cried. "Yes," said the chairman solemnly, does it mean the armistice?" "Listen to the cheering." "Oh, let us get on with the work," said some of the older men, but three women looked at me, and I at them (N. B. They were the three best and most active workers of the whole committee). "Come along!" I cried, and out we went down the street to Westminster, in time to watch the whole population streaming out from office and factory, faces as white as death, often, and all the flags running up like a scene in a theater.

We just saw, and cheered like mad, the flags go up on the House of Commons and St. Margaret's—cheered the little bugler lads coming out to sound "All clear," as after air raids—and then went back to our committee! finished the work, and then raced past Buckingham Palace, where the huge impromptu procession was gathering, to fetch my daughter from her office in the Strand. It was a struggle to get there, and even greater to get back, but I had learned the massed bands of the Guards were to play, and the King and Queen come out at 1:30, but in spite of the crush and the rush I would not have missed it for worlds.

After four and a half years of oppression, anxiety and distress, to see the myriads of happy faces! Every one (even in deepest black) smiling, and all the dull dark streets waving with flags, taxis and lorrys—motors and wagons covered with soldiers, nurses, munitioneers, flags waving in every hand—bands playing—and all so spontaneous, so sudden—and so beautiful! Well! M. and I ran behind motors, dived through the American Army (so she says!), round taxis, in front of lorrys, under horses' noses. Every one laughed, every one helped us, every one was a friend and a comrade. And so we reached Buckingham Palace just as the bands struck up. At least 100,000 were there, waving flags and cheering; and then we sang, "Tipperary," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," etc., and then "Home, Sweet Home," and a good many voices choked, till only young voices rang out; then the "Old Hundredth," and then the national anthems of the Allies, while Queen Mary waved her flag and the King saluted—then a pause, as he stepped forward, and quite clearly his voice rang out: "Friends, we must all thank God for this great victory." The most wonderful hush fell on that huge shouting crowd for a couple of minutes and then all the bands struck up, "Now Thank

We God Our Lord." Every one sang it and then dispersed. It was wonderful!

Now I have said very little of the last stages of the war. Certainly we all felt that America's response to Lloyd George's telegram was great, and it was wonderful to hear how your boys did fight in those last attacks. Nothing could have been finer. And all this autumn we have had the comfort of their freshness and keenness as a great asset of moral as well as physical help. Not that spirit had failed here—but I do think the last six months had brought a really terrible strain—so many homes utterly desolate, whole districts in mourning. My son trained and sent out two hundred boys of under 19 in September; 70 per cent were killed within a month! This was no uncommon story; and with poor food and many other minor hardships cumulative in effect, I think nothing could have helped us like the coming of America.

Such fierce fighters, too! The Germans certainly dreaded them, and clearly some of the new and stringent rules they brought were all to the good.—New York Christian Advocate.

MORE INSPIRATION

That is it, exactly, more inspiration. The churches continue to go over the top with a relish that is exhilarating, and optimism prevails in every quarter. Our beloved Mission Secretary taught us the larger and better way and blazed the path of this glorious time. He has always said that all we needed as a people was a chance. He gave us one. We accepted it joyously. We now have another, and it is fast becoming a twice-told tale. "Our people are folks," as Dr. Rowland has so often said, and Brother Charlie knows.

But I must not drift. Union, (N. C.), Apple's Chapel, Chapel Hill, Monticello, Belew Creek, First Church of Greensboro have the past week gladdened every heart with their lovely response. The week has been crowded with interest and joy, and the work is not yet done in any of them. Rev. L. I. Cox has greatly helped in the magnificent results.

The largest gift of the week was by Hon. R. T. Kernodle, familiarly known as Alamance County's great-hearted sheriff, who gave $5,000. The spirit in which he and his wife gave this large sum for Kingdom service was even more satisfying than the gift itself. It is good to see a man who has worked hard and been prospered show his gratitude to God in such liberal fashion. Sheriff Kernodle thus becomes the first member of our Church in North Carolina to give $5,000 to any Church enterprise but he is not the last. God has greater things in store for us and this pioneer in Christian liberality shall see the fruit of his daring for Christ bear a larger and still larger harvest of generosity among our North Carolina brethren.

The First Church of Greensboro, with a few years ago a mission point, has produced a cluster of strong young business men who prasege much for the Kingdom. They more than doubled their quota, Brother S. A. Caveness and wife giving $2,500, as a thank offering that God had spared his life in his recent serious illness. When young business men urged to it by their wives give so liberally, it promises large for the Kingdom's coming. We need more such friends. They are the future's guarantors.

Several brethren this week have given a thousand dollars each to establish funds perpetually to work for our Christ through Elon in the training of Christian ministers and workers. In Greensboro Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Cylmer in memory of their angel daughter, Rena Maude Cylmer; Mrs. Cora L. Anthony of her sainted husband, so recently taken from her heart and home; and Deacon H. C. Simpson, the first student ever registered at Elon, who worked as a laborer in building the College and earned his expenses thereafter through College,—this man, prospered in his business, honors himself and family and expresses his gratitude to God in this signal style.

At Belew Creek, Brother V. O. Roberson has established the Roberson Fund; Brother Z. V. Strader, another in loving memory of his daughter, Miss Margie May, recently taken to Heaven in the joyous days of young womanhood; and Brother Allen W. Preston, a third in devoted memory of his sainted wife, Sudie Boyd Preston.

At Union, Deacons, J. D. Wilkins and G. R. Maynard, two noble men of the Kingdom, with the hearty approval of their life companions, have perpetuated their names and expressed their gratitude to the Master in creating the Wilkins and Maynard Funds. It requires sacrifice for them to do this, but they are re-joiced to make it. These brethren realize that the measure of our soul is the magnitude of our sacrifice for noble causes. God multiply their kind!

Surely these are tales of inspiration. Surely God is blessing this work. Pray for it and the workers.

W. A. HARPER.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

NOTICE

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Christian Conference meets with Shallow Well Christian church July 15-17.

The general theme for discussion will be "The New Sunday School for the New Time," and all talks and addresses are expected to be somewhat related to the general theme. The Sunday schools within the bounds of the Conference are requested to make an earnest effort to have themselves represented by capable delegates. It would be nothing but right that the travelling expenses of these delegates be paid by the Sunday schools.

Each Sunday school is requested to send to the Convention an amount of money equal to four cents per member of its enrollment. Churches that have been accustomed to holding their protracted meetings the week following the second Sunday in July are requested this year to arrange a different time for the protracted meeting, in order not to conflict with the Convention.

It is the purpose of the executive Committee to get out an attractive program that shall be instructive and inspiring, and to this end we solicit the co-operation of the brotherhood.

HERBERT SCHOLZ, Sec'y.

A LETTER FROM REV. J. W. WELLONS, D. D., TO D. S. FARMER'S FAMILY AND FRIENDS, AND TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CHURCH AT PLEASANT GROVE

My dear Brethren and Sisters and Friends:—

I am very sorry that I cannot attend the funeral of my dear Brother, Sam Farmer. My age and infirmity forbid my taking a trip like this at this season of the year. I am now in my 94th year and my capacity for walking is very poor, nevertheless I feel just as much for you, and my tears of sympathy shall be mingled with yours as much as if I were there.

Once I was the pastor of the church at Pleasant Grove and have always felt a deep interest in the people of the community and church. I was the pastor of Brother Farmer's father and mother, and knew Sam from a little boy, but all the older people there when I was pastor are gone. Pleasant, Archie, Willie, and Obe Farmer; John Boyd, John Herbert Boyd, Scott Boyd, Ed. Pierce, John Russell, Walter Boyd, Broady Anderson, Ed. Belew, Bob and Joe Crews, James Moore, James Hankins, and Sandy Farrell were some of them. These dear brethren, though they were not all members of the Christian church, were my friends. While I was pastor there I visited them, broke bread with them, enjoyed the association with them, and they all attended regularly at my church. I knew no difference between these dear brethren than I did my own members, but they are of the past.

God bless the dear sisters! How many of them I could mention as true to their God, true to their church, true to their family, and true to their pastor. This was a delightful congregation to serve.

As to Sam Farmer, he was a leading man in the church, in his family, in the community, in his conference and in his convention. His worth to the community and to the church is unknown. But these are things of the past. Let us deal a little with the things of the present.

The opportunities of these older brothers and sisters were limited compared with what they are now. Their means of accumulating the things of the world were limited. The many opportunities that we have at the present are giving us quite an advantage over the past. We should feel as the children and grandchildren of these dear ones that are gone that there is an unlimited field of usefulness laying before us. May we all feel that we want to make an improvement in all relations of life to do our duty to those of the past. May we feel that we are living in a progressive age, and let us feel that by the help of the Lord we shall move forward with the forward movements in our church work, in home, in community, and that it may be equal to the times. May we feel we live not looking so much to the future as it is to be prepared for the future. May we feel as we close with the earthly life that we will bring in our sheaves as reapers in the Master's vineyard.

May God bless the dear family of Brother Farmer, and the dear friends and sisters and brethren, and may this stimulate us to live nearer our God and stick to our duty. The harvest is ripe, let us go forth to labor.

This may be my last word to you dear brethren and sisters. But if we meet no more on earth may we meet our dear brothers and sisters that have gone before us! And what a happy meeting it will be to meet the dear old friends on the other shore and walk with them on the golden streets! God bless you all in my earnest prayer.

SUPPOSE

Do you ever stop to think that this is God's time; that we have no promise of tomorrow—only the present moment? Suppose we all realized this fact, how much more would we do?

Suppose you thought of your church and Sunday school as often as the cigarette smoker thinks of his smoke. Suppose you carried your Bible and referred to it as often as the cigarette smoker does his cigarette. Would you know more of the truth of the Bible? Suppose the dancer should turn his steps heavenward; suppose the gambler should direct his plans for service to his fellowmen rather than cheat them.

Habits are formed for worldly ambition and desire. Why not form them for spiritual and religious things? Religion, we say is the best thing that a person can possess. Should we not put more time and thought into it?

In forming habits, read your Bible, pray and meditate upon Biblical truths and teachings and note the difference in your life. Does it pay? The Apostle Paul says, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lonely, whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think of these." Phil. 4:8. Think of the above things and note your experience and the trend of your habits.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The following was sent out to members of the Suffolk Christian church congregation for a meeting, May 22, 1918:

On Wednesday, the twenty-second, from eight until ten,

Come to the Christian Church and you'll want to come again.

To get acquainted is the object of the meeting

And you'll find awaiting you a right hearty greeting.

The pastor will be there and his charming daughter, too.

And they will be most happy also to welcome you.

We want to get together to have a very good time,

That's the reason we are sending you this little rhyme.

The reception was equal to "Elder Brown Donation," by Will Carlton and more; for it was not poetry, but pantry goods which one might call the poetry of generosity. It is late to write of the happy occasion, but it takes a long time to get the facts of history together to write true history. It takes a year to recover from such a surprise, and as long to test the gifts that touch the heart as well as feed the body. I am sorry for the typesetter in this case for there are so many items. Two hundred and ten registered at the reception and many came who did not register. About one hundred persons made donations; perhaps more as some made gifts without names. I must be permitted to mention, so far as I can, the gifts in kind and in cash: Cash, $8.00; 16 cakes of soap, 210 pounds of sugar, 60 pounds of flour, 9 pounds of rice, 18 pounds of coffee, 3 pounds of butter, 1 pound of eakes, 9 hams, 7½ dozens of eggs, 15 quarts of fruit, 10 quarts of vegetables, 1 bottle of plum juice, 7 quarts of pickles, 1 quart of apple butter, 1 quart of citron, 1 gallon of syrup, 5 packages of seeded raisins, 1 bottle of cherries, 3 bottles of olives, 1 can wesson oil, ½ gallon of-peanuts, post toasties, 1 hen, apples, corn starch, 1 can of milk, dates, strawberry preserves, 2 boxes of baking powder, 2 cakes of chocolate, 2 cans of fine apples, a package of postum, a package of cocoa, panecake flour, cream of wheat, rolled oats, salt, 1 broom, 1 can of scouring powder, 1 can of gold dust and vegetables.

We have tested and tested these gifts, and the donors know how to select the best. There is no way to repay kindness when it breaks out in a flood as it did on that occasion. Music, conversation, and happy feelings seemed to convert the hours into minutes of joy. To me it was overwhelming and I have not fully recovered from the shock.

There is a lesson in this donation. It shows what many can do by putting their efforts together. That is the power of the Church. If all would bring something of thought, prayer, song, interest, and gifts to the regular services, and all come, it would make Sunday great in worship, and great in happiness. In all this large donation there was not a gift that was useless and not one that was small in the eyes of the recipient. It was the gift and not the size or value that we appreciated. The Lord is more appreciative than we can possibly be, because He knows the mind and heart of the donor. We are too prone to judge motives by actions; God judges actions by motives. The least child can bring a tribute of praise well-pleasing to God. What the Church needs is the presence, prayer, and praise, of all its members.

One other thing fastens itself more and more in life: and that is that I receive more than I deserve. People have always done more for me than I have done for them. The world itself has treated me better than I have treated the world; and this is doubly true of the Church; and I really believe that the Church is hungry to do more and more for ministers and the Kingdom they serve. People really look for opportunities to express their love, their liberality, and their life. I fear the energy of the world is sometimes interpreted in terms of selfishness. Because men are devoted to their business they are accused of narrowness; what they want is an opportunity and a cause worthy of their confidence, their consideration, and their contributions.

This is my thanks for the kindness of the congregation that I love.

W. W. STALEY.

FIRST CHURCH, NORFOLK

The First Christian church, Berkley, Norfolk, Va., is in the midst of her Easter evangelistic meetings. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Morgan, is doing his own preaching, and the music is being led by two splendid choirs, a Junior and a Senior. The meetings began on Sunday, March 23, and by the 26th twenty-two had united with the Church.

On Sunday, March 16, the pastor asked his congregation for $500.00 to lift the debt from the Sunday school room, and they contributed more than $780.00, thus lifting the debt, and paying some on the parsonage debt as well.

The emphasis in this Easter drive is being laid on the winning of men to Christ, and the interest seems to be increasing each night.

Brother E. T. Cotten, Suffolk, Va., one of our young pastors, writes: "I am glad to help THE SUN and also help my members by sending these few subscriptions. But there are others to be brought into our list, and I hope to get them soon. Probably I shall get a few more Sunday. I do not want this February-March Campaign to be the last time you hear from me in the way of sending new subscriptions." We appreciate this and the good work that Brother Cotten is doing for the cause. His message rings true.

The Durham church begins its revival next week. Rev. J. Lee Johnson is to do the preaching and Rev. O. D. Poythress to lead the singing.

Dr. J. W. Harrell was in Dayton, Ohio, last week attending the meeting of the Executive Board of the Forward Movement.

COMRADES IN SERVICE

Last night hundreds of the soldiers of Camp Val-dahon, France, came in the "Y" hut to learn about a movement that is literally attracting thousands of the men of the A. E. F. The pent-up emotion of a great and manly ideal is seeking outlet through a fraternal organization that bids fair to play small part in American life. The growth is phenomenal when considered in the light of its short history. For the benefit of those who are at home and read the church papers I want to give a few things that may be interesting regarding your boys.

The germ of the movement was planted by the Y. M. C. A. and religious workers of the American Cantonnents. The fellows felt the need of getting in close contact with each other for mutual benefits in the days ahead of them. So they became "comrades" and signed a little card that became their creed and guided them in their practical efforts to entertain and satisfy and instruct those of their ranks. Being more of a "spirit" or "mutual impulse" than an organization, it came to France with the boys and has proven such a developer of all-around manhood that it has been approved by General Headquarters as the uniform method of welfare work throughout the A. E. F.

On Monday, December 30, 1918, at Paris, the Chaplains and the various accredited representatives of the welfare organizations entered into a formal agreement to give "Comrade in Service" a wide-spread recognition and operation. A Central Council was effected as follows:

President, Bishop Charles H. Brent, Senior Chaplain G. H. Q.; Vice-Presidents, Mr. E. C. Carter, Chief Secretary, Y. M. C. A.; Mr. E. L. Hearn, Chairman Overseas Commission K. of C.; Rabbi H. G. Enelow, Director Jewish Welfare Board; Colonel W. S. Barker, Commander Salvation Army; Chairman of Executive Committee, Chaplain Edwin F. Lee, U. S. Army; Executive Secretary, Dr. O. D. Foster.

Later there have been added to the personnel of the Council additional vice-presidents consisting of one Army Officer from G. H. Q. and another officer, non-commissioned officer and one or two privates to be selected from the field. This provides representatives from every branch of the A. E. F.

The following fifteen articles of agreement subscribed to form the working basis of the movement as initiated:

1. That this movement be a means to an end and not an end in itself and as such strive to adjust itself to conditions that may serve best all concerned.
2. That the Comrades in Service be a movement of the soldier, for the soldier and by the soldier promoted and guided by a Central Council composed of the military and the auxiliary organizations of the A. E. F.
3. That the Central Council be composed of the heads of the organizations concerned, or some one designated by them.
4. That all policies governing the operation of the activities by the Comrades in Service be approved by this Council.
5. That all literature concerning the Comrades in Service be passed upon by the Council, or a smaller committee that it may appoint, before the manuscript is sent to press.

6. That all the organizations concerned be charged with the responsibility of promoting the movement throughout the entire A. E. F.

7. That the various agencies here represented focus their attention upon the furtherance of this program in the interest of unity and efficiency in the largest service of all.

8. That all share the expenses incurred in proportion to their respective constituencies.

9. That no man be expected to compromise his faith, but rather become a more worthy representative of it, adopting the attitude of a genuine comrade toward men of other faiths.

10. That every member of the Council continue to share with the entire body any such perplexities as might tend to make the Comradeship here any less complete, in order that the absolute confidence and faith in each other and in the organizations represented, may be maintained.

11. That the various organizations provide as far as the demands require, personnel for the Field and Central Headquarters Staff.

12. That the means of publicity at the disposal of the agencies here represented be used freely in the furtherance of the movement.

13. That the heads of these organizations immediately instruct their respective constituencies that they are expected to give their hearty co-operation in the promotion of this movement.

14. That the Central Council meet once a month or as often as deemed advisable by the President.

15. That the Executive Secretary, in conference with members of the Central or Headquarters Staff be charged with directing the work according to the lines laid down by the Central Committee.

The aims and ideals are set forth in an Enlistment Card as follows:

"Having answered the call of my country in the defense of Liberty, Justice, and Humanity, and recognizing that on me falls the obligation of being the best man possible in continuing this struggle in every realm of life for these essentials to human welfare and happiness, to this end I unite myself with others of like mind among my "Comrades in Service" to strive to help make real throughout the world the aims and ideals of the Comradeship stated on the reverse side of this card.

AIMS AND IDEALS

1. To create the highest type of morale by stimulating interest in helpful activities of all kinds and by encouraging in every man self-respect, self-reliance, loyalty, the spirit of team play, pride in himself, his fellows, his organization, his calling, and above all, his country.

2. To develop the best citizenship through clean living, generous respect for the rights of others, settling differences so far as possible through mutual understanding rather than by force, giving sympathetic attention to the sick and afflicted and encouragement and an all round human development through various lines of organized endeavor: physical, social, relief, educational, and religious.

3. To bind together in lasting comradeship on the democratic platform of Service, all the forces, both military and auxiliary operating in the Army and Navy."

The initial meeting of "Comrades in Service" with President and Mrs. Wilson as distinguished guests, was held on Sunday night, January 12, 1919, at the Palais de Glace in Paris. The large pavilion was packed with five thousand men of the A. E. F., representatives of the welfare organizations being present. Men of vision and leadership, both Catholic and Protestant, delivered speeches in which they approved most heartily the movement and pledged the co-operation of their respective constituencies.

Already flying squadrons are touring France to give publicity and enthusiasm to the work of the organization. Everywhere the men are fascinated with the idea. The insignia of Comradeship is suggestive and inspiring. The emblem unites in beautiful symbolic form the forces that have made American life powerful; the double triangle in blue representing Judaism, and the binding White Cross of Christianity. These are brought together on the face of a golden world of opportunity to strive as "Comrades" for a greater America and a grander world. Symbolically, but truly, they build with their sword by their side,—Nehemiah 4:18. In the service of one's country and world building there is no difference.

Why is the movement succeeding, and why will it continue to grow? Because it is not a "cut and dried" organization foreign to the spirit and ideals of our soldiers imposed from above. It is the crystallization of an impulse that surges in the veins of every American. It is giving articulate expression to a mighty emotion that has been developed by a common cause. Men of all stations in life have fought together for our flag against a common foe. They have sacrificed and suffered together as brothers for the defense of an ideal that was the outgrowth of liberty. They sealed their brotherhood as their blood mingled in the trench. Now the hands of all will be engaged in binding up the wounds of a shattered and bleeding world. I wish the folks back home could know how anxious our boys are to maintain the ideals for which they have fought! Numbers of men, Catholic and Protestants, are coming and inquiring how they can help the cause of humanity and right when they return home. They are "Comrades" over here. Will they have the chance to be "Comrades" when they get "Over There?"

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

When we ask the good women in our Church to help us we always get a hearty response. Sometime ago we asked for sheets and counterpanes or spreads for our beds and this week Mrs. M. E. Boyd and Miss Sarah E. Boyd, of Richmond, Va., sent us six sheets and one spread for our beds.

These good folks always come to our rescue whenever we call. Mrs. W. P. Betts, Batesburg, S. C., also mailed us check for $2.00 to buy sheets. If our good women will take hold of this proposition it will not be long till all our beds will be supplied and we will be glad.

Another Ladies' Society has decided to furnish one room in the Orphanage and are asking what it will cost to furnish a room.

I will say for the benefit of those who want to take part in this work that it will take some thing like sixty dollars to furnish a room with everything new. Of course much more could be spent in furnishing a room but we are calculating on just plain furniture, good substantial beds.

Have you been thinking about the Easter Offering in your church and Sunday school?

We must raise enough money from this offering to enable us to open up the home for the little children.

Begin to make your plans now and then work your plan. I will mail you envelopes for this offering soon and I trust you will get a splendid offering in your church.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Here comes a little girl only four years old who wants to join the band of cousins and help the little orphans. I go to Sunday school at the Christian church. Our teacher, Mrs. Glass, had us to sing in class last Sunday. We sang "Anything for Jesus" and the little shine song. We all like to sing. Hope all the little orphans are well and having a good time. Enclosed find my dime for March. Lots of love.—Pauline Trotter.

We are glad to have you join our corner and help keep it bright. We now have a little girl in the Orphanage who has pretty brown eyes. You must come to see her.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Here I come with my dime for March. I am about to be late. I am so glad spring is here. The birds sing so sweetly and we have pretty flowers and fruits. Hope all the cousins are well and happy. With lots of love to you and the cousins.—Irene Patton.

Of course you would have to come with your dime with all this pretty weather and amid the songs of birds and the pretty flowers. All must be happy together. Glad to get your letter this week.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am four years old and mother thinks I am big enough to join the Children's Corner. I go to Sunday school and like to go very much. I belong to the Cradle Roll and like to put my money in my mite box. I am sending a dime for March. With love for all the cousins.—Frances Horne Everett.

Glad to have you join. Yes, you are old enough to join the Corner. You will help to brighten it.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I hope this finds you and all the little cousins well. Enclosed find dime for March. With love to all.—T. D. Mathews, Jr.

You are as faithful as the boys who broke the Hindenburg line. You are always right on time. I will mail you a picture of our little girl who sings, "Keep the Home Fires Burning."—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Here comes a little girl and boy, eight and ten years of age. We have always been taught to care for the little orphans. Enclosed you will please find fifty cents.—Beulah and Clayborne Hodges.

I am very fond of little boys and girls and have two at my home. My little boy is seven and my little girl five. Both are sick this week, and their mother is, too. I am a trained nurse, by experience and am keeping them all in bed and if I can do that, don't you think I am doing pretty well?—"Uncle Charley."

Ask your neighbor if he takes THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and if he does not, get him to take it.

See special offer on books and Bibles. We hold the offer open till April 10.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

THE REVERENT MIND

I think the immortal servants of mankind
 Who from their home watch how by slow degrees
 The world-soul greathens with the centuries,
 Mourn most man's barren levity of mind—
 The ear to no grave harmonies inclined,
 The witless thirst for false wit's worthless lees,
 The laugh mistimed in tragic presences,
 The eye to all majestic meanings blind.

O prophets, martyrs, saviours! ye were great,
 All truth being great to you; ye deemed man more
 Than a dull jest, God's ennuï to amuse;
 The world for you held purport; life you worse
 Proudly, as kings their solemn robes of state;
 And humbly as the mightiest monarchs use.

—William Watson.

EACH MORNING A NEW EARTH

Did you ever go out of doors in the gray of the morning before the long yellow rays pushed back the heaps of black as night fled to the west? If you were up early enough to hear the voice of the first bird, you felt the sense of surprise in the strange new comradeship. Then, from one tree and another the nests yielded their chorus, until the whole air was vibrant with melody. Then, all of a sudden, a section of orange light crept across the placid water of the inland sea to make a golden pathway from the measureless depths beyond straight to you. As the light grew brighter and the rays lifted long fingers up, up toward other boundless depths beyond man's keen, you felt a strange sense of unfitness. "Surely, this is not all for me. Can the path to heaven be as clear for me as this unbroken way, that across the deep to the rising sun?"

Involuntarily you turned your back to the sun—perhaps the glory was too great, or was it the soul's unworthiness?

Again, the joy in life was reflected from the myriad drops of dew that caught the generous light and flashed it about in the blues, and reds, and all the rest of the rainbow tints. Land, sea and sky had awakened while you stood in wonder.

Oh soul of mine, awake! Awake! A new earth is yours each morning. On waking turn your face toward Him, and the clouds of doubt and despair will be dispelled. Sorrow and sighing shall flee away. The sweet communion with Him before you break the silence of night with the tattered speech of day will set your soul in the clear light of His love, so that all day you may reflect His presence in the varied experiences that await you.

Oh soul of mine, awake! Look for the new heaven and the new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness!—
Exchange.

LISTENING TIMES

What we need above all things in these crowded days is the setting apart of many listening times; times of quiet in which we can hear the heavenly voices that call to us unregarded in the busy day. The great clock bell of Saint Paul's is not heard even a few streets off in the roar of traffic all day long; but it can be heard over half the metropolis in the silence of the night. One reason why God so often spoke to His servants in the night was that all was quiet then.—G. H. Knight.

"TONED UP"

Most of the time-honored stimulants are under the ban today. Scientific investigation has proved that the old-fashioned "tonic" was really no tonic at all. The man who took a drink of whisky to prod his brain fooled nobody but himself. He merely induced in himself a fallacious feeling of mental speed. Most of the so-called "spring tonics" were merely whips to a tired horse; they made the victim "go" at cost of increased weariness. But there are some tonics that are safe in the taking and sure of results. There is the stimulant of a new idea, of a passionate goodness, of an exalted love. There is the touch of that presence which "disturbs us with the joy of elevated thoughts." There is the gift of a supreme forgiveness or the call of a paramount duty. Life at its best is rich in moral stimulants. Perhaps that is what we need just now; to take a tonic from the pharmacopoeia of God.—George Clarke Peck.

TAKE THEM AS THEY COME

"The lessons as they come every day are not so hard. It is after a while, when the examinations come and bring them all at once, that the trouble comes," fretted a girl who wanted to stand high in her studies.

"Take them as they come. If you learn each one well you will find when you meet them again in examination, that they are old friends," wisely encouraged her mother.

That is the good, old rule. It smoothes away many a Hill Difficulty that seems to loom up ahead. We need not do all our life tasks at once. Take them as they come, master them thoroughly, and each conquered lesson, when we meet it again, will prove an old friend instead of a new foe.—Selected.

HELPING A TROUBLED HEART

There are always those about us who are in trouble of some kind. Vexations meet and greet us all. These are the times when we need a little comfort, a little cheer, or a little gentle talk. There is no consolation like a little encouragement when the hours are dark and gloomy, when the sky is out of our sight and the clouds of life lingering very near. Let us seek to help another and thus be a real brother.

MISSIONARY

A LETTER APPRECIATED

The Mission Treasurer received a few days since the following, which had no name, but which is appreciated beyond words, and which will be used as directed. It was without postmark or signature, and read as follows: "Dear Dr. Atkinson:

"Enclosed is $10.00. I want you to please send it overseas to help feed the poor starving little children over there. It may be if they are spared to live they will be good Christians and workers for the Lord Christ."

We have no idea as to the writer, but the $10.00 reached us safely and is used in the way designated. Some heart anxious for the salvation of the unsaved thus performs a noble task without making known his or her name.

ANOTHER LETTER

The following is received and is like others which we are receiving now from time to time and manifests somewhat the spirit that is growing in our Sunday schools:

"McCuHers, N. C., March 8, 1919.

"Dr. J. O. Atkinson,
Elon College, N. C.

"Dear Sir:

"Enclosed herewith post office money order for $78, offering from Wentworth Christian Sunday school for missions. The school has decided to give one offering each month to missions and to spend a few minutes each Sunday to the study of missions. Hope you are having much success in your great work. "Our school is small at present. We reorganized since the first of the year. We believe we are going to have a good school.

"With best wishes, I am

"Yours very truly,

"L. D. Stephenson, Secretary."

The following also tells what another school is doing and is appreciated beyond words:

"Graham, N. C., March 17, 1919.

"Dear Sir:

"As the New Providence Christian Sunday school has pledged to give one Sunday's collection to the foreign and home missions, the third Sunday in the month being the one accepted. So please find enclosed the collection of $3.50.

"Miss Effie Hall, Secretary."

This comes from Wadley, Alabama, and is also appreciated:

"Dear Brother:

"Enclosed find post office money order for $70, the monthly offering of Beulah Christian Sunday school. Please send receipt.

"Yours truly,

"Grace Kenley, Secretary."

Another letter comes from Linville, Virginia:

"Dear Brother:

"Your letter of January 28th to hand. Please pardon the delay in answering, for only today the school, by a large vote decided to send the fourth Sunday's collection for missions, as your letter indicated. As Secretary of the School, I was instructed to send this amount each month. So I ask that you write me how and to whom I am to send same. For this month I will send with this letter-

"As to the study of missions, the Superintendent failed to mention; yet I feel sure the school will want to take up this part also, and I am asking you to send samples such as you think will suit best a country school; adult, junior, intermediate and primary classes, also prices of the same and I will present this school. Money order for $1.15 is enclosed for February. Our Sunday school is sending one Sunday's offering to the Christian Orphanage.

"Cordially yours,

"Miss Mary E. F. Kratzer,

"Sunday School Secretary."

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY*

I Cor. 6:19-20. "Ye are not your own's; ye are bought with a price."

You have seen the full page announcement on The Christian Sun of the Southern Christian Convention's request that our pastors preach today on the subject, "The Call to the Ministry." The request is urgent and the need for more ministers is imperative, and therefore I shall carry out the wishes of our Convention and, I fully believe, the wishes of the Master of the harvest.

The need of men for the harvest shall be our first consideration. The need perhaps has never been more evident for the inhabited world is larger. The expansion of the territory is both local and universal—the vacant places are filling up; the unreached territory is being populated. The harvest fields are becoming fertile everywhere; populations are increasing in every country. And every soul must have Christ or be lost! In the larger world our blessed Savior sees a larger number of men with the possibility of becoming leaders and I see Him standing amongst us with up-lifted head; with out-stretched hands; with a throbbing, blood-stained breast saying, "Ye are not your own's; ye are bought with a price."

The universality of education makes the demand for true, orthodox, Christian leadership more urgent. "A little learning is a dangerous thing," so also is un-Christian learning. We could but shudder in fear for this old world and its future if we only knew the vast amount of tommy-rot that is being taught by so-called thinkers of new thought, spiritualism, higher criticism, super-manism! The old world needs true education, but what shall become of us if we allow the new tossing, tainted tide of religious infidelity to sweep so much of the good of our greater cities off of its feet? Hear me, young man of our church, God is going to call you—enough of you—to drain dry the cess pools of sin on this earth! You are needed to leaven the present great lump of education. You, because you are the sons of Christian fathers and mothers; you because your precious lives have not been tainted by the wicked and vulgar tide of which I speak; you because you have been taught from your infancy the orthodox views of Christianity! Our entire Southern Christian Convention is calling for young men and women who are not afraid to read, to love, to believe, to teach this blessed Book from the first chapter of Genesis to the last part of Revelation just as it is! It must live in the heart of education, and unless it does our fairest hopes are futile.

Never was the opportunity larger because wealth and material riches are at their zenith. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein." And unless we can bring this great age to see and to know that our vast riches spring from the eternal garner of God we shall surely meet a final crisis such as was met by Greece, Athens, Carthage, and Rome. We must keep a full, grateful stream of our money flowing back—ever back—to God, for such is in keeping with his natural laws,—from the ocean abundant and copious rains pour but back to the ocean streams of water ever run. While wealth is at its crest a large army of zealous, wide-awake, brainy young men and women are needed to turn the tide toward suffering and superstitious humanity in larger areas of the earth.

And war has enlarged the opportunity. Democracy has been on trial. War has put it in this case to its supreme test. Seeing the urgent need the leaders of democracy's realm raised army after army—mobilized millions upon millions of men—until finally the shout of victory was heard. The issue has put Christianity to the test. O, Christ, will you not raise an army equal to the need? See the wide open doors of China, India, Japan, Africa, South America and the isles of the sea. They are opened up as never before—never! And things are happening! Aethism, agnosticism, skepticism and all the damning afore-mentioned-isms are rushing in at those doors, and now as never heretofore we are needed to hasten in. Oh! men—young men—I challenge you to a task magnanimous in size. I challenge you. Shall we good people out here in our large Christian communities evade so great a question? Nearly a score of men from this church offered their lives for democracy. Shall we do less for Christianity? Or shall we do nothing? May God bless every young person who hears that question, and may he be willing if God so directs to say—"Here am I, send me." Hear Paul as he thunders the truth of the text at you: "Ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price."

And while the opportunity has never been larger never has it been easier to miss. You honest, conscientious young people will not all miss the opportunity without some consideration but the seeming importance of other fields will lure you away. Many other professions, vocations, and callings will make their bids for your times, talents and possibilities. For instance, the teaching profession of which I have tasted will bid high and well for first place in your considerations. And indeed it is a most delightful experience to have a group of clean, talented, happy, and eager boys and girls sit about you and with never-failing faithfulness attend your every teaching. I have watched the play of intelligence upon their foreheads, the gleam of gratitude in their eyes, and known the purity of their love! But oh! pleasanter—pleasanter still it is to have each of the same group of young people say: "You have shown the Christ to me; here and now I give my heart and life to Him!" Yes, yes other important fields may lure us away!

We might miss the opportunity by being lured away by wealth. Wealth, a medium which may be transformed from a holy and heavenly thing to "the root of all evil." Oh! wealth, you will sing your choicest anthem to many a young man and young woman who is already "bought with a price" far greater than you can ever pay! "For what shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" He is bought with things eternal which are worth more than the material wealth of the world. Listen not, young man, to the song of the wealthy siren until you have heard and heeded the voice of the Master, saying: "Seek ye first the kingdom and its righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." God will supply your needs and open to you the wealth of the world if you need it.

And then you might be lured away by ambition. "Caesar was ambitious, and I slew him." Saul was ambitious and did not slay king Amelek and was himself rejected as king of Israel. The word "ambition" is not so far as I know in the Bible. Beware of being ambitious. When I was first hearing the call to the ministry I desired with all my heart to be a lawyer—and eventually a statesman—if you will permit me now to express my boyish dream. I practiced law behind the plow, in the woods, with my chums and schoolmates, everywhere. I loved lawyers. I could listen at them at the bar with intense pleasure. They were my heroes. I knew some good ones; I loved them then; I love them now. But all the time there was something teaching me that there is a Law higher than the law man. I heard the Voice calling—the old desire began to go slipping and I yielded. To myself I said, "I will plead at the bar of God's mercy; I will practice a Law that will never be repealed; I shall be an ambassador for Christ and do business for and with the King of kings and Lord of lords." Young men, your command is from Him—"Slay all." As you are you are prince with an opportunity. You stand head and shoulders above some of your fellows,—and "you are not your own, you are bought with a price." Miss not your opportunity by any of the three afore mentioned allurements. "The path of duty leads but to glory."

How may I know I'm called to so responsible a position? I feel sure that by the time we have reached this point in the discussion some of you are beginning to want an answer to this question. Oftimes Christ answered a question with a question. May I ask this one, Are you sure you are a Christian? Are you a citizen in the kingdom of Christ? Are you on the altar of God? Oh, Savior, help us first to answer these questions steadily and faithfully before our God! Help us to answer them now! It is no time for trifles! Life is too serious; responsibility too great for any quibbling or vacillating. It is the time for men, true men, to answer this great question in a great way, Am I really a Christian with all that that implies? Oh! for scores upon scores of young men and women in our beloved Christian church who will answer that question rightly. With that one answered let us take a few more. What were you saved for? Ornament? Never—except as you shall glorify Christ in active service for Him. The world is the field—the harvest is ripe—why, is it possible that the ungarnered grain shall fall to the earth and decay? I believe that if every person Christ chooses would answer the call there would be men to do the harvesting. Not more than enough, but enough. Christ has said plainly "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Can you be sure that does not mean you? You cannot, unless you bring the matter to most serious prayer and consideration. When He says, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," you say "That's to me, you and everybody." But have you diligently considered the former commandment which I have just quoted?

My friends listen to this: "Now Samuel did not yet know the Lord, neither was the word of the Lord yet revealed unto him. And the Lord called Samuel again the third time. And he arose and went to Eli, and said, 'Here am I; for thou didst called me.' And Eli perceived that the Lord had called the child. Therefore Eli said unto Samuel, Go, lie down; and it shall be if he call thee, that thou shalt say, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'" So Samuel went and lay down in his place. And the Lord came and called as at other times: 'Samuel, Samuel.' Then Samuel answered, 'Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.'" Did Samuel ever regret that night, or the answer he made his Lord? Oh! my friends, you know the beautiful story of Samuel's long and glorious career! Suppose he had not answered as he did, unto oblivion a useful life would have gone. If he had said, "I fear my chums will call me sissy," he would never have crowned kings, nor nursed a nation. Not just any pious young man can be a minister, but a God-called, level-headed, consecrated man who is not afraid, will become a power in the world.

Do you want a large place, or would you fill a small corner well? Do you want to serve your day and generation? Do you want to be a blessing to humanity? Then if God calls say, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth."

In conclusion allow me to say you will not all be called to preach, but each of you are called to do service in the harvest field. Some of you, I sincerely believe, will hear the call. I pray the Lord of harvest to help you to realize that "ye are not your own; ye are bought with a price." Amen.

*Sermon preached by Rev. J. G. Truitt, Sunday, February 16, 1919, Pleasant Grove (Va.) church.

MARRIAGES

SAVEDGE-SPRATLEY

On the afternoon of March 11, 1919, at the Christian parsonage, Dendron, Va., then was a quiet marriage, when Mr. Beverly Allen Savedge led to the marriage altar Miss Ruth Atkinson Spratley. Immediately after the ceremony, which was said by the writer, the happy couple motored to Wakefield, Va., where they took the train for Washington. They will make their home in Dendron, Va., and they have the best wishes of their many friends.

BROWER-SHEPHERD

On March 16, 1919, 311 Chestnut Street, High Point, North Carolina Mr. Oscar Floyd Brower and Miss Ethel Sheffield were united in the holy estate of matrimony. They both live in High Point where they plan to continue their home.

The ceremony was performed at 4:00 P. M., in a quiet manner with only a few intimate friends present. Immediately after the ceremony they motored to the home of the bridegroom's parents.

May theirs be a life, long, peaceful, prosperous and happy.

The blessings of our heavenly Father be upon the bereaved wife and loved ones.

J. W. HARRELL.

LONGEST

At eight o'clock Sunday morning, March 9, 1919, the soul of Brother John Longest quietly slipped from the suffering body into the eternal freedom of God's presence. He had reached the age of sixty-three years. Only a few years ago he professed faith in Christ and united with the Christian church of Graham, North Carolina. His final testimony gives such comfort to those who mourn that they "sorrow not as others." Perhaps the wife and children feel most keenly the loss, but a brother, two sisters and a host of relatives and friends join them in their grief. Dr. D. A. Long assisted the writer in the funeral services which were held in Graham Christian church. Interment was in Graham cemetery.

What is the object of distillation? Describe the process and the apparatus used. Answer: The object of distillation is the making of whisky. When The Community Church Broke Its Fetters Broke its fetters? Yes, its fetters---the things that had tied it to her own hitching post.

Strange indeed that an institution as free as the community church should be bound to tradition and custom--- the tradition and custom of doing all for self and nothing for the big world outside of her community. Yes, strange, but that is the way of so many local churches.

But Here Is How

the community church broke her fetters and started on the road to growth: She Did Something Big For a Big Institution of Her Own Denomination. AND THAT GAVE HER MEMBERS to do something for enterprises beyond their own immediate neighborhood.

Vision and Courage

Will Your Church

break the lines of custom and tradition and go "Over the top" for Elon's Standardization Fund by subscribing her quota?

The Spirit of Larger Things

THERE is a spirit of larger things brooding in the minds of our people. In every home and in every church the spirit of giving is finding its way. The people are accepting the great challenge before them and taking God at His word. The result is that a new day is dawning for the Christian Church. Littleness is being pushed into the corners and will soon be a thing of the past. Our people are getting richer in wealth, sweeter in spirit, greater in soul. The windows of heaven are being opened and the blessings of the Kingdom are being poured out upon them.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

SOME REFLECTIONS

An editor is supposed to write editorials but he may write articles that are not classed as editorials. A definition for an editorial might not cover this article, and so we do not claim it to be an editorial, but a little testimony to a feeling within that is finding sanction without.

For several weeks

we have been sharing a feeling of larger things for the Kingdom. Our work along this line, aside from editing THE CHRISTIAN SUN has recently been challenged and the outcome of it will surely be seed sown in fertile soil to bloom into the fullness of the Kingdom's cause. The public will learn further as the matter develops.

Going after the mail after supper is a set custom of ours. We enjoy the many good things that friends write us. These letters, together with our splendid exchanges, make the evenings all too short and the call of the bed time too soon. Last Friday evening we went for our mail and then on to THE SUN office. Among the many good things in our mail were three articles from President Harper. These articles are printed in full in this week's issue of THE SUN and need no comment. When we read these letters they lifted our soul to a feeling that we rarely ever experienced. It was a feeling like unto that which we had been feeling for months—that the time was at hand for larger things and larger tasks for our Church and for all Churches. Suffolk's challenge made our heart glad, and almost before we knew it, we were on our knees by the side of the desk, where the routine of business is hammered out, praying to God that the good work might be continued and the people of the Church enter into the wide open door of opportunity. We returned to our home and told the "assistant editor" of what had happened and how we felt. Turning to an exchange we found the following article, which seemed to be in accord with what we had experienced and felt:

Money can be converted into happiness, and that makes it much more worth possessing. It has, in fact, usually been sought for that reason and the additional one that it gives power.

Money can secure power much easier than it can secure happiness. It cannot buy happiness as a cross-counter transaction. Happiness is not so cheap as that.

Money cannot buy happiness, but it can be changed into it. This can only be done through some intermediate object or person. Money consecrated to Jesus Christ breaks out into the great golden flower of happiness both for the giver and for many others whom the gift reaches.

The very act of consecrating money to Jesus Christ makes it a kind of sacrament, and it washes the heart of unselfishness and awakens in it urges of kindness. There is no way to consecrate money to Christ except by giving it to the needy ones of earth.

Up to this time the matter of $125,000 had looked large but not impossible. It now looked small and our mind immediately began to think of the $250,000 margin. A big task but one not impossible. And then we thought of all the churches that would not be given a chance if we stopped at $125,000; we thought of the good men and women in this generation whose only opportunity this was to contribute to Elon's endowment, for the endowment of a college rarely ever challenges the people but once in a generation; and so that we make—a thing that almost staggers us, but with a clear conscience and a feeling of duty to say it: Let us make it TWO HUNDRED AND FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS. We can do it and do it easily. And thank God we can do it without calling it "begging" for money. Beggars beg, but Christian men and women who represent the cause of the Kingdom do not beg but give opportunities. It would put the privilege and the pleasure into the hearts of a few churches and individuals were we to stop at $125,000. It is our College—the College of the people and for the people and so let us give all the people a chance. A part of Elon's present endowment is in the form of a note and it has been learned that it cannot be counted as strictly endowment. This with the fact that the college is to have under its care 80 young men and women to train as ministers and missionaries during the next four years makes it imperative that we double the quota of each church and make the amount $250,000.00.

here is the point

This good feeling

continued throughout the day Saturday and remained with us. Saturday night we went to High Point to be with the good people of that congregation on Sunday. We were met at the train by Brothers R. C. Boyd, J. E. Bost, and Rev. L. L. Wyrick, the pastor, and then carried to the home of Brother Vuncannon where we met more than twenty-five young people of the church and community who had gathered for singing. Their first song was "Strengthen your Hold upon Jesus," and how they did sing it! We listened to it with interest and rapt attention and reviewed time after time the things that we had been thinking about for weeks, for they were things that would cause us to get a greater hold upon Jesus and let Him get a greater hold upon us. Other selections followed and in all of them there was a beautiful revelation of our feelings.

The evening soon passed away. Brother R. C. Boyd made a splendid talk of how community singings were bringing the young people of the church into Christian fellowship. THE SUN's Editor led in prayer and all went to their homes feeling happy—and they were happy. We were carried to the home of Brother Whitt and found there a bed fit for a king and a room set in order by the hands of a splendid Christian woman. We asked Brother Wyrick if we should not undertake to raise High Point's goal of $500 for Elon's Standardization Fund. He said that he would leave it to us, and so we prayed over it that the coming day might break clear and the homes be opened to us for this work. We spent a pleasant night. Our sleep was as sweet as that of a baby and our dreams as charming as fancy ever dared to make them. We were out early next morning and began to call on the people. We had just one hour and thirty minutes before Sunday school, and in this time raised High Point's quota with $200 over.

We went to Sunday school and there Superintendent Boyd had everything in fine running condition. Life was put into the songs, variety into the opening and enthusiasm into the work. The school is flourishing and meeting a long felt need in a splendid community. The school gives a Sunday's offering to the Orphanage and one to missions.

Preparation had been made for the regular services. Hand bills had been scattered over the city, and by the kindness of the High Point Enterprise, the services had special mention and space on Saturday afternoon. The attendance was good. By the advertising, many old friends of the Editor who were in the city, (though their whereabouts unknown to us) were in attendance. We endeavored to speak at the appointed time and had the co-operation of good attention. At the close of the service we announced that the High Point church had subscribed her quota to the Elon Standardization Fund and that we wanted to see the church double it. No soliciting was done from the pulpit. After the service the required amount of $300.00 was soon subscribed rounding out one thousand dollars for High Point and again demonstrating that a mission church can do things if it will—and they all will if given a chance. We were hastened to Brother L. R. Gibson's hospitable home, given one of the best dinners ever spread, and then rushed to the train at 1:40 and began our journey back home.

We stopped in Greensboro between trains for two hours and met up with pastor J. V. Knight of the First church. He carried us to his study and we talked over things worth while. He too, like, Brother Wyrick at High Point, is doing a good work and bringing things to pass. The special meeting is to begin April 20 and already much work is being done to make it count for the Kingdom's growth. And now for a summary of the situation and a few facts worth stating: THE CHRISTIAN SUN had paved the way for the work at High Point. There is no question about it. The people had been reading THE SUN—and the back page, too. No details were necessary. They knew it all. Oh, how long will it be when all the pastors will begin to see that the Church paper is needed to help them carry out their work? May the day hasten! The people who gave the $1,000.00 were, with two exceptions, tithers and readers of The Tither. One man said: "All right, I want to help and can do it for I am tithing my account," and with his pen signed the pledge with delight. God's plan of financing His work is coming, coming, and it will be a good day when it comes.

to High Point and her band of loyal workers. She is talking about all-time service, and one of these days it will be more than talk. It's a joy to be with such good people; it's a joy to work when there is work to do; it's a joy to write when you have something to write about. There is a better day, a brighter day, for the Kingdom's work and that day is here and is challenging all of us for LARGER things.

At the time of this writing when we are due to make up THE SUN forms we have received nothing on the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor topics. We carried nothing last week. This work was generously taken over by the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Board of the Southern Christian Convention. The work has been very irregular for some time. Complaints have been coming to us about it. The fault is not our, dear friends. We put the matter up to the Committee to do the work or otherwise advise us so that arrangements can be made for regular weekly contributions for these two important topics.

Brother J. F. Morgan sends this note, March 31: "Our meeting is still interesting—33 received into the church to date."

Look for our report on THE SUN campaign next week. Did not have room this week.

President Wilson is reported ill in France. His condition is not serious, however.

CHURCH PAPER WISDOM

Brother T. N. Ivey, Editor of the Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., has the following timely things to say in his paper of March 28:

It is a question whether the great public has yet become fully awake to the fact that without the newspapers of the country the great war could not have been won by the United States and the Allies. If it had not been for the newspapers, public sentiment could never have been worked up to the point of strength necessary to our entering the war. If it had not been for the newspapers, the great Liberty Loans and other helpful enterprises could not have been floated. If the secular newspaper is so necessary to a country in carrying on successfully a war and other important enterprises, can there be any exception to the rule in the case of the Church? Should we not see that for the Church to neglect the matter of publicity in carrying on the war against evil is to meet defeat?

Lately we received from one of our subscribers, evidently a lady of culture, a request for the discontinuation of this paper. She said that nothing could be said against the paper, but that she was already taking more papers than she could read. This plea is very familiar to every editor in the land. In nine cases out of ten it is equivalent to the declaration that in the cutting down of the number of periodicals the work must begin with the newspaper representative of Jesus Christ. Such a plea more often betrays a greater lack of consecration than of time to read. "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness" applies as much to the reading of newspapers as to going to preaching and to praying. Many professing Christ, who expect daily visits of Jesus Christ in the shape of material blessings, draw the line at spiritual blessings brought by the weekly religious newspaper.

Early in the Editor's newspaper experience he received a rude jar. He heard a worthy pastor offer one of his members an apologetic explanation of the fact that he had approached her with the Editor to solicit a subscription for the Church newspaper. The Editor could not understand it. During his pastoral life he had been in the habit of presenting frequently to his congregations the claims of the connectional and the Conference organ. The idea never occurred to him that he was doing anything unusual or irregular or prejudicial to himself as pastor of a flock. On the contrary, he felt thankful for the opportunity of doing something that would be so helpful to his people and his work. And to this day he is puzzled over the fact that some preachers have the idea that a sermon or a talk on the circulation of Christian literature, or even a canvass of the congregation for subscribers, is an innovation to be justified only by an apology to the congregation. Why apologize for doing that part of pastoral work which keeps solid and sound the very foundation on which real Christian service rests—that is, knowledge of God and his Church? Surely the dignity which prompts such feeling of apology is that dignity which is but the "starch of the shroud."

WORLD'S CHRISTIAN CITIZENSHIP CONFERENCE STRONG PROGRAM

The Third World's Christian Citizenship Conference which was to have been held in Pittsburgh, Pa., last summer but which was postponed on account of the war, will be held in Pittsburgh, Victory Week, November 9-16, 1919, under the auspices of the National Reform Association.

An exceptionally strong program is already assured. Among the Americans who have agreed to speak at the Conference are the Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, formerly governor of New York, justice of the United States Supreme Court and nominee for the presidency of the United States; P. P. Claxton, U. S. Commissioner of Public Education; Frank J. Cannon, formerly U. S. Senator from the Utah and the greatest living authority on Mormonism; Arthur Capper, Senator from Kansas; Henry M. Temple, U. S. Congressman; Henry Van Dyke, author, poet, ambassador to Holland; Gifford Pinchot, statesman and authority on conservation; Drs. James A. Francis, Charles F. Jefferson, Charles L. Stelzle, Samuel Zane Batten, Edwin C. Dinwiddie, Charles L. Godell and B. S. Steadwell, well known reformers, and Mrs. Ella A. Boole, first vice-president of the W. C. T. U.

The purpose of the conference is to gather together representatives from various nations to compare views as to the moral interests of mankind and to aid in conserving the moral gains and repairing and the moral damage of the war.

This conference is not an experiment. The first of the kind was held in Philadelphia in 1910 with an attendance of 1,500 and seven countries represented on its program. The second met in Portland, Oregon, in 1913 with 15,000 people in attendance at some sessions and seventeen countries represented on the program. It is proposed to make this third conference much larger and more representative in every way, particularly in view of the world's need in this period of reconstruction.

GROWTH OF WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Woman Suffrage has had a gradual growth for several years. The following are the countries that have adopted it, also the years of their adoption:

New Zealand, 1893; Australia, 1902; Finland, 1906; Norway, 1907; Iceland, 1913; Denmark, 1915; Great Britain for England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, 1918; Canada, 1918; Sweden, 1918; Germany, 1919; Holland, 1919.

PLACING THE VALUE

It is a significant fact that the laws of the State of North Carolina afford better protection to the live stock of the State than is provided for the citizens. Mr. M. W. Wall, Farm Demonstration Agent for Northampton County, has just returned from Ohio with a load of thoroughbred milk cows. Before being allowed to bring these cattle into the State Mr. Wall had to have them tested for tuberculosis. The State law prohibits any cattle with tuberculosis or any hogs with cholera from being brought into the State, requiring examinations to be made to prove that the live stock are free from these diseases. People suffering from tuberculosis and other infectious diseases, however, may come and go at will. Does this mean that North Carolina places a higher value on its stock than upon its citizens? Or is a lack of appreciation of the worth of human life the cause?

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

GREENSBORO LETTER

Our work here goes good at present. Services, both morning and evening, are still on the increase in interest and attendance. The "Efficiency Contest" in the Sunday school has aroused much interest, and installation of the double envelope is bringing the double interest in missions we expected. By means of the efficiency work over 90 per cent of the classes in the school have registered 95 per cent on preparation for the last three Sundays.

It is wonderful to see how our people are lining up for our evangelistic campaign which begins April 20. Seventy-six have pledged themselves to pray every day for the meeting. Thirty have joined the personal work group, and fifteen have joined the personal workers' class and will make special preparation for their work. I am predicting a great meeting for the First church because the work needs it; the folks are praying for it, expecting it and I know God is always mindful of our needs. Then I have secured the service of two of the leading evangelistic workers of our country. Those of us who are acquainted with the work of the Berge Sisters know what a treat our people have in store awaiting them. Another evidence of the progress of our work is seen in the matter of the Elon Standardization campaign. Our church was apportioned $4,500, and we are now rounding out $10,000 and the work is not yet done.

The writer did the preaching for the Palm Street meeting which closed last night (March 30). Rev. John W. Knight of Stokesdale is their pastor. We had a great meeting, which he will probably speak of at a later date. The people there love Brother Knight, and it is a great pity that he cannot give his whole time to that field. The great need of that church is full time preaching, and a pastor on the field all the time. The church is able to do it, and I believe with a little encouragement from the Conference Board of Missions, they would undertake it. Our Greensboro work as a whole needs the service of two men all the time. As I see it, the time is ripe for the establishment of an all time pastorate at the Palm Street church. I hope the people will pray for it, and lend their aid in bringing it about.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

Greensboro, N. C.

GEORGIA AND ALABAMA CHURCHES

Sunday, March 23, was spent by the writer with Rev. E. M. Carter at Lanett, Ala. Brother Carter has been pastor of our church here "off and on" for several years. He enjoys the utmost confidence and esteem of his people, and is in turn devoted to their moral and spiritual welfare. He can now only give them one Sunday a month appointments and he and they much desire at least two Sundays of each month. A pastor should by all means be located here, and give the other two Sundays of the month to the very promising nearby points of Langdale and Fairfax. There is a wonderful opportunity for the Christians at these latter two points, as well as at Lanett, and we certainly losing a fruitful field of service by not so locating a pastor. Our Lanett brethren need a new house of worship, and they are seriously considering rebuilding. If they had a resident pastor it is likely they would have on a building program at an early date. We have some splendid people at Lanett; none better any where. A visit in their homes was a great joy.

Early Monday morning the writer left for Lumber City, Ga., where he met Rev. H. W. Elder, our Georgia miracle of church builders. Brother Elder has long felt we should have a Christian church in Lumber City. He has built churches in the last few years at Kite, Ambrose, Enigma, and Vanceville, and now wishes to build the most costly and permanent of all at Lumber City. All these towns are in South Georgia, and in a few years we should have a thriving Conference here.

We found some most delightful, amiable and loyal people there, and they can and will have a permanent and handsome church home if they really desire it, and decide to undertake to build. There are three families of Elders there, relatives of our beloved and hustling H. W., and they are aggressive builders in the business and financial world as their cousin is in the church world. If they build at all—and the writer thinks they will—they will have a house of worship of which the Christians from any quarter will not be ashamed.

In fact our people are determined to build better and more handsome houses of worship whenever they build in future. This sentiment prevails wherever the Mission Secretary has been. We have already put up too many cheap, shoddy, indifferent church buildings. You simply cannot have a wide awake, active congregation in an indifferent, inadequate house of worship, for long at a time at best.

Our stay at Lumber City was a great joy, being enhanced by the opportunity of preaching at night of Tuesday in the M. E. Church. We trust to know more of the good people of Lumber City.

SUFFOLK LETTER

There is a feeling in these times that the people of God ought to be more spiritual by making religion more real. There is not so much a demand for emotion as for devotion, and that not a devotion separate from daily life but permeating daily life.

"They who seek the throne of grace
Find that throne in every place;
If we live a life of prayer,
God is present ev'rywhere."

The growing thought is not that the world's work should be brought into the Kingdom, but that the Kingdom should go into the world's work. "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil." The sunlight is not contaminated by the earth, but it blesses the world. It is the function of the Christian to go into the farm, the shop, the school, the store, the lodge, the political meeting, and to manifest the spirit of Jesus by doing all to the glory of God. The sparks from a Christian blacksmith's anvil may help to enlighten the world. The yardstick has its place as well as the hymn book. The ledger may honor the Bible, and the book-keeper may serve God. It is this larger Christian life that the present time demands.

It must nowhere be taught that any human service, apart from God, is a substitute for religion. There is no human service a substitute for divine grace; but divine grace may work in all human service. The Christian religion has expressed itself in the prohibition of the liquor traffic, the abolition of slavery, the removal of the lottery, and the prohibition of vile literature from the mails. A labor union in Mississippi has elected a chaplain for the first time, and there is no reason why labor organizations may not become agencies for saving men. That will be a great day when railroads and steamboats are Christianized and carry no evil thing. That day may come. They require sober men to operate them, and they should refuse to transport what unfits men to do their work. The time is within the memory of men now living when railroad officials had liquors on the table in their private cars; but that day is gone. The day is near when it will not be in the freight cars. The spirit of Christ has entered the train.

The time is near when the farmer's religion will not be in the church only but in the field as well. He will not only treat his neighbor right, but his mule. I caught a hired man taking corn from the trough of mules to feed his hog and he was a member of the church. I said to him: "It would have been bad enough if you had stolen corn from my crib; but it is mean to steal from a mule. Those mules have worked hard all day and will have to work tomorrow. You have stolen from them and they cannot tell their loss." He said: "Fore God I never thought of that;" and many people wrong dumb beasts without thought. The time will come, and is already here when religion will be determined by how men treat mules.

WHY WAS THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR LEFT OUT?

In THE CHRISTIAN SUN for April 2 appears a notice concerning the so-called, "Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Christian Conference." Before reading that notice I had thought there was such a convention in existence, but now I have another "think" coming. Note the general theme of the Convention: "The new Sunday School for the New Time," and quoting the notice further, "all addresses and talks expected to be in line with the general theme," and still further, "let all Sunday schools have themselves represented by capable delegates—and raise four cents per member for the Convention." Then why not call it the North Carolina Sunday School Convention of the Christian Church and be done with it, since the Christian Endeavor is left out? Rest assured brethren, that your Christian Endeavor Committee will never ask the Societies to raise funds for a Convention that does not recognize its work in the bounds of the Convention. Be it far from us to even dream of such methods of procedure.

True, the Christian Endeavor in our Southern churches has never done very much, but that is neither the fault of Christian Endeavor nor of Christian Endeavor principles. As I see it, this part of our Church life is sorely neglected. I have no criticism to offer on the general work, but the Sunday school has never and never will do the work of the Christian Endeavor. It is not supposed to do it. The primary aim of the Christian Endeavor is to "train Christian workers," and for that reason it ought to be given a place in all our Conference and Convention program. The reason our Societies have never done much is because they have never been given any encouragement to do it. Give it a chance in the Convention and Conference work, or publicly place the stamp of disapproval on that line of work and let it die decently.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

I will preach at the Masonic Home in Greensboro, N. C., Sunday, April 13, 1919, to all the old people and particularly to the unsaved. All the old people who desire to do so, may attend. I am very much interested in persons who have reached old age that are unsaved.

On Sunday, April 20, 1919, I will preach at Bethlehem, six miles north of Elon College, to old people. All persons are invited to be present but I desire especially that all old people of that community, who are unsaved, attend. I am now in my ninety-four year, perhaps the oldest minister that many have heard preach, and I trust that much good may be accomplished.

Other churches or places desiring my services will please write or call me.

REVIVAL AT ELON COLLEGE

Revival services were held here beginning March 20 and closing March 30. Revs. J. V. Knight, Greensboro, N. C., O. D. Poythress, South-Norfolk, Va., and P. E. Lindley, Elon College, N. C., led the singing and conducted the preliminary services. They rendered valuable service and it was highly appreciated by pastor and audience. The preaching was done by the pastor. All services were well attended, and a quiet and serious spirit of interest prevailed. There were eighteen decisions for Christ and seven reconsecrations. Eight united with the church and were baptized. Others have signified their intention to unite at the next service.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

"THE GREATEST EVENT IN OUR HISTORY"

That was Colonel J. E. West's animated statement. The scene was enacted on Friday morning, April 4 at 9 o'clock in the pastor's study of the Suffolk Christian church, where for more than a generation a modest leader of men and self-forgetful man of God, has wrought out sermons that have changed men's lives and initiated plans that have advanced the interests of the Kingdom in our Christian Church. Present were that man, Colonel J. E. West, Mr. C. A. Shoop, Dr. I. W. Johnson, and the writer.

The writer announced that Col. J. E. West would be the first speaker. He spoke as the Chairman of the Drive Committee on the Elon Standardization Fund. He stated that this Committee had agreed that any Church which should give $50,000 in this drive could designate some one in whose honor the chair of the presidency in Elon College should be named.

Mr. C. A. Shoop, as Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Suffolk Church, was next heard, stating that Suffolk had met this condition and had designated Dr. W. W. Staley as the man in whose honor the chair should be named, in view of his signal service as pastor during 37 years of the Church in Suffolk; as Elon's president for eleven years of unpaid labor, and in the leadership of the Southern Christian Convention for a generation.

Dr. Staley was visibly affected. Who could but be under such circumstances? It is worth while to have lived and labored and toiled for a life-time for a moment like that. True to his characteristic modesty, he began to beg to be excused. Others were more worthy. His interest was safe and nothing could alienate it. The bestowal of the honor in another place would win friends for the cause. Thus the great man pleaded. But the Committee was unyielding. They would have nothing but his acceptance, and they won.

Then Dr. Johnson led in a beautiful prayer of gratitude to God for Dr. Staley, for the college, for the generous friends of Suffolk—a prayer tense with sweet sentiment and simple as the language of the child, because God was being addressed directly and no garnishment of words could enrich the occasion. It was a tender moment.

The writer then congratulated Dr. Staley on being thus honored, expressed his satisfaction at being the first occupant of the W. W. Staley Chair of the presidency, and voiced the prayer that God would spare the honoree for many long years yet of service in the Church.

Then it was that Col. West declared, what all present felt, that "this is the greatest event in the history of our Church." We are sure every reader will agree with us.

The raising of this magnificent sum was easy. Nine men gave five thousand dollars each: W. W. Staley, C. A. Shoop, Holland and Beamon Co., J. E. West, E.

E. Holland, Lakeview Hospital, S. E. Everett, A. T. Holland, and G. W. Truitt. There were four gifts of $1,000 each by Ballard and Smith, J. T. Williams, Mrs. H. M. Phillips, and R. C. Harrell. Mrs. W. H. Jones, Jr., Miss Dorris Jones, and Lyman R. Brothers each gave $500. The other donors were H. Woodward, Sr., H. M. Holland, J. P. Lee, W. E. MacClenny, E. H. Rawles, J. D. Rawles, Philathea Class, Fred Bullock, and J. D. Luke.

Colonel West and Mr. Shoop are a continuation Committee to bring the total up to at least $50,000 in addition to Dr. Staley's subscription, and it will be readily done. Mr. J. M. Darden, who recently gave $5,000 to missions, is expecting to give $5,000 in this good work too, and will announce his decision shortly.

Dr. Staley was kept absolutely in the dark as to the plan to honor him, and only learned of it when officially notified. God bless him and multiply his kind. God bless the Christians of Suffolk and multiply their kind.

THE VICTORY AT SUFFOLK AND PRAYER

Something always happens when God's people pray. The overwhelming flood of generosity in Suffolk, which consecrated more than $50,000 to the cause of Christian Education in our Church, is attributable to prayer as its fountain source.

On Sunday morning just before going to the service there, when I was to speak on "The Church in the New Time," I received the following telegram: "At request of the pastor the faculty met in prayer tonight (Saturday) for God's blessing on you and His service while in Suffolk. We further covenanted to pray individually for you daily that you may acceptably represent Him and that those you approach there may do His will. (Signed) W. P. Lawrence, Dean." I handed it to Dr. Staley after reading. No comment was necessary. Sunday, morning and evening, went well, and seed were sown soon to fruit gloriously.

On Monday morning after Dr. Staley had subscribed $5,000, we walked to the postoffice to find this letter from the professor who has served Elon longest and who is giving $1,000 in this drive: "We are watching the canvass with increasing anxiety and joy, believing that God is blessing your labor because you fully realize this is His work and you have consecrated yourself to His service in it. This trip to Suffolk is a crucial point in the campaign. What Suffolk does means so much to the brethren there, to the college and to the Kingdom. A response worthy of them will be a new day for the larger spiritual life of the local Church and larger effort in the other Churches will ensue. We follow you with our sympathies and our prayers. God will prosper you."

Seven other letters, of similar import came to me, being so timed in their arrival as to revive any depression from the nervous tension inescapable in such a drive and cheering my heart to new effort.

But all the prayer was not on the part of the dear ones at Elon. The pastor of the Suffolk church held me up constantly to the Throne. In his homely way, and yet so forceful, when the goal had been reached, he likened himself during the week to a sitting hen, busy in prayer for God's blessing, and occasionally looking around to see what was happening.

Prayer did it. That is all. To Him be the praise.

FIVE HOURS AND $6,100

On Thursday afternoon of the Suffolk drive week Dr. Johnson thinking a little ride would be helpful, a party consisting of himself and wife, Dr. Staley and Miss Annie and the writer, forded it down to that genial center of Christian hospitality, the home of Trustee and Mrs. Willis J. Lee. Brother Lee has been quite feeble, but was up and able to greet us in his usual happy style. Mrs. Lee was in bed, but her welcome was equally cordial and happy. Two dearer friends Elon never had. While in their home they volunteered to give $5,000 to the drive, and Mrs. Lee called on Dr. Staley to give thanks that they could do it. How precious the moment!

On this little outing we called upon Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Odom, dear friends whose hearts bleed because of the death of their eldest son of his wounds in France. Sergeant W. F. Odom was an Elon student when the war broke out. On the following day he volunteered in the service of his country and on December 12, 1918, he died in France of his wounds received in the desperate fighting two months before. His friends called him "Happy," and happy he is now in his Master's presence. His grief-stricken parents desiring to perpetuate his name have decided to build Sunday school rooms to his home church, Berea, and to establish in his honor the W. F. Odom Fund of $1,000 in his Alma Mater. This is the first instance where loving parents have thus honored a fallen hero son, but it will not be the last. How could parents do a finer thing than this?

On the way back we stopped to see Mr. and Mrs. John E. Benton and these loyal alumni of the college gave $100, making $6,100 for our five hours of outing. Some outing,—eh?

I should say that later I return to Berea and give the other friends there their anticipated opportunity to help the cause of Christ through Elon.

W. A. HARPER.

Dear Dr. Harper:

I just want you to know that I am sure we shall succeed in the drive for $125,000.00. I do not feel that this is merely an educational move, but more to fit our College, therefore our denomination in order that it may hold its own with the other churches. We must succeed in this.

Very sincerely,
MRS. W. C. WHITAKER.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

EASTER OFFERING APPEAL

My dear Sunday School Workers and Friends:

Since our last Easter offering our country has been visited by one of the worst epidemics of flu that this country has ever experienced. It has been no respecter of persons, but has taken fathers and mothers, as well as younger people, and has left many little helpless orphans in its wake.

In all my experience in this work, I have never had so many urgent applications to take little helpless orphan children, as we have had in the last month. We have filled our Institution to the limit of its capacity and now have fifty-seven in our care. Bright and happy little boys and girls.

One of the Many Little Outstretched Hands to Receive the Easter Offering

We have fifteen urgent applications on file in our office pleading to us for a home. Helpless and in destitute circumstances and no where to go—pitiful in the extreme.

One of the heaviest crosses we have to bear in this work is to be compelled to say NO to the cry of little orphans who so much need a home of this kind, because we have no more room. What can we do to relieve the situation at present? Let us open up another home for the small children and that will make ample room at present to take care of the situation.

We want to raise for our Easter Offering this year the sum of $3,000.00 to enable us to open this home for the small children. We want your Sunday school to have a liberal offering in this task. If you could but read the pitiful letters that come to me, or come in touch with the pitiful cases that I do, it would make your heart ache and melt your eyes to tears. You would be glad to divide the last dollar you have and freely give that a home might be provided for these children.

I plead with you in behalf of the children who have been left alone in the world, to make an offering on or near Easter Sunday to help in making a home available for them. Give as you have never given before. Give because the need is urgent. Give because the cry of the little helpless orphan child is ringing in your ears. Give because you will be the better and the happier. Give as God has prospered you. Remember "He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will He repay him again."

Make your offering liberal to meet the need.

Yours in the work for the Master,
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

WANTED

THE CHRISTIAN SUN desires the name and address of every invalid and shut-in member of the Christian Church in the Southern Christian Convention. If you know of one, man, woman, or child, report it at once. Don't take it for granted that some one else will. Let us hear from you.

NOTICE

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Christian Conference meets with Shallow Well Christian church July 15-17.

The general theme for discussion will be "The New Sunday School for the New Time," and all talks and addresses are expected to be somewhat related to the general theme. The Sunday schools within the bounds of the Conference are requested to make an earnest effort to have themselves represented by capable delegates. It would be nothing but right that the traveling expenses of these delegates be paid by the Sunday schools.

Each Sunday school is requested to send to the Convention an amount of money equal to four cents per member of its enrollment. Churches that have been accustomed to holding their protracted meetings the week following the second Sunday in July are requested this year to arrange a different time for the protracted meeting, in order not to conflict with the Convention.

It is the purpose of the executive Committee to get out an attractive program that shall be instructive and inspiring, and to this end we solicit the co-operation of the brotherhood.

HERBERT SCHOLZ, Sec'y.

"Dr. Harper spoke here yesterday and I will report if he succeeds here as we hope he will. I am hoping for a quarter of a million for Elon in the campaign when all the churches have had a chance to go over the top as all have so far," so writes Dr. Staley to the Editor under date of March 31.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

THE VINDICATED HOPE

(Rev. S. Parker Cadman, D. D., in The Christian Work)

St. Paul was an optimist from principle, not from sentiment. He wrote his letters to the churches as a Christian Jew who was thoroughly acquainted with the varied fortunes of the human race and of his own people. He knew the historic epochs of triumph and disaster; the anticipations of patriachs and the predictions of seers were familiar to him. Many of their efforts seemed futile. Civilization in his day was apparently decadent; the richest promise of Judaism had been tragically negatived by the Scribe and the Pharisee.

Nevertheless, this stupendous breakdown of faith and morals did not breed despair in the apostle. Neither could the fierce persecution to which his new religion was subjected cause him to waver for a moment. His tribulations worked for that patience which is no cheap nor common virtue. His golden age persisted in an environment of hurricane and disaster. It was born of his conscious acceptance with God; fostered by his intimacy with his Risen Lord. These divine relationships created in St. Paul the ardent expectation of better things beyond which was too reasonable and inspiring to be thwarted by outward circumstances. Every Christian is the heir of God's love shed abroad in the believing heart by the Holy Spirit. And out of that love arises the hope that cannot be frustrated nor put to shame. We have to wait for its regal fulfilment which forecasts the future as the supreme opportunity for all righteousness.

In the meantime, those who do not share the love have not the hope. They mock its radiant prospectus and deem us dreamers of the impossible, peddlers of illusions, who have utterly miscalculated human destiny. How chimerical to speak of the approaching reign of peace and fraternity in a world where wickedness is rampant and the old feuds persist! There are good sincere individuals who yield to this accusation of our hope. Discouraged by the delay of their Deliverer, they are tempted to cast away the confidence which has "great recompense of reward," or to mention it cautiously and with rigid reserve. Such a timid attitude is not very serviceable against those patronizing tendencies of modern literature which insists that religious ideas are only a product of egotism, in which the living atom man persuades himself that he is infinitely more honorable than the rest of the universe, and upon terms of peculiar friendship with its Maker. Nor are we sure that the insistence would be altogether groundless but for one indisputable fact of Christian experience. None who has really felt the love of God, not our love for Him, but His overwhelming and boundless love for us, can doubt the security of life and of its every noble cause, or succumb to the demoralizing skepticism that we are helpless puppets manipulated by blind insenate powers. The transfiguring truth that the Father's love is already ours, that we do not have to win it, but accept what He bestows, who loves us even in our sins to save us from our sins, unites us with the Deity of life and might. His delight is with the sons of men, with all His children, with the sailor on the sea, the soldier on the field, the husbandman tilling the soil, the miner delving in the rocks. He is as Martineau has said—"the dear God of the home," upon whose loving kindness we can draw and not be disappointed. He underprops our hope so that it is no flattering guess-work, and gives us here now the earnest of its long-lost achievement to come.

The routine we must follow teems with tokens of His accompanying presence. The fevered dusty atmosphere of ordinary existence is purified by celestial breezes. We could not testify of these things so dogmatically had we not seen them demonstrated to the hilt. The wayfarers of our youth were not socially fortunate. The majority were colliers and ironworkers, men of strong elementary passions and vigorous physical equipment. But once they knew the Love Divine they were transferred into new beings, a literal miracle of grace which we have seen repeated in numbers instances. There they ceased to speculate, and were possessed by the gladdening reality of an inward witness which enabled them to sing—

*"Thrice blessed bliss-inspiring hope,
It lifts the fainting spirit up.
It brings to life the dead.
Our trials here will soon be past,
And you and I ascend at last
In triumph with our Head."*

In this frame of mind they were nearer to the apostle's type than are many erudite and eloquent divines and teachers who bid on the future out of the resources of the earth and are worsted. Let the man who has lost hope seek first a renewal of his apprehension of the love of God, forever full and free, and he will not remain in darkness.

Brother L. I. Cox writes under date March 31: "I had a good day Sunday at New-Center and Seagrove. The people are becoming interested in larger things for the Kingdom, and are responding more than ever for the call of Missions and Christian Education."

Dr. P. H. Fleming, now at Dover, Del., writes that he will fill his regular appointment at Union (N. C.) on the second Sunday.

Abie Mulky, one of the great evangelists of the M. E. Church, is dead.

Brother J. W. Wellons came down from the College one day last week and paid us a brief visit. He is in his usual good health.

MISSIONARY

SOME MORE GOOD SUNDAY SCHOOL LETTERS

In reply to the letter recently sent to our Sunday school secretaries, asking them to take up the matter of mission study and a missionary offering, one or the other, or both, for their Sunday school one Sunday a month, many responses are coming in for which we are profoundly grateful. As our Sunday schools take up this matter, we feel that the beginning is being made at the right place. Many schools are discussing either taking the offering or, that which is even better, studying missions once per month and for this the Mission Secretary is profoundly grateful. Here are three letters by recent mail:

"Durham, N. C., March 29, 1919.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"Enclosed I herewith hand you check for $11.02, Sunday school collection for the third Sunday in March. The Durham Christian Sunday school has voted to give the collection on the third Sunday of every month to missions. Trust our collections will be good on this Sunday.

"Yours truly,

"R. J. KERNOLLE, Treasurer."

"News Ferry, Va., March 31, 1919.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"The Pleasant Grove Sunday school has decided to give the collection of one Sunday per month to missions. Enclosed please find check for $2.15, the one Sunday's collection for missions.

"With best wishes, I am

"Yours sincerely,

"P. W. FARMER, Acting Secretary."

"Raleigh, N. C., R. 3, March 23, 1919.

"Dear Sir and Brother:

"I am glad to tell you that our Sunday school (Catawba Springs) has adopted one of the three points mentioned in your letter. We have decided to give one Sunday's collection to missions and I hope that as our people become more interested in the work, we will take up the other two.

"With all good wishes for your success,

"B. F. BRANCH, Superintendent."

PLEASANT GROVE SETS THE PACE

Dr. Harper's report of the liberality of the dear Pleasant Grove people in the Elon Standardization campaign must have sent a thrill of joy to all who love our Elon, and have a care for our cause. It was at Pleasant Grove the writer began his active campaign for our missionary drive, and when the great and good people of that congregation pledged $3,000.00 for missions, the writer knew then that victory was sure, and that the day of our missionary awakening had come.

And now that the same generous people have pledged $15,000.00 to our beloved College the writer feels our denominational awakening is assured, and that the hour of our great opportunity and unlimited service has struck. God cannot prosper a non-missionary people and keep His word. Nor conversely can He fail to prosper a missionary people and not keep His word. "Lo I am with you unto the end," is conditioned on "Go ye." What the Christian Church needs most of all is "Christ with us." And we have Him with us when we undertake His program:

God bless our dear, loyal, faithful, generous Pleasant Grove people. They have set the standard high in the Elon Standardization drive as they did in the hundred thousand dollars missionary drive, and as other churches and congregations not only flocked to that standard but helped to raise it even higher and higher, so will it be in the Elon drive.

Elon is our very own. Her needs have from the beginning been close to our Christian heart, and between now and July first, by our Father's great wisdom and indulgent hand, we shall witness the outpouring of our love and our dollars such as we have not witnessed heretofore.

No one can know how every report of success and victory in this great work rejoices the Mission Secretary's heart. It is all but the confirmation and the glad realization of his hopes, his dreams and his desires for as he has even contended. We will freely take care and provide for our own when we become willing to do our best to carry out the great commission.

J. O. ATKINSON.

TWO GENEROUS WOMEN

This was found in an exchange the other day and because it represents the spirit, character and conduct of many of the good women I have met since I became Mission Secretary, I pass it on through these columns:

Two Generous Women

Their name is legion, but two instances will suffice. They do not live on Fifth Avenue or own limousines. One is a professor in college, drawing a small salary, upon which she supports herself besides helping out her family. She met the secretary of her Foreign Board on the street one day and asked if it were true that the Board had turned down the offer of the officials in a certain province in China looking to the Mission taking over the conduct of the public schools. She was informed that such was the case, as there was no money in the treasury for the support of the educational supervisors who would need to be sent out. After expressing her sorrowful surprise that such an opportunity could be allowed to pass, she said, "I cannot be content until I will have done my own little part to make possible such a strategic move as it proposed. I was about to purchase a new gown which I have greatly needed, not having had a new one for a year, and I have set apart $50 for that purpose. I will try to get along for another year, and let you have this amount."

The secretary was so impressed by her self-denial that he took the matter up in one of the Board's publications, mentioning what this woman had done, and asking if others would not like to join in the movement. Without any further reference or pushing, within two weeks $15,000 had been secured from givers all over the country, mostly women, and the Board cabled to China its acceptance of the offer. The two educational supervisors are now on the ground and a work of splendid promise has been launched by which the Chinese officials and the missionaries are working hand in hand in the promotion of Christian education.

The other case is that of a young lady who is obliged to support herself and her mother by taking boarders. In addition she was receiving an income of $100 a year from a mortgage investment, and for a number of years she had been devoting this sum to the support of two native preachers in Africa. The last time she brought in her check the secretary, who knew her circumstances, expressed his surprise that she was able to maintain her gift from year to year. She replied, "I had a terrible scare. A few weeks ago I learned that the interest on my mortgage had failed, and that I would have to get along without that help. It looked for a time as if I would have to give up this work in Africa!" "How then," asked the secretary, "have you been able to secure the money?" "Oh," she replied, "I at once went to work and earned $100 by a special enterprise in which I engaged."

That evening the secretary mentioned this incident to his wife, whereupon she remarked, "That explains why Miss W. has been going around the neighborhood taking orders for silk stockings. I wondered that she should do this, but knowing she must have some good reason I ordered a pair, although I felt I really did not need them."

How many persons situated as this young lady was, would have taken such pains to keep up her missionary giving, and how many would have let the thing drop?

'THANK YOU': A TRUE STORY

Inga is a little Swedish girl, only eight years old, whose home is in the country, many miles from town.

Swedish parents teach their children to be very polite. Every little favor or gift meets with a prompt "Thank you." It sounds very sincere, and if they are especially grateful the "Thank you" is apt to be emphasized by a hand-shake. When the Swedish children eat a meal at a friend's home, upon arising from the table, they smile and say, "Thank you very much for the meal." It is a very pretty custom.

Now, Inga is very fond of something all boys and girls enjoy, though she seldom has it—only at Christmas. It is candy.

One day an aunt came to visit Inga's parents, and she brought a box of candy and gave it to Inga. Immediately Inga treated the entire family. Finally the box was put away, so as to save the candy as long as possible; but when it was brought forth the family once more was treated and the box again put away. Inga had just put the pretty candy box on the table and was about to take a piece when her mother entered the room.

There were only three pieces left, and she had been very generous. Mother was busy and had not noticed the box. Inga could easily hide it away, but no! she would be selfish were she to do that, so she called: "Come, mother, have some candy."

"Yes, dear," mother responded, but when she looked in the big box and saw only three pieces of candy left her mother-heart made her exclaim: "No, mother doesn't want any. Keep it yourself; you have been so generous to all."

Back came the reply of her small daughter with such a sincere ring of thankfulness as almost made her gasp in surprise, for Inga wildly shook her mother's hand, exclaiming: "Thank you, mother; thank you very much, for not taking any!"—M. E. G.

HOW A SEAL GETS AIR THROUGH THE ICE

When the Arctic Ocean is entirely covered with many feet of ice the seal has to find some way of obtaining air to breathe. So he selects a spot and begins to drill a hole to the surface by pressing his warm nose against the ice. No one knows how many hours it takes him to accomplish his task, but he manages it; and although he is obliged to work most of the time, because the surface of the hole is continually freezing, he keeps it open all winter and obtains air.

Seals have been known to drill in this manner through 50 feet of solid ice. Whether or not they take turns in the slow drilling is not positively known.

It is at these "seal holes" that the polar bear seeks food in the winter, and there the Eskimo waits, spear in hand, for his weekly supply of meat.—Apples of Gold.

"What's all that noise over at the minister's house?" "Oh, he's memorizing his sermon; he always has to practice what he preaches."—Judge.

Papa—"Bobby, if you had a little more spunk, you would stand better in your class. Now, do you know what spunk is?"

Bobby—"Yes, sir. It's the past participle of spank."

"Well, after all," remarked Tommy, who had lost a leg in the war, "there's one advantage in having a wooden leg."

"What's that?" asked his friend.

"You can hold up your sock with a tinae!" chuckled the hero.—Boys' Life.

We must succeed with the drive for $125,000 for Elon College. Of course we will.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

WARREN H. DENISON, Superintendent

The Forward Movement Executive Committee spent a day planning the work and in counsel with the Superintendent, President W. A. Harper asked Rev. J. W. Harrell to represent him at the meeting. The whole Church seems to be awakening to the fact that this is our day of opportunity to serve. The time has come for the Christian Church to come to her own.

The Forward Movement representatives are meeting with groups of workers, conference officials, pastors, and representative laymen in strategic centers. Many more calls are coming than the present force of workers can answer.

The Northwestern India mid-year institute raised several hundreds of dollars more for missions than ever in its history. The Forward Movement vision caught the people and the Woman's Mission Board benefited. The Deer Creek, Indiana, church which is a rural church was greatly blessed. Five persons subscribed $1,400 for the Forward Movement. The mission offering of the night before did not hinder giving to the Forward Movement. Again it is demonstrated that giving to one benevolent cause does not hinder but helps another. The Superintendent will soon return to see others of that congregation and receive their gifts.

The Superintendent has already secured $6,394 in cash and subscriptions for the $500,000 while conducting a preliminary publicity campaign. The Executive Committee reports that $10,000 have been subscribed to the initial promotion fund to inaugurate the campaign.

Every pastor in the denomination is asked to appoint a four-minute man or woman for his congregation to keep them informed of the Movement.

Easter results for membership additions from all the churches will be gathered. Our pastors are requested to report on Easter Monday the number of members received, church, conference, and pastor.

Forward Movement speakers are at Urbana, Ill., in a Forward Movement drive, also at Antioch church near Frankfort, Ind., at the Joint Convention of the Western, Indiana, Conference.

Scores of our pastors are working out and working at definite church programs and they are built upon the points of the Forward Movement.

Our pastors and conference officers in nearly every case are showing the heartiest co-operation and spirit of working together in the large program of our church for the Kingdom.

Rallies have been held in the last few days at Warren, Ind., Huntington, Ind.

Many decision days in the Sunday schools are now being planned at this Easter time.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

FACTS FOR YOU TO REMEMBER

The North Carolina Christian Conference, chartered by the State of North Carolina, January 27, 1919, held its initial session at Elon College, February 14, and among other things, transacted this item of business: "On motion the officers of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Eastern North Carolina Conference are hereby elected the officers of said Convention of the North Carolina Christian Conference, since they have agreed to this plan." The first session of said Convention will be held at Shallow Well church, July 15-17, 1919.

Pursuant to above the Executive Committee of said North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, met in a called session March 19, in Raleigh, N. C., and decided the following:

First, that the first annual session of the North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention be held at Shallow Well Christian church (near Jonesboro, N. C.), Tuesday evening, Wednesday, Wednesday evening and Thursday, July 15-17, and that the general theme of this Convention shall be "The New Sunday School For The New Time."

Second, that the apportionments, or Convention dues from the schools and Societies, be 4 cents per member for the enrollment of each school and society, not having a fixed apportionment by its convention last year.

The above are facts that I want you to get firmly fixed in your mind. Read again, and memorize, and don't forget; and in view of the fact that this is now a State Convention embodying all the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, in what was formerly the Eastern North Carolina Christian Conference, the Western North Carolina Christian Conference, and the North Carolina and Virginia Christian Conference, the call is greater now than ever before to put through the greater work God has entrusted to our care. To live up to this new challenge in the coming Convention, we must have the full support of every Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society within the bounds of the new Conference. We cannot afford to do anything less than this. Therefore, I am asking you to read these facts before your school; begin now, and boost the Convention until it comes off. Your school and Society are entitled to one delegate for every twenty-five members, and fractions thereof. Elect a live, wide-awake delegation, that is really interested in the work of the Church and Convention. Choose the delegates who are most interested and capable, and see that they are there for the first session, and remain throughout the Convention. We are preparing the best program yet, and propose to give you at the Convention that which will help your school or Society practically. The rest remains with you and your delegation.

Hoping that you will catch the spirit of the new undertaking to "consolidate our forces and broaden our fields of service in the Master's Kingdom," I am

Yours for a greater Convention,

C. H. STEPHENSON, Pres.

State S. S. and C. E. Convention.

WICKER

Mrs. Anna Belle McFarland Wicker was born November 10, 1854, and departed this life February 14, 1919, aged 64 years, 3 months and 4 days. She was married to Thomas L. Wicker March 4, 1877. To this union were born six children: Lacy P. Wicker, Greensboro, N. C.; J. Farland Wicker, Norfolk, Va.; DeLancy D. Wicker, A. E. F. in France; Mrs. E. D. Kelly, Moncure, N. C.; Miss Ida Belle Wicker, Durham, N. C.; and Miss White Wicker. Besides the children there are nine grandchildren and scores of other near relatives and friends left to mourn their loss.

For some time the deceased has lived in Durham, having moved here about two years ago from Lee county. She was a member of the Zion Christian church at the time of her death and had been for many years. Her husband, Thomas L. Wicker, preceded her to the grave and to God twelve years ago.

Mrs. Wicker's funeral was conducted in Durham from her home on East Main street. The body was then carried to her old home in Lee county and the interment was made at her home church cemetery Sunday, February 16, 1919. To all who knew her her death brought sorrow. She was a good mother, a congenial friend and a faithful Christian, and she will be missed in her home, in her community and in her church. To all of her relatives and friends we offer our deepest condolence and urge them to turn to God for solace.

A FRIEND.

CRIFFITH

Mrs. Mary Griffith was born in 1843 in Wake county, North Carolina and died at her home in Petersburg, Va., March 9, 1919. She was 76 years old. In 1868 she married Robert Griffith of Cumberland, Maryland, where she made her home for a number of years. She then came to Durham and resided till a few months ago when she left and went to Petersburg to live with her son, Henry.

About three years ago she lost her eyesight and since then she has been in a invalid. She is survived by one brother, Dock Sanderford of Wake county, two sons, Henry Griffith of Petersburg, Va., and Samuel Griffith of Richmond, Va.; three daughters, Mrs. Henry Beach of Raleigh, N. C.; Mrs. Lonnie Glosson of Durham, N. C., and Mrs. William Ferrell of Durham county.

The funeral was conducted by the writer and the interment was made in the Maplewood cemetery. May the Holy Spirit comfort the bereaved.

ELON COLLEGE NOTES

The annual Freshman-Sophomore debate occurred on April 4. Harold W. Johnson presided and made the introductory address. Miss Mary Miller was secretary. The marshals were: Sam Cozart, Chief; Misses Margarite Corbitt, Esther Chandler, Janice Fugham and Nettie Tuck. The query was: "Resolved that the railroads of the United States should be owned and operated by the Federal Government."

The affirmative was represented by J. Horton Doughton, Miss Lula Cannon and William R. Thomas; the negative by Lawrence M. Cannon, Miss Maude Sharpe and Joseph E. McCauley. The affirmative contended, among other things, that private ownership had been marked by discrimination in freight rates, rebates to great concerns, over capitalization of stock, corrupting of legislatures and opposition to measures of public safety. The recent war had demonstrated their incompetency in a time of stress. Germany and other great nations have made government ownership a success and we could do the same. The Post Office Department showed the cheapness and efficiency of government operation.

The negative declared government ownership economically impracticable and politically impossible. It would hoist an enormous debt on the country. The government is generous in wages and improvements and would increase the cost of operation. The people are opposed and would never vote for government ownership, which would mean political control. Under private ownership our railroads have made the greatest development, paid the highest wages and given the lowest freight rates and the most efficient service. Private ownership, under Inter-state Commerce Commission with enlarged powers, was in accord with American ideals and would be the solution of the problem. The negative won.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

EASTER THOUGHTS

Easter is a symbol of new life, life of freedom.

* *

Easter is a reminder of the open tomb. We go into it, but we come out of it. Christ showed us the way.

* *

The Resurrection put a new life into all society and a new meaning into death.

* *

The grave has no victory over the spiritual life.

* *

He rose from the grave and so we shall come forth in His likeness if we are like Him.

* *

The New Life has overcome the victory of the grave.

* *

The Easter lilies remind us of a pure and undefiled life—a Christ life.

* *

The stone was rolled away. Have you rolled the stone away from the door of your heart and let Him in?

* *

How happy is the thought that Christ is living and not dead!

* *

Easter has a new meaning to us this year because of our hero dead who lie beneath the lilies of France.

Everything about Easter time means a new face. This reflects the resurrected life.

* *

"The powers of death have done their worst,
But Christ their legions hath dispersed."

We cannot lose our dead. They are but for a time out of our sight.

* *

There is hope and joy in the thought that, though we die in body, we shall live again.

* *

Live not for self, but for Him Who came forth from the tomb.

THE DUTY OF THE LOCAL CHURCH TO THE STANDARDIZATION FUND

We are of the opinion that in many local churches the question has come up as to its duty toward the Standardization Fund for Elon College. For example, some church says that it has never sent a student to the College and does not know of one to go from the community. We deem such a case would be rare but the first thing that such a church should remember is that it gets the benefit of every trained leader of the College who goes into that community and renders any service to that church. It must also remember that our duty is not to live solely for the benefit and pleasures of our own days, but to help build well the foundation safe and secure for the coming generations. From such a community God will some day call some young man or young woman to teach or to preach in this or in the foreign lands. The local church that has provided something of the building and enlarging of our educational interests will only be preparing to do a duty by the coming generations of its own neighborhood.

We challenge any church in the Southern Christian Convention to intelligently point out where it has derived no benefit from Elon College. The other day we were at a mission point and pointed out to the people that every pastor who had filled the pulpit at that place was an Elon product and that they had been benefitted. Almost directly because of the work of the College they agreed with us, even to the extent, of subscribing liberally to the Standardization Fund.

The time has come when no local church can clamor draw itself apart from every activity of the denomination. The hour has struck for united effort in education, in missions and in every progressive enterprise of the denomination to carry out the program of Jesus and obey the command, "Go ye into all the world."

THE SUN CAMPAIGN

The February-March SUN campaign brought the following results worth noting: 162 new subscribers were added in addition to a large number of renewals. 111 of these were for one year and the remainder for less than one year.

The ministers participating in this special effort were as follows: (The figures in parentheses after each name indicating the number of new subscriptions secured.)

Revs. J. E. Franks, (31); E. T. Cotten, (19); Jas. L. Foster, (14); L. I. Cox, (12); L. L. Wyrick, (12); W. W. Staley, (12); R. F. Brown, (8); T. E. White, (5); W. D. Harvard, (4); I. T. Underwood, (3); J. Lee Johnson, (2); A. W. Andes, (2); J. O. Atkinson, (1); J. F. Morgan, (1); C. E. Newman, (1); B. J. Howard, (1); B. J. Earp, (1); D. A. Long, (1); J. O. Atkinson, (1); W. L. Wells, (1).

It would be justice to state that 12 credited to Brother Franks, 7 to Brother E. T. Cotten, 7 to Brother Wyrick and 3 to Brother I. T. Underwood were for less than one year.

The pastor sending the largest amount of money for new subscriptions and renewals was Brother J. E. Franks and the next following was Pastor J. L. Foster and then Brother E. T. Cotten stood third.

Notes

By adding the figures given after each name the total will not be 162 as given above. This is because several friends sent one or two each, the enumeration of which would be too numerous. We are, however, grateful to all and appreciate the good work done by those who aided.

Several of the ministers have written us that they expect to do their part this month or next. Among this number we recall the names of Rev. R. L. Williamson, Henderson, N. C. and Rev. G. D. Eastes, Raleigh, N. C.

Rev. J. W. Harrell of Burlington does not have credit for any work but this was the Editor's fault, he working the Burlington field himself.

After closing our books for April Rev. L. I. Cox sent in three subscriptions for six months each to be credited to his number. We are glad to make this mention though unable to technically include it since the books had been closed.

We are grateful to the large number of persons who bought books, Bibles and Testaments during February and March and know that their number will increase. If we have left out any credit, or failed to make any mention that is due anyone, we trust that our attention will be brought to it.

It was on January 31 that we wrote the ministers asking if they would help us in this special effort. Below is a condensed note taken from each reply received:

L. I. Cox—Favors campaign. Hopes to secure at least 10 new subscribers.

W. D. Harvard—Will bring the matter to attention of the people. Thinks 500 new subscriptions should be secured during the campaign.

J. W. Patton—Will present the claims to his people.

G. D. Hunt—Will do what he can for THE SUN.

N. G. Newman—Will canvass the situation.

T. J. Green—Will present the cause of THE SUN to congregation.

J. S. Carden—Will do all he can. Pledges 5 subscriptions.

Jas. L. Foster—Thinks plan wise. Pledges 8 new ones. Desires 4 or 5 copies for samples each week.

R. F. Brown—Favors idea. Pledges 50 new names.

T. E. White—Pledges 5, and promises to do more if he can.

G. J. Green—Does not care to pledge definitely.

J. E. Franks—Anxious to increase circulation. Pledges 20 new ones. Desires 6 copies for samples each week.

L. L. Wyrick—Pledges 5.

J. F. Morgan—Is presenting the matter, does not pledge certain number.

R. L. Williamson—Pledges 10 new ones.

W. T. Walters—Will make effort to secure 5 subscribers.

E. T. Cotten—Intends to give someone a race for the largest number.

A QUESTION

A Brother raises the question as to whether a man should serve as superintendent of a Sunday school that will not take the offering for the Orphanage. We feel that this question is based on conditions, and before we would answer such a question we would have to know the reason why the school would not make the offering. So far as we can see there should be no reason why any school of the Church should not take an offering for the benefit of our Orphanage. It is possible, however, that ignorance and prejudice would so blind the majority of a Sunday school that they would refuse to give. In a case like this it would be a man's duty as well as a Christian privilege to serve such a people that might be lead into the light. We, however, pass the question along and open the columns of this paper to any one who desires to speak on it.

READS THE SUN

A. B. Chandler, a rural letter carrier on Route No. 2, Nelson, Va., writes: "I am a Baptist, but read THE CHRISTIAN SUN on my R. F. D. route each week and enjoy it a great deal. I notice that you want the names of your "shut-in" members. Mrs. O. L. Keen, who is old, blind and unable to walk, is a member of Hebron church. Her husband was a deacon. I think that she is pitiful sitting by the side of the window wishing to see the beautiful flowers and birds as they spring forth these warm days." Thank you, Brother Chandler, we are going to give our readers an opportunity to bring a bit of sunshine to these unfortunate ones. Our announcement later.

REV. JOHN BLOOD DEAD

We learn of the passing of Rev. John Blood last week. Brother Blood was known to many readers of THE SUN who will mourn his going. He was very much interested in Franklinton College and a loyal supporter of the Church's every enterprise. He lived at Riegelsville, N. J. Mrs. Blood died some months ago.

The Church should be able to meet every human need (not want).

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

AN UNUSUAL QUARTERLY CONFERENCE

During the fall and winter months the Influenza epidemic decreased church attendance, and even closed some churches for a while, thus retarded greatly the progress of the churches. Saturday, March 15, was the regular time for Quarterly Conference of the Isle of Wight Christian church. It was a rainy time; not many were expected to attend. The pastor, however, found a good attendance. For the reason stated above, not much was expected financially; but an unusual amount was paid into the treasury. After many matters had been attended to, and much business was ended successfully, the pastor was asked into the men's class-room, on business, he supposed. On opening the door, to his amazement he realized a pounding was being given. Those present can tell of his excited countenance, and unplaced words uttered. But none can realize the momentum of the heart's beating and the fluttering feelings of the pastor, but the pastor himself. There before us were: Eggs, butter, lard, ham, shoulder, sausages, coffee, sugar, dried apples, soap, meal, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, cans of fruit from the store, and home-put-up cans of fruit, preserves, pickles, etc.

On account of the long distance to all my appointments of the Third Sunday with rainy weather, my wife was not present. But no one was desired more than my wife, for I wanted her to share the excitement and help give thanks to the people for their kindness. Several members did not write their names on their gifts, and so we must express our great appreciation to the church all together and not individually.

The pounding was left at Isle of Wight in care of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Edwards, while I drove to Mt. Carmel to spend the night. Sunday morning I preached on "The Call to the Ministry," at Mt. Carmel; drove 14 miles and preached at Isle of Wight Sunday afternoon on "The Call to the Ministry." After the service, by the help of friends we managed to pack all of the pounding in the back of the car, in the foot, and on the seat beside me, in bags, and a big basket. Then I drove to Mt. Zion, a distance of 18 miles and preached at eight o'clock on the same subject. I felt that I had a most appropriate sermon for that day. On leaving Mt. Zion church for home, I was given some oysters, and a nice shad. With such a pounding, most any man would feel rejoiced.

One of the thoughts that I gained from this unusual conference was that, although the minister may, like Samuel the prophet, sometimes deliver an unpleasant message, one that goes straight home to the soul, that convicts and converts, if he has yielded to the call to the ministry and is trying to serve God and save souls, he will be blessed by God and helped by men. May all those who showed the desire of their hearts to give, receive the blessings of God, and may our service to the church ever grow greater and more efficient for the Master's sake.

A MORE EXCELLENT WAY

It is an excellent way, that of having a revival in the church, some time during the year. This is better than not having one at all. The records seem to show that most people who come into the church have done so as a result of some special meeting. So we believe in special meetings and plan to have them. People get blessed in these times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

But I am thinking of a more excellent way, that of having the evangelistic spirit so in evidence, at the regular services, during the year, that we should be led to expect, and have the joy of seeing the people come out and take a stand for Christ at these services.

With the membership on fire with the love of God and a desire to see souls saved, such an atmosphere would be created as to appeal to those out of Christ and to make it more favorable for them when they come into the church. This would lend great hopefulness to the work of the church.

A soul winning campaign in our churches, beginning, now, growing out of a love to God and for souls, with a consciousness of an acceptance with God and of accountability to God, and not limited to a week or ten days, but continuing, would bring us to a blessed sense of what the church was founded for.

In the pamphlet, "Forward for Evangelism, A Call to the Churches," there is a plea for some definite things, which are very fitting: Definite prayer for a revival of religion, definite plans for personal appeal to those who are not Christians, definite meetings for the deepening of the Christian life, prayer groups of three or more for definite intercession for individuals.

I am impressed with the importance of having a personal workers' band in our churches. I am hoping to have one in each one of my churches in the near future.

DISTRICT MEETING

We had a great meeting at Mt. Zion last Saturday and Sunday, (March 29 and 30). The brethren seemed very anxious to have the meeting and did their best to make it a success. The good people of Mt. Zion cannot be beaten when it comes to hospitality. We had with us Dr. J. O. Atkinson, our mission secretary, who is always a great help and inspiration in a meeting of this kind. He gave us a great sermon Saturday.

A few subjects of special importance were discussed: "A School in our Conference," by Rev. E. M. Carter. Brother Carter made a very able speech, and while he spoke of Elon College in highest terms, pointing out the great work that she has done, he also pointed out clearly the needs of a church school in this section of the country. The other subject under consideration was "Grouping our Churches," by Rev. G. D. Hunt. Brother Hunt made a splendid speech. He made us see the wisdom of grouping our churches.

I failed to get to the meeting on Sunday but understand that the Mission Board had a meeting and made arrangements to resume the mission work in northern Alabama.

After another able sermon by Dr. Atkinson the meeting adjourned. As the brethren turned their faces homeward no doubt they had a feeling in their hearts akin to that feeling which David had when he wrote: "Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

MOTION AND EMOTION

The age of emotion is not passed. God forbid that it ever should pass. Emotions are some times fundamental, and when stirred action and motion become possible. The time has come when emotion that does not result in motion is counted of little worth or merit. We have at last learned that creeds must be translated into deeds. What you believe must be proven by what you do, that our emotions are very shallow unless they produce motion, and that praying does not count much unless backed up by paying. Holding a service without doing a service is folly. "Show us your faith by your works," is the cry of the hour.

The men of letters tried long ago to bring this truth home. I scissored this from a Christian Herald recently and it is worth while:

Ruskin said, "Life without industry is sin." Carlyle said, "The end of a man is an action, not a thought." When Cavour died Mrs. Browning wrote, "That noble soul who meditated and made Italy has gone to a diviner country." The words "meditated" and "made" are significant. Creed without deed is useless. Emotion without motion is null and void. To hold a service and not do a service is folly. The Word must become flesh. Doctrines must be incarnated. The tree must be vindicated by its fruit.

All this is being demonstrated by the various movements, evangelistic, aggressive, extensive and intensive, that are now showering manifold blessings along the Jericho road of life. They are the practical demonstration of the parable of the Good Samaritan. They are the recovery of the first-century passion impelled through twentieth-century channels. It is a return to the Christian fundamentals. It is presenting the world with the Rose of Christ rather than the botany of Christ. It is a return to Christ, who did much preaching but who also did more good. The Church is now singing all of Wesley's hymn, for it realizes that it has not alone "a never-dying soul to save," but the God-given task "to serve the present age."

All this is as it should be. It is the Church taking itself seriously. It is "Stressing the Great Commission." It is heeding the things that matter most, and it is following the gleam instead of the glitter. It is thinking in world terms, looking beyond sectarian fences and over denominational retaining walls. It is abandoning forever the petty and peevish policy of "you in your corner, and I in mine." The practical result will be not the making of more members for some communion in particular, but the making of more and better Christians in general.

COURTESIES TOWARD THE MINISTER

Ministers need not read this—it is for the laity. There is no penalty, however, if a minister does read it. The sole object in writing it is to enable our church members to see more things from the pastor's viewpoint.

1. Remember that your pastor is human, and can make some mistakes.
2. Attend all the service possible, and be on time.
3. Invite others to go with you to hear your minister. Be proud of him—if you can.
4. Pray for him and his daily work; he does that for you and yours.
5. Watch your life, so that he will have no unnecessary mortification because you belong to his flock.
6. Pay promptly what you owe him; see that his salary is paid promptly.
7. After he receives his salary, remember that it is his to do as he pleases.
8. Don't buy his clothes, nor his wife a hat; if you have a liberal streak, give him the extra money. Let him choose his own clothes, and give his wife the same privilege about her hat.
9. When you are ill, send word to your pastor as well as to your physician. How can he know unless he is told?
10. When you die, have it arranged so that the minister will be notified in time to re-arrange his plans to meet yours, if necessary. (A few days ago I was asked over the phone at 1:30 if I could conduct a funeral at 2:00, more than one mile away. It was short notice, but I was there on time).

11. If you wish to die happy, stand by your minister in all needed improvements. Give him all possible opportunity to build up God's Kingdom.

12. Be courteous by hearty appreciation; plan little surprises for him by suggesting the omission of a service if you know he would like to be elsewhere for something special; or a vacation, or tickets to a lecture. If his sermons help you, tell him so; if they strike you rather hard, thank him heartily. Make his work as easy as possible, for it is hard enough then.

13. Always remember that his wife and family are his own; they belong to his home, and are for his comfort. You only hire him, not his family. His wife has household cares as well as the lady members of the church, and it takes time and strength to keep her home as you wish it to be kept.

ANSWERING A CALL

"I want to help some one now," said a Sunday school teacher a few weeks ago. Though this statement made by a young lady may display some of the enthusiasm of youth, yet I believe it to be prompted by a sincere desire to be of service to humanity and the Master.

This young girl proposes to go down among the sick and suffering and there minister to their needs and offer a word of hope and cheer. She says, "I can hear their voices calling me, many of them, and I feel I have in my heart a message for them." Truly this is a beautiful expression of sacrifice and service, of loyalty and devotion to the Master.

What if all our young people should express such a desire and then put it into practice? What if our young people who are to be the future leaders of the Church, and the human agency through which the world must be brought to Christ, would hear the call for service "in the Army of the Lord?"

The call for young men to prepare for the ministry would be answered, as well as the ever present call for workers in the foreign field. But this is not all. Though we can not all enter this, the most noble field of all human endeavor, we can let our light "shine for Jesus where we are." There is abundant opportunity for service, for Christian living in our churches, Sunday schools and homes. May we answer the call.

RALEIGH LETTER

When our Sunday school contest was begun, the goal was set for 150 members. This goal has now been reached, and a new one set at 200. The contest will close Easter Sunday and all indications point toward reaching the new goal by that time.

At the last Board meeting, the report of the Music Committee was adopted and this included the employment of a competent music director for the choir. The Music Committee was also given authority to purchase new song books.

The Publicity Committee reported that sign boards for placing on each side of the church door had been arranged for at a cost of $25. These boards will include the name of the church, the date of organization, the hours of service, the name of the pastor, and the principles of the Christian Church. The Board also decided that moving picture slides were not suitable for church advertising.

A committee on constitution and by-laws was also appointed. Heretofore, the church has had no concrete local church organization, and the duty of this committee is to draft suitable rules of procedure and organization.

Several people have been added to the church roll by letter recently, the record number for one Sunday being four on March 31.

NOTES

We understand that Dr. P. H. Fleming is planning to engage himself during the summer in evangelist work by aiding the pastors who secure outside help for their work. Dr. Fleming has many friends in all sections of the brotherhood and this decision of his will place him in touch with them again. Pastors desiring to secure Dr. Fleming's services will do well to write him the date or dates of their meetings and get in touch with him before all his time is taken up. Dr. Fleming is a sound preacher and his services will be appreciated.

The Young People's Missionary Society of the Burlington church on last Sunday night had under its auspices the services of Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Miss Toshio Sato of Elon College. Miss Sato told about the educational work in Miss Fry's school and Dr. Atkinson spoke concerning the work at Santa Isabel. The service was enjoyed by all present and the spirit of it was uplifting.

Rev. J. E. Franks was the first to respond to our call for the names and addresses of all invalids in the churches of our denomination. Do not overlook this matter. We will tell you a little later what we want with them.

Next Sunday is the time for the Easter offering for the Orphanage. Of course, the churches will respond in the usual liberal way and manner. The institution needs the offering, and our people need to give it for their spiritual benefit. Let all the churches take the offering.

Mrs. J. J. Lincoln, who has been spending some time with her sister, Mrs. P. H. Fleming, Burlington, N. C., is now making her home at Williamsburg, Va., with her son.

PRIZES FOR BOOK MANUSCRIPTS

Aiming to secure volumes treating important questions of the day, yet possessing permanent value, the American Sunday School Union, under the provisions of the John C. Green Fund, offers the following prizes:

1. A prize of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS for the best book manuscript on the subject, "Christianity and Modern Industry": How to apply Christian principles to the relations of employer, employee, and consumer.

This work should deal with actual achievements, as well as with principles and methods. It should include the rural as well as the urban situation.

2. A prize of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, in two parts, six hundred dollars for the best manuscript and four hundred dollars for the next best, on the subject, "Everyday Heroism;" The challenge to the heroic presented by the common tasks of life. The "moral equivalent for war" found in self-sacrificing service in peace.

This work should have special application and appeal to young people. It should emphasize present-day calls to community service, and world-wide brotherhood. It should be freely illustrated by examples from real life.

Instructions to Writers

Each writer shall give an appropriate original title to his work and may choose his own method of treatment, using such literary form—discussion, story, or other—as he may prefer. It is desired that the books shall be of a practical, instructive, and popular sort, containing from 40,000 to 70,000 words each.

The manuscripts shall be typewritten, or in plain, legible handwriting. They must reach the Union, to be submitted to the judges, on or before December 1, 1919.

Each manuscript shall have a designating mark or number, and the name and address of the author shall be sent at the same time in a sealed envelope (not to be opened before the award) bearing the same designating mark or number. Both are to be addressed, post or express prepaid, to the American Sunday School Union, 1816 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The manuscripts winning the prizes are to become the exclusive property of the American Sunday School Union; the prizes to be paid as soon the copyrights are so secured to and by the Union.

The Union reserves the right to decline any and all manuscripts not suitable for its purpose.

The manuscripts not winning prizes will be returned to the writers, at their request and expense, within ninety days after the award. All manuscripts will be at the risk of the writer.

Conditions of the Fund

These prizes are offered under the conditions of the John C. Green Income Fund, which was created "for the purpose of aiding in securing a Sunday school literature of the highest order of merit," and germane to the objects of the American Sunday School Union.

The Deed of Declaration of Trust of this Fund provides that a certain portion of its income shall be used in securing such works, either

1. By arranging to have them written by authors of established reputation and known ability. In this case $1,000 is to be paid the writer for the copyright of the work, which then becomes the exclusive property of the American Sunday School Union. The sum thus paid is intended to reduce the selling price of the book and thus increase its circulation and usefulness; or

2. By the prize plan as announced in this circular. It is required that this prize plan be followed for one thousand out of every three thousand dollars of income provided by the Fund.

Additional copies of this announcement may be had upon application.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

A COUNTRY PARSON AND SIX CHURCHES

This week my lines were cast in pleasant places—with Rev. J. Lee Johnson and his six country churches. It has been a week of victory and at the same time of spiritual feast.

Brother Lee took me in his Ford and we stuck strenuously to our text—"to place his field on the map of the Elon Standardization Fund"—until God had blessed us abundantly. These people love their pastor and his presence with me demonstrated his interest in the cause and so insured its success. Every one of his churches gave its quota and five of them went over the top. It has been a blessed week, replete with inspiration and uplift.

Brother Lee's presence, however, was not his only contribution. He gave himself $250 and at every moment of crisis threw his weight to the side of a favorable response. He based his remarks always on Scripture and urged his people to give because the Bible teaches it. No man suggested that he would rather give to the preacher who did not hear his preacher urge him to do this good thing and have no fear for the preacher. This man of God with his one arm is unique. Lacking all the tricks of the orator, called to preach somewhat late and for a long time unresponsive to the call, he yet yields such an influence in his community as no minister ever had there, and people of all faiths and Communion hang on his words. Why? Because he has a message from God. I thank Him for such a man.

Catawba Springs and Wake Chapel each more than doubled the quota and so each earned a star on its recognition card. Wentworth, Christian Light, and Pleasant Union went over the top. Piney Plains may yet do so contingent upon the subscription of another brother, but its quota is safe. What a tribute this to the shepherd of this flock—the Rev. J. Lee Johnson, the country parson of this fortunate people!

Hon. K. B. Johnson gave $5,000, for Wake Chapel. Brother Kemp is Elon's loyal trustee and member of the Drive Committee. No man enjoys religion more than he does. "THE CHRISTIAN SUN and Puck, Circuses and protracted meetings, Elon and Wake Chapel"—these are his specialties. Here is one of the Kingdom's noble men.

Five friends each gave a thousand dollars this week, and so perpetuated their good names in a fund that will work the works of the Lord when they shall have gone home. They were: Deacons John Murray and T. M. Franks, Rev. J. E. Franks, and Brothers E. B. Utley and J. Beale Johnson. May our Master multiply their kind!

There is not space to detail each donor, but their names are written on the Lamb's Book of Life, where their generosity is recorded as a memorial to them.

A Thousand Dollar Letter

Just as I was leaving my country parson's field, a letter was handed me, stating that in my absence from the office Mr. W. F. Corwith, of New York City, but wintering, though it seems like summering as I scribble away, in Southern Pines, had volunteered through the mails to give $1,000. Not a word of solicitation had been spoken or sent. He had learned of our campaign and wanted to help. He is brother-in-law to Dr. Martyn Summerbell and a member of The Francis Asbury Palmer Fund Board, in which position he has helped Elon before. The Lord multiply his kind.

A Thousand Dollar Editorial

I am sure you read Brother Riddle's editorial last week, telling of the thousand dollar mission Church at High Point. Well, that was a thousand dollar editorial, I call it, and if you didn't read it you are out a thousand dollars. Brother Riddle not only fills the back page of THE SUN with "punchy stuff," but he goes out and puts the regular field men to shame by a stunt in demonstration of his major thesis—that we can make it $250,000, doubling it if we will, by inducing a poor, struggling mission church to do the thing he advocates. Some Riddle—eh?

Surely the lines have fallen for me in pleasant places. Surely God is in this work.

W. A. HARPER.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION*

Matt. 28:19—"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations;" or make disciples of all nations;" or "make Christians of all nations." Three translations: perhaps the last is the best.

The Century Dictionary gives no definition of Christian Education. It names Physical Education, Intellectual Education, Aesthetic Education, Moral Education, and Technical Education; but Christian Education is a new term in the field of human development. Jesus made this the first and last word in His program for the church. They were commanded to teach all nations. The middle wall fell before His word as the walls of Jericho before the shout of Israel. All education is missionary in motive and object. The public school undertakes the education of all children. Christian education includes the whole man and the whole race.

P. P. Claxton, Commissioner of Education for the United States, sounds the tocsin of danger of the more than five million illiterates in this country; but mass-ignorance is not as dangerous as un-Christian education. The world suffers today from culture without character. The chemistry of this age is the devil of destruction; and every human invention has been perverted to human injury.

Christian education develops the spirit of man into the likeness of Him who was stronger than the strongest, wiser than the wisest, and better than the best. Nicodemus called Jesus "a teacher come from God"; and the church is a teacher of truth. A teacher is one who shows others how to do or how to live. Precept must be sustained by example; teaching is essentially personal, and its quality will vary with the character of the teacher. The reason why Christianity has produced the best nations is because Jesus is a better teacher than Confucius or Mohammed. His disciples imbibe His spirit and are moulded into His likeness.

There are three places where Christian education may flourish:

I. The Home.—The Christian home is the greatest institution on earth. The Christian home has Christian parents. It trains the children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Nurture is a great word and includes food for body, mind, and spirit; "but if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." I Tim. 5:8. "Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old, he will not depart from it." Prov. 22:6. Great responsibilities rest on parents, and great happiness rewards faithful precept and example. The surprise, in many cases, is not why children do so bad, but why they do so good. Christian education has its essential beginnings in the Christian home. Foundation principles are imbedded in the plastic life that world-influences cannot destroy. The wrecks of the world are reflections upon the home.

II. The Church.—This is first and always a school of Christian education. The Sunday school cooperates with the home in training the young. The history of the Sunday school challenges the reason of men as to its good work. It is the rarest thing that young people go astray while they are true to home and Sunday school. The break comes when they break away from the Sunday school and church. The education here is Christian in its teachers, its subjects, and its objects. Its text book is the oldest, the wisest, and the purest of all books. It is a character-builder, a home-builder, and a state-builder. Character rooted in the Bible is Christian character, and Christian character is the only character that fears no foe and does no harm. Christian character is the gold-standard of all character, without which all other character is worthless. The base character of the world rests on the character of Christian education. The Christian home and the Christian church create an atmosphere in which life and property are safe.

III. The School.—The church school is the only Christian school. State schools have never claimed to be Christian. Great universities profess to teach higher learning. Technical and professional schools lay no claim to Christian teaching. It remains for church institutions to furnish Christian training. Here is the school to develop Christian leaders in all departments of Christian activity. Where do you get ministers, missionaries, Christian authors, and workers? From church colleges.

Elon College makes "Christian character first and always. It is the exponent of our Convention, the training-ground for our young people, the source of our leaders, the conservatory of our traditions, the interpreter of our purposes. It nourishes our church-life, inspires our activities, relates us to other denominations, and gives us place in public consideration. It embodies our ideals, emphasises our position, and illumines our horizon. It reflects our loyalty, develops our liberality, needs our support, and rewards our help. It is the child of our faith, the pride of our hearts, and the test of our fidelity.

Christian education binds home, church, and school together with indissoluble bonds and develops character that is rock-like in its strength and stability. And all this looks beyond self-interest to the salvation of others, even all nations.

The church college is the heart of church intelligence, of church usefulness, and church influence.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

MRS. CHAS. D. JOHNSTON

Superintendent Johnston has no report this week. For several days he has been at the bedside of his sick wife whose spirit took its flight to the home eternal on Friday morning, April 11, at their home in Graham, N. C. The funeral was conducted from the home at 11 o'clock, Saturday morning where sorrowing friends gathered in a large number to pay their respect to a beloved wife and mother.

Mrs. Johnston had been afflicted for some time with Bright's disease. Her passing will be mourned by the entire Church. The public knows very little of the great heroic sacrifice her life played in the work of our Orphanage. She sacrificed the presence of her husband from their home that he might give his time to the Orphanage and live there almost exclusively. Her part was that of unseen sacrifice but nobly given by a noble heart that the Kingdom's work might prosper through the efforts of her devoted husband.

Brother Johnston has been twice married. He now fathers a family of eight motherless children—three by his first wife and five by the second. No man among us has a heart more sympathetic for the fatherless and motherless than Brother Johnston. He is a great father to the household made up from a number of homes. His grief will bring him to see a new meaning in his work. The Church will pray that his grief may be translated in the Kingdom's service.

C. B. R.

One of the most surprising facts discovered during the examination of our men for army service is that rural people are more susceptible to infectious diseases and succumb to them much more readily than do urban people. During the war the Federal Government by a uniform method of examination applied to something like ten million men, from all walks of American life and from the healthiest age group—from 21 to 31 years of age—pronounced 38 per cent of those examined unfit for military service. It is from the records of these examinations that it has been found that a large majority of those rejected were from the country districts.

Brother J. L. Jones of the Pleasant Hill church, in the Southern part of Alamance county, was a caller at THE SUN office last week. Brother Jones is one of THE SUN's faithful subscribers.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

THE WAY, THE TRUTH, THE LIFE

The world is weary of new tracts of thought
That lead to naught;
Siek of quack remedies prescribed in vain
For mortal pain;
Yet still above them all One Figure stands
With outstretched hands.

Man's ears are deafened with conflicting cries;
"Here wisdom lies!"
"Here rest and peace are found!" Lo here, lo there,
Are all things fair!
Yet still One Voice repeats the tender plea:
"Come unto me!"

Fools stumble on strange paths their fathers trod
In search of God,
But found Him not, and in the defeat died
Unsatisfied;
Yet now, as then, One ceases not to say:
"I am the Way."

Would-be philosophers make blind our eyes
With sophistries,
And bid our faith by science stand appalled
(Falsely so, called);
Yet still ring out those words of tender truth:
"I am the Truth."

Men seek in vain some charm whereby to flee
Mortality—
Some magic potion which to them shall give
The power to live;
Yet still One Message sounds above the strife:
"I am the Life."

TRANSPLANTING

The minister's wife was transferring some plants from one pot to another and remarked that she did not see why some plants were so hard to get to take root and grow when good soil was offered them in the new pots. With some she had no trouble at all, while with others it was a very difficult task and really endangered the life of the plant.

Not long since an article appeared in one of our papers under the question: "Will your religion stand transplanting?" The thought of the writer was that so many, when they leave the old home church, find it easy to drift in the new field and do not get into the church whither they have gone. Even those who have been active at home often become inactive and even fail to attend the house of God by reason of this moving about. The writer seemed to have in mind those who have changed their residence from the East to West, but the same thing obtains among those who go from the open country into the city.

There is nothing which gives the pastor more concern than this matter of getting hold of those coming into his community as professed Christians and who are yet refusing to line up with the Master's forces. There is no question of the need, and their reception would be of the heartiest. Still they persist in holding aloof upon one pretext or another. Many schemes have been proposed to meet this difficulty, but none have been found altogether effective. The result must depend largely upon the one who is being transplanted. Even when the pastor writes to the minister in the new home, as he certainly should do, and the minister goes immediately after the newcomer, as he is almost sure to do, the plant may persist in withering. The church letter is too often left in the old home church until the session feels compelled to place the name on the reserve roll, or it is dropped into the trunk and allowed to stay there until its owner has become like a withered plant which has died for want of the nourishment which the soil would gladly have supplied.

It is to be hoped that all pastors will immediately inform their fellow ministers of any one removing into the other's parish, and also follow the member by letter and counsel to get him into the garden where he belongs as early as possible. The new era and the new year and the changing conditions may be occasions of getting such transplanted with safety. There can be no doubt of the need of a revival just here. If only all those whose Church letters are elsewhere would come forward and be planted in the local garden and take root and grow as they might, how the Lord's gardens would flourish!—Exchange.

TURNING THE NEXT CORNER

It sometimes happens that the court jester is a philosopher and that his merry quips contain bits of good advice and suggestions of practical value and importance. As, for example, this from a supposedly humorous column in a daily paper: "My friend, Jerry, who is the pilot of a taxi, told me the other night that the hardest thing to learn about drivin' was to realize that you did not have to go the way you had planned. If you decide that you are goin' to turn at Herkimer Street into Main, and you get there and there are four trucks, a street car, and an ash wagon in your way, it is best to keep right on down the street and turn at the next corner, or your friends will be apt to be talkin' of what a nice fellow you was when you was still among us."

There is a good deal more than a joke in that. Perhaps one of the hardest things in life is to learn that it is not necessary that all our plans shall be carried out in every particular as we have framed them; that there may be other ways to a given destination than that which we have decided upon; that a goal is of more consequence than the manner of going to it. We are in danger of becoming enslaved to plans and methods. We are used to certain ways; our judgment approves the wisdom of certain lines of approach to the desired objective; history, observation, and experience set their seal upon the advisability of certain things as related to the end we have in view; we cannot see how the end proposed can be reached in any other way so easily, if at all. And when we come to Herkimer Street and would turn the auto of our endeavor down it, we find it blocked by all sorts of things that make going impossible. Very well; that settles it! We cannot reach our destination! The thing that we desired to do cannot be done! We will give it up and own ourselves beaten! Too often that is the story when we encounter obstacles in the course that we have mapped out as the one in which we are to go.

But perhaps the clogging of traffic at the predetermined corner does not mean "no thoroughfare," after all. It may simply mean "Try the next corner." It may simply suggest the recasting of plans and the making over of methods, or the discarding of them entirely and the trying of new ones. It is not of superlative consequence that a given plan be followed or a certain method be employed. What is of consequence is that the end sought be attained. The "how" of doing a thing is subordinate to the doing of it. Success in any line is usually achieved through a series of experiments, many of which have necessarily been modified or have failed altogether. There is greatly needed in the Christian Church the breaking of the shackles of methods, the release from the thrall of the things that have always been done in the same way, and the cultivation of the grace of spiritual initiative and ingenuity. It is impossible always to go on in the same old way and to turn at the same old corner.

In these days it is especially important that we realize this. We shall make a lamentable failure in many of the tasks which changing conditions are thrusting upon us if we persist in limiting endeavor to the ways that we have always known and the methods by which we have always worked. When the four men of the Gospel story sought to bring their friend to Jesus, they could not do it in the usual manner. The door was blocked, and the passageway was jammed. So they simply climbed up the outside staircase, tore up a portion of the roof, and let the sufferer down through the hole to the Master's feet. Nobody ever did anything of that sort in that way before. It is not declared that it was the best way of doing it. Certainly it was not the easiest way. But it happened to be the only way in which it could be done just then, and therefore it was the right way. It was getting to the destination by turning at the next corner. The significant thing about it, and the only thing that we need to remember, is that they reached their destination and did the thing they set out to do. There is a difference between not being able to do a certain thing and not being able to do it in the way that we had expected. Harking back to our taxi philosopher, it is a great lesson to learn that we do not have to go the way we have planned. —Watchman-Examiner.

SAVING THE RED HILL DAM

"Let's fire our signal so that Mr. Hill will know that we are here again," said Walter Lenox, turning to his companion, Lawrence Graham, who was standing at his side.

The two were standing on the right bank of Fresh Water River, just above the Red Hill Diversion Dam, which supplied one of Arizona's most fertile valleys with irrigation water by means of long canals leading across the desert. On the opposite bank from which they stood was a small house, the home of Mr. Hill, who had charge of the dam.

"You might as well," replied Lawrence to his friend's question; "for if the river continues to rise, he probably won't be able to cross to this side before long, as the water will overflow on the spillway."

Picking up the repeating shotgun which lay at his side, Walter fired three shots into the air; then, after a moment, two more. In a short time a man appeared through the door of the house on the opposite bank of the river. He hurried across on the spillway of the dam, which was yet half a foot above the water being diverted into the great main canal.

"Well, boys, out hunting again?" Mr. Hill called as he approached the spot on which the two boys were putting up their tent preparatory to their night's encampment.

"How do you do, Mr. Hill?" cried Walter. "Yes," we came out for a week this time. School has been closed on account of the State Fair being held, you know. Looks as if the water were rising some from last night's rain."

"I should say it is," replied Mr. Hill. "I just received a report from the government station above here that a two-foot wall of water was coming down the river. It will be a sight for you boys to see. I notice that you have your camp high and dry so that you are in no danger. If there is anything you need, you had better let me know so that I can bring it over right away, for that water will be here in a half hour or less, and it will be impossible to cross the river after that hits us."

The boys assured him that they were amply supplied with all that they needed. For a few minutes they discussed the hunting possibilities, and then Mr. Hill rose to go. "I'll have to be going now," he said, "for that water will be here before long. Oh, by the way, you remember that Mexican, Carlos Montijo, I had working for me? I had some trouble with him yesterday and had to discharge him. If you should see him over here, I wish you'd keep your eyes on him, as he vowed he'd get revenge—not that I pay much attention to that sort of thing, but it will do no harm to watch out."

A few minutes after he had crossed safely to the other side the boys heard a low, deep roar, for all the world like a great gale of wind, approaching them from up the river.

"The water's coming!" cried Lawrence, and both boys jumped up and rushed to a safe vantage point from which they could watch the approach of the flood.

It was but a few seconds before they saw it—a great angry wall of muddy water full of brush and the limbs and trunks of trees bearing down upon the dam with the speed of an express train. With a reverberating roar that shook the ground beneath their feet, the mighty wave struck the spillway of the dam and surged over, the trunks of great trees crashing and booming down the torrent. With unabated force, though with a lessened roar, the flood of water rushed on, fully a foot and a half over the top of the dam's broad spillway.

"It'll keep that up all the rest of the day and all night," said Walter, "but the dam is strong enough to hold. A lucky thing, too; for if it should give way, the whole valley would be flooded and dozens of people drowned. There must have been a terrible cloudburst up in the mountains to cause the water to rise like that."

The next morning when they awoke they found that the flood had subsided until there were but a few inches of water running over the spillway. All over the top of the spillway and along its upper edge the brush and tree trunks washed down by the flood had formed a small barricade through which the water rustled.

"It'll take a gang of Mexicans to clear that brush away," said Lawrence, sweeping his eyes up the muddy river.

"Say, what's that?" he asked a moment later, pointing to something floating on the stream. "It looks like a small raft or something. Maybe it's some kid's toy submarine, as it seems to have a conning tower made out of a tin can on top."

Walter picked up a pair of field glasses and focused them on the object which was rapidly approaching on the current. "That's funny," he said after a while; "it looks like a baking powder tin fastened to a dynamite can, and the whole thing is tied tightly to a little raft. I wonder what it can be." As he handed the glasses to Lawrence the little raft, struck by some cross current, veered around.

"Walt!" gasped Lawrence as he put the glasses to his eyes; "there is a burning time fuse hanging out of that baking powder tin! Do you suppose that Carlos?"

Snatching the glasses from his hands, Walter gave a quick look. Sure enough, he could distinguish a piece of time fuse hanging from the baking powder tin and a red spark halfway up its length. "What can we do?" he said. "That raft will just swing down into that brush and stuff that has accumulated on the spillway and hang there until the thing goes off! And then—we've got to do something, Larry!"

Suddenly, just before the tiny raft came abreast of them, he rushed to their improvised gun rack in the fork of a tree and seized his automatic rifle. Throwing it to his shoulder, he took careful aim and pressed his finger hard against the trigger. A stream of lead crashed from the mouth of the gun straight into the dynamite can. And then, suddenly, it seemed as if a great hole appeared in the water while a deafening crash echoed and re-echoed from shore to shore. The flossam which had accumulated on the spillway, loosened by the terrific jar, plunged over and on down the river. Then, except for the steady roar of the river, all was silent again.

Though they immediately patrolled the bank of the river for several miles, they could find no trace of Carlos, although they were sure that he had been the author of the crime. It was not until next day that Mr. Hill was able to cross the river to give them his hearty thanks for what they had done. He told them that Carlos had been captured on the opposite bank by a cowboy just after he had launched by the deadly raft.

"I certainly appreciate what you have done," said Mr. Hill; "and I think that the city of Aqua Frio will appreciate it just as much when they learn what you have done." And as subsequent events proved, Aqua Frio did appreciate it.—Joseph Thalheimer, Jr., in the Junior Herald.

MISSIONARY

IN THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE

The fifth Sunday (and Saturday) District Meeting in this Conference is almost as largely attended, and as deeply interesting and worth while as the annual sessions of the Conference. At any rate this was the case of the meeting at Mt. Zion, near Roanoke, Ala., Saturday and Sunday, March 29 and 30. A majority of the churches were represented by delegates, and about all of the preachers of the Conference answered to the roll call. Rev. E. M. Carter was elected Chairman and Rev. J. H. Hughes Secretary of the session. The body is deliberative and the object of the meeting is to discuss topics of vital interest to church and Sunday school. Few votes are taken, but all subjects introduced are open to discussion, and the discussions are generally lively and interesting.

One of the topics was The Mission Study Class. After discussion every delegate present voted to try to introduce the study of missions in the Sunday school, and every woman delegate present voted to undertake to organize, or get organized, a Woman's Missionary Society in every church of the Conference. We know that quite a number of the good women present went home determined to use their utmost endeavor to plant a Woman's Missionary Society in their church. It is the writer's firm belief that in a few years the women of this Conference will take rank along side the best and most aggressive in our other Conferences in the number and strength of their Societies. This is the great hope of the Conference. No people can come to be a great missionary factor and force until the women are aroused to their duties and opportunities in missionary work.

This Conference finds itself greatly in need of ministers. We have no Conference in which there are more and better fields of usefulness and service than this. But the work cannot be done because of the great lack of workers. Right now they should have one of their number in Northern Alabama and another in Northern Louisiana. Some of the ministers have visited both of these fields and find members of our Church there who would help build, and want churches and Christian preachers. But the preachers are lacking. They cannot be spared from the field at home. Great indeed is the pity. From all reports if we had a good, live, consecrated, active man in northern Alabama and one in Northern Louisiana we would in a few years have ample churches in these districts for a Conference. But where are the workers? Surely the harvest is white, but the laborers are indeed few. Funds are available for the work, but the workmen are not at hand.

Rev. E. M. Carter represented the Elon Standardization Endowment at the meeting, and not only made a telling and powerful plea for the fund, but did personal work among the members and delegates present. The people of this Conference are loyal to Elon and have given it liberal patronage through the years. And four of our bright, big, best ministers now in other Conferences have come from this Conference, or rather from the churches composing it: L. E. Smith, G. O. Lankford, R. F. Brown, J. V. Knight. A Conference that can give to the Church at large such men in a few brief years has push and power worth reckoning with. Some of the most devoted and loyal members of the Christian Church to be found any where are in our Alabama Conference. From such members and the homes they make will come other ministers, and other benefits to our whole Convention in the years to come. It is a joy to be with them in their homes and in their Conferences.

SOME INSPIRING LETTERS

Egg an Chicken Money

One year ago, I recall that a lady who had promised five dollars a year to our Mission Fund, handed me the $5.00 for the first payment and stated that that was "egg money," and the hens had never seemed to do quite so well as during the month set aside to make this $5.00 for missions. Today the Secretary is in receipt of a letter from the same person enclosing $5.00, as a second payment on the original subscription and $5.00 as a first payment on a new subscription equaling the one previously given with this fine statement:

"This is more chicken money. It was 'egg money' last year. So you see that a woman's chickens or whatever she decides upon as a place to get results will in some way always bring the desired results when she becomes interested and really wants these results, for something worth while. Particularly is this so when it is to be used for the Master's work. Truly 'where there's a will, there's a way.'"

With hundreds of our good women feeling that way about this mission work and their number seems to increase constantly, what may we expect through the agency of our dear Church in the years that are to come in furthering the cause of our Master in the world? God bless the good women of such noble sentiment and such untiring effort to help win the wicked world to Christ. They are a source of joy and inspiration to all who are trying to carry out the great commission of our Lord.

Another Letter

I am just in receipt of a very helpful and cheering letter which I think I will be pardoned for publishing in this department and which I think some readers will enjoy. The persons writing the letter subscribed, the husband $100.00, the wife $50.00 making a payment of one-fifth when the pledges were given. I am profoundly grateful to these noble hearts and appreciate immensely the motive that prompted them in their liberality. Their letter reads as follows:

"Dear Friend:

"In reply to your letter, enclosed you will find a check for myself and wife, $80.00 for myself, and $10.00 for my wife, total $120.00. Will you please send us our receipts. We are sending the whole amount. We have lived nearly three score years, and we may not live to pay it yearly. Wishing you success in all your works.

"Respectfully yours,

J. B. BLAND & WIFE, Walters, Va."

Still Another

The following letter, like many others reaching the Secretary these days, is exceedingly encouraging and makes him very grateful for the friends who are taking interest in the great work of trying to reach an unreached world for Christ:

"Dear Brother:—

"The Sunday school at Lebanon has decided to give one Sunday's collection each month to missions, so I am enclosing $4.75 for two months.

"Yours sincerely,

M. M. TAYLOR, Secretary, Semora, N. C."

And Finally

Brother J. M. Crabtree of our Damascus church, Chapel Hill, N. C., R. F. D. No. 1, writes: "We received your letter asking us to give one Sunday in every month to missions, both in teaching and in the collection. I brought it before the school last Sunday and all were in favor of it. So we have decided to try it the first Sunday in every month. Please give us full information. With yours for much success."

There is no better place to begin the study of missions than in the Sunday school and we are rejoiced that so many of our schools are beginning to see it this way.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 20

Our Risen Lord (Easter Lesson)
Matthew 28:1-10

Golden Text: He is risen, even as He said. Matt. 28:6.

Thoughts for Teachers: "The resurrection of Jesus is more capable of proof than the death of Napoleon or of George Washington."

If the body of Jesus was not raised, why did not the Jews bring it out and exhibit it? They were powerful enough to find it, no matter where a few frightened men might have hidden it.

If Jesus did not rise, explain what caused the change in Peter who faced, unhesitatingly, thousands of men and women and proclaimed the facts while but a scant six weeks before he had lied in fright of the words of a maid servant.

A roll of linen and a hundred pounds of spices, make a thick and bulky roll when wound around a body. It was from out this roll, like a chrysalis from its shell that Jesus rose. So when John saw the linen clothes lying wrapped just as they had left the body, the head cloth a neck's length away, he immediately believed.

The Easter Story in Our Sunday Schools

Easter is a time of new birth. But who would be satisfied with just being born? How soon we commence to fret if the infant does not grow? What shall we do for the little new souls in the Kingdom? Are we content to have them remain in swaddling clothes? Do we ever give them a chance to stretch their spiritual muscles and grow?

"The Sunday school is the church at work, winning souls for Christ and training them in His service." The reason we have so many paralyzed Christians is because we have never given them a chance to grow and their spiritual bodies have atrophied.

Plan for "Children's Week" that the children may come early to their Savior and grow up in service for Him.

John A. Alexander had a class of boys recruited from the barges along the Hudson River. These boys formed an organization with pins, mottoes, etc. Their badge was a button with a lily, and the letters "F. B. L." "To those who questioned, the boys replied it meant "brave, live fellows," but each fellow understood that its secret meaning was "Flower of a Blameless Life." So the Easter message is a message of Life from Death, a flowering of the plant, a fruiting of the tree, a growth and development, until we all attain unto the perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR APRIL 20

Eternal Life and How to Live It
John 5:24; Eph. 2:1-10

This is not a heaven topic, but an earth topic. "He that hath the Son hath eternal life. What are you doing with it now?"

A boy goes away to school, but he comes home to begin to live. So God has sent us here to school, but when we are ready, He will bring us home to fullness of life.

If we are living the eternal life, can we live it as does the one who is living the world life, whose days are as grass, as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 27

The Holy Spirit Our Helper

John 16:7-15; Acts 2:1-18
Golden Text: If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit unto them that ask Him? Luke 11:13
Devotional Reading: Rom. 9:9-17, 26, 27.

Thoughts For The Teachers

"The Greek word paraclete is not adequately translated Comforter; it means a helper, particularly a legal helper, an advocate or counsellor in a court of justice. In this character the Holy Spirit suggests true reasoning to our mind, and true courses of action for our lives, convicts our adversary, the world, of wrong, and pleads our cause before God our Father."—Peloubet's Notes.

The Holy Spirit could not come until Jesus went and opened the way. Nor can it come now to the world, unless we, too, go and open the way.

"I would like to do right, but it is so hard to know what is right," how many say that. "If you cannot decide which of two courses is right, then it is because you have not accepted the Spirit as your Helper, for 'He shall guide you into truth.'"

Make the Spirit, the Comforter, Guide and Friend, a reality in your thought and life, and you will have no trouble in making Him real to your pupils.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR APRIL 27

Christianity and the Toilers of America

Matt. 19:35-38 (Missionary Meeting)
It was the weak-kneed, the spineless, the down-and-outer, the no-count for whom Christ died. What are you doing for them?

A Sunday school superintendent told me recently. "Our greatest difficulty is the floating population; the renters who only stay a year; the lumber mill folks who stay a year—or a month—and are gone again we cannot depend on them for anything." But can they depend upon us for anything? Does the Christian Church owe a duty to the renter? Ought the Church to be interested in soil conservation, in better understanding between renter and rentee? Ought it to undertake to aid men in deciding to buy, rather than to rent? Are the home-making people or the attitude of mind that makes home-makers the concern of the church? Ours is largely a rural population; let us consider these questions.

What about the mill people? Shall we permit the children to grow up, but little above the beast that a few may become rich? Has the Church any duty to them?

What about the negro? He is a foreigner, a heathen sometimes. As a purely selfish proposition because the ignorant negro in our midst, the ignorant or vicious negro in our homes is a positive menace; we are taking cognizance of them.

OBITUARIES

ROBERTS

Mrs. Sallie A. Roberts was born August 13, 1834, and died March 17, 1919. Sister Roberts, formerly a Miss Butler from Carrsville, was married to Mills W. Roberts, who passed to that great beyond December 9, 1893. To that union eight children were born, two of which survive. She leaves twelve grandchildren—one in the service in France, eighteen great-grandchildren, other relatives and friends to mourn their great loss. May God bless the bereaved ones. She was a faithful Christian from youth, a member of Hebron church near Holland in childhood days, after marriage she joined Antioch Christian church, and later moved to Windsor and joined the Windsor Christian church, of which she was a faithful member till death. She was active unto her last days, was planning to help cook supper when the paralytic stroke came upon her Saturday evening about 6 o'clock. The funeral service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. L. T. Lewis, at the Windsor Christian church, and interment was made in the cemetery. A large congregation attended the services, thus showing the esteem in which Sister Roberts was held by the entire community.

HITS AND HAPPENINGS

Senatorial Brethren

Senator Spencer tells the story that recently when Hiram Johnson had finished a certain speech another senator sent across to him a penciled note reading: "Johnson, you're an ass." Johnson wrote back immediately, "Thank you for the information. Fraternally yours."

Experimental Religion

One of our prominent authors and ergymen was attending a dinner recently when the conversation turned to charity, whereupon the distinguished guest remarked:

"Speaking of charity reminds me of the millionaire who was dying. He had lived a life of which, as he now looked back on it, he felt none too proud. To the minister at his bedside he muttered weakly:

"If I leave a hundred thousand dollars or so to the church, will my salvation be assured?"

"The minister answered cautiously, 'I wouldn't like to be positive, but it's well worth trying.'"

All Things to All Men

In a speech at New Bedford, President of the New Haven Railroad told this story, according to the Truth Seeker:

I well remember, when a little boy, hearing my father tell a story that his father told him about the great Lafayette, who was such a warm friend of the United States, then in the making, when Lafayette came back to this country on a visit. My grandfather met him at a reception, and as an evidence of his tact and humor, to one man to whom he was introduced Lafayette said.

"How do you do? Are you a married man?" The man replied, "Yes, sir."

And Lafayette said, "Happy man! Happy man!"

The next man to whom Lafayette was introduced was asked, "Are you a married man?" and replied, "No, sir."

Whereupon Lafayette said, "Lucky dog! Lucky dog!"

ANOTHER CHALLENGE TO THE BROTHERHOOD

For some time Superintendent Johnston of our Orphanage has been reminding us of a great need of a home for the small children. He tells us on his Easter Offering envelopes that he has fifteen applications on file. The demands on the institution are becoming greater and we must go one way or the other.

In a personal letter to THE SUN'S Editor under date of April, Brother Johnston informs us that his sainted wife decided to tithe her account some time ago and had $200 of the Lord's money, which she instructed, just before she became unconscious, to be placed as a part of the building fund of the baby home at the Orphanage, in memory of her. As will be seen from the report this week, one man offers to be one of the twenty to give $500 to meet this need. We are permitted to say that Brother Johnston will place $300 with the $200 of his wife's, making $500 in memory of Mrs. Johnston, whose noble sacrifice in behalf of the Institution has been a silent working force in the Master's Kingdom.

Brother Johnston suggests—which suggestion seems to us well and wise—that each person contributing $500 do so in the memory of someone, and that in the building be placed a memorial tablet indicating the giver and the person whose memory is perpetuated. A fine thought, and we believe that the Church will meet this challenge of the good Brother who has given $500 to start the work. What will you do for this cause?

OUR NEW READERS

We are glad to welcome to THE CHRISTIAN SUN list the many new subscribers that have been placed on during the past few weeks. Many of these probably never read THE SUN before. We welcome them and trust that the mission and message of the paper will always find a reception in their hearts and homes. It is a good day for any denomination when its membership begins to read of what that denomination is doing. May our new readers remain with us from year to year and become permanent members of THE CHRISTIAN SUN household.

THE PRESENT POSTAL SYSTEM

The present postal system under the direction of Mr. Burselson has been getting some very sharp criticism of late, and it seems that some of it is justifiable. We are aware of the fact that the conditions brought about by the war have imposed added burdens on the system and probably disorganized a part of it, but many who have made a study of the present situation do not let this come in to be the sole excuse for the poor services that the public is getting. From the platform, on-the-street and in practically all leading papers, are voices, regardless of political party, that can be heard denouncing our present postal system. Here is a case that we cite:

On April 10 the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Eastern Virginia Conference was to meet with the church at Berkley. Four days before that time we mailed the programs. They should have reached the party, Mrs. M. L. Bryant, 41 Poplar Ave., Berkley, Norfolk, Va., on the next day after leaving this office. We are informed that this package was delivered six days after the Convention was held, or ten days after mailing from this office. This seems to us to be inexcusable. We could cite many other cases.

OYSTER STEWS AND ICE CREAM SUPPERS

We are aware of the fact that all of us do not agree as to oyster stews and ice cream suppers for financing the church. There are good men and women who engage in these things and by them many a struggling church has been financially benefitted. We have always felt that there is a better and safer plan of financing the Kingdom. These things are only substitutes for the Bible standard of giving and support of the church.

We have often wondered where the actual profit came in after the preparation of many such functions. There could really be but little profit if the church itself had to buy the material out of which to make that which was sold. Such methods will never develop the spiritual interests of the church. There are local churches that have depended on quilt parties, cake raffles and the like until they have taught their membership that this is the only way to raise money. The real joy of giving will never come to the individual by such a process. We cannot honor God with our money by such a method. The Lord says to bring an offering into His courts. We are not commanded to come into His courts and buy as we do in the market.

THEY MEAN BUSINESS

The Drive Committee of the Elon Standardization Fund meant business when the work was begun. The Committee outlined what it wanted to do and meant to do. The members of the Committee have set an example to prove their earnestness in the matter, two of them have already subscribed $5,000.00 each—Col. J. E. West and Hon. K. B. Johnson; also Dr. Staley, President the Convention, and ex-officio of the Committee, has subscribed $5,000.00. This is practicing and not prating; demonstrating and not illustrating.

A LETTER FROM DR. LONG

Editor The Christian Sun:

Dr. Fleming will fill, or cause to be filled, all of my appointments at the churches of which I am pastor.

I think you, Mrs. Riddle and Ruth, would certainly enjoy a visit to Florida. Well, some of these days when the press is going smoothly and the number of subscribers has doubled, and the fishing is good, and the orange and grape fruit trees are bending, and the limbs are low enough for Ruth to climb easily, I'll edit THE SUN for a month and let C. B. take his bunch to the land of the mocking bird and golden apples. Fine! Fine!

Billy Sunday closed a great revival in this city last night. I heard him many times last week—repeated some sermons I heard him preach, in part, years ago—greatly improved. Much slang eliminated—not so much time taken up telling how he once served the devil. Thousands "hit the trail." The tin pans gave up $14,144. At the written request of President Wilson, Sunday started today on a whirlwind campaign for the Liberty Loan, to wind up at San Francisco, and then go to his ranch at Hood River, Oregon, and take a rest with "Ma" Sunday and his four children.

I received a letter from Mrs. Long today, telling of the departure of the wife of the Superintendent of our Orphanage. A good woman has gone home to glory, a good man left to mourn and care for motherless children. Such visitations serve to remind us all of the words of that One who said, "Be ye also ready."

GOVERNOR BICKETT'S LETTER

Governor Bickett, North Carolina's eloquent and working governor, whose heart and hand seem to be in every good thing, sent out this letter to many citizens of the State last week:

Dear Sir:—

Our soldiers and sailors are now returning home in great numbers. We are receiving them with open arms and it is eminently fitting for their return to be celebrated with great outbursts of patriotic enthusiasm. But these men cannot live on cheers and music and flowers and kisses. The fairest and finest thing we can do for them is to see to it that every man of them at once gets a good job.

I want every town and county in North Carolina to highly resolve that no soldier or sailor shall be denied a chance to make a decent living. Please lay this matter on the hearts of your people. Make it a matter of community pride and patriotism. Let each community be very sensitive on this point. Let no community be willing for another community to provide jobs for its heroes.

These men are neither afraid nor ashamed to work. They seek no charity—they scorn it. They want a job, and they must not be denied.

Very truly yours,

T. W. BICKETT, Governor.

NOTES

Are you going to the A. C. C.? Remember the date, April 29.

See Brother Chas. D. Johnston's letter on another page. Read it.

Rev. J. F. Minnis, a Senior at Elon and a ministerial student in the Methodist Protestant Church, preached at Salem Chapel last Sunday.

We mourn the loss of our good friend, Brother J. B. Rogers of Long's Chapel church, who died last Saturday night. A good man gone.

The State Christian Endeavor Convention meets in Burlington, N. C., June 6 and will be in session until June 8. Karl Lehmann and others of C. E. fame will be speakers of the occasion.

Rev. H. Jennings Fleming left last week for Newport News, Va., to accept the pastorate of the Christian church at that place. Our prayers go with our young brother in his new responsibilities.

Rev. J. W. Pinnix, Kernersville, N. C., in renewing his subscription says: "I am very feeble and in bed most of the time. I have been feeble for two years, though long to be able to do some service again."

Brother J. W. Wellons preached at Bethlehem in Alamance county last Sunday. Brother J. W. Holt, the pastor, reports a fine service and a large audience. The church remembered the Orphanage in good style. Friends also sent THE SUN office money for renewals.

The revival meeting is in progress in the First Christian church, Greensboro, Rev. J. V. Knight, pastor, doing the preaching. Brother Knight says of the Berge Sisters of Baltimore: "They are among the leading evangelistic workers of today and any ministers in our Church needing the services of evangelistic will find these among the best."

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

BROTHER BUTLER WRITES

Newport News

The work at Newport News is progressing very well. We have some fine workers there. It is pleasant to work with people who are earnestly engaged in the Master's work. I was with the people of this church from Saturday, April 5, until the following Thursday morning. I preached for them on Sunday morning and night, also Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights and held their church meeting. The reports from the different committees of the church were fine. They all showed much progress.

While in Newport News I visited some forty or fifty homes; some old friends whom I had not seen for several years. There are a good many of our members there from other places who should unite with that church. This we are trying to get them to do.

The people were very kind in taking me around to see the friends and members. I had a good time and believe that many were built up and made stronger in the Master's work. Brother C. D. West's wife was sick and he could not be with us much of the time. We trust that she is much improved.

Union

On the second Sunday my appointment is at Union or Joyner's church. We are few in number there but they are good workers and are doing well. God bless our little band of workers at old Joyner's church.

Antioch

Owing to sickness and the influenza our work has been thrown back some at Antioch. We are now doing well. We have good workers at this place. Brother Elisha Bradshaw, our good Sunday school superintendent, and one of the deacons of the church, remembered the pastor with a bag of fine Irish potatoes some days ago, which we appreciated very much. God bless him and his dear family. May the pastor live worthy of his love and prayers.

Oak Grove

The writer served as pastor of this church five years and found it a good church to serve. Rev. J. M. Roberts is now pastor and is doing fine work. These people are workers for the Master.

On Thursday, April 10, that good man, that hard and earnest worker for the Master's cause, Deacon W. C. Beamon, came to my home while I was away, and left with my family a real good pounding which he and his little church gave. God bless Brother Beamon and the good people at Oak Grove. We appreciate their love and kindness more than we can express in words. May their old pastor and his family live worthy of their love and kindness.

A GREAT CAMPAIGN WITH GREAT RESULTS

The Elon Standardization Campaign first for $125,000, now for $250,000 by July 1, because the first named amount was exceeded in six weeks from the time the campaign began, is showing us what we may do for the Kingdom when a great need is felt, and is brought home to our hearts. President Harper and his co-workers in the campaign are making us all rejoice as our faith is enlarged and we see visions of a brighter, bigger, better day for our dear church, our Elon, and all the interest committed to our care. Surely a greater day dawns for us, and we thank God for the liberality of our great people, and take courage.

J. O. ATKINSON.

POUNDED

This time I might report it as being a cross between being "aided" and "pounded," and it was a very happy cross (for the pastor and his wife) for the pounding was like those we have heard about, years ago, before provisions were so high.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of Burton's Grove church, in session, suggested that they lead off in a movement to pound their pastor and his wife. The suggestion worked substantial results, as we have now learned, the members of the church, as well as the Ladies' Aid, taking part.

We were for the first time apprised of the fact, at the close of our last service at the church. On going to the machine to start for home, we found it well loaded with the good and useful things that these kind and appreciative people had gotten together. Many were still on the grounds, watching us as we made our happy discovery. If they enjoyed it anything like as well as we did, they were feeling mighty good.

We would like to mention the many good things that we found, as we unloaded the car, but will not take the space, suffice to say there were five splendid old Virginia hams (not Smithfield but just as good), flour, butter, eggs, potatoes, canned goods, etc.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to all who took part in getting together these good things for the body—and we hope to be instrumental in bringing them to a larger enjoyment of things spiritual.

W. D. HARWARD.

ADDSD TO THE CHURCH

We read in Acts 2: 47: "And the Lord added to the church, daily, such as should be saved," those who were being saved. This was when the pentecostal fervor was upon the people. Believers, "were together." They regarded what they had in their possession as something which they might use to help supply the needs of the people who might lack. They frequented the temple for worship, broke bread from house to house and did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, praising God and having favor with all the people.

Through a people, so unselfish, sincere and devoted, God could work and did work, to add to the church, the body of called out ones, daily such as were being saved.

The atmosphere was charged with the power of God, conviction took hold of the sinner and through faith he was saved. The church was alive and on fire with holy zeal, and thrilled by beholding the power of the risen Christ drawing, "all men to himself," after his being "lifted up."

I am more and more impressed that our conception of the value of the soul, the uncertainty of life, the sacrifice of Christ, and our desire to, "win for the Lamb that was slain the reward of his sufferings" should lead us to sincere personal work and to expect to see souls added to the church, if not daily, at least at the times of our regular services.

My last Sunday services, three in number, were an encouragement to this larger hope for a continuous evangelistic spirit among the churches. At the close of the service Sunday morning, at Wakefield, I gave an invitation to come forward in decision for Christ. One strong man, head of a family came and made the good confession. He united with the church, also his wife who joined by transfer, together with a young man who made a profession in our service; two weeks before, and a bright young boy who had recently made profession during a revival held at the Methodist church.

Sunday afternoon at Burton's Grove there were several who came forward to reconsecrate their lives to the Lord and his service. There was one addition to the church by letter.

At the night service at Dendron we had a large congregation and a good service. There were several requests for prayer. Some one remarked that things looked favorable for a revival. We want it to start this time before the protracted meeting begins and to continue after it closes.

ANOTHER PREACHER POUNDED

This time it is the pastor of the Ashboro Christian church. On April 10 our people and their friends gave us a complete surprise by entering our home and placing upon our dining room table many good things too numerous to mention. Dr. E. L. Moffitt, master of ceremonies, introduced Mrs. S. S. Hayworth who in a very tender and appropriate speech, presented the many good things that tend to make a preacher's heart glad. Among them was a beautiful silk dress from the Ladies' Aid Society for Mrs. Underwood.

These acts of friendship form another link in the golden chain that binds our hearts together in service for the Master.

May the good Lord bless all who took part in this very pleasant surprise.

G. R. UNDERWOOD.

ROSEMONT-BEREA, VA

The work on this pastorate goes well. In fact, it is moving forward now in a way that has not been witnessed before during the two years the present pastor has been on the field.

At Berea congregations have greatly increased, and the Sunday school attendance is much better now. Interest is encouraging. On a recent Sunday morning an offering was taken for the St. Isabel Chapel in Porto Rico. This offering amounted to a little more than $125.00. A good member was received on profession of faith on the fifth Sunday in March.

Rosemont has just closed a gracious revival that continued for two weeks. The attendance at these services was good throughout the two weeks and on two Sunday nights during the revival, the house was crowded to the doors. The pastor did the preaching. The church was deeply revived and strengthened. Thirty-three members were received into the church.

The Rosemont Sunday school also recently made an offering to aid in building the St. Isabel Chapel in Porto Rico. The offering from this school was $86.00.

This church rejoices also that it will soon be free from debt. A little more than two years ago the church owed on the property $3,500.00. This amount had been "whittled down" until we owed only $850.00 more. The second Sunday in March was fixed as the day for lifting the debt. Success crowned the efforts of the day. We "went over the top," and raised $1,005.00 in cash and pledges. Within a few weeks now the pledges will all be in hand and the late note will be paid in full.

A QUESTION

I have been thinking that in many churches and Sunday schools there is need of improvement in the singing. I believe readers of THE SUN will agree with me in this, and that steps should be taken to improve same. Though there are in every community some who devote themselves to this work, they should be aided by a competent organization and thus be enabled to do more efficient work in this branch of church work.

Cannot the Department of Christian Education solve the problem by employing a teacher capable of organizing and training a choir in each church and Sunday school? Or could not this work be taken up by the organized Sunday school forces in each county and thus make the work inter-denominational?

I believe the people can be interested and their cooperation secured, if an organized campaign were made in this way. And will the results not be worth the efforts?

GREAT REVIVAL IN FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, NORFOLK, VA.

We have just closed the greatest revival in the First Christian church that we have ever had. The meeting began Sunday, March 23, and closed on April 6. Every service was good, and each service was well attended. At several services chairs were used to accommodate the large audience, and the annex rooms had to be thrown open. Both of them were filled every Sunday evening. As a result of the meeting there were fifty additions to the church, and the church was very much revived.

The preaching was done by our pastor, Rev. J. F. Morgan. He was at his best all through the meeting, and everybody seemed to enjoy every sermon. Mr. Morgan also led the music during the meeting. He was assisted in the music by two fine choirs, a junior and a senior. Miss Lula Bell, one of our most consecrated young ladies, presided at the piano in the absence of our organist, Mrs. W. J. Spence, who was kept away from the meeting on account of sickness in her home. Miss Bell also had charge of the junior choir, and met with this choir fifteen minutes early each evening for prayer and devotion, before the hour for preaching.

We feel that the meeting has done a wonderful amount of good, and we are grateful for every blessing that has come to us.

We are expecting a number of others to unite with our church by Easter, as our pastor has announced that all our services from now until then are to be evangelistic. We hope to make Easter Sunday a great day in our church, and we crave the prayers of the brotherhood in our behalf.

MRS. J. A. LEWIS.

SUFFOLK LETTER

"Just as good" might be taken as a modern phrase substituting for real things. There are so many artificial products on the market that take the place of natural and real products, that one hardly knows when he is getting what he buys. There is butter that is not butter, silk that is not silk, diamonds that are not diamonds, wool that is not wool, linen that is not linen, and medicine that is not medicine. This is the artificial age. It is artificial in thought, in literature, in inventions, in manufactures, in social life, and in character.

What is the use of demanding the real, when the artificial is "just as good"? Why examine shoes to see whether the soles are leather, when you cannot tell the difference? Why question theology or religious character, when new ideas and practices take the place of the old? Why be so rigid in to "remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," when people are so busy during the week that they need recreation on Sunday? The idea of office and shop people going to church on Sunday, when they have been housed up for six days! They need the park, the woods, the stream, the ride, the baseball game, anything for recreation. It is "just as good" for the soul as poor sermons. They talk of God's "out-of-doors," His "sunshine," His "temple of nature."

It is not strange that the artificial age should run into religious life. There is a sort of tendency in human society that affects everything, even conduct and character; and the substitutes in material, commercial, and social life, evidently affect religious life. The people at Berea "searched the scriptures daily" to find out whether what Paul and Silas had preached were so. "These were more noble than those of Thessalonica." It seems, from this, that the more noble are those who are looking for the real in religion. It is evident that religion is always colored by the age in which it develops; but it should not yield to the age to the extent of losing its reality; it should be the potter rather than the clay. This age is full of amusement, entertainment, and that of the lighter kinds. Everything is lighter in these days. Machinery is lighter, literature is lighter, music is lighter, pictures are lighter, dress is lighter, life is lighter. This tendency calls for lighter religious services; something attractive, something that will appeal to the young people. Shorter hours for work lead to shorter religious services. Even higher schools are dropping out Greek and Latin and substituting lighter studies as electives for degrees. The word films expresses the idea. It is thin, transient, requiring little reflection or discrimination.

I raise this question for thoughtful readers and earnest Christians. Is it not a good time, when the world is working for re-adjustment, to undertake to make the Church the one real institution? Can international peace and universal welfare be achieved without genuine spiritual character? I would not rob the earth of its flowers, but its pines and oaks but furnish material for homes and ships, and tower above the world of beauty. The Church is more than an institution to touch and please the lighter nature; it must vitalize the spiritual life and prepare the soul for eternity. Of all the values that should be kept real and genuine, it is character.

W. W. STALEY.

BURLINGTON LETTER

Work on the new church is going forward. However, there is much to be done before the building will be completed. We are expecting it will be ready for occupancy in the early fall. To date we have expended about $29,000 on the building. A pipe organ fund is being raised and we are about ready to place the order. The purpose is to open with complete equipment.

The public meeting of the Young People's Missionary Society Sunday evening, April 13, was a very helpful one. Miss Toshio Sato, a Japanese student of Elon College, told of her high school experience in Mrs. Fry's school. The large congregation present followed her with intense interest. All of her difficulties were overcome one by one and it was interesting to hear her tell how and to look upon her as a living product of Christian teaching and influence. In a short time she will graduate from Elon and go back to tell her people about the Christ who has done so much for her. Dr. Atkinson spoke on the needs of the work at Santa Isabel, Porto Rico, and made us feel that the new building for which money is being raised ought to be erected at once. The offering was nearly $50.00.

April 15 was a delightful day at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Walters, near Burlington, N. C. It was their golden wedding anniversary. Children and grandchildren gathered to enjoy the occasion. The writer and his wife counted it a privilege to meet with this family and share the joys of the occasion with them. This home was established fifty years ago. What is more beautiful than a Christian home? Brother and Sister Walters have walked together half a century and have bravely fought life's battles. They have shared life's joys and sorrows. God has blessed this union with three sons and two daughters—Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., Winchester, Va.; Dr. C. M. Walters, Burlington, N. C.; George W. Walters, Spencer, N. C.; Mrs. Martha Piper, Burlington, N. C., and Mrs. Mary Blanton, Lee, Fla. There are sixteen grandchildren.

The writer, on behalf of the children, presented the couple a gift of golden coin amounting to $50.00.

ABOUT THE OFFICE

Friends interested in making a better Sunday school will do well to read "Marion Lawrance Answers the Question" on page fifteen of this issue.

Since closing our books for the February-March campaign, Rev. A. W. Andes favors this office with 4 more new subscribers. Thank you, Brother.

Do you need a good Bible Dictionary? This office can supply you at the following prices: Cloth binding, $2.40; sheep binding, $3.00. This is the Smith International and will please you.

In the report last week of THE SUN Campaign Rev. E. T. Cotten should have been credited with twenty-four new subscriptions instead of nineteen, as printed. Twelve of this number were for less than one year. The five extra added to the number of new subscriptions sent in by Brother Cotten, were last week credited as renewals. Thus, the amount of money sent in by him remains the same and his standing is as reported in last week's SUN. Rev. J. L. Foster should have been credited with 15 instead of 14. We are glad to make these corrections.

MISSIONARY

SHALL WE ACCUMULATE OR DISTRIBUTE?

If the writer were to answer that question his testimony would not be worth much. He has very little to distribute. He has been distributing all his life.

But when a man of great wealth is asked the question, his testimony should have weight. Recently Mr. A. A. Hyde, President of the Mentholatum Company, of Wichita, Kansas, was asked the question and his answer, as it appears in The Missionary Review, is worth while and will have weight: "Sherwood Eddy told us of talking with a millionaire once over his financial responsibilities to the Kingdom of God until the man was really in agony. Finally this Dives turned to his son and said: "John, commence giving away money. I have reached the point where I can't." (There are men who would really like to give but they neglect to cultivate the grace and virtue of giving till they can't give). "We sincerely believe that it is not vision which people want, but consecration; not light, but love; not knowledge, but power.

"Shall we accumulate the wealth of the world and lose the souls of the world, as well as our own? Surely no one who has a right vision of the life, death and teachings of Christ can answer in favor of accumulation. No-one who has studied the unmeasurable relief from human suffering, which men and money have accomplished in this war, can justify themselves hereafter in failing to distribute. In addition, no one who has experienced the depth and lasting joy of giving beyond the shallow temporal joy of receiving will hereafter hoard wealth to shrivel his own soul and handicap his children."

Mr. Hyde goes to the heart of the matter. For well may the increasing number of men of wealth of our day inquire, "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

J. O. ATKINSON.

THE NEW "ACTS OF THE APOSTLES"

In the first "Acts of the Apostles," says a recent writer in The Missionary Review, three thousand were baptized in a day, but in India's "New Acts of the Apostles," three thousand are baptized every two weeks. What is known as the "Mass Movement" in India is one of the most remarkable scenes and triumphs of all missionary history. Some days as a result of preaching or teaching by the missionaries, whole villages become Christian and ask for baptism. They are pressing with violence into the Kingdom. And yet not many years ago there were those who declared that India with its caste system and its ancient superstitions could not be reached for Christ. Verily we are living in the days of miracles.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY, CHAPEL HILL CHURCH

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Chapel Hill Christian church at its second meeting this year, discussed the advisability of changing the Society from an Aid Society to a Missionary Society. After discussion, the Society voted unanimously for the change.

The Society voted to give $50.00 to the work in Porto Rico, the money to be used for repairing and building places of worship.

The Society also took a Life Membership in the Building Fund. This was $10.00.

One of our members, Mrs. E. W. Neville, is also a Life Member of this Fund.

Our Society will use as a text-book for the year, "Women Workers of the Orient."

Funds

Our Society is a Larkin Club. We accept no premiums, but let all premium money go into the Society treasury. In this way we keep our treasury replenished and are not confronted with the necessity of giving suppers, teas, etc. We also raise money by special offerings and through our Mite Boxes.

The above is written in the hope that it may give some other Society an idea as to how they may solve the problem of finances.

According to an estimate made based on last census, about thirty-eight per cent of the people in North Carolina are non-church members.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

MT. AUBURN AND ELSEWHERE

The Southern Christian Convention was organized at Mt. Auburn, Warren County, North Carolina. That fact marks it with distinction, but it has other marks too. It has always prided itself on meeting every obligation to the general enterprises of the Church, and Southern hospitality and graciousness abound in its homes. No finer people breathe than they who worship at this holy place. It is always a joy to go there, but never more so than on this occasion.

An all-day service had been provided. Rev. J. W. Patton is pastor of these people, and is greatly beloved by them. At the morning service he preached a most magnificent sermon. I hope it will be printed. During the noon hour he gave a subscription of $250 for himself, his wife having previously done the same. At the afternoon hour I spoke to a good audience and Brother Patton urged his people to do their part nobly. He had set them the example and they gladly followed his lead.

On Monday morning Mr. J. A. Kimball laid aside everything, though his farm is without labor, and took me in his automobile to see the brethren. He started the subscription that day with $1,000 and urged his brethren to come and do likewise. Well, they did, and when we finished at noon Tuesday the church had doubled its quota. The recognition card with the golden star on it was placed in his hands and how proud he was of it.

Two of Brother Kimball's brothers also gave a thousand dollars each. These men, like their brethren at Mt. Auburn, love the Kingdom's work and rejoice to help it forward. There are many tithers in the church, and tithing makes the Lord's treasury full and gladdens all hearts. I must specifically mention one tither, —the thirteen year-old son of Brother W. W. Kimball, my young friend, Master Charles Lewis. He had his first crop this year. It netted him $550 and $55 of it went to the tithe box. I read the items to which he had devoted it, and missions led the way. How beautiful thus to train up the children in the way of the Lord!

At the home of Brother Allie G. Hayes on Saturday night I met for the first time "Aunt" Ellen Tunstall. She was the first Mt. Auburn member in 1889 to make a subscription to the Building Fund for Elon. She led the way again this time, in her sunset period of life subscribing $100. All honor to her generous heart. The subscription there was closed by Deacon G. W. Ellington, now living on borrowed time, a veteran in Christian devotion, and in between these two silver-haired saints flowed the generous contributions of stalwart Christians of younger years, whose future presages much for this grand old church.

And Elsewhere

From Mt. Auburn I went to Macon and in company with Rev. Herbert Scholz, visited our border churches in Warren county, Antioch and Bethlehem. Both these churches are on the map, and Pastor Scholz is happy. A pastor has a right to be happy when his people do their Christian duty.

Thence to Youngsville, where Deacon W. T. Young lived and died the noble Christian man that he was. He is followed there by a cohort of the faithful, and his works do follow him. This church, too, did its part, and received a star on its card of recognition.

Rev. L. I. Cox in Rockingham county and Rev. T. E. White in Wake and Chatham, rendered valiant service for the cause during the week, and the goal of $250,000 seems in sight, under God's blessing, by June 30, 1919. May it please Him that it should be so!

Funds This Week

Five funds were established this week, of one thousand dollars each, as follows: Brother W. E. Lindsay, Chapel Hill; Brother J. A. Kimball and Brother W. W. Kimball, Manson; Brother J. E. Kimball, Townsville; and Deacon and Mrs. J. L. Brown, Youngsville. The establishment of these funds means sacrifice, but our sacrifice is the measure of our Christian growth. How the Heavens rejoice when Christians grow!

A Letter That Cheers

The first Elon Alumnus to give Alma Mater $5,000 was the Honorable S. E. Everett, Suffolk, Va. Some men repent of a generous deed, but not so with this beloved and honored son of the College. Read this letter to the writer, marked personal but too good to be kept: "I feel that you will be glad to know that not only do I not regret the pledge I made to the College, but that it makes me happy every time I think of it. I am sure I have never in my life enjoyed giving anything so much as I have enjoyed this gift. I am convinced that the money given to the College will mean many fine young lives enriched and blessed and given back to the country and the Kingdom for enlarged usefulness." The cheerful giver the Lord loves and this kind of lawyer not only do clients seek out, but Jesus owns and blesses. This letter has cheered my heart. It will also cheer yours.

THE MAN WHO OVERCAME

By Herman Hagedorn, Author of The Boys' Life of Theodore Roosevelt

Roosevelt was frail. He became a tower of strength. Roosevelt was timid. His name became the synonym for courage. Roosevelt was a dreamer, dreaming of ancient heroes. He became one of the great doers of all time and when he died joined the company of those magnificent spirits he once worshipped from afar.

Two lines which he ran across one day as a boy in Brown's "The Flight of the Duchess" exercised a decisive influence on his life. These were the lines, recounting the ambition of a poor sprig of an honorable family:

All that the old dukes had been without knowing it, This duke would fain know he was, without being it.

The young duke, it seemed, wanted to appear to be like his famous ancestors without taking the trouble necessary to make himself their equal.

Roosevelt, thirteen years old, felt that those lines were aimed straight at him. He resolved then and there to be that which he wanted with all his heart to appear.

He was made of the stuff of heroes. From his birth he was encompassed "by the terror that walketh by night." For years he was racked by the agonies of asthma, and night after night in summer his father would drive him in the buggy through the countryside, so he might breathe. For weeks on end he lay in bed. But he was indomitable, even then, reading and writing and gathering his sisters and his brothers and their friends about him and, between fits of coughing, telling them wonderful stories of adventures that never came to an end.

He determined to conquer the weakness of his body, and after twenty years of struggle he did conquer it. On the plains of Dakota he finally put the asthma under his heel, so that it never showed itself again. The rough life brought its own perils. He was bucked off a horse during a round-up and finished the round-up with the point of a shoulder blade broken; at another time he rode after cattle from dawn until dark with a fractured rib.

It was so when he was twenty-five it was so when he was fifty; it was so all the days of his life. In the spring of 1910 he was hunting hippopotamus at Lake Naivasha, in Central Africa, when he was laid low by an attack of the Cuban fever, to which he had been subject at intervals ever since the Santiago campaign. And these were the entries in his journal during the days he was prostrate:

July 16. Fever; wrote.

July 17. Fever; wrote.

July 18. Feeling better.

July 20. Five hippos.

Three years later he was in the jungles of Brazil. He and his men were in grave peril. They faced the alternative of death by drowning in one of the countless rapids which impeded their journey, if they hurried, and death by starvation, if they did not. Roosevelt was taken ill with malignant fever and for two days lay at death's door. He pleaded with his men to proceed without him, to leave him to die, rather than to sacrifice the whole expedition. His loyal companions refused. By the force of his will he pulled himself up from his sick bed and went on with his journey, succumbing to the fever at last only when they had reached civilization and all danger to the expedition was over.

History will speak of Theodore Roosevelt as a great statesman and as one of the world's greatest leaders. But men and women who are encompassed with difficulties will remember him with tenderness and gratitude as a man who overcame. Men with weak eyes will remember that Theodore Roosevelt had weak eyes all his life and became a successful hunter, an omnivorous reader and a keen naturalist. Men with defective hearing will remember that Theodore Roosevelt lost the use of one of his ears and could still distinguish the calls of birds and lead a people magnificently. Men stricken with pain will remember that once Theodore Roosevelt worked at his correspondence until he fainted and the couch on which he lay was drenched with blood. Cripples will hear the word that Theodore Roosevelt spoke when a physician told him in the last month of his life that he might be confined to his chair the rest of his days: "All right! I can live that way too!"

The millions will remember the inspiring leader, but a few with terrors to face will always cherish most the man who overcame.—Carry On.

TWO FRIENDS

"In-a-minute" is a bad friend. He makes you put off what you ought to do at once, and so he gets you into a great deal of trouble.

"Right-away" is a good friend. He helps you to do pleasant and quickly what you are asked to do, and he never gets you into trouble.—Our Little Ones.

Little four-year-old Harold met with a very serious accident, having both a broken arm and a broken leg in consequence. When he was able to talk his father questioned him as to how it happened. "O," he said, "I went upstairs and there was a window open. I looked out, then I hollered out, and then I jest followed the holler."—Selected.

Nothing in the universe is so enslaving as sin. It shackles body, mind and soul. Without it, the Eternal Prison would be empty.—Baptist Boys and Girls.

BIRD SONGS

The robin sings: "Cheer up! cheer up!"

The bluebird: "Tru-al-ly!"

The meadowlark: "Spring o' the year!"

Goldfinch: "Per-chic-o-ree!"

The crow sends forth his: "Caw! caw! caw!"

Redwing his: "O-ka-lee!"

And we all know the blithesome song
Of merry chickadee.

And then who has not heard bobwhite

His name call o'er and o'er,

From fence rail or an old stone wall

Where he has perched before?

"Chewink! chewink!" ground robin says,

"Teacher!" the oven bird;

And I suppose there're many notes

That I have never heard.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

O HELP US PRAY

By J. C. Casou

To thee all praise, almighty Love,
Who dost attend us from above,
And spirit's cry wilt yet inspire
With utmost of divine desire.

Bear with us, Lord of tender care;
On each bestow the heart of prayer;
No ampler gift may man receive;
Without, what might our want relieve?

Kind helper of the blind and weak,
We are most strong when thee we seek;
Thou canst not strive in us in vain,
While we thy purpose would attain.

O help us pray, we humbly call,
And still would know 'tis asking all;
Thy will our joy—our sorrows blessed,
Rich, being poor, thy burden rest.

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

By Hon. James M. Robertson

(Reprinted from the Christian Advocate)

The subject of Christian stewardship is one of vital importance from the subjective as well as the objective standpoint. What we really believe and daily practice in our lives affects our character. It also determines whether the Church shall be adequately or inadequately supported and sustained. It is a commonplace in theology and in current thought that God is not only over all, but the owner of all. No one would question the Psalmist that the "earth is the Lord's, and the fullness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein." To his proposition there is almost universal agreement, but few of us put into practice the deep and far-reaching principles involved. One has said that "An honest man is the noblest work of God." Whether we accept this statement as true or repudiate it as false will depend upon our definition of the word "honest." If this statement has reference to business relations between men only, then it is false; but if used in a larger and more extended sense, then we accept it. It is easy to find men who are strictly honest, judged by the world, who are nevertheless dishonest in the larger relations of life toward God. Our trouble is not that we over-emphasize honesty as between man and man, but that we overlook or ignore the possibility of our dishonesty in our relations to God, the creator and owner of all of us. Are we really honest, or are we really honest in the lower sense of man to man? That a man should, if possible, pay his honest debts is a truth universally accepted. Men attempt to justify almost every act and crime known to the law except that of dishonesty among men. Men have defended the liquor business, gambling, the red-light district, Sabbath desecration, and almost every other wrong known to frail humanity; but have you ever heard one say that an honest debt should not be paid where payment is possible? So our trouble is and has been that we have failed to recognize obligations which were and are upon us—why we owe God and why we should meet this obligation.

No man owns anything. He merely holds what he has in trust from God for the purposes of the kingdom; and yet, unfortunately for us, many of us still adhere to the heathen conception instead of that taught by the Bible. In contradistinction to any other man, you own your home; as against him and all others it is yours, and the terms of ownership are absolute in that limited as between man and man; but as between God and yourself, it is he who owns the house deeded in earthly courts to you. It is his, intrusted to you as a steward. This law of God's ownership, or stewardship, if you please, is universal. A man who deliberately violates a trust, takes for his own use that which has been intrusted to him by another, is worse than the highwayman. An honest man cannot afford to violate a trust. What we have we hold in fee simple as against all other men, but it is always in trust from God.

We have been blind to the great fundamental truth of God's ownership and our stewardship. But the time has come when, as individuals and as a Church, we must face the facts as they are and become either faithful stewards or deliberate defaulters in the sight of God. Our accountability to God for every dollar we handle and spend, for all we have and are, cannot be escaped by denial upon the one hand or by ignoring it upon the other. An honest obligation is not paid by a mere denial, and ignoring a debt does not pay it. We have acted as the absolute owners of everything we have and everything we control; but God is calling us through the widespread stewardship to the great and higher truth so plainly taught us by Jesus Christ. Every one is under this law, rich and poor, in or out of the Church, he who by denial attempts to escape and he who by acceptance finds in it the place of peace and power.

We must give to this great fact of stewardship more than mere assent. It must be incorporated into our thinking and become the principle governing our daily life. What we do regarding the principle of stewardship declares what we are and determines what we shall be. What we commonly call the Jewish law of the tithes existed and was practiced by various peoples before Abraham ever left the shelter of his father's house to go forth to an unknown land. His meeting with Melchizedek, king of Salem, is an illustration of this fact. It was incorporated into the Jewish law and life, but did not originate with the children of Israel. Many devout and scholarly men hold that the law of the tithes and all other laws passed away with the coming of Christ. Whether we accept or reject this view, there is one point at which we can all meet and one fact upon which we can all agree—namely, that God does not set for us, who are the heirs of all the ages and who have all of the blessings of the gospel of the Son and who face the open doors of the twentieth century, a lower standard of liberality than was set for the Jews three thousand years ago. Whatever conclusions we may reach concerning the tithes, we certainly cannot think of paying less than ancient Israel paid before gifts and freewill offerings were made. Avarice is an evil so great and insidious, so destructive, that Christ gave warning again and again concerning it. We must not approach the practice of tithing from any narrow or legalistic standpoint, but surely we should dedicate to the service of God at least one-tenth of our income as an acknowledgment of his ownership of all. Paying the tithe for religious purposes does not release us from the law of stewardship concerning that which is left, neither does it represent what many should pay for the purpose of the kingdom. It is an acknowledgment of God's ownership of all, not the settlement of any account he may have against us. It is the beginning and not the end of Christian liberality.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

A CALL IN SEASON

This week brings in the first Easter offerings. We trust each church in the entire denomination will make this special offering because the need is great and the cause is worthy. Let us give and let us build a home for the little tots. Do you know of anything for which you could make a sacrifice for, that you would receive more joy from the giving, than to see a beautiful modern building filled with little orphan children at the Christian Orphanage?

I have a letter in my hands written a few days ago making this challenge to the church. This brother has this to say: "I will be one of twenty to give $500.00 each, making a total of $10,000, to build a new building for the children."

It seems to me that we ought to have nineteen others who would meet this challenge in the next few weeks. Now, dear friends, when you read this letter and read the challenge contained in it, and the Lord has wonderfully blessed you in the past, will you not make up your mind to invest this amount in the home for the little helpless boys and girls who need the home so much? How much interest would you feel, when you visit the Orphanage, in the home for the little children.

The happiest part of your visit would be the time you spent in the baby home. A little child always appeals to our sympathies and reaches the tenderest places in our hearts.

Who will be the next to subscribe $500.00 to this fund? Let me hear from nineteen others in the next thirty days, if possible.

The response to the call for sheets has been beautiful and our hearts have been made to rejoice in the sweet spirit in which they have been given. The following have contributed:

Mrs. M. E. Boyd and Miss Sarah Boyd, 6 sheets, 1 counterpane; Mrs. Fred Holland, 2 sheets, 1 counterpane; Mrs. R. C. Cotten, 2 sheets, 1 counterpane; Mrs. W. C. Pierce, 2 sheets; Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Carlton, 6 sheets, 1 counterpane; Mr. Jas. P. Montgomery, 20 sheets; Mrs. C. D. Ives, 2 sheets; Mrs. J. H. Alford, 2 sheets; Mrs. G. M. Spain, 2 sheets; Ladies' Aid Society, Berea, (Nansemond), 18 sheets, 2 towels; Mrs. W. C. Wampler, 2 sheets, 1 counterpane; Miss Daisy Wyatt, 1 sheet; The Ladies, Union Church, Virgilina, Va., 13 yards of sheeting, 2½ yards of toweling; The Ladies, Pleasant Hill church, N. C., 12 sheets, 1 counterpane; Ladies' Aid Society, Graham Christian church, 6 sheets; One bolt of sheeting, (No name given); Mrs. J. W. Page, Burlington, N. CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: I am three years old now and just begging for pants. Mother says she will make me some. Uncle Charley, wasn't the Golden Text hard last Sunday? I could not learn it. I told mother I would rather say "Tom, Tom, the piper's son, etc." I send a dime. Your little boy.—Leon Newman.

All little boys want pants and think they are little men when they get them on. My little boy begs to go barefooted.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Mother has just read the letters in the Corner to us. Leon said, "Write a letter for me and give them a penny." I will give a dime. Aunt Anna gave me a quarter for my birthday. I will give a dime of that. I was five years old last Friday. I had a cake with five candles.—Ralph Newman.

You are a fine little boy and have a great big heart full of love. I hope you will live to have many more birthdays and have a nice cake for each one.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: This is my first letter but not the last. I live in Norfolk, Va., but my daddy is in France. He has charge of the Financial Division of the Y. M. C. A. Headquarters in Paris, so mamma and I are spending the winter with my aunt, in Maryland. I am two and a half years old, so owe you for dues, $3.00. Enclosed please find check.—Edward M. Albright, Jr.

You must be a good boy till "daddy" gets home. I know he will be glad to take his little boy in his arms again.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Here comes a little girl who wants to join the band of cousins. I am most five years old. Will soon be old enough to go to school. I go to Sunday school at the Christian church. You ought to see my big doll. I think a lot of it and have the nicest time playing. Hope all the orphans are having a good time this fine spring weather. Enclosed find dime for April.—Lois Stout.

We are glad to have you join the Corner and be one of the little cousins. I am mailing you a picture of the little girl who sings, "Jesus Loves Me."—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I hope you have nursed your little boy and girl and their mother back to good health. I have been sick, too, but am well now and hungry nearly all the time. Enclosed find twenty cents for March and April. With lots of love to the dear little orphans.—Lester B. Frank.

The little boy and girl have gotten well but the Angels came and took their mother to live in Heaven. Her vacant chair in our home brings sorrow to each heart.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am sending 60 cents for January, February, March, April, May and June. I send my love to the little orphans.—Mary Emma Adkins.

You are a splendid little girl. You are paying ahead this time. I hope Easter will bring you much happiness.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am sending you a dime for April. I am going to join the Sunday school. I want to go very much. Love to all.—Hermon Thomas.

You are making a good step when you join the Sunday school. I remember the first day I went to Sunday school and I have always been proud of it.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am daily expecting my picture of the little girl who sings, "Keep the Home Fires Burning." Am sending my dime for April, also a little offering for Easter. Wishing you a happy Easter.—T. D. Matthews, Jr.

I am mailing the picture of the little girl. Let me know how you like her.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I have decided not to be a lawyer like daddy, but a farmer like Grandfather Newman. I think his corn and chickens the most interesting of anything I have yet seen. Love for all.—Oliver E. Young, Jr.

If you are as good a worker as Grandfather Newman, you will make a splendid success.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am sending the little orphans ten cents for April. I have a little brother a month old. I am going to join the Sunday school. I want to go every Sunday. Love to all the orphans.—Mae Thomas.

You must take good care of that little brother. Brothers are real nice to have around.—"Uncle Charley."

Mrs. L. H. Brantley—Enclosed find money order for a new subscription. Hope to be able to send more new subscriptions. Best wishes for the advancement of our Church paper.

R. U. Laine—It is a pleasure to help in my humble way in helping the publication of my church paper. It was the first paper I ever remember reading.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Rev. Warren H. Denison, D. D., Superintendent

Urbana, Illinois, church—Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., pastor, Central Illinois Conference has given over $4,000 in cash and pledges for the half-million dollar fund for the Forward Movement.

Deer Creek church near Galveston, Indiana—Rev. Roy E. Lucas, pastor, in the Northwestern Indiana Conference has given in cash and pledges $3,120 for the Forward Movement Fund.

Antioch church, near Frankfort, Indiana—Rev. Clarence Defur, D. D., pastor, in the Western Indiana Conference has just given in cash and pledges $4,105 for the Forward Movement Fund.

The pastors of all these churches are in hearty sympathy with the Forward Movement, and gave it their loyal support. Leading laymen helped in the canvass and counted it a privilege to leave their work for the work of the Kingdom. These pastors and laymen believe that the Forward Movement is a blessing to their local churches and will help their local enterprises. It is not true that large giving to the work of the Kingdom hurts the local work of the church.

The Antioch church has sent to the headquarters fifty signed Prayer Covenants. How many have you sent in?

The Urbana church has a large number of tithers among its leading laymen and they bear happy testimony of the blessing both temporal and spiritual. Do you tithe? How many tithers in your church?

All delegates and visitors from the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention will have a Forward Movement meeting at Conneaut, Ohio, at the American Christian Convention, Thursday night at 7 o'clock for thirty minutes.

The Forward Movement hopes that every church will have a splendid ingathering on Easter Sunday. Each pastor is requested to report the day after Easter the number of members received into the church on Easter Sunday, the name of the church, the conference, and the pastor's name.

The Forward Movement Committee of Twenty-Four will hold a meeting at an early time during the week of the American Christian Convention at Conneaut, Ohio. The committee consists of Revs. F. G. Coffin, M. T. Morrill, O. S. Thomas, J. O. Atkinson, D. B. Atkinson, J. P. Barrett, J. F. Burnett, W. H. Denison, W. P. Fletcher, J. W. Harrell, C. B. Hershey, C. B. Kershner, F. H. Peters, W. G. Sargent, H. A. Smith, W. W. Staley, J. A. Stover, E. A. Watkins, W. C. Wicker, and laymen W. A. Harper, Hermon Eldredge, Netum Rathbun, J. O. Winters, O. W. Whitelock.

The names of the Four-Minute Men from the churches are coming in rapidly and we are asking that every church appoint such person to keep the church informed concerning the Forward Movement work and message. Have you sent in the name from your church yet? Do it now.

Are you working to have your Sunday school a Standard Sunday school according to your own denomination and the International Sunday School Association by the end of June? If you lack any of the ten points now is the time to bring them up and join the ranks of a Standard school. The ten points are: 1. A Cradle Roll and Home Department; 2. At least one organized class in both the Young People's and Adult Divisions; 3. A Teacher Training Class; 4. Your school graded both in Organization and in Instruction; 5. Missionary instruction and offering; 6. Temperance instruction and Pledge signing; 7. Definite decision for Christ urged; 8. A Workers' Conference held regularly; 9. Annual reports and an annual offering to the Sunday school work of the Christian denomination; 10. Delegates, reports, offering to the Sunday School Association work.

FROM OVER THE SEAS

To the Editor of The Christian Sun
Dear Brother:—

"I remember my faults this day," as I think of the kindness you have shown in sending the paper to me for nearly three years, I believe, and the scanty measure of appreciation that I have shown. I certainly have been glad to receive its messages and especially have rejoiced in the progress of foreign mission work of which it tells. I trust that many of THE SUN's subscribers are also readers of the Christian Missionary. Almost everything I write for print is sent to the editor of that magazine,—and the total is so small as to seem indivisible. Yet, not to seem even in my own eyes too ungrateful a critter, I want to write you at least a little of a letter.

A forward movement has been launched here by your Japanese brethren of the Christian Church, similar to the one in America. Your success there will encourage toward like advance here. "We be brethren."

Here at Utsunomiya our latitude is not far from yours, being about 36.30. This province of 1,000,000 population is still largely vacant of Christian work, and there is much prejudice, and what is worse, much sheer indifference to the things of the spirit, but there are also souls hungering for the bread of life. I have known a man so stirred by receiving a tract while traveling, as to walk to the nearest church, eight miles away, a few days later, to make further inquiries into the matter.

While this is a personal letter, you may print any parts of it that you wish.

Yours in Christ,
E. C. FRY.

Utsunomiya, Japan, March 21, 1919.

Mrs. W. C. Whitaker—We often hear comments on the improvement of THE SUN.

S. S. TOPIC FOR MAY 4, 1919

Man made in the image of God.—
Gen. 1:26-28; 2:7-9; Eph. 4:20-24.

Golden Text: God created man in his own image. Gen. 1:27.

Devotional Reading: Ps. 8:1-9.

Thoughts For Teachers

"The breath of God unchanged became the breath of man; man received life of the life of God. With this divine life he was a living soul. At that moment religion became possible. For the first time there was in the earth a person whom God could love. It was God-like to make a man—Peloubet.

Sometimes the image of God is so defaced, so covered up, that it is almost impossible of detection, but it is there. It needs the sunlight of God's love, the washing of the blood of Christ, and the work of His servants to bring it forth.

Many old manuscripts were blotted out by monks that they might rewrite on the pages some of their own imaginings. So much precious material was apparently lost. But science has discovered how to bring to light the original writing. So Satan writes over the precious manuscript his superscription. But like the solution of the scientist, the blood of Christ will bring to light the original handwriting of God.

Children's Week

Did you observe Children's Week? Did you make a special plea for the babies to have their names on the Cradle Roll? Did you invite every parent to join some department of your school? Did you plan for a bigger, brighter, better Beginners and Primary Department? If not, it is not too late to do it now. The need of the child must be our basis of service. Let us help the parents to answer the question of Manoah, "How shall we order the child, and what shall we do unto him?" Let us help the child, so that he, too, out of a full heart shall say, "I was glad when they said unto me, 'Let us go into the house of the Lord.'"

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 4, 1919

Our Relation to God—Serving.
Matt. 2:20-28; (consecration meeting).

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength I promise Him"—what? Are you giving Him a soul, or a life? Have you consecrated yourself to His service? Dan Crawford says about the verse "How beautiful upon the mountains are feet of those who bring good tidings, 'It's not your talk, it's your walk that counts.'"

Jesus did not say, "He who becomes a famous physician" but "he who visits the sick;" not he who becomes a prison reformer" but "he who visits the prisoner;" not "he who feeds the world" but "he who gives a cup of cold water." Does this mean that we should give only little services? No, it means that we are to give the best we have and all we have, whether it be large as the world or small as a glass or water, just so it be done "In His Name."

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

AN APPEAL TO OUR PASTORS

Please begin now to make your arrangements to attend the first annual session of the State Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention which meets at Shallow Well Christian church July 15-17. It is generally conceded that there is no more important organization in the Church than the Sunday school—and I am inclined to think that the Christian Endeavor Society should have the same consideration—as this strong right arm of the Church. I believe that the pastors of our churches will agree with me when I say that these two organizations furnish the great dynamic force of the Church. If this be true, and these organizations are necessary in the advancement of Christ's kingdom on earth; then isn't it the duty of every pastor in the State to stand by these organizations, and lend them all the encouragement in their power?

We want you at the Convention, and you can be there too, if you want to, and will plan your work to this end. Please don't plan your summer outing, lodge meetings, or revival meetings for this one week. You have fifty-one other weeks, and it does seem to me that you can give three days in the whole year, to your convention. Have you ever stopped to think that if you hold a revival meeting at any one of our churches during this week, that you not only stay away from the Convention yourself—but you actually keep others away who would be glad to attend. A good brother said to me a few days ago: "I wish you would get after our pastor and ask him not to hold protracted meeting this year during the week of the Convention." He said further, "I want to attend the Convention, but we have a protracted meeting every year, the second week in July." Now Brother Pastor, won't you please let this good brother attend the Convention this year and feel that he is loyal to his church too. Won't you help us to make this the very best Convention possible, not only by your presence at the Convention but by talking it, and boosting it from now on until it is over?

C. H. STEPHENSON,

Pres. S. S. & C. E. Convention.
Raleigh, N. C.

THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WAS NOT LEFT OUT

Judging from his article in THE SUN's issue of April 9, Rev. J. Vincent Knight seems to have buckled on his armor, unheathed his sword and declared war on the Executive Committee of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Conference. Brother Knight seemingly has little faith in the Committee, in that he allows himself to doubt their sincerity, or to think that any member of this Committee would discriminate in any manner.

I was present at the meeting of the Executive Committee in Raleigh on March 19, and can assure Brother Knight that if any error has been made in choosing a theme for the Convention, it was an error of oversight; there was certainly no such thought as that of leaving out the Christian Endeavor work.

It has been my privilege to attend the sessions of every Convention for the past four or five years, and from observation and reference to the minutes can show that the Christian Endeavor has always had its place on the program.

The Christian Endeavor is a great Auxiliary, it is wonderful in its field of training young people to become Christian workers, it is a part of the Convention, has been in the past, will be in the future. Let us all pull together for a great Convention at Shallow Well in July, united action, concerted effort and the prayers of the people will accomplish great results.

MARION LAWRENCE ANSWERS THE QUESTION

For the three years that I have been handling books for the Southern Christian Convention, I have so many times had this question put to me: "Can you get me a little book that will help to improve conditions in the small Sunday school?" The persons who have asked me this question have gone on to state that they have been unable to get a book that will apply to the Sunday school in the country church where there are few class rooms and no modern equipment.

The other day I was in Greensboro to hear Marion Lawrence, the Sunday school specialist of the world, speak, and after the session, I went to Mr. Lawrence and asked him the question that so many have asked me. He replied: "Get the little book, HOW TO RUN A LITTLE SUNDAY SCHOOL, written by E. Morris Fergusson." He told me where to get it, and I got it. It is fine, has 126 pages, cloth binding, neatly bound. The author sticks to his text with commendable consistency, having continually in mind the needs of a small school with its circumscribed facilities, and furnishes suggestions of especial benefit to such an organization. I quote from the preface these words: "This book is written for the man or woman in the little Sunday school to show how such a school may lift itself out of the ruts of custom and tradition, gain the vision of a better day and take its rightful place among the progressive, graded, efficient and spiritually-successful Sunday school of its field."

The price is 75 cents, delivered. Send for a copy today.

OBITUARIES

BECKHAM

On March 6, 1919 death entered the home of Mr. C. L. Beckham, and bore away the spirit of his beloved companion, Mrs. Effie Harton Beckham. She was born August 28, 1886. At an early age she gave her heart to Christ, and to the last lived a consistent Christian life. She was devoted to the work of the church and attended its services regularly. In her devotion to her home and church she has left an example worthy of emulation. Besides her husband she leaves two children, Elizabeth and Edwin; father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Harton; four brothers, William, Leonard, Marvin and Wayland Harton; four sisters, Mrs. B. J. Nelson, Mrs. O. C. Ham, Mrs. Pearl Renn, and Mrs. W. J. Holmes. Services were conducted by the writer, and what was mortal was laid to rest in Elmwood cemetery May the Comforter speak peace to the bereaved.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

ROSS

Mrs. Elizabeth Ross passed from this life March 16, 1919. Had she lived till June 10 she would have been 100 years old. She leaves a large number of descendants. She was buried at Mt. Carmel church of which she was a member. She had outlived her generation and had almost become a stranger. Although her community and even the nation had quadrupled its population in her life time and steam and electricity had transformed the world as by magic, her life had not been swerved by these things, but had continued to move and to think in terms of former times. There had been a "parting of the ways." How the world outgrows us! Worn out with years and toil the end was not unwelcome. "Even death is yours," said the great apostle, and many times instead of being dreaded it comes as a welcome relief.

G. J. GREEN.

LANGSTON

Another home was saddened when Mrs. Annie Gupton Langston answered the call of the great "reaper" on March 8, 1919, leaving her husband, Mrs. Jesse Langston; four children, Herbert, Oscar, Louise and Charlie; father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Gupton; four brothers, Joe, Alfred, Charlie and George; five sisters, Mrs. D. I. Langston, Mrs. William Range, Mrs. William Crabtree, Mrs. Henry Faulkner and Mrs. William Medlin. She was born August 31, 1886. Early in life she joined the Baptist church, and soon became an active worker. She was devoted to her home, and left a vacant place in heart and home that cannot be filled. Services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. S. W. Taylor, pastor of the M. P. Church of Henderson. May the Lord comfort the bereaved husband and children.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—RAGLAND

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God to call from among us our Brother, E. O. C. Ragland, Be it Resolved:

First, That we bow in humble submission to His holy will, and that we remember his widow and children at the Throne of Grace;

Second, That we have lost a capable and honored member of our church, and that although his afflictions kept him from church he will be greatly missed, and Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our church record, a copy sent to the bereaved family and the same be published in The Christian Sun, our church paper.

VICTORY V VICTORY
LOAN LOAN
IS ON THIS WEEK

BECAUSE

The United States Government needs money to pay the debts contracted in bringing liberty to the peoples of the world. The job had to be done and now it must be paid for by the people.

BECAUSE

The people have money that is not in use and Uncle Sam wants to use that money to pay some big bills that cannot wait until enough is accumulated through the regular channels. Uncle Sam is the biggest and safest banker in the world because he handles the money of all the people. His resources are the people and his liabilities are the people.

BECAUSE

Our boys went over there, did a big job in a big way, turned the tide of civilization, brought honor and fame to themselves, joy to the world, knocked the K. out of German Kultur, the king (and the sting) out of the Kaiser, laid down their lives for freedom's sake and made the world a safe place in which to live. But there is by the Christian forces of the world—the victory for Christ and His Kingdom. And this must be done by Christian leadership, such as trained in our church colleges. It must be done, that is the point.

ELON COLLEGE

is getting ready to do her bit and best in training her part of the young men and women who are to be the soldiers in the next war—the war against wrong; a crusade for righteousness. Her part is our part; her obligation is our opportunity. She is building character and our obligation is to help her—and help her now.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

A WORD TO CONTRIBUTORS

We appreciate the good articles that the brethren send THE SUN from time to time. We welcome them. However, a few of our contributors make a copy of what they send THE SUN and send it to other papers. This is all right in many cases, but so often we are crowded and cannot use the article immediately upon arrival, and when it is used, some reader informs us that such an article appeared in The Herald of Gospel Liberty or some other paper. The fact is that, though we print the article after it has been printed in The Herald of Gospel Liberty, there is no credit given that paper. When the article is sent us we are not informed that a copy of it had been sent to some other paper.

We are endeavoring to make THE CHRISTIAN SUN original in every way so far as possible, and it is a matter of justice to our readers that we publish articles that they do not get in other papers taken by readers of THE SUN. If a man takes The Herald of Gospel Liberty, he expects to get something from it which he cannot find in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and vice versa.

This does not concern official notices of the Church. We do not feel obligated to publish articles after a copy of them has been submitted to another paper for publication that is widely circulated in our own constituency. The papers that become popular and great are those you have to read in order to get what they print.

One Church publication of our reading has been hindered and handicapped by this method until it has adopted the policy of paying a small sum for each article submitted and accepted for publication, except regular field news. Our problem is our problem and we trust that all readers and lovers of THE SUN will help us to continue to make a popular paper.

The Church can take a tip on this from the big metropolitan papers that have a circulation which runs into thousands. They demand original matter. (And by the way the Church paper is seeing a hard time because of their influence in the home. They have catered to business and the Church paper has catered to sentiment).

When the Church paper becomes as original as the magazines, and the "funny sheet" it will become more popular.

DEDICATION OF FRANKLIN, VIRGINIA, CHURCH

The Franklin, Virginia, Christian church was dedicated last Sunday, April 27. We present on the front page of this week's issue a cut of the church and glean the following items from the program used on the occasion:

A Word of Appreciation

To All Those to Whom This Message May Come:

It is with a large degree of satisfaction that the building committee is enabled to declare this building ready to be dedicated to the service and worship of Almighty God.

We wish to record our appreciation for the hearty co-operation of our people, which under the blessing of Heaven has enabled us to carry to completion so large and important an undertaking.

We desire to express our appreciation to Mr. E. C. Smith, the contractor. Much credit is due him, and this building will long stand as a monument to his good workmanship and honest service.

To the various builders and artisans who have labored upon this building and to all who have assisted in a financial way we express our gratitude.

It is one of the most delightful experience of a lifetime to present such a structure as this to the congregation, to the community, and to God for the worship of His Son through the Holy Spirit. This church is yours, if you will have it so.

Evening Service, 8 O'clock P. M.Some Facts About The Church

The Franklin Christian church was organized April 29, 1883, in the Masonic Hall, with eleven charter members.

The pastors who have served the congregation: Revs. M. L. Hurley, R. A. Ricks, J. Pressley Barrett, J. W. Barrett, J. T. Kitehen, J. W. Rawls, W. S. Long, N. G. Newnan and C. H. Rowland, the present pastor.

The new church is of hard brick with pressed brick front, and is constructed of first class material throughout. It has twelve separate rooms suitable for class and committee purposes, and a pastor's study. The building enterprise has cost more than $20,000.00.

MAY FOURTH—EMPLOYMENT SUNDAY

Sunday, May 4—will be observed as "Employment Sunday" in nearly every Protestant and Catholic church in the land. On that day ministers from their pulpits will urge their members to co-operate with the United States Employment Service by calling upon employers to register their needs for help, with the Service or its Bureaus for returning soldiers and sailors. They also will urge that every effort be made, individually and collectively, to find jobs for the men who have offered themselves for the supreme sacrifice for their country, thus making May 4 a day for a great country-wide drive for employment, in which the co-operation of labor will prove an all important factor.

The War Emergency and Reconstruction Joint Centenary Committee of the Methodist Church, has arranged to have 60,000 five-minute men address meetings and congregations on the subject.

The General Wartime Commission of Churches, which includes all of the Protestant churches, is co-operating with the U. S. Employment Service to the extent of appropriating five thousand dollars for spreading propandea for the employment of the returning men, and to promote the observance of May 4 as "Employment Sunday," when clergymen, Bible class teachers and special speakers will appeal for support of the work of the U. S. Employment Service and urge employers to keep all employment openings listed with the local offices of this Service and its Bureaus. It has, by direct appeal, enlisted the co-operation of more than 150,000 ministers of America.

Not alone the churches, but welfare organizations, chambers of commerce, organized labor and private individuals, are co-operating with the U. S. Employment Service in assisting men to jobs.

It is a matter of record that 35 per cent of all the men discharged from the Army and Navy, leave the Service without prospects of positions. Of these, the United States Employment Service is placing 80 per cent in good jobs through its 400 regular offices and about 2,000 Bureaus for returning soldiers and sailors. In many instances, labor unions are supporting and continuing the employment offices for the U. S. Employment Service, temporarily abandoned, owing to the failure of Congress to appropriate funds, recognizing the vital necessity for continuing this work, not only in the present emergency, but as a permanent organization following the completion of demobilization.

With returns from the 14 largest states not yet tabulated, the U. S. Employment Service in 34 states, for the week ending March 29, received 43,512 applications for jobs. Of this number 41,972 were referred, 31,600 reporting back to the Service as placed. Returns from the 14 missing states undoubtedly will more than double the placement record for that week. Placement figures from 16 of the 30 demobilization camps in which the U. S. Employment Service has offices, for the same week, show that of the 8,470 men discharged who applied for jobs, 8,042 were referred to positions, and that of this number, 5,429 are known to have been placed immediately.

Among the industries and individuals who have come to the assistance of the U. S. Employment Service in carrying on this work, is the firm of J. P. Morgan and Co., who have contributed $100,000 to the Service for the purpose of tiding it over until Congress in extra session provides the necessary funds for a continuance of the work, this fund being devoted to finding suitable jobs for the discharged men.

PRESIDENT WILSON APPEALS FOR UNIVERSAL OBSERVANCE OF SUNDAY, MAY 4, AS EMPLOYMENT SUNDAY

President Wilson has cabled from Paris to the White House, Washington, D. C., (April 17, 1919), the following public statement on "Employment Sunday," May 4:

"The church organizations of the country having generously united in an effort to assist the Employment Service of the United States in finding work for returning soldiers and sailors and war workers, and having designated Sunday, May 4, as 'Employment Sunday,' I am happy to add my voice to others in an appeal to our fellow countrymen to give their earnest and united support to this and every similar movement.

"I hope that the people of the country will universally observe 'Employment Sunday' as a day of fresh dedication to the mutual helpfulness which will serve to work out in the months to come the difficult problems of employment and industrial reorganization. In these days of victory we can make no better offering than that of service to the men and women who have won the victory.

FAMOUS MUSICIAN TO BE AT ELON COLLEGE
MAY 6

The people of Alamance and Guilford counties will have a rare treat offered them on Tuesday evening, May 6, when Mrs. Crosby Adams, a world famous teacher and composer in piano, will give a lecture-recital in the Elon College auditorium.

Mrs. Adams for many years now has been giving her summers to teaching music teachers at Montreat, North Carolina and each year the number of such teachers who resort to that mountain retreat for her instruction grows perceptively larger. She has the rare faculty not only to compose great music but to those who study under her direction to interpret it.

In her lecture recital at the College she will demonstrate how great music composition grows in the soul of the musician and she will at the same time demonstrate her own rare talent as a performer.

The Y. W. C. A. of the College is presenting her for this event and they have placed the admission charge at 25 cents. They have no thought of making money but to give all those who love music in this section an opportunity to hear a real artist and we feel confident that the confidence that the young women have in the musical taste of the people in the community will be rewarded with a large audience at this great event.

Following Mrs. Adams' public appearance there will be a reception given in her honor by President and Mrs. Harper at their home.

Do not forget the date, May 6, nor the hour, 8:30 P. M.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There is no sin in making money, provided it is by honest methods.

The Church has no right to glory in its poverty. Christ did not teach that we should remain poor.

So long as selfish hands hold God's money, the Church cannot prosper.

An offering comes after we have paid our debts—our debts to God.

You say that tithing puts the Church on a cash basis. Good! She has been on a credit system long enough.

Giving is a growth. When a man has money and fails to let God have His part, the usual reason is because the man has not been taught to give.

When a man considers that he is a steward of what he has, he will take more thought as to how he will administer it.

Let there be a crusade everywhere to say offering instead of collection.

It may be a thing with which you cannot very well reckon, but the man who really dedicates a part of his money to the Lord dedicates his life also to the Lord.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

POUNDED AGAIN

Brother Editor:

If you have never been pounded—oh; I mean in the good way—then you don't know just how it makes one feel. To see the people interested in the Master's business, to see souls getting blessed in your services, and to get a good pounding occasionally, well it is delightful and encouraging.

This time the New Lebanon folks did the pounding and they knew how. This makes three Ford loads we have brought in this year. In this last list of useful things we found: money, meat, meal, flour, sugar, coffee, eggs, potatoes, canned fruit, etc. We wish in this way to express our sincere thanks to these thoughtful people for this gracious remembrance.

W. D. HARWARD.

Dendron, Va.

Editor's Note: Yes, Brother Harward, it must be great to be pounded. Editors never have such good luck. Their joy is to read first what has happened to the other fellow. The next time you think there is a pounding in the air for you, let me know, or better still, send the Ford after me, so that I can see the "thing" and know better what to say about poundings. If this office should get such a pounding as you have been getting of late readers of THE SUN would certainly miss a copy.—C. B. R.

RAMSEUR PASTORATE

The work of the Ramseur pastorate is doing fine as a whole but I shall not speak in this letter with reference to only two of the churches in charge, the others need to be mentioned as well as the two I am going to write about but for lack of space I shall speak of them later. I am writing this time of Ramseur and Parks X Roads.

We began a revival with the Ramseur church the fifth Sunday in March and closed Wednesday night after the first Sunday in April. We had no outside help either to sing or preach. The meeting was good from the beginning. We had a packed house the first service and the congregations were large throughout the meeting. There was a deep work of the Spirit at every service. There were a number of professions and reclaimations and six united with the church at the closing service. I think others will join later. The whole church was revived and a good work done.

The activities of the church are good. The envelope system is working wonders in the finances. The church is up to date with all finances—a thing that was never known before here at this season of the year.

The Ladies' Aid Society is doing fine work. The Society has about $100.00 in cash and is going to make some needed improvements on the inside of the church soon. They have presented the church, since Christmas, with a handsome Individual Communion service.

The Woman's Missionary Society is growing in interest. The Society has adopted for present study at each meeting the five points in the Forward Movement program. A Cradle Roll has been organized which is rapidly growing. We are going to do something extra for missions this year.

The church has gone on record as endorsing the Elon Standardization Fund and the campaign for missions. You will hear more from Ramseur later.

Park's X Roads

I feel encouraged with the work at Park's X Roads. If these good people could only see the possibilities for them by opening their almost unlimited means to the Lord, what a blessing it would be!

We have been greatly hindered here this year, but last Sunday we had a fine day. A large congregation and good interest. We raised $35.65 as an Easter offering for the Orphanage. The Sunday school is giving one Sunday's offering to the Orphanage. The Sunday school is also giving one Sunday's offering to missions. This means an advance step for them. I feel that they are beginning to see things in a larger way. This church and Ramseur ought by all means to give a man full time to preach to them. It would mean so much for them.

We are planning for the annual memorial service the third Sunday in May. This is the annual house coming day for the church. We hope and pray that it may be a great day for the Kingdom. I am looking for larger things from these people this year. Pray for us, brethren.

Yours in His service,
A. T. BANKS.

DURHAM LETTER

On April 13 the Durham church began a series of evangelistic meetings which closed last night, (April 24). Rev. J. Lee Johnson did the preaching. It seems easy for him to preach. The only explanation of this that I can give is that he is a preacher and has something to preach—the Bible. He uses the Word of God frequently and freely and quotes it at will, and his interpretation of the Bible was entirely satisfactory to all.

The singing was another great feature in the services. Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of the South Norfolk church, led the choir. He not only preaches the Gospel but sings it. He is possessed with a talent that few men have. The people here fell in love with Brother Poythress, while with Brother Johnson it was a case of renewing their former love. He was here three years ago in a meeting.

The services were attended by large crowds. At almost all the services the house was well filled, chairs being frequently used, while the Sunday school rooms were resorted to two or three times. Men who have a message will always have somebody to hear it.

During the services there were forty-one professions and twenty-six additions to the church. There are several others who will join later. We hope that a similar series of meetings can be held in the near future with greater results.

R. F. BROWN.

HIGH POINT

Some one said this was the first time it had happened that Easter came on the Sunday of the regular preaching day at High Point Christian church. It was an ideal day in weather conditions. Quite a number were out for Sunday school and preaching; several whom the pastor had never met.

It was a good day for me and greatly enjoyed, especially when the Easter offering for the Christian Orphanage was taken. Brother R. C. Boyd, the superintendent, announced the time to take it and the writer suggested the method. The Bible was placed on a chair convenient for the little folks, because some had taken envelopes and also solicited for their respective classes. How beautiful it was to see the children bring their offerings for the helpless ones. It was an inspiration to me. Practically all present took a part and all looked happy over it. Look for Brother Johnston's report for the amount. May the Lord abundantly bless all in this noble deed.

Our evangelistic services begin on Wednesday, April 30, 1919, at 8:00 P. M. Rev. J. W. Knight of Stokesdale, N. C., will assist in the preaching. A good man and a great Gospel man is he. It is good to hear him and to associate with him in the Master's work. Let all who are interested in the Lord's work here pray for the success of the meeting and that the Lord's will may be done in and through us. We want all who attend to feel at home. The meeting will continue for about ten days.

One and all are welcome to attend and help in this specified time and all other preaching days.

L. L. WYRICK.

UNION, SURRY COUNTY

We had a good service here last Sunday morning, April 20. Brother T. S. Wrenn was ordained to the office of deacon.

There was one profession of faith in Christ, and one reconsecration at the close of the service.

NEW LEBANON

At the close of our service here in the afternoon there were two professions of faith in Christ, two young boys, the father of one of the boys came forward and professed to have been reclaimed from a backslidden condition. Prayer meeting services have recently been started in the church, being held each Thursday evening. The meetings are well attended and there is a good interest.

W. D. HARWARD.

SUFFOLK LETTER

One of the least thought of and most useful workers is the faithful Sunday school teacher. Parents send their children to Sunday school and expect the teacher to be there and to give them the help of their example and their instruction. Often parents do not know the name of the teacher. They take the teacher as a matter of course, and find relief when the children are off to the school. That hour in the Sunday school is the most important hour in the one hundred and twenty-eight hours of the week. The three essentials for a teacher are: Christian character, punctuality, and interest in the members of the class. Expert knowledge is valuable, aptness to teach is important; but nothing takes the place of the above essentials. Love for God, love for the Bible and love for human souls, will make a triangle by which all other problems can be solved. "Love never faileth." It must not be inferred that this position is in opposition to teacher training, expert knowledge, parallel study, pedagogical experience, or any modern requirement. Any addition that can be made to the essential qualifications is to be approved and recommended.

It may be set forth as a self-evident proposition that the majority of workers in all spheres must do their work without expert training; and, further, that much useful knowledge is acquired by experience. This opens a field of usefulness for untrained Sunday school teachers who are willing to consecrate themselves to this noble service. It, also, is an encouragement to those who have not had the opportunity for expert training. Some of the best cooks never read a cook book; and some of the best farmers never read an agricultural paper; and this says nothing against cook books or agricultural journals; it simply recites a great fact in the world's work. All the learning in the world cannot substitute for inherent, God-given, capacity to do good work; and the Sunday school teacher is no exception. If the teacher loves the Lord, the Bible, and the children, punctuality will follow. To be present on time, to be patient with scholars, to be earnest in teaching, to win their friendship by being friendly, will make success with any grade and in any school. There is no higher service in the church than to teach a class faithfully. The position is inconspicuous, without material remuneration, requiring personal sacrifice, carrying with it great responsibility, and, sometimes, without appreciation. It imposes self-denial, the faithful observance of the Sabbath, real consecration, and loyalty to church institutions. The Sunday school teacher is a model Christian, a real worker, a home-helper, a soul-saver, and an invaluable citizen. Parents should love them. The community should appreciate them. The church should pray for them. The children should praise them. Heaven should bless them. There are a million of these good people in the United States. They are the captains of an army twenty millions strong. They carry no weapon but the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. They are encamped in every part of these forty-eight States. Their songs reach the throne of the King of Kings. The tramp of their feet is greater than Roman legions or Hun minions. When they pray, Heaven answers; and when they sing, Heaven rejoices. All hail to Sunday school teachers!

W. W. STALEY.

There is no Christian satisfaction in being a miser. Miser seems very much akin to miserable.

Those who begin to tittle keep at it. There seems to be no disappointment about it.

MISSIONARY

A CLARION CALL TO ACTION

"The way to keep up is to keep on." Only those are keeping up who keep on trying by prayer, purse or person, to make known the gospel of our blessed Lord to a sin cursed and needy world.

The church today is seeing the world as it never saw it before. "And the world sees the Church as it never saw it before." The Church sees a whole world—not one section, race, tongue or nation, but the whole of it—in the tight grip of sin.

The missionary movement in all the churches means the awakening of the Church to grapple with the monster evils that stalk abroad and at mid-day and never sleep at night. "Emotion without motion is null and void." And in the movements for mission and for righteousness now there is something for everybody to do.

A TRAGEDY UNSPEAKABLE

The Northern Baptist Laymen have issued this manifesto:

"It would be a tragedy unspeakable if we should win the war and after all fail to achieve the purpose for which we are fighting. To what end shall we have spent millions of treasure and the far more precious lives of our sons if we fail to take a long step toward the creation between nations and races of those relations of good will and helpfulness that are in accord with the principles of Christ and are necessary to the welfare of the human race?"

The only way we are to avoid this unspeakable tragedy is to stress the Great Commission. Brave men, strong men, willing men, prepared men, are needed today in the Army of the Lord as they were never needed before. Brave men and devout women won this world war for democracy. It will now require brave men and devout women to win the world to the only true democracy there is, namely the democracy of the Mau of Galilee. We will never have permanent peace in this world till the Prince of Peace shall have won His way into the lives and hearts of enough men and women to control this world for Him.

TAKING THE KINGDOM BY VIOLENCE

"And from the days of John the Baptist until now the Kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and men of violence take it by force." (Matt. 11:12). Taking the Kingdom of heaven by force is no puny job or puerile task. It requires stalwart manhood, dauntless womanhood, fearless courage to go out on the firing line in the bloody battle of the Cross, and there teach and live and proclaim the gospel of righteousness in its conflict against iniquity. The call, the challenge, the need now is for strong, courageous, invincible souls who are willing even to make the Kingdom itself suffer violence in their onslaught for truth and conquest in the name of the Prince of peace.

MRS. M. L. BRYANT, Treasurer.

No principle is more fundamental in the Christian program of life and none less fully comprehended than that of the second mile. Jesus urged His disciples to go two miles with the man who would compel us to go one. Love always outdoes necessity, and the Christian religion is love. "Now abideth faith, hope and love." When love prompts hope, faith says "I can and I will," and the second mile becomes sweeter than the first. Some of us have known this a long time. Many more of us are happily learning it these good days.

It is certainly so in our Christian Church these happy times. Our beloved Mission Secretary set out to raise $50,000 and the Brotherhood went with him the second mile. Our College sent forth the call for $125,000, and the brethren began to demonstrate the joy of the second mile and are making it $250,000. The churches are individually with a remarkably generous stride going the second and often times the third and fourth mile with their quotas, and everybody is happy.

The explanation is easy. Elon has proven to the Church her worth and in the hour of her crisis the Church is willing to go the second mile to render her safe in her place of primal service to the Kingdom. It is heartening to those who labor at Elon that the Church is expressing its devotion to her in this gracious manner. With city church, town or village church, with the church in the open country, with the strong and the weak, with the pastored and the pastorless, the story is one unbroken tale of triumphant liberality. Surely God can but bless a people so cheerfully willing to go the second mile for His cause.

I am indebted for this thought to Superintendent R. B. Wood of our Portsmouth Sunday school, a real statesman in Christian service. He took me around in his city and aided me in ways unnumbered, and stoutheared my heart by expressing the hope in the outset that Portsmouth would go the second mile. Well, she went the third. Isn't that fine for a church not yet entirely out of debt?

Berea (Alamance) went the third mile too this week and so did Berea (Nansemond), and more is yet to be done at the second Berea. A third Berea, that of Norfolk, has made a noble start. One member only has been seen, and she gave $1,000. God bless the Bereas! Surely there is something in a name. We read in Acts 17:11 that the Bereans of Bible times were a noble people "in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, and searched the scripture daily." The churches of our brotherhood who are named for them have imbibed the spirit of their nobility and perpetuated it in noble deeds. We need more Bereas.

The churches at Graham, (N. C.), and the grand old Memorial Temple, Norfolk, have this week gone over the top. They both deserve special mention. Graham has this year doubled the pastor's salary and is engaged in paying for a parsonage for the man who ministers to them to live in, and yet she oversubscribed. And the Temple is without pastoral care. A beloved minister of the Congregational Church, executive secretary of the Norfolk Church Federation, a big job for any man, preaches for them, and is doing fine work, but Dr. Ekins cannot pastor the people. Besides many members have left the church recently. In spite of all this, this monument to the union of our Northern and Southern churches after the Civil War has maintained her long-established record and gone over the top. A princely people have done the princely deed.

Funds This Week

Funds this week have been established by Deacon Thos. A. Jones, Norfolk, in memory of his wife in the sum of $2,500; and in sums of $1,000 each by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Pollard, Elon College; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Farmer, Elon College; Attorney John M. Cook, Burlington, (a good Methodist Sunday school teacher) in memory of his mother, Mrs. Melissa Staley Cook; Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Wood, Portsmouth; Mr. J. F. Brothers, Jr., Portsmouth; Mr. Walter C. Rawles, Norfolk; Mr. B. L. Nichols, Norfolk, in memory of his daughter, Mrs. Lillie Nichols Wright; Deacon James H. Craig, Norfolk; Mr. Logan McCloud and wife, Norfolk; Hon. I. W. Pritchard, Chapel Hill; and Mrs. J. E. Hall, Norfolk county, in memory of her late husband. Veritably do the righteous rest from their labors and their good deeds follow them in the loving sacrifices of their loved ones.

The chorus of generous response remains without an unbroken note, and the second mile has become the prevailing style, for which we thank God and take courage.

Let the Church continue in intercession for God's continued blessing on this work and that the churches yet to be visited may learn in happy experience the joy of the second mile.

W. A. HARPER.

More Cheer Yet

Upon my return to the office for a few hours, a letter was awaiting me from Brother W. F. Corwith, New York. He had previously given $1,000. He now makes it $5,000. May the Lord multiply his kind.

THE CALL TO THE MINISTRY*

I Cor. 1:1, "Paul called to be an apostle of Jesus Christ through the will of God."

There are three classes of ministers:

1. Apostles and Prophets who founded the church. "Ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone." Eph. 2:19, 20.

2. Evangelists who extend the church by preaching the gospel where it has not been preached or to whom it has not been preached, and winning souls to Christ and the church. Missionaries are evangelists.

3. Pastors and teachers who have the care of churches and edify congregations. These all work in harmony toward one common end.

Apostles and prophets did their work in founding the Church as an institution. Having performed their task, they passed on to their reward and had no successors. Missionaries are evangelists to extend the Church into all lands and among all peoples; pastors and teachers must care for churches in their development.

Ministers are called to their work, and Paul says he was called by the will of God. His call was divine. Samuel was called when a child. He was the last of Judges and the first of the regular succession of prophets. Elisha was called when a man. God directed Elijah in the cave at Horeb to anoint Elisha a prophet in his room. He found Elisha plowing in the field with twelve yoke of oxen and cast his mantle upon him; and it fell upon him again as he ascended in a chariot of fire. God never called an idle man nor an immoral man into the ministry in early times.

The call of the minister is,

I To a New Life

Jesus called men from secular occupations to spiritual occupations. He said to the fishermen: "Follow me and they followed Him"; to Matthew at the Receipt of Custom, and "he followed Him." This was to them a new life. He trained them first as disciples in this new life. This new life was more than separation from wrong world-ways; it was separation from right world-ways. It was a separation from secular occupations. It was the first step into the ministry—separation from secular life, no matter how good it might be. Fishing and official service are both necessary and good in the world's business; but Jesus called them away from their business to follow Him in His business. "The ministry requires the whole man," and the man's whole life.

II To a New Office

"When it was day, He called unto Him His disciples; and of them He chose twelve, whom He also named apostles." Luke 6:13. Matthew says, "He gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease." Saul was already a church man when he was called into the office of an apostle.

In Matthew nine thirty-eight Jesus said to His disciples "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into His harvest." The ministry is not a self-chosen office, but one into which God calls men; and there is a double danger: (1). That of entering the ministry without a divine call. In that case, it means failure in the ministry. Think of the man at the wedding without a wedding garment. (2). That of not yielding to a divine call. In that case, it means failure in the world. Paul was very much impressed by his call: "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel." Aptitude for work may help the individual to decide. A person without a musical soul would hardly be chosen leader of a band or choir. The presumption is that God will choose wisely no matter what men may think.

III To a New Work

There is work for all in the vineyard, but special work for ministers who give up secular employment and devote their whole time to religious work by the will of the Lord. Paul says: "This one thing I do," and that is the essential thing in the work of the minister. The soldier commits himself, without reserve, to his country, and depends upon his country for support. The minister must commit himself and his life to God, and depend upon God for support. "The laborer is worthy of his hire;" and "they that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel;" and Paul says again: "I count all things but loss for Christ." God calls untaught men into the ministry, as the fishermen; but it is their business to prepare for the great task. The hardest thing in his experience is the self-denial necessary in his preparation. No matter how much time is required in preparation, it should be given to that hereulean task.

The ministry is a most trying and delightful service. It tries human faith and human patience; but "this is the victory that overcometh the world even your faith;" and "let patience have her perfect work." The beauty of the ministry is its satisfaction. Nothing is more satisfying than a good conscience, and that cannot be enjoyed when deep conviction is not obeyed. This question of conviction as to a call, and obedience to the call, must have a personal and individual answer; and it must be the will of God. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin;" for "whatsoever is not of faith is sin." The call to the ministry roots itself in conviction and faith, and gets its answer in the obedience of the will to the will of God.

A VILLAGE 4,000 YEARS OLD

Dr. John H. Finley, who visited the Holy Land for the Red Cross, tells in the Asia Magazine about the old town of Halhul one of hundreds of villages in Palestine which have not changed in 4,000 years.

"I have visited today a village that is four thousand years old, but that is without certain facilities which the newest town in Oklahoma would insist upon having in as many hours as this village has known years. It stands upon a hill almost bare of trees and looks at the left between the mountains to the Mediterranean sea, and at the right across the Dead sea. This village was doubtless sitting in the same place where Abraham left Lot and journeyed from the plains of the Jordan down into Hebron, which is only four miles away. David often passed by it when he was fleeing into the wilderness from Saul or during his seven and a half years' reign in Hebron. A little way off soldiers of the new crusades are encamped in a fold of the hills and in the valley of Caleb's lower springs, close by one of the springs, new refugees from the plain of Jordan are pitching their black tents. This village, Halhul, is more like one of our Indian adobe towns than any other communities in the States, except that the huts are of stone. There are no streets, only winding, labyrinthine paths round and about, up and down, sometimes over the roofs of the huts—paths made by the feet of men, women, children and donkeys through the centuries. There are no vehicles, wagons, motors, street cars. There is no postoffice, for never a letter comes to the village, I suppose. There are no newspapers, no schools, no places of amusement (there is one man, at least, who plays a primitive pipe), no running water, no signs, no stores so far as I could see, no libraries nor books, no women's clubs, no telephones—there was nothing to give the inhabitants communication with the world beyond the sight of their eyes or the reach of their feet. And few, I suppose, had journeyed beyond Hebron to the south, or Jerusalem at the north.

"Halhul! What a new life would come into your old stone body if the children of a typical American village would come to sing and play with your children. Halhul! How many summers will you sleep in the sun, how many winters will you shiver in your windowless huts, before the civilization which has come up to your gates, across the seas and up from the ports of Egypt, shall not only pass like the automobile at your feet or fly like the aeroplane over your head, but will enter your heart with its joys, its higher joys and its deeper sorrows. Halhul! Will not the new Joshua give you an inheritance not merely to some particular tribe or nation, but to the world, that it may add its comic gifts in this Tele-Victorian age to those which you have gathered out of your long past with its narrow horizon—a horizon whose edge is not cut by the sky-scrapers of your coast, dear America!

"Halhul! I should like to come to you in the year of our Lord 2000."

PRIZE FOR SCHOOL GIRLS AND BOYS OFFERED BY STATE BOARD OF HEALTH

2,626 children die in North Carolina each year under the age of two from diarrheal disease, this one disease causing the largest number of deaths in the 33,914 which occur yearly.

With a desire of calling the attention of school children in North Carolina to the large number of children under five who die annually in the State and to those conditions which contribute to their death, and with the hope of attracting through the school children the attention of mothers and fathers to these facts and conditions, the Bureau of Infant Hygiene of the State Board of Health offers a prize of $10 for the best composition giving ten contributing factors to diarrheal diseases of infants under two years of age, and the best methods of removing these conditions.

This composition is to be sent in to the Bureau of Infant Hygiene, State Board of Health, by May 10th and must contain a statement that said composition was composed and written without assistance.

Information regarding the cause of disease can be obtained by applying to the State Board of Health, in case local teachers are not prepared to furnish it.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

LIFE'S SAMENESS AND FRESHNESS

(By Rev. Arthur Pringle)

Reprinted from The Christian Work

This, we say, is a "new" age, the events through which we are passing are "unprecedented," and, of course, this has its strong element of truth. Perhaps, however, it would make for our strength and wisdom if we allowed the other side of the case to take firmer grip of us, remembering that history repeats itself, and that so many of the things that are now disconcerting us with their freshness have in reality traveled through long ages to reach us. For all their novelty and surprise, they bear, on close inspection, the marks of their journeying, making us understand how a wise man could once say that there is no new thing under the sun. It is in this connection that Mr. Havelock Ellis makes the acute observation, "He who would advance can never cling too closely to the past You may spare yourself some unhappiness if, beforehand, you slip the Book of Ecclesiastes beneath your arm." Here we are, for example, in the midst of international and social and industrial upheavals and readjustments, and our proper demand is for alert, enterprising leaders in touch with our own time. But they cannot be this unless they are in touch with all other times. They must bring out of their treasure things new and old, or they will land us on the rocks. War, for example, has come to us with a literally terrifying newness, and we see how, without check, it will become newer and newer until it means the end of all things. But, nevertheless, there is a weird antiquity stamped on its panoply and horror; it is essentially the same war that has ravaged the ages, the same in its root causes and accompaniments and results. Our social problem, too, is, from one point of view, intricate with incalculable factors; but, stripped to reality's bone, it rehearses the ancient lesson that Nemesis must overtake any community which acquiesces in the jostling of senseless luxury and hopeless need, and in complacent about evils that would yield to resolute attack. Epochs and centuries have their individuality, just as persons have, and in this our time it is our business to be ourselves, to see with our own eyes our specific task and vision. Each generation ought so to put its distinctive stamp on history as to hand it on fresher and finer than it has ever been before. But under the stamp there will ever be the unalterable factors and the unimprovable lessons, and the age intent on solving its peculiar problems would be wise to steady itself with much preliminary reflection on the riddles and guessers that have gone before.

This combination of sameness and freshness is also the key to a right estimate of individual experience. At first blush we appear so painfully or gladly new to ourselves, as the case may be; painfully, in the awful uniqueness that sorrow has a way of assuming, so that it seems as though no one could ever have had to face such a trial as ours; gladly, in the wonderful sense that comes even to the moderately fortunate that life is whispering to them a separate, intimate secret. Without a doubt, all youth should hear before and behind and on every side the heartening challenge, "Behold, I make all things new," and should feel, with something like rapture, that its life has never been lived before. In that sort of spring and mid-summer madness there is a sanity that may keep life warm to the winter's end.

But in and by itself this is no use; it is even dangerous, for it makes people act as though the great thing were to be "new" and "up to date" and superior to convention—phrases which, isolated from wholesome qualification, are danger signals rather than goals. When people declare their intention of living "their own life," it may mean the best or the worst. If they propose following the healthy bent of their individuality, thinking for themselves, opening all the windows of their soul and drinking in all the winds of God—what more legitimate? But if they intend the careless defying of accepted codes and rash moral adventuring—what more disastrous? In such a day as ours it is worth while insisting that conventions have only had time to become conventions because they have somehow justified themselves, and the wise will respect them accordingly. Religion holds no brief for hidebound stalemness, and the magic phrase about "having life abundantly" as final warrant behind it. But here again our treasure is new and old. We are, in essence and at heart, what others have been before us. In Sir Thomas Browne's quaint words, men are "lived over again." The drama of humanity is like the drama of the playhouse; the scenery becomes more elaborate, the actors appear in garb that alters with the times, all manner of ingenious changes are rung upon the plot—but the plot, in all its comedy and tragedy, remains the same. So, when all is said and done, we are not lonely in our sorrows or peculiar in our joys; they are shared by an unnumbered host who did our laughing and crying, our fearing and hoping, before ever we were thought of. We are, then, as new as this very minute; we are, also, as old as Adam, and it all makes life very wonderful.

Should we be so liable to panic about modern problems of faith if we remembered this mingling of the old and the new in human experience? It is the fashion to talk of the religious difficulties "created" by the war, but, if put to it, could you name one? Providence, prayer, free will and "fatalism," the death of the good and the frequent immunity of the vile: what age has not known, in whatever form, these familiar offshoots of the ancient riddle? Each successive period discusses philosophy in its own jargon, but in the stuff of our philosophical perplexities and conjectures is there not more redressing of the old than manufacture of the new? No people are the people with whom wisdom was born or with whom it shall die, and all the ages are concluded under one impenetrable mystery. Is there any speculation or problem whereof men say, "See, this is new;" it hath been already of old time, which was before us.

Out of which spring two practical suggestions. One is specially the concern of preachers and all people who care or the pulpits fair name. Do we not see by this time the absurdity of dividing theology into "old" and "new," and its exponents into "orthodox" and "progressive"? The theology that was only "new" would be a plant without root, a house without a foundation, and that which was merely "old" would be the equally futile reverse. The "progressive" preacher who fails to gather the essence of his message from the rich stores of the ages—the man who forgets that temptation and sorrow and immortal longing spell the same hunger in all time: what a figure he cuts, what short vogue the need of humanity gives him! Yet, as he brings the old out of his treasure, it is his to ensure that, even as the mercies of God, it is new every morning. Old, the truth is paralyzed; new, it is the whim of a moment; old and new, it is the meat and drink of every generation. So in the true pulpit the conservative weds the adventurous, and when this happens there is fine progeny of helpfulness.

The other suggestion is for the general run of work-a-day people. Do what we will, every life must have a big element of sameness, and for many monotony is the great enemy. Whoever we are, we must needs do the same thing day after day, year in and year out. Name what you will, from what is called menial drudgery to what seem the dazzlingly attractive professions, there is not much promise of happiness or success to the man who will not squarely face up to routine repetition, demands that, having been put to bed tonight, rise up with aggravating renewal of insistence tomorrow. To this we must make up our minds, but it need not take the heart out of us, for when a man catches the spirit of Christ he may sometimes be tired, but he does not easily become stale. Out of the heart of God, triumphantly meeting all life's flatness and sameness, his faith and courage receive, the answering promise, "Behold, I make all things new."

BOLSHEVISM

The Bolsheviks of Russia have issued a decree abolishing Sunday and a pronouncement forbidding weddings or funerals to be held in any of the churches. They have also issued a decree that lessons in Atheism shall be given in the schools, and all religious instruction is forbidden.

This is not the first time in history that a nation has tried to abolish God and the Sabbath and sacred things by decree. But all such decrees have failed, and with them has gone the failure of the nation making such mad decrees. This godless decree of the Bolsheviks may result in blood-shed, death and destruction of property but it at the same time seals the fate and pronounces the doom of this uprising of anarchists.

NOTES

Rev. L. E. Smith sends this note: "Special meetings closed Sunday evening, (April 20) with 101 new members since I arrived January 15, 1919. The Lord has wonderfully blessed us. The building has been enlarged to accommodate the people. The possibilities here are certainly unlimited. I covet the prayers of the Brotherhood. More later."

Rev. J. W. Wellons writes: "I preached at the Masonic Home in Greensboro, N. C., the second Sunday and administered the Sacrament. I enjoyed the day very much. I will preach at Shiloh, Randolph County, the second Sunday in May."

We have received from Chaplain H. S. Smith a copy of The Soldier-Student—the official organ of the American students at the University of Montpellier. A readable sheet, it is.

At this season of the year the income of THE SUN falls off considerably and remains so until fall. We suppose that the nature of the crops in the rural sections accounts for this. Such a condition means that the summer months are hard on us, financially. There are many who can renew just as well at one time of the year as another, and so we call the attention of our friends to our needs. If your subscription is due, renew now. We must meet our bills promptly and have no means of so doing except as the people pay.

Y. M. C. A. FOR BURLINGTON

Burlington, N. C., is to have a Young Men's Christian Association building that will cost about one hundred thousand dollars. It is to be a gift to the city by a prominent family.

THE AMERICAN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION

The American Christian Convention is in session at Comeaut, Ohio, this week. Many of our Southern brethren are in attendance. We hope to give some of the main items from the Convention in next week's issue of THE SUN.

LATEST NEWS FROM THE SECULAR WORLD

The revised covenant of the League of Nations has been adopted without amendment. The amendments by the French and Japanese have been withdrawn. The outlook is hopeful for an early peace.

The Council of Four to present a provision to try the ex-Kaiser has made provision for his trial by five judges. He is to be tried for: "A supreme offense against international morality and the sanctity of treaties."

Postmaster General Burleson says that all cables will be turned back to private owners.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Our financial report this week is encouraging to us. Our churches and Sunday schools are responding splendidly. This week runs our Easter Offerings to a little more than one thousand dollars. So the first thousand has been reached and passed. Now for the second thousand right quick. Let us all pull together and at the same time and just keep on pulling till the three thousand dollar mark for the Easter Offering is reached.

Two churches were placed on the honor roll this week for their contribution was more than $100. One other church just lacked a small amount reaching the $100 mark.

How many will we have on the honor roll when the Easter offering is all in? I trust a number will be there.

It has been suggested that we build a new home modern and up-to-date for the little children. One that the Church will be proud of. Why not raise enough money in the next two months to build this home? A home of this kind would cost something like ten thousand dollars. Twenty persons giving $500 each would build it. Forty persons giving $250.00 each would build it. One hundred persons giving $100 each would build it.

How easy it could be done if our people would just stop and think. Who will be the first to mail us a check for either of the above mentioned amounts to raise this fund and give the little children a home?

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

(Rev. Warren H. Denison, D. D., Superintendent)

Notes From The Field

Rev. George D. Eastes, Raleigh, N. C., is intensely interested in the Forward Movement, and says that we may count on him in every possible way. One of the finest things in this Movement is to notice the loyalty of our pastors.

President W. A. Harper, Elon College, has the hearty congratulations of the Forward Movement in his splendid success for Elon's endowment fund. Dr. Harper is a member of the Forward Movement Executive Committee.

The New England Christian Convention is building a strong Forward Movement program for its annual meeting in June. All the points of the Movement will be strongly emphasized.

Professor J. N. Dales, editor of the Christian Vanguard in Ontario, hopes that every one of our Canada churches may enlist in the Forward Movement.

The Forward Movement requests, that every conference in the Southern Christian Convention appoint a Forward Movement committee, and report the names of said committee to the Superintendent. Let the executive committee of the conferences take up this matter soon.

The latest word from Urbana, Illinois is, that they have pledges for $625 more to be added to their former pledges of $4,000.

Rev. J. E. Etter, D. D., Troy, Ohio, reports 55 new members received into his church in the pre-Easter evangelistic campaign.

Rev. W. H. Hendershot, Towanda, Kansas, says "I believe the Forward Movement plan is born of God. The Towanda church, Sunday school, Mission society, are all working on the Forward Movement plan."

Rev. Frank H. Peters, D. D., Greenville, Ohio, says, "In response to the leaders of the Christian Church in the United States and Canada, our Greenville Christian church has adopted the five-point program of the Forward Movement as the basis of its work. Devotion, Evangelism, Religious Education, Missions and Benevolence will be made the center of our activity. Special committees have been appointed. The committee on evangelism has districted the city and appointed assistants for active, continued work throughout the year."

Mr. Claude Norfleet, Holland, Virginia, is the Four-Minute man of the Holy Neck church.

We are expecting some splendid reports from the churches of the Southern Christian Convention immediately following Easter, for a number of the churches are expecting to receive a goodly number of members on Easter Sunday. We ask all pastors to report to the Forward Movement their Easter gatherings.

The Virginia Valley Central Conference is planning a Forward Movement program for its Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention, in May.

Rev. G. W. Shepherd, Sumner, Illinois, has appointed a laymen's evangelistic campaign team of sixteen men, as one of the Forward Movement items of his church.

Miss Letha McGuire is pushing the Forward Movement work in the Sunday schools of the Des Moines Conference.

INCREASE

The nineteenth century witnessed an increase of professed Christians in the world from 200,000,000 to about 500,000,000. This represents an increase of 2 to 1 to the world's increase in population in the same period. There are now nearly 50,000,000 Christians in the United States and church property in the United States is estimated at over a thousand million dollars. "And of the increase of His government there shall be no end forever."

Forty-six doctors were killed in the recent war, twenty-two died of wounds, twelve of accident and one hundred and one of disease. Four were lost at sea and seven were missing in action. Thirty-eight were taken prisoners and two hundred and twelve were wounded in action, according to an exchange.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 11

Sin And Its Consequences.—Gen. 3:1-24; Romans 1:18-23; James 1:15.
Golden Text: The wages of sin is death; but the free gift of God is eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord. Rom. 6:23.

Devotional Reading. Ps. 51:1-13.

Thoughts For Teachers

The devil has found no new arguments through all the years, "It won't hurt you;" "You are strong enough to know when to quit;" "A man has got to see life." These are the devils stock arguments. And our excuses have not changed much either. "I was led into it;" "I was overpersuaded;" "It is hard to know just what is right." The great trouble is that we, like Adam have a "guide who shall lead us into all truth" but we think we are strong enough to cope with evil. Adam and Eve had no need to debate the question with the Serpent at all. God had spoken, and His word was sufficient. It is only when we begin to debate with evil that we are in trouble, for he is more subtle than we when we are depending upon human strength and wisdom alone.

No death till Sin entered, and then a long obituary column, as long as the birth list, with but two exceptions. All sicknesses are caused by broken laws, directly or indirectly; all death is caused by Sin. The last Enemy that shall be destroyed is death.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 11

The Lure of The World.—II Tim. 4:10; I John 2:15-17.

Vice is a monster of such hateful mein
That to be hated needs but to be seen,
But seen too oft, familiar with his face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace. (Pope).

You've heard of the snake in the grass, my lad;
Of the viper concealed in the grass;
But now you must know,

Man's deadliest foe
Is a snake of a different class;
Alas!—

'Tis the viper that lurks in the glass. (Saxe).

VACATION CARDS

Some of your pupils are going away for the summer. Are they going away from the Sunday school—some Sunday school—as well? Why not arrange now to have some vacation cards, either printed for your individual school, or buy the regular cards from the Publishing House, and see that each vacationer is provided with a card to have signed by the superintendent or teacher of the Sunday school or schools he attends while absent from home? Then when they return and these cards are turned in, their record will be clear and clean, and the goodly habit of church and Sunday school attendance will not have been broken into because "we were away all summer." It is evident that Satan works while summer weather brings fruit to the trees. Shall we be more slothful?

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

CHILDREN'S DAY

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Board of the Southern Christian Convention, through its Executive Committee, is preparing a program for Children's Day. These programs will come from the press in a few days and it is believed the exercises are adapted to the needs and conditions of the largest as well as the least of our schools. The programs are for free distribution, to a limited number, and can be had by addressing a request to the undersigned. It is planned by the Board for every school in the Convention to have Children's Day on some Sunday of June. This should be a great and good day not only for the children, but for the whole school and the community. By all means let every school have Children's Day in June. Make it a rally day for the school, as well as a glad day, and through it seek to increase attendance and interest.

MORGAN-WILLIAMS

At the home of the bride's parents on Easter Sunday Mr. Elder V. Morgan and Miss Cora Ida Williams were united in marriage by the writer. None but homefolks were present except Eddie Morgan, the twin brother of the groom, and his wife.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Baxter Williams of Eagle Springs, N. C., and the groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Morgan, Spies, N. C. Both are popular young people.

May happiness and prosperity be theirs through life.

CARR

S. Livy Carr was born March 18, 1874, and died April 6, 1919. He had been enjoying the best of health for twenty years, and was seemingly in perfect health Saturday night. He was found sleeping the eternal sleep Sunday morning, the cause being heart-trouble. His wife, Martha E. Carr, departed this life six years ago. Five children survive, the oldest being nineteen years of age, and the youngest nine. Besides these our Brother leaves three brothers, relatives, and a host of friends to follow the Savior to whom our deceased Brother was ever a faithful servant. He made a profession of Christ at the age of fifteen, united with the Mt. Carmel Christian church, and throughout the thirty years of his church membership he was a willing and ready helper in all good causes. He was a member of the "Woodmen of the World." Neighbors and friends wanted it remembered that there was "never a better neighbor, nor better citizen, nor more faithful husband, nor more devoted father, nor more earnest and energetic farmer" than Livy Carr. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Dr. C. H. Rowland. Interment was made in the cemetery. The crowded congregation not being able to find seats shows the high esteem in which the community held Brother Carr. May the Heavenly Father comfort and bless the bereaved ones.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to call Brother Sam Farmer, our fellow deacon and honored Brother from our midst, and whereas we are bowed in sorrow and grief, be it Resolved:

First, That one of our foremost men, both in church and community, is at rest from his extensive and fruitful labors;

Second, That his widow and children have sustained an irreparable loss, while his memory and example is a priceless heritage.

Third, That our church and its every auxiliary has lost a large factor and great asset;

Fourth, That we, the Board of Deacons, have lost a beloved friend, fellow-worker, and counsellor, and

SEATE

Mrs. Sallie Susan Seate was born in Halifax County, Virginia, January 4, 1879 and died Sunday, March 30, 1919, aged forty-nine years, two months and twenty-six days. Her parents were Captain Ned and Julia Overby Tuck.

At the age of seventeen she united with Union Christian church where she held her membership till death. In 1887 she married Robert Lipscomb Seate, who died October 19, 1909, leaving her with the responsibility of a large family of children. No widow ever labored more heroically and showed a more loyal, sacrificing spirit in her home than she.

She is survived by her mother, two brothers, five sons and five daughters, and one granddaughter. Two sons have served in the army. Russell received his discharge in time to spend a few weeks at the bedside of his mother. Corporal Ned Seate, at the time of his mother's death, was being treated in a hospital in New Jersey for a shattered bone from a wound in the right arm received last October near Verdun. He arrived on a furlough about one hour before the funeral. The highest tribute to the life of Sister Seate was given publicly at the funeral by a prominent neighbor when he spoke of her excellent children, having known them from early childhood.

The funeral was conducted from the home near High Hill, Va., on Monday, March 31, at 4:30 P. M., by the writer and the burial was in the family burying ground nearby.

A splendid Christian woman has gone to her reward. Her influence for good will live on in the lives of others and serve as an impelling force to duty and right.

WALKER

Died, April 13, 1919 in his 71st year, John Calvin Walker of Watson, Alamance County, N. C. He leaves two sisters, Mrs. E. A. Trolinger of Watson, N. C., and Mrs. J. W. Smith of Durham, N. C., one brother, James Monroe Walker of Safford, Arizona. He was a good citizen, friend, and neighbor. He was a successful business man, kind and courteous. He will be greatly missed in his community. The funeral service was conducted by the writer in the presence of a large audience at Union Christian church and his body laid to rest in the church cemetery.

30 Years of World Building IS ELON'S CONTRIBUTION TO CIVILIZATION

For thirty years Elon College has been doing, in a noble way, her part toward building a world—a civilized world where happiness is assured and where peace is soon to be maintained as a safety to mankind.

A MINISTER

in practically every pulpit, teachers in our schools, lawyers at the bar, judges on the bench, statesmen in the Capitol, business men in every walk of life, to say nothing of the trained men in other professions and the women who make houses into homes and strengthen the pillars of civilization by their lives, is only a part of Elon's contribution to the work of the Christian Church.

THESE YEARS OF SERVICE

have been years of sacrificial service, rendered by competent men and women whose first thought is to build character—Christian character.

AND THESE YEARS

must be multiplied many times in their service to meet a larger program for the Church and the Kingdom. To do this the College is, with hands that are outstretched, calling us to this challenge. We are meeting it and will continue to do so until we "go over the top."—all together.

PRAY FOR THE WORK AND THE WORKERS

—OURS IS THE BUSINESS OF THE KING—

Let Us Pray and Let Us Pay and Open the Way—For Elon

THE CHRISTIAN

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY"

The Remedy

THERE is strife and unrest in the land. Labor is arrayed against capital, and the industrial world is having its problem. Vengeance is being sought, but the Lord says that vengeance is his. One class cannot plan and plot against another without disastrous effects. We must apply a remedy that will cure this evil or suffer the consequence. The Church has the remedy—the spirit of Jesus Christ. What will she do with it? Cannot the Christian influences and forces do something to remedy the situation? Let Christians pray to that end.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

'FINISHED'

There are a great many things on the market today that are labeled "finished." Not only are there things on the market so labeled but there are individuals who are labeled "finished" by schools and colleges. The "finished" product is found everywhere these days. It seems to be the outgrowth of specialization. For nearly twenty-five years specialization has been stressed by individuals and institutions. We agree that conditions have made it imperative that specialization be made in a number of lines, but like many other things, it has gone to the extreme and we feel that the time has come, especially in this period of reconstruction, when the matter should be amended.

We take one case for illustration: The other day we needed some extra help and advertised for a stenographer. More than a dozen applications were received. Many of these applications were from students in business colleges, or had just left some business college, and all of them said that they had "finished." We recall one letter in particular, which letter was brief, and the young lady said that she had "finished" her course and was waiting for a position. Although the letter was short, more than a dozen errors could be pointed out as to the arrangement, punctuation, paragraphing and other details. The worst part of the application, however, was that this young lady who had "finished" did not seem to know where to end a sentence or how to begin a new sentence.

We take advantage of this instance to point out the danger there is in many so called business and technical schools that claim to give a complete course in a certain number of weeks. It is possible for them to do it, provided, they have the necessary material, and so the question now goes back to the literary schools.

So many of the high schools fail to thoroughly prepare their students, and so when they leave the school and enter the business college they are not able to master the principles of shorthand and bookkeeping. When they begin their work they find that such principles and literary qualifications are so united that they cannot separate one from the other. A person may know shorthand and be able to take dictation rapidly but the putting of that dictation into good English form is another proposition. Large corporations everywhere will tell you that they seek out the men who not only have the business training but the literary qualifications as well.

Young man, young woman, don't let some small business college deceive you by making you believe that it can turn you out as a "finished" product in a few weeks capable of holding some responsible position. Know well that your literary foundation is secure and on this build your knowledge of business and your specialization. If specialization comes first, it is like the pyramid turned upside down, but if you make your preparation first, the pyramid of your life will be properly prepared and it will take something more than a mere push to turn you over.

MEMORIALS

At this season of the year the various country churches are planning and holding their annual memorials. We have always felt that these occasions were helpful and uplifting in many ways. They keep us in touch with the deeds of our fellowmen—deeds we seldom appreciate until our loved ones have been taken.

This year these occasions bring to us another phase for meditation. Since last year many of our friends have fallen in the foreign fields and in the home lands. Some of our brave young men lie beneath the wooden cross in sunny France. Their place is vacant in the home, in the church, and in the community. We trust that a fitting part will be given in all memorial services to these young men who have sacrificed their lives for freedom's sake. But their grave is not in the home cemetery, and we cannot place on their resting place flowers, but there are other ways that we can show our appreciation and pay our tributes of respect. May no church fail in the highest tribute to these young men!

WHERE THE TROUBLE IS

For some time our good Baptist brethren have been pouring "hot shot" into the church union idea. The Bible Recorder, Raleigh, N. C., has had more or less to say about the uniting of churches, and a few weeks ago it carried a cartoon called the "Union Hen." The cartoonist spread before the eyes of the public a very large pile of eggs with each labeled showing what the result would be from union. The cartoonist had in mind this idea: That when churches united, it meant the breeding of more sects.

Mr. Gordon Poteat, a son of Dr. E. M. Poteat, the former President of Furman University, Greenville, S. C., writes an article for the Biblical Recorder, which, it seems to us, brings a strong indictment against his own denomination. The article speaks for itself and far better than we could state his position. We print it in full and would like very much for Editor Johnson of the Recorder to tell us how he can get around Mr. Poteat's position.

HOW TO OPPOSE THE UNION MOVEMENT

Gordon Poteat.

(Reprinted from the Biblical Recorder)

Southern Baptist papers have of late been full of articles and editorials on the Union Movement. These articles bespeak an agitation of mind because of a situation which seems fast getting beyond control, because what is being done is more or less in the dark and there is no way of resisting the hidden opponent. Some feel that the Movement is quite sinister; that its purpose is the disintegration and destruction of the Baptist denomination and the truth for which Baptists stand. As we have observed the Movement, however, its impetus has been directed rather to a task—which its leaders have conceived on broad lines—a conception which takes in the whole world, home and foreign. Baptists generally do not believe in their methods, and see in their effort to integrate without regard to the general belief of some bodies a danger something like that of Catholic ecclesiastical conformity. But, rather than setting their forces to overcome or overwhelm Baptist opposition, they are sweeping on to the accomplishment of the task they have set themselves, and are leaving us behind. In one article it is said that the movement "bears much resemblance to certain phases of politics, socialistic in spirit, which develop a type of thinkers and talkers who know how to do everything, from financing and running the Government down and out to all the small particulars of social life, but never do anything but talk!" Far from doing nothing but talk, they are acting in extensive and statesmanlike ways, whatever we may think of their ruling ideas.

May I give one or two illustrations from the mission field? We shall probably all agree that one of the most strategic places for mission work is in the capital of the nation. The Unionizers have combined in the capital of China, Peking, for a great Christian university, with the strength of several smaller faculties, Chinese and foreign, uniting in the one institution, and the various participating denominations combining financial resources to build a plant and run an institution in no sense inferior to the best American educational institutions. However we may dissent from their plan, as far as it might involve our interests, we cannot blink facts like these: (a) that the institution will include in its faculty some of the most able and well trained men in North China; (b) that its equipment will be standard and adequate, costing hundreds of thousands; (c) that it will be a model for the Chinese, and without a shadow of a doubt gain their respect and admiration and support. The same thing may be said of the new medical work in Peking, which by combination has made available large resources of men and modern equipment. Baptists have no work in the capital of China, nor in but one or two provincial capitals.

In contrast with the situation just pictured, much of our work is in out-of-the-way places, where we are little calculated to affect the life of the nation as a whole; though, of course, we shall do good in the various forms of service. As one who has visited already many of our nations in China, as one who believes deeply in the Baptist message and its adaptability for China and its assured welcome where it is widely proclaimed, I have to confess with shame the inadequacy of our program and our present contribution to the needs of China. Proud of our faith, we stand abashed because of our conspicuous lack of works. One of our most strategically located stations is the capital of Honan, the center of the government, educational and commercial life of thirty millions of people. An indescribable opportunity there, made possible by a location in the heart of the city far superior to all the other missions, and a present missionary force more numerous than the other missions, is discouraged and defeated by buildings not only greatly inferior to all the other missions, but to the neighboring Chinese buildings which border us on the street. Yet, appeals for equipment have resulted in nothing, so far, from the denomination—only a few personally solicited subscriptions secured by an interested mother's earnest effort, naturally far short of the amount necessary.

The shoe is on the other foot. It is we who are doing the talking; it is the Unionizers who are at their work. We talk of our great numbers, and boast that we are more numerous than any other denomination, but in comparison with their deeds we cannot claim a high place in the ranks. Our name is scarcely known in great sections of more or less evangelized territory in China. Others are producing already many trained leaders in their churches, while we are having difficulty in getting pastors or teachers for our most important places. Are we really serious in our mission as a denomination, after all? Can we play dog in the manger very long?

The only practical opposition to the ideas of the Union Movement is a revolution in our own ideas of our responsibility for mission work, an enlargement of our program, and an elevation of the standard of support ten to fifteen times as great as the present more or less insignificant million and a half from three million Baptists. Our articles of criticism of the Movement serve only to excite ourselves. They are read by almost no one else. We are spending our newspaper space talking of the danger of Unionism; they are raising their tens of millions to carry out their plans. Our talk is futile; their actions are sure of success. And the opportunities which we might well seize today will be gone from our hands soon, unless our Convention rises to totally new standards of giving.

Not every one who saith unto me, "Lord, Lord," shall enter the kingdom, but he who doeth the will of my Father.

CHANGE IN LUTHERAN PUBLICATIONS

The Lutheran of Philadelphia and The Lutheran Church Work and Observer, of Harrisburg, Pa., two very readable and well edited papers of the Lutheran denomination ceased their publication last week, and to take their place will be The Lutheran, published in Philadelphia. These two papers have been in existence for a number of years, but the recent uniting of three Synods of the Lutheran Church, brought about a new issue in that it needed only one publication and a stronger publication to circulate in its enlarged territory without competition. The Lutheran and The Lutheran Church Work and Observer have been welcome visitors to this office and we look forward to the arrival of the new Lutheran and shall welcome it to this sanctum.

We have praised the soldier for his work, and so now let us give him work at home. See that all discharged men in your community find employment.

Have you subscribed to the Elon Standardization Fund? Don't miss the opportunity of having a part in the work.

MISSIONARY

MESSENGERS OF MERCY

"And Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and tell John the things which ye heard and see: the blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, and the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them." (Matt 11:4, 5). These are the words Jesus chose to cheer a man in prison. And those who bore these words, and the faithful ones who go out into the world to hear them today to those who are in the prison of sin are veritable messengers of mercy.

The missionary challenge today is for messengers of mercy.

The missionary movement today means the sending out of messengers of mercy.

SOMETHING GREATER THAN DEMOCRACY

What a fight has been made, and what treasure has been poured out, that the world might be made safe for democracy. How many of our gallant sons went out from our homes and our churches to enlist in the army of their country to fight in that momentous cause?

But great as it is, there is something yet greater than democracy to fight for. I quote from Bishop Brent: "While ago the bugle called men to be led to lay down their lives in order that the world might be made safe for democracy. We counted democracy such a precious thing that we were led to give our lives for it. But there is something still greater than democracy to give life to. There is the Kingdom of God that must be spread throughout this world, and, until it covers the world as waters cover the sea, even a league of nations, however wisely organized, cannot hope to maintain stable and righteous peace. The missionary, the despised missionary, is the greatest candlestick of God in the whole world at this present time, as he has been in the past and must be in the future."

The army of missionaries out on the firing line is engaged in a war that means more for democracy, for righteousness, for peace in the world than any other army that ever engaged in battle. Other brave men and true, other noble women and faithful, are needed there.

Are we doing our part to send them out, and support them after they are sent out?

PLEASE DO NOT COME

"Please do not come here for the next two weeks. We like to have you come, but you see, the next two weeks is our special time for thriving and your message of Jesus creates in us a desire to be honest and righteous. If you continue to come we will not have the courage or desire to steal." This was the message of people in Ballia, India, sent to a Christian missionary. What a tribute to our Lord Christ and His message!

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

FAVORABLE RECEPTION

The members and friends of the East End Christian church, Newport News, Va., gave me a very cordial reception when I came to them as pastor on the twentieth of April. Due to the kind and generous reception which was given me I feel very much at home.

Easter Sunday the children of the Sunday school gave an excellent exercise which took the place of the morning service. That night I preached my first sermon to a large and appreciative audience.

This past Sunday morning the theme for discussion was, "The Great Commission," and at night, "St. Paul's Answer to the Commission." At both these services a good audience was in attendance and we had fine meetings.

The people of the church are very much interested in the work and a good work is being done by them for the cause of Christ in this part of the Kingdom. The prayers of all members of our denomination are asked in order that the pastor may faithfully and effectively serve this people.

POUNDED!

There is hardly a more pleasant little church to serve anywhere than Christian Light, and a few days ago they made it all the more pleasant by piling good things to eat all over my Ford. Sausage, eggs, cereals, canned stuff, etc., that were fit for the whole family young and old. It is hardly to be said that all the goodies were engaged by our little family.

But the most enjoyable thing about a pounding after all is not simply the eating, but the feeling of love and friendship which prompted the gifts.

May the heavenly Father, who is rich in mercy, repay a thousand fold, those whose hearts were so generous and make the receiver more worthy by every good word and work.

A VISIT TO MY CHILDHOOD NURSE

One beautiful morning in April, I passed over the busy highway of life through the most enchanting scenery, when spring was putting on her summer dress, and looking her best in decorated splendor. I was invited to visit the home of my dear old nurse, who lives at Story, on the Southern road in Southampton County, Virginia. She lived in my home and cared for me so tenderly when my life was new. She loved me very truly and I loved her so devotedly that time nor distance have not diminished my love for, and a deep interest in her. Her lovely white, wavy hair—bleached in spotless purity with drifting snows of ninety-six winters—looked extremely beautiful to me. She appeared like an angel, while her honest, sweet, pure, calm, face seemed to be resplendent with a heavenly smile. Her mind is clear and active and she talked with me so brightly about many things which occurred in my childhood days, until emotions too deep to tell, pervaded my whole being.

What momentous thoughts trembled in my heart as she so vividly and tenderly recounted the eternal past! My feelings at meeting her were mingled with both joy and sadness. So glad was I to meet her after a long separation. I was glad that the dear old Christian woman has lived so long and spent such a useful, Godly life. This in itself caused me to love her more and better. I was glad to be entertained so nicely and sumptuously in her quiet and pleasant home. Among the many pleasant visits to other homes, none of them surpassed the visit to this one. The sad part came when we thought of the fact that we two were the only ones left to tell the eventful story of a happy past. She and I are the only living ones of a large family. Father and mother, four brothers and two sisters are sleeping in the long dreamless night in old Virginia's soil. The silent echoes of their voices came whispering over the hills of time as we sat and talked together of their living, as we hoped, in a more beautiful and happy world. Her pure, true character is reflected as perfectly as a still, clear pond of water mirrors the flower that sleeps on its rim.

After spending a few days with this nurse of mine, the time came for us to part again. As I took her soft tender hand in mine, the other arm being entwined about my neck, she said in a sweet voice, "John, be a good boy and meet me in Heaven." I responded through tears with visible emotion, "We are both standing in the lonely glimmering twilight of the evening of life, awaiting and watching for the dawning of the morning, the cloudless morning of eternal day."

SACRIFICIAL SERVICE

Men judge by outward appearances; God by inward motives. Men often misjudge; God never. Bounties that men receive are often accepted as being in the natural course of things, while God knows that they come because of sacrificial service. Could men but realize the amount of sacrificial service done for their benefit they would be more appreciative. It is Christ's sacrifice that draws all men to Him. We Americans eat Chinese rice by the forkful or spoonful never thinking that some human sufferer picked that same rice grain by grain. We wear our nice clothes never dreaming that some poor boy or girl sacrificed an education and spent the very vitality of youth in manufacturing the goods; or for that, perhance, a widowed mother worked long, weary hours in a mill when health demanded that she be out doors and her children cried for her motherly care, yet she worked that we might enjoy the comforts. Sacrificial service is the highest form of human endeavor.

Not all heroic souls fought on Flander's field or in any part of the recent bloody conflict. (All glory to those who did!) There are in our midst women and men doing just as heroic tasks. I shall be pardoned for a personal reference, I am sure, for why should all the flowers be saved until one cannot see them?

We have all been delighted to know of the great and good work that has been done at the Christian Orphanage. It is a joy to know that the Institution is free from debt and the needed improvements are being made. Yet I dare say that but few know of the heroic sacrifice of our excellent Superintendent, Brother Chas. D. Johnston. He knows how to refuse other work that offers more money, fewer hours, less worry, and more time with his family and for personal enjoyment. Only a great heart could refuse. More than once he has done it. The Christian Church will never know how willingly and how freely this man of God has sacrificed all the things that men call dear in order that he might serve his Church and his God by being a father to the fatherless. In this sacrifice his good wife joined heartily up till the last day of her earthly life—her last provision being for the Orphanage.

As you have seen in THE SUN she gave $200, and out of his meager salary he gives $300 with it. This is not all these good people give by any means. This is a special free-will offering in order that the Orphanage may do a greater work, and it means sacrifice. Surely none of us will make a greater sacrifice than our Superintendent is doing. It is no easy matter for him to be away from his own motherless children all the day and travel twelve miles each day that he may be with them at night. The Christian Church should never allow any call from this man and this Institution to go unheeded.

Remember, fathers and mothers, that when you have given a dime or a dollar you have made no sacrifice. You still live with your darling babies and they have plenty. Think, will you, of other babies just as innocent and helpless as yours pleading for a home in our Orphanage where they may have bread to eat and clothes to wear. No less than twenty of them are now pleading for shelter. It is no fault of theirs that they are homeless. If the Church refuses them a home where shall they go? The answer is with you. Are you willing to sacrifice in order to serve?

EASTER SUNDAY

This is the day when the whole Christian world commemorates the resurrection of the Savior. It dates back to the earliest Christian times and is participated in by Greek and Roman, Catholic and Protestant. At first, there was much confusion as to the exact date. The Roman Emperor Constantine called the Council of Nice in 325 A. D. This body fixed upon the first Sunday after the full moon following the vernal equinox.

Many curious customs grew up with the observance, such as the lighting of great candles in the cathedrals of the old world. These were called paschal candles, and one in Durham, England, was with its candlestick, seventy feet high. Many of the old customs were done away with at the time of the reformation, but others, notably the part played by colored eggs, have survived.

The rolling of eggs on the White House lawn, by the children of Washington, is one of our American customs.

In this country too many make it an occasion for the display of new hats, toothpick heels, and fine clothing. Surely this is a curious way to commemorate the memory of Him who had no where to lay His head.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

ENCOURAGING REPORT

The response to the call for the Easter Offering has been beautiful. We just lack a small amount this week being two-thirds of the way to the goal. Eighty-nine churches have responded to the call. One hundred and thirty to hear from.

We trust that all will join in this great work and make this offering and mail it in. We are hoping to go over the top in this offering and go far enough to make the home for the little children look near in the future. We have received, some very encouraging letters in regard to the "Little Children's Home" and we feel sure our people will see that it is built in the near future. The good ladies have been very kind to us in responding to the call for sheets. The following have been sent in since our last report:

CHILDREN'S LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: Here is 50 cents for Easter, and 30 cents for March, April and May. I hope all the cousins got along fine Easter.—Mills Wellons Staylor.

You are a fine little boy, and pay for one month in advance.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I hope the cousins had a good time Easter. We had an Easter egg hunt. I found two eggs. We went about two miles out in the country and had to walk. We had some ice cream on the lawn of Mrs. Powell. Since we have been in Edenton we go to the Baptist church. There is not a Christian church in Edenton. Aren't we the only ones who take THE CHRISTIAN SUN here? Enclosed find 30 cents for March, April and May and 50 cents for Easter, even if it has already passed.—Willie Staylor.

Our little folks had an Easter egg hunt, too. One little girl found one dozen. She was an expert on finding, wasn't she?—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Since writing my last letter, we have moved to Asheboro. Uncle Charley, I have lots of dolls, and I love them all, but the one I love best is "George Henry." I would like to visit the Orphanage and see the cousins. I am sending my dues for April. Much love and best wishes.—Pauline Trotter.

You ought to have my little girl to play dolls with you. She is very fond of them.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I have not written you for the past two weeks. I have had pneumonia but am well to be up now, although not strong enough to go back to school. Enclosed find 50 cents for my dues. I hope you and the cousins are well.—Ethel Leigh Joyner.

Well Ethel, I am glad you are better and will soon be well again. Pneumonia is dangerous. I am always uneasy when any one has it, till they get better.—"Uncle Charley."

THE LITTLE COOK

By Florence Jones Hadley

Sometimes when mamma goes away
And leaves the work for me,
I quickly tidy all the house,
Then hurry to get tea.

I try and try so hard to think
Of something good to eat,
And everything that I like best
Somehow seems to be sweet.

I get some cookies and some tarts,
A cake all frosted white,
A jar of jam, a jelly mold,
Then tea is ready quite.

And when my papa hurries home
As hungry as can be,
He laughs and says he's very glad
He has a cook like me.

THE GOLDEN RULE OF OUT-OF-

There's a Golden Rule to govern our visits to the woods,
The pastures, fields and meadows of country neighborhoods

Where we go for flowers and berries and other treasures wild,

'Tis a rule that should be memorized and kept by every child.

The sign "No Trespassing" is placed for those who take no pains

To put up bars and fasten gates when leaving fields and lanes,

And for those who break the branches off and tear the fences down—

Who left their manners far behind when they tramped in from town.

The little signs along the road were also meant for those

Who "hook" the farmer's apples from beneath his very nose;

For those who tease his watch dog and rob the phoebe's nest;

Most farmers think such folks are worse than a caterpillar pest.

Should we be always welcome in the country, you and I Must never be ill-mannered to our hosts, and always try To keep Dame Nature's golden rule, which should be widely known—

Treat woods and field and all therein as if they were thine own.

—Annie Balcomb Wheeler, in Christian Work.

A TRUTHFUL BOY

How people do trust a truthful boy! We never worry about him when he is out of sight. We never say, "I wonder where he is; I wish I knew what he is doing." We know that he is all right, and that when he comes home we will know all about it and get it straight. We don't have to ask him where he is going, or how long he will be gone every time he leaves the house. We don't have to call him back and make him
"solemnly promise" the same thing over and over.
When he says, "Yes, I will," or "No, I won't," just once, that settles it.—Robert Burdette.

THE OTHER ROBIN

Montreal, as most people know, is blessed with long, cold winters. The snow covers the ground for about five months, while the thermometer is often down below zero. Consequently all the song-birds leave early in the autumn and do not return till toward the end of April or the beginning of May. Of course the English sparrow stays, for the sparrow can live, it seems, in any climate. The crow and the flicker also stay, but they cannot be classed as "song-birds."

This winter it was a surprise for one to see a robin feeding on the dried berries which still hang on the Virginia creeper which covers part of our house. We wondered at first what had kept him from flying off with all the other robins last October, at which time we often see large flocks making their annual migration South, but we soon found that one of his wings had been injured, and this had no doubt been the reason for his enforced stay.

He must have found some very warm shelter in which to spend the nights (and I assure you we have had one or two very cold ones), although the winter, on the whole, has been very mild—for Montreal. We could not but pity our robin, for we knew he must be very lonely, with only the sparrows, who are his "sworn enemies," for company. The robins and the sparrow, it is sad to relate, fight all summer long. One morning about Christmas-time we saw for the first time the injured robin's mate! The two were having a very substantial breakfast of berries. Since the return of the "other robin" we often see them feeding together.

Now the most interesting part of my story is the fact that the "other robin" came all the way back from the South. Heretofore we always thought that robins did not remain mated after the young birds had been fledged. We knew that the old nest was never reoccupied, and it seemed natural that a new mate might be chosen to make the new nest in the far South after the long flight. (Our robins never build a second nest in the season.) And then also, as the flocks going South number hundreds, it would seem likely that mates might get separated by miles and miles, and never find each other again. We know now, however, that robins remain mated, and we also know that mated robins will seek each other, even going hundreds of miles to do so.

At Christmas the long-separated one having appeared for the first time, I have no doubt that last October, when the time came for the long Southern journey, and hundreds of robins congregated, the "other robin" flew off with the great flock, and did not miss her mate till the end of the long journey had been reached. When she could not find her mate, she must have started North, probably flying over exactly the same ground, searching every corner, covering hundreds of miles. How far she flew may be roughly estimated by the time it took to get back here. It was about three months.—Lewis Skafje, in The Christian Register.

A Canadian named Casey was appointed to a government place. Technically it had to be held by a lawyer, which Casey was not. The benchers of the Law Society, however, undertook to obviate the technicality. "Well, Casey," said the examiner, "what do you know about law, anyway?" "To tell the truth," replied the candidate, "I don't know a single thing." The examiner reported in his affidavit "that he had examined Mr. Casey as to his knowledge of the law, and, to the best of his information and belief he had answered the questions that he had put to him correctly." The aspirant was admitted.—Law Notes.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND THE CALL OF THE MINISTRY*

Text: Study to show thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed rightly dividing the word of truth. II Tim. 2:15.

Our subject today, which is one that has been assigned for the occasion, is of a two-fold nature but I think that both phases of the subject have their basis in the words of our text.

When Paul said to Timothy, "Study to show thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," he proclaimed what is fundamentally the soundest principle of our present day system of education; that it should be God approved and therefore Christian in character.

When Paul said to Timothy that such a presentation before God was necessary for handling aright (R. V.) the word of truth he was explicitly stating the qualifications accompanying the call to the ministry. Timothy himself had heard the call to the ministry and had already been vested with its special prerogatives by the Apostle Paul.

At the time Timothy received these inspiring words from the Apostle, he was actively engaged in the ministry somewhere in the Northwestern part of Asia Minor while Paul was spending the last days of his final imprisonment in a Roman prison.

His friends were fast deserting him, and knowing the perilous times through which the church would have to pass because of persecution, the strange doctrines that would arise to deceive even the very elect, and momentarily expecting his fateful end, with the sword of the executioner almost ready to be unsheathed, he hastily dispatched this letter to Timothy, his son in the gospel, requesting him if possible to come shortly to him, but nevertheless "to hold fast the form of sound words," "to be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus," "to suffer hardship with me as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," and finally in the words of our text the Apostle as a last counsel to his faithful friend if he could not come to him, exhorts Timothy to equip himself for the great work that was before him by giving "diligence to present thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed handling aright the word of truth." (R. V.)

He made it plain to Timothy that it was not the work of the minister to strive or be contentious, but to be apt to teach and patient; in meekness correcting those who were of an opposite opinion.

I submit to you brethren, that herein do we have set up a splendid standard of preparation for the gospel ministry. It could well be translated into what we today are pleased to call our standard of Christian Education.

If a Christian Education may justly be required in preparation for the gospel ministry, and since a considerable portion of the period of preparation is the same for all professions as for the ministry then the logical inference is that the best kind of preparation with which the youth of our country should be equipped for whatever calling in life, is a Christian Education.

Among the many institutions of learning the college may be said to be the chief exponent of Christian Education. Aside from the home it is a college life that Christian character gets its greatest pronouncement.

If the College is the soul of the American nation as the Catherine of Siena, whatever her sufferings, was always jocund, "ever laughing in the Lord." The blind Madame du Deffand rejoiced that her affliction was not rheumatism; Spurgeon's receipt for contentment was never to chew pills, but to swallow the disagreeable and have done with it; Darwin's comfort was that he had never consciously done anything to gain applause; and Jeerson never ceased affirming his belief in the satisfying powers of common day light, common pleasures, and all the common relation of life. Essipoff, when commiserated on the smallness of her hands, insisted that longer ones would be cumbersome. Robert Schaufler's specific for a blue Monday is to whistle all the Brahms tunes he can remember. Dr. Cuyler, when very ill, replied to a relative's suggestion of the glorious company waiting him above: "I've got all eternity to visit with those old fellows; I am in no hurry to go;" and old Aunt Mandy, when asked why she was so constantly cheerful, replied, "Lor', chile, I jes' wear this world like a loose garment."—Lucy Elliot Keeler.

ENVIRONMENT

God puts His own with the people who and in the place which will tend most to develop the spiritual graces.

He puts one who is quick with one who is slow, and one who is quiet with one who is talkative; that the one who is quiet may be patient with the one who is talkative.

He puts one who is orderly with one who is untidy, that both may learn lessons. Often our environment is but an answer to our prayers.

We pray for patience, and God sends those who tax us to the utmost; for "tribulation worketh patience" (Rom. 5:3).

We pray for submission, and God sends suffering, for we learn obedience by the things we suffer. (Heb. 5:8).

We pray for unselfishness, and God gives opportunities to sacrifice ourselves by thinking on the "things of others" (Phil. 2:4).

We pray for victory, and the things of the world sweep down upon us in a storm of temptation; for "this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith" (1 John 5:4; 4:4).

We pray for humility and strength, and some messenger of Satan torments us until we lie in the dust, crying to God for its removal (2 Cor. 12:7, 8).

We pray for union with Jesus, and God severs natural ties and lets our best friends misunderstand or become indifferent to us (John 15:2).

We pray for more love and God sends peculiar suffering, and puts us with apparently unlovely persons and lets them say things to rasp nerves, lacerate the heart, and sting the conscience; for "love suffers long and is kind; love is not impolite, love is not provoked, love bears, love believes, hopes, and endures; love never faileth" (1 Cor. 13:4-8; John 15:9, 10).

We ask to follow Jesus, and He separates us from home and hindred, for He himself said: "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be My disciple" (Luke 14:33).

We pray for the Lamb life, and are given a portion of lowly service, or we are injured and must seek no redress; for He was led as a lamb to the slaughter, and opened not His mouth (Isa. 53:7).

We pray for gentleness and there comes a perfect storm of temptation to yield to harshness and irritability.

We pray for quietness, and everything within and around is confusion, that we may learn when He giveth quietness no one can make trouble (Job 24:29).—Miss Hulda Stumpf, Kijabe, B. E. A., in "Africa Inland Mission."

OVERLOOKED RICHES

But in spite of God's continual revelation in star and ower, in conscience and human love, we have struggled in the dark. Insufficient the wisdom of Plato, the art of Phidias, the genius of Homer! After centuries of research humanity bowed to "the unknown God." Insufficient, too, our own philosophy, with its Kants and Schopenhauers, its Ibsens and Omar Khayyams! So thickly our souls are enusted in sin! So utterly blinded our vision!

What else is there that God might do to make Himself known? The voice of mountain and sea and sky has left no echo in our hearts. Even conscience speaks with stammering lips. On the height of the centuries stands that master of scientists, Du Bois Reymond, repeating in his own words the confession of Pilate, "We know nothing and we shall know nothing."

Clearly there is but one thing left. God may descend from His height into our depth. He may become one of us. He may assume a human voice. He may live among us and speak with our own tongue.—Andrew Bard.

THE WALLS ARE BREAKING DOWN

If one doubts that the walls around ancient China are not breaking down, read this: "Three thousand big bricks from the Wall around the forbidden city of Chington, West China, have been contributed by the Government for the foundation of a Methodist church in the city."

NOTES

Rev. J. V. Knight writes that the Greensboro church is experiencing a great meeting.

Mr. Z. H. Cotner, Clemmons, N. C., a dear friend of THE SUN, was a caller at THE SUN office last Monday.

Rev. W. B. Fuller has been discharged from the Y. M. C. A. work and is now at his home near Henderson, N. C.

Rev. E. M. Carter has helped us to increase THE SUN's circulation and financial budget during the past few days. Thanks!

We are grateful to the many kind friends who are responding to our call that their subscriptions be paid now so as to help us during the summer months. Many thanks, dear friends.

Rev. J. E. Franks, Cary, N. C., does not cease his work for THE SUN when a campaign is over. He just keeps on sending us new subscribers and renewals. Last year we called on Brother Franks to tell us how he did all of this but he never answered directly, but a few days after we wrote him, he sent us another list. If he does not have any patent on the principle we will appreciate it if he will tell the brethren how he does it.

We have received the following communication from Dr. P. H. Fleming written from Conneaut, Ohio: "Please announce in THE SUN that there will be all day services at Union on the second Sunday in May. Preaching at 11 A. M., and also at 2 P. M. There will be quarterly meeting at 2 P. M. on Saturday before. The Deacons are called to meet in the church at 1:30 P. M., (Saturday). The Lord's Supper will be administered at the close of the morning service Sunday. Two visiting ministers are expected to be with us."

Just as we go to press, we are in receipt of three copies of The Conneaut News Herald giving splendid write-ups concerning the American Christian Convention. The papers received are dated April 28, 29, 30 and May 1. They do not contain any definite accounts of the Convention, and so we have no special news for our constituency this week from the Convention.

There is to be a lecture in the city auditorium at Raleigh Monday night, May 12, in which all CHRISTIAN SUN readers will be interested and which they will do well to attend, if possible. This lecture will be "The Life Story of Gypsy Smith," as told by his son and will be given under the auspices of the Raleigh church. This lecture will not only tell the inspiring story of the life of that great evangelist, Gypsy Smith, but it will also tell about many of the customs and ideals of the Gypsy race. Admission will be free.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

(Rev. Warren H. Denison, D. D., Superintendent)

Splendid Easter Results

A splendid harvest seems to have been reaped in all sections of our Brotherhood and the Forward Movement rejoices to hear the first reports of the Easter ingathering and they come from every section. The Forward Movement is laying much emphasis upon its evangelistic program, and we are expecting all our churches to lay much emphasis upon an all-the-year evangelistic spirit. Easter, we hope, was only the first fruits of a new and enlarged evangelistic effort to reach the 50,000 set as our Forward Movement goal to be added to the churches.

If your church has not yet appointed a four-minute man, please attend to the matter very soon and report the name and address to the Forward Movement headquarters, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. This four-minute man will be able to render large service to your church and to the Forward Movement.

Did you get a letter from this office last week calling attention to our needs for the summer? Let us hear from you if you did.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

late Professor Munsterberg of Harvard has said it must be because that here Christian Character is not only fostered, but encouraged and made to function in all student activities.

The test for the continued existence of all college activities is: are they productive of the elements of Christian character? If not, such activities find but little place in the student life in college.

The first requisite of a Christian college is that its faculty be not only well trained for their respective duties but that the personnel of that faculty shall be distinctively Christian in character.

It is a Christian teaching force that gives the first tinges of Christian color to college life. This is supplemented by the additional hues of a Christian student body and the result is a beautiful reflection of the life of the Great Master Teacher of us all.

Under such environment and in such an atmosphere college is a safe place to send our boys and girls for the development and training of their powers and faculties.

One who is just trained to think and act without regard to a proper direction of his thinking and acting is a dangerous person to society. There are many such persons now, who instead of going by name, go by number in some of our State institutions.

To get a one sided education may be to get a dangerous thing. The danger, however, is not so much in the getting as in the forgetting. To forget God; to forget the deeper things of the spiritual life; to fail to get the understanding heart in the process of getting an education, is what the wise man pronounced "vanity of vanities."

Solomon tried his wisdom without God; he sought every human pleasure and folly that was under the sun and when he had tried all he summed it up in these words: "All was vanity and a vexation of spirit. "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter, fear God and keep his commandments for this is the whole duty of man."

A Christian education will bring one to this same conclusion without the marks of a prodigal life. It prepares the individual not only to face his task but to face the environment surrounding his task. Many a person has succeeded at his task but went down to defeat before the evils of his environment.

Education prepares one for his task. Christian education prepares him for a life.

Education is no mystical process; it is simply the unfolding of the possibilities of life as a scroll.

Religion is a part of life and Christian character is the vital product of religion. If, therefore, Christian character is not shown on the unfolded scroll of life, that education was incomplete, onesided and will be barren of the best and most permanent results.

Christian education is obtained in the institutions where Christ is in the curriculum and where Christian character is held in par excellence with the best that the institution has to offer.

I am glad that we have an institution of our own in our midst that emphasizes just such preparation for a life work.

Elon College has done and is still doing a work in the Southland that is having its telling effect in the churches perhaps as no where else. A large number of the churches of the Southern Christian Convention are now being served by her graduates, or men who have received Christian training within her walls; and her ambitions are far beyond present attainments.

But Elon's future is now in the crucible. Shall she take her rightful place among the standardized colleges of the land and thus maintain the splendid standard of work she has already been doing, as well as her bright and hopeful future. Whether she shall enjoy this splendid prestige all depends upon whether Elon's friends are her friends in time of need. The standardization fund of $125,000 must be met and it will be met.

Elon's friends will not see her lose her rank and place among the colleges of the country and ultimately her student body, when the raising of the above sum will insure her future.

The Southern Christian Convention has issued the call for twenty recruits for the ministry, annually, for the next five years, and Elon's share in this work is not only to furnish her quota, but to provide Christian training for these recruits.

Shall we not earnestly pray that the Lord shall move upon the hearts of at least twenty of the best young men of our churches to answer this great and important summons this year?

It seems to me that no church has risen to its highest duty until it has furnished at least one recruit for the gospel ministry.

Must we continue to look to the little old church in the wildwood for recruits to the ministry? I know that upholstered pews and stained glass windows do not produce preachers, but a Christian atmosphere, and prayer and Christian admision from parents and friends and pastors does create a productive environment for the recruiting of the ministry.

If the home and school and the church were sufficiently permeated by the spirit of the Master, the ministry and other Christian callings would not go wanting for recruits.

Young men and women have no right to discriminate against the call to definite Christian work, without giving it any consideration, just because the call to the commercial life may permit of more luxury, more salary, a looser life religiously. Perhaps due consideration of the work of the ministry or other Christian work may be all that is necessary to show the need and to prepare the heart to hear that still small voice calling to this particular work.

I think that God would be greatly pleased if more young men of the surrendered life type, would offer their services to Him in the gospel ministry instead of waiting for some voice to speak to them, or some peculiar demonstration of power to come over them.

Let there first be the surrendered life, a consciousness of the need, a fitness for the work, and a willingness to go, and surely the Lord will bid you enter in.

*A sermon preached by Rev. W. M. Jay, Holland, Va.

TWICE FIVE TRIUMPHS

The old Roman generals used to affix to their names the number of times they had marched in regal procession over the broken walls of the city of Rome. They called these processions triumphs. A general could triumph in Rome only after he had won victory elsewhere. To show her great confidence in her conquering hero's ability to preserve her at any cost, Rome would tear down her own protecting wall to let him ride in.

No such triumph as this are those to which reference is here made. We are getting away, forever I hope, from the celebration of one nation's victory over another. I write now of the triumph of generosity over self-interest, of the upward and outward look for Christian workers, and of a new day just dawning. Twice five triumphs the Lord has granted us this week, and two preachers wear smiles that will not come off, since they irradiate from happy souls within.

On last Saturday I landed in Waverly, Va., and was greeted by Rev. Jas. L. Foster, the ministerial outpost westward of the Eastern Virginia Conference, a sentryman worth while, believe me. That afternoon and Sunday morning Barrett's church, by the generosity of a promising group of her younger men and devout women not a few, went on the map. Sunday afternoon old Spring Hill, one of the landmarks of Christian history, a tower of strength even now in her old age, went the second mile. Monday Centerville executed the same rare, no prevailing, stunt for the Kingdom, and Waverly gave more than four times her quota, and is not done yet, thus taking her place with Elon and Pleasant Grove by achieving three stars on her recognition card. Uncle Jim was a whole menagerie of smiles, a full nursery of blossoming loveliness. His rainbow countenance was something to behold when the grand climax was reached.

To Raleigh next the journey lay. At mid-week prayer meeting Pastor Eastes presented me to a fine body of the Lord's elect. The next day we went at it, rain to the contrary notwithstanding. Here again a group of young men put the thing across, and what the wise ones said was impossible is a sweet achievement. Raleigh is on the map, and Brother Eastes, the proud father of a fine son, is the pastor of a people who have lifted up their eyes from the hard grind of a severe local struggle to see the stars of the Kingdom's glory and to discover that it is good, blessed, more blessed to give than to receive. Keep your eye on Raleigh. Her young men have seen visions, and Raleigh is destined not only to become self-supporting, but to do large things for others these days ahead.

Five More Funds

Brother J. D. Gray, Waverly, Va., this week gave $5,000. He is number 16, sweet sixteen, in this galaxy of the great-souled of our Church in this new time.

Also at Waverly, Brother J. W. West founded a fund of $1,000. Judge J. F. West, member of Elon's Provisional Board of Trustees, did the same, and Rev. Jas. L. Foster likewise in loving memory of his sainted parents, Deacon James Henderson and Lucinda Fitch Foster.

At Raleigh, Brother P. T. Hines, in his twenty-fourth year, the youngest man yet to do so, gave $1,000 in memory of his father, Deacon E. D. Hines. Brother Hines is a tither, but to make this large gift he had to add to his tithe "an offering to the Lord." He is learning the blessing of the second mile personally. God multiply his kind.

And so this week I have had twice five triumphs. Five churches have gone over the top and five noble souls, the Lord's anointed for this good time, have founded funds for the Kingdom's advance in our Brotherhood. Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

Such are the salt of the earth. Such are the light of the world.

I like these Christian triumphs better than those of the Roman conquerors. Don't you?

Pray that God may continue to own and bless His work and this cause.

W. A. HARPER.

MORE TRIUMPHS YET

I reached home Friday night and found three more triumphs in store.

Deacon W. W. Tuck, Virgilina, upon the solicitation of Dr. W. C. Wicker, had founded a fund of $1,000.

Brother J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va., had sent in $1,000 to found the L. H. Whitley Fund, Brother Whitley being one of Elon's noblest friends and father-in-law of Brother Darden.

Brother B. W. Card, Raleigh, upon the solicitation of Pastor Eastes, had founded a fund of $1,100 in memory of his sainted mother, whose sweet life he thus perpetuates in a tender manner.

And so the cause of our Master continues to triumph. To Him be the praise and thanks.

GLEANINGS FROM THE SECULAR WORLD

The German delegation to the peace conference arrived last week. The speaker of the delegation was soon overcome by emotion and the first session of the meeting with the peace council lasted only five minutes.

Last week there was unearthed in New York a plot that was scheduled to kill a number of prominent citizens. Sixteen bombs found securely wrapped and mailed to prominent people in the various parts of the country. One of the bombs was addressed to Senator Lee S. Overman at his home in Salisbury, N. C.

Three giant hydroplanes of the American Navy started a flight across the Atlantic last week.

Americans seem to object to the International Court to try the ex-Kaiser. The American delegates are unwilling to punish the Kaiser if he did not order atrocities. Others were implicated with him, it seems.

The Belgian Government seems somewhat dissatisfied with the peace terms offered it.

Secretary Daniels, who is now in Europe, is expected to sail on next week.

Parts of California suffered an earthquake last week.

Repeating the Lord's Prayer is not living it. It is not enough to repeat it.

If you attend the American Christian Convention, let THE SUN have a note from your pen.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 18

The Grace of God.—Gen. 6:8; Ex. 34:6-7; II Cor. 12:9; Eph. 2:4-10; Titus 2:11-14.

Golden Text: We shall be saved through the grace of the Lord Jesus.—Acts 15:11.

Devotional Reading: Ps. 32:1-11.

Thought for Teachers

God's grace is a sufficient grace. He supplies all our needs. How? Not out of his riches; nor even according to my needs or my petitions, but according to His riches in glory through Christ Jesus our Lord. Can you measure the riches of God? Then you can measure His grace.

He kept Noah from the flood of waters; He kept Lot from the flood of fire; He kept Abram from being overwhelmed by a goddess generation in Ur. Is He less able to keep you today in the flood of worldliness? But you say your faith is and you are not able to lay hold on Him? Thank God, you don't have to lay hold. His strength is made perfect in weakness for as long as you trust in yourself, you don't trust Him entirely. Don't try to hang on to God; let God hang on to you. Underneath are the everlasting arms. "Just let go, and—let God."

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 18

Life, the School of God and its Lessons.—Ps. 119:1-8; 33-40.

What do you learn in school? Well, the three "R's" must be learned in the very first grades. Reading! Have you learned to read intelligently? "Understandest thou what thou readest?" Do you study a lesson every day until you can spell your way through the Book? Or do you take a lesson once a week—or less often—and then cry because it is hard? Writing! No other tablet in the world like the human heart. You can write on it over and over and across and across, and all that you write is graven there for eternity. Have you learned to form your letters with care? Are you writing what you will enjoy in reading? Arithmetic! Can you count with but one figure? The first lesson in Arithmetic is Addition. Do you think God's arithmetic is any different? His first lesson is addition—"Add to your faith," and "come with me." I may be only a cipher but if I put one in front of me, and follow Him, I am ten, but if He is before me, I am going somewhere, *some*way. He never said "I am with you, to the stay-at-home in heart and body. (Matt. 28:19-20.) But if I go, I am out of the primer Class, for I am learning History "Thus far the Lord hath led us on," and Geography "all the world," and Grammar "speak forth the words of truth and soberness and some day I shall graduate, and receive the laurel wreath which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give to me at that day, and not to me only but to all those who love His appearing."

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

THE LIST INCREASES

Continued reports from our Sunday schools are exceedingly encouraging. They show that the schools want to grow and go forward. Marion Lawrance points out the fact to our consternation that the Sunday school has been losing out very rapidly the past year or two, and that during the same time juvenile crime has been on the increase. He says if the Sunday school continues to lose in the next decade as it has the past two years, it will be extricated as an institution. The plain remedy is that the Sunday school must get to doing things for others. If the school just lives for itself, it has no right to live and no claim to life. It may be selfish, as well as the individual may be. Why not seek to get out of the old idea of living for self, just going on in the same old way, and begin to think, study, teach and do for others? The Sunday school has fallen into a groove, into a well-worn rut. It needs to fall in with the spirit of this new time, and do something outside its own for the salvation of this wicked and sin-cursed world.

If any school thinks it cannot yet spare the offering of once per month to help reach and save the world, why not spend some time once per month at least in trying to find out the distress, the misery, the poverty, the want, the need of the two-thirds of the human family today who are without the Gospel and without hope either in this world, or in that to come? Why not let the Sunday school understand that two out of the three infants born into this world look up into the faces of mothers who can never tell them anything about the blessed Christ, because those mothers themselves never heard that Name which is above every name and the One whereby we must be saved, if we are saved? If children in the Sunday school can learn such facts as these they will have pity, even if the grown-ups will not.

KINDERGARTEN HELPS FOR PARENT

By Mary E. Dozier

A child of four years who was in the habit of pinching her neighbors, was asked by her kindergarten teacher: "Would you like to have Alice pinch you?" "No," "She doesn't like it either, Dorothy, and will not care to sit by you if you continue."

But the talk did no good, for the little tot went on repeating her offense. Then the teacher quietly took her handkerchief and, wrapping it around the offending member, said: "Suppose we cover up this little hand, and not let it be seen until it can remember not to pinch."

After a few minutes the child came over to the teacher to say that the hand could take care of itself now. Smilingly the teacher unwrapped it and said: "I am so glad."

A mother for a similar offense, was seen to slap her child's hand and jerk his arm. Which do you think the better method to follow?

In a kindergarten room of forty children, the story hour was in progress. The room was small, hence the attention of all was a necessity. Two boys, half listening, half playing, were continually rocking their chairs. The teacher's efforts to gain their complete attention proved fruitless. She stopped long enough to say: "Those who cannot sit quietly on their chairs must sit on the floor." One of the boys immediately gave perfect attention, but the other continued his noise. When the teacher reached over to take his chair, he resisted, then went off by himself in a distant corner.

Knowing the disposition of the boy, the teacher let the matter pass until the next day when he asked for some work which he specially liked to do. She replied: "I will be glad to let you have it John, after you have obeyed about sitting on the floor."

For three days the boy rebelled, and for three days this teacher of forty children did not forget the individual problem, refusing all of John's requests for the things he desired—always, however, in a pleasant manner.

The fourth day a dramatized story was on the program and the boy longed to be "the old troll." "May I be?" in his enthusiasm he asked. "I am sure you would make a fine troll if you would first obey your teacher." He looked at her, smiled and slid down onto the floor.

Too much attention devoted to such a simple act? Not when a child learns thereby that disobedience is not worth the price of forfeited companionship, and that to be an active and desired member of the school group he must comply with its necessary laws.

In some cases a child may be talked with and his sense of honor and dependableness aroused, while another child for the same offense must be dealt with more severely to awaken him to better action.

Study the nature of the child with whom you have to deal, and although it may take many months of patient study, and perhaps much experimenting, work out the best approach for a permanent lesson with him.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT— JOHNSTON

Whereas, Mrs. Charles D. Johnston, one of our best loved members departed this life on April 11, 1919, for an eternal and celestial home with her Heavenly Father. Be it Resolved:

That she had dedicated her life to the extension of the Kingdom of God on earth, so may we more fully dedicate our powers of body and mind to the same purpose;

That we extend to her bereaved husband and children our deepest sympathy, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun and Alamance Gleaner for publication, and a copy be sent to her husband and children and that a copy be spread upon our minutes.

ROGERS

Joseph Braxton Rogers was born January 9, 1859, and died Saturday, April 19, 1919. He was buried Sunday afternoon at Long's Chapel Christian church of which he was a member and a deacon. The funeral was conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. L. I. Cox.

Brother Rogers was married to Miss Jennie Allen November 9, 1888. She died February 11, 1902. Four children, one brother and two sisters survive him. He joined the church at Long's Chapel January 5, 1890, and was elected deacon May 6, 1911. A good man is gone. The church will miss him.

May God bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

CHRISMON

Miss Mamie Chrismon passed to her reward on Saturday evening, March 29, 1919, after a short period of serious illness. She had been a sufferer from tuberculosis for several years and spent a few months at the State Sanatorium where she apparently improved and looked well until a few days before her death. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. W. Overby, a Baptist minister, at Apple's Chapel where she was a member. The family could not secure a Christian minister to assist. A large concourse of people gathered to pay their tribute of respect to the deceased. One brother is in France in the service of our country. May God bless and comfort the bereaved.

CARR

Little Johnnie Carr died at his home at New Hill, N. C., April 19, 1919, aged thirteen years and one month. He was the son of Fen and Mary Carr. He is survived by two brothers and two sisters: George Fen, Edwards, Eula and Janice Carr. Burial was at New Elam Christian church, conducted by Rev. J. E. Franks.

Johnnie was a good boy and loved by all who knew him. His health began to fail about five years ago, but he never complained. We can never know the suffering that he bore, but we feel that his suffering is over and now he is singing with the angels, awaiting and watching for his dear ones to come. May the Lord bless and comfort the dear family in their sad bereavement.

A FRIEND.

TATUM

Harvey F. Tatum, youngest son of Allen and Mary Elizabeth Tatum (deceased) was born February 2, 1896 in Sussex County, Virginia, and united with Centerville Christian church August, 1915. He volunteered in the United States army May 14, 1917, in Company B, 4 Infantry, Newport News, Va. In September, 1917, he was sent to Camp McClellan, Aniston, Ala., for further training.

He was sent overseas June 15, 1918, for active service. He was immediately put into active service, and followed closely in battle, and was killed in action about November 2, 1918, in Company E. 116 Infantry, 29 Division.

The family have been unable to get full details of the death of this splendid soldier. He was a popular young man in his community and had bright future before him. He gave all for humanity. May God bless the memory of so splendid a sacrifice as was his.

MOTHERS' DAY

NEXT SUNDAY

is Mothers' Day—ah, all days are theirs! Why just one day? But this is a particular day on which we make amends for all the days that we have failed to think of them. MOTHERS' DAY—beautiful thought. All of us know what it means, even those who know not the love of mother, for they, most of all, miss her.

THERE IS ANOTHER MOTHER

but she cannot speak, and yet she speaks; she cannot sing and yet she sings; she cannot walk, and yet she walks; she cannot love, and yet she loves; she cannot call her children to her, and yet they come. She is a mother made of earth and stone and personalities. She is to use part of a song that her every child can sing with the familiarity of "My Country 'Tis of Thee." This Elon College is the mother who speaks through others, who sings through others, and who is the foster mother of a large family that calls her blessed.

"ELON, DEAR ELON"

LIFE

seems to even things up. When you were helpless she took care of you; now you should take care of her. She was patient with you; now you have an opportunity of showing your appreciation. She fed you mentally; it is your privilege to now feed her financially. You were re-born of her intellectual life—a thing that you cannot lose. She watched you while you grew into a capable man or woman. It is your privilege to now help her to continue that watch. She is watching on the Rhine—and everywhere. Beautiful mother, faithful, patient, GOOD, ready, willing, anxious.

HER FINANCIAL CALL

is challenging every soul that ever came under her watch-care. Today is a day of appreciation of what she has done for us, fellow former students.

THE AMERICAN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION

(Abstracts taken from the Conneaut, Ohio, News-Herald)

April 28

The First Christian church of this city, Conneaut's oldest church and the church having the largest membership in the Erie Christian Conference, will be the scene of this year's American Christian Convention. The opening date of the Convention is tomorrow afternoon. Thereafter three sessions daily will be held until next Tuesday, May 6. The Convention was brought to Conneaut for October 15-22, 1918, but was twice postponed and then called off until this spring because of influenza regulations.

April 29

M. R. Smith, mayor of Conneaut, today issued the following message, welcoming to Conneaut on behalf of the administration the 400 delegates of the American Christian Convention:

"As mayor of the city of Conneaut, I wish to extend to the delegates of the American Christian Convention the welcome which I am sure the whole community accords and which I believe our visitors will feel ere their departure.

"It is indeed unusual that a city of the size of ours finds itself host to the distinguished assemblage of men and women who are now our guests. In full realization of this and trusting it may not be regretted our city was chosen for this honor, we bid our guests a sincere welcome from the depths of our hearts.

"M. R. SMITH, Mayor."

Scores of delegates have been arriving hourly since Sunday from all parts of the country to attend the big American Christian Convention which opened in the First Christian church of this city at two o'clock this afternoon.

This afternoon's session will be chiefly a business affair taken up for the most part with appointments of committees and presentation of reports. The time up until the opening of the afternoon session was spent in getting acquainted and learning the location of various departmental headquarters, etc.

Tonight Rev. F. G. Coffin, of Albany, N. Y., president of the Convention, will give his message. An address will also be given tonight by Rev. Warren H. Denison, of Dayton, superintendent of the famous Forward Movement.

The Chamber of Commerce at its meeting last night passed a resolution extending a welcome to the American Christian Convention and offering the services of the Chamber in any way they might be acceptable to the Convention. The Chamber offered, if it may be arranged, to conduct an automobile tour for the delegates during their sojourn in the city.

President Dunn was named chairman of a committee of five members he was asked to select to carry out the plans of the Chamber. The committee includes Charles Marey, Wm. Fortune, M. R. Smith, G. M. Whitney and C. L. Whitney.

April 30

The fourth session of the American Christian Convention was in session here this afternoon and owing to radical changes made in the previously arranged program some of the most important business of the entire Convention, in fact business characterized by one delegate as "the most important in our church history if we adopt it" was under consideration.

May 1

With over three hundred delegates now in attendance the sessions of the American Christian Convention are already beyond expectancy in the enthusiasm, interest and importance. Two of the most instructive and most entertaining addresses Conneaut has been privileged to hear were given at the sessions yesterday afternoon and evening.

May 2

Three more sessions of the Christian Convention, attended by about three hundred delegates, were held Thursday afternoon and evening and this morning. The tour of the city conducted by the Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday afternoon and attended by practically all the delegates. Several more interesting addresses and many important reports were made with committee sessions continuing. The committee on nominations is to report late this afternoon and election of officers is to be held.

Thursday afternoon the Christian Publishing Association was in session. The Board of Trustees of the Association reported through its Secretary, which was followed by reports of the editors of the various publications issued by the Association.

Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., editor of the Herald of Gospel Liberty, the oldest religious newspaper in the county, devoted himself to a statement of his editorial ideals and the general conditions affecting religious journalism in the country.

Rev. S. Q. Helfenstein, D. D., editor of all the Sunday school papers and quarterlies of the denomination (except the Teachers' and Officers' Journal) reported in similar vein concerning his work, and behalf of the Armenian and Syrian refugees.

Mr. Netum Rathbun, popular Manager of the Association's publishing house and business located in Dayton, Ohio, was called to the platform for a short speech.

Rev. Martyn Summerbell, D. D., Lakemont, N. Y., conducted a memorial service for ministers who have fallen by death during the past four years. Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Suffolk, Va., offered prayer. Dr. Summerbell then read a long list of deaths and commented on the note-worthy lives of several of these men, including Revs. C. H. Hainer of Ontario; O. J. Hancock, of Maine; A. W. Lightbourne, of Delaware; H. J. Rhodes, of New York; G. D. Lawrence, of Illinois; Henry Brown, of New York; Albert Dunlap, of Ohio; N. Del McReynolds, of Ohio; P. W. McReynolds, of Ohio; David E. Millard, of Michigan; Elisha Mudge, of Michigan; R. O. Allen, of New York; S. S. Newhouse, of Ohio; John Blood, of New Jersey.

The Convention then adjourned for the auto ride to the harbor, generously provided by the Conneaut Chamber of Commerce.

May 3—An Appreciation

The News-Herald today received from the American Christian Convention in session in the First Christian church of this city a resolution of appreciation for the efforts of the paper to give publicity through its news columns to the events of the Convention. The resolution follows:

"The American Christian Convention wishes to express by resolution its grateful appreciation of the fine courtesies which have been extended to it by the Conneaut News-Herald.

"At no other Convention in many years has any paper been so generous in the space given to our publicity, and so anxious to print in full all matter which our reportorial committee has prepared for it. Its editors have been anxious to do everything possible to serve us and have admirably succeeded in doing so. We wish to express our thanks for the splendid service which they have rendered us.

"The Convention votes that in connection with the efforts of the Conneaut News-Herald to give our Convention due recognition, we should also record the untiring efforts of the chairman of the reportorial committee of this Convention, Rev. Alva Martin Kerr, who personally wrote a large part of the copy for the press."

Eminently satisfied with the achievements of their seven days' stay in this city, members of the Christian Convention left last night and today for their homes or for the Inter-Church World meeting in Cleveland, after having concluded the quadrennial church session here.

The church board of polity, a new institution in the church, will be formed at a meeting of the various department boards to be held in Dayton, May 27. This is following up a decision made on the floor of the Convention just closed to have a board to decide matters of polity in the future and carry out the program of the Convention so that resolutions and movements brought up might not die with the Convention.

EDITORIAL NOTE

THE SUN'S Editor was deprived of the privilege of attending the American Convention. The foregoing is the best information that we have at this time as to the work of the Convention. Readers will note that little is said as to the actual happenings of the Convention as to plans and policies, but presume that we will be furnished this for publication at later date.

GREAT COMMENCEMENT PLAN FOR ELON

The Elon College commencements have become gala occasions in Alamance County history each year, and the approaching commencement, which begins on Sunday, May 18, and continues through Tuesday the 20th, promises to surpass its predecessors in items of general interest to our people. It is the purpose of the College always to adhere to the spirit of the times and this thought has been kept in mind in the present program. The people of Alamance and Guilford Counties will recall the great event of the closing day of the 1918 commencement when after a splendid address by Governor Bickett the giant service flag of the College, representing the hundreds of Elon men who had gone into the service, was unfurled amid thunderous applause. That was a dramatic moment in the history of Alamance County. This year it is highly appropriate that the College should observe memorial exercises for its sons who have fallen in the cause of human freedom. It is appropriate also that the orator of this occasion should be Col. Albert Cox of the 113th Artillery, a unit of the 30th Division which broke the famous Hindenburg line. Col. Cox was an outstanding lawyer of the North Carolina Bar before he entered the service of his country and he may be depended upon to speak forth words of soberness and inspiration when on May 20 at 2:00 o'clock in the afternoon he is to speak to the leading citizens of this county and of Guilford County in a memorial celebration, which we have said is so highly appropriate for the College to observe at its present commencement.

Hon. E. S. Parker is to preside at this celebration, and will introduce Col. Cox.

The Commencement will begin on Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock when the baccalaureate sermon is to be given by Rev. Peter Ainslie of Baltimore. Dr. Ainslie is one of the first men in the American pulpit today. He has constructed a magnificent piece of Christian statesmanship during his thirty-five years of service in Baltimore. The theme that is nearest his heart is that of Christian union, and for this cause he has travelled the earth around and held conferences with Christian leaders in every land. He is a man of devotion to life and his message will be looked forward to with rare pleasure. It is expected that a great audience will hear him.

Sunday evening the baccalaureate address will be given by the President of the College. His theme will be: "The New Task For the College."

On Monday, May 19, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning the class day exercises will occur, and that afternoon at 3:00 o'clock the society representatives will speak. The annual celebration of the College Choral Union will occur Monday evening at 8:30 P. M., when the famous oratorio, "The Triumph of the Cross," will be rendered with Prof. E. M. Betts as director.

The final day of commencement will be May 20, as has been said, and the exercises will begin at 10:00 o'clock in the morning when the class of 1919 will read their essays, deliver their orations, and receive their diplomas. At 2:00 P. M. in the afternoon Col. Albert Cox will speak. The closing item of the commencement will be the alumni address, which will be given by Mrs. W. A. Harper, '99. Her subject will be: "Shoulder to Shoulder, a Study in Human Equality."

The College authorities wish us to say that the people of Alamance and Guilford Counties are cordially invited to attend all these exercises, and we feel sure they will avail themselves of the opportunity.

NOTES

Rev. H. J. Fleming writes: "THE SUN came this morning and I never knew the value of it until I got into regular work of the Church."

The annual memorial service held at New Providence church, Graham, N. C., will be held this year on the first Sunday in June. A program has been prepared which indicates that a good day may be expected. Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., is to preach the annual sermon.

We mourn with Pastor C. H. Rowland in the loss of his mother on May 3. Mrs. Rowland was one of THE SUN's many devoted friends. She was truly a saint. Though helpless, her life was sunny. A great and good mother gone. See obituary on page 15.

Many of the preachers have been "pounded," some have been "suited," some "coated," some "aided," some "watched." None of these things have happened to the Editor, but he is one ahead of the other brethren as to what has been done to him. He has been "billed." A good Brother—who has been taking THE SUN for 60 years, and began before joining the church—presented us the other day with a five dollar bill. No bad gift, sir, and we are grateful.

Gypsy Smith, Jr., began a meeting in Burlington on Sunday evening, May 11. His tent is within twenty-five yards of this office. At this writing he has preached only one sermon, but the verdict of those who heard him is that it was a sermon. Every available seat was taken at the first meeting with possibly one thousand persons left without seats. The people heard him gladly. If all his sermons come up to the first, our decision is that he is a great preacher.

The Editor was due to be with Brother J. F. Apple at Mt. Zion last Sunday. Brother Apple told us on Saturday that if the weather was very unfavorable on Sunday morning not to come. This was the case, and it looked as if it might rain any minute. In a short time after the train passed the clouds cleared away and the most of the day was favorable. We regret losing the trip, but have charged it to the weather man. Two years ago we started to this church, but through some misunderstanding no one met us at the train. We were unable to get any one by phone and had to take the next train back home. If for any reason that our failure to appear last Sunday was a disappointment, the church will have to break even with us for their failure before.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Mrs. William Thomas Fryer announces the marriage of her daughter, Violette Hope and Dr. Jennings Sipe Lineon, Captain United States Army, on Tuesday, the twenty-ninth of April, nineteen hundred and nineteen, Baltimore, Maryland.

THE HERALD OF GOSPEL LIBERTY CHANGES EDITORS

The American Christian Convention in session at Conneaut, Ohio, last week elected Rev. Alva M. Kerr, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, to the editorship of The Herald of Gospel Liberty. The present Editor, Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., has been Editor of The Herald twelve years. Dr. Barrett was Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN from 1881 to 1894. Thus he has served the Christian Church for nearly a quarter of a century in an editorial capacity. As Editor of THE SUN he was able and efficient, and his training on this publication well qualified him for the work on The Herald of Gospel Liberty. As Editor of THE SUN he gave the people a good paper and as Editor of The Herald he maintained the same good standard. He is a man of conviction, and carries at the masthead of his paper, "Earnestly contend for the faith which was once delivered unto the Saints." To this text he sticks unflinchingly. He has his views and expresses them. Dr. Barrett is an able writer, and as an evidence of this, it is common to see in many of our exchanges quotations taken from his pen. He gives up his work on July 1 and expects to return to some part of the Southern Christian Convention. His coming to the pastoral ranks will be a blessing to the Church. His experiences as pastor and editor fit him in every way for a successful work in some field.

Brother Kerr, the new Editor, is a young man full of promise, and has done his work well in every task of the Church committed to his care. We welcome him to the editorial tripod. We speak for him a loyal support from the Brotherhood at large, and especially from the South. May the blessing of God follow the work of these brethren and continue to bless the mission of The Herald of Gospel Liberty.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

THE KEY-WORD OF THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

The key-word of the Ten Commandments is Love. The life of the ancient Mosaic laws is not to be found in exacting, rigid justice according to the popular idea of justice. Often the time before Christ is spoken of as a dispensation of law, as being somewhat different from the present dispensation which is spoken of as a dispensation of love. The Pharisees gathered about Christ and asked Him the great commandment of the law, He replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind," and he added a second which He said was like unto it, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The soul, the spirit, the life of each of these commandments is Love. "On these two commandments," He said, "hang all the law and the prophets."

NORTHERN ALABAMA

Rev. J. D. Dollar, of the Alabama Christian Conference, was with us the fourth Saturday and Sunday in April. Brother Dollar did some good preaching and we were glad to have him with us. We hope to have Brother C. W. Carter the fourth Sunday in this month, Rev. G. D. Hunt in June and Rev. E. M. Carter in July. We are glad that the Alabama Conference has taken hold of the work here and we are glad to welcome the ministers.

We have an organized church of but a few members. We have no church building yet, but expect to begin one soon and trust that by the help of the Lord we may have a building for our ministers to preach in before another year. The Methodist people have been kind in permitting us to hold services in their building and we appreciate their help very much.

Brethren and sisters, pray for this little band and especially the work at this place.

MRS. LELLA JEAN.

A VISIT

On Saturday, May 3, memorial services were held at Mt. Zion Christian church. Through the courtesy of Rev. J. D. Dollar, the pastor, the writer had the pleasure of attending. The weather was fine and the congregation large and attentive. The dinner served could not be beat. One of the best programs that has ever been my privilege to witness was rendered.

Brother Dollar has served as pastor for these people a number of years and is doing a great work here. He is much beloved by his people.

The next day, Sunday, by request of Rev. E. M. Carter, I went to New Harmony to fill his appointment. This was a great pleasure because I had once been pastor for these people. It was a pleasure to meet and shake hands with these old friends again. Brother Carter is doing a good work at this place, as the newly painted house of worship, a live Sunday school and a large congregation attest.

The service at this time was good, five new members were received into fellowship of the church.

I had the pleasure of visiting a number of homes while at this place, one of which deserves special mention. On Sunday night I stayed at the home of a good old friend, Rev. J. C. Knight. Brother Knight is an invalid and cannot walk without help, yet his faith seems to be strong in God and his hopes bright for an eternal home around His throne.

The work seems to move well in the Alabama Conference.

SUFFOLK LETTER

(The American Christian Convention)

The postponed meeting of the quadrennial session of the American Christian Convention opened in this city on Tuesday, April 29, 1919, and will close May 5th.

The church is a splendid edifice, with modern apartments, well furnished, in the best part of the city, and will seat, in the main auditorium, more than five hundred, and the membership is more than seven hundred. Rev. A. E. Kemp, the pastor, is a well-balanced minister, a beloved pastor, and a successful preacher.

By the kindness of the Congregational church, the dining hall, in that church, was tendered for use during the Convention. The room seats about two hundred and it was crowded every meal. Meals cost forty cents and tickets were sold outside the door of the dining room. The ladies of the church served the meals in a manner that deserves praise and grateful thanks.

More than three hundred delegates registered and the attendance has been good and the interest has been at tension most of the time.

The Forward Movement has been prominent throughout the Convention. Attractive banners around the gallery and the platform have kept it before the eye, frequent reference to it has kept it in the air, and the committee of twenty-four has changed the goal from half a million to two million and this was approved, heartily and unanimously, by the Convention. All Mission money, Endowment funds, and Benevolences are to be counted in the two million during the five-year period, starting with 1918.

I think there are seven from North Carolina and twelve from Virginia present and they are representing the Southern Christian Convention with credit.

Many distinguished visitors have added to the interest by great addresses. Daniel Couve, a French chaplain, gave a splendid address. Rev. Dr. Worth M. Tippy, representing the Inter-Church World Movement and Dr. Bruner, also, gave splendid addresses.

Dr. H. C. Armstrong of Baltimore, representing the Disciples of Christ, pleased the Convention by an address on the relation of our body and theirs, and left the audience feeling that we ought to be united.

Drs. J. O. Atkinson and L. E. Smith made great addresses and the feeling is that the South furnishes orators; but they must not take our best for all.

Ministers, by request, were sent to the other churches in the city and adjacent villages, even to the Episcopal on the same street with our own. It does seem that the Protestant churches are getting closer together. Christian unity is in the air—yea, in the heart of the denominations. The difficulty is in getting the heads together.

The Missionary Pageant on Sunday, which was a report to the eye of the woman's work for four years and it made a vivid and hopeful impression upon the great congregation. It introduced placards, ribbons, recitations, women and children, and all was led by Mrs. M. T. Morrill. It was one of the most impressive lessons of the Convention, not only in the matter of statistics, but it was intensely spiritual.

The Chamber of Commerce carried the entire Convention in more than fifty automobiles out to the docks on Lake Erie—the greatest ore docks in the United States.

W. W. STALEY.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Dear Friends:—

Our Easter offerings have been coming in splendidly and this week's report runs us up to $2,535. We just lack $465 reaching the goal. Shall we reach it in our next report? I trust we will. Since I have been in this work I have never made a campaign to reach a goal under such trying circumstances. Let each church that has not taken this offering take it and mail it in so you will have a part in this great work and happy task. Make some sacrifice for the little orphans and help give them a home.

We have several contributions this week on our home for the little folks and as the interest increases I hope to see this fund climb upward at a rapid rate.

I know you want to have a part in this the most sympathetic work connected with our Orphanage.

Who is it that has a heart that a little child left helpless, fatherless and motherless, cannot touch?

My heart goes out to those little ones. You should open your heart to them too. Let us all sacrifice to the end that a home will be built in the near future for their comfort and happiness.

Last week we gave Berea church, Altamahaw, N. C. credit for $50.00 on the Easter Offering which was an error. It should have been credited to The Young Ladies' Sunday school class of that church.

MISSIONARY

ON BEING BENEVOLENT

God did not build this planet on an economic, but on a benevolent basis. And His method of procedure from beginning till now has not been materialistic, but moral. His laws are not the laws of matter, but of spirit. Hence the writer of Hebrews declares, "By faith we understand the world was made by the word of God." We cannot understand it any other way than by faith; how things we call material grew out of that which is immaterial, and that which is seen grew out of that which does not appear. Verily, we walk in all this world, as Paul declares, by faith and not by sight.

Economy then is of man; benevolence is of God. Matter is due to man's limitation, for in the realm of the Infinite all is spirit. I once read a book called "Natural Law in the Spiritual World." It was a misnomer and you never hear anything of it now. It should have been "Spiritual Law in the Natural World." There is no natural law. All law is spiritual. We call it natural because of our finite limitations. Natural law is our human reading of the mind and spirit of God seeking to break in upon us through the crust and shadow of things called material.

This universe is a moral universe, and all its creation, its government and its destiny are benevolent, are spiritual. If the universe had been economic, constructed and developed according to the laws of saving; its Creator would not have dug the seas so deep, made its oceans so wide, nor piled its mountains so high. What do the infinite depths of the seas and the towering peaks of mountains declare, save that God who made the earth and the sea had plenty and to spare, and the Hand that created was outstretched, open and abundant. We have talked economy and preached economy and practiced economy until we have almost forgotten that the God who made us did not have to practice economy but was abundant, resourceful, benevolent, and that His reservoirs were, and are now, and ever will be unlimited, inexhaustible, infinite.

This is why it is that men, communities or states when they become benevolent do not get poorer but richer. The Secretary of State for North Carolina just after the second Liberty Loan issued statistics showing that before North Carolina began to give for Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Missions, and to buy thrift stamps and Liberty Bonds, it had $22,000,000.00 in the Savings Banks to their credit; but within a year's time after they had manifested their benevolence, they had $73,000,000.00 in Savings Banks to their credit. God constructed this universe on a benevolent basis and when men and States become benevolent they tap the sources of His abundance, and the streams of wealth gush forth. This is why Malachi cried forth in the days of the waning strength and increasing poverty of Israel and said: "Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts, But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings, is the sure and quick reply. Prove me herewith saith the Lord, if I will not open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room to contain it." You will note that it is not to be handed out, counted out nor doled out! It is to be "poured out." When God gets ready to bless He does not have to measure out or keep accounts, for His supply is inexhaustible, and He just pours it out.

Oh! my brethren, how we have pauperized the Kingdom of our Lord. We have sometimes made God a pauper by going out begging for Him. Think of it! Begging for Him. God is no pauper. All the gold and all the silver and the cattle upon a thousand hills are His. Sometime since I asked a man to make a contribution to missions. "Not a dollar," said he. "Why?" was my query. "Because," said he, "God does not need my money." I said, "My Brother, you are right. God does not need your money. For by the breath of His nostrils every trembling leaf on every bending bough of all the forests could be changed in an instant into hundred dollar notes. By the word of His mouth, every sparkling blade of grass beneath the sun would turn to gems and pearls and diamonds; and every grain of sand would be changed to silver dollars or golden eagles. No sir, God does not need your money. But, sir, because He is God and is benevolent, He wants you, made in His image, to be benevolent, and so be like Him. You cannot be like God and not be benevolent. For God is benevolent."

When the Word declares that God made man in His own image, that is what He meant. He meant that man should be, and if he is to be like God, he must be, benevolent. This explains why you cannot find in the Bible, or in any other book, the beginning of the law of the tithe. That law did not begin. Like God it had no beginning. It was one with the creation. I have heard people who ought to have known better call the law of the tithe a Jewish or a Mosaic law. The law of the tithe already was before the beginning of Jewry and before the ancestors of Moses to the tenth generation had been born. Abraham, the father of the faithful, did not enact the law; he practiced it as an accepted statue, and Melchizedec, king of righteousness, priest of the Most High God, having neither beginning of days nor end of life, sanctioned the law and received with his blessings its bounty. And now historians tell us that all nations, pagan, heathen, barbarian, Greek, Jew and Gentile, practiced the law of the tithe from their earliest records. This act of benevolence, this law of God, this much of the nature and character of God were wrapped up in the very nature and make up of man; until man crowds it out of his nature with his short-sighted and ruinous policy of what he calls economy, but what God knows is wickedness, folly, madness.

We are told that the love of money is the root of evil. (or of all kinds of evils), and it is. For a man can love money till the last spark of benevolence dies out of his heart and of his nature.

But the love of the good money can do is also the root, stem and branch of all kinds of righteousness, truth, justice and mercy in this earth.

We Christians have been, for the past few months, talking about the Forward Movement, and writing about it and wondering about it, praying over it. We wonder where that paltry $500,000.00 is to come from and how it is to come. And it is safe to say that even while we have been talking and writing and paying and wondering, those self-same Christians have worse than wasted far more than that amount. I hazard here and now the statement, and fling it forth as a challenge for any to prove the contrary that before we raise that $500,000.00 and pay it into the Lord's treasury, the very peoples who are to pay it will fling away twice that much in trifles and spend four times that much for that which neither buys bread nor keeps alive. "Try me," saith the Lord God, "Become benevolent as I am benevolent," saith the Lord God, "and see if I do not open the windows of heaven and pour out to you a blessing such as you cannot contain."

Brethren, the resources of God are evermore available to those who undertake the program of God. Let us get right with God, set ourselves to the sure purpose of executing the program of God, and I declare to you that before five years, we will not have a half million, but a million and more of God's good dollars going through our treasury with which to do the work of God. There are no limits to the resources of God, to those who undertake and do the will and work of God. When we invest our money in the Kingdom we are laying up treasures in heaven and in the act are becoming benevolent as He Himself is benevolent.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

DURHAM AND HINES' CHAPEL

On Sunday, last, it was my pleasure to speak twice to our Durham congregation and once at O'Kelly's Chapel, where the great founder of our Brotherhood spent his latter days and near which his body now rests, marked by a simple, yet appropriate shaft of granite. I reached Durham in time for the closing exercises of the Sunday school. Superintendent D. L. Boone is doing a splendid work and is very popular with his people. So is Pastor R. F. Brown.

This Church went over the top and so did Hines' Chapel this week under the leadership of Dr. W. C. Wicker. O'Kelly's Chapel was left to be canvassed later by Rev. R. F. Brown, who did the work well. Rev. B. J. Howard is pastor at O'Kelly's Chapel. He is a very promising leader in our ministry. He has agreed to help the drive in his old home church, Moore Union, and that means that church does her duty, especially since her pastor, Rev. P. T. Klapp, has started the subscription there.

Funds This Week

Funds of $1,000 each have been established this week by Deacon Brooks Wyrick, Mrs. J. P. Avent, on the annuity plan; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McNeil in loving memory of their daughter, Mrs. Frankie McNeil Cooke, and by Dr. W. H. Boone and Deacon D. L. Boone in memory of their sainted parents, Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Boone. What satisfaction of heart it is to be able to place a portion of the means God so graciously bestows on us to do the work of Christian Education, the hope of the world, perpetually!

Commencement and The Final Plunge

The College Commencement is rapidly approaching. Everything must be in readiness for its arrival. That means curtailment of time in the field and longer hours in the office at home. But with the first Sunday in June, we shall have our plans matured to reach every church not so far on the map for this greatest drive of our history. A good man said to me recently, "God has great blessings ahead for the Christian Church." Even so, as He always does when Christians do full duty and cheerfully meet their privileges in sacrificing for His cause.

Let the brethren continue in prayers, and our good sisters too, that God may continue to bless this work.

W. A. HARPER.

WELCOME HOME!

A Welcome Service to the Returning Soldiers, Prepared by the War Work Commission of the Christian Church
SUGGESTIONS TO THE DIRECTORS OF PROGRAM

1. True Patriotism and Vital Religion should be blended in this service in such a way that the service may be attractive and inspirational to both the soldier and the civilian.
2. The Double Objective of the service should be constantly before the mind of the leader; first, to give the soldier a whole-hearted welcome home which will show our appreciation of his service and sacrifice and, second, to enlist both soldier and civilian to "Carry On" these ideals of Service and Sacrifice in the life of the Church, the Community, the Nation and the World.
3. The Decorations should be in keeping with the occasion and it is suggested that the National colors of Red, White and Blue are most appropriate and should be used lavishly with the National Flag and the Christian Flag as a prominent part of the decorations.

PROGRAM

- I. "THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER"—Sung by Congregation.

Oh, say, can you see by the dawn's early light,
What so proudly we hail'd at the twilight's last gleaming,
Whose broad stripes and bright stars, thro' the perilous fight,
O'er the ramparts we watch'd, were so gallantly streaming?
Oh, thus be it ever when freemen shall stand

Between their lov'd home and wild war's desolation;
Blest with vict'ry and peace, may the heav'n-rescu'd land
Praise the Pow'r that hath made and preserv'd us a nation!

II. INVOCATION—Pastor.

III. "THE BATTLE HYMN OF THE REPUBLIC."
Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He is trampling out the vintage where the grapes of wrath are stored;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible, swift sword!

His truth is marching on.
I have seen Him in the watch-fires of a hundred circling camps;

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

THE STATE OF BEATITUDE OR SOME FUNDAMENTAL-ALIS IN PURE RELIGION

(Rev. J. W. Patton, Greensboro, N. C.)

Text, Mat. V; 2 and 3: "And He Opened His Mouth, and Taught Them, Saying, Blessed."

The incarnate and immaculate Son of God was the greatest Teacher the world has ever known, but He could learn for no man.

The benediction of Jesus Christ, is the richest legacy in the universe of God. Its source is obedience; its effect is happiness; its result is marvelous. The heart craves it, the Devil hates it but few possess it.

All have the natural birth; some are born spiritually, and the world today is unhappy.

Every true Christian has four perfect points of entering the Kingdom of God: (1) Repentance; (2) Faith; (3) Regeneration, and (4) Obedience.

Repentance produces reformation; Faith seeks for God; Regeneration produces a new creature, and Obedience clings on to Jehovah.

Note With Me

I. "Blessed," is Beatitude in the Reach of Every One. God's commands are both reasonable and possible; crucifixion to the flesh, but life to the soul. ... (Gal. 2:20), "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, Who loved me, and gave Himself for Me."

"Blessed" represents the beatitudes spoken of by Jesus Christ, comprehending the introduction and fundamental statements in His marvelous and memorable Sermon on the Mount.

These Beatitudes are natural, logical, and essential. No soul can reach Heaven without them. God is no respecter of persons.

These nine states of blessedness, lead those who are exercised thereby, from poverty of Spirit to a pure heart, making of them peace-makers, enabling them to endure persecution for righteousness sake; and when revivings and persecutions and all manner of evil speaking are against them, they can and should rejoice with exceeding gladness because Jesus said: "Great is their reward in Heaven."

(a) The first Beatitude, poverty of spirit, is the initial step in, and toward complete salvation. It represents a condition that must be realized before any person will rightly seek God.

God appeals to every man through (1) Nature, (2) Dealings and (3) Revelation, reinforced by aid of the Holy Ghost.

(b) The second Beatitude, or mourning, takes up the essential doctrine of repentance. Its purpose is, a change of heart and faith in God.

When a sinner sees and realizes his lost estate and miserable condition, he will mourn and seek God.

This doctrine of "mourning," in the great plan of Salvation, has, to a large degree, been modified, and in many cases nullified by the human made machine that appeal to the emotion, finding expression in the hand-shake and large numbers reported by the preacher, with a small percent holding out faithfully to their profession; rather than appealing to the trinity that is in man, viz: the emotion, the judgment and the will.

"Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again."

(c) The third Beatitude, meek, is the first evidence of a changed heart. Meekness is greatly a lost art.

The fourth and fifth Beatitudes are additions to the third, producing the finished product, viz: A pure heart.

The pure in heart are blessed, for Jesus Christ said: "They shall see God."

The logical steps, in regeneration, as enumerated by Christ, are (1) Poverty of Spirit, (2) Mourning, (3) Meekness, (4) Hungering and thirsting after righteousness and (5) Merciful, thus producing God's ideal, a pure heart, and a spirit filled life.

This is all internal work, producing a condition and an absolutely necessary qualification to be prepared for, and able successfully to meet external demands.

The pure heart is a diploma from the university of God, in which the Holy Spirit is the Great Teacher and the Holy Bible the text book. With this pure heart, man is ready to commence real and true and happy life. He then becomes a positive factor in religious life. That is, he becomes:

(1) A peace-maker. This is an external evidence of an internal change and condition of heart, making him a powerful asset in the Church of Christ and for the Kingdom of God. (2) He will have persecution. He must be tested. He must be tried by the furnace of fire.

Jesus Christ could create the universe, but He could not save a lost soul until He was perfected by trials and temptations and persecutions of the incarnate life. Heb. V, 9: "And being made perfect, He became the author of eternal salvation."

(3) The Pure in Heart will be reviled. But they can overcome, and demonstrate to the man of sin, the power of the believed gospel of our resurrected Lord, over all forms and conditions of satanic temptations. Such are the salt of the earth and the light of the world.

II. The Beatitude of Blessed May Be Lost. Because a man has accumulated much of this world's goods is no positive proof that he will die rich. Because a person has a finished education does not necessarily carry that such an one will be a blessing in life. Because, any person has lived a moral life, professed faith in Christianity and is even an active member of the church, having many opportunities thereafter to do good, is no absolute proof that he will reach heaven at last.

(Gal. V; 1): "Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage." (Gal. V; 7): "Ye did run well: who did hinder you that ye should not obey the truth?" (Mat. VII; 21): "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of My Father which is in heaven."

The word of God is full of warnings along this line.

(Eze. III; 20): "Again, when a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness, and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumbling block before him, he shall die: because thou has not given him warning, he shall die in his sins, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand." (21), "Nevertheless if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou has delivered thy soul."

So the way to hold the state of beatitude, is not to sin.

Some of the most dangerous people in the world are the educated. Educated in head and hand—e. g. the Hun. Their literary attainments are wonderful and their manual productions marvelous, yet they prepared for, and precipitated the most barbarous war the world has ever known. And Mr. Frederick Boyd Stephenson says of this war: "In balancing the books against William Hohenzollern and Co., on the New Year, not one dollar, not one good deed during the four and one-half years of murder, pillage, incendiarism and rapine can be placed on the credit side of the ledger."

There is a trinity in education, without which no man can be his best. Educate properly, the head to think, the heart to feel and the hand to do, then you have the ideal character.

Some of the most wicked people in the world are members, in name, of the Church of Jesus Christ. Judas was one of this class. The heart must be regenerated or the life will be a failure and a liability upon the world.

A good way to re-enforce a profession of religion and church membership is, to apply to life, the warning usually placed at a railroad crossing: Stop! Look!! and Listen!!!

(1) Stop.—Stop to consider what your church membership represents; what kind of a life you are living—whether or not your conduct is an exponent of the teachings of the great Christ.

(2) Look.—Look to see which way you are really going. See if there is danger ahead; see if your feet are in that straight and narrow way that leads to the haven of rest.

(3) Listen.—Listen to hear God's message to you. His words of warning, of admonition, of love; the Spirit's leading, the call of suffering humanity. Be a neighbor living in a house by the roadside and be a friend to man.

III It Requires the Supreme Effort of God and Man to Save a Soul. I submit, reverently, that God has exhausted His ways and means, in the installation of a supreme plan to save rebellious man.

God's part has been so amply, lovingly and lastingly provided, that no one can have a single excuse, so far as God's provision for man's eternal salvation is concerned. Man must do his part because every one of God's promises are based upon conditions.

God's Part

(1) Giving His Word by Inspiration. The Holy Bible, the message from heaven, has stood the acid test of the ages and even the Teutonic war of this decade, has made its sacred page appear more sublime.

(2) Sending His Son to Die in Our Stead. The love of God our Father, as demonstrated in the gift of His Son, is incomparable. The belief of this love, stops man, and saves him from his sins.

(3) Establishing His Church Militant. The Militant Church of God, is the mobilized armies of the Christian religion on earth, to help each sinner to overcome the great enemy of man, as existing in his flesh, the world and the devil.

(4) Calling and Sending Men to Preach the Gospel. Some times God has a hard task to get a man to preach the gospel; but after He allows him to go his way, until a limb of his body is lost, a failure in his business comes, or some great calamity overtakes him, he then, sometimes, reconsiders his way, listens to the divine call, turns to the profession of preaching the gospel and becomes an efficient teacher in the church of God.

Millions have heard their country's call to arms, thousands have died upon the European battlefields; but many pulpits are vacant, few heed the call of God to preach, men are turning away from the church and the world is facing toward hell. If some thing is not speedily done for the purity of the peoples of earth, if those whom God calls to sacred ministry will not heed, God almighty may uncoil perdition and pour out from the "bottomless pit" upon the nations of earth, fumes a thousand-fold more deadly than the mustard gas from the laboratories of the Hun, or the liquid fire upon the Allies on the devastated battlefields of Northern France, or the destructive torpedo from the hellish Teutonic submarine.

(5) Sending His Holy Spirit to Call and Teach Man. (Jno. XIV; 26): "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, Whom the Father will send in My name, He shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."

God, our Father, is doing, in amplified form, His part for the salvation of men. And yet men are wicked, and multitudes are sinful, and countless hosts are being eternally lost.

Man's Part

(1) Repentance. This is a Godly sorrow for sin and a turning away therefrom. Jesus Christ came to save man "from" and not "in" sin. Even from the (a) Guilt, (b) Practice and (c) Power of sin.

(2) Faith (Romans I; 16): "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek."

(3) Regeneration This produces a new creature. A new creation. New as to: (a) Heart, (b) Disposition, (c) Love, (d) Department. Regeneration is a fundamental doctrine in the gospel of Christ and the Christian religion.

(4) Obedience The great trouble in the world has ever been, the misappropriation of power.

If the church of Christ would obey God, conserve her power for His glory, and use energy, divinely directed, to evangelize the world, as men do to advance their own selfish purposes; then the world would soon be Christianized, the nations of the earth indissolubly united, a league of nations formed upon the basis of the Fatherhood of God and Brotherhood of man, with peace on earth and good will toward men pervading.

May the church of God awake to her pristine valor, may the doctrines of repentance, faith, regeneration and obedience be more constantly and thoroughly emphasized from the purity of the pulpit; may the members of the church be taught, by actual experience, that they cannot remain members and live in open rebellion to God's holy commands though they may pay their thousands; then the pulpit and pew will be reinstated, then the world will have confidence restored, then the unbeliever and the sinner and the ungodly will seek, by a new humanity, to be fitted for and admitted into the association of the pure in heart.

MR. FONVILLE HONORED

Mr. D. R. Fonville, of this city, who served as Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in France for several months, has been honored by receiving the Croix de Guerre. Mr. Fonville will leave May 15 for Washington, D. C., where he will be officially awarded this medal.

Be a friend to some one. Human sympathy is always needed.

A man may be a great sinner, but Christ is a great Savior.

When the Lord begins to get a man's money, He soon gets the man.

They have builded Him an altar in the evening dews and damps;

I have read His righteous sentence by the dim and flaring lamps:

His truth is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that transfigures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free, While God is marching on.

IV. THE SALUTE TO THE FLAG.

"I pledge allegiance to the Flag and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

V. RESPONSIVE SCRIPTURE READING.

The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?
The Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?

When the wicked, even mine enemies and my foes, came upon me to eat up my flesh, they stumbled and fell.

Though an host should encamp against me, my heart shall not fear: though war should rise against me, in this will I be confident.

One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after; that I may dwell in the house of the Lord all the days of my life, to behold the beauty of the Lord, and to enquire in His temple.

He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty.

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in Him will I trust.

Surely He shall deliver thee from the snare of the fowler, and from the noisome pestilence.

He shall cover thee with His feathers, and under His wings shalt thou trust: His truth shall be thy shield and buckler.

Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day;

Nor for the pestilence that walketh in darkness; nor for the destruction that wasteth at noonday.

And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant:

Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many.

Know ye not, that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?

For he that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman: likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant.

Ye are bought with a price; be not ye the servants of men.

Brethren, let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide with God.

No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. You cannot serve God and mammon.

And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto men;

Knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ.

For, brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another.

For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies in a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service.

How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord!
How firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord!
Is laid for your faith in His excellent word!
What more can He say, than to you He hath said,—
To you, who for refuge to Jesus have fled?
To you, who for refuge to Jesus have fled?

When through the deep waters I call thee to go,
The rivers of sorrow shall not overflow;
For I will be with thee thy trouble to bless,
And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress,
And sanctify to thee thy deepest distress,

The soul that on Jesus hath leaned for repose,
I will not, I will not desert to his foes;
That soul, tho' all hell should endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake!
I'll never, no never, no never forsake!

VII. PRAYER—By Pastor.

Followed by Announcements and Offering.

VIII. "THE WELCOME."

(1) Why we are glad to welcome you, by a Layman or Pastor. (Five minutes).

(2) Why we are glad to get home, by a returned soldier. (Five minutes).

IX. SONG, "ONWARD CHRISTIAN SOLDIERS."

Onward Christian soldiers!

Marching as to war,

With the cross of Jesus

Going on before;

Christ, the royal Master,

Leads against the foe;

Forward into battle,

See His banners go!

CHORUS—

Onward Christian soldiers!

Marching as to war,

With the cross of Jesus

Going on before.

Like a mighty army

Moves the Church of God;

Brothers, we are treading

Where the saints have trod;

We're not divided,

All one body we;

One in hope and doctrine,

One in charity.

Crowns and thrones may perish,

Kingdoms rise and wane,

But the Church of Jesus

Constant will remain;

Gates of hell can never

'Gainst the Church prevail;

We have Christ's own promise,

And that cannot fail.

XI. THE ENLISTMENT COVENANT—of the

"Carry-On Group."

Every true man and woman has had his or her part in this war. It may have been in the Front Line Trench, in the Training Camp, on the Sea, or saving, giving, praying and working at home. America stood together in all this struggle or we would have been like Russia today.

The object of the "Carry-On Group" is to carry on the ideals of Christian Democracy for which we fought, labored and prayed during the war into every department of life.

The "Carry-On Group" shall consist of all who sign the "Enlistment Covenant." (See last page). They shall hold a C. O. G. "Review" as often as once a month which shall be socially attractive but whose main object shall be to review the work of the Church, Community, Nation and the World and to plan future constructive activities. (See "Carry-On Group" Notes for further details).

XII. SONG, "TO THE WORK."

To the work! To the work! We are servants of God,
Let us follow the path that our Master has trod;
With the balm of His counsel our strength to renew,
Let us do with our might what our hands find to do.

Chorus—

Toiling on, toiling on, toiling on, toiling on;
Let us hope, let us watch, and labor till the Master comes.

To the work! To the work! Let the hungry be fed;
To the fountain of Life let the weary be led;
In the cross and its banner our glory shall be,
While we herald the tidings, "Salvation is free!"

Chorus—

XIII. ANNOUNCEMENT OF THE MEETING OF THE FIRST "CARRY-ON GROUP REVIEW."
XIV. CLOSING PRAYER AND BENEDICTION.

"CARRY-ON GROUP"
Enlistment Covenant

I hereby covenant, with God's help, to enter or to extend my activities along the lines I have checked below and thus help "Carry On" the best things of life in the Church, the Community, the Nation and the World.

(1) In the Church:

- By joining the Church.
- By service in the Church program as assigned by the pastor.
- By some special service in the Sunday School.
- By some special service in the Christian Endeavor Society.
- By rendering some special service not above noted.

(2) In the Community:

- To help make this Community a good place in which men, women and little children may live.
- To help plan and promote a program for Civic Betterment.

(3) In the Nation:

- To lend aid in the promotion of a true democracy—a government of the people, by the people and for the people—guaranteeing a square deal to every man, woman and child under the flag, rich and poor, high and low, without regard to race, creed or condition of life; and to place the weight of my influence against all erratic movements which endanger our civic institutions.

(4) In the World:

- To promote International friendship by an effort to know the differences of environment and view-point of my fellowmen and to find ways of bridging those differences.
- To give of my substance to aid those lands and peoples who are not so favorably situated as my own and to thus minister to their physical and spiritual needs in the Spirit of Him who gave His life that they might have eternal life with Him and with us all.

To make it the rule of my life to pray daily for those in every land who do not know Christ or who have misunderstood or not accepted His life of sacrifice and service.

Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for help and direction, I hereby willingly give myself to Him and to whatever special life work of Christian Service He may open to me.

If it is His will, I will gladly go as a missionary to a Foreign Field or be a religious worker in the Homeland as He may open the way, and I hereby pledge to do all in my power to bring this to pass.

I hereby solemnly but willingly enter into the above covenant with God and all others who may sign this pledge of service. I agree to the best of my ability and with God's help to fulfill this my vow.

NOTES ON THE "CARRY-ON GROUP"

1. The lessons of the war must not be lost. The sooner they are appreciated and built upon, the more certain will be the response. Do not wait until all the boys come home. Hold more than one Welcoming Service and let the boys you first welcomed help welcome those who come later.
2. The "Carry-On Group" should be assembled for its first "Review" as soon after the Welcome Service as it can be arranged and an evening given to organizing and vitalizing the Group. It is not designed that it should be composed of soldiers only, though all soldiers should be in it.
3. The Group should have at least the following officers and committee:
 - A president. (He may be called the captain.)
 - A vice-president. (He may be called the lieutenant.)
 - A secretary. (He may be called the field clerk.)
 - A treasurer. (He may be called the paymaster.)
 - The Pastor should be the Chaplain of the Group.

Committees:

- THE TRAINING CADRE. (The Church Group.)
- THE WELFARE WORKERS. (The Community Group.)
- THE DEPARTMENT OF MORALE. (The National Group.)
- THE AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCES. (The World Group.)

he pastor and official should plan world-wide jobs for these groups. Each "Carry-On Group" should, if advisable, have a "Carry-On" Bible Class in the Sunday School.

The Church should:

- (1) Welcome the Returning Soldier by (a) A Committee to meet him when he comes. (b) A Welcome Service. (c) Making him continue to feel Welcome.
- (2) Get the Soldier a Place where necessary by (a) A Committee of three active members of the church. (b) Looking for him; consulting him! suggesting to him; securing for him his old job or a better one.
- (3) Enlistment in a Life of Service by The Carry-On Group and in every other possible way.

NOTE—Copies of this service can be secured by addressing War Work Commission of the Christian Church, Room 45, C. P. A. Building, Dayton, Ohio. Sufficient should be ordered to enable each person present at the Welcome Service to have an individual copy in order that each may have an opportunity to enlist in the "Carry On Group," which is the climax and objective of the service after the Welcome to the Soldiers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 25, 1919

Repentance

Jonah 3:1-10; Luke 13:1-5; Acts 2:37, 38.

Golden Text: Repent ye, and believe in the gospel. Mark 1:15.

Devotional Reading: Luke 15:11-24.

Thoughts For Teachers

Have you gotten discouraged with that bad boy or careless girl? The Lord had to speak to Jonah a second time. The Lord said "Go" to Jonah and he went—in the wrong direction. The Lord has said "Go" to you; which way are you going?

God had thought for the 120,000 children in Nineveh who would be lost if the city was destroyed; have you thought that we have have 25,000,000 boys and girls in America who are not connected with church or Sunday school? I have recently heard a stirring address on "Saving the Loss" those who go out from our Sunday schools, and form the continual loss which accounts for the fact that with all the numbers in our Sunday school, our churches increase so slowly. Except our nation repents, we shall perish as did all the civilizations of old. Shall we pray "Thy will be done" unless we are doing it, and helping others to learn it that they, too, may do it?

Mrs. FRED BULLOCK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 25, 1919

Kings 8:54-61; II Peter 1:1-4

(Union Meeting with Juniors and Intermediates. A memorial meeting.)

Sing some of the Promise Songs, and plan a meeting which shall be a future promise for the younger, a past promise for the older ones, and also a future of which we are sure, based upon the past. A splendid Christian woman went as a missionary. While upon a furlough home, she went to a doctor concerning a spot upon her finger and learned to her horror that she had contracted leprosy. She said nothing to her parents or friends that her furlough time with them might not be spoiled, but when she returned, she went to a leper colony as missionary. Eventually she was cured, but she chose to stay and labor there. Years later a friend came to see her. As she went away, she turned back to wave a final farewell, and word of encouragement. Her word was "Hitherto," and the brave missionary returned the wave, and shouted back "Henceforth." If we are surely doing the work of God then so surely as 'Hitherto' He hath helped us, has He 'Henceforth' a crown of Righteousness laid up for us.

Mrs. FRED BULLOCK.

CHILDREN'S DAY

Are you planning for Children's Day in your school? Let us have a special day in June when the flowers are blooming and the birds are singing to have a very special day for the children and invite the fathers and mothers to come. There are splendid programs prepared. You can secure them from the publishing houses, or from the publishers of almost any Sunday school song book. If you want a missionary program, write "The Missionary Education Movement, 156 Fifth Ave., New York City." Some people object to Children's Day on the plea that every day is a children's day in Sunday school, but this objection is not well founded. The older people should be found in the Sunday school, and if they are not there, something is radically wrong. "Train up the child in the way he should go" and go that way yourself.

Mrs. FRED BULLOCK.

CHILDREN'S DAY PROGRAM

June has been decided upon as the month in which every Sunday school of our Southern Christian Convention should have Children's Day—some Sunday in June. Let's make it unanimous. The children deserve the day and the occasion, and will make both memorable, if given a chance. Give the children a chance. Give them the joy, and the wholesome service of Children's Day.

The Sunday School Board of the Convention, with the invaluable aid of Mrs. J. W. Harrell, of Burlington, N. C., and Mrs. Fred Bullock of Suffolk, Va., have done their best on a program. We have every reason to believe the program is suitable to all our schools, and will satisfy. A copy has been sent by mail this week to every Sunday school secretary and to every pastor of the Southern Christian Convention. The programs are for free distribution. By copying the parts as needed no school need require many copies. But to a limited number additional programs will be sent on request.

Some trouble to have Children's Day? Some effort? Some work? Well, what is there on this earth that is worth while which does not require trouble, effort, work? Announce your Children's Day. Send request for programs. Get ready for the glad day. You want a bigger, better Sunday school? Well, we think Children's Day will inject new life—and will help. Try it. Let all the schools try it. Let's make it unanimous.

Your request to the undersigned for programs will have immediate response.

Yours for a great Children's Day.

OBITUARIES

SCOTT

Mrs. Lottie M. Scott, wife of Franklin Scott, died April 22, 1919, at the age of nearly forty-four years. She was married to Brother Franklin Scott May 2, 1902, who, with a number of friends and relatives, are left to mourn their loss. Funeral services were at Needham's Grove, conducted by the writer. May God bless the husband and may he be ready to meet her in the glory land where there will be no parting.

ROWLAND

Mrs. Margaret E. Rowland, widow of the late Elmond Rowland, was born January 20, 1834 and departed this life at the home of her son, Rev. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., on May 3, 1919, aged eighty-five years, three months and thirteen days.

Mother Rowland had been an invalid for thirteen years and five months during which time she was a great sufferer, but through it all she was very patient and never lost her keen interest in Christ's Kingdom. For many years, though not able to be out of bed, she listened, by means of a telephone, to her son preach the riches of Christ's Gospel. Her sweet Christian life during the years of her suffering was a constant inspiration to all who knew her. She was affectionately known by all in the community as "Mother Rowland" and no one ever left her bedside without a blessing. She was a member of the Plymouth Christian church.

Her husband and five children preceded her in death. Surviving are two sons: Dr. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., and J. T. Rowland, Raleigh, N. C.; seven grandchildren and five great grandchildren; three sisters and one brother. Beside these relatives, a host of friends will greatly miss her.

A large concourse of people gathered at the Pleasant Grove church near Raleigh where the funeral was conducted by Revs. J. Lee Johnson, R. P. Crumpler and the undersigned on Sunday afternoon, May 4.

CANCER TREATED SUCCESSFULLY AT THE KELLAM HOSPITAL

The record of the Kellam Hospital is without parallel in history, having restored, without the use of the knife, Acids, X-Ray or Radium, over ninety per cent of the many hundreds of sufferers from cancers which it has treated during the past twenty-two years. Might Have Happened Here

It is in Wichita they are telling the story of a woman who called at the police station and asked help in locating her husband, who had been missing several days. ONCE UPON A TIME

(Written for the historian fifty years from now)

Once upon a time an institution—Elon College by name—needed financial help. This educational institution was founded eighty years ago. Its founders have passed away. This college to which I refer is located in North Carolina, institution. Time went by and he saw the splendid work of Elon College, saw and felt her influence on every hand and there was continual pining in his ears, his Lord's money and regretted it.

And, lo and behold, this writer forgot that he was in the year 1969 and thought that he was in the year 1919—and looking over this story to correct it, the fellow who would not, and so it was the case. There was a man, a certain man—Oh, his name is forgotten—who could, but would not help this deserving, had not sinned—he had just missed an opportunity of pending well some of $125,000. The promoters of the work began to give the people an opportunity to $250,000. Listening and Looking

THE world is listening and looking for a message, and that message is that a world order has been created in which all mankind can participate. The world is going ahead, but not satisfied. It is expecting something great to happen over night and a new day to dawn. The Peace Conference is the center of world thought, while Christian hearts are yearning for a conciliation of the differences of nations. Something is going to happen. Let us not be impatient, for the great things of the world are not wrought out in a day. Brotherhood of mankind is at stake; civilization is in the balances. It is our part to petition a throne of grace for a successful outcome.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

KEEPING THE CEMETERY CLEAN

In going about over the country at this season of the year, you can see cemeteries, especially in the country, raked and scraped very clean. This is the annual memorial season; and by custom, we clean the cemetery as a part of the preparation for these occasions. This is well and good and it ought to be done. But we want to make a further suggestion about cleaning the cemeteries.

In the first place they ought to be kept clean and free from trash and weeds all the year, and in the second place, we feel that it is a mistake to scrape all the grass from the ground. Our cemeteries ought to be seeded with some suitable grass and the land enriched instead of scraping the soil off once a year and hauling it out as we often see. It is a common thing to pass a cemetery and see all the soil raked up in piles with the grass and packed in some remote corner or heaped over the fence. The consequence is that the cemetery looks barren all the time and the heavy rains, especially if the ground is sloping, washes away still more soil and often does damage to the graves. Let us begin to enrich the soil in the cemetery and get the land covered in a lawn grass and then the flowers will look so much better with a back ground of grass, the cemetery more beautiful and our lands preserved, and the burying place of our dead made attractive. Let us change some of our ways of doing things.

THE DIFFERENCE

Something less than one hundred years ago, we went to a certain country church. It was our first visit there. Upon arriving, the first thing that greeted the eye was an ordinary structure free from paint and resembling some forsaken farm building. The yard was poorly kept and there were few suitable hitching places. We had never met the people before and we knew nothing of their hospitality. We were treated all right and treated in a kind manner, but there was a feeling that was present, akin to the way the house and the yard were kept. There was a kind of "don't care" spirit in the air. Not many children gathered there that Sunday and we wondered why. We believe that we know why now.

Another occasion carried us to a country church and it was our first visit there. A beautiful little church building could be seen for some distance before we reached the spot. It had paint upon it, and as we drew closer to the place, there was something of a smile upon the grounds that gave us a welcome that made a glad heart. The ground about the church was neatly kept, the building was well cared for, and there was a feeling of progressiveness there that was not experienced at the other place. The children were there in great numbers and they seemed to be at home on the two acres of land swept clean for the patter of little feet. It was easy to preach that Sunday because there was a spirit that embraced us.

The country church ought to be the place of attraction, the building should be kept in the best condition, well painted, care given to the inside looks and arrangement. The yard or grove about the church should always be kept in the very best condition for these things have their bearing upon the children as well as the older ones. Few of us have a desire to visit a lonely, forsaken place once every week or once a month, but all of us delight in going daily to the places about the farm that are beautiful and about the woodsides where beauty abounds and where we find the things that we appreciate and love and adore. Why not make the church yard attractive by shrubbery? Why not plant flowers there just as we plant at home? And why not have a cultivation committee to look after these things? Such a work is worth while and we need to give it our attention.

Just one other word on the subject: The reason that we do not have the church grounds more attractive than we do is because many churches are poorly located. They are located on some barren hill that is fit for nothing else except a building. We express the hope that people will quit this kind of a thing and locate the house of worship where the grounds can be beautified as well as the building. We must remember that it is the house of God and that it deserves the best location, and the best of our ability to make it beautiful and attractive.

CHILDREN'S DAY IN OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

The Board of Religious Education sent out last week a suggested program to be used for Children's Day exercises in our Sunday schools, and the Board urges that some Sunday in June be set aside for this day of special exercises by the children. This move upon the part of the Board is commendable and is certainly a step in the direction of better Sunday schools and better training for children. The children take a delight in doing these little tasks, and their recitations certainly bring joy to the hearts of those who hear them.

We earnestly hope and urge that every Sunday school in the Southern Christian Convention have a Children's Day exercise some Sunday during June. It will take time, but why have a Sunday school if you are not going to invest some of your time and talent in it? Why advocate the instruction of children if you are not going to instruct them? Why have a school for the children if it does not school them? There is enough talent in every Sunday school to train the children for this day and for these exercises. Of course, some will say that they do not have time but let us learn that what we do for the children, we must do for them now. Very soon they will be grown-ups and we will miss the chance of bringing them under the influences of these good things; we will miss the chance of instructing them early in the great lessons of Christian life.

Let no Sunday school fall short of its duty—it's whole duty by the child. Let there be a universal move upon the part of our people to carry the program into effect for the Church and for the Kingdom—and for the children.

WE CONDEMN IT

We have in our possession a secular paper containing a large advertisement of the Methodist Centenary Fund, the advertisement being contributed by the Coca-Cola Company, Atlanta, Georgia. We believe that the Coca-Cola bottle fascination leads to the beer bottle, the beer bottle to the wine bottle, and the wine bottle to the whisky bottle. The Church needs to condemn these slop factories, and it seems to us that when the Church resorts to them for free advertising that it is giving them its approval. We believe in the Methodist Centenary Fund, but condemn the promotion of it through Coca-Cola agencies.

CONFIDENCE OF THE ALLIES

Confirmation of the abiding confidence of our Allies of the Old World in the energy and generosity of America is given by Major Pierre Blommaert Protestant Chaplain in Chief of the Belgian Army who has just arrived in this country. The Major, who is a Chevalier of the order of Leopold, has been officially delegated by the Belgian government to spend three months in America for the purpose of making known the actual situation of the Belgian people at present and their needs in the work of reconstruction. But he is also an unofficial ambassador from the Belgian Protestant Churches to the Churches of America, and is confident that Americans, who gave so freely to Belgium in her darkest days will not allow Protestantism to go under for want of timely assistance at a critical hour.

He admits frankly the disadvantages of Protestants in Belgium; "we are few in number," he declares. "We are not united as we should be. We are new comers. Although Protestantism first appeared in Belgium at the time of the Reformation, it was nearly stamped out by persecution, and for almost two centuries only one or two churches remained to keep alive the fire of the Huguenot faith. My own parish of Maria Hoorebeke is the sole Belgian parish which remained constantly Protestant from the Reformation until 1830."

THE CHRISTIAN SUN IN EVERY HOME

Our leaders are appealing to the people in behalf of Missions, Education, the Forward Movement, the Orphanage and the various other enterprises of the Church. All these things have the fullest endorsement from this office and we stand ready and willing to help in any way. These leaders are making some valuable discoveries, and one of these is that their work is easier where THE CHRISTIAN SUN is read.

Our great need is THE SUN in every home, and in behalf of the Board of Publication of the Convention, we make application now for time and approval to line up the whole Convention to visit every home where THE SUN does not go and make an extra effort to put it there. To this end a large card has been prepared for display in every church. It reads:

OUR ONE GREAT NEED THE CHRISTIAN SUN IN EVERY HOME

This card is soon to be mailed to every church and we seek the co-operation of the pastors to see that this card is displayed. We have also had these same words placed on a small gum label to be used on correspondence, packages, programs, hand bags, and other such places as they can be used. Let us pull together with this in mind—THE SUN in every home—until we get the thing to a practical issue. First, we must feel that it ought to be done and then do it. When our financial leaders tell us that those who read THE SUN contribute more liberally and willingly, is it not time for the Church to wake up to see that it must get the Church paper into the homes? If the denomination can benefit one hundred dollars, or five hundred dollars at the expense of a year's subscription as a medium of information and inspiration, we suggest that some of the money being raised be used in this way as part of the advertising of the work. If the departments of the Church cannot live without THE SUN, and depend upon it weekly, they ought to feel free to help support their best medium of communication with the people. We leave it to their good judgment.

STATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

The Christian Endeavor Convention in North Carolina meets in Burlington June 6-8. A great time is being planned for and the outlook for it is hopeful.

AMONG OUR BRETHREN

Church Members Need an Explosion

The statement is made that the gas shells used in the late war really contained no gas. They held two or three liquids that united to form gas only after an explosion. With no desire to carry the figure out to its last analysis, we stop to remark that there are many Church members who need an explosion to make them effectual. The elements are there which, if stirred together under due pressure, would work wonders. They need to be jarred into usefulness. The transfer of the Church's potentiality into dynamics is the problem of the age. We beg leave to draw a good, long breath before attempting a solution.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Religious Opportunity in New York

Greater New York is now said to be the largest city in the world, with a population of nearly six million. From the Church standpoint it presents the greatest field for mission work that can be found probably on any like area in the world. Of all that vast population, it is said that in all the Protestant Churches there are only 330,000 contributing members. There are registered in the public schools 1,750,000 children. Besides these, there are vast numbers of school age who are not in school. In Protestant Sunday schools there are only 185,000, and in Roman Catholic Sunday schools there are 158,000. This leaves in that great city 1,410,000 children who are not touched by the Sunday school. What an opportunity that presents to the Churches!—Presbyterian.

Horrible Crimes of Bolshevists

The most horrible crimes in the history of the world are now taking place in Russia. There have been as many people killed by Asiatic hordes which have swept down on civilization in past ages; but never has there been so deliberate, never so brutal a selection of the best people of massacre in large numbers. The case of the Bolsheviki massacring two thousand of the best citizens of a small city, selecting all of any education, is only typical. It would be as if the I. W. W. here should get control of a small town, line up and shoot all persons who had received a common school education. Last week the Bolsheviki troops got into Riga with the avowed intention of killing all the middle-class people. Bolshevism is war on intelligence, on all above the lowest classes of a nation.—Journal and Messenger.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISEMENTS

(Northwestern Christian Advocate)

Wanted—A few ravens of the Elijah type that know how to feed preachers when salaries are slightly under par. Well-trained birds are required for this service, as it is emergent.

Change of Time—Morning services as announced for 10:30 o'clock will hereafter begin at 10:30 sharp. No more waiting until the last straggler presents himself or even until the choir shows up. Kindly take notice. The preacher means business. This train starts on time.

Wanted—Church members to fill empty pews near the altar rail. Best seats in the house. Must be filled if the preacher does his best. Move out from the back seats. First come first served.

Wanted—A working official board, one that will not only attend meetings upon call, but will work between times. Apply at any pastor's study.

Lost—A loud, sonorous "amen." When last heard it was in the "amen corner." It suddenly vanished and has never been heard from since. If found, deliver at next morning service sometime during the opening prayer or the preacher's sermon.

No Dumping Here—Please do not dump your rubbish in this church. Thoughtless ones have used the church vestibule and aisles to gossip and complain in. Please unload your troubles somewhere else. This is no dump.

Business Change—I wish to announce that I have closed up my business of knocking the preacher and obstructing the progress of the Church. Found it didn't pay. Am doing business for the Lord at the new stand, corner of Service Street and Faith Avenue. Sign of the Illuminated Cross.

Wanted—Fifty-three thousand young men and women to volunteer for kingdom-building. A score of lines are offered. Openings on all hands. Must have that number to keep pace with the Centenary. Apply to any pastor or Sunday school superintendent.

Investments Solicited—Splendid investments solicited by the Bank of Centenary. We take deposits of money, prayer, or service. Fine opportunity. Big returns. No risk. Inquire of your pastor or unit leader.

Found—A Methodist without a church home. We saw him wandering about in aimless fashion, not knowing where to go. We are detaining him temporarily by talking Centenary. Any one losing a member recently can secure the same upon application.

Lost—The spirit of testimony. It was once at home in every church and the possession of most Christians. But of late it has vanished. Its recovery is generally desired. Finder will be generously rewarded.

Agents Wanted—Wanted, a score or more of canvassers to introduce a brand-new article called the "Centenary," in every community. Short hours. Selling points unsurpassed. Home territory. Must be put on the market immediately. Splendid commissions. Inquire immediately of any pastor.

SLIPPED IN BY THE BOOKKEEPER

Dear Brother Riddle:—

I am sorry that I let my subscription expire before renewing. It was a case of pure neglect and I appreciate the fact that you did not stop the paper from shining in my home. Your editorials and Dr. Staley’s letters are worth the price of the paper, to say nothing of the many other good things. I have been taking THE CHRISTIAN SUN for thirty years and want it to ever shine in my home. I enclose check to renew my subscription.

Yours very sincerely,

Greensboro, N. C.

FROM TWO LETTERS

I am glad that the paper has improved, and feel that we should not be satisfied until it is in every home in the Christian Church. * * THE SUN is a necessity. Why subscribe for another paper because it is cheaper? Why compare it with other denominational papers? Does a farmer buy a hoe when he needs a plow? NEW HERALD EDITOR NOT MARRIED

We made a blunder some days ago and it is too good to keep. This office sent Brother A. M. Kerr, the newly elected editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty, a little present. The present had a place in it for his name, and also for his wife’s, and so we filled in the names before sending. He sends thanks and gives us the information that he is not married. We gladly apologize for the error, but advise Brother Kerr to let the name stand for a while yet. Brother Kerr is not married. Keep it in mind and don’t send his wife any presents.

Don’t strike your horse until you are ready for him to go. Don’t insist upon your people to do something without giving them something to do.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

FROM A PASTOR AT LARGE

I left home Saturday morning, May 10, and that afternoon found myself in the neighborhood of Shiloh, Randolph County. I preached at this place over sixty years ago and since that time there have been many changes. Practically all the old people are gone and their children and grandchildren are taking their places. I went out to Shiloh church on Sunday morning and memorial services were held. A large crowd was in attendance and I shook hands with many dear friends. I preached a sermon to the old unsaved people in the afternoon and we had a delightful service. Brother Banks is doing a great work here and all seem to like him and he enjoys his work among them. I spent the next three days in the community. I went to the homes of Rev. H. A. Albright, Brother William Craven and several of the Moffitts, the names of whom I cannot separate. I came home exhausted, but after having rested a little I am ready for the next work.

I enjoy talking to the old people, and particularly to the unsaved. The fourth Sunday I expect to be at Barrett's church, in Southampton County, Virginia. This is my natural and spiritual birthplace. It has been over eighty years since I was spiritually born at that place. If able to get there I am anticipating a delightful time.

GREENSBORO REVIVAL

What has been called the greatest meeting in the history of the First Christian church, came to a close last night, (May 8), with 119 professions and reclamations. The pastor did the preaching and was ably assisted by the Berge Sisters, singing evangelists of Baltimore, Maryland. From the first service, Sunday, April 20, the power of the Spirit was in evidence, and much interest, in spite of the difficulties and opposition a man has trying to hold a meeting in Greensboro.

One of the greatest features of the meeting was the work of the Berge Sisters. To say they are great expresses it in a very mild form. They sing the Gospel in the most effective manner of any workers I have ever met. They sing with the spirit and the understanding which makes an audience sit up and listen. In addition to their musical qualities, both are great in personal evangelism—entirely free from sensational devices and methods. They depend upon the Lord for the revival, and it comes. Both persons are filled with the spirit of enthusiasm, and the power of the Holy Spirit.

One great blessing of the meeting was the awakening on the part of the church. We had a revival in the church. It was great to see strong men and women who had lost the joy of salvation, and numbers who were unsaved, rush into the altar and pray through, for the altar was used from the very beginning, and every profession was made at the altar of prayer. We have great reason to believe that the work is going to accomplish something as a result of the great revival it has had just witnessed.

Another great feature of the meeting was the noon hour shop meetings. The writer has always loved these services, and found his helpers in the same frame of mind, and ready at all times for the services. The men and women in the shops gave us a warm reception, and gladly gave of their time for the noon hour meetings.

During the meeting a number of distinguished visitors called. Among them were Drs. W. A. Harper and W. P. Lawrence, Mrs. Lawrence, Mrs. N. G. Newman, Mrs. J. O. Atkinson, and Mrs. C. C. Johnson from Elon, and a number from this city. We were glad to have them, and welcome them back to see us again.

On the last Wednesday of the meeting we were given a delightful surprise by two of our best and most loyal friends, Messrs. L. S. Thompson, and W. L. Rilee, from Newport News, Va., who came down to spend a day or so in the meeting with us. We were overjoyed to have these men come to see us. Both united with the Newport News church during our ministry there, and have always been among our very best friends, as well as the leaders in that church. God bless and multiply their kind in the Christian denomination. We were glad to have all the visitors with us and hope one day to have them call again. Pray for our work.

FROM W. D. HAWARD'S NOTE BOOK

First Sunday.—Preaching at New Lebanon at 11:00 A. M. One member received on confession. Attended Young People's Missionary Society at the same church at 3:00 P. M. From there we drove to Union and attended a meeting of Young People's Missionary Society. From there we drove home and had not been in the parsonage very long before a young couple came in to be married. They were Mr. Clyde Clifton Hart and Miss Edna Atkinson, both prominent young people of Dendron. The groom has recently returned from France where he saw service in several hard fought battles. In the evening we attended service at the Methodist church. A full day.

Second Sunday.—Preaching at Wakefield at 11:00 A. M. A good service. Mothers' Day was observed here and at Burton's Grove in the afternoon. At the last named place there were four reconsecrations and one member received on confession into the church. The evening service at Dendron was called in on account of a protracted meeting at the Baptist church. That meeting closed last night, May 14, with several additions to the church. There will be some to join the other churches. The movie man is here with a big tent but was kind enough not to run his show while the meeting was going on. He will have a crowd tonight. Many feel, perhaps, as I heard a good sister once remark: "I enjoy everything that comes along."

WELL (WELLS) SUITED

Sometimes people are "well suited" with their surroundings and sometimes they are not. What will suit some people will not suit others. The writer was "well suited" a few weeks ago when he was instructed by some of our most loyal and faithful members of our Reidsville church to go to the dry goods store and select himself a nice hat and have his measure taken for a new suit of clothes not to cost less than $50.00 and they would see that the bill was paid. Their instructions were immediately carried out, not reluctantly, but gladly and cheerfully. The selections were made at a cost of $51.00 and I am now wearing my hat and suit with a very high degree of satisfaction and appreciation. It is a real joy to the pastor's heart to be so generously remembered in such a way by the people whom he serves. I appreciate these gifts not only for their money value, but more for the love that these big liberal hearted people have for their pastor that prompted the giving. As one of the members said to me: "Brother Wells, we are not presenting you with this suit and hat because we feel that you are not able to buy them yourself, but we are doing this as an expression of our love and appreciation of you as our faithful pastor." Words like these are words worth while. They make me feel like I want to keep going; to strive harder to be worthy of such expressions of appreciations and to live a better life and be a better pastor. I have never served a people more appreciative than the people of our Reidsville church, and I want to say, "God bless and prosper them."

UNION, ALAMANCE

On the second Sunday in May we had a very large audience and delightful services at Union, Alamance. It was Mother's Day and the writer spoke on that theme at the morning hour and Rev. J. W. Holt administered the Lord's Supper at the close of the morning service. Rev. D. A. Long preached at the afternoon hour. It was a pleasure to have Brothers Holt and Long present and to hear them. They are men of ripe experience and their words of wisdom doeth the heart good.

Dinner was served on the ground and a more bountiful one it has not been my privilege to see. This is a fine community and they have large opportunities for service in the Master's work.

The Sunday school has decided to give one Sunday's offering to the Orphanage and one Sunday to Missions each month. It has also decided to take up the study of Missions in the Sunday school.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The American Christian Convention was a very busy one. Commissions on many subjects consumed much time, provoked discussion, interested the majority, and made voluminous matter for future reference.

The recommendation, by the joint Committee of the Executive Board and the Commission on organization, to make out of the Executive Board of 10 of the Convention and the Board of nine Trustees of the Christian Publishing Association, a Board of Polity to work out the policy for the next four years and, at the same time, to clothe said Board of Polity with power to elect all editors, provoked spirited discussion. It was finally passed with the provision that it go into effect at the close of the present session. Hence editors were elected at the Conneaut session; but the joint Board of Polity will meet in Dayton, Ohio, May 27, and hereafter that Board will elect editors.

Two new District Conventions were provided for, but none of them are to be units of the Convention except the Southern Convention. There will be the New England Convention, the Southern Convention, the Western Convention, and the two others to be formed, making five in all. It looks as if such Conventions would, eventually, become units in the American Christian Convention; and, if they do, this would look to some real constructive work in organization. They seem to think, in the north and west, that the Southern Convention is doing progressive work; but I tell them, it is not our men, but our organization. There is nothing the American Christian Convention needs so much as organization. She has a host of capable men, but they are too far from the center of the organization. Conventions in smaller groups, and meeting biennially, as units, would develop system, leaders, activities, and furnish material for reports to the Quadrennials.

The new goal of $2,000,000.00 for the Forward Movement, created more enthusiasm and received greater applause, than any financial announcement ever made in open Convention; and this impressed me with the feeling that the people are pleased when we undertake big things. Small propositions do not stir men and women. Leaders must plan larger things for the Church, if they want to secure enthusiastic co-operation. We must make our goal in the Southern Convention for the five years, $500,000.00; $250,000.00 for Elen Endowment, $150,000.00 for Missions, and $100,000.00 for other purposes. When that is done we can go up to the next Quadrennial feeling that we have some right to work in a great Convention. The beauty of doing great things is that many doing little things can have part in the great work. Our God is a great God above all gods, and we belittle Him when we plan on a small scale. We do not work in our own name, but in His name; and He will help us to accomplish great tasks, if we lay out great plans. The Convention wants to come South in 1922 and no doubt the choice will lie between Suffolk and Burlington. It has never met in the South but once and that was in Norfolk.

Altogether the Convention was earnest, forward-looking, seeking to advance the Kingdom-interests; and the entertainment was ample, hospitable, and enjoyable.

We are grateful to the many friends who have renewed their subscriptions since May 1.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

A BUSY AND HAPPY EXPERIENCE

On Saturday, last, I landed at Carrsville, where Brother Howard Luke met me and delivered me safely at his father's home in Holland soon after. I was not feeling very well physically and so I sought the advice of Dr. John G. Holland, one of the Kingdom's noble men, and he soon set me right.

Sunday morning I rode over to Holy Neck with Brother Dick Butler, who is a Sunday school teacher worth while. The Sunday school there is a remarkable one. In the open country where it is supposed things cannot be done in business-like, modern manner this school is thoroughly up-to-date. The more I travel around, the more I am convinced that it is folks and not the place that causes the Kingdom to flourish. Holy Neck flourishes, though more than a century old, and will continue to flourish. We need more such country churches.

That afternoon I attend a Sunday school Convention at Berea (Nansemond). My host, Deacon I. A. Luke, was president and not only presided well, but delivered a splendid address on Evangelism in the Sunday School. "Saint Luke," he is called, and I wish we had more such saints, not the saint of the cloister he, but the busy business man who yet has large time for Kingdom service.

Sunday night I was worshipping with our beloved Holland congregation. They meet in the town school building, while their new church, an edifice that would do honor to our cause in a great city, moves on toward completion. If ever a people had excuse for withholding from our Elon drive, these people did. Their church is really a tremendous undertaking for them. And yet it happened with them as always with God's true servants: the more they do, the more they can do, and so Holland joins Elon, Pleasant Grove (Va.), and Waverly in winning three stars for her card of recognition, giving thus four times her quota, with a magnificent church in course of construction and local conditions, from the world's standpoint quite unfavorable for any undertaking at this time.

I returned to Holy Neck Tuesday for the drive. It was their memorial day, and Rev. L. E. Smith delivered the sermon, a fine effort and greatly appreciated. On Sunday, I neglected to say, Mrs. Fred Bullock gave an excellent Sunday school address at Holy Neck and Commonwealth's Attorney S. E. Everette, reared in the church, rejoiced every heart with one of his inimitable addresses. Monday night I attended a Sunday school class social at the home of Mrs. Job G. Holland, where I met as fine a company of young people as my experience numbers. So that I have feasted on the fat these days.

But back to Holy Neck. Her quota was the largest of any country church in the Convention and next to the great church at Suffolk among all the churches, and she came. "Over the top" she went and everybody is glad.

Two things have made the victory in this field possible—the people love the Kingdom in reality, that is, they are willing to sacrifice for it, and their pastor gave his unqualified support. Rev. W. M. Jay took me in his car and for three days and nights nobly seconded my appeals to the friends, and whenever I would reach my limit, he would come with a solar plexus blow that would put the thing across. He is a loyal son of Defiance College and as such must contribute to her necessities, and yet he volunteered a subscription to our drive, dividing it between his two churches. His people love him, and they have every reason to do so.

Funds This Week

Brother I. A. Luke gave $5,000 this week in memory of his father, Rev. J. M. C. Luke, a minister of the Baptist church, and of Rev. R. H. Holland, his wife's father, and one of the pillars of strength in our own Brotherhood.

Deacon R. H. Riedel gave $1,000 in memory of his daughter, Mary Natalia, who with his four other children, would have come to Elon, had God not called her. In her memory in Elon the tuition cost of a Christian minister is thus perpetually provided.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Gomer lost a most lovely and promising son, James Hallie, in the cause of freedom, and in his memory they have provided a fund of $1,000. At Holy Neck at the memorial service in his honor, tributes were paid his Christian character by Deacons B. D. Jones and E. T. Holland, and then Pastor Jay announced the gift of his devoted parents in his name. It was a tender moment.

Other funds of $1,000 each this week were founded by Brother Wilson J. Holland, Dr. Job G. Holland, Brother W. Q. Peele, Brother R. C. Norfleet, Brother E. T. Holland, Mrs. Willie E. Lee in memory of Capt. P. H. Lee, one of Elon's noblest friends; Brother A. L. Jolly, Brother B. D. Jones, and Brother W. H. Riddle of Shallow Well church. May God multiply their kind!

Commencement

I write this on the train homeward bound. Two days are left to get ready for commencement. Next week we shall be busy with that great annual event in the Elon calendar, and then to the field again till this campaign has been gloriously crowned with victory and every heart shall rejoice.

Let our friends pray earnestly that God may continue to bless this cause.

W. A. HARPER

And Then More

Good things never cease—and that is why there is always more. Under the leadership of Dr. W. C. Wicker, Shallow Well church has gone over the top, and through the efforts of Rev. G. O. Lankford, Rosemont has doubled its quota.

People are always ready for something that will stir them to do something.

Are you on the band wagon helping your church do something, or walking behind?

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

AND OVER THE TOP WE GO

Dear Friends:—

You remember in the beginning of the Easter campaign I asked you to make the Easter offering $3,000.00. I am glad to inform you in this letter that the financial report for this week carries us over the top with twenty cents to spare.

The response to the call for the Easter offering has been beautiful, indeed, and makes us very grateful to our churches and Sunday schools that have been so loyal to us in this work. We have quite a number of churches to hear from yet. We truly hope that each church will make this offering as we want to get each church and Sunday school interested in our little orphans and lend us a helping hand in caring for them.

One hundred and forty churches and Sunday schools have joined hands with us in reaching this goal of three thousand dollars for the Easter offering. Eighty two churches and Sunday schools have not yet answered the call. How many more little helpless children we could help if all our churches would help us! I truly hope that sometime all our churches and Sunday schools will join in the work and get interested in helping the fatherless and motherless children.

If God has been so kind to you, as to see fit to spare you to be with your little children and to train them, don't you think you ought to be so grateful to Him, in His great love, to make some sacrifice to care for the little helpless children who have been deprived of the loving and tender care of a mother or the strong arm of a father to lean upon?

No mother upon whose knee to climb. No mother's sweet lips to kiss. No mother's neck to put their little arms around. No mother to listen to their little prayers at night. No mother to lay her hand upon their fevered brow while sick.

No mother to lay her gentle hand upon their little head and impart to them that mother's love no other can give. Left alone to go all through life deprived of this great blessing. Do you love them? Do you pity them? How much?

In a recent report we gave Liberty church, Vance county, credit for $21.20 when it should have been credited to the Sunday school.

In our last report we gave Cary Welch, credit for $20.00 and it should have been credited to New Hill Christian church.

We are glad to make these corrections.

DREAMINGS FROM THE FIRESIDE

There is no place like home. The patter of the rain on the outside presses the heart closer to the thought of a household where the footsteps of a baby make music that is sweeter than the playing of an artist.

No greater joy could come to us now than to have the whole SUN Family if it were possible come and greet each other in this little home. Their handshakes would make a melody in our heart.

Our highest hope is that THE CHRISTIAN SUN may bring some joy to a discouraged heart tonight.

We had a letter today—a real "God bless you letter" and greatly enjoyed it. As we read it we wondered why people did not write their friends letters more often. We appreciate the letters that come to this place and regret that time and expense forbid us from answering each.

There is a pleasure in serving a people who are good and kind and pleasant—such as we have as friends. God bless them all—all of them and multiply their kind in great numbers.

There is no rest in our work. It is one continual grind. There is little to break the routine feeling and "over and over" happenings. But there is that sense of pleasure that it will help some one—and that alone is joy.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

WHY MOST MINISTERS SHOULD PREACH SHORT SERMONS

By E. C. Ferguson, Ph.D.

(Reprinted from The Christian Advocate)

It is said of Francis Bacon that so entrancing was his eloquence the only fear of his audience when once he began to speak was that he would stop. The opposite fear too often pervades many a long-suffering congregation, but the preacher never will stop.

In his rules for a preacher, as contained in the Discipline, John Wesley says: "Take care not to ramble, but keep to your text, and make out what you take in hand." An additional advice might well be added, that after you have made out what you took in hand, bring the sermon to a conclusion. It is better to leave one saint wondering why the preacher stopped so soon, than ten wondering why in the world he did not stop sooner.

It is not because the people are worldly, wicked, unspiritual that short sermons are more popular than long ones. The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak, was Christ's apology for the shortcomings of His disciples on a critical occasion, and so, while the poet, in an ecstatic mood, may long for the state where it is certain that the average congregation is in no humor for such protracted services.

Congregations ne'er break up

And Sabbath has no end,

It is said that Bishop Morris, after preaching about twenty minutes, used sometimes to surprise his audiences by closing the book and sitting down, making no other explanation afterwards than that he stopped because he was through. But such brevity in a bishop would scarcely meet the popular demand, as people expect longer sermons on such special occasions. On circuits, where people have preaching only once a month, it would seem desirable that the sermons should be longer; but in stations where there are two sermons on Sunday the preacher should cultivate brevity.

The teacher adapts the length of his lessons to the average members of his class; not to the bright ones, and the preacher should time the length of his sermons not to the saints in the Amen corner, but to the average member of his congregation.

Unhappily for their own good, preachers do not hear all the comments which the people in the pews make on their sermons, otherwise there would be a speedy reform in some quarters.

While ago I spent a Sunday in a station in a certain Conference. The good woman at whose house I was staying remarked to me: "Our preacher will preach us to death." Of course she did not tell him that, and so he goes on all ignorant of the death-dealing properties of his sermons. The brother who, with glowing face, grasps the pastor's hand as he comes down from the pulpit, exclaiming, "O, how much I enjoyed your sermon! Why did you not continue longer?" is not followed by the ten dissidents remarking, "If you had only stopped when you got through what a fine impression you would have left."

When I have seen preachers, especially in revival meetings, preach the congregation into the spirit, and then by hanging on so long preach them out of it, I have thought of no more apt comparison, to use a homely illustration, than a cow giving a brimming pail of milk and then kicking it all over.

Brevity is the one merit in a sermon that is in the power of everyone. Every minister cannot be eloquent, learned, profound, logical, impassioned, poetic and interesting, but he may be brief.

Though, strange to say, this seems, judging from their talk, to be the one thing beyond the preacher's power: "I did not intend to preach so long, but then I did not find any place where I could stop without marring the symmetry of my sermon."

But edification, and not symmetry, is the end of the sermon, and if one of the two has to be sacrificed, one would better sacrifice symmetry.

It is curious how different symmetry looks from the standpoint of the pulpit and the pew. While the pulpit says, "I would like to close now and I know I ought to, but I cannot see any proper place," the pew can see plenty of places where the sermon could be brought to a close with good effect.

An anecdote has been going the rounds of the papers illustrating this point. Dr. Thomas A. Hoyt, the pastor of the Chambers-Wylie Memorial Church, of Philadelphia, was entertaining President Patton, of Princeton, General John B. Gordon, and other eminent men at dinner. The guests were speaking in strong praise of a sermon the minister had just preached, and those who were versed in theology were discussing the doctrinal points he had just brought out. Dr. Hoyt's young son was sitting at the table, and President Patton, turning to him, said: "My boy, what did you think of your father's sermon? I saw you listening intently to it," at which praise Mrs. Hoyt smiled cordially, and all listened to hear what sort of reply the lad would make. "I guess it was very good," said the boy, "but there were three mighty fine places where he could have stopped."

The difficulty of stopping is not half as great as many preachers imagine. In the times when the resumption of specie payments was being discussed and the difficulties and even impossibilities of such resumption were being learnedly presented, John Sherman cut the knot by declaring, "The way to resume is to resume." So the way for the preacher to stop is to stop.

Germany must accept or reject the peace terms as they are.

NOTES

Rev. F. H. Peters, Greenville, Ohio, writes: "Congratulations on the fine things that the South is doing."

Rev. J. G. Truitt will be assisted by Rev. L. E. Smith at the meeting at Pleasant Grove in August.

If THE SUN is any better than usual this week it is because our mother-in-law gave us a ham the other day.

Rev. W. B. Fuller, recently discharged from the Y. M. C. A. work, was in to see us the other day. He is open for church work now.

Mrs. W. S. Harcastle and daughter, Mary, Dover, Delaware, called to see us a few minutes Monday morning. They are attending the commencement at Elon this week.

Rev. L. L. Wyrick and Miss Annie Brown were married last Wednesday, May 14. Rev. J. F. Apple officiated. Congratulations and best wishes. A long and happy life be to them.

Brother J. T. Cox, Lanett, Alabama, writes: "Our home was made dark some time ago by the loss of our son in France. North Carolina is my native State and I enjoy THE SUN."

The Elon commencement is on this week. Dr. Peter Ainslie, Baltimore, Md., delivered the baccalaureate sermon yesterday (Sunday) and Dr. W. A. Harper delivered the baccalaureate address. Owing to sickness we were deprived of attending. Following our custom, a full announcement of the commencement will be given next week. Look for it.

The annual memorial service was held at Bethlehem last Sunday. Dr. W. C. Wicker spoke at the eleven o'clock service and Dr. P. H. Fleming in the afternoon. Pastor J. W. Holt had the service in charge. This church has installed new pews and five dozen folding chairs. Brother Holt goes to Belew Creek next Sunday to hold memorial service there, he being pastor.

DR. BARRETT TO COME SOUTH

Dr. J. P. Barrett, Editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty plans to move South about July 1 when his term of office expires. He is open for work in the Southern Convention. He is too well known to our people to need any introduction. Any Church needing a pastor of ripe experience and well qualified will do well to get in touch with Dr. Barrett.

CONGRATULATIONS TO BROTHER HARDCASTLE

Rev. Howard S. Harcastle, Dover, Delaware, is the valedictorian of the Senior class at Elon College this year. Brother Harcastle was a Freshman when the Editor was a Senior and we had the privilege of rooming with him that year. Of course our association did not help him to win the honor—in fact we have sent him word that it was for his good that he did not have but one year's experience with us, or else he would not have won.

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

The National Convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America will be held in Washington City, June 3-6, followed on Sunday 8th by a Field Day for the presentation of the prohibition situation to the churches of the Capitol City. Therefore, as the most convincing proof that the better citizenship of the country, which is the overwhelming majority, not only wants the enforcement of prohibition, but intends to see that it is accomplished, the Anti-Saloon League of America suggests and earnestly requests that the pastors of the churches in favor of prohibition throughout the country shall on June 8th bring the issue involved to the attention of their respective congregations to the end that Congress may be advised that not only has there been no reaction against prohibition but that on the contrary, the overwhelming majority of the people not directly interested in the liquor traffic want it fully and faithfully enforced, and desire the immediate enactment of the permanent code to carry into effect both war-time prohibition and the 18th Amendment to the Constitution.

LAST MOMENT WORLD NEWS

The American troops in Russia are to be withdrawn June 1.

FROM OVER THE SEAS

THE JEWISH PASSOVER, 5679-1919, AND THE COMMUNION SERVICE

(Chaplain C. Summerbell, 318 Field Artillery, A. E. F., France)

"This is as the bread of affliction which our ancestors ate in the land of Egypt; let all who are hungry, enter and eat thereof; and all who are needy, come and celebrate the Passover! This year we celebrate it here, but in the year to come, we hope to celebrate it in the land of Israel. This year we are as slaves; next year we shall be as freemen in the land of Israel."

Thus spoke Rabbi David Goldstein as he held up the "dish," at the Feast of the Passover, held in Chatillion-sur-Seine, on the evening of April 14, 1919. It was a unique occasion, for here were gathered five or six hundred Jewish soldiers, with a few of us Gentiles as invited guests, to celebrate the Passover an army gathering, held in a great Y. M. C. A. hut; it typified the New Day dawning on the world, when Knights of Columbus Orthodox and Liberal Jews, Y. M. C. A. men, and Army Chaplains of Christian and Jewish faiths, united in the Seder service.

Generally this is a home service, where families are gathered, but any poor Jew can knock on the door of the home of a fellow Jew, and has a right to enter and partake of the feast. After the second cup of wine is filled, the child, usually the youngest, asks, "Why is this night distinguished from all other nights?" and the parent answers in Hebrew:

"Slaves were we unto Pharaoh in the land of Egypt, and the Eternal, our God! brought us forth from thence with a mighty hand and an outstretched arm; and if the Holy One, blessed be He! had not brought forth our ancestors from Egypt, we and our children, and our children's children, had still continued in bondage to the Paraohs in Egypt; therefore, even if we were all learned, all men of understanding, all of us having knowledge of the Law, it nevertheless would be incumbent upon us to recount the departure from Egypt; and it is accounted praiseworthy to discourse at length thereon."

It was a great privilege to attend this Feast of the Passover, and as I looked down the long tables where sat hundreds of soldiers, all dressed in the same uniform, with similar faces, answering in Hebrew, there came to me a new meaning to the Lord's Supper.

Invariably men brought up under the influence of Christian traditions and atmosphere, like myself, look upon the Passover as a sad celebration, because our hearts are filled with sorrow as we read of the "Last Supper" that Jesus ate with his beloved disciples. To them, that Passover feast was a time of farewell and tragedy. But to the Jew, it is an occasion when religion and patriotism are united, and he feels his nearness to Jehovah, and what the Lord has done for him; and he rejoices at this Feast, remembering that his condition of freedom came only through the mercy of God to the Jewish race, of which he is one. All his family love, all his patriotism, all his appreciation of religious ties, are aroused and strengthened.

To this Feast, the greatest Jew of all, looked with expectation of sweet communion, having loved his own that were in the world, he loved them unto the end. And as the death shadows began to darken the joy of living, when the hour was come, he sat down and the apostles with him, and he said unto them, "With desire, I have desired to eat this Passover with you before I suffer; for I say unto you, I shall not eat it until it be fulfilled in the Kingdom of God."

The Fourth of July to America lacks the family and religious association, but patriotically it has something of the national joy of the Passover, for the Passover is a feast.

Modern religious movements are coming back to the feast idea of this ancient celebration. In New England, the Parish supper, in the West, the Men's Club of the church, where eating is abundant, many forward movements are launched; a favorite approach to the business man that the Y. M. C. A. has successfully adopted, is a supper, after which religious plans are enthusiastically outlined. And Jesus himself asked to be remembered by an act of eating and drinking.

Again we are reminded that true religion is life, abundant life. After they had sung a hymn—one of the Passover psalms, they went out to the Mount of Olives. How many times these inspiring psalms help us to be brave and heroic! The hymn that Jesus and his chosen brethren sang must have been sad, but it was full of the strength that supports men's souls in deep anguish. After this, the Captain of our Salvation, was prepared for the Garden of Gethsemane.

At this crisis in the history of the world, many have gone, lonely, to a Garden of Gethsemane, without knowing that angels of God are ever by their side to strengthen in time of sorrow. Alas! too often, humanity neglects a spiritual preparedness. It becomes arrogant and proud, taking pride in a national God who has spoken in the past, but not desiring to catch the "accents of the Holy Ghost" concerning the every-day world of the Now.

"In these days," said Rabbi Goldstein, in an after dinner speech, "the world is looking for deliverance." "President Wilson," he affirmed, "is the modern Moses, and the men who hold up his hands are General Pershing and Admiral Sims."

To Americans, who are accustomed to hear their political leaders spoken of as the worst men out of state's prison, these words seemed extravagant. Yet we are surely living in grand and awful times.

This Passover, the Seder service, was entered into in the responsive exercises, not only by the Jews present, but by the Gentiles, and the Senior Chaplain of our First Army; and the Division Chaplain led in the English reading by invitation of the Ruler of the Feast, who considered this the largest Seder Service in the world in which Christians and Jews jointly participated.

And yet to me this Seder service seemed to lack the atmosphere engendered by the awe inspiring truth of a Jesus or the missionary zeal of a Paul. At one time we were asked to eat, the Jew in honor of Hillel who the Rabbi claimed originated the movement, eventuating in the Christian religion; the Christian, to eat to the worship of Christ. As I try to worship, not Christ, but God alone, and consider Christ, the originator of Christianity, I was probably by myself in the large company. Nevertheless, I was thankful that Providence put it in my way to attend the Passover in France. The Heavenly Father is better to us than we can understand. And as I went out unto the heavy rain to find my side car which was to convey me back to my billet, I was happy in the consciousness of greater truths. I hope I understand a little better the real inner truth of the communion, in having partaken of the Passover with the fellow countrymen of Jesus. The Last Supper which artists have made immortal, and his disciples have made sublime, was a family gathering. He, as the head of the family, would not leave them comfortless, he would come to them that where he was, there they might be also, for he was going to prepare a place for them in the Heavenly Father's Home.

The Communion is not a time of division, or a separation, or critical self analysis, but simply a remembrance of Jesus, and how He sacrificed in life and death, wooing us to the same life of gentle sweetness, until we shall see him face to face.

MISSIONARY

THE BURDEN OF MISSIONS

No pastor is effectual, for the cause of missions, with his congregation, until he himself feels the burden of the missionary need. Rev. J. Campbell White who has likely stirred more people to missionary activity than any other man now in the public eye relates that recently he heard one of the most prominent missionary secretaries in this country make a speech, and a very fine speech, before a national convention; and then he heard a layman say after it was over "that speeches of that kind would not lay any burden of missions upon the Church in a thousand years." Dr. White's comment on this episode was, "We must feel this burden before we communicate it; and if we give the impression, the idea, that the Church is doing very well by giving seventy cents a year for the redemption of the world, it will go on sleeping until we all sleep in death."

The writer wonders what Dr. White could say of a Church that instead of giving seventy cents a year for the redemption of the world, gives less than a third of that amount. Will "it go on sleeping until we all sleep in death?" The writer wonders how long our own dear Church is going to keep on sleeping the sleep of indifference to the one great object of the Church.

Are our pastors burdened with the missionary needs of the world? If so, are they crying out to their congregations from hearts that ache and agonize for the salvation of a lost and sin-cursed world? We cannot communicate a burden until we feel that burden ourselves.

False Education

Dr. White warns us as to a false sort of education. "We are not doing the thing (the missionary work)," declares Dr. White, "and that is the first thing we ought to realize; and when church boards give the impression that we are doing our duty, I am very much afraid that they are educating the people in falsity unless we ask for many times what we have asked them for yet."

It is easy to believe with Dr. White that we are today confronting the biggest responsibility that ever rested upon mortals, and the greatest opportunity, if we can only see it, and if alongside of the responsibility we can see our Lord with His resources and take the whole task in His name. "In the presence of standing armies of 25,000,000 of men today, we ought not to be afraid to ask for 100,000 missionaries if we really believe they are necessary in order to carry on Christ's world campaign."

We are not feeling the heavy burden of a world's need, and so we are not asking with intense earnestness for the life recruits we now so much need.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JUNE 1, 1919

Faith: What it is and what it does
Heb. 11:1-40; 12:1-2.

Golden Text: Believe in God, believe also in me. John 14:1.

Devotional Reading: Ps. 27:1-40.

Thoughts For Teachers

"According to thy faith," is God's rule. Archaeologists have found that the Greek word translated "substance" here in Heb. 11:1, is the same word they used for a title deed for property. So what the writer really says to us is this, "Now faith is your title deed to the things you hope for; the evidence of your ownership in things not yet seen." Is your faith small? Then so is your Heavenly property. Have you faith to remove mountains? Then they will be removed and your inheritance will be a land flowing with milk and honey, a Heavenly plane. If you hope for a large inheritance in Heaven, then get ready here to care for it there. The shirker here will never be a worker There, and there is a work there, for "His servants shall serve Him." Mrs. F. BULLOCK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 1, 1919

Our Relation to God. VI Reverence and Public Worship. Ps. 33:1-11, John 4:19-26.

Keep thy feet when thou goest into the house of the Lord. Are our feet kept when we go in loudly and boisterously? What about the times when we discuss "peanuts" and "cotton" and "house-cleaning" and a multitude of other things in the house of God? Are we reverent if we are talking of school or home or work until the very minute when the meeting is called to order, or even finish a sentence afterwards? What about the churches where spittoons are still kept as in a smokers club for those who cannot leave their tobacco outside the house of God? Are we showing reverence and respect to God when we allow trivial things to keep us away from His house on His Day? Would we break solemn engagements with anyone else as we break them with our Father? Think of these questions, and find the answers.

Mrs. FRED BULLOCK.

FORWARD MOVEMENT IN THE SUN- DAY SCHOOL

What are you doing toward adopting and aiding the Forward Movement as it relates to the Sunday school? Have you a class in your school that is praying for a definite object? Is your school praying for any specific thing? Jesus said: "Whatsoever ye shall ask in my name," and our prayers, if they were analyzed, would often be like the oft-told tale of the aged lady's prayer for a husband, "Anything, O Lord, anything." What does your school need? What does it want? For what is it working? For what is it praying? Mrs. FRED BULLOCK.

WHY WAS THE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR LEFT OUT?

"Why was the Christian Endeavor left out?" asks Brother J. V. Knight, of Greensboro, N. C., in THE SUN of April 9, as he proceeds to play the promoters of the "So-called Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society Convention." I deem it neither necessary, or called for, to answer this question for Brother Scholz. But for Brother Knight's information, be it known that with all our efforts in previous Conventions both by addresses and a half session devoted entirely to the interest of Christian Endeavor, there have not been more than three Christian Endeavor Societies represented at any time in the past five years. This would seem to indicate that Brother Scholz's omission springs not from "sore neglect" on the part of the Convention, but rather from something that is akin to neglect within the Christian Endeavor Societies themselves. We admit freely that the Sunday school cannot do the work of the Christian Endeavor Society. It does not pretend to. Brother Scholz rather included the two under the one head, as is commonly done in the Convention, than omitted one in favor of the other. As for funds, the Convention has not, nor shall at any time solicit a cent from Christian Endeavorers, without first doing in all its power, both for the improvement of individual Societies, and for the promotion of general Christian Endeavor activity throughout the State. We challenge Brother Knight to hurl his energy expended in flaring Brother Scholz's omission into spreading Christian Endeavor at the so-called Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention in July, "for Christ and the Church."

CHILDREN'S DAY

Programs for Children's Day in our Sunday schools were mailed last week to the Superintendent or Secretary of every Sunday school of the Southern Christian Convention, and two copies of the program to every pastor. Also a letter with each showing and urging the helpfulness of Children's Day. We have ample programs on hand. Address a request to the undersigned and program will be sent gratis.

And on Children's Day urge that the offering be liberal and large. This will all go for Sunday school missions. We can never do much in building up weak schools and in planting new ones until we have a fund with which to do this needed work. The Board should have a thousand dollars this year with which to plan its work for next year. Have a great Children's Day and take a good free-will offering, remitting same to the writer. Thanks.

J. O. ATKINSON.

A FEW NOTES—READ THEM

Is your Sunday school planning to have Children's Day in June? If not, why not?

Give the children a chance. A Children's Day will help to interest them in the work of the Sunday school, and will inspire the grown-ups also.

If you need Children's Day programs, address request to J. O. Atkinson, Secretary, Elon College, N. C., and same will be sent.

The Board of Religious Education of the Southern Convention have prepared a suitable program for Children's day and are now anxious to supply every school in the Convention that desires to have Children's Day—and that should mean all the schools.

ONCE UPON A TIME

(Written for the historian fifty years from now)

Once upon a time an institution—Elon College by name—needed financial help. This educational institution was founded eighty years ago. Its founders have passed away. This college to which I refer is located in North Carolina, Alamance County, seventeen miles East of Greensboro and sixty miles West of Raleigh. Its first four presidents were: Rev. W. S. Long, D. D.; Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D.; Dr. E. L. Moffitt and Dr. W. A. Harper. This College was born of a need, nurtured in love, and has given to the Christians (the denomination owning and controlling the institution) many great men and the world many valuable citizens. Missionaries trained there have carried the Gospel to a heathen world, and its almost unnumbered teachers are carrying learning's lamp to every quarter of the earth.

But this is not the story. I said once upon a time. Yes, it was in the year 1919—fifty years ago—that this institution needed an endowment fund of $125,000. The promoters of the work began to give the people an opportunity to give to this fund; and so hearty was the response that the amount was raised to $250,000. This was just after the great world war closed and a great expression in that day was "Over the Top," because the American boys had gone "over the top" and hammered back the hordes of Huns that were hurrying down the hills of France with their heavy heels in a hellish way. And so the people in giving this $250,000 called it going over the top, employing a military term to express their willingness.

Yes, the people gave willingly, but like many other things there had to be the fellow who would not, and so it was the case. There was a man, a certain man—Oh, his name is forgotten—who could, but would not, help this deserving institution. Time went by and he saw the splendid work of Elon College, saw and felt her influence on every hand and there was continual ringing in his ears, "I didn't help do it." He would have given a hundred times that which he was asked to do if he could only have recalled the opportunity to give the small amount asked of him. He died with this expression of regret upon his lips. He had not sinned—he had just missed an opportunity of spending well some of his Lord's money and regretted it.

And, lo and behold, this writer forgot that he was in the year 1969 and thought that he was in the year 1919—and looking over this story to correct it, screamed out in wild imagination, WHO WILL THIS MAN BE?

The Call of the Rose

ON the table where the editorials of THE CHRISTIAN SUN are written we frequently find a vase filled with roses. They have their lessons for us and call us to higher things. They represent beauty of life, purity of thought and speech, and character unmarked by the wilds of the world. Life seems withered and dwarfed when compared with them. But they call us to a higher life, a nobler life, a life of purity and strength. God speaks to men through the rose, the buttercup, the daisy, and all other flowers of the garden and field. They call us to better and nobler lives, and to things heavenly and sublime.

EDITORIAL

AN EXPLANATION

Having more matter than we can handle this week, we are giving over the editorial space to the happenings at Elon during commencement week. We feel that the friends and former students of the College are more interested this week in the commencement items than in the usual editorials.

ELON'S 29th COMMENCEMENT

(Reported by C. M. Cannon)

MAY 18

The Elon College commencement opened with the baccalaureate sermon this morning by Dr. Peter Ainslie of Baltimore, Md. Dr. Ainslie brought a vital message, and was heard with appreciation by a large audience. His subject was: "Is God Here?" The message was timely and inspiring. The following is a resume of the sermon:

"The greatest fact in the world is God. You cannot look into the face of a blooming dahlia or newly opened buttercup without having the thought to arise in your mind, who made this? You cannot stand out under the skies at night or on the beach of the rolling ocean without the same interrogation arising in your mind. Men can get away from each other by moving to different parts of the city or different parts of the country, but we cannot get away from God. Every day is a reminder that He is alive and alive in tenderness and love.

"We are accustomed to think that things cannot be except they have a purpose. We may not have discovered the purpose of some things, but when man looks in upon his own heart he cannot come to any other conclusion but that the purpose of his existence is immortality with the Almighty Father. Our minds are clouded and we think in error. We blame God for our sins and accuse Him of being the source of our sickness and our disasters and sometimes such criminal transactions as the great war, but God is not a part of man's unholiness. The roots of our sins and our crimes are in ourselves and God gives to us the right of self-mastery which can only come by toil and overcoming every adversary until we shall stand with Him in the morning when the world of God's adjustment shall displace the world of man's injustice. Nature, history, philosophy, science, conscience and experience prove man's obligations both to himself and to God and opportunities are around us like open doors, inviting us to leave our meaner selves for the self that is most like God.

"We have sought to define God and try to find satisfaction there as though it bore some evidences of piety. We have chafed under His moral government as though we knew better what we needed than God. We have said in our hearts what we would do for others rather than what is being done. We have spent more time on the wrong road than we have in our attempt to discover the road in which alone walks Jesus whose paths are those mysterious paths of peace and light that satisfy the soul beyond any experience known to mortal man.

"Let us study the art of friendship, the art of manliness, the art of interpreting the Spirit of Christ to others as He interpreted the Spirit of God to us. Then all other occupations and all other tasks become but nursery games by the side of this the greatest task for the soul of man."

Dr. Ainslie is well known here, as well as all through the South, and his presence on the Hill this year is a source of pleasure to his many friends here. He arrived Saturday morning and has been entertained in the home of President and Mrs. Harper. On account of other engagements it was necessary for him to leave immediately after the sermon, but his presence here will be remembered for a long time by the student body.

Following the baccalaureate sermon this morning by Dr. Peter Ainslie the baccalaureate address was delivered this evening by President W. A. Harper of the college, to the graduating class. His message was, "The New Task of The College," the text being from Rev. 21:5. "And He that sat upon the throne said, behold, I make all things new." Dr. Harper brought to the students a message from his heart, and during the address he discussed the great need of religious education in the colleges, and the permeation of the spirit of Christ in the lives of all college students; that the colleges had failed in their duty to truly educate until they had instilled into the minds and hearts of the individuals some definite religious program for their life.

"Jesus Christ was the true," said Dr. Harper, "the real, the original progressive in Kingdom affairs. Forward is the only direction suitable to His teachings. The age in which we live is highly favored by its revelations of spiritual principles and its opportunities to apply them to new situations. There is no doubt the Gospel of Jesus Christ has a message for this hour, in the interpretation of which the college must play a large role. Colleges shall never be the same again as in the days before the world war, they will seek to equip themselves for life-direction with some essentially new ideals for the guidance of their attitude and conduct of life in the unfolding years.

"Central among these ideals we shall find a new and enlarged conception of Brotherhood's place in determining the relations of men. But the college cannot do this unless it makes Christ central in its curriculum. We must devise some plan by which religion may be taught in tax-supported institutions of higher learning.

"Democracy is not an end in itself and the college must give direction to democracy in terms of service. Too often the church has mistaken Christian activity for Christian service. The scope of service touches every realm of our life. But lest men should serve selfishly, with their eyes on the reward that ever blesses him who serves, the college must equip the leaders of men with the spirit of sacrifice.

"And finally, "for others," Class of 1919, let this be your motto as you pass out into the stirring realities of our troubled and uncertain time. "For others," this shibboleth shall admit you to the realm of the genuine servants of the race. It may bring you to the judgment seal of a Pilate, it may nail you to the Cross, it may send you into the tomb, even as it did our Lord. But why should you fear or falter?

"Such is the new task of the college. Such is Elon's task. May she be true in this crisis time."

MAY 19

Following the baccalaureate sermon and address Sunday of the college commencement the Class Day Exercises were held this morning. The college auditorium was full to overflowing with the many friends of the graduating members, and visitors of the college. The Class Day exercises is always an event of great interest in the commencement and proved to be no exception this year. The history of the class was rendered by Mr. Floyd, and the Class Prophecy, the Last Will and Testament, and the delivery of trophies to the members of the Class of '19 furnished merriment to all who were present, and the program was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The following program was rendered:

Devotional Exercises	J. F. Minnis
Welcome	Annie Lindsay Raper
Class History	Henry T. Floyd
Class Poem	Pearle Frances Teter
Class Prophecy	Leo D. Martin
Last Will and Testament	Ida Viola Wilkins
Delivery of Trophies	H. S. Hjardecastle

At 3:00 P. M. the society representatives delivered their orations and essays; two members from each of the three societies participating. The representatives were as follows:

Thelma Guldmar Burton	Psiphelian
The Woman of Tomorrow
Hobart M. Lynch	Clio
America's Mission
Percy E. Lindley	Philologia
Laborat Qui Vincit
Benjamin Bunn Suipe	Philologian
Democracy and Reconstruction
Toshio Sato	Psiphelian
Your Opportunity in the Land of Morning.

Immediately following the program of the Society representatives the Society reunions occurred in their respective halls.

At 5:00 P. M. the Art Exhibit was held in the Art Gallery of the West Dormitory, where the paintings and works of art of the students of the Department of Fine Arts were displayed.

At 6:00 P. M., the College Band gave a concert on the campus and rendered many pleasing numbers.

The last item of today's program was the Oratorio in the evening, "The Triumph of The Cross." This Oratorio was a decided success and was well received by all the music lovers. Under the supervision of Professor E. M. Betts of the Music Department the students composing the Oratorio have practiced faithfully, and made a fine show of talent this evening. The musical number of the commencement program is always enjoyed, and was looked forward to on this year's program.

MAY 20

The climax of the Elon College commencement occurred today, this being the final day of the commencement. At ten o'clock this morning the Graduation Exercises took place, the following program being rendered:

Salutatory by	Leo DeWitte Martin, Salutatorian
The Art of Failure	Hattie Edna Brown
Patriotism Purified	Henry Terrie Floyd
Woman's Place in Social Service	Bessie Lee Baldwin
"Carry On"	Leo DeWitte Martin
The Star of Hope	Minnie Atkinson
Social Education for Peace	William Carson King

Following the literary items of the program each member of the graduating class, twenty-four in number, were presented with a Bible by the President of the College, after which degrees were conferred and diplomas and certificates awarded.

The concluding item of the Graduating Exercises was the Valedictory Address by Howard Scott Hjardecastle, Valedictorian.

The memorial service in the afternoon was an event that will long be remembered in the history of Alamance County. Last year it will be remembered by the citizens of Alamance and Guilford Counties at the commencement a giant service flag was unfurled for the men in the service after an address by Governor T. W. Bickett. It was therefore very fitting that the College should hold a memorial service at its commencement this year in honor of the men that made the supreme sacrifice during the war. Col. Albert Cox of the 113th Artillery, which played an important part in the breaking of the Hindenburg line, was the orator.

Col. Cox in civilian life was a lawyer, and did full justice to the occasion by his oratory.

At the conclusion of the address a silk banner bearing gold stars representing the Elon men who died for the cause of freedom was unfurled. The President of the College read the names of those represented by the gold stars, and announced the memorial funds that had been established in the College by their parents and loved ones.

Also a service flag was unfurled bearing the letters "S. A. T. C." and carrying 112 stars, representing the men of the Elon S. A. T. C.

The giant service flag of the college was again unfurled bearing its full numbers of stars, over 800.

At this occasion many prominent men of Alamance County were seated on the stage and in reserved seats. The College chapel would not hold the crowds that thronged to hear Col. Cox.

At 5:00 P. M. the Art Exhibit occurred in the annex—2nd floor, of the West Dormitory, where the works of the diploma and certificate pupils in the Art Department were displayed.

This evening the concluding number of the commencement program occurred. The Alumni Address, by Mrs. W. A. Harper, followed by the Alumni Banquet in the College Dining Hall was the final item. Mrs. Harper graduated with the Class of '99. Her subject was, "Shoulder to Shoulder."

"Woman," said Mrs. Harper, "is by nature intended to obey, but not to be regarded as the inferiors of man. All through history men have ever placed women under guardianship and perpetually violated the trust committed to their tutelage. The religions of the world are man-made. Women are naturally religious and religion has been deftly fashioned to terrorize and submerge them.

"As we women view the intricacies of the mental operativeness of men to perpetuate and untenable conception as to the relations of the male and female created in God's image, we would lose heart and conclude with Lady Somerville, 'the more we see of men, the better we like dogs,' but for the teaching of our Master. Progress, we recognize, to be a painful process, tedious, but sure, and in the long run self-interest will surrender to simple right and elemental justice, and when that day has come, as come it will, the epic of woman's patient suffering will crown the racial accomplishment with a glory never to be dimmed.

"Women, with their wonderful intuition and love for service, when given an equal chance, will become evangelists of light. We shall transform the world in that day of equality marching "shoulder to shoulder" with men by deeds of mercy and love."

MAY 21

Commencement closed officially here Tuesday night but the Board of Trustees did not conclude its session until a late hour last night, and many things of a constructive character were passed upon by the Board, which have since been announced.

From the students' point of view the two most important items which the Board of Trustees passed were the fencing and grading of the athletic grounds and the erection of a grandstand, and permission for the college to engage in foot ball, which for twenty-nine years has been strenuously opposed. The grounds on which the Board of Trustees finally yielded on the foot ball question was that the sport was not the inhuman thing it once was and that it would bring opportunity for a larger number of the students to be engaged in athletics. The alumni were heartily in favor of it as well as the student body, and the permission to engage in this sport for the future was passed without a dissenting vote.

The alumni association with the approval of the Board has decided to employ a secretary whose residence shall be at the College and whose duties shall be to stimulate the alumni in methods of loyalty and support to Alma Mater. Next year is to be the official home-coming year and a committee of seven was appointed with C. C. Foyville as chairman, and instructions were given to secure a large tent and provide cots to take care of the inflow of alumni at the 1920 commencement. The alumni orator for next year is Hon. S. E. Everett, Suffolk, Va., with Hon. G. E. Whitley, Smithfield, as alternate. The Alumni scholarship was awarded to Miss Zula Patterson, Franklinville, N. C.

The Summerbell scholarship was won by Miss Bertha Paschal, Manson, N. C. The Stanford Orator's medal was won by L. D. Martin, Suffolk, Va. Miss Minnie Atkinson, Mullins, S. C., won the Moffitt essayist medal, and He S. Hardecastle, of Dover, Del., won both the Morrow Thesis medal and the Wellons scholarship medal.

Rev. L. E. Smith, pastor of the Third Christian church, Norfolk, Va., was given the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity.

The Board of Trustees appointed a special committee to outline a system of accrediting college hours and official positions. This committee will report to the Executive Board their findings. The design is to prevent college offices accumulating to the hurt of the individual student, too many on one man. The investigation will cover the practices of the colleges throughout the country.

It was also voted that beginning with the summer of 1920 an Institute of Religious Education will be held for a six weeks' term, and the President is authorized to plan for this school, select the faculty for it, and bring it to the attention of the Christian leaders. It is the purpose of the college through this Institute to do for the teachers in Sunday school and other Christian works what the summer schools for professional teachers are doing in the secular branches.

The Board of Trustees unanimously voted to confer the degree of A. B. upon John Carl Miller of the Class of '19 and upon Charles Nottingham Whitelock of the Class of '18, and the degree of Ph. B. upon William Frank Odum of the Class of '18. These men gave up their courses to enter the world war and gave up their lives in the cause of freedom. These diplomas will be mailed to their parents and they will be included in the list of graduates of their respective classes. Twelve other Elon men are definitely known to have lost their lives, but they had completed their courses here before they entered the war. Should it develop when the official casualty list has been finally passed upon that other men who left their college course to enter the service have given up their lives they too will be decorated with their degrees.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—FARMER

Whereas, God in His wisdom has seen fit to take from our number, by death on the 13th day of March, 1919, our esteemed Brother, David Samuel Farmer, who, for years has been a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, be it Resolved:

2. That we commend to the members of this Board and to our successors the beautiful spirit of devotion and sacrifice that has ever characterized the life of our consecrated, modest Christian brother in the discharge of every duty he has been called upon to perform for the College—he loved so well, as well as for every other enterprise of his Church.

3. That we extend to the bereaved wife and children our profound sympathy in this hour of supreme distress, commending them to the mercies of a kind Heavenly Father who can heal every wound and dispel every sorrow.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Farmer, a copy spread upon the minutes of this Board, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—LEE

Whereas, Trustee Willis J. Lee, of Nansemond County, Virginia, came to his death suddenly today, and whereas, he was for thirty years a faithful trustee and loyal friend of the College, therefore be it Resolved:

1. That we record our sincere appreciation of his Christian character and faithful service to the College and the cause of Christ. No man among us has been more generous and faithful. He was modest and humble yet brave and strong in every field where duty called him. His counsel was wise, his example worthy of emulation.

2. That we bow in humble submission to the will of God who doeth all things well. We thank our Heavenly Father for extending his life well beyond three score and ten years, and we devoutly pray that God may raise up some worthy successor in our beloved Zion.

3. That we extend to Mrs. W. J. Lee and the family our sincere sympathy in their great bereavement and pray that His divine grace may be sufficient in this dark hour.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

HERE AND THERE

I preached at Martha's Chapel second Sunday in April at 11 o'clock and administered the Communion, the pastor, Rev. B. J. Howard not being ordained. At 3 o'clock P. M., I preached at O'Kelleys Chapel and after the service enjoyed a privilege that I had long desired—that of visiting the resting place of the Christian hero, the founder of the Christian Church, Rev. James O'Kelly. When I preached at the grave where his remains lay, I must confess, I was humiliated. The grave was covered with vines and surrounded by bushes and briars. And again, when I looked at the simple square stone that marks his resting place, and found almost nothing on it, I said in my heart that we as a people had failed to show our appreciation for this great man who fought the battle and gained freedom and liberty for the Christians. Mr. Upchurch, whose wife is the nearest relative to James O'Kelly, went with me to the grave.

The fourth Sunday I preached at Chapel Hill—morning and evening, and administered the emblems of the body and blood of Christ to a large number of communicants. Rev. B. J. Howard is pastor of these churches, and is highly spoken of by his people.

The first Sunday in this month I preached to a large congregation in the First Presbyterian church in the city of Richmond, Va. Here I found a spiritually minded people. Dr. McFaden, the pastor of this church, is a grand and noble man. This church edifice has been standing for 107 years and Dr. McFaden is the seventh pastor. When I was through preaching I was met by a number of our own people, who have moved into this city, and have no church home. Some of our people, for the lack of having no church of our own denomination, have placed their membership with other branches of the Church, and have gone to work. The longer we wait, the more we will lose. Richmond is a beautiful city, and why not take our place there along with the other branches of God's Church?

Yesterday, (May 11), I preached at home, Elon College, to a very appreciative congregation. And now for all these blessed gospel privilege to witness for my Master, I give Him all the praise.

Next Sunday, (May 18), I go to Moore Union, where I began my first pastoral charge forty-four years ago. This is my fourth term with them. The condition here is not what we would like to see it, but from what they tell me there is some indications for improvement. We are praying daily for a great revival at this place. Pray with us.

A SUNDAY IN NORFOLK, VA.

The writer was invited to supply for Memorial Temple in Norfolk the second Sunday in May. A very beautiful exercise for Mothers' Day was held in the Sunday school. Lovely flowers, carefully and tastfully arranged about the pulpit and other places, were very inviting and added much to the service.

I listened with delight and helpfulness to Dr. Baird as he taught the Men's Bible Class in a very impressive manner. He seemed to put his best thoughts and energy into the teaching of the lesson. He is kept busy as a physician to the City Home and is doing a great work there as well as in his church work and city practice. He and his wife lived in Windsor some years ago when I was pastor there. They were popular and had many friends. I dined with him on Sunday and was entertained in his home in a delightful way by Brother Baird and his wife, who is a splendid Christian woman. They have a quiet and pleasant home and are consecrated workers for the Lord.

I was glad to preach for these people and greatly enjoyed the kindness shown me.

A VISIT TO NORTHERN ALABAMA

The writer reached Cullman County on Friday afternoon before the fourth Sunday in April and preached at the home of Brother J. E. Almon that evening. Saturday at 11:00 A. M., I preached in the Methodist church and Saturday evening at Brother J. C. Brown's. Sunday morning at 11:00 o'clock I again preached at the church. We have a small organization in this vicinity and it seems to me that we might soon have a strong church. We need to put our hearts and hands to the task and erect a building of our own. There are a number of heads of families in this community who have never made a profession of religion, and as they learn of the Christian Church they speak favorably of its principles, and we would be glad for them to unite with us.

From the above named place I went to Brother J. G. Bryan's, a distance of fifteen miles, and preached in a Baptist church. This is in the corner of Blunt County and is a fine section for farming and there are good homes, too. We think that there is an opening here for our church.

The things that the Christian denomination need in North Alabama are men and money. I trust that God will call men from some part of the Southern Convention soon, in order that the work may go forward. Brother Hughes worked faithfully in this field for two years during the period of the war. I feel that we need one or two men in the field, not to plow five or six days in the week, but to represent the Christian Church and he will find enough to do that will pay us. Brother Carter, let us hear from you when you return from Northern Alabama.

ALABAMA LETTER

Dear Brother Riddle:—

I am at Lagrange, Ga., for a few days, in a meeting with Rev. C. W. Hanson. Prospects are good for a fine meeting. I am seeing a number of my old friends and quite a few of my new ones.

A few years ago I was pastor here, and I am glad to be among the flock once more. But a goodly number have crossed over and are at rest, and I am glad to say that I find many others who seem to be ready.

It seems that the work here is in fairly good condition. Brother Hanson is here for two Sundays in each month and the people have the utmost confidence in him. In fact his home is here which makes it so much better for the church.

Our work in this country is suffering for the lack of service, the cause generally is suffering for more men. We need some good, strong, young men in these two Conferences, and especially in South Georgia.

I am just from Enigma and Vanceville. These little churches are trying to co-operate, and are in need of a man to locate in their midst. I am trying to preach there this year, and the prospects are encouraging; and if some good man can be induced to locate in their midst a great work can be done. Who will step out on the Altar and say: "Here am I, send me"?

The work at Enigma, Vanceville and Ambrose, which are some thirty miles away, will support a man and keep him on the field. Can it be done? Who will answer the question?

SUFFOLK LETTER

At the close of the Suffolk Sunday school on April 27, 1919, a photograph of Captain Robert B. Brinkley was presented to the school by his niece, Miss Margaret

A. Brinkley. Captain Brinkley was one of the twenty-five charter members. His parents lived near the mill, now the pumping station of the water works. He and his sisters were members of the choir and sang at the dedication the second Sunday in March 1861. In April of that year the church met to organize a Sunday school and elected Captain Robert B. Brinkley and Captain James A. Turrentine superintendents; but war had been declared, both volunteered and the school was not conducted. Brinkley was Captain of Company L, Va. Infantry, Mahones Brigade and, "after faithful and distinguished service, was killed at Hanover Junction in May 1864." His body was taken to Petersburg, Va., and forwarded to Suffolk by Rev. W. B. Wellons, and carried to the family burying ground near Cypress Chapel. Peter Duke, a nephew of Col. A. Savage, and a colored man conveyed the body from Suffolk to the country in a wagon at night; and Peter used to say "that he was scared almost to death." He was a boy of eighteen years old. The portrait is an enlarged copy of a Civil War photograph, in his uniform, and is placed on the wall of the Sunday school fifty-five years after his death.

Captain James A. Turrentine, Burlington, N. C., is the only surviving charter member of this church, and his picture graces the main Sunday school room, back of the platform. The old clock on the wall is between them. Captain Turrentine says he skinned the pine poles for the scaffolding in the erection of the old church. The pulpit Bible in the Sunday school here was given by Captain and Mrs. Turrentine; and the old pulpit Bible in New Providence church was also given by them. I was impressed by that fact when I came from Graham to Suffolk, that both pulpits had Bibles given by the same devoted Christians. It seems from the records that Captains Brinkley and Turrentine were elected joint superintendents or superintendent and assistant superintendent. When the Brinkley portrait was presented, W. T. Beamon, the present superintendent, responded in fitting words of acceptance and thanks to Miss Brinkley for this gift to the school. Their pictures now face us every Sunday and remind us of the beginning of a Sunday school in this church.

The Sunday school was a small institution in this country before the Civil War. It has grown to twenty millions with a million officers and teachers, and a literature that is immense in its quantity, and splendid in its quality. No mind can estimate the full value of the Sunday school. Many are wanting to change the name and call it "The Bible School," "The Church School," or by some other name. I enter my protest against any change of name. It puts emphasis on Sunday, and we need that emphasis because so many things tend to ignore Sunday. It is more than a Bible school; it is more than a church school; you can have either of those schools on secular days; it is a SUNDAY school. It helps men to remember the day to keep it holy.

NEWPORT NEWS, VA.

The work of the East End Christian church continues to progress nicely. The Sunday school is well attended and a good and great work is being done by it for the rising generation. The regular church and prayer meeting services are well attended and a lively interest is being shown by the people.

On May 16 The Christian Endeavor Society was reorganized and a contest for new members was put on. This contest is to last a month at the close of which time a social will be given and a business meeting held. The Society meets on Monday night at eight o'clock. This past Monday night was the first meeting and at the opening service the pastor led the meeting. There were fifty-five in attendance, the majority being young folks. We aim to have one of the best Endeavor Societies anywhere in this section before long.

Last week Rev. J. V. Knight of Greensboro, N. C., and Rev. G. O. Lankford of Berkley, Va., were our visitors in the interest of the Elon Standardization Fund. We were glad to have them and we folks of the East End Christian church will do our part on this endowment.

With best wishes for the work of our beloved Church and earnest prayers for the men and women of all communions who are in the great work of building a New World and training the New Humanity for the best possible service to the world and their fellow man:

MEMORIAL DAY AT BETHLEHEM

May 18 was our annual memorial day at Bethlehem. The weather was pleasant and the people came in large numbers until the church was more than filled. At eleven o'clock Rev. W. C. Wicker preached the memorial sermon. It was a discourse filled with good thoughts and inspiring truths. At the close the children marched into the cemetery bearing flowers which they placed upon the graves of departed loved ones.

In the afternoon dedicatory services were conducted by the pastor, after which Rev. P. H. Fleming preached for us. We were glad to have these visiting brethren with us and hope they will come again.

DEDICATORY SERVICE AT BETHLEHEM CHURCH

MAY 18, 1919

(Delivered by Pastor Rev. J. W. Holt)

More than one hundred years ago when the hills that overlook the River which flows between them, and when dense forests of oak covered nearly the whole land, the people who lived in this section established a place for the worship of Almighty God in a building made of hewed logs furnished with simple benches for seats. As the years went by and population increased better houses and seats took the place of the first ones, and today finds us enjoying more comfortable and modern pews.

This result has been brought about by a proposition made to the church a little over one year ago by Brother Daniel Davis Sutton in which he generously proposed to pay $800.00 towards the cost of new seats in honor of his father if the church would raise the balance. His proposition was accepted by the church and the result is that we have new seats, and have them paid for, and in addition we have five dozen folding chairs to be used when crowded. This addition is made as a memorial in honor of Brother Rily Sutton who was for many years collector, treasurer, and deacon of Bethlehem Christian church. Other improvements have been made recently to the appearance and comfort of the church.

In grateful appreciation of the liberal contributions of all who have helped in this matter, and in recognition of the blessings of our Heavenly Father by which alone it could be done, and further as expression of our desire and purpose to honor Him and to advance His kingdom among men, we wish now to solemnly and unitedly consecrate this addition to our house of worship to the service of God, and to present the same as an offering to his divine goodness.

The audience will stand while we solemnly present these things to God in behalf of the church and congregation.

The Prayer

Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, we present the pews and chairs and other improvements which we have placed in this church as an offering unto Thee, to be dedicated to Thy divine service and to the upbuilding of Thy kingdom on earth.

We dedicate them to be used by devout worshippers to holy meditation, and to earnest inquiry after the truth by all who may occupy them from time to time in coming years.

We dedicate them to the free use of all who are seeking to know the truth, to find the way of life, and to do thy service.

We dedicate them to the glory of God our Father, to Jesus Christ our Redeemer, and to the Holy Spirit our Comforter, now and forever. Amen and Amen.

LADIES' AID BETHLEHEM CHURCH

The Ladies' Aid Society of Bethlehem Christian church was organized in the year 1890 by Rev. J. W. Holt with ten charter members.

The object of this society is to raise funds for the benefit of Bethlehem church, and other good causes.

The first meeting was held February 16, 1890, with the following officiating members:

President, Miss Addie Rippy, now Mrs. O. P. Shelton and an active member in the Ladies' Aid Society of the Christian church of Burlington. Vice President, Miss Octavia Ireland, who is now a member of Berea Christian church. Treasurer, Mrs. L. D. Rippy, formerly Miss Sudie Waynick, and still a member of this Society. Secretary, Miss Iola Hall Simpson, deceased.

This Society has continually grown and at the present time we have 71 members.

During this time the Society has collected the sum of $684.71. This money has been used for the benefit of the Church, the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, and other causes.

Since the organization of the Society, there are several who have withdrawn their names to join other churches. Several active members have died. They are: Nancy Isley, Ida I. Kernodle, Georgiana Kernodle, Rachael Sutton, Madison Smith, Mary Kernodle, Margaret McCray, Daisy Shepherd, Sally Isley, Hepsy Barber, Esther Rippy, Malinda Sutton, Elizabeth Simpson, Bettie Holt, Isabella Smith, Annie Faucette, Lena Wagoner, Iola Simpson, Minnie Smith.

The following are the officiating members: Miss Fannie Paschal, president; Miss Lottie McCray, secretary.

HIGH POINT

On Wednesday evening, April 30, 1919, at 8:00 P. M., the evangelistic services began at High Point and continued for ten days. The ministerial help became sick and was not able to be with me any during the meeting, so the pastor had to do all of the preaching. It seemed that the Lord was putting me to the test. The task was large but the Lord gave strength. It seemed the largest task that I had ever undertaken but the Lord gave victory.

The church was greatly revived. Pastor and people were drawn closer in purpose and effort. Cottage prayer meeting groups were held a few weeks previous to the beginning of the meeting which was a great power for the success of the revival. I never have had a finer spirit of co-operation on the part of the militant church in my previous experience. This is a good and progressive people to serve which is a pastor's joy.

The visible results were not as much as we had hoped to see. There were five professions of faith in Christ, several for prayer and four united with the church. There are more to come in yet.

During the meeting on Saturday night before the first Sunday in May was the regular time for quarterly Conference. The church met at an appointed hour. Besides regular reports, one thing was accomplished which all had worked and prayed to see done. The note of indebtedness was covered and all went home feeling good. No other important business claimed the attention of the church, the meeting adjourned for three months hence.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Field Mission Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, Elon College, N. C., has promised to preach the dedicatory reunion which is to take place the first Sunday in June at eleven o'clock. Every one interested is cordially invited to attend.

The Sunday school and church are going to observe Children's Day in June. The Sunday school is giving one offering each month to the Christian Orphanage and one to Missions.

For all of the above blessings and accomplishments we are grateful and to God be all the glory.

L. L. WYRICK.

Elon College, N. C.

Last Sunday the Editor was scheduled to be at Concord in Caswell county, eighteen miles from Burlington, with Rev. L. L. Wyrick in an all day service. A down pour of rain from early morning till about 2 P. M., prevented any one coming for us, and so far as we know, prevented the services.

MISSIONARY

PUSHING SPIRITUALITY ASIDE

I found this very significant utterance in The Ohio State Journal of April 29th and I very much wish CHRISTIAN SUN readers could and would all see, read and carefully weigh it. Are its statements true? Read and answer:

"In an address by John Galsworthy at Columbia University, last Wednesday, the renowned author spoke of the tendency of the times, and said, 'if America should get that purse and power proud fever, which comes from national success, we are all destined to another flare-up.' We go about bragging of our tons of pig iron, bushels of wheat, and balances in the bank, without understanding that all these material things are simply millstones about the neck unless we grace them with much spiritual purpose. A man with simply materialistic power is not worthy of honor or praise. He is nothing; worse than nothing. Mr. Galsworthy says:

"We were rattling into a new species of barbarism when the war came, and unless we check ourselves, shall continue to rattle, now it is over. The underlying cause in every country is the increase of herd-life, based on machines, money-getting, and the dread of being dull.

"But power for real light and leading in America will depend, not so much on her material wealth, or her armed force, as on what her attitude towards life, and what the ideals of her citizens are going to be."

"We are spending billions and billions in making the world better and really how much better is it? How much less is there of selfishness vice, overreaching, prejudice, distrust than a few centuries ago? Indifference and vice are more respectable than they were a few centuries ago. But their hold on human life is nearly as strong. Why? Because we are pushing spirituality and religion aside and putting on style and frivolity, which unrestrained, are as hurtful to a nation as espionage."

Are we pushing spirituality aside? Long, long ago One asked very candidly and very seriously, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" And what will it profit a nation if it get all the riches of earth, and push spirituality aside?

J. O. ATKINSON.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

THE RIGHT KIND OF A MAN

While pastor of our church, at Newport News, Va., I went over town, from the East End, one Sunday afternoon, and listened to an address by a man by the name of Williams. His subject was that given above. I still have the impression that the address was a good one, though I am not able to reproduce it. This reminds me of a young lady who was questioned, on returning from a preaching service. She said the sermon was fine and that she enjoyed it but she did not remember the text nor anything the minister said.

In regard to the address of which I speak, I do remember the outline and have carried it with me for these years, although not being able to recall the body of the address. The speaker said that the right kind of a man must be right—First, in conscience; second, in conduct; third, in companionship; fourth, in competency; fifth, in character, positive, sympathetic, tolerant, stable; sixth, in consolation; seventh, in consecration; eighth, he must be right with Jesus Christ.

These are the eight points of the address as I remember them, but as it occurs to me now, they all might be summed up under the last, that of being right with Jesus Christ. If a man is right with Him, he is all right but if he is not right with Christ, he may have many good qualities but he still lacks the essential as held up in the above named points.

We cannot be right with Jesus Christ by accepting his words yet denying his works. We cannot accept his ethical teachings and deny the Virgin birth, his blood atonement, his resurrection and miracles.

If we cannot remember the main points that are characteristic of the right kind of a life, and a life that is well pleasing to God. We can be right with Jesus Christ and thus have them all, "For to me, to live is Christ." "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me, and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God who loved me and gave himself for me."

W. D. HARWARD.

LOOK UNTO ME

When we can put our minds and eyes upon the wonderful, the beautiful and the sublime things of creation, how much better we feel and how much better we appear with such delightful and profitable exercise! And while thus beholding the great and wonderful things of God the impressions are deep and profound. Some things are very attractive while others are repulsive, but the most attractive things are not always the safest and best for our good. You have seen many beautiful and attractive flowers, but it was not safe to gather them because they were poison, so you had to leave them alone. Some other rare flowers you have seen which you ardently desired to take but they were imbedded in thickly set thorns which would pierce and hurt the fingers in the effort to pluck them. And much, very much to your regret you had to leave them, but in the end it was far better that you did. It seemed so hard to resist them, for above everything else you wanted them the most. But after a while you saw it was better that you did not gather those flowers.

In like manner many of the sins of life invite us to engage in them; they are so alluring, so attractive, so beautiful, as you think, that there is a constant and earnest desire to engage in them. The most sinful, the most beautiful and attractive things are often dressed in the most winsome and inviting way; so very much so that it even becomes difficult to resist their powerful influence. You have seen beautiful colored serpents, but you would not dare to touch them with even one of your fingers, because they would bite you. You admired and loved the color, but you hated the snake. You admire and love many sinful pleasures but you hate the terrible, the awful effects of those pleasures.

Experience and observation enable us to understand and appreciate more fully the true, the pure and the good, and help greatly in a right discrimination of their character. After the terrific grandeur of the thunderstorm we appreciate more fully the calm. The dashing waves tossed over the deep sea fringed with white foamed beauty are admirable to behold, even in the midst of the storm, but how delightful to look at the water when the waves are at rest upon the placid bosom of the deep water! Yes, after the storm is over, how delightful, pleasant to rest in the calm hours of repose!

After a long time of sickness it makes you so very happy to be restored to health again, and to engage into the activities of life. And you enjoy and appreciate health better because you understand what it is to be well. Rest is also enjoyed more after labor. The labor enables you to rest well, and you realize what rest means. And in a like manner you greatly enjoy life after trouble and much anxiety.

It is not always best to have all we want although the heart craves for it.

Windsor, Va.

A PRAYER

O great Lord of the harvest, send forth, we beseech Thee, laborers into the harvest of the world, that the grain which is even now ripe may not fall and perish through our neglect. Pour forth Thy sanctifying Spirit on our fellow-Christian abroad, and Thy converting grace on those who are living in darkness. Raise up, we beseech Thee, a devout ministry among the native believers, that, all Thy people being knit together in one body, in love, Thy Church may grow up into the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ; through Him who died, and rose again for us all, the same Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.—Bishop Milman.

NOTES

Remember that the State Christian Endeavor Convention meets in Burlington, June 6-8.

Rev. J. O. Cox changes his address from Asheville, N. C., to Flat Rock, N. C.

We regret to note the death of Rev. R. L. Williams's mother-in-law, also the sickness of his wife's father.

Rev. H. S. Harcastle preached in our Raleigh church last Sunday in the absence of the pastor, Rev. Geo. D. Eastes.

Brother B. J. Howard has offered his resignation of the work at Chapel Hill to take effect August 1. He is open for work elsewhere.

Persons desiring copies of Children's Day programs will be furnished same gratis by Rev. J. O. Atkinson, Secretary, Elon College, N. C.

The Board of Trustees of Elon College, in session last week, conferred the degree of D. D. upon Rev. Leon Smith, Norfolk, Virginia. An honor well bestowed and will be worn with credit to the Church.

Brother O. D. Poythress writes that the church at South Norfolk is now in the third week of a most successful meeting. More than seventy professions and forty-eight additions to the church. Brother Poythress is doing the preaching and is conducting the singing.

Tuesday afternoon, May 20, Mr. Willis J. Lee, Bennett Creek, Virginia, passed to his reward. His passing means the loss of one of the Church's most devoted members. Brother Lee was a warm friend to every enterprise of the Church. The Orphanage, the College, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the Missionary enterprises, all had a place in his heart and purse. He was a man of God and lived a life that portrayed the spirit of Christ. At the time of his death preparations were being made in his home for the celebration of the Golden Wedding of Brother and Sister Lee. We are not in possession of facts concerning his age and other details of his life. To his widow and many friends we extend sympathy.

Mr. L. C. March, a member of Elon's 1916 Class, entered the service of his country shortly after his graduation. Several months ago he was reported missing in action, and not being found, was reported dead by the information authorities of the Government on October 6, 1918. His name appeared in the regular casualty list, and a special note was made of it in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of November 6, 1918. Some weeks ago he reached this country and is now at home near Holland, Va. He is a member of Holy Neck church. We rejoice with his parents and friends that he is still alive. The Editor having been reported dead twice himself a few years ago knows how to appreciate with his classmate what it means to still be alive, and to receive the congratulations of his friends.

COLLEGE ADVERTISING CONTEST

The "puzzle type" that appeared on the back page of THE CHRISTIAN SUN May 14 created no little amount of interest. We were pleased to hear expressions concerning it from various parts of the Brotherhood, and while only thirteen sent papers to enter the contest, we are grateful for the many others who spoke of it and manifested an interest in its solution.

We received five correct papers, and eight papers that were not correct. We take pleasure in printing below the names of all persons who participated, and list them in order received indicating after each name the per cent made:

BROTHER FRANKS REPLIES

In a recent issue of THE SUN we asked Brother J. E. Franks to tell us how he managed to get so many new subscriptions. He replies and we deem his letter worthy of a place in this paper. Here it is:

No, Brother Riddle, I haven't any patent on getting subscriptions for The Sun. If there is a possibility of helping others, I will try to tell first why I get subscriptions and second, how I get them.

Why Get Subscriptions

You are giving us a first class religious paper. I consider it good, clean, and wholesome. The Sun is free from secular advertisements, and well edited. It represents the general interest of our Church, and is vigorously pushing forward its enterprises.

Every member of our Church should have the information and inspiration that The Sun gives. We do a good deed when we get The Sun into a home. As we extend The Sun's circulation we enable you, Brother Editor, to devote more time and secure additional talent that should give us a bigger and better paper, and consequently be a greater blessing to our cause.

How to Get Subscriptions

Earnestly go after them, realizing that duty and fidelity demand that you do your best. Exemplify some of the tact and determination of successful business salesman. Don't be shamed to speak of The Sun in public. Though you may be able to tell the public, eloquently, of its worth and great good, don't stop there and depend on that alone. Personal solicitation with the belief that "I can if I will, and I will if I can," will generally get them.

J. E. FRANKS.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

(Warren H. H. Denison, D. D., Superintendent)

$2,000,000 Is Our Goal

The Forward Movement Committee had several meetings and enlarged the scope of the Forward Movement. It was decided to include all the regular benevolences of the whole Church from January 1, 1918 to January 1, 1923. This will include, not only the Forward Movement financial drive in five year subscriptions but all the general Home and Foreign Mission, Education, Convention, and all other benevolent offerings of the Convention, the college drives, gifts to benevolent institutions, conference, state, and district convention offerings in so far as they pass through the hands of treasurers. Thus they placed the goal of the Forward Movement at $2,000,000. It will be seen at once that this is a much larger financial program than the Movement had anticipated. It is made necessary by the great needs of the Church that she may do her share in meeting the world's needs. It challenges us to much larger service and giving than we have ever undertaken before.

It was decided that the canvass for the financial goal in our five point program should be made within the next eighteen months; that the Movement should finance itself after the initial promotion fund has been expended; the endowment and active funds were made more elastic, giving to the donor a chance to express his wish to which fund they should go; and in case no expression is given, the recipient church boards are to use their judgment in placing the funds in either of these two funds.

Three persons were added to the Forward Movement committee of twenty-four, thus making a committee of twenty-seven. The committee is limited to thirty. The new persons are President A. G. Caris, Defiance, Ohio; Rev. W. J. Hall, Franklin, N. H.; Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, D. D., Urbana, Illinois.

The Convention Expresses Itself

The Convention unanimously and enthusiastically adopted the following resolution, as well as the above recommendations of the Forward Movement committee:

Resolved, That this Convention, in quadrennial session, hereby gives its hearty and strongest endorsement to the Forward Movement of the Christian Church, as our deamination's answer to Christ's call and challenge for these wonderful days, and pledge ourselves sacredly as officials, ministers, delegates, both in our representative and individual capacity, to aggressively carry out this five-point program, recognizing that these five points are fundamentals in Christian and church activity. We express the conviction that this Movement is divine in inspiration and purpose. We believe that our brethren were led of God to present such a program for our Church. We believe that it will help us to fill our place and do our part in these days of reconstruction. We offer our allegiance to The Forward Movement of the Christian Church and pledge our co-operation to those who are called to direct its activities."

Mrs. A. E. Hines.—I enjoy reading THE SUN and trust that you will have much success in your work.

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

The financial report this week takes us past the sixth mile post or the six thousand dollar mark. We have been reaching thousand dollar mile posts right along since the Easter offering has been coming in. The response to the Easter offering has been beautiful and we are glad. We now number fifty-seven children and our expense is much more than it was when we had a smaller number. We have used the last barrel of flour we had on hand, and from now till our wheat crop is garnered, we will have to buy flour. Flour, meat and lard are three big items in our expense account.

It was a great pleasure for us to have the Board of Trustees with us on Tuesday, May 20, and a number of visitors who were attending the Commencement at Elon College.

Our little folks are always happy to have the Board meet with us for on that day we always set them up to ice cream and they enjoy it.

We are glad to have visitors because we find that the more we can get people to come to see us and look into the faces of the children and see the opportunity the Church has for doing a great work for the Master through this Institution, the more they become interested.

The following contributions have come in since our last report:

L. C. Huffines, two suits and collars; Berea Christian church, Norfolk, 25 yards sheeting; Rosemont Christian church, South Norfolk, 25 yards sheeting and one counterpane; Mrs. J. L. Pointer, two sheets; Intermediate Class Pleasant Grove church, (Va.), two sheets; The Ladies' of Catawba Springs church and friends of the Orphanage, members of other churches who are friends to the Orphanage, two counterpanes, one sheet, 35 yards double sheeting; Ladies' Aid Society, Berea church, (Nansemond County), Va., one counterpane and three towels; T. E. Brickhouse, two boxes of oranges for Easter, (overlooked in previous report); Ladies' Aid Society, Shallow Well church, six sheets and one pair of pillow cases; Mrs. J. P. Sharpe, Cummoek, N. C., 12 sheets and one pair of pillow cases for the Ladies' Aid Society.

WHAT GERMANY FACES

At this writing, (May 23), Germany has not signed the Peace Treaty. Here are some of the main things to which she must submit when she signs:

The League of nations made a part of the treaty to be signed.

Internationalization of the Saar Basin for a number of years.

Permanent internationalization of Danzig.

Territorial changes in Belgium and in East Prussia.

Cession of Upper Silesia to Poland.

Creation of international labor body.

Creation of commissions for holding various plebiscites.

Leaving disposition of former German colonies to Allies.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR
JUNE 8, 1919

Obedience. Gen. 12:1-4; Matt. 7:16-29; John 15:21-24.

Golden Text: Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I commend you. John 15:14.

Thoughts For Teachers

"Wherefore seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witness," says the writer of Hebrews, speaking of the faithful. Is it not equally true of the obedient? Has one a real faith if it is not a working faith? If you tell me you have placed a thousand dollars to my credit, have I real faith, no matter what I say, if I never draw or use a cent of the money?

"The Lord said unto Abram" or Isaac, or Jacob or Moses. Whenever they spoke, He answered, and told them what they desired to know. We are apt to say, it was easy to do right in those days. But we have the Word of God for the statement that God Who in times past spoke to and through His prophets, hath in these latter days spoken unto us through His own Son. They did not know, in the olden days, half so well as we, for the revelation was only a partial one; no matter how clear the voice of God might be, its applications and implications were necessarily limited by the ear of flesh which heard. But when His Son spoke, piercing, as it were that earthly veil, and permitting us to speak directly to our Father, the entire truth was given once for all. There remains only its direct application to our particular case, an application made by the Holy Spirit, who guides into all truth, and our obedience to the Heavenly vision.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
JUNE 8, 1919

Conditions necessary for world peace. Micah 4:1-15.

For peace as for everything else of value, other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, even Jesus Christ. Men cry peace, peace today, and there is no peace. The world is in turmoil and trouble and perplexity. A veritable fire of trouble seems to be consuming parts of it. We are told that the League of Nations nowhere mention the name of God. If this be true, certainly it is that it will not accomplish the things designed by its founders. It may be, in a measure a success, but neither a righteous nor a lasting success. The Lord must build the house of the nation as well as the individual if it is to be founded on a rock.

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

GIVE THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS A CHANCE

Continued reports from our Sunday schools are exceedingly encouraging. They show that the schools want to grow and go forward. Marion Lawrance points out the fact to our consternation that the Sunday school has been losing out very rapidly the past year or two, and that during the same time juvenile crime has been on the increase. He says if the Sunday school continues to lose in the next decade as it has in the past two years, it will be extinct as an institution. The plain remedy is that the Sunday school must get to doing things for others. If the school lives just for itself, it has no right to live, and no claim to life. It may be selfish, as well as the individual may be. Why not seek to get out of the old idea of just living for self, just going on in the same old way, and begin to think, study, teach and do for others? The Sunday school has fallen into a groove, into a well-born rut. It needs to fall in with the spirit of this new time, and do something outside its own for the salvation of this wicked and sin-cursed world.

If any school thinks it cannot yet spare an offering once per month to help reach and save this wicked world, why not spend some time once per month at least in trying to find out the distress, the misery, the poverty, the want, the need of two-thirds of the human family today who are without the Gospel and without hope either in this world, or in that to come? Why not let the Sunday school understand that two out of three infants born into this world look up into the faces of mothers who can never tell them anything about the Blessed Christ, because those mothers themselves never heard that Name which is above every name and the One whereby, we must be saved, if we are saved? If the children in the Sunday school can learn such facts as these they will have pity, even if the grown-ups do not. Let's give our children in the Sunday school a chance to know and to understand. Is it not high time we were teaching missions in our Sunday schools, and teaching the pupils there to give of their means for missions? Give the Sunday schools a chance and see if they do not take on new life.

Slang

SLANG is mockery of our mother tongue, depreciates the fine elements of expression and cheapens our communication. It is a sign that the speaker's vocabulary is limited and that he takes his auditors to be on the same level. Slang in the mouth of the child takes from the home some of the sweets and is an inducement to be irreverent. Slang in the pulpit debases the Word of God and undervalues the Story of the Savior. Literature is too rich with choice words—words that convey thought—for the minister to resort to slang in order to lead men and women to a richer life.

EDITORIAL

CHURCH ADVERTISING

The topic for this article embraces too much territory for us to discuss all of it at one time. We are, therefore, undertaking to mention only one phase of church advertising.

It is custom of ours, and we presume a custom of many others, to look over the church notices in the Sunday paper. It is true that we do not read all of them, but usually look for the announcement of certain churches, and especially of our own denomination.

The church notices in the Sunday paper seem to be taking the place in the city of the time honored bell. The church notices in the Sunday paper meet our approval in every way, but the topics sometimes announced are not in accord with our way of thinking. We ask the question: What is the object of the church notice if it is not to give information? Some of the sermon topics given in these church notices are vague and convey no information whatever to the reader. Let us quote a few of them which we take from the papers before us: "A complaint and a challenge," "Seeing the invisible," "On the Gaza Road," "When the wife wishes she were single," "The telling of it," "A forgotten secret."

What reader of this article can tell what is to be discussed by reading these announced topics? What information do they convey? Or suppose that you are looking for a certain article, and wanting to know something about the article, a placard with words on it as vague as these was hung on the article, what information would you have about it?

The need of church publicity through the Sunday paper seems to be universally recognized, but we are wondering if we are not making some of these Sunday church notices about as interesting as a list of real estate transfers? Why should we desire to announce some subject in order to decoy the reader and get him to church? Is it not time that we begin to think about such tendencies and give the people the information that they need?

THE INDIVIDUAL CHURCH AND THE ELON ENDOWMENT

Just now there is a great responsibility resting upon the individual church in regard to the Elon Endowment of $250,000. Especially is this true of the church if it has not raised its quota. Every enterprise of the Church is united by a bond that is strong. Every enterprise of the Church needs the co-operation of every other enterprise. The local churches cannot live without linking themselves up to every enterprise of the Convention. No church in the Southern Christian Convention can afford to withhold its support from our College. It is a duty, a privilege and an opportunity.

The various churches have been asked to raise through their members a certain amount to apply on the endowment fund of our College. It ought to be the pride of each local church to see that its part of this fund is raised. What church desires to come up blank in the final report? What member of any local church will not be humiliated at such a statement? What pastor will not be humiliated to know that his church failed to do its duty and to grasp its opportunity?

EVADING THE LAW

The Siler City Grit, Siler City, N. C., an independent newspaper, has been writing editorially of late on a very important subject—the subject of punishing the guilty who continue to deal in the whisky traffic. The Grit points out that in its own county and in other sections the offenders of the law are often apprehended and brought to face their crime, but due to some spasmodic effort the question is settled and the offender goes free.

This paper continues: "The question is, shall a few law defying blockaders and whisky dealers set aside the will and the law of the majority of the honest, thrifty, law abiding people of this country?" This is the question important and not until penalties are dealt out sufficient will the whisky business be finally overcome. At the present price of this hellish fluid, a man can soon pay a small fine and will be glad to do so. We have prohibition in this country and why not unite and let it prohibit?

THE METHODIST AND BIG THINGS

Our Methodist brethren and sisters are showing us how to do big things for the Kingdom. The Southern Methodist went over the top in their drive for $35,000,000. The Methodist Episcopal church went over the top in its drive for $80,000,000. Of course they did. They were celebrating the one hundred anniversary of their missionary endeavor. It was in 1819 that Methodist missionary work began, though not till several years later did they send out their first foreign missionary.

When the Christian Church has for one hundred years been seriously engaged in the matter of missions, and has carried on a real missionary propaganda for a century, then it too can celebrate a centenary of missions and raise $105,000,000.00. But when are we to begin seriously that one hundred years? There is one reason and only one today why we are driving for $2,000,000 instead of fifty times that sum and that is because we have not been an active, aggressive missionary force. That is all.

“PRAY AND FAINT NOT”

Jesus taught His disciples that they should pray and not faint. This does not mean fainting in the ordinary term.

Many persons do not pray unless they have a particular desire to do so. They want to be prompted to pray. So often we pray when we do not feel in a prayerful attitude, but we believe that the reason for this is because of the lack of prayer. When we talk daily with the Lord, the association becomes pleasant and interesting.

It is only the snare of Satan to make us feel inclined to pray only when we feel like it. A very good time to pray is when we do not feel like it because that is the time when we need strength that is divine. Cultivate the habit of daily prayer.

TONING DOWN

We believe that Editor Johnson of the Biblical Recorder, Raleigh, N. C., is toning down somewhat as to the position of his paper on the union idea. Read the following editorial from his pen:

For quite awhile several of our papers have been warning their readers against the danger of being swept away by the union propaganda. These papers have urged our people to stand firmly by their convictions and for the integrity of our denomination. This paper has no apology to make for having used what influence it may possess, in behalf of denominational integrity. It believed there was real danger, and that a warning note needed to be sounded. The Convention in Atlanta puts itself on record so overwhelmingly and emphatically as opposed to union, or federation, of any kind that little more space will be needed for the publication of defensive matter.

There are two things, however, which, at this juncture, we should do. One is to cultivate a fraternal spirit, and the other is to leave the trenches and launch out in a great offensive movement. We must be very careful not to allow our opposition to union to engender a feeling of bitterness toward those with whom we think it best not to unite. They are our brethren, and they love the Lord, “whom we are and whom we serve.” They are as anxious to extend His Kingdom as we are, and many of them are making greater sacrifices than we, for the spread of His glorious gospel. While we differ as to the methods to be used for accomplishing the great task, we are one in wanting the thing done, and while we believe that each denomination should maintain its separate organization, we can, and should, have unity of spirit, and each division in the army should rejoice in every victory gained by any of the others. We should show to others that we are willing to co-operate with them whenever and wherever we can do so without a sacrifice of principle. We should make them to understand that it is conscience, and not a lack of fraternal feeling, which prevents us from going as far in the work of co-operation as they think we should go.

While we believe that our position as to union is the only consistent one and, therefore, the one that we must take, we should give those who differ from us credit for honesty of opinion. They, no doubt, are conscientious in the belief that by some sort of interdenominational movement the world can be more speedily evangelized. When the disciples told Christ that they had forbidden a man who was casting out devils in His name, Christ said, “Forbid him not, for no man can do a mighty work in my name, and straightway speak evil of me.”

We Baptists certainly cannot afford to spend all our time defending our position, while others are engaged in a great offensive. If the principles which we hold are worth so much to us, surely we should make every sacrifice within our power to give them to the world. A well known Baptist brother, who is in thorough accord with the position taken by the Southern Baptist Convention on the subject of union, said this to the writer the other day: “We Baptists profess to ‘stand by the Book,’ and we are true to our profession, we ‘stand by the Book,’ but the time has come when we should take the Book to the millions who have never seen it.”

With compassion for a lost world, loyalty to Christ and His Word, and love to all who love our Lord, we must launch out in a great offensive, and do our full part in this aggressive warfare.

Brother Johnson’s last paragraph says it all; there he admits the need of unity of the forces of Christ.

The ministers can help us materially this summer by sending short articles. Let them come along.

Watch your label, but not too long.

“A man may be down, but he is never out,” says a motto of the Salvation Army.

SMILE

He (silly with the season): “Really, I’m so fond of strawberries that I’d like to be straw-buried.”

She: “Well, I’d prefer to be ice-cremated.”—Boston Transcript.

“I never saw such a man as you are. I really believe you hate yourself.”

“Well, why shouldn’t I? My mother is English and my father is a German.”—Puck.

“What dirty hands you have, Johnny,” said his teacher. “What would you say if I came to school that way?”

“I wouldn’t say nothin’,” replied Johnny. “I’d be too polite.”

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

BETTER THINGS FOR THE CHRISTIAN DENOMINATION

The spirit of a forward movement is in the air. Perhaps no small denomination in the United States has given more time, thought and energy during the past year to devise and perfect plans for aggressive effective work. Especially in our missionary and educational work largeness of vision, a buoyant spirit, a hopefulness, an earnestness and a consecration of purpose everywhere manifest that it is full of promise for the future.

Here in the South all eyes are naturally turned to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Dr. Atkinson for Missions and President Harper for Christian Education. Others are just as loyal and liberal, but certain names and personalities are inseparably connected with any great movement as spokesmen and leaders.

Some are too old and too poor to do and give very much but no loyal member of the Christian Church can or will withhold his prayers and benedictions as the campaign for an Every Member Canvass is being planned and carried out.

Yes, yes, they are after money, and they are getting it, too. But listen—it is something more. Combined with getting money and “back of it as a motive power, should be the effort to deepen the conservation of our people, and to quicken into newness of life a sense of the joy of service,” in the vineyard of our Lord.

D. A. LONG.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The “city of the dead” lies close by the “city of the living” and the two are joined by invisible bonds as well as beaten roads. The obliteration of human life is impossible. Life is linked up to events in such a way as to make them inseparable. Immortality is written in the universal thought and experience of mankind. What we call death is only the separation of spirit and body and not the death of spirit. The body is animated by the spirit, and the return of the spirit into the body re-animates it. The twelve-year-old daughter of Jairus proves this: “Her spirit returned, and she arose immediately.” Jesus Christ re-entered His buried body and arose from the dead. All who believe in Him shall, also, arise from the dead. Resurrection includes the body and is without meaning, if the body is left out.

Mrs. Ella Milteer Norfleet was born August 15, 1872, and passed out of the body March 16, 1919, in her 47th year. She was married to A. T. Norfleet April 19, 1899. She leaves her husband and one daughter, Cecil, besides a brother, John A. Milteer, and two sisters, Mrs. R. L. Wilkinson and Mrs. M. F. Martin.

Mrs. Norfleet had been long afflicted but of such a cheerful and hopeful disposition as to dispel the gloom that usually settles down upon a sick woman. She made her friends almost ashamed of themselves when they visited her. They found her so happy and so cheerful in spite of a fatal disease. People in health are often rebuked by the life of the afflicted. “It is not all of life to live, nor all of death to die.” More is in the spirit of man, and the hope of the heart.

Mrs. Norfleet was a faithful member of the church, of the Philathea Class, and lived in a large circle of friends who enjoyed her fine spirit and her brave life. The end found her ready for the change, and left a glow like the setting sun that relieved the darkness that flooded the home. She will rise again on a new day and shine like a star in the firmament. Jesus made the tomb the hope of the world, and the cemetery the place of flowers and of sweetest memory for the living.

Sickness and death develop patience, service, love, and sympathy. If the world had no trouble sympathy would die. Adversity binds the human family together; prosperity separates men and nations. The wild animals of the west have been known to huddle on the shore of the Great Lakes in perfect peace when driven from the jungle by great forest fires. When safe in the woods they were enemies; when in-danger of life, they were friends. Pain is a great friend because it warns us of danger, sends for the doctor, takes the bitter medicine, and saves life. The rent earth and the broken heart keep us tender, sympathetic, humble, prayerful, and useful in life; but the darkened chamber, the vacant chair, the silent voice, the absent spirit, the face that is gone, all fill the soul with griefs that God alone can assuage; but His grace is “sufficient” and His promises are “sure.”

A SUNDAY EVENING MEDITATION

Reading so as to communicate intelligently to hearers is an art. Not everyone who reads has acquired this art.

Many attempt the reading of the Holy Scripture from the sacred desk and utterly fail. They have not failed to read, of course, but they have failed to communicate God's message in that particular Scripture to the listeners and worshippers. Thus the latter has lost the heart of the message and the devotions of the hour.

This is very disappointing to the earnest seeker of God. He who goes to the sanctuary because to him it is the “Courts of the Lord” and because there he wants to hear God's voice and the message from the altar, cannot leave the sanctuary satisfied, because he has failed in one particular thing for which he is looking. If he is satisfied, the greater is the loss, for then he is content to be without due contemplation of the Holy Writ. The greater, too, is the loss if the messenger is content to read without conveying the meaning, for he is indifferent to results with his audience. He may be dissatisfied but the fact that he is not satisfied with this does not alter the case for the result is the same and the omission is a little less than a calamity.

Public reading of God's word should always be with understanding both on the part of him who reads and of him who hears. If the worshipper hears without understanding he has not missed it all, of course, but he has missed much which is of primary importance.

There is another reason why such care should be given the reading of the Scriptures. The congregation nearly always consists of promiscuous intellects such as the educated and the illiterate, the cultured and the uncultured, the devout and the indifferent, the Christian and the sinner, and perhaps fifty or more other characteristic minds. Many of the worshippers in almost any congregation have almost everything else in mind but a concentration of thought on the Scriptures. Perhaps many of them are not able to comprehend the language read so monotonously, or perhaps they have not time nor the ability to read just misplaced emphasis given by the reader; and there are others who are not disposed to do so. Therefore, it is the task of the reader to so read as to engage the attention of all and to convey the truth of his message.

The meaning of the Scripture may be interpreted and conveyed in the flexibility of the voice and in properly placed emphasis. To do this it may often be necessary for the reader to pause to put the message into everyday parlance.

It is thus the truth engages attention by becoming the living truth, and living truth is that in which living people are interested. Every public reader of God's word should study to show himself approved of God in the reading of His message and the interpretation thereof just as much as he seeks to show himself approved, "A workman who needeth not to be ashamed."

DENOMINATIONAL DAY

April 28, 1919, was set apart as "Denominational Day," when every Baptist minister was asked to preach on "How Baptists Differ From Other Denominations." The Watchman-Examiner perhaps the ablest Baptist paper in America, commenting on this subject, among other things said: "Christian co-operation and Christian union have been in the limelight of discussion so long that Baptists are wondering whether the time has not come to preach our distinctive principles without running counter to the spirit that is abroad and without appearing to the narrow and unfraternal." Again in the alarmed and faithful Baptist Watchman on the walls of denomination ramparts says, "It is manifestly our duty to safeguard our principles and to continue their advocacy. If in such a day we abandon our distinctive principles or turn aside from their advocacy, we shall prove traitors to our trust." He then tells us about a few of these "distinctive principles." They are: "Toleration in Religion," "Absolute Soul Liberty." As Church and State are not united in the United States this distinctive principle is not clear. The second "distinctive principle is this: "Baptists protest against "Sacramentarianism." This big word is understood to imply a sort of superstitious belief that baptism saves men by some mysterious ex-opere operato magic.

The third distinctive principle mentioned is the belief that "the Bible is the only and all sufficient rule of faith and practice." Protestants generally agree on this principle.

Would it not be a good idea to set apart a day for all denominations to try to find out how many principles they can, and do agree upon? Most of the principles are about things non-essential to salvation, and concerning which good men and women can think differently, in Christian love. Magnify the agreement and disagreement.

POUNDING PREACHERS

I feel impressed to write on the subject of "Pounding Preachers." I believe that we should pound them, but I do not think that we should wait for a definite time to do so. It should be a regular habit with us. The preachers come once a month, and perhaps oftener, to bring us a soul feast and we should treat them in a way that will show them that we appreciate their efforts on our behalf. I do not mean that we should get up a regular pounding, but some could give one time and some another and in so doing our preachers would not go away in need at any time.

Also concerning tithing, the tenth part, or tithe, belongs to the Lord and if we give only that we have only done our duty. Let us give that and add thereto a free-will offering so we will have something to our credit if we expect the Lord's blessing upon us.

THE MOST PRECIOUS THING ON EARTH

While trying to explain the nature and fruits of repentance as set forth in the Sunday school lesson for May 25, my attention was called to what Thomas Moore tells in his poem, "Paradise and the Cari," a story of the most precious thing on earth. It is a story which comes from Arabia, and relates how a woman was refused admittance to Paradise until she should bring as an offering the most precious thing on earth. She returned to earth and searched in all parts for what might prove to be earth's most precious treasure. Passing a battlefield, she saw a patriot dying on the field, and she caught up the last drop of his life-blood given for his country and bore it up to the gates of Paradise. But they were not opened for her, and she was sent back for something more precious still. She found a mother giving her life for the child, and caught up her last sigh of self-sacrifice and took that to heaven, but even that did not gain her admittance. Coming to earth again, she saw an old man and a little child as the call to prayer was sounded. The little child spread his prayer rug on the ground, and as the man looked at the child at prayer in his innocence and purity and then remembered his own innocent youth and his evil life since, hot tears of repentance fell to the ground. The woman caught one of these tears of the old man's repentance and swiftly carried it up to the gate of heaven. This time she was admitted.

FROM OUR SUBSCRIBERS

Mrs. Sallie McCauley—I enjoy reading THE SUN more each week. I hope it will find a place in every home in the Christian Church this year.

Mrs. Joseph Liskey—May this be the best year yet.

Mrs. A. D. Baker—I just love THE SUN and am so glad it is shining in my home. I expect to do all I can to keep it shining as long as I live.

Mrs. B. F. Frank—THE SUN is a welcome visitor in our home. It seems like an old acquaintance coming in every week to cheer our loneliness as we are so far removed from our home church.

WITH THE POETS

A LITTLE WALK AROUND YOURSELF

When you're criticising others and are finding here and there

A fault or two to speak of or a weakness you can tear;
When you're blaming someone's meanness or accusing some of self—

It's time that you went out to take a walk around yourself.

There's lots of human failures in the average of us all,
And lots of grave shortcomings in the short ones and the tall;

But when we think of evils men should lay upon the shelves,

It's time we all went out to take a walk around ourselves.

We need so often in this life this balancing of scales,
This seeing how much in us wins and how much in us fails;

But before you judge another—just to lay him on the shelf—

It would be a splendid plan to take a walk around yourself. —Exchange.

TRUST

The thunder roared; the lightning fell
And crashed the chimney to a heap;
And darling screamed as if she dreamed
Some dreadful dream in her first sleep.

"Hush," said the nurse. "You're not afraid;
See, all the house in safety stands.
Nothing can happen us, indeed,
For, darling, we are in God's hands."

And on the morrow darling said:
"I was mos' scared to deff. That's so!
But now I'm not afraid at all,
For I am in God's hands, you know."

Sweet confidence of childhood that Believes hands always there at call,
Oh, as the rainbowed years fleet by,
May that sweet trust remain to all!

—Harriet Prescott Spofford.

THE DAY'S NEED

Each day I pray, God give me strength anew
To do the task I do not wish to do,
To yield obedience, not asking why,
To love and own the truth and scorn the lie,
To look a cold world bravely in the face,
To cheer for those that pass me in the race,
To bear my burdens gaily, unafraid,
To lend a hand to those that need my aid,
To measure what I am by what I give—
God give me strength that I may rightly live!

—The Youth's Companion.

THE SECRET

Who's that by the garden rim,
Head a-bobbin'?—
Scarlet vest and jacket trim;
Mr. Robin!

Now he whistles, loud and clear,
Eyes a-glisten;
Runs a bit, then stops to peer,
Look, and listen.

Crocus lifts her waxen cup,
Brimming measure;
Jonquil's golden lamp lights up
For his pleasure.

There's a secret glad and gay
In his keeping;
Can he keep it for a day
Without peeping?

Nay! he's whispered it about;
Heads are noddin';
Spring is here! your secret's out,
Mr. Robin.

LIFT A LITTLE

Lift a little, lift a little.
Neighbor, lend a helping hand
To that heavy-laden brother
Who from weakness scarce can stand.
What to thee, with thy strong muscles,
Seems a light and easy load,
Is to him a heavy burden
Cumbering his pilgrim road.

Lift a little, lift a little.
Effort gives thee added strength.
That which staggers him when resting
Thou canst hold at arms' full length.
Not his fault that he is feeble,
Not thy praise that thou are strong;
It is God makes lives to differ,
Some through wailing, some through song.

Lift a little, lift a little.
Many are they that need aid;
Many lying by the roadside
'Neath misfortune's dreary shade.
Pass not by like priest and Levite,
Heedless of thy fellow-man,
But with heart and arm extended
Be the good Samaritan. —Watchman.

"GOD BLESS MY MOTHER!"

A little child with flaxen hair,
And sunlit eyes so sweet and fair,
Who kneels when twilight darkens all,
And from those loving lips there fall
The accents of this simple prayer:
"God bless—God bless my mother!"

A youth upon life's threshold wide,
Who leaves a gentle mother's side,
Yet gets enshrined within his breast
Her words of warning—still the best;
And whispers when temptation tries:
"God bless—God bless my mother!"

A white-haired man who gazes back
Along life's weary, furrowed track,
And sees one face—an angel now!—
Hears words of light that led aright,
And prays with reverential brow:
"God bless—God bless my mother!"

—Ladies' Home Journal.

OUR PLACE

We cannot fill another's place,
Our own we scarce aright can fill:
No strength have we for other's work,
Nor yet have we the needed skill.

If faithful to our trust we prove,
Our place will ever wider grow;
Yet still 'tis ours, by God assigned;
Beyond its bounds we cannot go.

If other hands in needful toil
At length too tired and weak have grown,
And we have strength that work to do,
It is not theirs, but just our own.

The soul enlarges in its sphere,
The place expands to give it room;
For ev'ry day God gives the strength
Its varied duties to assume.

MISSIONARY NOTES

Our Holland, Va., Sunday school has decided to devote five minutes each Sunday morning to missions, and Mrs. Chas. Daughtry has been elected superintendent of the work. If we mistake not our Burlington, N. C., school followed this plan for years, and the result has been that this school has decided to support a missionary and take an offering once a month for this purpose, the offering amounting to at least $60.00 monthly. Every Sunday school can, if it will, study missions in some manner. And any school studying missions will become missionary in spirit, power and activity. No human being with a mind to think and a heart to love can know missions and not be interested in missions. When you see a person's indifference to missions you may know that person does not know missions.

What has your church done for the Elon Standardization Fund? Will it do its part, or fall behind?

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

SADNESS AND JOY COMMINGLED

1. Sadness

Elon's 29th commencement closed on May 20, the anniversary day, the 30th in succession, of the laying of the first brick of the college plant. That glad day was saddened for two reasons this year—it being in the first instance the day on which honor was done in the memory of the fifteen gallant sons of the college who died in the cause of freedom and in the second instance it was the day of the death of that beloved man, Trustee Willis Lee, the only word properly characterizing his interest in Elon being devotion.

"Uncle Willis," for such he was affectionately called at Elon, fell on sleep at 1:15 p. m., on May 20. He went to his Heavenly home as he had lived on earth, gently as a babe. Truly a prince of the Kingdom and a great man has left us. To know him was to respect and love him. Three great soul qualities constitute in memory's gallery his Trinity of life—considerateness, generosity, spiritual-mindedness. The courtesy, the deference, which true men accord their mothers, sisters, and wives this splendid man accorded to everyone. His generosity knew no limitation. Tithes and offerings, and especially offerings were his delight. But the crown of his Christian manhood was the deep undercurrent of a vital spirituality. The Kingdom and its interests were his first consideration. "He was the most useful Christian man from every standpoint I ever knew," declared a life-long friend, Senator J. E. West. I attended Brother Lee's funeral in a representative way, as the special envoy of the Board of Trustees of Elon College. My real place was with his stricken family, for truly has Elon lost a loved one whose place cannot be filled. This must not be taken as his obituary. Other and worthier pens will garland his life. I have no language in which to express my sorrow over his leaving us nor my sympathy for his loved ones in this sore affliction. Let me finally add for their comfort and for inspiration to all who would emulate him, that you cannot coffin the life of such a man as Willis J. Lee. He lives and he will continue to live in the gracious deeds of his gracious life.

2. Joy

I turned from the grave-side of my beloved friend, to take up with Rev. E. T. Cotten the Standardization Drive in his field. We began at Mt. Zion church, where a few men and "devout women not a few," gave nearly four times the church's quota. With such a splendid start, despite unfavorable weather conditions, we could but achieve a notable victory for the Christ. Mt. Carmel next opened up her heart and purse and wreathed Brother Cotten's face with smiles. At Bethlehem Deacon-elect Fred C. Holland was my pilot, tired and true. That grand old church, named for the birth-place of the Savior, despite many predictions to the contrary, went "over the top." May God richly bless the noble souls that did it! Isle of Wight, C. H. then joined the procession, by the generous hearts of a group of young men and widows. Why is it that a widow never fails to be generous? I sometimes think it might be spiritual economy for God to make all women widows, and especially is this so when I indulge in self-examination. There is something in the state of widowhood that brings a keen sense of dependence on God and that means generous support for the Kingdom. Blessings on the widows! To Windsor next and finally we went, and the same story is told. This town was first in Virginia in every drive during the war, and it went safely over for this cause. God has greater things in store for Windsor. He has greater things in store also for Isle of Wight C. H., Bethlehem, Mt. Carmel, Mt. Zion, and Pastor Cotten.

Brother Cotten is one of our young ministers. He is a faithful worker, has the sermonizing sense, is vitally spiritual, puts the Kingdom first, loves his work and his wife, who is a genuine minister's help-meet. I expect God to make a real leader in our Brotherhood out of this devoted young preacher. My fellowship with him was sweet and satisfying. His people are devoted to him. He is their devotee also. We need more such Cotten in our harvest field.

Three Funds

Out of Brother Cotten's field came three funds. They were established by Deacon J. W. Folk and Deacon-elect W. Ernotté White, of the Bethlehem church, and by Mrs. Nannie V. Bradshaw of the Mt. Carmel church.

Mrs. Bradshaw is the only surviving child of the late Major I. W. Duck, one of the Kingdom's noble men of our Church. His delight was to help educate Christian ministers and to entertain them in his home. His daughter's home now is the preacher's home. She is a queen in the fine and happy art of making you feel that you are not visiting at all. And she has his joy too in helping to educate ministers. She founded her fund to pay the tuition cost of instructing perpetually a minister of the Gospel in loving memory of her father. How sweet, how heavenly the deed, and the fine spirit in which she did it, that is one of life's oases, green and refreshing through all time and through eternity, too!

Finally

Such is life. Sorrow and joy commingled make up its busy activity, but why should we spurn the one or too eagerly grasp the other? It is our Heavenly Father Who directs, and joy or sorrow, all is well.

W. A. HARPER.

The other day Henry J. Heinz, the Pickle King," passed away. His "57 varieties" are known all over the world, and what possibly made them known as well as their flavor, was that Henry Heinz was a man of God and did much for the Kingdom's growth.

Last week the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church elected a layman as moderator, the first instance of its kind in that body for 130 years. John Willis Baer was the chosen one.

MISSIONARY

AN ENCOURAGING LETTER

Buffalo, Ala., May 19, 1919.

Dear Dr. Atkinson:

As you suggested we invited the ladies to stay after services at Pleasant Grove last Saturday for the purpose of organizing a Woman's Missionary Society. The pastor suggested that we organize before the benediction. We organized Saturday P. M., with eight members, but before service was over Sunday, (May 18), we had enrolled twenty-one members. So we are now twenty-one strong and hope to grow stronger. We need literature and suggestions for our program when we have our next meeting. Please send us this if possible by return mail. Thanking you in advance.

Yours for service,
Minnie L. Edge.

As far as we know, this is the first Society to be organized in our Alabama Conference, though we believe at an early date every church in this Conference will have a Woman's Society. This will add greatly to the strength, power and growth of the Conference.

WOMEN AND MISSIONS

No wonder women are interested in missions especially when they know what missions have done for women. Buddha who today has more followers and adherents than any other religious teacher that ever came to this earth, our own Christ not excepted, rejoiced that he had escaped three curses: one was that he was not born in hell; second that he was not born a vermin; and third that he was not born a woman. Yet, I say, the man who held woman in far lower esteem than he did a cow or a horse, and cursed woman throughout his teachings, has more human beings worshipping him and following him today than any other religious teacher or founder that ever visited this planet.

And Mohammed was even worse than Buddha in his curses upon woman. This religious teacher with untold millions of worshippers made Heaven itself contingent upon the eternal degradation of woman. Thus Mohammed was not content with woman's enslavement and inferiority in this world, but declared that Heaven could not be a place of happiness unless women were kept eternally in a state of shame and degradation.

I want to quote a few sentences from the Code of Mann, that book far older than the Law of Moses, and which is the Bible today that rules nearly 300,000,000 of the earth's population in India. "Though destitute of every virtue, or seeking pleasure elsewhere, or devoid of good qualities, a husband must be constantly worshipped as a god by a faithful wife." (Mann V, section 154). "SINFUL woman must be a fool as falsehood itself. This is a fixed law." (Mann IX.) "He is a fool who considers his wife as his friend. Educating a woman is like putting a knife in the hands of a monkey."

All Hindus, of every sect, name and creed, are agreed upon two points: The sanctity of the cow and the depravity of woman. Every Brahman suspends reading his Vida (Bible), if a woman approaches because her ear is too impure to hear what he reads, no matter how vile he is. The law of Manchu declares: "A woman is not allowed to go out of the house without the consent of her husband; she may not laugh without a veil over her face or look out of a door or a window."

On the other hand our Bible with its Christian civilization has made of woman a person and a comrade for man while heathen civilization everywhere has made her a slave and a thing contemptible. The only reason why all our women are not missionary in spirit and in activity is because they do not know, and will not learn.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

THE MOUNTAINS OF JEHOVAH

By William C. Allen

A few years ago when in Korea I several times enjoyed fellowship with one of the best interpreters I have ever had. He was a native Korean a devout Christian and a pastor. The spiritual needs of his distraught country rested heavily upon him and often he would go up into the mountains adjacent to Seoul and pass the nights in prayer. There under the stars or in the storm he would hold communion with his Lord.

Did not this Korean when thus sacrificing his body also lift up his eyes to the eternal hills of God from whence all help comes? Is Jehovah not found by all of us when nothing intervenes between Him and ourselves—when in the silence of our inmost souls we pour out our thoughts and entreaty to Him? How vital is the prayer! How vibrant is the answer! The hills of God are holy ground, yet all of us may daily tread them if we will, and lay our temptations, our weaknesses, our burdens at His feet. Then, after such a period of communion and we perforce return to the valley of commonplace existence, to its enjoyments, its sordidness and its carking cares, we jealously exclaim with that grand old Hebrew prophet, "He maketh my feet like hinds feet and will make me to walk on my high places!" Even in the somber lowlands of life we may live on the spiritual hills of God.

Those glorious elevations are beautiful to look at from a distance—they seem like exquisite amethyst in our quiet moments, like transparent amber in hours of questioning, like massive battlements in days of fear. But it is infinitely better to arise and go to them than to simply view them from afar. Every sinuous canyon within them leads upward, every rugged rock is of immutable strength, every towering peak points to the Son of God. Every flower is refreshed with the dew of heaven, every shrub is redolent with the fragrance of love. The rills of divine goodness pour down their rugged slopes—we satisfy our thirst for Jehovah in their refreshing pools. I ask my readers to set their feet toward those beautiful mountains where they may commune with the Holy One and find strength and rest for their weary souls.

The sacred charm of the unchangeable mountains of God is found in the fact that they are all around us. We do not always know this—our eyes are sometimes hidden that we do not see them. How unprotected at times we feel ourselves to be! How the swirl of apparently uncontrollable events threatens to engulf us! How frequently we gaze on the clouds big with darkness and are filled with dread lest the rage of the tempest sweeps us away! Then we remember the everlasting hills—we again look up to them because from them cometh our help. We behold them behind the menace of the storm and its fury is stayed by their sheltering sides. Over their lofty tops is arched the bow of promise and renewed confidence in the Eternal Goodness speeds us on our way. We know that God is all about us and we understand the sweetness of the glory of the peace of the prophet who declared:

*As the mountains are round about Jerusalem
So Jehovah is round about His people
From this time forth and for ever more.*

NEXT TO GODLINESS

Three wash basins, a number of towels and a few cakes of carbolic soap form a part of the equipment of the evangelistic parties engaged in our present campaign. These articles are used in one of the "stunts" in the Boys' Club work. After first day or two of one of our campaigns the ticket of admission for a boy to the hall where the club meetings are held is clean hands and face.

It is the carbolic soap that makes this stunt so popular. Water is not a curiosity and enamel wash basins are becoming a familiar sight in these regions. But the soap is wonderful. Out in front of the hall where hot water is provided the lads scramble over each other to get hold of the soap. They fairly revel in the lather it produces. After the towel they walk toward the hall putting their hands frequently to their faces and inhaling deep breath of air. The carbolic fragrance delights them. Women crowd around with their babies and ask the Boy Club workers to wash them.

A little boy on being asked if he had washed replied in the affirmative and at once lifted his hands to his face. Turning to another lad standing near he said, "How fragrant!" The disappointed look in the second boy's eyes as well as the condition of his hands and face showed that he had missed something. The next day he was in line pushing his way for a chance at that wonderfully scented soap.—Grace Darling Carson, Hinghwa, China.

It is impossible for us to expect too much from his generosity, or to trust too implicitly to the bounties of his providence and the aids of his Spirit. It is equally easy for God to supply our greatest as our smallest wants; to carry our heartiest, as our lightest burdens.—Thomas Guthrie.

This anxious desire, thy prayerfulness, thy longing for God, are but the shadows of the divine will upon thine own will! Imagine not that thou canst get the start of God in the race of mercy.—C. H. Spurgeon.

A man's willingness to give is not measured by his pocket book.

When you take your vacation this summer, don't forget to attend church.

NOTES

Dr. P. H. Fleming filled pastor Eastes' pulpit in Raleigh last Sunday.

Dr. W. W. Staley was in Dayton, Ohio, last week. On his return home he preached the annual memorial sermon at New Providence last Sunday. He was a caller at this office today, (Monday).

Dr. W. D. Harward writes under date of May 29: "I received nine members into the Dendron church Sunday morning on confession. Rev. L. I. Cox has been with me this week in behalf of the Elon Standardization Fund. All the churches went over the top. Wakefield and Burton's Grove doubled their quotas. We all feel good."

President Harper is with Brother Banks in the Ramser pastorate this week in the interest of the College.

On Friday, May 30, about 25,000 people assembled in Burlington for the greatest celebration that Alamance county ever witnessed. The occasion was unique in every way. We were glad to see many old friends in the city that day.

Rev. Henry Crampton has resigned his charge at Columbus, Georgia, and takes up work at Mt. Sterling, Ohio, at an early date.

Mr. W. S. Sutton, Coolemeec, N. C., was a caller at THE SUN office this week. Though Brother Sutton has changed his church membership on account of being out of reach of any Christian church, he still takes THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Dr. D. A. Long is this week in Florence, South Carolina.

A very severe electrical, hail, rain and wind storm visited Burlington Sunday night about 8:15 o'clock. The wind blew at almost hurricane speed, vivid flashes of lightning and long, roaring peals of thunder were nearly continuous, while hail stones the size of cherries preceded the torrents of rain. Services were being held in the Gypsy Smith tent which was well filled with people, when suddenly it collapsed and crashed down over the congregation. Fortunately only a very few were injured and none seriously. Among those hurt the worst were Mrs. E. S. W. Dameron, Miss Ella Robertson and Mr. H. W. Trollinger. Several others were slightly injured. When the tent fell there was a wild scramble to get from under, women screamed, and men greatly excited, tried to help one another to safety.

The Allies have presented their terms of peace to Austria and it follows in about the same manner as the terms presented to Germany.

SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS

Virginia Beach, July 29—August 5

One of the strong features of this year's session of the Chautauqua will be the discussion of some real church problem. Especially qualified men will each day discuss some such problem as is of vital interest to the church in these reconstruction days. For example, "The Community Church," "The Merger Service." It is especially important that every church and conference officer and pastor be present to get the benefit from these messages. The discussion during one period of some one of these problems may be of untold value to you and your church.

There will be a Christian Endeavor period daily and all Christian Endeavorers are invited to participate in this important theme. Are you interested in Christian Endeavor work? Three Christian Endeavor workers will present messages on Christian Endeavor lines. They will be practical and vital to every Christian Endeavorer.

In these days after the war there is no theme that is engaging the attention of more people than that of Christian leadership. There will be a daily message to young people on Christian leadership and it is expected that many a young life will get a vision of Christ's call to him for real Christian leadership. It is important that pastors and parents see that the young people of their churches are present at these daily inspirational messages.

It is the aim of the Chautauqua management to offer instructors who are especially fitted for the special themes which they present. It is our aim to arrange the program each year so as to meet new conditions and emphasize calls that come to the Church.

Do you hear the ocean waves calling you to a delightful dip? Do you recall the fine fellowship of the past years? Have you counted up the new Christian acquaintances formed at the ocean side? If so, you are planning now to be at the opening session.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

On page 59 of The Lutheran, official organ of the United Lutheran Church in America, of May 15, 1919, you may find the following: "Mr. George Eddy, who has just returned from China, states that the Chinese have little sympathy or enthusiasm for our denominational differences and that Nanking is the first city in the world to unite all the church forces under the title, 'The Christian Church.' Good for 'Nanking' but what about 'Antioch' where the disciples were first called Christians and where one organization appeared to exclude no follower of Christ?"

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

The income from June to November in the past has always been much less than the expense account. So it makes the work for these months discouraging because when our income is not enough to meet our expense bills at the end of the month, and we have to cut down our bank account to meet this deficit, it is like our bills at home running more than our salary check.

To help us to keep in good spirits this summer while everything is so high, I want to appeal to the Sunday school superintendents and teachers to see that the Sunday schools make the monthly offering. Let us make a big effort to get each Sunday school on the list of monthly contributors. If each superintendent will make himself a committee of one to see to this I feel sure in the near future each Sunday school will be credited on the list. You may think this a small matter and think the Orphanage can run without your help, but suppose all the Sunday schools should think the same way, what would be the consequence?

We cannot reach as many children without your help as we can with your help. We want your school to have a part in this great work. We must have you on our list. We are going to look for your contribution in the month of June. We will be greatly disappointed if you fail us.

While I was writing this letter I received a letter from a poor widow who has three little children she wants to get a place for in our Orphanage. Are you willing to give of your money that these little helpless children may have a home? We have twenty-seven other applications on file and we must say "No." to them unless we can get more room and our income up to the point where we can support them. What are you going to do about it?

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley: We are expecting daddy home from Germany in June, and I am such a happy little boy. I am trying to walk and talk and do everything at one time. Even grandfather Newman is kept on the jump watching after me.—Oliver E. Young, Jr.

I know you are happy that papa will soon be with his boy. I am looking for my boy home most any day as he landed in Newport News on the 24th.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am sending fifty cents for an Easter offering; it is rather late but mother was sick at the proper time and since she just neglected it. I earned it myself. I put up mother's little chickens every night so she gave me a quarter. Because I so seldom get quiet, grandpa said he would give me fifty cents if I would sit perfectly still for five minutes. Mother said if she were in my place she would give half of it to the orphans because she thought the gifts that gave us the most pleasure were those that cost us a great deal; and she knew that was hard earned money. I had a birthday party on the fifteenth of February. My cake had five pink candles on it. I hope you will get enough for the new building.—Maurine Wilson Isley.

I guess the fifty cents grandpa gave you was hard earned money. I am glad your mother is well and you have her to love you and to care for you. I have a little girl five years old, but her mamma has gone to live with the angels.—"Uncle Charley."

BORN FEBRUARY 30!

"For such a beastly month as February, 28 days are as a rule sufficient," as the late Sir W. S. Gilbert once remarked. But nevertheless it is actually possible for there to be a February 30th.

Every one knows that in voyaging round the world a day has to be added or "heaved overboard," according to the direction travelled. The adjustment is invariably made when crossing the 180th meridian, almost midway between Japan and California, so a vessel on that spot on February 29 in leap year must according have a February 30. Indeed February 30 does, in fact, appear on the ship menu.

But it is hard lines on any baby born abroad that day, for it can never have another birthday, even if it lives to be a centenarian.—London Chronicle.

We put every part of our work on a systematic basis and let the Lord have the fragments. It is unfair. Put God on the pay roll, too.

Men who are leading great financial movements in all denominations tell us that their work is easier among titheers.

Germany virtually refuses to sign the peace treaty. She claims that it is too severe.

THE NEWSBOY'S MOTHER

He was a ragged little newsboy who lived with his mother. They were all in all to each other. Tenderly he cared for her, bringing to her small earnings and doing his best to help her in the household tasks.

One day the tired mother, weary of her hard struggle, closed her eyes to the scenes of earth. The lad was inconsolable. How could he live without her? After a few days of giving way to the bitterness of his grief, he began to wonder what he could do to show his love for her.

The picture of the unmarked grave came before his eyes. Other graves were marked by stones; why not hers? Of course, stones cost a great deal, and his earnings were small.

But love found a way. At a cutter's yard he found that even the cheaper stones were far too expensive for him. He was turning sorrowfully away when he saw a broken shaft of marble, part of the debris from an accident in the yard. Eagerly he asked the price of the irregular piece. The low price named by the proprietor came within his means. But he knew he would be unable to pay for cutting the inscription. The brave little chap made up his mind to do his best to prepare the marble himself.

The next day he carried the stone away on a little four-wheeled cart, and managed to have it put in position. One who was curious to know the last of the stone made a visit to the cemetery one afternoon. On his return he thus described in an article what he saw and learned:

"There was our monument at the head of one of the newer graves. I knew it at once. Just as it was when it left our yard. I was going to say, until I got a little nearer to it and saw what the little chap had done. I tell you, when I saw it there was something blurred my eyes so's I couldn't read it at first. The little man had tried to keep the lines straight, and evidently thought the capitals would make it look better and bigger, for nearly every letter was a capital. I copied it and here it is. But you want to see it on the stone to appreciate it:

"MY MOTHER
SHEE DIED LAST WEEK.
SHEE WAS ALL I HAD.
SHEE SED SHEAD BE WATTING FUR—"

And here the lettering stopped. After a while I went back to the man in charge and asked him what further he knew of the little fellow who bought the stone.

"Not much," he said, "not much. Didn't you notice a fresh little grave near the one with the stone? Well, that's where he is. He came here every afternoon for some time, working away at that stone, and one day I missed him, and then for several days. Then the man came out from the church that buried the mother, and ordered the grave dug by her side. I asked if it was for the little chap. He said it was. The boy had sold all his papers one day, and was hurrying along the street out this way. There was a runaway team just above the crossing, and—well, he was run over, and lived but a day or two. He had in his hand when he was picked up, an old file sharpened down to a point that he did all the lettering with. They said he seemed to be thinking only of that until he died, for he kept saying: 'I didn't get it done; but she'll know I meant to finish it, won't she? I'll tell her so, for she'll be waiting for me.' And he died with those words on his lips.'"

When the men in the cutter's yard heard the story the next day, they clubbed together, got a good stone, inscribed upon it the name of the newsboy; and underneath it the words: "He loved his mother."—Baptist Commonwealth.

MOTHER

The noblest thoughts my soul can claim,
The holiest words my tongue can frame,
Unworthy are to praise the name
More sacred than all other,
An infant, when her love first came—
A man, I find it just the same;
Reverently I breathe her name,
The blessed name of mother.

THE SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA

The sixth annual session of the Sea Side Chautauqua and School of Methods of the Christian Church will be held at Virginia Beach, beginning Tuesday evening, July 29, closing the following Tuesday. A strong program is being prepared. Several new speakers will be on the program. It is now time for all those who have ever been at the Chautauqua to urge upon those of their acquaintances the importance and the real value of this valuable institution of the Christian Church. We know of no place where our workers may get so much benefit within a week as at Virginia Beach. We offer a strong program, a most delightful fellowship, a practical presentation of church problems and bring to the Chautauqua those who have been eminently successful in their chosen lines. In the five years past many hundreds of our workers have gone back to their churches with vision, consecration and methods that have helped to mold the life of the home church and make it more able to do the work of the Lord. The recreation, the bathing, the fellowship, the opportunity for rest, are worth all it costs to go there if there were no classes, lectures and sermons at all. Plan now to come and have a good time. Let every pastor come himself and bring other workers from his church. Write the secretary, S. M. Smith, Chamber of Commerce Building, Norfolk, Va., for any information concerning rates, rooms, routes and general information and the undersigned concerning the program.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JUNE 15, 1919

Prayer. Matt. 6:5-15; Luke 18:1-14.

Golden Text: In nothing be anxious; but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. Phil. 4:6.

Thought For Teachers

How are you teaching prayer? Do you have prayer in your class? Do you repeat the Lord's Prayer in your school, and consider that is all that is necessary? Are you willing that the next generation in our church and Sunday school should be as tongue-tied as we are of the present generation have been? Are you praying for your pupils, for your school, for your church? One of the most successful Sunday schools I know asks all the teachers to come together for fifteen minutes before the opening of the Sunday school. This time is their "upper room" period when they are all with one accord in one place.

"All of God's large promises regarding prayer, however, are defined and conditioned: we must believe, we must abide in Him, we must ask in His name, His spirit. It is morally impossible to have a real confidence that the things we are asking for shall certainly be received, unless our petitions are grounded on some real knowledge of the mind and method of God; otherwise asking would be crying for the moon. But observing these conditions, we have a right to perfect confidence. Christ's signature is at every promise, his name perfumes each one." (Peloubet's Notes.)

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 15, 1919

What We Owe and How to Pay It. II Cor. 8:1-15, (Tenth Legion Application).

Can we give anything until we have paid our debts? If Jesus said, speaking of tithing: "This ought ye to have done," have we paid our debts until we have paid our tithes? What about our offering? When we "make an offering unto the Lord," how shall we make it? This is, as we understand it, something over and above the tithe, perhaps a thank-offering for restoration to health, or for some good news, for a specially good crop or a good business year. Many States had a "war chest" and persons regularly pledged a certain amount to the fund. Then when a special call was made for any particular purpose, they agreed upon amount was taken from the war chest, instead of making a desperate last minutes canvass for it. Would this plan work in the church? Is this what Paul meant by "laying by you each week—that there be no gathering when I come" to make a special plea for the Jerusalem needy?

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

FOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS IN THE NORTH CAROLINA CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

No doubt you read my note of April 9, relative to the Christian Endeavor being left out of the Convention notice, and the two replies that have been made. Hope you have, and that you will see the situation as it is. The purpose of my note was not to criticize the Committee but to get an explanation and a reason before the public. My note brought the desired results, and I am glad. Thank you Brother Stephenson, for setting forth the reason for the omission of the Christian Endeavor from the Convention notice.

Now Christian Endeavor workers, note that Brother Stephenson says, "With all our efforts in previous Conventions,—there have not been more than three Societies represented at any Convention within the past five years." Well, that does look discouraging to the Committee and to the work, but you need not give up, for Brother Stephenson is now President of a Convention three times as large, as the one of last year and we hope to have at least nine represented this time. The writer gladly accepts any challenge the Committee throws, on condition, however, that he be furnished a list of all Societies, and their officers in the State work before June 15. I have written twenty letters since I came to the State last November, trying to get this information, and not a single reply has been received.

Let every Society that reads this note have at least one delegate at the State Convention, June 6-8, in Burlington. Then, raise the same amount that your Sunday school does per member, and have at least one delegate at the coming Convention at Shallow Well next July. Let each Society pay the expense of its delegate, and see to it that the delegate stays through the Convention. Also, have a representative at the Seaside Chautauqua at Virginia Beach, July 29 to August 3. You could not spend your vacation at a better place.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT,

Chm. Christian Endeavor Com.
Greensboro, N. C.

P. S. When you read this note, stop right there and send the name of your Society, the name and address of your president and corresponding secretary to the Chairman of this Committee.

MISSION OFFERING IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL

I visited a Sunday school recently which has a Duplex envelope for each class. Some years ago, when I made my first visit, they told me they had hard work to collect enough to keep up their expenses, that people did not give. I wondered how their treasury was standing the strain of a double offering. I found they had about thirty dollars in their treasury, that they were giving once a month to the Orphanage, and on the Sunday of my visit, the benevolence side of the envelope contained more than the Sunday school side. "Bring ye all the tithes—and prove me now—if I will not open the windows of Heaven and pour out such a blessing that there will not be room to contain it." Is it possible it means Sunday schools as well as folks? Why not?

MRS. FRED BULLOCK,
Field Secretary, Eastern
Virginia Sunday School Convention.

MARRIAGES

YOUNG-WEATHERS

The writer united in holy estate of matrimony Miss Glads Weathers of Youngsville and Mr. Kenneth Young of Wake Forest on April 21, 1919. The ceremony was performed at the home of Mr. June Johnson, Franklinton, in the presence of a few friends of the contracting parties. That they enjoy a long and prosperous life is our wish.

OBITUARIES

DUDLEY

Miss Martha Dudley died at the home of her brother, Mr. Edward L. Powell, Savage, Gates County, N. C., May 6, 1919, aged seventy-one years. She was a member of the M. E. church, Norfolk, Va. She was a good Christian woman and will be greatly missed by all who knew her. She was an aunt of Mrs. W. C. Beamon, Savage, N. C. She leaves four brothers: E. L. Powell, Richard Powell, George Powell and Isaac Powell, and many relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted at her home by the writer and her remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones.

H. H. BUTLER.

GRAVES

Little Curtis Elkanah Graves was born March 29, 1917, and died May 13, 1919, aged two years, one month and fifteen days. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Graves of Seagrove, N. C., Route 1. His grave is the first at New Center Christian church where his mother holds her membership.

The floral offering which was abundant shows how quickly he had won the love of many hearts; but Jesus took him and by this taking we are reminded of His saying: "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

May the Master comfort the hearts of the parents and loved ones.

T. J. GREEN.

TUCKER

Saturday, May 17, Benjamin Tucker, aged 26 years, was laid to rest in the family burying ground near his home about eight miles east of Louisburg, N. C. He was a member of Mt. Gilead Christian church. He leaves one brother and one sister, the remainder of the family having preceded him. May the Holy Spirit comfort the bereft.

RESOLUTIONS OF SYMPATHY— NORFLEET

Because we mourn an empty chair when we meet, and because we have benefited in the past by her presence, we are participants in the sorrow that has come to the home of Mrs. A. T. Norfleet because she has passed to her Father's House, therefore, be it Resolved:

That we thank our Heavenly Father for her life with us; that we shall bear in remembrance the example she has left us of steadfast fulfillment of duty, and patience in bearing whatever befell her, and that we join her family in thanksgiving for her life here with us;

That we extend to them our sincerest sympathy in their sorrow and loneliness, yet we know and believe that her love is theirs now in even fuller measure than when bounded by the limitations of earth.

Resolved further, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Philathea Class and Woman's Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church, a copy sent to The Christian Sun, and another copy sent to the bereaved family that they may know we share their grief, while reminding them, and our selves, that we sorrow not as those who have no hope, but look forward with confident joy to the glorious day of His coming when we shall be ever with the Lord.

WHY I GAVE TO Elon's Standardization Fund

(By one of the givers)

I thought of the little wooden crosses that decorated the graves in France. The sight of a little home came to me, and in the door-way, while the evening shadows fell, a silent figure stood. Around the door played a little boy and a little girl. A gold star hung on the wall, it appeared to me. That silent figure was a mother—the mother of the children—and her silence was broken only by her sobs as she thought of her husband who slept in sunny France. Out in the unknown and untried future that mother tried to see the pathway of her children. She could not. She wondered if they would be educated, if she could not do it, and if not, what reflection would they, untried in Christian's way, bring upon the dead hero of their home.

The curtain of night grew darker and the smiles of heaven were shut out by the untouchable thing we call night. I saw it all, and the home was here in my midst. Unable to comfort, to soothe, to speak a word of cheer; unable to carry out my heart's desire, I turned, with tear-dimmed eyes, and lifted my voice and heart to heaven.

There was a joy, I thought, that could in a very large measure, compensate for the gloom of that home—and that was the proper education and training of that sweet little girl and sunny-faced boy. Then I thought of how my own body would perhaps be moulding in mother earth before they were ready for college. Ah! no worry there, I thought, for the money called mine is His, and I shall dedicate a part of it to make the future safe for that mother's companions that her heart may rejoice, and a world blessed. I signed it—that pledge, five of them, and now I am happy, thrice happy.

Personality

PERSONALITY can be defined and it cannot be defined. Philosophers can satisfy themselves as to what personality is, and their definitions are plausible. But personality is so close to us, is so much of us, that we do not know what it is because we do not know ourselves. Men know us better than we do—hence they know more about our personality. With our personality we change minds, hearts and destinies. Then it must be an influence that is sacred. God gives us our personality and when we use it for evil we rob God of the fruit of His gift. Personality used for the Kingdom's growth is rendering unto God that which is His.

THE PASTOR'S VACATION

The summer months are here and those of us who are accustomed to, or in a position to, take a vacation are thinking of that time when we can leave our worries at home and go to some place for rest (unfortunately we are forced to speak from observation and not experience).

Your pastor needs a vacation. You may not believe that, but you should not say so until you had some opportunity of experiencing the duties and obligations of a pastor. The pastor needs a vacation that he may get away from the daily grind of things that absorb his energy, and thought and make his work one continuous grind. The pastor needs a vacation that he may have time to meditate and think on obligations that are new and conditions that are perplexing. Vacations do not come without their price; and since the average preacher is not paid a decent salary, there is something else to consider as well as granting him a vacation; he needs the expenses of a trip and we certainly hope that no church voting its pastor a vacation will overlook this very important item. Your pastor will come back rested in body and mind and equipped and prepared to do a larger and greater work than before. Give your pastor a fair deal and give him a vacation. Do something for him that you have not been doing and you will love him better than you have ever loved him and appreciate his messages more than you have ever appreciated them.

And now a word as to the pastor's duty when he takes his vacation: the pastor owes it to his church when he takes his vacation to take a genuine rest and not go elsewhere and engage in a revival meeting or some other work, for this kills the opportunity of a vacation and defeats the purpose.

LYNCHING

The matter of lynching continues to grow and the protests against it also increase. Within the last two weeks, not less than three very disgraceful lynchings have taken place in the United States. If memory serves us right, about 100 persons were lynched in the United States last year despite what the law could do. This unfair method of taking life seems to continue in its death-dealing sweep. Such crimes are a disgrace upon the state in which they are committed, and for that matter, upon the civilized world.

Very drastic steps have been taken in a number of states to prohibit lynching, and we are of the opinion that steps still more drastic will have to be taken before this evil is abolished. The lynch law is dangerous to society, breeds unlimited trouble, and creates an opportunity of revenge that a century cannot wipe out.

There are many things that we could suggest in order that public sentiment be crystalized against lynching, but none possibly would be better than this: To see that the offenders of the law are brought to a speedy justice. The fear of the mob is that justice will not be done. It is the duty of all good citizens to lend their influence in every possible way to see if this curse cannot be removed from our land.

THE IGNORANT WHO ARE TO BE PITIED

An ignorant man is to be pitied. We do not mean by this that a man without an education is to be pitied, because the lack of education does not always make a man ignorant. There are persons who are educated that live in gross ignorance because of their surroundings and the way in which they have been taught to think. The man who is pitiful is he who has lived to himself and depended upon the thinking of other people until his horizon of life is but an inch before his eyes. He cannot see that the world is depending upon him, neither can he see that he is depending upon the world. He has ignored "that no man liveth to himself and no man dieth to himself." He has never explored the beauties of life because he has not launched out far enough to break the shackles from his own soul. We pity the man who is so limited in vision, so shallow in thinking that he feels that the world is trying to rob him of his possessions when it is only seeking his co-operation and offering him the finest opportunity to develop into a Christian citizen in every way.

FOR BETTER COMMUNITY LIFE

The American nation was startled first and then dismayed and disheartened when the selective draft showed that our young men were fast becoming weaklings. The great per cent of young men who were found to be either physically or mentally unfit for military duty was like a fire alarm at night. The utter change that the customs of the country had undergone in the last twenty-five years, the lack of sports, the absence of physical exercise, the ravages of disease, the cigarette, soda fountain, picture show, hot house lives, and the absence of everything calculated to produce manly vigor, have so devitalized the young manhood of the country that serious alarm has been raised. Not only has this been felt upon the condition of the population, but like a canker it has eaten into the moral and mental stamina of the young. Now there is a great cry, led by the national government itself, for better health, better sports, better recreation, better physical habits, better eating and drinking habits, more clean living, more out-of-door exercise, and in short, more of everything that is likely to produce normal and happy and strong and efficient human beings. This work will begin with the infants in arms, nay with the mothers before the infants are born, and go all the way up through the schools, through young manhood and womanhood, middle age and old age, before we shall have succeeded in producing the vigorous and healthy manhood and womanhood that we once had. The coming era is to be the era of sane and happy living. The patent medicine habit and the dope habit and the ease habit must go the way of the liquor habit.

We hail with joy any proposition that tends to develop the spirit of out-door sports. Games should be encouraged in every community. We need hospitals, but we also need playgrounds and sane living and clean exercise to keep the population from falling prey to all the modern diseases that have developed as a result of wrong living. Every community should have ball grounds, tennis grounds, volley ball grounds, and all other kinds of grounds that will encourage the population to use them. What indeed shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul? And what indeed shall it profit us if we have the means of living comfortable and happy lives if we let the inducement to languor and disease and physical laziness sap the vitality of life generally and cut down the three score and ten years of a man's life to two score, which is becoming almost the dead line for the business and professional man, and the period of decay, ugliness, and weakness of the women? Cosmetics cannot take the place of physical and joyous exercise in women any more than soft drinks and tea parties can make children grow up strong and manly and beautiful. The human body is a thing of marvelous beauty and efficiency when given a chance to be. Modern habits might well be defined as a conspiracy to enrich the medicine fakirs, the doctors and the sanitariums, and to sap and devitalize the physical, moral, and mental efficiency of mankind.

"THE LORD GAVE AND THE LORD TAKETH AWAY"

In practically every funeral service that one attends, if not every service, you will hear this quotation: "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord. Now, we believe that the Lord does give and we believe the Lord does take away, but He does not take away every time we think He does.

The thing in our mind now is this: So often people neglect their children through ignorance and carelessness, and the result is that they die. The question win us is: Does the Lord take away in every such case? For example: A child is given improper food, is not given sufficient baths and is compelled to sleep in a place without sufficient air, and takes some disease; and then possibly not given proper medical attention when it becomes sick. The child grows worse and dies. Now, the Lord gave, but did the Lord take away? Was it the Lord Who took away or was it careless hands? Can we bless the name of the Lord every time a loved one dies?

A man may engage in some habit, such as drinking, or smoking, and bring a disease upon his body that will take his life. Does the Lord take away in such a case, and can we bless His name?

We believe that thousands of persons are going to their graves every year through sin and ignorance and yet our ministers stand up and say at the funeral, "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord." Surely our conscience will never condemn us as long as we are taught to believe that it is the hand of the Lord and the Lord is blessing.

Since writing the above paragraphs, we find the following in the North Carolina Health Bulletin: "The time is not far distant when local health authorities will be held responsible for an epidemic of typhoid fever. The responsibility for individual cases is going to be fixed also by the courts of the states, as is clearly indicated from a decision handed down by the Supreme Court of Wisconsin in the case of Vennen V. Dells Lumber Company, 154 N. W. Rep. 640 (October 26, 1915). The Supreme Court of Wisconsin decided that the death of an employee caused by typhoid fever, which was contracted by drinking impure water furnished by the employer, was the result of an accident under the terms of the Workmen's Compensation Law, and the person responsible for the impure water was liable for damage resulting there from."

When the Supreme Court decided on such a case as above quoted, it is an indication that individuals are thinking seriously that the responsibility of many lives lie with them and not with the Lord. When we fail to provide pure drinking water or wholesome food for our families, or let some one go to bad through drinking or some other abusive habit, we place a responsibility upon ourselves; and though the Lord gave, we are the ones who take away, and we ought to, in many cases say: "The Lord gave but we took away; cursed be our name."

Minds may run in the same channel, and so even after quoting the above, we have, by accident, in reading a health bulletin, found the following which we quote, and which seems to be in accord with what we have written:

Two Towns

Mr. Billy Jolly of Bumtown, dropped an orange peel on the sidewalk. His fellow-citizen, Mr. Bob Ernest, stepped on it, broke his leg, and was laid up for three months with no accident insurance policy to help out. Neither Billy nor Bob knew that it was Billy's fault; in fact, Billy did not remember he had dropped an orange peel. He never thought about such things. He was a good-hearted fellow at bottom, fond of Bob, and both put the whole blame on the orange peel. If Billy had known the truth, it would have been a terrible lesson for him, and Bob would have been obliged in his heart of hearts to blame Billy for doing such a fool trick. Of course, no one blames those who do not kick the orange peel off the sidewalk before it got in its work.

Mrs. Ownway, also of Bumtown, let little Jack play on the sidewalk when his sister, Ethel, had the diphtheria; little Jenny Lovejoy, from the other side of town, stopped to speak to Jack, and now little Jenny is dead. Mrs. Ownway had said she really hadn't the heart to keep Jack so closely confined when he was perfectly well, and that this foolish quarantine was so perfectly unnecessary. Of course, Mrs. Ownway really killed little Jenny; but she didn't know it, and Mrs. Lovejoy didn't know it. Mrs. Ownway was terribly distressed, wrote Mrs. Lovejoy a sweet letter of condolence, and sent a bunch of lilies of the valley for the little coffin. The two mothers agreed that these germ diseases were awful and that the blame was on the germ. Mrs. Lovejoy did not blame anybody and Mrs. Ownway felt no personal responsibility.

Bumtown was inhabited by some of the best people in the State, kindly, accommodating and easy-going. They had excellent sanitary regulations all printed out in plain English on paper, and most of them could read. They would not have hurt a fly, and, in fact, they seldom did. It was the business of the town government and the health officers, armed with these nice laws, to bring health to Bumtown. The citizens felt no responsibility individually or collectively. But the city government was composed of good, kindly, fairly intelligent, average citizens, who were elected to give a nice, quiet, neighborly government to Bumtown, and who honestly tried to do so. "Laws were not to be taken too seriously; to enforce these sanitary laws strictly might offend some of our best citizens. We are getting on very well." So said they all.

No citizen, meanwhile, complained of the lack of law enforcement, or saw in it a cause of the high death rate. If any one was shot, the shooter was promptly punished. The shootee knew he was hurt and who hurt him, and immediately got busy. The government and the citizens were opposed to open crimes of violence that endanger the lives of innocent people. But, when it came to sanitary matters, nobody made any fuss. It would not be nice or popular. As to the death rate, they were sure there was some mistake about it. They said they liked a quiet life. But, as they continued to die, it rather looked as though many of them preferred death and an early one. Still, if one looked carefully, he would have observed that the very best citizens spit on the sidewalks, that food was sold under most unsanitary conditions (even candy was handled with dirty hands and soda fountains were vile), that the sections in which the servants lived who served the food were refused proper water and sewerage facilities, that flies were bred in stables permitted to be run under conditions contrary to law, that for the servants a vile surface privy on the lot was considered good enough, and above and beyond all, that press and pulpit were silent on the moral responsibility of each man for the health of his neighbor.

The story of Goodtown is less eventful, because nothing happened. Mr. Bob Jolly went there on a visit, to be sure, and dropped an orange peel on the sidewalk, but Mr. Aristides Faithful came along and kicked it off. Nobody was hurt. Nobody felt grateful for not being hurt. Mr. Faithful did not know whether he had saved any one or not, and, if he thought he had, there was the whole town to chuse from.

Mrs. Ownway, who had not developed diphtheria but who proved to be a carrier, also visited Goodtown as soon as little Ethel was discharged. Strange to say, a child in the house she visited soon had diphtheria. But they at once administered the proper treatment, gave every one in the house the antitoxin, and observed the strictest quarantine in spite of the inconvenience. Therefore, no one else got it and the invalid was soon well.

So it was with sporadic cases of several other communicable diseases. They seldom got beyond the first case. Everybody cheerfully obeyed the laws and backed up the doctors and health officers. Goodtown people did not have typhoid. They knew that, in plain language, it came from swallowing the excrement of other people, and they did not think it was nice. Besides, it was so unnecessary. They actually insisted on the strictest enforcement of the sanitary regulations (which Bumtown had adopted word for word) and, besides, they all took the anti-typhoid vaccination every few years. They insisted on this for all who handled food, raw or cooked food, in public or in private houses. Any one who had typhoid in Goodtown brought it with him; in fact, this is what worried Goodtown. Being a delightful, healthy town, it attracted many visitors from the best people in many of the finest cities of the State, and soon after arriving, some of them had typhoid. They blamed Goodtown. Goodtown loathed them and doubted their intelligence, their Christianity, and their patriotism. They nursed them carefully and pulled most of them through. Some of them died, and for these they wrote nice obituaries and tried to respect their memories.

The city government of Goodtown had no easy time. They had to fight some of the oldest citizens, but they well knew that that was what they were elected for, and that failure to enforce the law strictly on every one would surely prevent their re-election. The press fearlessly told the whole truth about health conditions and violations of law. The pulpit joined with the press in preaching that any one was a fool who did not look out for the health of others for his own sake, and no Christian if he did not do so for the sake of others. Hence, every one felt a conscientious responsibility for the life and health of every one else, everybody loved everybody, and the life insurance companies just loved the town.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

CHURCH DEDICATIONS

It is a most wholesome sign to see so many of our churches clearing themselves of indebtedness now, and dedicating the houses cleared of all encumbrances, to the service of the Lord. A dollar now is worth in purchasing value about what fifty cents was when most of these church debts were incurred, and so it is in keeping with the best sort of economy to clear up the debts while money is cheap and abundant. If you cannot get money for church and charity now it is likely you never will, or certainly not with as little effort and sacrifice as now.

Franklin

Franklin, Va. church, Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., pastor was dedicated on the fourth Sunday in April. The day was ideal, the audience large, the fellowship was sweet, and the free-will offering wonderful. Our membership at Franklin has wrought so well and worthily that it has won the respect, confidence and admiration of all who are acquainted with the situation, and so it is easy to get assistance there. Just before the sermon on the day of dedication the pastor simply announced that a free-will offering would be taken, and whatever was given would be properly used and appreciated. The ushers began passing the plates, but they were quickly filled, refilled and filled again, till more than $4,700.00 had been placed on the plates. The church had been cleared of indebtedness by agreement, and assuming of all obligations by individuals, the week before.

It was a happy day, and the audience that taxed the capacity of the building seemed to enter heartily into the joy and solemnity of the occasion. The decorations were appropriate and comely, and the music for the occasion was inspiring and beautiful. Dr. Rowland and his faithful wife are much beloved by the congregation and have the hearty support of a most loyal and devoted membership. They have built a splendid house of worship with a large basement for dining room and kitchen service, ample room for Sunday school classes, pastor's study and social gathering, and a main auditorium easy to speak in, happily ventilated and substantially furnished. An elegant pipe organ and a well trained choir furnish soul stirring music. It is a beautiful temple of worship worthy of the great preacher and liberal souls who, as co-workers together with God, have conducted it.

High Point

Last Sunday, June 1, the writer was again in a dedicatory service. The High Point Christians had a few days before paid off the last dollar of indebtedness on their church. Rev. L. L. Wyrick, Elon College, N. C., is the pastor. The church was organized by Rev. J. F. Morgan, now of Berkeley Ward, Norfolk, Va., with fourteen charter members. There are now seventy-one members. Other pastors have been Rev. H. Shelton Smith, now an Army Chaplain in France and Rev. H.

S. Hardecastle, who graduated from Elon College recently. There is a flourishing Sunday school under the aggressive leadership of Brother R. C. Boyd, and the school gives the offering of one Sunday each month to missions, and that of another Sunday each month to the Orphanage. The church and school are alive to all the interests of the Kingdom, loyal to all the calls of Convention and Conference. There are faithful and active members in this church who have sacrificed nobly to build a house of worship and they are now happy in having their building paid for and their house consecrated and dedicated to the worship of God. Brother Wyrick is a faithful pastor, deeply interested in his work, and is laboring earnestly to build up the congregation to which he has been called. They are soon to repaint their building and Brother W. E. Lowe, of Elon College, N. C., who kindly used his car Sunday to carry the writer to the dedication, gave the first dollar, unsolicited, with which to begin the work of painting. It is a faithful band of workers and when they put on a new coat of paint, as they soon will do, they will have a neat, comfortable and attractive house of worship.

Rosemont

On the fourth Sunday of this month Rev. G. O. Lankford and his good people of Rosemont are to dedicate their beautiful house of worship, the debt having already been paid and the preparations are now being made for the great and glad day soon to come. The writer anticipates a day of joy and sweet fellowship with the faithful and beloved at Rosemont, for in all our Communion it is doubtful if we have a people more imbued with the spirit of devotion and of self-sacrifice than the saints at Rosemont. But of this dedication after the event.

Besides dedications several points are on the eve of purchasing lots and erecting buildings; and this is well. For now is the time to secure funds with which to do the Lord's work.

SUFFOLK LETTER

By invitation of "The Memorial Association," I delivered the memorial sermon at New Providence church, Graham, N. C., on the first Sunday in June. The church was planted there before the county was created, before the railroad was built, and before the town was even dreamed of. It was, in its earliest years, what is called, in modern phrase, a "community church." School was taught there by one who was, afterward, Governor Worth. It was the meeting place for people interested in the community welfare. The community was composed of good people, was prosperous, intelligent, and religious.

Later came the new county of Alamance, the North Carolina railroad, the towns of Graham, Haw River, Burlington, cotton mills, electric cars, and all the modern movements. These new communities built school houses, churches, homes, making new centers of business, social, and religious life; but during those early years the people buried their dead near the old church. This has kept alive an interest in the place, and the Association keeps the cemetery, provides for a great service on the first Sunday in June of each year, and thus revives memories of loved ones and cultivates a community social and religious spirit, and decorates the graves with summer flowers. The music is rendered by the joint choirs of Graham churches, dinner is provided without cost to the large audience, and the day is enjoyed by old and young. In the afternoon of this occasion Captain James A. Turrentine made an interesting talk reminiscent in character in which he recited incidents of unusual interest.

Mr. E. S. Parker, Jr., President, presided over the services. Vice-President, McBride Holt, made a brief talk. Pastor F. C. Lester read the scripture lesson, and Rev. W. S. Long, D. D., who was pastor and built the present edifice in the sixties, offered prayer.

It was a revival of memories, a quickening of affection, a brightening of hope, and a reminder of mortality and immortality. Christianity rests upon death and the empty tomb. "Except a grain of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." The harvest that feeds the world depends upon the empty tomb where the seed died. Christianity could not survive without the empty tomb. The fowls of the barnyard and the birds in the forests can all be traced back to the empty shell. Our hope of reunion is derived from the empty tomb. Jesus robbed death of its sting and the grave of its victory. The grave is the hope of the world. Every church should hold a memorial service once a year. It is so sweet to see age placing flowers on the grave of childhood, and the young placing flowers on the graves of ancestors. The flowers represent fading life and the beauty of life as well. Flowers speak of feelings and loves that cannot be expressed in words; and that is the reason Jesus gave His Son for us, because He could not tell us His love in the Bible of words; and hence He calls His Son His "Word," "The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us."

W. W. STALEY.

EARTH'S DEAREST SPOT—THE GRAVE*

"This day shall be unto you for a memorial."—Ex. 12:14.

"Thy prayers and thine alms are come up as a memorial before God."—Acts 10:4.

Memorials are memory helps. They may be tablets, monuments, feasts, or services; but they all revive memories and remind us of other days, other persons, and other events. A Confederate monument reminds us of the Civil War. The Washington monument reminds us of George Washington and the infant Republic, now so great. The Passover reminded the Hebrews of deliverance from Egypt; and the Lord's Supper reminds us of the death and sufferings of Jesus Christ. Memorial services remind us of loved ones gone from us, and they are more affectionate than monuments, because flowers appeal to the heart more than cold marble. "This day shall be unto you for a memorial," as the Passover feast was to the Jew; and there were qualities in Cornelius that reminded God of his worth. Cornelius embodies four essential elements of a good man: 1. He was devout. 2. He feared God with all his house. 3. He gave alms. 4. He was a praying man. One is surprised to find such a man in such a position. He was an alien, a Gentile, a Roman centurion; but he had made religious use of what he had learned of the Jewish faith. Good people are found everywhere. Under a bunch of wild flowers, on Memorial Day, may rest the remains of one as noble as Abraham Lincoln or Robert E. Lee. The Passover reminded the Hebrews of deliverance from bondage, the centurion's life reminded God of his good life, and this day reminds us of loved ones as sweet to us as the flowers you place on their graves today.

I. Angel Visits.

Angels visit good people. They visited Abraham, Lot, Mary, Joseph and Mary, and Cornelius. "The angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear Him." Angels were at the tomb when the women went, "early in the morning," with sweet spices to embalm the body of their dear Lord. Angels enlarge life's outlook and hopes and reveal the path of duty. The angel visit to Cornelius opened a new world to him, and a new day for mankind.

II. Memory a Fine Artist

Memory selects and preserves the best in men, the best in history, the best in literature, the best in painting, the best in music, the best in family life, and the best in religion. You never hear the worst of men at a funeral; you never hear the evils of men at a memorial service. Epitaphs tell the best of the dead. Memory puts in the best colors as artists do. Nothing smoothes out the wrinkles of experience so much as memory.

III. The Good Recognized by God.

It takes the world a long time to appreciate the ordinary. It took the Jews two thousand years to see any good in the Gentiles. Jesus had to teach that lesson; and Peter's experience made him realize it. It took the world sixty centuries to appreciate the common people. The great world-war has opened the eyes of mankind to the value of democracy. We are just beginning to appreciate good folks and trees. The barren earth reminds us of devastated forests and makes a tree seem almost human in value.

Graves speak to us. That cemetery is a library full of messages, reminding us of home and love. Libraries are the cemeteries of human achievement; they are as silent as graves and as eloquent as living speech. Mount Vernon speaks of Washington and the birth of a nation that seems to have come forth to serve the world in such a time as this. The Holy Sepulcher is the open mouth of a new era, a new faith, and the proof of a new life. The empty tomb announces the resurrection of Jesus Christ and assures the Christian of the resurrection of his beloved dead. Dust once animated by spirit is imperishable. It may be sown in weakness, but it is raised in power. Memorial services are memory services. This day reminds us of a congregation that used to sing, pray, and rejoice in the pews you occupy today They help to make this occasion and to bring you to this place. You would not be here, if there were no graves here. We bring the flowers to decorate the graves of dear ones, not for what we can do for them, but for what they have done for us. This sacred day would be unknown but for sacred graves. Christianity would die without the empty tomb. We stand between the living and the dead—between the past and the future—between the rising and the setting sun. Families, churches, nations become great as they pay honor to the noble dead—the good dead are the great dead, and Jesus is the great example. He was the best and therefore the greatest—the most loved and the most honored. The women brought sweet spices to the tomb sweet spices to the tomb of their departed Lord; you of their departed Lord; you bring sweet flowers to lay upon the graves of those you still love, moved by the hope His tomb inspires.

The Hebrews carried the bones of Joseph into the Promised Land; we carry the memory of our dead in our hearts, and baptize their graves with tears.

This war has added a new chapter to Memorial Day; beyond the graves of the Civil War are the graves of the world-war where white crosses mark the spot where heroes sleep in the fields of France. We will not forget them this sacred day. Men and women love to visit the graves where true men rest. If in Brussels, you would want to go out ten miles to Waterloo where the Allied armies of the British, Dutch, and Germans, under Wellington, defeated Napoleon and the French Army, June 15, 1815. The battle commenced at 11:30 a. m., by a French charge and was defeated; renewed in the evening by the last charge of the Old Guard and this failed and was followed by an advance of the combined armies. The Allies lost 22,000 of their 67,000 and French 35,000 of their 72,000. At change in the tide Blucher came up with 50,000 Prussians and joined in the pursuit. That was a great day and people love to visit the spot. Then British and Germans were allied against France; in the last victory British and French allied against Germany; such is the course of human history. Those great historic spots have multiplied until every grace has become sacred and every little child's grave is honored by a flower and a prayer.

*Abstract of the Annual Memorial Sermon, preached at New Providence Church, June 1, 1919, by W. W. Staley, D. D.

CONFERENCE RESOLUTIONS

It is not an easy task—writing resolutions is not. And yet it is easy compared with the keeping of them. I have just been reading the Christian Annual, and I find it full of most interesting facts—facts worth knowing; facts that ought to be known and treasured by the members of the Christian Church. There are resolutions there, too—resolutions of all shapes, kinds and sizes; resolutions written hurriedly and perhaps on the back of an old envelope and handed in hastily to some Conference official; resolutions written by a special resolution committee; resolutions of praise to man, some of praise to God; some to be kept in the hearts of men and women; some to be kept only in the Conference records.

"Daniel purposed in his heart..." The heart is the seat of good resolutions. To stand they must be supported by the personality and character of the maker,—and that personality must be linked up with the personality of God. Such was Daniel's. And some such we have had recently in our own denomination. For instance, two good women in the Virginia Valley Central Christian Conference formulated a plan by which three of their churches were canvassed for THE CHRISTIAN SUN under the direction of the Conference. That resolution is found on page 18 of the 1918 Annual. On page 43 of the 1919 Annual they reported 26 subscriptions from those three churches. That is certainly to be commended, not because of the great showing made for the percentage of subscriptions is small considering the number of homes reported, but because it was a resolution with a history—a resolution with something done about it.

This study will be continued next week.

LA GRANGE, GA.

We have just closed a ten days' meeting at the La Grange Christian church. Brother G. D. Hunt was with us one week and was a great help. He is a man that the people are always glad to see and hear.

Twenty new members were added to the church and everything is looking good. There is a great work to be done here. We have planned to run another week's meeting about the first of September. We hope that Brother Hunt will remember us and come again, also Brother Elder, who spent a week with us in April and got things started off for a meeting.

BROTHER CLEMENTS WRITES

I am writing a few lines because I am happy. I want my friends to rejoice with me in being able to take three steps yesterday, (June 2), without my crutches. That may look like a very little thing but it was a mighty big thing to me. God has been good to me.

W. G. CLEMENTS.

DESPOTIC GODS

Such were the duties of the Egyptians, the Canaanites, Greeks and Romans. Their Gods courted, married, swore and lied. The ignorant people, in superstitious fear, tried to keep their gods good natured by sacrificing regularly to them—ofttimes offering their own flesh and blood.

Now do not be shocked when we say that the belief of the Jews, in the beginning, was a little better than their heathen neighbors. The idea that Jehovah was the only God developed gradually. At last they learned that the punishments which came upon them were not due to the whim of God, but to the sin and disobedience of man. Gradually the morning light broke in. David swept his fingers over his harp and sang, "Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him." At last, Deity, embodied in human form, smiled in a manger, wept at a grave, died on a cross, robbed death of its sting, the grave of victory. Soon after this, the prejudice of the Academy, the pride of the portico, and the fascies of the lieters were humbled in the dust. The light of the knowledge of God, through the gift of the Holy Spirit, reached, rested at noon, in Christ, the Redeemer of Jew and Gentile, yea, of all who trust and obey the One who died, that we might live.

D. A. LONG.

A FEW PARAGRAPHERS

No, indeed brother, we have not outgrown Christianity; we had, to some extent, forsaken it or never really understood it. It never can be outgrown. Its author is "the same yesterday, today and forever."

Listen, you chattering erities of the old, and you gibbled tongued prophets of the new, do not forget that while you are calling upon the editors and preachers for a clearer and more vigorous message, that the challenge that comes to them comes to you—yes, to all.

The protracted meeting season is at hand. Beloved, we may not be able to distinguish, every time what is essential, and what is non-essential. We know that never was the world in greater need of the loving truth of the Christian religion. We should not indulge in any foolish talk, or fritter away our time quibbling over trifles. Let us, by pen and tongue, by giving and praying, do what we can to evangelize the world, feed the hungry, the body and spirit, to open the eyes of the physically and spiritually blind, to proclaim the good news that Christ is able and willing to save from sin to eternal life, all who, with broken hearts and contrite spirits, come to Him.

A LETTER OF INTEREST

It is a pleasure to have the opportunity of writing to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I have been a member of the Christian Church for about fourteen years and love it better each day that I live. My husband is a member of the Christian Church also, having joined with me. We have tried to live Christian lives. We now have six children living—one girl and five boys. We are trying to rear our children the right way. They go to Sunday school regularly and they enjoy going.

We all love our pastor, Rev. T. E. White, and wish him much success in life and his work. Our two oldest boys are members of Sanford Christian church.

We enjoy reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN and no other paper can fill its place in this home. My mother and father were members of the Christian Church and of course it is natural for me to love the denomination. My mother is dead and it is my desire to meet her and all our loved ones when the Lord calls.

We desire the prayers of the Christian people that we may live the way that we should live in order that our children may be loved and respected by all.

Mrs. W. M. Dowdy.

IN LURAY, VA.

Those who were reared in and are still living, can tell you much more than I can about these incomparable valleys—Page and Shenandoah. Soon the long, wide fields of waving wheat will be ready for the binders, and the extensive hills and plains of thrifty growing clover, timothy and other grass will invite the mowers to give them needed attention. The clik and clatter of these machines drawn by fine teams will be a scene of great interest and profit.

The fine orchards of apples, peaches, cherries and other kinds of fruit are loaded with delicious and valuable fruit. Truly this is a land full of greatness, and plenty. Natural scenery of superlative, stupendous and inexpressible beauty invites us to look, praise and admire until we exclaim: What hath God wrought? If I had the pen of a ready writer—the skillful touch of a painter or sculptor, the eloquence of the most gifted orator, the spiritual energy and power combined with the zeal and zest of Paul, I could not tell what I want to say about the matchless and thrilling caves, mountains and valleys. But I am inspired on the way with the precious and entertaining thought, that all of these things are the works of my Father, and that He is nearer and dearer to me.

DISABLED SOLDIERS

In his work throughout the country in behalf of discharged service men Colonel Arthur Woods, Assistant to the Secretary of War in charge of finding employment for demobilized soldiers, sailors and marines, has learned that in many sections people generally do not know just what the Government is doing to enable men disabled in the line of duty to re-establish themselves in civil life.

Inasmuch as the Government took these men out of civil life and placed them in camps and in the trenches where their disabilities were incurred, the obligation upon the Government to re-establish them in civil life is clear. And it should be understood that those injured in France are not the only ones entitled to assistance, for all disabled service men, whether injured in the United States or abroad, are provided for equally.

For re-establishing the disabled in civil life, the authorized agency of the Government is the Federal Board for Vocational Education, which is charged by Congress with the "vocational training of disabled soldiers and the placement of rehabilitated persons in suitable and gainful occupations," after their discharge from the army.

The Government, it will be noted, not only trains the disabled man, thus enabling him to assume again with unimpaired efficiency, the responsibilities of civil life, but also assists him in securing employment at the end of his period of training.

In some large cities crippled men in uniform are seen on the street engaged in "panhandling" kindly disposed persons. It has been found that in nearly every case these men were just plain ordinary fakirs in the guise of soldiers, who took this method of enlisting unmerited sympathy from the public. There is no excuse for these fakirs. No man disabled in the service need engage in any sort of hold-up game on the streets nor need he engage in any occupation whatever which is not becoming to him. Anyone seeing men in uniform so engaged should inform of provision made for their training and placement by the Government. If any man after being informed what his opportunities are continues his game, a favor will be done the great body of self-respecting disabled men who are trying to make something of themselves, if every case of this character is reported to the nearest branch office of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

MISSIONARY

ABOUT THE CHURCHES AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of our South Norfolk, Va., church has enjoyed recently a very gracious revival season. Under date of May 21 he writes: "You will be interested to know that our work here has the most promising outlook in its history. We are in the third week of the most successful revival ever held in our church here. More than seventy professions and fifty additions to the church. The pastor is doing the preaching and also led the singing the first two weeks. Rev. J. F. Morgan has assisted with the music two nights this week." Nothing rejoices a pastor's heart more, or helps a church more, than a spirit filled revival.

Sister T. Upton Savage, Suffolk, Va., writes: "I think the Children's Day programs are the very best, and as I have been training the children at Bethlehem for many years, that means right much." Many words of commendation for the programs have come, and we are grateful. If other schools desire copies, send request at once, as the supply is limited. And all schools should have their Children's Day in June.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND MISSIONS

The number of our schools that are contributing one Sunday's offering each month to missions constantly increases. Our Durham school is among the most liberal, its check being about $10.00 each month. No school loses anything, no more than does an individual, by dividing liberally for missions and world-wide evangelization. When a school spends all its offerings upon itself it is in that act as selfish as an individual who does the same. The writer had a letter from a Sunday school secretary the other day who said that the school could not give one Sunday a month's collection for missions or for the Orphanage, as it barely got enough to buy its literature, maintain current expenses. That school is having a hard time living, and it should have. It is just living for itself. It spends on itself all it gets. It thinks and acts in terms of self. "He that loses his life shall save it," says the Word. Some schools need to lose sight of themselves in order to save themselves.

OUR CHAPEL HILL CHURCH

It is doubtful if any church amongst us deserves more credit and has from the beginning been more loyal than our Chapel Hill church. It has responded to every call, and is awake to every interest and progressive step of the Church. In the Elon Standardization drive Chapel Hill was apportioned $500. It responded with $1,500. In our special missionary drive it gave about $1,000. It gives one Sunday school offering each month to missions and one to the Orphanage. It has been, and is one of the most liberal congregations, despite the fact that it is a mission point and still owes heavily on its building indebtedness, and only has preaching one or two Sundays each month. All have a right to feel proud of what our Chapel Hill church has done, and what it gives promise of doing in the future. Located as it is at the State University it should be one of our strongest, and most aggressive churches, and here is hoping that it will be before many years.

BUYING HEALTH

America's determination to eradicate venereal diseases is best demonstrated by the action of the legislatures in thirty-one states which have appropriated large sums of money to be used for this purpose exclusively. In each of the states the Federal government augmented the appropriation and the United States Public Health Service officers are co-operating with state health officers.

Most of the states not included in the following list are confidently expected to make appropriations as soon as their legislatures meet:

Arizon	$ 4,500
Arkansas	34,237
California	201,600
Colorado	17,000
Connecticut	24,000

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

WINNING OTHERS

No, it is not the business of the minister and the evangelist only to ask individuals to accept Jesus Christ, nor of some central committee which sends out literature suggesting ways and means. It is everybody's task. The injunction, "Go ye and make disciples," is just as binding upon the man sensitive to his Christian obligations as "Come unto me" or "Learn of me."

Really, now, how long is it since we tried to induce some one else to walk the Christian way? When did we speak or write a note with this in view? When was the last time we prayed that a certain person might be converted from the self-centered life and enter the Christ life?

O yes, one's first reaction toward the idea is quite understandable: "I'm not built that way; it doesn't come as easily to me as it does to some persons. I try to live a decent and useful life; I am supporting the Church and missions, but this business of approaching another person goes against my grain. At heart he may be as good as I and perhaps better. I don't like to interfere with another man's private affairs or invade his personality."

Ah, but on this last point you remember the story about Father Taylor, famous as a preacher to sailors? He sometimes included in his round of visitations the wealthier section of the city. One evening when a prosperous merchant came home to dinner, his wife informed him that Father Taylor had called on her that afternoon and had inquired about her soul. "I should think you would have told him to go about his business," grumbled the man just back from downtown. "If you had heard him, husband," said the wife, "I guess you would have thought that he was about his business."

Going out after the other man reacts on the man who goes. Nothing so quickly and so thoroughly rouses us steady-going, conventional Christians as the effort to help some one else see the glory of the Christian life. It sets us to thinking and planning. It leads us to ask how much of a Teacher, Master, and Saviour Christ is to us, anyway. It impels us to clean up our lives. It defines more sharply the contents of our religion. It burnishes the weapons of our warfare. We may fail or we may bungle the matter, but our spiritual assets will increase through the effort to share them.

But we shall not fail. The person addressed will not be offended if without fuss or sanctimoniousness we say: "Come and live the Christian life with me. I make poor work of it at times, but I know that I possess an urge, a recourse, an ideal of priceless worth, and I know they all proceed from Christ. Won't you settle once for all the question of your personal attitude to him?"

Be an Andrew. Be an Andrew under your own roof. Be an Andrew in the factory, the store, the club, the community. You don't have to make a fool of yourself or become a bore in order to fulfill Andrew's role and bring some one else to the Master.

The world needs many more disciples and followers of Jesus Christ. They and not external arrangements in the way of treaties and covenants will be the salt and leaven of society. Who are to help Christianize this distressed and turbulent world and all who dwell in it if not just such everyday Christians as we?—H. A. B., in the Congregationalist and Advance.

THINGS BROKEN

God uses most for his glory those people and things which are most perfectly broken. The sacrifices he accepts are broken and contrite hearts. It was through the breaking down of Jacob's natural strength at Peniel that got him where God could clothe him with spiritual power.

It was when the three hundred elect soldiers under Gideon broke their pitchers, a type of breaking themselves, that the hidden lights shone forth to the consternation of their adversaries.

It was when Esther risked her life and broke through the rigid etiquette of a heathen court, that she obtained favor to rescue her people from death.

It was when Jesus took the five loaves and broke them that the bread was multiplied in the very act of breaking sufficient to feed five thousand.

It was when Mary Broke her beautiful alabaster box, rendering it thenceforth useless, that the pent-up perfume filled the whole house.

It was when Jesus allowed his precious body to be broken to pieces by thorns and nails and a spear that his inner life was poured out like a crystal ocean for thirsty sinners to drink and live.

It is when a beautiful grain of corn is broken up in the earth by death that its inner heart sprouts forth and bears hundreds of other grains.

And thus on and on through all history and all biography and all vegetation and all spiritual life. God must have broken things.

Those who are broken in wealth and broken in self-will and broken in their ambitions and broken in their beautiful ideals and broken in worldly reputation, broken oftentimes in health and those who are despised and seem utterly helpless and forlorn, the Holy Spirit is seizing upon and using for God's glory. It is the "lame that take the prey," Isaiah tells us: It is the weak that overcome the devil. God is waiting to take hold of our failures and nothingness and shine through them.—British Evangelist.

NOTES

The Rose Hill Christian church, Columbus, Georgia, is in need of a pastor. Any one interested may write See Houghton, 642-25th Street, Columbus, Ga.

Some days ago Mr. Basil S. Cox, son of Rev. L. I. Cox, met with a painful accident at High Point by getting part of his toes cut off by a moving car. He is in the hospital at High Point and is doing well. We sympathize with him in his accident.

We cannot refrain from calling attention to Mrs. Dowdy's letter on another page. So often we call upon people to write for THE SUN, and the reply is that they cannot because they cannot discuss some topic. Mrs. Dowdy's letter is a good testimony, an example of what many could write, and would certainly be helpful to readers. Let us have more such letters.

The North Carolina Christian Endeavor Convention was in session in Burlington, N. C., June 6, 7, and 8. The attendance was the largest in the history of the work in the State, the reports registering the highest degree of work done, and the fellowship could not be surpassed. We cannot undertake to tell of the splendid work. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows:

THRIFT SUNDAY

The churches of the country have been asked by the Treasury Department to make Sunday, June 22, Thrift Sunday and to devote it to the aid of the savings movement which is sweeping the country. A direct message from Secretary Glass to the Treasury Department, to be read to congregations from the pulpit, will set forth the personal and patriotic reasons for seeking to perpetuate the lessons of thrift learned by the people through the struggles and self-sacrifices of the war period.

The moral value of thrift to the individual and to the community make the savings movement a particularly appropriate subject for church activity. The great services rendered by the churches to all public causes during the war period have demonstrated the value of church co-operation in great public movements.

Rev. W. B. Fuller has accepted a call to Damascus church, near Sunbury, N. C. His address, until further notice, will be Sunbury, N. C.

Dr. W. A. Harper spoke in the Burlington church last Sunday. His message was heard gladly.

Rev. H. J. Fleming of Newport News, Virginia, came in to see us the other day.

We rejoice to know that Brother W. G. Clements is improving. See his letter on another page.

We are unable to give the names of all our subscribers who called last week during the Christian Endeavor Convention. We are always glad to see our friends. Come again.

President Wilson is to sail from France in a few days.

Uncle Wellons writes interestingly of his trip to Eastern Virginia. His letter will appear next week.

6-1-9 on your label means that your subscription expired June 1. Look and see if these figures are on yours.

Remember the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention that is to be held at Shallow Well, July 15-17.

Your pastor may need a great many things that cannot be bought with money. He may need a word of cheer and encouragement.

If there is anything about this paper that you do not approve, let us know it.

Let us have your renewal during this month.

Do you need a nice Bible or Testament? We have a full line of each.

Last week we completed the mailing of a handsome card to each church in the Convention to be placed on the wall. Has your church received its card? If not, let us know. Every church is due to have this card calling attention to THE SUN.

Let us have short articles for publication. We need them and welcome anything that you may send.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

A WEEK IN RANDOLPH COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

Rarely have I enjoyed a season of fellowship so well as the five days I spent with Pastor A. T. Banks and the group of churches he serves in Randolph county. Brother Banks was graduated in the class of 1913, the class which promulgated the Alumni Building Fund and published the first issue of the Phispsili, the College Annual. You would expect such a man to be a progressive and he does not disappoint your expectation. In his work he is ably and sympathetically assisted by his consecrated wife, also an Elon graduate with three diplomas at that.

I reached Ramseur on Saturday afternoon and was soon discussing the Standardization Drive with Deacon T. A. Moffitt and wife. They gave us a good start, subscribing $1,000, being the first subscription for that large an amount given for any purpose in the Christian church by a member of the Western North Carolina Conference. With that start, following a tender prayer by Brother Banks, we were ready for victory all along the line.

Sunday morning found us at Park's Cross Roads, one of the strong country churches of our entire Brotherhood. God has greater things in store for this grand old church. It doubled its quota in the drive.

Sunday afternoon we met a small band of the faithful at Shiloh. Shiloh is a Scriptural word, and means salvation, deliverance. Here have been born many leaders in the Christian Church. The best days are ahead, for this church has learned the blessed joy of helping the Lords work. "Over the top," she went, Deacon J. C. Cox giving one-half the original quota to make it possible.

Sunday evening we were to have held a service at Pleasant Ridge, but a terrific storm prevented. Pleasant Ridge, however, on Wednesday following, too went over the top, and a new day of rich blessing awaits the noble band who worship there.

Ramseur, of course, went over, and in as happy a mood as any church I have visited. I left Pastor Banks smiling, and why should he not smile in such a case? It must greatly grieve a pastor's heart when his field does not do its part generously for the great enterprises of the Kingdom. It is natural therefore for his heart to rejoice when they step out with firm tread for these causes. Keep your eye on Brother Banks. He is one of the coming men of our ministry.

Funds This Week

Deacon and Mrs. T. A. Moffitt named their fund in loving memory of their deceased daughter, Virginia Lehman, who would have entered Elon as a Freshman this fall, as her brother and sister had done, but God claimed her. What sweeter thing than for her devoted parents thus to preserve her memory in the College they love and of which she would have been an Alumna!

Brother B. F. Craven and wife, of Park's Cross Roads church, lost a noble son in the World War. He was killed in action on November 9 at Menhaulles Meuse, France. In his honor in the old home church they have provided a beautiful memorial window, to be unveiled on June 29 by Rev. T. E. White, a former pastor, assisted by Revs. A. T. Banks and T. J. Green. In addition these devoted parents have perpetuated his memory forever by founding a fund of $1,000 in Elon to be used to pay the tuition cost of educating a Christian minister. "Though dead, he speaketh." What a precious tribute this to Floyd Craven, their hero son!

A Thought For The Week

Two things are had in remembrance in the sight of God, according to Acts 10:31—our prayers and our alms. Prayers without alms are hypocrisy in His sight. Alms without prayers are a mockery to Him. It takes both to make the Christian man or woman full orb'd in His sight. Our Christian brethren and sisters are, by their generosity and their prayers in this drive to make our College standard, causing many things to be done on earth that will be remembered "over there," when this life is ended. God has rich blessings in store for our people and our cause. He can not fail to bless with every joy those who thus do His will.

W. A. HARPER.

P. S. Brother Riddle, I have urged the other brethren who are in the field with us in this final lap to write each week of their experiences. They are too busy to do so, but I can assure you and the interested friends that they are hitting the trail hard and faithfully. Pray for us all.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

It is a busy time with the Orphanage boys now. We have had so much rain for the past fifteen days that we have not been able to get our work in the condition we would like to have it. We had planned to get our corn all worked the second time and ten acres of beans sowed before harvest. Our wheat is nearly ripe and there is much work to be done before we go into the harvest, but we have a crowd of faithful boys who like to work and who work like men when they are at it.

We have three Easter Offerings reported this week—two churches and one friend. I had hoped that each church would make the offering this spring and help swell the amount but it seems that quite a number did not avail themselves of the great privilege of helping the little orphans in this way.

We have one letter for the Corner this week. Lester B. Frank is a faithful little cousin and always gets his letter in on time, though he lives in a distant state. He wants to help keep the Corner bright and cheerful. I would like for all the cousins to write through the summer months and keep our page full.

We trust the Sunday schools will lend us a helping hand from now till the Thanksgiving offering comes in. Through the summer months our income is not large enough to meet expenses. While we do all in our power to keep the expense account as low as possible it will run up at the end of the month when we get all our accounts in. Everything that we have to buy is so high and the children wear as much and eat as hearty as they do when everything is cheaper.

I truly hope that the day is not far distant when each family in the Christian Church will take THE CHRISTIAN SUN so they may be able to keep up with the different departments of the Church and the Orphanage. If each family in the Church were a subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, then I could reach each family weekly through the paper. My only way of keeping this work before our people is through my report in THE SUN, by personal letters and visits to the churches and Sunday schools. If you are not a subscriber, subscribe now and when I tell you of our need for the comfort of our little folks open your heart and send a contribution to help supply the need.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley:—Your sad letter came some days ago. We have a sympathy too deep for words for you and your little boys and girls. It was so sweet and dear of Mrs. Johnston to think of starting a fund for a baby home at the Orphanage. I hope I may visit the home and play with the babies some day. I thank you for the pictures of the little orphan girls. Enclosed find twenty cents for May and June.—Lester B. Frank, Lindsay, Okla.

Glad to have your letter this week. It is the only one to brighten the corner. I hope you will have the pleasure of visiting the Orphanage sometime and see our little boys and girls. They will give you a good time playing ball and jumping the rope.—Uncle Charley.

THE TALE OF A DOG

By W. H. Burgwin

When Gypsy came to our house she was a bit of a pup, a dark-brown, short-haired, kindly-eyed, tail-wagging, fun-loving bundle of cheerfulness. Her business, among other things, was to grow and to learn good dog manners in the house and out. These she did in her happy way, and very quickly, too.

She was the property of our boys, but she soon adopted our baby girl as her special charge. Wherever that baby went Gyp was. The baby carriage with its precious cargo was to go down town. A small brown doggie tagged along, as proud as any prize-winner could ever be. The carriage was left outside the store while grandma or mamma did the shopping. Whereupon without orders, Gyp mounted guard, and the carriage was always safe. When a new baby girl came along, there was no jealousy on Gypsy's part. She was delighted and at once added the new baby to her responsibilities. One day that baby had been asleep in her carriage in a grove by the seashore. Mamma was on the beach a short distance away. Baby wakened. A friend near at hand was about to lift the child from the carriage, but Gyp was on guard. The friend thought it best to call mamma, saying that he was about to bring the baby, but the dog objected, and he thought it prudent to desist.

On another occasion papa took the older child to the city to see her doctor. It was convenient to push her to the station in her carriage. The travelers returned some six hours later to claim the carriage left in charge of the express agent. He asked if we had brought a little brown dog with us. We did not know. But Gyp was there and had watched that baby carriage in a strange place and would not be driven off during the whole of a long summer afternoon. How glad she was to see us!

At another time a minister friend who knew our children met them on the sidewalk and stopped to talk with them, patting the baby, then two years old, on the cheek. Gyp was puzzled. She was kind in her act, but very insistent as she walked up and put her nose between the baby's cheek and the minister's hand, pushing the hand away. The minister told us the story, so we know it's true.

We call ourselves a Christian nation, but we can learn some valuable lessons from the heathen. In the Japanese language it is impossible for a man to use profanity, as there are no profane words in their vocabulary. What a pity that this useless and degrading form of speech was ever introduced into our Language.—Biblical Recorder.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JUNE 22, 1919

Love. I Cor. 13

Golden Text: Now abideth faith, hope, love, these three; and the greatest of these is love. I Cor. 13:13.

Thoughts For Teachers

Love is the fulfilling of the law. It is the law of teaching, the law of the home maker. No parent will have obedience, no teacher will secure results through fear. "If ye love Me," said the Master Teacher, "ye will keep my commandments." Oh, yes, if we love Him, we shall desire to keep His commandments. The unloving, no matter what he thinks, has no part in God, for God Himself is love. What about our neighbor? "If a man say 'I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar.'" Who is my brother? Answer this for yourselves. If Christ died for the weaker brother, can we not live with Him in peace? Suppose he does not do our way, what then?

God so loved
That He gave
How much do you love?
What do you give?

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 22, 1919

Christianity and The Toilers of India. Isa. 40:18-31. (Missionary Meeting).

Let us know something of India; its needs and its conditions. Do you know of the sickness which comes every year from unsanitary conditions? Of the thousands who drink the poisoned waters of the Ganges every year, waters poisoned by dead bodies, and filth? Do you know of the tens of thousands of child widows of India? What about the little lads of ten and eleven deprived of childhood to become heads of families? What of the coolie class, without hope of ever having enough to eat or enough to wear? What hope for these in the native religions? What hope for them in Christ? What have we done, what can we do to send His Word to a people two and a half times as numerous as the population of the United States?

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

THE LARGER PATRIOTISM

We are coming close to the Fourth of July. How will you celebrate it in your school? What will you do with it, pass it by, and ignore it, or make such a use of it that your boys and girls will begin to be fitted for world citizenship? They need to learn the larger patriotism of the world, to learn that "all ye are brethren," that "God hath made of one blood all the peoples of the earth," and that no member can sin against another without causing suffering to all. And, when you teach the Brotherhood of Man, remember there can be no common brotherhood, without a common Fatherhood. Have a patriotic program, a program which, if possible, shall include a speech by some soldier, either of this or the preceding wars. Have all soldiers on the platform, make a strong appeal for patriotism, love of country, reverence for the flag and all for which it stands, and then, as the closing number, have the pastor or some one in his place, to make an appeal for the Christian flag and the things for which it stands, an appeal for loyalty to the King and the Kingdom.

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SKEDADDLES By S. J. Porter

Skedaddle comes from the Greek word skedannumi. It means to run away, to scamper, to spill, to retreat disorderly. According to the findings of the Commission for the Adolescent Period appointed by the International Sunday School Association, the proportion of boys and girls between thirteen and sixteen years of age, who dropped out of Sunday school was sixty-two per cent; and from seventeen to nineteen years of age, seventy-seven per cent. In other words, sixty-two of every 100 younger boys and girls, and seventy-seven out of every 100 older pupils "skedaddle" from the Sunday school at the time when they need its training and anchorage most. Something ought to be done to stop this "spilling," this disorderly retreat. It is said on good authority that in eight years 11,000,000 scholars passed through the Sunday schools of the United States without manifesting any definite decision for the Christian life. We are of course accomplishing much in the Sunday school, but are we not also losing a great opportunity? Some one once asked, "How shall we keep our older boys in the Sunday school?" "Build a wall of men between them and the door," is the reply. And if this be made up of the fathers, it will be all the stronger. Instead of "skedaddling" in the opposite direction, let parents blaze the way to the Sunday school and it will be easier to win and hold the young people.—Baptist Messenger.

HUFFINES

Mrs. Annie Wakefield Huffines was born in Canada, January 3, 1861, and died at her home near Pleasant Ridge Christian church, Guilford county, North Carolina, April 26, 1919, aged 58 years, 3 months and 23 days. When she was 11 years old her parents removed to Friendship, Guilford county, N. C., there she grew into womanhood.

While in school at New Garden, (now Guilford College), she professed faith in Christ and joined the Friends church at that place.

Thirty-one years ago she was happily married to L. C. Huffines. To this union was born seven children: Mrs. L. A. Beeson of Friendship; Mrs. E. G. Farlow of Teachey, N. C.; Allen Huffines, Charlotte, N. C.; Mrs. L. B. Farlow of Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. L. L. Isley and Craven at home. One son, Henry, a noble young man, died last fall.

Her husband being a member of the Christian church at Pleasant Ridge, after her marriage, she transferred her membership to Pleasant Ridge of which church she remained a consistent helpful member, always gladly and faithfully performing all tasks assigned her. She was a model wife, mother and neighbor. She walked the path of life with her husband for thirty-one years. "Her children rise up, and call her blessed; her husband also and he praiseth her." She was ever ready to help the needy.

In the absence of her pastor the funeral was conducted by the Rev. Edgar Williams, pastor of the Friends church at Guilford College, assisted by the writer. S. STARR HIGGINS.

MOORE

Mary R. Moore was born October 15, 1847, and died April 21, 1919, at the age of 71 years, 6 months, and 6 days. Sister Moore united with the Christian church at Union, Southampton County, Va., at an early age, and lived the life of a faithful Christian until death. On October 21, 1868 she was united in marriage to Rev. H. C. Moore. She was a devoted wife and mother. Sister Moore was well known and highly esteemed in all parts of the Virginia Conference where Brother Moore has been pastor of several churches in recent years. At the time of her death they were living in Charlottesville, Va. Death, however, occurred while on a visit to her son, John, near Beaverdam, Va. In addition to her husband, she is survived by six sons and two daughters, one being the wife of Rev. R. L. Williamson of Henderson, N. C. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Charlottesville, Va., April 22.

Why We Should Give to The Church College

For Our College
For Our Church

"The Missionary Review of the World has gathered some interesting statistics relative to the influence of small church schools. It says: "A small Christian College in New England, which recently celebrated the centennial of its birth, has never had, in the one hundred years of its existence, an attendance that exceeded one hundred students, yet its record of graduates show 542 clergymen, 70 foreign missionaries, 102 college professors, 32 college presidents, 9 governors of states and 15 members of Congress.

De Pauw University, a Methodist institution in Indiana, numbers among its graduates 448 ministers and missionaries, 107 editors and journalists, 146 college professors, 57 college presidents, 5 governors, 15 members of Congress, 2 cabinet officers, and a host of other public servants and useful citizens.

Much of the same evidence comes from other denominations. In 1915 Presbyterian colleges in America reported 28,445 graduates, of whom 5,830 were in the Christian ministry. 714 were foreign missionaries and 1,385 were in other Christian work. There were on the list 727 college professors and 4,762 teachers. The law claimed 4,064; medicine, 3,796, and other professions, 1,733. Forty per cent. of the graduates were in altruistic work. The Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions reports that 70 per cent. of their missionaries prepared in Christian institutions.

Our own Elon College stands for "Christian Character first and Always." Its ministers, missionaries, teachers and trained workers everywhere claim for it our unstinted support. Shall we give or shall we withhold from the Church college? Her brightest day is before her. Shall we dim her lamp or aid her in the radiation of a greater light?

The Message

DEW themes, new thoughts, new things—all these call and challenge us. They are worthy of consideration, but mistakes are being made by isolating them from the Great Message of the Book. The message of Christ and Him crucified preached by a spirit-filled soul will draw the crowd. Men never tire of it—they love to hear it and to support it. There is no substitute for the Gospel and no theme so dear to the hearts of men. Teach it, preach it, for it is the message of all ages—and for this age.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

BRIEFS

Cheerfulness is a child of kindness and a cousin to religion.

It is not enough to hope for a thing—translating our hope into help is the practical method.

Sorrows may have in them great blessings. It is said that "every cloud has a silver lining." Often the hand of God seems hard, but He is leading, and it is faith only that will enable us to follow.

Doing a good deed gives a blessing in two ways: It helps the one doing the deed and also the one to whom it is done. That is why selfishness is not Christ-like—it is void of that mutual spirit.

The Church is due the retired minister an honor and consideration. The Church should set a far better example than a corporation in such matters. The government often retires men on a pension. Let us not forget those who have been faithful in the Lord's work.

We note that a sister denomination in another State is raising a fund to send the Church paper to all its ministers. A good thing to do, but a bad thing that all of them have not been taking the official organ of their Church.

The Church cannot afford to suffer any relax from its present position in giving. The urgent needs are too many and the call of the Kingdom too loud for any backward step.

These are days when we need to keep close to God. Things are unsettled, temptations abound, and sin is lurking. This is a day of impatience when the nervous strain is hard upon us. So let us guard ourselves physically as well as spiritually.

There is a certain satisfaction in all States of their wealth. A thing to rejoice in to be sure. A State has a right to feel proud when its wealth is great. God is the Giver, and in our boastings of State wealth, God should be praised—and honored by it.

There are hundreds of young men and women in the Church who should be induced to attend college this fall. The educational activities of our denomination need very much to enlist more of the young men and women for future leaders.

The other day we heard W. J. Bryan speak on prohibition, and among the things he said, he told of the start against whisky in his own State—Nebraska. He opened the campaign himself, but so unpopular was the issue that he could not find a man who would sit on the platform with him. Today old Nebraska is dry. It takes courage to fight some things, and you often have public sentiment against you. Right will win.

OFFERINGS AND COLLECTIONS

The other day we had the pleasure of being in a community and speaking in a Church not of our own denomination. In that church not less than twenty families worship. The average family is worth not less than five thousand dollars in material things. Acres of waving grain and growing corn greeted the eye, while fine horses and automobiles filled the church yard. The occasion spread a dinner worth $250.00. That church pays its pastor $350.00 per year, and in the last six months its Sunday school has contributed the sum of $13.50 for all purposes. (No error in these figures). The collection plates were passed for a collection, and we had the audacity to remind the people that the plates were for the offering and not for a collection. Collections are made in churches that do not give.

"ASLEEP"

The most of us dread death, and perhaps all of us, if we could really know ourselves. It is the passing into that unknown that we dread. It is the separating from this life that we fear.

The other day we read of a missionary who died about three weeks ago in Brazil. His associates sent a cablegram and said: "Dr. Butler Asleep." How happy that thought! It rang in our ears again and again. Asleep! Not dead!! His work was finished, his task completed and then he went to sleep. Precious thought that one can go to that eternal sleep where only the touch of an angel can wake us.

We get so busy living that we forget about dying. We make it a rule not to talk too much about dying, but rather to be so busy living and endeavoring to do right that death will take care of itself. However, all of us need to be reminded that death is certain and that it comes to all of us. We know not the day nor the hour. It is our part and privilege to be ready.

Going to sleep! What a good feeling after a hard day's work! It is delightful. Let us, all of us, pray and prepare that our going will be "just going to sleep," peaceful sleep to wake no more here; but on that shore where there is no night, no pain, no sorrow, no trials, no partings, no cares, and where rest is assured to the children of the Lord.

CONCERNING A GOOD AND GREAT MAN

Dr. J. P. Barrett, Editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty, speaking of the late Willis J. Lee says:

Death of Willis J. Lee

In the early days of our ministry we found a friend in the person of Willis J. Lee, of Nansemond County, Va. Till the day of his death, we always counted him among our dear friends. It was Tuesday afternoon, May 20, 1919, that our dear brother made the great surrender of his life and went back to God who gave it. During the morning of that day he had been busy on his truck farm. At noon he took dinner with his wife as usual, and then lay down to take a little rest. Mrs. Lee discovered that he was breathing hard, and undertook to minister to him, but it was too late, for in the space of a few moments he had quietly slipped away from earth and gone to be with Jesus. He was a warm friend to the Christian Church and to the cause of Christ. He was a man of means and was liberal toward the great enterprises of the denomination. He was especially interested in the Orphanage at Elon College, in the great missionary work of the Church, and also in our educational enterprises. Especially was he a great friend to Elon College. Then, too, he took great interest in the local church at Berea, Nansemond County, Va., where he held his membership for perhaps fifty years. When he died he was within five days of the fiftieth anniversary of his marriage to Miss Jennie Jones, who remained with him through all of his long and useful life, a faithful and devoted companion. Through his long journey in business and in church affairs, we cannot recall having seen him excited, or out of an even frame of mind even once. He was as gentle as a woman and true and faithful to his Lord and to His friends. His life among men was a blessing. He had been for the last few years in poor health, and yet he kept along most of the time and looked after his business affairs. It was only a few days before his sudden going that he gave $5,000.00 to Elon College, and he did it so quietly that you would have thought that it was nothing more in the way of an event in his life than the eating of a regular meal, but that was characteristic of the man. Memories of his life will long remain as the fragrance of sweet flowers to give comfort and joy to loved ones left behind. Good-bye, beloved brother, till we meet in the morning in the Father's house on high!

A LETTER

Ether, N. C., June 12, 1919.

Dear Brother Riddle:—

I injured my back by falling and carrying a heavy piece of wood last March. Later Myelitis developed and I have not been able to do any work since. I have been slowly but surely growing worse since.

I am interested very much in the work of the Kingdom. I trust you will pray for me that God may restore me back to health. I am sure that He is abundantly able to restore me.

I am sending you a few odds and ends which came to my mind while lying on my bed of affliction. You may use them if you think they are worth while.

W. H. FREEMAN.

Brother Freeman is a member of our Ether church and has been active in the Master's service in teaching and doing good work for his local church. Let the Brotherhood pray for Brother Freeman that he may be restored to health.

THIRD CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUYS PROPERTY

The Third Christian church has purchased the lots on the northwest corner of Thirty-third street and Llewellyn avenue, from C. Elmo Billups and Captain Francis for $3,500. This property is 100 by 110 and is adjoining the property now owned by the church.

The official board of the church made this purchase as a preliminary step towards the erection of a church for the congregation. A campaign towards this end is planned for the fall. The congregation has for some time been using a small wooden structure which was erected on their first property near the corner of Thirty-fourth and Llewellyn.—Norfolk Ledger-Dispatch, Wednesday, June 11, 1919.

DR. CHASE NEW HEAD OF NORTH CAROLINA'S UNIVERSITY

Dr. H. W. Chase, chairman of the faculty of the University of North Carolina, has been elected to the presidency of that institution to succeed the late Edward Kidder Graham.

Dr. Chase was born in Groveland, Mass., April 11, 1883, took his A. B. at Dartmouth in 1904, his A. M. in 1908 and his Ph. D. at Clark University in 1910. He has been connected with the University of North Carolina as Professor of Psychology about five years. He comes from a family of teachers and is expected to reflect greatly upon his newly elected position.

Miss Martha Stacy, Haverhill, Mass., the young lady chosen by the Burlington Sunday school as a missionary, is in Burlington this week. She conducted the Christian Endeavor meeting last Sunday evening, also spoke to the congregation of the church at the regular preaching hour. She made a good impression.

Last Sunday night lightning struck the Sellars Hosiery Mill, Burlington, N. C., and set the building on fire. The damage is about $40,000.00 with $25,000.00 insurance. The mill is owned by D. E. and C. V. Sellars of our Burlington church and we sympathize with them in their loss.

By vote it was decided by the last session of the Convention to hold only a two days' session this year. The program, therefore, has been arranged accordingly. Let each superintendent keep this in mind in planning for the Convention. For information as to trains, see the pastor, Dr. I. W. Johnson's announcement in THE SUN. All together for a successful session. Meet us at Oakland on July 23 and 24.

MUSICIANS—TAKE NOTICE

The North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will meet with the Shallow Well Christian church near Jonesboro, N. C., July 15, 16, 17. Our president and secretary are planning for the very biggest and best Convention we have ever held. The music committee is anxious that the musical part of the Convention be "steadily on the job." Leaders of music in our Sunday schools are earnestly requested to be with us and to use their best efforts to have their singing classes represented. We especially ask that all who can play an instrument of any kind to be there to take part with our Convention orchestra. Bring your violin, your horns, or whatever instrument you play and tell us who you are. We want to know you and have you join us in our work. We will use our regular convention song book, "Joyful Praise," published by the A. J. Showalter Co., for sale by Alfred Williams and Co., Raleigh, N. C.

Any members of our Committee will gladly give information concerning the work to any one interested. Get ready, come and help us.

A SERMONETTE

(G. C. Crutchfield)

Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not me only, but unto all them also that love His appearing. II Timothy 4:8.

These are the words of a man who had given his life for the Lord's cause since he was stricken to the ground on his way to Damascus. We find that from that day until his death he followed the Lord, and gave his life for his Master's service. We also find that his life was spent in helping others to find Christ. This should be the object of every man and every woman.

When we read of the life and work that this man did we should not become discouraged, but when we have persecutions and hardships to bear we should only be drawn closer unto Christ.

Hebrews 12:1, 2, we find these words of Paul: "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith." If a man who had been caught and imprisoned could have such hope and courage, why can't the Christians of today who have no such trials as those to overcome? Because we are not living as close to God as we should or could. We undertake to run the race and we do not lay aside all that hinders us we cannot make it to the end. So let us get everything out of the way and make a sure race for Christ, and let our light so shine that the world may see our good works and glorify our Father in Heaven. When we do this we can say as Paul has said, "There is a crown of righteousness laid up for me."²⁶

Elon College, N. C.

WHY DON'T THEY DO SOMETHING?

While reading the proceedings of the Southern Christian Convention my attention was arrested by the following resolutions:

Report of Committee on Evangelism

Resolved:

1. That the Southern Christian Convention, through its Home Mission Board, employ an evangelist to take the field at the earliest day possible for the purpose of aiding our people, as far as possible, in evangelizing those who have not been brought to Christ.

2. That said evangelist aid in securing services for all parentless churches within the bounds of said Convention.

I think the following question is in order: Why has the evangelist not been employed by the Home Mission Board? I have been trying to answer this question for myself. At first I tried to satisfy my mind with the thought that perhaps the man was not available. But when I began to reason I found that I had no foundation for such an argument. Then I thought that this delinquency on the part of the Board might be due to inadequate means. But my reasoning broke down when I thought of the money that is now available.

Some of our leaders complain because our denomination has not grown as rapidly as some other denominations that are not so old. The answer is not far to seek. The theoretical eloquence that we so often hear in our Conferences and Conventions must give place to practical methods and practical applications. The above resolution, no doubt, was prompted by an evangelistic motive, but it has not been backed up by an evangelistic drive and push. Are we afraid to undertake new and bigger things? The above resolution calls for one evangelist. The Baptist Convention called for and employed one hundred evangelists and their slogan is, "one hundred thousand souls for Christ and the church this year." Are we not willing to undertake one hundredth part of what the Baptist people are undertaking?

I want it distinctly understood that I am not writing this article to criticize, but to stimulate action. Evangelism is a thing that we content ourselves to talk about, and not a thing that we really do. Evangelism is no commonplace thing. It is a big thing—that of winning men to Christ. It calls, not for comfort and complacency, but for concentration and consecration. People must be won to Christ before they can be trained for Christ, and not until we feel, and feel deeply, the impulse of evangelism will Christ be enthroned in the hearts of men.

ADOPTING AND ADAPTING

In the 1917 Annual, on page 121, a recommendation is made against "ice cream and oyster suppers to raise money for church purposes"—and certainly not to raise money for any other purpose. What do you think of that? It was adopted in solemn council by one of our Conferences, and it should have been, but was it carefully and prayerfully observed by the churches whose representatives helped to place it upon our records? You will find the writer's name subscribed to that recommendation and yet the thing has been done at one of my charges since its adoption. If it had been properly laid before my good people I feel sure they would have gladly abided by it, consequently I have no one to blame but myself. Therefore, brother pastor, and delegates, we are not doing our duty unless we carry the actions of our Conferences back to those who committed to us the responsibility and privilege of representing them.

In conclusion permit me to summarize by saying we should be very careful in adopting resolutions; we should be just as careful in seeing them given a proper charge; in taking an inventory of what they have meant during the past year, or years; and in making them affirmative rather than negative. Our Conferences and Conventions are great, good times. Resolutions thrive, but unless they come up out of a soil well filled with prayer and meditation, nurtured throughout the year with abundant rains of toil, and unless they be kissed daily by the sunshine of faith they will wither and die. Prayer, toil, and faith like that bestowed upon the resolutions which contain the first actual launchings of our great missions, and college endowment campaigns will make resolutions worthwhile and the hours of resolving memorable and sacred.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Paul says, "the fashion of this world passeth away," and Isaiah says, "the flower fadeth; but the word of our God shall stand forever." The best things are the most permanent things. Change is a mark of the transient and evanescent. The value of things is measured by their permanence or capacity for repetition. Good things grow better by repetition, while bad things grow worse by repetition. A good piece of music grows better by repetition, while poor music soon wears out. God's great creations repeat themselves without loss of interest or value. The motion of the heavenly bodies, the rising and setting sun, the four seasons, the flow of rivers, the ebb and flood of the tide, the pole star; all these repeat themselves without change and without loss of interest or value to mankind.

"The Athenians and strangers there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing;" but all that passed away, while their great orations and poems, great architecture, great sculpture and great paintings remain as models. These all repeat themselves in all the centuries since their day. Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," and his "Elijah" and "St. Paul," two great oratorios, require repetition to be appreciated. Light music is at its best when first heard; but great music grows upon the mind by repetition. As a rule the "taking things" are light and will not bear repetition. Moving pictures make a great contrast with great paintings. Human conduct can be measured in its social and moral worth by the merit of its repetition. Good conduct may be repeated with personal satisfaction and public approbation. Good sermons, good music, good stories, may all be repeated with profit; in fact the test is whether they will bear repetition. The poor books are read, pass out of print, and are forgotten, while great books remain on the shelf and are re-read, and recommended to other readers. The Bible is the One Book that remains in print, is reprinted in larger numbers than any other book, and is printed in more languages. It is gaining in favor all the time. Its pages do not exhaust by reading. There is a depth, a divine-human quality in its message, and a response in the soul to its teaching, that makes it the The Book for the home, the church, and the world.

In the smallest details of life truth and falsehood can be tested by repetition. Truth can be repeated, even under oath in a court of justice; while falsehood can be overthrown by evidence. Gossip does its mischief by repetition; but it dies of its own shallowness. All the delicacies of life are tiresome when oft repeated. Bread never surfeits the appetite; but delicacies do. The plain foods may be repeated with delight and physical benefit; the luxuries break down health and enjoyment by constant use. All attempts at satisfying the appetite with special dishes, all tempting drinks, and all artificial tonics, weaken the system and rob it of the pleasure which belongs to sane eating and drinking. God has so made man and the world that all service and all eating should be a pleasure. All devices for entertaining men break down by excesses or artificial methods. Plain food, honest work, pure religion, and commonsense manners will furnish the average man with a lifetime of usefulness and happiness. A good rule is to do what you can afford to repeat without injury to self or offense to others.

TO THE CHURCHES AND PASTORS OF THE ALABAMA
CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

Dear Brethren:—You remember that the 1917 session of the body appointed a committee to investigate the field and make some recommendation, with reference to grouping the churches of this conference, into groups or pastorates. This committee was not ready to report at last session of the conference, and was continued.

We have carefully and prayerfully looked into the situation as best we can and have decided to recommend the following groups, to the next session of the conference. We are publishing them that you may be considering them, and if you think advisable, plan your work for next year accordingly. We will recommend the following groups:

Group No. 1—Noon Day, Rock Stand, Rock Springs and Mt. Zion.

Group No. 2—Lowell, Antioch, Forest Home and Bethany.

Group No. 3—New Hope, Pleasant Grove and Christiana.

Group No. 4—McGuire's Chapel, Beulah, Wadley and Corinth.

Group No. 5—Cragford, New Harmony and Spring Hill.

Group No. 6—Shady Grove, Dingler's Chapel, New Home and Macedonia.

Now you will note that two of the groups recommended have only three churches, but you will see if you study the situation, that in the territory occupied by these churches, or right near them, there is a fine field for missionary work, and it is territory that we should occupy, and the pastors of these groups could do the work, to the better advantage than any one else.

Let us consider the above groups, having the good of the cause in our hearts, and not look at the matter from a selfish stand point. Let us not say, "Will it suit me best," but let's ask the Living God to show us what is best for His cause and we will make a safe decision.

COMMITTEE.

DR. LONG WRITES FROM SOUTH CAROLINA

Florence, S. C., June 5, 1919.

Editor Christian Sun:—I am spending some time with Mrs. Long on a visit to my only son, Joseph, and his friend in this city. Joseph graduated from Union Christian College with the class of 1912. His wife, nee Lenora Vinson, of Muncie, Ill., also from Union Christian College.

I came via Raleigh and spent one night with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Belvin. I learned, through my daughter, Mrs. Belvin, that our good brother, W. B. Mann, had been too feeble to attend any business at his store for several days.

Mrs. Long and I have had a delightful time here, attending the State Sunday School Convention. The 42nd annual Convention of the South Carolina Sunday School Association closed here tonight, after having completed the greatest program, according to the delegates attending from nearly every county in the State, that the Association has ever known. E. O. Excell led the singing and many of the State's ablest educators took part in the exercises. Also speakers from other States.

As South Carolina,—with the exception of Louisiana, has more illiterates in proportion to the population, her leading men and women are putting forth a mighty effort to have every one, of all races, educated. Hundreds of boys and girls, just home from college, will give their services, free to teach night schools, during the summer vacation.

When the late Kemp P. Battle was called to the head of the University of North Carolina, I was, on his motion, chosen agent to canvass South Carolina for students for the University of North Carolina, as the University of South Carolina had not sufficiently recovered from Conby rule, and carpet bag government, to open its doors. A mighty change has taken place in South Carolina. Then she was poor and discouraged. No factories to speak of, now manufactures about as much cotton as North Carolina, or Massachusetts. Her farmers are prosperous and happy, and as for patriotism, one of her Governors furnished more boys for the United States army, in the last war, than any Governor in the United States, and as for liberality in giving to the cause of Christian Education, only ask Jew and Catholic, Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist. The Methodists requested the village of Bennettsville, S. C., to give $12,000 as a centenary offering. The village Methodists responded with a little over $132,000. Mark you, South Carolina will not be "next to foot" many years in anything "worth while." The Governor of North Carolina will have to introduce another subject to the Governor of South Carolina, outside of "drinks."

UNCLE WELLONS GOES VISITING

He Finds Suitable Husbands and Wives. He asks Questions And Offers Advice to Companion Seekers

I left home May 23, 1919, for Waverly, Va., and on to Barrett's church to attend an annual home coming. I stopped at Waverly with R. E. West. The next day Rev. J. L. Foster took me into the neighborhood of the church. We spent the night with Mr. H. E. Rollins. Here he and his sister have long lived together at the old homestead, and some man has missed a good wife, and some woman a good husband.

That night a heavy rain came but we went to the church the next morning, and through the mud and water the crowd began to assemble until we had the house full. We had a pleasant service. Brother Foster gave them a fine sermon, and after dinner I did the talking. After we got through with the services I sat there and shook the hands of all the congregation, asking: "Who are your father and mother?" and more particularly, "Who were your grandparents?" Then I could identify them. They left a kind remembrance on the table as they passed.

I told them I was naturally born in this vicinity, January 1, 1826, the first day of the week, the first day of the month, and the first day of the year. But that was a matter of record. In ten or fifteen feet of where I then sat, Monday after the fourth Sunday of August, 1837, I was spiritually born. I got a little spark of grace that has gone with me through life this far.

Brother J. W. White took me to the home of J. F. Wellons and sister, the old Wellons homestead of my grandfather where I saw the graves of Grandfather Wellons and wife as I had never seen before. Here the neighbors came in and we had a pleasant evening. Here were the two bachelors again and my cousin, Olive who is small in stature, but fine in appearance. I can't see why some bachelor hasn't long since taken her away from her bachelor brother, leaving him to seek an associate.

We took dinner on Monday with Brother R. M. Jones, whose wife was a Wellons. We went, that afternoon, to Hebron church and heard Rev. Mr. Roane preach an extra good sermon, and then we spent the night with R. C. Hines and family, another cousin. Tuesday evening we went out to the cemetery that contained the bodies of my mother and father and grandfather and grandmother Stephenson. Here I spent a good while with friends, in pleasant interview and prayer. Brother J. W. White and R. C. Hines promised to see that a wire fence is placed around my parents' graves.

I spent the night with Brother J. W. White and family and visited Mrs. A. E. Hines the next morning and that evening Brother White took me to Windsor, and I don't know how to say enough thanks to Brother White for his kindness in taking me everywhere I wanted to go.

Stopping at Brother R. E. Hines, P. M. Hines, T. H. Harris, I met my old friend, R. C. Richardson. Here I visited different families and had so many callers. I visited the daughters of my old friend, Frank Baines.

I found Misses Sally and Poke and other friends there. I, yet, can't see why some bachelors or widowers don't sweep them right off and break up that old maid's home. Their father and I were reared together, and if he had been living and there, I would have heard him say, "Howdy, Jim!" and I would have replied, "Howdy Frank!"

I spent two nights with the dear little family of my cousin, T. H. Harris. Friday evening Brother R. C. Richardson took me to Spring Hill, to the Memorial Day services where I used to go to church eighty years ago and saw the same old spring gushing forth. Here I saw so many old friends and visited the graves of so many friends that had long since passed across the Jordan

As Brother Richardson told me of the old homes that I used to know, I couldn't recognize any of the places as new houses had all been built.

While in this section I spent every hour so pleasantly with children and grandchildren of my old friends of the days past and nearly everybody were cousins; and how pleasant it was to be there! On Saturday morning I "ran" down to Suffolk, where Col. J. E. West and Rev. E. T. Cotten met me at the station. We hurried away to the Seaboard road, meeting with obstructions and freight trains. The Colonel succeeded in getting me on the train, turning me over to the captain to take me to a seat in the car. Here I met Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Miss Mary D. Atkinson, who secured me a ticket and arranged my trip to Henderson. Here I went to the home of Miss Ayscue where a number of friends came in to see me, and I spent the night so pleasantly, but it would be dangerous for a widower to go around there if he wanted to go without sore shins. Sunday I attended the church with Rev. R. L. Williamson and we had a pleasant service. I talked for the people and assisted in administering the sacrament. I attended the service again at night and Brother Williamson gave us a fine sermon. I spent the night with W. N. Newman, who kindly took me to see a few friends on Monday morning, and safely put me on the train for Durham.

At Durham I spent two or three hours looking after a little matter of clothing, and spent the remainder of the time in shaking hands and speaking words of greeting to old friends. I promised to return in a few days to visit a friend older than I am. I boarded the train for Elon College. On my arrival, when I entered my room, how things were changed! The most of men have one hen to peck at them but as I have five or six you may guess the hair was pretty thin on the top of my head. But some of them had dispersed. I went into my room, and everything was turned around. Hot water and soap were exhausted on the floor. My room was calmed. Some pieces of furniture were taken away with others in their places, everything turned around. But as I have so many hens pecking at me, I let them fix it to suit themselves, and make myself quite contented.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

We have received several letters this week containing checks for monthly offerings for the Orphanage from Sunday schools and telling us that the school had decided to give one collection each month toward the support of the Orphanage cause. We truly hope that each Sunday school that has not been making this monthly contribution will begin now. I am real anxious to get each school on the list this year. Work is made lighter when all pull together. It puts "pep" in the spirit of the work and all become more interested.

From now until the Thanksgiving offering comes in our income depends largely upon the Sunday school monthly offerings for support. Our schools should bear in mind that we have fifty-seven children and all we have to buy is very high. It costs us three times as much to live now as it did four years ago. Yet we have failed to get many of our Sunday schools to realize this fact and many of the schools that have been contributing one dollar per month for the last ten years still contribute one dollar. While everything the farmer has to sell is much higher in price and those who work for a salary get much larger salaries than a few years ago.

Some of our Sunday schools have increased their monthly offerings to help us meet the high prices we have to pay and they find it just as easy to raise the amount they now contribute each month as it was to raise the amount they contributed several years ago. Why can't all our schools take on the new spirit and see how much they can do? I believe each school could double its monthly offerings and find it just as easy to raise. The more we do, the more we find that we can do.

The home for small children should be and must be built. We will build this home as soon as we have the funds in hand to build it. I want to say that all contributions made for this building will be kept in a separate fund for this purpose and those who contribute may rest assured that it will not be spent for any other purpose. I am anxious to know how many persons in our denomination are interested in this undertaking and will show how much they are interested by their contributions for this home for the little children who are so much in need of a home of this kind.

How many would like to give us $100, $500, or $1,000 toward this building? Or have we one man or woman in our church who would like to give $10,000 to build the building?

I visited an orphanage in another state last year and several modern buildings were pointed out to me where one individual had contributed a building for the cause of the orphan children. What a beautiful monument it was, given in memory of some loved one to be a blessing for all time to come to the little helpless orphan children?

These schools are trying out the plan, “as much for others as for ourselves,” and give one Sunday's offering each month to missions, one to the Orphanage, the other two Sundays to their local expenses. The writer's firm conviction is that any school adopting this plan will as easily secure the funds with which to buy its own literature and pay its own local expenses as it will by spending all its money on itself. In fact a Sunday school that spends all its money on itself is like a person who does the same thing, namely, always hard-up. It is just as easy for a Sunday school to be self-centered as it is for an individual to be so. And isn't it a pity to teach and train a Sunday school to be selfish?

A good Baptist lady told the writer not long since that the school of which she was a member never spend any part of its regular Sunday collections upon itself, but gave all to missions, and then individual members of the school made up the money with which to buy literature—that they wanted their school to think, act, give in terms of others.

Mission Study in the Schools

But along with the giving for the Orphanage and for missions, many of our schools are adopting the plan of studying missions either the whole period once per month, or say five minutes of the lesson period every Sunday. This is splendid. The writer wishes all our schools would in some way study missions, give our young people the opportunity of understanding the needs, the pressing, crying needs of this sin-cursed world for the Good News of our Lord and His power to save. If our children knew the needs, they would have pity, even if the grown-ups will not. How many children in our Sunday schools know anything of factory conditions, say in China or Japan, and of the mothers and the children there who toil from twelve to sixteen hours a day, seven days in the week the year round?

After his recent visit to China, Robert E. Speer said, “It is heart-breaking to go into the great cotton factories and see the men and women and children, chiefly women and children, eight years old and upward, working in long twelve-hour shifts, seven days in the week, and every week of the year.”

In Japan the industrial system is working ruin to hundreds of thousands of poor innocent before they have known what life really is. Dr. Gulick in his “Working Women of Japan,” says: “As a rule the girls are apprenticed for from two to three years immediately on leaving the primary school, at an age therefore of twelve to thirteen. They barely earn their living, although they work from day-break to ten or eleven at night—from fifteen to eighteen hours a day. The hygiene and moral conditions are about as bad as they can be. It is estimated that one-half of the girls are ruined before the close of their apprenticeship.” This sentence is quoted from “Women Workers of the Orient”: “In another city in Northern Japan, where fifteen hundred girls between the ages of twelve to twenty-eight are working in 130 factories, the hours are reported to be from five in the morning until ten at night, with an hour off at noon. There is, of course, no Sunday rest day, but two holidays a month are granted. The girls are given food and clothing and from fifteen to forty cents a month in money.”

What Japan must have to make child-life bearable and worth while is Christianity. Millions are perishing before their day for no other reason than that they know not our Christ, Him who said: “It is not your Father's will that one of these little ones should perish." And Who also said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven." But the little ones are not permitted to come unto Him, for neither they themselves nor their parents know anything of Him. Give the Sunday school a chance to learn the real needs of this world for Christ.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

BURLINGTON OVERSTEPS THE MARK

We have two congregations that are deeply engrossed in building plants for themselves at this time—Holland, (Va.), and Burlington, (N. C.) I was at Holland the second Sunday in May and that band of noble Christians added three stars to the card of recognition. I was at Burlington the second Sunday in June, and this grand old Church more than doubled its quota.

It is no use to say that sacrifice for a local situation hinders the general enterprises of the Church. Both these Churches did splendidly in the mission drive and Burlington has also during her building operation undertaken the support of a missionary in the foreign field. God somehow enables people who do to keep on doing. Have you also noticed that the growing Churches are the giving ones? Have you ever heard of a Church that grew and did not give? Have you ever known of a generous man's not prospering? Can you conceive of God's giving back on His promise? And has He not promised if we prove Him to open us the windows of Heaven and pour us out blessings such that we cannot receive them?

At Burlington I had good help. Trustee D. R. Fonville and Editor C. B. Riddle hit the trail with me and that meant success. The Fonville family gave a thousand dollars and Rev. C. B. Riddle, Mrs. Riddle and little Miss Ruth Teague Riddle are the first one hundred per cent family we have. Each of them made a subscription, and Miss Ruth is the youngest contributor to the fund, nineteen months old, and the fund is being raised in the year nineteen nineteen. Her parents said: "We desire that her first gift should be to our Alma Mater, one day to be hers we hope." Is that not fine? How do they do it? Brother Riddle not only edits THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but also The Tither, and he practices what he preaches.

Funds This Week

Seven funds of $1,000 each were founded this week. They follow:

John R. Foster, joining his brother, Rev. Jas. L., in a fund of $2,000 in memory of their sainted parents.

Jas. P. Montgomery for himself and wife; Charles A. Walker for himself and wife; Capt. W. H. Turrentine for himself and wife; John W. Fonville in memory of his parents; L. J. Fonville for himself and family; and Dr. R. M. Morrow for himself and wife.

Two More Weeks

We have but two more weeks now to complete the campaign. I have faith that we shall overtop the mark. I have never doubted that we would. I know these people of the Christian Church. I know their generous hearts. I know their love for Elon. I am gratified, but not surprised at their magnificent generosity in this drive, and God has great things in store for them in the days ahead.

These two weeks are great weeks for the field men. Pray for us that we may be fit representatives of our Master and of His cause in these closing days of our greatest denominational drive.

W. A. HARPER.

THE LORD'S LABOR PROBLEM*

(Text: "The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that He will send forth laborers into his harvest.") Matt. 9:37-38.

The Minister and His Call

These were unusual days in which Christ and His disciples were living. But as unusual as they were, they were not so different from the present hour, especially in regard to the needs of humanity. Since Christ is gone He is depending upon the minister to supply this need, being aided by the Holy Spirit. The present-day need of mankind is great and no ordinary person can supply this need.

That these are unusual times no one needs to be told. About four years ago the fire was kindled around the melting pot of the age, and new things have been continually springing forth. History is being made. Nations are being born. We have never lived in a time like this. God is doing and seeking to do great things. Yea, I may say God is about to do a great thing. This new thing will not be an act of creation. God's creative acts were all completed centuries ago. But this new act will express itself in the form of a "re-making." God is about to remake the marred world. He has been trying to accomplish this momentous task since the day when man just became marred; but the task is great and the work has been hindered on account of the labor problem. God has never ceased to honor men and women by calling them to preach His Word and make disciples of all nations.

The world's war-time experiences have prepared it for spiritual leadership. New calls are heard, new problems are here. Problems not so much of rebuilding roads, reconstructing bridges, clearing the debris from the overrun soil, rehabilitating the shattered territory, rebuilding the devastated cities; but problems of remaking and remodeling the devastated souls of men. This particular need was not caused by war conditions so much as by the pre-war conditions.

The work of the minister is negative as well as positive. He must defeat the designs of the evil one and build up the crumbling walls of devastated souls. His work is great and no ordinary man can do it. An architect with ordinary ability can build a house or a ship but God wants specialists in His harvest field. The minister is such a specialist. May his kind increase! The Lord is encountering and has ever encountered very serious handicaps for lack of laborers. The situation is appalling. Shall we not aid in mobilizing this man-power adequate to the demands of the hour?

This is a great undertaking, but the call of Christ is imperative. The harvest is ready. The laborers are few. Pray ye. If we fail to respond to this command we thrust the burden of a keen disappointment upon the heart of our Lord. Let us not be guilty of this. The Master is counting on us, not to make ministers, but to pray the Lord to send them forth.

It may be that some of us will have to help God answer this prayer for more laborers. It may be that He cannot answer your prayer by sending some one else. He may want you as a laborer. Is the sacrifice too great? No. God never makes a demand that is too great, or calls for a sacrifice that we cannot meet. To enter the ministry is no sacrifice. It is a joy. It is a privilege, an honor, that all men do not receive. The Gospel ministry has a charm that is unprecedented.

The Minister and His Equipment

While we are mindful of the urgency of the King's business and the need of more ministers we should not overlook the call for special equipment. The first duty of every minister is to prepare himself for his work if it is within the range of possibility. This he must do if he is to meet God's expectations and demands of him in these days of thoroughness in which we are living. In order to fulfill his high calling in the salvation of souls, building Christian character, and drawing men closer to God and the things of His Kingdom the minister should spare no time in his preparation. The minister should not secure this preparation in order that he may look wise and walk with an exalted gaze. There are too many star-gazers in the world already. What the world needs and what Christ wants is not the Priest or Levite but "Good Samaritans"—men who can look down and see the oppressed. God needs men who can reach out their arms and hearts and help men. The minister must be a man who can read human nature, interpret life, discover values, and direct the course of every religious energy, just as the compass directs the ship with her cargo of values to the port where the values may express themselves.

Thus realizing the vast field of labor and the varied problems confronting him, the minister should not content himself with less than four years of college training. This goal is not too high for any ambitious person who is blessed with good health and possessed with a will to work.

The minister must have heart training as well as head training. His true business is the enlargement of life. To this end he must bend every fiber of his being. His most effective weapon is the Holy Spirit, his strong hold is the proclamation of the good news; he must illustrate with his own life the prize which is within reach of every man who will lay aside every weight and run with patience the race that is set before him.

The Minister and His Reward

What is the minister's reward? This question, no doubt, is one of the first questions the prospective minister asks. But why should he ask this question? Why not proceed without inquiry? There is a reason. None of us would accept employment with an individual, a company, or a corporation without definite assurance of adequate compensation. You do not only demand something for your labor, but you must know just how much you are to have and when you are to get it. This is a right and a privilege that belongs to every person. Men must have a living. The minister is a man, therefore, he is no exception.

By turning to the Christian Annual for 1918, I find that we have about seventy-five active ministers in the Southern Christian Convention. I have further discovered that the 235 churches which have a membership of 22,886 paid these ministers last year $46,714.08—an average salary of $622.85. The average truck driver or bank janitor makes more money than that. And yet the minister with all his preparation is called upon to serve in a more important capacity for less compensation. Shame! He must be the most active man in his community. He must make as many calls as the busiest and most popular doctor. He must do as much walking as an industrial insurance agent. He must rival the best banker as a financier. He must know how to raise money and keep folks in a good humor. He must do as much talking as a politician, and three times a week bring to his people a message from God. Should the minister have pay for this? Some people think not. The average amount paid per member on pastor's salaries for 1918 was $2.04. It does seem to me that we ought to pray for ourselves before we pray the Lord of harvest for more laborers.

*Abstract of a sermon preached by Rev. R. F. Brown recently before a congregation of the Durham Christian church.

ODDS AND ENDS

We should not seek honor but strive to do right; then honor will come unsought. If you would really be happy, seek to make others happy. You will become happy in doing so.

Why not all unite for the common cause of righteousness? Certainly we are all striving for the same heaven. Our daily lives are sermons to those around us. Brother, what sort of sermons are you preaching?

We should do right not simply because there is a hell to shun and a heaven to gain, but because it is right. We should be careful what we say. A word carelessly spoken may cause some heart to become broken.

SCOTLAND SAVED BY A THISTLE

Billy, a bright-eyed boy, in his eagerness after bowers, had wounded his hand on the sharp, prickly thistle, “I do wish there was no such thing in the world as a thistle,” he said in hot temper.

But his father said calmly: “And yet the Scottish nation think so much of it that they engrave the thistle on the national arms.”

“It is the last bower I should pick out,” said Billy.
“I am sure they could have found a great many nicer ones even among the weeds.”

“But once this thistle did them such good service,” said the father, “that they learned to esteem it very highly. One time the Danes invaded Scotland, and they prepared to make an attack upon a sleeping garrison. So the Danes crept along barefooted, as still as possible, until they were almost on the spot. Just at that moment a barefooted Dane stepped on a great thistle, and the hurt made him utter a sharp, shrill cry of pain. The sound in the still night awoke the sleeping Scotch soldiers, and each man sprang to arms. They fought with very great bravery, and the invaders were driven back with great slaughter. So you see this thistle saved Scotland, and ever since it has been placed of their seals and emblems as their national flower.”

“Well,” said Billy, “I would never suspect that so small and ugly a thing could save a nation.”—Exchange.

A STRONG FAMILY

“You just ought to feel my muscle, papa,” said
Johnny; “ain't it big and hard?”

The blue blouse and the flannel shirt were pushed up into wrinkles at the shoulder, and a very soft and pink arm presented itself proudly for the father's inspection.

“Pretty good for seven years,” said papa, smiling.
“I hope some day to see you as strong as a family I know, who carry the world on their shoulders.”

“What's their name?” asked Johnny, forgetting his muscle at this first hint of a story.

“Their name is Never,” answered the father with a queer little wrinkle at each eye corner, as if a smile was curled up there.

“Never! What a funny name!” exclaimed Johnny.
“What are their other names?”

“Oh, there are a lot of them. There is Mr. Never-drink; he has such clear eyes and such a steady step, you'd know him anywhere; a strong fellow is Mr.
Never drink. He is always ready to lift his end of the log.

“Another is Mr. Never-swear; you will know him by the company he keeps, and I suppose he grows strong by not wasting his breath. Then there's Mr. Never-lie, everybody trusts him; and Mr. Never-forget, who loses nothing; and Mr. Never-be-idle, who does the world's work; and Mr. Never-be-discouraged—”

Papa stopped and laughed aloud, for Johnny was in the midst of a big yawn. “You don't seem to care much about my strong young people, Jack,” he said.
“I like stories about sho-nuff people,” owned Johnny.

“All right. Once there was a little boy who wanted to be very strong—oh, as strong as Samson. So he went to the strongest man on N. Street, and asked him how he got so strong and hardy. ‘By never touching strong drink,’ said the man on N. Street. He asked another steady fellow. ‘Never swear,’ said the man; ‘it takes you into low company, where God and men are dishonored.’ Another said ‘Never lie.’ A single lie takes away a man's courage.—”

“Who was that little boy, papa?” interrupted Johnny.

“He was that little boy that I want my little boy to be,” answered the father. “I want him to make friends with the Nevers, because they are the friends of God, and their family motto is, ‘Thus saith the Lord, Thou shalt not.’”—Exchange.

WORSHIP AND MEDITATION

SUNDAY EVENING MEDITATION

"It is The Spirit That Quickeneth."

Everything we look upon has its message for us. "The heavens declare the glory of God and the firmament showeth His handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech and night unto night showeth knowledge." "There is no speech or language where their voice is not heard."

In the rising sun and the setting thereof He has set the tabernacle for His voice. In every budding tree and blossoming flower, He has set a throne from which issues His infinite love. Great is the Lord and greater to be praised.

When we sit in the sanctuary all that our eyes behold speaks to us. Everything in the construction and furnishing thereof is placed there to speak to us. If this is not so it should be so.

The church is the one institution given us for the specific purpose of imparting the inspiring word and the Holy Spirit of God. We behold the Cross. It is the supreme symbol of all the church represents. It is therefore the supreme symbol of the quickening spirit of all things, and nowhere should we be without its presence. Everywhere should the Cross appear before us to convey to us the inspiring message of Christ's sacrifice. Of course it brings to us a very sad story and yet it was the most joyous event which ever transpired. For the death of our Lord is most far-reaching in its significance for the good of humanity. It set in motion life which can never die. It sent into the world this spirit of our Lord which quickeneth.

But it matters not how forceful and beautiful the messages of things; it matters not how clarion the voices we hear; it matters not how inspired the church; it matters not how inspired the Word; we ourselves must be inspired to appreciate any of it. We ourselves when standing before a primrose must be inspired if we would behold therein the throne of God. We ourselves when opening the Bible must be inspired or else its messages will be meaningless. Every day the Bible should be new and gripping to us and it can be this only through our own inspiration and hungerings for it. The church cannot impart its divine message to us if we are not inspired to its life. "It is the spirit that quickeneth," and by it the church must be and is new to us every week.

Thus, the Holy Spirit indwells the church because He indwells the believer. Thus, the Holy Spirit is fruitful in the believer only as the believer appropriates Him. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, meekness," etc. These are the manifest fruits of an inspired believer. Thus, the Holy Spirit is of use to us only when we accept Him and appreciate Him and apply Him to the issues of our lives.

MORAL ADVANTAGES OF PHYSICAL POWER

Many who are weak physically are strong intellectually, and have made a success of their work. Living and dead examples could be given if necessary. Some who are strong physically are weak intellectually and there are different causes for this condition, which need not be stated, as the reflective mind can see them. And it is a self-evident fact which needs no proof. Have seen some appear delicate, but they were charged with a full amount of electricity. Touch them at any point in their physical and intellectual departments and they have power. Their magnetic influence attracts and holds. Then, too, their work is such as to impel and compel them to do it on time, and in a right way. This has much to do with their efficiency and power.

One who has nothing to do does nothing because he has nothing to make or cause him to do things. But when physical, will and intellectual powers are combined, and properly regulated, then he who has them, possesses a power at once beautiful and forceful.

Let everybody train himself physically and intellectually as much as he can for best results. I saw a young man the other day just coming into the beginning of the prime of life. He had been fettered, and hindered by disease. "O," said he, "I want to get well, and be a man in the world. If I had the health, power and gladness you seem to enjoy, how happy I would be. I feel like this world is some pleasure to you." The reply was: "Live in the sunshine and air all you can; be prudent, prayerful and hopeful, following Him who said, 'I am the way... and the life.'"

America talks much about her millions of people, and her unlimited means—riches and honor, but sin in public and private places has ruined a great part of the beauty and strength of the American people by taking away much of their physical power and leaving them invalids and poor.

Very much of our weaknesses has come from sin and ignorance. Hear, O, hear the voice of nature, repeating to you these friend words: Know thyself. Then listen with earnest delight to these helpful words: Jesus Christ, the same, yesterday, today and forever.

Mrs. W. M. Dowdy—I enjoy reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN and no other paper can fill its place in our home.

Mrs. J. T. Hopper—Enclosed find renewal to THE SUN. I like the paper fine.

We have passed through the "penny age" and let us never return to it. Pennies have been so faithful to the church that they are due a rest.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JUNE 29, 1919

Review—Response to God's Love. Selection for Reading, Phil 3:7-14. Golden Text: I will praise thee, O Lord my God with my whole heart. Ps. 86:12.

Thoughts For Teachers

Do not be content with a review of the title, golden text, and principal truth. Make this lesson a real review of the things you have studied together through the quarter. Review for yourself what you have learned. What do you know more of the Fatherhood of God, the saving power of Christ, the guiding power of the Spirit? What have you done to bring back the image of God in some one, or to preserve it unmarred in some other? Have you kept away from sin, or relied more in the grace of God and less on yourself? Have you repented of your past sins of unbelief, and is your faith stronger in itself and in its working power? Have you learned to obey more readily? Have you taken more joy in your prayer life? Above all, have you learned to love? Answer these questions, earnestly and sincerely, then and only then are you ready to teach these things to the pupils committed to your care.

What response are you making to God's love? What response have you asked from your class? What response is being made in your family life, or in your church life? "If ye love me," said Jesus, "ye will keep my commandments." Have you responded to God's perfect love by a full surrender of self, and an ardent desire for service? Have you heard the call of God for workers, and responded, "Here am I, send me to the place where thou dost need me most"? If not, how can you claim the love of God, when you have no love to offer? Mrs. FRED BULLOCK.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JUNE 29, 1919

What does loyalty to our Church and country call for? Matt. 22:15-22.

We have a different conception of loyalty today than we had two years ago. We know it is not enough to rise when the band plays, "The Star Spangled Banner," if our physical habits have been such that we are unfit when called to the colors. We have learned that a man's patriotism may be shown by the care of his teeth or his feet, or his eyes. We know that the sins committed in secret stand out, when the test comes, as a real treason against his country as though he had sided with her enemies.

What, then, about the church? Is the same thing true? Do we owe a physical fitness to the church? (I Cor. 6:19,20). Do we owe a mental fitness to the church? Above all, do we owe a spiritual fitness? Have we any right to remain unfit spiritually? How shall we avoid this? (II Tim. 2:15). See "The Makers of the Flag" in Teachers and Officers Journal for Second Quarter. This will make a splendid reading to use in this service.

FIRST STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN CONVENTION

I am wondering as I sit here meditating on things that should be done, and done well at the coming Convention, just how many of the men, women, boys and girls belonging to the Christian Church in North Carolina will read these lines, and consider that they are a part of the Convention, and what the Convention is for anyway.

Too few of our people read their Church paper, and when they do accidentally see an article of this nature, they seem to think that it is for the other fellow. I wish that I had the writing capacity to say something that would cause each one of us to realize our individual duty to the Church we represent. Don't get it in your mind that we are not going to have a good Convention July 15, 16, 17 at Shallow Well Christian Church, because you don't feel inclined to attend, and take a part in making it a success yourself. Don't think for a minute that you are so important that we cannot get along without you, and the church work will stop in its entirety, BUT THINK SERIOUSLY what you are missing, and will continue to miss as you go along the journey of life, if you keep ou neglecting to do your bit in the Master's kingdom. The Conventions that are to be held during the summer should have our first consideration at this time. We should do all we can to make each one a great success, and at these Conventions get full fledged behind the work of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Board, (or The Board of Religious Education), in such a manner as to make this organization also, a success in every detail. Whether you are on the program or not, if you live in the State and are interested in Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work, we want you to attend the Convention that meets at Shallow Well Christian church next July.

C. H. STEPHENSON,

President.

NOTICE

We want every Sunday school in the Christian denomination to have Children's Day in June, but if you find that it will have to be in July, make it the first Sunday, and be sure that you report the results to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, N. C., promptly.

We want a report from him at the different Conventions, and you doubtless know that the first North Carolina Convention meets Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday after the second Sunday in July, (15, 16, 17), at Shallow Well church, near Jonesboro. I am hoping that we can get the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Board, (The Board of Religious Education), before our people at the Convention, in such a manner that its future will be assured, and it will mean much in the field of progress, among our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers. I have not received any report from your Sunday school. What is the trouble? If you have just simply put it off, or through the rush of other things neglected it, take a few minutes to discuss this Board and its mission in your school, and be ready to give us your honest opinion regarding its future at your Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention.
