THE CHRISTIAN SUN

"IN ESSENTIALS UNITY, IN NON-ESSENTIALS LIBERTY, IN ALL THINGS CHARITY"

WE enter the New Year facing our task with an optimistic spirit. Friends surrounded us with splendid co-operation during nineteen hundred and nineteen. This good year of nineteen hundred and twenty, we predict, is to be the "best yet" with THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Seventy-one volumes of the paper are now recorded history. The seventy-second volume has begun. With every subscriber a booster, together with co-operation and prayerful support, this volume can record the largest and best growth of our work. In your hands, dear friends, is held the answer.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

AN APPRECIATION

During the Christmas holidays and leading into the New Year, we have received many words of greeting. Almost every letter to this office since the latter part of December to date has borne some personal message of good wishes. It is practically impossible for us to personally acknowledge receipt of these words of kindness and appreciation; and while we know that a reply is not expected, this means is taken to thank each one who sent a card of remembrance or added a word of cheer. Subscribers can rest assured that each piece of mail is personally read and that we always appreciate this thoughtfulness upon the part of our friends. To one and all, we thank you.

WHY—WHEN?

Generally speaking, the official organ of a Church is supposed to put its approval on every department of the Church. So far we have done this thing, but as to the matter of conducting these departments we have had only one to criticize, and we are going to do that now. Our criticism may not be altogether constructive, for we feel that the Board of Religious Education of which we speak, is wise enough and needs no dictation.

During the last year and a half we have had to beg, persuade and write to get the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor topics on time. It seems that the Board of Religious Education has had to "swap" horses many times and the whole thing is to be done over again in the matter of training some one in the manner of furnishing Sunday school and Christian Endeavor topics. Perhaps a few SUN readers will recall that may issues of THE SUN during 1919 carried no Sunday school or Christian Endeavor topics and the explanation of this was that the copy did not reach us on time. Mrs. Bullock was entrusted to the work of furnishing both the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor matter and then the work was divided, leaving her responsible only for the Sunday school lesson. To be frank, Mrs. Bullock did not see her way clear to cooperate with the SUN's Editor and offered her resignation which was accepted. We were then informed by Dr. Atkinson that Brother C. H. Stephenson, Raleigh, N. C., would be responsible for this matter and that copy would reach us in due time. We waited as long as we could, hoping that since an "on-timer" had been elected to do this work, that we would have no further trouble. We waited as long as we could for the copy and wrote Brother Stephenson. "A Word of Explanation," on page 14 of this issue, fully explains. Listen to Brother Stephenson's own words: "My answer came not from Dr. Atkinson but rather from Brother Riddle, Editor of THE SUN, asking for immediate copy for the next issue." Read Brother Stephenson's explanation and see what he says.

Brother Stephenson, a member of the Executive Board, admits that he did not agree to furnish this matter for THE SUN. With all due regard for the Board of Religious Education, we cannot refrain from saying that it seems to be loosely organized, if organized at all, and that the members of the Board are going at the work as if it were a child's play. If THE SUN is a mouthpiece of the Church then we feel that we are speaking the sentiment of the majority of the members when we make this statement. If we are wrong then we are wrong, but will maintain our present position until otherwise shown.

While speaking very definite, and at the same time in a most brotherly way, we should say that the exposition of the Sunday school lesson furnished for THE CHRISTIAN SUN during the last few years is not up to the standard of what we find in our exchanges. Whether the method of treatment as outlined by the Board of Religious Education is responsible for this or not is not for us to say. Some months ago we asked a member of the Board of Religious Education, a dear and devoted reader of THE SUN if he read the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor page. He turned aside and said in a whisper, "I read all of THE SUN, including the advertisements, save that part of the paper."

The Board of Religious Education has accepted the responsibility of conducting these topics in THE SUN and we sincerely hope that its program for 1920 will be much better than it was during 1919. The Board as created by the Convention, it seems to us, forms a proper organization. The members of the Board are all capable men and women but the Church is waiting to see just what they can do. How long shall we wait?

A GREAT MEETING—A GREAT UNDERTAKING

We were privileged to be in Suffolk, Virginia, December 30, last, and to participate in a meeting composed of about twenty-five officials of the Convention and officers of Conferences. The purpose of the meeting is fully stated below in the record of Secretary Johnson:

Official Record of the Meeting

*Suffolk, Va.
December 30, 1919.*

Pursuant to a call issued by Dr. W. W. Staley, President of the Southern Christian Convention, by authority of the Executive Committee, the Executive Committees of the Conferences composing the Southern Christian Convention met in the Christian church today, and the meeting was called to order at 10:00 o'clock A. M., by Dr. W. W. Staley, President.

Those present were: Executive Committee of the Southern Christian Convention: W. W. Staley, I. W. Johnson, E. E. Holland.

Georgia and Alabama Conference: H. W. Elder, J. W. Willingham.

North Carolina Conference: T. E. White, P. H. Fleming, W. A. Harper.

Eastern Virginia Conference: C. H. Rowland, I. W. Johnson, W. W. Staley.

Virginia Valley Central Conference: W. T. Walters, A. W. Andes, Samuel Earman.

Others present were: Dr. J. O. Atkinson, L. E. Smith, C. B. Riddle, J. F. Morgan, W. M. Jay, G. O. Lankford, J. E. West, J. M. Darden, E. T. Holland, J. A. Williams. These were invited to seats as deliberative members.

Song: "Where He Leads Me, I Will Follow."

Prayer, led by Dr. P. H. Fleming.

Dr. Staley and Dr. Atkinson stated the purpose of the meeting.

It was moved and carried that we put on a campaign extending the Forward Movement in the Southern Christian Convention, with a view of reaching every member and presenting an opportunity for making an offering for benevolences.

It was moved and carried that a committee be appointed to make an estimate of what we are now doing for benevolences through the regular channels, and to make a per centage apportionment for the Conferences.

Committee: W. W. Staley, H. W. Elder, W. A. Harper, A. W. Andes.

It was moved and carried that the Chairman appoint a committee to nominate a committee on Organization.

Committee: C. H. Rowland, J. O. Atkinson, T. E. White, W. T. Walters, J. E. West.

Adjourned for dinner.

Afternoon Session

Conference met at 2:30 o'clock. Prayer, led by Rev. J. F. Morgan. Report of the Committee on Estimate and Apportionment was read and, on motion adopted as follows:

We recommend the following Apportionments to the Conferences: Eastern Virginia, 40 per cent; North Carolina, 50 per cent; Valley Virginia, 5 per cent; Georgia and Alabama, 2 per cent; Alabama 3 per cent.

We estimate that $50,000.00 each year will be raised for Conference Apportionments, the Orphanage, the Woman's Boards, and the Conference Missionary Associations.

W. W. STALEY,
A. W. ANDES,
H. W. ELDER,
W. A. HARPER,

Committee.

It was moved and carried, That in addition to the sums already pledged and paid for Education, Missions, Orphanage and other church benevolences, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $500,000.00 in pledges and $50,000.00 per year from regular sources, and without in any way interfering with the other activities of the Church, we undertake to raise in cash, and by subscriptions payable in five years in equal installments, from the individual members of the Church, the sum of $750,000.00; the campaign for such subscriptions to begin on the 27th day of March, 1920 and end on the 4th day of April, 1920, and each church to be credited with the amount subscribed by its members; and that we raise during the period of the Movement $500,000.00 for Church Extension, the same to be raised and expended in the local churches, making a total fund of $2,000,000.00 from all sources.

It was moved and carried that W. W. Staley, I. W. Johnson, E. E. Holland, J. E. West and K. B. Johnson be elected a Steering Committee, and that all details of organization be determined by this Committee.

It was moved and carried that we memorialize the Forward Movement Committee of the A. C. C. to make the goal for the other part of the Church $3,000,000.00—making a total goal of $5,000,000.00 for the whole Church.

It was moved and carried that the money raised be used for Missions, Education, Supernnuation, Publications, Orphanage, Convention, Sunday Schools, and Christian Endeavor.

It was moved and carried that the Steering Committee determine the per centage basis of distribution of the Funds.

It was moved and carried that the Committee be authorized to borrow the money to finance the Movement; the money to be paid back from funds received.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

FRANKLINTON LETTER

Chaplain B. F. Black, Pastor

I have been on this new job one month, and have found a splendid people. November 7, 1919, Methodist, Baptist and my faithful "eleven members" gave me a real pounding. This pounding was made up of from one pound of coffee to three bags of flour; from one gallon syrup to ten gallons gasoline; from ham ready for the table to a pig ready for the pen; from one pound butter to fourteen pounds of lard. In all, eighty contributions were made—and we have but eleven members. Words cannot express our appreciation. We are grateful and will try to live and act so as to prove worthy of this unexpected kindness. We have been told that Mrs. A. L. Allen and the shepherds of the Baptist and M. E. flocks were in the lead. We are sure of one thing: The M. E. shepherd entered our home first, and without ceremonies, with a bushel of potatoes on his back.

Our little church here doubled on its Orphanage offering. Total, $40.00. December 7, 1919, was a busy day at Oak Level. At Sunday school hour Miss Bessie Holt, of Burlington, presented the claims of missions. The Sunday school voted to give one Sunday's offering to the Orphanage and one Sunday's offering to Sunday school missions. At 11:00 o'clock A. M., memorial services were held in memory of the former superintendent of the Sunday school—Private Archie B. Pearce, of C., 11th Inft., 5th Division, A. E. F., son of J. J. and Martha Winston Pearce. Private Pearce was killed in action at Montfauco, France, October 21, 1918, age twenty-six years, seven days. A true soldier in the church and on the battlefield. Loved, respected, honored by all who knew him.

At the close of the address the overcrowded church was emptied slowly, the family of the deceased lead, followed by the Sunday school. Then the friends followed. Arriving at the cemetery the beautiful ceremony of the unveiling of a stately marble shaft was silently witnessed by the large crowd of sympathetic friends. The monument was erected by the family of the deceased. A lovely bronze tablet was placed in the church by the members.

At 7:00 P. M., Miss Holt again spoke on "Missions" and completed the organization of a Woman's Missionary Society. The Sunday school and church offering for the Orphanage was completed. Our good people went over the top with $5.00 for the Orphanage and $425.00 on the five hundred thousand dollar mission fund. More to be added to the latter amount.

WINCHESTER, VIRGINIA LETTER

The work at Winchester is moving on as usual. We are suffering with other churches from a lack of interest following the war. Our Sunday school shows an increased interest, especially in offerings. We are arranging a good program for our Christmas entertainment, which will be rendered December 23. We are going to pack a box for the Orphanage this week.

At the request of the Home Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, I have decided to go to Richmond and look after the interest of our work there. I tendered my resignation here yesterday and shall close my work at Winchester the last of February and take up the work in Richmond the first of March. It is with many regrets that I leave the work here. It is my hope to pay the last of the indebtedness on the church before I leave. My people here are contributing liberally and if a few of our friends, who have been so generous with us, can send us a check for a small amount, I feel that we will get the total amount. The Winchester church will be in need of a pastor after March 1. This is a good people with whom to labor and I trust they will succeed in securing a good pastor.

The following contributions have been received:

Previously Reported, $12,289.07; Mrs. B. F. Frank, $1.00; R. E. Short, $25.00; Netum Rathbun, $1.00; W. A. Crawford, $5.00; Va. Valley Central Conference, $473.00; Rev. W. G. Clements, $5.00; Miss Phadonia Ritter, $5.00; Women's Mission Board, $38.81; Mrs. Kate Fleming, $1.00; S. W. Lincoln, $15.00; Winchester Sunday school, $3.20; L. H. Hook, $10.00; Total, $12,872.08.

We are thankful for all these contributions.

W. T. WALTERS.

IMPORTANCE OF THE FAMILY ALTAR

By William T. Scott

We find that it is readily acknowledged by most men that the family is the organic unit of society, and is one of the most potent factors in human progress. The character of the nation in quality, is patterned after the character of the family. The home life is the living of the world's life, and if it is kept pure and wholesome all the life will be made purer and the world as a whole better.

Homes are the real schools in which men and women are trained, and the father and mother are real teachers. They are more responsible than any one, for their wayward boys and girls. To prove this, we may take the child's nature. It has inherited the imitation instinct and it must be cultivated. In order to cultivate this instinct the father and mother as teachers should establish and dedicate the Family Altar at the very first step made in the home, because it is the most powerful agency in making the home sacred. The home is the center of religious education, and if religion dies out in the home and family, it cannot be maintained elsewhere. If the fathers and mothers would co-operate with each other more on this important business for our Lord and Savior the men and women of the homes would be more able to withstand the temptations of the world and live pure lives.

There is no man, who has so many business interests of such importance as to justify his evasion of the social duties which he owes his own family. "What will it profit a father and mother if they gain the whole world and lose their own children?" So, fathers and mothers, this is my plea, establish at once for our good Lord and Master's sake, this important factor in the home, the Family Altar.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

When the shepherds of the East heard the words of the angels of the Lord, "For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord," and listened to the sweet strains of the heavenly host, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men," "they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger." "And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this Child." "And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen." And when the wise men from the East "saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy." "And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary, his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh."

I am wondering now whether or not we are having the same sort of spirit the shepherds and the wise men felt on their first real Christmas. The women of the Bethlehem Christian church have just recently organized, without any personal aid of pastor or persons outside of their church, a Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society, with eighteen charter members, the purpose of this Society being—the giving of the Gospel to the whole world. Surely this is done in the spirit of the shepherds, for they are anxious to spread abroad the glad tidings of the birth of our Saviour and of His wonderful saving power. The members of the Windsor Christian Sunday school have recently given to the orphans at Elon College $139.11, fifty dollars of which the Baracca Class gave. This was done in the spirit of the wise men and by such a small membership that fifty dollars would have seemed a very liberal offering. But thanks be to God that the spirit of liberality, of Christmas giving, of giving to the Lord is permeating the little Sunday school at Windsor. "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." The little membership of Mt. Zion church has spent over two hundred dollars in the improvement of their church building. To do this meant liberality on the part of some of the members, considering the few to bear the burdens of that church. The Mt. Carmel Sunday school and church has raised and secured in subscriptions over four thousand dollars for the building of Sunday school rooms. It is noteworthy that the Baracca class contributed nearly fifteen hundred of this amount. The young men are having visions of the new church for the new time.

Other items of interest could be mentioned showing that our people are trying to carry out the command of the Master, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature," all of which are encouraging to both pastor and people. We have increased our membership, but let us pray that some may give their lives for the mission fields and to the ministry. As we pass from the Christmas tide of rejoicing over the birth of our Saviour, happy that we have had a part in the worship and adoration of the new born King, may we begin the New Year with heart-felt regrets that we have not done more for the Master, feeling truly sensitive of the smallness of our efforts and accomplishments, and purpose to enlarge our program of Christian work, grow deeper spiritually in Christian worship, and go forward for the Master who gave His life that we might live.

E. T. COTTEN.

Suffolk, Va., December 17, 1919.

"MY FAITH LOOKS UP TO THEE"

I am writing a few words of encouragement to those who have been praying much and whose prayers have not as yet been answered. Do not be discouraged, but keep on praying. I will never again doubt my Father's goodness for I realize now that he knows what is best for me. I have often said that surely God did not love me or He would answer my prayers, but I understand now that he answers by saying "No" as well as "Yes."

I got the following thoughts from the study of a Sunday school lesson some weeks ago: In one instance Christ prayed thus: "O my Father, if this cup may not pass away except I drink it will be done." The prayer of Jesus was answered, not by taking away the cross, but by giving to the weakness of His humanity that heavenly strength able to overcome the world and win the everlasting victory. God also hears our prayers and answers. When in His infinite love and wisdom our afflictions are not removed at our petitions, still he answers ours as He answered His own Son's in the garden of Gethsemane. He strengthens us to bear our suffering for His glory for the good of others and for our own eternal joy. Our Savior was willing to do His Father's will, so ought we be willing to say His will be done in everything.

When I used to pray for my boys in France I would say "God's will be done" but I know now that I did not mean it. I was not willing for them to get killed. God was good to me and let one of them come home but my dear oldest son sleeps in a grave in France; but I have the comforting assurance that all is well with him and that God knew best, and some time I will understand. If our Savior suffered, why should we not suffer too? To all that are saved God gives a work, and with each mission of service there is appointed some sacrifice of suffering. Though at times our cup is one of overflowing joy, there are other days when it is one of bitter pain and sorrow. Yet never should we doubt or despair for our Father doeth all things well. We lay up treasures in heaven as much by bearing suffering for God and for His people as we do by our efforts of toil and labor.

So you see what studying the Sunday school lesson has done for me—it has given me a clearer idea of how God answers prayer. If we cannot go to Sunday school we can study the lessons at home and receive benefit therefrom. May God give us strength and wisdom that we, like our Savior, may prove steadfast in the hour of trial. "Think how He prayed, unaided and alone, 'Thy will be done.' Friend, do not despair, Christ in His heaven of heavens will hear thy prayer."

HOLLAND, VIRGINIA CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Sunday, December 14, was a day long to be remembered by the Holland Christian church when the new building was formally dedicated to Almighty God and his Divine worship.

The day was observed by three special services besides the Sunday school hour. Heavy rainfall and extremely bad roads were factors which tended to diminish the overflow crowds expected at these services, yet notwithstanding all this, fair sized and appreciative audiences greeted the speakers at each service.

At the morning and night services Dr. N. G. Newman, of Elon College, N. C., a former pastor, spoke very acceptably on two vital themes.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, also of Elon College, was the orator of the occasion and delivered an address that is still meriting frequent comment. His text was Genesis 28:17: "And he was afraid and said, How dreadful is this place! this is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven."

One of the striking remarks of the speaker's introduction which focused attention upon all that he had to say was this: "It is a dreadful and an awful thing to build a church, and they who do it take upon themselves tremendous responsibilities." Many have said this remark put them in great suspense as to which the speaker was going to land, but they did not fail to add that he surely did land.

The writer would say that it was a message unique and simple and more powerful than any two-edged sword, because it was the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God which the preacher declared unto us.

The choir furnished splendid special music for each service, a quartette selection sung by Mrs. J. E. Holland, Mrs. W. M. Jay and Messrs. William Darden and E. M. Tilghman, was effectively rendered as was also the solo sung by Mrs. W. J. Bryan.

VALLEY LETTER

A multiplicity of duties prevented me from getting started with revival meetings as early the past fall as I should have liked. In consequence I have held only three meetings up to this time. My meetings thus far have been gratifying in some respects, but in the matter of conversions and accessions to the church have been very disappointing. A splendid spirit seemed to pervade the meeting at Antioch but there were no conversions. There seem to be but few unconverted people in the community. It is one of the best communities along that line that I know of.

At Timber Ridge good congregations, and apparently a good interest greeted us, and there were three conversions. Mrs. Andes assisted in the music during the last half of the meeting and the people showed their appreciation by giving her a free-will offering (entirely unsolicited) of $17.00. While in the community I secured seven subscription to The Herald of Gospel Liberty, and five to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. At the close of the meeting we organized a Christian Endeavor Society which is starting off fine.

At Palmyra some interest was manifested in the meeting and there was one conversion.

I want to spend a little time in my study now while the cold winter winds blow, and then I must get into meetings again. There is always plenty to do in the Master's service, and it is a happy service.

OUR RICHMOND WORK BEGINS

The Mission Secretary has made two trips to Richmond, Va., the past fall with a view to investigating the prospects of beginning a Christian Church there and has been exceedingly encouraged. We have been able to locate about fifty-five who now belong to the Christian Church or who because of past membership in the church, it is believed would unite with us if we had a church there.

Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., who has had such a successful building experience at Winchester, Va., and then whom we have no more tireless worker, has accepted the pastorate of the work in Richmond and is to move his family there and begin March 1, 1920, or earlier if some one can be secured to succeed him at Winchester. The Secretary feels that this will carry confidence in the movement to all who know Brother Walters and who are at all acquainted with the situation in Richmond.

A number of members met with Brother Walters when he was in Richmond on December 5 and this company unanimously requested the Board to secure Dr. and Mrs. Walters for the work there if they could be obtained. In writing of his visit and his final acceptance of the work, Brother Walters says: "I am well pleased with the outlook in Richmond and feel sure that the venture will be a success."

If any CHRISTIAN SUN readers know of members in Richmond whose names we should have, it will be very much appreciated if the same could be sent either to Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., Winchester, Va., or to the writer. We have at least made a beginning in Richmond where we should have had a church a half century ago and there has been great waste and great leakage through all this time to our great cause because we have so sorely neglected this vital point. The writer asks the interest of all CHRISTIAN SUN readers and the prayers of our brotherhood generally upon the work at Richmond.

J. O. ATKINSON.

THE WORK IN WASHINGTON

Under date of December 10, Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., 806 Taylor Street, N. W. Washington, D. C., writes: "We had a good service Sunday with twenty-one present. We have organized the Sunday school with Brother Irving W. Hitchcock as superintendent. We have a class for men, one for married women, one for younger women and one for children. We expect to have a class for boys soon. Some who have just moved into Washington have sent for their letters.'

Dr. Kendall is encouraged by the work in Washington and here is believing that the year 1920 will be an eventful one for us Christians because of the things undertaken at our nation's capital. We shall not despise the day of small things and shall bear in mind that "great trees from little acorns grow," and that it takes time for their growth and great strength and power. Through the prayers, help and sacrifices of SUN readers, the Lord can and will show us what mighty things he can achieve and this writer is believing that hundreds and thousands will rally to the Washington work with the passing days and years. Such a pity it is that through all these years we have allowed our membership to move into the national capital, go into other churches or be without a church home during all the years of their residence there. When it is borne in mind that we have neglected such a vital point, is it any wonder that we have yet such slow growth the past twenty years, if growth it may be called? But by our Father's good will, we shall strive together in the great work of evangelizing the nation and the world.

J. O. ATKINSON.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Christmas was more quiet, more Christian, and more enjoyed than in saloon days. The few drunks, the few broils, and even the deaths from wood alcohol were small evils compared with the saloon-times when wives suffered, men were in lockups, and children cried for bread. At the Jerry McCauley Water Street Mission, in New York City, twenty odd persons sat down to a dinner that had been prepared for more than five hundred, and that number of twenty odd compared with fifteen hundred poor hungry people heretofore fed at that Mission on Christmas. The dinner this year had been prepared for more than five hundred, and not a single man appeared, and hence the meal was postponed till night. Dr. James Maple used to say: "there are three kinds of poor: the Lord's poor; the devil's poor; and poor devils." The removal of the grosser evils of the world will remove the two latter classes of poor, and the Lord's poor will be such a small number that Christian charity will easily provide for their necessity and their comfort.

Fireworks belong to the Fourth of July and not to Christmas. Good tidings, praises to God, good will, and gifts harmonize with Christmas. The manger-birth is no misfortune, if angels sing and wise men honor the Babe, and shepherds spread the news of a new life of love.

Well, Christmas brought some joy to the Suffolk Christian church Sunday school. On the last day of the year the Primary Department, under direction of Mrs. John M. Butler and her co-workers, gave an entertainment at 3:00 P. M. At this delightful service in the Primary Room one hundred and ninety-nine little ones, besides the grown-ups who attended, were present and had the time of their lives and received an apple, an orange, and a box of candy.

At night the Superintendent, W. S. Beamon and his helpers, mostly women, and Santa Claus, greeted a big audience of men, women, and children. Superintendent Beamon read Scripture lesson and offered prayer. Little ones recited good prices and sang beautiful songs, older ones aided in songs, and the whole audience sang lustily; the pastor made a short talk and Santa Claus appeared from the rear of the church. The ringing of his sleigh bells as he came around the church excited the children and interested the grown folks. The Superintendent called the roll of classes by numbers, and as they came forward, a committee assisted Santa in the distribution of an apple, an orange, and a box of candy to all who went forward. It was a joyous occasion.

Then Senator J. E. West, in well-chosen words on behalf of the church, presented the pastor with a dainty box containing gold; after which Congressman E. E. Holland, in most fitting speech on behalf of the Sunday school, presented Superintendent Beamon with a silver pitcher. The recipients of these much appreciated gifts responded in words too weak to express what they felt.

A few remained to watch the Old Year turn over its achievements to the New Year and to hear Mrs. Bullock recite a beautiful Christmas story while we waited and watched. Then a psalm, a prayer, and to rest.

W. W. STALEY.

POUNDED

Yes, pounded on the fourth Sunday in December, my regular appointment at New Center, after service when the secretary of the church invited me to walk with him. When we returned the object of his invitation was plain because in our absence the good people had proceeded to load our Ford with flour, hams, sugar, coffee, fruits of many kinds, soda, candy, nuts, sausage, soap, many cereals, pop-corn, and other good edibles, besides sox, handkerchiefs, cash, etc.

May the Lord bless these good people, and render their unworthy servant capable of rendering better service to them and Him.

T. J. GREEN.

REV. H. A. ALBRIGHT—REV. L. I. COX

The Christian Church in North Carolina lost two faithful and useful ministers in the death of Rev. H. A. Albright and Rev. L. I. Cox, with both of whom I have had sweet fellowship in other days. In the early days of my ministry, during my editorship of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, I often met with Brother Albright, especially in the annual sessions of the (then) Deep River Conference. He was, so far as I ever knew, very loyal and a true yoke-fellow in the Gospel. I sorrow that I shall see his kindly face no more. Well, done, good and faithful servant! Brother Cox was a much younger man, but he had done a great work in his ministry and went early to his reward. As I write I think of his many noble qualities of head and heart and lament his early going from us. He was a man of far more than

THE PASSING YEAR

The year 1919 will soon be numbered with the eternal past. Sitting one day, last summer, under a thick spreading tree, looking out upon a broad landscape of surpassing delightful scenery which was very inviting and pleasing in the highest degree, a covey of birds came to rest their tired wings awhile on its branches, and warbled, a sweet, glad song. Then the sheen of summer sun they winged their graceful flight to thrill and sweeten more lives, and gladden other hearts and homes. As they spread their swift wings until lost in the distant view, it left an impression that many other hearts needed gladness as much as ours. Hearts which have groped in sadness a long time realize that the best and most welcome visitor to them is joy. It is truth to say that happiness is one of the greatest blessings that this world can give to any one.

Yonder is some secluded one battling with old age, disease and poverty. Have we been to see him or them this year? Our smiles and willing, helpful hands—our tender, encouraging words and substantial gifts will cause them to feel that they are not forgotten, but that somebody loves and cares for them still. Make a special visit to see them. No just pass by visit to say you called to see them, but give them special visits. These nominal, formal, make pretend visits are not much enjoyed, but one, two, or three and then more visits with interest in and for them are the winning ones. Don't give them visits as you pass by to see others in better conditions, but make special visits to these special ones. Put them down on your list and give them special time on your rounds of doing good. Pray with them and help to make them happy.

It is the dream by night and the earnest desire by day of millions of anxious ones, who are waiting for some welcome wave of gladness to roll the sweet messenger of peace in their souls. What a glad, pleasant, happy day it will be when it comes! Everybody is looking for and expecting it. From the least to the greatest, from the youngest to the oldest, from the poorest to the richest, from the sick ones to the well ones, all up and down the wonderful way of life, all, all classes and conditions are looking for solid happiness. Help them to find it. Then let it come, let it come like refreshing shower into every life.

To be tied, tangled, twisted, wound, and bound up in a bundle of unhappiness is a bad thing to think of, and the realization of it must be more so. Being in such a condition, and unable to get out of it would almost be a living death to some, and yet we must think that many are drinking the bitter draught. If all such did not entertain a hope of getting out of that situation, they would be troubled more than they can bear. But here comes hope and greatly helps them by its persuasive and gentle influence.

The passing year ought to bring more gladness especially to the Christian, because he is nearing home, and desires to take part of that happiness which will be lasting. For a thousand years in His sight are but as yesterday when it is passed, and a thousand years are as a day. God does not count time by our reckoning, but computes it into infinite length. The great clock of time has nearly numbered the days of 1919, and we are in the twilight of its close, watching and waiting for the end; and looking for the mid-night hour that will welcome in the new year. Said a very faithful friend not long ago: "I have passed many bright and pleasant years, but this seems to have been the most pleasant of them all—it mainly has been the way of happiness. I cannot account for it, unless it is because I am nearing the end, and my mind dwells on it more than in former years." Above all things he desired to be ready, and that if he could live that way, it would give him inexpressible gladness. Hope which has led the way before us so delightfully still leads us down the final days and permits us to say the last words to the departing year. All we have said and done have been recorded on the pages of time, and, as we believe, will help to make us happy or unhappy in the great eternity.

What have we done, what are we doing, and what can we do? The past tells what we have done—the present shows what we are doing, and the future invites us to make the best use of ourselves. If you have given your means as far as you were able, to help some good cause, you will feel better by that act. "Give to the world the best you have, and the best will come back to you." Not exactly the money you give or the things you give, but happiness will pay you back with full measure. To those having means, it is, and ought to be a great pleasure for them to give. If kind deeds have been performed, and tender, loving, helpful words spoken, the remembrance of them will bring great blessings and a rich reward. If bitter words have been said, repent of them, deeply regret them, and avoid their use in the future. How many dull and dim eyes have you made to flash with new life this year? How many faces have you made radiantly beautiful with reflected joy? How many poor, needy, afflicted, lonely, tired ones have you been to see this year; prayed and talked with and cheered by your pleasant, helpful presence? How many needy ones have you helped and blessed with your means as far as you were able? How many troubled hearts have you comforted with the lotion of kindness? How many lost ones have you found? How many sinners have you helped to save?

These golden days have adorned in a most becoming way the last months of this year. They have been resplendent with their departing beauty and loveliness.

KEEP WAR RISK INSURANCE

It is regrettable that so many former service men are not keeping up their Government life insurance issued through the Bureau of War Risk Insurance in Washington. The fact seems to be due largely to widespread confusion and lack of information as to the right of former service men to permanent Government life insurance, and the process by which this insurance may be retained.

The demobilization of our armed forces was so rapid and was attended by such uncertainty on the part of service men as to future civil occupations and permanent places of abode that it was not surprising that many of the men gave little thought to the matter of insurance. Others doubtless thought the original term insurance (War Time Insurance) ceased when they were demobilized and did not know it might be converted into any one of the several forms of permanent Government Life Insurance (Converted Insurance). Still others, immediately upon their return to civil life, felt financially unable to continue the insurance. They should now take advantage of the liberal provisions for reinstatement.

One million children in Poland are now being fed by two big American relief agencies—the American Relief Administration and the American Red Cross.

AN EDITOR

No editor has said or hinted anything to him who writes this; has said nothing about writing him up or down. The intention of this article is to collect a few thoughts which have floated in the mind concerning an editor's work.

As much as you can, read carefully what an editor says in each number of his paper. He prepares you something to read and it takes time, work and some little patience to do so. He wants to tell you something and he desires that you shall read or hear it read. One would think it was warm work during the summer. If he takes a plunge in the ocean wave, or breathes mountain air, he has soon to return to his work, write, write, write and rewrite; think, think, think, and get right at it again. Sick or well, glad or sad, tired or rested, young or old, he has to work in it over and over again.

If an editor has the ability and courage to write up his paper under depressing and adverse conditions, we readers ought to have enough grace and sympathy to read and appreciate as far as possible what he says. Thoughts do not all the time flow freely, nor are suitable words always ready for his service. Sometimes too many words come at once, then he has to stop, think, choose and reject. He often has many to please and none to offend, and it must keep him in a straight betwixt two to know just how to be tactful, tender, and sweet.

Almost every correspondent to his paper likes for his article to appear first and in the first and best place, though there are a few who have patience and are willing to be last.

After all the troubles, trials and relations, it gives him pleasure to be still in his place, and doing his duty. There is where happiness is found in his place and doing his duty. These words express it in a plain way. To be a good, faithful, popular editor, whether in the religious or secular chair, is a noble work, and we have many fine and accomplished editors in both departments. There are many secular editors who are most honorable and worthy in every way, and they have helped to make the world better by their writings, by defending truth, upholding honesty and purity and enlightening the people.

No matter about the condition of the weather or anything else, they are expected to do their work well and on time, and it must be a continual effort to maintain their elevated and responsible position. A few intimate friends, and other thoughtful ones, who understand, partly the work they have to perform, know how to appreciate their valuable service, but some do not consider nor properly estimate their worth.

The editor is expected to say nice things about folks when they get married, to write cheering words for them up and down the ways of life, and give to their friends and the public comforting eulogy when they die. So you see the editor says and does very much for the people while they live and after they are dead. He is, therefore, a useful person and deserves all the praise and success he gets. If it were not for him life would be more tiresome and lonely. His brilliant editorials, eloquent sayings and elegant language all contribute to our admiration of him. He also skims the columns for news, and gives us the cream of his exchanges. Reviews them for us, and saves us much time and research.

Principles and Government of The Christian Church

(The Franklin, Virginia, session of the Southern Christian Convention ordered that the Principles and Government of the Christian Church be revised and that a committee be appointed to make the revision. The following members of the Convention were appointed to do the work: Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., President; Rev. W. S. Long, D. D., Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Rev. N. G. Newman, D. D., and W. A. Harper, LL. D. Some weeks ago the committee completed its work, and we are privileged to print, in serial form, the Principles and Government as outlined, subject to ratification by the next session of the Convention.—Editor.)

ADMINISTRATION OF THE LORD'S SUPPER

1. The deacons of the congregation should be invited forward to assist in the administration of the supper.
2. All followers of Christ should be invited to the Lord's Supper.

The minister may then read from the Scriptures:

And, as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom. Matt. 26:26-29; Luke 22:7-20; I Cor. 10:16-18; 11:23-26.

The elements should be set apart by prayer and thanksgiving.

PRAYER.

After which the minister shall break the bread before the people, saying in this manner:

Our Lord Jesus Christ, the same night in which he was betrayed, took bread, and when he had given thanks, he brake it, and said, Take, eat; this is my body, which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of me.

Taking the cup he shall say:

After the same manner also he took the cup, when he had supped, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood: this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of me. I Cor. 11:25, 26.

After serving the congregation the minister and deacons should then partake.

HYMN.

BENEDICTION.

CHAPTER IV
CONSECRATION OF CHILDREN

The parents standing with the child in the home, or before the congregation, the Minister shall read one or more of the following selections of Scripture:

SCRIPTURE:—

And the man Elkanah, and all his house, went up to offer unto the Lord the yearly sacrifice, and his vow. But Hannah went not up; for she said unto her husband, I will not go up until the child be weaned, and then I will bring him, that he may appear before the Lord, and there abide forever. And Elkanah, her husband, said unto her, Do what seemeth thee good; tarry until thou have weaned him; only the Lord establish his word. So the woman abode, and gave her son suck until she weaned him. And when she had weaned him, she took him up with her, with three bullocks, and one ephah of flour, and a bottle of wine, and brought him into the house of the Lord in Shiloh: and the child was young. And they slew a bullock, and brought the child to Eli. And she said, Oh, my lord! as thy soul liveth, my lord, I am the woman that stood by thee here, praying unto the Lord. For this child I prayed; and the Lord hath given me my petition which I asked of him: therefore also I have lent him to the Lord; as long as he liveth he shall be lent to the Lord. And he worshipped the Lord there. I Sam. 1:21-28.

And, behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him. And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death, before he had seen the Lord's Christ. And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law, then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said, Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word: for mine eyes have seen thy salvation. Luke 2:25-30.

Then the minister shall say to the parents:

Beloved Friends: In presenting this child for consecration to God, we recognize that you are moved by that impulse of parental love, which prompts to all sacrifices, and promotes all efforts to bring comfort and blessing to the objects of its faithful care. You are anxious that your child may increase not only in strength and knowledge, but also in the fear and favor of God. To this end it is needful that you exercise watchful oversight upon every influence that may affect his (or her) youthful mind, and besides exhort him earnestly to follow the path to Heaven, to give him the more effective example of yourselves leading the way.

Will you therefore endeavor to bring up this child in the nurture and admonition of the Lord: will you teach him for his earliest years to engage in daily prayer, and will you employ every effort to bring him to a saving knowledge of the truth in Jesus Christ our Lord?

ANSWER—I will.

J. Milton Banks—THE SUN gets better all the time.

Will you be careful in your own conduct to live as Christian believers, and in wholesome example to this child?

ANSWER—I will.

Will you abound in prayer for this child and seek to restrain him from all evil habits and associates, and to turn his mind to the Holy Scriptures and his feet to the House of God?

ANSWER—I will.

Then the minister shall read this Scripture:

Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. Matt. 19:13.

But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them. Mark 10:14-16.

Then the minister shall take the child, or place his hand upon its head, and say:

Name this child.

Then naming it after them he shall say:

I consecrate thee to the Lord, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. Then returning the child he shall say:

Let us pray:

Receive, O Lord, we beseech Thee, this child, whom we consecrate to Thee and to Thy service forever. Lead him, we pray Thee, early to an understanding of Thy ways, and to a perfect trust in Christ, his Saviour. Preserve him in the slippery paths of youth, from the perils of doubt and the temptations of sin, and so replenish him with the gift of Thy Heavenly grace that he may serve Thee with a faithful heart all the time that Thou grantest him to live. And so sanctify, we beseech Thee, these Thy servants, that they may direct their household in the fear of the Lord. Purify them so wholly in thought and word and deed, that the family may be united to Christ in lively faith and love, and having walked in Thy sight on the earth, be finally admitted, parents and children together, to the greater family of the redeemed in Heaven, there to praise Thee, world without end. Amen.

Then the minister shall add this benediction:

The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God and the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you all. Amen.

The Sunday school of the Burlington Christian church set out a year ago to raise $700.00 extra as a special mission fund to support a missionary. A few Sundays ago we heard the report read for the first eleven months and the total raised was $660.05. We usually get things done when we undertake to do things.

ordinary usefulness. His ability lay in many directions. I recall his address before the American Christian Convention at Springfield, Ohio, in 1914, when he spoke on the question of Moral Reform, specially with reference to Temperance. In my humble judgment it was a great effort and did not only honor to his head and heart, but to the cause of Christ as it was represented in that Convention. God bless the memory of these two faithful servants and may the fruits of their life work abide among those with whom and for whom they labored so faithfully. One by one the workers are going home to their Lord and to the reward He will give them as they rest from their labors. I once thought that the life of an old man was very long. Now it seems to me that at best it is short, so short! To the child a day seems long, but to the busy man who rises early, labors hard, and ere he is ready for rest, the sun seems to set and he goes home, and often when he feels that so little has been accomplished.

HOW ARTIFICIAL LIMBS ARE MADE

The manufacture of artificial limbs received a wonderful impetus during the American Civil War, many improvements in the product resulting. The artificial limbs are not made of "cork;" they used to be known as "cork legs" from the fact that so many of them were made in Cork, Ireland. They are made of wood, hollowed out, over which rawhide is shrunk to prevent the wood from cracking or splitting. Satisfactory joints and forms of movement make the present style of artificial legs not a hardship to wear, and with practice they are easy to "negotiate," so that remarkable running and leaping stunts are possible. It has been found by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance that it is more difficult to find and fit a satisfactory artificial hand, the type most generally in use being finished with a hook instead of a hand. Both training and patience are required in learning how to use the artificial hands with accuracy and facility.

Practically the whole of this issue is composed of articles left over from our last issue in 1919 (the issue of December 24). Several months ago we had hoped to make it a New Year Number but again our added responsibilities made it impossible for any new feature. We know that our friends understand and will appreciate our position.

The Editor had the privilege on last Sunday of holding service at New Providence for Pastor F. C. Lester, who is convalescing from an operation for the removal of tonsils. The weather was extremely cold and the disagreeableness increased by falling snow, but a reasonable number came to worship and we enjoyed the trip.

It was moved and carried that the Committee be authorized to employ a stenographer, during the campaign, and that the expenses be paid.

I W. JOHNSON, Secretary.

The above record needs no special comment at this time, but from time to time we shall write editorially on this undertaking. Suffice to say, however, that we consider it one of the biggest and best things that the Church has undertaken to do in a long time. Our first worth while move was to raise $50,000 for missions. There were those who said it could not be done; while a few "doubting Thomases" were wondering what position we could give our Mission Secretary after he had accomplished the great task. The $50,000 was soon raised, the amount increased and the goal soon reached. The last goal set by the Mission Board was $500,000.

Our second worth while undertaking, in a financial development, was to raise $125,000 additional endowment for our beloved educational institution—Elon College. Though we had underestimated twice the willingness, the generosity, and the co-operation of our people, we set the goal at the pittance of the very low figure given above. We then raised the goal to $250,000 and before all the churches were reached we were far over this figure and when the final canvass was completed we reached $375,000.

In our campaign for the college endowment the minimum subscription was $100 and, hence there are thousands whose resources we could not claim and whose willingness could not subscribe, though their loyalty was just as great as those who did subscribe. Leaders of the Church began to see that possibly we had made a mistake by not putting on an every member canvass. Other denominations followed the every member canvass in their benevolent campaigns and undertook to reach every household and the members thereof. Our enlarged program will do just this thing and bring the Church to a uniformity of giving and thus quicken interest among all, instead of a few.

Space forbids that we make further comment but later we shall have more to say along this line.

Rev. J. W. Wellons reached his ninety-fourth birthday on January 1, and has thus started into his ninety-fifth year as a useful citizen and devout man of God. We are confident that a large number of friends remembered "Uncle" Wellons on his recent birthday. If there are those who overlooked, if we suggest that suggest that they do so now. The Church owes a great debt to Brother Wellons for the great work that he has done in our midst.

Elon College was represented in the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. meeting in Des Moines, Iowa, during the holidays by the following persons: Dr. N. G. Newman, College pastor; Messrs. J. W. Fix, H. W. Johnson, and Misses Juana Pinnix and Janie Angel of the student body.

MISSIONARY

WHICH COURSE IS MOST PLEASING TO CHRIST?

World Call

One church gives $4,000 a year for missions. It keeps six missionaries at work in different parts of the world. This church believes that Christ meant what he said when He commanded His disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation, and makes it its chief business to obey that command. In this church missions are not considered an outside cause; they have the first place in all the thoughts and plans and expenditures of the membership. The building in which that church worships is convenient and commodious, but strikingly plain. No money has been wasted in adornment. The building is not a Greek temple or a magnificent cathedral; it is a workshop. It is a place where the Lord's business is transacted. There is no pipe-organ. The carpet is inexpensive. Opera chairs serve as seats. There are a number of churches in town more impressive from an architectural point of view; there are several that cost two or three times as much, but this church gives more for the extension of the gospel than all the other churches in the place combined. This church is known and honored in all parts of the world.

Other churches take the opposite course. They set their hearts on having the finest building in the neighborhood. Their ambition is to outclass all their rivals. When the building is dedicated there is almost always a heavy debt upon it. This debt is a millstone around the neck of the church; it is a lion in the path. Until the debt is paid, little or nothing can be given for missions. Members urge the shameful excuse that they must be just before they can be generous; as if the cause of Christ had not the earliest and strongest claim upon them; as if that divine claim should not be met before a sacrifice was made to the pride and vanity of the membership. As soon as the debt is paid a pipe-organ must be provided. Until that is paid for the missionary cause must be content with a pittance or with nothing at all. As soon as the organ is clear of debt, the building must be frescoed again and new and costly carpets must be laid. Then music of a more elaborate character must be secured; expensive singers must be engaged. The church proceeds on the assumption that the local church is the supreme thing and must be attended to first, and that the evangelization of the world is a matter of small importance and one that can wait for convenient seasons.

Which course is most pleasing to Christ? Which honors him most? To ask this question is to answer it. A church needs and should have a suitable building for its work and worship. But while half the race are without the gospel, it would seem that simplicity should be the order of the day, that more money be available for the support of the missionary enterprise. Surely if the church spends $30,000 for a building for itself and gives twenty-five dollars or less for missions, or pays $2,500 for an organ and pays five dollars or less for missions, it has not adopted the course that is most pleasing to her Lord. Nor is this course one that secures the respect of men of the world. When they see the church trying by means of music and eloquence and artistic and esthetic accessories to attract and hold the fashionable and wealthy, they despise it in their hearts. Let the church stand for the simplicity of Christ; let it exert itself to the limit of sacrifice to give the gospel to the unevangelized portions of the earth, and these same men will honor it and contribute freely and joyfully and generously to its support. The history of the church Dr. Gordon ministered for in Boston, and the one Dr. Bradt ministered for in Wichita, and the history of the Church of Christ in Angola, Indiana, demonstrates this. When the church most honors Christ, she will compel the respect of the world and she will do most to build herself up on her most holy faith.

The Church exists to help Christ accomplish his gracious and eternal purpose. In order to do that it is not necessary to have the finest building in the city; it is not necessary to have a pipe-organ. It is far more profitable to support a missionary or two. That will do more to attract the public and to build up the church in membership and holiness than anything that can be done to minister to the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, and the pride of life. In many churches the emphasis is put on the wrong place. That which should be greatest of all and finest of all is last of all and least of all. For this very reason many churches are weak and sickly and some are dead. They misapprehend the purpose and the plan of Christ, and because they do they miss the path that leads to prosperity.

The church is not to lavish her thought and her resources upon herself. She is not to study ornamentation and elegance and magnificence. She can well afford to leave that to the club. Her mission is a higher one. Her work in the world is to seek and to save the lost. Her business is to publish the truth far and near so that the prophecy may be speedily and gloriously fulfilled, "They shall see to whom no tidings of Him come, and they that have not heard shall understand." By doing this the church will please and glorify the Lord, and she will bring down upon herself such a blessing that there will not be room enough to receive it.

A TITHER

A good brother from Sanford, North Carolina, writes these lines:

"I take pleasure in sending you $10.00 to pay my subscription to the special mission fund. I have been a tither ever since you were here and I do not feel like anything could induce me to quit it. I always have money to pay into every good cause when I need it. Best wishes for you and our great mission cause."

This reminds me to say to CHRISTIAN SUN readers that the one unanswerable argument in favor of tithing is the tither. In all my travels, observation and experience, I have never yet found a person that tithes who would go back to the old system under any conditions. Neither have I ever known a person to adopt tithing as a method of life and attitude to the Kingdom, and willfully and deliberately give it up. If a person were disposed to argue with me about tithing, I think I should say, as Philip said unto Nathaniel, "Come and see." To try it, is to prove its merit.

Speaking of the experience in tithing, I do not see how one could wish a stronger testimony than that which is before me while I write. A good and hustling young man who graduated at the head of his class from Elon College last June, and who had to work his way through College, earning his living by dint of hard work in various tasks while here, writes as follows:

"During my first year in college, I adopted the system of tithing and since that time, I have faithfully set aside at least one-tenth of all that I have earned. On the first day of last January, I embarked on a system of giving two-tenths to God as well as of recognizing his ownership of the remaining eight-tenths and I am following that system even now in Yale. When I received the first payment on my scholarship which I am earning, by working, I set aside my two-tenths for the Kingdom and I did it from love and joy and not from stern, formal duty. I receive joy from no other source that excels the joy I receive in showing God my appreciation of His goodness to me."

How any person who cares to assume the right attitude to the Kingdom can read such testimony and not be convinced into trying tithing as a system is more than I can understand.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Our Thanksgiving offerings are still coming in nicely. One hundred and eight churches have responded to the Thanksgiving appeal. One hundred and fourteen have not as yet responded.

I truly hope each church will make this offering and mail it in. If you will look at the financial report you will see that we just lack $1,800.00 reaching twenty-five thousand dollars for the year 1919. I know our entire Church would like to see us reach twenty-five thousand dollars. It would be far beyond our expectations. But how happy we would be to reach it! It does seem to me that out of the churches not reported we ought to reach that amount. Now, dear reader, if your church has not made this offering will you see to it that you take a nice offering at your next service to help us reach this goal of $25,000.00 for the year 1919? I will not close the books for this year till after the middle of January in order to give each church an opportunity to have a part. Let everybody pull and give till we reach the twenty-five thousand mark. You will be proud of it. I will be happy. Let us do it.

CHRISTIAN LITERATURE SUNDAY

In view of the imperative need for rallying all the available forces for conserving the moral and spiritual life of our nation, January 25, 1920, has been designated by the American Tract Society as Christian Literature Sunday, and Churches, Sunday Schools, Young People's Societies and other Christian organizations of America are urged to observe this day with appropriate services, in order that the function and power of Christian literature as an Americanizing and world evangelizing force shall receive its proper recognition.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

A WORD OF EXPLANATION

Mrs. Fred Bullock having resigned her position as Sunday school reporter to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, it became the duty of the Executive Committee of the Board of Religious Education, consisting of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. J. W. Harrell and myself, to elect her successor. A duty which the two first named brethren, being a self-created majority, suavely performed by electing me to fill the place. I immediately suggested to Dr. Atkinson the appointment of some layman less burdened already with offices and outside duties. My answer came not from Dr. Atkinson, but rather from Brother Riddle, Editor of THE SUN, asking immediate copy for the next issue. So I have decided in my mind, in order that the department may not suffer more than can be helped, to do my best, and until a better substitute for Mrs. Bullock has been found readers of THE SUN may expect a message direct from me to every one of your each week.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JANUARY 18, 1920 (C. H. Stephenson)

Subject: The Boldness of Peter and John. Acts 4:1-31.

Time: A. D. 30; Place: Jerusalem.

Golden Text: Stand fast in the faith, quit you like men, be strong.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 124. Also Matt. 5:10-12; Acts 5:12-42, II Tim. 4:6-8; Heb. 11:32, 38.

Adult Topic: The Need and Source of Christian Courage.

This is a day of great courage. To prove this one only needs to refer to the battles of the Argonne of Ypres or Vimy Ridge. And it is the same courage that prompted Martin Luther and David Livingstone to press on in spite of seemingly irresistible opposition. But boldness may be misdirected. There have sprung up in our country a considerable element of people who are bold in defiance of law and government. I refer to the radicals and anarchoists who are now such a constant menace to organized society. Peter and John were bold for the right even in spite of the decision of the Sanhedrin court and it behooves us to be even bolder for the right than this class of revolutionists. Two years ago it required the Peter-John type of boldness to die for right, and many of our sons were there who unflinchingly did it. But I believe it is just as hard to live for right and requires the same amount of courage every day in every little thing we do even though it is not so advertised and seldom is praised.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JANUARY 25, 1920 (J Vincent Knight)

"The World's Need of Christ."—Eph. 2:1-13 (Foreign Missionary Lesson).

For nearly two thousand years the world has been clamoring for something, and yet that something has not and cannot satisfy. It has been clamoring for wealth, honor, fame, knowledge and supremacy, and yet the combined powers of all have failed to even civilize the world, not to mention the Christianization of the foreign fields. The sum total of all the above characteristics means little or nothing without the knowledge and power of Jesus Christ. A few years past the last word in the world's education was the German University, but now things have changed and the world has learned that education of that kind is a miserable failure. But what are we to do? The wheel has revolved and our own America must furnish the world with the higher institutions of learning. Will they be pagan or Christian? The world's greatest need is Christ, and we of America hold the key to the situation. Shall we grasp the opportunity and supply the need?

We must supply that need, and how shall we do it? We must know the need, catch a vision of the work and hasten workers to the field. The Inter-Church World Movement purposes to gather the facts and place them in the hands of every denomination that will line up with the organization. Then, the Church must act, and act at once. Our Sunday schools and Young People's Societies must be turned into recruiting stations and mobilize our young men and women for the field at home and abroad. You don't have to leave America any more to do foreign work. The war has scattered the peoples of the world, and every day you who live in towns and cities may do a bit of foreign mission work.

The Christian Endeavor monthly service program starts you off right on this work. Let us lay special emphasis on the personal work plan for January, and thus learn to do the work assigned to us. Then, let every Young People's Society do its best to furnish at least one life work recruit for the field at home or abroad. We gave to the war an average of twelve men from each Church. Can we do less for our Christ?

Questions Answered

"Why is it that our Church people in the South do not line up with the Christian Endeavor work being done?" (Burlington.)

I anticipated that question. Here is the answer, after having studied the same question since 1913. One fourfold reason, viz.: Lack of information, interest, vision and leadership. You have the right qualifications to be a leader in this great work. May I lay the matter more heavily upon your heart? I wish I could, for some one must start something.

Second, "Which state has more Endeavorers—North Carolina or Virginia?" (Suffolk).

North Carolina. Virginia reported 266 Societies with an average of 30 members to the Society last August. North Carolina reported 385 Societies with a membership of nearly 750, at that time but is soon to reach the 400 mark. New Societies are being reported every day, and we suppose the same is true in Virginia. The number of Societies in our Church in the two states stand fifty-fifty as I have it.

MARRIAGES

MOORE-FARMER

Wedding bells rang on December 17, 1919 in the home Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Farmer, News Ferry, Va., when their daughter, Elizabeth, became the bride of Mr. Jesse Moore.

Their pastor and a large circle of friends bid them God-speed on the course which they are beginning to run.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

ALDERSON-WALKER STRANGE-ALDERSON

On December 18, 1919 a double wedding was celebrated in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Alderson, Paces, Va., when his son, Arthur, and Miss Callie Walker made the vows that united their lives, and his daughter, Miss Sue, became the bride of Mr. Harry Strange.

An infare dinner was served in the Alderson home at six o'clock. Sceldom did happier party ever assemble nor were they served to a more sumptuous diner. May God bless these young people as they shoulder the new responsibilities henceforth devolved upon them.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

MARRIED

Mr. and Mrs. H. K. Trogdon announce the marriage of their daughter, Marie Bland, to Mr. Paul Strayer Kennett, on Tuesday, December the sixteenth, nineteen hundred and nineteen, Liberty, North Carolina.

LOWDERMILK-CRAVEN

In the presence of several friends and relatives, on December 25, 1919, at 2:30 P. M., the writer united in marriage Mr. Millard Lowdermilk of Bennett, N. C., and Miss Jeroua Craven, at the home of the bride's parents, Ramseur, N. C., Route 1.

Both are popular young people and many good wishes follow them.

T. J. GREEN.

WRIGHT-SHAW

Mr. George M. Wright and Miss Mary Shaw took upon themselves the obligations of matrimony December 28, 1919, at 6:30 P. M. Only a few intimate friends were present to witness the ceremony. They are popular young people of their community and their many friends wish them a long, happy life. They were married at Mr. T. L. Shaw's the home of the bride.

May good health and length of days with great happiness be their blessings in life.

L. L. WYRICK.

SHARPE-GRAVES

On December 23, 1919, at 7 o'clock P. M., at the home of Rev. J. W. Holt, Miss Mary Alma Graves became the bride of Mr. Alvis Alexander Sharpe. The words that united them in holy wedlock were pronounced by Rev. J. W. Holt in the presence of a few witnesses. The wedded couple left on the westbound train at 9:00 o'clock p. m.

J. W. HOLT.

LEE-McCRAY

Accompanied by a few of their friends, Mr. James S. Lee and Miss Mary P. McCray, of Altamahaw, came down to the home of Rev. J. W. Holt, on Christmas day, and were united in the bonds of matrimony. These young people embark upon the voyage of life followed by the good wishes of many friends. Marriage ceremony by the bride's pastor, Rev. J. W. Holt.

LAINE-FREEMAN

On the evening of December 17, 1919, at the Christian parsonage, Dendron, Va., Mr. Willie J. Laine and Miss Nina L. Freeman were united in marriage. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple motored to the home of the groom's father, near Manry, Va., where a delicious supper was served to a number of invited guests. These young people are highly respected and have the best wishes of their many friends.

OBITUARIES

ATKINS

Sarah Edua Atkins, wife of Deacon C. H. Atkins, has passed from labor to reward. She was born September 2, 1884, and was the daughter of Ben T. and Sarah W. Epps. She was married on December 27, 1899, and to the union were born four children, two of whom died in infancy.

Her husband and two children, Madeline T. and James O., survive her. At the age of eleven she joined Bacon's Castle Baptist church, but after marriage joined the Christian church at Isle of Wight with her husband. She was buried at Central Hill Baptist church, in the presence of a host of friends and relatives. God bless the family.

J. M. ROBERTS.

RICHARDSON

Warner Frankliu Richardson was born July 29, 1861 and died December 10, 1919. On February 1, 1887, he was married to Laura A. Hollemau. To this union were born five children, three of whom preceded him to the spirit land. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Laura A. Richardson, two daughters, Mrs. Lillie V. Spivey and Mrs. Bertha M. Harrell, and a host of friends and relatives. He was active in public affairs, and was a member of County Board of Supervisors when he died.

He was a member of Barrett's Christian church and was always at his post of duty. He projected his business ability into the affairs of the Kingdom. He was a Mason, an Odd Fellow, a Woodman of the World, but he put the church first.

The flowers were beautiful and abundant.

May God bless all the bereaved family and friends.

J. M. ROBERTS.

FERRELL

At his mother's home, Houston, Va., R. 1, on November 26, 1919, Archer Ferrell fell on sleep. For several years he had had very poor health, and his taking off was not unexpected neither by him nor his people.

Brother Ferrell was a widower, about 33 years old; the father of three sons who survive him—Malcolm, Eddie, and Garland—12, 10, and 8 years old respectively. He leaves a mother and several brothers and sisters to mourn their loss.

His body was laid to rest in the Compton burying ground beside his wife. The writer had charge of the services. May God's blessing rest upon his surviving loved ones.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

TERRY

On December 2, 1919, Jimmie Terry, the eight-year-old son of William Terry and his deceased wife, died from the effects of a burn received at the explosion of a gasoline engine gas tank on November 29. The boy was playing with the batteries, the spark of which ignited the gas and caused the explosion. His clothing was nearly burned off of him and for three days he suffered agonies untold. It was a sad incident.

He was laid to rest by sorrowing friends and loved ones in the family burying ground near News Ferry, Va., beneath a beautiful floral offering. May God bless his father and step-mother and brother and sisters, and grand-parents.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

MORELAND

Mrs. Mary E. Moreland was born October 10, 1838, and died November 24, 1919. Her age was 81 years, 1 month, and 14 days. Sister Moreland was a faithful member of the Timber Ridge Christian church, and a woman enjoying the confidence and highest esteem of all who knew her. She is survived by one son and three daughters. A large congregation attended the funeral services at Timber Ridge, November 26. A good woman has gone to her reward.

A. W. ANDES.

McCLANAHAN

Isaac T. McClanahan, a native of Powell's Fort, moved to Washington, D. C., several years ago and secured employment on the railroad. He was killed in an accident there November 27, 1919, at the age of 51 years, 3 months, and 7 days. The body was brought back to Powell's Fort where the funeral services were held at the St. David's Lutheran church, December 1, 1919. It was my pleasure to receive him and most of his family into the church at Joppa a few years ago. Surviving are his widow, three sons, and one daughter.

A. W. ANDES.

OATES

Miss Ella Oates, formerly of Capon Bridge, West Virginia, died November 18, 1919, in Washington, D. C., where she had been living for several years. Her age was 49 years, 7 months, and 20 days. Surviving her are her mother, five brothers, and three sisters. The remains were sent back to her old home, and the funeral was held at Timber Ridge, November 21, 1919.

A. W. ANDES.

NELSON

Nathan B. Nelson was born October 21, 1841 and came to his death by accident November 20, 1919, aged 78 years and 29 days. He was a faithful member of the Burlington Christian church, having moved here from Pleasant Hill Christian church about thirty years ago. He was of a bright, cheerful disposition and lived on the sunny side of life. His delight was in the service of the Lord. He is survived by a devoted companion, one son and three daughters.

The funeral was conducted from the home by the writer, assisted by Dr. Fleming.

J. W. HARRELL.

FOSTER

Bruce Foster, the youngest son of Robert and Josephine Foster, departed this life in Boston, Mass., December 22, 1919, at the age of 14 years, 7 months and eight days. This young man was afflicted with tumor of the brain more than a year before his death. His sufferings were great at times, finally resulting in blindness and death. All that kind hands and loving hearts could do was done to save him. He was taken to specialists in Atlanta, Boston and elsewhere, a delicate operation failed to save him. He was a member of Bethlehem church at Altamahaw, where his funeral services and interment took place, conducted by his pastor. A bright and promising youth has fallen in death. May God comfort the sorely bereaved parents and friends.

J. W. HOLT.

BROTHERS

Mrs. Jane Rebecca Brothers, widow of the late John F. Brothers, departed this life on November 29, 1919, at 11:00 o'clock P. M., at her home on 818 Duke St., Portsmouth, Va. She was seventy-seven years, nine months and fourteen days old. She was a member of Damascus Christian church. She was a good Christian mother and greatly loved by all who knew her. She will be missed in her home, community and church, but our loss is her gain. Having moved to Portsmouth, her folks united with the Christian church there and the mother did all she could for the cause of her Lord. She leaves eight children, three sons and five daughters: J. F. Brothers, Portsmouth, Va.; R. R. Brothers, Norfolk, Va.; A. R. Brothers, Raleigh, N. C.; Mrs. Stephen Long, Portsmouth, Va.; Mrs. W. M. Rieks, Portsmouth, Va.; Mrs. Sam Green, Okisko, N. C.; Mrs. C. J. Heath, Portsmouth, Va.; Miss Viola Brothers, Portsmouth, Va.; one sister, Mrs. M. E. Horton, Whaleyville, Va., nineteen grandchildren, and many friends. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at the home, assisted by Rev. H. W. Dowling. The Lord bless and comfort the dear bereaved ones.

H. H. BUTLER.

JORDAN

Mrs. Francena Jordan, wife of W. S. Jordan, was born May 17, 1861 and died at St. Leo's Hospital, Greensboro, N. C., December 8, 1919, after illness of three or four months. She leaves to mourn a loving husband, five sons and three daughters. She was a consistent member of the Christian church at Brown's Chapel and had been for many years. The funeral services were conducted by the writer in Brown's Chapel church December 11, and interment was made in the cemetery at that place. May the Holy Comforter comfort the bereaved ones.

W. N. HAYES.

GRIMES

On Monday, December 15, 1919, Mrs. Ellen E. Grimes died at her home with her son, V. M. Grimes, Portsmouth, Va., at the age of eighty-five years, eight months and twelve days. She was a dear good Christian mother. She united with the Christian church, Norfolk, Va., in 1847 and was baptized by Rev. Stephens S. Barrett, who was then her pastor. She was one of the charter members of Washington Street Christian church, which was organized in 1901. She loved her church and was true and faithful to the end. She leaves four sons and one step-daughter; also twenty-three grandchildren and thirty-one great grandchildren and a host of friends. She will be greatly missed in her home, community and church. Her funeral services were conducted at Washington Street Christian church on Wednesday afternoon, December 17, by the writer, assisted by the pastor, Rev. H. W. Dowling, and her remains were laid to rest in Oak Grove cemetery.

FROM OVER THE SEAS

CALLING!

Calling! Calling! Calling! They are calling us, the heathen are, to help, to rescue, to come. From over the seas the call comes. For years it has been coming, but we have paid so little heed to it. Louder and louder the call comes to us—the Christian Church—to do our part. Our ears are just beginning to be unstopped, and our purses are slowly opening. Let us hasten. The needs are many. The needy are calling and so is our God. We must answer.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

SCRAPS FROM READING AND THINKING

Recently a bishop in the M. E. Church said, in ordaining a young man to the ministry: "You are to do the profound thinking in the community in which you live." The bishop was right, but the trouble with the average minister is that there is not time to do profound thinking. With a multitude of things to do, and without help or the salary large enough to secure it, no man can do his best thinking. Many laymen have an idea that if a man is a preacher he has always at his disposal sermons to preach.

To define spirituality is a difficult problem, yet all of us know when the soul is satisfied and when we are at peace with the Spirit. Keep close to God is the only way to be able to define, in feeling, what spirituality is.

John D. Rockefeller gave $100,000,000 to the cause of education during the recent holidays. A great gift indeed, and yet when all the people give out of their means to make such a fund, the cause, we think, is benefitted greater; and certainly the individual strengthened more.

The occasional church goer often finds fault, in some way, with the service. There must be a reason for this, and we think that it is this: The irregular attendant fails to get in touch with the deep and abiding spirit that prevails in the service. The occasional attendant looks for something noisy and spectacular and seeks to substitute this for real worship. It takes the "big" occasion to bring some people to the house of God.

We still hold to the conviction that if THE CHRISTIAN SUN went into every home in our Church in the Southern Christian Convention that the result would be that added contributions to the various causes would far more than pay the cost. The revenue for such an undertaking will never come directly to the treasury of the paper as a result of a larger circulation, but if the results come to the departments of the Church, an expenditure to put THE SUN into every home would be worth while. The present generation of leaders in our Church is, with few exceptions, slow to move on the matter of publicity. We hope that the next generation will be willing to do more for the printed page than we are now doing.

A message on this page last week carried the announcement of what the Church is about to undertake, namely, the beginning of an every member canvass for the whole Church for the benefit of all the departments of the Church. Perhaps it has not dawned upon all what a great undertaking this is and what it will mean. Human machinery and physical strength will never put it over. Only the spirit of God upon us can bring results. Spiritual results will follow in its wake, the Church will be quickened, our people brought closer together and the Kingdom extended. It begins to look as if those who are the busiest, and whose duties are most exacting will have the burden of the undertaking to bear. But only as we spend and are spent can we hope to accomplish things worth while.

The lynching record of 1919 is another shameful blot for the democracy of this country. Eighty-three persons were lynched. Seventy-five of these were negroes. In 1918 sixty-four persons were lynched, which indicates an increase of nineteen for one year, and all this happened in our first year of reconstruction, and just after our boys had returned from making the world "safe." Shame upon America! Leader of the world and yet so brutal in her acts. Can we continue to lead the world and do such things? A question for every citizen to consider.

The Christian Evangelist, a publication of the Disciples Church, is running a series of articles on "Debate that Made History," reviewing debates of its own men with other denominations. Personally, we cannot see any good end to come from reviewing such history. This is a day of peace and fellowship and we should not be reminded of bitter denominational struggles. Our young people need to know something else.

It is just as essential for a minister to study those who are to hear his message as it is to study his message. Good words may be in vain if they fail to reach those to whom they are addressed. This is only another way of saying that a resident minister is necessary for every congregation. No minister can know his people as he should and not live with them.

Dr. Chas. M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," and about thirty other popular books, became editor-in-chief of The Christian Herald on January 1. Dr. Sheldon has been pastor of the Congregational church, Topeka, Kansas, for more than a quarter of a century and has wrought many great achievements as a pastor. We consider his new field of labor an enlargement of his work and predict The Herald to soon have the largest circulation of any religious paper in this country.

A thing of vital interest—and of great joy—to the people is that National Prohibition goes into effect January 16. All possible effort has been made by the liquor interests to prevent it, but nothing could be done. The good and right thing has been done. Let it not be undone.

A LETTER OF APPROVAL

January 7, 1920.

Rev. C. B. Riddle, Editor,

Burlington, N. C.

My dear Editor Riddle:

In this week's issue of THE SUN I get consolation. I refer to the criticism that the Board of Religious Education received. I most assuredly think it is a just and timely criticism—except it should have come long ago.

You will remember when you were editor of the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor department. So far as I know you received the salary for the work ($125 for the year). (Paid in part—donated the remainder to the Board.—C. B. R.) I believe the work was better organized then than it is now. It fell from your shoulders on mine. The first year the salary was cut to $107. The next two years I was to receive the large sum of $50 a year. I received $25 for the second year and nothing for the last year. For this decline in money matters I supposed that the position paid as much as was done, (the supposition still stands), but I do console myself in thinking, I am not the only person in the world to be criticized.

I have noted that any organization which lets its finances go as indicated above cannot hope to succeed. There will have to be a different spirit shown and demonstrated before the department in question can be appreciated and brought up to the standard of such departments in other denominations.

Yours very truly,

A. L. Hook.

A CHANGE—A CORRECTION

While one side of this issue was being printed, and over night, the Editor journeyed to Raleigh, N. C. with Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Dr. W. A. Harper and Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston to meet with the Executive Committee of the Convention, with the two added members, J. E. West and K. B. Johnson, as stated in Dr. Staley's letter on page five. The meeting was called at the request of those who are to handle the field work of the new campaign.

The following changes were made in the former outline of the work, which outline is given in "Suffolk Letter" of this week: Education and Missions each is to receive 40% of the fund instead of the amount first agreed upon. All other percentages stand as given by Dr. Staley. The name of the movement is to be: "The Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention." The Steering Committee, composed of W. W. Staley, I. W. Johnson, E. E. Holland, J. E. West, and K. B. Johnson, will form the directing board of the campaign. The Secretaries stand: J. O. Atkinson, Field Secretary; W. A. Harper, Organization and Publicity; C. D. Johnston, Auditor of expense accounts and collector of the funds from the local treasurers; C. B. Riddle, Speaker's Bureau and Advertising; C. D. West, Treasurer.

LITERATURE YEAR

Some months ago we took under advisement the matter of a new feature for THE CHRISTIAN SUN during 1920 and we regret that we did not get to announce it in the last issue of 1919 or the first issue in 1920.

It is a matter of disappointment to us that so few books are purchased by our people, at least the books are not purchased through this office.

We have been in correspondence with various publishers of the country and have made arrangements to buy closing out stocks of books at reduced prices and feel that we can secure enough good books under this plan to fully carry out our plans during this year.

The plan is this: The average cost of one of these books that we have arranged to buy at a discount will be about 25 cents the copy, including the mailing. We have, therefore, planned this arrangement: Each subscriber who renews his or her subscription and adds 25 cents will receive by return mail a copy of some useful and valuable book. We cannot undertake to announce titles from which subscribers may select because the supply on hand at times will contain quite a number of titles and possibly there would be more calls for certain titles than we would have books. Most of the books will be for children, and utmost care will be exercised in selecting the very best reading matter. Our purchases will practically all be made from Church publishing houses and that alone insures the books to be wholesome. We entertain the hope that our people will co-operate with us this year in placing more books into the homes of our constituency. Send for a book.

"Were it not for the clouds today there would be little appreciation of the sunshine of tomorrow."

Revivals have been conducted in all the churches of this pastorate, except one, since Conference met last August. Rev. I. W. Johnson was with us in the revival at Leaksville and did all the preaching. Dr. Johnson did a great work while in our midst by his strong personality, splendid fellowship, and practical earnest sermons. While with us he dedicated the new church that we have built the past year at Mt. Lebanon. We were very glad to have Dr. Johnson with us, and we all regret that his stay could not have been longer.

I feel proud of the many tokens of kindness that have been shown Mrs. Earp and myself by the kind people of this pastorate. The one that perhaps deserves most praise is Mrs. J. F. Louderback, of the Newport church. These people of the Valley have not as yet developed the habit of contributing a great deal to the enterprises of the church, but they are very kind to their pastor, and they try to see to it that he is fed, and in these days that counts a great deal. So when I read of the poundings of my brethren I am not at all jealous because Sister Louderback is pounding us every week, and others are remembering us with tokens of kindness from time to time. It really does make a pastor feel he is appreciated in the community when kind friends remember him in this way. May the good Lord help us to be more faithful as their spiritual adviser.

CONVENTION EVANGELIST

The last session of the Southern Christian Convention authorized the department of evangelism, and the election of an evangelist. The details of the Department and selection of the evangelist were referred to the Mission Board to be worked out. The Board in its various sessions since has had the matter under advisement and in special session at Suffolk, Va., elected Brother Victor Lightbourne, Dover, Delaware, as our Convention evangelist. The Evangelistic Committee for the Convention is composed of Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., and Brother J. A. Williams, both of Franklin, Va., and members of the Mission Board, and they will have the Department in hand, arranging with churches and pastorates Brother Lightbourne's engagements, and directing generally the affairs of the Department. Brother Lightbourne has resigned his Dover pulpit, has accepted the appointment tendered him and hopes to move his family to Elon College, or some convenient center of his work at an early date. Any pastor or church desiring evangelistic services should correspond with Rev. C. H. Rowland, Chairman, Franklin, Va.

Evangelism is fundamental and our Convention is indeed fortunate in having one of the very ablest and most successful evangelists in the country.

HAYES CHAPEL

We met with this church first Sunday. The weather was very cold, hence the smallness of the congregation. Good attention was given to the Word. The offering for the Orphanage was good, between fifteen and twenty dollars. This church is at a serious disadvantage. The most of its members live out in the country, and I was told that many of them rarely ever attend the services. I hope that during this year this condition will change. Several of the members entered into a covenant to pray daily for a great revival. This church has no Sunday school, this I sorely regret. Pray for us. We spent both nights with our dear Brother G. O. Barbee and his amiable wife and little boy. They made my stay with them very pleasant, and enjoyable. Our appointments here will be every first Sunday. May the Lord's cause prosper here this year.

P. T. KLAPP.

MOORE UNION

This church has started off well as I see it. Here we had a good meeting last year, but we are praying for a greater one this year. Pray with us. God bless these churches. Moore Union has a Sunday school with Brother Curley Maddox as Superintendent.

A LETTER OF APPRECIATION

I want to express through THE CHRISTIAN SUN, how grateful I am to my many friends for the kind remembrances of over sixty letters, cards and presents, in remembrance of Christmas Day, but more especially my birthday, which was the first day of the New Year when I rounded out my ninety-fourth year and am now entered my ninety-fifth. There are too many for me to write to, thanking them, and I adopt this means of reaching them all. Among these presents, I received a book "Love's Way" by Marden. I did enjoy reading this so much during the Christmas holidays. I am in my usual health but my hearing, that I so loathe to part with, is fast leaving me. During the cold weather I could not get out of doors and made a very poor hand walking in the house.

J. W. WELLONS.

Elon College, N. C.

January 8, 1920.

HOLLAND, VA.

A watch night party was held at the Christian church in Holland, on the night of December 31. It was prayer meeting night and about forty were in attendance at the prayer service. The prayer meeting closed at nine o'clock and the Entertainment Committee took charge of the audience which during the evening had increased to more than seventy-five.

Games were played and contests were indulged to the rapt pleasure of young and old.

From 11:00 to 11:30 o'clock hot chocolate, hot coffee and sandwiches were served after which the pastor called the audience to order again and a fifteen-minute song service was held in which many groups participated. Mr. I. A. Luke then made very appropriate remarks and led in prayer. At the hour of twelve the audience was singing "Nearer My God to Thee;" then for a moment immediately after 12:00 o'clock there was humble silence, the hymn was then finished and the audience dismissed. Some said that the evening with its interim social and religious features was better enjoyed than if it had been Christmas service.

Just prior to the prayer meeting hour the door bell of the parsonage rang and before any one could answer the ring the door was thrown open and a whole line of Santa Clauses filled and laden with such bounties as meat fresh from the scaffold, flour, meal, eggs, and several pounds of that rare and precious commodity sugar, cereals, canned goods, potatoes, butter, chicken and a purse containing ten dollars in cash. The pastor was then handed a list of the donors, and in response fumbled a few ill-arranged remarks of appreciation for not since the day when he made his first speech in the little old school house in the hollow was he so great a loss for words to acknowledge this expression of appreciation. Perhaps the best chosen remarks was uttered by the pastor's wife as the group was leaving, "Come again."

In justice to both the churches, Holland and Holy Neck I should not fail to mention the fact that at the last Quarterly Conference of each church a prominent laymen deliberately ordered the pastor out of the church. Then in a little while he repented of his arrogance and invited him back in and said for this misdemeanor the Conference had penalized itself $100.00 which would be credited to pastor's salary. I should further say that this is the second increase of $100.00 this year from each church, making a total increase of pastor's salary this year for the two churches of $400.

FROM DR. D. A. LONG

Lake Alfred, Fla.,

December 15, 1919.

Dear Editor:

Florida is drawing many thousands from the North. The trains are crowded daily. The Dixie Highway from Jacksonville to Tampa is thronged with autos. Many of the cars are bright and shiny, indicating that they had been shipped to Jacksonville, but the majority are mud-splashed, and showed long distance travel. Florida never looked better than it does this winter, and it welcomes the visitors from the frozen North. The magnificent red poinsettias nod their royal heads in pleasant greeting to every touring party, and the roses give forth their perfume in greeting, and the golden oranges and grape-fruit smile a welcome as they glisten in the sunlight. The brick and asphalt roads gladden the hearts of the drivers; the lovely lakes and rivers ripple a smiling welcome to those who have left frozen roads like corrugated iron, to seek pleasure and comfort in a semi-tropical paradise. The fish will jostle each other in striving to reach their hooks.

I preached at the Presbyterian church at this place yesterday.

Mrs. Long will join me at Tampa, in a few weeks.

D. A. LONG.

SUFFOLK LETTER

SUN readers have already had opportunity to read proceedings of a meeting of the Executive Board of the Convention, in Conference with the Executive Committees of the Conferences composing the Convention, and the Mission Board, together with unofficial ministers and laymen, held in Suffolk, Va., on December 30, 1919. That meeting was called to consider ways and means of executing the will of the Convention, expressed at the Franklin session in 1918, in its endorsement of what has been called "The Forward Movement of the Christian Church." The conclusion of that joint Conference memorialized the Executive Board of the Southern Christian Convention, with two added members, J. E. West and K. B. Johnson, to act as a Steering Committee, and to provide for a two million dollar campaign, within the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention, to begin March 27, 1920 and end April 4, 1920.

The Steering Committee held a meeting in Suffolk on January 7, 1920, and, after careful survey of the whole subject, elected the following persons to plan for and direct the Campaign:

1. General Director—J. O. Atkinson.
2. Director of Organization and Publicity—W. A. Harper.
3. Executive Secretary—Chas. D. Johnston.
4. Secretary of Speakers' Bureau—C. B. Riddle.
5. Treasurer—C. D. West.

It was decided to distribute the funds of this Campaign by the following percentages:

1. Education	30%
2. Missions	50%
3. Publications	5%
4. Orphanage	5%
5. Superannuated Fund	5%
6. Convention Fund	2%
7. S. S. and C. Endeavor.....	3%
	100%

It was, also, the sense of the Board that the term Education, include schools, college, and ministerial education; and the Board memorializes the Southern Christian Convention to use a part of the fund for Education to help in providing for a school within the the bounds of the Conferences in Georgia and Alabama and for ministerial education.

The officially appointed directors and managers will plan, provide literature, appoint Conference directors and helpers to put the Campaign over with success.

The Campaign for $2,000,000.00 is a tremendous task for our Convention, but when the matter is fully outlined by the officials and the membership understands the meaning and opportunity of the campaign, it will no doubt, be a joy to go over the top. Every member of the church will have an opportunity to subscribe on a five year basis, and it is to be hoped that not even a child-member will fail to subscribe. All the big tasks the Church has undertaken have been the easiest to accomplish. This task will require a "long pull, a strong pull, and all pulling together," and before it all, through it all, and behind it all, must be the spirit of faith and prayer.

W. W. STALEY.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

Many CHRISTIAN SUN readers will be happy to know that our forces in Richmond have secured a suitable building in which to hold services, and have also organized and begun a Sunday school there. The writer was pleased to find recently in the Richmond Journal the following:

"Announcement is made that the William Fox school building has been engaged by the committee of arrangements for the new Christian church to be organized in this city, and the Sunday school will be organized at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning. All persons interested are invited to attend."

I was also very much pleased to receive a neatly printed leaflet with the following announcement:

"Christian Sunday School
Richmond, Va., January 2, 1920.

Members and Friends of the Christian Church:

"The Committee, appointed to find a suitable place of meeting, reported to the meeting held at the Jefferson Hotel Monday evening of this week that the William Fox High school Auditorium, 2300 Hanover Avenue, had been secured on very favorable terms.

"The first regular meeting will be held Sunday, January 4, 1920, at 9:30 A. M., at which time a Sunday school will be organized. Literature has been ordered and is on hand. Bring with you the Billy Sunday Song Book. This work is under the direction of the Home Mission Department of the Southern Christian Convention.

"How to get there—Take street cars, Broad and 25th, and Broad and Main, get off at Roberson and Hanover and walk two squares east. Or, take Main St., Car, transfer to North Roberson, and get off as before.

"Come and bring your friends.

"P. J. KERNDOLE, Chairman,
"MILDRED ATKINSON, Secretary."

Rev. W. T. Walters writes, under date of January 3, and states that he had been in Richmond for two days, and adds:

"The Brethren in Richmond are in earnest and the outlook is very encouraging. The school building where we shall hold our service is in one of the best sections of the city. I visited quite a number of families. They have things in fine shape for the organization of their Sunday school tomorrow morning. I have seventy-eight names on my prospective member list."

It will, of course, take time and persistent effort to build a great work in a great city, but many feel that to delay longer would only mean a continuation of the losses which we have sustained through the years. The pity, of course, is that we did not begin twenty-five years ago, but as we have at last begun, if God wills, we will keep our hearts in the work and our hands to the wheel till the right thing is done in the name of our great Church in this growing city.

J. O. ATKINSON.

AUBURN

I want a short space in THE SUN to tell how the people at Auburn thought of their pastor Christmas. I received a nice box of good things such as bacon, cheese, butter, coffee, chickens, fruit, sugar and many other things; also a nice sum of money. May the good Lord bless these good people and may He make me a better pastor this year than I have ever been.

J. S. CARDEN.

PLEASANT RIDGE

At my last appointment at this place Brother W. M. Crutchfield and son, Jerry, gave the pastor some nice meats for Christmas; also five dollars which was greatly appreciated. May God bless this good people and their families.

J. S. CARDEN.

HAVE WE LEARNED?

I have seen no question more pertinent and vital to SUN readers than the following (from Missionary Review for January):

"What nations have learned the lesson that God would have them learn from the war? In America money is given more freely (for benevolences), but there is still the same extravagance, unrest and selfishness. France has suffered and at first turned her thoughts Godward; but now is again becoming thoughtless in religious matters. Russia has overthrown the Czar's autocracy, but knows nothing of law and freedom; Italy and the Balkan States are turbulent and self-seeking; Turkey is dismembered, but unrepentant and is uninstructed in righteousness; Germany and Austria are defeated but are hoping some day to retaliate England, with problems almost too great for her to grapple with, is torn by factions and disputes."

Only the Word and the Gospel of our Lord are sufficient for these things.

J. O. ATKINSON.

Mamie Alphin—I pray that all members of the Christian Church may send you $2.00 each for our Church paper this year.

Jas. B. Morris—I am always glad to renew for THE SUN for I feel that I am getting my money's worth. May the year 1920 be a prosperous one for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Wayne Rowland—Let THE SUN keep shining in my home.

Mrs. George W. Stovall—I want THE SUN to keep coming.

Belle Burke—I enjoy reading THE SUN.

"RECONSTRUCTING THE CHURCH"

Fleming H. Revell Company, New York City, is soon to bring out another book for President W. A. Harper entitled "Reconstructing the Church." Marion Lawrance has written the introduction and we have had the privilege of seeing that, together with the publishers' note. We reproduce the two below:

From Lawrance's Introduction

Dr. Harper's new books, "The New Layman for the New Time" and "The New Church for the New Time" recently issued, and now this present volume, "Reconstructing the Church" constitute a three-book library which deals in a new and vigorous fashion with the mightiest problems the church of today has to face.

The first two books have attracted wide attention and the present volume will do the same.

Whatever views one may hold in regard to Church union, he will nevertheless find much food for thought and many a compelling challenge in this book. It is impossible to get away from the comparison set forth relating to the winning of the great world war. It was when the forces united that the banner of victory came in sight, and yet each of the armies was marshalled under its own distinctive banner. The necessity of trained leadership; the recognition of religious education as a reconstructive force; the place of religious education in character building which is fundamental both to the State and the Church; the tragedy of the prodigal son so often repeated in modern life; the tremendous contribution made by the women of the church and the still greater contribution yet to be made, together with the vision of what this reconstructed church may be under right influences, constitute a train of thought and study which will hold the reader from the first page to the last.

The book is readable, necessary and timely. The Church needs to get a new grip on herself if she is going to measure up to the ideals entertained for her by her best friends. This book points the way. As I have read the manuscript, my heart has been thrilled as it has seldom been thrilled before, and I can readily believe that the reading of this book, especially coupled with the other two books named above, and all three really taken to heart, would usher in a new day in church reconstruction, and this would usher in that better day of a virile church and its inevitable result, a better world.

MARION LAWRENCE.

Chicago, Illinois.

The Publisher's Notice

"The author in this book, as in his former writings, speaks critically of the church, but his criticism is constructive. Thoughtful men everywhere are agreed that Christ is the remedy these uncertain, searching times require. In this book a vigorous and discerning layman sets forth his views cogently as to how the church may adequately exemplify the Christ spirit in curing the heart-sickness of a deranged social order. It is a courageous, manly, devout arraignment of the church with illuminating discussion of the way out that the reader will find in these stirring pages."

The book sells for $1.25 and orders may be sent to this office.

WHY DOES A BARBER'S POLE HAVE STRIPES?

In early years the barber not only cut hair and shaved people, but he was also a surgeon. He was a surgeon to the extent that he bled people. In early times our knowledge of surgery was practically limited to blood-letting. A great many of the ailments were attributed to too much blood in the body; and when anything got wrong with a man or woman, the first thing they thought of was to reduce the amount of blood in the body by taking some of it out.

The town barber was the man who did this for people, and his pole represented the sign of his business.

The round ball at the top, which was generally gilded, represents the barbering end of the business. It stood for the brass basin which the barber used to prepare lather for shaving customers.

The pole itself represents the staff which people who were having blood taken out of their bodies held during the operation. The two ribbons, one red and one white, which are painted spirally on the pole, represented the bandages. The white one stood for the bandage which was put on before the blood was taken out and the red one the bandage which was used for binding up the wound when the operation was completed.—From "The Book of Wonders." NOTES

Brother W. E. MacClenny, Suffolk, Va., would like to know where the Eastern Virginia Conference of 1858 was held, who the president was, the secretary, and who delivered the annual address. If any SUN reader is in possession of these facts, it will be appreciated if sent to Brother MacClenny.

Readers will note that Brother A. Victor Lightbourne has been elected Conference Evangelist and has given up the Dover pastorate. See announcement on page four of this issue.

We have a new contributor this week—Miss Minnie Lohr, Mt. Vernon, Ohio. Miss Lohr will become an occasional contributor to THE SUN.

TWO DEATHS

As we go to press we hear of the sad intelligence of the passing of Brother J. H. Moring, Morrisville, N. C., and Brother F. O. Moring, Raleigh, N. C. Brother J. H. died in Norfolk, Va., last Friday, and almost suddenly. He was attending Billy Sunday's meeting. Brother F. O. died at his home in Raleigh Sunday night. J. H. and F. O. were cousins. We have no further facts at this time.

Principles and Government of The Christian Church

(The Franklin, Virginia, session of the Southern Christian Convention ordered that the Principles and Government of the Christian Church be revised and that a committee be appointed to make the revision. The following members of the Convention were appointed to do the work: Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., President; Rev. W. S. Long, D. D., Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Rev. N. G. Newman, D. D., and W. A. Harper, LL. D. Some weeks ago the committee completed its work, and we are privileged to print, in serial form, the Principles and Government as outlined, subject to ratification by the next session of the Convention.—Editor.)

ORDINATION OF DEACONS

1. After due election and at the appointed time, the person to be ordained as deacon shall take his place in front of the altar and the Elder officiating shall say:

Brother has been duly chosen by a vote of this church to the office of deacon, and it now becomes our duty to set him apart thereto by prayer and the imposition of hands.

The following passages of Scripture shall be read:

And the saying pleased the whole multitude; and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch; whom they set before the apostles; and when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them. Acts 6:1-6.

Likewise must the Deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre, holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless. Even so must their wives be grave, not slanders, sober, faithful in all things. Let the Deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. For they that have used the office of a Deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus. These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly: but if I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth. I Tim. 3:8-15.

After the reading of the Scripture the minister shall address the candidate, saying:

My brother: You have been called to a very honorable and responsible office in the Church of God; and it now devolves on me to propound to you, in the presence of this congregation, the following questions:

(1) Do you believe the Holy Scriptures to be the word of inspiration, and a sufficient rule of faith and practice?

(2) Do you promise to adhere faithfully to the Principles and Government of the Christian Church?

(3) Do you promise to discharge the duties of a Deacon to this congregation to the best of your ability?

PRAYER.

After which the officiating minister, the candidate kneeling, shall lay his hands upon the head of the chosen person and utter words to the following purpose:

My Brother, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by authority vested in the church, I ordain you to the office of deacon in this congregation, and may the Holy Spirit enable you to discharge the duties of your position. Amen.

CHAPTER VI

LICENSURE OF CANDIDATES

The President, or minister appointed by him, the candidate being before him, shall proceed in the following manner:

HYMN.

Scripture.

Lay hands suddenly on no man, neither be partaker of other men's sins; keep thyself pure. I Tim. 5:22.

Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me, in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus. 11 Tim. 1:13.

And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witness the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also. II Tim. 2:2.

Addressing the candidate, the President shall say:

My Brother: By order of Christian Conference, it devolves upon me to license you as a probationer to preach the Gospel, but not to administer the ordinance. That you may witness the same before these present, I propound to you the following questions:

(1) Do you believe the Holy Scriptures to be the Word of inspiration, and a sufficient rule of faith and practice?

(2) Will you faithfully adhere to the Principles and Government of the Christian Church?

(3) Will you labor zealously, through the grace given you, to promote the peace and unity of the church?

(4) Do you promise to submit to the decisions of the Conference to which you may belong, and to subject yourself to the brethren in the Lord?

PRAYER.

After prayer the President shall address the candidate in the following manner:

My Brother: In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by authority vested in the church, we license you to preach the Gospel of the Son of God wherever Providence may call you; and may the grace of God sustain you, and the Holy Spirit enlighten your mind. Amen.

2. This proceeding shall be duly recorded, and a certificate given to the Licentiate, signed by the President and Secretary of the Conference, to the following effect:

CERTIFICATE OF LICENSURE

This will certify that, a member of the Christian Church at, in..... County, State of, has been carefully examined upon the various branches of learning, as required by the Government of the Christian Church, and has given satisfaction, and is licensed as a probationer to preach the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, wherever the providence of God may call him.

Done by order of the Christian Conference, this day of, 19....
President.
, Secretary.

CHAPTER VII
 ORDINATION OF ELDERS

1. Ordination should take place during the sitting of the Conference, or at such time and place as Conference may designate. A sermon or address on the office of the ministry should be delivered. Two Elders shall then conduct the candidate to the altar during the singing of a suitable hymn.

HYMN.

And the one to whom the part is assigned shall address the Chairman of the Presbytery and say:

Reverend Brother in Christ, we present to you, after due examination by the proper committee, under authority of the Christian Conference, this Brother approved by said Conference to be ordained to the office of the Christian Ministry.

The Chairman of the Presbytery shall read from these Scriptures:

Now thanks be unto God, which always causeth us to triumph in Christ, and maketh manifest the savour of his knowledge by us in every place. For we are unto God a sweet savour of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish. To the one we are the savour of death unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life: and who is sufficient for these things? For we are not as many, which corrupt the word of God: but as of sincerity, but as of God, in the sight of God speak we in Christ. II Cor. 2:14-17.

And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation; to-wit, That God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them; and hath committed unto us the word of reconciliation. Now then, we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us: we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. II Cor. 5:18-20.

Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw him, they worshipped him; but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, all power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you always, and even unto the end of the world. Amen. Matt. 28:16-20.

But unto every one of us is given grace according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. (Now that he ascended, what is it that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things.) And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ. Eph. 4:7-13.

This is a true saying, If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work. A bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behavior, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre; but patient; not a brawler, not covetous; one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; (for if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the Church of God?) not a novice, lest, being lifted with pride, he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Moreover, he must have a good report of them which are without, lest he fall into reproach and the snare of the devil. I Tim. 3:1-7.

Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery. Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy profiting may appear to all. Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee. I Tim. 4:14-16.

Thou therefore, my son, be strong in the grace that is in Christ Jesus, endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ. Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. II Tim. 2:1-3, 15.

I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long suffering and doctrine. II Tim. 4:1, 2. And shall say:

My Brother: From all these Scriptures you learn to how high a dignity, and to how weighty an office and charge you are called. Forasmuch then as your office and work is of great difficulty, and you are not able of yourself faithfully to fulfill it, so as to be well pleasing to God and to the edification of the church; we exhort you to put your trust in the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is able to succor you. They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength. And he who has promised to be with us always even unto the end of the world, will uphold, and prosper you, in that whereunto He has sent you.

That all here present may be assured of your purpose, to this end we are required to propound to you the following questions:

(1) Do you believe the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to be the Word of God given by inspiration for our guidance, a sufficient rule of faith and practice?

(2) Do you promise to adhere strictly and faithfully to the Principles and Government of the Christian Church?

(3) Do you promise, to the best of your ability, through grace, to discharge the duties of an Elder as set forth in the Holy Scriptures and the Government of this Church?

(4) Have you been actuated, as far as you know your own heart, in seeking this holy office, by love to God and a sincere desire to spread the Gospel of his Son among men?

(5) Do you promise to obey the decisions of the Conference and to submit yourself to the brethren in the Lord?

PRAYER.

My Brother: In the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by authority vested in the church, we do ordain you to the office of an elder and do clothe you with power to take part of this ministry with us. And may the communion of the Holy Spirit be with you, and the peace of God which passeth all understanding keep your heart and mind, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

The newly ordained Elder arises. A charge shall then be given in the name of God to the newly ordained Elder by one of the officiating Elders.

THE CHARGE.

At the conclusion of which the Holy Bible shall be presented.

PRESENTATION OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

All the Elders present shall then give the right hand of fellowship.

RIGHT HAND OF FELLOWSHIP.

2. The following is a form of the certificate which ought to be given to the newly ordained Elder at the time of the presentation of the Holy Bible:

CERTIFICATE OF ORDINATION

We, the undersigned Presbytery of Ordination, appointed by the Conference, do hereby certify that Brother, having proved his gifts as a licentiate, having been recommended by the churches to which he has ministered, and having passed a satisfactory examination, as required by the Government of the Christian Church, has been this day set apart and ordained to the office of an Elder, by prayer and the imposition of hands, and is hereby authorized to administer the ordinances of the Church and solemnize the rites of matrimony.

Signed by order of the Christian Conference, held at, in the county of, and State of, on this the day of, 19

WHAT OTHER DENOMINATIONS ARE PLANNING

(Dr. Earle Taylor)

Let me read to you some denominational forward movements under way:

The American Missionary Association (Congregational) is launching a great forward movement.

The Baptist Church, North, under its General Board of Promotion, is launching a Victory movement for $100,000,000.

The Baptist Church, South, under its Seventy-Five-Million Dollar campaign committee, is launching a campaign for $75,000,000.

The Christian Church, under its Forward Movement, is launching a campaign for $2,000,000.

The Church of the Brethren, under a committee of interchurch co-operation, is launching a movement with the figures not named.

The Churches of God, under their Centennial Forward Movement, are launching a movement, the figures not named.

The Congregational Church has its Pilgrim Memorial Fund of $5,000,000, and the Pilgrim Tercentenary of $2,000,000.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church has an Endowment Commission with about $1,800,000.

The Disciples of Christ have their Men and Millions Movement for $9,000,000.

The Evangelical Association, through its Forward Movement, is launching a campaign, the amount not yet named.

The United Evangelical Church has a Forward Campaign of $1,000,000.

The Friends Church has a Forward Movement Society with an amount not named, but an adequate sum for all its home and foreign work.

The United Lutheran Church has a Double-the-Appportionment movement for $2,699,000.

The Centenary campaigns of our own church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, we know.

The Methodist Protestants have a Forward Movement, the amount not yet named.

The Moravian Church has a Larger Life Campaign with an amount not yet named.

The Presbyterians have the New Era movement with an amount already named of $13,000,000 with larger figures in sight, and an educational campaign for $25,000,000 in addition.

The Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church has a Forward Movement for $250,000.—Exchange.

T. J. Simpson—This is the twenty-third time I have renewed my subscription and I expect to continue as long as I live.

Dennis F. Parsons—I look forward to the day for me to receive THE SUN as I do the letters I receive from home.

Revs. G. R. Underwood and R. F. Brown each write that their work is moving along nicely and that they are well situated.

MISSIONARY

MINUTES OF THE WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE

The Women's Mission Board of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference met in the Sunday school room of the Christian church, Suffolk, Va., on Saturday, December 13, 1919, with the following members present: Mrs. C. H. Rowland, President, Franklin, Va.; Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. W. D. Harward, Secretary, Dendron, Va., and three visitors: Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va.; Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Secretary of Missions, Elon College, N. C., and Rev. W. B. Fuller, Sunbury, N. C.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. C. H. Rowland.

The Board took up the matter of appointing the specials for the new societies and a complete list of these societies and amounts will be printed later in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

The President reported seven new societies since Conference, October 23, 1919, as follows: Antioch Bethlehem, Dover, Union (Southampton), South Norfolk, Ivor, Oakland, also a Willing Worker's Society at South Norfolk.

Moved and carried, That the same committee, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Darden, Mrs. W. H. Andrews, and Mrs. I. W. Johnson, who went to Antioch and organized a missionary society be asked to visit the churches adjacent to Suffolk and organize societies.

The following was planned for each member of the Board for this present year: Mrs. Rowland to organize ten missionary societies; Mrs. L. E. Smith to secure twenty life memberships in the Southern Christian Convention; Woman's Board from this Conference and to visit the societies of Norfolk; Mrs. J. E. Cartwright to secure fifty new subscribers to the Christian Missionary; Mrs. W. V. Leathers to organize ten new Young People's Missionary Societies; Miss Mary Andrews to organize six cradle rolls; Mrs. M. L. Bryant was asked to confer with each society concerning the specials for this year; Mrs. Harward to look after the Home and Foreign specials in her section.

Moved and carried, that the Secretary instruct Miss Mary Powell to refund money, sent on Miss Hamaguchi's salary since her death, and the same be returned to Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Treasurer.

The apportioning of the $1,000 to be raised by the Young People's Societies for the mountain work and for the Santa Isabel pastor was assigned to Mrs. W. V. Leathers.

To societies wishing a missionary play the Board recommends, "Hanging a Sign," a dramatic presentation of medical missions to be given by eight girls. This has been published in pamphlet form, ten cents per copy, or sixty cents per dozen. Address Missionary Review of the World, New York. This is especially interesting to follow the study of the book, "A Crusade of Compassion for the Healing of the Nations."

The Board recommends that new societies use package, called "Helps for the Year," which may be had for $1.50 including a year's subscription to the Christian Missionary. Order of Mrs. Emma S. Powers, 249 Conover St., Dayton, Ohio.

The following were appointed delegates to the Southern Christian Convention: Mrs. J. M. Darden, Mrs. W. R. Mitchell, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Mrs. J. L. Foster, Mrs. J. E. Harris, Mrs. J. G. Holland, Mrs. B. D. Jones, Mrs. E. T. Holland, Mrs. E. T. Cotten, Mrs. J. M. Raby, Mrs. R. B. Odom, Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson, Miss Amy Morris, Mrs. J. J. Harrell, Mrs. J. H. Sewell, Mrs. O. M. Cockes, Mrs. Turpin Whitley, Mrs. B. H. Lane, Miss Berta Savedge, Mrs. M. J. W. White, Mrs. F. T. Atkinson, Mrs. A. H. Saunders, Mrs. W. R. Cole, Mrs. J. C. Ellis, Mrs. B. F. Gibson, Mrs. J. W. Manning, Mrs. E. E. Benson, Mrs. J. D. Gray, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Mrs. L. E. Smith, Miss Mary Andrews, Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, Mrs. W. D. Harward.

Owing to train schedules and other conditions, Resolved, That, if agreeable to the Holland Society, the Woman's Conference meet in next annual session on Saturday and Sunday before the annual meeting of the Easter Virginia Christian Conference, and that a program committee be appointed to make a program, covering the two days session. Committee, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Mrs. Job Holland and Mrs. W. V. Leathers.

The meeting closed to meet at the call of the President. Prayer by Dr. Atkinson.

MRS. C. H. ROWLAND, President,
MRS. W. D. HARWARD, Secretary.

WOMAN'S LITERATURE APPRECIATED

The Woman's Board at Virginia Beach the past summer voted to print twelve pamphlets. So far five of these have appeared, one for each month. We send seven of these to some officer of every society and in churches not having a society to some woman we have reason to believe will be interested. We request these pamphlets read in society, Sunday school, or church. There are questions for study in societies not caring to use the regular mission study books.

We receive regularly many such letters as this from Mrs. J. A. Kimball, of the Mt. Auburn society:

"We all enjoyed the pamphlet "Jesus and Women" so much; we wish at least half a dozen more copies to distribute among the members of our Missionary Society. We enjoy all the pamphlets written for our monthly meetings and are trying very hard to have them read in every home represented in our church.

Yours very truly,
MRS. J. A. KIMBALL."

Whenever a society desires more copies write either to Mrs. M. F. Cook, Greensboro, N. C., or to the undersigned at Elon College, N. C.

MRS. W. A. HARPER.

NEW SOCIETIES

Miss Bessie Holt has organized new societies as follows:

Oak Level: Mrs. W. H. Hudson, president, with sixteen members.

High Point: Mrs. L. R. Gibson, president, ten members.

She expects to organize twenty this Conference year.

MRS. W. A. HARPER.

A CHRISTMAS GIFT FOR MISSIONS

A good friend noticed in THE CHRISTIAN SUN a reference the writer made by the suggestion of another, about the appropriateness of making Christmas gifts for missions, and with a most cheering word of approval handed the writer a dollar. This good friend declares an awakening on the subject of missions during the year just passed, and hopes that 1920 will see an awakening in the Christian Church on the subject of missions, such as we have not heretofore had or dreamed of. This friend feels that a proper understanding of missionary need and a vision of blessings and benefits coming to those who enter into missionary effort and sacrifice, will bring to the Church generally growth, power and development, such as has not been witnessed and by another year hundreds, if not thousands, would willingly make a Christmas gift for missions. The idea is certainly one joyous to contemplate for all of us understand that all the joys of Christmas come from the birth and influence of the Christ. Non-Christian lands and peoples therefore have no such joy, and it behooves those of us who have the joy to share the same with those who have it not. It is an interesting and engaging theme to think upon and the writer is placing the dollar as requested to an account of a Christmas Fund, since we have no alternative in the matter other than to do as requested by the donor and he is wondering if by the time another Christmas rolls around there will be others who will catch the vision that this friend has caught and express the gratitude for the same as this friend has. Our Christian country is in the enjoyment of such prosperity as it never witnessed before and the only safety valve of this prosperity is that an increasing amount of it shall flow into the channels of benevolence.

J. O. ATKINSON.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

This will be my last appeal for the Thanksgiving offering for the year 1919. Out of the 223 churches 123 have answered the call for the Thanksgiving offering. While our Thanksgiving offering has been larger than any year in the history of the Christian Orphanage, it could have been so much more if the one hundred delinquent churches and Sunday schools had joined in and lent us a helping hand.

I hope and pray that the day will soon come when each church in the Southern Christian Convention will feel enough interest in the helpless orphan children in our land to make a Thank-offering and Easter offering and a monthly offering toward the support of the Institution.

Would you like to see your Superintendent the happiest man in Elon College? If you will look at our financial report this week you will see that we just lack $396.00 being at the $25,000.00 mark for the year 1919.

If we can reach that total we will wear a smile as broad as Dr. Harper, though we would have to get it on our face lengthwise, but we will get it there just the same. We are so near the goal and it would be heart-breaking disappointment to fail to reach it. We have till January 21 to close our books for the year 1919 and we have enough confidence in the membership of the Christian Church to believe they will not see us fail in reaching this mark for the year 1919.

If your church has not sent in its Thanksgiving offering or its Christmas offering or monthly offerings for the past year, let us have them by January 20, without fail, so we may reach this goal.

How many men and women have we who would like to make a contribution (special) just to help reach this goal? Let us have your checks for this by January 20. I know you are just as anxious to see me reach it as I am to reach it and I know you are willing to make some sacrifice in order that we may reach it. Let us make just one more strong pull just at the finish and round out the $25,000.00. Will you help us?

FORM AND POWER

A fine, symmetrical, beautiful form is admirable and a good form and becoming style ought to be commendable and desirable. Every form ought to appear neat and attractive as possible, because neatness and attractiveness are needed by every one who aspires after better and greater things. There ought to be some striking characteristic about each individual to make him look and feel well as he can all the time. You already know there are signs—often many of them—we all hang out, and the world reads these old outward signs as we pass along and understands what kind of a soul we have. The looks, the gestures, the poise, actions, attitude, walking or sitting, the speech and many others, are some of the signs we all hang out. They hang to us—close up, and we are not sensible of their presence. "Who and what are you?" are reflected back to our inspectors. Some considerate ones have already thought these things and are finding out more about themselves. The grace, ease and dignity with which you move about the different ways of your work will give a good impression, and greatly help you in its accomplishment. But if a form or figure is beautiful or attractive it will be useless to itself and the world if it has not health and power to do things. Having a form but to be denied the power thereof is a sad disappointment and a great misfortune.

This introduction leads to notice the words: Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. Expect that some are formal, nominal professors of religion, presenting a pleasing and very fine appearance to each other but denying themselves the real spiritual joy—the help and blessedness of the spirit filling power. To better illustrate this subject, yonder is a new fire engine just from the shop. It has a good form, designed with precise calculation. Great care and much mechanical skill were employed in its design and build, and is intended for locomotive power. Its workmanship passes inspection and has the ways and means through which the power can work—but it stands still, and cannot move itself until it has the power. When coal, wood or oil, fire and water are properly used, steam is generated, the power is applied, and then it moves like a thing of life and beauty. So the professor who has a form of godliness can have the divine power applied and run successfully in the Christian race. When he gets a touch of the power they received when Peter preached his great sermon, he will be so full of the power of God as to run this heavenly race looking continuously unto Jesus.

Some will simply look at the head line of this article, then glance at the last line, a few will scan it over, part will read it, and many, so many will not read it at all.

SO WALK YE IN HIM

"As ye have received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him." Our walk shows the measure in which we have received Christ Jesus as Lord. We may deceive people by our talk, but they will not be deceived by our walk for that tells for or against us always. We cannot walk in Him unless we have Him. We cannot have Him unless we receive Him as Master of our lives.

We must be filled with His truth, we must be indwelt by the Spirit. The believer's walk is to be a Spirit-filled walk. "Be ye filled with the Spirit," is not a suggestion, it is a command. The believer is not to walk after the flesh, but after the Spirit. The believer is not to walk in darkness but in the light, as He is in the light. All things are made manifest by the light. If we have received the Light of the world, we are conscious of the sins in our lives, and becoming conscious of them we confess them and forsake them.

If we have received Christ Jesus as Lord, we will let Him be Master of our lives. If we have received Him as Lord, we will let Him be Master of our service. If we have received Him as Lord, we will "walk in love, as Christ also hath loved us." Our walk will be an upright walk, knowing that no good thing will be withheld from them that walk uprightly.

If we have received Christ Jesus as Lord, though we walk in the midst of trouble, His right hand will save us. "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me."

If Christ be Master of our lives, we will "walk by faith and not by sight. We will walk worthy of the Lord, being fruitful in every good work, increasing in the knowledge of God." We are to walk "even as He walked." We know our Lord's walk was so faultless that the man who passed the death sentence upon Him, could find no fault in Him.

If we have received Christ Jesus as Lord, our "conversation will be as becometh the gospel of Christ." Our conversation will be just what it would be in His presence. There will be "neither filthiness, nor foolish talking nor jesting." But every thought will be brought into captivity "until Christ be formed in you." Such a walk brings us closer and ever closer to Jesus' side. It leads us to drink deeper and ever deeper of His truths. It will become our whole aim to bring the life into complete subjection to the Father's will. "In thee do I trust: cause me to know the way wherein I should walk. Teach me thy way, O Lord; I will walk in thy truth: unite my heart to fear thy name."

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR JANUARY 25, 1920 JANUARY 18, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

(By Barelay Meador)

Subject: Peter Stands up for Truth and Honesty. Acts 5:1-11.

At: Jerusalem, A. D. 30.

Golden Text: Lying lips are an abomination to Jehovah; but they that deal truly are his delight.

Devotional Readings Psalm 15; also Ex. 20:16, Prov. 11:1, Matt. 6:2-4, Rev. 22:15.

The story of the fate of Ananias and his wife, Sapphira, holds two lessons for Sunday school workers of North Carolina—the lesson of giving and the lesson of truth. When the infant church at Jerusalem needed money Joseph Barnabas—rich in lands and copper mines—sold his possessions and laid the money at the apostle's feet, a bequest proportionate to Mr. Rockefeller's Christmas gift of $10,000,000.

In striking contrast with this gift Ananias, coveting the high esteem for Barnabas' generosity, sold his property but secretly held back a part to himself. He wanted honor without paying the price. How many Christians in our Sunday schools today are trying to buy religion over the bargain counter and pay only half-price? But there can be no discount from the right; nor can there be found passports to salvation at an auction sale. Heaven is a one-priced shop and only those who pay this in advance may expect the desired reward. Begin now to rid your Sunday school of half-way methods, spiritual short-cuts. They discount and cheapens the very thing for which Christ made His sacrifice. Insist on living the truth, which is often harder than merely telling it. So often by our very acts we lie to ourselves by a false assumption of motive or piety. This is hypocrisy and suggests Matthew 23:15: "Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites." Then beware the wolf in sheep's clothing.

My Favorite Psalm and Why

Lesson—A Study of Psalm 139.

This psalm is an example of the poet's highest art in blending the lyric and the didactic. Its form is that of an address to God and its phrases express the deepest emotions of the human heart, while at the same time they disclose an orderly development of profound truth concerning God. It is at once a song, a prayer and a setting forth of the attributes of the Eternal God who is our dwelling place. It reveals an acquaintance with God that had come from "The practice of the presence of God." Being in the first person it gives the reader a sense of the nearness of God.

The Badge of Eternal Life

If God is omniscient, omnipresent and omnipotent and his attributes bring him into close relation with men what response may men make to his overtures? Is there in men a complement to those attributes of the heavenly Father? God knows us altogether, he is "acquainted with all our ways." We may know God through him whom he hath sent. Indeed this is the goal of Christian experience. Paul had it before the eye of his aspiration, and his endeavor. He said: "That I may know him and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his suffering * * * * * (Phil. 3:10). Again he said he had not attained, but had he not? His own words confirm it, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him against that day." (II Tim. 1:12). This answer is a badge of their eternal life. (John 17:3).

Fallacy of World Philosophy

The world's creed is set over against David's teaching. The fallacy was introduced in Eden. God had said that our first parents should die if they ate of the forbidden fruit. The serpent said that God was mistaken. So the word that God does not know has passed down the line of the generations of men. And men have taken the risk and suffered the consequences. It was so with David himself in an unguarded moment. But the words of the faithful prophet Nathan, "Thou art the man," burned the fallacy out of his heart. It was so with Prof. Webster of Harvard University who, when he had unwittingly slain the young man who came to him to collect a bill, burned the body, piece by piece, and thought that neither God nor man knew.

Fruition for the Faithful

If the fallacy has led men to their ruin acceptance of the truth has led them to their exaltation. "Great is the mystery of godliness," exclaimed Paul in a moment of exaltation, (I Tim. 3:16) whereupon he proceeded to give a comprehensive declaration of the doctrine of God as manifest in Christ. The truth was known in Abraham's day only in a remote way and yet it led that Patriarch to a response to God's overture, "Fear not Abraham I am thy shield and thy exceeding great reward," (Gen. 15:1) that made it possible for the historian to characterize him as the friend of God. The leaders of the world, hold as the chief end of their existence that communion with him to which his fatherly interest in them invites. And this is equally true of the most obscure disciple in the jungles of Africa or the rock bound coast of Labrador.

HALL-WHITE

The home of Mrs. J. E. White, Suffolk, Va., was the scene of a pretty home wedding Wednesday, Dec. 31, 1919, when her daughter, Miss Margaret Edith White, became the bride of Marion Frank Hall. Just before the ceremony Miss Cloe Edwards sang "Believe Me if All Those Endearing Young Charms." accompanied by Mrs. M. T. Whitley at the piano. The bridal party entered to the strains of the Lohengrin bridal chorals. The only attendants were Mr. George Hall, best man, and Miss Nertie Mae Barnes, maid of honor. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Roberts. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party motored to the home of the groom, where a wedding supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Hall will make their home in Isle of Wight.

J. M. ROBERTS.

MICHAEL-WAYNICK

The home of Mrs. G. T. Waynick was the scene of a pretty marriage December 24, 1919, at 4:30 P. M., when her daughter, Nannie, became the bride of Joseph Elder Michael. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. W. Patton of Greensboro, N. C., in the presence of the family and a few intimate friends. Immediately after the ceremony, they were ushered into the dining room, where a sumptuous supper was served.

On Thursday, December 25, Mr. and Mrs. Michael were honor guests at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Margaret A. Michael, where thirty or more relatives and friends gathered to partake of the Christmas dinner.

Mrs. Michael is a daughter of the late George T. Waynick of the MeLeansville section. Mr. Michael is a promising young farmer of Guilford County, and, like bride, has many friends.

They will make their home with the groom's mother, near Gibsenville, N. C.

Our Threshold Message to the Brotherhood

An Address to the Churches

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:

We summon you to the noblest undertaking of our thirteen decades of history, a history honorable, thrilling, inspirational to every member of our beloved Church. The Christian Church is not afraid to pioneer the way in Kingdom truth and service. Our Brotherhood has been prophetic from its birth. The great-spirited men who rallied to James O'Kelly in 1792 were seers and prophets of the highest order. The day of religious freedom, of Christian democracy, of a united household of the saints had fully dawned for them in those far-away days. Their contemporaries could not understand them. They considered them dreamers and contemptuously styled them "New Lights." As with all prophets, these men were rejected in their own day, only to have their teachings espoused by the men of later generations. All men now love and speak the language of religious freedom. All men now are responsive to the urge of Christian democracy. Many men now stand for the union of Christ's followers, and the day is coming when all men will. The grand old Christian Church for more than a century has sponsored these mighty fundamentals of the Kingdom. The men and women of our Church in this hour are glad to be the inheritors of these priceless principles from a noble past and we pray for strength, for courage, for wisdom, for grace to propagate them in their fullness to this generation. Under the blessing of Heaven, we shall not be unfaithful prophets in a time like this.

Dare we to be unwilling to continue the prophetic tradition characterizing our Church into this day too? It will be disastrous for the Kingdom's interests committed to our hands, should we fail to respond as the valiant devotees of the Christ we are in a program of advance, statesman-like advance, prophetic advance in this supreme hour for Kingdom progress. We cannot wholly choose the vehicle of our prophetic message. But we can discern the times as James O'Kelly did, as Jesus did, and we can suit our message to the spirit of our age. Men in O'Kelly's day thought in terms of regulative principles for life and so this princely democrat of the Kingdom, this uncrowned citizen of the Republic of God, proclaimed his message in terms of freedom and fellowship for the Christian life. The progress of his ideas since stamps him one of the world's great men, one of the Kingdom's princes.

In this day, the spirit of the age longs for expression in life and in money. We summon you therefore not simply to give money, but to give life too. We summon you to face the issue of Christian duty and privilege in the spirit of the challenge Jesus issued to the rich young ruler. The Kingdom totters today before its stupendous tasks because of lack of leadership, a leadership of surrendered and dedicated manhood and womanhood, and is a beggar in a land rolling in wealth for lack of a scriptural conception of the stewardship of money. The Christian Church is now again being mightily called of God to proclaim the principles necessary to save this age for the Kingdom. We can do this if we will. We undoubtedly have come to the Kingdom for such a time as this. God help us to be worthy, worthy of our forefathers, the prophets of their day, and worthy of the God we serve and Whose we are, the God revealed to us in the life and sacrifice of our Christ!

We, therefore, summon the men and women of the Christian Church in this crisis day to give such a response in life and money to meet the requirements of this hour as shall from this time on induce every child of the King everywhere to face as the prime duties of life the service of the Kingdom as fundamental in its obligation and the trusteeship of money as the badge of true discipleship.

It is needless to say we cannot do this in the old way nor by the time-honored methods. It is impossible to be prophets of the new order unless our program shall first stagger us by its magnitude and then send us to our knees in humble supplication to God for the strength and resources that never fail in any hour of need, those who work His works. The resources of God are promised to those who undertake the program of God. Undertake great things for God, and we shall not only expect, but receive greater things from Him.

We have just passed through two great and marvelously successful campaigns for money, our missionary and educational appeals. But inspiring as these successes have been to our Brotherhood, they are but the beginning of our duty and our privilege. Only a few of our leaders in benevolence have been reached. The great mass of the Brotherhood has been untouched with the spirit of sacrifice. We do not believe God can hold us guiltless if we do not provide an opportunity for every member of every church to give for the Kingdom as God has prospered in this day. Conversely, it is our conviction that God cannot prosper any Christian permanently who declines to do his best in a cause like this, with his life and with his money.

We have, therefore, called this campaign "The Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention." We have set our goal at $2,000,000, which is not large in total, but is staggeringly large in comparison of membership with the financial campaigns of other churches. The largest sum undertaken by any Church in history so far is $25.00 per member. Ours is $80.00 per member. We have pioneered before and God has blessed us in our heroism and made us a blessing to our brother-men. He will do it again. We shall, God helping us, raise this $80.00 per member and so help the Kingdom tremendously by showing larger denominations what a small body who love the Lord can do out of their poverty and their smallness. Together, beloved, let's do it, let's do it for God.

But we shall not stop with raising this stupendous sum of money. That is to be the beginning of our devotion to the Kingdom, of our sacrifice for it. In addition to putting over this most audacious program of benevolences in Christian history, we are summoning you to work and pray that we may have one percent of our total membership giving itself to the ministry or to preparation for it. No Church has projected such a program for securing Kingdom leaders as this. Let us do it, beloved, let us do it for God.

We summon you then, brethren and sisters in Christ, to thorough co-operation with the leaders chosen to serve us in this Men and Millions Forward Movement. When these brethren call on you for any service, respond to them promptly as representatives of the Christian Church and of God in the duties whereunto we have called them and to which they have dedicated themselves, "ready to be offered up" for the cause, anxious that our prophetic message to the world in this day may be properly voiced and practically demonstrated not in a spirit of vain glory, but of generous emulation, of fraternal provocation to all the household of God. Dr. J. O. Atkinson is Chairman of the Campaign Committee and Field Secretary; Rev. C. B. Riddle, Secretary of the Campaign Committee and also Secretary of the Speakers' Bureau and of Advertising; President W. A. Harper, Secretary of Organization and Publicity; Superintendent Chas. D. Johnston Executive Secretary, and Mr. C. D. West, Treasurer. These brethren are our servants and we are their servants. In mutual service and co-operation, let us serve the Kingdom with an abandon and consecration that shall put us safely over the top. God help us to do it.

We do not hesitate to declare our conviction that this Movement is of God. No man would have dared propose a program so stupendous as this, and if a man had dared propose, no man or set of men would have dared undertake it. Yet the five men we have chosen to do this majestic thing, this prophetic deed, have accepted with joyous hearts, because they have been witnessed to in their souls as we have in ours that God has called this Christian Church to the Kingdom for just such a time and just such a program as this.

A new day has come to the governments of the world. A new era has come in hope to the Church of God in America. With her wealth practically untouched by war's exhausting drain, with crops that burden our facilities of housing and transportation, with the spirit of Brotherhood stirring in men's souls like a tidal wave following this great upheaval in the ocean of life, with her thousands of young men and young women restless for the spiritual adventure that shall match the call of patriotism in the imperative urgency of its appeal, with every door of the wide world open to the flaming evangel of the Christ, surely these concurrent situations are a prophetic moment in Christian progress. Surely the divine reveille has sounded. Surely the Christian Church will awake, gird herself, go forth to its greatest task that any American Church has ever undertaken. Surely, beloved, we shall volunteer to this new, this glorious call to the colors of the blood-stained Cross.

To do his best, as God wills, we summon one and all. Let no man shirk in an hour and in a cause like this. Let every one dedicate himself to the Kingdom in this hour, large with prophetic hopefulness to the faithful stewards of the Master.

THE CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE ACCEPTS

We have accepted, and gladly, the commission directed to us by the campaign directors of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. We have not accepted this commission in any strength of our own, nor have we accepted it with any misgivings as to the purpose and will of God in it. We do not believe that we would have been willing even to consider undertaking so arduous a task if the movement as we conceived it had come from the men who initiated it. We are thoroughly convinced that this movement is of God, and for this reason we have been willing to place ourselves upon the altar to be used in any way that the directors of this campaign may suggest and the Spirit of God lead.

All we ask of the Brotherhood is that we be daily remembered in intercessory prayer and that the same loyal spirit of co-operation be extended us in the plans we shall elect to mature, which has characterized our membership in every forward movement and general enterprise our Church has so far launched. We recognize that $80.00 a member for every man, woman, and child of the membership of our churches is the most mammoth financial undertaking ever inaugurated by any Protestant Church in the history of Christianity, and yet weak as we are we are willing to undertake it because we believe it is the will of God that we should and we are confident that our people will respond whole-heartedly to the demands of the movement and to our request for co-operation and service.

We are your servants, and yours will be the glory for any success that we shall be able to achieve. In full confidence we are, therefore, undertaking this commission and pledge to our constituency the very best we have and are capable of, and we are praying for ourselves the divine direction in all that we do.

Praise and Approval

I HEARTILY APPROVE

W. P. Lawrence, Lit. D.

The Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention meets my approval and has my prayers and support. Here is one reason why I approve it: I like it because it is a loud call to the entire Church membership to arise in its might to move forward as never before in all its history in offering men and money to the Master for the carrying forward of the program of His Kingdom. I like it too, because the undertaking is big enough to challenge the most chivalrous heart and appeal to purses both big and little.

M—and—M

THE MARK NOT TOO HIGH

Rev. J. W. Harrell, D. D.

The action of the Southern Christian Convention in putting on a Men and Millions Forward Movement at this time is certainly timely. $2,000,000 is a worthy goal. It is by no means too high. We have already passed every goal that the Convention has set for us and we can pass this goal.

The people of the Christian Church can do great things for Christ and His cause, as well as the people of other Churches. Our people have already shown themselves willing and ready. They have caught the spirit that is in the air and they have only begun to consecrate their means to God in larger sums. Better things are ahead.

Let every one become an intercessor for this Movement. God will answer His people when they call upon Him. Success is first won in the prayer room. Let us pray.

M—and—M

MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT CAMPAIGN

Rev. T. E. White

The campaign for $2,000,000.00 is the biggest thing the Southern Christian Convention has ever undertaken, and it will certainly test the loyalty, liberality, and love of our whole membership.

As to the ability of our people to give, it is unreasonable to suppose that they are less blessed with prosperity than are their neighbors. We need to give all an opportunity not only for the sake of raising the amount, but that they might get the greater blessing—the joyful reaction upon their own lives.

The ministers of our Church need a larger faith in the Church. Nothing, I believe, will so encourage them to give their all to the ministry than to see this campaign succeed, and nothing will so largely bless the Church as the privilege and joy of doing it.

M—and—M

“PUT IT ACROSS”

Rev. J. V. Knight

The action of the Executive Board of the Southern Christian Convention in its recent session held in Suffolk, Va., not only sets the Church to thinking, but sets other denominations to watching the progress of this particular movement. Eighty dollars per member within a period of five years means something, and is the greatest undertaking of any Church yet, but the task is none too large for it can and must be done.

Our leaders have had the faith, confidence and the vision to set the goal and lead the way, and as I see it there is only one thing to do, and that is: Put it across.

M—and—M

MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT

Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D.

The history of the progress of our Church for a century and a quarter shows that we need something to arouse us to a deeper interest and a greater activity. In asking for millions in money in this drive, we are on the right road—the road that is surest to reach the hearts of the people. Our Church will reap four distinct benefits from the campaign:

1. Increased funds for the enlargement of our work both at home and broad.
2. Increased interest along all lines by the membership of our churches.
3. A large increase in the number of young men and women offering themselves for the ministry, as foreign missionaries and as workers in the home church.
4. An aroused church will be a soul-winning church and as a result of this drive we are going to see a great increase in our church membership.

M—and—M

FOR THE GLORY OF GOD

Rev. H. W. Elder

I am glad I am living today. I am also glad that I am a member of the dear old Christian Church. We are undertaking great things for God, and we are expecting great things from God. Twenty-five thousand members are going to raise two million dollars in five years for benevolences. By God's help we will reach the goal. This is not the rich man's task, neither the poor man's. It is every man's task.

Our people have had faith in the Christian Church and now we will have a chance to prove our faith by our works. We hope the doubting Thomases will not show up in this campaign, but that optimism will reign in every pulpit and in every heart.

I voted for this campaign and I shall not be satisfied till we have put it over for the glory of God and the enlargement of the Church on earth.

M—and—M

I AM GLAD

W. E. Lindsay

I am very much gratified, and I think it should be a source of joy to every member of the Christian Church, to note that the Executive Committee of the Southern Christian Convention has, at last, launched such a great Forward Movement. "Men and Millions" with God's blessings upon them, can work wonders in advancing His Kingdom.

Our Church has suffered seriously in not taking such a step sooner. Every department of our Church is very much in need of expansion. While the funds that will be spent will accomplish untold good, yet the greatest good and blessing will come to the ones who do the giving. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." I most heartily endorse the every member canvass.

M—and—M

MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT

Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D.

I like the alliteration, Men, Millions, Movement. It sounds like "a-going in the tops of the mulberry trees."

The Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ needs men, money and there is earnest need for a forward movement. "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields; for they are white already unto the harvest." "The harvest truly is great, but the labors are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest."

The Church needs men and it needs money; and it needs to pray. The churches giving will not enrich God for all things are His; but it will enrich Christian experience, service and sacrifice. It is a good thing to make all you can, save all you can, and give all you can.

The Men and Millions Movement is inaugurated and set forth to give each and every individual an opportunity to contribute something to the cause of Church benevolences and to enable all, even those of us who cannot give largely, to have a hand and a part, financially, in the Forward Movement of the Christian Church.

M—and—M

HERE WE GO!

Rev. J. Pressley Barrett, D. D.

What a marvelous growth has taken place in the Christian Church in the last forty years! In 1877 it fell to my lot to undertake to raise a mission fund for the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference. The plan was very simple. I was to induce the people to sign notes for whatever sum they might be willing, with the understanding that they were never to pay the principal, so long as they kept up the interest, at six per cent. My labors were rewarded with notes to the amount of ten thousand dollars, which really meant only six hundred dollars a year to the cause, and some of the brethren thought I was a prodigy in raising money, but now we are starting out to raise two millions for the next five years, or four hundred thousand each year. The beginning in 1877 looks no larger than the point of a needle as compared with what we are now undertaking. Some have thought our progress has been slow, but stop and think of the point of a needle as compared with the butt end of a log, two feet in diameter, and there you have the difference! Growth! It is wonderful. Now, let us lay to and make the raising of two million dollars a success. It will mark a new day in our work as a people. To undertake a great thing and do it, that means a new day to the doers. Let every friend of the Church fall into line and do his or her part, and our next forty years will show greater progress than the last forty, which now seems marvelous. Let us bend to the task, brethren—the way is open and the field most inviting.

M—and—M

THE PEOPLE WILL DO IT

Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D.

We know that the Christian Church will not fill its place in the world that God intended it should fill, until every member of every church has a definite work and is doing his work faithfully. The Men and Millions Forward Movement is to reach every member so that they may be with one accord, filled with the Spirit, witnessing for Christ and dedicating of themselves and all they have to the cause of Christ and the welfare of humanity.

I believe in the Movement, I believe in the leaders of the Movement, and I believe in the people, and I believe they are ready and anxious for a part in world evangelization. The money will be the smallest part of the blessings we shall receive in this great campaign. We shall find ourselves and our young people will find their places in the work of the Kingdom. We are praying that every member, young and old, rich and poor, shall rally to the standard of the Cross and do his part in this Forward Movement.

SIMPLY GREAT

Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D.

It was with a distinctive thrill of pride and enthusiasm mingled with much rejoicing that I read the account in THE SUN'S columns of the action of the members of the Southern Christian Convention in putting on a campaign for "Men and Millions."

I am proud of the fact that the Christian Church possessed a body of men with the daring faith to attempt so great a task. I say faith and I mean just that; faith in God, faith in the cause, faith in our fellow Christians and their readiness to respond to a great challenge.

It is for God and His cause and the money that becometh to the King will, I am sure, be forthcoming.

Mr. C. H. Stephenson,
Raleigh, N. C.

Dear Brother Stephenson:—

I explained to you in former correspondence that I would have to have the Sunday school lesson by Wednesday of each week and by all means not later than Thursday. I dictate this letter at 9:30 o'clock, Friday morning, January 16, and I have received no Sunday school lesson for next week's paper; and have, therefore, supplied other matter for the space allotted to the Sunday school lesson.

Regretting the continued laxity of this work, I am
Yours very sincerely,

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

WANTED: A NAME

In the latter part of December we were asked to go to Suffolk, Virginia, December 30 to meet with executives and Convention officials to consider an every members canvass for the churches in the Southern Christian Convention. At the Suffolk meeting Drs. W. W. Staley and J. O. Atkinson stated the object of the body assembled; and back of the object for which the meeting was called, was a suggestion by Senator J. E. West at the meeting of Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference that the Church put on an every member canvass. The Suffolk meeting has already been reported in THE SUN, but suffice to say that it was the unanimous opinion of those present that such a step as has been undertaken should be made.

At the Suffolk meeting, and other meetings held in interest of the same undertaking, those present seemed to lack one thing only—and that was a name for the undertaking. So great was the thought, so staggering was the idea, so stupendous was the task, that no one dared, for a while, to name the movement.

The suggestion of the plan at the Portsmouth meeting took "like fire" and the sentiment spread, and it would not, and will not, cease.

Hush! Listen! Pull back the curtain of time, give ear to the rumbling of the wheels of progress, see the world-wide program of Christian progress and look for the part that the Christian Church is to play in the evangelization of the world. There lies the secret. Something that we cannot fully understand, and that is why we want a name. We know that God wants men and He wants millions of the money we have that belong to Him. "Men and Millions Forward Movement"—Ah that gets nearer to it than anything that we have thought about, and yet, and surely, there is a name. Dare we say it as we write freer than pen can run? Yes, here it is: A call and a challenge to a Church to defend its time-honored principles and gird itself for its part in a world program.

Wanted: A name, not exactly that we want a name, but a full interpretation of what moves the Church to such definite action. In the hidden secrets of Heaven is locked the full revelation of it all. The summons is here; the command is given. If we can trust our Leader, He will reveal to us in His own good time the mysteries of the Kingdom.

God speaks to men through men and not angels. It has been made plain to those on whose shoulders some of the larger tasks have been placed.

Read the threshold message of the Committee and other articles in this issue and ask God to help you do your whole duty in this matter.

Wanted: A name for this great impulse of Church. God has it.

M——and——M

THE BUSINESS OF THE CHURCH

The business of the Church is to lead and not to follow. The business of the Church is not to be poor but to be rich. The business of the Church is to function and not fail. The business of the Church is to do business, do business for the King and the Kingdom.

The Church is not a beggar, though some of us have so classed it. Paupers beg, and the Church is not a pauper, though some of us have tried to make it one. The Church is not a weakling—she is strong if only we knew it by testing her strength.

The business of the Church is not only to heal wounds, but to prevent wounds from being made. She is an agency of prevention as well as an agency of cure.

The business of the Church is to invest, invest wisely, for no larger dividends are made than those made by the Church. The dividends of the Church are men, good government, peace, happiness of the individual and protection of the country.

Then shall we "beg" for the Church or invest in the Church? Shall we consider her institutions reformatories or agencies to make and mould the best possible manhood and womanhood from birth?

The Men and Millions Forward Movement is not a begging agency for the Church—she is an agency for wise investment. Pray for it, work for it, work with it, work through it for the Kingdom's enlargement.

A WORD TO OUR NEW READERS

With this issue of THE SUN more than a thousand new homes to this paper are visited. More names will be added from week to week. This increase is a part of the program of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, and persons receiving the paper may be free to accept it. The cost is being borne from the expense budget of the Movement.

We appreciate the opportunity, kind friends, of having this chance of reaching more of the Church's membership. We ask through the printed page a careful and prayerful reading for the sake of the new impulse of the Church, also for the sake of the official publication of the Convention.

You will receive THE SUN free until ordered stopped by the Publicity Department of the Movement. Should you become interested enough to forward your subscription and be placed on the permanent list it will be appreciated.

BOARD OF PUBLICATION.

M——and——M

THE CHRISTIAN ANNUAL

This week the Christian Annual is on the press and we hope to be able to make the distribution in a very short time. The final copy for the Annual reached us December 22, which meant that it could not be used until after the holidays because of the closing down of a week in the plant where we are having the work done.

Some of the brethren have seen fit to wage complaint each year because of the lateness of this publication. We do not say that the complaint is not justifiable but we can truthfully say that every possible effort has been made to push the work, and that no delay has been due to any hold-up of work in this office. In normal times we have never known a printer to guarantee the delivery of a book of 200 pages in a period less than 30 days after the final copy was received. This has been one of the most trying years for publishers. Labor has been scarce and work in great abundance, and yet the Annual is on the press in less than thirty days after the final copy was received. We feel encouraged and hope that others will be encouraged also.

ANOTHER ADVANCE IN PAPER

Another advance has been made in book paper. For several months we have been paying eight cents per pound for paper on which THE SUN is printed. The best price we have now is 10¾ cents with no guarantee of that standing. This means a heavier cost to THE SUN for each issue than in previous months. Also the office in which THE SUN is printed, was operated on a fifty-four hour week until January 1, on which date the hours were cut to forty-eight with the same pay. The difference in each advance must be distributed on each job, and THE SUN will have to bear its part. We feel that our readers should be informed of these things.

CONVENTION EVANGELIST

It has already been stated through the columns of this paper that Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne has been chosen evangelist of the Southern Christian Convention. To us this seems to be a timely selection and a choice well made. Brother Lightbourne's heart is in the evangelistic work and there is sufficient territory for him and much work to be done. It seems to us that all his time should be taken, and we believe that it will. Let us support Brother Lightbourne by giving him opportunity for usefulness and praying for his success.

WASHINGTON, D. C. AND RICHMOND, VIRGINIA WORK

The work at Washington, D. C., under the leadership of Dr. A. B. Kendall seems to be moving along nicely. The work at Richmond has already started and Dr. W. T. Walters is soon to become resident pastor. The opening up of our work in these places should be a source of rejoicing. We have waited too long to begin our work in these progressive cities but since "it is never too late to do good," it should be no discouragement but rather an encouragement that we should support them in every way.

HEARING ON CHAPLAINS BILL BEFORE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS

Representatives of the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains secured a hearing January 13 before the House Committee on Military Affairs concerning the Hull Bill. There were in attendance: Bishop William F. McDowell, Chairman of the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains, Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, General Secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, Rev. E. O. Watson, Secretary of the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains, Dr. Gaylord S. White and Rev. Clyde F. Armitage representing the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains of the Federal Council; Chaplain John T. Axton, Chaplain Milton O. Beebe, Chaplain Julian E. Yates, Chaplain Francis P. Duffy, Chaplain Ignatius Fealey and Father Louis F. O'Hern representing Archbishop Hayes.

A full and courteous hearing was had before a full meeting of the Committee. There was absolute unanimity of sentiment as to what was required on Chaplain Legislation. All indications now are favorable for securing the ends aimed at through the Capper-Hull Bill introduced in the Senate and House.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

PASTOR AND FAMILY FOUNDED

At my last appointment at Shady Grove church the good people of that church and community made up a purse of $12.50, besides some other very valuable presents, and sent them to Mrs. Dollar and the children as a Christmas gift.

On Christmas morning Mrs. Dollar received a very valuable present from the good women of Mt. Zion church, which was a nice bed quilt and with it was sent a letter saying that it had been made and sent by them as a token of their appreciation of her.

On last Saturday I was sick and not able to get to my appointment at Noonday, but But Sunday it was my privilege to preach to a large and attentive audience. After service some of the brethren began to inquire as to where I was going to stop for dinner and of course I told them. So, in the afternoon the people began to gather at the home of Brother C. C. Huey where I took dinner, and such a pounding this unworthy pastor has never had before. They loaded my Ford with good things to eat and nice things to wear, consisting of 100 pounds of flour, 4 gallons of sugar-cane syrup, canned fruit and oranges, shirt, socks, ties, handkerchiefs, towels, glass and crockery ware and other valuable gifts, including some money. And now may the benedictions of the Heavenly Father rest upon every one who took a part in this act of kindness. It brings joy and gladness to our hearts and may God make us able to be to them a better servant, and may His name be praised.

GEORGIA

We have no special news from this section of our brotherhood. Christmas passed off in the usual way for this section—it was a time of jollification and merry-making. It looked more like we were celebrating the fourth of July than the twenty-fifth of December.

Our work at Rose Hill church is moving slowly. We had a Christmas tree for the Sunday school and the children did their part very well. Their recitations were good and appropriate. Christmas giving abounded in a large measure. Almost every one in the Sunday school received some gift.

The writer was remembered in a most unexpected way. Brother T. J. Holland of Wray, Ga., sent me a fine turkey as a Christmas present—it weighed ten pounds after it was dressed. The gift was highly appreciated, but the circumstances made it even more so. In 1879, or 80 I was pastor at Holy Neck, Va., and Brother Holland was then a small boy. Through all of these years he had not forgotten me, and when I came to labor in his own adopted State, he gave me a welcome after this manner. It was truly appreciated on the part of the recipients. Brother Holland is now one of Georgia's good farmers and is prospering in his business, but true to his early training, he is serving the Lord. Thank you, Brother.

At last we are in Rose Hill Parsonage, and we are glad. It is a decided relief to be once more settled, especially after months of moving around. My address has been changed several times since coming to Columbus. It is settled now—it is 1020 Park Place, Columbus, Ga.

REMEMBRANCES

(By W. S. Long, D. D.)

From time to time we see accounts in THE SUN that brethren have been pounded and we are always pleased to learn that faithful service has been acknowledged in a substantial way. Such acts of gratitude are always valued far beyond their intrinsic value. The individual who can receive favors and never show appreciation is an ingrate and unworthy of additional favors.

During the holidays I received a great many letters and cards from old students bearing love and good wishes. Some of these contained substantial gifts. Several articles came by parcel post. Some of these remembrances came from persons who were my students fifty years ago.

I give you one letter just as it was written:

Roxboro, N. C., Jan. 2, 1920.

My dear old School Master, Billie:—

Enclosed you will find my check for $50.00. I remember you every day. Come to see me some time. Got plenty to eat and can take care of you and yours. If all the boys you have worked so hard over to educate would remember you some—and that is just what they ought to do.

Love to you and yours.

D. M. ANDREWS.

P. S. If you had just given me one more whipping it would have been $75.00. So you see how much you have lost.

CHRISTMAS IN GEORGIA

Christmas, 1919, was the first I ever spent in Georgia. It was much like Christmas in Virginia. One thing both Virginia and Georgia, and so far as I know all the Southern States ought to learn, and that is that Christmas is no time for frolics and fire crackers. Christmas celebrates the birth of the Savior. Now what would He think of us if He should come back to earth at Christmas time and find His people celebrating His birthday by shooting fire crackers, by card parties, by dances, by big dinners and such like things? Can you tell what He would say to seeing His own birthday celebrated in that way? I cannot, but I fancy He would turn away from the scene and weep over it as He did once over Jerusalem. Let us pray to be kept from giving Him cause to weep over our conduct in celebrating His birthday. Let us learn to celebrate it as becomes a Christian people. We can get no good out of the celebration of the birthday of Jesus by making a mockery of it, as is too generally done.

I have lived in the North and I have lived in the South, but I am compelled to admit that the North is far ahead of the South in the way they celebrate Christmas as to this matter. I cannot recall ever having heard a fire cracker shot off on any Christmas day in any Northern State. It may be appropriate to shoot off fire crackers on the fourth of July, but it certainly is not appropriate to shoot them off as celebrating Christmas day. Brethren, let us quit it. Shoot fire crackers on the fourth of July, if you can find no better way to use your surplus money, but don't do it on Christmas day—it is a shameful mockery of the world's most universal tribute to Christ. Let us not do it any more.

POUNDED!

At the regular appointment at Good Hope church, Sunday, January 11, 1920, the members and friends of the church showed their appreciation of their pastor and their sympathy for him and his family by giving him what they termed a "pounding." As the pastor does not have a car, those good people concluded that the most convenient thing he could carry home was money. Therefore, instead of pounding him in the usual way, each one handed him a dollar or a half dollar or a quarter dollar,—amounting in all to nine dollars and seventy-five cents. One lady gave a pound of butter. The pastor and his family are very grateful for this token of love and appreciation, both to the dear people who gave it and to our Heavenly Father Who prompted and made possible the giving.

ROSEMONT—BEREA

For some time no word has appeared in THE SUN

from this field. This period of silence, however, should not be taken as an evidence of inaction in this field, for the work in general is moving steadily forward.

At Berea three good members have been received since Conference. During the winter months so far the Sunday school has maintained a normal attendance and interest. At the Christmas season a suitable and an attractive program was rendered, at which time an offering for the Orphanage was received. On Saturday before the first Sunday of this month the second quarterly business meeting for the year was held, this being a helpful and forward-looking session of the church. On Sunday following occurred the church's quarterly communion service, the new individual service being in use for the first time.

For Rosemont it may be said that substantial work is being accomplished. The program rendered at Christmas was in keeping with the occasion, and the offering received for the Orphanage and for the poor in the community was very gratifying. A most encouraging feature of the work here at present is the splendid Christian Endeavor Society with a membership of sixty or more and an average attendance of about forty. The church has recently bought an additional lot adjacent to the church. This lot has already been paid for. At the second quarterly business meeting of the church last Wednesday night it was decided to purchase at once the home now occupied by the pastor and family for a parsonage.

Both congregations are planning for evangelistic services later in the year and are praying for guidance from above.

The pastor's family was remembered in a most generous way during the recent holidays. From Berea came many good things for the table and from Rosemont a nice purse, for which we are deeply grateful.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The Bible teaches that "none of us liveth to himself," and that is such a wonderful truth, that we may well ponder its significance, we might say, that none of us knoweth to himself, or does business by himself. Man left to himself would be totally ignorant and helpless. We learn from others, we get our fortunes from others, we get happiness from others. A human being left to himself from infancy would not be able to speak his mother tongue, nor to supply his physical wants. The reason why one person knows more than another person is because he has learned more from other persons. He is indebted to others for all he knows, all he has, all he can do, and all he enjoys. There is absolutely no place for egotism, self-righteousness, or any feeling that looks down upon others. The man who does nothing for others stands in the light of those who do not pay their debts. If one has knowledge he owes society for that knowledge; if one has social standing he is indebted to society for it; if one has money, he owes society for that money; if he has any talent or any possession he is indebted to society. If one could subtract what he has gained from others, he would be a pauper and a fool.

The human mind is a blank in infancy. It develops through contact with others and, later, through contact with books which are the accumulations of human thought and life in the past or the present. There is nothing more despicable than persons who assume superiority over others, because they know more, have more, or hold higher positions than others. It makes them debtors rather than creditors. Paul had the right view and expressed it in fine spirit when he said: "I am debtor both to the Greeks, and the Barbarians; both to the wise, and the unwise." Religion makes the Christian a debtor to others, and that is the ground for missions. The church is in debt to the world. The Christian is debtor to the sinner. The rich are in debt to the poor. The wise are debtors to the ignorant. The civilized are debtors to the uncivilized. There is no ground for human pride, human oppression, or religion bigotry. The honest debtor is always humble, and humility is the badge of wise and useful men and women. Good people owe so much to others, that it makes them humble. No man can feel proud till his debts are all paid; and the debts of good and wise people will never be paid till all men are free and saved. The very thought of what we owe to others, staggers us, humbles us, and awakens us to a new sense of our obligation to the ignorant, the needy, the unfortunate, and the heathen. Benevolence is what we owe to those who have not shared in the blessings which we have enjoyed.

Savages have no public debts, but civilized states are in debt and will be to the end of time. Great cities are in debt. Great corporations are in debt. Great nations are in debt. The Kingdom of God is in debt. It is high time for Christians to realize their obligations to all departments of church work at home and to missions. The only way to maintain credit is to pay debts; and the only way to care for character is to help others.

W. W. STALEY.

HENDERSON AND FULLER'S CHAPEL

On the second Sunday in November Henderson church made an every member canvass for the 1920 budget with satisfactory results. All departments of the church, including Sunday school, Christian Endeavor, Ladies' Aid and Missionary Societies are well organized and are doing good work. The attendance at preaching services is somewhat larger than it has been, and we are hoping that there may be a still greater gain during the year.

We have held the regular services at Fuller's Chapel since Conference, with quarterly communion services second Sunday in this month. The ladies here are planning to organize a Missionary Society in the near future. The congregations are good and the prospects for growth are encouraging.

We were kindly remembered during the season of giving and receiving gifts. Henderson church gave us a nice rocker; Brother D. I. Langston a turkey; Brother John Langston a ham; Mrs. C. D. Harton, Mrs. W. H. Stephens, Mrs. J. F. Coghill, Mrs. G. W. Edwards, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. J. W. White, and possibly others whose names I cannot now recall, kindly remembered us with good things to eat. All these acts of kindness we deeply appreciate, and greatly enjoy the gifts. We crave the prayers of the Brotherhood that we may face the work of the New Year with greater zeal for the Master's cause and greater willingness to be used of Him for the advancement of His Kingdom.

UNION BY THE BACK DOOR

The following letter by the St. Paul's Guild of the Protestant Episcopal church of Conneaut, Ohio, is an illustration of how liberal minded laymen of different denominations are trying to get together in the bonds of peace:

"Conneaut, Ohio, December 22, 1919.

Rev. C. Summerbell:

"St. Paul's Guild takes pleasure in cordially inviting you, as a member of the Ministerial Association of Conneaut, to attend the Christmas Eve Communion service to be held at St. Paul's church, Wednesday evening, December 24, at eleven o'clock, and to partake of the sacrament in commemoration of our Lord's birth and the peace and union which we all hope will be finally secured when re-adjustments of methods of Church and State are worked out in accordance with the teachings of Christ, which we all recognize, but because of our ignorance and perversity have not fully accepted.

"This invitation is extended by the Guild because Church customs do not (yet) permit our Rector to do so, but we are sure he is in hearty sympathy with the sentiment expressed therein.

Respectfully,

ST. PAUL'S GUILD,

It is too much of a task to undertake to write to all who sent sympathetic letters and showed acts of kindness in many ways to our family, in arranging for the burial of Deacon J. H. Moring, and sending so many flowers to decorate his grave. Hence, we are sending a message through THE CHRISTIAN SUN to all of them. We certainly appreciate all that was done.

NOTE AND PERSONAL

We are in receipt of a neatly printed invitation which reads:

"Dear Friend: Our Sunday school which was organized last Sunday will meet January 11. You are cordially invited to be present and bring your friends with you.

P. J. KERNODLE, Chairman,

MILDRED ATKINSON, Secretary.

The "heading" of the letter on which this invitation was printed reads as follows:

"Under the direction of the Home Mission Department of the Southern Christian Convention. Christian Sunday school at 9:30 A. M. in the auditorium of the William F. Fox School Building, 2300 Hanover Ave. Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., pastor; D. J. Kelley, superintendent, P. J. Kernodle, assistant; Mildred Atkinson, secretary and treasurer; Music Committee: Mrs. Inez Woodward, Miss Gladys Whidden, Miss Janie Pierce; Welcome Committee: J. W. Price, F. S. Gardner, Richmond, Va."

All of which looks mighty good to the Editor since he feels that we are at last beginning in Richmond, Va. the good work of organizing a Christian church weher we should have had one 50 years ago.

Principles and Government of The Christian Church

(The Franklin, Virginia, session of the Southern Christian Convention ordered that the Principles and Government of the Christian Church be revised and that a committee be appointed to make the revision. Harper, LL. D. Some weeks ago the committee completed its work, and we are privileged to print, in serial form, the Principles and Government as outlined, subject to ratification by the next session of the Convention.—Editor.)

CHAPTER VIII INSTALLATION OF PASTOR

The installation services may be made an occasion of great value to the church and cause of Christ. The sermon should precede the installation ceremonies, and, when convenient, should be delivered by some invited minister.

After the introductory services and the sermon the installation ceremonies shall be as follows:

HYMN.

THE LORD'S MESSENGER:—

How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, thy God reigneth! Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion. Break forth into joy, sing together, ye waste places of Jerusalem: for the Lord hath comforted his people, he hath redeemed Jerusalem: the Lord hath made bare his holy arms in the eyes of all the nations; and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God. Depart ye, depart ye, go ye out from thence, touch no unclean thing; go ye out of the midst of her; be ye clean that bear the vessels of our Lord. For ye shall not go out with haste, nor go by flight: for the Lord will go before you; and the God of Israel will be your reward. Behold, my servant shall deal prudently, he shall be exalted and extolled, and be very high. Isa. 52:7-13.

THE FAITHFUL MINISTER:—

But thou, O man of God, flee these things; and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness. Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life, whereunto thou art also called, and hast professed a good profession before many witnesses. I give thee charge in the sight of God who quickeneth all things, and before Christ Jesus, who before Pontius Pilate witnessed a good confession: that thou keep this commandment without spot, unrebukable, until the appearing of our Lord Jesus Christ; which in his times he shall show, who is the blessed and only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords; who only hath immortality, dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto; whom no man hath seen, nor can see: to whom be honour and power everlasting. Amen.

PRAYER.

At the close of the singing of a hymn, the minister to be installed shall stand before the altar.

HYMN.

After which the officiating minister shall say:

REVEREND BROTHER:—You have been called to the oversight of this church and have signified your acceptance of the call. It is, therefore, obligatory upon you to labor for the edification of the church and the upbuilding of the Redeemer's Kingdom while this relation shall continue.

To the Church:

Does this Church now renew the call and promise to discharge its duties to the pastor? If so, the members may signify their purpose by rising.

To the minister:

Do you accept this call and declare your willingness to discharge the duties of a faithful pastor?

PRAYER.

The address of welcome may be by one person or separate parts may be assigned to different persons.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME:—

(1) On the part of the ministry, (2) on the part of the church, and (3) on the part of the community.

RESPONSE BY THE PASTOR INSTALLED.

During the singing of a hymn the right hand of fellowship shall be given to the new pastor by the ministers, Church officials and Christians generally.

HYMN.

BENEDICTION BY THE PASTOR.

CHAPTER IX THE DEDICATION OF A CHURCH

The general order of service for the dedication and consecration of a Church or Chapel may be as follows:

ANTHEM OR VOLUNTARY.

A hymn shall be announced in which the congregation may join in singing.

HYMN.

After which may follow an invocation by a minister assigned to this part of the order of service.

INVOCATION.

A historical sketch of the Church may at this time be given, if thought advisable, after which shall be read the following Scripture lessons, or other suitable selections:

SCRIPTURE LESSONS

DEDICATION OF THE TEMPLE:—

And Solomon stood before the altar of the Lord, in the presence of all the congregation of Israel, and spread forth his hands toward heaven: and he said, Lord God of Israel, there is no god like thee, in heaven above, or on earth beneath, who keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants that walk before thee with all their heart; who hast kept with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him: thou spakest also with thy mouth, and hast fulfilled it with thine hand, as it is this day. Therefore now, Lord God of Israel, keep with thy servant David my father that thou promisedst him, saying, There shall not fail thee a man in my sight to sit on the throne of Israel; so that thy children take heed to their way, that thy walk before me, as thou hast walked before me. And now, O God of Israel, let thy word, I pray thee, be verified, which thou spakest unto thy servant David my father. But will God indeed dwell on the earth? Behold the heaven, and heaven of heavens, cannot contain thee; how much less this house that I have builded? Yet have thou respect unto the prayer of thy servant, and to his supplication, O Lord my God, to hearken unto the cry and to the prayer which thy servant prayeth before thee today: that thine eyes may be open toward this house night and day, even toward the place of which thou hast said, My name shall be there; that thou mayst hearken unto the prayer which thy servant shall make towards this place. And hearken thou to the supplication of thy servant, and of thy people Israel, when they shall pray towards this place: and hear thou in heaven thy dwelling-place; and when thou hearest, forgive. And it was so, that when Solomon had made an end of praying all this prayer and supplication unto the Lord, he arose from before the altar of the Lord, from kneeling on his knees with his hands spread up to heaven. And he stood, and blessed all the congregation of Israel with a loud voice, saying, Blessed be the Lord, that hath given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there hath not failed one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant. The Lord our God be with us, as he was with our fathers; let him not leave us, nor forsake us; that he may incline our hearts unto him, to walk in all his ways, and to keep his commandments, and his statutes, and judgments, which he commanded our fathers. And let these my words, wherewith I have made supplication before the Lord, be nigh unto the Lord our God day and night, that he maintain the cause of his servant, and the cause of his people Israel at all times, as the matter shall require; that all the people of the earth may know that the Lord is God, and that there is none else. I Kings 8:22-30, 54-60.

LONGING FOR THE SANCTUARY:—

How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth, for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God. Yea, the sparrow hath found a house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even thine altars, O Lord of hosts, my King, and my God. Blessed are they that dwell in thy house: they will be still praising thee. Selah. Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee; in whose heart are the ways of them: who passing through the valley of Baca, make it a well: the rain also filleth the pools. They go from strength to strength; every one of them in Zion appeareth before God. O Lord God of hosts, hear my prayer: give ear, O God of Jacob. Selah. Behold, O God, our shield, and look upon the face of thine anointed. For a day in thy courts is better than a thousand. I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee. Psalm 84.

HYMN.

PRAYER.

DEDICATORY SERMON.

After which the minister chosen to dedicate the house of worship shall request the congregation to arise and at the end of the dedicatory formula to respond amen and amen, and shall say:

DEDICATORY FORMULA:—

And now most solemnly do we dedicate this house to God the Father Almighty, the only living and true God. We dedicate it to His supreme and unrivaled majesty; to His paternal love; to His free grace; to His supreme worship.

We dedicate it to the Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of the Father, the manifestation of God in the flesh, the only Mediator between God and man; to the memory of His dying love; to the celebration of His divine perfection; to the preaching of that gospel which He sealed with His blood, and confirmed by His resurrection from the dead.

We dedicate it to the Holy Spirit, the Comforter who proceedeth from the Father and the Son; to His regenerating and sanctifying power; to those heavenly influences which bring back the rebellious sons of men to the smiles of a Heavenly Parent; to those celestial visitations which communicate peace, joy and strength to the devout soul.

We dedicate it to the cause of Christian liberty and the right of private judgment; the union of all the followers of Christ, under the one divinely appointed name; to social worship; the keeping of the ordinances; to religious intercourse; to the communion of saints.

We dedicate it to Christian morals; to social order; to diffusive benevolences; to universal good will.

We dedicate it to those solemn warnings, affectionate entreaties and persuasive arguments by which perishing sinners are won from error's ways and brought back to the Father's house.

We dedicate it to the precious promises of the gospel, which pour consolation into the pious soul and lighten the burdens of human woe.

We dedicate it to the hope of a blessed immortality in that bright world of glory where one eternal day of rest, peace and joy is experienced by the saved.

We dedicate it to the great work of preparing the soul for that eternal state of blessedness, and for nearer approaches to God its Maker.

We dedicate it to God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, both now and forever, and let all the people of God respond with devout hearts: Amen and amen.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

CLOSING FOR THE YEAR

This report brings us to the final report for the year 1919. The year's work has been one that has been filled with encouragement and joy so far as the work has been concerned. The Sunday schools and churches, the pastors of the churches and the superintendents of the Sunday schools have been as loyal as we could ask and a large percent of the churches have contributed toward the support of the Orphanage. The different goals set for the year have been reached and passed. The loyal support of the pastors and superintendents of the Sunday schools and friends have made this possible. The time for closing our books for the year was at hand and we just lacked $100 being to our goal. We happened to meet our dear old friend, Mr. R. T. Kernodle, and told him about being so near to the goal and the time so close to close our books, and yet not there. He gladly handed us a check for the $100.00 to push us up to the goal. This was a push at a critical time when we were most out of breath and our strength almost gone. He was a friend when we needed a friend.

You see from the financial report that our total income for the year is $25,021.89. This is far above our expectations. It is far above the goal set, but when we got so close to the $25,000.00 mark we doubled our energy to reach it. Our Thanksgiving offerings for the year was at hand and we lacked $100.00 being to our total.

This has been the best year, financially, the Orphanage has ever had. We have taken care of a larger number of children than ever before. The Lord has been good to us in many ways and has blessed us with splendid health. Practically no sickness during the entire year, and no deaths.

A number of the churches and Sunday schools remembered our little folks at Christmas and sent in boxes to make them feel that "Old Santa" had paid them a visit and to make them happy as other children at the Christmas time.

We are very grateful for the loyal support we have received, the kind words of encouragement that have been spoken and we only wish we were worthy to receive.

The following articles have been received:

River Side Hosiery Mills, Haw River, N. C., 4 dozens hose; May Hosiery Mill, Burlington, N. C., 5 dozens hose; Burlington church and Sunday school, one box containing many useful articles; Washington Street Christian church, Portsmouth, Va., one box containing a present for each child; First church, Berkley, Va., one box presents for children, one box canned fruit, one bucket of candy; Mr. Boyd R. Cather, Winchester, Va., two barrel apples; Mrs. Julia Euliss, Rock Creek, N. C., two sheets; Pilot Cotton Mills, Raleigh, N. C., 64 yards chambras; Mrs. Ed Smith, Clayton, N. C., 6 yards gingham, two towels, pair shoes; Antioch church, (Val. Va.), one box containing quilts, sheets, blankets, gingham, hose and shoes; Willing Workers' Class and the Gleaners Class, of the First Christian church, Lincoln, Kans., one box presents for the children; Chapel Hill church, N. C., one box containing hose, shoes, hats, quilts, pants, etc.; Zion Sunday school, Moneure, N. C., one box containing towels, soap, gingham, counterpane, and quilt; Mrs. L. D. Price, Frankfort, Ind., one box clothing for children; Waverly, Va. Christian church, one box presents for the children.

We are very grateful for each and every contribution made.

PREACH CHRIST

In this day when ministerial demands dip dangerously far toward the purely social and ethical, we need to revive the ancient fact that men are called to preach a gospel whose immediate end is the redemption of a soul from sin and death. There's no use talking—we are in danger of being programmed to death. Did you ever see an engine on a dead center? Is it possible that we are about to have a mass of machinery so complicated that the wheels interfere? O no; we are not pessimists. We just don't know of a solitary human condition that the cross will not solve. This old sin-sick world will always turn its languid eye toward the cross. Like the needle to the pole, the human soul, with all its load, dips in that direction. The one last, supreme hope of the race is the gospel which is the power of God—final, complete, sufficient. Preach Christ.—Texas Christian Advocate.

COUNCIL ON ORGANIC UNION OF THE EVANGELICAL CHURCHES IN AMERICA, AT PHILADELPHIA,
FEBRUARY 3-6, 1920

One of the most vital problems of the times is the union of the Church of God. Multitudes are seeing the waste, uselessness and folly of the one hundred and eighty-six divisions in the American Church. Union cannot come at once, but those bodies of closest kin can and will get together, loosely, perhaps, at first, and gradually growing into organic union.

To meet this need the Council on Organic Union of the Evangelical Churches of America will meet in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, February 3-6, 1920, and will there receive the plan which has been prepared by ad interim committee on an international conference that met in the same place December 4-6, 1918, out of a call from the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. This ad interim committee, composed of representatives from sixteen or more evangelical communions, has been at work constantly since its appointment, and now, after a careful survey over the whole field, is prepared to give its findings.

It was first discovered that the communions were not prepared to go as far as many of the leaders had hoped. This was a natural condition, due to lack of acquaintance and misunderstandings that have made apparent barriers. But the ad interim committee zealously worked out its problem, and its plan goes as far as it believes the communions represented are willing to go. In the February meeting it may develop that the communions are prepared to go farther. Many of us hope that such will be the case.

The plan, briefly, provides for the association of ourselves into a visible body to be known as the "United Churches of Christ in America" for the furtherance of the redemptive work of Christ in the world. This body shall exercise in behalf of the constituent churches only functions delegated to it by the Council and by subsequent action of the constituent churches, those churches retaining the full freedom at present enjoyed by them all in matters not so delegated. There shall be complete autonomy in purely denominational affairs. The basis of representation shall be two ministers and two laymen for the first one hundred thousand or fraction thereof of its communicants, and one minister and one layman for each additional one hundred thousand or major fraction thereof. The Council shall adopt and promulgate its own rules of procedure and order, and each constituent communion shall continue the exercise of its several powers and functions as the same exist under the denominational constitution. In order to prevent overlapping, friction, competition or waste in the work of the existing denominational boards, or administrative agencies, the Council shall undertake to harmonize and unify the work of the united churches, such consolidation to be progressively achieved as by the union of the boards of churches of any two or more of the constituent denominations.

The Council is to undertake inspirational and educational leadership of such sort as may be decided upon by the constituent churches from time to time in the fields of evangelism, social service, religious education and the like. Each constituent communion shall certify from its governing or advisory body its assent to this plan. It is also planned that the commission on group union of constituent bodies shall be appointed, whose specific duties will be to cultivate friendly relations between those bodies that are nearest kin. There are other plans that have been presented to the ad interim committee. These will be published in the Blue Book, which will be presented to the February Council. They embody plans of a more complete united church, with specific articulations of powers and functions, and they may be preserved for consideration at some future time, when it may be deemed expedient to take a further step in the direction of organic union.

There is every expectation that the February Council will be abundant in interest, patient and true in its attempts to go forward, and that it will make a definite contribution to the great problem that is now absorbing such interest. In the event that the plan or plans submitted are not satisfactory, there will be opportunity for the presentation of other plans. Whatever we do, one thing we ought to be sure of, and that is the plans may be laid for the foundation of a permanent union of the Evangelical Churches of America.

The chairman of the ad interim committee is the Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., and the secretary is the Rev. Rufus W. Miller, D. D. For further particulars address either of these at the Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

LITERATURE YEAR

It is a matter of disappointment to us that so few books are purchased by our people, at least the books are not purchased through this office.

We have been in correspondence with various publishers of the country and have made arrangements to buy closing out stocks of books at reduced prices and feel that we can secure enough good books under this plan to fully carry out our plans during this year.

The plan is this: The average cost of one of these books that we have arranged to buy at a discount will be about 25 cents the copy, including the mailing. We have, therefore, planned this arrangement: Each subscriber who renews his or her subscription and adds 25 cents will receive by return mail a copy of some useful and valuable book. We cannot undertake to announce titles from which subscribers may select because the supply on hand at times will contain quite a number of titles and possibly there would be more calls for certain titles than we would have books. Most of the books will be for children, and utmost care will be exercised in selecting the very best reading matter. Our purchases will practically all be made from Church publishing houses and that alone insures the books to be wholesome. We entertain the hope that our people will co-operate with us this year in placing more books into the homes of our constituency. Send for a book.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR
FEBRUARY 1, 1920

(J. Vincent Knight)

"What does our pledge require?"
Deut. 13:4; John 14:21-26. (Christian Endeavor Day—Consecration Meeting).

Our pledge is a promise made to Jesus Christ. If it were made to man, we would not think of breaking it, but it is made to Jesus Christ and it would be a miserable shame to break it. It requires faith, fear, obedience, service, ingenuity, love, and consecration enough to keep us from breaking it. It carries nothing that every Christian ought not, and cannot do. It requires our attention. It is no good unless put into practice, for a pledge or promise is no good unless we live by it. I wonder how many of us face "broken promises?"

Our pledge requires thought. Think of what it means to you as an individual—to your Society, your church and to Jesus Christ for you to keep this pledge, and live up to its requirements. Is it nothing to you that your church fails to meet its obligations? Look into the matter, maybe some one has failed to meet what was required of them in the pledge they made to their church. Failure always marks the pathway of those who fail to meet their obligations. If we sum it all up, our own pledge requires a real consecrated consistent Christian life of active service to Jesus Christ, and that is nothing unthinkable or unreasonable for any Christian. Have you signed the pledge? If not, do it now, and try your best to live up to its requirements.

A Correction

Something, I know not what, made me say in the question box two weeks ago, that North Carolina has 385 Societies with a membership of 750. That is wrong. This is right: 385 Societies with a total membership of ten thousand, seven hundred and fifty.

More Questions Answered

"What will be the program for Christian Endeavor in Dixie after the New Orleans Convention July 8-11?" (Norfolk).

I cannot give an answer that will be absolutely correct. I can give you an idea. The All South Committee will be continued. The All-South Secretary will be continued, probably under different title. The Dixie Endeavorer will be continued and enlarged, probably edited by Mr. Lehmann. The States will be grouped, and wherever possible, two States adjoining will swing a field man for full time. The Executives of North Carolina and Virginia are agreed that we must have a man for full time in these two States. Help us push things towards that end.

"From whence comes the support of the Board of Religious Education of the Southern Christian Convention?" (Dover, Delaware).

It hasn't any. This Board is an orphan child which will go the way the Young People's general Convention went unless some means of support is found. We have failed to get support from the various Home Mission Boards, and our schools now give one Sunday to the Orphanage, and one to the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention and it takes the other two to support the school. So as I see it, this Board is helpless at present.

"Don't you think the conflict between the Young People's Missionary work, and the Christian Endeavor is one reason why we have so few Societies?" (Franklin, Va.)

I did not know there had been, or could be any conflict. Give us some light on that subject. Christian Endeavor teaches missions and in addition calls for volunteers for the field. Secretary Greenleaf of the Inter-Church World movement tells us that for the last 15 years ninety-six percent of all ministers, field workers and missionaries going from churches having Christian Endeavor have been trained in these Societies. I welcome all information on the subject, will use it in these columns and give you credit for it. Come on!

JUDD-JONES

Mr. M. Hubert Judd, Ensign United States Navy, for the present located at Norfolk, Va., and Miss Esther Kathryn Jones, Elon College, N. C., were happily united in marriage at the home of the writer, Elon College, N. C., at 5 o'clock P. M., Friday, January 16, 1920. There were no invitations issued but several friends of the bride in the college and village; also the groom's mother, Mrs. L. G. Judd, Mrs. Scott and Mr. Davis, of Dalton, Ga., were present to witness the ceremony. Mr. Betts of the Music Faculty, presided at the piano. Miss Lottie Lee Jones, sister of the bride, sang: "I Love You Truly," and Mr. Alexander of the Music Faculty sang: "O, Promise Me." Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played while the bride and groom approached the marriage altar and while the ceremony was being said. The souvenir ring ceremony was used. The bride wore a lovely costume of white Japanese silk, trimmed in real lace, and the bridal veil trimmed in real lace and orange blossoms, and carried a corsage of roses and sweet peas. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome lavalier of diamonds set in platinum.

The bride was a former student in Elon College and is the daughter of Mrs. Sadie Jones, of Elon College. After March 1 Mr. and Mrs. Judd will reside at Dalton, Ga., the home of the groom. Prior to the marriage Mrs. Atkinson, aunt of the bride, gave a dinner to the bridal party and relatives present.

J. O. ATKINSON.

FERRELL-HALL

On the evening of January 16, 1920, Miss Effie May Hall became the bride of Mr. William Everett Ferrell. The ceremony that united them in holy wedlock was performed by Rev. J. W. Holt at his home in the presence of a few friends. Both parties were of Graham, N. C., where they will reside.

J. W. HOLT.

ANDREWS

Mrs. Sallie E. Andrews, wife of W. F. Andrews, was born August 26, 1875, and died January 14, 1920. The funeral was conducted at Apple's Chapel January 16, 1920, by the writer. She leaves to mourn their loss a husband, twelve children, four sisters and two brothers. The funeral was attended by a large crowd. She joined Apple's Chapel Christian church when quite young. May God bless the bereaved ones.

J. F. APPLE.

BARHAM

Robert Barham died January 10, in his seventy-fifth year. He was an honest and industrious man, and much beloved by those who knew him. He married three times, and was the father of twenty-one children.

He withdrew from the Baptist church of which he had been a member, and at the time of his death had not connected himself with any church. He was a man of strong faith, and claimed to have been divinely healed of cancer in answer to prayer.

His funeral was conducted at the home of his son, Thomas Barham, by Rev. J. D. Wicker, and the interment was in the neighborhood burying grounds near Clem Mitchels. An immense audience had gathered there out of respect for a good man, and beautiful flowers covered his grave.

Some Speed!

Two stenographers, says the Argonaut, were boasting to each other of the speed of their shorthand writing.

"Whenever I am reporting at a meeting on a warm evening, all the people try to get near to my table," said one.

"Why?" asked the other.

"Because," said the first, "my hand goes so fast that it creates a current of air like a fan."

"That's nothing," said the second man. "I always have to report on wet paper, or else the current of air caused by the movement of my hand would blow it away. Besides, the paper has to be wetted every few minutes because the friction caused by the rapid movements of my arms would set fire to it in no time."

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

A LETTER AND A REPLY

Suffolk, Va., January 20, 1920.

Rev. C. B. Riddle, Editor
THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
Burlington, N. C.

My dear Mr. Riddle:—

I read your editorial "Why——When" in regard to the Board of Religious Education, and I am taking it upon myself to answer a portion of it.

I shall not endeavor to answer the portion that refers directly to the Board, leaving that to the officers. I only answer in so far as it was directly aimed at me. I suppose most people know that during the last year and half I have had the task of providing the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor topics, but no one, I least of all, can be aware that you have had to beg, persuade and write to get them there on time. I did ask you to write me when they were due, and thus to assist me in getting them there on time, but this you positively refused to do, saying you were in no way responsible for that page. If you ever wrote me, once, asking for this material, the letter certainly never reached me.

I explained to you that it was almost impossible for me to keep ever in mind in the midst of other duties, just when it was time for me to send more notes, as I tried to send six or more weeks' supply at a time. You refused to aid me, and if my material was not there on time, both the Lesson and Notes and articles on Sunday school work all found the waste basket together. At least, from the tone of your letters, and from several other editorials, I became convinced that my work was personally distasteful to you, and for that reason, and no other, offered my resignation. It had been a labor of love with me. I have never received so much as a postage stamp or a piece of paper on which to write, for my work, nor did I ask for it. I gave the best I had to give, and while you found it so very inferior, some of the few who do read the page have been kind enough to say my work was, in their opinion, up to the standard.

Now, I have a suggestion to make: You state that one member of the Board of Religious Education never reads the Sunday school page. While he cannot judge what he has never seen, he certainly has not done his duty as a member of the Board. It appears to me that right now is a good time to put him to work. Why not give his name, in confidence, to the President of the Board, and perhaps the Board will permit him to write the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor topics for a while? I am sure it would be good for that member and it might be helpful to all of us.

I will appreciate it if you will print this letter in THE SUN, with as much publicity as was given the previous article.

Yours truly,

MRS. F. BULLOCK.

Our Reply

1. Mrs. Bullock calls the work a task and not a pleasure, and we presume that is why there was no regularity about sending the articles.

2. There is in THE SUN office copies of several letters to Mrs. Bullock about the matter in question. Mrs. Bullock replied to three of these letters and they are on file in THE SUN office, portions of which do not correspond to the above letter.

3. Mrs. Bullock says that the letters never reached her. Her reply to these letters reached this office. Just a case of forgetting, we presume.

4. We gave Mrs. Bullock a schedule as to when to send the material and repeated this in letters. We could not tell when the material would not reach us on time, and to write her ahead of time for it, would, it seems to us, have been forever reflecting upon the ability and interest of the author of the Sunday school notes. When they came too late, they were too late, and the waste basket is the only place for such things when not accompanied by postage or request to return.

5. Mrs. Bullock says: "If you ever wrote me once asking for the material, the letter certainly never reached this office." Again she says: "At last, from the tone of your letters * * * ." She seems to have received the letters and read them enough to hear the "tone."

6. This paper is not responsible for the pay of the Sunday school lesson editor. That is a matter with the Board. Pay or no pay, when a person accepts a duty it should be performed.

7. We did not intend for the editorial to aim at any particular member of the Board. Mrs. Bullock takes it as such and defends her position as an individual and not as a member of the Board. We cannot, therefore, address this reply to the Board, but to Mrs. Bullock alone.

8. We have made this reply advisedly, knowing and weighing the matter. Mrs. Bullock asks that her letter be printed, and in so doing grants the privilege of reply, which is always understood in such matters. Mrs. Bullock has been granted the privilege of stating her case, and we have stated ours. This ends the controversy with Mrs. Bullock so far as these columns are concerned.

Gentlemen of the jury, the case is in your hands. Nations flourish where justice is supreme; they crumble to dust where the hand of injustice leads.

FORWARD MOVEMENT MEETING FOR GREENSBORO THIS WEEK

A great meeting is planned for Greensboro Thursday and Friday of this week in the interest of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. All the ministers of the Convention have been invited, and will, we think, accept the invitation. More next week.

THE LOCAL CHURCH AND THE CAMPAIGN

What is the part of the local church in the Men and Millions Forward Movement? Its part takes in many things which will be discussed from week to week in THE SUN. Let us consider one thing this week.

The pastors are being called upon to help in the Movement, and this may mean the loss of services in some cases. What will be the answer of the local church to this? Will the church say no when its pastor has had an opportunity of being of great service to his denomination? One pastor writes: "My Board has gladly voted for me to help." That sounds good, and believe us now, that church will never die.

If your pastor can be of service to the great cause, let him help, and let him help now. What church will be so narrow as to refuse its pastor off a few Sundays? Don't all speak at once—one at the time will do.

SEES NEW HOPE FOR THE UNDERPAID PARSON Dr. E. T. Root Finds Tendency is For Just Compensation For Ministers

Some phases of the problems of the underpaid clergyman were discussed in a recent article in a Boston paper by Edward Tallmadge Root, Executive Secretary of the Massachusetts Federation of Churches.

"The remedies for the relief of the struggling minister," said Mr. Root, "are, first, the arousing of the people of every church to the realization of the situation, with the result that the pastor receive a salary enabling him to attend his church with more care and less worry about his worldly duties; second, the setting of a minimum salary by every denomination for its ministers, the extra amount called for being assessed on the richer churches for the benefit of the poorer communities, with the added provision of ministerial pensions; and, third, the combination of small congregations into larger groups, even though this may mean the binding together of people hitherto held apart by denominational considerations.

"Though pledged to suffer martyrdom if necessary, the minister is not ready, and ought not to be ready, to embrace privations and hardships that are altogether unnecessary. When a small salary is combined with a field so divided by denominationalism that the minister's work is no longer a man's job, then the minister must refuse to continue in such a situation.

"Our county survey men of the Interchurch World Movement of North America, visiting and interviewing thousands of pastors, are finding the situation even more serious than had been supposed. Preacher after preacher has been forced to resign to find work more remunerative.

"I am proud to belong to a profession that is not demanding an increase of income. I am glad that the ministry is setting the example of going quietly on with its work, and accepting hard conditions with Christian fortitude. But this very heroism and courage of the ministry puts the more obligation upon the church and the community to see that the ministry does not suffer and that this great work is not hampered.

"When our evangelical churches combine in Christian fellowship, our ministerial wage problem will be largely solved. The minister may then be properly compensated, and Christianity will go on apace."

Word reaches us that Dr. W. T. Walters and members of his family are ill with Influenza. The Brotherhood will pray a Father's blessing upon that home.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson has just returned from the Georgia and Alabama Conferences where he has been in the interest of the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

Dr. Chas. S. Macfarland, New York City, will deliver the literary address at Elon this year, with Dr. L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va., preaching the baccalaureate sermon.

See Brother L. M. Clymer's advertisement on page fifteen, and when in need of his services, he will serve you acceptably.

Add 25 cents to your renewal and get a nice book. See our announcement in the last two issues.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

VALLEY LETTER

The Christmas season has passed leaving many hearts happier because of gifts given or received. Christ has again been presented to the people in appropriate sermon or service as the new born King, Prince of Peace, and Savior of the world. Many hearts have doubtless been persuaded to look to Him anew as the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

In my field Bethlehem and Dry Run prepared and rendered excellent Christmas programs to the delight and edification of large and appreciative congregations. It was my happy privilege to attend both these services and have a little part in the program, either for better or worse. Near the close of the program at Bethlehem I was asked to come to the front. Miss Claren Lincoln was also called forward. In a very pleasing and appropriate little speech she presented, on behalf of the Sunday school and church, an envelope, which upon opening I found contained a ten-dollar bill. During the distribution of the presents at Dry Run I was handed a fine pocket-book which I found contained $13.00. Both of these presents were very much appreciated, and served to gladden my heart and make me feel under renewed obligations to these loyal people. In addition to these, little gifts of various kinds frequently came my way from the loyal members and friends of my churches. All these are appreciated far more than their real value because of the good will and kind regard conveyed by them.

The Sunday school at Mayland has recently installed curtains by which the six classes of the school are provided with separate class rooms. It is quite an improvement, and such as almost every school could have, and should have, unless they have something better. Bethlehem also some time ago curtailed off one class, and Concord two classes. The day of the one-room school is fast passing—and the faster, the better. A work so important and fruitful as that done by the Sunday school deserves the very best equipment that can be obtained.

May the year into which we have recently started bring us rich blessings and large fields of usefulness.

GREENSBORO

The fact that nothing has appeared in the columns of the paper concerning the work of our Greensboro church does not mean that we have been entirely idle. Our work here is moving forward with enough interest in it to make a man glad he is pastor of such a church. Below we are giving some facts concerning the progress of the work during the fourteen months the present pastor has been on the work here.

The church attendance has doubled. Every family in the church takes the Church paper. The Sunday school has almost doubled from the standpoint of efficiency. It has a Teacher-Training class of twelve members, and the superintendent, Mr. S. D. Scott, has put on the regular monthly teachers' meeting. It has six organized classes. One class of young men who are educating a missionary for Porto Rico. The Junior Christian Endeavor has doubled its membership twice, and now has a Junior choir in the Society. The Senior Society has been re-organized and is doing fine work. The Ladies' Missionary Society has broken all records of the past, and is to double all past records for the coming year.

During the fourteen months the church has broken all records in the way of finances, and is now rounding out $19,000.00 for the various drives, current expenses, etc. And still the work goes on, for the men of the church have taken up an option on a lot in one of the most beautiful localities of the city, looking forward to the erection of a more commodious building for the church. The committee has just announced that a drive is soon to be made to raise $12,000.00 for the local church, and when it is launched under the present plan and direction, the folks will put it across, too. In addition to all that a $300.00 raise was made in the pastor's salary at the beginning of the year.

The church is fortunate indeed in being centrally located enough to have the Men and Millions Forward Movement Conference with us on January 29-30. We are looking forward to a great meeting while all the pastors of the Convention are with us, and we hope no pastor will stay away from this meeting, because we want you here. Then too, we are looking forward to our Evangelistic Campaign from April 11-25. Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor of the First Christian church, Norfolk, Va., will be with us, and do the preaching, and that means we are to have fine preaching. Write to us, think of us, pray for us, and help us along with the work in the Gate City.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT, Pastor.

DENDRON—WAKEFIELD CIRCUIT

I am serving as pastor for the fifth year in this field. The people have shown an appreciative spirit and that has given encouragement to the work. When we think about what might have been accomplished, and what we have desired to see, it seems that we have come short and yet when we begin to check up, it occurs to us that after all the work has been worth while.

We found one missionary society in the field, now there are seven. One Ladies' Aid Society has been organized. The duplex envelope system has been introduced and is being used in four of the churches. The duplex envelope has been introduced in two of the Sunday schools and an offering is made for missions each Sunday. Another makes an offering for missions once per month. The others will follow soon.

The pastor's salary has been raised three times, the recent raise being $400.00. More than a year ago the churches purchased a parsonage and the last call to the pastor was for an indefinite time.

The people have been very considerate of our physical needs. Besides poundings reported we have often received many good things to eat. At the Christmas time we received a turkey, goose, a ham and five dollars in money.

An encouraging feature of the work is the interest taken in missions by our young people. I neglected to mention the Y. P. S. Christian Endeavor that has been organized at Dendron.

We are hoping for the best year yet. With the Men and Millions Forward Movement Campaign now on we have a proposition that is big enough to challenge the best that there is in every life and we are hoping to get as many as possible to line up in this great movement.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The value of land is measured by its productive capacity or its relation to business. If it produce trees, with lumber value, it thereby becomes valuable; if it produce corn, wheat, potatoes, orchard fruits, or grass, it becomes valuable in proportion to its capacity for production. Again, if human population increases and business grows, until a city is created, then land becomes valuable by reason of its proximate relation to such conditions. In that case, the value is created by human conditions. The truth is, that the human element puts value on land. The man who tills the land makes it valuable, if he is valuable. Land values are some times reduced by the low character of the human beings who reside on a street or in suburbs.

The value of people is measured by their capacity to produce what others need. The farmer is valuable, the lumberman, the miner, the inventor, the discoverer; the trader puts new values on property and thereby increases prosperity by increasing activity. The man who produces ideas and makes others think, the composer who produces music and makes others sing, the author who produces books and makes others read, the Christian who produces character and makes others better; all these are valuable assets in society.

The man who gives and makes others give is valuable. Liberality has value as well as business. There is one place on earth that receives all the time and gives nothing, and that is the dead sea. The river Jordan pours all its waters into it, and other streams from the mountains empty their snow-water into its bosom; but the dead sea gives out no stream to enrich land, slake thirst, or to produce power. Nothing can live in its waters, not even grass or moss. No fish swims in its depths. It receives, but it does not give. No green willow grows on its shores. Desolation surrounds it, and death within its waters.

Organizations and men are measured by what they give. "It is more blessed to give than to receive," said Jesus, and it was one of His great utterances. Liberality is not only a Christian virtue, it is a Christian necessity; "by their fruits ye shall know them." The value of Christians is measured by what they give to the Kingdom and not what they get from the Kingdom. Life depends on a double action of the lungs—inbreathing and outbreathing. Lungs cannot act in one direction alone and support life. The Christian cannot receive from God and not give to God and live. Life receives and gives. The earth itself teaches us this great lesson. If the earth did not give moisture to the clouds, the clouds would give no rain. The coal gives out the heat it had received and we are warm, the engines pull the train, pump the water, and grind the grain. If one wants to see a useless Christian, let him look at an old engine that gives no power—a worn-out engine, fit only for the junk heap. The Christian to live the Christian life must give money, service, influence, love, example, and life to God and to others.

W. W. STALEY.

THE OLD AND THE NEW WAY

The beaten paths of the fathers of the Christian Church, the pioneer preachers and laymen were packed very hard by repeated travel. Over and over them they passed again and again without much onward movement but they held the ground and helped to open the way for the present great success and activity of the Church. They worked with the best light and means at their command. Perhaps they did not do their best, but they were mainly honest, hearty, healthy, hard working, devoted men. They were deficient in many ways and things and they knew it, but most of them did what they could under the conditions of their times. From place to place they traveled in the cold regions of the North and over the sunny and burning plains of the South with much inconvenience and very little salaries, but they kept right on trying to do more and more, and they did much good. You have studied Peter and John with devoted and increasing interest. What did you think of their first work with Jesus? What did you think of them after they got right and were filled with pentecostal power? What did you think of Paul when he first played with sin and the world? What do you think of him today as he stood on Mars Hill, and worked and moved with such tactful and missionary skill during his wonderful and inspired evangelistic preaching? No doubt, you think he was a godly, manly man.

To be brief, you need not be told of the great men in all ages and different parts of the world who have done so much to make the Church what it is today. They have ceased to labor, but their works in a glad, generous glorious way live after them.

Says the young, new life of the present day: "Why didn't these good old saints do as we are doing in 1920? Do things and move the world into more Christian activity and liberality?" Because the opportune time had not come. The fullness of times had not come. The leaven which they put in the service has been working its way through the kingdom until now, and this is the time for its greater rising success. Don't despise your parents because they were not as well educated as you are; don't dislike them because they did not make money like you do; don't depreciate their worth because they do not have the style nor wear the fine fashionable clothes as you do. They are dead—but they are living in you today. Water does not rise above its level.

Why didn't the great Methodist and Baptist Churches with their millions of men and money raise five or six hundred millions of dollars before this great, glad, eventful day of getting and giving? They were full well able to do these large things before, but the time for this large work had not come. They did great things with their people and means before this flood of greatness came, but they are doing even greater now, and will do far more, as they have started on the flowing tide of church liberality.

The Christian Church wants to do her part, and is doing it well. Because the fullness of time has come, and it will become fuller and fuller all the time. They have not been asleep all the time as some say. The time has come to begin their greatest and best service of giving to extend the Kingdom of Jesus to the world. Then the work will be largely educational, and will make it far more easy in coming years to raise means for Christian work.

Expect, too, that all the ministers, active ones at least, are giving liberally of their small salaries to the calls and needs of the Church. Those favored with getting good salaries ought to be willing to give as they have been willing to receive. Where much is given more ought to be expected. Have not been informed as to the amounts the preachers give, and have no anxiety to know, but suppose they all do their best part, and if any are too old to contribute liberally it may be unfortunate for them. The writer of these remarks has said nothing in print before on this subject but that in itself did not prove any lack of interest in him. But wishes to say that he desires to do what he can for the needs of the Church. And besides this there were others better prepared in every way to speak and to write on these vital subjects, and he did not think it best to take the space and place of those who could discuss it better and more successfully. Silence is best some times. The silent forces of nature are none the less useful because they are not speaking in tones of thunder.

In the onward, rapid progress of human thought, generosity, benevolence, great advancement and achievements, do not let us forget the beginning of the work, nor despise the day of small things. Remembering it was the beginning that laid the foundation for the construction and reconstruction of these wonderful, welcome, working days.

MOCK OBSEQUIES

(Western Christian Advocate)

The obsequies of John Barleycorn were the sensation of the hour last week, when the nation went dry from constitutional enactment. It is reported that Billy Sunday and his evangelistic party at Norfolk, Va., in the presence of ten thousand people, held one of the most spectacular services in his tabernacle.

The ceremony began at the railroad station, where the "corpse," in a casket twenty feet long, arrived on "a special train from Milwaukee." Twenty pallbearers placed the casket on a carriage and marched beside it through the streets to Mr. Sunday's tabernacle, while His Satanic Majesty trailed behind in deep mourning and anguish.

At the tabernacle door Mr. Sunday met the "corpse" with a delighted grin and led the way to its resting place while he preached the sermon. The devil, wearing a mask and assuming a state of deep dejection, sat with the party of mourners.

Perhaps no man in this country has delivered more severe blows on the body of the booze business than he. Thank God the victory has come! The Christian people have led in the fight, and on them rests the responsibility of keeping the nation sober.

The British newspaper fraternity chafed under the restraints of the censorship during the great war and one of them made the following fling at the censor:

"Cannon to the left of them, cannon to the right of them, cannon behind them, volleyed and thundered." So quoted the enthusiastic war correspondent. But the censor cut out this passage. "Can't be giving away the positions of our artillery," commented he, sagely.—The Argonaut.

MISSIONARY

RICHMOND, VA.

This personal line explains itself and will be of interest to others as well as to the Mission Secretary:

“Rev. J. O. Atkinson,
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Brother Atkinson:—

By having Brother Eastes here at Winchester in a meeting yesterday, I got the chance to go over and hold a service with the Richmond, Va. people. They have a splendid auditorium, with a seating capacity of four or five hundred, with beautiful surroundings and in a good location. Those associated with the movement are deeply interested and very enthusiastic; there were twenty present at the Sunday school and twenty-seven at the church service. They are planning to have some good speaker give them an address every Sunday morning until I take up the work regularly. Mr. N. C. Scott, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the State Sunday School Association, will address them next Sunday. They want you one Sunday in February if possible.

Yours truly,
W. T. Walters.”

Will SUN readers who know members of the Christian Church in Richmond, please send their names and addresses to Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., Winchester, Va., who is to take up the work for us in Richmond, March 1, 1920, or to the writer?

SOME STARTLING FACTS

Here are some startling facts which we glean from The Christian Advocate (New York) and they should be heeded by our people:

“From figures compiled by Dr. Walter S. Athearn, head of the religious education division of the Inter-church World Movement, it is evident that the Protestants who profess the faith in its fullness have been much more lax in the religious training of their youth than other religious bodies. The 1,600,000 Jewish children in the United States receive 250 hours of religious instruction annually, and the 8,000,000 Catholic children are instructed in religion 200 hours a year, while Protestant children receive during the year an average of only twenty-four hours' religious education. Furthermore, this authority claims that there are 27,000,000 Protestant boys and girls not affiliated with a Sunday school. According to Dr. Athearn, the Protestant churches of America spend three times as much for the services of their church janitor as they do on the religious education of their children.

“If we are to have a Church militant and triumphant we must have a Church intelligent. One generation of youth, properly taught the saving principles of the Christ they have been persuaded to accept as Lord and Master, would afford the most secure foundation for the evangelization of the whole world.”

This looks like that the Protestant Church is facing a big issue. She has every means of meeting it, and let us pray and work that she may.

Dr. W. A. Harper was in Raleigh last Sunday and spoke at the Christian church in the absence of Pastor Eastes.

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE OF THE
MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT
OUTLINES THE CAMPAIGN'S OBJECTIVES

Giving The Church a Chance

In the Men and Millions Forward Movement, about which SUN readers are reading and our Christian forces are beginning to think, my heart's desire and prayer to God is that a whole Church shall have a chance. From youth up I have believed in the people. Give every man and woman, boy and girl, rich and poor, learned and unlearned, a chance to do the right thing, and the right thing will get done. I do not mean by that that all of us do the right thing every time we have the opportunity. But I do mean that those who have been redeemed and brought from darkness into light by the saving power of the blessed Christ only wish to know what is their duty, what their privilege is, and then given the opportunity, they will, by the help of God, do that duty and avail themselves of that privilege. I have craved with all my heart that all the people of the Southern Christian Convention should have a chance at doing their duty in behalf of all the benevolences that the Church has undertaken, or may undertake. If I understand at all the significance of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, it is that every man, woman and child in the Church shall have an opportunity to do something through their church to advance the Kingdom of their Lord.

We have men of a ripe old age amongst us who have given their lives with all their energy, effort and enthusiasm to the service of their Church. They are now too far advanced in life to make a living. It behooves the Church of the living God to take care of such men, and this Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that we shall do the right thing by these good and faithful servants of the Cross, and shall see to it that they have a competency during their last days on earth that will make them glad of the labors they have wrought, and happy in the love of the Church to which they have given their lives.

We have an Orphans' Home to get well-established and to provide for. The demands of this Home are constantly increasing and the plans for its enlargement must be constantly prosecuted, and a growing number of fatherless and motherless children must be cared for. All of us in the Church ought to have a hand and a part in caring for these needy ones. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that we shall establish on a solid and fixed basis our Orphans' Home, and shall carry it on with greater efficiency and better equipment.

We have a Church paper and other publications which must be provided for, and through the years we have had to struggle and lay plans and make efforts to keep the paper going and the editor supported, and have had to limit our printed page and our work of publicity to exceedingly narrow confines and limitations. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that we shall have a fund with which to put on a sure and safe basis not only THE CHRISTIAN SUN, but other needed publications of the Church. Publications should increase and multiply amongst us, making known to the world the holy and heavenly principles which are so near and dear to our hearts, and which the world stands so much in need of.

In our Georgia and Alabama Conferences for years the brethren there have been clamoring for a school or college in which our own young people, who are to enlist in church work in the years to come, may be educated and, so far, nothing practical has been done. All of us who are at all acquainted with the situation have come to realize that these claims are just and that these needs are pressing, and that such a school or college must be built. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that our brethren of the far South shall have their dreams realized, and see their hearts' desires materialized.

We have never had in many of the Conferences the funds wherewith to help educate needy young men preparing for the ministry, who desired help in obtaining an education. I have never known in all my day our Heavenly Father to call from a home of wealth and ease and luxury a man to preach the Gospel. The men who enter the Gospel ministry, as a rule, come from very humble homes and are of very limited circumstances; and at the very time when they most need help, the hand that can help and will help is most doubtful and hesitating. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that we shall have a fund with which to help every worthy young man in the Christian Church who is preparing for the Gospel ministry, at home or abroad, to get ready for his work and give him aid at the time when that aid is most needed and most effectual.

Our own Elon College has recently been helped by many strong men and women in the Church. Yet that help was not sufficient in view of the changing standards of the educational agencies, and there are hundreds who were not called upon to help in the Standardization Drive, who were as willing to help on a small scale as those that did help on a large scale. These want a part in helping to sustain and carry to greater usefulness and power our beloved institution which has trained so many of our ministers and so many of the best young men and young women of our Church throughout the South. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that thousands who wanted to do so may have some opportunity at least in dividing their means for the support of this institution that is leading us on, and has for years led us on to even greater and greater tasks.

And then our Church has ever been backward in the matters of missions, home and foreign. After a hundred years, we are just beginning to awake and there are thousands in the Church who desire to have a part in planting Churches in centers where we have no Christian Churches now, and in sending out missionaries to the lands which need the gospel. The Field Secretary has only been able through personal effort to reach a few individuals in this great behalf in these two years. He desires that every man, woman and child in the churches of the Southern Christian Convention shall have the same opportunity to help plant

Christian churches and send out missionaries that the few have had during these few years of personal appeal and personal work, and that all shall have a hand in spreading the good news of our Lord in all parts of the earth. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that every man, woman and child, shall have such an appeal and shall have the privilege of saying that "My Church gave to me the same opportunity that other Churches have given to other individuals and that my Church had already given to a few individuals."

We, all of us, know that our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies lag and many of them are inefficient. We have no man or men amongst us giving their whole time to the development of the Sunday school work and the carrying on of Christian Endeavor work amongst us. We should be planting Sunday schools where we haven't them, so that churches might grow out of them, and we should be planting Christian Endeavor Societies where we haven't them and all of our Sunday schools should have the help of some individuals' time, effort and thought who is giving his whole life to Sunday school and Christian Endeavor development. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that all our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies are to receive a real impetus and are to have the benefit of the aid of an individual or individuals in the Church who will be giving all his time, effort and strength to making for us more and better Sunday school and Endeavor Societies.

We haven't half the Missionary Societies among the women, the young people and the men that we should have. We are only beginning to realize what these Societies really mean for a church and the great majority of our churches have not yet had the privilege and benefit of such Societies. This Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that redoubled efforts are to be put forth with increased means to plant Missionary Societies for men, women and young people in all our churches and that the missionary spirit is to be developed in our homes and in our communities to the glory of our Heavenly Father and to the advancement of His cause.

Then I know full well that the accumulated wealth of our day is leading to increased extravagance. Unless the Church can open up increasing channels of benevolence for the outlet of our increasing wealth, our civilization is heading in the same direction that the civilizations of the past have headed in. Be it remembered that nations have gone to pieces, not because of poverty and want, but because of riches and extravagance. We are living in a delirium of extravagance and our only hope is that the Church of the living God will so busy itself, that a constantly increasing amount of God's good money shall be directed to the saving work of God among the peoples and the nations who know Him not.

We are needing today recruits by the score and by the hundreds to prepare to spread the Gospel in our own land and to carry it to other lands. A thousand strong young men in the Christian homes of the Southern Christian Convention ought today to be offering themselves as ministers and preparing to be missionaries. One thousand young women should be preparing to give their efforts and their lives and hearts to the spreading of the Gospel and the carrying of the message of the Gospel to the millions who have not heard it. The Men and Millions Forward Movement means, if it means anything, that we unitedly ought to pray to our Heavenly Father that He send laborers into His vineyard, for surely the fields are white unto the harvest and the laborers are so very few.

Brethren and beloved, we shall do this great and good thing, and our dear Church shall go forward by leaps and bounds if we all of us shall undertake this task in the name and for the sake of our Lord and His Christ.

I am willing to admit that the sum to be raised is large and the number of men and women to be found is large, but he was preaching the gospel of light and of right and of wisdom who said, "If God is your partner, make your plans large." And surely God is our partner in this our noblest, greatest, most unselfish undertaking for Him.

J. O. ATKINSON, Chairman.

Elon College, N. C.

HEARTILY ENDORSES IT

T. J. Holland

I heartily endorse the Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention and hope we will be able to put it over on time and in good spirit.

IT WILL REACH HIGH AND LOW

Rev. J. G. Truitt

The Men and Millions Forward Movement is, in my opinion, going to fill some of the present great needs of our Church. I am glad it is being launched. By it we shall be able to learn who we are and where we are, even into the very highways and hedges. It may be likened unto a renovating and airing out process for our whole Christian Church in the South. Into it the sunlight of God's love will shine, bringing into view for service the widow's son as well as her mite. Our Church is greatly in need of both. Like the Father's love it will reach high and low, great and small alike and abundantly bless all that it touches.

A CHANCE TO DO OUR UTMOST

Wesley Webb

The work that has been outlined by the Campaign Committee for this Forward Movement is comprehensive and will give everybody an opportunity to do his utmost for the cause of Christ in the world, and every member of the Christian Church should enter into the campaign heartily and work with the utmost possible earnestness and zeal.

IT MEANS AN AROUSED CHURCH

Rev. W. M. Jay

It seems to me that this is the greatest opportunity that has yet presented itself to our Church. It is team work by which every member of the Church is to be reached. Individual work gets money but team work gets not only money but produces results far beyond mere money-getting. It seems an aroused Church, an awakened Church, a Church interested in and working for the things in which it only had a passing interest and many in the Church not having even that.

TIME TO SETTLE UP

Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D.

Two million dollars for the Kingdom from the Southern Christian Convention? Certainly. Why not? Think of the years that we have given practically nothing. It may be that some of us owe debts to God that are long standing. God has not withheld His blessings from us even if we have been tightening our purse strings. It is getting about time to settle up. There are folks today in the Church, plenty of them, who have money in the bank over their signatures that belong to God. You will grow in grace a thousand times more rapidly and your treasury's will not run dry if you will walk up like a man and settle.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell

The announcement that the Christian Church is preparing to give its members an opportunity to undertake large things for the Master and His Kingdom, is the best news I have heard since November 11, 1918. It is good news because it shows that we have recognized the world need of Christ's message and Christ's Kingdom and because it shows that we are willing to do our part towards supplying that need. It will bless both the world and the Church.

PRAYER AND CO-OPERATION NEEDED

Mrs. Alice A. Lincoln

A personal appeal to each member will convey to him the real need of the general enterprises of the Church.

The benefit derived there from will strengthen and enrich the giver not in proportion to what they contribute but the spirit that prompted the giving.

Backed by the prayerful co-operation of the entire membership success will attend the undertaking.

AN AWAKENING FROM OUR LONG SLUMBER

Rev. A. W. Andes

The launching of the Men and Millions Forward Movement is but another evidence of our awakening from our long slumber to the larger things of the Kingdom. What a pity we did not awake long ago! How much larger and stronger we would have been today, and what a large part we might have had in the Lord's great redemption plan for the world! There may be some among us who will hang back as they have always done, and refuse to take any part in this great movement toward bigger and better things for the Kingdom, but let us hope their numbers will be very small. The masses of our people will catch the larger vision, and imbibe more of the spirit of liberality, and lend a stronger hand to the advancement of the Kingdom.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

EARLY TRAINING IN CITIZENSHIP

The problems arising in the reconstruction period demand quite as much devotion to country as those of the war. Conditions of social unrest can only be settled by justice and right training in citizenship. The kindergarten provides this right training early in life. The hope of our nation lies in our children and all of the 4,300,000 little ones of kindergarten age should have this training which only 500,000 are now receiving.

The democratic kindergarten is the ideal place for first lessons in efficiency, adaptability, and good citizenship. The games teach fair play, honesty and consideration for the rights of others; the patriotic songs and stories sow the seed of love of country; the block building, clay modeling and paper work lay the foundations of the skilled mechanic and teach head and hand to work together.

If more of our neglected little children could have this splendid training in honesty, efficiency and self-control, there would be a tremendous saving of money to the State in the maintenance of reformatories, prisons and asylums. Our park benches contain many pathetic examples of dishonest, inefficient, lawless men whose early years were wasted. What better investment can we make of our time, our money and our effort than to forestall this lamentable result of neglect by early training in honesty, efficiency and adaptability, making citizens who are an asset and not a liability to the State?

Appreciation of the kindergarten is growing, and parents all over the country should work to secure its advantages for their little ones, all of whom are entitled to receive them.

CONSCIENCE NOT FOR SALE

All honor to Charles Evans Hughes and William Howard Taft! "When the liquor men began casting about for a man to contest constitutional prohibition in the courts, they decided to look for some one of social prominence," says the Christian Century. They laid down on the table in front of Charles Evans Hughes a check for $150,000. The great jurist replied: "I would not champion this cause before the courts for any sum of money you could name." Failing to buy Mr. Hughes, they next went to William Howard Taft and placed before him a signed check, telling him to fill it in for any amount he wanted. The reply of this statesman will be memorable: "Gentlemen, you couldn't pile enough gold on this continent to induce me to take your case before the courts and before the public, for I will have you know my conscience is not for sale." In sad contrast to these stalwart men stands Elihu Root, in dark shadow, attorney for the liquor men.—Evangelical.

CHAPTER X

SOLEMNIZATION OF MARRIAGE

1. Marriage was instituted by God, and is the union of one man and one woman; and they should never be within the degrees of consanguinity or affinity prohibited by the Word of Inspiration.

2. Marriage ought to take place only between persons capable of making their own choice, and should be solemnized by ministers of the Gospel.

3. The minister having received a license, or being satisfied that the parties may rightfully be united in the state of matrimony, at the time and place appointed, the persons to be married shall appear before the minister, the woman on the left of the man.

GENERAL MARRIAGE CEREMONY

Dearly Beloved, we are assembled in the sight of God and before these witnesses to join together in the holy estate of matrimony and

Forasmuch as marriage is holy, being instituted by God in the time of man's innocency, and confirmed by the word of Christ, it is incumbent on all who seek this holy estate to duly consider its sacred obligations and enter therein soberly, discreetly, and in the fear of God.

I, therefore, charge all present, and especially you who seek the married estate, that if any can show just cause why these persons should not be joined together that he instantly speak, or else hereafter forever hold his peace.

Join your right hands.

The minister then says:

Wilt thou,, take this woman to be thy wedded wife, to live together after God's Word in the holy estate of matrimony; and wilt thou pledge thyself before God and this company to be to her a faithful and loving husband, and, forsaking all others, keep thee only unto her, so long as ye both shall live?

The man shall answer:

I will

The minister then says:

Wilt thou,, take this man to be thy wedded husband, to live together after God's Word in the holy estate of matrimony; and wilt thou pledge thyself before God and this company to be to him a faithful and loving wife, and, forsaking all others, keep thee only unto him, so long as ye both shall live?

The woman shall answer:

I will.

The minister then says:

Forasmuch as you have covenanted together in holy wedlock before God and these witnesses, I pronounce you husband and wife, according to the laws of the land and the Word of Almighty God.

The minister then offers the following prayer, all standing with bowed heads:

O eternal God, creator and preserver of all mankind, giver of all spiritual grace, the author of everlasting life, send thy blessings upon these thy servants, this man and this woman, that as Isaac and Rebecca lived faithfully together, so these persons may surely perform and keep the covenant and vow betwixt them made, and may ever remain in perfect love and peace together, and live according to thy laws, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE RING CEREMONY

The parties to be married standing before the minister, the woman on the left of the man.

"Grace to you and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ."

"And the Lord God said: It is not good that the man should be alone; I will make him an help meet for him." "Therefore shall a man leave his father and his mother and shall cleave unto his wife: and they shall be one flesh."

"Wives, submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as it is fit in the Lord. Husbands, love your wives." "Let everyone of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband."

Then shall the minister say:

Dearly Beloved: We are assembled in the sight of God and before this company to join together in the holy estate of matrimony and

Forasmuch as marriage is holy, being instituted by God in the time of man's innocency and confirmed by the word of Christ it is incumbent on all who seek this holy estate to duly consider its sacred obligations, and enter therein soberly, discreetly, and in the fear of God.

I therefore charge all present and especially you who seek the married estate, that if any can show just cause why these persons should not be joined together, he now speak, or else hereafter forever hold his peace.

Join your right hands.

Then shall the minister say:

Wilt thou,, take this woman to be thy wedded wife, to live together after God's Word in the holy estate of matrimony; and wilt thou pledge thyself before God and this company to be to her a faithful and loving husband; and, forsaking all others, keep thee only unto her so long as ye both shall live?

The man shall answer:

I will.

Wilt thou,, take this man to be thy wedded husband, to live together after God's Word in the holy estate of matrimony; and wilt thou pledge thyself before God and this company to be to him a faithful and loving wife, and, forsaking all others, keep thee only unto him so long as ye both shall live?

The woman shall answer:

I will.

Then shall follow the giving away of the woman, (which may be omitted if desired), the minister saying:

Who giveth this woman to be married to this man?

The person giving her away shall answer:

I do.

The bridegroom shall then pass the ring to the bride and the bride to the minister, who holding it up shall say:

This ring, given and taken, is a symbol of nuptial love. It is pure, and under fiery trial shines with a richer luster. Its form, being a circle, is without end. It is therefore a fitting seal to your marriage vows and the sign to you of an endless bond.

The minister then gives the ring to the bridegroom, who places it upon the fourth finger of the bride's left hand, the bride and groom then joining their right hands, and the minister continuing:

Forasmuch as you have covenanted in holy wedlock before God and these witnesses, giving and taking the ring as the seal, I pronounce you husband and wife, according to the laws of the land and the Word of Almighty God.

"What therefore God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

All standing with bowed head.

O eternal God, creator and preserver of all mankind, giver of all spiritual grace, the author of everlasting life, send thy blessings upon these thy servants, this man and this woman, that as Isaac and Rebecca lived faithfully together, so these persons may surely perform and keep the vow and covenant betwixt them made and may ever remain in perfect love and peace together, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

(To be continued next week)

Dr. J. U. Newman, Elon College, N. C., writes: "I finished second reading of THE SUN. Getting better all the time. Last issue was great in inspiration and vision. Today is the birth of a new era in the Christian Church."

TWO PAPERS ADVANCE SUBSCRIPTION RATE

The Christian Observer, Louisville, Kentucky, increases its subscription price from $2.50 to $3.00 the year to help meet the high cost of print paper and labor.

The Greensboro Daily News, Greensboro, N. C., changes its subscription rate from $7.00 to $9.00 the year to help get by with increased cost of production.

NOTE FOR NORTH CAROLINA ENDEAVORERS

Had you thought about your State Christian Endeavor Convention? The date is June 11-13, and the place is Greensboro. Coming? Lawrence C. Little of Louisiana, will be there; Karl Lehmann, of Tennessee, will be there; Miss Grace Hooper, of Nebraska, will be there, and—listen! Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of Boston, will be in the Convention. The above have accepted our invitation, and invitations have been extended to two other speakers of great reputation, and we are pretty sure they are going to be with us. Look out for final announcements.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

NOW AND THEN

Each goal set for 1919 was reached and passed. The Superintendent is wearing a very broad smile and is very grateful for the loyal support of the pastors, Sunday school workers, and friends. Four years ago the total income for the Orphanage was less than six thousand dollars. The Thanksgiving offering was $2,000.00. The year 1919 has an income of $25,000.00, and the Thanksgiving offering was more than eight thousand dollars.

Four years ago we had an indebtedness of about seven thousand dollars. Today we have no indebtedness. Four years ago we had forty-five children. Today we have sixty children. During the past three years the Orphanage has bought and paid for more than six thousand dollars worth of land and made considerable improvement on the Orphanage building. I mention these facts to show that the Orphanage is making some progress. It has been brought about by our people getting more interested in the Orphanage work. Still our people have not done as much as they ought to have done. Just think our Church established the Christian Orphanage in the year 1905. Its doors were opened for the admittance of children in 1907. We have been running for thirteen years and still have just the one building. Our Church is strong enough and able to support one hundred children and we ought to build a new building every five years and equip it and fill it with the little helpless tots. The Orphanage should hold a very tender spot in the heart of every church member in the Southern Christian Convention. Everybody should be willing to give to help care for the helpless.

We want to build, during this year, a home for small children and equip it and give the little tots a home. We have in cash more than two thousand dollars contributed toward building that home. How much, dear reader, do you want to see that fund grow? Let us know by the amount of your contribution.

Our January offerings have started off nicely and the income for the month of January has been the largest we have ever had for the month of January.

Let us make the year 1920 the best year in the history of the Institution. Let everybody pull together and pull all the year—and it will be surprising to know just what our people can do. They are just beginning to know they can do things.

CHILDREN'S LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little boy seven years old. I am sending a dime for the little orphan children. I wish you all a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Love to all.—Joe Stuart, Jr.

We had a happy Christmas and "Old Santa" came to see us. You must write often this year.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little boy six years old, but little boys can help, so I'm sending a dime for January and will send more soon. Mother used to belong to the Corner when she was a little girl, and she told me about the little orphans.—Jennings Hargroves.

Glad to have your letter to start the New Year with. You must write often for the Corner.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am sending a dime to the little cousins. I hope they are well. I had a fine Christmas.—Hoyle Spivey.

Glad you had a fine Christmas. Our little folks had several presents each and enjoyed Christmas very well.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—Mother has been reading to us the letter from the cousins and I am writing to know if I may join with them. I am in the third grade and my teacher is Miss Eugenia Jones. Hope you and the little girls and boys had a jolly Christmas. Love for all.—Jack Hargroves, Jr.

We gladly welcome you to the Corner and trust you will write often this year.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I have been too busy to write. We have moved from Oklahoma to Virginia and are now living with Grandma Andes. I have big times playing with Uncle Alfred's little boys who live near. Enclosed please find my dues for November, December and January.—Lester B. Frank.

Glad you have come back to Virginia and I know Grandma was glad to see you.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I want to join the band of cousins. My daddy is a farmer and when I am old enough I want to be just like him. I am going to help my mother and daddy to make some money to send to the Corner. Love and best wishes for a Happy New Year.—James Everett Hargroves.

You are a boy after my own heart. I was a farmer boy too, and still like to farm. You must come to see us some time.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I want to wish you and all the cousins the happiest New Year of your lives. I have been sick with the croup and a bad cough. The doctor gave me some bad medicine and I think I am improving, although I don't like to take it. Mother holds me while daddy pours it down my throat. Enclosed find check for 50 cents, my dues for January. With love and best wishes to you and the cousins.—Olive D. Poythress, Jr.

Now, I am sorry you have been sick and had to take bad medicine. It is not a bit good, is it? You must write often for the Corner this year.—"Uncle Charley."

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 8, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject: Peter at Lydda and Joppa. Acts 9:32-43.

Time: A. D. 40.

Place: Lydda and Joppa.

Golden Text: The prayer of faith shall save him that is sick, and the Lord shall raise him up.

Devotional Reading: Psalm 61, Luke 5:17-26.

Adult Topic: The Secret of Spiritual Power.

Peter's experience at Samaria, treated in last Sunday's lesson, convinced him that the greatest need of the new church was Christ's method of teaching—that is, in making missionary tours around the country and not confining himself to Jerusalem. Accordingly today we have him in Lydda—a rich little town in the plain of Sharon about a day's journey from Jerusalem. And as he went about, seemingly without aim, he came on one Aeneas, a paralytic of eight years—as if directed thereby some unseen but omnipresent hand. And Peter said unto him: "Jesus Christ maketh thee whole." How willing the apostle was to place the credit where it belonged! It was Jesus who had done the miracle through Peter and the latter did not detract from its glory by claiming it, as Simon the tanner might have done for himself.

This is a strong lesson for the world today. At the Paris Conference nations were too willing to set up claims to all the spoils instead of giving credit where it was due. Be it said for our representatives in that conclave, that while they may have been guilty of errors in judgment and foresight, still they stood stronger than any others for credit to those principles on which the war was actually won. In business we are too often guilty of misrepresentation to prove a point or drive a sale. Let us give credit to whom credit is due and though we may lose the immediate sale, we are sure to win in the bigger business of life.

From Lydda Peter went to Joppa (now Jaffa on the Palestinian coast)—a nearby town where he lifted up from death a certain woman, Dorcas, who had been full of good works. What greater miracle than by simple prayers to pass over that border whenever there is no human return and bring back a Christian worker to her loved ones! What power to achieve such marvel! And still how simple the method of achieving this this power. Prayer conquers everything. Then, in our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work, let us make it a very real and permanent part of our service. Pray simply; pray fervently.

"And God shall make divinely real
The highest forms of thine ideal."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 15, 1920

J. Vincent Knight

"What Prayer Will Accomplish."
Psalms 34:122.

The one outstanding need of the Church in the present crisis is prayer. Every great movement of the world has been born and developed in prayer, and even the Son of God Himself recognized its place in the development of all programs for the betterment of world conditions. The great forward movements of the Church today were born in prayer, and the one essential thing to make it a valid success and a complete victory is the earnest prayers of the whole Church. The great underlying danger to be avoided is the neglecting danger to be avoided the neglect of prayer. We must not forget to pray in order that the work be pleasing to our Christ.

Prayer increases our faith, delivers our souls from sin, opens the soul to God, enlists us for active service and brings the richest blessings of heaven to our sin-sick souls. Without the prayer life our souls would starve and die. It does not take a prophet to proclaim a new revelation of prayer, for each of us can readily see the need. How shall we get it? You cannot revolve the wheel and bring back the family altar again as much as we would like to see it. So the next best thing to do is to emphasize the "Quiet Hour," and make it a practical thing, for our churches need a new revelation that can come through nothing except prayer. Our young people's societies ought to be a real power for God because of the great things they can accomplish through prayer. Let us get behind our Forward Movement and pray it through, for we shall never be able to reach the goal except through much prayer.

POND-JOHNSON

On December 27, 1919, at the residence of the bride's parents, Deacon and Mrs. T. W. Johnson, near Waverly, Va., Alice Ophelia Johnson was united in marriage to Albert Henry Pond, of Cleveland, Ohio.

It was a quiet, beautiful home wedding, only the immediate family being present. Miss Gladys Johnson, the bride's sister was the only attendant; she carried pink carnations. The bride wore a traveling dress of mid-night blue and carried brides' roses. They left immediately for Washington, Niagara Falls and Cleveland.

The bride will be greatly missed throughout our community but we wish for both the happiness that comes when hearts as well as hands are united. Ceremony performed by the writer.

JAS. L. FOSTER.

ANDES-LINEWEAVER

On December 15, 1919 Mr. Samuel E. Andes and Miss Pearl Lineweaver were quietly married at the home of the officiating minister. Both are residents of Brooklyn, Iowa, and are relatives of the writer. After a visit among other relatives in Virginia they returned to Brooklyn where they are making their home.

BRITTON-JOHNSON HAMILTON-SMITH

On Sundry morning, January 18, 1920, at 10:30 at the home of Mr and Mrs. S. J. Johnson, near Holy Neck church, occurred a very pretty but quiet double wedding scene.

The contracting parties were James Thomas Britton and Annie May Johnson; also John Wade Hamilton and Sylvia Ionia Smith.

Mr. Britton is the son of J. T. Britton, a farmer living near Holland, and Miss Johnson is the daughter of S. J. Johnson, also a farmer of near Holland.

Mr. Hamilton is the son of the late J. T. Hamilton, deceased, and Mrs. Claude Wilkins, his mother and Miss Smith is the daughter of W. J. Smith, a farmer of near Holland.

Both Mr. Hamilton and Mr. Britton will pursue their usual occupation of farming in the nearby community and we wish the happy couples a most prosperous and happy life. The ceremony was performed by the writer.

W. M. JAY.

GWALTNEY

Maude Blanche Gwaltney was born February 14, 1898 and died January 20, 1920, at 6:30 P. M. The "flu" more than one year ago left her weakened so that she never fully rallied. For the past six or eight months she has struggled against tuberculosis till quietly and trustfully the end came at the above date.

She was the loving daughter of Mrs. Virginia Raines of Waverly, Va. She leaves three brothers and one sister to mourn their loss: Samuel, Harry T., Robert and Mrs. Mollie Padgett. "Maude," as every one called her, was very popular. She served at the post-office window for quite a while, was reared in Waverly, Va., had been a member of the Christian Sunday school from a little girl and joined the church ten or twelve years ago. She was faithful in attendance till she moved to where she retired and was too feeble. Her love to mother was beautiful and her trust in Jesus Christ that of a loving child.

The burial services were held at the home, the attendance was large, and the floral offerings were beautiful. Peace to her dust and joy forever to her soul. Services by her pastor.

JAS. L. FOSTER.

CRISMAN

William Wilson Crisman was born August 26, 1919 and died December 30, 1919, aged four months and four days. Little William was the son of Mr. and Mrs.

Maybery Crisman who are good people of the Methodist Church in Powell's Fort, and live near Joppa. Surviving the parents are a little brother and sister. It is hard to give up a little one like that, but he is safe in the arms of Jesus.

Funeral services were conducted at the home on January 1, 1920, by the writer.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—SIMMERS

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove from us our beloved friend and member, Mrs. Hattie Davis Simmers, therefore be it resolved:

First, That in her death our church has lost a member full of good works, whose life was an inspiration to us all.

Second, That while deeply lamenting her death, we realize that our loss is her gain, and pray that God may give us strength and wisdom to continue the work dear to her heart,

Third, That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives and pray that God may be their ever-present help and comfort,

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this church, and a copy be sent her husband, and to The Christian Sun for publication.

Adopted by the Linville Christian church, January 4, 1920.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

"THAT THEY GO FORWARD"

Our Ministers Called Into Conference

NO report, however lengthy, and no record, however accurate, can convey to our readers any adequate conception of the wonderful meeting of our pastors in the First Christian church, Greensboro, last Thursday and Friday, January 29 and 30. Pastors were there from every Conference and every quarter of our work, and they were there intent upon the "King's Business." It is doubtful if a conference has been held amongst us for a quarter of a century which was so harmonious in action, so united in purpose, so determined in effort and so glorious in fellowship as was this one. The workers, the leaders, the key men of the Church, to quote one speaker, "Had foregathered to take counsel together about the King's Business." All felt the gravity and the solemnity of the task and the occasion, and fully realized, seemingly, the monumental task now laid upon the Convention and the churches to which we are to give ourselves in the coming weeks and months. It seemed as if all present had heard the voice of the Lord which said unto Moses, "Speak unto the Children of Israel that they go forward." There was somehow a feeling that the time had come when God was speaking to the Church through us in unmistakable terms and that we were face to face with a real crisis in our history. In a marvelous and magnetic address which held his audience spellbound and swept the minds of all up and up to the highplaces, Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., of the Third church, Norfolk, Va., in the closing moments of the Convention declared: "God has brought His Church into judgment and our Church has now been put on trial. Which shall it be with us, progress or stagnation, life or death?" And every member of his audience felt that this dear Church of ours of the Southern Christian Convention is face to face with the most momentous issue that it has faced through the years.

There were speeches, papers, addresses and a program, but from the opening session on Thursday evening till the closing moments late on Friday night, the very atmosphere was tense with bigness, and surcharged with holy zeal and Heavenly vision. The brethren had met primarily for prayer and praise, for worship, for re-consecration, for dedication, for devotion, to a great plan, a great purpose and a great task. Much and often and long we tarried together on bended knees and with uplifted heart, until it seemed that we could hear the still, small voice and from our hearts could cry out "How dreadful is this place! This is none other than the house of God and the very gate of Heaven!"

We were to speak, plan and pray for the best methods of undertaking in all our churches the program of our glorious Men and Millions Forward Movement. A belated train Thursday evening interfered considerably with the arrival of many brethren and their part upon the program, but those who were present were greeted by a good house, and Rev. Victor A. Lightbourne, Convention Evangelist, after a song and prayer service, opened the meeting with a most eloquent and powerful address which he styled "Carry On." Brother Lightbourne took his theme from a battle front slogan and made a most eloquent appeal that we of the Christian Church, like true and devout Christian soldiers, march to the front and to the thick of the fight for Christian liberty, for Christian truth and Christian conquest under the blood-stained banner of the Cross. It was a fitting opening for a great conference, and touched the hearts of all present and gave a vision of courage and of battle which all of us need in these days of world upheaval, and of world conflict between the forces of righteousness and unrighteousness.

The Field Secretary of Missions, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, followed Brother Lightbourne with an explanation of the Campaign that we are putting on and made clear the purpose of this meeting. He told of how matters had gone which culminated in this great gathering, from the time when Col. J. E. West first publicly mentioned the matter of undertaking a great campaign, in his never-to-be-forgotten address before the Christian Missionary Association at Portsmouth, Virginia, December 7, 1919. It was told how from the first mention of our undertaking, a universal campaign designed to give every man, woman and child in all our churches a chance, the matter had taken fire and spread in every direction so that our people fully agree that the beginning was of God and the leading was of His divine wisdom.

Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., of Washington, D. C., followed in a masterful address under the topic, "Millions," in which was vividly portrayed a picture of the great ideal and the great thought of our day. We are thinking in terms of millions, both as related to men and to money. The recent world war made it easy for us to think in such terms, and possibly made this contribution to our time. If we of the Christian Church are to measure up to the demands of our day, we too must think in terms of millions, or be forgotten in the progress and plans of the times in which we live.

After a fitting prayer and song service, the first session of the pastor's conference for the Men and Millions Forward Movement came to a close and all felt that in deed and in truth it was glorious to be there. Our Greensboro First church gave the glad hand and liberal hospitality to all who were present and there was a clamor for delegates and visitors in many more homes than there were guests to go.

On Friday there were three sessions appointed to begin at 9 o'clock and last till 1, beginning at 2 and continuing till 6, and beginning at 7:30 and continuing until the conclusion of the program. It was indeed a busy day. Great things were planned and still greater things were accomplished.

Before the appointed hour of meeting Friday morning, the brethren had assembled and were engaged in a joyous song and prayer service. It lasted for an half hour, paving the way, as it did, for the sweet fellowship which was to obtain and the unity of purpose and action that was to prevail throughout the day. Rev. J. W. Harrell, D. D., of Burlington brought the Convention to its knees by a wonderful, thrilling and inspiring address on prayer. The speaker declared that some of the results of prayer were: (1) The awakening of the Church. "Prayer," declared the speaker, "is the central battle ground of this campaign. Through prayer we have got to get ready to be hurt, to be wounded, to be burdened and yet have the courage to advance and keep on advancing till triumph is declared and victory won. The great events of church history began in prayer. While the one hundred and twenty prayed in the upper chamber, God was making ready for Pentecost. Prayer results in a vision of the world's need, and this vision we must have if we are to get our hearts burdened with the spirit and the power which assures victory. Through prayer we get a vision of our resources. God wants live men and has no use for dead ones in the Church; and prayer it is that prepares the Church for action. Prayer results in courage, the courage to overcome in every time of trial, of doubt and of danger. Prayer results in larger faith and this large faith we must have, and it results in asking for large things and then best of all prayer results in that unity in which alone is strength and which alone assures victory and brings about that spirit of sacrifice which God is pleased to accept and use to the achievement of a great purpose in the world."

Dr. C. H. Rowland of Franklin, Virginia, spoke out of the depths of a great heart, appealed to the hearts, and reached the souls of his hearers in an impassioned address on "God's Claims on a Man's Life." Dr. Rowland told how two of his laymen, after the preaching service one day, followed him to his room, and said, "Give us of the Christian Church a chance. Other Churches have had a chance, and are having it to grapple with the great problems of our duty and to go forward, but our Church has not had such a privilege. Why do you preachers not give us a chance?" Dr. Rowland declared first of all that the preachers must let God set up an undisputed claim in their lives. "God has a claim on the preacher as a leader and when we feel and realize that God has a claim on us as the key men in His church, this wide world will be saved for Him. We are the key to God's claim on men for society, men for state, and men for every walk in life. It is the easiest task in the world to raise money. The speaker did not doubt for a moment but that the money asked for in this campaign would come and would easily come. But the most difficult task is going to be to get the men and the women of the Church to give God undisputed sway in their lives and let Him set up in their hearts His claim prior to every claim that is made upon us." Both Dr. Harrell's address and Dr. Rowland's eloquent and masterful heart-talk lifted the brethren to mountain heights and to where it is simply glorious to be, and all of us realized what Peter meant when he said, "Master, it is good to be here. Let us build three tabernacles."

Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., President of the Southern Christian Convention presented a paper on fundamentals which because of its depth and gripping power and wonderful sweep was, on request, not only read, but re-read. It was entitled, "Where Our Christian Church has Led." It was a great utterance from a great heart. "Leadership," declared Dr. Staley, "depends not upon members and prestige, but upon spirit and upon power. God does not always choose great and large things. He may, as did our blessed Christ, just say, 'A little child shall lead them.'" Equality or right has been advocated in the Christian Church from the beginning. It led in co-education, which has resulted in equal suffrage. It led in religious journalism and the fruit of this is the religious press. In 1852 Horace Mann opened Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, on equal terms to all men and women without regard to race or sex and this was the first institution, as far as the speaker knew, ever to do this prophetic thing. God helps men in the days of their realized and expressed need. Our Church, because of our need and struggle, has received from Him wonderful blessings of leadership and of service. Dr. Staley stirred the convention with his wonderful presentation of fundamental principles which have ever characterized our brotherhood and made a plea that as God has chosen us to lead, that we go forward in the great task to which He seems to be calling now. Rev. James O'Kelly made a Patrick Henry stroke for Christian Liberty and the spirit which was being born into the world politically in the days of O'Kelly has ever manifested itself in our Church religiously to the light of the world and the glory of our God.

Mrs. W. A. Harper, President of the Woman's Board of the Southern Christian Convention, read a thrilling and most wholesome paper which she entitled, "The Womanly Heart in this Forward Movement." In this address the speaker set forth some of the differences between the heart of man and that of woman in the tasks of the Church. She believed that the womanly heart was more trustful than that of man; that woman has a sure and steadfast trust in God that has ever been a power for truth and righteousness and achievement in the church. Then the speaker maintained that there was a degree of genuine and unsullied consecration in the womanly heart which speaks of a devotion that man's heart does not know. Women are devoted with a passionate fondness that overlooks and is blind to faults and failures and sweeps on toward the object of its devotion. And then declared the speaker: "Woman has a willingness to sacrifice that is sublimely powerful." In this campaign which we are now making for men and millions, and which also includes women and millions, it will be discovered amongst us, if there are any of us who have not discovered it, that our women are willing to sacrifice to their last penny and the last portion of their strength that our dear Church may go forward in this task. And finally women have a readiness to be led. "We do not aspire to leadership, but to comradeship. The Church will have great leaders among the men in this mighty movement of our forces and in that we women shall glory, and assure them that there shall be a comradeship that will nerve and inspire them and will help win, and all of us will be co-workers together in achieving this great task in our Master's name and strength."

The morning session closed at 1 o'clock with visions of glory and of greatness, of conquest and of power, of courage and of power, of courage and of achievement, with songs of praises on our lips and with emotions of joy thrilling our hearts.

The afternoon session from 2 until 6 was given over entirely to the mechanical side of the campaign. The Field Secretary first explained the duties that had been laid upon him, telling that he was ready to speak on any platform and before any audience where opportunity might present and where occasion might demand that the spoken word should be delivered in behalf of this movement.

Dr. W. A. Harper, Secretary of Organization and Publicity, explained his method of organization and gave to the conference a thorough reading of the campaign Text Book, which has been prepared, and a copy of which was given to every member present, and is for free distribution among our brethren. Dr. Harper began his part of the program by asserting that "when a church is satisfied, a funeral is in order," and this campaign means that "the Christian Church is not satisfied with itself." If there ever was a time in all history when a church needs to be active, that time is now. "There are three things" declared the speaker, "which are more necessary and larger in this campaign than the money. The first of these is, life recruits, and a period from February 21 to 29 has been set aside in which we through prayer and devotion and appeal are to call for one per cent of our total membership to enlist as ministers, missionaries or as life recruits for Christian service in some field. Secondly, that of Tithers Week, March 7, to 14, in which we are to seek to enlist ten per cent of all our membership as tithers. The Church should cease to be a pauper in a land of plenty and if our people would learn to tithe, His Kingdom would be enlarged, His name glorified, and every church treasury would have an abundance. March 28 to April 4, a crusade for personal workers. During that week there is to be a crusade to secure personal workers for the work of the Church and the work of the Lord." The Convention was turned into a class room for the time being and all present were given a lesson, clear, definite and specific, as to how the work was to be organized in the Conferences, in the county, in the district and in the local church. The speaker also told of the class of literature that is being produced and of its contemplated distribution every week from now till the campaign is ended.

Editor C. B. Riddle, Secretary of Speakers' Bureau and Advertising, told of the position to which he had been called and which he was seeking to fill to the best of his ability. His is to a most strenuous and active life in these trying days. He is to secure the speakers for the various groups that shall gather throughout the Church, the four minute men of the local church and for all occasions that may arise, and demand public speech for the campaign, and through the process of advertising keep the people advised as to the progress and the needs of the campaign.

Executive Secretary, Chas. D. Johnston, told of his willingness to do what he could in looking after the financial side of the campaign, to see that all moneys were properly expended and handled, to see to invoices and charges and that they were correctly and accurately kept and that the funds, when pledged, should be collected and properly distributed.

Treasurer C. D. West, of Newport News, Va., not only told of his willingness to keep the books of the campaign, to receive and pay out funds as ordered, but of his own interest deepened and quickened by his contact with the brethren and by the magnitude and spirit of the convention.

The evening hour program opened with an address by Rev. Stanley C. Harrell of Durham, N. C., who declared that the new slogan of the times was "Evangelize or Fight," for he believed that the world must give its strength and effort to evangelization in the name of the Prince of Peace, or there would in the years ahead of us come a war so stupendous and far sweeping in its blighting consequences as to make the recent war seem but a skirmish. There is today a crisis, the most momentous in all history. In this war we have only won the first victory and hardly made a beginning in the great conflict now ahead of us. Class is arrayed against class, capital against labor, money against manhood, race against race. Jesus Christ has given to the world a recipe for the solution of these problems and a program, the character of which would settle them right and that recipe is contained in Matthew 28:19-20, which says: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The world must settle its problems in the light of this great command and the object of this campaign is to call us of our Church to this most worthy and momentous task.

Brother D. R. Fonville, Attorney of Burlington, N. C., made a very eloquent address on the "Claim of Country, versus the Claim of God," in which it was vividly shown that the claims of country are very close akin in kind and character to the claims of God. Our country calls for allegiance first of all and then for loyalty and then the spirit of thankfulness—for splendid opportunities; and finally for service. Now, this same allegiance, loyalty and spirit of thankfulness and devotion through service must be manifest through the church and to God if we ourselves are to prove faithful in life's conflict. We have been trying to take our dreams out of the sky and make them a living reality through our supreme sacrificial service in the war period, and this is exactly what we of the Christian Church are to try to do in this Men and Millions Forward Movement. We have been dreaming and dreaming of the good and great and wonderful things of God. Now, we are to buckle on the armour and set to the task with a courage and determination that we shall snatch our dreams from the sky and make them a living reality upon the earth.

Rev. L. E. Smith fittingly concluded, with a great and gripping speech, this wonderful program of great things. The speaker was former pastor of the Greensboro church and he felt that he was with his own when he faced this audience. He is beloved by all the ministerial brethren and he realized that he was speaking not only for them, but for 25,000 other members of the Christian Church not present. The burden of a great task was upon his heart and profound emotion struggled through his eloquent tongue for expression and for utterance. "We need now," declared the speaker, "divine optimism. There can be no standing room amongst us for the pessimist. There is now a new sense of responsibility before this great task such as we have never realized before. God will fulfill His promises but only on condition that we yield ourselves to Him and obey unreservedly His commands. We have the faith to lay this challenge before our people. Whether they have the faith to accept it or not, is yet to be seen. The reason we have not accepted more is because we have feared failure. We who have taken counsel together have at last put aside our fear and are willing to face failure for our Master's sake." "Playing is safe," he continued, "is no longer a slogan of our time for it does not go into the thick of the fight where the shells are bursting and the bullets are most deadly and dangerous. 'Courage,' 'Onward,' 'Forward.' These are the words that must be our slogan now and we talk about safety only after a glorious victory by God's help and leadership which have been assured. God has brought us into judgment and it is now life or death with us. Men who believe in the divinity of our origin and our destiny have shaped and are shaping this matter for us and we who are here, believe that God has charged us with this task. We are called upon not merely to give our possessions but our bodies living sacrifices and we are to fling not merely what we have but all that we are in strength of body and mind and spirit into the achievement of this task which means life or death for us." A pity it is that the membership of our churches everywhere could not have heard this wonderfully masterful appeal for that dauntless courage and unselfish faith that leads to victory and to God. Standing on this high and noble heights of eloquence, of Heavenly fervor, of holy zeal, the congregation broke forth in the song, "Onward Christian Soldiers" and the writer is sure that those who were present will never forget that moment and are ready as never before on account of it to move forward in solid phalanx to the accomplishment of the great task which our Heavenly Father has laid upon us in this trying time. We cannot convey to CHRISTIAN SUN readers the emotions that stirred the hearts and the power of the spirit that prevailed through the meeting; but we feel that from that night in Greensboro will go gleams of glory and streams of wholesome and refreshing life to hundreds of places and thousands of lives in our dear Church. The Campaign is on, Beloved, for men and millions, men for the Master's work and millions for the Master's service.

HIGHLY PLEASED

I received my SUN today and it seemed to shine with Divine power. I thank God that I have lived to see this great day dawn in our denomination. I have been praying for just such a movement among the Christians. Isn't it wonderful! I am sure God will bless it with success, as I feel that His hand is guiding.

MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT

J. A. Dickey

The Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention deserves and requires the whole-hearted endorsement of every member of the Church, as it is a movement to place the Christian Church of the Southern Christian Convention in its entirety and with more force and effect in a position to go forward and accomplish more for the Kingdom. The world is traveling at an unheard of speed and the forces that make for good and for right must travel a little faster so as to lead humanity amid the dangers of a sin-cursed world.

IN THOROUGH SYMPATHY

Rev. J. T. Kitchen

I am in thorough sympathy with the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention, and will try to do what I can for its success.

ON THE MARCH

Bessie I. Holt

I am so glad that our Church has seen a vision of its opportunity. Let us invest for God and good of others, it may cost sacrifice. Difficulties will arise, problems to be solved, but none of these will take away the joy of victory. As I see it, "Men and Millions Forward Movement is Stewardship of life and Estate."

The Church is on the march, only the deaf will fail to hear the tramp of feet, and only those without vision to see the great goal toward which we are aiming.

AS ANOTHER WOMAN SEES IT

Mrs. J. J. Lincoln

Throughout our Southern Convention, no less than other places, a large door of need and opportunity long has stood open. Some of us have understood but we have not cared. It took courage and grace and faith to open the way which at last has been opened.

When the summons went out in every direction for leaders to "come let us reason together" what the Lord would have us do, the "Here am I" flashed back and those leaders came. They prayed and planned and in their prayers and plans they were no respecters of persons. And therein shall be the glory.

Now, it is our time, the Churches' time, to respond. For Jesus as truly called the masses as he called the twelve or the seventy "Men and Millions" does not denote men alone. Or if it does, women's share comes in on the "Forward." Let the Church, the whole Church, pray God that the very mind and spirit of Jesus may lead us all; that the promoters of this great undertaking may be imbued with His power and His wisdom; and that the people, the whole people, may get an intelligent, unrelenting grasp on the meaning, the privileges, the possibilities of this wonderful "Movement."

If the Men and Millions Forward Movement campaign, in the matter of awakening prayer and opening purses, can but fulfil its purpose of reaching every member of the Southern Christian Convention, it will, for that reason alone if there were no other, prove the biggest and best thing that ever has entered into our church propaganda. I am humbly thankful for the step that has been taken.

THE MOST FAR REACHING

A. T. Banks

Of all the undertaking the Christian Church has done, the Men and Millions Forward Movement as now planned is the most far-reaching.

I am glad our people have at last caught a vision that is big enough to enlist the interest, sympathy and money of all classes of our people.

I am glad that men are put first instead of millions. I hope and pray that many lives will be enlisted during this campaign. If the Gideonite band will pray for lives as well as money it will mean a great deal for the Kingdom.

DO YOUR BEST FOR THE "MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT"!

P. T. Hines

The Christian Church needs to break its shell. It cannot grow until it gets a world-wide vision of the needs of the Kingdom and then does something to realize that vision. The "Men and Millions Movement" offers the opportunity to grow for the Master.

It deserves your support!

Why?

1. It is doing the Master's work.
2. It will help the Christian Church to fulfil its mission.
3. It will make you spiritually a bigger man or woman.

MUCH INTERESTED

Chaplain H. E. Rountree

I note with great interest the new movement of the Christian Church, South, to raise funds for a triumphant program of the Church. Some call it "Forward Movement." Others call it "men and millions" movement. If a name signifies distinctive actualities I like the latter better, because it carries with it something of the real; and apparently it comprehends a future program adequate to the needs of men. Whether this shall be true or not, rests with the makers of the program and whether they will or not depends upon their mental and spiritual grasp of the future church as a unit and its relation to the triumphant, invisible, glorified church to come.

BIG LOAD—BUT ALL ARE HELPING

Mrs. W. P. Lawrence

The call of the Men and Millions undertaking of the Southern Christian Convention is an effort to get every church member in the Convention to add his mite in carrying on the general work of Christ's Kingdom. I do not like to see one stand idly by when his brother is toiling to carry a heavy load. This undertaking is a big load and I hope to see every one lend his strength and his influence in its favor.

A CAMPAIGN SONG

The Call for Men and Millions

(Tune: "Keep the Home Fires Burning")

By Dr. A. B. Kendall, Washington, D. C.

1. When the whole world's peace was shattered by a tyrant's cruel greed,
From across the restless ocean came the cry of lands in need:
Calling, calling, O, Columbia, unto you is our appeal, Haste to save the struggling nations from autocracy's iron heel.

CHORUS

Men and Millions needed,
Men and Millions needed,
For to save this world of ours for liberty:
And the cry we heeded,
Gave them all they needed,
Saved the world by our great gifts and kept it free.

2. Now there comes a ringing summons, falling from the throne above;
'Tis a challenge to our people from the Christ, our King of love.
'O, my people, hasten, rally 'gainst the bannered hosts of sin;
Help to crush man's mightiest tyrant; bring my glorious kingdom in.'

CHORUS

Men and Millions needed,
Men and Millions needed,
Shall we heed the call of Christ, our glorious King?
Shall our lives be offered,
And our gold be proffered,
'Till with shouts of victory the heavens ring?

3. O, the sad world needs the message, in its sinfulness and loss,
Of the overcoming power of the blood of Calv'ry's cross.
We must send this message glorious, over sea and over land,
'Till as sons of God victorious men at last shall conq'rors stand.

CHORUS

Millions for his glory;
Men to tell the story;
These, O glorious Son of God, we offer thee:
Lay them on thine altar:
Never will we falter:
'Till our blessed Christ 'shall reign from sea to sea.'

4. We are heralds of the dawning with the Bible as our creed;
With the blessed name of Christian, this the only name we need.
We with Christ our only Leader stand for Christian liberty,

Praying with our loving Master for the church's unity.

CHORUS

Millions for His glory;
Men to tell THIS story;
You must bring, O Christian Church, your gifts so free;
'Till the world is lighted,
And the church united
In the Spirit's bonds of love and liberty.

TALK JESUS CHRIST

Has a Christian concern with any other conversation than Christ? This whole land would be swept with the Christian life as no section of the world has ever been swept with it if men made it their business to talk Christ; if, when they walked with one another, they talked Him; if, when they sat down for a conversation, they talked Him; if they came to know Christ as the object of their speech. Mr. Ruskin gathers up what the conviction of all of us must be, in his "Notes on the Construction of Sheepfolds," when he says that it is the business of every Christian man, whether he be a minister or layman, to be constantly and incessantly talking Christ, not only indirectly but directly; to the servants in his home, to the men he meets on railway-trains, to that man with whom he is thrown in touch in his work in life; it is his one business as a Christian man to talk Jesus Christ. Oh, the glory of the lives who have learned that lesson!—Robert E. Speer.

Let us, so far as may be, look at life steadily and whole. It is not all darkness; it is its crimson dawns, its rosy sunsets. Its blackest clouds have their silver embroideries, and through the rifts we may catch glimpses of the radiant blue of heaven.—Cannon Farrar.

Just prior to the time when the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect, approximately 100 carloads of liquor were shipped to Calexico and Mexicali; just across the Mexican border.

Several Pittsburg doctors have fallen into the clutches of the law for writing whisky prescriptions. One of them has been arrested twice within the last few days. Several druggists have also been arrested. The Allegheny Medical Society is taking cognizance and is preparing to deal drastically with guilty doctors.

I most heartily endorse the "Men and Millions Forward Movement," and shall pray God's blessing upon it.—Stella Johnson, Neuse, N. C.

BURIAL OF THE DEAD

1. When any person departs this life, due respect and attention should be paid to the body, and it ought to be kept a proper and sufficient time before interment.

2. The minister ought, if invited, but as pastor, it is his duty, to offer the comforts of religion to the bereaved, and console them by the promises of God, and otherwise improve the occasion as may be thought expedient.

3. If a sermon is to be preached, or an address in memory of the deceased is to be delivered, and the services are to be performed in the church, the minister shall meet the corpse at the door, and passing before it to the altar, shall repeat the following passages:

I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth, and believeth in me, shall never die. John 11:25, 26.

I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though, after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another. Job. 19:25-27.

Or, the following:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live. John 5:25.

And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them. Rev. 14:13.

SCRIPTURE.

Ascending the pulpit or standing at the altar the minister shall read the Scripture, or portions of it:

But now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first-fruits of them that slept.

For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order: Christ the first-fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming. Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority, and power. For he must reign, till he hath put all enemies under his feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. For he hath put all things under his feet. But when he saith, all things are put under him, it is manifest that he is excepted, which did put all things under him. And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject unto him that put all things under him, that God may be all in all. Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead, if the dead rise not at all? Why are they then baptized for the dead? and why stand we in jeopardy every hour? I protest by your rejoicing, which I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily. If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me, if the dead rise not? let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die. Be not deceived: evil communications corrupt good manners. Awake to righteousness, and sin not; for some have not the knowledge of God. I speak this to your shame.

But some man will say, how are the dead raised up? and with what body do they come? Thou fool! that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die. And that which thou sowest thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain. But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. All flesh is not the same flesh; but there is one kind of flesh of men, another flesh of beasts, another of fishes, and another of birds. There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial; but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars; for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power: it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit. How be it, that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. As is the earthy, such are they that are earthy: and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. Now, this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption.

Behold, I show you a mystery: we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality; then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? The sting of death is sin; and the strength of sin is the law.

But thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Therefore, my beloved in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord. I Cor. 15:20-58.

After the lesson, a suitable hymn shall be read and sung.

HYMN.

Then shall follow an appropriate prayer.

PRAYER.

After which the sermon or address shall be delivered.

SERMON OR ADDRESS.

The services will be concluded at the grave.

The pall-bearers selected shall then bear the body to the grave, the minister and undertaker going before it, and the family and friends following in the rear. On arriving at the grave, after the body is lowered, the minister, taking his position at the head of the grave, shall say:

Man that is born of a woman is of few days and full of trouble. He cometh forth as a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not. All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. They are like grass that groweth up: in the morning it flourisheth; in the evening it is cut down and withereth. For here have we no continuing city.

Lord, make me to know mine end and the measure of my days, what it is; that I may know how frail I am. Behold, thou hast made my days as handbreadth, and mine age is as nothing before thee; verily every man at his best state is altogether vanity.

We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out. The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away, blessed be the name of the Lord.

Continuing, the minister shall say:

Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God, in His wise providence, to take out of this clayey tabernacle the soul that inhabited it, we therefore commit the decaying remains to their kindred element; earth to earth; ashes to ashes; dust to dust; looking for the general resurrection, through our Lord Jesus Christ, at whose coming to judge the world, the earth and the sea shall give up their dead; and the corruptible bodies of those who sleep in Him shall be made like unto His own glorious body, according to the mighty working whereby He is able to subdue all things unto Himself.

Then shall be said the Lord's prayer.

Our Father who art in heaven. Hallowed be thy name. Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread; and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory, for ever. Amen.

Benediction.

The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Spirit, be with you. Amen.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

FOUNDED—AND POUNDED

Others have expressed through THE SUN their appreciation and expression of good will and kindness on the part of people to pastor while I have been somewhat tardy in doing so. The churches of my charge presented me with a purse of $138.00 in addition to the obligated salary. A few days before Christmas we received two boxes from the people of Liberty, Nathalie, Va., containing all the substantials usually found in a good old fashioned pounding. The people of Virgilina also remembered us with a nice pounding. In addition to what has been mentioned above the people of Virgilina and community have placed us under special obligations since our loss in November of barn and a mileh cow by fire. A purse was handed me soon after the fire containing money sufficient to purchase a cow and several months' feed.

C. E. NEWMAN.

REIDSVILLE

Eight substantial members have been received into the church since January 1. The Sunday school is growing under the good leadership of our Superintendent, Brother W. H. Smith. The church has made fine progress the past few months in eliminating the church of indebtedness. Our plans are to pay the entire debt off by March 1, this year. Our Reidsville members love their church and they have been very responsive to all of its needs. Christmas they remembered their pastor and family in a most substantial way with such things as fresh sausage, flour and other articles of usefulness.

We were also remembered by the good members of Mt. Bethel and Happy Home churches with good things to eat such as butter, eggs, sausage, potatoes, lard, canned goods, and money. It is good to be the pastor of such a generous hearted people. May God bless and prosper them all, and help the writer to be to them a better pastor.

MONUMENT OF REV. L. I. COX

An Open Letter

January 27, 1920.

Mrs. L. I. Cox,
City.

Dear Mrs. Cox:

I am making you my final report on the money that has been contributed by the churches of which Brother Cox was pastor for a monument to be erected on his grave:

New Lebanon contributed—$117.00.

Apple's Chapel contributed—$64.50.

Mount Bethel contributed—$15.00.

The check of the Mount Bethel church was made to you and I enclose the original check.

The money raised by the other two churches was sent to me and so I enclose you my check for $181.50 which, with the check from Mount Bethel of $15.60, makes $196.50.

I can assure you that it is a pleasure for these churches thus to show their appreciation for the service of the faithful minister who served them so faithfully and for so many years.

If you should wish to make any personal acknowledgement you should write to Mr. Alfred Apple, Elon College, N. C., for Apple's Chapel; to Mr. D. I. Cummings, Stokesdale, N. C., for Mount Bethel, and to Mr. W. G. Sharpe, Wentworth, N. C., for New Lebanon.

With every good wish, I am

Sincerely,

W. A. HARPER,
Secretary N. C. Conference.

“LARGE THINGS”

The writer has received from our good Brother, Rev. H. Shelton Smith, Fairfield, Conn., now preparing at Yale University to go for us to the mission field as soon as his preparation is deemed sufficient, the following letter which I am sure will inspire and edify SUN readers, as it has the Secretary who received it:

Fairfield, Conn., January 23, 1920.

My dear Dr. Atkinson:

All hail to the glorious undertaking of the Christians of the South and all honor to you in initiating this notable undertaking in the directions of missions. It rejoices my heart to know that at last we as a Church are beginning to do large things for the Kingdom. The Movement is timely, imperative, and the challenge of such a notable advance will awaken a Convention consciousness and quicken the loyalty of the entire constituency as nothing else can do. The campaign for millions has the right ring when it couples the work of raising money with that of enlisting men to make the money and methods effective. I only wish I could have a more definite part in the great work. I haven't the money to give as I should like but I am willing to match my life with the money that shall be forthcoming to extend the Kingdom. I am glad to have definite things to pray for and I am so glad to pry definitely for you and all others of the committee who are doing such mighty tasks. God bless you!

If there is anything that I can do at any time that will add to the interest of the campaign please let me know. A new day is dawning for us but God forbid that we should be content with the mere dawn or even the sunrise. But let us lengthen the ropes and enlarge our work until His Kingdom shall spread over the entire earth.

With praise on my lips for the great undertaking and with prayer daily that the Movement may bless our dear Southern people, I am

Yours very sincerely,

H. SHELTON SMITH.

How I wish all our people could feel about our Men and Millions Movement as Brother Smith does!

J. O. ATKINSON.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Debtor and Creditor are terms that seem to be misunderstood and greatly abused. There is a mutual relation between them, and any difference grows out of dishonesty or misunderstanding. Debtor is derived from debeo which means to owe or have from another; creditor is derived from credo which means to believe: hence the seller believes the purchaser and the purchaser becomes under obligation or indebted to the seller. If the transaction is a mutual transaction both are benefitted and, therefore, under obligation to each other. The common view is that the creditor accommodates the debtor; and hence at banks, a loan is spoken of as an accommodation to the borrower; but the word comes from ad, to, and commodus, fit; it means to settle amicably, or to compromise. The lender believes; the borrower promises. Religion is based on the same kind of relation between God and man; God promises; man believes. Here is a mutual relation established by agreement that puts both parties under obligation to each other. If either party defaults, there is trouble. Now, in a business transaction between men, these principles are misunderstood or abused.

The criticisms or complaints usually come from the creditor, who lists the defaulting debtor among dishonest men. It is a common thing for merchants to attach blame to customers with past due accounts on their ledger; but the creditor may be as responsible for the unpaid account as the debtor. Both of them exercised their judgment in the transaction. Both made mistakes; one indulged too far, the other ventured too far. It was a mutual blunder. The customer may blame the merchant for selling too much, just as sincerely as the merchant may blame the customer for buying too much. Sellers will persuade customers to buy and then blame them for not paying. Both of them should be wiser, and they are, after the mistake in the bargain. If a trader purchases a piece of property and must sell it later for less than cost, he blames no one but himself. The transaction was made on his own judgment. He sells to debtors on credit in the same way—on his judgment.

It would heal much of bad feelings among men, if more wisdom was displayed in trading and less complaining in settlement. The trouble in married life grows out of unwise unions. Too careless the contract, too exacting in the requirements.

The bank does not accommodate me; the shop does not accommodate me; the creditor does not accommodate me; accommodation is mutual. All honest transactions rest on this mutual foundation. Injustice is practiced by selling agents as well as by defaulting purchasers. I have seen a $12.00 Bible sold to a poor family on the instalment plan of $1.00 per month, when the family could not pay for medicine for a sick child. I have seen a well-furnished room on the instalment plan, when the wedding suit had not been paid for. After part was paid on the furniture, it was taken back by the merchant. The young man lacked experience and judgment; the seller should have given him the benefit of his own experience.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED AND SIGNED BY OUR PASTORS, GREENSBORO RALLY, JANUARY 29-30

Conscious that God expects great things of His Church in this crucial period of history, and convinced that He has led in the inauguration of the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Christian Church, we, the pastors assembled in conference in Greensboro, January 30, 1920, desire to go on record in the following resolutions:

1. That we most heartily endorse the Men and Millions Forward Movement and pledge it our most loyal support.

2. That we conceive the plans outlined for this campaign ample and believe that God will own them in giving it a fruitful success.

3. That we give our most hearty approval to the plans in particular for securing Life-Recruits, Tithers, and Converts through personal effort at the periods designated in the plans.

4. That we esteem the Men and Millions Forward Movement and its claims upon us to be the prime claims at this time, and urge that every minister give this movement right of way in his congregation and that when local plans already laid would in anyway conflict with the purposes and plans of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, they be recalled and the Movement magnified by thorough sympathy co-operation.

5. That we will respond promptly, cheerfully, wholeheartedly, and prayerfully to every summons or request sent to us by the leaders of this Movement, and that we will do our best as the Commander-in-Chief in our fields of labor to make this Men and Millions Forward Movement the glorious achievement the Master wishes it to be on the part of our people.

MEN AND MILLIONS CONFERENCE LEADERS TO MEET

The Conference leaders of the Men and Millions Campaign will meet on the following dates and places named:

North Carolina Conference, Raleigh, N. C., February 10.

Eastern Virginia Conference, Suffolk, Virginia, February 12.

Georgia and Alabama Conference, Columbus, Ga., February 17.

Alabama Conference, Wadley, Ala., February 19.

Valley Virginia Central Conference, Linville, Va., February 24.

SPECIAL NOTICE

We have added nearly 4,000 new names to THE SUN list during the last two weeks. Just as we started this new work, one of our office helpers was taken sick with Influenza and we have been unable to replace her services. Therefore, it may be possible that we have some duplicates on account not having the help to thoroughly check the lists. We hope to be able to give all the new names a thorough checking at a very early date and avoid all possible duplication. If you get two copies of THE SUN you will understand. If persons receiving two copies will drop us a card it will help us in our work.

One other thing: We have no way of telling that John Smith and J. R. Smith, for instance, is the same person. We may have John Smith on our regular list, and then some one sends us the name of J. R. Smith. In such cases we can only remedy the matter by the kindness of the individual.

YOUR PAPER FREE

If you receive THE SUN and have not subscribed for it, accept it. The Men and Millions Forward Movement is paying for your subscription for three months. Do the Church the honor of reading the paper for this period.

The Influenza epidemic is again sweeping over the country. The disease seems to be in milder form.

Governor Bickett has endorsed Herbert Hoover for president of the United States.

We regret to chronicle the death of Brother George W. Nurney, Suffolk, Virginia. Dr. Staley will give a more complete account next week.

THE TITHES AND THE BLESSING

We come with thy tithes, O Jehovah!
We answer the call from thy throne:
For all that we have thou hast given,
And we give thee but of thine own.

We come with thy tithes, O Jehovah!
We cannot withhold what is thine!
We come with rejoicing and gladness,
Constrained by thy favor divine.

Now open the windows of heaven,
Upon us thy blessing outpour;
And if there's not room to receive it,
O help us make room, we implore!

Pour on us the rain of the Spirit—
The early and latter day rain.
With tithes and with full consecration
We pray thee revive us again!

—H. B. Hertzler.

THE INTERCHURCH GATHERING

One most important matter which was settled at the great Interchurch World Movement Conference at Atlantic City was the date of the financial ingathering. This will take place from April 21 to May 2, following the Easter ingathering of communicants. The tentative five-year total for the benevolence of the co-operating denominations is somewhat over one million and three hundred thousand dollars. On February 7 the Boards will report their final budgets for the ensuing year. Another important accomplishment of the Conference was the convincing of the denominational leaders that the surveys must be pressed through to completion.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

Children's Home Fund in cash $2,677.00

How fast do you want to see it grow?

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

The Children's Home Fund now amounts to $2,677.00 in cash on hand. We hope to reach the three thousand dollar mark in our next report. The plans are now being drawn for this building. We hope to the building completed this year and see it filled with the dear little tots. This building is very much needed in this work and our people ought to open their hearts and contribute enough in the next two months to build it. I have turned away from our doors in the last three months more than fifty applications for a place here. I have taken urgent cases till every space in our present building is occupied. No one in our Church sees the need of this building more than your Superintendent. I want to cite you just one case out of many others.

I was called to visit a widow last week who had made an appeal for help. She had five little children, all too young to work. She was working in the spinning department of a cotton mill trying to feed and clothe these five children. How could you expect her to meet expenses at the present high prices? She is a splendid woman. She has five bright, sweet children. How my heart went out to her in her distress. I cannot take the children for the lack of room.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1-27. This widow in her distress has appealed to the Christian Church for help. Will we not hear her plea?

We now have sixty children. It takes one and a half barrels flour each week. Six barrels each month for bread alone, and we have corn bread for dinner. We have to buy our bread. Flour is one of our great needs. Prices are still climbing higher. How many in our church have plenty bread and some to spare? Remember our family of sixty who have no bread, except what we buy.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl ten years old and want to join the band of cousins. I like to read the children's letters in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Please find enclosed ten cents. Your niece, Christine Hatch.

Dear Little Niece:—I am glad you are joining the band of cousins the first of the year and hope you will write often.—"Uncle Charley."

MISSIONARY

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY WORK IN THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE

The work in the Eastern Virginia Conference started off auspiciously and up to the end of 1919, eight new Woman's Societies had reported. Union (So.), South Norfolk, Va., Ivor, Oakland, Antioch, Bethlehem, Dover and Lambert's Point. At Dover there was an organization which had not been reporting through the Woman's Board. Bethlehem, Oakland and Union had been reporting by means of mite boxes but had no organizations. There are other churches to be organized and we are anxious that this be done during the Spring months. We feel sure that the women can be depended upon to bost and push the Men and Millions Forward Movement, and help to bring it to a glorious consummation.

Mrs. C. H. ROWLAND.

Franklin, Va.

TITHING

A good brother in sending his first payment, $20.00, on his $100.00 missionary pledge says:

"Since undertaking the tithing plan, I nearly always have some money to give. Before then I seldom had any that I thought I could spare. If our people could be induced to follow the Bible plan of giving, there would be no difficulty in raising the $2,000,000 of our Men and Millions Forward Movement, now being undertaken."

This brother is eminently correct. Tithing is not a hardship but a blessing and thousands in our Church are missing the real joy of giving because they have not yet adopted the Bible plan of giving. Strange is it that so many of us feel that our wisdom and our way are an improvement upon God's wisdom and the Bible way. God did not institute the tithe and write it into the constitution of mankind and the universe because he wanted to impoverish His children, but He did so for their joy and enrichment. His wisdom far surpasses that of man which many of us learn only after we have found our wisdom to fail us and after we have missed many of the joys of life.

TEN LITTLE NIGHTS

By Adelbert F. Caldwell

Ten little knights of the Table Round,
Ready for service each one is found.

During the contest not one doth quail,
Dressed is each in a hood of mail.

Without blare of trumpets or roll of drums,
They collect the dishes and brush the crumbs.

To the kitchen back and forth they go,
"I serve" is the ten little knights' motto.

Whence do these doughty knights, pray, hail,
Each one clad in a hood of mail,

Who clean the table and brush the crumbs?
Why, they're your fingers and two stout thumbs!
Greencastle, Ind.

YOU WILL NEVER BE SORRY

For telling the truth.
For living a pure life.
For your faith in Christ.
For confessing your sins.
For doing your very best.
For thinking before acting.
For hearing before judging.
For forgiving your enemies.
For helping a fallen brother.
For being honest in business.
For thinking before speaking.
For being loyal to your church.
For stopping your ears to gossip.
For bridling a slanderous tongue.
For harboring only pure thoughts.
For being courteous and kind to all.
For money given to the Lord's cause.
For faithfulness in keeping your promises.
For asking pardon when you have done wrong.

WHAT TOM'S PIG DID FOR HIM

Tom was a twelve-year-old colored boy down in Mississippi who belonged to a pig club organized by one of those wide-awake State supervisors of rural schools. The town bank agreed to buy pigs for the boys and girls if each one signed a promissory note for twelve months at the legal rate of interest, agreeing to work with the pig for that time and pay the note from the sale of the pig's offspring.

Tom could hardly write his name. The banker called in the supervisor to help him make out the name and address. Tom borrowed $15.00 from the bank on September 9, 1915. "One day in July, 1916," says the supervisor, "I noticed Tom walking down the street on the opposite side, and he had a great, big smile on his face. He saw me and he came running across the street, and said: 'Mr. H., I have something to tell you.' He pulled out of his pocket the canceled note and said: 'It cost me $16.00 and a few cents, interest and principal,' and he had calculated the interest and knew exactly what it would be. He got one of his brothers to help him in this calculation, and when he went to pay the note he knew the exact amount. That was not all. He pulled out of his other pocket a bank book.

"The bank had credited him with $76.00, as proceeds from the pigs he had raised that spring. That was the happiest boy I have ever seen, with that great, big smile on his face, seeming determined to do greater things in his life. I felt that was a turning point in the history of his life.

"Today Tom owns about $700.00 worth of pure-bred live stock, which, he tells me, he is going to make pay his way through high school and college."—Southern Workman.

WHATEVER IS—IS BEST

(By Ella Wheeler Wilcox)

I know as my life grows older
And mine eyes have clearer sight
That under each rank wrong, somewhere,
There lies the root of Right.
That each sorrow has its purpose
By the sorrowing oft conquered,
But as sure as the sun brings morning—
Whatever is—is best!

I know that each sinful action,
As sure as the night brings shade,
Is somewhere, sometimes, punished
Tho' the hour be long delayed.
I know that the soul is aided
Sometimes by the heart's unrest
And to grow means often to suffer—
But whatever is—is best!

I know there are no errors,
In the great Eternal Plan,
And all things work together
For the final good of man.
And I know when my soul speeds onward
In its grand Eternal quest
I shall say as I look back earthward
Whatever is—is best.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 15, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject—Peter (a Jew) And Cornelius (a Gentile).

Places—Caesarea, Joppa, Jerusalem.

Persons—Cornelius and his family, friends and soldiers—Peter and brethren from Joppa and the Jerusalem Church.

Golden Text—The same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. Rom. 10:12.

Leading Thought—All people are precious in God's sight.

Junior Topic—Peter wins a Roman Captain.

Intermediate and Senior Topic—
Overcoming Prejudice.

Adult Topic—Significance of the Conversion of Cornelius.

In this lesson for the first time in Gospel history, we enter upon that which all agree is a genuine case of foreign missionary work. Race prejudice, and class distinction are thrown to the winds. Men, the most widely separated in education, environment, inherited faith, and nearly every other earthly characteristic, met and found that in Jesus Christ they were brothers beloved. The meeting of the Jewish Peter and the Roman Cornelius was a prophecy of all Christian missionary enterprise. To get the most out of the lesson, we should have thoroughly in mind, the preceding verses, Chapter 10:1-29. They report the vision given the Roman Centurion Cornelius at Caesarea. He was an honest seeker after God, and God gave him special help in finding the divine will. Peter was given truth that prepared him to be God's agent in pointing Cornelius and other Gentiles to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. Cornelius sent for Peter, and he put aside all his prejudices, and gave him a real hearty, and royal welcome. Peter who had been divinely helped was in the Christian brotherly spirit to teach. The impossible was accomplished—Jew and Gentile became one in Christ. Often we think and feel that our tasks are beyond our strength and ability, but if we would only realize that sincere prayer to God for guidance and strength like Peter of old, would be more prepared to meet the needs of another.

We need no angel to assure us that God hears and answers prayer, since we have such words of Christ himself as found in Matt. 7:7-11; 21:22; John 14:13, 14. Could God send a seeking soul to you, or to me with assurance that we could supply the guidance He needs? Not unless, like Peter, we are in close and daily communication with the Master. The highest and the lowest of men need no new gospel, only the pure, simple story of Jesus and His love, as told by the faithful Peter as he opened his mouth and said, "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons * * * *". The one way to make our country a safe and happy place to live in, is to help people of every color, language, and condition to know the same Lord Who is over all, and Who is wonderfully able to pardon and forgive even to the lowest and most cast down soul on earth.

In last week's lesson Peter was a Jewish Christian; today we see him emerging into a full rounded Christian with a heart for all nations and tribes alike. It was a great day for Peter as well as for Cornelius and his household.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 8, 1920

(J. Vincent Knight)

"A Worth-While Life."—Psalms 37:18-40. (Decision Day).

The only life worth while is the life upon which God can depend. Such a life is one of the earnestness, purity, unselfishness, service, high-purpose, and communion with Jesus Christ. A life of that type has something to draw from that is worth while, and its every day experiences make for the betterment of body, mind and soul. There can be nothing worth while in a life that is an alien to Jesus Christ, and the world does not look to such a life for real things worth while. A constant fellowship with Him will produce high ideals, for He has been lifted up from the earth, and must draw all men unto Him. If we would make life worth while, we must make it so consistent that God may at all times depend upon us to do service for Him.

There are thousands of our young people that stand at "the parting of the ways." Which way shall I take?, the great question that confronts them, and the question is one that every young person must answer for self. Yet, you, brother pastor, Sunday school teacher and young peoples' leader, are responsible for the way the question is answered, and the decision that is made. If it were a great contest for a prize, each of us would stand square to the task and do our best to get every decision possible for our side. Now, we are in the greatest contest of our lives. Won't you be responsible, and equal to the task? We are our brother's keeper, and responsible for what he does. Come on! Let us help some young man or woman answer the question for Jesus Christ. Make the year 1920 rich for the Christian Church. We need hundreds of young lives dedicated to the cause of the Master. Remember that Decision Day does not mean simply leading men to Christ—it means more. It means lining up those who are already professed Christians for active service. Let us make February 8 a memorable day for the Christian Church.

Suggestions For This Meeting

Note the following: Above 96 per cent of the decisions for Christ are made between the junior age and 20 years. So the crowd you are most anxious to reach are the "teen age boys and girls." They are easy to reach if we go about it right. During the first week in February, (Christian Endeavor week) while millions are praying for life work recruits, get among the high school boys and girls, and place the matter before them in a definite way. Emphasize the importance of an early decision for life service, and get to the heart of things before they decide to wait until the student has gone to college, because you do not know where they will go, or what influence they will be under. Now is the time.

MARRIAGES

LOWRY-COX

At my home in Virgilina, Va., December 31, 1919, at 3 P. M., Mr. Dandy Lowry and Miss Mary Cox of Mayo, Va., were united in marriage. They were accompanied by a number of friends on automobiles, and returned to their home the same afternoon. The groom is a farmer of the Mayo section and is to be congratulated on the selection of a companion.

C. E. NEWMAN.

GORDON-GOODE

Mr. Henry Cleveland Gordon of Denniston Junction, Va., was united in marriage to Miss Lila Mae Goode of Virgilina, Va., on the evening of January 22, 1920. The ceremony was performed by the writer at the home of the bride on Carolina Street. They will make their home at Denniston Junction, where the groom is engaged in farming. The bride is a daughter of Mr. Edward Goode and a member of the Christian church at Virgilina. May God's blessings attend them.

BRADY

Sarah Hackney Brady, wife of Brother L. E. Brady, was born February 10, 1851, and died January 20, 1920. She was married to Brother Brady in 1871. To them were born two children, Maxie and Lonnie, both living. She joined Pleasant Grove Christian church with her husband 37 years ago. She became afflicted four years ago, but bore her afflictions with a great deal of patience. A good woman is gone to her reward. Funeral by her pastor.

G. R. UNDERWOOD.

OATS

Easter Anna, wife of the late John E. Oats, was born June 13, 1845, and died January 27, 1920. She united with Pleasant Grove Christian church, 25 years ago. She was the mother of six children—three of her daughters preceded her to the Spirit world. The living are: Mrs. Maggie Brown, John and William Oats.

Funeral by her pastor.

G. R. UNDERWOOD.

HASLETT

Mr. J. A. Haslett, of Holy Neck District in Nansmond county, who departed this life January 20, 1920, was born April 28, 1846, aged seventy-three years, eight months and twenty-two days.

He was a loyal faithful member of the Holy Neck Christian church for about thirty-five years. While attaining a ripe old age he always enjoyed splendid health until only recently. In the last few months of his life he suffered with high blood pressure, heart-trouble and general feebleness common to old age.

Three sons survive to cherish the memory of a good father: W. W. Haslett, J. O. Haslett and R. E. Haslett. Mrs. Haslett and one son, Charles R., preceded the deceased to the glory land; also two sisters, Mrs. Mary A. Davidson, living near, and Elizabeth S. Darden of Portsmouth, Va., J. D. Haslett is the only surviving brother. The grandchildren are: Mrs. Edna E. Horton, daughter of W. W. Haslett, Little Virginia Haslett, daughter of R. E. Haslett and Lloyd Haslett, now of Elon College and son of Charles R. Haslett deceased.

W. M. JAY.

KEARNEY

Benjamin S. Kearney was born August 13, 1846, and departed this life January 20, 1920. Services were conducted at the grave by the writer. He was laid to rest in the church cemetery at Pope's Chapel.

He leaves to mourn their loss, his beloved wife, Mrs. Belle Usy Kearney, two daughters and seven sons, ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, and a host of friends.

Mr. Kearney served in the civil war, with the North Carolina Junior Reserves. His brother, Mr. William H. Kearney of Wake Forest, N. C., and Mrs. Cynthia Patterson, a sister, of Burlington, N. C., survive him.

NO ROOM FOR A PESSIMIST

SPEAKER said the other day that there was no standing room for a pessimist during the Men and Millions campaign. We want to add that there is no sitting room for such a creature, and just how such fellows get into the Church and love the Lord is more than we can comprehend. The issues before the Church are too vital for the pessimistic element to stand in the way. Let the love of God prevail and let all seek His will and you will need no room for the pessimist.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

SOME REFLECTIONS

"Watchman, what of the night?" We walk slowly along the pathway as these thoughts come and go. What does the future hold? Today we have heard the rattle of the typewriter keys, sent messages thousands of miles, and have been swept on by the rush of traffic. The day dies and we return home to find the quietness and repose. Here we have time to think and reflect and react. Time is the same in both places, but in one the mind is forced to work while in the other it is given a chance to help live.

We hear so much about the family altar and the need that it be restored. Modern life is giving the family altar a hard road to travel. The call of the telephone, exact office hours, and numerous other things separate members of the family and blast the hour set for worship. The head of the household gives up his desire for family worship and trusts that each member is finding time for prayer.

But is he? That is the question and one that must be reckoned with in the present industrial age. Reformers are offering solutions and social workers are advancing theories. We advocate the family altar and urge the Church not only to adopt it, but adapt it. Christ took advantage of situations to present His truths and deliver the message of the Father. If we cannot establish the family altar, we must meet the situation and help a fast-living generation to think of, and worship, God.

That is only one step, which step, or suggestion, is in vain without something to make it practical. Christianize business is the solution that we have to offer. So long as a man thinks that his business is separated from his God, just so long will he find no time to worship the Lord. On the other hand, when a man acknowledges that God is the Owner of all and that he is the trustee, then and only then, will he see the fulness of the Lord's Prayer " * * * * thy Kingdom come * * * ." The Kingdom cannot come until the Lord is given right away in our business six days in the week as well as in our hearts on the Sabbath day.

Great and prosperous times are these, and yet we shall be the poorer unless we dedicate the overflowing wealth to the Lord. And great these days may be, but how much greater would they if we conducted our enterprises for the Master's sake.

We pull back the curtain of time and view the evening horizon. What of the night? A world divided in opinion, a world in dispute, in a chaotic condition. Over the land confusion reigns, while the ocean's billows cease to be calmed. A remedy! A remedy! A louder cry—A REMEDY. There is one remedy, and it is He Who said, "Peace be still."

* *

And before the world will listen to the Master's voice, it must be taught His word and live His example. We must give of our means—must dedicate all to Him and to His cause.

THE MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT

The Campaign Committee reports fine progress in its work. Co-operation is being given in all sections and the outlook is hopeful in every way. The people want to do, are willing to do, and ready to do. All together, brethren, for it is a noble thing to do. We need to do it—and we will.

A CORRECTION

In a recent issue of THE SUN Oak Level church was reported as having contributed $5.00 to the Orphanage, while it should have been $35.00. We do all we can to avoid errors, but since all papers make them, it seems that apologies are not much in order. But brethren, you will never understand this until you have been an editor.

The Raleigh meeting of the Men and Millions Forward Movement had to be postponed on account of the Influenza epidemic. The time is changed to February 26.

EDITORIAL NOTES

We have read a story about how the men in a community formed an association to protect their horses from thieves. In the same community children were going to ruin and nothing was done to protect them. The point is clear.

Some men agree to give on conditions that others give, or so many others give. That kind of giving is selfish.

A joke that had much truth in it occurred at Louisville, Kentucky, the other day. The Joint Commission on Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church was in session and adopted a resolution asking that the Peace Treaty be adopted. The action was wired to Washington. The next day a member of the Commission entered the session room and asked privilege to read a telegram. Here is what he read:

Washington, D. C., Jan. 16, 1920.

To the Joint Unification Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South:

Your communication requesting the early ratification of the treaty has been received. Considering the progress you have made in three and a half years with your own task, we are tremendously impressed with your exhortation.

WOODROW WILSON,
THOMAS R. MARSHALL,
HENRY CABOT LODGE.

The message read was a "fixed up" affair, but had its impression on the body since the unification problem has been a long drawn out one of the M. E. Church.

Some recent changes have taken place in President Wilson's cabinet. Carter Glass, Secretary of the Treasury, goes to the Senate as successor to the late Senator Martin of Virginia, and David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, succeeds Mr. Glass, while Edwin L. Meredith, Des Moines, Iowa, succeeds Mr. Houston. Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, has expressed his desire to retire to private life. When his successor is named, only four of Wilson's original cabinet members will be left.

LEADERS OF RELIEF WORK APPEAL TO CHURCHES TO SAVE CHILDHOOD OF WAR-TORN NATIONS

The pitiful wail of ten million starving children rang in the ears of America's religious leaders, Tuesday, February 3, as, in conference called by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, they heard plea after plea from the overborne representatives of relief organizations who are helplessly confronting the imminent starvation of much of the childhood of central and southeastern Europe and the Near East. That at least $50,000,000, in addition to amounts now in sight, is urgently necessary for European and Near East relief work, was the decision of the conference.

In an all day session at the national headquarters building of the Y. W. C. A. in New York, more than forty representatives of the great denomination and in-terdenominational organizations met with the leaders of the American Relief Administration, Near East Relief and the American Friends' Service Committee, to canvass the present dire situation and consider plans for meeting the emergency which is caused by an accumulation of unforeseen difficulties abroad and the apparent loss of interest on the part of many in America who contributed generously during the war, but seem to fail now to realize the slowness of the necessary reconstruction of much of war-torn Europe and Asia Minor. Rev. Frank Mason North, President of the Federal Council, was chosen Chairman of the meeting.

On behalf of the American Relief Administration, Edgar Richard, acting chairman, reported that 2,900,000 children between the ages of 4 and 12 were now being given a daily supplemental meal, in the various countries of eastern and southern Europe, but that the needs of Poland and Austria were not being met in any adequate way by their organization; that merely to sustain the lives of the children in these countries would require $9,000,000 more than was now in sight for this purpose; while the American Friends' Service Committee needed $7,000,000 more than was available for similar work in Germany.

Mr. Charles V. Vickrey reported that the work of the Near East Relief could not be confined so wholly to the feeding of children since the refuge population of the subject races of the Ottoman Empire was largely dependent upon the aid furnished by his organization. More than $35,000,000 would be needed, he said, to care for the distressed population of Asia Minor and Syria during the next six months.

Mr. Wilbur K. Thomas, Executive Secretary of the American Friends' Service Committee, told of the widespread relief work undertaken in France, Poland, Italy, Russia, Germany, and other countries in Central Europe. The work of the Young Men's Christian Association and of the Young Women's Christian Association, in providing limited canteen service below the actual cost of provisions in numerous centers of population, was also reported. Dr. Lauritz Larsen told of the work being done by the National Lutheran Council in providing 2,000,000 pounds of clothing for Poland, in cooperation with the Red Cross, and in aiding the Lutheran population in northern Europe. Relief work by the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches was also reported.

In facing the practical problem of allocating the raising of funds among the various church agencies, Dr. S. Earl Taylor, General Secretary of the Inter-church World Movement, appealed to the gathering for unity of action and the cutting of all needless red tape that might hinder such instant response to this appeal as would mean a saving of countless thousands of lives. Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association also urged united and immediate action, prophesying that the people of America would not fail to respond to clear-sighted leadership in the present emergency.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

HISTORY OF THE PHILATHEA CLASS OF SUFFOLK CHRISTIAN CHURCH

By Mrs. B. D. Crocker

The organization of the Philathea Class of the Suffolk Christian Sunday school was effected October 27, 1913, at the home of Mrs. W. H. Yates, 1426 West Washington St., with the following charter members: Miss Elizabeth Batt, Miss Effie Beale, Mrs. R. O. Harvey, Miss Evie Harrell, Mrs. Clarence Harrell, Mrs. Raleigh Harrell, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Miss Duppie Kilby, Miss Eunice Langston, Mrs. J. E. Phillower, Miss Rosa Riddick, Mrs. J. E. West, Mrs. W. H. Yates and Col. J. E. West, together with three visitors, Mr. W. H. Yates, Mr. R. C. Harrell and Rev. I. W. Johnson. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. I. W. Johnson; Secretary, Mrs. R. O. Harvey; Treasurer; Mrs. J. E. West, and the teacher, Col. J. E. West.

At this first meeting the class petitioned the Sunday school superintendent for a room, for the exclusive use of this class, our motto adopted, which is as follows:

*I cannot do everything
But I can do something,
What I can do, I ought to do
And by the Grace of God I will do.*

A motion was carried to keep 25 cents of the weekly offerings in the Philathea treasury. A month later this was increased to one-half the weekly offering, also every member was requested to bring a birthday offering to the November business meeting, which amounted to $14.34, with 32 members enrolled.

During this first year of work and organization a room was secured for the class meetings, shades for the windows purchased, two dozen glasses, a table, map and reading stand paid for, together with other gifts donated by members, as follows: An organ stool, by Miss Florence Harvey, a collection basket by Mrs. Clyde Nelms, a picture painted by Mr. Richard Klages and framed by Mrs. I. W. Johnson, and a mirror for the ladies' room by R. W. Baker and Company.

Regular committees for work were formed as follows: Membership, Social, Hospital, and Program—all of which did wonderful work with far reaching results.

Regular contributions were made for our Orphanage at Elon every month of the year, with extra special offerings at Christmas, Easter and Thanksgiving. We also subscribed a membership of $10.00 yearly to the Christian Missionary Association.

In this brief review of our work the first year, there were 78 members on roll, and the class had raised for all purposes for the year, $129.21.

During the second year, in February, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, tendered her resignation as president of the Class, to take effect at once, as she was called to teach a class of girls. Her resignation was very reluctantly accepted, for she had proven a most faithful and competent officer. Mrs. W. H. Yates, vice-president was elected to fill her unexpired term. During this year we also lost another valuable member of the class, when Miss Florence Harvey left to make her home in a distant city. The regular work was carried on, some new members enrolled, and all committees active. Cottage prayer meetings were organized and held before and after the revival held in the church by Rev. Victor Lightbourne. Some needed work on our room was done this year, the walls painted, floor stained, screens for the windows were put in, and a drugget for the floor purchased at a cost of $75.00. The treasury was reimbursed during the year by two rummage sales which amounted to $71.92. The amount raised by the class from all sources for the second year amounted to $189.62.

Beginning with the third year, Mrs. Rochelle Harrell was elected president, and for eight months made a very efficient leader, but moved away and Mrs. W. R. Mitchell was appointed to take her place. The urgent need of the Christian Missionary Association was again presented to the class, so it readily agreed to take an additional membership of $10.00 per year to help them reach the Association's goal. During this time we felt the need of a piano, so the class took this purchase as its special work for the year. Col. West made the first contribution of $25.00. A lawn party was held on his lawn during the summer which netted $31.40. In September a rummage sale brought in $75.85, and a sale of waste paper, $15.02. Together with other contributions the piano was bought, installed in October and paid for at a cost of $285.00. Contributions from all sources for the year amounted to $246.12.

During the fourth year the class moved that we have a mite box for missions. The contributions were entirely voluntary but the box was placed on the table every Sunday since May, 1917, and to date collections from this source alone have amounted to $95.45. War work was especially emphasized during this year and as usual our class came up nobly. With Col. West's help of $100.00, the class turned in the sum of $127.42 for the Red Cross Fund. This same day the class unveiled a handsome photograph of our beloved teacher, which picture is to hang on the walls of our class room forever. Later, a beautiful book-case and two dozen Bibles were added. We donated $5.00 to the Christian Endeavor Society, for which to purchase Testaments for our departing soldiers. In September Col. West presented the cause of missions, a campaign of which Dr. J. O. Atkinson is Secretary and the class readily subscribed $200.00 to this cause, the same to be paid in yearly instalments of $40.00 for five years. The amount raised for all purposes this year amounted to $312.26.

In the fifth year of our Philathea class the regular work was carried on, especial interest taken in our Orphanage, missionary and war work. In January we donated $21.00 for Syrian-Armenian Relief. The Elon Standardization Fund was presented, for an endowment of $250,000.00 for our denominational college. The class subscribed $200.00 also to this Fund to be paid in five yearly payments of $40.00 each. We raised for all purposes for the class this year the sum of $188.57.

On account of the Influenza epidemic the church and Sunday school were closed for some time in the beginning of the fifth year.

On December 23, the class presented to our faithful teacher a loving cup in token of the esteem in which he is held. It bore the following inscription: Presented to our teacher, Col. J. E. West, by the Philathea Class of the Suffolk Christian Church, December 25, 1917.

And now we come to the sixth year of our work as an organized class. Mrs. W. C. Crocker has been our faithful president, and all the committees have done splendid work, especially should the hospital committees be commended, in visiting the sick, and taking magazines and flowers to the shut-in. In a short review we note that we have at present 72 members on roll, quite a number have been added from time to time, while a good many have moved away to other communities. We make monthly offerings to our Orphanage, aside from our special offerings at Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas. For all purposes $288.34 was raised this year. During these six years the class raised altogether the grand total of $1,354.72. We have given to the Sunday school at large, a great per cent of its teachers, to the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society—a president and three superintendents of departmental work. We feel especially blessed in so much as we have lost by death only two of our members in these six years of our work, for which on the eve of this Thanksgiving season, we give grateful thanks also to those who so faithfully bear the burden of the work, those who contribute so much by their presence and especially to our sacrificing, untiring and faithful teacher.

SUFFOLK LETTER

For the next few months THE CHRISTIAN SUN will be mailed to six thousand persons. It is fair to assume that it will be read by twelve thousand persons; and, if they read THE SUN with some degree of care, they will be informed on the "Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention." It is wise to put "Men" before "Millions" for "Men" were first. The world moved before "millions" loomed large in the business of the world; but "men" were in the world and made it more. "Millions" must never be put before "Men"; but "Men" must put "Millions" into movements that are to save the world. Men are of more value than money, and money has no value without men; and the value of money depends upon how men use it; and that means the cause for which money is used. Money must be estimated in terms of men. To quote E. M. Potat, D. D., in his quotation of what a young woman said: "I would rather marry a man who was worth a million and didn't have a cent than to marry a man who had a million and wasn't worth a cent;" but she might have added: "I would be willing to marry a man who had a million and was worth a million." This campaign calls for "Men" first and then for "Millions." That corresponds to what Paul said of the Macedonians: "first gave their own selves to the Lord." This is the sensible, logical, and Scriptural method of giving. The church needs ministers. There are vacant pulpits able to pay living salaries. The Church needs missionaries. The "fields are white unto the harvest." The Church needs lay-workers giving whole time as co-helpers to pastors. The Church needs money to care for orphans, to send missionaries, print literature, to put workers in the field for Sunday school and Christian Endeavor service, to build, equip, and support schools, to help old, worn-out ministers and widows of ministers who have given their lives to His work.

There will be a call for tithers. All the denominations are giving their members an opportunity to become tithers. Now is the time to prayerfully consider that Bible teaching: One-tenth of what one earns to the Lord. This admits the doctrine of Christian stewardship; that God owns all and puts His people in charge of His goods and demands return. If A lends B ten thousand dollars, A expects B to recognize his obligation to A for that sum and interest upon it for the time that it is in his hands. Law fixes the rate of interest, generally, six per cent. The tithe is fixed by the law of God; but that law does not require ten per cent of the capital but only ten per cent of the earnings of that capital. I would be very glad to borrow a hundred thousand dollars from a man upon the agreement that I would pay him ten per cent of the interest on the hundred thousand dollars; that is ten per cent on $6,000.00 which would be $600.00 per year. I would lend the money and get for myself $5,400.00 per year. God's law is reasonable, because He furnishes all the capital of the world, allows men to use His goods, and then requires only ten per cent of what they earn with His air, rain, soil, trees, coal, rivers, gold, silver, iron, and strength. No wonder God loves a cheerful giver, because it expresses appreciation and an honest life.

I hope that all who receive THE CHRISTIAN SUN for these months will read, ponder, pray, and enter into the Men and Millions Campaign with a loyalty, a liberality, and a love that will carry it over the top.

W. W. STALEY.

FRANKLINTON PASTORATE

Liberty (Vance) proceeded to pound us some time ago. We are happy in the service of a thoughtful people, and for all these kindnesses we are grateful.

December 28, 1919, we laid to rest one of our faithful and beloved deacons, Rufus M. Brown. His tragic death shocked the entire county. Funeral service was held at Pope's Chapel, where he had long worshipped and served as his Maker directed.

He leaves to mourn their loss, his devoted wife, two children, his aged mother, one brother, two sisters and a host of friends. The county, the masons, the church all have lost a friend indeed.

May the Lord comfort those who are sorely bereaved. Two deacons of my charge have gave to their reward in the past two months. May their mantle fall on worthy shoulders.

MEN AND MILLIONS NEEDED

J. T. Clack, M. D.

I want to go on record as approving the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Christian Church. I think it the greatest step yet taken toward bringing the Christian denomination and the beloved principles of the same into its own.

If this does not go over the top then we have failed to do that which we should do in keeping with the progressive movements of other Protestant denominations in the upbuilding of the Kingdom and helping carry the Gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth.

The institutions of the Christian Church are failing to make the progress they should for the lack of men and money. We hear the Macedonian cry from all parts of the country for the Gospel and the beloved principles of our Church, and through this means we see a way of answering the calls, by providing the men and the means.

MUST SUCCEED IF OUR IDEALS ARE REALIZED

Walter C. Rawls

The effects of the World War upon the Christian religion have been as broad and far-reaching as the effects on politics and economics. This effect makes absolutely necessary that the cause of the Master must go forward without pause and without stint if the high ideals of Christianity are realized and permanent results are obtained. This Forward Movement must be concerted and on a large scale because the experience of our Government and of other denominations has taught us that the way to accomplish big things is to do them in a big way.

To get the results men are needed, men who are conscientious and fearless in the cause of Christ, and who are trained and equipped for the work. Our money is necessary, too, and when the objects sought are considered it seems so little. I heartily endorse the Men and Millions Forward Movement. It must succeed if our ideals are realized, and to make it a success the concerted efforts of our people are necessary.

MEN AND MILLIONS FOR THE MASTER

J. A. Kimball

When we realize that the Christian Church, under its Forward Movement, is launching a campaign of two millions of dollars, we can but say: "What a blessed privilege is ours." If we do not respond to this call we are falling short of the high calling of Him Who came that we might have love not meagrely, but have it abundantly. If ever a man's soul ought to be burdened with the responsibility of the souls of others, surely it is now. Our lives should be as the lives of His disciples and become a never-ceasing record of mighty deeds done in the power of the Spirit. We should adopt the principle of loving others instead of loving self.

And what a change this is. To cease to grasp all and begin to give all, to cease to seek all and begin to surrender all, to aim to minister, instead of to be ministered to, to no longer lay up, enjoy, and be at ease, but to suffer and spend and be spent for Christ Himself.

Brethren, can we go over the top? Of course, we can, the people have only to be given the opportunity and this every member canvass is the very best feature of the campaign. For every member to become conscious of his responsibility in the success of this undertaking will be of untold benefit both to himself, the Church, and world at large. With the giving of this seemingly large amount will go so many prayers and hopes.

This will be a splendid opportunity to urge the tithing system among our people. A tithing membership will enable us to be able to go over the top and then some.

THAT GOOD DAY HAS ARRIVED

Rev. F. C. Lester

"Your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions." Prophetic words were these of a good day that should dawn. For our Church it has been long in coming. "Where there is no vision the people perish," we are told. Most certainly we have not grown as we should. Now, that our old men have dreamed of a bigger, better Christian Church and our young men have caught a vision of the needs of the Kingdom, the power of God, and the command of our Master, since these things are coming about, and since we are being challenged with a task greater than we can accomplish in our own strength, surely it is a time for rejoicing. The new day for our Church is just dawning and promises to be by far the brightest and best in our history.

The "Men and Millions" campaign is the biggest and best thing we have ever undertaken. It will do us more good, make us love our Church more, and do more to hasten the coming Kingdom than anything we have ever undertaken.

THE SIGN

Rev. H. J. Fleming

"In hoc signo vinces," the motto of Constantine the First tells us the secret of the power of this great man of the early Christian Church. His soldiers conquered because they had this motto written on their hearts and emblazoned on their battle standard. And we today can find no better motto for the "Men and Millions Forward Movement" than, "In hoc signo vinces." So let us write it upon our hearts and stamp it upon our battle flag as we launch one of the greatest movements in human history. Thus equipped we will be assured of victory and the God of heaven will bless us in this effort to bring about the reign of Lord Christ on earth.

ASK GREAT THINGS AND EXPECT THEM

Mrs. T. A. Moffitt

The Men and Millions Forward Movement is no doubt the greatest undertaking that possibly any Church has launched. It almost took my breath away when I realized that it meant $80.00 per member.

Certainly the Southern Christian Convention pushed back the horizon of our Church, when it shouldered such a gigantic task.

The work-a-day-world no longer reckons in small figures and the Church must keep the pace and no one familiar with the Missionary Campaign, or the Standardization Fund, can doubt the results and by means of the sure success of this great Movement, our Church will come into her own.

Let us thank God and take courage that our campaign committee dared, as Nehemiah of old, to ask great things of the Lord, and may this Movement be a strong wall of defense to safeguard our beloved Zion. As we gave our boys a victorious sacrifice on the battlefields of France to banish autocracy from the earth, so we must now give in means that the era of peace may be established and that "the kingdoms of this world might become the kingdoms of our Lord and His Christ."

CALLING A CHURCH TO ITS KNEES

The Church never had such problems as it has today. And this is the function of the Church, to have problems and to solve them. The Church creates problems. It raises moral issues. It is militant. It is on the war-path. Its one business, while militant, is to wage a continuous warfare for righteousness, mercy, justice and love.

In the present world upheaval, in the turmoil and chaotic conditions of our time, the Church has the weightiest problems of all its history. Here in America wealth is increasing, growing, multiplying with a rapidity never before witnessed. And with increasing wealth the desire for more wealth increases. Getting money, has a strong tendency in two directions. First: To make one want to get more money. Second: To make one want to give less money, proportionately, to church, charity, benevolence.

This one thing is inevitable: Either the passion for money getting is going to control the next generation and materialize us, or the Church must develop the passion of money, giving and spiritualize us. The conflict is marked and the issue cannot be obscured nor ignored. Either money will master us and materialize us; or the Church will master us and our money and so spiritualize us.

Jesus the Christ recognized the keenness of this conflict, and the deadliness of it when He said: "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the Kingdom of heaven." And He gave the one and only solution when He said, "Lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven. For where your treasure is there will your heart be also." Keep on piling up your treasure in bank vaults and land deeds, and your heart will surely be piled up there also.

We weak human beings cannot master this passion. But our heavenly Father can.

The Steering Committee cannot get the Men and Millions now so sorely needed to carry on the work of the Kingdom as God has laid it upon our Church. The Campaign Committee cannot get the Men and Millions necessary to the Forward Movement of our Church. But God can get the Men and the Millions if we fling ourselves upon His altar and do His will in this time of chaos and crisis. The Church must go to her knees if she would hear the voice of God and witness the glory of God and the triumph of His cause. J. O. ATKINSON.

KNOCKER OR BOOSTER

Silence is golden, but there are not many persons who indulge habitually in the luxury of stillness. People will talk, at least part of the time. It is very important that articulate utterance should be of the right sort. "In her tongue was the law of kindness," is the inscription on Jane Austen's tomb in Winchester Cathedral. Would that the same thing could be said of the vast majority of mortals!

The knocker has been busy in the past, is broad in the land today, and probably will be heard from in the future. He seems to be the possessor of an unfriendly eye. He is continually looking with close, scrutinizing gaze to discover faults in others. He never seems impressed with the virtues, the commendable qualities. He is blind as a bat to beauty of character and conduct. He is an expert in the business of uncovering defects and pointing out flaws. He seems to take an unenvy and devilish sort of delight in expatiating on the subject of human frailty. When some one is praised, the knocker may go so far as reluctantly to admit that a modicum of goodness may be in evidence; but he is always ready to smother the admission with a lot of derogatory and nasty remarks. We freely confess that we do not like the knocker. We would not select him for a next-door neighbor. We sorrowfully declare that in some respects he is an undesirable citizen. In fact, we are almost ready to knock the knocker. What ails him, anyway? Is he afflicted with what is known as a bad stomach? Is he the unfortunate victim of dyspepsia? Is he cursed with hereditary tendencies too strong to be resisted, or is he constitutionally jealous? Are his eyes green?

"Base envy withers at another's joy
And hates that excellence it cannot reach."

The knocker generally levels his shafts at some one who has surpassed him.

The booster is a different sort of creature. He is charitable in spirit. He follows the good old advice that, if you cannot say anything good about a person, say nothing. He keeps his eyes open for the good traits in his neighbor and rejoices to behold them. He speaks the word of kindness and of enthusiastic approval. He loves to advertise the excellencies of his fellows. His heart is not saddened and his disposition is not soured at the thought that certain people are superior to him in personal equipment and are distinguished by a larger measure of success. He is the uncompromising friend of the man who has made a mistake, but who is trying hard, by God's grace, to do better. The booster is the incarnation of good will.—United Presbyterian.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

THE TEACHER

Dr. Frank Crane

Teaching is the most honorable occupation in which any one can engage.

It is the most self-respecting business on earth.

In it one knows he is earning his salt, if he is faithfully fulfilling his duties; he is justifying his existence among men, he is doing his bit for the state, and he is serving the Lord.

No profession offers such constant inducements to be honest, truthful, humane, and intelligent. The teacher has the most admirable of all opportunities for the development of high character.

There are probably fewer immoral, shady, devious or hypocritical persons in the teaching business than in any other, not excepting preachers and reformers.

The school teachers I have met in my time grade higher, I deliberately assert, than any other class of workers (The non-workers do not grade at all.)

Good teachers are born. When a boy finds one, the kind God makes, the kind that inoculates the pupil with the love of learning, he has found a pearl of great price.

I had, I suppose, a hundred or so teachers during my school days. I remember only two of the divinely ordained kind. The rest of them were holding their jobs.

The teacher's influence I reckon to be the most far reaching of all. No reform is of much value that is not begun with children.

It is more honorable to teach school than to make money, or to hold high office, or to lead an army.

"The durable satisfactions of life," says a recent article, "come faster, in greater variety, and stay longer for the live and growing teacher than for any other human being except the teaching person called by some other name."

The teacher has the greatest opening for intellectual advancement, for we learn more by teaching than we do by studying.

The money reward of teaching is not large, but the wise person will prefer to teach at half the salary he could get in any other calling.

Teaching is hard work. But it is the kind of work that strengthens and constantly refreshes life, and not exhausts life, when pursued in the right spirit.

Every one should do a little teaching if only to find himself, for it is the best of all kinds of work for self-revelation, self-development, and self-discipline. Teaching is an excellent preparation for any other career. The president of the United States was a teacher, and he seems to be holding his own with the kings and czars that have been in the ruling business all their lives.

Take off your hat to the teacher. He is a personage.

Elsie Bray—I always read THE SUN with great pleasure and through its pages find untold benefit and encouragement.

FROM OVER THE SEAS

CHRISTMAS IN TOKYO

Certainly I attended more festivities in different churches on this my first Christmas in Japan than ever before that I remember. The celebrations began on the morning of the twenty-third, when I visited the Oji Kindergarten in time for their Christmas celebration. About thirty-five little ones were in the ring with their two teachers, and the visitors numbered about as many as the members.

If I could only borrow your eyes for awhile, and let you see the Oji church as it looked that morning, not because of the room, though it was very beautifully decorated for Christmas, but because of the people in it. The little girls in their kimonos of many and vivid colors, mingled with the darker colors of the boys' clothing as they marched into the ring, the bright eyes sparkling with anticipation, and the watchful eyes of the parents taking in every detail of the room and the ring and the foreign visitors, made a picture full of interest.

One little girl across the room appealed to me strongly because of a fancied resemblance to a little niece at home, and I remarked to Mr. Garman that I would like to hug her, but on nearer view I promptly changed my mind. That little child of only five had her face made beautiful (?) with a thick coating of powder, as white faces seem to be an ideal beauty here. As the exercises went on my heart went out to child after child, and I looked forward to the time when I shall know them all better, and can love them all I want to without being misunderstood.

One of the strangest things to the eyes of a new foreigner out here is the way in which Japanese children wear foreign clothing. Several of those little girls had on sleeping garments under their kimonos, with the pink flannel legs showing several inches below the kimonos. Then, too, black aprons seem very stylish among the boys.

While all these thoughts had been racing through my mind, the morning exercises were well under way. Teacher and children talked about the meaning of Christmas, and several children gave Bible messages. Recitations and songs followed, then the children's rhythmic work and rest time. While they were out Mr. Takahashi, the pastor, talked to the visitors, telling them again the Christmas story, and explaining the large picture of the Wise Men which formed part of the decoration. His wife and I were the only women in the room bold enough to look at him while he spoke. All the others sat with heads modestly bowed, and eyes glued to the floor. I don't know about them, but I never could get much meaning from a talk unless I could watch the speaker. Of course in this case it was very largely guess-work even then, coupled with my familiarity with his message. But I would like to have been able to see the faces of the listeners to see if the message was finding responsive hearts.

It was not long before the children were back, ready for games and their Christmas treat. They had made gifts for their parents, and I was greatly pleased with the extra ones they had made for us. I had a pretty calendar and some paper gifts. Do I hear you say it doesn't take much to amuse or please some folks? It certainly doesn't when it is the first year away from the busy home center where preparations were great and gifts many.

Next day came the Kindergarten celebration at Naka Shibuya church, and thirty-two children were gathered there. As it is held in a Japanese house, there was not room for so many visitors, but several mothers, and one old grandfather were on the floor on the edge of the circle. Right in the midst of things the old man lighted a long cigar at the hibachi fire, and began to puff smoke into the room. Luckily for me, he didn't keep at it long. Miss Watanabe, the kindergarten teacher, told the Christmas story herself here, and each child had a part in a Christmas exercise. Their songs and games were pretty and pleasing, and their gifts different, but equally pretty. Big cherry blossom blotters were their home gifts, and again I had one of them. I hung it on our tree at home for extra decoration.

Then came Christmas Day itself, with a real Christmas wedding, when Mr. Akemoto, who has been acting as pastor of the Azabu church, was married at three in the afternoon in the mission home. Or rather I should say the guests arrived then, and sometime later the wedding took place. After the ceremony and wedding refreshments were over, and the bride and groom had had their pictures taken, we rested awhile and then went to the Azabu church to the Sunday school Christmas exercises. They had begun before we arrived, and for two hours and more songs and dialogues and recitations and exercises followed each other in interesting succession. Of course, I couldn't get the meaning of all they said, but children themselves are always interesting apart from what they say, and these were no exception to the rule. Won't I be glad when I can really know them and talk with them, and have as good times as I always had with children at home?

Next day I had an invitation to the Naka Shibuya Sunday school exercises, but as I had taken a heavy cold during the week, I spent most of the day in bed instead. Now, I have yet a whole week to study and rest before the next term of language school begins, and as Dr. and Mrs. Woodworth have just returned, I am enjoying the chance to make their acquaintance. So in pleasant work and profitable pleasure the time passes rapidly. Just now as I am writing I hear sounds I never heard in the homeland. Some of Dr. Woodworth's baggage has come, and is being carried upstairs with a great deal of verbal help accompanying the physical effort. Any heavy load, whether pushed along the street or lifted in the house, seems to require a sing-song, rather musical, grunt as it moves along. So many strange sounds to hear, and so many strange sights to see, that life seems never to pall. Strange to say, I seem to look as queer to others as they do me.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR PASTOR SUCCEED

Bishop Charles H. Fowler

The Church cannot afford to have the pastor fail. If you and he and we and God, all combined, can make him succeed, we have done our best. For this end God always uses all the agencies within his reach and leaves no force within the promptings of infinite love untrained on this point. We offer a few hints and suggestions for the consideration of the laity.

Hear Him.—This is not a fair-weather duty. Has not the business of eternity as urgent claims as the business of time? Then it is not too high to let one rule govern decisions in both cases. The preacher is sent to be heard. He comes to tell the good news. Joy bubbles up in the heart and ripples out over the lips, while sorrow settles, like life's sediment, in the bottom of the heart, to clog its throbbing. His best may not suit you. Remember that there are only a few model preachers. We have read of only one perfect Model, and he was crucified many centuries ago. You are to hear as those who must give an account to God. Roaming about for the gospel is as pernicious to character as roaming about in business life would be to a man's fortune. Fortunes are built up by pushing a business along given lines through all seemings. Religious characters follow the same law. Who are the pillars of the Church? Not those who run around after men, but those who stand by the Church.

Back'' Him.—Be in your place. Battles are won, not by men on the muster roll, but by the men in the engagement. As a rule, sermons are none too warm. An empty pew throws a bucket of cold water over the pulpit. We have seen very good preachers, like very good gophers, drowned out. Every seat in the prayer meeting is occupied. When you are not in your seat there, some evil spirit occupies it, trying to represent you. Is it not too much to ask your pastor to pray in pandemonium? You either go or send a hand. In the low strifes of this world for perishable crowns and belts champions never stand alone.

Pray for Him.—The mother, seeing her son's craft go upon the breakers, kneels on the dripping beach. Many a dead Church has been resurrected by the voice of prayer. The Master's blessing has many a time made a very little bread and fish feed a great, hungry multitude. Your prayer will secure that blessing. The great revival that launched the infant Church originated in a ten days' prayer meeting. The Reformation sprouted in the cell where the great German prayed. Methodism grew out of the prayer meeting of a few Oxford students. The great Irish revival that astonished the world the other decade was spoken into power by the prayer of two poor women. Simeon and Anna, in extreme age, dwelt in the temple and abode before the altar, and they found in the helpless Babe of a peasant of Nazareth the Son of God.

Pay Him.—The steward who charged the preacher with a pair of socks with his mother gave the preacher the year before footed his gospel bill with a yarn that will not bear repeating among the angels. He differed from the preacher in being scantily supplied with soul; and from his mother in that while she warmed the preacher's soles, he prepared his own soul for warming hereafter. He must have not only bread, but also books. This means money to pay for them and time to study them. When the hopper is empty, the bread tray cannot long be full.

Use Him.—He is neither a sickle nor a wine press; nevertheless, if you would gather the harvest and the vintage he must be used. Weak men object to being used. But that is what we are in the world for. Great parties, great organizations, great movements use men for the advancement of vital interests. God's administration in the world consists in using men; and the perfection of human greatness consists in being put to the greatest uses. Your pastor comes with certain ability for the advancement of the cause in your community. Now utilize this ability. Use him on business principles. Seek the handling of his gifts and graces that will secure the largest harvest. Use him along the lines of his strength. Revolve him about his shortest axis. All this means that by a skill that denotes ability you are to put within his reach the re-enforcement of your knowledge and experience and judgment. If you lack these or the skill to lend them, the pastor may be less responsible for not profiting by them.

Give Him Air.—Break up the old-time league between Satan and the sexton. Many a good sermon is neutralized by bad air. You could smother Paul or Barnabas in carbolic acid gas. It is easy enough to ventilate a church when it is empty, but it takes the best brain in the community to do it when filled. Door-keeper in the house of the Lord is a high office.

Support Him.—Make him feel that he is not alone. No man can do much alone. The sense of support is better than support without that sense. Preacher and people are the confronting halves of an arch. Separated, they cannot hold up themselves; united, they can hold up the world.

Encourage Him.—Some people think that it is dangerous to commend a preacher. It is more dangerous not to do so. True, you may inflate him; but if he explodes, it is a slight loss. Not much material would be wasted in him. The thoughtful preacher finds enough to humble him in the failure of his best work. Bishop Simpson was so disheartened on his first circuit that for months he was fully resolved to retire from the work at the end of the year. Judicious encouragement would have saved him many weary hours. The lack of it nearly robbed the Church and the world of a preacher and a prince almost without a peer.

Recommend Him.—Many a moderate preacher is sustained by timely and persistent recommendation. Your approving sentence may turn the scale to a glorious success. Some men refuse to give an opinion till after the case is determined. It is more generous to give the struggling man the benefit of the doubt. It is time enough to bury him when he is dead. Ridicule at your table can prevent his helping the children. Sons go to ruin because fathers criticize the preacher. Criticism is easy. Nothing is perfect, and it requires no great ability to find fault. It rather indicates great perversity of heart. Bees, not blow flies, find honey everywhere.

Illustrate His Gospel.—When the lives of the believers pull the same way with the words of the preacher, nothing is impossible. The ancients said: "Whose life is lightning, his words are thunder."—In Methodist (Sydney, Australia).

A Men and Millions Forward Movement meeting is to be held in Suffolk, Virginia, this week.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson is sick at his home in Elon College, N. C.

We mourn with our readers and friends who have lost loved ones during the epidemic. We regret that we are unable to make personal mention because of the number.

Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne has moved his family from Dover, Delaware, to Burlington, N. C.

Dr. W. T. Walters and family are improving, so we are informed.

The increased circulation of THE SUN makes it impossible, with such a shortage of help, to get the paper mailed on the usual time.

Is your subscription out? If so, please renew. We have been too overworked to send out statements.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

Children's Home Fund in cash $3,004.00 How fast do you want to see it grow?

A PLAY GROUND NEEDED

A kind friend in Burlington, N. C., made the Orphanage a present of a new school Victor talking machine with a number of records. It has brought joy and delight to all the children and they enjoy it very much indeed.

While it is not their privilege to hear the noted singers, they can now have the opportunity, at the Orphanage, to hear some of the best.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Wakefield Christian church sent us one nice quilt which comes in real good this cold, rainy weather.

Miss Vera Gilliam was kind enough to send us one dozen nice handkerchiefs for the children.

There is one thing the children enjoy as much as anything and that is chicken pie. The good people of Pleasant Ridge church, Randolph County, sent the Orphanage a coop of chickens for Christmas, but owing to the delay in Greensboro they did not reach us till in January but we were delighted to get them. The good ladies of new Providence church, Graham, N. C., gave us eight hens too. So we had chicken pie and kept some to go in our poultry yard.

I have often thought how much happiness the different churches could bring to our family of sixty children by making up a coop of chickens and shipping to the Orphanage. Most any farmer's wife could spare one hen, and a number just contributing one hen each, would soon make a coop full.

Since we have purchased the Dawson tract of land, which runs within ten feet of our building on the East side, and secured the beautiful grove at the East end of our building, I have often thought if some man who had money with which he wanted to bring happiness to others, if he would invest about $450.00 in a "Fun-Ful Play" ground set and place it in that grove, I know it would bring real joy, delight and happiness to sixty boys and girls and I know of nothing they would enjoy more.

For that amount of money we could get one ocean wave, one set of swings, one stride with eight ladders, one coaster, one set see-saws.

This would give us a splendid variety and the sport and fun the children would have would be too much to value.

Have we not a man in our Church who would like to make this contribution?

Don't forget the Children's Home. We want to commence work in the early spring. Have you contributed your part toward building a home for the little helpless tots?

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: We are writing to you again. Hope all the little orphan children had a merry Christmas. Hope "Old Santa" did not forget any of the little children. He came to see both of us and brought lots of good things to eat. We are still going to school. I am ten years old and Elizabeth is seven. We are sending ten cents each. With love to all the children.—Irene and Elizabeth Dunn.

You are splendid little girls. You must work hard in school and make good grades. I have a little girl in the seventh grade who made an average of 100 on all her studies last month.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed find my dime with lots of love for the little folks. I am a little boy four and a half years old and most large enough to go to school. I can help mother and daddy in lots of ways. Love and best wishes.—L. M. Veazey, Jr.

Little boys are lots of help. I have a little boy that can help litter up the floor and keep sister sweeping all the time, but they are fine little fellows.—"Uncle Charley."

Rev. P. S. Sailer, Westerly, R. I., writes encouragingly about the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention and adds: "How fitting that great things should take place where our denomination was first launched—in the South,"

THE COURAGE OF CLEO

Cleo's teacher had told a story about the bravest girl, no bigger than Cleo, who had saved her baby sister from a runaway horse. "O, deary me!" sighed Cleo to herself, "I just love my baby sister, but I know I'd be too sacred to run out and grab her like that." Cleo couldn't help feeling that she was the worst coward in the country, and as she scuffed up the pebbly path she was telling herself, "Cleo Martin, you're afraid of dogs, and cows, and big boys, and the dark, and woolly worms, and falling off the foot-bridge over the creek, and of Dr. Duncan's big voice and whiskers—"

Just then Cleo spied baby Ruth at the window and she began waving and calling to the eager little one, so in trice she forgot what a 'fraid-cat' she was, and ran in to romp with Ruth and to help her mother.

Mrs. Martin looked rather anxious as she fixed supper. "Baby Ruth has been fretful all day," she told Cleo, "and coughed a little. I do hope—" Her voice trailed away, but she did not need to finish. For Cleo knew her mother was thinking about the dreadful time a few months before, when the baby had nearly strangled to death with the croup before the doctor could get there.

Cleo ate her supper of bread and milk very soberly. Baby Ruth fell asleep early, and with a sigh of relief her mother tucked her in her crib saying, "I do believe she'll sleep through the night and be all right in the morning. Now, daughter, let's put away the dishes and go over your reading."

Before midnight Cleo was wakened from a sound sleep by her mother's terrified voice. "O, wake up, dear! Here are your clothes. Put them on quickly, just any way, but hurry. Baby is choking and you know Daddy is away. You must be my helper, big, brave girl, and run for the doctor! Cross the creek; cut across Adams' pasture and you can reach Mrs. Darby's in a few minutes, she's so kind she'll be glad to get the doctor for us."

Never in her life had Cleo known she could get over the ground so swiftly. Right through the awful pasture she flew, and not a cow said "Mo!" nor came near to molest her. She heard the dog bark, but somehow it comforted her to know that he was awake. Above the sick tremble feeling inside, the one thought urged her on: "Hurry, Baby Ruth is choking and mother is counting on me. I must run faster!"

At last she reached Mrs. Darby's house. "You poor lamb, weren't you afraid to come over here at this time of night," exclaimed Mrs. Darby. Cleo told her about baby Ruth, and in less than five minutes Mrs. Darby had called the doctor. "Now, I'll go straight back with you," she said.

After the strain was relieved, and baby Ruth was sleeping peacefully and the doctor and Mrs. Darby had gone, Mrs. Martin crept into bed with Cleo. "I was scared nearly to pieces, mother," she confessed honestly. Her mother cuddled her up close. "My brave little daughter, you did it in spite of being afraid? And that's the very best, truest kind of courage there is," she declared proudly. Cleo gave one great sigh of content and drifted off into dreamland, so glad that she needn't call herself a "fraidy-cat" in the morning—

Phyllis (at the amateur concert): "Do you know the name of that piece?" Mary: "Do you mean the one the woman was singing or the one her accompanist was playing?"—Answers.

Teacher, to little boy: "What is your name, dear?" Little Boy: "Jule, teacher." Teacher: "Don't say 'Jule;' you should say 'Julius.'" Then to the next boy: "And what is your name?" Second Little Boy: "Billious, teacher."—New Commonwealth.

OUR CHILDREN IN HEAVEN

"They are not dead, but gone before," we say of the loved ones who have passed to the beyond. We lovingly gaze after them into the Shadow Land. Only our imagination can follow them in that great hereafter to which we are hastening. Faith whispers that there will be a happy reunion, and, of all persons who have gone on before, to none do our hearts go out in greater love than to the little children whose infant voices have been hushed on earth. Their little handclaspings are still warm; we feel the soft breath upon our cheeks; we clasp to our breast any of their little garments or play-things, but our hearts do not cease from mourning because of their absence.

The only comfort offered us in our bereavement is the thought that again we shall receive our little ones in our arms. If we believed that their opening light had gone out forever into darkness, we would plunge our souls into anguish!

When a little baby leaves its mother's arms to go into the arms of Jesus, we know it is forever safe from all harm and the parents can, if they will, surely meet it again. This thought that the little ones are in the Father's care, is the sweetest comfort to the hearts of bereaved parents. Our consolation is that death is not a final severance but only a parting for a while until the meeting takes place on a farther shore.

The Bible teaches us that death is but a separation of parent and child for a short time. The child is only going back after a short stay, to the Father who gave it. The little ones die in the Lord, gain rest without labor, victory without conquest and are saved without probation. Jesus Himself made children the special objects of His love and care. He was ever solicitous for them and gathered them around Him on all possible occasions. "Suffer the little children to come unto me," said He, "for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

THE FRUITS OF PROHIBITION

The American Issue, Westerville, Ohio, gives the following as the fruits of prohibition:

"Young men are safer. Young women will have better husbands.

"No more will broken-hearted, poverty-stricken mothers be seen in very agony of soul, wringing their hands at the graves of drunken sons.

"No more will the sun of joyous youth and lofty purpose go down at noon.

"Homes will be happier and tidier. Love will build her nest and rear her brood under the eaves.

"Wives and children will be better housed, better clothed, and better fed.

"Imbecility and subnormality will be rarer and less pronounced.

"Christmas will be an occasion of joy and cheer in the home—no longer one of dire apprehension of a drunken husband and father's home-coming.

"Daddy, too, will be more industrious, a better provider, more healthful, and self-confident.

"Business will be steadier, employees will be more efficient, and the volume of business transacted will be greater, with fewer losses from failures and bad accounts.

"The State will have less crime to prosecute, fewer calls will be made upon the poor fund, workhouses and jails will close up, and tramping will become a lost art.

"Fewer public institutions will be needed. More children will be in school and fewer in the sweat shops. Schools will do better work.

"Politics will be cleaner. Legislation will more nearly reflect public sentiment.

"There will be an increase in respect for law. The saloon has been the most sinister influence in the administration of law. By precept and example it has taught contempt for all law.

"The saloon has been, when possible, a corrupting influence in court procedure, legislation, and administration—everywhere.

"Surgery will make a better showing in vital statistics. Patients with better vitality will come to the operating table.

"The physician, too, will have better success in the treatment of diseases. His attempts at medication will not be resisted at their very inception and made more problematical by alcoholism.

"The perfectly enormous waste of life through alcoholic indulgence will be less. A more healthful generation of people will in due time arise."

FUN IN ADVERTISEMENTS

The following advertisements appeared in various papers some years ago:

"Bulldog for sale; will eat anything; very fond of children."
"Wanted—A boy, to be partly outside and partly behind the counter."

"Widow in comfortable circumstances wishes to marry two sons."

"Animal sale now on; don't go elsewhere to be cheated; come here."

"A lady wants to sell her piano, as she is going abroad in a strong, iron frame."

"Lost, near Highgate Archway, an umbrella belonging to a gentleman with a bent rib and a bone handle."

"Wanted, an airy bedroom for a gentleman 22 feet long and 11 feet wide."

"Mr. Jones, furrier, begs to announce that he will make uppers, caps, etc., for ladies out of their own skins."

Recently this line appeared in a daily paper: "A earload of bricks came in for a walk through the park."

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 22, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject: Peter Delivered From Prison. (Acts 12:1-19.)

Time: A. D. 44.

Place: Jerusalem.

Golden Text: "The Angel of Jehovah encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them."

Additional Reading: Psalm 34:1-8; Luke 22:39-46; James 5:16-18.

Promise: Things wrought by prayer.

The history of Christianity is a record of contests with temporal authority. Since the supreme illustration of Pilot's assertion of worldly authority rulers of all times have sought to stop the march of Christ's spirit down the ages by interposing man-made law. But as that first demonstration of the victory of right showed the world that apparent temporal surrender really brought eternal salvation, so all subsequent attempts to bring Christ into court have strengthened His cause on the earth.

Only One Supreme Court

How foolish rulers have been to think their petty courts could call to trial disciples of Christ! Little have they understood that no courts have power or authority save such as they derive from the highest court of final appeal. Short-sighted rulers they—and no more striking illustrations survive than the Herod's. It was Herod the Great who slew the babes of Bethlehem. It was Herod Antipas who murdered John the Baptist. And now the grandson and nephew of these men comes into power to rule for four years only to learn that he had not ruled at all because he spurned contact with the Divine Ruler.

A Twentieth Century Herod

How modern is the example of this haughty defying ruler in the world today. We have but recently seen a classic attempt to do the same thing. Apparently all the progress we have made in two thousand years is in expressed motive. Unlike the Herod of 41 A. D. the modern Herod, now covering in Holland, did not publicly renounce the right but insisted on "Gott mit uns" however inconsistent with his policies of ruthlessness and disregard. The result is always the same. Men may take every precaution to inform their earthly mandates; they may set double guards over their prisoner or plant cannon bases in Belgium and France. But with prison guards and cannon bases another power is essential. It is the power that makes them possible. It is the power without which they are of no avail.

Prison Bars Whit Genius

Peter's deliverance from prison had just the opposite effect of what Herod had hoped for, so in early translations of the Bible prison terms seemed always to whiten the spirit of righteous men so they could fight harder than ever. O'Henry, a North Carolinian, in the story of his life attributes the firing off of his literary genius to his confinement in a Southern prison. The morale for our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers is: Fear not the temporal abstracts raised by worldly authority, keep faith in that power which is ultimate—that power which is supreme!

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 22, 1920

J. Vincent Knight

"Christian Principles In Industry." Mic. 6:8; Matt. 7:12.

One of the great problems of the day that our nation as well as other nations of the world has failed to solve, is the industrial problem. The great mass of private owners have done little to give satisfactory results. Then, Government ownership in part, has also failed and we are far from the goal we have been trying to reach. Indeed, matters seem to grow worse. The fact is, politics. Private or Government ownership cannot and will not adjust matters, for in the heart of the world there is still the spirit of graft, gain, pre-dominance and oppression that will never yield itself, and the result is a mass of confusion.

Has God confused the minds of men, that they are turned against each other in the industrial world? Such is possible, and all that to teach mankind one lesson we have so far failed to learn: "That what we have Settlement by legislation, and law enforcement? Never, until our Christian civilization has put the spirit of the Christian religion into politics, and teaches the world about us the use of the Golden Rule. We must stop long enough to learn the lesson God taught Cain: "That we are our brother's keeper." In other words, we must settle our problems by the spirit of the Christ life. Politics, legislation, and law enforcement will help, but they are means to an end and not the end itself. Nothing less than the spirit of Christian brotherhood will bring a safe adjustment of matters.

The Church is beginning to open its eyes to the needs of the industrial world, and well it should. Why should the Church sit still when in 1915 out of 11,600,000, boys and girls between ten and fifteen years of age, 1,714,500 boys, and 514,800 girls won their bread by hard labor? The Church needs to insert itself into the industrial world and face the situation in the spirit of the Master. Christ stood for justice, mercy, love and service to the other fellow. The Interchurch World Movement has caught the right vision, and proposes a program large enough to cover the industrial problems, and well it should for the world problems will never be solved through political wrangles.

The time has come when we must insert the principle of Christianity into the industrial world. This we will do, as soon as we are ready to make our religion the practical basis of our living. The religion of Jesus Christ is the religion for the world, and is a safe basis on which to settle all our difficulties. The present crisis and the crush between capital and labor, together with the general unrest all over the world constitutes a strong call to Stewardship. When we learn to use God's money and property as we should use it, we will have no industrial problems to solve, and I contend that it is the whole Church to get behind the proposition and hasten it to an early adjustment.

MARRIAGES

TUNSTALL-FRANKLIN

Miss Josephine Franklin, the attractive daughter of Mr. George Franklin, was married on Wednesday afternoon to Mr. C. C. Tunstall of Henderson, N. C. The wedding took place at the home of the bride on 2nd St. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Truitt of News Ferry, pastor of the bride. He was assisted by Rev. George Tunstall, brother of the groom. The wedding was a quiet home affair, only a few friends and relatives being present. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for a trip to northern cities after which they will make their home in Henderson.

OBITUARIES

COVINGTON

Henry T. Covington was found dead in his bed Saturday morning, January 24, 1920. It is supposed that he died of heart failure. He was seventy-three years old and was one of the most thrifty farmers in this section of the country. He had been a neighbor of the very finest type, a loyal member of Pleasant Grove Christian church.

He lived near News Ferry, Va., and leaves three sons and one daughter surviving him. He was buried in Pleasant Grove cemetery, his pastor officiating. May God bless the bereaved family.

J. G. TRUITT.

BEALE

Hazel Virginia Beale was born November 10, 1913, and died February 1, 1920, at the age of six years, two months, and twenty-two days. Her death came as a shock to the community, as she was sick only a few days. She leaves to mourn their loss a devoted father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Beale, one grandfather, two grandmothers, six uncles, three aunts, and other relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. C. H. Rowland, February 2, 1920, at Mt. Carmel church. Interment was made in the Mt. Carmel cemetery.

E. T. COTTEN.

DUKE

Genie Duke, a well known farmer of Nausemond county, died at six o'clock, February 2, 1920, at the age of forty-eight years. He had suffered several years and taken treatments from the hospital at different times, but was at home at the time of his death. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mittie A. Duke; his daughter, Addie Maie Duke; his father, James E. Duke; two brothers, James Duke and William Duke; two sisters, Mrs. Cornelia Mizell, and Mrs. Ella V. Powell; three half brothers, Jethro Babb, Roney and Joel Duke; two half sisters, Mrs. Frances Clover, and Mrs. Mary Standworth. Funeral services were conducted at the residence Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock, by the writer. Interment was made in the family burying ground near Nurney.

E. T. COTTEN.

MORING

Prof. James H. Moring was born June 5, 1844 and was reared in the community of O'Kelley's Chapel. In early childhood he professed religion and united with the church at that place. While he was yet a youth, he volunteered and entered the Civil War and was wounded at the first battle of Manassa, July 21, 1861. Sheriff Page detailed Aaron Roberts of Morrisville, N. C., to take him off the battlefield. While he was about to be carried off, the enemy halted his helper and was about to stab Moring to death, but he prayed for deliverance and the enemy stayed the beyonette, remarking at the time "there is no use to stab him, he will die anyway," and let him go. Prof. Moring always attributed his deliverance to immediate answer to prayer.

After he returned home from the war, he soon felt the call of God to prepare himself to teach music and prepared himself to teach church music under the direction of Dr. Wilson of Chapel Hill. He used his talent in teaching music in churches of all denominations where he made a host of friends. He made himself useful in leading the music for conferences, conventions, churches, Sunday schools, and revival meetings of all churches. He was never happier than when he was engaged in such service.

He was an active member of the Christian church at Morrisville of which he was deacon at the time of his death. He served as Sunday school superintendent, Sunday school teacher, leader of music, and representative of this church at various times in conference, where he enjoyed meeting his many personal friends, among the ministry and laity.

He was elected three terms as Sergeant-at-Arms in the State Legislature where he made many strong friends among the representative men of the entire State. At the time of his death, he was Commander of L. O. B. Camp at Raleigh.

During the Christmas holidays, he visited Prof. S. M. Smith, his personal friend at Norfolk, Virginia, apparently in as good health as usual. He attended the "Billy Sunday Meeting" and was a member of the great choir in the bass section. On the night of his death, there had been an especially great service with a choir of a thousand men singing gospel songs. This was the greatest experience of his life in song. At the close of the service which was climacteric for him, as he stepped from the platform, he fell on sleep and passed away without a struggle. It was to him like going from the Mount of Transfiguration to the home above. He joined the invisible choir above, going from the greatest choir that he had ever been a member of on earth. There could have been no time or place for the end to come that would have suited him better for he was never happier than when he was singing. The last song he sang was entitled "Just Outside the Door," and then he stepped inside his heavenly home.

He is gone, but his memory liveth;
He is dead, his example is here,
The sweetness and fragrance it giveth
Will linger for many a year.

LIFE-RECRUIT SUNDAY

NEXT Sunday, February 22, is to be "Life-Recruit Sunday" throughout the entire Church (see page 12 of the Christian Annual for 1919 for recommendation of this by the Southern Christian Convention) and we feel satisfied that pastors have already scheduled this for a topic on that date. This comment is an effort, in some way, to assist these pastors in getting the people, especially the young people, to think with them on this important subject.

Some men and women come to decision of some definite Christian service early in life while others make decisions in more mature years. Behind every decision we believe there is a definite influence, that leads to definite action of mind. Home influence, or some other influence, may be brought to bear upon the life of a young man and cause him to give himself to the work of the ministry. There may be a responsibility, we believe, connected with the bringing of this influence to bear upon the young man.

We entertain the hope, and as spokesman of the official organ of the Church, call upon our people everywhere, to use their best efforts and influence to get the young people to assemble in the various places of worship on next Sunday, that they may have an opportunity of hearing a message designed to bring more workers into the vineyard for the sake of the Kingdom.

The labor problem is a very grave one in this country, and when we say that, the application applies not only to ordinary labor, but to every branch of activity. There is a reason why every class of labor is suffering a shortage and the ministry is not to be held up as being forsaken. Other vocations or professions are suffering a shortage of help. It is not because men are forsaking these things but because of the very rapid adjustment of world affairs, increasing and changing of commercial conditions. Somehow the world has always wanted to slap the ministry in the face when a pulpit had to go unfilled. The opening up of social service work, Y. M. C. A. work, and numerous other organizations characterized by the spirit of Christianity have called thousands of young men into their activities that would make fine pastors and excellent preachers. There are two reasons why they answer these calls: First, the urgency, and second, because preparation can be eliminated in many instances.

The field is too broad for us to comment in detail as to what this new order of things may mean for the Church. Suffice to mention these: A more definite emphasis must be placed on the work of the ministry, a broadening out of the Church's activity to do some of the world's tasks that organizations outside of the Church are endeavoring to do, and to place the compensation of the ministry on a basis with other things. A minister is first a man and then a minister; the function of the Church is not only to be but to do; a minister is worthy of his hire, and just as he cannot live by bread alone, neither can he live by praise alone.

We believe in a Divine call to the ministry, but that is not all of our belief. We believe in a Divine answer, and that answer does not stop with the individual when he says, "Lord, here am I, send me," but it continues to those whom he is to serve to help answer that call in a joyous and generous support. Not support in money alone, but support in encouragement, co-operation, prayer, sympathy. No man can be a success and do his greatest work without the united support of those whom he is endeavoring to serve. A good listener may be as much help to the making of a great sermon as the preacher himself.

God is not going to call human beings to preach or to teach, to be missionaries, and help bring the Kingdom unless we co-operate with Him in every possible support of those whom He shall call.

It is a pity, a shame, and almost a crime that hundreds of our noble young men turn to other things in life when we need their services so much. It is a disgrace that our country is abounding in wealth, barns bursting with rich harvests, and so little spent for the education of our Christian young men and women. God may be waiting to call your son or your neighbor's son, but he may want you to help him make that call. God works through human instrumentality. Seek out the young people of your community for Kingdom service and see them, for your voice in their ears may be the voice of God.

We believe in definite seasons to do definite things. The Christ had a time to work, a time to pray, a time to rest. The world's greatest organizations move with the least friction because of their system. A course of instruction can best be appropriated by a student who has a definite period to study, a definite subject, and a definite period to recite, review and reflect on the subject under consideration. We believe that the greatest ministry—the greatest process of religious instruction—can be best accomplished by a logical outline of religious instruction, and the pulpit of all places of instruction and edification should lead in this method. It is, therefore, fitting, appropriate and business-like that our pulpits are called upon by the highest official body of our Church to give attention to a definite subject on the third Sunday in this month. We feel confident that no pastor will fail to carry out the wishes of the Convention, and thus help to bring an influence to meet a great need in our Church—a need for more life-recruits.

As we shall bring the matter and the message of life-recruits to our people let us bring this very important point for consideration: To engage the minds of our young people to give definite consideration of some active work in behalf of the Church. "Life-Recruit Day" does not mean altogether getting pledges from young men to become ministers or the young women to become missionaries, but to enlist their thoughts for serious consideration of these matters that are Divine.

SOME THINGS THE CAMPAIGN REVEALED

Rev. Ira E. D. Andrews writing in Home and Foreign Field (Baptist) tells some things that the great Baptist campaign for 75 millions revealed both to the Baptists themselves and to the world. As the Baptists are organized in church work and government much as we are, may not this revelation prove a prophecy for us: "It has revealed the real solidarity of our people and clearly demonstrated the fact that regeneration of soul and not centralization of earthly authority makes us one. It has revealed we have the spirit to do big things when big tasks are set before us. It has revealed that we have a great host of consecrated laymen and elect women whose talents should more and more be utilized—speaking, praying, talking things of the Kingdom in their respective spheres. It has revealed that while there were some big gifts, the greater giving comes from 'the common people who hear Jesus gladly.' It has revealed the fact that the young as well as the old are interested in financing the Kingdom of God. It has revealed that we pastors have never asked enough for the interests of Christ's Kingdom at the hands of our people nor explained fully to them their duty in this regard. It has revealed a few everywhere who have not learned 'it is more blessed to give than to receive.' It has revealed a few whose horizon is measured by the confines of home. It has revealed that we have leaders who by faith see the invisible. It has revealed that sacrificial giving wonderfully promotes spiritual living. It has revealed, in a visible and evidential way, that the Lord's people are destroyed, to a great degree, in efficiency and service, for the lack of knowledge of the affairs of His Kingdom. It has revealed afresh the place and power of prayer in the Christian life. It has revealed the need of continued and concentrated effort and its effect. It has revealed the need of real religious enthusiasm, rightly directed. It has revealed the need of genuine faith. It has revealed with wonderful significance that we must never depart from the personal and the individual call in religion. It has revealed to any who may have doubted that God's promises never fail."

AN EXPLANATION

So many fine endorsements for the Men and Millions Forward Movement have been received that we have been unable to get them all in the last several issues. Each endorsement received was numbered and took its place in the paper exactly in order as received. Also we have had to condense all these endorsements, except two or three that were already very brief. We believe that this explanation will suffice for any question as to why any certain endorsement has not appeared, or why any one appeared in condensed form.

We have been burdened to the utmost to carry the matter received, in addition to the Men and Millions Forward Movement matter. Every editor has the privilege of condensing and so long as you crowd him, without giving him more pages, just so you must extend his editorial privileges.

WHEN ALL PULL TOGETHER

From a Baptist paper last week we take this note: "Reports continue to come in from Victory Week which read like a modern version of the Acts of the Apostles. Take this for example: The church at Docena in an Alabama Association was apportioned. The total membership of the church is sixteen. Their financial report for the campaign shows $3,334.22—lacking only $165.78 of being seven times their quota. The largest single pledge was for $300.00." That shows what even a poor, struggling church of hardly a handful of members can do when all pull together. To us the most glorious sight to be witnessed will be that of all our churches pulling together, every man, woman and child in every one of them, for the Master's work, each seeking to do his and her best in the name of our dear Church for the glory of our dear Lord.

"THE SLACKER"

We present elsewhere in this issue a pointed and comprehensive treatise on "The Slacker," by Dr. A. T. Robertson of the Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., reprinted from The Biblical Recorder. Here is hoping that such things can be said of none of our pastors when our Men and Millions Forward Movement campaign is over. It is bad enough for a cowardly layman to be a slacker; but a preacher "slacker"—may the good Lord spare our dear Church of his kind. And here is believing that if he shows his cowardly or faltering hand it will be made "lonesome" for him in the years to come.

ANOTHER WORD TO OUR NEW READERS

You are receiving THE CHRISTIAN SUN without cost. The Men and Millions Forward Movement is having it sent to you. Accept it, kind friends, and read it—read its every issue and its every page. It is your Church paper, it is an institution of your own Church and deserves your support in giving it a careful reading. It is "The Christian Sun"—it seeks to reflect the sunshine of righteousness in a Christian way. It is not perfect because it is edited by a human being, printed by human beings and brought to you through the hands of human beings. Any fault or failure upon our part in making the paper worthy of your approval in every way is but an effort to do better, and if we have that satisfaction of knowing that you are appreciating the paper our efforts will be fully paid.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

A STUFFED ORDER

We have finally secured two rooms in which we are located in reasonable comfort. Soon after we moved in we found ourselves in need of some oil. We called Deacon E. W. Neville and placed an order with him. He did that which no other merchant has ever done in dealing with us. He stuffed our order. Instead of sending only the oil, he sent a big fine ham, oat meal, bread, tomato catsup, canned brains, syrup, eggs, and other useful articles.

We fully appreciate these gifts. If ever a man loved to give to the church and pastor that man is Deacon E. W. Neville. He does that which but few other men do; he puts his church first. He loves his church and pastor, and is a prince in the work of the Kingdom. May the Lord bless him and make us worthy of such tokens of love.

MR. & MRS. R. F. BROWN.

PREACHING ON MEN AND MILLIONS

I am now preaching a series of sermons on the Men and Millions Forward Movement. I am of the opinion that every pastor should keep this great movement before his people. The subjects are as follows:

February 8, 11 A. M.—“The Power of Prayer.”

February 8, 7:30 P. M.—“The Kingdom of God.”

February 15, 7:30 P. M.—“Why God Needs Men.”

February 22, 7:30 P. M.—“God’s Claim for our Lives.”

March 7, 11 A. M.—“God’s Way of Financing His Kingdom.”

March 28, 11 A. M.—“God’s Living Epistles.”

April 18, 11 A. M.—“The Soul and Substance are God’s.”

THE PREACHER WHO IS A SLACKER

Prof. A. T. Robertson

Words are pictures. Some are more vivid than others. Every great movement brings some new words to the fore. We had military terms before the war like deserter, traitor, campaign, and victory. But now we have drive, over the top, camouflage, and many others. One that will stick is slacker, as applied to the men who tried to dodge the government draft for service or who tried to dodge his war taxes. It is a good old Anglo-Saxon word that has come back. We use the adjective frequently as of a slack rope. It is a Biblical word: “The Lord is not slack concerning his promises as some count slackers” (2 Pet. 3:9). There are several examples in the Old Testament. Jehovah “will not be slack to him that hateth him; he will repay him to his face” (Deut. 7:10). “And Joshua said unto the children of Israel, How long are ye slack to go in to possess the land, which Jehovah, the God of your fathers, hath given you?” (Joshua 18:3). This is a use of the adjective in precisely the sense of our “slacker,” one who balks in the face of duty to country and to God. Twice we have the adjective slack used with the word hand. “He becometh poor that worketh with a slack hand” (Prov. 10:4). “In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not; O Zion, let not thy hands be slack” (Zeph. 3:16). Here again to have cowardice in the presence of danger described by the word slack. Laziness and cowardice already belong to the word slack in the Old Testament.

There are instances also of the verb slack that are very striking. “When thou shalt vow a vow unto the Lord, thou shalt not slack to pay it: for the Lord, thy God, will surely require it of thee; and it would be sin in thee” (Deut. 23:21). Here we are getting close on the trail of the man who has taken the oath of fealty and loyalty to the government and who does not live up to it. He dodges military service and the burdens of citizenship. And what about the preacher who has made his vows of consecration to the Lord? “And the men of Gideon sent unto Joshua to the camp to Gilgal, saying, Slack not thy hand from thy servants; come up to us quickly, and save us, and help us” (Joshua 10:6). Alas and alas, for the preacher who slacked his hand during the 75 Million Campaign, who relaxed his interest and his grip, who let the cause lag, who did not lead the hosts to victory, who took to cover before the first outset of covetousness and stinginess.

Once more there is the Shumanite woman, whose son fell ill and died. She saddled an ass and said to her servant: “Drive, and go forward; slack not thy riding for me except I bid thee” (2 Kings 4:24). The Revised Version here has “slacken.” The life of her son was at stake and she must get Elisha, the man of God, and she rode until she did get him. She was not a slacker when her boy’s life was the issue. He had already died, but she would not be content till Elisha had come to restore him to life. Once more in Habakkuk 1:4 we read: “Therefore the law is slacked, and justice doth never go forth.” Here the law is in the hands of slackers who stand in the way of justice. It is beyond controversy that today the law is often slackened by technicalities in the hands of sharp lawyers and hair-splitting judges who higggle and hagggle over the forms of law and are unable to strike the common righteousness of the case.

The 75 Million Campaign, like the great World War, has revealed the slackers in the ministry with a powerful searchlight. The state director of the campaign in one of the Southern States told me that in a dozen churches in his State leading laymen had asked him to recommend to them loyal preachers who can be counted on to lead the churches in the new era of service. These churches all have pastors who proved slackers in the campaign. The onward movement of the churches will throw these pastors out of a job. The preachers who have stood guard at the door of the churches to keep the denominational agents away will soon find that they are without a job. The laymen in the churches have lost confidence in the preacher who is a slacker. He has been weighed and found wanting. In a minister’s conference Monday I heard a minister say that in his association one of the pastors refused to present the apportionment to the church or to allow any agents of the campaign to come and speak. But all the same the laymen in the church reading the denominational paper and unwilling to be found a slacker church because of a slacker pastor, took the matter in hand and went over the top in spite of the pastor. Needless to say, that pastor's usefulness is over in that church and community.

It has been glorious to see how the Baptist pastors in the South have rallied to the cause in this campaign. And the laymen and the women have come right up to the help of the Lord in the great crisis. There were grumblers who were sure that the thing could not be done. Now that it has been done, most of them will be boasting about how they did it. But it will be hard to forget those who held positions of leadership and who refused to lead and who even hindered those who wanted to help.

These will be tagged with the term slacker, and it will stink. Hardshellism has received its death-blow in this great campaign. Some Hardshells will hang on, but they cannot stand against the on-rushing tide of educational and missionary enthusiasm which is now sweeping the land. The preacher who is a slacker will have a lonesome time in 1920 and for many years to come.—In Biblical Recorder.

DR. W. T. HERNDON

I was intimately acquainted with this dear brother from my boyhood, and during the great struggle that resulted in the building of Elon College he was very closely associated with me and I know how arduously he labored to secure the funds necessary to meet the expenses of that undertaking. He obtained pledges beyond the amount needed to pay all demands, but it was no fault of his that many pledges were never paid, and so a debt occurred that was afterwards discharged.

Would it not be befitting for the friends of the college to place a nice stone at his grave as a feeble expression of our love and gratitude? Who will speak first?

DOVER, DELAWARE, WORK—GREAT MEETING HELD
BY DR. ROWLAND

My dear Brother Riddle:

This will advise you that on January 4, 1920, I brought to a close my ministry in the Dover pastorate. On October 4, 1919, I advised the brethren that some changes would have to be made, and recently tendered my resignation which was to take effect at the regular congregational meeting.

Since that Sunday, in July 1916, when I reluctantly accepted the invitation of the People's church to become its pastor, and donned the heavy and over-large harness so lately laid down by my revered father, the Dover work has been crowded with memorable and varied experiences. After the initiatory baptism into service with its accompanying thrills of united enthusiasm, the Master usually leads His servants into the wilderness for a time of testing. We have not escaped this experience. There have been times of trial and temptation, when my feet seemed to drag in the clay of despair. But these, happily, were of duration, and from them I returned with power. "The burdens of the valley of vision,"—how significant is the phrase. It is in the valley and not on mountain peaks that our eyes were anointed with vision and the real beauty of life is unveiled to our hastened gaze. I do not deny the mountain peak experiences, nor have they been denied. It is magnificent to stand upon some highest Pisgah of faith, there to look with prophetic vision upon promised lands freighted with spiritual delights. I have ascended mounts of veritable transfiguration, where with Peter, we fain would have built tabernacles for our eternal habitation. But—it is in the valley that heart meets heart, that we enter into fellowship with the sufferings of our Christ, that by sharing the burdens of man we learn the exquisite lesson of vicarious sacrifice, and come to read aright the sacramental meaning of life.

The reactions from the work overseas were most helpful and sent me into the Dover activities with renewed energy and enthusiasm, and since last July the church, in all of its departments, has forged steadily ahead. I have not time to review, in detail, but if you will kindly indulge me I will call attention to two outstanding features.

First, the series of meetings we held under the splendid leadership of Brother C. H. Rowland, of Franklin, Va. For ten days this man of God poured out his heart to us in messages filled with the Spirit of Christ eloquent in presentation of Gospel truths, and characterized always by most impressive and impassioned pleading for souls. Dr. Rowland won all hearts to him and on every side there was outspoken praise of the man, his message and his methods.

Toward the close of the meetings Sister Rowland came to re-enforce her husband and to pay us a visit. Our ladies soon became conscious of the fact that a serene and beautiful spirit was in their midst. In her quiet talks on missions, Sister Rowland not only won the sympathies of our ladies but gripped their imaginations and successfully challenged them to new and nobler endeavors. The visible results of the meeting were thirty-eight public acceptances of Christ, of which number twenty-three joined the church.

Second, during the past year the People's church has raised and pledged approximately $10,000.00 over and above its current expenses. The debt on the church has been liquidated, and all other indebtedness has been provided for.

There is, I believe, a crystalizing sentiment in favor of sending an individual representative to the mission fields; and, in addition to this there is on foot a movement to secure in the near future a handsome and adequate pipe organ.

As I indulge this retrospective mood my heart rejoices over these splendid results, though I marvel that they should have come to pass under a leadership so frail and untutored as my own. Surely God has abundantly blessed us.

As I turn again to the evangelistic work to which God so wondrously called me six years ago, I pray that our Father may continue to bless this great Dover work, renewing in the hearts of His children that divine urge which shall impell them forward to the realization of larger and nobler achievements; and that I, the least of His servants, may be clothed in the power of His Spirit, anointed for service and fully consecrated to my high and holy office.

A. VICTOR LIGHTBOURNE.

HUMAN TOKENS OF SPIRITUAL WORSHIP

God does not need our tenth or any portion of it. He is infinitely rich in the abundance and resources of Heaven and earth. What He does need, however, is our acknowledgment that He is our Sovereign and our Lord. He wants us to acknowledge His sovereignty, not only of our lives, but of our possessions as well. It is through material and proportionate giving that I can acknowledge His sovereign rulership and ownership of that which comes into my possession.

When the tenant pays the landlord one-fourth or one-half from year to year, then the tenant acknowledges that another and not himself owns the land on which he lives. Now landlords charge as rental one-fifth, or one-fourth, or one-half, according to agreement for tenantry and for temporary use and occupancy. So the landlord of this universe saw fit in the making of man to charge mankind one-tenth for using temporarily and for occupying His land, His possessions, His belongings, and when we pay that stipulated tenth, we have in that account recognized and acknowledged God's sovereignty and our tenantry. This is the heart and the soul of the tithe system, namely, the acknowledgment on our part in the payment of it that which we have for use is temporary, and the right of ownership is vested in our Lord, our Creator, before Whom one day we shall come into judgment and shall give answer, and according to the records and accounts which the divine hand has accurately kept. We may by stealth, or secret dealing, as the tenant does his earthly landlord, withhold for the time being His part of the rental, but God Himself has declared that the tenth is sacred, is holy unto Himself, and He who withholds this from God does so at his own peril. The tithe was not established of Almighty God to make the church rich and individual poor. It was ordained of Him, if His Word is plain in the matter, that through that divine plan we might in all our material offerings and transactions acknowledge God's supremacy and our dependence upon Him, as His tenant for the time, His stewards for a season. In the light of such Biblical and unmistakable facts, I do most heartily agree with Dr. E. A. Watkins of Lima, Ohio, who recently declared in a great article in the "Herald of Gospel Liberty" that:

"We are not at all interested in securing ten thousand tithers in the Christian Church, save as it would contribute mightily to the raising up of ten thousand consecrated Christians who would seek first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness. There is no higher type of spirituality than this: to acknowledge God's sovereignty in the material world and to maintain it by the devotion of material possessions to exalted use. Material offerings are the most natural, and therefore, the most persistent human token of a pure and spiritual worship. Love to God and His Kingdom is unimportant and meaningless without the tokens of such love expressed in a sacrificial way."

No, beloved, God is not so poor that He needs a gift from you, but He is so rich and full of glory that He wishes by and through our acknowledgement of His sovereignty to share that riches and His glory with us poor mortals. And this He does when we are willing to always give to Him His required and holy tithe, so that in that act, He may bind us to Him and through it realize that we really and truly acknowledge Him as Lord and Master of ourselves and our belongings.

PREPARED TO SING THE PRAISES OF JEHOVAH

Only the thought of a meager mind will lead any of our number to say that the Men and Millions Forward Movement is gotten up for the money only, or that the Kingdom can be saved by money. Anyone who would think that the Kingdom of our Lord can be perpetuated with money, or saved by money needs enlightenment of mind, enlargement of heart, and a sound understanding of the Word of God. What we of the Christian Church need, what we are striving and praying for, is that our membership may come to the same results and to the same glorious achievements that the Baptist papers and people declare that their membership through the Campaign for $75,000,000.00 came to. There is before me now while I write this statement in The Biblical Recorder of January 28 from the General Secretary:

"The $75,000,000.00 campaign aroused multitudes of laymen to unparalleled giving and to zealous activity. Multitudes that had been silent were led to speak and even sing the praises of Jehovah. Thousands went afiel as heralds of stewardship; that carried spiritual enlightenment to others and brought spiritual enlightenment to themselves. Their executive ability was called into exercise on behalf of our enterprises of the Kingdom. Many of our laymen have expressed their desire to be kept in the Lord's work." From every source this writer has heard that thousands have been awakened among our Baptist brethren to spiritual activity in the church who had been before the campaign inactive, indifferent and unconcerned.

I can only think of one class of people who can consistently oppose or object to the present Men and Millions Forward Movement, and that class of men consists of those who oppose activity in behalf of the Church, energy in prosecuting the Lord's work, and any effort to make the world better and the Church stronger in our day and time. There are such souls, of course, but this should not in any wise dampen the ardor of those who with zeal for their Lord are willing to spend and be spent that His blessed Kingdom may come and that His will shall be done on earth as it is in Heaven. We of the Christian Church have the right to labor, to toil and to earnestly pray that our people, like our friends of the Baptist Church, shall have their mouths filled with praise, and shall be led to speak and even sing the praises of Jehovah. It seems to this writer that every individual in the Christian Church who has a love for our Church, for its growth, progress and power, can fling himself unreservedly into the great task before us and give his voice, his hand, and his heart to the achievement of this great task. Brethren and Friends, the Lord will give us the victory if we approach His throne on our knees, get the burden of the world's need upon our hearts and agonize with Him till the answer comes. Admit that the task is great, but the greater the task, the stronger the challenge to brave hearts and courageous souls. It is true that slackers and cowards tremble and give away before great obstacles, but that which frightens the coward nerves and strengthens the courageous and the loyal to redoubled activity and increased energy. To our knees, Brethren, in answer to the Master's call, and before a great task which we undertake in His name and in His strength.

Men and Millions Forward Movement

READY TO SERVE

Rev. P. T. Klapp

What we need most now is men of absolute consecration; men of faith once delivered to the saints. The apostle in his age exhorted the brethren to contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. Without such a faith our Men and Millions Forward Movement will be in vain. We must have faith in God. There is no limit to the power of the Church when it is placed in God's hands. Not only two millions of dollars but many other millions will come, if we co-operate with God, and the world be brought to Christ. The money is the minor part. We need men consecrated to a great cause and looking toward a great end.

In the name and for the sake of Jesus, I lay myself and what I have upon the altar for service and to this end will I work and pray.

CAN WE DO IT?

Rev. C. E. Newman

Can we do it? Yes. How? The Campaign Committee assisted by the enthusiastic support and devout prayers of our ministers and laymen. Other denominations have gone forward in great movements and done the things that seemed to be unthinkable a few years ago. We must do the same or remain still, which will ultimately mean extinction. Organize, get enthused, have a program and get to work. The people will respond. Let us go to it.

TOO MANY SERMONS ON THE WIDOW'S MITE

Mrs. Ella M. Benson

When Jesus taught us to pray "Thy kingdom come," He knew that if we really believed we would work to that end and only those who use the talent or talents God has given them do believe. Too long have we played with the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." With open hearts welcome the Men and Millions Forward Movement planned by our Church as the best possible means to that end, the cable that will carry our workers and money in a wise and well directed manner to the necessary points of contact.

Of course, it will mean sacrifice of our money and our loved ones but when we try to conceive the height, breadth and depth of Jesus' sacrifice, how small seem all our efforts. Sometimes I think we have heard too many sermons on the widow's mite until we have come to regard all ourselves as widows. Surely if we pause to think about it, we will realize the greatest happiness life can offer us come as a result of personal sacrifice and if we never learn this lesson now and here, there is much doubt if we recognize Heaven when we arrive.

Let us take this great movement into our hearts and minds, study it, think it, talk it, give to it and work for it now, for the night is coming and we shall have to regret what we have left undone.

GREAT NEED OF MEN

W. J. Benson

The Church needs money, but most of all it needs men and women. I am glad that the committee has put Men first and Millions second. Let us not make the mistake in putting all the emphasis on money. We need Men. Let us put great emphasis on Men, for the Kingdom needs Men. It also needs money.

THREE THINGS ESSENTIAL

J. H. Blanchard

If this country of ours is ever to be a Christian nation, we must win millions of men and women to Jesus Christ. If we expect to win them for Christ, we must be able to pay the price in sacrifice and not dollars. Let us give to God's work a portion of that which he is loaning to us while we are going through life. To win Men and Millions for Christ, we must do three things:

First: Live the Christian life daily.

Second: Spend much time in prayer, talking with God through the spirit and reading His Word daily.

Third: Recognize that all we possess belongs to God. It is His and not ours. Let us return to the Lord that which belongs to Him.

A GREAT CAMPAIGN

Rev. W. D. Harward

This campaign for Men and Millions has a great possibility in it. It presents a challenge to undertake the impossible, but we are to chant no dirge. Let there be no discordant note sounded. All things are possible to him that believeth, but this kind cometh only by prayer and fasting. When the goal is reached this secret will prevail: They first gave themselves unto the Lord. Let us pray.

"OVER THE TOP"

Rev. B. F. Black

The challenge of the day is go "over the top." We can go over the top with the Men and Millions Forward Movement, and we will do it. It is a real challenge to the best that is in the best of us. It is a challenge to sweep over the most of us like a mighty passion, delivering us from our lesser selves and turning our faces toward the hills from whence cometh all our help. Let us do this good and noble thing for God and humanity.

WE DARE NOT FAIL

Rev. G. O. Lankford

One weakness of the Christian Church in the past has been her extreme individualistic efforts along various lines of Kingdom service. We have worked, but we have not known how to work in co-operation with our own forces as we should—"Here a little and there a little" has been our plan of procedure, as a result of which doors of opportunity for service have continued to close in our face.

For this reason we have long needed a task that would bring us together in thought, in purpose, in prayer, in action. Such a task is "The Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention." The achievement of this task will set in motion forces for righteousness that will doubtless be in operation when the Master comes again.

Since we believe this movement is of God and for God, we dare not fail.

THE EASTERN VIRGINIA TRAINING CONFERENCE

The first of the training conferences to be held in each of our five Conferences assembled in Suffolk, Va., for the day of February 12, 1920. Seventy out of one hundred persons invited to come were there and registered. More would have attended had it not been for health conditions.

It was a great meeting. It was great in personnel: the leaders were there, real leaders with the spirit of the Master. It was great in inspiration: three great utterances were given and a splendid period of intercession was conducted. It was great in vision: the seventy saw visions and laid plans to realize them. It was great in determination: no pessimist was there, but a mighty chorus of the beloved determined to "put it across."

Dr. N. G. Newman, an adept in directed prayer, conducted the period of intercession. It was replete with uplift for the soul, energizing to the overturning of the strongholds of lethargy if such there be in any local church of the Conference.

The three addresses were by Dr. J. W. Harrell on "Prayer and Success," Dr. C. H. Rowland on "God's Claim on Life," and Dr. L. E. Smith on "Men and The Movement." No resume can do justice to the utterances of these trusted leaders. They stirred the auditors to a new sense of privilege and duty and inspired them to undertake. It was good to be there and hear.

Dr. I. W. Johnston read the "Call to Arms," and the Conference rose to its feet in token of acceptance. Then "Uncle Charley" Johnston read the acceptance of the Field Campaign Committee.

The singing was led by Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne with Mrs. J. L. Foster at the piano. The Campaign songs were sung with appreciative sympathy. Brothers Kendall and Truitt have done a signal service in the creation of these songs. Let them be sung in every service and this Movement cannot be defeated. When Christians sing the songs of Zion, something happens, just as when we pray. Therefore let us sing and pray.

And work. To work and the plans for the afternoon were given. The Secretary of Organization was there and for two and one-half hours the Conference became a laboratory, a clinic, a workshop. At the conclusion of the lesson period, the following resolutions were presented by Dr. C. H. Rowland, Chairman of the Conference Advisory Board, and unanimously adopted by a rising vote:

Rejoicing in the opportunity that the Men and Millions Forward Movement of our Church offers us as ministers, laymen, and laywomen to do a great work for the advancement of the Kingdom we, the official representatives of this Movement in the Eastern Virginia Conference in session in Suffolk, Va., February 12th, desire to go on record in the following resolutions:

1. That we heartily and sincerely approve this Men and Millions Forward Movement and pledge it our most loyal support believing as we do that it comes of God and is the challenge to our people to do His will in this present time;

2. That we will in our local churches and in the various duties incumbent upon us in connection with this Movement give it the right of way and put forth every effort within our reach to make it the success which we are sure is the will of our Father;

3. That we will respond cheerfully and promptly and wholeheartedly to all letters, summons, and requests for information or service directed to us by any officer of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, realizing that team work is the only hope from the human standpoint of ultimate success for us in this Movement;

4. That we will pray earnestly daily for the success of the Movement, and that God may use it for the advancement of His Kingdom.

The Conference came to a close with a prayer of tender feeling voiced by Dr. I. W. Johnston, expressive of the sentiment of all. A great gathering was history, but it will make more history elsewhere.

There was great regret that Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Rev. C. B. Riddle of the Field Campaign Committee could not be present. They were detained because of illness. Prayer was offered on their behalf, Dr. Staley leading. It is worth being sick just to hear Dr. Staley pray for the afflicted.

W. A. HARPER.

MEN AND MILLIONS GATHERINGS

Two great gatherings are scheduled this week in the interest of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. One is at Columbus, Georgia and the other day at Wadley, Ala., February 17 and 19 respectively.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Ten ministers with sixty-one registered laymen from twenty-five of the forty-five churches of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference met in conference in Suffolk Christian church, on Thursday, February 12, to consider the "Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention." The absence of Chairman J. O. Atkinson and Editor C. B. Riddle, on account of sickness, disappointed the meeting; but Dr. W. A. Harper, C. D. Johnston, Drs. N. G. Newman, and J. W. Harrell, added greatly to the day's work. Great addresses were delivered by J. W. Harrell, D. D., C. H. Rowland, D. D., and L. E. Smith, D. D. Victor Lightbourne led the music with Mrs. J. L. Foster at the piano. Dr. Harper, the prince of organizers, explained the organization and presented printed matter to be used in the Campaign.

The Advisory Board for the Eastern Virginia Conference is composed of Dr. C. H. Rowland, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, and I. A. Luke. Under this Board will be local boards to carry the work down in detail to the smaller groups.

It was an all-day meeting and an all-interested meeting. No person seemed to tire, no one seemed to doubt that God was in the movement, and no one seemed unwilling to do his or her part. The enthusiasm was of that deep type that lasts. If every member of the Convention could have been in that meeting, the Men and Millions would be enrolled and subscribed without further effort. It surpassed in intense interest the great Greensboro meeting; and that, no doubt, was the result of sixty-one men and women from the churches. The laymen are beginning to feel that they have an opportunity to do something worthy of their time, their heart, and their money. It takes a big task to make big men and great women. To enlist one per cent of our church membership for definite Christian service for life; ten per cent of the total membership as tithers; ten per cent new members added to the churches; and then millions of money for church benevolences, furnishes a task that meets all the requirements of a great task for ministers and laymen.

Dr. Harper says that this is the greatest undertaking of any religious denomination in history. The $80.00 per member makes men think, pray, and feel the sense of stewardship. Pastors first feel that it cannot be done; then the more they think, and the more they hear the leaders talk and pray, the more they think it can be done; and when they reach the point that it can be done, they feel that it ought to be done; and finally they decide, it must be done. The most satisfactory work is doing what seemed impossible at first. The Red Sea passage furnishes our example of obedience by faith. It looked impossible, but once on the other side, "Moses and the children of Israel sang unto the Lord saying, 'He hath triumphed gloriously.'" That will be our song when we reach the goal: "He hath triumphed gloriously."

The intercession led by Dr. Newman was most touching and inspiring. One could feel the presence of the Spirit and the impulse to pray. The emphasis was placed on men and service, on the life-side of the Campaign, and with men won to Christ and service the money would come. Men first and Millions second was the standard held up before us. The day was fine, the spirit was sweet, the enthusiasm ran high and hope was born. If Dr. Harper could get all the constituency in one great hall and they could hear him, all the goals might be reached in a day; and especially, if the same men would speak and all would sing the Campaign songs written by Revs. A. B. Kendall and J. G. Truitt.

W. W. STALEY.

MISSIONARY

MISSION WORK IN THE MOUNTAINS OF VIRGINIA

Those of us who have had the privilege of hearing Miss Iola Hedgepeth, Handsom, Virginia, tell her wonderful story of missionary work last summer in the mountains of Virginia, will be deeply gratified to know that the Mission Board is to send her next summer to begin a permanent work there and is hoping to have three or four recruits accompany her for the great work she is to undertake in behalf of our Church and in the name of our Lord.

Miss Hedgepeth is now making her plans for the work. The Young People's Societies have undertaken to raise the money as a "Special" for the support of the work and the following article from Miss Hedgepeth will be of interest to all readers of THE SUN.

There is no field of service today more needy and more inviting and more promising for missionary endeavor than those in the far rural mountain sections, where geographical conditions have largely isolated the people from contact with civilization and with progress. It is a fact that as our mountain neighbors have the opportunity of learning and of religion, some of the best, ablest and most efficient ministers and missionary workers are obtained and are given to the world, as strong and as unyielding in their religious faith as the great mountains from which they come, and among which they were born and reared.

J. O. ATKINSON.

THE MOUNTAINS AS A MISSION FIELD

In setting forth the needs of missions in both home and foreign fields, little or no emphasis has been laid upon the needs of the mountain people, many of whom are living in sin and darkness almost equal to that of heathen lands.

In the recesses of the Appalachian Highland of Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Kentucky, there are 300,000 neglected people on the byway of civilization. The things that mean advancement to us seem to have passed them by;—such as railroads, telegraphs, automobiles, and facilities in general which might connect them with the outside world. There in those mountain districts are many natives who never saw nor heard a railroad train, nor an electric car. Among them are those who would be impossible converts to the telegraph, and few of them yet who, in all the history of the automobile, have an experience limited to having seen possibly a few "Fords" as they passed, driven by tourists, or Federal officers along the public highways.

During a ten weeks' stay in one of those remote mountain sections of Virginia, I taught twenty-five children, only six, possibly, out of the number having ever seen a train. I was in the home of one of these ideal mountain housekeepers and mothers whose life had been so entirely limited to "the hills," that she had on only one occasion in all her life been more than ten miles from her home and who would not recognize a saucer of ice cream were it placed before her without recalling my description of that luxury we so much enjoy.

Not only is the knowledge of the mountaineer limited as to the outside world; but many of them, especially the women, know little, or nothing of the world adjoining them. Housekeepers in many of those homes live and die entirely ignorant of the appearance of adjoining communities. Many of their lives are limited entirely to the one little mountain community in which they were born, reared, married, and are now bringing up in the same way children whose opportunities for development are no better than those of their parents and grandparents of many years ago. I am reminded of a story showing the limitations of their narrow lives, which is told of the daughter of one "well-to-do" of the mountains. She was sought by a gentleman of her own standing to be his wife. In their wedding journey on their "sheeted" wagon home, he purposely chose a circuitous route and accomplished his desire in making his bride feel that she was going for the first time some distance from her home. Some time afterwards the lady, when out on the mountain farm, felt sure of recognizing the sound of a cow bell which she followed up, and found it to be the one carried by a faithful old cow which she used to milk before leaving her father's farm. Many other incidents might be given to show the narrowness of these less fortunate people. Even those things in a way are pathetic, but alas! They are not the worst!

Today there are in those hill communities of poor, neglected people whose opportunity to advance has been exceedingly small because of the ruggedness of their much loved country, in which they have been born and now live without schools and without churches—and being without these there is little else to hope for. Appalling is it when reminded of the thousands of children of the mountain districts now out of school and the larger number still of men and women of the Highlands who have had no opportunities for the development of the educational or religious life. These settlements are crowded with a host of children who are the pride of their homes and the only hope of the mountains, surrounded by conditions affording little else to look forward to than tobacco and drink.

The school system in most mountain sections has reached no higher standard than the most old-fashioned school conducted by teachers of the lowest standard and afford, in the most inadequate way, only the rudiments of education and in many cases not even that. The number of churches amount to practically no more than the few placed among them by some of the leading denominations. The few weak native churches are governed and led by preachers who have had few or no educational advantages.

The outgrowth of such poor opportunities has been there just what it would have been elsewhere—a low standard of living, lives that have been given to sin in the form of whisky making, drunkenness, lawlessness of all nature, forgetful of God and totally ignorant of a Savior's love. Almost without restriction, "moonshining" (which is the real breeder of most of the disorder), and killing, exist in many mountain communities. It seems an execution of the laws against such is not easy. The officers who may be given the authority to make arrests are possibly endangering their own lives in attempting to carry out their authority. One man's life means no more to a mountain outlaw than does another. When a more loyal and refined citizen respects his community and State to the extent that he will report such crimes, his life is endangered as well, and often nothing less is imposed upon him than the burning of his property or poisoning his cattle.

Not only is the opportunity given to wipe out whisky-making and lawlessness of all other kinds which are in a large way the result of that, but we must take a stand against the superstition and "hardshellism" of those districts. That in itself is a problem. In that one particular the mountaineer displays his loyalty. He is as loyal to a faith of any kind as he knows how to be. This properly directed is a strong thing in our favor.

Now, as we summarize the great needs of our mountain people, the point arises as to the best way to reach them. As has been tested and proved, the most ideal and effective way is through Christian schools. To be recipients of the Gospel which we wish to send to this outstanding mission field, they must largely be prepared, through better educational facilities. We must carry them the message upon which they are to feed and grow and will best establish them as a part of our own State. Once thoroughly taught and evangelized, they will be able to take their places in our own educational and church systems. Statistics show that they grasp every opportunity to make good and a large per cent of those who have been given a chance proved to be unexcelled missionaries and leaders along other lines.

The task of Christianizing the world will not have been accomplished until we have responded freely and willingly to the call of the mountain folk. "Come over and help us," they say, for in their hearts is that unrest and dissatisfaction with self and surroundings which can only be gratified by what we may do for them, in only the way we respond to the call of other mission fields. It is a great task. I picture our Lord as He walked among men in His humble way, ministering to the simplest and lowliest folk. I can think of no more fit work for the followers of His teaching than to serve these neighbors of ours who are our next akin in ideas, customs, and no doubt, many by blood. Those who are set apart from us by the great mountain barriers, the fastness of which will possibly forever turn from their pathways the many material blessings that we enjoy—yet may never hurl their repelling powers against the blessings of a loving Savior, for nothing but selfishness can withhold the Gospel of Christ from the place where there is a soul to be saved. May we take a new vision of service in another direction for we must help give the mountain people a chance to make good. We Christians should have begun long ago to do our part in helping reach for Christ these neighbors of ours. How happy I am that we as a Church are to begin at last.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

Children's Home Fund in cash $3,687.65
How fast do you want to see it grow?

CHILDREN'S HOME

Our people are very loyal to the Orphanage and are taking more interest in the work than ever before. I feel sure if each member of the Church could come in closer touch with the work that the interest would increase.

Our Children's Home Fund grew very fast this week. It went from three to more than four thousand dollars. As soon as we get five thousand dollars in the treasury to the credit of this fund we are expecting to commence work on the building. We are having the plans drawn and getting them ready to submit to the Board of Trustees for approval. It seems to me that this is one building that every member of our Church would want to have a part in. Just think of the many little helpless boys and girls for years to come will be cared for in this building. The many useful men and women that will be added to society who will be of service to mankind, that will come into this building while they are little helpless tots and receive their early training there.

Brother J. M. Darden knows how to make the Superintendent happy. He went before his 20th Century Baraca Class of the Suffolk Christian church a few Sundays ago and asked them to contribute $1,000.00 toward the building of the Children's Home. On that Sunday more than $2,200.00 was subscribed, and since that time the amount has run up to $2,755.00 and Brother Darden thinks he will make it $3,000.00 before he stops. Brother Darden is a great worker and a man who does things. The Suffolk people are a great people and have always been very loyal to the Orphanage.

We have many Baraca Classes in the Christian Church and I wonder if all these classes would not like to have a part in this great work? This Home will be built this year, unless something unforeseen happens, and would you like for this to be done and you not have a part in it? I would like for everybody to have a part.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: As I did not write last month, I will put in 20 cents for this month. I am glad some more little girls have joined the band of cousins, as I love to read their letters. It makes me feel like the little ones are getting help. Your little niece.—Rachel Hofer.

Glad you wrote for the corner this week. I had come to the conclusion that the cold weather had got you frozen up.—"Uncle Charley."

Brother W. T. Meacham, R. F. D., No. 2, Roanoke, Ala., says: "I think the Men and Millions Forward Movement is the greatest undertaking in the history of our denomination. I am delighted with the movement and I am constantly in prayer for the success of the work." This is only one of the many good things that reach us every day. Surely the brotherhood is greatly moved in behalf of this liberation of our little selves.

We learn from The Herald of Gospel Liberty that Mrs. Henry Crampton, wife of Rev. Henry Crampton, and Mrs. Ira Clark, wife of Rev. I. C. Clark, both passed away last week. Both of these brethren have labored in the Southern Convention and are known to many readers of THE SUN.

"THE LITTLE SINGER"

By H. H. Hunt

She is called "the little singer" now, by people who speak three languages. The Turks say the words with some dislike and some unwilling awe, in their accents. The Armenians pronounce them lovingly and a little triumphantly. The American workers of the Near East Relief bestow the title upon her with admiration, and reverence.

As a little girl twelve years old, Virjin Yakoubian won the name in the peaceful little city of Mounjunsann, in Cesara, where she was known amongst all the Christians for her sweet voice, and her devotion to the Sunday school. She was singing in the little church when the Turks attacked the city, and drove her forth with the neighbors, without her mother or father.

As they took the difficult march to some unknown country, going without food or water, plundered here and there by thieves, the little hymn she had been singing rose to Virjin's lips once more. This and her prayers to the Christian God enraged the Turks, who beat her into unconsciousness. But when the little girl arose again, the song was still on her lips.

Her beauty attracted the leaders of the band so greatly that her friends feared for her and managed to put her into a boy's cast-off garments, so that she might be safer. The march continued, toward Aintab. Many died from hunger and thirst on the way. At one point, the men were seized by the Turks, bound, and killed with swords and hammers. The lamentations of the women arose, and the wails of the children. But Virjin could always quiet them when she sang her hymns.

From Aintab the company was deported to Ourfa. Here with many others, the little girl was cast into prison. During those terrible nights of suffering in her cell, her voice was still raised in song. The Turks, marvelling, came to her, and offered her her freedom if she would cease her Christian songs, and her Christian prayers, and become a Moslem. Virjin answered with a hymn which told of Christ's love.

That day the prison doors were left open for a little time, and the little girl and her friends were among those who escaped. "Jesus did it for us," she always said afterwards, of what she regarded as a miracle.

After ten days the little band who had escaped, came to Rakka in a state of starvation. On the banks of the Euphrates, soldiers seized the party. Virjin, alone for a moment, knelt and prayed. The soldiers ran toward her.

"Lord, Jesus, receive my spirit!" cried the little girl, and leaped into the river.

A Turk dragged her out of the water, and took her to his home. For two years that she lived there, Virjin continued her prayers and hymns, in spite of repeated curses and beatings. At last she escaped, and fled to Barajin, where she was found by Near East Relief workers, and taken to the orphanage.

Safe now in the big orphanage, cared and loved, by the American workers, Virjin still sings her songs, and tells the little orphans who have come through so much woe the story of Christ, who loves children, and watches over them.

Devotional

I WILL REMEMBER

For some reason, or other, the best people are at times greatly depressed. Every one who has served the Lord for any length of time has, perhaps, felt the same tumults of sadness and depression sweeping over him, which seemed to be surging through the heart of the Psalmist when he asked, "Will the Lord cast off forever?" Is His mercy gone?" "Doth His promise fail?" "Hath God forgotten to be gracious?"

When we go back to the Word we learn the Lord never has cast off a single one of His obedient followers. If we break away from Him and persist in going our own way and doing our own will instead of His, He will leave us to ourselves until we come back confessing our sins and asking forgiveness. God let Elijah go just as far into the wilderness as he wanted to, but Elijah never got beyond the circle of God's love. He did, however, have to submit to God's will and serve where God said. It was when Job threw off his cloak of self-righteousness and ceased trying to justify himself, when he beheld his own unworthiness against the matchless goodness of God, when he said, "I abhor myself," that his blessings doubled upon him.

God does not cast off or withdraw His mercy from His servants, but His love and mercy are always waiting for the first sign of penitence in His erring child. Neither does His promise fail. Trace it through the Word from the first to the last of His promises and we find "not one word of all His good promise has failed." We fail, but God's name and failure are as far removed as the east is from the west.

"Hath God forgotten?" No, He never forgets. The mother may, the father may, your best friend may, but God never does. We forget Him. When we realize it is our forgetfulness instead of God's, then we soon realize "this is my infirmity." When we once realize "this is my infirmity," the next thing is to resolve that "I will remember" the ages during which God's power has been exercised over His people. "I will remember the works of the Lord. "I will remember" His wonders of old.

That strengthens our faith, but can we not bring it still closer home? Has there not been a time in your life as you watched by the bedside of a loved one, or saw a loved one go away to come back no more, that you knew His "I will strengthen thee; yea I will help thee," was unailing? Has there not been a time in your life when the cruel thrust of an enemy, or the deeper wound, such as only one whom you have looked upon as a true and faithful friend can make, has driven you almost to despair? Did you then remember your Lord's "I will never leave thee or forsake thee," and prove Him by taking your wounded heart to Him, finding in Him a refuge unailing in time of trouble?

Our God continually surrounds those who put their trust in Him. Above us is God's watchful eye which never sleeps. Underneath are the everlasting arms. He who said, "Lo, I am with you alway," keeps close by our side, walking and talking with us as He gently leads and guides us along the way. Speaking a "be of good courage," or a "fear not" at every hard place.

"I will meditate also, of all thy work." Meditation is dwelling upon anything in thought, seriously turning or revolving the subject in the mind. When we get to dwelling upon the works of the Lord and His goodness, our meditation turns to prayer. Prayer soon changes gloom to gladness. Then the next thing we, too, are talking of God's doings. Silence if you can the one who has let God lead him triumphantly through a severe test. He is sure of his ground. He puts an I know before every one of God's truths. He has found out for himself there is none so great as our God, that He is a God that doest wonders. "My meditation of him shall be sweet: I will be glad in the Lord."

LIGHT AND TRUTH

"The field is the world." God has raised up men to navigate the oceans, to bridge rivers, to tunnel mountains, to build roads, over which cars of different kinds may take passengers. He has given some the ability to pass through the air and to open subterranean ways, and to do many other wonderful things. Thus permitting the gospel to have full, free and final access to all nations upon this earth. Then the field to which the gospel must be carried embraces the whole world. It is sent out to all classes, colors and conditions of people. God is no respecter of persons, but in every nation he that fears Him and works righteousness is accepted.

Mission means to send out, and there are many anxious ones now, paying, pleading and praying for this great cause. They will continue this work, "until the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." That will be a world full of heaven then. Would you love to behold it?

Light and truth. The search-light of truth when turned on this dark world will make it radiant with the light of God. This world, as you know, has no light of its own. It has to borrow or get its light from natural and artificial sources. It is a dark planet, getting its main light from the sun. When sun, moon and stars are set and clouds overcast the sky artificial light is a great and helpful substitute. In Psalms 43:3, it says: "O, send out thy light and thy truth, let them lead me. Send them out on the silent, swift, invisible where they may reach the souls of those who are hungering and thirsting after righteousness until they receive the bread and water of life with all the satisfying and saving power." The light must be sent by those who have means, and are able intellectually, physically and spiritually to carry it. They must be tactful, polite, patient, forbearing. They ought to be lighted with the light, so that it may, through them, shine brighter, and more successfully wherever they carry it. In other words, the light must shine all the time—it must not be hid under a bushel. Remember it is the reflected light of God. They must be blinded to sin, but must be awake to righteousness. They ought to have their sign up, with the light shining on it that people may not stumble over them. A thoughtful one said some where: "There are persons so radiant, so social, so pleasure-bearing, that you instinctively feel in their presence that they do you good; whose coming into a room is like the bringing of a lamp there."

We cannot do without light, and in the natural world, many beautiful and helpful artificial lights have been produced, and on account of their practical utility have been a great blessing to the world. Let them, the light and truth, lead us. Let them lead us out of darkness into light; out of ignorance into knowledge; out of sin into righteousness; out of bondage into liberty; out of despair into hope. What is more beautiful and useful than light? It is admired by all; it is useful for all. What is stronger than truth? The light of God and the truth of God must be seen and realized as we walk in the light of Him who is the way and the truth. There is going on in the world a great conflict between sin and righteousness. The world is moving its Christian forces as never before to overcome evil with good. If sin predominates it will both rule and ruin the world. What an awful thing that would be, a sin ruled world! But if the Kingdom of God is sent out, upheld and maintained by God's children, it will make all nations triumphantly and gloriously victorious over sin.

The workers in the vineyard of the Lord must work and stand together. Linked together in Christian friendship and fellowship. A chain is made of links and each link is a whole of the hold. Each one a whole one in itself forming a part of the whole chain. There is a beautiful unity and strength in this linking together.

May we not pray fervently to God to send out His light and truth? You remember that Jesus said to those Jews who believed on Him: "If you continue in my word, then are you my disciples indeed; and you shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Take these two companions, light and truth, with you, earnest givers and workers in the Kingdom of God, and you will have made a good, glad and a great choice. With the light of God in one hand and the truth of God in the other hand you will succeed.

Truth, founded upon the word of God, will stand forever; truth, when monuments made of the best marble and the most lasting granite, will crumble to earth, shall lift itself up to stormy worlds; truth, standing like the North star, shall pilot the Christian over the foaming sea of time and help him to anchor safely in the everlasting harbor.

Eternal truth, how lovely you must be to admiring worlds! Truth, like the purest diamond, sparkles in the character, the grandest principle that throbs in the human heart.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

NEWS OF GENERAL INTEREST

Congress has taken up the labor question again and is endeavoring to work out with labor leaders some acceptable policy to meet the labor situation.

The big railroad strike that was scheduled to take place this week has been postponed to an indefinite date, pending adjustments between transportation authorities and the operators.

Governor Bickett, of North Carolina, has commuted several sentences imposed upon rioters who caused bloodshed and slaughter in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, about fifteen months ago.

Secretary Daniels of the Navy has declared himself for a strong fleet and outlines his reasons, giving national prosperity as the chief reason why we should have a strong navy.

Just who is to be next President of the United States is a matter of great speculation. The names of several men are tossed into the air and one day they seem to be sailing and the next day they are blown away or disappear in some way.

The country was surprised on February 13 to learn that Robert Lansing, Secretary of State, had resigned his position, due to disagreement between him and President Wilson. Mr. Lansing succeeded William Jennings Bryan, who resigned the same position because he could not endorse the entry of the United States into war with Germany.

The Influenza epidemic seems to be gaining great headway throughout the whole country. Newspaper reports from all sections indicate at this writing (February 13) that new cases are developing. The disease, however, does not seem to be so desperate as it was last year and not so many deaths are reported.

The bill that has been before Congress for some time to bring about compulsory military training was defeated on February 10. The action and reaction of the people in regard to the question seems to be that military training would lead to the development of military ambition and for that reason Congress listened to the voice of the people and when the final test came the bill was killed.

PUNISHING THE KAISER

The Literary Digest some weeks ago conducted a questionnaire as to whether or not the Kaiser, William Hohenzollern, should be punished. The Digest received 328 replies, which furnished the basis for the first statement that The Digest issued concerning the punishment of the war king. Here is a summary of the replies:

For exile	137
For Capital Punishment	106
For Imprisonment	51
For other penalties	7
Against any trial	27

ARE YOU GETTING TWO PAPERS?

Several have been kind enough to advise us that they are getting two papers and we appreciate this information. Being called upon to handle 4,000 new names, almost without a day's notice, is a burden upon any office. Just as we started the addition of new names, our office clerk was taken sick with Influenza and at this writing has not returned to her post of duty. Many names had to go to the new mailing list without being checked with our regular subscription list. We are doing the very best we can and hope to have the whole matter adjusted at an early date.

If you are getting two papers let us know it, and if in different names, let us know that, because we have no way of knowing that Mary Jane Smith is the wife of Deacon John Smith.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to thank our neighbors and friends for their sympathy and kindness shown us during the sickness and death of our dear husband and father. May God abundantly bless each of them.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 29, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject: Peter Writes About Christian Living. I Peter 2:1-5, 11, 12, 19-25.

Time: About A. D. 60.

Place: Babylon.

Golden Text: "He that saith he abideth in Him ought himself to walk even as He walked."

Additional Reading: I Peter, Rom. 12:17-21.

Promise: Ideals for Christian living.

It was the poet, Milton, who when he saw his country in a state of chaotic unrest exclaimed: "Plain living and right thinking are no more" And it is likely that conscientious men of every age, who had human welfare really at heart, have experienced the same feeling. And especially has this been true in the readjustment periods following war. But I believe it applies today more than it did when John Milton uttered it, or at any time since then. Today with our restless readaptation to constant change in social, religious and domestic activity, we are apt to feel with renewed emphasis that "plain living and right thinking are no more."

Peter's Modern Council

Then we need to turn Peter's fervid and picturesque epistle. Its purpose was to comfort and strengthen the Christians of the young church during a season of severe trial. Then, as now, there was on every hand suffering, discontent, impatience. And what was Peter's council? Keep high your standard of living and hold fast the blessed hope of deliverance into His Kingdom. What salient advice for our Sunday schools today! It was only a short time ago that the order of Masons held a convention in Raleigh and at that time the grand orator suggested as a solution for the problems of Bolshevism and labor discontent more high living and thinking such as the Masons stand for. He was but repeating the message of Peter in his great epistle.

The Spiritual Home

The place to begin higher living is in the home. I have often thought that in the rush and commercialization of today the home has lost much of that reverent and sacred atmosphere which goes so far to mould character. The tendency seems to be to get away from the old family gathering to read and discuss God's word and from the manifestation of common interest to a selfish individualism when every member of the family cares only for himself and his business. Indeed the home of today has come to be too much a mere service station where we run in to eat and change clothes and tires before going again.

The Call is to You!

And it is you, members of homes in our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies, who must transform the home from a mere service station to a station of service for Christ and the church. It is in your power to make it impossible to say "plain living and right thinking are no more."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR FEBRUARY 29, 1920

J. Vincent Knight

"The Results of Our Words and Deeds." Gal. 6:7-10.

The world knows us by what we say and do. It also watches those things we leave unsaid and undone. Some one has said: "What is in the well always comes up in the bucket," or in other words we know what the life contains by what the action of that life shows to the world. Our words, whether kind or rash, picture the kind of character back of them. If the life is filled with folly, jealousy, envy, hate and strife—the words and deeds of our life will show clearly to the world what we are, and one need not be at all careful to advertise affairs.

If men would only watch their words, all life about us would be different, but too often we speak and never think what it will mean after the words are spoken. And how many of us have spoken and in almost a moment's time wished for the words back? And, oh, if we just could recall them we would speak quite differently next time. Our words are frequently the cause of much trouble, for the hardest member of the body to control is the tongue. We cannot be too careful in this age of slang and corrupt speech for corruption in speech denotes corruption in character. Our words denote what we are trying to be, and also reflect upon the kind of training we have had.

"But what you do sounds so loud I cannot hear what you say," and here we find something of the results of our deeds. It may be easy to talk, and give others advice, but it is not always easy to take our own advice and do the real things ourselves. What we do, shows clearly what we are, and not what we hope to be. I am glad the gospel of Jesus Christ is so handed down to us, that it permits every one to have part in carrying it the world, and by our deeds we have learned that there are those about us that are real Christians. These are trying days of sickness, sorrow, pain and distress and in it all I can see the finger of God as He points out something for us to do, and I hear the voice of Jesus saying: "Inasmuch as you did it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it unto me." What are we doing for those about us?, and what are the deeds of our lives showing to the world?

The preachers of my own city, and the church folks as a whole, have again found a fine opportunity to serve. Our churches are closed, our services and worship are in the home. As I go among the folks, I find preachers at the wood house, in the coal bin, making fires, carrying water, cooking, washing dishes, and a hundred other things that those who are sick need done, and in it all I see a picture that to me is very beautiful—a picture of the Christ Who served, and by the deed of His life proved himself a friend to humanity. Then, let us imitate Him, and do with our might what our hands find to do.

MARRIAGES

BROWN-ELLISON

Mr. Thomas F. Brown, of Kemp's Mills, N. C., and Miss Maggie Ellison, of Ashboro, N. C., Route 1, were united in marriage by the writer at his home in Ashboro on Saturday evening, February 7, 1920.

Only a few relatives were present to witness the ceremony. Both are popular young people in their respective communities and their friends wish for them much happiness.

OBITUARIES

UPCHURCH

Mrs. G. W. Upchurch departed this life January 12, 1920, at her home in Durham, at the age of 57 years. Mrs. Upchurch, before marriage, was Miss Mary Jane Carlton, and one of the direct descendants of the James O'Kelly family, she being the last of the O'Kelly family to pass out. She united with O'Kelly's Chapel some time previous to her thirteenth year, and remained one of its most faithful members until death. The funeral services were held in the Berea Baptist church near the old home, by the writer who was her former pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Howard, pastor of the local church. The remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery. A great mother is gone, and the community and family will miss her.

Mrs. Upchurch leaves her husband, Mr. G. W. Upchurch, one brother, F. M. Carlton; six boys, P. E., C. F., M. I., L. W., O. C., and R. C., and three daughters, Mrs. E. I. Barbee, Mrs. G. Vance Massy, and Mrs. R. C. Yates, all of whom reside in the immediate community of Durham. Her six sons acted as pall-bearers for the funeral. May Heaven's richest blessings rest upon the heart-broken family.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

PAGE

Mrs. Vannie Jones Page was claimed by death on January 24, 1920. Mrs. Page was only 26 years old and was the youngest daughter of the late Rev. John Jones. She leaves a husband and two children, besides a mother, three brothers and four sisters. She joined Wake Chapel Christian church at the age of nine and was a consistent member till her death. Her body was laid to rest in Wake Chapel cemetery to wait for the resurrection of the dead at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

BARKER

Nannie Cathrine Barker, daughter of G. W. and Mattie F. Barker, was born November 15, 1911, and died January 28, 1920, aged eight years, two months and thirteen days. Three brothers and two sisters survive her. Her sickness was of short duration and came as a great shock to the entire family. She was a bright girl, devoted to home and very fond of school and her school-mates. High school boys bore her body from the home to the cemetery. Just before dying, she looked heavenward and stretched her hands upward as if asking her Heavenly Father to receive her.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. W. Holt and the writer. The interment was in the Stony Creek church cemetery. May the dear Master comfort the bereaved ones.

P. H. FLEMING.

COTNER

Waldo M Cotner, son of Bettie Cotner, died at Youngwood, Pa., January 29, 1920, aged twenty-eight years, two months, and thirteen days. His mother and step grandmother survive him. He was sick only about ten days and it had been only about six weeks since he left home to take work in Pennsylvania. His remains were brought home for burial. A friend accompanied them. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at Pleasant Hill church and the interment was in the church cemetery.

The minister who visited him at Youngwood during his sickness wrote the family a comforting letter about his visit and his prayers for him and about the young man's own prayers to the Heavenly Father. May the blessed Christ comfort those who mourn.

P. H. FLEMING.

NURNEY

George W. Nuruey passed away at his residence in Suffolk, Va., on January 30, 1920, after years of agony from rheumatism; but with the spirit of a hero, he made a great fight and continued in business up to the last.

He had been in the livery and sales business for more than forty years, and had been very successful. His trade extended over many counties in Virginia and North Carolina, and his reputation for honesty held his customers.

He erected splendid buildings and thus added values to the city while he prospered himself. He opened Clay street and presented it to the city; and at the head of that street stands the Jefferson High School building.

He was a director in the Farmers Bank of Nansemond, one of the greatest banking institutions of the country. He had been a member of the City Council, and was useful, as a citizen, in public affairs.

He was a member of the Christian church for thirty-two years and on its official board, loyal and faithful to the end. One of his first voluntary acts, after he joined the church, was to present a thirty-dollar pulpit Bible for the pastor's use.

He leaves his wife, two sons, and two daughters and the legacy of a good name. Few men have devoted themselves so unreservedly to their business, their family, and their civic and religious obligations, without show, as did this great servant of God up to his sixty-ninth year.

Hundreds of times has he furnished me horse and buggy, without charge, to attend funerals in Nansemond and other counties. He thus befriended many families in their trouble without their knowledge.

THE CAMPAIGN BATTLE CRY

‘I Gave the Best I Had for You’

(Tune: I'm Here on Business for my King'')

By Rev. John G. Truitt, News Ferry, Va.

1. O, noble Christian church,
O, valiant soldiers true,
There is a work for us
That others cannot do;
A work that God doth give
To each and everyone
That has a hope in Christ His Son.

CHORUS

- O, noble men of this great Band,
Hark, hark the challenge He hath Planned;
O, give your young men fair;
O, give your millions rare,
I gave the best I had for you.
2. Oh! see Christ hanging there
Upon the rugged tree,
Oh! is He looking down
For someone just like me?
I'll have the grace today
To stand up straight and say
I'll give myself, my all to Thee.
3. And as we onward go;
Oh! as we forward speed,
Let every Christian know
For him there is a need;
Take up his battle cry,
O, every heart that's true,
I gave the best I had for you.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

GOD TESTING US

God tests His people in adversity and He also tests them in prosperity. No one acquainted with the present situation can doubt for a moment that God is today challenging His Church in America and testing it in a most trying time; and we admit prosperity such as no people ever witnessed before. A Washington item, under date of December 10, 1919, says: "Americans are buying more diamonds and other gems than at any other time in history." According to this item, precious stones valued at $10,425,325.00 were imported into the United States in October 1919. For the corresponding month of 1918, the importations amounted to $1,154,329.00. Diamonds alone were imported in October 1919 valued at $8,277,245.00, against a half million for October 1918. Not that one objects to diamonds, for they are glorious to look upon and beautiful to behold and represent God's glory and joy in creation, but what startles and amazes is the unparalleled demand for them, and the wherewith to purchase them.

The United States Treasury Department in giving the condition of the National Banks of the country speaks in similar words of our unequalled prosperity.

The yearly net earnings of the national banks of the United States in the five years from July 1, 1914 to July 1, 1919 had a greater increase than in the entire forty years prior to that time, the increase for the forty years prior to July 1, 1914 being $149,270,171.00; in the five years following that date the increase being $240,366,000.00.

Deposits, capital, surplus and undivided profits showed a similar increase, the most remarkable feature of the report being that in the year 1919 out of a total 7,770 National Banks, there was not a single failure recorded. This, we presume, has no parallel in all our history. Unless the Church can in some way manage through the grace and wisdom of our Heavenly Father to divert correspondingly large increase of this wealth into the channels of charity, and of benevolence, our civilization is headed toward the same luxury, ease and indolence which overwhelmed the civilizations of the past. As this writer sees it, the Church today is not only making a fight in seeking to increase its revenue for the Church itself on behalf of the Kingdom, but is really making a fight for civilization itself. Let it be understood that it is not poverty and want, but wealth and indulgence that materialize a civilization and destroy states, nations, homes and countries. We quote the following words from Mr. Wade C. Smith, of the Stewardship Department in a recent Bulletin:

"Unquestionably, Protestant Christian America has a full share in the almost unbelievable increase of the wealth of the past five years. Many believe that church members have more than apportionate share of the nations' wealth. Can it be that God's greatly favored people are willing to accept this enlarged commitment of God's riches into their hands and fail to respond with a quickened sense of stewardship and a stronger conviction than ever that the Father is leading them out into a broader service to the world than any nation has ever known? God is today testing America as individuals. What shall be our answer?"

GEORGIA AND ALABAMA RALLIES

The Men and Millions Forward Movement rallies in the Georgia and Alabama Conferences are history, but it is more than a history of fact that they represent. Hopefulness, co-operation, good fellowship, inspiration characterize them in the retrospect of memory. It was truly good to be there. If Peter had been present, he would no doubt have desired to tabernacle permanently amid such pleasant surroundings.

The rally for the Georgia and Alabama Conference came first at Columbus. Every preacher was present and about forty or fifty laymen and laywomen. Dr. J. Pressley Barrett as pastor seconded by his capable wife and aided by a band of faithful women, made the physical entertainment delightful. The people there certainly love their pastor and pastoresse, and with right.

The rally opened with the reading of the "Call to Arms," by Brother Jubilee Smith Stephenson, namesake of a great and good man, who honors the name he wears in becoming Christian service. Uncle Charley Johnston read the acceptance of the Campaign Committee. Then came a soul-stirring message on "Prayer," by Dr. J. W. Harrell, followed by a period of intercession conducted by Dr. N. G. Newman. Men and women laid hold on the throne and felt the divine presence in this sweet experience.

Mrs. J. Pressley Barrett then read a paper on "The Womanly Heart and The Forward Movement," prepared by Mrs. W. A. Harper, who was unable to be present. Mrs. Barrett read this paper with sympathetic expression. Mrs. H. W. Elder followed its reading with a tender prayer, such as only a Christian mother can offer.

Dr. Barrett then stirred the audience with a zealous impromptu oration on "The Value of a Great Undertaking." Rev. H. W. Elder concluded the morning service in an impassioned address on "We Will Do It."

The evening audience heard three addresses by Drs. Harrell, Newman, and Harper. Dr. Harrell spoke on "Stewardship," Dr. Newman on "Christ's Acid Test," and Dr. Harper on "Some New Christian Emphases."

The Alabama Rally was held at Wadley, attended by about the same number of leaders, though two of the ministers were kept away on account of illness. It, too, was a mountain top experience, whence the horizon was scanned for many a delightful hour, a horizon roseate with promise because the people are grateful for the opportunity of service offered them in this majestic movement.

The rally began with a testimony meeting, in which ministers, laymen, laywomen all freely expressed their vital concern in the Movement and their willingness to be used for full and faithful service. All doubt as to the success of the Movement in this Conference was dissolved in the joyous moments of this informal interchange of the heart's reaction toward the cause.

Following this unique period Dr. J. W. Harrell brought another soul-reassuring message on "Prayer." Dr. Harrell thrilled this lovable people as he opened up his heart to them. Then Dr. N. G. Newman capitalized the emotional fervor of the address in its effect on the people by a sweet and precious period of intercession. In this Conference there was no evening session.

In both rallies the Secretary of Organization was given the afternoon period for the training of the various units of the organization. The questions asked indicated the deep and abiding concern of the people in the Men and Millions Forward Movement. There is no mistaking their unyielding determination, their confident expectation, that so far as they are concerned this Movement, being of God, shall not fail because of their lack from any standpoint.

And so, it is in every quarter of the Brotherhood. Nothing like the spirit of unanimity and co-operation characterizing the brethren's attitude toward this cause was ever witnessed in the Christian Church. God leads. We follow. Victory shall crown His cause through us.

Pray for the Movement and seek God's leadership in personal devotion to it—these are the ways of ultimate achievement, of sincere satisfaction of heart, of glorious victory for Him.

CHURCH ADVERTISING

There is much being said nowadays about church advertising. A testimony of what church leaders think of church advertising is demonstrated in this week's issue of The Burlington News. Note that a whole page advertisement is used in behalf of the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention. This advertisement is not donated, neither is it given at a discount. The advertising manager of the campaign, Rev. C. B. Riddle, of this city, is running advertisements in the biggest daily papers in the country, besides extensive advertising in The Christian Sun, of which he is editor.

Church advertising is not commercializing the church, but simply using good judgment in promoting the work of Christianity.—The Burlington News.

DR. J. W. HARRELL GONE TO GEORGIA AND ALABAMA

Dr. J. W. Harrell, pastor of the Christian church, left Sunday night for Columbus, Ga., to address on Tuesday of this week, a conference of the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention. From Columbus he will go to Wadley, Ala., to make a similar address before a conference considering the same work. The Christians are putting on a big program and sparing no time and means to make it a success.—The Burlington News.

A church that pays its honest debts will prosper. Honest debts may not be stipulated obligations, either. If the pastor of a church is worth more than he is getting, the church is indebted to him and that church is not honest until it pays for value received.

MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT CONFERENCES

A Conference in the interest of the Men and Millions Forward Movement will be held today (February 24) at Linville, Virginia and another Conference held at Raleigh, N. C., Thursday of this week. A good attendance is expected at both these meetings.

Mrs. W. J. Rigsbee, Roxboro, N. C., writes: "I feel deeply interested in the Men and Millions Forward Movement."

Rev. H. H. Butler, Suffolk, Va., has been confined for some time on account of sickness, but authorizes us to say that he is still living.

Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne is serving a few weeks at Memorial Temple, Norfolk, Va., and will leave there March 7 for Dendron. Churches desiring the services of Brother Lightbourne can address Dr. C. H. Rowland, or Mr. J. A. Williams, Franklin, Va. These brethren have Evangelist Lightbourne's engagements in hand.

Men and Millions Forward Movement

THE OPPORTUNE TIME

Samuel W. Lincoln

There has never before in the history of the world a period in which the need is so great, the opportunity so broad and the capacity so ample for the Church of Jesus Christ to launch great movements for the promulgation of the doctrine of Christianity and for the enlargement of His Kingdom, as the age in which we now live.

With an opportunity for each and every member of our beloved Christian Church to have a part in this great undertaking, the success of the "Men and Millions Forward Movement" is a foregone conclusion, and to this end I hereunto pledge my earnest co-operation and support.

MEN AND MILLIONS ARE HIS

Rev. W. L. Wells

I heartily endorse the "Men and Millions Forward Movement" campaign. The men are God's and the millions are God's. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof." If the men and millions are God's He should have both men and millions to be used in His wise way to make this world a better place within which to live and glorify Himself. God knows better how to place men and millions than we do, and let us as a Church trust God with our men and millions and it will mean more for the growth of our Church and the Kingdom of God than any thing we have ever done.

SOUNDS GOOD TO ME

B. D. Jones

The Men and Millions Forward Movement sounds good to me. The name is full of meaning. The task of evangelizing the world can never be accomplished without men. It is fitting that the campaign includes the recruiting of man-power as well as for the securing of money.

Dr. Ralph S. Cushman in his talk on stewardship sounds the key note when he says: "While money alone will never save the world, the world will never be saved without money."

The beauty of the Movement is that every member of the Church is to be given an opportunity. I heartily endorse the great undertaking.

I AM GLAD

Rev. W. S. Long, D. D.

With great interest I have read what has appeared in THE SUN relative to the Forward Movement for Men and Millions. I hail with joy and gratitude every advance step taken by our dear Zion.

For many years after I entered the ministry I was, at times, greatly discouraged when I saw how little our people were doing to advance our cause as a Church either in education or missions, and, I confess, I was tempted at times, to withdraw and join some live branch of the Church. Thank God, I have lived to see an indication of life manifest itself. I believe it is a real baptism of the Spirit. It has come when I have no work in the Church and I see no way to help except to pray for the success of this great movement.

I MOST HEARTILY ENDORSE

Miss M. Clyde Keith

I most heartily endorse the Men and Millions Forward Movement and offer my sincerest co-operation and aid.

IT WILL BE PLEASING TO GOD

Elisha Bradshaw

I heartily endorse the Men and Millions Forward Movement because I feel that God will be pleased for us to undertake such a great thing in His name. I feel that God has been waiting for a long time for us to undertake something big. The Movement is carrying out the last command of our Lord that we are to go into all the world and preach the Gospel. How any one can remain inactive toward this Movement who has been pardoned of his or her sins, is more than I can understand.

I am delighted and we are going to strive for men as well as money. We must learn to pray that God may send our boys and girls to carry the Gospel while we are giving our money to send it.

I am glad that we are going to give every member a chance in this great drive. We must give our money and along with it give ourselves.

THE HAPPIEST DAYS OF ALL

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield

Notice the heading of this article, "The Happiest Days of All." Surely these days in which we live now are the happiest of all because God's people are realizing as never before that they do not live for self alone, but for their neighbor.

"If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink." Surely that is what the Men and Millions Forward Movement is trying to do. It is to prepare the young people to carry on the work of God more fully than our fathers have done.

I say, hurrah, and let us put it over, and then we will realize that these are the best days yet.

Our laymen are doing big things in business. Why not big things for the Kingdom? New business ventures spring up everywhere. Corporations are multiplying, and capital in all lines of industry is increased. Farms sell for fabulous prices, and farmers are getting ready to spend more, and if possible, make more than ever before.

Why should the Church not endeavor also to increase its number of workmen, and enlarge its working capital? Unless it does this, it must suffer loss and deterioration. In fact, the Kingdom's interest should come first in every reckoning and rating. "Seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added."

In our Men and Millions Movement then we are only seeking to keep the Kingdom's interest where it belongs, namely, in the fore front of our thoughts, minds, hearts, and endeavor.

But far and above all other facts and considerations of our time we have learned the strength, the beauty and the glory of co-operation. When the allies began to co-operate, do team work, act and counteract together, then the Central Power began to fall back. Our dear Christian Church has this test put upon it today. Can it co-operate, can it do team work, can it co-ordinate its various independent units, can it swing its whole force into action, and move forward together to the accomplishment of a single, great task? If we have the mind, the heart, the courage to do this we shall have men and millions for the Master. The whole thing is a test of our willingness and our ability to do team work, to co-operate, to move together at our blessed Master's challenge and command. Our Savior prayed "that they may be one, even as He and the Father are one; I in them and thou in me, that they may be made perfect in one." Thus in oneness of motive, purpose, aim and achievement, we become strong in our Master's service and powerful in carrying out that which He hath so gloriously committed to us.

We are called upon to do no impossible thing. We are not called upon to impoverish ourselves, our families or our local Church. We are called upon to do our simple duty in our Master's name, and do the best we can together, by our united effort, for Him. Let us show the world the glory and beauty of our dear Church by all of us doing our very best for the Master and His cause, that together we may have men and millions for His use.

J. O. ATKINSON.

COUNTY AND REGIONAL DISTRICT RALLIES

The Lord willing, February 26 will see the conclusion of the Conference Rallies of the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

Immediately thereafter the Conference Advisors and the District Directors should make arrangements for the County and Regional District Rallies. To these rallies should go all pastors, all captains, all leaders of the women, all the local team, as many interested laymen and laywomen workers as possible, together with the District Directors and the Conference Advisory Board. The meeting will be for the day only and the local church will provide only a simple luncheon.

Already the following district meetings have been announced:

Georgia and Alabama Conference

- For South Georgia, Enigma, Ga., February 26.
- For LaGrange-Lanett, Lanett, Ala., February 29.
- For Richland-Columbus, Richland, Ga., March 2.

Alabama Conference

- For Chambers County, New Hope church, February 29.
- For Randolph County, Rock Stand church, March 2.
- For Tallapoosa County, McGuire's Chapel church, March 3.
- For Clay County, Shady Grove church, March 4.

Eastern Virginia Conference

Southampton County, Johnson's Grove church, February 29—2 P. M.

Nansemond County, Suffolk, February 29—3 P. M.

Norfolk District, Third Church, Norfolk, March 4—3 P. M.

Waverly District, Waverly, February 29.

North Carolina Conference

The Halifax District of the North Carolina Conference under the leadership of Rev. John G. Truitt, Mrs. W. J. Pierce, and Mr. W. O. Farmer has already held its meeting, having assembled in South Boston on February 19. Here is the inspiring account of the meeting given by Brother Truitt.

News Ferry, Va., Feb. 19, 1920.

Dr. W. A. Harper,
Elon College, N. C.

My dear Dr. Harper:—

Our meeting has just closed and has been very successful. Twenty-four delegates from seven churches present. Began at 10 o'clock and closed at 5. Very busy day.

We certainly had a great, good time together. Inspiration ran high at all times. We sang the songs to good effect. Some remarkable speeches were made by the laymen. Brother P. W. Farmer made some most excellent speeches. "Christ," he said, "was turned away from the Inn 2,000 years ago, but we are privileged to meet here today for His name's sake." It was a spontaneous speech and a great moment. Other great speeches were made by the laymen and women, and Brother C. E. Newman.

Certainly did appreciate your help. I've felt the burden of our part in the campaign, and still feel it, but after all that is the joy of it.

With every good wish,

JOHN G. TRUITT.

Finally

The Secretary of Organization helps all he can to get a delegation out for these district meetings. But the real burden for that which Brother Truitt says is the joy of it, rests on the Conference Advisory Board and on the District Directors. Please report all dates for district meetings promptly.

Let us pray and work, beloved, for these rallies and this splendid cause.

W. A. HARPER.

SUFFOLK LETTER

"Life recruits" is a phrase that opens up a large field, and calls for new forms of service. It is quite plain from the sixth Chapter of Acts that other service than that of preachers, comes with the multiplication of disciples; and, in this age, there is not only a multiplication of disciples, but a multiplication service. Complex civilization and world related intercourse and interest, creates new conditions that increase human dangers and human necessities. Congested populations produce destitution and immoralities that require new treatment by new agencies. "Ye have the poor with you always," and that calls for charity, disease remains as long as sin abounds, and that calls for personal ministrations; the heathen are "without hope and with God in the world," and that calls for missionaries; social evils increase with great cities, and that calls for social service. There is no end to obligation and opportunity, and hence no end to the multiplication of agencies of Christian ministrations. Deacons became a necessity, because the "number of the disciples multiplied" beyond the care of the apostles.

No new work and no new agency can supersede the ministry which we usually include in the word preacher. His function is not to be supplanted or abated, but raised to a more spiritual consecration; but other forms of life-service may supplement his work and make it more efficient.

Missionaries may devote their lives to medicine, teaching, Christian work, as Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Christian Endeavor service, or Red Cross. The whole wide world is open to all young people who are willing to surrender their lives to the Lord's will and use for human salvation, and human welfare. Young men and young women may prepare themselves to be secretaries to pastors, of Sunday school organizations, to edit Christian literature, or champions of temperance. Signing cards for any form of life-work in the Kingdom means that such persons surrender themselves to be used, if God calls them. Moreover, we have the privilege to pray for such help. "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest"; "for we are laborers together with God." There is such a thing as Christian work as well as Christian preaching; and this is an age when labor is required in the Kingdom as well as in the world.

Life is the most valuable asset in the Kingdom, and to surrender life to the use of the Kingdom is the best human gift. That is what Jesus gave to the world. He gave His life in service and in sacrifice, and we can do no more; but we can do as much, and that makes us most like Him. There are so many open doors to the young for life-service, and for such service there is compensation and reward. Women "ministered unto Him" in His day, and they are coming into their privilege in this day. Young men and young women may both offer themselves for Life-Recruits, and wait the Lord's direction. Samuel was dedicated to the Lord and then the Lord called him; parents have that same privilege in these days when the need is so great. There is no place in life so good as that place where God wants men to work; and there is no offer so great as to be willing to do His will.

W. W. STALEY.

POUNDED BY PARCEL POST

To our great and glad surprise, we received a heavy package by parcel post, last Wednesday, February 18, from Antioch Christian church (Chatham). This package contained such things as sugar, butter, eggs, sausage, jelly, honey, preserves, lard, dried fruit, oatmeal, coffee, peas, beans, and seventy cents in money, etc. This is not only the first time we have been pounded by mail, but it is absolutely the first time we ever received any money by parcel post.

Owing to the fact that the schools and churches in Chatham county have been ordered closed for two weeks, the writer of this article did not fill his regular appointment at Antioch last third Sunday. However, several members of the church showed their love, appreciation, and sympathy for their pastor and his family by the means mentioned above. We are very grateful to those dear people for sending us so many good things; and to our Heavenly Father for prompting the sending. May the Lord richly bless the membership of Antioch church; and may He enable us to render them more efficient services in His name.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

ARE YOU GETTING TWO PAPERS?

Several have been kind enough to advise us that they are getting two papers and we appreciate this information. Being called upon to handle 4,000 new names, almost without a day's notice, is a burden upon any office. Just as we started the addition of new names, our office clerk was taken sick with Influenza and at this writing has not returned to her post of duty. Many names had to go to the new mailing list without being checked with our regular subscription list. We are doing the very best we can and hope to have the whole matter adjusted at an early date.

If you are getting two papers let us know it, and if in different names, let us know that, because we have no way of knowing that Mary Jane Smith is the wife of Deacon John Smith.

If you are receiving THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and have not subscribed for it, you can be assured that you are not to receive a bill later. This office does not do business that way. The Men and Millions Forward Movement is sending THE SUN to 4,000 persons free. This is why you are getting the paper. Read it—that is the price.

We are already receiving subscriptions from some of our new readers. We have made no appeal to them in any way to become permanent subscribers. We appreciate these subscriptions and hope that they will continue to come.

Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, died in Washington, D. C., February 20.

Add twenty-five cents to your renewal and you will receive by return mail a nice book.

THE FARMER'S WIFE

It is especially important that whatever will prepare country children for life on the farm, and whatever will brighten home life in the country and make it richer and more attractive for the mothers, wives, and daughters of farmers should be done promptly, thoroughly, and gladly. There is no more important person, measured in influence upon the life of the nation, than the farmer's wife, no more important home than the country home, and it is of national importance to do the best we can for both.—Theodore Roosevelt.

We can use your renewal now. A good time to send it.

NOTES

Brother W. T. Meacham, R. F. D., No. 2, Roanoke, Ala., says: "I think the Men and Millions Forward Movement is the greatest undertaking in the history of our denomination. I am delighted with the movement and I am constantly in prayer for the success of the work." This is only one of the many good things that reach us every day. Surely the brotherhood is greatly moved in behalf of this liberation of our little selves.

Miss Carrie Robison, North Springfield, Pa., Superintendent of the Young People's Work in the American Christian Convention, sends two dollars for a year's subscription to THE SUN and adds these words of cheer: "The Southern young people are doing such splendid work for missions that I want to keep in closer touch with them. They are so busy doing work that they do not find time to report to this department and so often I have to guess how many societies they have."

Brother D. J. Kelley, Richmond, Va., accepts his place as Four-Minute Speaker in our church at Richmond, Va., and in complying to the request to do this work, Broter Kelley has this to say: "I am only too glad to do anything I can for the success of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. I pray God's blessing on this great undertaking." This is an encouraging word from the member of a church that is less than six months old. In fact, the Richmond congregation does not even have a house of worship and yet one of its members sends encouraging words in behalf of our great undertaking. Surely no man will say less and offer to do less.

The Year Book of the Southern Christian Convention for 1920 has just been received and is a very complete compendium of knowledge of the work of that section of our church. The various conference reports are very full and complete, especially upon financial lines, the record of each individual church being given in detail. It ought to be in every home of our church South and in the hands of every official of the denomination. It gives both valuable information and inspiration—for the record is one of increasing efficiency and liberality.—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

BE PATIENT WITH YOUR PRINTER

Be patient with your printer, if you use the services of such a gentleman. The printing industry was never more congested than it is now and it will be manifest just a little spirit of the Master to be patient.

There are those who take "copy" to have a job done and want to wait until it is finished like they sometimes do when they go to the mill. There are those who carry matter to be printed and cannot understand why they cannot get it in a few hours. They forget that others, many others, make this same request and that every hour in the day great demands are being made upon the presses in the country. They also forget, taking things equal, that others deserve the same consideration as they. The right kind of a printer is anxious to serve the public, and no man would rejoice more to be able to deliver work "at once" than the foreman of the average print shop of today.

Be patient with your printer, and remember that when you insist upon quick delivery that a hundred others are doing the same thing.

Mrs. A. E. Smith—I like to read THE SUN because it gives me much pleasure. May God bless all readers of this paper.

ELON COLLEGE

* Evangelistic services were held at the college January 18-29. Rev. Victor Lightbourne, Convention Evangelist, was in charge and did the preaching and led the singing. The congregations were large and the interest good from the beginning. Much personal work was done by the students privately. There were more than fifty definite decisions for Christ and a large per cent of the student body and others reconsecrated themselves. Thirteen were received into the Elon College church. The singing and preaching were greatly enjoyed, and Brother Lightbourne's clear-cut and definite method of presenting the message and putting up a challenge to men met with hearty approval. This was Brother Lightbourne's first meeting since accepting his position and was one of the very best ever held at Elon. We would heartily recommend him to any of our ministers and churches needing evangelistic help.

Devotional

THE BOOK

This Book needs no introduction—needs no defense. It introduces and defends its own character, and stands pre-eminently upon the sayings of its Author, "these sayings of mine." The Bible is the greatest, most interesting and attractive Book ever written. The grandest, most sublime and helpful one the world has ever seen. It has rescued and raised more fallen ones; brought more light, love, liberty to those who grouped in darkness, hatred and bondage; helped more depressed and oppressed ones, and cheered more pilgrims on the way of life than all the other books combined.

Very many entertaining and instructive books have been written on romance, biography, travel, history, theology, and on every other subject, but the Bible stands the center of attraction among them all. Brilliant people and learned ones in every age have produced able and beautiful works, written charming essays, and some spiritual comfort, but inspired Bible writers have surpassed them all, in style, thought, expression, and spiritual helpfulness. Their inspired pages were not only helpful to themselves, but a blessing to untold thousands who read them with increasing devotion. Said a very truthful character recently, "The Bible moulded my life and made it what it is. It taught me the way to walk up to Christian manliness." It has fashioned more lives and formed better characters than any other book wherever it has been read and practiced. It has cheered more believers and comforted more believers as they passed to the great beyond than anything else. Before leaving this world for his Heavenly home, a faithful minister said to his devoted daughter, who was attending to him, "Give me the Book that I may take one more, last, long, lingering look upon the Book I love." She said: "Father, which book?" Then he replied, "There is but one Book, that is the Bible." He felt that that Book was all and all to him.

Influenced by the company kept or the books read, an individual either grows better or worse. There can be no standing still or neutral ground. Either upward or downward he goes. It is a commendable fact that in the last century, and thus far in the twentieth, more has been written and spoken concerning the Bible than any other book in all the great libraries put together, and its study is becoming more interesting all the time which proves its popularity and superiority over all others. Time nor distance does not prevent its onward march and triumphant entrance into the whole world.

No other book in the past nor present has given to its readers such exceeding great and precious promises—no others having given assurance of everlasting life with a splendid home with the redeemed of the Lord, and none have told so well how to cure troubled hearts. "These sayings of mine," from the lips of Jesus have helped the despondent, cheered the discouraged, comforted diseased ones, and have been a constant stream of gladness to so many tired and weary ones. O, the joy—the joy that comes by reading, studying and believing the fascinating story of the Bible! Jesus did so many lovely wonderful things, that John said of Him in the last verse of his Gospel: "And there are also many other things which Jesus did, * * * if they should be written every one, I suppose that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Amen."

It is said that an autoharp, placed upon a certain rock, in a connecting link of the Blue Ridge range, can be distinctly heard three miles away on the other side of the mountain, as you place your ear close to the connecting rocky structure. So as we rest ourselves upon the rock, reading this very same Bible we can almost hear by faith the sweet, loving voice of Jesus, telling us: "It is I, be not afraid," and, "Peace be still." Still standing on that Rock, and that Rock is Christ, we are waiting for the heavenly harpers to join the innumerable company of celestial spirits in singing the new song in everlasting glory. And while waiting for Jesus to come, we can sing: "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

He Who is the light of the world shines on its pages, and illuminates the empires of earth, and other worlds as well as the Kingdom of Heaven. The Bible has stood much criticism by its friends, and some by its enemies, but it stands today at the head of all things, and the truths it teaches will grow brighter until the perfect day when all must render an account to its Author.

FOR OUR INTERCESSION

The Interchurch World Movement has outlined four statements of purpose for definite consideration February 29. Let us think them through and be guided in our intercession by them.

1. Having given my life to Jesus Christ as Saviour and Lord, it is my purpose, as the central, controlling aim of my life, to do my utmost to extend the Kingdom of Christ throughout the world.

2. I believe that God has a definite plan for my life-work, which it is my purpose to follow, no matter where it may lead.

3. It is my purpose to keep studying the needs of the world and also the plan and will of God as revealed in the Bible, both to fit me for larger present service and also as important means toward finding God's unfolding plan for my life work.

4. Since thorough training is so valuable in all kinds of Christian service, it is my purpose to secure a college education, if possible.

Young people especially should carefully study these statements of purpose. Parents should discuss them with their children. But at least three of them are broad enough to apply to any age. Therefore, let each of us think through there as they may relate to our own lives. Every Christian should possess the spirit of the life recruit. "Multitudes, multitudes, in the valley of decision!"

A PURPOSE IN LIFE

We are all placed in the world for a purpose, and a good purpose at that. If any person fails to use that purpose and to live up to his opportunities and to make the best of life by utilizing his talent, he has not only done himself injustice, but he done his fellowman, and even God, an injustice. We are not placed here to live alone, and for self, but we are placed here to live for each other, and for the glory of God. Therefore, it should be the desire of every person to make the best of everything, live for a good and glorious purpose.

We all have our little mission in life, and little corner to fill, and to end our mission well, and to fill our little corner rightly ought to be the ambition of every human soul. To strive to do the right and never the wrong is a wonderful thing. And he who thus strives is sure to attain much in the world. His life will not be spent in vain.

If we all cannot do something great, we can do something small to bless the world. After all, it is really the little things that count.

We can cause sunshine by speaking some kind and cheerful, encouraging word to those whom we meet, which is worth while. It costs nothing, and is more valuable many times than silver and gold. We can help to make some aching heart glad. We can lend a helping hand to the needy. We can stoop to raise the fallen, and place them on higher ground. We can bring sunshine and joy to some one. We can pluck a flower from the garden and give it to some poor, outcast and forsaken one in token of our friendship, and love. We can sing some sweet song, read some soul cheering verse, or do some little deed of kindness or charity that is worth while in order to relieve suffering humanity. God will bless us for these things and we will be made happier thereby.

It is certain that if we strive to benefit others and make them happy, they will help us to be happy in return. When we do some good deeds we can never tell how far reaching it may be. Even when we are gone the good we have done will still bless the world. Then why not live right? Why not "shine just where you are?"

In all our deeds, words, actions, steps and movements in life we need Jesus with us. We need Him as our Guide Shield and Counsellor. We cannot afford to be without Him. We need Him every day and every hour. He will strengthen us, keep us in time of trouble, if we only trust Him. Then why not live this life? This is all the life that is worth living even in this world. Are we not willing to do the thing that is best? Surely we are for a life spent in the right is never regretted.

THE BIRTH OF "THE WAYFARER"

By J. E. Crowther, Seattle, in The Christian Advocate.

How did you come to write "The Wayfarer"? This question has been asked so frequently that a few lines of explanation may be of interest.

First of all, it was unintentional. It was not intended to present dramatics as an educational medium, nor was it introduced to "reform the stage." It was created to meet an emergency in the program of the Centenary Celebration at Columbus.

The original intention had been to create two pageants, representatives of the triumphs of Methodist home and foreign missions during the past hundred years. The time element, however, was insufficient for the preparation on so elaborate a scale. Already we were within the danger zone for the creation of scenery and costumes for a single pageant. Immediate and certain action was imperative.

I shall never forget that Friday night when I was confronted with the task. The day had been a sorely trying one. With a burdened heart I went to my room at the hotel in New York and retired for the night.

But sleep refused to come. What should be done about that gap in the Columbus Program? While tossing there is fevered prayer the choruses of "The Messiah" broke suddenly upon my mind and a vision of the ultimate triumph of the Redeemer's kingdom began to unfold before my soul.

Then it was that the celestial fire began to burn within; it blazed like a consuming fever. Handel's "Messiah," in a holy wedlock of oratorio and pageantry, began to fill the gap in the program.

I arose and dressed. The clamorous voices of the city's life had become silent. There was only one voice, a "still, small voice," and the sound of angel choirs as on the night that Christ was born, commingled with the peal of heavenly bugles.

All night long the Spirit tarried. I wrote on with tears and song and prayer. Again and again the heart aflame cried out, "Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth," and He did! That night The Author of "The Wayfarer" spoke His message to a humble Methodist preacher.

When the saffron fingers of the morning had touched the eastern sky the pageant, substantially as it afterward appeared, had come into being. The shell-torn church in Flanders, the heathen temple and shimmering river in Babylon; the pastoral scene of Bethlehem; the highway and gate into Jerusalem; the thunder-swept brow of Calvary; the resurrection triumph in the garden of Joseph, and Emmanuel's coronation triumph, amid the pean of the "Hallelujah Chorus"—all had come down through the midnight sky.

And yet I could not be sure. Perhaps it was a mirage, born of weariness. With much misgiving I journeyed on the following day to the home of Dr. S. Earl Taylor, in the country, and read my notes to him and his good wife. The effect was instantaneous and overwhelming. "You've got it!" he cried, and I went back to the city with a contented heart. Thank you, Dr. Taylor!

But doubtless "The Wayfarer" anteceded that Friday night. Through many years the writer had fought the same battle against doubt and defeat. He, too, had suffered Babylon's bondage and had found the peace of Christian certitude.

The musical setting of the pageant began to take form in a humble cottage in England. My father had been a church organist in his youth and mother was an alto in the choir, but the raising of eleven children on ten dollars a week left little of a margin for luxuries.

Eventually, however, father had "amassed" the sum of twelve dollars and invested this fortune in a second-hand "harmonium" that had difficulty living up to its name. It was asthmatic in the wind chest, rheumatic in the pedal extremities and altogether too quavering on the "tremolo." But it had a grand soul within and its efforts were bravely supported by the large Crowther choir. It was there we learned by memory the music of Handel and the glorious masters of oratorio.

The final scene of the pageant is strangely familiar. Many a time as a child in the factory the beatific vision of that day when "the kingdoms of this world should become the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ" lightened the drudgery of the day. Above the roar of the loom there came the sound of heaven's full-throated organ, like the fountain of the winds and the chanting of children's voices that were forever free from the sigh and sob and sorrow of life.

If "The Wayfarer" shall guide some "pilgrims of the night" to the "Light of the World" its mission will have been fulfilled. Meanwhile, I am humbly grateful that the great, good God chose an earthen vessel to bear His treasure to men. In common with "The Wayfarer" the writer concludes:

"It must be that God's omnipotence
Fulfills itself in weakness
Like to mine."

MISSIONARY

MONEY AND THE KINGDOM

There are certain miserly souls in the church who are themselves so averse to contributing anything to the Kingdom that they will impugn your motives immediately that you speak of raising money for the Kingdom. The usual pitiful plea of this class in that "You can't save the Kingdom with money." Or "You can't buy your way into the Kingdom with your dollars." Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the very fellow who says that is about the closest fisted man you know, and is saying it either to cloak his own conduct, or excuse his own conscience for not giving any decent proportion of his income to the Kingdom. As if anybody had said you would save the Kingdom with money.

How different from such a man is the plain teaching of the Word of God. The rich young ruler came to Christ; and Christ said to him, "First go sell and give. Then come. For where your treasure is there will your heart be also." But more to the point. When the prophet, Malachi, was calling an apostate nation back to its god he put the money offering first, knowing full well the desired blessings would follow this offering. Hear him as he pleads (Mal. 3:10), "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse * * * and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not * * * pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

We wonder if there were not close fisted Jews then who said in reply, "Malachi makes his blessings depend upon the willingness to pay tithes." At any rate the blessings were to come after and not before.

And this very thing is what has happened with our brethren in other denominations that have had great drives for Kingdom's work. The Biblical Recorder, speaking for the Baptist, says editorially: "Perhaps the greatest blessing that has come from the campaign is the spiritual awakening among our people. There have been many reports of conversions, and thousands have enlisted for special service. There will be recruits for the foreign field and many workers for the home land as a result of the campaign."

When we deny ourselves—and with many money is the one thing of hardest denial—take up our Cross and follow Him, great blessings always follow.

J. O. ATKINSON.

RICHMOND, VA.

The Mission Secretary was very happy to receive a neatly prepared invitation bearing the following:

"Richmond, Va., Feb. 17, 1920.

"Dear Dr. Atkinson:

"You are invited to attend a meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Christian church, which will be entertained in the home of Mrs. D. W. Darden, 3006 West Grace St., at 8 o'clock, Friday evening, February 20th.

"All friends are cordially invited to be present and bring with them other interested friends.

"An attractive program has been arranged for the evening. Won't you aid our cause by attending, thereby showing your personal interest in the work?

"Yours for 'The Aid,'

"MILDRED ATKINSON, President."

Our Richmond band of loyals are beginning right, having started with the auxiliaries of the church, as well as the church people. They expect their pastor, Dr. W. T. Walters and family soon after March 1.

INTER-CHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT MEETING

The following has been sent to all white Protestant pastors in North Carolina:

Dear Brother:

You are invited to attend a Ministers' Conference to be held in Charlotte, N. C., March 8-10. At that time all the ministers of the State will be asked to consider the Kingdom's interest in relation to the State, the Nation and the World. Similar conferences will be held in every State in the Union.

The Atlantic City Conference, January 7-10, was one of the greatest meetings ever held in America. There were over 1,500 delegates from 42 different denominations. For three days this great gathering reviewed the Surveys which had been made by the Interechurch World Movement, showing conditions local and world-wide. Everyone came to feel that there is something good and great just before the Protestant Churches in the new spirit of comradeship which they have discovered. Some of the greatest leaders of Protestantism were present and took part in the meeting. Practically every Southern Denomination was represented. The facts given by addresses and on the screen proved to be the most gripping narrative.

It is proposed to give the ministers of North Carolina the facts as they were presented at Atlantic City, together with a large amount of material revealed by the Survey now being conducted in the various counties in this State under the direction of the Interechurh World Movement. A frank discussion of all facts presented will be freely encouraged. A team of trained experts will lead in the Conference, and will assist in interpreting the facts.

No pastor in this State can possibly afford to miss this great gathering. Surely it will be one of the great privileges of our lives to meet for the first time all the spiritual leaders in a great conference where the common problems of Protestantism will be considered.

In order to make it possible for all the pastors in the State to attend, the Interechurh World Movement has been authorized to pay the railroad fare and the sleeper fare, (where necessary) of all the pastors who attend the Conference. No other item of expense will be paid on account of the large number of men expected.

The place of meeting will be announced later. The program and other information will be mailed you. Will you not plan to come and see that every minister of your county is present? May we not count definitely upon your assistance in this way? Will you not also join us in prayer that this meeting will be all that it should be for our State?

Thanking you for your co-operation and with all good wishes, we are

Yours very truly,

E. N. ORR,

Field Secretary for North Carolina.

A. M. SCALES,

Chairman State Advisory Committee.

FEDERAL COUNCIL ISSUES STATISTICS OF ALL RELIGIOUS FAITHS

(Contributed)

"The Year Book of the Churches" for 1920, the official volume issued annually by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, contains the usual annual statistics for all the leading denominations as furnished by their officials. In the case of some of the smaller bodies it was necessary to take the United States Census figures for 1916.

For 1919, in spite of disturbed social conditions due to reconstruction, the various religious bodies of the country report a total growth in membership of 2,861,182 over the census of 1916. There is also an increase of 3,519 ministers and of 6,347 church organizations. The total number of churches now stands at 233,834. There are 195,315 ministers, priests and rabbis with 44,788,036 members of these various organizations. The total Roman Catholic baptized membership is reported as 17,549,324. The report of Jews who hold membership in various synagogues is only 260,000, in spite of the large population of persons of Jewish ancestry. This is accounted for by the fact that membership in Jewish congregations is, in most cases, restricted to heads of families and these only are reported in the table. The two Mormon bodies report a membership of 494,388. The Greek Orthodox Church reports 119,871, while the Russian Orthodox Church has a membership of 99,681. Another Oriental body, the Syrian Orthodox Church, has 50,000 members in this country. The total Protestant church membership reported is 25,980,456.

The Roman Catholic figures represent baptized members, both children and adults, while the Protestant figures are simply for the communicant members.

The membership of the bodies making up the Federal Council has increased 816,922 over that of 1918. This is in part due to the admission of the Christian Reformed Church and the Churches of God in North America (General Eldership), but represents also a very considerable gain by many denominations reported last year. The total membership of the Federal Council bodies is given as 19,504,102 this year as compared with 18,687,180 reported a year ago.

The new figures show an increase of 5,013 in the number of Sunday schools reported, but a loss in the number of persons under formal religious instruction amounting to 596,534, the present number of Sunday schools pupils being 21,291,987. The Congregational Churches and the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. made no report on the number of Sunday schools. The figures used in these instances were those of the 1916 census. Some of the Lutheran Synodical bodies also made no report as to the number of Sunday schools, so that the total number of Sunday schools given for the Lutheran Churches is much smaller than is actually the fact. The figures given for the Lutherans, however, are those printed in the Lutheran Church Year Book for 1920. Even these circumstances do not seem to explain away the apparent loss in the number of persons under religious instruction in the United States.

The expenditures of the churches have fallen off during the year $2,522,048, the total for 1919 being $326,287,951. Church leaders account for this chiefly through the decrease in local church building enterprises due to disturbed conditions and high prices. While no figures have been reported to show the increase for missions and other general benevolences, it is known that on account of the enormous sums raised by Methodists, Presbyterians and other bodies during the past year, these figures have far outstripped those of any previous year.

The membership of the larger Protestant bodies is as follows: Methodist Episcopal, North, 4,175,502; Southern Baptist Convention, 2,887,428; Methodist Episcopal, South, 2,152,974; Presbyterian in the U. S. A., 1,603,033; Northern Baptist Convention, 1,502,341; Disciples of Christ, 1,193,423; Protestant Episcopal, 1,065,825; Congregational Churches, 808,122; the newly formed United Lutheran Church in America, 782,807, (the membership of the twenty Lutheran bodies in the United States totals 2,451,997); the four leading colored denominations, National Baptist Convention, African Methodist Episcopal, African Methodist Episcopal Zion and Colored Methodist Episcopal total 4,191,257.

A CHILD'S PRAYER

God, make my life a little light,
Within the world to glow,
A little flame that burneth bright,
Wherever I may go.

God, make my life a little flower,
That giveth joy to all,
Content to bloom in native bower,
Although the place be small.

God, make my life a little song,
That comforteth the sad,
That helpeth others to be strong,
And makes the singer glad.

—M. Betham-Edwards, in The Children's Treasury.

FOLLOWING ORDERS

A fifteen-year-old boy, who had been waiting patiently in line at a big bank, presented a slip of paper at the cashier's window calling for several hundred dollars in different denominations. It was evidently for the pay-roll of some large business house. First a roll of twenties was handed to the youth, and before he had finished counting this a lot of tens, fives and twos were shoved out. The cashier, evidently becoming impatient, threw down on the greenbacks a lot of silver dollars, halves, quarters and dimes. The boy flushed, gave the man a long straight look and deliberately continued counting until he had finished. Back in the waiting line was a tall, prosperous-looking man who had seen it all. When his turn came, he said rather sternly to the cashier: "That boy you were trying to confuse a moment ago is my new office-boy. In counting the money before leaving, you knew he was following the orders of the bank—it's on one of your signs. I had also told him to do the same thing. He's going to get a raise Saturday night."—Illustrative Incidents for Public Speakers by Will H. Brown.

THE SLEEPY SONG

As soon as the fire burns red and low
And the house upstairs is still,
She sings me a queer little sleepy song
Of sheep that go over the hill.

The good little sheep run quick and soft,
Their colors are gray and white;
They follow their leader, nose and tail,
For they must be home by night.

And one slips over, and one comes next,
And one runs after behind;
The gray one's nose at the white one's tail,
The top of the hill they find.

And over they go, and over they go,
And over the top of the hill;
The good little sheep run quick and soft,
And the house upstairs is still.

And one slips over and one comes next,
The good little, gray little sheep!
I watch how the fire burns red and low,
And she says that I fall asleep.

—Josephine Daskam Bacon, in The Christian Evangelist.

GAMES TO PLAY WITH THE FINGERS

This is little Tommy Thumb,
Round and smooth as any plum.
This is busy Peter Pointer;
Surely he's a double-jointer.
This is mighty Toby Tall;
He's the biggest one of all.
This is dainty Reuben Ring;
He's too fine for anything.
And this little wee one, maybe,
Is the pretty Finger baby.
All the five we've counted now,
Busy fingers in a row;
Every finger knows the way,
How to work and how to play;
Yet together work they best,
Each one helping all the rest.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MARCH 7, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject: John Writes About Christian Love.—I John 4:7-21.

Time: Probably A. D. 90.

Golden Text: "Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another."

Additional Reading: I Corinthians 13, I John, II John.

Students of this lesson should first of all try to analyze its theme—What is love? John says: "God is love." Science says: "Life is love." While the poet has a very different interpretation: "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." It is apparent, then, that without any conception of just what love is, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers are apt to theorize abstractly about love without getting anywhere.

The Supreme Manifestation

The answer to our question lies in the classic illustration of ultimate love found in the tenth verse of the lesson. It is the great example of God's love for man. And I think it may be resolved into two parts, concern and sacrifice. God was first deeply affected by the waywardness of mankind, and then made the one sacrifice that could redeem it—the giving of His Son. What a precedent in love for the world!

Our Opportunity

While we have no sinful worlds to be concerned with, still there are evidences of sin and need on every hand if we would but open our eyes to them. This is the great error we make in practical religion. While we are learning a principle or nursing our creed, wrong and deprivation stalk before our very eyes unheeded. What we need to do is to cultivate the "hunting life" that seeks for chances to serve. Such a life that meets an epidemic not with: "how can I avoid it?" but "what can I do to relieve it?" That asks in Sunday school next Sunday not, "What is the matter with the superintendent?" but "where can I apply my little force to give him a boost?" The preparatory element in love is that seeking spirit that inquires after opportunities to serve.

But the real test of love is what it does. God gave His Son. You can give a life of service—a small gift in comparison, to be sure, but nevertheless the religious hope of the world. You can translate the "love your neighbor" command into actual help at planting time or carrying ready relief when he is in distress.

Practical Love

Then let us guard against the mistake often made by our preachers when they read the thirteenth chapter of 1st Corinthians and then proceeded to dispense abstruse prescriptions of love without ever telling us just what it is or how applied to our lives. What we need is to know and practice love. This may be done by cultivating that inquiring spirit that hunts for the weak spots in man and then give freely of sacrifice toward making them strong.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MARCH 7, 1920

J. Vincent Knight

"Life Lessons From The Book of Proverbs."—Proverbs 20:1-15.

(Consecration Meeting)

The book of Proverbs is a book of sententious sayings, applied to life. In these sayings is found the mind of divine wisdom, and that wisdom applied to earthly conditions of God's people. The sayings found in Proverbs not only touch life, but cover all life and in the book is found a panacea for the human ills. No matter what the environments of the life may be, that life may find a lesson of vital importance to it, if the proper study and research of the Book, is made, and the pithy savings properly interpreted.

One great lesson the world needs to learn is the value of human sympathy and how to apply it. War stirs every emotion of the human life, and while stirring the best, it also stirs up the worst and leaves the dregs afloat; and who knows but what this great epidemic of Influenza again sweeping the country is a plague sent to restore lost sympathy for mankind? There seems to be no real psychological or physiological reasoning for its rapid spread and great toll of life. God chastens those He loves, and why should it be thought incredible that our life lessons are seasoned with sore afflictions?

In all lessons given in this wonderful Book, the sacred writer does not fail to emphasize the fact that God has need of all life. One fine example of this is found in Proverbs 11:1, where the mind of wisdom sees a grave need for religion in business. If men saw that today we would need no law to protect us from profiteering, graft and gain. Even the life tainted with sin, sorrow and disappointment finds a soothing message, for we learn that "Love covers all wrong," Proverbs 17:9, and "points the weary soul to the fount of real joy." Proverbs 15:13. "Wherever such is true, that life has the light of God in the soul." Proverbs 20:27.

To many of our young people, this topic may seem difficult, but suppose we apply it? It is a consecration meeting. Let us study the life lessons, and apply them and get a real vision of self, and then consecrate that life with whatever advantages or disadvantage we may have to God, and life service for Him. While our salvation is not a matter of works alone, we receive a reward for the works we do, and we must not forget "that the firm we serve must pay us." If we live for sin and Satan, God is not responsible for our rewards. Proverb 24:20.

MARRIAGES

RAWLS-DAVIS

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. S. Edgar Delk in Brewer Avenue, Suffolk, Va., on Thursday afternoon, February 12, 1920, Miss Sarah Elizabeth Davis, daughter of the late George A. Davis of Madison, Florida, became the bride of Dr. David Luther Rawls, an old student of Elon College, and a member of the staff of Lakeview Hospital.

The Delk home was decorated with masses of pink roses, carnations, palms and ferns, lighted by candalaba lights.

Mrs. C. R. Wallace, organist at the Christian church, rendered Lohengrin's bridal chorus as the bride entered with Miss Margaret Delk as maid of honor, and Mrs. Bradford Kilby, Director of the church choir, sang "Because" just before the bridal party entered the room. The groom entered with his Brother, Dr. J. E. Rawles, as best man. The ring ceremony was used.

A select group of relatives and near friends filled the room with quiet attention, and extended congratulations. After an extended bridal tour they will return to Suffolk and reside here after February 27 in the new apartments on Main Street.

At the Gatling home on Bank street, on the day before the marriage, Misses Azequeida and Mary Sue Gatling, nieces of the groom, entertained at a "Miscellaneous Shower" in honor of Miss Davis. The parlors were a garden of cut flowers and ferns and a host of friends came with their presents and their good wishes, and their showers of blessings upon the lives now united in law and love.

WOODARD-GRIGGS

Sunday morning, February 8, 1920, at 11 o'clock, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Caleb Griggs was the scene of a pretty home wedding when their daughter, Miss Estelle Burcher Griggs, became the bride of Mr. James Henry Woodard, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Woodard. The wedding marches by Lohengrin and Mendelssohn were rendered by Mrs. E. T. Cotten. The ceremony was performed by the writer. The bride and groom with their many guests immediately motored to Bethlehem Christian church to attend the regular preaching service. After which a very delightful dinner was served to many relatives and friends by the bride's parents.

SMITH-SMITH

Tuesday afternoon, February 10, 1920, Mr. Sylvester J. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Smith, and Miss Thalia E. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith, having escaped the watchful eyes of parents and motored to Corapeake, Gates County, North Carolina, were united in marriage by the writer. They shall make their new home in the county near Suffolk, Va.

OBITUARIES

FLYNN

Mrs. Julia Josephine Flynn died February 7, 1920 about 3:20 A. M., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Cora Wheeler. She was sixty-three years, ten months and three days old. She married J. Frank Flynn, who died about eighteen years ago. She leaves to mourn their loss, one brother, one sister, four children, thirteen grandchildren and a host of friends.

She was a member of Howard's Chapel church. She was devoted and loyal to her church. Just a month ago to the day she was buried, she paid her last tribute to the finances of the church. One of her deacon's testimony to her life in the church, "Her life has been more consistent with the principles of the church than many other members." A beautiful tribute to her life!

Peace to her soul! Interment of her body was in the cemetery of Howard's Chapel.

May the Comforter bless all who weep.

L. L. WYRICK.

At about noon, February 8, 1920, at home, Haw River, N. C., Mrs. Bessie Adeline Wilkins, wife of Dr. J. C. Wilkins, passed from earth to the Spirit-land, aged thirty-two years, three months and ten days. Her parents, husband, one child, one sister and two brothers survive her. Her maiden name was Gilliam. She and Dr. Wilkins were united in marriage December 28, 1916 and their wedded pathway of three years, one month and ten days, was a very happy one till death came and she fell asleep. She has gone to be with God. In early youth she united with Union Christian church and for several years was church organist. She loved her church and was deeply interested in its welfare.

The funeral services were from the home, conducted by the writer and Rev. J. W. Holt. The interment was in the cemetery at Union Christian church. The dear Master bless, keep and comfort the bereaved.

P. H. FLEMING.

DOLLAR

Mrs. Nora Cates Dollar, wife of T. W. Dollar, passed from earth to reward in the early dawn of February 13, 1920. She was 34 years old at the time of her death. Her death was caused from an attack of Influenza. When twelve years old Mrs. Dollar joined the Bethel Baptist church, but transferred her membership to Damascus Christian church two years ago in order that her membership might be with her husband. She was a true wife, a loving mother and a devout Christian. She leaves to mourn their loss, a husband, seven children and the following sisters: Mrs. C. H. Ellis, Durham, N. C., Mrs. R. G. Suitt, Durham, N. C.; Mrs. L. H. Chandler, Durham, N. C.; and Miss Dora Cates, Durham, N. C. The funeral was conducted by the writer and the interment was made in the cemetery at Bethel church. May the Holy Spirit brood over the little motherless children, comfort the husband and console the broken hearted relatives.

R. F. BROWN.

WICKER

Mr. Hoyle H. Wicker, who had been ill for a week with Influenza and pneumonia, died at his home in Colou, N. C., Thursday, February 5, 1920. Mr. Wicker died at the age of thirty-nine years, and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Wicker. His mother died a number of years ago.

He was married to Miss Katie Wicker, fifteen years ago. The widow and three children survive, also his father and several brothers and sisters.

Mr. Wicker was a member of Turner's

Chapel Christian church, and a faithful husband, father, church-man and citizen.

The burial services were conducted at Turner's Chapel church on Saturday morning, February 7, 1920, by his pastor, Rev. T. E. White.

T. E. WHITE.

WICKER

Mr. Winfred Wicker who had been ill for a few days with pneumonia following Influenza, died at his home near Colon, N. C., Tuesday, February 10, 1920. The funeral services were held at Turner's Chapel Christian church on Wednesday, February 11, 1920, by the pastor, Rev. T. E. White. Mr. Wicker is survived by his wife and several children. He was a member of Turner's Chapel church, and in his death the church loses a faithful and substantial member.

T. E. WHITE.

OWENS

A. A. Owens died at his home near Hopedale, February 16, 1920, aged about 53 years. He leaves a wife and six children—two girls and four boys. One of his boys is in the United States Army and he did not get home when his father died.

Mr. Owens was a member of the Christian church at Randleman, N. C. The funeral services were conducted by the writer from the home and the interment was in the Brown's Chapel cemetery, near Burlington, N. C.

P. H. FLEMING.

STRADER

William F. Strader was born October 14, 1876 and died February 2, 1920. He was the eldest son of the late Adam M. and Mrs. T. A. Strader of Burlington, N. C. He was married to Miss Fannie Hines of Greensboro, N. C., December 24, 1912. To this union were born four children, the youngest being only one month old. Two of the children died in infancy.

Brother Strader was strong and healthy until attacked by Influenza about two weeks before his death. He was cut down in the midst of life and in the midst of a successful career. He was a prosperous farmer and was looking to the future with bright prospects. Truly we know not what a day will bring forth. His sudden passing was a shock to his many neighbors and friends.

He was a member at Long's Chapel Christian church and purposed moving his membership to the Burlington Christian church at an early date. He died looking unto Jesus and talking of the Heavenly home. A good man, a loyal citizen, and neighbor has fallen.

He leaves to mourn their loss a widow, two children, three brothers, one sister, a devoted mother and a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral was conducted from the home by the writer and interment made in Pine Hill cemetery, Burlington, N. C.

J. W. HARRELL.

JOHNSON

James E. Johnson, Windsor, Va., while on his way to Norfolk, Va., to see a brother and hear Billy Sunday preach, January 31, 1920, was crossing the Norfolk and Western Railroad to get on board the train when he was struck and killed instantly. He was a true member of Mt. Carmel Christian church, a good man and greatly beloved by his friends. He leaves a devoted wife. May God bless and comfort her in the sad bereavement. One brother, Willie Johnson, Norfolk, Va., four sisters and many friends survive him. Funeral services were conducted at the grave at his church, Mt. Carmel, Sunday afternoon, February 1, 1920.

H. H. BUTLER.

RAWLES

Mrs. Sarah C. Rawles, widow of the late Justice Frank Rawles, died at her home near Nurney, Va., January 8, 1920, aged seventy-three years, two months and twenty-eight days. She was a good Christian mother, a faithful member of Cypress Chapel Christian, church and will be greatly missed in her home, community and church, to which she was so devotedly attached. She was both sister and mother to the writer. God bless her sacred memory. She leaves two sons and one daughter: C. F. and R. L. Rawles and Mrs. T. J. Ellis, all of Nurney, Va.; six grandchildren, ten great grandchildren and many friends. Funeral service was conducted at her home by the writer, assisted by Rev. W. W. Staley, and her remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery. God bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—MORING

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove from us our beloved Sunday school superintendent, Mr. J. H. Moring; Be it Resolved,

First. That in his death our school and church has lost a member full of good works, whose life was an inspiration to us all,

Second. That while deeply lamenting his death, we realize that our loss is his gain, and pray that God may give us strength and wisdom to continue the work dear to his heart,

Third. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives and pray that God may be their ever present help and comfort,

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of our school, and a copy be sent his sister, Mrs. W. G. Clements, and to The Christian Sun for publication.

Adopted by Morrisville Christian Sunday school, February 15, 1920.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—RICHARDSON

Whereas, our beloved deacon, Warner F. Richardson who departed this life December, 1919, after an illness of nearly three months, and

Whereas, for twenty-eight years as a member and for about twenty-five years as a deacon of Barrett's Christian church, he has proved loyal, faithful and true to his church and God. Therefore, Be it Resolved:

First. That in Deacon Richardson God has given us a noble example of a liberal church member, Christian brother, patient sufferer and loyal soldier of our Lord Christ.

Second. That to his grief-stricken family we offer our sincere sympathy and commend them to God and the Word of His grace, the only source of strength in such a sad hour.

Third. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy spread on the minutes of our church for safe keeping.

Tithers' Week

MARCH seventh-fourteenth is Tithers' Week in the Men and Millions Forward Movement program. During this period the membership of the churches will be approached on the subject of giving at least one-tenth of their increase to the work of the Lord. One-tenth of the membership enrolled as tithers is the goal of the Movement. A moderate figure indeed! Two thousand five hundreds persons signing the cards will reach the goal. Surely more than this number of our loyal and liberal members will enter into definite financial relationship with the Lord.

In sermon and in song we hear the subject of the tithe being discussed. When we entered our editorial career, only an occasional note was found on the subject of tithing in all our most excellent exchanges. Today every church publication is carrying, almost every week, not argument for, but praise of what tithing is doing for the Kingdom's interest. A test of the plan is its best endorsement. Surely the household of faith is coming to realize that there is no better method to finance the Kingdom than God's own plan.

The Kingdom has suffered because we have not brought our tithes and offerings to the house of the Lord. The people have suffered because they have not had the windows of heaven opened to them and the promised blessings poured out.

Has the Lord failed where we have trusted Him? Surely not. Then let us go a step further and trust Him with at least one-tenth of our increase. We are possessors and not owners; we are stewards only. Are we faithful stewards?

Our plea is not of official duty, to be timely, to meet the program of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, to theorize, or any of these things. It is a voice from experience, definite, systematic practice and backed by a joy that only the experienced know.

You have thought about it. Pray over it—and then sign the card. Be a tither. Be honest with God.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

GOVERNOR EDWARDS

The editorial policy of this paper is not to deal with persons, but things—things for persons to be and do. However, our policy is not iron-clad so that we cannot say things about persons when the occasion justifies it.

New Jersey, to the disgrace of her good name, elected a man the other day as Governor who is in favor of the liquor traffic. Governor Edwards is his name. Governor! How strange it sounds to call a man Governor who is allied with hell's once chief asset. Mr. Edwards—or just Edwards—says that he is going to make New Jersey as “wet as the Atlantic Ocean” during his term. We say that he had better make good his boast during his first term, for we are bold enough to predict that New Jersey will go “dry” and Edwards will soon go out as an official. Public sentiment has outclassed John Barley Corn and our States can no keep men in office who favor the whiskey traffic, and longer keep men in office who favor the whiskey traffic, and hence are the chief agents of the devil.

The Trenton, (N. J.) Times received a letter the other day from a little girl that is worth reproducing in this connection. Here it is:

Trenton, N. J., January 26, 1920.

To the Editor of the Times:

Will you allow me space in your paper? I am a little girl eleven years old, and my father drinks: and now, since prohibition law has come, our home is so happy.

My mother is praying for the saloon to never open, and I pray, too, for them to never open again.

We all six children and mother had the flu, and papa would go out and leave us, all sick, and come home drunk, and go to bed.

My mother had to get up and tend to us all; and she was so weak she could hardly stand up. But God saved us all; we could not get a doctor and I know prayer is what saved us all; and not one of us died; and not one of us had a drink of whisky. Only our Saviour, the Lord Christ, that saved us. Praise his name! I read the Bible, and this is a chapter: St. Matthew XXIX:35.

I would like Mr. Edwards to read it. He is working for evil things in this world. Just think what liquor does to make us little children unhappy. He ought to be ashamed of himself.

A LITTLE GIRL.

That little girl's real face may never be seen by Edwards, but he will see her in mind. That mother's prayers will haunt him and his associates. The presence of that drunken father will be in the vision of Edwards as he looks at his own home.

God save the name of New Jersey! History's pages are closing to the State that defends the whiskey business.

MEETING THE NEEDS OF THE HOUR

Some time since a distinguished divine wrote an article in one of our American magazines in which it was caustically pointed out that Peter stood by the fire warming himself while the world's greatest tragedy was being enacted. The claim was made that Peter's example had very often been followed by the church; and that this Institution which ought most of all to care was very often idle and indifferent when the greatest need for action was upon it. While Peter's Lord and Master was being falsely accused and tried for His life, Peter looked after his own personal comfort and contentedly warmed himself. Without following further the thought in question it is sufficient to say that while some in the church have been contented with their own personal comfort during times of great needs, emergencies and tragedies, the Church as such has not been contented to do so.

Today the Church is fully aware that there are moral and spiritual crises upon us. We are just out of the throes of a world's tragedy in arms. We are now in the throes of a world's tragedy in morals. New problems have arisen. New issues have thrust themselves upon us. Nothing is settled. Thought is on edge. Opinions are divided. The past is being weighed in the balances. The war did but whet our swords. The supreme conflict is now on. Labor is in a threatening mood and is dissatisfied. Capital is uneasy and sensitive. The whole public lives in a state of expectancy and wonders what next.

Politics, legislatures, Senates and Cabinets can't settle these questions. At heart the problems involved are moral and spiritual. On this account the Church faces a responsibility, an opportunity and a crisis the like of which it has not faced for many a long decade. Shall Peter again be found standing by the fire warming himself while his Lord and Master is on trial for His life? Or will he awake to the tragedy and prove himself worthy of the Lord he loves and Whose cause he has espoused?

On February 9, the National Conference of Church Women (representing twenty-one denominations from thirty-one States), assembled in Washington, D. C., unanimously declared that, "Within the Christian Church are the mightiest energies that can be released to meet the needs of present day problems. The Church must be aroused to reconsecrate itself to the promulgation of the Gospel."

This is what our Men and Millions Forward Movement means. It is an honest and faithful attempt to release the mightiest energies of our Church to meet the tremendous moral and spiritual needs of this perilous and unsettled time. It is our dear Church endeavoring to reconsecrate itself to the promulgation of the saving Gospel of our dear Lord. There may be those in the Church who in such a time will indifferently stand by the fire and warm their bodies to their own personal comfort; but the true Church and those who have a care for its progress, power and development will not. In this supreme conflict, in this awful hour of trial and of tragedy the Church of our Lord will do its utmost for the glory of its Lord and the salvation of men. Every loyal son and daughter of our dear Christian Church is now called to his colors, to reconsecration and to supreme activity to meet the needs of the hour.

RALEIGH CONFERENCE

The Raleigh Conference of the Men and Millions Forward Movement was first scheduled for February 10, but the "flu" prevented and the date reset for February 26.

The morning session opened at 10:00 A. M. After a period of intercession, and a period of singing, in which the campaign songs were sung, the remainder of the morning was given over to inspirational addresses by the members of the Campaign Committee and others.

Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., Chairman of the Steering Committee of the Movement, delivered the first address. His subject was: "Where the Christian Church has Led." Dr. Staley in his splendid and convincing style gave a short history of the Christian Church, pointing out instances where it had lead in the past as well as in this Movement which is now on foot.

Following this address Chaplain Stanley C. Harrell spoke on "Men." He emphasised the need of men in connection with the Movement rather than "millions," and when the men are secured the millions will be forthcoming.

"Millions" was the theme of Dr. A. B. Kendall of Washington, D. C., in which he presented some surprising statistics in connection with Church and Sunday school members and the money given for the support of these organizations in the United States. "There are 5,500,000 illiterates above ten years of age in the U. S.," he said. "58,000,000 unidentified with any church, Jew, Catholic, or Protestant. 27,000,000 Protestant children under 25 years of age not enrolled in any Sunday school. Last year the Protestant Churches gave $249,788,535, which equals the tithe of .27 per day, or .027 cents per day per capita for all purposes, local and benevolence. If we could lift it to .13 cents a day we could take care of all last year's work and have $1,000,000,000 margin."

Dr. W. P. Lawrence made a brief address on "God's Claim on Life."

Mrs. W. A. Harper, President of the Woman's Mission Board for North Carolina, in a splendid address entitled "The Womanly Heart and the Forward Movement," pledged the support of the women of the Church to this Movement. She said the women were anxious and willing to do their full share, and expressed the appreciation of the women for the large place of responsibility they had been given in this Movement.

Afternoon Session

The afternoon session was given over entirely to the organization and set-up work for the local churches. The leaders of each church and their team helpers received thorough instruction concerning the manner in which the campaign is to be conducted and the methods of organization that will be used.

Dr. W. A. Harper, Secretary of the Organization work of the Campaign, was in charge of the training work, and outlined fully to the church leaders the plans and purposes of the Movement, and the details of the procedure of the set-up work.

Men and Millions Forward Movement

THE WOMANLY HEART AND THE FORWARD MOVEMENT*

We women of the Christian Church rejoice to see this day. Our hearts swell within us as we contemplate what this Men and Millions Forward Movement contains in it of promise for our beloved Church, and you pastors and leaders of our Church may count upon us women, one hundred per cent. of us, to do our best for this cause. At least that is the goal, the aspiration, the purpose of our hearts I am sure.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary work of our Church is but a few brief years of age and only a fringe of our possibility has been touched, yet we ourselves have been astonished at what we have been able to accomplish by united effort. Last year, the terrible year of the Influenza, we raised more than $7,000, and this year our goals are set at $10,000, and verily I believe we shall pass them. It is easy to raise money, when co-operation paves the way and the Lord leads.

Let me say next that we women appreciate the recognition our Church has accorded us in the organization of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. We are to have representatives on the Conference Advisory Boards, on the County and Regional District Boards of Directors, and on the teams of the local churches. We are asked to see that every woman and every girl subscribes, and we shall gladly do it. We only hope that the results we shall achieve will justify the recognition accorded us by the leaders in this Movement. We pledge you our best.

As soon as we were apprised of our new honors and of this further evidence of esteem and confidence on the part of the Church, true to the intuitive nature of woman, we discerned that we must give our women a distinct understanding of what the Men and Millions Forward Movement is and of its relationship to our regular Woman's Department of Home and Foreign Missions. Fortunately we have been issuing a pamphlet each month for general distribution in our societies and churches and among our pastors. The pamphlet for February was already in type. We held it up and prepared a new one for February, which has already gone to our women and our ministers. I am told this is the first piece of pamphlet literature issued in the name of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, and if it is we were glad. It is our purpose to have one of these pamphlets placed in the hands of every woman of the Church, and to have it studied by the women of every congregation. We women hope that our pastors see to it that the pamphlets we regularly issue are read in their congregations, if there are no missionary societies in any of them. Such procedure would undoubtedly lead to the coming of such societies in the churches not now blessed with them.

But to return to my subject, "The Womanly Heart and the Forward Movement," I asked a man friend how the womanly heart differs from the manly heart.

He said it was characterized by greater trustfulness, by deeper consecration, and by a more genuine willingness to sacrifice. I think I would add one more ingredient, readiness to be led. Under these four heads let me say a few things.

1. Trustfulness. The heart of a woman is certainly trustful. The genuine woman trusts her associates and she trusts God. We women trust our men to make the plans of this Men and Millions Forward Movement. We have confidence in their judgment and in their wisdom to do it well. We trust God in it too. We feel that it is His work and trustingly, never wavering, never faltering, we are sublimely hopeful as to results. Our hearts safely trust in our leaders and in our Heavenly Father as respects this great Movement. And believe me when I say, doubt as to its glorious success shall not poison our thoughts nor dim the ardor of our feminine enthusiasm for this cause.

2. Consecration. Men have always said we women are more consecrated than they. We appreciate the compliment and consider its source. Men and women are consecrated in different ways. Women's consecration is that of loving devotion, man's of action. But in this Men and Millions Forward Movement we women are going to try to make good in both directions. We are going to be both men and women in our consecration. We are devoted lovingly to this cause and we shall clothe our love in becoming expressions of activity. We trust our new type of consecration will commend itself to the Church, to the men of the Church I should say.

3. Willingness to Sacrifice. This is said to be a genuine characteristic of the womanly heart, and a poor widow did receive the highest commendation of our Master for her generous gift to the Lord's work. The heart of woman all down the ages has been willing in any crisis to give its all for the Kingdom. We women of the Christian Church shall not, I devoutly pray, be unfaithful in this Men and Millions Forward Movement. We shall seek the will of our Heavenly Father in relation to this cause. We will surrender ourselves to Him and do as He directs, no matter what sacrifice may be required. We certainly will not be under necessity to sacrifice for this cause as Jesus did for us, and it is for Him that our hearts are with the men for putting this Movement across.

4. Readiness to be Led. No woman who is not willing to be led has any right to think of matrimony. Her husband to be preceeds her to the marriage altar. It has been said that right there his leadership ceases. Be that as it may, we women do not aspire to leadership. We do aspire to comradeship, and we are happy our men have accorded it to us in full measure in this first real Movement of our Church. We are ready to be led and confidently, hopefully, proudly follow our leaders. Where He leads us, we will follow, and we recognize our human leaders in this Men and Millions Forward Movement to be His representatives, and so we can with full assurance that we have His approval also say of this splendid Movement that where our leaders lead us, we will follow them.

Such is the response of the womanly heart of this Christian Church to the challenge and the privilege of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. We are with you. Count us in and pray for us that we may be faithful and efficient in this worthy cause so vital to the growth and development of the Kingdom of our Christ.

*Paper prepared and delivered by Mrs. W. A. Harper before the Men and Millions Organization Conferences recently held in various parts of the Convention.

THE VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL

It was a most disagreeable day and sickness abounded, yet the group of workers that assembled in the Men and Millions Forward Movement Rally at Linville on the twenty-fourth has not been surpassed for enthusiasm by any other group in the entire Convention.

Dr. W. T. Walters, the Chairman of the Conference Advisory Board, presided and injected his spirit of optimism in every person and in all the items of the day's program.

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell gave an address on "Men," and Dr. A. B. Kendall one on "Millions." Dr. C. H. Rowland spoke on "God's Claim on Life," and Mrs. W. T. Walters read a paper on "Woman's Relation to the Movement," prepared by Mrs. W. A. Harper, who could not be present.

Then came a very stimulating address on "Prayer" by Rev. John G. Truitt. Brother Truitt was in a hotel fire at an early hour that morning. He had seen a new necessity for prayer in a moment of great personal danger. Always a forceful speaker, Brother Truitt excelled himself in tender emotion in this deliverance. Rarely has so fine a spirit pervaded any public assembly. The period of intercession following this uplifting message brought the workers close to the heart of the Father.

After a brief time spent in a lovely luncheon, the workers reassembled for the period of training in the text-book and the methods of conducting the campaign. The questions that were directed the Secretary of Organization stimulated his enthusiasm and fired his hope. Undoubtedly the Virginia Valley Central Conference will do full duty in this Men and Millions Forward Movement. About seventy-five leaders attended the gathering and they say it will go, and it will.

District Rallies

There was time for a brief conference with the district chairmen and the following dates were selected for the District Rallies:

Page—Green—Albemarle District, Newport Church, March 5.

Rockingham County—New Hope Church, March 6.

Shenandoah County—Palmyra Church, March 8.

Winchester District—Timber Ridge Church, March 9.

HAPPY THOUGHT

The world is so full of a number of things,
I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings.

—Robert L. Stevenson.

SUFFOLK LETTER

On my way to Raleigh today I was trying to think of something for this Letter that would be of some value to the Men and Millions Campaign. At Norlina my experience furnished the idea that I am now trying to express for a lesson to the reader. I went into a telephone booth to 'phone Ben T. Holden at Louisburg, as he and his family had had the "flu". I called long distance and Central answered from Henderson that she would call me. After the usual waiting, she did. Then she said the charge was 30 cents; so I put 25 cents in one slot, 5 cents in another slot, and then I could talk with Mr. Holden, and found him at his office and all improving. Now there is nothing unusual or remarkable about that experience, for it occurs every day with people who use a pay station to talk with their friends or on business; but when I returned to the train, I said to myself, and I am now saying to you, that that experience illustrates three points in Christian life and they are all essential to Christian usefulness.

1. There is Prayer. When I called the Central I was asking for what I desired. "Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, uttered or unexpressed; the motion of a hidden fire that trembles in the breast;" and "men ought always to pray and not to faint." But my prayer did not bring the blessing I sought; it brought the opportunity to get the blessing. 2. The Central required me to pay. I was in a position to talk with Mr. Holden provided I would comply with the conditions of the Company. The Church can get in touch with God by prayer, but it reaches men by pay. The first thing in the Men and Millions Campaign is to pray; the second thing is to pay. That is the way heathen nations must be reached and Christianized. That is the way the ignorant must be reached and enlightened. That is the way the orphan must be reached and fed. That is the way sinners must be reached and saved. There are two classes of members in the churches that need reconstruction. There is the praying member who does not pay; and there is the paying member who does not pray. It takes both in one to make the efficient member; and this Campaign seeks to enlist the heart and the purse. Then 3. Praise. I got the information and it was good; so I praise the Telephone Company in my soul. I could do nothing without the arrangement which the Company had provided, and it was useless to me without my prayer and my pay.

We must be in touch with God and man to accomplish the task that comes as a great desire into our souls; and when the desire is accomplished we will be filled with praise. We can never prove God's promises until we pay His price. Talking to Central does no good unless you reach others. Prayer is useless if it stops with God. Pray! Pay! Praise! These are three good words in the vocabulary of religious experience and Christian service. They are the trinity of human exercises that secure heaven's help in Christian work. The essential thing in us is cleansing from our sins; for, "if I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me."

W. W. STALEY.

MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT "MOVING FORWARD"

Dear Editor Riddle:

Surely the Men and Millions Forward Movement is "moving forward." I was so delighted when I was reading the evening paper (The Atlanta Journal) this evening to see in it an account of the meeting at Columbus, Ga., with the names of the speakers, including some of our best men. I only wish I might have been in touch with them and have seen them, if for only a short time, as they pass back and forth through our Gate City, Atlanta. Cox College, the institution in which I am teaching, is only a few miles from the city with direct and regular street car service.

Though I am nearer Christian churches than during the six years I worked in the Western Carolina mountains, I am yet not near enough for attendance but I try to keep in touch with the work through the periodicals and I am in full sympathy with the above mentioned movement. I am ready and anxious to do my part in making it a success.

I am standing the change of climate back to the lowlands splendidly and am pleased with my work in this college which I began about a year ago.

Any of my friends coming to or passing through the city can reach me by telephone and I should so much appreciate either hearing from or seeing them.

I send kind remembrances to all my old time friends.

Yours sincerely,

BETTIE STEPHENSON.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

CHILDREN MAKING GOOD IN SCHOOL

We feel very proud of our Orphanage children. We find that they can do things as well as other children. It has been our ambition for a long time to see the children in our school make as good grades as other children. Some time ago we offered a prize of $1.00 to every one who would make a general average of 95 on all studies during the entire month.

Last month Ella Frederick and Emma Morelen won the prize in the graded school. Joe Jones, Wilson Collier and Lala Brady won the prize in the school at the Orphanage. Quite a number of others came within a fraction of reaching the mark. Miss Brothers, our faithful teacher, is doing a good work and all the children are very much interested in their work and she tells me that she believes I will have to hand out quite a number of dollars next month.

Our Children's Home fund still grows and this week brings it up to $4,634.92. I hope to reach the $5,000.00 mark in my next report on this fund.

Our space in THE SUN was blank last week so far as our weekly report was concerned. We were in the Georgia and Alabama Conferences in behalf of the Men and Millions Forward Movement and enjoyed our trip very much. We found those good people down there very much interested in the Orphanage and are very much in earnest about the Men and Millions Movement. They fully expect to go over the top in this movement.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—This is our first letter to you and the little children. Hope all of the little children are well and do not have Influenza. We are little boys, Herbert five and Frank seven years old. We are enclosing twenty cents, a dime each. With love and best wishes.—Frank and Herbert Burton.

We are real glad to have you join our band. It keeps life in the corner to have the little cousins to write.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am very anxious to join the band of cousins and enclosed you will find ten cents. I know two of the little orphanage children. They are from the place in which I live. We went to school together. Now, Uncle Charley, guess you are wondering who they are: The girl is Margaret Utley and the boy is Frank Utley. They are both nice and bright children and would like to see them. With best wishes to all the children.—Ethel Rigsbee.

Glad you want to keep the corner bright. Yes, the little Utley children are splendid, bright children and are getting on nicely.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am sending a dime for myself, and one for my little brother. We want to help the little orphans. I go to school and like fine. I am seven years old and my brother is two years old. Hope you and all the little cousins a successful year.—Virginia Pearl Ayscue.

We are very grateful for your letter. It keeps the "Home Fires Burning." Write often.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I have not forgotten you and the cousins yet. I want to know if you realize who this is writing you. I am in the bed, having had the "flu" this week. I hope none of the cousins have had it. How is business getting along. I hope it is getting along fine. Do you know yet who this is writing you? I will tell you and stop fooling you. This is Joel, the boy who helped plant cabbage that time. Enclosed find 20 cents.—Joel Lee Chapman.

Yes, Joel, I remember you well. I am glad to get your letter. I hope you will work hard in school and make good grades.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—Today is my first birthday, and I am walking alone. Don't you think I am smart to walk at only twelve months old? I am a little late this month. Mother has had a sore throat, and daddy is such a busy man. Yet, here I am with my dues for February. Find check enclosed for 50 cents. Trust you and all the little cousins escape the "flu." Love and best wishes to you and the little girls and boys.—Olive D. Poythress, Jr.

You are a splendid little boy. We are always glad to get your letter. You must grow fast and come to see us.—"Uncle Charley."

NOTES

Dr. W. C. Wicker preached for the Richmond congregation last Sunday.

We are sending out statements this week to those whose subscriptions have expired and will appreciate a hearty response from those who get these reminders.

The Regional Conference of the Men and Millions Forward Movement for Guilford and Forsyth Counties will be held at the First Christian church, Greensboro, N. C., Thursday, March 4, at 10:00 A. M. The morning session will be given to speaking, singing and intercession; the afternoon to the training of local workers. A great conference is expected.

North Carolina Christian Conference Workers, Raleigh Christian Church, Raleigh, N. C.

My dear Friends:

I rejoice with you to see this day, and though absent from you in body I am with you in devotion, in intercession and in spirit. I believe with Rev. J. Campbell White that "we are now entering into the greatest era of Christian activity that the Church has known since apostolic days." All churches seem to be moved with a conviction that the hour has come for a world-wide expansion of Christianity. Thank God our dear Christian Church not only shares this conviction but is being stirred, as it has never been stirred before, with a holy zeal to not only do its part, but lead others in sacrificial service and offerings for the Kingdom.

There is every indication that in these past two or three years God has been bringing the peoples and nations of the earth with judgment. And, says Isaiah 26:9, "When thy judgments are in the earth the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." I am praying for you today, my brethren and sisters in service, that you, and through you, our entire Conference and all the people thereof, shall learn righteousness in this awful time when He, through His judgment, is calling us to go forward in a Movement to secure Men and Millions for His service.

J. O. ATKINSON.

CHRISTIAN UNION DAWNING

Our Christian Church believes in Christian union and will rejoice to know that a plan has at last been evolved looking to its consummation. I was planning to attend the meeting of the Interchurch Council on Organic Union in Philadelphia, February 3-6, which drafted this plan and had already engaged my room, when a letter came from Dr. F. G. Coffin to the effect that little would be accomplished at the meeting and that he intended to go. I am glad he was there. It would have been a tragedy indeed if we had not been represented in this gathering, since we were not in its initial meeting in December a year ago.

But even as keen a discerner as Dr. Coffin was in error as to the results to be achieved at the recent meeting, which goes to show that a new spirit has come to the earth and to the Churches. A plan of union was adopted. It is hereby printed in full:

INTERCHURCH COUNCIL ON ORGANIC UNION

The Interchurch Council on Organic Union, composed of official representatives from eighteen denominations, met in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, February 3-6, 1920. One hundred and thirty-five delegates were registered.

The Council spent several days in consideration of a Plan for Federal Union recommended by an Ad Interim Committee appointed at an Interchurch Conference in Philadelphia, December 1918. This Plan, with some slight amendments, was approved.

The Plan provides for autonomy in purely denominational affairs, each constituent Church reserves the right to retain its creedal statements, its form of government in the conduct of its own affairs, and its particular mode of worship. Each Church elects, through its supreme governing or advisory body, an equal number of ministers and lay members, on a pro rata basis according to communicant membership, to a Council which is to meet biennially. The Federal Union is to be known as The United Churches of Christ in America.

The Council has power to harmonize and unify the work of the United States, particularly the consolidation of their missionary activities, and it shall undertake inspirational and educational leadership under the powers delegated to it by the constituent Churches.

Among the presiding officers at the Council were Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., LL. D., Stated Clerk of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Bishop Luther A. Wilson of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Paul de Schweinitz, D. D. of the Moravian Church.

The Plan of the Union is to be submitted for consideration and approval to the eighteen denominations represented in the Council and also to other Evangelical Churches, as the Ad Interim Committee, appointed by the Council may determine.

For the first time in the history of American Evangelical Churches, a definite movement for actual organic union has been started by Protestant Churches, such as the Baptist, Congregational, Disciples, Methodist Episcopal, Moravian, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian, Reformed and other denominations.

The officers of the Ad Interim Committee, which is to be known as The American Council on Organic Union, are:

Rev. William H. Roberts, D. D., Chairman; Rt. Rev. Ethelbert Talbot, D. D., Vice-Chairman; Rev. Rufus W. Miller, D. D., Secretary, 15th & Race Sts., Philadelphia, Pa.; Rev. David G. Downey, D. D., Historian; Mr. Edward H. Bonsall, Treasurer.

PLAN OF UNION

Adopted by the American Council on Organic Union of Churches of Christ

Held in Witherspoon Hall, Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 3-6, 1920

"This Council instructs the Ad Interim Committee to present the Plan to the supreme governing or advisory bodies of the several communions in such manner as the Committee shall devise and at its discretion to such other evangelical denominations as may not here be represented."

William H. Roberts, President, Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rufus W. Miller, Secretary, 15th and Race Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

PREAMBLE:

Whereas: We desire to share, as a common heritage, the faith of the Christian Church, which has, from time to time, found expression in great historic statements; and

Whereas: We all share belief in God our Father; in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Saviour; in the Holy Spirit, our Guide and Comforter; in the Holy Catholic Church, through which God's eternal purpose of salvation is to be proclaimed and the Kingdom of God is to be realized on earth; in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament as containing God's revealed will, and in the life eternal; and

Whereas: Having the same spirit and owning the same Lord, we none the less recognize diversity of gifts and ministrations for whose exercise due freedom must always be afforded in forms of worship and in modes of operation:

PLAN:

Now, we the Churches hereto assenting as hereinafter provided in Article VI do hereby agree to associate ourselves in a visible body to be known as the "United Church of Christ in America," for the furtherance of the redemptive work of Christ in the world. This body shall exercise in behalf of the constituent Churches the functions delegated to it by this instrument, or by subsequent action of the constituent Churches, which shall restrain the full freedom at present enjoyed by them in all matters not so delegated.

Accordingly, the Churches hereto assenting and hereafter thus associated in such visible body do mutually covenant and agree as follows:

I. Autonomy in purely denominational affairs.

In the interest of the freedom of each and of the co-operation of all, each constituent Church reserves the right to retain its creedal statements, its form of government in the conduct of its own affairs, and its particular mode of worship:

In taking this step, we look forward with confident hope to that complete unity toward which we believe the Spirit of God is leading us. Once we shall have co-operated wholeheartedly, in such visible body, in the holy activities of the work of the Church, we are persuaded that our differences will be minimized and our union become more vital and effectual.

II. The Council. (How Constituted.)

The United Churches of Christ in America shall act through a Council and through such Executive and Judicial Commissions, or Administrative Boards, working ad interim, as such Council may from time to time appoint and ordain.

The Council shall convene as provided for in Article VI and every second year thereafter. It may also be convened at any time in such manner as its own rules may prescribe. The Council shall be a representative body.

Each constituent Church shall be entitled to representation therein by an equal number of ministers and of lay members.

The basis of representation shall be: two ministers and two lay members for the first one hundred thousand or fraction thereof of its communicants; and two ministers and two lay members for each additional one hundred thousand or major fraction thereof.

III. The Council. (Its Working.)

The Council shall adopt and promulgate its own By-Laws and rules of procedure and order. It shall define the functions of its own officers, prescribe the mode of their selection and their compensation, if any. It shall provide for its budget of expense by equitable apportionment of the same among the constituent Churches through their supreme governing or advisory bodies.

IV. Relation of Council and Constituent Churches.

The supreme governing or advisory bodies of the constituent Churches shall effectuate the decisions of the Council by general or specific deliverance or other mandate whenever it may be required by the law of a particular state, or the charter of a particular Board, or other ecclesiastical corporation; but, except as limited by this Plan, shall continue the exercise of their several powers and functions as the same exist under the denominational constitution.

The Council shall give full faith and credit to the authenticated acts and records of the several governing or advisory bodies of the constituent Churches.

V. Specific Functions of the Council.

In order to prevent overlapping, friction, competition or waste in the work of the existing denominational boards or administrative agencies, and to further the efficiency of that degree of co-operation which they have already achieved in their work at home and abroad:

(a) The Council shall harmonize and unify the work of the United Churches.

(b) It shall direct such consolidation of their missionary activities as well as of particular Churches in over-churched areas as is consonant with the law of the land or of the particular denomination affected. Such consolidation may be progressively achieved, as by the uniting of the boards or Churches of any two or more constituent denominations, or may be accelerated, delayed, or dispensed with, as the interests of the Kingdom of God may require.

(c) If and when any two or more constituent Churches, by their supreme governing or advisory bodies, submit to the Council for its arbitration any matter of mutual concern, not hereby already covered, the Council shall consider and pass such matter so submitted.

(d) The Council shall undertake inspirational and educational leadership of such sort and measure as may be proper, under the powers delegated to it by the constituent Churches in the fields of Evangelism, Social Service, Religious Education, and the like.

VI. The assent of each constituent Church to this Plan shall be certified from its supreme governing or advisory body by the appropriate officers thereof to the Chairman of the Ad Interim Committee, which shall have power upon a two-third vote to convene the Council as soon as the assent of at least six denominations shall have been so certified.

VII. Amendments.

This plan of organic union shall be subject to amendment only by the constituent Churches, but the Council may overture to such bodies any amendment which shall have originated in said Council and shall have been adopted by a three-fourths vote.

Note: The Churches represented in the Council were the Armenian, Baptist, The Christian Church, Christian Union of United States, Congressional, Disciples, Evangelical Synod of North America, Friend (two branches), Methodist (Primitive), Methodist Episcopal, Moravian, Presbyterian Church in United States of America, Protestant Episcopal, Reformed Episcopal, Reformed Church in the United States, United Presbyterian, Welsh Presbyterian.

"The attention of the constituent Churches is called to the fact that the assent called by Article VI of the Plan should be secured in conformity with the constitution of each constituent Church."

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

SPECIAL CONFERENCE CALLED

To the People of North Carolina:

At the request of His Excellency, Governor Thomas W. Bickett, the Honorable E. C. Brooks, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; Dr. Julius I. Foust, president of the State College for Women, and many prominent citizens, educators and others, I am, as United States Commissioner of Education, calling a conference on education in North Carolina, to meet in Greensboro, April 29 and 30 and May 1, 1920.

The purpose of the conference is to bring together representatives, citizens, men and women, from all parts of the State; State, county and city officials, farmers, laborers, merchants, manufacturers, home-makers, lawyers, physicians, ministers, editors, educators and others, to confer on the State's most important interest—the education of its people. Theme of the conference will be "The Crisis in Education in North Carolina and How to Meet It."

The discussions will relate directly to the pressing problems of education in North Carolina, the principles upon which they are to be solved, and the formulation of a program of action looking toward legislation.

To the end that the conference may have the largest possible practical results it will consist of general sessions, with set speeches alternating with periods for meetings of the several sections into which the conference will be divided for the consideration of specific problems in education.

Special invitations will be sent to certain individuals to participate in the conference, and to institutions, societies, clubs, and other organizations to send accredited representatives. But all citizens who are interested in the educational welfare of the State are cordially invited and urged to attend.

The general program, to be issued soon, will state the time and place of the general and sectional meetings of the conference, most of which will be held on the grounds of the North Carolina College for Women.

Yours sincerely,

P. P. CLAXTON, Commissioner.

A MOTHER'S MEETING

"I beg your pardon," said the cow,
 "But it would make you laugh
 Could you but hear the cunning things
 Said by my little calf.
 She's only three days old; you'd scarce
 Believe the thing was true;
 That darling child has called me 'Ma-a-a-a!'
 And once she murmured 'Moo!'"

"I beg your pardon," said the hen,
 A bird of lofty mien;
 "But when my chicklets tried to eat
 A large plebeian bean,
 They turned their little noses up,
 The insult made them weep!
 They looked with scorn upon that seed
 And loudly cried, 'Cheap! Cheap!'"

"I beg your pardon," said the mare,
 Whose colt was six days old;
 "About that little son of mine
 I could a tale unfold.
 I asked him if he thought 'twould rain,
 It was but yesterday:
 He looked me in the eye and smiled,
 And said, distinctly, 'Neigh!'"

"I beg your pardon," said the dame
 Whose child had lived a year;
 "Than mine your babes are younger far.
 Much smarter, too, I fear.
 I hate to tell the horrid truth,
 Yes, 'tis the thing to do:
 My great big baby's never said
 A single thing but 'Goo!'" —Carroll Watson Rankin.

TOM TABBY

Tom Tabby had been kept in the yard all day, and managed to dart into the kitchen when the fire was burning brightly and the kettle was on the stove to boil for tea.

Tom's nose was very cold, and his bones were a little stiff through trying to sleep on a box of coke, for a box of coke has rather too many knobs to make a cosy bed. But why he chose so hard a place to lie in is more than I can tell you, because out in the coachhouse there was a fine, large basket full of nice, soft, yellow hay, in which one could have dozed with the greatest comfort.

Perhaps Tom Tabby was tired of that basket, for he had spent a good part of his early youth in it—he and two brothers, both of whom were very like himself.

They were three of the prettiest kittens you could have seen in a day's journey; and, indeed, a clever artist who once came that way was so pleased that he put them in a picture, which he called "Wide Awake," because Tom and his little furry brothers looked so very bright and lively.

This was in the old times when Tom Tabby was younger. But today he did not feel bright or lively in the least, and so far from wishing to be wide awake, his sole desire was to have a good, long nap, as he stretched himself with a sigh of relief on the hearthrug. He had the kitchen all to himself; Dolly, the maid, was upstairs dressing; the place was warm, and there was no one to disturb him.

So Tom Tabby fell fast asleep. He would have still slept if a cannon had gone off in the front garden, or if ten motor-horns had shrieked at the same time in the backyard. But the tiniest whisper of a baby mouse, or the softest rustle of a bird's wing would have waked him on the instant.

The daylight was fading away and the kitchen was getting darker. Very soon the firelight was playing with shadows of the chairs and table. Indeed, it looked quite night-time, and a little mouse was tempted to peep out of her home behind the woodwork. There, lying at the corner of the fender, were a few crumbs of cake. Mousie thought how nice they would taste if only she could get at them without danger.

She looked all round to make sure that everything was safe; and then, to her horror, she saw Tom Tabby dozing on the hearthrug and very near the cake crumbs.

Miss Mouse was very hungry; so with great bravery, but still with trembling footsteps, she came softly up to the fender. The cake was so good to eat and poor mouse was so hungry that for a few seconds she forgot all about the cat.

But, looking up on a sudden, she found Tom Tabby's large green eyes fixed on her with a cruel, greedy look.

"Alas!" she thought, "my life is over! There is no escape from this great monster; his eyes follow me whichever way I look. I am so stricken with fear that I cannot move. Oh, if only he would look another way, how soon would I dart to my little home!"

With these thoughts in her mind poor mousie gave up all hope. She closed her eyes as if she were about to die, and Tom Tabby made ready to spring at her.

But, hark! What was that? A loud hum like that of a drowsy bee, then a long squeak like a goose trying to sing.

Tom turned quickly. What other creature was near? The noise seemed to come from the fireplace. Just then the stream came rushing through the kettle spout, the lid danced, and the water poured over into the fire with a hiss.

Tom Tabby gave a great spring, but not at mousie. He jumped into the air with an angry snarl, for little drops of boiling water were spattering all over the hearthrug, and one or two of them had splashed Master Tom and made him skip so high with the sudden smart they gave him. Meanwhile, mousie had opened her eyes just at the right moment, and in a twinkling she was in her own little home safe and sound after her dreadful danger.

A few minutes later Dolly came downstairs to make tea. "Dear me," she said, as she laid the cups and saucers, "what can be the matter with the cat? He keeps sniffing round the fender as though he had lost something!"

And he certainly had. Nor do I believe he ever found it again. At least, I never heard of it.—Selected.

PAYING OUR PREACHERS

Christian Index, Atlanta, Ga.

When the 75 Million Campaign was in its infancy, a group of preachers in Georgia were talking about the movement one day and one of them offered this quest: "We will see, as one of the results of the campaign, that the salaries of our preachers will be increased." This was doubted by many because it was believed that the churches would feel that they could not raise the salary after they had broken all precedents in their subscriptions to the campaign.

Of course, the theory of the preacher was correct. Just the minute a church wakes up sufficiently to do a worthy part in the campaign, it finds its eyes open to the embarrassing salary of the preacher and of many other needs which all the while have been pressing for recognition. We all know that the more we gave to the campaign, the more we find it in our hearts to give for local expenses.

And so the story comes from every section of the State that churches are adding materially to the salary of the pastors. It is a good word to come from any church. We are delighted that the country churches are taking the lead in this movement. They have not been paying their pastors as well as the town and city churches, especially since the abnormal conditions of the war. But they are setting themselves straight now. A number of reports have been received recently of country churches that have gone to twice a month with an increase of four times the original amount paid the preacher.

We shall have a better year when our churches all come to this point of appreciation of actual conditions. A better paid preacher means a man who will have more time for study, more time for visiting his sick, more time for recreation. When he sits down with his family at the end of the day he will not be worrying about the actual needs of the morrow and he will be a happier leader in every way for his flock.

And one of the greatest blessings of paying our preachers a living salary is the consolation which comes to our own hearts that we have done our duty. We will find joy in the fellowship which we will have with our pastor when we can look him straight in the face and know he is well supplied for this work.—L. D. N.

VETERAN CHAPLAIN WILL TRAMP ACROSS THE EMPIRE STATE ON UNIQUE BIBLE PILGRIMAGE

A year ago Chaplain C. Benson of the 59th Infantry was hiking into Germany with the Army of Occupation. Now he is hiking across New York State from Niagara Falls to New York City on a Bible pilgrimage as the representative of the American Bible Society, of which he has become the Eastern Agency Secretary. He will make the trip in his overseas uniform, carrying Bibles and Testaments instead of hard tack and corned Willie in his knapsack.

Many thousands of men, women, young people, boys and girls, living along his route across the Empire State will treasure highly the copies of the Scriptures they receive from the soldier-preacher on his mid-winter missionary journey. He plans to sell the Scriptures at cost on week-days and to give free copies away on Sundays.

Each mayor, in behalf of the citizens of each city through which Chaplain Benson will pass, will receive from him at the City Hall a handsome Bible. He will be publicly received by the officials of many New York cities in which he previously addressed Liberty Loans mass meetings during the war. This pilgrimage will carry him through Buffalo, Batavia, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Herkimer, Little Falls, Amsterdam, Schenectady, Troy, Albany, Poughkeepsie, Cold Spring, Yonkers, and a large number of smaller cities and villages.

In each city and village through which he will pass, the Chaplain will give a Bible address, speaking in both large and small churches, Y. M. C. A. auditoriums, from the steps of City Halls, and on the streets. Hundreds of thousands of people who have never much thought to the Bible before hearing this eloquent young veteran will go home to open reverently the pages of the Word of God and to offer sincere prayers for the blessing of God on the tremendous task of the American Bible Society in its world-wide efforts to distribute the Scriptures to the waiting millions, and especially to every home in America.

At each town Chaplain Benson will enlist eleven other Christians who will accompany him to the next stopping-place on his route, where another company of believers will be recruited to continue the Bible pilgrimage.

Chaplain Benson will follow as nearly as practicable the Scriptural injunction, "Provide neither gold nor silver nor brass in your purse, nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves, for the workman is worthy of his keep." He says that on his arrival in each town he will accept the night's entertainment from the first person who invites him, whether he be a hod carrier or a millionaire—and he has often been entertained by both.

The Chaplain expects to arouse interest in the Bible cause throughout the State, and to increase not only the reading of the Scriptures but also the gifts of individuals who desire to promote the world-wide work of the American Bible Society in supplying the Scriptures printed in over 150 languages and dialects.

ENCOURAGING LETTERS

The writer went down under a cruel attack of the "flu" Wednesday night, February 4, but was able to be out about the place Monday, February 16; had a relapse and suffered worse than ever Tuesday, February 17 and some days following; but is in fine shape now and on the road to full and speedy recovery, seemingly. All this to say that it was worth being in, and bearing the bitter disappointment of missing several engagements for happy service and sweet fellowship, to receive the many, wholesome and encouraging letters from all quarters about our Men and Millions Forward Movement. Not a discordant note thus far from any quarter about the worth, merit and blessing of this great undertaking.

One loyal layman—and most encouragement thus far seems to be from laymen—writes: "Enclosed find check to cover my next three annual payments to the special Mission Fund for which I gave you my subscription, and on which I have already made two payments. I am doing this to clear the deck for our Men and Millions Forward Movement and be ready when the time comes to help put our church over the top." There is the spirit for you. That is a man tried and loyal and true who loves his church and believes that we can do things when we try.

A letter from another layman, big hearted, tried and true, says: "I am in for the Men and Millions Forward Movement for all I can do. It is the biggest and best thing the Christian denomination has ever undertaken and will do more to move us forward as a denomination than anything we have ever done." And our ministers everywhere, God bless them, are rallying like heroes to this bugle call to duty. It will require courage, grit and grace for many pastors because they are naturally going to find those in their flock who "want to be let alone, have had enough of money and drives and begging and such." But our pastors have never failed in a real time of responsibility and opportunity. And they will not now. All pastors thus far heard from are hopeful, determined, encouraged and are praying that our Heavenly Father will bring this great thing to pass.

It has brought joy unspeakable to the writer's heart to hear of the wonderful Conferences at Suffolk, Columbus, and Wadley. Dr. Harper, with his natural talent and instinct for organization, seems to have come into the Kingdom for such a time and opportunity as this. Rev. C. B. Riddle's power of publicity is being brought into play with telling results. Superintendent C. D. Johnston, of the Orphanage, is attentive and efficient in every business detail of the Movement. Drs. N. G. Newman and J. W. Harrell are using the Conferences as great occasions and opportunities for bringing home to the hearts and minds of our leaders the necessity of consecration and the prayer-life if we are to achieve in this task for the Master. And Treasurer C. D. West is faithfully keeping the money end of the situation straight and correct. Surely the work goes well, and there is reason for all to take courage and press forward in this our greatest undertaking for the Kingdom.

"Men and Millions for the Master," is a slogan that should inspire all to go forward, and God helping us under this sign we will come to victory.

J. O. ATKINSON.

FROM FEAR AND DREAD TO ACTIVITY, EASE, AND ACHIEVEMENT

I am sure that when many of our pastors and secretaries shall see the quota for their churches in our Men and Millions Forward Movement, they are going to feel very much as did an acquaintance of the writer in the Baptist Church who was talking with the writer recently: An accidental acquaintance with the Baptist brother brought a bit of interesting information. He belonged to a small country church, few in numbers, weak in resources, and quite inactive in church service. It fell to this brother's lot, by an appointment which he could not refuse or put upon another, to be Captain of the team of three in putting on the campaign in his church. He had never done such a thing before in his life and was unprepared and untrained for the task. The quota for his little church ran up into the thousands and not only startled and amazed him but frightened him into a terrible dread and fear. He lived for quite a number of weeks in this disagreeable frame of mind, dreading his task and unable to get a faith to believe that it could be achieved. Finally he decided to put the matter to a test at any rate, and do his part and have it over with before the week came for the drive in other churches. He had stood that fear and dread about as long as he well could. He took his automobile early one morning and began his canvass, going from neighbor to neighbor; and to his utter astonishment and amazement by three o'clock in the afternoon, he alone had put his church "over the top," independently of and in addition to what the other two members of the committee in his church had done. And when the total was added, they had gone far "over the top," to the joy of the entire church membership and to the abundant relief of our timid and fearing captain. He declared to this writer that that was the easiest task he had ever done in his life and then he added, "the most glorious also."

I believe sincerely and devoutly that if we can get one layman in every church in the Southern Christian Convention to be amazed, to dread, to tremble and to fear before this great task, and then out of that heart of fear and amazement, he shall devoutly ask God's help and God's strength and one day set himself to the task, there is not a church amongst us that will not go "over the top" with ease, with joy and with great gladness.

I notice this item in the Biblical Recorder of January 21, which is typical of what has happened and is only one of hundreds of the same type and it seems to me that this should nerve some of our men and women to activity in the task before us:

"Miss Ida Durham writes from Efland, N. C., that when their church was told what they were expected to do for the Campaign they felt they could not raise the amount. However, they went over the top and also learned a lesson that by first going to God in prayer they could do anything."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MARCH 14, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject: John on the Isle of Patmos.—Rev. 1:4-18.

Time: A. D. 96.

Place: Isle of Patmos.

Golden Text: Jesus Christ is the same yesterday and today, yea and forever.

Additional Reading: Isaiah 6:1-8, Rev. 2:1-3, 22.

"I am the Alpha and Omega, the first and the last!" This lesson of John's message to the churches is a glorification of Jesus Christ. And the gist and heart of it is found in the golden text: "Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever."

A Time of Great Change

In a short period we have lived through the greatest transformation the world ever knew. There has been a reshaping of the map of the world in which age-old autoeracies and empires have been effaced while a dozen infant democracies have come to take their places. Czars and kings that threatened to outhrod Herod have crumbled before our eyes and instead of the Hohenzollerns, Hapsburgs and Romanoffs we have young, autonomous governments striving to get on their feet.

While the boundaries and government of our own great nation have not changed with the war, still we have not been without our social and economic transformation. It is said that the war made 200 millionaires but it is equally true that the war made 2,000,000 paupers. Prices and wages have striven with each other in such a seesaw fashion that they are rarely in the right proposition to promote comfortable living. Stocks and securities in the business world have fluctuated so that business men are not surprised at anything.

Number of Sunday Schools Decline

This unsettled atmosphere of change has also invaded the Sunday school. According to the "Year-Book of Churches for 1920," just published by the Federal Council of Churches in America the churches of our country show an increase in membership for the past year of 580,366. Whereas the actual decline in the number of Sunday schools of all kinds in the country was 10,537. And the decrease in membership was 3,644,132. While these figures are not complete in that all Sunday schools have not reported, and while there has been no decline in the Sunday schools of our Conference, still it shows a tendency in Sunday school work in the country that we must face and solve. Every school in the State must undertake the individual responsibility of building and spreading its influence so as to make up for this collective loss. Never in all its history has the Sunday school had such a challenge as 1920 sends out to make up this deficit!

Christ—the Unchangeable Rock on Which to Build

What a relief from such transformation and change to know that there is one thing in life that never changes! How comforting to know that in the foundations of this rocking world one stone is steadfast. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MARCH 14, 1920

J. Vincent Knight

"Patience and its Rewards." I Cor. 13:4-7; Luke 21:19.

The topic might have been stated—"The thing most men do not have." There can be no patience unless back of it is found a real love for the thing with which we have to deal. We often hear the expression: "I have no patience with this or that." The thing we really mean is, that we do not care very much for the thing with which we find the difficulty. This lack of patience is not confined to the lower classes of men, for even in our National affairs the same difficulty exists.

Patience a God-Like Characteristic

God is patient because He is love. He is patient with the short comings of mankind. The world of sin that lies at his feet. He loves us, and is patient with the things we do. From the beginning, mankind has been prone to sin, and commit evil doings, and God has not executed judgment or meted out justice, but has through His patience given mercy in its stead. The Christian who is most like him will be patient with even those who seek to do him a personal injury, and in a time of greatest perplexity will possess those God-like characteristics, patience, loving, kindness, gentleness, goodness and love.

Patience Deals Gently With the Other Fellow

The wrong that is hardest to overcome is the individual one, and the hardest injury to cure is the personal one. To overthrow the wrong and cure the injury requires much patience. The sacred writer who commanded the servant to obey his lord, also commanded the Lord to be patient with his servant. Men in a measure have forgotten this divinely inspired message and move by oppression and compulsory methods. In some cases the plan works, but in most cases it is absolute failure. The patient, long-suffering, forbearing, Christian finds it a pleasure to deal gently with men.

Finding Its Great Reward

Patience finds its reward in one's reputation. It matters much what others think of us, for that governs to a great extent what we are. Even the world loves a person who is patient, long-suffering, gentle and good, and the reward that comes is that of a good name. It also finds its reward in soul satisfaction. The soul that is kept saved is a soul of peace, and we are commanded to possess our souls in real patience. The most complete satisfaction the soul can have is to be willing to wait God's way with it. Then, too, patience finds its great reward in Christian character. Our impatience and restlessness may lead others to question our religion and true character. In after life, patience finds the once tender youths full grown and honored in old age. Our character will be in a measure the great result of our patience.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—RICHARDSON

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom and mercy, to remove from us our beloved friend and member, Brother W. F. Richardson, Therefore Be it Resolved:

First. That in his death Burton's Grove Missionary Society has lost a member full of good works, whose life was an inspiration to us all.

Second. That while deeply lamenting the loss of our departed brother, we will ever cherish his memory here and while we commend his spirit to the God Who gave it, we are consoled in the fact that he has been called from his labors to the presence of Him Who will provide such refreshment as are suitable to his immortality.

Third. That we extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy, in their hour of grief, with the assurance that in memory of our brother we will be ever ready to extend to them sympathy and help whenever and wherever it may be needed.

Fourth. That these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, that the family be furnished with a copy and that a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

KITCHEN

Francis Merret Kitchen was born June 9, 1840, in Southampton County, Virginia, and died at his home, in the same County, February 4, 1920, aged 69 years, 7 months and 25 days. He was married the first time to Mrs. Victoria Travis. To this union were born five children, three of whom are still living: Mrs. Etna Jones, Charlie, and Edgar Francis Kitchen.

He was married a second time to Miss Ida Dunlow. One son, David Kitchen, by this marriage, survives. Besides a widow and the above mentioned, he leaves also a step son, J. E. Travis, Wilmington, Del., and ten grandchildren, and one half brother, Lawrence Morris. He was a member of Barrett's Christian church. Funeral service at the home, conducted by the writer.

W. D. HARWARD.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—WILLIAMSON

Whereas, Almighty God hath called unto Himself our beloved friend and brother in Christ, Mr. Reps Williamson, and whereas, we who had the privilege of working with Brother Williamson in the church and knowing him as a friend do hereby mourn his loss, therefore, be it Resolved:

First. That we take this means of expressing our grief and our knowledge of our loss and our sympathy for those Brother Williamson has left behind. We wish to commend his life among us because of his genial personality and his unselfish devotion to his fellow men and to Christ.

Second. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy sent to the family.

WINNER

Deacon Frank Winner, son of William and Elizabeth Winner, was born in Bordentown, N. J., August 18, 1850 and died at his home in Nansemond County, Va., January 18, 1920, at the age of 69 years and 5 months. He married Miss Berthania Cox in November 1873. His wife and five children survive him: Morris S. Winner, Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. R. B. Odom, Driver, Va.; Walter Winner, Missess Margaret Elizabeth and Jennie Lee Winner, Driver, Va. He leaves eleven grandchildren. Brother Winner was a worthy deacon and efficient superintendent of the Sunday school in Berea Christian church. He was modest and humble, faithful and submissive in all his religious activity. A few moments before his sudden death he conducted the usual morning family devotions in his home. He went from the altar of prayer to the throne of glory. How beautiful to pray and then be taken into the arms of Jesus. Funeral service conducted by the writer, assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley.

I. W. JOHNSON.

McINTURFF

Wilmer S. McInturff was born December 1, 1895, and died January 31, 1920, aged 24 years and 2 months. Brother McInturff was an excellent young man, a faithful member of Joppa Christian church, and will be greatly missed. He was born and reared in Powell's Fort, lived and worked at Linville several years until broken in health, and then went back to his old home in Powell's Fort where he gradually grew worse until the end came. He is survived by his widow and one little son, his parents, three brothers, and one sister. It is sad to say good-bye to one in the prime of life who fills such a large place in the home and in the church. May God comfort and care for the bereaved. Funeral at the home February 2, and interment in the family cemetery near by.

A. W. ANDES.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—MORING

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in His wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst Brother F. O. Moring, a charter member of the First Christian church, Raleigh, N. C., and for many years an active deacon as well as a faithful and devoted member of said church, and

Whereas, we desire to express our sincere appreciation for his long and faithful service to the church and the Kingdom; also our appreciation for his valued counsel and fellowship as a member of the Board of Deacons, Therefore be it Resolved:

That, we bow in humble submission to the will of God, realizing the great loss we sustain by his departure, and that the heartfelt sympathy of the Board of Deacons and the church be extended to his family in their great bereavement.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family, to The Christian Sun for publication, and spread upon our minutes.

Signed:

C. E. BARROW, Chairman,

KEISTER

James Keister was born March 2, 1847, and died February 15, 1920 while on a visit to Florida. His age was 72 years, 11 months, and 13 days. His wife died in 1884. Four sons survive. He was a prosperous farmer, and a good neighbor, and left many friends to mourn his death. The body was shipped to his son, John, who lives near Harrisonburg, Va., and the funeral service was held February 21, at Weaver's Mennonite church.

A. W. ANDES.

SHEFFIELD

R. S. Sheffield, Spies, N. C., died of tuberculosis February 12, 1920, aged seventy years. He was a consistent member of Brown's Chapel Christian church. The church has lost one of its best members. He leaves a wife, one son and four daughters and many friends to mourn their loss. He told the writer during his sickness that he was only waiting the Will of the Father. May God's richest blessing rest upon the bereaved family. The body was laid to rest in Brown's Chapel cemetery on February 14, funeral service being conducted by the writer.

W. N. HAYES.

CARVER

Henry Seawell Carver, Jr., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seawell Carver, was born on July 14, 1918 and died February 20, 1920, aged one year, seven months and six days. His father, Henry Seawell Carver, Sr., died May 21, 1918. The father never saw his boy. The baby carried on the shores of time for a little over nineteen months in the care and love of his devoted mother and then went to the spirit land where dwells his father.

The funeral services were conducted from the home by the writer, assisted by Revs. J. W. Harrell and T. S. Brown.

The interment was in Pine Hill cemetery, Burlington, N. C. We left the little grave a mound of beautiful flowers. May Jesus of Nazareth comfort the hearts that mourn.

P. H. FLEMING.

BREWER

Mrs. Francis Brewer and Mrs. Bertha Brewer, of the same home, died February 16, 1920. The first named was the wife of Martin Brewer and was sixty-five years of age. The second named, was the wife of Dock Brewer and was twenty-seven years of age. Both were consistent members of Brown's Chapel Christian church. Their husbands, two small children and a grandfather and his son are left in the home—one baby four months of age and one child two years old. There was but one and a half hours difference in the time of their deaths. Both bodies were laid to rest in Brown's Chapel cemetery. Funeral service was conducted by the writer.

W. N. HAYES.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—GRIMES

Whereas, it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom and mercy to remove from this world to a place of eternal joy and peace, our beloved sister, Mrs. Ellen Grimes, the oldest member of our church and Aid Society and one whose life was spent in the service of the Master and in her presence was always sunshine and good cheer.

Therefore, we, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Portsmouth Christian church hereby, offer the following resolutions:

1. That in her death our Society has lost a faithful member—one who was always abounding in good works and whose Christ-like life, shall ever be an inspiration to us.

2. That while we mourn her departure, we realize that our loss is her eternal gain and that God Who gave, has taken her sanctified spirit unto Himself, to live in perpetual bliss, in the home prepared for those who love and serve Him.

3. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones, in whose hearts she is enshrined and pray, that God may be their ever present help and comfort through life.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased; one to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy spread on the records of our Society.

MRS. D. P. RAWLES,
MRS. J. S. WRIGHT,
MRS. S. P. GORT,
Committee.

MANN

Mr. S. Vernon Mann died on February 13, 1920. Brother Mann was, I think, once a member of Christian Chapel, but for about twenty years had been a member of Catawba Springs. He was a loyal member and we will miss him. He was about forty-three years of age and leaves a wife and four children, mother and father, several brothers and sisters besides a host of friends. He died in Raleigh where he had been living for a short while. He was buried at Catawba Springs.

May the rich blessings of our Father bless and keep the loved ones left behind, in the love of God and with the blessed hope of the first resurrection out from among the dead.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to thank our neighbors and friend for their kindness and sympathy shown us during the sickness and death of our dear husband and father. May God abundantly bless each of them.

An Old Story You May Not Have Heard

A doctor, looking out from his office window in a Southern town, saw a Negro belaboring a mule that had balked in the middle of the street. After the man had exhausted himself, the doctor stepped into the street to offer some advice.

"What have you tried, Sambo?" he questioned.

"Ah done try eberyting, suh. A wallops him wif dis elub twell it frazzles. Ah done kiek him twell mah foot burts. An' I done set a fire undah him, but he only move up far enough to set fire to the wagon. Ah sure done try eberyting." Then grasping at a last hope he inquired of the doctor, "Say, boss, you ain't got no medicine would cure dis yere

"Well, Sambo, I guess I could fix it for you."

"What it cost, boss?"

"Well, we'll say fifteen cents."

The colored gentleman fished for some time through several pockets and produced several small coins. The doctor returned to his office and came back with a small phial. From this he poured a few drops into the mule's ear. Like a flash the mule was gone.

Sambo, with his eyes popping out, watched his wagon jump, a few leaps to the block, till it was lost to view. Then bending his wooly head sideways and holding his hat in his hand, he yelled: "Quick, boss, gimme a quatah's worth. I got to eateh that mule."

The Kingdom's Battle Hymn

(Tune: The Battle Hymn of the Republic)

By Mrs. C. E. Newman, Virgilina, Va.

1. Awake, arise each Christian who is loyal to the King
There's a call to duty sounding, clearly, clearly doth it ring.
If our hearts receive the message, then we all with joy shall sing
A new triumphant song!

CHORUS

- Bring your gifts unto the Master,
Bring your gifts unto the Master,
Bring your gifts unto the Master,
And save the world for Him.
2. For many years you've loitered, doing little for the Lord.
Now the time has come for action, buckle on your shield and sword.
In the strength of faith, go forward trusting in the promised Word,
And we shall win through Him.
 3. There's a word that's dear to Christians and that word is liberty.
We must preach and teach and sing it till the whole world shall be free.
And the Master's prayer is answered, that we all united be,
In one grand, glorious Church.

Scripture in Season

BEWARE that thou forget not the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commandments, and his judgments, and his statutes, which I command thee this day: lest when thou hast eaten and art full, and hast built goodly houses and dwelt therein; and when thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, and all that thou hast is multiplied; then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God, which brought thee forth out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage; who led thee through that great and terrible wilderness, wherein were fiery serpents, and scorpions, and drought, where there was no water.—Deut. 8:11-15.

“Do all things without murmurings and disputings: that ye may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, in the midst of a crooked and perverse nation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world.”—Phil. 2:14-15.

“Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? And how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent? As it is written: how beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!”—Rom. 10:13-15.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

FACING THE ISSUE AGAIN

We have already declared ourselves on the subject of more adequate pastoral support and feel that we cannot say too much along this line. Some of our churches are paying their pastors a decent salary while others are paying a pittance all too small.

The average bricklayer is now making three times what the average minister is getting. And yet we send out the unpleasant news that fewer men are entering the ministry and more entering the bricklaying business. The reason is plain. We say that a man is not honest who will not pay his honest debts. Suppose that he cannot. What, then, will you say? The man on a salary now is being hit hard, unless that salary is adequate.

The other day we sat in a car by the side of one of our good and faithful ministers. He is a young man and the Church is now getting the best of his service. "Brother Riddle," said he, "I cannot do my best in the things I am expected to do because I cannot make ends meet on my present salary." And then he added: "My Conference loaned me money to help me in College and I cannot pay it back."

A few months ago we said that a church could be dishonest with its pastor. We have not changed our opinion, but rather we have seen and heard of things to strengthen our statement. 100 per cent service and 50 per cent pay. Can an institution of justice, morality, religion, demand such? You have the answer. Where is the corporation that would demand such? Hasn't the Church been preaching to the corporations that they had no souls? Haven't we been taught that big businesses were great giants to accumulate wealth and rob the people? Surely we have heard these things, and some truth may be found in the statement. Let us see if the Church is not lagging behind a little in dealing out justice. Study this chart:

MINISTERIAL SALARIES PER CAPITA GIVING INCREASED WAGES AND LIVING EXPENSES

Note that railway wages, cost of living, wages for office help, pastors' salaries, and ministerial support were on equal ground in 1914. Something took place. Mr. H. C. L. took a hand. Railway wages took a leap at once and kept pace with the cost of living. The salary of the pastor began to increase a little, but soon fell behind and was left by railway wages between 1915 and 1916. The wages of office help goes far beyond the support of the minister. The diagram speaks for itself.

What shall we do about it? Shall we keep praying for the Lord to send laborers into the vineyard at the same salary? Will God call a man when He knows that the people will let him perish?

Back to the case cited. If our Brother had his debts paid, his Conference notes settled, he might do double the work that he is doing. The Church is losing and the Kingdom is losing. Paul said to go without purse, and too many of us are anxious to keep the preacher without purse so that we can have it ourselves. Paul was a bachelor and had no dependent relatives.

Some Facts in The Case

Poundings are all right, but a systematic living salary is better.

No church will ever pay a decent salary while the committee to set the salary is made up of men who neither receive nor pay a just wage.

The carpenter uses the same hammer for years, but the minister must have new books.

No man should say: "That was a poor sermon," until the minister is relieved of a poor salary. No man can do his best who must worry over his debts.

What young man has the aspiration to reach the place where we have permitted some of our old preachers to reach?

Shall we continue the practice of aiding our young men while in college and pay them so little when they get out that they cannot return it? And how shall we class them if they do not?

What shall we do about this thing? What would the Master have us do? Pray over it before you decide.

SHOULD TAKE ITS OWN ADVICE

The Biblical Recorder, Raleigh, N. C., seems to take editorial pleasure each week in fighting the Inter-Church World Movement. In its issue of March 3 we quote the following: "So far from keeping our people out, we fear that some of them will be driven into the Movement by the constant attacks upon it. If we assume an attitude of negation, and constantly 'nag' those who are doing their work in a way that seems best to them, though we cannot co-operate with them, we weaken our position. It is better to hit with a sledge-hammer, when necessary, than to constantly tap with a tack-hammer."

We have read all the Recorder's editorials on the Inter-Church World Movement, and personally, have considered them as "tack-hammer" blows; and the Recorder's editor must think so too, since he keeps on tapping away. We suggest that he take his own advice and use the sledge-hammer method and get the job done.

We have never declared ourselves for or against the Inter-Church World Movement. We have not committed ourselves as readers of THE SUN have no doubt observed. Hence we have no personal reasons for giving the Recorder this advice.

ARE THESE STATEMENTS TRUE?

Rev. Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, till but recently pastor of the City Temple, London, preached a sermon at the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York, Sunday, February 22 in which he declared that "20 per cent of the pastors who were with us here in the United States before the war have resigned to enter other occupations." The reason why one-fifth of all our pastors have quit the ministry since the war, according to Dr. Newton, is that "they could not preach to empty benches." "Of the 110,000,000 people in the United States," continued the speaker, "not more than 44,000,000 attend services in any religious denomination. Today there are 3,000,000 fewer children attending Sunday school than there were in the year before the war. Patriotic citizens cannot help feeling alarmed at the growth of indifference to the church."

This writer has no way of verifying the figures given by Dr. Newton, but even if exaggerated they indicate a tendency which all who care for the welfare of the Church must deplore. One thing we can verify and that is that there are vacant pulpits all about us, and a deplorable falling off in the number of candidates for the ministry.

Is it any wonder, then, that the Church is becoming alarmed, and is taking active and extraordinary steps to counteract some of these deplorable tendencies? Every patriotic citizen who really cares for his country and the Kingdom must hail with joy and a sense of relief that the churches are at last calling for Men and Millions for the Master. Every man, woman and child in the Church is at last called upon to do something for the Church, and contribute his or her part to combat the present evil and dangerous and deplorable tendency "toward Church and Kingdom indifference."

Rev. W. E. Turner, Gallipolis Ferry, West Virginia, who recently came to our denomination from the M. E. Church, desires work in the Southern Christian Convention.

Brother J. W. Fonville, a member of the Burlington church, met with a painful and almost fatal accident last Saturday by being struck by a passenger train near the station in Burlington. Brother Fonville was driving his car and attempted to cross the railroad in front of an approaching train when his car went "dead," permitting the train to strike him. He was quickly removed to the hospital, and though painfully injured, is expected to recover.

Men and Millions Forward Movement

AN APPRECIATED LETTER

Dear Brother Riddle:

Permit me to say that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is always good and have enjoyed reading it about twenty years, but must say must say that I think the issue of February 18 was the best I have ever read.

Wish to say that I am proud of and in for the Men and Millions Forward Movement and pray that it may go over the top.

Very respectfully,
C. E. JOYNER.

A GOOD DAY IN THE CAMPAIGN

Sunday morning, February 29, we had a well filled house at Dendron, Va. At the beginning of the service eight young ladies gave an exercise, "Hanging a Sign," a plea for medical missions. Then the pastor preached, emphasizing our first goal in the campaign. There was an offering of $18.81 for missions.

At three o'clock Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, delivered an address on the Men and Millions Forward Movement, and again on the same subject at the Wakefield Christian church at our night service. Brother Harrell's messages were well received, and we felt, at the close of the day, that it had been a good one in our great campaign for Men and Millions. There is evidence of a growing interest on the part of the people and our confidence is being more confirmed.

W. D. HARWARD.

TWO THINGS MOST NEEDED

To make the Men and Millions Forward Movement a glorious success, there are two things we must surely unite—prayer and service. Brethren with sincerity of heart, unceasing devotion and unwavering faith, let us come together with one mind, one accord and make our wants, our heart yearnings made known unto God. Oh! for an offering of devotion so simple, so trustful, so sincere and child-like, that there will not, cannot be any denial. With our prayers we must give our best service in time, counsel and means. If we, with the Spirit's guidance, keep in these channels of approach unto the Throne of Grace, God will hear, will give the power and the glorious results.

M. W. HOLLOWELL.

A GREAT TASK MADE EASY

Our home-made philosopher, the "Sage of Suffolk," Dr. W. W. Staley, says that it does not hurt Tom to get in the family fire wood at night provided Sam, his brother, who is due to help, will come on and do his part; but if Sam holds back, and refuses to do his part then Tom's feelings are hurt, his temper is riled and the whole task is disagreeable. Every man who has been a boy and had a brother knows that this is true. It is not the actual task that goes hard. If Tom did not have a brother, he would have brought in the family wood in his usual way and with good will. It was not the largeness of the task that hurt; it was the lack of co-operation that Tom had a perfect right to expect that hurt and hindered. That is another way Dr. Staley had of saying that co-operation makes a task easy and pleasant; the lack of it makes the task difficult and disagreeable.

Just now, and for the first time in our day, all ministers, laymen and lay-women, young and old, are called upon to co-operate in one great task for our Master. This task will not only be possible, it will be easy and agreeable, if all will co-operate—if each and every one will do his or her part.

And this writer is fully persuaded that no Christian in any of our churches, pews or pulpits, will oppose this Movement, or fail to do his or her part when the Movement is fully understood. Many have not yet understood, we have no doubt. And so there is going out every day now a stream of wholesome literature seeking to make clear to the minds of all our people what all this Movement means. And then there are going out to all our churches in the week days and on Sundays speakers, preachers and laymen, to carry the spoken message of the Movement, and make clear what it is all about, and what our dear Christian Church is trying to do.

Brethren, a whole Church is being called to its knees for intercession, and every individual member of every Church in all our Zion is being asked to do something for the Master in these trying and perilous times. Our dear Church has from its origin stood for union. We are now being tested to see if there is union in our own ranks, and a willingness on our part to become workers together with our dear Lord and His Christ. Brethren and beloved, if Christians were ever called upon to be loyal and show where they stand, that time is now.

J. O. ATKINSON.

A VERY PERTINENT QUESTION

Rev. Dr. M. T. Morrill in his "At Prayer Time" department in The Herald of Gospel Liberty, February 19 asks a question which seems to this writer most pertinent and one which he wishes CHRISTIAN SUN readers would each and all put to themselves and seek the answer thereto from their Bibles. There are two questions in fact, but they are put in one paragraph and we quote: "When will we learn that the proper use of money is a means of spiritual development? We expect our motives and conduct to have some permanent effect upon our character and the use of money falls within the moral and spiritual sphere of life. Can we ever secure a devout and spiritual church unless it is also a liberal church?" I have quoted these two questions as culminating in one which may be read as follows: "Does not liberality precede and become a necessary part of spirituality?" The writer's conviction is that if CHRISTIAN SUN readers will take this question and lay it down beside plain Scriptural teaching which may be found in a hundred places, the answer will be forthcoming.

The liberal man is he who sows liberally. The close-fisted man sows sparingly in all that pertains to the Kingdom. In this light read Paul's declaration in II Corinthians 9:6: "He which soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully." And God has seen fit whether we like it or not to condition His outpouring of blessings and benefits spiritually upon our willingness to relinquish liberally our possessions for His use. "Bring ye all the tithes, and prove me saith the Lord, if I will not pour ye out a blessing. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of Hosts."—Malachi 3:10-12.

And all of us remember the famous case of the rich young ruler who came to our Lord as being the only man who ever went from Him sorrowfully so far as we know. Our Saviour made the selling of what he had and laying it upon the altar as a condition precedent to a great blessing.

For my own part, I believe it is contrary to reason, to economy and to the laws of Almighty that our richest men are frequently the most non-spiritual. They should be, according to reason and to plain teaching of the Scripture, the spiritual lights and leaders of the community. They have never in all their lives made money or wealth. It was God who gave them both the power to get wealth and the wealth which they got. Deuteronomy 8:17, 18: "Beware that thou forget not the Lord thy God and say in thine heart, My power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth. But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth, that he may establish his covenant which he sware unto thy fathers." The man, then, who has the ability to acquire and reap such large benefits and bounties from the rich fields of the Master, should surely be the man most ready and willing to glorify the God of the field, of seed sowing and of harvest. Not all rich men, glory be, are indifferent to the Source from whence cometh their help; and a great and constantly growing number of the very rich men of our day are among the most liberal givers and are among the spiritual lights of their church and of their community. Many of the leading millionaires of America today are now tithers and have been from youth up, and many more only make the tithe the starting point as did William Colgate, the great soap maker, or the great Baldwin of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and then go on to that day when they not only give one-tenth of or one-fifth, but one-half, and in the case of Mr. Colgate in the latter years of his life, all his earnings to the service of the Master. No man has ever yet been made poorer because he divided up liberally with the Lord's work and thousands have been made richer. For God is the founder both of the moral and of the economic law, and if we could see deep enough into the root of things, we would discover that the economic, the moral and the spiritual are one because our Maker is one. God did not make one law for the business man and another for the spiritual, but He made one law for all and if it is right and wholesome and helpful to one of God's creatures to tithe and to be liberal toward His work, then it is helpful and wholesome and right for all.

In our great Men and Millions Forward Movement now confronting our Church, we desire above all things else to grow in grace and to become a great spiritual force in the world, but full well we know that we can never secure a devout and spiritual Church unless and until we have also secured a liberal Church, and then shall we learn that the proper use of money is indeed and in truth a means of spiritual development and spiritual power.

J. O. ATKINSON.

WE MUST HAVE FAITH

The Christian Church is undertaking one of the biggest enterprises in the history of the denomination. We are not as strong as some other denominations but can accomplish as much as any of our sister churches, according to our number.

To the pastors and leaders of the churches I want to say not to go to your church with a feeling that the amount asked cannot be secured. I want the word "can't" left out of our conversations during this campaign and the words, "We will try," substituted. Tell your people that we are going over the top and ask that all classes pull together in order that the work may be accomplished.

I am in my ninety-fifth year, and am less able, physically and financially perhaps than any other minister of the Church, but I want a part in this undertaking. I haven't had a new winter suit in a long time, neither have I had an overcoat in several years, but I am going to make the sacrifice a little longer and give a part to the Lord's work. For the past twenty or thirty years I have been paying my tithes, and though my annual income is very small, and I am trying to meet my current and burial expenses, yet I want to have a part in this enterprise and my name recorded among the names of the other ministers.

Now, brethren and sisters, if we will pray earnestly for this Movement we will surely go over the top. We have five years in which to pay it, and we must have faith. A little over a year ago my eyesight went back on me so that I could not read. I took it to the Lord in prayers of faith, asking that my sight might be restored so that I could read my Bible, and by means of simple treatment and some new glasses I can now read my Bible every day. I had the same experience with my hearing which was remedied by simple treatment. All this I attribute to faith for answer to prayer, which faith we must have in order to accomplish our purpose in the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Christian Church.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., pastor, 806 Taylor Street, N. W. Washington, D. C., sends us a very attractive folder relative to our membership in Washington and soliciting help which SUN readers may easily render if they will. We agree with Dr. Kendall in saying: "We can help us find your folks now in this city." Dr. Kendall then continues in his attractive prints as follows:

"Doubtless you are aware that the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention has started the work of establishing a church in Washington, D. C.

"Sometime during the month of October I was called by that board to become the pastor of the church.

"Since locating here in November I have obtained the names of eighty-five persons in Washington who are or have been identified with the Christian Church elsewhere, and we are doing our best to line them up with the work here.

"So far the work is encouraging. We are receiving new names every week, sent to us from different parts of the country by friends interested in the work here.

"This is what we need right now, if our present objective is the mobilizing of our own people here in Washington to form the basis of our work,

"We feel that surely every pastor and every member in the Christian Church must be deeply interested in the establishment of a Christian Church in the National Capital."

In concluding Dr. Kendall adds: "If in the future you should know of any who are moving to Washington, who are or should be interested in the Christian Church, let us know at the earliest possible date when they expect to arrive and where they intend to locate. It means so much to get in touch with folks when they first land in the city. We would be glad to have them communicate with us as we may be of help to them in locating a home."

Here is hoping that any SUN readers who may know of members of the Christian Church, present, past or prospective, now residing in Washington or intending to go there at any early date, will send their names to Dr. Kendall that he may mobilize them for the work which he is establishing there.

MY IMPRESSIONS OF RICHMOND

Last Sunday at the request of the Christian congregation at Richmond, Virginia, I went to that city to visit the Sunday school and preach for the people who are beginning the organization of a Christian church at that place. On my arrival, I was met by my friend and former student, John T. Kernodle, and was soon conducted to the home where I met Prof. P. J. Kernodle and wife who entertained me royally. I also met there Mrs. J. D. Kernodle of Graham, N. C., and Major Henderson, her son-in-law, who was there visiting his sick wife.

After rest and breakfast, we went to the William Fox School where the Sunday school for the Christian church was assembled. This is in a densely populated portion of the city that has recently been settled, a fine center for a new Sunday school and church.

At the Sunday school, I met several old friends of former acquaintance—D. J. Kelly, Miss Mildred Atkinson, Mrs. Artie Pierce and her son and daughter, Brother Daughtrey, Miss Boyd and Pleasant Boyd, Brother Carlton and several others. There were about thirty people in the Sunday school. They have excellent quarters in which to worship—a fine public school auditorium as well seated and attractive as that of the Elon College Chapel. A good piano for music and excellent singing by the school.

The people who constituted the Sunday school were intelligent, active in service, the singing was good, the exercises were attractive and spiritual, the interest was fine, the organization was efficient, and the future outlook for the work is promising. The men and women who have been appointed leaders in the organization are capable and have had experience. They have a hopeful, optimistic outlook. They believe in the Christian church, they believe in the work at this place, and they believe they can do their part in the new undertaking of organizing and building a Christian church worthy of the denomination.

Brother Kelly and Brother J. T. Kernodle, who attended the Men and Millions Forward Movement Convention at Linville, the former as a Four-Minute man, the latter as Captain, spoke on the Movement in the service, and pledged their loyal support. The people are interested and will not only do their part but will go far over the top in some of the drives and measure up to the full expectation and standard set for others. They certainly have good leaders for the Movement, and I am sure the people will do their full part.

At the preaching hour, 11:00 o'clock, the service was attended by more people than were at the Sunday school, though the snow was falling fast and the day was not inviting. Between forty and fifty were present at the preaching service. Several gospel hymns were sung from the new Sunday school book, and the regular church service was conducted very much as that in any city congregation of the Christian church. Just before preaching, Mrs. Brinkley, formerly of Suffolk, Va., sang a solo which was rendered according to her usual artistic manner. It made me feel that I was better prepared for the service and it reminded me of our service in song at the College. At the close of the service, practically all the congregation met the preacher and expressed appreciation and showed interest in the work. The offerings at the Sunday school amount to about $15.00 each Sunday and the general interest in the work is fine.

Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., becomes pastor and was expected to arrive in the city the day following my visit. He has a fine people to serve, a fine outlook, a big undertaking, and a worthy cause that will inspire our people to greater things in other places.

After preaching, I went with Brother and Sister Boyd to the splendid home of Brother Carlton where I was entertained royally and had the pleasure of meeting again in the flesh Brother Carlton's father whom I had known in other years at Ingram, Virginia. It was my pleasure to have prayer with him while there and he seemed greatly to enjoy the service.

My experience during the entire trip was delightful and joyous and the Christian fellowship both at the church and in the homes of the people was delightful to the soul.

SUFFOLK LETTER

I wonder if any men and women who live in houses heated by vapor, steam, hot water, hot air, or coal stoves, remember the wood-pile, just outside the yard, the ax standing by the log waiting for the willing hands to cut and split wood for the kitchen family or the family fire-place. When the snow began to fall the sound of the ax echoed from the hill just beyond the spring. The music of those sounds mingled with the spotless snow, and then flamed in the big log fire in the family room while the snow continued to fall until the wood-pile looked like an arctic hill. That fire-place was the altar of rest, religion, and domestic virtue. Gathered around that open fire-place were all the elements of home. Black mammy in the corner carding the cotton or the wool; the eldest daughter stepping back and forth to the whizzing of the spinning-wheel; mother darning sister's stockings or mending brother's torn pants; father baking his feet by the roaring fire and dozing in his big chair; others are reading or playing with their dolls. Virtue shines in that household as bright as the flame above the logs; and love is as pure as the glowing coals.

Courtship in that home is done by glances and emotions that speak the wireless message from genuine hearts. No dance-hall unions, or auto-contracts mar the sacredness of the marriage bond. No place on earth is so virtuous and honest as that one-room home. Obscene language, immodest practices, vile associations have no place in that house of purity where mother's presence keeps out social evils.

Mother is the last one to retire. To see her kneel by her bedside, in her white robe, and watch her, from the trundle-bed, climb into her big feather-bed was to see an angel as pure and sweet as Jacob saw ascending the ladder from earth to heaven from his pillow of stone. From such homes have come the Lincolns, the Gradys, the Edisons, the Rockefellers, the great men and women of the world. Virtue is its own reward. Home is the citadel of the nation. But those days and those conditions are gone. Character must be built under new conditions and it can be done. It is Men and Millions now. It is men surrendered to God's use and man's. It is money surrendered to God's use and man's. The unselfish life can be built in the midst of pleasure and luxury. Faith may grow in the mansion and virtue may flourish in the hotel. God must be regnant in the life, money must be the means of helping men to serve God, and every institution fostered and conducted for human welfare deserves support. Life-recruits, Tithers, new members, the consecration of money to meet the Men and Millions allotment should inspire every member of every Church to do his or her full duty in this great campaign.

W. W. STALEY.

KNOCKERS

Evangelist Biederwolf has said: "God created the dog, the cat, the tiger, the bear, the wolf, the snake, the lion, and the skunk, then took the thin slimy substance he had left and made a knocker." He also says: "The knocker cans his brains in the hull of a mustard seed; plays the disreputable part of a coward, and advertises the thing he is knocking."

Are you knocking the Men and Millions Forward Movement? Are you a Thomas and doubt the wisdom of it? Are you a Demus and turning to worldly things? Are you a slacker, refusing to line up with the Church where you are? Are you a quitter and declare you will quit the Church if you have to help this cause? In other words, are you one of those who seem especially interested in knocking the Movement as a whole? If so, keep it up, the Church appreciates the advertisement you are giving this Movement.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

CHILDREN'S HOME TO SOON BE BUILT

The Superintendent has been out of the office most of the time for the past three weeks in the Men and Millions Forward Movement work and quite a number of letters have failed to be answered, and the work in the office is badly behind.

When the Superintendent is out the office work ceases till he returns but we hope to be on the job now and get everything caught up in the next week. So if you did not get an answer to your letter you may know that is the reason. We hope to get rich enough some time to have a secretary who can carry on the work in the absence of the Superintendent.

Our sixty little fellows have been in good health during the cold weather and have only had one sick child. Little Fred Jones has had pneumonia and has been quite sick but is improving some now, we are glad to say.

It is remarkable how healthy the children are when we have so many together. But the good Lord is very kind to us anyway.

Our Children's Home fund still grows and it now amounts to $5,199.81. It will take $25,000.00 to build and equip this building if the Trustees decide to build a two story building. We want to commence work the first of April. How much do you want to invest in this building? Why can't all the Baraca Classes take a special offering for this fund? Why can't the Ladies' Aid Societies make a special offering for this work too? We would not want to build this building unless the good women had a part.

The good women always come to our rescue when we are in need. We called for sheets and counterpanes last year and the response was beautiful indeed. In fact in every instance the good women have always done their part.

Brother T. E. Brickhouse was the first man to make the proposition to give $500.00 on the Children's Home fund. Last week we received his check for that amount. Brother Brickhouse is a warm friend to the little orphans and our little folks are often reminded of him by the kind deeds he does for their happiness.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

(Deferred from last week)

Dear Uncle Charley:—Enclosed find a dime for the orphans. We have moved to Gibsonville. I am going to school and like very much. My teacher is Miss Ida Guyir. I am in the fourth grade. Love to all the cousins.—Mae Thomas.

I am glad that you enjoy going to school. You must study hard and make good grades.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—Enclosed find a dime for February. I have a little brother eleven months old, his name is Irvin. I am going to school. My teacher is Miss Moore. I like her fine. I am in the first grade. Love to all the cousins.—Hermon Thomas.

You must take good care of that little brother. He will be large enough to go to school with you some day. Won't you be glad?—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—As I did not write last month I will put in twenty cents for this month. I am glad some more boys have found the band of cousins as I love to read their letters. It makes me feel like the little ones are getting help. Your affectionate friend.—Dock Spivey.

We are glad to have your letter this week. We have several this week. I am glad our little folks are keeping the corner filled.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am sending my dime for this month. I am glad other boys and girls have joined the band. I hope the cousins are well.—Hoyle Spivey.

I hope many little boys and girls will join the corner this spring. It helps to keep the corner bright.—“Uncle Charley.”

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—I want to join the band of cousins. I am twenty months old and weigh thirty-two pounds. Now, don't you think I'm a great, big little boy? I hope the little cousins have escaped the “flu” this time. I'm enclosing check for 50 cents for January and February. With love and best wishes to you and the cousins.—R. F. Brown, Jr.

You are the little boy that fell in love with me when I visited your home. I remember you all right and you are a fine little man.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—We are sending one dollar to the corner. Our baby brother is just getting over the pneumonia. Hope you and the cousins are well. Love to all.—James E., Jennings, and Jack Hargroves, Jr.

Glad your baby brother is getting well. We have a little boy who has pneumonia, but is better.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—We are little brothers and want to join the band of cousins and help the little boys and girls who have no father and mother. Enclosed please find a dime for each of us.—Clarence and Loyd Piper.

We give you a warm welcome to the corner and hope you will write often.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I guess you will be surprised to get a letter from me. I am the little girl that you nursed at the Convention. I want to join the band of cousins. I am sending my dime. I am five years old. With best wishes for you and all the cousins.—Alma Ruth Duke.

Yes, I remember you well. You are a pretty little girl and I fell in love with you while in Georgia.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I guess you remember me. I was at the Convention. I enjoyed it so much. Will close by sending you my dime. Would be so glad to come to see you and the cousins.—Paul Duke.

Hope you can come to see us some time and see the little boys and girls.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl ten years old and want to join the band of cousins. I like to read the children's letters in THE CHRISTIAN SUN very much. I am sending you twenty cents for the little orphans. Hope they will get it all right. I go to Oak Level school and am in the fourth grade. My teacher's name is Miss Grace Ferrell. I like her fine. With love to you and the cousins.—Florine Strange.

Real glad to have your letter this week and have you join the band of cousins. You must write often.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I want to join the band of cousins. My papa is a farmer and when I am old enough I want to be just like him. I go to Oak Level High School and am in the second grade. My teacher's name is Miss Greenwood. I am sending twenty cents for the cousins and hope to send more soon. With love and best wishes for you and the cousins.—James Strange.

We are real glad to have you join the band of cousins and want you to write often.—“Uncle Charley.”

NOTHING TO DO

I know a little girl
About as big as you,
Who sighs ten times a day:
“I don't know what to do.”

She has new toys and games,
A baby brother, too,
And yet she still complains:
“I don't know what to do.”

The baby likes to romp,
And mother's busy, too;
Now can't you think of something
That this small girl can do?

TAME ANIMALS I HAVE KNOWN

A thick-fleeced lamb came trotting by.
“To have,” said he, with ne'er a stop,
“My wool clipped off at the ba-ba shop.”

I asked the dog: “Why all this din?”
Said he: “I'm fashioned outside in,
And all my nights and days I've tried
My best to get the bark outside.”

A hen was cackling loud and long.
Said I to her: “How strange your song!”
Said she: “'Tis scarce a song; in fact,
It's just a lay, to be eggs-act.”

I asked the cat: “Pray tell me why
You love to sing?” She blinked her eye.
“My purr-puss, sir, as you can see,
Is to a-mews myself,” said she.

I asked a cow: “Why don't you kick
The man who whips you with a stick?”
“Alas! I must be lashed,” said she,
“So I can give whipped cream, you see!”

AN UNNAMED STATION

It was late afternoon, at the hour when business men and belated shoppers as well as the motley crowd of toilers seek their homes, and the suburban car was filled to its utmost capacity. Sitting side by side in one corner were a stout, overdressed woman and a very little boy. The woman had so often endeavored to obey the harassed conductor's adjuration to “sit close” that her voluminous skirts quite overspread the child's dangling legs and feet, leaving visible little more than a small, patient face set around by a fringe of cropped yellow curls and lighted by a pair of large, serious blue eyes. One could but wonder that the woman seemed to give him no attention. He must have been tired with the long, noisy ride. Why did she not take him on her lap and cushion his head upon her ample shoulder?

Singly or in groups the passengers began to leave the car at the various street crossings, until there was left, besides the woman and child, only a young woman in black, with a beautiful, sad face. At length the stout woman pressed the signal button, and the car came to a stop. Halfway to the door, she heard the conductor calling after her: "Lady, you've forgotten your boy."

"My boy! What 'cher mean? I've got no boy!"

The man stared. "Whose is he, then? He's been on along with you ever since we left the car barn. Looks to me as if you meant to shake him."

"Me! Shake him!" The woman choked with indignation. "I never saw the kid before in my life!"

Still incredulous, the conductor addressed the child: "Ain't she your mother?"

"O no, sir!" The clear little voice sounded as "pipes o' Pan." "Mamma's gone to heaven. That's where I'm going—to find her. Here's my penny. I tried to give it to you, but you didn't see. Will you please tell me when we get there?"

The man gazed about him helplessly. "What d'ye know about that?" he muttered. Then, with a queer catch in his throat: "I'm sorry, kiddie, but heaven is not on our line."

There was a rustle of garments, a soft, breathless rush, and the woman in black had the child in her arms. "Tell me all about it, darling. What is your name, and where do you live?"

"My name used to be Dickie, but it's Fifty-seven now, and I live at the asylum. A man took me there after my mamma went away. There are lots of little boys and girls, but no mammas there. Nobody kisses me good-night or tucks me up in bed or hears me say my prayers. Have you ever been to heaven, lady, and is it far away?"

"I have never been there myself, dear, but I had a little boy who went. I know you could never find it alone."

"That's what my mamma said—to wait. But I'm so tired waiting."

"I am tired, too, waiting—for my little boy. Dear, will you come and live with me, so that we can wait together?"

The blue eyes gazed for a long, silent moment into the other eyes of tender brown. A look of utter trustfulness stole over the childish features, a pair of little arms twined about the neck of the lovely lady, and the curly head sank upon her breast.

The conductor drew his sleeve across his eyes. "I mistook," he murmured under his breath. "Heaven ain't named on our books, but it's sure on the line, after all!"—Selected.

WHO MADE THE FLAG?

A flag was raised over the Jamestown worsted mills. From the owners of the mill I learned, says a writer in the Philadelphia Ledger, that:

The flag was made of wool from American sheep—
Sorted by an American.

Carded by an Italian.

Spun by a Swede.

Warped by a German.

Dressed by an Englishman.

Drawn in by a Scotchman.

Woven by a Belgian.

Supervised by a Frenchman.

Inspected by an American.

Scoured by an Albanian.

Dyed by a Turk.

Examined by an Irishman.

Pressed by a Pole.

Where else could this be true except in the "land of the free and the home of the brave"?—Exchange.

A Complete Outfit

"Say, waiter," the peeved diner exclaimed, "a steak that is like a piece of leather is bad enough, but why do you bring me a knife that is as dull as a hoe at the same time?"

"Well, sir," the waiter explained kindly, "you can use the steak to strop the knife on, and then you can use the knife to cut the steak."—Country Gentleman.

Hit a Draft

In Savannah, Georgia, Bill Donovan, baseball manager, had a dusky-hued waiter at the hotel by the name of Sutton. Bill had to reproach Sutton more than once for a lack of agility in arriving with the food. Sutton promised to improve. One morning he brought in a consignment of griddle cakes that had gone cold.

"What do you mean," said Bill, "by bringing me in cold cakes?"

"Well, I'll tell you, boss," said Sutton, "I brung them cakes in so fast that I guess they hit a draft."—New York Globe.

Don't forget that the Southern Christian Convention meets in Raleigh, N. C., April 27-30, 1920. If you are a delegate, plan to attend.

Mrs. John T. Milteer—I don't want to miss a copy of THE SUN as I feel like I can't do without it in my home.

REV. A. VICTOR LIGHTBOURNE, CONVENTION EVANGELIST

CHRISTIAN SUN readers have already been notified by the Chairman of our Evangelist Committee, Dr. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Virginia, that Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne was now at the disposal of our pastors and churches for evangelistic work. The Southern Christian Convention at its last session authorized the Board to secure an evangelist, and, in keeping with this decision, the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention decided upon Brother Lightbourne as the man and now as the time to begin the work. It is useless to say that Brother Lightbourne's methods as an evangelist are safe, sane and commendable. The Board would not have elected him had he been otherwise.

He will measure up in any congregation as a faithful and successful evangelist. Franklin, Virginia, had him in October, and Elon College had him in January, and at both places he not only won the hearts and the admiration of the people, but was wonderfully blessed in deepening the spiritual life of the community and in the Master's service; for many decisions for Christ and the Kingdom were made. Any churches, rich or poor, strong or weak, needing the services of an evangelist should write immediately to Dr. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Virginia, as dates are being made for Brother Lightbourne's meetings, and we wish to keep him busy.

CITIZENS OF TWO WORLDS

This world is so full of beauty and admirable things that we like to live in it. It is our first home and we like it because we drew our life from it. It is great stage where we made our first appearance and acted our little part in the drama of life. Upon this stage but once we play and then pass off and give place to others. They, too, may learn much by our failure and success. So before we take our departure from this world we ought to have some assurance of our future dwelling place, because it cannot be that this world is man's only abiding place. What a mysterious, anxious thought is this! One that has crowded the mind, and is now engaging the attention of vast multitudes of every age, name and condition.

You are still in this world—but the mind often runs out of its narrow resting place and takes a look by faith into the place which Jesus has gone to prepare for you. With the experience and information you already possess the imagination conceives and pictures a most lovely and beautiful home in the other world—the spiritual realm of infinite glory.

Let us remember Paul as he was caught up to the third heaven in that transporting vision, that heavenly trance when he did not know whether he was in the body or out of it. His body was in this world but his soul and mind were taking flights in celestial heights. Doubtless he had a foresight partly to the greatness and blessedness which would soon be fully realized by him. Oh, it must have been a glad, very happy day with that faithful servant who had long before fixed his faith in Jesus! Far away from Rome, and from prison, free as engaged eagle, and far away from the din and battle of this world, he had fellowship and friendship with Jesus, saints and angels in the other world. Do you wonder that he heard, while in that happy condition, unspeakable words which it was not lawful, or possible to utter? Standing on the everlasting word he was still a citizen of two worlds. Oh, the dual splendor that must have enchanted his view!

How very much more we desire to know concerning the stupendous and unknown world to which we expect to go; and with what intense anxiety are we looking that way! The curtain will not be lifted now, but in a little while may be seen as we are seen. While waiting a moment for thought on this interesting subject the imagination is active painting scenes surpassingly great; the greatness and goodness of the glory which shall be revealed to us. The life we now live in the flesh is to prepare us for immortal life in that glorified state in the unseen world. Look and listen at these comforting words: "For unto the angels hath he not put in subjection the world to come?" Some "have tasted the word of God, and the powers of the world to come."

Scientists, astronomers, and some of the great ones are now talking and writing something about what may happen to some of those planetary worlds revolving around the sun, and fear that our dear little earth will be exploded in the dreadful crash. It is pleasing to follow them as they take us through space on such grand excursions and then bring us back home again. But depending upon the promises of Him Who is the foundation of worlds, we have nothing to fear. If we are in Christ and He is in us, what have we to fear?

If you were going from this to another country you would be deeply interested in making preparation to go; you would need to study its history, and language if needed, its people—its climate, its location on the map, and learn as much as possible about it. You would also want to know the best, safest way to get there, and you would be busy and earnest in getting ready. That is why you should talk, think, write, and pray about heaven, and, because it is your expected future, permanent home and your treasures are there, and where your treasures are, there your heart ought to be also.

J. T. KITCHEN.

TOO LATE! TOO LATE!

This will be the last note sounded by many a poor soul who goes before the last great Judge without Christ. Two weeks from today this will be the thought of thousands of people in tidewater section of Virginia who did not avail themselves of the privilege offered them to hear the great prophet of God, "Billy" Sunday while he was in Norfolk. Those who have been actively engaged in trying to help Mr. Sunday in the great campaign have had a chance more than ever before to see the selfishness of both church and people, and the reason the churches will not get a greater benefit of the meetings will be written with one word "selfishness." Then the reason every individual in this entire section has not been benefitted more may be written with one word, three letters "sin." No human being can sit and hear this great prophet explain the Gospel as he does without either accepting Christ or rejecting him, being better or being worse. We who are backing the work in every way possible have been disappointed in one way at least, the little effort and small attendance from our sister churches and towns nearby. My, what great messages they have missed, how many we have failed to lead to Christ through our indifference! Yes, yes, I know they say many things about him, but believe me, they are miserable lies and only serve to down the souls of the perpetrators, they do not hurt Billy. He goes right on just the same preaching the sinless Gospel of Jesus Christ. Thousands have heard him. Thousands have accepted Christ as their Savior under his powerful gospel preaching and thousands have listened to lies and never heard him because of prejudice, my, my, too late!

Mr. Sunday's party of singers and Bible teachers are the sweetest spirited workers that it has ever been my privilege of meeting. Many Bible study classes have been organized in homes throughout the city and we expect these classes to do much for old Norfolk.

Some Facts---Ponder Them

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MARCH 21, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject: John's Vision of Worship in Heaven, Rev. 7:9-17.

Time: A. D. 96.

Place: Isle of Patmos.

Golden Text: Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honor, and power, and might, be unto our God forever and ever. Amen.

Junior Topic: A Glimpse of Heaven.

Senior Topic: The Message of Revelation.

Additional Material: Rev. 19:6-10, John 14:1-6, Rev. 7.

Today's lesson is the continuation and culmination of St. John's vision on the Isle of Patmos. It is the vision of Heaven, the Alpha and Omega, the beginning and end, the goal of all life. Here the faithful saints who were maltreated and slain on earth are glorified, dwellers in the land to come with the angels of God where Christ is the King.

The Celestial City

It is a bright picture of John paints of worship in the City of Gold. It is peopled with the innumerable multitude, countless millions of all nations and kindreds and people and tongues.

Jew and Gentile, Catholic and Protestant, Teuton and Slave live side by side in the City of Heaven. There is no thought of group prejudice, no consciousness of race distinction. No Adriatic questions, no treaties of London come up to disturb the peace and contentment of those who by a life of trouble and hardships have earned an ultimate reward.

And they are clothed in white robes who inhabit the Kingdom of Heaven, showing their purity, their freedom from sin, their redemption by the blood of the Lamb. And they carry palms in their hands as emblems of victory. What a victorious scene! Certainly the big demonstrations in Paris and London last November celebrating the armistice can not compare with this victory pageant in the glistening city where the victory is not over armies or autoerats, but over sin, vice and all the weaknesses that life is heir to.

The Picture Made Real

And what lesson has this idealistic vision of St. John for the workers in Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies in this State?

It is a goal for us to strive after, a model to build our cities and states and lives on in the constant hope to become more like the Eternal city. We cannot know what Heaven is. Indeed the Church and Sunday school must guard against spiritualist like Sir Oliver Lodge, who is now lecturing in this country, who claims a communication with the world beyond. And particularly is this necessary now when in the intellectual and spiritual upheaval of the world waves of mysticism, such as that of the ouija board are apt to sweep over the country.

Let us keep our eyes on the White City, our hands on our own, our minds on those "Who climbed the steep ascent of Heaven

Through peril, toil and pain.

O God, to us may grace be given
To follow in their train!"

"Every Day Courtesies."—I Peter 3:8-12.

It does not cost one penny to be courteous to those about us. While that is true, no creditable estimate has ever been laid upon its real value. To be courteous to others is to be kind, and helpful. Ethel Clayton has said: "Even a dog likes a little love occasionally." She is right, for back of all courtesy must be sympathy, brotherly kindness and love, with great compassion, and should be put into action by our courtesy.

Our Courtesy Should not be Spasmodic

We cannot be kind and courteous to our friends today and be something else tomorrow. We must be found each day alike, and always ready to show an act or do a deed of kindness to prove ourselves sympathetic. Our courtesies should be put in practice at home. Try it out on home people and see if they are responsive to it. Our thoughtfulness for the welfare and comfort of those about us makes life beautiful and helps the other fellow to bear his burden. Then let us resolve that our courtesies shall be every day the same.

Superiority Calls Forth Courtesy

I once knew a man who claimed to be the best qualified person in the whole community for the special line of work he was doing. He had to deal with various classes of men, some who were his inferiors, others his equals, and still others his superiors. Yet, he treated all as mere objects or subjects, and it did not take a prophet to predict his fall for the people with whom he had to deal hated him, and he paid the price for his folly. Let us learn the lesson. "No man is ever so great but what somewhere there is another who is his superior," and the safe plan is the Bible rule—be obedient, and courteous to those who are in authority so far as circumstances will admit, and then be sympathetic with the great cause of right, for the servant is not greater than his Master nor the subject greater than his Lord.

Our Courtesies Tell What We Love

A woman once said of another: "I would not speak to her if I met her in Heaven." A friend who happened to be standing by said, "Don't worry sister, you will not likely see her there." His statement was true, for our courtesy not only tells what we love, but what kind of religion we have and which way we are going. It has been said of the late Theodore Roosevelt that "his courtesy made him great, for he never passed even the most humble peasant without giving some expression of sympathy for him." After all it is not a question of whether we are great or small, but the conduct of one's life matters much.

What the world needs is respect, sympathy, compassion and help. Not laughter, jocularity and criticism, for after all courtesy is thoughtfulness of others. We are most courteous to the things we love most, and should endeavor to possess so much of the spirit of the Christ that we are always found ready to lend aid to those about us who need our sympathy.

OBITUARIES

PITTMAN

Mrs. W. T. Pittman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Riedel of Holland, Va., was called from life to her eternal reward Thursday, February 12, 1920. Death was due to pneumonia following an attack of the Influenza. After a brief illness she was taken with pneumonia on Tuesday night and died on the following Thursday about 5 o'clock.

Mrs. Pittman was an accomplished and promising young woman; a devoted Christian and church worker and will be sadly missed in various organizations of the church of which she was an active member.

She leaves to survive her a father and mother, husband and little daughter, Margaret Elizabeth, one sister, Minnie, now Mrs. J. J. Lilly living in North Carolina, two brothers, Herbert W., and Esmond R. Riedel, the former living at Seaboard, N. C., and the latter teaching school at Millboro, Va.

Funeral conducted by the pastor in the Holland Christian church. This was the first funeral service in the new church which was erected by Mrs. Pittman's father, R. H. Riedel as builder and master carpenter. Interment was made in the Holland cemetery on Saturday, February 14.

HOLT

I have just learned today of the death of Brother S. V. Holt, New Hill, North Carolina, which sad event occurred at his home on the seventeenth of February, resulting from Influenza followed by pneumonia. Brother Holt was an active member of the New Elam Christian church and not only will that church, but the entire community certainly miss this good and noble man. I can hardly realize that one so active, strong, vigorous and heroic has been cut down in the very strength of his manhood. This writer grieves with the widow and the orphans and with those dear friends of New Elam and community whose hearts are sad because of this untimely death. But our Heavenly Father doeth all things well, and He cannot do anything that is unkind or cruel or unjust. It was our Father's will that Brother Holt be taken and from this source we must get our comfort and consolation.

We thought his years of greatest usefulness were before him, but our Heavenly Father Who knows the future better than we know the present and the past, said unto him, "Come up higher" and he submissively answered the summons. He told his loved ones in going that he was all right, and I am sure that our Heavenly Father Who said, "Be thou faithful unto death and I will give thee a crown of righteousness," did not and could not fail him in that trying hour. My prayers are for the bereaved.

BLAND

At the age of twenty-seven years, three months and six days, Brother Bernie Bland, member of New Elam Christian church, died at his home, Merry Oaks, N. C., February 9, 1920, and was buried the following day in the cemetery at the church whose membership he had been a part. In his death the church and community have lost a promising young man.

He leaves a young wife, father, mother, two brothers, and two sisters. May the Lord comfort them, and keep them, and keep them ever interested in the field of service now vacated by the deceased.

Funeral servc by his pastor.

B. J. HOWARD.

HOLT

New Elam Christian church lost another of her most consistent members in the passing of Brother Samuel Vester Holt on February 17, 1920, at the age of thirty-five years, eleven months, and three days.

Only about a week was he sick, but the end came not unexpected to him, nor to find him unprepared. He leaves a devoted wife, two children—Hazel and Inez, ages eleven and eight; two brothers and two sisters. May they be ever submissive to the will of Him Who doeth all things well.

Interment was at New Elam cemetery. Service conducted by the writer.

B. J. HOWARD.

FALLIN

Edna Lucille, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Fallin, died February 13, 1920, and was buried in Bethlehem church cemetery February 14. She was two days old. Weak heart was the cause of her death.

M.

LUTER

John Frances Luter, the sixteen-months-old daughter of John W. Luter, farmer, living near Holland, departed this life on February 14, 1920 and was buried in the Holland cemetery on Sunday afternoon. Death was due to Influenza-pneumonia and at the same time both parents and five other members were afflicted with the disease and none of the family able to attend the funeral.

The writer officiated at the burial services.

The Easter Ingathering

For the pre-Easter Period and the Easter Week of Prayer, March 24-April 4, 1920

THE Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and the Inter-Church World Movement of North America, with the Commissions on Evangelism of the constituent churches, unite in urging the Christian forces of America to the proclamation at this time of the glorious evangel of the Son of God in harmony with the right which Christ gave her when He called the church the salt of the earth and the light of the world.

The world problems which we are facing must be settled through the spirit of brotherhood announced and exemplified by Jesus of Nazareth. The lust of wealth and power has caused individuals and nations to forget their responsibilities before God. Human brotherhood has been ignored and love has often turned to hate.

Let the church bring to every family and individual throughout the church the impelling purpose of the Christian message. Humanity progresses from the individual to the multitude. Social movements take on permanent and compelling power when they are born in the lives and in the service of consecrated men. When hatred dies out in the human heart, it will die out among the nations.

Let the pre-Easter period, which the church is now entering, be one of heart searching and let us imitate our Lord in His passion for the souls of men. Now as of old, let Andrew find his brother Peter and bring him to Jesus. Let the church dedicate itself without reserve to the one great purpose for which it was organized, so that on Easter Day there may be a glorious ingathering and a signal triumph of the principles of Jesus in individual, and so in social and national life

Seek ye the Lord while he may be found, call ye upon him while he is near;

Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; let him return unto the Lord and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.

Isaiah 55:6, 7.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

LIFE-DEDICATION WEEK

Life-Dedication week, March 28-April 4, of the Men and Millions Forward Movement presents a time and an opportunity to the people that should be grasped and greatly used.

During this special period an effort is to be made to line the whole membership of the Church up in a personal workers' campaign to persuade, induce, and pray that men and women may dedicate their lives to God. There is just as much reason for such a campaign as this as there is for an evangelistic campaign or revival in any local church. It is simply a time set apart and dedicated to the work of soul winning.

The Life-Dedication card reads as follows: "Believing that Christ has need of my life and service, accepting Him as my personal Savior, I covenant with Him to live by His help the best Christian life of which I am capable." This card further makes provision for application for membership in some church.

Note that the person signing the card puts his belief in Christ and realizes that Christ has need of his life and service. The signer of the card accepts Christ as his personal Savior and enters into a contract to live, not alone, but by the help of Christ. The person signing the card further signifies his intention of living a Christian life, of making application to join some church.

It seems to us that the greatest opportunity ever afforded the members of our beloved Church has presented itself. Shall we enter the open door? Shall we? Let the answer be "for His sake."

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES

The inter-Church World Movement is giving the public some interesting figures obtained from the various surveys being carried on in the various sections of the country.

This Movement has found out by surveys that the annual sick bill of the thirty millions American wage earners is over one billion dollars. The survey shows that each worker loses an average of nine days each year due primarily to sickness. This average of nine days for each person represents wages lost and the earning capacity of the nation greatly reduced.

Aside from the average obtained we quote these figures that are worth while in this connection:

"Millions more go to the maintenance of hospitals and other agencies to combat illness. Seven thousand hospitals are operated in the United States. Not only public and private funds are used to meet this expense, but the churches of America pay their share of the cost in the maintenance of denominational hospitals. For the churches have recognized their obligation to care for the physical as well as the spiritual welfare of humanity.

"This is the problem of illness as it is presented by the survey now being made by the Inter-Church World Movement. This survey indicates that the Protestant Churches, through co-operative effort, can play a large part in reducing this tremendous financial and human loss.

"Just as the missionary in non-Christian lands, it points out, sets his hospital beside his little church, so the church at home, by a concerted effort, can make the hospitals a part of its work as well as an aid to its progress.

"The survey has formulated a program as a proposal for the co-operative effort of the evangelical churches. An increase in the efficiency and capacity of existing denominational hospitals is the first provision of this program.

"Construction of 31 new hospitals is the second. These hospitals include 12 general hospitals for white people; twelve for negroes; one tuberculosis sanatorium for Arizona; four hospitals for incurables and two children's hospitals."

These facts should be important to the denominations at this time since they are considering the social question. What is the duty of the Church in the nation's better health program?

A UNITED CHURCH FOR A DIVIDED WORLD

Dr. Sherwood Eddy, now on a speaking tour in this country after some years of lecturing in all parts of the world, and a close student of world movements, declares that "The present world situation is a challenge to America." To make plain this statement, Dr. Eddy gives this brief, but striking, survey of world conditions at present:

"Japan is at the parting of ways, facing the second great crisis of her history. In Korea and Shantung she must make her choice between autoeracy and democracy, between militarism and freedom. The Japanese are one of the three great expanding and dominant races of the world. The 630,000,000 of the yellow race, or nearly 40 per cent of the world's population, may become a yellow peril, but they are today our golden opportunity to Christianize the Far East.

"China is facing her darkest day politically but her brightest day religiously. The Government is in danger of breaking down. One of four things will happen to China. There is one last chance to save the country from within, or second, the Government may fall, or third, Japan and other nations may try to divide China upon the spoils system, or fourth, she may pass into a temporary receivership under the control of a League of Nations or a group of the powers. Here is our supreme opportunity to raise up a moral Christian leadership which alone can save the nation and give it a lasting foundation for personal and national life.

"India, divided between eight great religions, 147 different languages, and 2,000 different castes, is being united into one burning unit of a new national consciousness. She is entering upon a new era of responsible government. Hinduism and the non-Christian religions cannot furnish a lasting foundation for national life. Now is the time to raise up the Christian leadership which alone can save India.

"The Near East is still the danger zone of the world. Egypt is unrest, Palestine is seething with Zionism, Mesopotamia is a bone of contention between the French and the Arab Hedjas, and Turkey is awaiting her fate. The whole Near East is under the shadow of Islam, and there is no hope apart from a Christian control. The whole Near East needs help.

"Europe, crippled by the war, is suffering from under production. Industry is paralyzed through vast areas of destruction; transportation, both by land and sea, has partly broken down; there is a serious coal shortage which has left many countries in Europe without sufficient fuel or food to face the winter. With the lack of raw materials, the disappearance of credit, and the destruction of markets, industry is threatened over wide areas. These together with demoralization of labor, the high cost of living, and lower morale as the result of the war, threaten several countries in Europe with bankruptcy, famine or revolution. The Government of Poland with its twenty-four millions is in imminent danger. Russia is in a welter of Bolshevism. Germany and Austria are largely bankrupt and demoralized. Italy is rent and divided in her industrial, social and political life, and is on the thin crust of a volcano over the difficulty of Fiume. The position of the Jugo-Slavs and the Greeks is precarious. Every country is facing a great crisis, either industrial, social, political or military.

"For the whole distracted world today there is nothing but the Christian solution adequate to meet the present world situation. There is need of a united Church to face such a divided world. There is need of an advance of the Christian forces all along the line."

NOTES

Many articles had to be left out this week. They will appear soon.

The First church, Greensboro, N. C., has subscribed $12,000.00 for a new church lot.

See Dr. Staley's official letters in this issue and heed them. He needs the information. Don't put it off.

Rev. J. W. Harrell and Rev. F. C. Lester exchanged pulpits last Sunday night. Brother Lester's message was well received.

The Peace Treaty is now the vital thing in Government circles at Washington and something definite is expected this week.

We appreciate the renewals being sent at this time. If you have been planning to send your renewal do so during this month, if possible.

If you are getting THE SUN free you will be asked to subscribe a little later. Why not volunteer and send without asking? Who will be first?

Rev. H. W. Elder, Richland, Ga., visited us last week. Brother Elder is this week with Rev. A. T. Banks in the Men and Millions Campaign work.

We regret our inability to make mention of all the sickness in the Brotherhood. So many have been sick that we dare not begin to make out a list for fear we may overlook some one.

Revs. O. D. Poythress and W. M. Jay are this week entering the field of speaking for the Men and Millions Campaign. Dr. Atkinson, Rev. Stanley C. Harrell, and others have been engaged in the work for some weeks. Others are to begin soon. The spoken message is to be carried to every church.

The German Government has been disrupted again and a new party being formed. The new Government is to be democratic and not reactionery.

Mr. John J. Parker, of Union County, has been nominated for Governor of North Carolina by the Republicans of the State.

Men and Millions

FROM ANOTHER INTERESTED READER

I have been reading of the Men and Millions Forward Movement and I think it is a good thing as it will give all members a chance to show their love to Jesus. When I received my CHRISTIAN SUN today and looked into the picture face of our Lord with His thorn crowned brow my heart was touched and I said, "Who would not do anything for His sake?" Oh, if we loved Him as we ought we would not only give our money but more of our time and constant prayers. Each individual Christian should try to win one soul this year for Jesus. The unsaved are all around us and sometimes just one word spoken will turn a soul heavenward.

So let us ever be ready to speak that word in season and out of season. The harvest truly is great but the laborers are few. All that we will have when life is over is what we have done for others.

THE TEST OF OUR STRENGTH

The Church of God is built upon one great foundation, Jesus Christ. But each one of its members is a stone in the temple. The Church is strong and beautiful only through the strength and beauty of every one of its members.

I believe that the Men and Millions Forward Movement will be the test of our strength as members of the Christian Church and help us to realize that what we have is not ours. Let each of us do his or her part in the great Movement.

MRS. E. T. HOLLAND.

NORFOLK DISTRICT MEETING

The first meeting in connection with the Men and Millions campaign for the Norfolk District was held on March 4, in the First Christian church, Norfolk, beginning at 7:30 P. M. There were seven churches represented, and five pastors present. Rev. G. O. Lankford presided.

The spirit and enthusiasm of this meeting was wonderful. Each pastor made a short talk emphasizing some phase of the work, and encouraging remarks were made by local captains and workers. The women pledged their support and declared they were ready to fall in line with their part of the work. The outstanding expression of the speakers was by prayer and faith in Jesus Christ we can and will be victorious in this great work.

The main address of the evening was made by Dr. H. W. Dowding, pastor of the Portsmouth Christian church. He spoke so forcibly on the importance of the Campaign that every hearer was fired with renewed enthusiasm and zeal for the success of this, the greatest movement in the history of our Church.

Judging from the spirit and intense interest of this meeting this district may be depended upon to do its part in our great Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention.

MRS. J. F. MORGAN.

THE LINVILLE CONFERENCE

The Men and Millions Forward Movement, for the Virginia Valley Central Conference, held at Linville, Virginia, was a great success from the program standpoint. The epidemic of Influenza, bad roads and an inclement day cut down the attendance, but there was a fair sized audience, with quite a number of churches represented. Nearly all present voted their hearty approval of the Movement and pledged their co-operation and support.

The speakers were: Rev. S. C. Harrell, Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., and Rev. J. G. Truitt, all of whom delivered splendid and impressive addresses. Dr. W. A. Harper led in the period of intercession and conducted the Conference on origin, purposes, plans and campaigns of the Movement. Mrs. W. A. Harper's message to the women was read by Mrs. W. T. Walters.

It was a day of inspiration and uplift for our people and from it will go an influence and enthusiasm that we trust will put our Church over the top.

BY THE WORD OF THEIR TESTIMONY

I congratulate Pastor R. F. Brown and his Chapel Hill congregation that he is to preach a series of sermons on our Men and Millions Movement. I devoutly trust that many of our pastors will find it within their reach to do likewise. There is no better way to overcome difficulties, dangers and obstacles than by talking of victory, triumph and mastery over them. This passage of Scripture is significant: "And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony." (Rev. 12:11). This is the way they drove Satan out of heaven: by belief in the blood, and by the word of their testimony. And we can drive out the Satan of doubt, fear, dread and indifference as to our Men and Millions Movement by talking one to another about its virtues, its blessings and its benefits. Let us talk often the one to the other about this good, great and glorious task.

J. O. ATKINSON.

IDEAS AND "MOVEMENTS"

Hon. William Jennings Bryan in a recent utterance declared, "Great ideas may originate with individuals, but great movements are possible only through co-operation." It is by acting together that great feats are accomplished, great things are brought to pass. This striking illustration Mr. Bryan uses to make clear his statement: "For instance, all the people of the globe might have walked across the Isthmus of Panama one by one without any one of them attempting to build a canal; but when forty thousand persons united their efforts under organized and intelligent leadership, the greatest engineering feat in history was accomplished." In this brief statement Mr. Bryan has gone at the heart of the matter for our Men and Millions Movement.

The idea may have originated with one, or a few. But the Movement itself is only possible through co-operation. Here and here alone, is the question:

Are we devoted enough to our Lord, and loyal enough to His Church, to co-operate in His name in the greatest task He has ever called us to?

J. O. ATKINSON.

HAVE WE LEARNED GOD'S LESSONS FOR US FROM THE WAR?

A great magazine begins its leading editorial with this question: "What nations have learned the lesson that God would have them learn from the war? In America national prohibition of intoxicating drink has been established, money is given more freely, but there is still the same extravagance, unrest and selfishness. France has suffered and at first turned her thoughts Godward, but now is again becoming thoughtless in religious matters; Russia has overthrown the Czar's autocracy but knows nothing of law and freedom; Italy and the Balkan States are turbulent and self-seeking; Turkey is dismembered but unrepentant, and is uninstructed in righteousness; Germany and Austria are defeated but are hoping some day to retaliate; England, with problems almost too great for her to grapple with, is torn by factions and disputes."

Indeed we mortals are dull pupils in the school of righteousness, even though we are chastised with blood and death and suffering. Have we learned God's lessons for us from the war?

A SHAMEFUL ROBBERY*

By Rev. J. Pressley Barrett, D. D., Columbus, Georgia.

Will a man rob God! Yet ye have robbed Me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed Thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse; for ye have robbed Me, even this whole nation.

Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in Mine house, and prove Me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of Heaven and pour out a blessing, that there shall not be room to receive it.

And I will rebuke the destroyer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts.—Malachi 3:8-11.

We are taught (in Leviticus 27:30-33) that the tithe is the Lord's, not only so, but that the tithe is holy unto the Lord—it must not be used for any other purpose. Of course, the responsibility for obeying that command is upon the men and women to whom God commits the spread of the Gospel among men. They are His stewards, not owners. They are responsible, not to men, but to God for the use they make of their money, and especially the use they make of the tithe, the part of their income which belongs to God. Of course, everything we possess, ourselves included, belongs, not to us, personally, but to God. How liberal God is with the children of men! He gives us nine-tenths for our own use and demands just one-tenth of us, which is to be used strictly for the glory of His name.

*Sermon delivered in the Rose Hill Christian church, Columbus, Ga., on Sunday, March 7, 1920, in the beginning of the Tithing Campaign in the Men and Millions Movement.

God's Call to His People

In every age God has called His people to give the tithe—His part of the increase of the labor of our hands. He gives us nine-tenths of all we make as His tenants and requires of us a return to Him of only one-tenth. That is a veritable miracle of generosity! We have no account of any other such proposition ever having been made to man. The sad part of it is that man has not been equal to the opportunity. He did not seize it and use it for His own good as well as the glory of God, for there can be no doubt that the giving of the tithe is for the good of man as well as for the glory of God.

The tithe plan is God's way of financing His Kingdom among men. It was the Old Testament way. It is the New Testament way. It was the only plan the church had for a thousand years after Pentecost. There was but one voice in the Church, as to tithing, till the coming in of the Dark Ages, when the Church lost sight of the tithe rule. Then when the Dark Ages disappeared the Church was divided as to the right of the tithe. Man's plan for financing the Kingdom was substituted for the tithe. This drove the Church to resort to all sorts of questionable and unscriptural methods for making money with which to prosecute her mission in the world. The loss of the tithe rule reduced the Church to beggary. It has been a handicap to her ministry to this day, but thank God, we are living in a day when the Church seems to be awakening to the fact that the tithe is still God's way of meeting her expenses. Indeed, God has had no other way to gain this end. If the Church shall truly and surely rediscover and again practice the law of the tithe, a new day will dawn and a new prosperity will be given to Christianity and the Church will do a much larger work in the evangelization of the world in this generation.

We may keep the tithe from God, but in doing so we are hindering the triumph of the truth. Not only so, but we are doing ourselves serious injustice. When we rob God of the tithe, we in fact rob ourselves at least in part of what He meant we should have as our portion from the labor of our hands. If this be not true, will you tell us what mean these destructive storms that sweep our country, these floods that overflow our rivers and sweep bare the farm lands, these fires that burn our cities and our forests, these hail storms that cut to pieces our growing crops, the late frosts which blight our fruit trees and our vines and gardens? Is it cruel to say that God is taking from you by force that which you refused to give to Him in the tithe? I think not.

Greed is a Bag With Holes in It

The old prophet Haggai so understood it, for in dealing with this very question, he in rebuking the people who were not willing to give God His tithe in that day, said:

"Ye have sown much and bring in little;

Ye eat, but ye have not enough;

Ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink;

Ye clothe you, but there is none warm;

And He that earneth wages,

Earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes in it."

—Haggai 1:6.

It is still a common practice with the people of God to earn wages and then put them into a bag with holes in it, and so before the wages are used, they are lost through the holes in the bag of our greed. That may be an unpleasant truth, but it is the truth today as well as it was in the days of Haggai. Under this rebuke the people refused to obey and give the tithe. Then Haggai put the facts to them in a yet plainer way when he said:

"I smote you with blasting and with mildew and with hail in all the labors of your hands; yet ye turned not to Me, saith the Lord."—Hag. 2:17.

Then, as if challenging them to a final decision, Haggai said:

"Consider now from this day and upward, from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, even from the day that the foundation of the Lord's temple was laid, consider it."—Hag. 2:18.

Again, as if explaining to the people how they might test the truth of what he was telling them, He said:

"Is the seed yet in the barn? Yea, as yet the vine and the figtree, and the pomegranate, and the olive tree, hath not brought forth; from this day will I bless you."—Hag. 2:19.

It is a clear case. The Lord challenged the Jewish people to test Him while the seed was still in the barn, and the trees were yet not in bloom. He said: "Mark it in from the twenty-fourth day of the ninth month, you shall be blessed." It was done, and so we shall escape many losses if we will but obey God and give the tithe for the support of His cause, according to His plan. You may think that the losses occasioned by storms, and floods and fires and hail stones, are not because you have refused to pay God the tithe, but Old Haggai said it was the cause of the coming of these destructive forces in his day. He even told them that they had much and it came to little, and again, as if to make the matter plain to them, he told them of the destruction which was worked in their fields and orchards by blasting, (blight) by mildew and by hail. Who can say that God does not sometimes, and it may be often, collect the tithe by force?

Despising Dishonesty, But—

There are men and women who would despise themselves, if they were caught in dishonesty toward their fellowmen, and yet they do not hesitate to rob God of His tithe and appropriate it to their own selfish uses. Will God hold such men guiltless, will He leave them to go unpunished for such shameful robbery? You may think it is a light thing to rob God of His tithe, but wait till the day of judgment, and you will see, according to the Word of God, that robbing God of the tithe was the most costly act of your business life.

We Must Christianize Our Use of Money

One of the great tasks before us today is to Christianize the use of our money. We have not only robbed God, but we have taken with unholy hands His tithe and appropriated it to our own selfish purposes. We are reluctant to admit it, but it is a fact—we have been regularly and persistently cheating God. Indeed it is time to begin to practice common honesty by paying God His tithe. Let me illustrate the fact and so bring out what I mean by Christianizing our use of money:

A pastor on one occasion appealed to a wealthy lady in his congregation for money for missions. She hesitated, while he spent thirty minutes in trying to induce her to give. At length she reached for her check book and wrote a check for $2 and handed it to him. Looking at the check and then looking into her face he said: "My sister, a check from a hand wearing a diamond worth $500 should be larger than that, if the wearer belongs to Christ." Think of it! A wealthy Christian (?) woman wearing a diamond worth $500, and yet unwillingly offering a check for $2 to be given to the greatest enterprise the world ever had—the spread of the gospel for the saving of the lost. Is that not robbing God with a high and a rebellious hand?

A Shameful Robbery

Some conclusions are inevitable.

1. Robbing God of His tithe, not only does not pay the robber, but it drives the robber away from God by wrecking his own faith.

2. Two ways are still open to the man who robs God of the tithe: He can go on sinning by continuing to rob God and be lost, or he can repent and bring the tithes into God's storehouse and be saved through Christ. Choose you this day which way you will take!

3. If you choose to obey God by giving both yourself and your money (the tithe) to God, He will not only pour you out such blessings as there shall not be room to receive them, but He definitely agrees to rebuke the devourer for the sake of the men and women who have obeyed His tithing law. See Malachi 3:11.

God likened the refusal of His people to give the tithe to one who puts his savings in a bag with holes in it, and before he can use it, it all slips through the holes in the bag—the bag of greed. Have we not many such instances in the Church today? We labor and strive to get rich, even by cheating God of His tithe, and then almost before we know it, it is all gone—gone out in human waste. Be not deceived, God is not mocked! In due time, in one way or another, He will collect from you by force, if need be, the tithes you have so selfishly withheld from Him. He may collect it through a hail storm, or by a blight on your trees and vines, or in a flood that sweeps bare your farm, or in a fire that destroys your home. You may as well get ready to give up what you have unjustly robbed God of, for sooner or later, He will call for the gains which you have gotten robbing Him of His tithe. You may be sure that He will not allow you to rob Him and then keep your ill-gotten gain to bolster up your life in its sins against His tithing law. Choose your way—will you pay God what you owe Him, or will you in the face of the tithe law, continue to cheat Him? Be sure God will not be mocked, even in your ease.

Let us Put God to The Final Test

The lack of money in the Church has been a real barrier to the cause of Christ—it has retarded its progress as possibly no other one thing has. God loves a cheerful giver and our text tells us to bring all the tithes into the storehouse that we may prove God by seeing the windows of Heaven opened and giving us such a stream of blessings as there shall not be room to receive it. That is God's own proposition. Give Him an opportunity to prove that He will do what He says. Obey the tithe law honestly and from right motives and see if God does not vindicate His promise. As an honest Christian you cannot afford to disobey God by refusing to pay the tithe. Many a man is poor today, both financially and spiritually, because He will not pay the tithe. Do you ask for my authority for that statement? Then turn to Haggai 1:6 and also to Malachi 3:8-11. Here I rest the case with the reader—it is not a matter between the reader and the writer, but between the reader and the God of Heaven and earth.

“But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth, that He may establish His covenant which He sware unto thy fathers, as it is this day.”—Deut. 8: 18.

GIVING—GIVING

The mighty energies or forces of nature are being rapidly released. They are being developed for man's good. They are giving liberally and abundantly their great and wonderful resources. The air is giving its life-giving fluid—its life-giving power to everything that breathes. What a great providence, and what a wonderful thing! The elements which it contains are being extracted and used as commercial products. Its chemical properties are being extensively used to enrich the earth. It helps very much in itself to fertilize the land, and by this means helps the farmer in his cultivation of the soil. All this is given freely as “the air we breathe.” It helps to water the earth when the floating clouds are carried on the wings of the wind. It enables some folks to take aerial flights up through stupendous heights. It is a great agent full of life and power. So fully and freely its blessings are given to us that we ought to continually rejoice over it.

The sun is too profusely giving his healthful, helpful rays to warm and cheer the world. The sun seems to say: “Do not look at me, but look at the violets in royal blue, and the flowers I paint with so many different colors; gaze upon the cloud as it floats under the blue, gilded with bright lining and roseate hues, until it is tinged and fringed with golden splendor. Look out upon the wide world and see how I have melted the snow and ice of so many winters, and then turn your eyes on the budding and blooming woods and fields and see how I dress nature in the most attractive style. Behold how many extended fields of waving, rustling grain I have ripened to help feed the millions who are calling for bread. Look at the rainbow which I paint across the canvas of the sky with its seven colors, and then you may see what I am doing for, and giving, to you. Am helping to give you health—life and beauty. The reason I shine with so much power and with such intense heat and dazzling light, preventing you from looking at me, is because I have so many distant worlds to warm and light. It takes great power to do this. Even the little dew drops in which a world may be orbbed—sparkles with my seven colors, and is giving to the eye the richness and beauty of its purity and coloring.”

The earth is giving back to man the full reward of his labor and industry. Just think of its coal, oil, ores, minerals, gold, silver, diamonds, and so many beautiful, valuable, precious stones, and so many other things, and so much of everything. These are God's things—this is God's earth. “The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof.” He wants us to use them and the world, but not misuse them and it. These things were latent until man found and turned the key that unlocked the rich vaults of nature.

The great ocean is giving, giving all the time, food to increasing millions of hungry people. It continues to give many things which have not been mentioned.

People are learning to give more liberally than ever before, and it is right and commendable to pay back, or give, or return much of their means to the source from whence it came.

“WHEREIN THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH HAS LED”*

By Dr. W. W. Staley, President Southern Christian Convention

“The wolf shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; the calf, and the young lion, and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them.” Isaiah 11:6. It is a long way from the inquisition to the present friendly relation between denominations; and we may be the “little child” that has led, in some measure, from acrimonious divisions up to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. To claim the least, the Christian Church has been friendly toward all other religious bodies for one hundred and twenty-five years; and that can hardly be said of any other denomination. Leadership does not depend on prestige, but on spirit and example; and the Christian Church has embodied a good spirit and exemplary history. It would be boasting to claim too much; but true history is humble as well as useful. A few lines may be presented to show where the Christian Church has led:

I. IN CHRISTIAN DEMOCRACY

The Reformation was a revolt against ecclesiastical autoeracy. Luther expressed what many felt, and the sixteenth century Reformation set in motion ideas that work to this day among the nations, through the churches. The Christian Movement was a further step in the direction of individual and organic freedom. That was a new day, when James O'Kelly plead for Christian liberty. It was a Patrick Henry stroke in the Church for clerical and lay rights; and practically all his contentions have been adopted by the body from which he withdrew. Episcopacy is the only distinctive thing that remains, and that in modified practice. Individual and local rights are finding their way into the conscience of Christianity, and into all Christian organizations. Lay-representation, including women, is well nigh universal. Even in Episcopal bodies women are elected as delegates to official meetings. They serve on Mission Boards, Sunday school Boards, and in regular conferences and conventions. Thirty-two states now have woman's suffrage, in addition to denominational suffrage, and this grows out of co-education in which the Christian Church has led. Equality of rights for men and women has been taught by the Christian Church from the beginning of its history. There is no real democracy that excludes any member of the human family.

* Paper prepared by Dr. W. W. Staley by request of the Campaign Committee of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, and delivered before the Organization Conference of the Movement. Printed by request of all Conferences.

II. IN CHRISTIAN JOURNALISM

Permanent ideas create permanent means of propagation; and it was logical for this movement to open a new channel of reaching and informing the public. Creeds and catechisms had failed; and it had to be done through public print. It was out of this burning desire to reach the public that The Herald of Gospel Liberty, the first and oldest religious newspaper, was born, in Portsmouth, New Hampshire, in September, 1808. That paper was first issued by Rev. Elias Smith, is now issued weekly from Dayton, Ohio, and has been continued for one hundred and twelve years. As the Christian Church issued the first religious paper in the world, she has led in religious journalism. This paper, as the leader, has been followed by hundreds of denominational papers, and many independent religious papers. The fruit of this is what is known as the religious press. Then there is the secular press. In all great moral reforms the religious press leads and the secular press follows. The secular press did not lead in the fight for National Prohibition; but the religious press did. The religious press safeguards civic and social morals, raises the tone of political and commercial life, and quickens the religious conscience of the nation. It would be as difficult to adequately estimate the power of this first religious news paper, as to estimate the value of the locomotive perfected by George Stephenson, whose invention now throbs in every engine throughout the railroad world.

III. IN CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

The Christian Church founded Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio, with Horace Mann as President, in 1852, the first college in the world to admit both sexes on equal terms. The Christian Church has, therefore, led in co-education which is essential to Christian education. To educate men, only, makes a lopsided race. Women were not even admitted to the Jewish Church on equal terms with men; but Jesus admitted women on the same terms as He admitted men. This idea of equality has grown until co-education has taken possession of the educational activities of this nation and part of Europe. The public school admits the sexes on equal terms, and all the State Universities, except Louisiana and Mississippi, admit women. A few years ago the Virginia Legislature spent much time, and money, and many great educators delivered great addresses, and wrote great articles, discussing co-education and coordinate education, and finally passed it over for lack of funds. Now the Board of Visitors says the very thing I wrote for THE CHRISTIAN SUN, at that time, that women have the right, and have always had the right, to be admitted to the University, and they will be admitted to graduate and professional schools September, 1920. Christian education undertakes to educate the whole man—mankind—and the whole human race, and to do that under the sanction of God's Book and God's Spirit.

IV. IN CHRISTIAN UNITY

The rejection of human creeds, as tests of Christian fellowship and church membership, initiated all the modern movements toward Protestant oneness. Organic union may be a remote consummation, but Christian comity is a forerunner of practical unity. This principle was certainly included in the prayer of Jesus for His Church; and the world cannot be won to Him by a divided household. Protestantism must have one common motive, one common purpose, and one common objective; and this can be realized, only, by placing Kingdom interests above denominational interests. Selfishness is culpable in individuals; but it is offensive in denominational bodies. There is such a thing as denominational trespass, and four churches in a village of four hundred arouses suspicion that some organization has trespassed upon ground already occupied by others. Division of territory by denominations, on the foreign field admits the necessity for unity, fraternity, and co-operation in the Kingdom work.

"I HAVE WONDERED THAT THE CHURCH SHOULD STOOP"

A business man sent for the pastor of a city church. "I do not attend church often," he said, "but yesterday I was there. I listened while you presented the Stewardship Program.

"This plan of giving—regularly—a portion of one's income appealed to me very much.

"It's good business—for the church and for the giver.

"I have wondered many times that the Church of Jesus Christ should stoop to the methods it often has used in carrying on its work.

"If this Stewardship Program is to be carried out in our Church, I and my family want to sign up."

The Church of Jesus Christ is done with stooping. Today it stands squarely upon its God-given charter:

"Thou shalt remember Jehovah thy God, for it is he that giveth thee the power to get wealth."

Getting a new and unnecessary post office out of a sorely taxed public treasury is not a sure evidence of statesmanship.

Rev. A. B. Kendall, Washington, D. C., preached at the Winchester church March 7, at both morning and evening services; also at the evening service on Sunday, March 14.

GOALS SET

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Eastern Virginia Christian Conference have set as their goal for this year $5,000 to be raised by the combined efforts of the Woman's, Young People's and Willing Workers' Societies. To do this we have three specials. The Women have a Home Special of $1,200 for Washington Work and a Foreign Special of $1,200 for work in China to be started later. The Young People have a special of $1,000 for Mountain Work. The Woman's Societies have been apportioned as follows to be equally divided between the specials:

1. Antioch	$ 50
2. Berea, Nausemond	100
3. Berea, Norfolk	20
4. Bethlehem	50
5. Cypress Chapel	50
6. Centerville	20
7. Damascus	100
8. Dendron	100
9. Dover	40
10. Eure	20
11. First Church, Norfolk	50
12. Franklin	50
13. Holland	100
14. Holy Neck	100
15. Hobson	20
16. Ivor	20
17. Isle of Wight C. H.....	20
18. Johnson's Grove	20
19. Lamberts Point (Old Zion).....	30
20. Liberty Springs	100
21. Mt. Zion	20
22. Memorial Temple	50
23. Mt. Carmel	40
24. Newport News	50
25. Oak Grove	20
26. Oakland	100
27. Portsmouth	50
28. Rosemont	50
29. Sarem	20
30. South Norfolk	20
31. Spring Hill	20
32. Third Church, Norfolk	50
33. Waverly	100
34. Wakefield	50
35. Windsor	50
36. Union, Southampton	30
Total.....	$1,780

On account of their most generous response to our apportionment last year, the Committee decided to ask the Suffolk Society to apportion themselves. We are hoping to have some new Societies added that will help us to carry our goal over the top. A word of explanation concerning the amounts asked for: The reason that some Societies are assessed more than others is because some Societies are already doing special work aside from this special request.

Any information concerning the work will be given cheerfully.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

I was much impressed by the article written in the issue of February 18 by Miss Hedgepeth on "The mountains as a missionary field." Truly she has heard the Macedonian call and I would to God that the leaders of the Virginia Valley Conference would heed the call of the unfortunates who live in isolated sections.

My farming operations being located among the foothills of the Massanutton mountains and my position as Secretary-Treasurer of an Insurance Company enables, or rather causes me, to make many trips up the mountain hollows of the Shenandoah Valley and thereby see the need of establishing churches in these mountainous districts so they may have a place to worship their Maker and learn of the Savior's love.

I know it is the opinion of many in the Christian Church that we should establish churches in the large towns and cities, but because of the fact that so many living in the mountains of Virginia are not in reach of any church where they may worship God in all his glory and learn of a Savior who died for them that they might have life. I believe we ought to carry the gospel to this people before we attempt to extend our church operations to the large towns and cities.

I truly believe that the souls of a people that live on top of the Blue Ridge mountains are just as precious to the Savior as the souls of them that live in towns or cities and for that reason we should not extend our efforts city-ward until this people is furnished the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

Because of this condition I do not approve of the present plan of organizing a church in Richmond at this time. Why? It will cost at least $15,000.00 to erect a suitable church building in that city, where the people have already possibly as many as twenty churches where they may worship and with that amount of money fifteen church buildings can be built in as many mountain districts where the people do not have these privileges and will be the means of saving a great many more souls than one church in a large city.

Furthermore, if we give each group of four churches the services of such a power as Dr. W. T. Walters each group will be self-supporting long before the city church.

Then, too, statistics show that a great majority of the preachers and missionaries spring from just such districts, then why not center our home missionary forces at these points and possibly we can get the men which the "Men and Millions Forward Movement" are striving for.

Praying that this call of a neglected people may be heard,

I am an humble layman of the Christian Church.

C. W. LOUDERBACK.

OFFICIAL REQUEST

To Chairmen of Boards, and Committees of the S. C.
Convention to meet in Raleigh,
N. C., April 27-30, 1920:—

Let each Chairman submit to me, as Chairman of the Program Committee, as soon as you can, what you would like to have in the Program to represent your Department, in the Raleigh Convention. It is important to get this help, by way of suggestion, as early as possible, as the time is short and the Program must be made by the 10th of April.

The suggestion has already been made that opportunity for oratorical display be eliminated; and it is apparent that there will be so much real business that the number of speeches will have to be limited under each topic upon which reports are submitted. Be sure to send in your little program, and any suggestion you like, just as soon as you can, and let the Program represent the best thought of ALL the Boards, and not the judgment of only ONE committee.

Very sincerely yours,

W. W. STALEY,

Chairman of Program Committee.

Suffolk, Va., March 13, 1920.

AN OFFICIAL CALL

Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., President of the Southern Christian Convention and Chairman of the Program Committee, has sent to each delegate of the Southern Christian Convention a letter asking three very important questions. We reprint the letter below and trust that each delegate will, if not already done so, respond to these questions, or at least the first one. This information is necessary.

You have been chosen to represent your Conference at the Southern Christian Convention, which will meet in Raleigh, N. C., on Tuesday evening, April 27, and close on Friday afternoon, April 30, 1920.

It is very important for every delegate to be present at the opening and remain until the final adjournment. The session will be larger, deal with more great questions, and determine future activities of the Conferences more than any previous meeting.

All the Institutions and Departments of the Convention will share in the result of the Men and Millions Movement, and the final report of that Campaign will be made.

The Program Committee desires you to answer the following questions:

1. Will you attend the Convention?

2. Will you remain till the close?

3. Will you serve in some position on the Program, if the Program Committee needs your help?

If you have any suggestions to make in the preparation of the program, write just what you think would be of value.

Do not fail to write promptly so that the Program Committee may have the inspiration of your interest and help.

Sincerely yours,

W. W. STALEY, Chairman.

AN OPEN LETTER

Dr. Warren H. Denison, Dayton, Ohio,

Rev. Omer S. Thomas, Dayton, Ohio,

Rev. E. A. Watkins, Lima, Ohio,

Rev. R. C. Helfenstein, Urbana, Ill.

Dear Brethren:—

I have in the mails this morning three letters from ministers of the Southern Christian Convention enclosing requests from your offices to do certain things with reference to the Forward Movement which are in conflict with requests sent out by the Secretary of Organization for the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention. It was understood when we launched our movement for $2,000,000.00 in the South and the other items in the Forward Movement Campaign that we would be left free to carry on our campaign without reference to the general Forward Movement of the Church. This, therefore, is request to you in the interest of clarity and for ultimate success not to send further literature or requests for information or reports or things to be done to any person in the Southern Christian Convention since this matter is being thoroughly handled through our own organization.

I am sure that you will understand my reason for making this request.

With every assurance of good wishes, I am

Yours sincerely,

W. A. HARPER,

Secretary Organization,

Men and Millions Forward Movement.

DEATH INVADES OUR RANKS

It grieves my heart to announce that two Captains and one leader of the women have been called to their eternal home. I am sure our hearts will go out to their loved ones in this sad hour.

The Captains who have been translated to the other life are: Brother P. T. Joyner, Courtland, Va., for Johnson's Grove church, and Brother John L. Churehill, Apex, N. C., for Martha's Chapel church. New Harmony church, Alabama Conference, has lost its woman leader in the death of Mrs. Ella De Vaughan. These noble workers have been succeeded by Brother F. W. Stortz, Sedley, Va.; Brother A. J. Morgan, Apex, N. C., and Miss Etta Lashley, Lineville, Ala., Route 3.

Truly God's calls the workers home and then provides for His work. Let those of us who survive render full service to God in this Movement as gratitude to Him for His matchless kindness to us.

W. A. HARPER.

COUNTRY CHURCH TALKS

Edmund deS. Brunner, Associate Secretary, Home Missions Council

To the average person the word preaching sums up the chief and almost the only function of the country church. What untold good through the years has come from the constant preaching of the Word with power and sincerity no one can estimate.

And yet, preaching cannot be assumed to be beyond improvement. The eternal truths of the gospel need to be applied to the ever changing conditions of human life. There is a constant need, age after age to rediscover the Bible.

In these days when farming has been changed from the struggle of the lonely pioneer for just enough to feed and clothe the family to the highly organized industry which it is, the preacher in the country church can do great good by revealing the rural emphasis of the Bible.

"The sower went forth to sow." What hopes and fears, what ambitions, what faith, what possibilities for service lie hidden in those words. "The sower went forth to sow." So day by day through all the processes of sowing, cultivating, reaping, marketing, the farmer is God's human agent in answering the world's prayer for daily bread. "When thou cuttest down thine harvest in thy field, and hast forgot a sheaf in the field, thou shalt not go again to fetch it: it shall be for the stranger, for the fatherless, and for the widow: that the Lord thy God may bless thee in all the work of thy hands." So before the days of charity organizations God ordained help for the marginal members of the community, help if they helped themselves. How thoroughly "modern" and "scientific" are these age old laws.

Isaiah was a country life seer, though a city man. He inveighed against the laying of field to field by the rich and the consequent forcing of the poor from the country into Jerusalem the city (Isa. 5:8). In the new civilization which he foresaw, these conditions would be righted and those who built houses would dwell in them and eat the fruit of their plantings rather than another (Isaiah 65:17-23). Rural material prosperity was a frequent concern of the Lord, if we may judge by the laws of Israel. The salary of the traveling Levite, the rural pastor of the day, is provided for: "And the Levite that is within thy gates; thou shalt not forsake him; for he hath no part nor inheritance with thee."

Isaiah is rich in rural texts dealing with a variety of subjects from vineyard culture (Isaiah 5:5, 6) to the adequate return for agricultural labor guaranteed in that better time.

Genesis 26:12-14 shows God's blessing on Isaac who served him and was a farmer of the hundred fold type.

Many a rural minister has seen and deplored laxness in quarantine, disregard of sanitary precautions and similar violations in good community health practice. To such a one much of the legislation contained in Leviticus lives again when he realizes that it is a health code of divine authority way in advance of common practice in much of rural America.

THE EASTER OFFERING

The Christian Orphanage calls on each church and Sunday school for two special offerings each year—the Thanksgiving offering and the Easter offering. Last fall in the months when the churches would have taken the Thanksgiving offerings the weather was so unfavorable that many churches did not get to make this offering. Something like ninety churches out of the two hundred and twenty-two failed to take this offering. I feel sure it was the desire and the intention of all these churches to make the Thanksgiving offering, but the weather was so unfavorable and the congregations were so small that it was not done.

The Easter season is generally more favorable and it is in the spring when everybody feels the thrill of the bright spring days and appreciate the balmy weather and just feel like making an offering. So it is a very favorable time to make this offering.

I truly hope each church and Sunday school will see how large it can make this offering. I am mailing this week to the Secretary of each Sunday school a letter to be read to his Sunday school.

I will mail out to each Secretary in the next few days the Easter offering envelopes and trust that the Secretaries will see that the envelopes are distributed at the proper time.

Speak of the Easter offering in your school and set apart a certain Sunday to make this offering and get everybody interested.

The Orphanage has had splendid success during the past three years and your church and Sunday school have helped to make the success. I am glad you have a share in the joy of the success.

We still have a larger work before us this year and greater efforts must be made to bring it to pass. We must build a home for small children and give more children a home. The Church would easily take care of more children if we only had the room. While the Easter offerings will go in the general fund, still we can use the surplus in building and equipping this home for the children. So in making this offering you can bear in mind that part of the money you contribute will go to build a home for the dear little tots.

God has been good to you and richly blessed you in this world's goods and these little ones are crying to you for help. Can you give that they may have an opportunity to make good in life and not have to go through life handicapped because in their young and tender years they did not have an opportunity to be trained and educated so they could stand shoulder to shoulder with boys and girls who did have the opportunity?

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley:—I don't think I have written for the Corner since September, so I am sending check for 50 cents to cover my dues. Hope this finds you and all well.—T. D. Mathews, Jr.

I owe you an apology. I got your letter misplaced and found it this week. Hence the delay in getting it in the paper. Forgive me this time and I will do better in the future. I can't put this on the "Editor."—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—My papa reads to me the cousins' letters in THE SUN and I enjoy them so much. I go to school and can read, but I do not know how to spell. (I am so glad you do not have to learn you a. b. c's and know how to spell before you can read. Reading is so much easier than spelling). My Sunday school teacher is Miss Landis and she is fine. My every-day teacher is Miss Marshall, and I love her too. Find my dime enclosed for the orphans—and this money was my very own which I have been keeping a long time. Your little niece.—Emma Williamson Atkinson.

You are a fine little girl. It was good of you to give your money to the little orphans. You must come to see our little girls and I will have them sing for you.—"Uncle Charley."

Mr. E. S. Norfleet, Suffolk, Va., expresses his appreciation of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and says: "The Suffolk Letter is worth more than the price and so I get all the other splendid things free."

THEY WOULD A-FISHING GO

All day long, over the sunny, foam-tipped water of the beautiful Bay of Naples, the little trawling boats, with their tiny picturesque sails of many colors—pink, brick-toned, and dull, washed-out blues and greens—creep in and out, bringing or leaving their loads of sea food. All day long, the keen salt-tang of the deep-sea is carried shoreward by the ocean breeze.

Small wonder, then, that along these distant shores, young Italian lads are turning eager, expectant faces seawards, dreaming of the days to come, when they, following the path of their fathers, and their grand-fathers before them, may also become the dauntless seekers of deep-sea prey. For a fishing school, the first in Italy, has recently been opened with an attendance of eighty enthusiastic and ambitious fisher boys.

The Junior Red Cross of America has fulfilled the long-cherished dreams of these lads, in providing a large motor boat, in which extended trips to fishing grounds may be taken.

It is believed that this school will be of the greatest advantage and help in this part of Italy, where the greater portion of the population earns its livelihood by fishing, though it still employs the old fashioned methods. In this new school, instructions will be given in the practice as well as the theory of fishing. Some of the lessons will deal with the possible uses of fish for canning, the nature and extent of oil in fish, and its extraction and preservation.

THE PAPER-DOLL PRINCE

The paper-doll prince was out walking. He wasn't really a paper-doll, though he was a real, honest-to-goodness prince, and his home was the stately white palace crowning the world-famous hill up which he was walking. His name was Prince Lichenstein of Klagonfurt, Austria, and he was only one of the many Carthian nobles who fell from rank when Austria became democratic.

During the revolutionary disturbances, bandits swarmed through the valley nestling at the foot of the Prince's mountain castle, and finally made a raid upon the royal palace itself, taking away all the tapestries, military uniforms and even the everyday clothing of the Prince, leaving him absolutely nothing.

And so it happened that His Royal Highness became merely a paper-doll prince, for the only suit he possessed was one rudely fashioned from nettles and paper. For a time, this improvised costume answered his need, but the Fates were against him, and on this particular afternoon, while the Prince was out walking, the very worst calamity possible befell him. A rain storm came up. In terror for the safety of his suit, the paper clad Prince fled to a place of shelter, which happened to be a small barracks, where a few British soldiers were living.

One of the soldiers came to the rescue of the wet Prince, whose paper suit had peeled in spot, but had not yet dissolved. He was given a complete private's outfit while the paper garments were being hung beside a hot fire to dry. However, a vagrant breeze blew the drying suit against the stove, and it was so badly charred that it could not be further mended, and according to the latest reports, the Tommy that loaned his suit to the Prince, is still waiting for its return.

Paper clothing is being used generally through Bosnia, Croatia, and what was once lower Austria. Though some of the suits are quite durable, most of them have but small chance in a rain storm. Many tons of old American clothing have been distributed by the Red Cross to the poor of Bosnia, but there is still great need for clothing, for, since the people of that land are not real paper-dolls, they cannot be very comfortable in paper-doll clothes.

THE BLUE-STOCKING RABBIT

Before he was a rabbit, he had been a long, slimsy stocking of deep blue. In those days, he had been used to walking on two feet, sometimes even running very fast. Now, since he had become a little four-footed animal, he didn't know just what to do with the other two feet—evidently he was expected to move just twice as rapidly as he had been able to move before. Yet, try as he would, he couldn't move an inch. All he could do was to stay quietly in his corner, and stare straight ahead with his new, shining shoebutton-eyes. Perhaps the great amount of cotton stuffing put inside of him accounted for his inability to move about.

It all happened in this way. The people in the little town out on our western coast, advertised for old stockings to be sent to the Red Cross rooms. Then busy workers fashioned all sorts of useful articles and playthings out of all sorts of stockings, to be sent across the sea to the children who are so sadly in need of warm clothing and toys—for these little ones have almost forgotten how to play.

And that is how the stockings helped. The light-colored ones were made into little shirts for the babies, and some into tiny, woolly hoods and jackets, while the darker ones were turned into dolls, and animals of all sorts. All of them were packed away, ready for shipment across the sea.

But the blue-stocking rabbit, waiting patiently for the day when he can again hop around, feels sure that he is the finest of them all.

Brother T. J. Holland says concerning the Men and Millions Forward Movement: "Ambrose church is coming up with good measure, well shaken down and running over in her allotment."

E. B. Bailey—May this be one of the best years for THE SUN, and also for the Christian Church. I wish every family would take THE SUN.

Mrs. J. W. Boon—I am having much sickness but I am going to take THE SUN as long as I live for it is food to my soul.

Junior Topic: Peter and John Winning Others to Christ.

Senior Topic: Peter and John compared and contrasted.

Additional Material: Acts 3:1-16, John 21:15-24, I John 1:9.

Having studied for three months now, the training and preaching of two great disciples and evangelists, we pause to connect up the chain of incidents and get a bird's eye view of their whole career.

This is necessary to get a unified understanding of the work accomplished by Peter and John. Fragmentary study of God's Word gives us facts and information but it is only when we study great men and movements in their entirety that their deeper significance is revealed.

We first have Peter at Pentecost showing people how to be saved and adding 3,000 converts to the growing, young church. Then John joins him in the miracle of healing the lame man at the gate. We then have the disciples before the Supreme Court of the Sanhedrin defending the Church against temporal attacks. Peter then deals a striking blow to lying and hypocrisy through the tragic fate of Ananias, the Judas of the early Church. But hearing the call outside of the city of Jerusalem, the disciples begin a missionary trip which takes them first to Samaria. Here they exposed one Simon, the sorcerer, who thought to use his "magic" to get into the Kingdom of Heaven. At Lydda Peter delivered Aeneas the saint, from the clutches of a slow disease, the palsy. At Joppa he restored a certain disciple, Dorcas, to life. The vision of a young Roman officer, Cornelius, invites him to preach for the first time to the Gentiles. Preaching and living God's Word, however, are not without their trials. Peter is thrown in prison but no earthly bonds can restrain his spirit. His deliverance shows the force of prayer over material obstacles.

We then have two strong sermons, one by Peter on Christian Living, and one by John on Christian Love. The story of Peter and John is concluded with John's vision on Patmos, a fitting climax for the work of two great Christian preachers.

Peter and John Compared

Much benefit may be derived from studying these men, very different in their character and personal life and still very similar in the goal for which they strived. Peter was bold and practical, a preacher who once denied Christ three times, and was then converted. John was an idealist, the "disciple of love." Both were staunch leaders of the early Church, missionaries and courageous evangelists.

The study of the triumph of these men should inspire all Sunday school workers of the State to imitate their courage and devotion.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 28, 1920

(Missionary)

J. Vincent Knight

"Our Country's Need of Christ," Acts 4:11-12; Rom. 10:12-15. (Home Missionary Meeting).

The real need of our country is not more politics, legislation, new laws, or law enforcement, but Jesus Christ. The need within itself is an argument that cannot be refuted. Our country has tried every available means and each have in their turn failed. That means that nothing except Christ can ever satisfy the needs of humanity. That is the one great need, and how shall we meet this need?

By Mobilizing Our Man-Power For Christ

One-fifth of the ministers who were active before the war, are now in some other work. Why? The Inter-Church World Bulletin tells us they were driven there by starvation wages; had to go or let their families suffer. There is no doubt that many of these men will return as soon as they are able to make expenses, but we must have hundreds of new ones, and not only ministers but laymen. But what good is a layman if he will not lay?, or a preacher if he will not preach? Over seventy-five per cent of our Nation needs Christ, and the only way out seems to be the mobilization of the man-power. Pray for more men.

By Mobilizing the Money Powers For the Kingdom

In days gone by we have attempted to run the Church on hot air, and the Nation on money, and the thing we are thankful for is that the days are gone by, and we hope never to return. A religion that is not practiced is dead, and the world does not want it. If there is any going back to the affair, let us go back to the tithe, and begin right by placing one-tenth of our income in the Kingdom, for that is God's money. When we do it, we are to have a better time in the Church and Kingdom.

By Presenting a United Front For God

One reason the message of Christ has not reached the needy world, is that our efforts have been divided, and the world has looked upon it as a Church-getting machine, when the claim we should have made was a great plea for Christ. Now what we must do is to unite our forces and present a united front for Jesus Christ. That is the program of Christianity that will reach the world for Christ.

Mentioning

Don't forget the State Christian Endeavor Convention, Greensboro, June 11-13. The City Endeavorers plan to take care of 700 out-of-town delegates. Read the list of speakers again:

Lawrence C. Little, of Louisiana; Karl Lehmann, Tennessee; Miss Grace Hooper Nebraska; Dr. Stephens Bryan Dexter, Chicago; Dr. F. P. Price, China; Dr. A. Almedia of Brazil; Dr. A. B. Kendall, Washington, D. C., (invited); Dr. Daniel A. Poling, of Boston, and a number of others that will be in this Convention.

MARRIAGES

CATHER-EARMAN

A beautiful home wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Earman, Harrisonburg, Virginia, at high noon on February 18, 1920, when their youngest daughter, Miss Ruth, became the bride of Mr. L. R. Cather, of Winchester, Virginia. Mr. Morris Cather, brother of the groom and Miss May Burtner were the attendants. The ceremony was performed by the writer, assisted by Rev. Mr. Long of the Brethren Church. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. A buffet luncheon was served to the large number of guests present.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cather, of Winchester, Va. He is a former Elon College student and is engaged in growing and dealing in apples with his father.

Both are members of the Christian church and actively interested in church work. They were the happy recipients of many beautiful presents among which was a $500.00 check from the parents of the groom.

The wedding was to have been a double one but owing to the illness of the groom-elect, Miss Beulah, a sister of the bride, was married later in the day to a Mr. Harsberger in his home.

We join their hosts of friends in wishing both couples much happiness.

W. T. WALTERS.

EURE-JOHNSON

At the residence of R. V. Johnson, brother of the bride, on Pinner Street, Suffolk, Va., on Thursday afternoon, March 4, 1920, Miss Lucy Persons Johnson was married to Taswell Augustus Eure, of Eure, N. C. The home was lovely with palms, ferns, and blooming plants, an altar arranged with ivy and ferns against a background of white with many lighted candles.

The bride was dressed in a blue cloth traveling suit, with hat to match, and a bouquet of bride's roses and sweet peas. Miss Elsie Persons was maid of honor, wearing a maize duchess satin, trimmed with ferns and sweet peas.

Thad Arrine Eure, son of the groom, was best man, entered with his father, and presented the ring in the beautiful ring ceremony.

The beautiful home was crowded with relatives and friends. Mr. J. L. Little sang, "O Promise Me," and Mrs. J. J. S. Branch rendered the Wedding March.

The ceremony was read by Revs. W. W. Staley and G. T. Lampkin, Christian and Baptist pastors, the groom being a leading member of Eure Christian church and the bride of the Suffolk Baptist church; a good example of union based on love and not on doctrine.

The happy couple left for a bridal tour to Baltimore, New York, and Niagara Falls and will be home after March 15 at Oak Dale Farm, Eure, N. C.

OBITUARIES

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—PITTMAN

Whereas, on the twelfth day of February, 1920, death with its sickle keen visited our town and claimed as its harvest Mrs. W. T. Pittman, one of our most estimable young women, faithful worker in the church, a loving wife and mother, and a friend to all, and

Whereas, the whole community was made to sorrow and lament the loss of so faithful a friend and co-worker, yet we bow in humble submission to our Master's will, knowing that He doeth all things well, and that what we feel to be our loss in this respect, we believe to be Heaven's gain, and

Whereas, Mrs. Pittman was the honored and efficient president of the Christian Endeavor Society, and during her brief enuambency in office she had inspired new life and new enthusiasm into the work of the Society.

Therefore be it resolved:

That we in the regular meeting of the Society on the twenty-ninth day of February, 1920, dedicate this program to her memory and express our appreciation of her worthy example before us, and that we pledge ourselves to carry on with the same interest and zeal, the work she has so efficiently begun, and be it further resolved that we extend to the bereaved family our deep and abiding sympathy in this hour of gloom and sorrow, and faithfully commend them to the loving care and comfort of a dear Heavenly Father Who can all our sorrows heal.

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minute book of the Society, a copy sent to the bereaved family and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. NELL LANGSTON,
MISS BETTIE W. TAYLOE,
MISS VIRGINIA HOLLAND,
Committee.

DOWDY

Minnie Iola Dowdy, daughter of Mrs. Oscar Hart, died at her home near Goldston, N. C., March 3, 1920, at the age of seventeen years, nine months and three days. A mother and two sisters survive. Her death came as a great shock to her many friends. She was a bright girl and devoted to her home and fond of school and her school-mates. She professed faith in Christ at the age of fifteen years. She expressed her willingness to die. Interment was in the cemetery at Antioch Christian church. May the blessed Christ comfort those who mourn. A FRIEND.

MATKINS

Howard Barrett Matkins, son of Esker and Bettie Matkins, departed this life at the home of his parents, March 6, 1920, at the age of eighteen years, three months and fifteen days. He was a worthy member of Bethlehem Christian church, Altamahaw, N. C. He leaves to mourn his death both parents, one brother and three sisters. He was a loyal son in the home and his death has brought deep sorrow to the home circle. Burial services and interment in Bethlehem cemetery. His death was triumphant in Christian faith.

J. W. HOLT.

HENDERSON

Jas. Henderson, farmer and deacon, died February 26, 1920 at his home out from News Ferry, Va. He was seventy-eight years of age and is survived by his widow and four sons and one daughter: W. M., Luther, Jacob, Holt and Annie.

Brother Henderson was a charter deacon of Ingram church and had been the Sunday school superintendent for about twenty-five years. He was a good man, and reared a fine family.

May God bless each one of the bereaved.

EASTER WEEK OF PRAYER AND SERVICE

The Spirit of the Evangel

The Spirit of the Lord is upon me,
Because He hath anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor;
He has sent me to proclaim release to the captive,
And recovering of sight to the blind,
To set at liberty them that are bruised
To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord.
—Luke 4:18, 19.

Sunday, March 28.—OUR AUTHORITY

Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I commanded you. And lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.—Matt. 28:19, 20.

Monday, March 29.—OUR MESSAGE

Repent ye for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.—Matt. 4:17.

Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled.—Matt. 5:6.

Tuesday, March 30.—OUR PASSION

If any man would come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me.—Luke 9:23.

Father forgive them for they know not what they do.—Luke 23:34.

Wednesday, March 31.—OUR SAVIOR

Wherefore also He is able to save to the uttermost them that draw near unto God by him.—Heb. 7:25.

Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matt. 11:28.

Thursday, April 1.—OUR FAITH

Lord to whom shall we go? Thou has the words of eternal life.—John 6:68.

If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place and it shall remove and nothing shall be impossible to you.—Matt. 17:20, 21.

Friday, April 2.—OUR TESTIMONY

One thing I know that whereas I was blind now I see.—John 9:25.

This Jesus did God raise up, whereof we all are witnesses.—Acts 2:32.

Saturday, April 3.—THE TRIUMPH OF THE CHURCH

Upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it.—Matt. 16:18.

Easter, April 4.—THE RISEN LORD

Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the bonds of death because it was not possible that he should be holden of it.—Acts 2:24.

I was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of death and of Hades.—Rev. 1:18.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

ANOTHER CLASS OF UNDERPAID SERVANTS

Along with the preacher is the teacher who has been underpaid and overworked until the country is face to face with a condition that will certainly bring disastrous results, unless averted in some way.

War emergency called every class to service of some kind. The loyal and faithful teacher responded. Vacancies could not be filled, and most communities were glad to accept fair substitutes or manage some way for the time, hoping that the teachers would return to their work. We are told that 175,000 vacancies were reported during the war. 5,000 of these vacancies have not been filled, while 65,000 of these places are filled by persons unprepared to meet the average test, though passed to meet the emergency. The normal schools and colleges making a specialty of preparing teachers report a falling off of one-third in the enrollment for the teaching profession.

The pay of the teacher has always been too small. We have been too slow in changing it in the rapid change of conditions, and other things have taken over the men and women enlisted in this noble work.

An illustration may be typical. In our own town the teachers' problem last fall was to secure housing room. The school committee had to appoint a committee to secure homes for the teachers; and in a town of nearly ten thousand, nearly the whole of the place had to be canvassed to find lodging for the teachers. These teachers are prepared and do a splendid work. They draw an average salary of only eighty to ninety dollars per month, and pay from twenty-five to thirty-five dollars for room and board. Girls in this same town earn the average of the teachers, and in many cases more, board at home, and have twelve months' employment instead of nine. The teacher must go off to the summer school while the office girls work on. We give this citation because it is being duplicated in other sections of the country.

What are we going to do about this thing? Are we going to place the work of the brick-layer, the carpenter, office girl, and all these above the teacher who guards the mental stock of our boys and girls? Are we going to deprive our children of that which belong to them for the lack of a few dollars? We must create public sentiment until the school rooms are filled with teachers and education safely guarded.

We must exalt the work of teaching, place a premium upon it and recognize it to that extent of placing its remuneration on par with our industries—and until we do so we have placed money-getting ahead of the interest of our children.

Stop the flow from the teaching profession by paying a decent salary and furnishing modern surroundings. To do so is to head off a collapse of our school system.

THE COST OF THE WAR

Prof. Ernest L. Bogart, in a volume prepared for the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, states that all of the wars of the nineteenth century, from the Napoleonic wars down to the Balkan war, show a loss of life of 4,449,300; the dead of the recent world war reached 9,998,771. If each human life is valued at an average of $3,400 the total economic loss of this life would be thirty-three billion dollars. The property loss on land is estimated at about thirty billions, and at sea $6,800,000,000. The indirect cost in the loss of production is placed at $45,000,000,000. These figures added together give the total financial loss due to the war as the incomprehensible amount of $115,000,000,000. These figures stupendous as they are, do not take into account the effect of the war on human vitality, on economic well-being, on morality and on social unrest. Is it not time that the world sought to follow the "Prince of Peace"? The cost of Christian activities throughout the world is estimated at approximately $500,000,000 a year. On this basis the money waste of the war would have supplied funds for all Christian churches and missions for over 200 years. The number of men giving all their time to Christian work in all lands is estimated at not over 500,000. On this basis, the men killed in the war number twenty times this number and four hundred times the number of Christian missionaries.

TO BE CONGRATULATED (?)

In a recent issue of The Herald of Gospel Liberty a news item informs the Church that Mr. Hermon Eldredge has been elected to take a responsible position in a work outside of his own Church. (We do not recall the position now). The Herald's Editor says that the denomination is to be congratulated upon being able to furnish a man for such a responsible position. We agree and do not agree. It is complimentary to the Church to furnish the man and a shame to lose his services from the unlimited amount of work that Mr. Eldredge is capable of doing in his own Church.

We cite this case as an example. There are other cases. We have much work to be done. There is teaching and preaching and unlimited jobs that need good and great men. We are permitting some of our best talent to get away from us. Not always in membership, but in service. If other institutions find our men profitable, why not our own? How long will we compliment ourselves in this way? How long? It is fiddling where the house burns.

HATS OFF!

The fight is on! Good soldiers have buckled on armor and gone to the job. They are at it and at it to a finish. We refer to the work of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. It is moving and will continue to move. Don't forget that, please don't. And the soldiers we refer to are those who are big enough in heart, broad enough in spirit and interested enough to go out on the firing line and tell the people the good news. Through rain and mud, wind and storm, they have gone to do their best and their utmost. This office knows something of the sacrifices that are being made, but made gladly. "I cannot" has been knocked out of the vocabulary of some of our brethren. They said that they would and they are. They mean business. They are camping in the campaign. They are on the job and will be right there until that job is done and done well. They haven't the time, but they are taking it. The job can be done and must be done and they know it—and they know it so well that they are doing it.

Hats off to them! Three cheers for the booster!!
Hats off boys, hats off!!!

VALUABLE HISTORY

We have long delayed reading a book of valuable history concerning our own people. We refer to "Centennial History Miami Christian Conference," edited by Rev. B. F. Vaughan, D. D., Centerville, Ohio, and ably contributed to by Drs. Hugh A. Smith, J. G. Bishop, J. E. Etter, and Revs. O. P. Furnas and Mrs. E. K. Bishop.

Rev. B. F. Vaughan, D. D., is the historian of the Miami Christian Conference, and in bringing out his book of 275 pages demonstrates very thoroughly and practically that the historian of a conference can do more than to read a historical paper at the annual meeting, provided he is backed up by the right kind of co-operation.

The volume above referred to covers the history of the Miami Conference in the following manner: (a) "Organization and Early History;" (b) "Pen Pictures of the Founders;" (c) "History from Time Written Record—1847 to 1900;" (d) "Closing Period" These are the essential outlines in Part I while Part II concerns itself more over miscellaneous matter.

This volume is well worth its price of $1.25 postpaid and the reader will find interesting data regarding our people in the West. The book is handsomely bound and is a product of the Christian Publishing Association, Dayton, Ohio, to whom orders can be sent.

BROTHER HUFFINES' LETTER

We are delighted with the privilege of publishing on page 6 of this issue Brother L. C. Huffines' valuable contribution. Brother Huffines is a member of Pleasant Ridge (G) church. He is a good man, an intelligent citizen and a progressive farmer. Brother Huffines does not differ from us, as we see it, but only presents the other side of the situation. His position is right and well taken. We have never made any plea for the man who is already getting value received. We trust that other editorials will evoke discussion. The columns of THE SUN are open to all readers of this paper.

The Credits and Quotas for the various churches have been tabulated and a bulletin is being mailed out from the office of organization this week. This bulletin shows what each church has given on the Special Mission Fund and the Standardization Fund and shows the balance to be raised in the Men and Millions campaign. Call on the local captain for this information, find out how your church stands and help to bring her up to her full obligation.

WORLD EVENTS

Reports coming from Germany state conditions there are not improving much and that worse conditions may be expected.

After eight months of debating and wrangling over the Peace Treaty, the Senate returned it to the President on March 20 un-ratified. The Treaty was defeated by both Democrats and Republicans, though the majority was not large. Just what the next step will be cannot be learned at this time. The defeating of the Treaty means that we have not made terms with Germany.

Truman H. Newberry, junior United States Senator from Michigan, was convicted by a jury on March 20 for conspiracy and election frauds. Newberry, Republican, defeated Henry Ford in the 1918 election and it was later learned that fraudulent use of money, and the excessive spending above what is fixed by law, helped to win Newberry's seat in the Senate. Newberry has been on trial about three weeks. He was sentenced to two years in Federal prison and fined $10,000.00. Sixteen others were convicted with him and drew sentences and fines.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

HOW SHOULD PREACHERS PREACH FUNERALS— PRAISE THE DEAD OR WARN THE LIVING?

My heart has been made sad many times to hear preachers praise the dead at funerals when they should have been warning the living. Time and time again I have heard preachers praise and honor the dead and preach them to Heaven when the people who knew the life of the deceased knew better and knew that the life lived was in no way in harmony with God's work and plan of salvation.

What can the people think of a preacher who will go into the pulpit on the Sabbath day and hold up the plan of salvation as it is presented in God's Word, and before the week is out, some one dies whose life is contrary to the plan presented, and the preacher comes back and tries to get him into the glory land? I feel that this has a bad influence in two ways: Some people lose confidence in the preacher while some who are less informed about the Bible seem to think that it will be all right to live as you please, for the preacher will get you into Heaven all right.

Not so long ago, a man died who had been a rejector and scoffer of religion ever since I had known him. He refused everything in the form of religion and even cursed on his death bed. Everybody in this man's community knew him as a scoffer and rejector of religion. One of the best preachers that we ever had in our Conference preached the funeral, and I thought it was a good time to warn the people, but when the preacher prayed, he thanked God for the good life of the deceased, for being a good soldier, a good husband, a good father and a good citizen. He thanked God for the good influence that the man had in the community. I felt like crying out for the preacher to stop his prayer. I feel that our preachers do not realize the harm they do in trying to praise the dead when they do not know anything about their lives. I do not blame the preacher altogether for this, for many persons show up well to the preacher and bad to the world. May God help our preachers to so warn the living that they will so live as to be prepared to get to Heaven and their lives will get them the praise.

TO RETURNED SOLDIERS An Open Letter

My dear Friends:—

We are proud of you. Who? The entire Christian Church, to be sure, we are proud of you. You caused your dear old home churches to offer most earnest and compassionate prayers for you. We learned how much we loved you while you were gone from us. I am writing you this open letter because you hold such a vital position in our Men and Millions Forward Movement. Let us consider a few things seriously and prayerfully together.

As you know already France, England, Belgium, and Germany are not pagan countries. We speak of them here sometimes as "foreign countries," and then we raise sums of money to send missionaries to "foreign countries," but not to send missionaries to the above named countries. Missionaries are sent to pagan or non-Christian countries such as China or India for example. I mention this to you because I have known of instances where this was not clear in the minds of some men who have returned from France and England and have spoken somewhat against missionary enterprises in their home communities. If you have been only to the first mentioned countries you have not seen the countries toward which our missionary efforts are directed any more than the soldier who did not get to go across. When you speak we listen, therefore you should be sure to make the above distinction or else you may all unintentionally, of course, hinder Christ's disciples in carrying out His great command: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

We are counting on you, and may you march as nobly for Christ as you did for your country?

"LORD OF HOSTS"

Some of the old, familiar texts of the Bible are taking on new beauty and are being quoted with a new emphasis. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof; the world and they that dwell therein" is serving this day and generation in double harness. It is used anew in sermons on tithing and on missions. And, indeed, the two work splendidly together. From it we learn that we are possessors of the earth, not owners, and that a price of possession is holy unto God.

From it we can safely infer our Master's field of operations—the world. Although years later the Wise Men hunted for Him who should be born king of the Jews this singer saw in Him a world Ruler and Redeemer. For this poetic, prophetic heart He was to be more than King of the Jews; He was to be "King of Glory," "Lord of hosts." The church is coming to see it in a very practical way these days. Unless Christ shall be King of kings every nation must suffer together. To make Him such is a task big enough for a united effort of the whole church.

A few of the members of a local church cannot successfully combat the overwhelming powers of easy-going luxuriant, listless worldliness in a community, but a combined effort of a majority of the members can make Christ "King of glory" in a community. No one denomination can call the millions upon millions of non-Christian people of the earth to their knees for Christ in a generation but a combined effort will make Him "Lord of hosts." Shall we have that combined effort? Is He still "King of the Jews" for you? or is His "the world and, they that dwell therein?"

The Inter-Church World Movement gives us an opportunity to combine our energies, to unite our forces, to strike a common blow against the powers of darkness. Will we lose our name? or identity? Never. Did the United States lose its name or identity in the recent war? No. And when, indeed, our Christ shall be eventually crowned "King of kings, and Lord of lords" we will look in vain for the Christ of Pleasant Grove church (alone), or of Halifax County, Virginia, or of the Christian denomination, or any other one denomination or people, for we shall know Him as He is—Lord of Heaven and earth.

J. G. TRUITT.

INTER-CHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT ENDORSED

We, the undersigned pastors and members of the Christian Church in attendance at the Pastors' Conference of the Inter-Church World Movement at Richmond, Va., desire to express our gratitude to Almighty God for this great unified movement for world betterment and evangelization.

We believe this Movement to be of God, divinely inspired to meet the present unparalleled world needs, by bringing together in a fine spirit of co-operation the forces of the Protestant evangelical churches, in order that they may enter the many wide-swinging doors of opportunity for Christian service.

We are profoundly impressed with the far-reaching, constructive program presented, with which the Movement is challenging the Church of Christ to a task the magnitude of which far surpasses anything it has ever attempted.

And believing further that the criticisms of and objections to the Inter-Church World Movement, its motive and policy, can be and have been overwhelmingly refuted by the work already accomplished; by the spirit of the co-operating brethren of the Churches, taking part in these Conferences; and by the frank, explicit and official denial of said criticisms and objections.

Therefore, be it, Resolved, that we in the spirit of the message and of the Movement give it our hearty endorsement and pledge our individual support and co-operation in the work which the Movement is undertaking to accomplish.

And further, be it Resolved, that we who are in attendance upon this Conference of the Inter-Church World Movement sincerely desire and devoutly and humbly recommend that the Christian Church as a whole and in all its constituent parts and especially our Southern Convention participate to the fullest extent possible in the organization, budget, survey and other departments of the Movement.

WONDERFUL!

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is now shining in four thousand new homes. Wonderful fact!

Counting an average of four in each family who can read, you have sixteen thousand persons who have an opportunity to read THE CHRISTIAN SUN, who did not have that opportunity before. Wonderful opportunity! If these sixteen thousand people will read THE SUN carefully, during these several weeks that it is being sent to them, what a wonderful blessing it will be to them!

Then, if they will become permanent subscribers, and continue to read the paper, they will learn, not only of the great work that is being done through the Men and Millions Forward Movement, but of other matters relative to our work, and the enlargement of the Kingdom.

In all probability, they may become more definitely identified with the work of the Christian Church, and become intensely interested in the business of the King.

I wish that THE SUN could continue to go into every one of these homes, and many others as well.

The home is a wonderful institution. It is the foundation upon which our Republic rests. The home is made up of individuals. These individuals are influenced by what they see, hear, and read. Therefore, it is highly important that the home be provided with good reading matter.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is of that type. It contains great messages. Here is a quotation from one of Dr. Staley's sermons, concerning the home. It is the closing sentence and one of the most striking utterances I ever heard. He says: "Over the roofs of our homes roll the greatest responsibilities. Out of its doors our children go; to Heaven or to Hell; for there are but two places. Which shall it be?"

I wish that every father and every mother in all our land could have heard these wonderful words. Read THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

HAYES' CHAPEL

I have been able to fill only two of my appointments since our conference last November, on account of Influenza in my family and churches. I met the appointment at this place the first Sunday and the Saturday before. We had a very small attendance, five on Saturday and twenty-one on Sunday. The small congregation was due to sickness, fear, and extreme cold weather. Very little could be done for the Men and Millions Movement. I preached to them on the subject of "Doing Religion," from the text: "Go thou and do likewise," setting before them the fact that we are living in an age when we must be up and doing, or lose our opportunity as a Church. May the Lord direct us in this our great undertaking.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE

With great surprise we see the fight carried out by the Catholics against Mr. William H. Anderson, the Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York State. This attack should open the eyes of our brethren to see that the Catholics constitute the most powerful help the enemies of the prohibition may have, or at least one of the most powerful.

We, who have lived between Catholics in latin countries, have never doubted of it. We call the attention of our brethren on this important matter. It is being wanted to know what are the Protestants doing in favor of Mr. Anderson while he is the victim of the most violent attacks of the Catholics. We believe that all the Protestant churches should come out by his side defending his personality and his cause which is the cause of prohibition.

Many false statements and mad and insultant words have been uttered against him, some stating that he carries out this campaign for the sole purpose of getting some money, the same as his followers, and not because he is specially interested in such movement. They also speak of his followers as a fanatic sect.

The Catholic Clergy of Brooklyn and New York declared openly with special emphasis in The Tablet, their weekly newspaper, that they will not vote for any political candidate that is in favor of this cause. We must read the New York Times of March 7-13 to see what kind of utterances they use against Mr. Anderson and the Protestant Church as a whole defending their cause against prohibition. They not only attack him and insult him directly, but call his cause "The Anti-American Campaign," when we all know that there is no other institution more American than this which tends to improve the moral and spiritual conditions of the country. This way of attacking indicates plainly the great power that the Catholic Church have achieved over the great cities like New York, Chicago, and others.

What are the Protestants doing? Are we going to leave Mr. Anderson work alone by himself? We are permitted to suggest that our churches is some way send letters of aprobation to this gentleman or take some kind of measure they think best adopted to the case. We are greatly in favor of this cause and believe you will support it.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION

My dear Editor:—

I have just read your editorial in regard to preachers not receiving enough pay

I have been reading THE SUN long before you came into the world. I have read a great many editorials during that time about church members not doing their duty by not paying the preacher all they should, yet I do not remember ever seeing an editorial about a preacher not doing his duty. Mr. Editor, did it ever occur to you that a preacher could make a mistake or fail to do his duty?

I am a true believer in the Bible. I believe that God will pay His promise. I believe if a man is called of God to go and preach the Gospel, God will take care of him if he does his duty. God has never promised a man to give him all he wanted. If He should do that, He would ruin most of us. He said, "Go into my vineyard and work and whatsoever is right, I will pay you." Mind you, He does not say what you may think you ought to receive or what some organization may think you ought to receive. He is the sole Judge. When you hear a preacher grumbling about not receiving enough pay, I want you to look around and see how much work he is doing for the Master.

A great many preachers are like a great many other individuals, they are afraid of going the second mile. No man deserves any credit for doing just what he has to do. The laziest negro will do that. The man who is willing to do, and does more than he has to do is the one who is promised the reward.

I do not think a preacher is entitled to a living salary, who only gets out and preaches two, three or four times a month, reaches his appointment on the last train, and leaves for home on the first train after dinner. They half way prepare one sermon a month, drag through it at every church for the month. Some of them are not doing that well. They are chewing over some old stuff that they have been chewing on for years. We have men in our Conference, I am confident, who have not tried to prepare a new sermon for years. They and their churches are going down. Yet they blame the church members and accuse them of not paying what they should. A great many church members are paying dear for what little good they get out of their preaching.

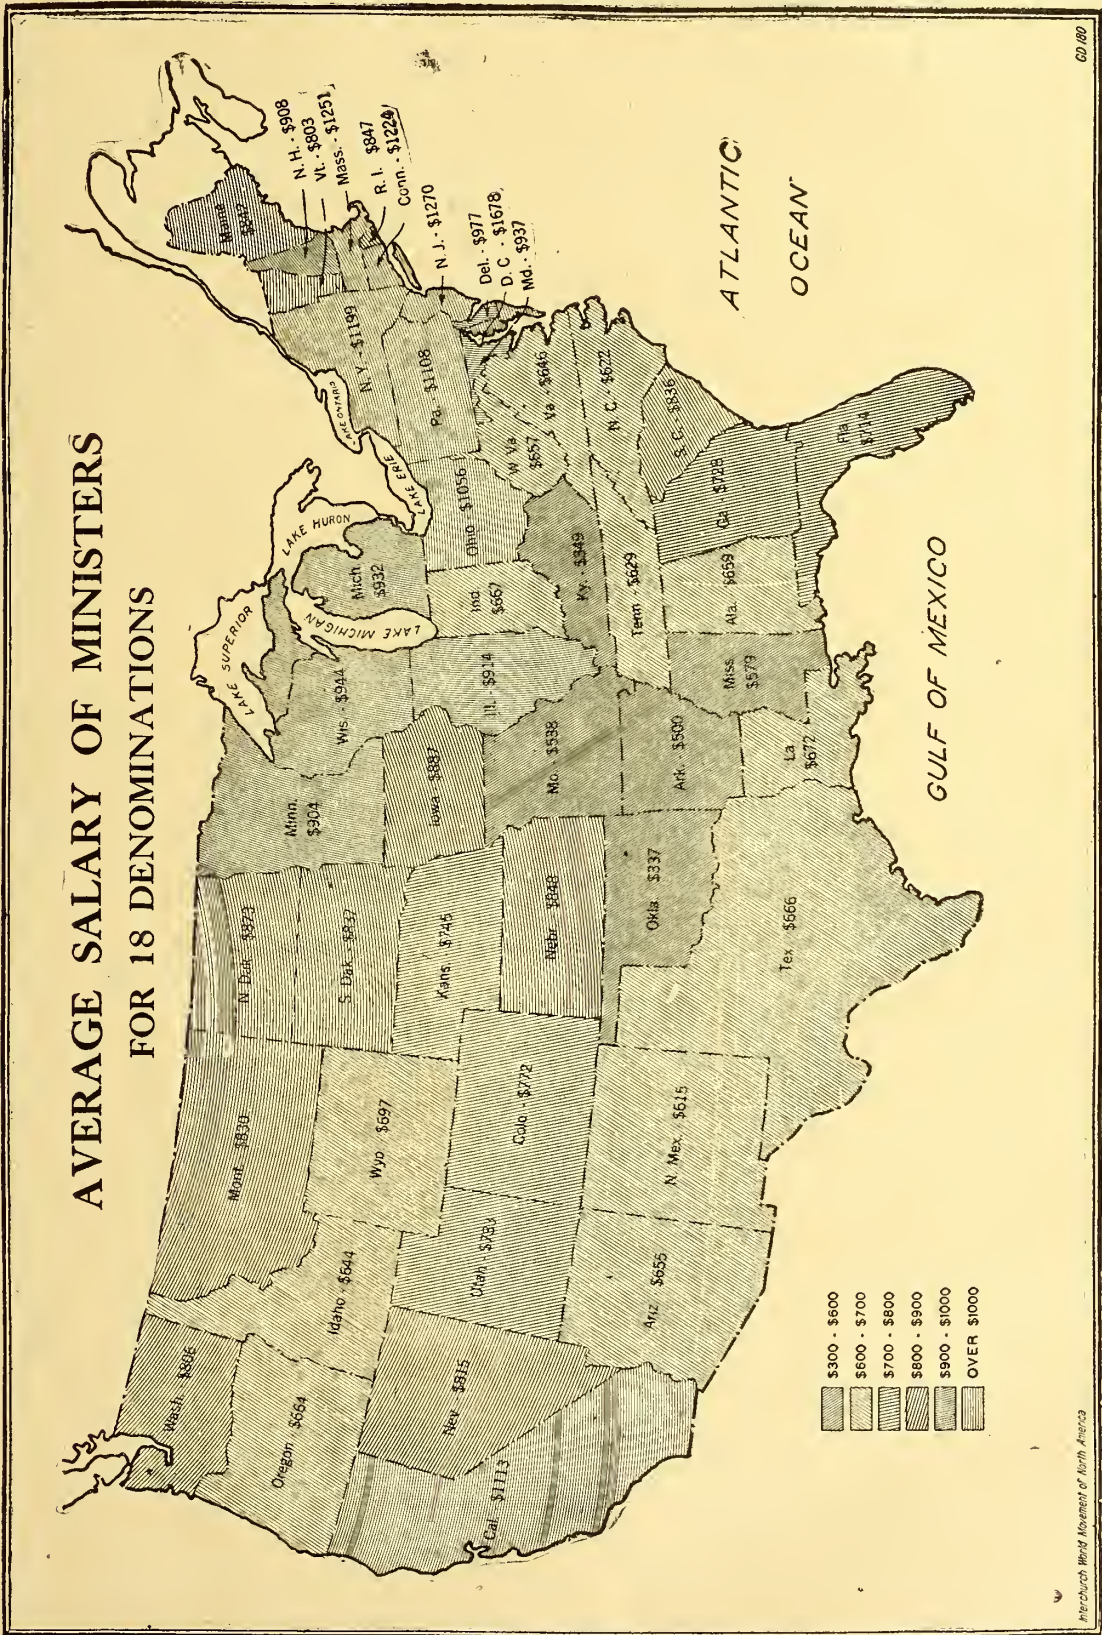

I am not pretending to say the church members are doing their duty, but there are two sides to the question. I was practically reared among preachers. My father's house was always the preachers' home, not only of our denomination, but all other ministers who passed our way. Since I have had a home of my own, preachers of any denomination have found a welcome. I was taught to have the utmost confidence in a preacher. One who stopped at my father's, more than any one else, I thought was the best man in the world. Some years later I happened to be stopping at this preacher's home. I heard a great commotion at the barn lot, so I went out to see what was the matter. He was having some trouble with his cattle and was cursing "to beat the band." Since then I have looked upon preachers with some degree of allowance.

I understand that some of our churches are without preachers and some preachers are without work, because the preacher will not take the work for what the church is willing to offer. What will the preacher say when he goes up to the beautiful gate and is asked why he did not preach? I think I hear him saying to the Lord, "Yes, I heard your call and I would have preached, but they would not pay me enough, so I let them go." Do you think he will be excused? My belief is this: If a man is called of God to preach, if he goes out and does his duty, God will take care of him, or the teachings of the New Testament are not true.

Men and Millions

"OVER THE TOP" IS RIGHT

Men and Millions are things that Graham people are seriously interested in. Nothing yet has so aroused the enthusiasm of the church as the Men and Millions campaign. There is hardly an end to the amount of work that the team is doing under the efficient leadership of Brother M. R. Rives, who is the Captain. It was impossible for the team to get started on time because so many people had "flu," but since they did get started it is nothing short of inspiring to see them work.

All are delighted at the thoroughness and effectiveness of the campaign. Instead of the ten per cent as tithers, they reported more than fifty per cent, and hastened to say that there were others to be heard from. Over the top is certainly right in this case.

The plans for the membership campaign are being carefully worked out and the prospects are bright for another sweeping victory. Public services are to be held in the church each evening during the week of the drive under the leadership of the pastor for prayer, praise and public profession. The final service is to be held Easter morning at sunrise at which time the new members will be received. All are intensely interested in this part of the campaign. The feeling is that it must not fail. I believe that it will not fail.

ANOTHER OPEN LETTER

*Mr. Netum Rathbun,
C. P. A. Building,
Dayton, Ohio.*

Dear Brother Rathbun:—

Last week I had occasion to write to Drs. Denison, Thomas, Helfenstein, and Watkins in regard to literature and requests from their offices to ministers and workers in the Southern Convention which were confusing and in conflict with the plan of the Southern Church for the Men and Millions Forward Movement. Today I have received from a minister your circular letter of March 10 and the blank accompanying it.

I know that your letter was sent out with the best of intentions but this circular is utterly confusing to those of us who are trying to organize the field for the completion of our campaign by April 25.

We send THE CHRISTIAN SUN to about 4,000 persons in the Southern Christian Convention during this campaign, and I personally advised Dr. Denison to do the same thing in other parts of the Church with reference to The Herald of Gospel Liberty during the Forward Movement Campaign. Getting The Herald to a large number of persons during the Men and Millions Forward Movement might help the circulation of The Herald in the South, but it certainly would not help us in putting across our Movement, which differs from the general Forward Movement of the Church in its plans and in its dates, though of course what we do here will count as a distinct part of the General Forward Movement.

As a matter of fact you state in your circular that the campaign for finances will be held from April 25 to May 2, and will be for Forward Movement pledges exclusively from our membership and congregations. Now as a matter of fact the financial campaign in the Southern Convention begins April 18 and concludes on April 25, and there will be no campaign on the dates you give. You, therefore, must see how confusing it will be for literature like this to go out to our people in a time when we need to conserve every ounce of our strength and energy for the drive we are to put on.

May I, therefore, request you to send out a circular letter to each of the ministers and other persons in the Southern Convention who received this letter of March 10 stating that it does not apply to the churches of the South? And may I also request that you refrain in the future from circularizing these persons?

The Southern Christian Convention has agreed to raise $2,000,000 of the $5,000,000 that our Church is undertaking, and has decided to secure 250 life-work recruits, 2,500 tithers, and 2,500 additions to the Church. This we are doing by our own methods and unless we are allowed to carry on our campaign without conflicts it will be almost impossible for us to succeed at all.

With many regrets that this thing has occurred, and feeling sure that it will be a pleasure to you to correct the same, I am

Yours very sincerely,

W. A. HARPER,

HOLY CONVERSATION

I have lived to see this Scripture fulfilled, "For our conversation is in heaven." In the last two weeks I have heard more people, men, women, children, preachers, teachers, merchants, farmers, clerks, bankers, brokers, lawyers, doctors, all kinds and conditions of folks, talk more about the King's business than I ever heard before in the same time in all my days. Our Men and Millions Movement is worth while, and has more than paid for all that has been done in it, on this one account, should it achieve nothing else, namely, it has transplanted our conversation from earth to heaven. The people in our Christian Church certainly are talking about holy and heavenly things these days. Mothers are saying, "I do hope the Lord will see fit to call my boy into the ministry and I am daily praying to that end." Business men are saying, "I am convinced that tithing is Biblical, and I am willing to give as God has prospered me." Young men are saying, "I am willing to go anywhere that God may direct if I may but be used to win a soul to Him." Young women are saying, "I want to be used of God in this Movement to do what I can and all I can for Him." Hundreds are reading all they can get on the Movement to find about it, and to learn what they can do. The wife of a very busy merchant said to the writer awhile ago,

"We have the Men and Millions Movement at our house three times a day, breakfast, dinner and supper, and my husband is so full of it that he talks it to his customers between meals."

If our heavenly Father does not give us men to fill our pulpits He will have to turn a deaf ear to thousands of earnest, anxious, devout and holy petitions that are ascending to His throne these stirring days. "Pray ye the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." This He has commanded through His Son, and He will not go back on His Word.

Men and Women everywhere are inquiring about the tithe, about Biblical giving, about the right attitude to property. I rejoice that I have lived to see this day, a day in which the peoples of the whole Church are diverting their minds to holy conversation, to heavenly things. We have come upon a program large enough, inviting enough, engaging enough to challenge every man, woman and child amongst us, and to afford all standing room, and all a topic worth talking on.

Surely blessings and benefits alone can come from such a Movement and to a people who in convert of action are seeking to be every day co-workers together with God in helping to reach and save this world to Him.

J. O. ATKINSON.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Discovery reveals new material and excites activity among men. The discovery of America by Columbus excited Europe and started a train of fortune-seekers. Western nations can repay Columbus only by making wise use of their civilization. The discovery of gold in California caused the "rush" in 1849. Great movements of men to the Pacific coast followed as a result of the "find" in California. But with all our research and progress, Africa still yields more than twice as much gold as the United States. In 1918 the United States produced $68,500,000.00 and Africa $176,000,000.00. This is given to show that Africa is rich in natural resources, and to suggest that the Christianization of that continent would add incalculably to the wealth of the world. Gospel missions carried out in the spirit of Jesus would pay better than any commercial enterprise in the world. No investment of money has paid such dividends as the money invested in missions; and yet some Christians say: "I do not believe in Foreign Missions." Nothing but sheer ignorance of facts permits any man to take that position. The schools are teaching French and Latin where they ought to be teaching geography and history. Geography is all built on discovery, so is progress.

The discovery of continents and islands, of gold and iron, of coal and lead is not the only kind of discovery. New obligations, new methods of doing things, new men and women for service all increase activities, multiply agencies, and add to the progress of the human race in knowledge and good works.

The Men and Millions Forward Movement is making many kinds of discovery. It has already discovered that the women in the churches have more real organizing ability and enterprise than the men. It has discovered a woeful indifference on the part of the men of the Church so far as personal religious activity is concerned. The men have drifted into the habit of paying to support the cause of Christ and then neglecting the Lord's work. This discovery is exciting the leaders and awakening the men. There is more real thought in the Church about Christian obligations than ever before. It has discovered another valuable fact: that the men who have accepted service in this campaign are capable men, willing men, useful men in the Church. Latent talent is coming forth and the end of this campaign will show a new spirit of activity. We have not known till we began to take stock that we were doing so little and able to do so much. The discovery of resources is the first step toward progress.

The tithe is increasing, the workers are more active, the spiritual hunger is stirred, and emulation among the churches. I have just read a good letter from a layman in Alabama who says: "May the Lord direct us in our Men and Millions Forward Movement. We shall go over the top." Nearly all of the delegates to the Convention, who have answered the letter of inquiry, have said they would attend, remain to the close, and serve in any capacity needed. The laymen are waking up and the preachers will have to get a new move in their work. The day of "clergy" and the "cloth" is passing; the day of the "minister" and the men and women in the Church is dawning. Jesus came not to be "ministered unto, but to minister." Leaders hereafter must lead in living, in giving, in working, and in progress. All must take part in the service of the King and the work of the Kingdom. In the war two per cent did the fighting, but ninety-eight per cent co-operated in the great world struggle. Behind the whole Church enterprise must be the whole Church membership.

Outline

- I. A Great Opportunity
 1. The opportunity of service.
 2. The opportunity of greatness
 3. The opportunity of leadership.
- II. A Great Responsibility

That of rising to sublime heights or decreasing to insignificance.

 1. As a denomination.
 2. As a local church.
 3. As individual members.
- III. A Glorious Experience
 1. Of spiritual achievement.
 2. Of spiritual greatness.
 3. Of spiritual leadership.

This is so fine, I wanted our people to know it. Think it over, fill in the thoughts, pray as you think and fill in.

W. A. HARPER,

WITH OUR ORGANIZATION LEADERS

Mrs. J. Pressley Barrett enters a hospital on Monday, March 22 for a major surgical operation. Let us pray that it may please our Heavenly Father to restore her to health and to her work in this splendid cause.

The mother of Rev. B. J. Earp is quite ill. Pray that God may spare her to her family and for His service.

Capt. T. A. Eure is married. Surely we will rejoice with him and wish for him and Mrs. Eure every joy and happiness.

W. A. HARPER.

GLAD OF THE INTEREST TAKEN IN THE WORK

I am so glad to learn that the people of different places are taking so much interest in the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Christian Church. My prayer is that we may go over the top in this undertaking.

R. H. COBLE.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

We were very much pleased when the teacher presented the reports for the school month ending Friday, March 12. We have offered as a prize $1.00 to each one who makes an average of 95 on all studies during the month. Also those who make 90 and over get on the honor roll. In looking over the reports we found the following made an average of 95 or more:

Louise Jones, 95 5-8; Hattie McKinney, 95 1-3; Frankie Frederick, 95; Eugenia Hilliard, 97; Swannanoa Weatherspoon, 96 1-2; Lela Brady, 98; Wilson Collier, 95 5-6; Joe H Jones, 95 1-6; Ella Frederick, 95.

Those who made an average of more than 90 are as follows: Vernon Sandlin, Walter Betts, Marvin Franklin, Maggie Lennard, Clarence McKinney, Allie Lee Pierce, Thelma Thomas, Kinsman Wicker, Irene Jones, Z. T. Jones, Eunice Bradshaw, Earl Churchill, Coy Franklin, Pauline Andrews, Mattie Lee McKinney, Hubert Terrell, Emma Morelen, and Pearl Goodwin.

Out of fifty pupils, twenty-seven got on the honor roll and nine made an average of ninety-five or more. We feel that this is a splendid showing and will be of interest to our friends to know that our little fellows in the Orphanage can make good grades as well as other children. Miss Brothers, our faithful teacher, has worked hard and the splendid work the children are making shows that her work counts.

Some of our friends in Georgia want to help keep us sweet and the following have contributed Georgia cane syrup for the purpose:

J. B. Poston, two gallons; J. L. Hatcher, one gallon; E. V. Hatcher, one gallon; J. S. Stephenson, one gallon; J. Carl Claxton, one gallon. There is none better than the Georgia and Alabama cane syrup and we are very fond of it, and very grateful to our friends in Kite, Georgia, for this contribution. Who else would like to help in this work?

Other friends have sent in the following:

Mrs. P. P. Jones, and others, one pair sheets and pillow cases.

Ladies' Aid Society, Wakefield church, Va., one quilt.

Mrs. C. V. Dunn, Paces, Va., two dozen cans fruit.

Ladies and girls, Union Grove church, two quilts.

Mrs. A. R. Chalfant, Middletown, Ind., one box clothing.

Mrs. C. H. Coles, Portsmouth, Va., sheets, towels, and pillow cases.

Mrs. C. A. Maren, Piqua, Ohio, one gingham dress, sheets, hose and vests.

We are grateful for all these contributions and they will be quite a help to us in this work.

I notice one of the little cousins tells us this week that his church is going to raise a large offering for the Easter Offering. That is very encouraging to me. I truly hope all our churches will make this offering and make it liberal. Why not every church have a part?

Watch the Children's Home Fund grow. How much do you want to invest in that fund? Ten children were turned away in the last week for the lack of room.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—My daddy is going away tomorrow to speak in behalf of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. I don't want to give him up for so many days, but perhaps when I get to be a man, I will be glad he went to speak in behalf of the great Movement. We are planning a great day Sunday, April 4, which is to be known as Orphanage Day in our Sunday school. We expect to make this the largest offering yet. Hope the little boys and girls are all well and happy. I enclose 50 cents as my dues for March. Love and best wishes to all.—Olive D. Poythress, Jr.

I know your daddy regrets to leave you, but we must do our best in the Men and Millions Forward Movement, for it means so much to the Church. I wish that I could be with you for your special service April 4. Your letter is very encouraging to me.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am very anxious to join the band of cousins. Enclosed you will find a dime for March. I am a little girl twelve years old. Am in the sixth grade at school. I like my teacher fine. With love to all the children.—Leona Ayscue.

I am glad you are going to be a member of our corner. We are glad to have you. I hope you will write each month.—Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl ten years old and I want to join the band of cousins. I have been reading the children's letters in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I like to read them very much.

I am sending you ten cents for the orphans. I hope to send you more next time. I go to school at Truitte. My teacher's name is Miss Thelma Burdette. I sure do like her. I am in the fourth grade. My father and mother were at the meeting at Wadley. I wanted to go very much, but I had to go to school. My father's name is Rev. C. W. Carter. We live about one mile from town. If you ever come to Wadley again, you must come to see us. With love to you and the little cousins.—Teresa Carter.

Glad to have your letter. I met your father at Wadley. Yes, I will come to see you when I go back down there. I will tell you what I want you to have to eat. I want hot biscuits, butter and Georgia cane syrup. That will please me.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am writing as a new member asking to join your band of cousins. I am a little girl eight years old. Enclosed you will find ten cents for the little orphans. With love and best wishes.—Emily Mae Gardner.

Now, you are a good little girl and live in Richmond. I was in Richmond last week. The next time I am over there I will look you up and get acquainted. I want to visit your church some time.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—We are three brothers and one sister who wish to join the band of cousins. Enclosed you will find $1.00, dues for February and March. We wish to help the babies who have no mother and father.—Walter Stokes, Martha Sue, Pearlmon, and Malchus Welch.

I am having letters this week from a number of new consins and we are real glad to have you join. When we get the baby's home completed and the “fun full” play ground set up, I am going to invite all the cousins to come and see us and have a good time. We will sure make ice cream.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl five years old. I want to join the band of consins. I enclose twenty-five cents. I am lonesome now as my little brother, the same size of me, has gone to live with the angels. I have to play by myself. I have a brother twelve years old in the high school: I will get him to write for me again if this does not get in the waste basket. With love to you and the cousins.—Pattie Slaughter.

This nice little letter will not get into the waste basket. I know you are lonesome without little brother. You must come up to see my little girl. She is five and she has a little brother. You can have a good time.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am anxious for sunshine and warm days to come so that I can get out to play. We don't always have such bad weather as you found at Linville, February 24. Enclosed find twenty cents for February and March. Hope all the little friends at the Orphanage are well.—Lester B. Frank.

It did snow, didn't it? We enjoyed the day splendidly and hope to come back again some time.—“Uncle Charley.”

NOTES

Rev. F. C. Lester, Graham, N. C., has been teaching in the schools of his town for some time in connection with his pastoral work. Last week the superintendent resigned to accept other work, and Brother Lester was chosen to succeed him. Congratulations and best wishes.

Rev. L. E. Smith is doing a great work at Third church, Norfolk, Va. He has received into the church, in a little over a year, one hundred and ninety-three members. Plans for a new church are being perfected and it is hoped that the building may be begun by the first of next year.

Rev. H. W. Elder has this to say about our work at Ashboro: “We must do something to help these good people to build a church. This town is surrounded by churches of ours and our people will continue to move here. It is a shame that we have delayed the matter so long. Let us stir our people over this proposition.” We consider Brother Elder's remarks a challenge to the Mission Board. It meets the Board on its own platform—that the flow from the rural churches must be met by churches in the towns and cities, or the membership is lost.

DEVOTIONAL

FERVENT PRAYER

I have been preaching some seventy years as a Steward for my Lord and Master. I have witnessed the conversion of thousands of souls. I have prayed with hundreds, and perhaps thousands of sick persons and have seen good results of many of my prayers. I am still anxious to do something for the Master and for the good of others.

If any persons are suffering with chronic troubles which their physicians cannot control I shall be glad to have them call or correspond with me and I will arrange an hour of prayer for their relief. If there are any unsaved people, particularly old persons, that desire to become members of the Lord's family, I will furnish them condensed portions of the Scripture and some words of counsel that I know will be profitable to them. I will also arrange a special prayer that the Lord may bless them. I am such a believer in prayer, having seen so many good results therefrom, that I am anxious to be of service in this way.

If any one desires to correspond with me, kindly write names and addresses plainly.

PROVING GOD IN PRAYER

Have you ever really proved God in prayer? When God puts some thought or purpose in our hearts, if we but patiently wait His time, and live in His will, He brings it to pass. Every right desire comes from Him, and it is given us that He may bring it to pass in our lives. It means obedience to His Word and will. It means the dethroning of self and the enthronement of Christ. It means when we come to God in prayer we must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of those who diligently seek Him. We must come in Jesus' name, for it is only through the Son that we have any claim upon God.

The selfish Christian will never see the hand of God working supernaturally for him. But the commandment keeping, abiding Christian will see the Lord's hand working in his behalf, again and again, for such an one is not limited in what he may ask. He who said, "All power is given unto me," has told His followers to "ask anything in my name, I will do it." Is it not strange that so few Christians are really laying hold upon those strong prayer-promises, promises which were repeated over and over by the Master Who in a few short hours was to be nailed to the Cross for you, for me?

The farther we go in prayer, the more severely Satan tempts us. He knows the power of prayer far better than most Christians do. He also knows when God says: "It shall be done," it will be done. He knows the abiding Christian who is laying hold upon God in His promises, has "power over all the power of the enemy." So he tries to break down that power. He tempts, he tries to divert, he hinders, he fights, he makes one terrific onslaught after another, he seeks to fill the mind with doubt, he tries to discourage. But if Jesus' Words are abiding in us, and we are abiding in Him, He will shield us in the hour of temptation. That is one of the "anythings" He will do if we ask.

Have you ever proved God in those promises? Have you ever told Him to take yourself, all your power, talent, possessions, your all given over to Him to use as He shall see fit, just as long as you live? If you have, those promises are yours to meet your every need. They are surer, they will enrich your life far more than your bank account possibly can. Your banker only lets you draw upon what is your own. Jesus has given every abiding Christian permission to take His name and go to the Father Who is "able to do exceeding abundantly above all we ask or think," and ask "what ye will," with the assurance that it shall be done. Are you calling Him Father and still living in poverty? Or, are you coming in that name and letting the Father enrich your life with His poured-out blessings just as much as He desires to?

THE FAIRY GIFT

There was once upon a time a little girl who was to have a birthday party. She was a very, very little girl and this was to be her first birthday party and her mother and her daddy asked all the fairies they knew to be sure and come to it.

Of course, when anybody is invited to a birthday party, one is usually expected to bring a gift. So the fairies began to wonder what they could carry to the little girl.

"I will take her a flower for her garden," said one.

"I will carry her a lucky stone," said another. And each one planned his gift to take to the birthday party.

But there was one little fairy who could think of nothing at all to give. He was the last to choose his gift and all others seemed to have chosen what he might have carried. He thought and he thought. There was nothing he could take! But at last he hit upon something! "Why, I'll take her some of my own fairy playfulness," he laughed. "Nobody has given the little girl the magic of play."

And so when the birthday came, the fairies each brought gifts and the last little fairy came and gave the little girl some of his very own playfulness. She thanked all the fairies and she smiled happily when the fairy gave her some of his own playfulness. It was a splendid party. Everything had been planned beautifully to make it the loveliest birthday party that ever was, but when it came time for the cake and ice cream, the little girl's mother began to be worried. "Oh, dear!" she said to the little girl's daddy. "The beautiful big birthday cake that was promised from the store and was to be sent with the ice cream—the beautiful birthday cake had not come!"

"What shall we do?" asked the little girl's daddy.

"What shall we do?" the little girl's mother sighed. "I suppose we will have to wait for it."

But it did not come. And it did not come. And it did not come at all. By and by everybody knew that the beautiful big birthday cake that had been planned and the ice cream that had been ordered was lost on the way somewhere and was not going to be served.

The little girl's mother said she felt like crying and her daddy said he felt dreadfully. You see they had planned to make this very first birthday party the nicest birthday party that ever was—there was no ice cream and to be no beautiful big birthday cake either!

"Then the little girl can make a magic with my present," chuckled the fairy who had given the present of fairy play. "We can all pretend that we have the beautiful birthday cake and we can make believe that we have the ice cream."

"What fun," laughed all the fairies. "Oh, how jolly!" They sat down in a big circle at the empty table and the mother and the little girl's daddy sat there with the little girl. She was happy to use the new gift and she said, "Oh, now we are making believe! Isn't it nice!"

"Yes, we're making believe," the fairies all laughed. "It's lots of fun! What a perfectly wonderful birthday cake it is!"

"Pink icing!" called one of the others. "How good it looks! I can hardly wait for my turn!"

"What shall I do?" asked the little girl's mother of the fairy who had given the magic gift of play. "Tell me."

"Make believe you are cutting a big cake," he chuckled. So the little girl's mother made believe she was cutting a big, big birthday cake and she helped out in all the pretend pieces and the daddy made believe carry the make-believe cake all around the big table. Then everybody made believe to eat the ice cream too.

"My, how cold," shivered one fairy, "I have to eat it just a little at a time."

"I let mine melt before I eat it," another fairy said.

"I eat the pink and leave the chocolate for the very last," the play fairy beamed. "My, isn't it fun to play party!"?

"Yes, isn't it fun," everybody laughed, "isn't it fun?" And the strange thing about the magic of the playfulness was that everybody forgot about the big, beautiful cake that was not there and they forgot about the ice cream that had not come, and they just thought what fun it was to play pretend!

When it came to the candies and paper snappers, they had to play pretend to. But nobody seemed to miss the real paper snappers and the candy that were to have come with the cake and ice cream.

I think that the fairies really liked the play better than they might have liked the real cake, and the real ice, and the real snappers, and the real candy. At any rate, when they said good-by, every one of them said, "Oh, this has been the very most splendid birthday party that we ever went to and we have had a most beautiful time!"

"Yes, I am sure the party was a great success, dear," said the mother to the daddy. "It is one I shall always remember," said the little girl. "I am very happy with the gift that the play fairy gave me and now that I have some of the magic of his own playfulness, I shall always be happy, I think."

And the little girl who had received the magic of fairy playfulness was always happy. She didn't need to be amused as other children did. She was always thinking of games she could play and of fun she could make out of nothing at all. She knew how to play house in the garden and she built the little playhouse out of most nothing at all but some spools and a box. She gathered chestnuts and acorns that seem most worthless and she made them into dolls with little sticks for arms and legs. Other little girls wanted china dolls! Other little girls wanted real doll houses! But the little girl who had fairy magic found all her play in the simple everyday little things that meant nothing to the children who had china dolls and real painted doll houses.

But the little girl who knew how to make her very own fairy magic was the happiest little girl that there ever was and she always said, "Oh, I am glad that I have been given the most magic gift of fairy play for I can always make something out of 'most worthless everyday things."

Maybe you can try to make magic like this that the fairies gave. Then you will find what empty spools are really meant for. Then you will know the magic that can turn an everyday box into a doll's house. Then, too, all the little everyday things will be magic and you will be always finding jolly things to play.—Pattan Beard, in The Congregationalist.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 4, 1920

C. H. Stephenson

Subject: Israel ruled by Judges.—
Judges 2:6-16.

Golden Text: When in their distress they turned unto Jehovah, the God of Israel, and sought him, he was found of them.

Time: 1450 B. C.—1102 B. C.

Place: Palestine.

Junior Topic: God's Kindness.

Senior Topic: A Nation Saved Through Patriotic Leaders.

With the advent of the new quarter the scene of our lesson shifts Northward to the battlefield of Palestine (between Mt. Carmel and the Jordan) and the time moves back over a thousand years. To understand this transition thoroughly, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor workers should read the book of Judges as a whole, making a close study of the history of Israel during the period intervening between the death of Joshua and the birth of Samuel.

Loss of a Leader

The story of the book opens with a depressing situation. Shortly after Joshua's notable farewell address to the great gathering at Shechem, by which the people were moved to renew their vows to Jehovah, this strong Christian leader died "being an hundred and ten years old." And he was buried "in the corner of his inheritance." The passing of such a good man must have left the same feeling of regret in the hearts of the Israelites as did the death of Lincoln or McKinley in the hearts of the American people.

Unguided—The People Soon Forget

But, unlike the loss of Lincoln and McKinley, there was in Israel no able successor to take Joshua's place. The result was the people gradually fell away from their strict allegiance to Jehovah. This is but another illustration of the imperative necessity of Christian education and leadership. Minds left empty of moral training and religious instruction are sure to become prey to immorality or false worship. Unless education teaches positive good, worldly circumstances will teach its antithesis. The plastic character of youth is a thing that must be continually worked over and remoulded. Else it will lose all shape or purpose. And the greatest need of every age, of every people, is for more moulders, more artists with their lump of human clay, who are willing to patiently and diligently work it into shape.

Redeemed Through New Leaders

Jehovah realized such a need in the children of Israel and was moved to pity. He sent new leaders to deliver them out of the hands of spoilers, to save them from the worship of Baal and Astoreth. Today He sends not judges, but you and me. And one concern is with the souls of men. Daniel Webster once said: "If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we erect temples they will crumble to dust; but if we work on immortal souls we engrave on these tablets something that will brighten all eternity."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR APRIL 4, 1920

(J. Vincent Knight)

"The Power of an Endless Life." —Heb. 7:15, 16, 25; I John 3:1-3.

(Easter Consecration Meeting)

There are but few things that live long. Those things which are natural are short lived and must pass out of existence. Man at his best has a short life. Few live to be a century old, and those who do, have but a short time in the world, and no time to waste. Only those who live in Christ possess even a hope of the endless life, for it was Jesus Who made possible for us a life that begins here and ends in the great eternity with God. It is the life over which death has no control. Great men have laid down their lives for a great cause, but none save the Christ was able to lay it down and take it again.

The Endless Life is Invincible

And he who possesses this life has the strength of God to back him, and no powers of the world can overcome him. It is true that for a while he may seem cast down, and the powers of the world seem to have complete control over him, but God is still able to care for his own. The angry mob had set the watch for Jesus and thought they had made safe the possibility of his escape, but the Prince of God's power could not be confined within the tomb. God sent His angel to administer in a time of need, and broke the bonds setting the captive free. Eternal life is not only sweet, consoling, comforting, and safe, but is invincible for the powers of death and hell itself cannot destroy it.

It is the Enlarged Life

For things eternal may also expand. Luke 2:52, tells us that, "Jesus grew in wisdom, stature, and in favor with God and man." That is, He developed into a fourfold man, for He grew physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually. So he who has a claim in the endless life need not become a spiritual weakling by spending his time in self satisfaction. Already too many Christians have become content because they think simply wearing the name of Christ is sufficient. Let us not be content with simply wearing it, but honor it by a strong growth like His.

It is the Only Insured Life

Two men in our city recently passed out. Both were prominent men. One left a hundred thousand dollars insurance to his family, but had no insurance on his soul. His death, they tell us, was caused by a mixture of whisky and gasoline, which caused his car to turn turtle. The other left no insurance money for his family, but he did leave an unquestionable record for Christ. He lived the Christian life, and while he did not leave a big sum of money, he did leave his family the assurance that he was not dead but had simply changed life. One was insured against poverty of life, and the other against poverty of the soul. Which one had you rather have been?

Life does not consist of the things we seem to possess, for they, too, belong to God and He has a perfect right to take them at any time. So there is only one safe thing to do, and that is to insure against death and the great enemy of men's soul. Then we shall have the power of the Christ life that enabled Him to break the bonds and come forth on that glad Easter morning.

MARRIAGES

LONG-WARD

Thursday, January 15, 1920, at 4:30 P. M., in Graham Presbyterian church, Graham, N. C., a beautiful marriage was solemnized, the contracting parties being Miss Minnie Blanche Long, the oldest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William S. Long, Jr., and Mr. William Ira Ward, both of Graham, N. C. The groom is a successful lawyer and real estate dealer.

Immediately after the ceremony they left for a bridal tour to Northern cities. A host of friends attended the marriage and wished them a happy life.

Ceremony by W. S. Long and Rev. E. N. Caldwell.

BARLOW-HARRIS

Married at the Waverly, Va., Christian parsonage, February 17, 1920, 9:00 A. M., in the presence of a few friends, Mr. Arthur M. Barlow and Miss Margaret Ruth Harris. Mr. Barlow is a native of Ohio, and is now one of our successful young farmers of Prince George County, Virginia. Mrs. Barlow is a native of Sussex County, Virginia, near Waverly, and is a member of the Harris family who have for several generations been prominent in the Christian Church. The many friends of this young couple wish for them much happiness and great success. They left Waverly immediately for Richmond, Washington on a pleasure trip. Ceremony performed by their pastor.

JAS. L. FOSTER.

LIPP-NADZEIKA

Married at the residence of the groom Mr. John Lipp and Mrs. Lena Nadzeika of Kansas City, February 19, 1920. Only the immediate families and a friend or two being present.

Mr. Lipp is a native of Switzerland, now of Sussex County, Virginia, and a leading farmer of his community; and Mrs. Nadzeika is a native of Lee County, Texas. The friends and neighbors join heartily in good wishes for the long life and much happiness of these two hearts thus united from such distant points of the world. The ceremony performed by the writer.

JAS. L. FOSTER.

PARHAM-ROUNTREE

On January 19, 1920, at Bosley, N. C., Miss Mary Elizabeth, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Rountree, became the bride of Mr. Albert Parham, of Rocky Mount, N. C.

Miss Novella Rountree, a sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and Mr. Tim Lee Rice was best man. The ushers were: Grady Rountree, and Henry Barnes. Miss Myrtle Hoffer rendered the wedding music. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the many presents attested the popularity of the bride. They will reside in Rocky Mount, N. C. May their married life be long and happy.

J. M. ROBERTS.

JONES-REYNOLDS

At Suny Acres, on February 18, 1920, James Hardy Jones and Martha M. Reynolds, both of the County were united in marriage. Only a few of the near relatives witnessed the ceremony. May God bless this union. The services were read by the writer.

OBITUARIES

MICHAEL

Peter R. Michael was born February 28, 1849 and died February 22, 1920, aged seventy years, eleven months and twenty-four days. He married Miss Rosa Brown, who departed this life nine years ago. Into that family nine children were born, seven of whom preceded the father to the Spirit world. The children living are: Russell Michael and Mrs. Daisy King; also three brothers and a host of friends who mourn their loss.

Brother Michael had been in declining health about a year before his death. He was a prosperous farmer of Guilford County, and a good neighbor. Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Apple's Chapel Christian church. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

L. L. WYRICK.

PIERCE

The funeral service of Deacon W. N. Pierce, of Isle of Wight, Va., was conducted at Isle of Wight Christian church on February 27, 1920. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Evelena Pierce, one daughter, Mrs. L. A. Wright, Norfolk, Va., one son, T. L. Pierce of Isle of Wight, Va.; two brothers, S. W. and Frank Pierce of Norfolk, Va.; four grandchildren and a host of friends.

He was a Confederate soldier, and fought in many of the important battles. He was a good neighbor and a fine Christian gentleman. He was a charter member of the Court House church, and had served as a deacon since its organization. He was formerly a member of Antioch Christian church, and was carried there for burial. A father in Israel has fallen. The floral designs were numerous and beautiful. May the Lord bless the bereaved ones.

J. M. ROBERTS.

HOLT

After a serious illness of four weeks, the seven-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Holt of Graham, N. C., was gently folded into the loving embrace of the blessed Master in the early morning of March 12, 1920. Julius was a fine little fellow and bravely fought against pneumonia many days and nights without a murmur. Gladly would the parents and friends have kept him here, but the Master knew best and He plucked the 'bud to bloom up yonder. "The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away." Funeral services were held in the home by the writer, assisted by Rev. E. N. Caldwell, pastor of the Presbyterian church.

F. C. LESTER.

WILKINS

Samuel Wilkins, aged seventy-five years, ten months and twenty-six days, died at Lake View hospital, Friday morning, March 5, 1920.

Brother Wilkins served through the Civil War and was a brave soldier and fought many hard battles for his country. He was a member of Col. Tom Smith's camp, Suffolk, Va.; also one of the leading members of Cypress Chapel Christian church. He will be greatly missed. He leaves four children—two sons and two daughters: Mrs. Jesse M. Brinkley, Mrs. C. C. Harrell, Ernest L. Wilkins and Willie L. Wilkins; fourteen grandchildren, one brother, Alex B. Wilkins; two sisters, Mrs. Sarah Skinner and Mrs. Mary C. Harrell, and many friends. Funeral services conducted at his church and the remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery. The bereaved ones have the deepest sympathy of their many friends.

H. H. BUTLER.

STALLINGS

The funeral services of Mrs. H. E. Stallings, who died February 19, 1920, at her home on 20th St., Newport News, Va., were conducted by Mr. Waterfield of the Chestnut Ave. Methodist Church, assisted by H. J. Fleming of the Christian Church. The interment was in Greenlawn cemetery, February 20, 1920.

Before her marriage to Mr. H. E. Stallings, who survives her, she was Miss Flossie Moore. She was a native of North Carolina, coming from near Mooresville. She took training at the Buxton Hospital in Newport News, and graduated from that institution as a trained nurse in 1916. A little over a year later she was married to Mr. H. E. Stallings, the date of the nuptial being December 27, 1917.

She was a devoted wife and woman of Godly character and loved by all who knew her. She leaves a host of friends as well as her husband and immediate family to mourn for one who was dear to them.

May God in His mercy touch the hearts of those who mourn, and may the great Physician of souls be their Comforter.

The Easter Gift

BY JOHN TIMOTHY STONE

THE RESURRECTION may mean an inspiring, historical event or a present newness of life.

The world is ever ready for the joy of life overcoming the realization of death with its accompanying sadness. The Easter gladness heralds many messengers of spring and with them the light and development of summer and the anticipation of harvest, full and fair:

The Winter is past and with it storms and snow, ice and cold, and now the lengthening days and warmer sun fill the soul with cheer and hope.

These Spring days mean much to the Church of Christ. Larger crowds of people throng her aisles, choirs sing anew their glad anthem of praise, sermons thrill with victory and children bear flowers to adorn her altars.

Of all seasons this is the select time to devote our time and means anew to the service of the King over death, and the One who brought life and immortality to light.

The new year of faith begins with the opening tomb; the new era of faith with severing the chains of avarice and selfish accumulation.

The Resurrection of the future will find its true expression in the benevolence of today and he that giveth life will give it abundantly as we give our hearts and means into His care and keeping.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

AN ERRONEOUS PRESS NOTE

Many friends read with a question mark the following story in last Sunday's papers:

Elon College, March 27.—Elon College has just completed the endowment fund drive for $250,000 and plans are being drawn for a new chemical laboratory and a new building for the newly organized fraternities, namely Kappa Psi Nu and Sigma Phi Beta.

Coach Johnson, who has for the past seven years coached the athletic teams of Elon, has accepted a position as gymnasium director at Leland Stanford university in California. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will leave for California in July, the rest of the family will follow in September. At the present no one is selected to take Mr. Johnson's position. L. E. Clark of Siler City was recommended by Coach Johnson for the position. Mr. Clark is a very good man and all indications lead to his filling the position.

We are informed that the note was sent out as a joke by some student or students and that no such note was authorized by the College. The information concerning the endowment is grossly misleading as well as the other items. There is no such anticipated change, we are informed, as indicated about Coach Johnson. If you happen to read the above note, dismiss the information from your mind, for it is purely the prank of some one whose motive we do not know.

A WORTH WHILE LESSON

This note is written on the train between Morrisville and Durham. A young lady boarded the train at Cary and thought that she was taking the Seaboard train for Merry Oaks. We were two miles from Cary when the conductor discovered that the passenger was on the wrong train. Cary is a junction for the Seaboard and Southern railways and a Seaboard train follows immediately after the Southern from Raleigh over the same track to Cary and leaves the station about ten minutes after the Southern train departs. The young lady was innocent in taking the wrong train because she failed to notice what track the locomotive was on. The conductor refused to put her off and allow her to walk back; and even if he had, she would have missed the Seaboard train that she intended to take. We asked the young lady for her name and she said it was Farrell and that she was a grand-daughter of F. M. Farrell. We informed her that F. M. Farrell was a special friend of ours and a very special friend to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the paper whose editorial career that we were entrusted with. She immediately replied that she had heard us spoken of, and especially THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

This young lady needed help and we told her not to worry that we would take care of her all right. We immediately looked into our traveling bag for a sheet of official stationery and wrote this note: "Dear Friend Clements: Please look after the welfare of this young lady. Thanks.—C. B. Riddle." We told Miss Farrell to hand this to Brother E. W. Clements. We are satisfied that the young lady was taken care of all right.

Now this is a personal story but it is related to show this: We know the Farrell's in Burlington, Graham, Merry Oaks and in parts of Chatham County. We also know Brother Clements and his father, the beloved Rev. W. G. Clements. Knowing these friends as we do, quickened our interest in the young lady and we felt free to offer our suggestions and assistance, and she felt free to accept. This proves that the Church can be just as helpful in assisting in times of trouble as a secret order. Men often count themselves fortunate in being members of some fraternal order so as to be able to get assistance in time of need. We have a reason to believe that an Odd Fellow, a Junior, Mason, or Pythian can get assistance in a strange place from a Brother of his own Order. We doubt that if a man should approach another and tell him that he was a member of his denomination that he could always get a deserved assistance. It is a pity that Christian people are not so marked in their relation that they cannot aid each other just as members of fraternal orders do.

The Church should be the greatest and best means of assistance in every way. We sometimes doubt if the Church is functioning in as many ways as she is capable.

NOTES FROM THE WAR PATH

We note that Captains and other helpers are on the war path for the Men and Millions in the Eastern Virginia Conference. We take this item from Suffolk items to the Virginian Pilot for Saturday, March 27:

The men and Millions Forward Movement in Isle of Wight and Nausemond counties is receiving most hearty support.

The schedule for speakers for Sunday follows:

Antioch Christian church—Hon. George F. Whitley, 11 A. M.

Windsor Christian church—Rev. E. T. Cotten, 11 A. M.

Bethlehem Christian church—Dr. J. E. Rawles, Rev. I. W. Johnson, D. D., Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D., Mrs. I. W. Johnson, 3 P. M.

Cypress Chapel—Dr. J. E. Rawles, Mrs. I. W. Johnson, 11 A. M.

Berea Christian—Col. L. P. Holland, 11:30 A. M.

Holland Christian—Mr. C. A. Shoop, 7:30 P. M.

Oakland Christian—J. M. Darden, 7:30 P. M.

In another note in the same paper the following is taken:

At the Holland Christian church Sunday, Commonwealth Attorney S. E. Everett will address the congregation on the Men and Millions Forward Movement at the morning service at 11 o'clock. At 7:30 Mr. C. A. Shoop, of Suffolk, will make an address on the Men and Millions Movement. Beginning Monday night at the Holland Christian church, dedicatory prayer services will be held each evening at 7:30 o'clock for the week.

All this seems like business. Eastern Virginia will do her part. Hats off to her!

CONVENTION MATTERS

The Southern Christian Convention is soon to meet. Many important things will be up for consideration. The delegates elected are to represent the people, and are thus supposed to know the mind of the people in important matters. It is, therefore, important that each delegate begin to study about what the Convention is to face and find out the mind of the people in the matter of each item for consideration. A program, we presume, will soon be printed and will contain the things to be undertaken.

Members of the Church will also bear in mind that THE SUN will welcome anything tending to guide the Convention in its deliberations.

NEW COMERS TO THE SUN FAMILY

We are pleased to present this week the names of many new comers to THE SUN family. Others are on the waiting list and many others are expected to arrive. It would be a great pity not to largely increase our list from the large number of copies being sent free for three months. Friends, we are sure, will aid us all they can in the work.

ENCOURAGING WORDS

We are very much pleased to receive so many encouraging words from readers of THE SUN concerning the Men and Millions Forward Movement. So many friends in renewing close by offering a good word for what the Church has undertaken. A good sign, indeed!

MT. AUBURN CHURCH

The Editor has been somewhere every Sunday of late in the interest of the Men and Millions Forward Movement but due to so many like missions nothing has been said in these columns concerning our appointments

It would be unjust to our feelings, however, not to mention our trip on last Sunday. For more than a year we have been promising a visit to our Mt. Auburn friends. We left on Saturday afternoon, spent the night in Henderson and was met there Sunday morning by Brother J. Byrd Ellington who carried us to his home and then on to church. The edifice at Mt. Auburn is the third to be erected on the site. It is, therefore, a historical center of our people and is surrounded by some of the best families in North Carolina. The audience was reasonably large and we had a good service. Brother J. A. Kimball, the local captain of the church, was on the job with his literature and poster. He is enthusiastic over the work, and if all captains were as interested as Brother Kimball, it would be the easiest kind of a thing to put the proposition over in every church. Mt. Auburn does not, in any way, fear her financial quota, but may not be able to reach her requirements in some of the other points. The Men and Millions work at Mt. Auburn is safe.

This church has no regular pastor at the present time. Dr. D. A. Long was called and accepted but is wintering in Florida and Rev. B. F. Black is supplying on the third Sunday afternoons. Mt. Auburn is just the church to thoroughly demonstrate the work of an all time pastor for the rural church, and it would make us glad to see Mt. Auburn undertake just such a thing. When she discovers her ability and arouses her people to such an undertaking the task will be easy.

We hold pleasant memories of our trip and shall go again.

SIX PROFESSIONS IN CHRISTIAN CHURCH

There were six professions and five additions in the South Norfolk Christian church last evening when the pastor, Rev. O. D. Poythress, preached on the subject, "The Soul That Sinneth, It Shall Surely Die." The pastor returned Saturday from a speaking tour in the south in the interest of the Men and Millions campaign. Next Sunday, Easter, a series of revival services will begin in the church, and preparatory prayer service will be held this evening, Wednesday and Friday evenings. The Girls' Class 4 of the Sunday school meets with Mrs. W. B. Abbott, 26 Chesapeake avenue, Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.—Virginian Pilot, March 29.

EIGHT PROFESSIONS AT CHRISTIAN REVIVAL

At the revival services at the First Christian church which have been in progress a week and is entering on the second week, there were eight professions yesterday and seven additions to the church. At the service last evening the church was packed to its capacity. Chairs had to be placed in every available place to accommodate the crowd. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Morgan, will be assisted this week in the song service by Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of the South Norfolk Christian church.—Virginian Pilot, March 29.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

GEORGIA

The Rose Hill Christian church had a good day Sunday, March 21. It was a beautiful day and we had a fair attendance. Just before the sermon the pastor requested all who had become tithers to present themselves before the chancel to receive a certificate of membership in the 'Tithers' Union. At once more than one-third of the entire membership of the church came forward. The pastor took occasion to charge them to remember that they were not dealing with him or the church in tithing, but that they were dealing with God and therefore he urged the most careful faithfulness to do just what they had promised to do in paying to the Lord's cause at least a tenth of the increase of the labor of their hands and of their business. The members seem very happy in their purpose to pay to the Lord what He demands. We are hoping to go over the top in each of the four special efforts of the Men and Millions Movement and so contribute our little part to the greatest enterprise we have undertaken as a people. Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of the South Norfolk Christian church, paid us a visit recently in the interest of the Men and Millions Movement. He is a member of the "Flying Squadron." He made a fine impression on the Rose Hill church. We shall be glad to have him come again. His address was right to the point and did good, much good. He had the closest attention throughout the entire address. He is a rising man in the ministry of the Christian Church.

ALABAMA

As I haven't seen anything in our paper, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, from Clay county, I will write a few lines.

I think the Men and Millions Forward Movement is all right. If there was ever a time that we, as professed followers of Christ need to be wide awake and put forth our every effort to help humanity and bring souls to Christ, it is now.

I am very poor, financially, but I feel rich in the grace of God. I pray oftimes for the success of the Men and Millions Forward Movement and all efforts that are being made for the advancement of the Kingdom. I can't give much money, but I can give my life's service as a minister of the Gospel.

If this finds its way into print, I humbly ask all who read it, to pray that I may be a success in the hands of the Lord. Realizing that my life belongs to God, I feel proud to know that the Lord can use me.

I have preached three sermons since the church licensed me. Oh, how sweet to be in the service of my Lord!

May the Lord bless the Men and Millions Forward Movement. May it prove a great blessing to the whole world.

A REVIVAL AT DENDRON, VA.

On Wednesday night, March 17, we closed a ten days' series of meetings. The services were well attended throughout and at times it was difficult to seat the people. The preaching of Evangelist Victor A. Lightbourne was clear and forceful and appealed to the people. There were many who took a forward step, fifty or more decisions for Christ, seventy-five or more backsliders reclaimed and many Christians desiring a deeper consecration. Twenty members were received at the close of the meeting, most of them were men, heads of families, some of whom were not in the habit of going to church. The pastor received two into the New Lebanon church last Sunday afternoon and the Baptist pastor received ten at night, all of these having made profession during the Dendron meeting. We are expecting several more next Sunday morning and there will be several to join the Methodist church.

The older citizens of the town say that it is the best meeting they ever saw in Dendron, and the people are speaking in highest terms of the preaching of the Evangelist, and feel that our people are fortunate in having him as Convention Evangelist. We are praying that he may be greatly used of the Lord wherever he is secured to hold meetings.

We are now in the midst of our meeting at Wakefield where Brother Lightbourne is doing the preaching and also leading in the singing. Already there are decisions for Christ.

W. D. HARWARD.

MOORE UNION

I was at Moore Union Friday, March 19, at 10 A. M., in the interest of the Men and Millions Movement, but Brother T. E. White and his speakers did not get there. Their failure to reach the place was due to the rain. On Sunday I delivered a message on Stewardship, Ownership, and Tithing, and had marked attention. After the message, we organized the work as best we could. I have been here only twice since Conference on account of the Influenza in my family, including all of us; and besides this the Board of Health ordered the churches to be closed till the first of March. We, who have work in the rural districts, when we meet our congregations only once a month, cannot work the program of Men and Millions as the pastors whose work is in the city and town. We are at a serious disadvantage, but we will do what we can.

P. T. KLAPP.

HATTED AND POUNDED

In passing through Pittsboro some days ago, I was halted by Brother T. M. Bland, who immediately ordered me to back up to his store. I obeyed in railroad style. The next sound was muffled orders on the inside, in response to which his "old stand-by" clerk, Wrenn Gilmore, proceeded to place into my Ford $10.00 worth of first class groceries. It was a gift.

Brother Bland loves his pastor, and no man is more generous with his means to local church, pastor, and especially unfortunates within his reach, than he.

Men and Millions

A GOOD SERVICE

I am glad that many of our people are willing not only to work but to give to the Master's cause. When we see men and women eager to speak and pray for any one thing, it makes our hearts rejoice, especially when they work and pray together for the uplift of mankind and the glorification of God.

We had services at Liberty Spring last Sunday. Brother Jay, pastor of Holland church, Dr. Jake Rawles and Mr. Pretlow Holland were there. Last, but by no means least, were Dr. I. W. Johnson and his wife, besides visitors from Holland and Suffolk.

Brother Jay led in prayer in behalf of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. This was followed by a splendid address by Mr. Pretlow Holland. Then another splendid address by Dr. Jake Rawles, one of Suffolk's leading physicians, and a Christian gentleman.

To my mind, no one could listen to such splendid addresses and not decide to render unto God the things that belong to Him. I feel that the time has come when men and women should awake to the duty that lies before them. May this Men and Millions Forward Movement be a means toward Christianizing this great world.

THE LAYMAN COMES INTO HIS OWN

The writer is now of the opinion that the chief joy of our Men and Millions Movement is to come to the laymen and the laywomen; not only the chief joy but the chief benefit and blessing as well. I think there is Scripture for this. Great revivals have sprung up and have been carried to successful conclusions when laymen got busy. According to the teaching of Scripture, the greatest of all revivals was that carried on by laymen. Laymen went out as fire brands in the Master's service in the first and greatest revival. The Apostles, (the preachers), could not get away from Jerusalem. Disciples multiplied there in Jerusalem and Jerusalem was being evangelized. But the work was local until laymen went forth to carry the message to the regions far out from Jerusalem. Stephen, the first Christian martyr, was a man commissioned by men, chosen by men, called into service by men. So were Phillip and five others. In Acts 8:1, we are told that "They were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria," (that is, the laymen were), "save the apostles." These remained at Jerusalem, but these others "went everywhere." That is to say, when laymen became willing to bear the message, they went forth from the established place and soon found lodgment in hearts and communities everywhere. That I say is the beginning of the greatest revival in history because it is the beginning of the preaching and teaching of the gospel outside of Jerusalem where the priests abode and from which the apostles could not depart, until the laymen had gone forth and shown them.

The preacher instructs, edifies and seeks to impress the disciples who gather at the house of worship. These disciples go out and carry the impression they have received and express by word of mouth that which has been impressed upon their hearts. All periods of church depression have been periods of inactivity on the part of laymen. Impression without expression produces depression. There is an awakening now from one end of our Zion to the other and mighty things are being done in the name of the Master because our laymen are active and eager and anxious in the work of the Kingdom in these stirring times. I heard a busy business man, a layman, say the other day that if the lay-leaders in the church, the Captains and their team workers, would give forty-eight hours of their time to this Movement between now and April 25 in all the churches of the entire Campaign, in his judgment, would be highly successful. I do not think this man has over-estimated the worth, the power and the influence of his fellow laymen in Christian service.

I have been rejoiced more than words can tell to find laymen everywhere who are willing to lay down their work for hours or a day or days, as the case may demand, and give the Kingdom's work first place. These laymen are getting great joy out of this Movement and in the years that are to be they will be found towers of strength in the Master's name and for His service. As the laymen everywhere learn the real purpose and meaning of the Movement they become not only active but enthusiastic and I thank God that I have lived to see the day when we are coming back to the Bible plan of church awakening, of church progress and of church development. I feel that in putting this great Movement over in all of its departments, our dear Church here in the South will be set forward with a great bound and come into a strength and a joy and a spiritual power of which it had not dreamed.

We have in this Movement a platform broad enough for all to stand upon, and strong enough to sustain all, and high enough to make us look from the sordid and the base to the high and the holy, the true and the good. By standing together on this program and by co-operating in our Master's name we shall achieve victory, not in our own strength, but in the strength of Him Who doeth all things well. God bless our faithful laymen who are entering into this program like heroes in a great cause, faithful laborers in the vineyard of our Lord.

J. O. ATKINSON.

A UNANIMOUS CHORUS

The unanimous chorus ascends in waves of tumultuous praise to God where the leaders are functioning according to the plans of the Men and Millions Forward Movement that all is well and hopeful.

As a sample read this report from Col. G. O. Lankford, District Director of the Norfolk District: "Six churches in the Norfolk District report to date one hundred sixty-four tithers, with more to follow Rosemont and Third church will enroll a large percentage of their membership and Memorial Temple will have something more to report. Four of our churches report fourteen life work recruits, with more to follow."

And this from General C. H. Rowland, of the Eastern Virginia Conference Board: "Franklin church has seven life-work recruits, and our quota was three. Two of these are from my own home. I am so thankful. The Eastern Virginia Conference is on fire for this Movement and we are safely over the top for every drive, or I have not judged our people rightly."

And this from Field Marshal O. D. Poythress of the Aviation Corps, excuse me, of the Flying Squadron: "In the Far-South, everywhere that the local workers are on their job, the outlook is most hopeful. These splendid people will do full duty I am sure."

And so it is from every source, a unanimous outburst of optimism unequalled in any undertaking of our beloved Zion.

What makes my heart ache is the thought that some local leader or local church may not understand the will of God as touching this Movement and so fall short of His expectation. It will be a tragic thing for any leader or church to fail to honor God in this cause and join in making the grand anthem of praise we are now composing really unanimous in its shout of triumph and achievement for Him.

The Secretary of Organization is not supposed to write for the papers, but to plan for the covering of the field. I hope this brief statement of what daily rejoices my heart may inspire others to redoubled effort on the Master's behalf in putting our Men and Millions Forward Movement across.

W. A. HARPER.

A PROPHECY AND AN INSPIRATION

Just that, nothing more nor less. It occurred in Raleigh, which a year ago won its independence by contributing largely to Missions and to Christian Education and which has now become the prophesy and inspiration of the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

It happened on this wise: the Secretary of Organization on March 16 decided it was necessary for the Chairman of the District Boards of Directors to get together for final training for the drive of Consecration Week. It was thought that a practical demonstration of the plans that were perfected should be given, and Raleigh was chosen. Rev. George D. Eastes and Capt. L. L. Vaughan were conferred with over long distance and readily accepted the challenge. They had but one week to get ready for the drive, while the other churches have till April 18 and yet this band of the faithful was ready to be offered upon the altar of the Kingdom's need.

On Tuesday morning, March 23, the Chairman of the Boards of District Directors met in Raleigh, where the local team consisting of Capt. L. L. Vaughan, Mr. P. T. Hines, Prof. C. O. Lehmann, Mr. Herbert Rhodes, Mr. C. H. Stephenson, Mr. R. F. Howard, Miss Gladys Pool, Mrs. A. O. Harmon, women leaders, Mrs. P. T. Hines, and Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, was finally "set-up" for the drive and consecrated by prayer by Dr. J. O. Atkinson for their task, no, their privilege. In four hours this church with a quota of $7200 had gone

$1,719.20 over the top. It was decided to wait until Sunday, March 28, to conclude the drive. A telegram just received says the total now over the top is $3,502.00, with quite a few yet to be seen.

So Raleigh becomes prophesy of the overpowering success of the financial side of the Movement and inspiration to every congregation under the blessing of the Spirit to do its full best.

God bless Raleigh and our 233 other congregations in their splendid efforts for this noble Christian work.

W. A. HARPER.

DOING OUR BEST

How I wish with all my heart that our people in the churches would get over their fright about not being able to raise their quota in the final drive in our Movement, and settle down to the good conclusion that "We will all do our best." Unless we can get clear of that fright and fear and dread, we shall miss the very joy and glory of this whole Movement.

If this were a financial campaign, and was of men, we could afford to indulge such dread. But this is not primarily a financial campaign, and moreover, it is not of man, for man or by man. We are in a movement for the Master. We are seeking by all we know to get interested, to get men and women everywhere interested in the Kingdom. If we do the best we can, we need have no fears as to consequences. Let us be laborers together with God, and do our part. He will do the rest.

God is benevolent; He is good. And He never requires of us more than we are able to do. He seeks to share His joy with His children, and to give of His bounty and benevolence to those who enter into His program. And those who are going to get most out of this Movement are those who enter whole-heartedly into it and simply do their best.

Here is devoutly hoping that all of us shall share the blessings and the joy of this Movement by laying aside our fear, dread, and fright, and giving it the best we have of service, of time, of effort.

J. O. ATKINSON.

SUFFOLK LETTER

At the Red Sea the Lord said, "Moses, speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." That was a bold faith that obeyed God when hemmed in by sea, mountain, fort, and the Egyptian army; but there is no Christian progress without faith. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." and without faith it is impossible to go forward. There is such a thing as individual faith and there is such a thing as massed faith. Elijah prayed that it might not rain and it rained not for the space of three years and six months; he prayed again, and the heavens poured forth rain. The disciples prayed together in the upper room and the Holy Spirit filled the place where they were sitting with light and sound. At the Red Sea they all went forward; they all moved together. It was not a movement of leaders, but a movement of the whole congregation. It was the combined faith of millions. The sea could not stand the force of such faith. The sea parted and the church went over. That is the meaning of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. It is the call of God to the whole Church to "go forward," and if they obey all obstacles will disappear and the purpose will be accomplished. The weakness of the Church has always been in the inactive doubters. The task of this movement would be a joy, if all the members united a real faith in God, in themselves, and in the work to be done.

The hosts of the world threaten us, the difficulties of the way discourage us, and our lack of faith weakens us. Lord, give us more faith. The last great week is Consecration Week. That is the real test whether we have entered into the spirit and purpose of the other three points of the program. Life Recruits, Tithers, new members. If these have wrought in us the spiritual experience and service, the money will be promised to the Lord for five years. Withholding is robbery, and robbery is not only a sin but a crime. The task will be an easy one, if all go forward. The phalanx in the Greek army was the invincible army, and all because they were massed and moved forward. If Moses had moved toward the sea alone the waters would not have parted; it was the millions moving together that secured God's power in their salvation.

The joy came on the other side of the sea. No great task gives joy in its undertaking. That is the period of faith and action. Faith precedes victory; it is victory. "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." "We walk by faith, not by sight." Faith discovered the Western Hemisphere; faith constructed this Republic; faith built the airship; faith built the railroads and steamship. Faith decides for Christ. Faith does the work of the Kingdom. Faith builds the home. Faith is the great working force in the world. It is faith that conquers. In this Movement we need faith. Every church that has faith to move forward, with every member in the march, will go over the top and Men and Millions will be in the service of the King. There has never been such an opportunity for the Church and there has never been such a danger to members of the Church. If any Israelites in that congregation at the Red Sea had failed to march with the forward movement they would have fallen into the hands of the Egyptians. To refuse to go with their brethren would have been fatal. That is the danger now. The Forward Movement is so insistent that it is fatal to Christian life not to join in the procession.

(Report to March 27)

Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne is holding a meeting in the Burlington church now.

A great storm swept over portions of the South Sunday night and did great damage to life and property. Many are reported dead in Georgia and Alabama.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Rev. H. S. Harcastle are in the Virginia Valley onference this week in the interest of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. Dr. N. G. Newman and Rev. O. D. Poythress have just returned from the far South and Dr. Harper is still in that section. Others have been and will soon be in the field speaking in behalf of the Movement.

SIXTY-ONE TITHERS IN THIS CHURCH

Sixty-one persons signed the pledges yesterday at the Rosemont Christian church as the result of the Men and Millions campaign, which is being conducted throughout the denomination.

The pastor, Rev. J. O. Lankford, preached able sermons, which were heard by a large attendance of the members and friends.

The fact of sixty-one members of any church becoming tithers, speaks in unusual terms of its spiritual development.—Virginian Pilot, March 29.

DEVOTIONAL

SIX GOOD LITTLE WILLS

I will not worry.
 I will not be afraid.
 I will not give way to anger.
 I will not yield to envy, jealousy, or hatred.
 I will be kind to every man, woman, and child with whom I come in contact.
 I will be cheerful and hopeful.—Exchange.

"A LIGHT TO MY PATH"

"A light to my path." So reads the inscription on a memorial window in a certain Western church, while underneath appear the names of two devoted Christian workers, who have long since entered into the glory of the homeland. For long, weary years of self-sacrifice and often gloomy experience that faithful pair needed just that—a ray of light to fall upon their rough and toilsome pathway. That is our need, too. Human life is dark indeed without an illumination that comes from above. The light that life must have is in part a mental sunrise. Intellectual bewilderment is a frequent experience with some, while no man lives who always thinks clearly and reasons correctly. Here the wisdom of the Divine Spirit reinforces the jaded or errant mentality of the humble who, like the ancient Jew, inquire of the Lord what his will is. Cares, worries, pains, and sorrows, too, often weigh upon the feelings, creating moods of melancholy which can be relieved, or at least mitigated, only by a reference to the Love Divine that broods over his sin-cursed, care-harried world, lighting hope's beacon even in the darkest night. If there be any doubt—and doubts many there are—if there be any woe or temptation, the only cheer obtainable is from the light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, supplemented by that supernatural effulgence which radiates from the cross of Jesus Christ. Not natural religion alone, but the distinct offers of a mediatorial help and atoning love constitute that "light upon the path" which guides and cheers pilgrim after pilgrim through this unfriendly world. And the very best thing about this spiritual illumination is that it shineth more and more unto the perfect day.—Zion's Herald.

SO EASY TO WIN A SOUL

Some years ago, at a conference of Christian workers at East Northfield, Massachusetts, Henry M. Moore, a merchant of Boston, a man much used of God for the salvation of souls, in addressing an audience of ministers on the importance of personal effort to save the lost, said if we would only open our mouths and speak to them, we would be surprised at times to see how easy it is to win a soul to Christ. And he illustrated this point from his own first attempt.

After his conversions he became very desirous of winning some one else. To him it seemed a very great undertaking. But if he tried, as he meant to do, he hoped the Lord would let him live long enough to save at least one. But he had not yet mustered up the courage to speak to any one on the subject of their salvation.

Finally he thought his chance had come. An unconverted young woman had come to his home to do dress-making for his wife. She was to stay more than a week, and he determined to speak to her concerning her salvation. But day after day passed, as he put off the dreaded duty, and he had not yet the courage to speak to her. Finally the time for her departure came, and he was filled with self-reproach because he had failed so miserably. But as he took her hand to say, "Good by," he stammered, "Oh, Hattie, how I wish you were a Christian!"

With no reply, she was gone. She was gone, and he was left to reproach himself for not having even tried to win her. A day or two later, however, he was surprised to get a letter from Hattie thanking him for his interest in her soul's welfare. She said his parting words continued to ring in her ears, and she could not sleep that night until she arose from her berth, and, kneeling upon the floor of her stateroom, gave herself to Christ, in whose saving favor she was now rejoicing.
Rev. Henry M. Tyndall.

GOD'S WORLD

By Walter S. Percy

God's world it is despite the scars
 Disfiguring its weathered face;
 God's world despite the woes and wars,
 Which mar its universal grace;
 For every vernal season's rounds
 Reclothed the violated ground
 And over it exults abroad—
 "The world belongs anew to God!"

God's world it is despite the wrongs
 Obliterating what was fair;
 God's world despite the strangled songs
 And gladness silenced by despair;
 For every spring's returning tide
 Is like a message heavenwide
 From every flowery grave and sod—
 "The world belongs anew to God!"

God's world it is despite the stark
 And unredeeming humanness;
 God's world to be the shining mark
 Of Love to reach and lift and bless;
 Till every waste with music fills
 And nature's jubilation thrills
 All earth and heaven with the laud—
 "The world belongs anew to God!"

MISSIONARY

A REQUEST

When Miss Williams was here, she promised to put the names of those who bought blocks for the Santa Isabel Chapel in the corner stone, when they laid it. I have a long list of names to send to Santa Isabel, but not many from the South.

You have bought so many of the blocks, (much more than a third of them,) that I should like to have many more names from your societies on my list. I want the list longer, and I want your names.

Won't each one who reads this, who is a leader or secretary of a Young People's Society, or of a Willing Workers, or any other Junior Missionary Society, take this as a personal request? Please add to the great service you have done by sending me a list of those in your society who have bought blocks, unless you have already done so. I have received a very few names. Give the name of the society and of the church, please, and I will thank you so much.

OUR WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONFERENCE

The Woman's Missionary Conference of the Southern Christian Convention will meet in Raleigh, Wednesday, April 28, at 9:30 A. M., in connection with the Southern Christian Convention. All officers of the Board and all life-members are ex-officio members of the Conference. We want the officers of all Conference Boards to be present as representing their Conferences and desire that each local society shall send at least one delegate. All women who can attend should do so and all should notify Mrs. L. L. Vaughan, West Raleigh, N. C.

We women will be in session Wednesday and then on Thursday I hope we can all remain over, for that is missionary day for the Convention itself, when we will make our report. That night there will be a great missionary pageant and rally, with two addresses, and certainly we will wish to be present. So let all our women plan to attend for these two days.

The following tentative program has been arranged for our Woman's Conference on Wednesday the 28th:

MEN AND MILLIONS NOTES

(Deferred from last week)

Rev. H. W. Elder was with Rev. A. T. Banks last week in the Randolph district and made fine reports of the work in that part of our zion.

Rev. F. C. Lester, Graham, N. C., gave a splendid account of the Men and Millions campaign work in his church in last issue. Note that the church has reached a fifty per cent basis for tithers.

In speaking of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, Brother L. A. Townsend has this to say: "It is a very great pleasure and privilege to be of service to the Movement."

Rev. R. F. Brown, Chapel Hill, writes: "We have gone over the top at Chapel Hill with both drives so far launched, enlisting three per cent of our members as life recruits and fifty-two and one-half per cent as tithers."

Mr. Elmer Cook, Edinburgh, Va., in a private note to this office says: "We have held our rally service at Palmyra. Dr. A. B. Kendall spoke and everybody enjoyed his address. We are getting on nicely with our pledges so far and more than the average percentage is expected. I think that the Men and Millions Forward Movement is the best thing that we have ever undertaken and you can count on me."

A RIGHT PROMISER

(Elizabeth Palmer Milbank, in The Christian Herald)

A little friend and neighbor, aged five years, came in to see me the other day, shadows in his eyes and rosebud mouth drooping. I love him because for two years mother love has been to him but a memory. So I welcomed him with a smile and a "What's the matter with you, Billy-boy?" But there was no answering smile, just a doeful, "I got somefin' drefful to tell you, Mrs. Mason."

Something too "drefful" to be said aloud evidently, for he climbed into my lap, put the drooping mouth close to my ear, and whispered: "Mrs. Mason, my papa isn't a right promiser."

The hopeless despairing tone made the confession tragic. "Why Billy-boy, what do you mean?"

"He promised to bring me some candy, and he didn't do it."

"O, but he is such a busy man, dear. He just forgot it."

"Yes," he answered soberly, "I thought about that. But he promised to make me a swing, and he didn't do it."

I struggled to hold his faith. "Billy, he probably didn't have the things ready to make a swing."

"Yes, I thought about that, too, but he promised to take me uptown last night, and he didn't do it, and"—in a tone of sorrowful finality—"I know now he isn't a right promiser."

His voice broke on the last word, and his blue eyes filled, but too manly to shed tears, he whistled to his dog and hurried away before I could make further excuses for the father who, I also knew, was "not a right promiser."

THE "ETHICS" OF GAMBLING

(From the Northwestern Christian Advocate)

Under its department entitled "Expert Catholic Discussion of Current Problems," the "Catholic Citizen" answers the question of an inquiring correspondent, "When is betting lawful?" in the following manner:

"Now, it is commonly taught that it is not wrong to make a bet, provided certain conditions are fulfilled. Among those conditions the principle are:

"(1) That the money risked belongs to him who bets, and that he has the free disposal of it.

"(2) Betting, to be lawful, must be free from fraud and deceit.

"(3) Finally, the chances must be fairly equal on both sides. The sharper who abuses the ignorance and simplicity of the countryman, can make no claim to have come by his gains honestly. He is a rogue and a vagabond."

In other words, "shooting craps" is permissible, according to the ethical standards of the Roman Catholic Church—that is, so long as the die are not loaded. To sit in at a poker game is perfectly in order so long as the cards are not marked and the men engaged are losing their own hard-earned cash. Funny sort of ethics.

KING GUSTAV'S PROCLAMATION

(From The Lutheran)

Last December the King of Sweden requested the archbishop to publish in the churches a call to repentance and renewed devotion. In it the archbishop calls attention to the havoc wrought by the war and asks, "Will a new world be built on the burnt ruins of Sodom, or has man gone through this trial in vain?" In speaking of the hunger for bread in famished countries, he refers to a still greater hunger—the hunger for love and restored fellowship. He calls attention to the grievous loss which the home is suffering—the lack of reverence and obedience toward parents—to the growing selfishness and lawlessness. The admonition concludes thus:

"May the Lord send a hunger into our Swedish land, not a hunger for bread, not a thirst for water, but for the Word of God. For 'man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth.' He has placed eternity in the hearts of men. Of this hunger and thirst it is written: 'Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.' 'Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled.'

"To this the king adds an appeal that on the four appointed days of the year—days for thanksgiving, fasting, penitence and prayer—the people shall "enter the house of the Lord, there with one accord to contemplate His holy Word."

ESTABLISHING PROHIBITION

(From the New York Christian Advocate)

The work of making the nation dry is progressing remarkably well. Despite the exaggerated publicity given infractions of the law the benefits are being generally recognized. Every month that this new section of the constitution continues in effect affords incontrovertible evidence which abundantly justifies its enactment.

It is to be expected that there will be persistent efforts to overthrow or nullify this act. This has been true of every great reform law which has overcome an outstanding public evil, restraining the deeds of selfish individuals for the good of the whole. In this instance these efforts will be most vigorous, as powerful interests, accustomed to live off the earnings of their victims and thoughtless of the hunger and tears of women and children, will fight to the last in order to restore their outlawed traffic. They have no respect for the will of the majority or the welfare of the nation.

UPPERMOST

(From the Central Christian Advocate)

Souls! Souls! Let souls be the uppermost word in every pastor's thoughts.

Father, God and Father of our Lord Jesus, we do want to be soul winners. We do want sinners to know Thee. We do not want the blood of any to be on our hands. We would see men saved. Canst Thou not reveal Thyself in some way through us? Canst Thou not use us that we may know the rapture of pointing lost souls to the Lamb of God? Father, this is our uppermost prayer, that we might be fit for our Saviour to use, clay in His hands, anything so we are wholly His.

Father, God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, our uppermost wish is that we may be such Christians that when men behold us they shall think of Christ. Wonderful possibility! Heaven born song! Yea, that others may take knowledge of us that we walk daily with Jesus and in some measure reflect Him.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. Charles David Johnston requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of his daughter, Mary Ruth, to Mr. Ellwood Newton Pearce, Thursday evening, the fifteenth of April, at half after eight o'clock, Graham Christian church, Graham, North Carolina.

THE CHANGING ORDER

The nomination of Bainbridge Colby as Secretary of State was confirmed on March 22.

The government is to relinquish its power on pricing of coal April 1.

An effort is being made to expel the Turks from Europe.

A bill has been passed placing the standing army at 299,000.

Mrs. Cora L. Pond—I enjoy reading THE CHRISTIAN SUN more every day of my life.

"Divine Service."

It is a great error to confine "divine service" to temples and assemblies or to suppose that we are only doing the Lord's work when we are engaged in devotional exercises or laboring for the conversion of sinners or for the edification of Christians. Whatever right thing a man does heartily, as unto the Lord, is the Lord's work. The farmer, when he is carefully and wisely cultivating the soil, is doing the Lord's work. Plowing is as truly a religious work as praying. The merchant, when he makes an honest exchange, is doing the Lord's work. Dealing justly is as truly a religious act as warning sinners to flee from the wrath to come. A man is doing the Lord's work when he is doing that which pleases God. A man is doing the Lord's work when he is faithful to his employer—does a fair day's work; when he takes proper care of his health; when he governs his temper; when he is courteous to strangers and lends a helping hand to the needy; when he has a word of encouragement to the desponding; when he sets an example of industry and honesty; when he returns good for evil; when he leads such an upright, benevolent, God-honoring life that men take knowledge of him that he has been with Jesus. Religion does not consist solely in reading the Bible, praying, attending church, and laboring for the conversion of men. These are important duties, but they do not include the whole duty. God's will has reference to every act of our lives, and by faithfulness in the common walks and acts of daily life we may "adorn the doctrine of God our Saviour in all things."—Exchange.

A Man of Sorrows and Acquainted with Grief

If the veil could be lifted, if it might be permitted us to look into the secret chambers of that Great Heart which bore the world's sorrows and made them His own, what a revelation that would be to us! We have glimpses of it, flashes of light radiating from words that fell from the Saviour's lips; but who can take in their full meaning? There is a capacity for sorrow just as there is a capacity for joy; there is a capacity for suffering and grief just as there is a capacity of love. The greater the love the profounder the grief, the sorrow, the suffering.

The mother who mourns the loss of a child that has gone astray, who makes that child's sins her own, as it were, bears within her soul a sorrow which others may not fathom. The keener her hatred of sin and the stronger her love for the child, the deeper her sorrow. But He whom Isaiah so beautifully and touchingly calls the Man of Sorrows, acquainted with grief, had thrown the arm of His infinite Love around a world of wayward children, and there is no measure the depth of His sorrow as He faced Him into Gethsemane—His dark valley of Hall, despised, rejected, spit upon, crowned ing underneath the burden of the Cross on fice for sin; but who of us can measure the at the heart of His infinite love?

A child stood at the side of its mother, loss by death of a husband and a son. It its mother; it could weep in sympathy with no capacity for sorrow because it could not comprehend. Deeper into the mystery of the mother's sorrow than her tears it could not enter. When we stand in the presence of the great mystery of Christ's sorrow as He passed through the valley of His Gethsemane to the Cross, we are like that little child. We see His tears in His words, but the infinite reaches of the sorrow of His soul we may not explore. But we know that it was as boundless as the ocean of His love.—The Lutheran.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

THE EASTER OFFERING

Easter Sunday will soon be here and I wonder how many churches and Sunday schools will make an Easter offering on that day. Of course, we expect many offerings to be made on that day, but it will not be possible for all the churches to make their offering at that time. We do truly hope that there will not be a church in all our Southern Christian Convention that will fail to take this offering on or near Easter Sunday. The Easter offering last year was one of the biggest offerings we have yet received. All the churches in the Southern Christian Convention except a few joined in that offering. My ambition is, and has been, since I took charge of this work, to get every church interested in this work. And if I could get each church to take a part in this offering at this Easter season, I think I would be about as happy over that as I will be when we get the home built for the little children. I am expecting that to be one of my happiest days in this work. It will be a joy to my heart to see that building finished and filled with the little tots.

We have mailed to the Secretary of each Sunday school a letter to be read to the school and also a letter for the Superintendent. We had to mail the Superintendent's letter to the Secretary as we did not have the address of the Superintendent. We have also mailed to the Secretary of each Sunday school a package of Easter Offering envelopes. We truly hope the Secretary will see to it that all these get to the proper place.

Now, dear friends, let us put forth the biggest effort we have ever made to make this the largest Easter offering we have ever contributed to this cause. Remember that all the surplus we have from this fund will be used in building the home for the small children and every church ought to be glad to have a part in this great work. The building will cost to build and equip it, something like $25,000. It will be a two-story building with a large basement and will be very complete for this work when finished. I want to say to you that to my sorrow I have turned away more than sixty little children since November for the lack of room. Do you think the Master will say to us as a Church, "Well done good and faithful servants" when our Church is well able to support a hundred children and cares for only sixty?

LETTERS FROM THE LITTLE ONES

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed find a dime. I wish to join the little cousins. My father takes THE SUN and I like to read the cousins' letters fine.—Eppie Johnson, Jr., Garner, N. C.

I am glad to get your letter this week. You must write often because your name is "Johnson." See!—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Don't think I have forgotten your little girls. I have not and I never will. I am now taking music and it keeps me busy. This is the way I made the money for the orphans. One day my brother came and said: "If you will polish my shoes for me, I will give you a dime?" I told him that I would and now I am sending the dime to your little girls. I hope some day to be able to come and see them all. From your little girl, Rachel R. Hofler, Sunbury, N. C.

I see that you are up to my two little boys. You gave all you made too. Little girls will not let little boys beat them, will they? Write often.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Father gave Loyd and myself a row of potatoes. We sold them and they amounted to $3.18. You will find the money enclosed. With best wishes to you and the cousins—Samuel and Loyd Bradshaw, Zuni, Va.

You can't be beat in giving, as you gave all. I think you are splendid little fellows. I hope to see you some time. I hope your father will give you two rows of potatoes this year.—"Uncle Charley."

The dog should be a native of Dog Island, Fla.

The dog really has five limbs, counting his tail, which is limber; whereas a leg is just plain limb. His natural means of expression is doggerel, in which he is frequently quite dogmatic.

Generally speaking, it seems proper for the dog to live in a dogwood house, sail in a dogger, and drive at a dignified dogtrot in a dogcart. He may return in time for his dinner of dogfish by consulting the dogwatch. Let us hope that he will firmly believe in dogma; so that at the end of dogdays, when he dies, he may find heaven on the dog-star.—Selected.

THE TACTLESS HAPPY

"You will have to make allowance for her; she is so perfectly happy."

At first that struck me as the oddest excuse I had ever heard offered for a girl's shortcomings. "Does happiness really make us so insane that we have to have allowance made for us?" I questioned. After some inquiry, within and without, I was forced to the conclusion that great personal happiness does often seem to blunt our sensibilities and render us less tactful and sympathetic with others.

You were so happy because you were going to spend your vacation at the seashore that you quite forgot to say good bye to grandmother at the last minute, and her feelings were so hurt that the post card you sent her, when you finally thought of it, could not quite make up for the neglect.

You really didn't mean to make your friend feel poor and unfortunate when you displayed to her, with so much gush, the perfectly beautiful hat your wealthy aunt had sent you from the city, when, if you had thought about it, you knew that this girl would have to make out with just a new ribbon or wreath on her last year's chip that was beginning to turn a little yellow.

"Love vaunteth not itself," affirmed the great apostle of love.

After all, is it not most often this vaunting spirit that takes possession of the fortunate in their elation over some personal benefit, that inspires in others bitter feelings and heartburnings?

By all means let us rejoice in the dear possessions and happy days that fall to our lot—our own that may not be shared with others or divided out in a literal sense. But there is a way in which the most personal happiness may be shed abroad without giving offense to others, in that radiance from a merry heart that doeth good like a medicine—a spirit quite above the vaunting, childish pride that displays a stick of candy merely to excite the envy of sweetness playmates.—The Way.

MOUSE AS ENGINEER

A field mouse which had fallen into a hole dug to receive a telegraph pole displayed ingenuity and perseverance in effecting his scape. The first hour or so he ran round the bottom of the hole, trying to find some means of escape, but could not climb out. Then he settled down to business. He began steadily and systematically to dig a spiral groove round and round the inner surface of the hole, with a uniformly ascending grade. He worked night and day; and as he got farther from the bottom, he dug little pockets where he could either lie or sit and rest. The men who were laying the telegraph pole, being curious to know how he would escape, supplied the little engineer with food. At the end of two weeks the little mouse struck a rock.

For nearly a day he tried to get under, around, or over the obstruction, without success. With unflinching patience he reversed the spiral, and went on tunneling his way in the opposite direction. At the end of four weeks he reached the top and probably sped away to enjoy his well-earned freedom.—Exchange.

GOOD MANNERS

One day a plain, black doggie
Had strayed in some one's yard,
And then, alas! the gate had shut—
And he was safely barred.

A neighbor saw his trouble
And let him out of jail—
Do you suppose the dog ran off
With careless wave of tail?

He went directly to his friend
With thanks in his brown eyes,
And laid his nose against her hand
With grateful little sighs.

Then, having thanked her pretty,
He trotted on his way;
He'd done his best to be polite.
Were you polite today?

A FEW LAUGHS

Butcher—"This pound of butter you sent me is three ounces short."

Grocer—"Well, I mislaid the pound weight, so I weighed it by the pound of chops you sent me yesterday.—Boston Transcript.

In a village church a baby was to be dedicated, and on the clergyman asking what name they had chosen, the father replied, "Octopus, sir."

"What!" exclaimed the astonished divine. "You cannot call a child that absurd name!"

"Yes, sir, you please," was the reply. "You see, it's our eighth child."—Exchange.

The customer picked up a knife from the counter and handed it to the butcher with a friendly smile: "I don't really want it," he said, "but if you will cut it off, I'll take it along with the rest."

"Cut what off?" demanded the astonished butcher. "Your hand," was the gentle reply. "You weighed it with the sausage and I like to get what I pay for."

The average foreigner's difficulty in comprehending the huge area of the United States is well illustrated by a story in "Everybody's Magazine" about an Englishman and his valet who had been traveling due west from Boston for five days. The traveler found his servant gazing thoughtfully out of the window. He said to him.

"William, what are you thinking of?"

"I was just thinking, sir, about the discovery of America," replied the valet. "Columbus didn't do such a wonderful thing, hafter hall, when he found this country, did he, now sir? Hafter hall's said and done, 'ow could e' 'elp it?"—Exchange.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 11, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

Subject: Deborah and Barak Deliver Israel.—Judges 4:4-16.

Golden Text: God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

Time: 1351 B. C.

Place: Palestine, near Mt. Carmel.

Junior Topic: A Brave Woman Helps a General.

Senior Topic: Women in National Leadership.

Additional Material: Judges 4:1-3; Heb. 11:32-33; Ps. 54:4.

And Deborah Judged Israel

The striking modernity of the Bible's teachings is shown again in the story of Deborah and Barak. The former was not a judge in the sense of a deliverer. Barak was technically the judge of his time, but she was inspired of God and acted as legal judge over the disputes of her people. So great was her wisdom and so widespread the public confidence in her that the children of Israel came from far and near to submit their petty squabbles to her sense of justice. The classic historical repetition of this leadership by a woman is that a Joan of Arc, the inspired maid of Orleans who delivered the French armies from the throes of the enemy.

And more modern still, indeed more clearly parallel to the story of Deborah and Barak, is the leadership assumed by the wife of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Mrs. David Lloyd George, since her election to the British Parliament a few weeks ago.

Woman Finds Her Place

There was once a law in England permitting husbands to beat their wives, provided that the stick used was no bigger than their thumbs. Now, not only is woman protected and given an equal opportunity with man, but she has forged ahead and taken a leading stand in all phases of human activity. Whatever the divergence of opinion as to what country or military unit won the war, all elements are one in their praise of woman's part in the victory. Every doughboy and sailor who saw a day's service felt the influence of woman's supporting hand. As Deborah's help inspired Barak to such a complete victory for God that "there was not a man left," so the women who served here, and in France inspired our men to inevitable victory.

And Deborah said unto Barak: "Up for this is the day." Four years ago the leaders of militaristic Germany said: "Aug! Es ist du tag! and doubtless they thought it was "du tag." But one thing was lacking. It was the thing lacking in the forces of Sisera. It is the thing lacking in every movement which attempts to defeat the right. It is the lack of God.

The Kaiser built a marvelous military machine. He trained millions of men to use high-powered weapons. But he left one thing behind—God. Sunday schools of North Carolina, don't leave God behind! Take Him with you, else ambition and effort will be in vain. The field is unlimited and night comes on. Then "up! for this is the day."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR APRIL 11, 1920

(J. Vincent Knight)

"What Shall We Do With Our Sundays?"—Nch. 13:15-22.

Wonder what Nehemiah would think if he stopped off in one of our American cities on a Sunday? Perhaps he would close his eyes instead of trying to close the gates when he saw the open house, running shops, open theatres, baseball games, and most every other place of business open for service and running at full speed as though we had no Sunday. Most certainly he would cry out against it.

We church people are responsible for prevailing conditions. To be sure there are necessary works that must be done on Sunday, but too often we make things necessary in order to escape the law. Yet, all the laws we have and can make will never break up the desecration of the Lord's day. That is a problem for the Church and we must get behind it, and create enough moral sentiment to put the laws we have in force. That we have come to the place where law enforcement is the only remedy, no one will deny, and here is where we can play a great part. Here is where everybody can have a part. What shall we do with our Sundays?

Use Them as a Real Day of Rest

Rest from our daily task. We cannot rest when our minds are burdened with the cares of the week. Here is the place to unload. The Lord created the day of rest for us, and we should lay aside our daily tasks and forget the worries and difficulties and use the day given us in the right way. He who breaks this law does it to his own hurt, for God planned it for a day of physical, mental and spiritual rest, and our own best interest demands the use of it.

Use Them For Worship

Christ the Son of God went up to the house of God and worshipped there on the Sabbath Day. Do you? Too many of our young people sleep through the Sunday school and morning worship. Billy Sunday says, "If the present rate of sleep is kept up, the fourth generation hence will be forty years old before they wake." Well, that is a miserable confession of laziness, yet there is a remedy for it and that is to retire before midnight Saturday, and then you will not sleep over your rights on Sunday or have to have a berth at church. Our first nature demands worship. We will worship something. Whatever we love best and worship most will be our God. Let us use our Sundays to worship the true God.

Use Them For Real Service

Too many people think they have to go to church to do service for Christ. We can serve Christ wherever we are. There are always those about us that need our assistance and sympathy. Follow the Christ Who never permitted such to pass without administering to their needs. Pay a visit to the sick, the shut-ins and those who are in real need of your sympathy. Speak a personal word for Jesus. Do a personal deed of kindness, and in this way use the day created for us in the way Christ would have us use it.

OBITUARIES

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—JOYNER

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom has pleased to take from our Sunday school, our beloved superintendent, Mr. P. T. Joyner, be it Resolved:

First. That in his death our school and church has lost a loyal member and faithful worker.

Second. That while we grieve over our loss, we realize that it is his gain, and while we bow humbly to His divine will, may we be strengthened for the work he has left us to do.

Third. That we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved family and commend them to God, Who is an ever-present help and comfort.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy spread upon the minutes of Johnson's Grove Sunday school, and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

MISS LELIA BRISTOW,
MR. ALEX BRADSHAW,
Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—PITTMAN

Since God in His infinite wisdom has seen best to take from our Sunday school class Mrs. Erma Pittman, who was a faithful and loyal member and true to her class. We resolve:

First. That in her death we have lost a member full of good works, and while lamenting her death, we feel that our loss is her gain.

Second. To her husband we offer our sincere sympathy and commend him to God, the only source of strength in such a sad hour.

Third. That a copy of these resolutions be sent her husband, a copy sent The Christian Sun for publication and a copy put on the records of our class.

CARR

Mrs. Lelia F. Carr, proprietress of the Windsor Hotel, Windsor, Va., died Wednesday morning, February 11, 1920, at the age of 58 years. Her death was the result of Influenza terminating into double pneumonia. Her death came as a shock to her many friends and relatives, as she was sick only a few days.

On account of the prevalence of the Influenza in Windsor, funeral services were held at the town cemetery, conducted by the pastor of the Windsor Christian church, of which church Sister Carr was a most faithful member from her childhood days. The many wreaths of flowers which totally covered the grave was a token of friendship and esteem with which she was regarded by the whole community. The Christian church, and especially its women members, have lost a loyal and wise leader.

Those surviving her are one son, Raleigh Carr; a step-daughter, Mrs. Mamie Watkins; two brothers, Rev. J. M. Roberts, and A. K. Roberts; three sisters, Mrs. B. P. Gay, Mrs. W. G. Niblett, and Mrs. G. J. Britt.

May the Lord comfort the bereaved relatives and friends.

E. T. COTTEN.

DEVAUGHN

On March 4, 1920 the community of New Harmony, near Cragford, Alabama, was greatly shocked over the almost sudden death of Mrs. M. E. Devaughn. She had been sick only three or four days prior to her death. Her disease seemed to baffle the attending physicians and death came unexpectedly. Mrs. Devaughn was in the prime of life being only forty-one years old at the time of her death.

Her death cast a gloom over the entire community for she was greatly beloved by all who knew her. She was a consecrated Christian, a member of New Harmony Christian church. A devoted mother, a faithful wife and a loving neighbor. She leaves a husband, three children, an aged father and mother, Mr. John Peek and wife, several brothers and sisters and a host of friends to mourn their loss. She is greatly missed and her place will be hard to fill.

J. H. HUGHES.

RESOLUTION OF RESPECT—PITTMAN

Since death has claimed our dear sister and co-worker, Mrs. M. T. Pittman, nee Erma Reidel, and called her from labor to reward, we bow in humble submission to this dispensation of Providence and endeavor to say in our grief "not our will but Thine be done."

Therefore, we, the Ladies' Aid Society of the Holland Christian church, do hereby offer the following resolutions:

First. That our Society has lost a faithful member, one who was always ready to lend a helping hand to all work that led to the uplifting of her society.

Second. That we offer our heartfelt sympathy and prayers to her loved ones and ask God's richest blessings to rest upon them all.

Third. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be entered on our minutes and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

THE CONVENTION PROGRAM

The Program Committee of the Southern Christian Convention furnishes for publication this week a tentative program for the meeting to be held April 27-30. A hurried reading of it leaves the impression that it is well planned and is the outline for many great and good things.

A commendable feature of the program is the advanced appointment of the committees. This will give the members time to think out some definite plans and have some constructive work done before the body meets. We would suggest that the chairman (who is the first named) take up, by correspondence or otherwise, definite matters to be passed upon by his committee. If nothing other than thinking be the result, that will pay well and each member of the committee will have been thinking out something definite beforehand.

We note that the committee is modest enough to put a time limit on each report and address. A very necessary thing indeed. They tell us that oratory is a passing art. Whether that be true or not, we leave it to the orators and better judges, but the display of oratory is certainly passing in business meetings. The Convention meets for business. It meets only once in two years, and the committee has said in another way what we have desired to say for a long time: That the Convention is made up, more or less, of those who hear much preaching and address making and the desire is for less speaking and more business. This is, at least, the result of the last day of the Convention. Many important things have to be passed over hurriedly because too much time is devoted to other things in the beginning. Members of a meeting are not always charitable to the chairman the opening day of a meeting if he rules with a strict hand, but approve his limiting later on.

Let every member of the Convention seek to make the four days great for the Kingdom's growth through work, prayer, interest and sincerity.

GOVERNOR EDWARDS AGAIN

THE SUN has said something on two occasions about Governor Edwards of New Jersey, recently elected on the "wet" ticket. The election of a man on the "wet" ticket should not (and thank God, will not) discourage friends of prohibition. They should not get a wrong idea about New Jersey. Listen to this from The Christian Advocate, New York:

"For years it has been the custom of the Governor of New Jersey to speak in the Auditorium at Ocean Grove, N. J., on July Fourth. But the present Governor's attitude on the liquor question has made him so obnoxious to all enemies of the saloon that the authorities of that famous Christian resort will break the custom of years and celebrate Independence Day without a Governor. Bishop Charles B. Mitchell will preach in the Auditorium on Sunday, July 4, and deliver the patriotic oration on the holiday following. The dropping of the Governor will serve notice to him that a public official cannot court the favor of nullifiers of the law and retain the esteem in which all good citizens would like to hold the chief magistrate of the State."

"A QUESTION WITH ME?"

"It is a question with me," said a professional man in the medical world, the other day "if I should treat ministers free or not." And he continued: "For a long time I have been thinking about it in this way: Is it not training the minister to expect something for nothing? And when he has to preach for nothing, he sees the philosophy of it."

This professional man whom we have quoted is earnestly seeking the truth of the situation; and while he receives much pleasure from helping the ministers, he is at a loss to know whether what he gives them in service is best for the cause or not.

To make the situation more definite our friend pointed out that he had always enjoyed doing work for the ministerial students of the College without charge, but had wondered if some of them did not go away feeling that the world owed them a living, or that they were the objects of charity.

Follow the line of thought and come to your own conclusion.

ELON REUNION

Elon College is to have a reunion of all its former students, May 23-25, and the occasion should engage the attention of Elon's sons and daughters. A college is something of a mother, in fact such an institution is usually referred to with the feminine pronouns, "she," "her," etc. It is a common thing for a college to be called "Mother," is the highest tribute that a student could pay his or her Alma Mater.

A committee was appointed last commencement to push the matter. Mr. C. C. Fonville, Burlington, N. C., is at the head of this committee and seeks the co-operation of all former students and friends to make the occasion a wholesome and beneficial affair. A welcome awaits the fair sons and daughters who have gone out to grace and bless the world. "Mother Elon Calls us Home," is the slogan of the committee, and it is the hope of all concerned that this "call" will be heeded. Who can refuse to answer the call of mother to come home? Next to this is our adopted mother, Elon, who calls us. Let us answer the call. Send Brother Fonville this message: "I'll be there."

REAL EASTER GREETINGS

Just as we go to press this (Monday) morning we have the good news from the Sanford church that the following result has been obtained from the work there for the Men and Millions Forward Movement:

Tithers	43
New Members	17
Life Recruits	2

And all this from a membership of 130.

Brother Joe W. Stout who gave the message over the long distance says: "The final lap will be made with flying colors." Hats off for Sanford. We have wired the pastor and his people congratulations. Who next?

A HEN DOES NOT STOP SCRATCHING BECAUSE WORMS ARE SCARCE

When the worm crop is below par, Mrs. Hen goes right on scratching. In fact, she scratches harder and longer and deeper than ever. Take a tip from this feminine egg producer. When opposition is raised in your church against the Men and Millions Forward Movement, fight harder, scratch deeper and see that the work is done.

Rev. H. J. Fleming has resigned the work at Newport News, Va., and is now at his father's home, Burlington, N. C.

Rev. H. S. Smith, Fairfield, Conn., is now in North Carolina working in the interest of the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

MAKING THE MOVEMENT MOVE

The time is now at hand when we must make the Men and Millions Forward Movement move. Much work, great sacrifice and an abundance of energy have been put into the entire program of this great undertaking. Practical minds have endeavored to work out a program that can be executed, and so far all the meetings in the interest of the Movement have approved it. Not only that, but the Raleigh church demonstrated that the Movement can move and that the program will work. The apportionment of the Raleigh church was $7,200.00 and the church raised in a few hours $10,702.00. If for any reason that the program does not work it seems to us, in all fairness, that any failure will be due to lack of study and interest.

President Harper's letter in this issue gives other instances where the program has been tested. It would be futile for us to repeat the wonderful story that he has written of the work already done in the far South. Turn to pages 6 and 7 and read for yourself.

The eight calls outlined on page 11 of this issue are all worthy and need our loyal and unstinted support. The Men and Millions Forward Movement program provides for an adequate support of these institutions. The Church has never undertaken bigger or better things and we enjoin upon our people everywhere to rally whole-heartedly and earnestly to this great plan of action that the Kingdom may go forward by our united effort.

The final plunge is near at hand. Let us stand like brave soldiers willing to spend and to be spent. This is the age of giving and not of getting. No man liveth to himself, neither can any church live to itself. Selfishness tendeth to poverty and gain can never be accomplished by the principles of greed. We can do it—and if we can, we should—and of course we will.

No man has a monopoly on thinking. If you do not agree with the other fellow, that is no guarantee that he is wrong. If that should be the case, then his not agreeing with you would mean that you are wrong.

Some churches are headed with a kind of a "priest" that dictates what is to be done. This is very unfortunate, and more unfortunate when the pastor bows down to him.

The coming of spring should inject new life into our Sunday school work, also rural church work where bad roads have prevented much travel.

Paying your pastor is not all of your duty. Attend his services, pray for him, appreciate him, and stand by him in his undertakings.

The devil is always playing his game. And the way that many good (?) church members aid him, he always has sufficient help.

A revival meeting began at the Greensboro church last Sunday. Rev. J. F. Morgan is assisting Pastor Knight.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

VALLEY LETTER

The Men and Millions Forward Movement is getting fairly well under way in the Virginia Valley Central Conference. We are very late in getting started here on account of adverse weather, road, and health conditions. We may not pull through on schedule time, but we hope to go over the top in every particular before the campaign is over. A work so great and good as this should have the sympathy and support of every member among us. Knockers and shirkers do not usually fill much of a place in the advancement of the Kingdom. The church has lived through the ages not because of them but in spite of them. Likewise will this campaign reach success because there are enough loyal devoted members among us to put it over the top.

The past few months have brought forth from some of the members of my churches various expressions of good-will and kindly feeling in the form of potatoes, beans, sugar, canned fruit, etc., etc. Palmyra gave an organized pounding of generous proportions. This has become somewhat a fixed habit with the Palmyra people. These continued expressions of good-will from Palmyra, as well as some from Antioch, Mayland, and Timber Ridge are very much appreciated. One of the joys of a pastor's life is the enjoyment of the friendship and esteem of his people. This helps to lighten the burdens, and throws sunshine and inspiration on the way.

MODERN DANCE IS SCORED BY REV. GEO. D. EASTES

(Reprinted from News and Observer, March 29)

"Can you walk as Christ walked, can you follow Him when in the embrace of some other woman's husband you are doing the shimie and the shimie? If you can walk with him there, if you can talk with him there, conscientiously, go ahead. If you can't for the sake of Christ, cease to profess him at all or cut out the dance," exclaimed Rev. George D. Eastes, pastor of the First Christian church last night concluding a sermon in which he scored modern dancing as immoral and detrimental to physical and spiritual health.

Previous announcement of the theme for the evening service served to fill the church with a congregation that listened with closest interest while the pastor discussed his subject. Three questions were propounded, "Can I indulge in the modern dance and be true to my better self, to the church of my choice and to my God?" With admirable logic the speaker presented each phase of the questions and arrived at negative answers to them all.

History of Dancing

The history of the modern development of the dance was traced to the year 1910 which saw the introduction of many variations popularly named for animals, "the Turkey Trot," the "Bunny Hug," etc. These were compared with the dignified "square dance" of a century ago, and the dignified religious dances that preceded them. "The square dance was all right as long as they kept it square, but they cut off the corners and this form of amusement has steadily deteriorated," he declared.

"There has been a gradual lowering of standards along many lines. Theatres, amusement parks, lewd illustrations in magazines, erotic novels, inordinate desire for pleasure, ignorance of sex hygiene, the growing familiarity between sexes, have all had their effect upon the grosser natures, of men and women, and the dance has not been immune from the same effects.

Dancing might be healthful from the standpoint of physical exercise if it were practiced in the open air and at reasonable hours, he continued, but generally it is done at night, beginning at an hour when such functions should be breaking up, carried on indoors in a heated and vitiated atmosphere. To anyone who regards the body as the dwelling place of the Divine Spirit, dancing must be regarded as harmful, he argued.

Churches Outlaw Dancing

Many of the churches have outlawed dancing among their communicants, and others have indirectly condemned them, the speaker stated in considering the second question, and no church member who indulges in the dance can be conscientious in his keeping of the vows assumed with church membership. He declared that if he were a church member and unwilling to forego the pleasure of dancing he would go to his pastor, state his feelings plainly and ask to be removed from the rolls of the followers of Christ.

No man can be true to his God and true to the modern dancing was the speaker's answer to the third of the questions. No church filled with dancing, card-playing, theatre-attending members can perform the functions of a church," he asserted. They have done more harm than all drunkenness, infidelity, atheism, and skepticism have done altogether. It hinders the church and it hinders the individual Christian."

"But the last and worst indictment I want to bring against the modern dance in defense to my negative answer to the question is that it endangers social purity. In other words, and we cannot evade the issue, it is, as at present indulged in, fundamentally and necessarily immoral. We dislike to tell the truth under this head but for the sake of the young men and women whose danger is that they think no evil, it ought to be told. The very pose of the parties on the dance floor, which cannot here be described, suggests impurity. If the same postures were attempted in the parlor of the home without music and in the absence of the husband it would result in divorce or murder."

Then why in the name of common sense can it be accepted as right and proper on the dance floor? The central source of the attraction of the modern dance, and an amusement which depends on sex for popularity is dangerous to morals. Men do not dance alone, nor do women, and when you ask them why, they will tell you there is no fun in dancing without the opposite sex and then the "cat is out of the bag."

"You say, "Well, I dance only with friends." But you can't tell who is who. Moral lepers are abroad in the land and the ticket that may admit them to your home or to the dance floor is fine clothes, money, limousine and such things without regard to the inward character of the man. You may mark it that the vast majority of red-blooded young men cannot long indulge in the latest forms of the dance and retain pure thoughts and if girls but knew how some of them talked "after the ball is over," they would never be caught on the dance floor again.

NEW CHRISTIAN CHURCH TO BE ORGANIZED HERE

(The Richmond Virginian—Tuesday, March 30, 1920)

The First Christian church of Richmond, which is using the William Fox school building as a temporary place of worship, will be formally organized next Sunday, at 11 A. M. Quite a number of names have been secured for the new organization and others will join next Sunday.

The pastor, Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., will have charge of the service. A Christian Endeavor Society will be organized at 7 P. M.

The Christian church, of which this is the first local organization in the city, had its origin in Sussex county, Va., under the leadership of Rev. James O'Kelley, in 1794. The movement has grown until at the present time it has churches established in thirty-one states, the District of Columbia and Canada. In addition to this it is doing work in a number of foreign fields. It has the distinction of publishing the oldest religious newspaper, the "Herald of Gospel Liberty," which was first published in Portsmouth, New Hampshire in 1808 and is now published at Dayton, Ohio.

The church is based on the following five cardinal principles:

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only head of the church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

The trustees are now investigating a number of locations with the view of selecting a lot on which to build.

"OUR CHRISTIAN SUN"

I am wondering as I write these lines just how many of us stop to think or consider what a privilege is ours to be able to say "Our Church Paper, or "Our Christian Sun." I have used the word privilege and have used it advisedly because it is indeed a blessed privilege to be a subscriber and thus feel that I can use the possessive term as above.

Our Editor has his heart in the work, is giving his life and his best effort to it, and I will say that he is giving us a paper that is second to none. Look through its columns and count the advertisements; how many can you find? Do you know what this signifies? It is this: Brother Riddle could no doubt get enough advertisements for each issue, to make the paper far more remunerative to him, but knows that we want good, wholesome reading matter in the columns of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and he is giving us the best possible for the price.

My object for this article is to urge every one who is getting the paper—whether on the free plan or how—to keep paid up in advance, seek to get a new subscriber everywhere possible, and so let Brother Riddle feel that he has a constituency that appreciates his efforts toward giving us the best paper possible.

Men and Millions

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Today was a great one for the Christian church in this, the Nation's capital city. At the close of the morning services which were conducted by Dr. A. B. Kendall, our pastor, in the temporary quarters, Corner Eleventh and E Streets, N. W., eleven members signed the tithe covenant. When one considers that our church organization is quite young and comparatively small in members this is a remarkable showing.

The task of mobilizing our people who are scattered all over the city and suburbs out into both Maryland and Virginia is a stupendous one and the Men and Millions Forward Movement has lately justly commanded some of Dr. Kendall's time, but we are still in earnest and are gaining ground. New names and addresses are being supplied from different sources and in addition to a pastoral call Brother I. W. Hitchcock who is our church clerk and a printer, keeps following up with leaflets and other printed matter advertising the church and meeting place.

The church has purchased a new silver individual Communion set and recently held the first quarterly Communion service.

There has been a great deal of sickness here this winter and a proportionate number of our membership has been afflicted but they are all improving at this writing.

Our pastor has set Easter Sunday as the day when all those presenting letters or asking admission will be formally admitted into the church with appropriate services.

L. R. TOWNSEND.

March 14, 1920.

THE MOVEMENT MOVES

The writer was in Dover, Delaware Friday night, Saturday and Sunday, March 26-28. It was a real inspiration to be among the Christian forces there and thereabout. Friday night there was a church council and conference in the People's Church. The workers there are much concerned in the matter of securing a pastor, and in all our broad areas it is doubtful if there is a more inviting, and a more promising field. The spirit of loyalty and devotion, interest and enthusiasm engendered and developed by the great and late lamented

Dr. Lightbourne, is still with this organized band of Christian workers, and with the right man as leader there is no measuring the amount of service and influence this church will develop. The Sunday morning service was well attended and the Sunday evening congregation was exceedingly promising and inspiring.

And, though without a pastor to lead, the church is awake to all the larger interests of the Kingdom, and particularly to our Men and Millions Movement. They were still working on the tithers' campaign and the Friday evening's conference was conserved largely in discussing and planning for life dedication campaign. They are making a concert of effort to increase their membership even in the absence of a pastor. This is wholesome, and suggestive, and we see no reason why they should not be successful. It was a joy to the writer to explain to the large Sunday evening congregation something of the plans and purposes of the Movement and all seemed intensely interested. I have observed everywhere, and this is, I think, a rule without an exception, that when the Movement for Men and Millions is made clear and plain the people both like it and are willing to advocate it. Information is the truest, safest and surest source of inspiration. Wherever churches got the proper information there has invariably developed inspiration from the Movement. I have never witnessed as many inspiring scenes in our churches in the same length of time as I have since our people became rightly informed about our Men and Millions Movement.

The people of Dover feel that they will "go over the top" when the time comes for the final dash, April 18-25. And they are getting both joy and strength out of the work before that time comes.

Dr. R. S. Stephens is doing a great work in Dover in founding and building up a mission there. He has outgrown his present quarters and has purchased a $5,000.00 brick building which was used for a shirt factory and which by improvements costing about $1,000.00 he is converting into a place of religious activity and divine worship. He has found half-hundred children in the town who had never been in any Sunday school or place of worship till he brought them in. How those children can sing their Sunday school songs is a wonder. And many of their parents come with them. In his new plant he will have ample facilities for handling 250 or 300 and it would not be surprising if he has that many in a few weeks after getting the room for them. He is to get possession of the new plant and begin work there, and worship, too, this week. His is to be known as "St Luke's Christian Church of Dover." It is already a live and very active institution in the city's evangelization. Dr. Stephens is loyal, and keeps his congregation informed as to what the Church is doing. He will have no trouble in "going over the top" in the Consecration Campaign of April 18-25.

Out at Wyoming, a thrifty village some three miles from Dover, we found a wide awake congregation of Christian workers. When have I met a company of men and women more devout, more consecrated, more zealous for the Master's name and cause than at the Christian church of Wyoming, Del.? Rev. Wilson C. Moore is the hustling, busy and beloved pastor. My! how they do love and respect and uphold the hands of their pastor! He is one of them. He works with and for them, and they work to inspire and encourage him. I was unable to discover whether the people were more devoted to pastor, or pastor to people; but I did discover that both pastor and people were "co-workers together with God." During the campaign this church has nearly or quite doubled its membership, and the other drives were receiving due attention and consideration. Brother Moore and his people assured the writer that they would have no trouble in the final drive, April 18-25. Our Men and Millions Movement is a real blessing to this church, as it is to every church that has given it a fair chance.

I wanted to tell of Richmond, Va., of Washington, D. C., and of Winchester, Va., all visited the past few days, and the Movement at these places. But space forbids. Dr. Walters with his family has now moved to Richmond, and the "First Christian Church of Richmond" was to be organized Easter Sunday. The writer spoke there Monday P. M., March 29 and it was an intelligent and happy group of Christian workers whom he met and addressed. One brother said the only trouble about Richmond's quota in the Movement was that "it was insultingly small."

Dr. Kendall in Washington is hopeful and is moving along in his work of finding our people who are there and seeking their presence at and interest in our services. He has on his list considerably over one hundred members of our Christian churches living in Washington. He is to organize the First Christian Church of Washington Sunday, April 11.

Winchester, Va., is on the lookout for a pastor. Here is a great field for service and a splendid opportunity for development. Happy will be the pastor who is secured to carry on the work which Dr. Walters has done so much to begin here. The captain and his team workers are organized for service and are moving splendidly in the Men and Millions task. They will rejoice in the labor and victory of Consecration Week, April 18-25.

"Come with us beloved and we will do them good."

J. O. ATKINSON.

FIVE BRIGHT LIGHTS

Rev. H. W. Elder, prince of church builders, came to this South Georgia county a half dozen or so years ago. No Christian church was within a hundred or two miles of the place where I have just said good-bye to this splendid man of God, Enigma, Ga. Now, we have five splendid congregations in this territory with four excellent houses of worship and a fifth soon to be constructed. Others are being contemplated. I do not hesitate to say that this section of our work, including Alabama, is our finest mission territory. We need to make the tireless and efficient Elder Church Extension Secretary, relieve him of pastoral labors, and give him a group of mission pastors as co-workers. Ten years of such work with a half dozen assistants will suffice to bring our strongest Conference down this way. I hope we shall do it.

But I set out to write from a different viewpoint, that of the Secretary of Organization of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. Brother Elder wanted these five South Georgia churches to be the first rural churches to try out the financial part of the Men and Millions program. He believed they would respond beautifully and his faith was well founded. Hence the title of this field note. Five bright lights indeed are these lighthouses of Christian democracy in the Far South.

I reached Kite, Ga., on Saturday night and spoke for them Sunday morning. That afternoon the drive went on under the Standard Plans for Consecration Week, and though the cyclone prevented our holding any evening service we were so far over the top when we left early Monday morning that Capt. J. S. Stephenson guaranteed the quota would be doubled.

To Lumber City next we betook ourselves. The noble hearts here are planning soon to begin their $10,000 church house, which will be the best in the town. They are not even as yet formally organized. Yet they were allotted $500 in this drive and over they went with joyous, happy enthusiasm.

Ambrose, Ga. next welcomed us. Brother T. J. Holland had already prepared the way for us there. The quota was soon doubled, being $1,350, and when we had to leave for our next appointment it was fast approaching the triple state. Ours is the only Church in this town. The people look upon it as a community center. There are numbers of growing towns in this good country where there is no Church. We do not have to have members in a town to start a church. All we need is money, men, Elders, and a heart to supply a vital need for our brothers and sisters now without church privileges.

A One Hundred Per Cent Church

We next found ourselves with the brethren and sisters of the Vanceville Church. Organized three years ago, with 26 members, and a quota of $650, the members scattered in Brookfield, Tifton, Chula, Moultrie, and Atlanta, Ga., and in Wadley, Ala., every member of this church is a subscriber to the Men and Millions Forward Movement, having been reached by the Standard Plans. But this is not all. The first young man converted in the Church has decided to become a Christian minister. They have 50 per cent of the membership enrolled as tithers and have added 15 per cent to the roll during Life Dedication Week. This Church is, therefore, one hundred per cent in its rating and is the first to enjoy that distinction. Team work, consecrated hearts, optimistic spirit—these did it, and they will do it everywhere. The financial quota was more than doubled.

From Vanceville we went to Enigma. We reached there at 3:00 P. M., and immediately put the campaign on. When I left six hours later one soul had been saved, the full quota of tithers secured, and more than 35 per cent of the financial quota attained. Rev. H. W. Elder is on the job there with a strong local team and there is no doubt this great hearted people will pass their goal of $2,100. (Telegram just received says Enigma went over too.)

A glorious week amid a lovely people with one of the Kingdom's princes and with many mountain top experiences of God's grace—such sums up the past seven days of life for me. I have never had seven before so packed with spiritual satisfactions. God has permitted me to see ex-convicts and mayors of towns, bright faced boys and girls, young men in the prime of manhood, heads of families during these precious days accept Jesus and connect themselves with the Church, through the efforts of ordinary laymen and laywomen. Truly the lines have fallen for me in pleasant places. Truly God is in this Men and Millions Forward Movement of our beloved Church. Truly He has in store still greater service in the days ahead for our Brotherhood in the plan of world conquest for Himself. Truly our people are to see the Heavens opened and Jesus interceding for them in their devoted labors for so holy, so spiritual a cause.

I return to the office encouraged greatly in heart that our plans will yield the results if only they are worked. Ample demonstration we now have of their efficiency. Any failure will result from local indifference from which may our Heavenly Father graciously deliver us. "We must do it—for His sake"—and we will. Together, beloved, let's give ourselves for this splendid cause.

W. A. HARPER.

EASTER AT ELON

The Easter vacation period which closed Monday night was signal in the spirit of good fellowship and jollity in spite of the inclement weather. The outstanding event, of course, was the annual celebration of the Psiphelian Literary Society. The young ladies departed from their usual custom and gave Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream." The departure was a great success. The costumes were especially prepared by a Chicago house and brought back to actual life again the dress and social customs of the Elizabethan period.

Before the play Miss Janie Angel welcomed the audience and Miss Bertha Paschall gave an essay on Shakespeare as a dramatist and interpreter of life. Also preceding the play Miss Eula Mae Massey and Miss Emma Brannock rendered a delighted vocal number.

The following young ladies appeared in the play each representing a separate character: Misses Essie Mae Truitt, Vada McMurray, Maude Sharpe, Lizzie Lewis, Pearl Reynolds, Nettie Sue Tuck, Jessie Sharpe, Helen Parkerson, Rosa Lee Brannock, Helen Scholtz, Gladys Foushee, Lucile Manning, Margaret Corbett, Mary Elder, Thelma Burton, Mary D. Atkinson, Janice Fulgham, Aurelia Manning, Maude Kendrick, Jewel Preston, Marguerite Youmans, Louise Wilson, Lois Holland, Margaret Moring, Esther Chandler, Juana Pinnix.

WALKING AND TALKING WITH JESUS

It was as the disciples talked about Jesus as they were walking to Emmaus, that Jesus Himself drew near and went with them. The Christian's conversation reveals what is in his heart. If Jesus is occupying a large place in the heart, our conversation will be largely about Jesus and the work He has left for us to do. It is when we lovingly, reverently think or talk about Jesus that He draws near, that He walks with us and talks with us along the way. But is our conversation always of such a nature that Jesus would be welcomed if He should unexpectedly come into our midst? Would it not sometimes be embarrassing to have Him join the group? We cannot imagine Jesus in the midst of a company where there is gossiping, slander, back-biting or where questionable stories are being told. Would it not bring a blush of shame to the face of His professed followers, if Jesus were to suddenly appear at such a time?

Jesus knows when such things are being indulged in, but He does not attach Himself to such groups. It is when the heart, the life is in tune with His, when our wills are in harmony with His will, that He comes into our midst. He draws near to those who draw near to Him. He walks and talks with those who separate themselves from the world, those whose minds are on things above, instead of the things of the world.

Those two disciples were very sad as they walked along that evening. Things had taken place which they could not understand. Their Friend, Who had done so many mighty works, that Friend whose hand had conquered disease and death, that Friend whose voice had subdued the rough winds and waves, had died the death of a criminal. There was a disappointment so great, a sorrow so bitter that it was nearly crushing them. Some of their company had brought the word that the tomb was empty and that He was alive, but they had not seen Him. They did not understand it. With sorrowful hearts as they walked, they talked about Him, always about Him. Jesus Himself drew near. He always does when sorrow comes into the life of one of His followers.

There is not a disappointment, there is not a sorrow in your life which He does not want to help you bear. If some great, crushing disappointment has come to you, if your heart is heavy and sad because of a break in your circle of friends, because one of your loved ones has gone away to come back no more, Jesus knows about it and is drawing very near to your side and is asking you to tell Him all about that which is making you so sad. Will you do it now? Will you talk it all over with Jesus, or, better still, will you turn it all over to Him as you tell Him about it, and let Him bear it for you?

If you will, instead of sorrow and sadness, joy and gladness will soon fill your heart. Instead of an aching heart, your heart will soon be glowing with an intense love for Him as you recall His love and tender sympathy as you walked and talked with Him. Will you let Him draw just as near to you as He wants to? Will you let Jesus walk and talk with you every day, all the way, as you make the journey to the other side?

SOME SHINE

If you cannot have the sunshine,
Tinge with gold the day or place,
See to it that there is some shine
Still reflected in your face!

Should dark skies and gloomy weather
Cast their shadows 'thwart your way,
Couple faith and hope together,
Usher in a brighter day!

Cheery spirits radiate gladness,
Loving hearts reflect the light;
There will be no room for sadness
When the world within is bright.

Someshine—glow of ardent feeling;
Someshine—gleams of tend'rest love;
Someshine, to the world revealing
Joys akin to those above.

FLASHES FROM OVER THE WIRES

Great rain storms swept over Central Western States Sunday and Monday. The Tennessee River reached a height of nearly fifty feet, so did the Mississippi.

The body of James G. Blaine, former Secretary of State, which has rested in Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, D. C., for 37 years, is to be removed to a spot near his former home, in Augusta, Maine.

India has decided to keep Germans out of that country for a period of five years.

Another American has been killed in Mexico. Bandits also attack trains on which Americans ride.

Many members of Congress plan to visit the Orient during the coming summer.

Herbert Hoover has announced that he will consider the nomination for the presidency by the Republican party.

The Red Cross workers in Siberia have been released by the Bolsheviks.

County Democratic Conventions were held throughout North Carolina last Saturday. Many counties elected women delegates to the State Convention.

Five Socialists have been expelled by the New York Legislature.

The Senate is to consider a peace resolution on Thursday of this week.

NOTES

Mr. M. E. Brunk, Knoxville, Tenn., father of Mrs. L. E. Smith, passed away March 31. Mr. Brunk had been paralyzed for six years. The funeral took place in South, Mo.

Representative Edward E. Holland, a member of the Suffolk church, is finishing his fifth and last term in Congress. He has served his country well, and of his own choice, decides not to run for the coveted place as Representative in the Second Virginia District again. Colonel Holland is one of the Directors of the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

The revival meeting in progress with the Burlington church is meeting with wide approval and a deep interest is being manifested. Brother Lightbourne is doing excellent preaching and the number who hear him grows from service to service. It would be a revelation of our feelings to say that we have been astonished at the great improvement in the preaching of Brother Lightbourne. We do not mean by this that he was ever below par. It is with a glad heart that we commend him to our people. "That was fine," is the usual verdict we hear in the audience as the listeners wend their way to the door.

GET READY

The Southern Christian Convention meets April 27. The place is Raleigh, N. C. Each delegate elected is expected to be there—and if for any reason that he cannot—his alternate should attend. Mark April 27 on your calendar. Get ready! Be there!!

THESE FINAL DAYS

During these final days of our great campaign, there is no time to be lost. Surely those who have had to lose time will endeavor to catch up. The time is at hand. Let every soul take stock and see where he or she stands. "Have I done my part and my best?" Let each of us ask the question—and then seek to answer it.

ANOTHER PAPER FEELS THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

The Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tenn., announces that it has been compelled to increase its subscription price from 2.00 to $2.50 the year. The Advocate also announces that the increased price will not meet the expense, but keep the deficit from being so much.

WANTED: ANSWERS TO THREE QUESTIONS

1. What is the biggest thing in the world?
2. What is the biggest thing for a man?
3. What is the biggest thing for a woman?

☞ Let us have the answers. Limit them to twenty-five words, less if possible.

AND STILL THEY COME

The list of new subscribers in this issue indicates that friends are still coming and offering to take their Church paper. It is pleasing indeed to have so many fine letters from our recent readers. Many thanks.

A few days ago we sent out a letter saying that those who subscribed by April 1 would receive a nice book free. So generous has been the response that we have decided to extend the time to April 15. So send your two dollars along, get THE SUN to May 1, 1921 and receive the nice book by return mail.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

PLANTING TIME

These are busy days around the Christian Orphanage. Everybody is busy. The children go to school one-half day and work the other half. Getting ready to get in the spring crops is the order of the day. Planting strawberry plants, dewberry plants, blackberry plants, fruit trees, etc., keeps us busy when the ground is dry enough to work. The trees are beginning to bud and the sun shines warm and all the children are begging to take off their shoes and go barefooted. I have a great deal of sympathy for them as I remember when I was a boy (a long time ago) how anxious I was to throw away my shoes in the spring of the year and get my feet on the ground. I have promised them when they bring me a dogwood blossom I will give them permission to take off their shoes. Our little folks are looking forward to Easter with a great deal of delight as they have had a real nice time on Easter Mondays, as some friends have been paying us a visit and giving the little tots an egg hunt.

Our Easter offerings are starting off nicely. Several churches have already sent in their offerings. I want to insist that each church in the entire Southern Christian Convention make this offering. It would be a happy event to have the pleasure of giving each church credit for an Easter offering this year. We would feel and know each church has an interest in this work in behalf of the little helpless ones and for the Master's sake. I want to ask the pastors, the Sunday school superintendents, the Sunday school teachers and the Sunday school secretaries to see to it that your church makes this offering this Easter season. I am depending on you. Will you disappoint me, or will you make me happy?

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Sunday was my birthday. I am six years old. I received several presents, one of which was seventy-five cents. I will send one dime of it to the orphans. I will write again when I have more money. Lovingly.—Ralph Bain Newman.

Glad to have your letter this week. You must write often and help to keep the corner interesting.—“Uncle”

Dear Uncle Charley: I have been sick, but am much better. I took my bad medicine like a man, so mother gave me a story book and some money. I am sending the orphans a dime. We like to have mother tell us about the orphan children. Are the twin boys there now? I wish Oliver Young would write again. I am now four years old but wish so much I were six so that I could go to school next year with Ralph.—Leon W. S. Newman.

I am glad you are better. Sorry you had to take bad medicine. It's bad, isn't it? I have been missing Oliver Young's letters too.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley: Here comes a little girl to join your happy band of cousins. I was three months old yesterday. I hope I am not too young to mingle with the other boys and girls. I live out in the country and have a good time going to see my grandma. I weighed fifteen pounds when I was two months old, so my great grandpa gave me a dollar. I have some little yellow biddies and mamma takes me out with her to watch them eat. Enclosed find a nickel for every month of my age. If this doesn't get in the waste basket, I will get mamma to write for me again. Love to all.—Vivian Oray Lewis.

We give you a warm welcome to the corner. I hope you will have good luck with your chickens. We are trying to raise some this year.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley: We are a little late with our dimes this month. I hope all the little children are well and are enjoying these beautiful days. With best wishes for you and the little cousins.—Frank and Herbert Burton.

All of our children are well now. Our little sick boy is up.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley: This is fine weather. I hope the orphans are having a fine time. It makes me very lazy to walk two miles to school. I have just two more weeks to go, yet I will be sorry when it is ont. We are enclosing twenty cents—a dime for each. With love and best wishes.—Virginia Pearl and U. T. Ayscue.

This weather is too pretty to be lazy. I am sorry your school closes so early.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley: It will no doubt surprise you to hear from me. I think it my duty to send a few pennies to the orphan children, as I feel impressed to do so. I truly hope it will do the children good in some way. I teach the card class at Catawba Spring's church and there isn't anything I like more. Rev. J. Lee Johnson, in my opinion, is one of our finest preachers. I like to hear him preach. Enclosed you will find $1.00 for the little ones. Wishing you all a happy Easter and much success.—Janie Sorrell.

I think you for the offering of $1.00 and appreciate your letter very much. I agree that you have a splendid preacher. I have heard him.—“Uncle Charley.”

“MOON, SO ROUND AND YELLOW”

Moon, so round and yellow,
Looking from on high,
How I love to see you
Shining in the sky.
Oft and oft I wonder,
When I see you there,
How they get to light you,
Hanging in the air.
Where you go at morning,
When the night is past,
And the sun comes peeping
O'er the hills at last.
Sometime I will watch you
Slyly overheard,
When you think I'm sleeping
Snugly in my bed.

NAHUM PRINCE

This is the story of Nahum Prince. He must have lived a hundred years or more ago, and he died, I do not know when. He was lame. Something had crushed his foot so that he could hardly walk.

It was at the time of the fighting with Burgoyne, and General Lincoln was in front and was ordering out every man from New Hampshire. And all of the regular companies of troops had been marched ont. Then there came the final call for all who could go, and all the old men and boys volunteered; and there was not a boy over thirteen years of age in the village who didn't go, except Nahum Prince. When they were getting ready to go he stood up as well as he could with an old Queen Anne's arm on his shoulder, and the captain came along and saw him and said:

“Nahum, you here!”

“Yes, sir,” said Nahum.

Then the captain said, “Go home, Nahum; you know you don't belong here; you can't walk a mile.”

Then he called to the doctor, and the doctor said, “Nahum, it's no use; you must go home.”

Then they all marched off without him. Rub-a-dub-dub; rub-a-dub-dub, went the drums; and every man and boy of them went off and left poor Nahum Prince alone.

“I shall die before night if I stay here all alone, the only boy in town. I must do something.”

It was coming autumn. It was not late but he knew that he must do something; so he went down and split old Widow Corliss' wood for her, for he could split wood, though he could not march.

He had not been splitting wood for more than an hour when four men on horseback came down the road and stopped. He could see them stand and talk. They all went off and then one came back again and beckoned to Nahum; and when he came up the man on horseback said:

“Where are all the men gone?”

“They have all gone off to join the army,” Nahum said.

“And isn't there any blacksmith in town?”

“No,” said Nahum, “there isn't a man or boy in town except me, and I wouldn't be here only I am so lame I can't march.”

“Do you mean to tell me,” said the man, “that there is nobody here who can set a shoe?”

“Why, I can set a shoe,” said Nahum.

“Then it is lucky you were left behind,” the man said. “Light up the forge and set this shoe.”

And now comes the most interesting part of the story. Nahum lighted the fire, blew the flames hot, and set the shoe on the horse; and the horse and the rider went away after the man had thanked Nahum.

Nahum finished splitting the widow's wood. And when, the next week, the boys came home and told how Colonel Seth Warner came up on his horse just in time, leading the First Regiment and took the prisoners and won the day, Nahum didn't say anything. But he knew that Colonel Warner never would have been on that horse if he didn't set that shoe. And it was little lame Nahum Prince who really won the splendid victory which ended the battle of Bennington.—From Stories Children Need.

Ask all the questions you wish in Siam! If you don't people will think you rude. When a Siamese boy or girl goes to school, he begins the day politely by asking the teacher how old he is, how much his hat cost, how much salary he gets, and how often he has his hair cut.—Everyland.

I asked the dog, “Why all this din?”

Said he, “I'm fashioned outside in,

And all my nights and days I've tried

My best to get the bark outside.”

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR APRIL 18, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

Subject: The Victory of Gideon's Band. Judges 7:1-8, 16-21.

Golden Text: There is no restraint to Jehovah to save by many or by few.

Primary Topic: Gideon and His Three Hundred.

Senior Topic: One Man with God A Majority.

It is Human to Forget

Last Sunday's victory of Barak over the Canaanites was followed by forty years of peace. But as throughout human history, the lesson of Israel's delivery died with those who learned it. And with the new generation came the tendency to put aside all thoughts of gratitude to the God who had generated the campaign of a strong man and a courageous woman.

New Enemies to Disturb

The new source of danger was not the Canaanites again but another tribe of monarchs or outlaws called the Midianites. These men were public robbers and used the same tactics as General Sherman did in his march to the sea. Overrunning fresh tilled fields, they ruthlessly carried off crops and cattle unhampered by the frightened men of Israel who sought shelter in caves and the hills.

God Sends a Deliverer

From this situation there was but one escape-God. To do it he needed a man. So on every occasion when a crisis is to be met God looks about for a man who is capable of rising to it. How rich our country's tradition is in furnishing Gideon's for perilous times! George Washington arose at a time when a small company of freedom-loving men determined to do the apparently impossible. Abraham Lincoln came from a farmer's hut to hold together by the sheer force of his character a nation that was breaking in two. And in our own day General Joffre of France arose when the German army was within a few miles of Paris and with no practical barrier to hold them back. These men with the help of God achieved the impossible. So did Gideon with his band of three hundred buglers.

The Need of Modern Gideons

Note the contrast in the size of the opposing forces. At first it is ten thousand to fifty thousand; then it is two thousand to fifty thousand. Then finally after the water-drinking elimination it is three hundred to fifty thousand! Note also that the fifty thousand had weapons of war, whereas God's battalion of three hundred carried torches, pitchers and trumpets. And still the latter triumphed. Why? Because they carried that without which no victory is possible. God was in the lead.

A War Hallowed Ground

Two years ago, and three thousand years after Gideon's victory, the forces of Great Britain rescued the same territory from the ravages of the Turks. Today the small white crosses of a British military graveyard mark the spot where today's lesson occurred. History is repeating itself before our very eyes and God is still in the lead.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR APRIL 18, 1920

(J. Vincent Knight)

"When Is Courage Needed?"—Luke 12:4; Deut. 20:1-4; Esth. 4:13-17.

Some one has said: "The bravest man in the world is the one who dares to do right when he knows he stands alone in his undertaking." In the Bible we find many such characters. Daniel, Esther, Stephens, and Christ Himself faced such difficulty. It took the grind of life to bring out the real courage of these characters, and show to the world what the best in them would endure for the work. It takes trial, temptation, hardship and the daily grind of life to bring out the best there is in us. Courage we must have.

When We Would Shun the Modern Evils of the Day

One of the greatest evils our young people have in the modern age is the social evil. There seems to be an exodus from the Church to the public amusement side of life. The public dance, pool room, card tables, etc. These have wielded a dreadful influence on our people. In our cities our young women as well as the men have fallen into the habit of matching each other for drinks, coins, etc., gambling in the open, visiting questionable shows, public dance halls, etc. These habits have a dangerous effect on the life of the young, and sap the vitality of the whole life of the Church. It will take all the courage you can muster to overcome this habit, for if ever a poor soul needed courage to help him it is one who has fallen a victim to the social evil of today.

When We Know it Makes us Unpopular to do Right

No doubt the young man or woman need courage most when they know that their stand for the right has made them unpopular. But let us not forget that reputation is what folks think of us, and character is what we really are. A young woman in—Church—State threw her whole life and influence on the side of Christ and the Church. She lost most of her young associates, who buffeted her, called her a snob, etc. When asked what she thought of it she replied: "I know the stand I have taken has made me very unpopular, but I shall keep on in spite of it." She has, but it has taken courage to do it. Rest assured, young man or young woman, that what Christ expects is a strong Christian character and not a reputation.

When We Would Dare to do the Right Thing

Doing just the right thing at the right time is not always easy. It often takes courage to do it. Daniel had courage when he prayed in spite of the protest. Esther had the courage no one of her sex ever possessed when she went into the King's court. It took courage for Stephen and others of the Apostolic age to pray for those who martyred them. It takes courage today to do the right thing when we know those who stand by us are seeking to murder the character and rob the life of its real joy and happiness. Would you overcome the social evil, temptations of the day, and triumph, when you know it makes you unpopular to do the right thing?

MARRIAGES

WHITMORE-WAMPLER

March 9, 1920 was the scene of the first wedding in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Wampler near Harrisonburg when their second daughter, Miss Eula C., became the bride of Mr. Charles S. Whitmore. A number of invited friends were present to witness the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Whitmore are splendid young people, and are popular with a host of friends. A number of beautiful and useful presents were received. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for a bridal trip to Washington, D. C. They will reside for the present at the bride's home. May their married life be useful and happy.

OBITUARIES

PARKS

February 29, 1920, Brother T. W. Parks passed from labor to reward after a long illness of rheumatism and heart trouble. He was known throughout the community as "Uncle Willie." He was named for Rev. J. W. Wellons who was his pastor in early life. Brother Parks was a member of Parks' Cross Roads church for many years.

Brother Parks was a man of strong convictions and a determined will which marked a man of continued energy.

I was his pastor for fourteen months and found him to be at all times ready to help liberally to carry on the work of his church.

I never saw a man more humble to the will of God and always glad to hear the Word of God and to pray. The last few months of his life I never saw him but that he wanted me to read the Word and pray with him. He told me so many times that he had nothing against any man and he was ready to go when the Lord said come. He died happily with his faith in his Savior. I have certainly lost a true, good friend.

May the good Lord bless and comfort the bereaved wife and children.

A. T. BANKS.

PARKS

On February 17, 1920, Fields P. Parks passed from earth to heaven after an illness of twelve days with Influenza and pneumonia. He was a young man of rare qualities, being unusually clean in habits and morals. I am sure I knew him as well as any person, having been room-mates at college and very closely associated friends since that time. I never knew him to stoop to anything that was not becoming to a Christian gentleman. He was gentle in disposition, clean in word and kind to everybody. His character was above reproach both morally and spiritually. He always offered prayer before retiring and read His Bible often.

He had established himself as a business man. At the time of his death he was a book-keeper and credit man for Livermore & Brothers Supply Company, Pates, N. C., and also a partner in the same firm. Surely a good man has gone to receive the reward of the faithful. He was buried at Parks' Cross Roads church, services being conducted by the writer. God bless the bereaved ones.

A. T. BANKS.

COX

Monroe P. Cox died February 26, 1920, at the age of fifty-two years, three months and nineteen days. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife and two sons, besides many other relatives and friends. He had been a member of the church at Pleasant Ridge, since he was sixteen, at which place he was buried.

May God comfort the hearts of the bereaved ones in this sad trial.

T. J. GREEN.

HIMLER

Mrs. Margaret Himler was born in Germany, February 6, 1831, and died at her home near Bethel Christian church, March 13, 1920, aged eighty-nine years, one month, and seven days. Sister Himler with her husband came to America many years ago and became loyal and much respected citizens of this country, enjoying the highest respect of all who knew them until death called them up to the heavenly land. The deceased became a member of the Lutheran church while still in her native land, and remained a Lutheran until death. She was known by all who knew her as a deeply pious Christian woman. Surviving are one son, three grandchildren, and five great grandchildren. Her husband, also an excellent Christian, died several years ago. Funeral at Bethel Christian church, March 15.

A. W. ANDES.

BECKMAN

Mrs. Virginia C. Beckman departed this life February 27, 1920, at the age of fifty-five years, seven months, and twenty-four days, having been born July 3, 1864. Her death occurred in Cumberland, Md., where she had been living for several years. Sister Beckman held her membership with the Christian church at Concord, and was a woman of estimable Christian character. She is survived by two brothers, four sisters, one son and four grandchildren, and her second husband; her first husband having died some years ago. Funeral services at Timberville Reformed church, March 1.

A. W. ANDES.

WHITMIRE

Mrs. Flora Etta Whitmire was born April 26, 1887 and died at her home near Mayland, February 28, 1920, making her age, therefore, thirty-two years, ten months, and two days. Her death breaks up the home, thus causing the husband to put the three small children out among friends to be cared for. Such cases are always very sad. Besides her husband and three children she is survived by her parents, three brothers, and three sisters. She was a good Christian woman, and a member of the Methodist church. Funeral services conducted by the writer on March 2, at Linville Creek church of the Brethren church, assisted by Rev. W. A. Myers of the Church of the Brethren.

A. W. ANDES.

DELK

Little Bryan Delk, the five-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Delk, died February 24, 1920.

After services in the home the little one was laid to rest in the cemetery at old Christian Union. The parents were unable to attend burial as was also the grandmother, on account of the "flu."

May God bless and comfort the loved ones.

T. J. GREEN.

DOWDY

Mr. W. Robert Dowdy, of Ore Hill, N. C., died March 17, 1920. He was fifty years, one month, and twenty-nine days old. He had been an intense sufferer during the last six months of his life, from spinal rheumatism, having received treatment at four different hospitals and by many physicians. He is survived by a widow and five children—three girls and two boys, his father, mother, and four sisters.

He was happily converted and united with Antioch (Chatham) Christian church at the age of sixteen; and for several years he lived a consistent Christian life and was an energetic worker in the church. Although he later strayed off into the wilderness of sin, the Good Shepherd sought this wandering sheep across plains of prosperity, over mountain-tops of temptation, and through swamps of suffering until four weeks prior to his death, he finally found him and brought him back safely to the fold. Having been restored to full fellowship with Christ, Mr. Dowdy prayed that he might live long enough to prove to the world that he again had gotten right with God. It is said that a few days before he died, he earnestly entreated his father and uncle not to be so indifferent to the pleadings of the Spirit concerning their souls. He assured his loved ones that he was prepared to meet God in peace.

The funeral was conducted and the interment made at Antioch church.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

KITCHEN

Frank M. Kitchen died February 14, 1920, after suffering about three years with paralysis. He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Victoria Travis. To this union were born five children, three of whom are living: Mrs. Etna G. Jones and Edgar F. Kitchen, Manry, Va., and Charlie E. Kitchen, Brooklyn, N. Y.; also one step-son, James Travis, Wilmington, Del.

The second wife was Miss Ida F. Dunlow. There were four children to this union, one of whom is living: David R. Kitchen, Manry, Va. He is also survived by ten grandchildren.

He was a member of Barrett's Christian church. Funeral services conducted at the home by Rev. W. D. Harward and interment was in the family burying ground at J. F. Wellons. We hope to meet the beloved father and husband in Heaven.

A FRIEND.

FLEMING

Walter L. Fleming was born September 5, 1886, and died March 17, 1920 at the age of thirty-three years, six months, and twelve days. Surviving to mourn his departure are his widow and five small children, his parents, three brothers, and seven sisters. Brother Fleming was a member of the United Brethren Church, and was held in high esteem by all who knew him. Funeral services were conducted by the writer on March 18 at the Zion Church of the Brethren church, assisted by Rev. G. W. Clegg of the United Brethren Church, and Rev. I. W. Miller of the Church of the Brethren. The family have the deepest sympathy of their friends.

A. W. ANDES.

ROADCAP

Susannah Roadcap was born March 1, 1837, and died at her home at Linville, Va., March 26, 1920, at the age of eighty-three years and twenty-five days. She is survived by her husband who is now left alone. She was a member of the Methodist church, and enjoyed the esteem of a host of friends. A large congregation attended the funeral services which were held at the Linville Christian church on Sunday afternoon, March 28. Services by the writer, assisted by her pastor, Rev. C. J. Clarke.

A. W. ANDES.

BEASLEY

W. I. Beasley died February 25, 1920, at the age of sixty-one years, eight months and sixteen days. He leaves a wife and two children—one daughter and one son. He was a member of Mt. Hermon Christian church at which place he had held his membership about forty years. He made the statement before he died that he was willing and ready to die at any time. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

A FRIEND.

SUMMERS

Simon Peter Summers departed this life February 28, 1920, aged thirty-five years, five months, and twenty-four days. The date of his birth was September 4, 1884. He lived with his mother and sister on the old homestead near Laeey Spring. His aged mother, three brothers, and three sisters survive. Funeral services at Laeey Spring United Brethren church, March 1, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. C. S. Myers, pastor of the church.

Stop! Look! Listen!

A Message from the Convention's President,

Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D.

WE ARE approaching the crisis in the Men and Millions Forward Movement—Consecration Week. Stop and consider the meaning of April 18-25 for this great program of the Church. Three steps already taken lead up to this final test of laying money on the altar of God. Abram obeyed God's call and went out "not knowing whither he went;" Jacob promised the Lord one-tenth of "all that thou shalt give me" when he had no bed but the earth and no pillow but a stone; and, after that great prayer meeting and Peter's sermon, "there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Later, "when they had prayed, the place was shaken where they were assembled together and the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul; neither said any of them that ought of the things which he possessed was his own." In all of these four steps faith and prayer were most prominent. Life-recruits come from those who are willing to do what God requires; tithing is the willing mind to recognize personal stewardship and to covenant with God to give Him one-tenth of what He gives to us; life dedication comes out of the prayer-chamber, under the influence of the Holy Spirit; and Consecration Week puts faith and promise into concrete service. Ananias failed in the final step—he withheld what he pretended to give. The money test tries most men and women, because it is the substance they can see and use. The one man who went away sorrowful from the presence of Jesus Himself went away on account of money. Here is the Cross of this Campaign: "Whosoever doth not bear his cross, and come after me, cannot be my disciple." Look at that verse; ponder its meaning; think of what God is doing for you, and then help to put your church in the front line. Consecration Week should be the week of joy. Listen! "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another." This is a time for members of the Christian Church to do likewise and thereby "provoke others unto love and good works."

This Consecration Week is to be a great challenge and a great opportunity, and it will crown the whole Campaign with glory if every member does his part. Our leaders have done great things in preparing and sending out campaign literature; the laymen have aroused a new spirit of confidence and hope in the membership of the church by their Four Minute addresses; and the women have inspired all with a new faith and a new activity. The campaign songs have been sung with enthusiasm and devotion, and the whole Church has been quickened into new spiritual life.

Words are weak now; "actions speak louder than words;" and hence I am pleading with all to do their best. Do not say, "I gave to Missions and the Endowment Fund, and I cannot give to this call." In giving to these two causes you did not give to the other five causes, Publications, Sunday schools, Aged Ministers and their widows, Christian Endeavor, and Convention Fund. All of these must be supported and need your help.

THE PROMISE OF A NEW DAY

One of the most inspiring things to me about our Men and Millions Movement is the activity and interest manifested by our laymen. Again and again, has my heart rejoiced in the message brought by our Four Minute men and other speakers in behalf of this great Movement. Our men are putting into the work of the Kingdom some of the hard business sense which has made them successful in the business world. Too long has the Church sat back at ease with the preacher in the harness trying to pull the whole load. A new day has been ushered in, in which the whole Church is to carry forward the work.

Another thing of great promise is the enlisting of our boys and girls as stewards and the training of a generation which shall recognize Gods claim on their lives and possessions. Truly it is a glorious privilege to have a part in a work of such far-reaching influence.

Men and Millions Forward Movement Brings Joy to Sanford Church

Sunday, April 4, was a great day in our church at Sanford. We are having a real revival, and there is much joy in the church. From the beginning there was no opposition to the Movement, and as the Movement moved all got interested. We have secured two life recruits, forty tithers, and seventeen members were received into fellowship Sunday. We are unanimous in the opinion that the Movement is a spiritual blessing to any church. It will be almost fatal to any church not to enter heartily into this Movement that is bringing such joy and blessing.

T. E. WHITE.

From Old Dominion's Capital

We are doing fine in Richmond and we expect to go at least $2,000 more than we are allotted. I am sure we will give $2,500 or $3,000 here in our new church as our people are deeply interested in the Movement and are praying for a successful finish in the greatest undertaking in our Church.

Our church here is growing. We have an interesting Sabbath school, and on Sunday, April 5, we are going to organize a Christian Endeavor Society. We are in earnest and praying daily for the success of the greatest Church in the whole wide world—the Christian Church.

Glad to Be Living in a Time Like This

I am glad our leaders are putting the Men and Millions Forward Movement before the Church in my day. God demands one-tenth of our income and blesses us in giving it back to Him. I am a tither and I thank God that I am, because I have experienced the joy of much blessing because of it. I want to live a Christian life and when I die I hope to go to Heaven and live with Jesus. I want to meet others there where we can praise the Lord for His goodness to mankind.

Work—Pray—Give

"He that gathereth in summer is a wise son; but he that sleepeth in harvest is a son that causeth shame."

Dear Co-workers: Let us apply "Wisdom." We hear much nowadays about "waking up" as if we have been asleep on certain things. There is more truth than poetry in this expression. Thank God the Christian Church is waking up to her full duty.

When this great campaign is over and when we have gone over the top for our great Men and Millions Movement, may each one of us look back with pride and satisfaction.

This is truly the harvest time. Let us work, let us pray, and let us give. We may not have this opportunity next year. "For in such an hour as you know not, the Son of Man cometh." "Blessed is that servant whom his Lord, when He cometh, shall find so doing."

MRS. J. F. LOUDERBACK.

THE MONEY TEST

We are approaching in the Men and Millions campaign last part of the program—the money test. The one conspicuous person who declined to accept a personal invitation from Jesus was the young man who was very rich. It was the money question that kept him from accepting Christ. That has always been a hard question; but it must be solved. Money without Jesus leaves one sorrowful: "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?" Some one has said: "To lose money ill is often a crime." To gamble to lose money ill. "To get money ill is a worse crime." To rob, default, defraud, is to get money ill. "To spend money ill is worst of all." To spend money in wrong doing or living is to spend money ill. Nothing reveals one's character more clearly than the way he spends his money. The glutton spends for food. The drunkard spends for drink. The libertine spends for lust. The selfish spend for self. The philanthropist spends for others. The Christian spends for God's Kingdom. If you will write down what you spend your money for, I can tell what your character is.

Some say, "business is business" and "religion is religion;" but religion is business, and business should be religious. "Serve the Lord with gladness: come before His presence with singing." Money often stands in the way of life-recruits. If the ministry offered large salaries, many young people would surrender their lives for service; but the prospect of hard work and small pay deters them from such surrender. A man said to me the other day: "You never really find out a man till you have money-dealings with him," and this is certainly true, religiously; you never really find out a church member till you reach the money obligation of Christian life. The manner in which a Christian devotes his money to the cause of the church is an index to his heart. "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver." "See that you abound in this grace also." Money is a great revealer of character, of spirit, of manner, of all that enters into the man and the Christian. When the team comes to you, as a member of the Church, to subscribe on this five-year plan to raise the $2,000,000.00, receive them cordially, treat them helpfully, and subscribe liberally. It is the first time in our history that every member has a personal opportunity to help all the departments of the Church financially. The Kingdom needs Men and it needs Millions. "Little drops of water, little grains of sand" suggests a lesson for all of us. It is the countless rain-drops that fill the rivers; and the rivers give back to the sea what the sea gave to them through the clouds. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." Put this great truth to the test in that week of weeks from April 18 to April 25—"Consecration Week"—the week that should crown the campaign with the joy of service. Every church that raises its quota will be happy, and every church that goes over the top will overflow with joy. With one per cent of life-recruits, ten per cent of tithers, ten per cent new members added to the church, and the financial goal of $2,000,000.00 reached, a new day will dawn for the Southern Convention as a part of the Christian Church.

W. W. STALEY, Chairman Board of Directors Men and Millions Forward Movement.

MASTER, WE ARE HERE

On April 18 the Christian Church enters upon one of the most momentous crises of her history. When our forefathers left Baltimore Conference to form our Brotherhood, the divine principles of Christian democracy, they faced a crisis, but not so vital as this. Our crisis means that we are to determine whether they were right and whether we are worthy of their sacrifices. It is a momentous moment for us. God help us to be true, faithful, consecrated.

This Men and Millions Forward Movement has wrought wonders already in the spiritual life of our Church. Men and women whose relation to the Church was perfunctory before, have become soul-winners under the inspiration of this cause. Life can never be the same thing to them again. It would seem that God has enabled us to achieve victory in the three former drives, though all reports are not in yet, and these victories have been won despite sickness and inclement weather and other hindering causes. Tried with the zeal of the Spirit, our heroes and heroines have welcomed these obstacles as added spurs to faith and utilized them as stepping stones to success. This Movement has become an uprising of the people. Nothing like it ever occurred in our Church before.

And now we are on the verge of the final dash, the dash for funds. The success of this objective will conserve all the others. Failure here will discount all we have done before. There is an organization in every Conference in every regional district, in every local congregation capable of putting this drive over with all ease provided the standard plans adopted are employed. These leaders have a frightful responsibility resting on them. At the same time they have a most alluring invitation to go over into the land and possess it. Caleb and Joshua will go. We pray that God may give all our leaders the spirit of Caleb and Joshua and that no "grasshopper" Christians will be found among them. Of this we are absolutely sure—these leaders will bring their churches into a new day of service and Christian usefulness in their communities or they will dig the graves of their churches. Already leaders in the Methodist and Baptist churches unhesitatingly assert that the churches of their denominations that failed to function in the Centenary and 75 Million Dollar drives are disintegrating, dying. It cannot be otherwise in our Brotherhood. God cannot, He will not let a selfish, self-centered Church live. It is a case of life or death with us, beloved. Let us earnestly pray and labor that it may be life, new life, the abundant life of devoted service for the Kingdom.

When General Pershing stood by the tomb of La Fayette in France, the gratitude of his heart for that brave soldier's gift of service to our country so overcame him, that he was able to say only four words, but such words they were! "La Fayette, we are here." The heart of the Republic of the West echoed that sentiment in grateful acknowledgment of La Fayette's devotion to our liberty and every soldier in our National Army felt a new inspiration to do full duty in the cause of France's and the world's freedom as expression of gratitude therefor.

The Christian Church is now summoned to the standards of the Christ, the Christ Who died for us, summoned to His standards to help Him win the world to Himself through our Men and Millions Forward Movement. He gave far more to us than the gallant La Fayette ever gave to our country. Can we say less in this moment of His appeal to our loyal hearts than our nation's spokesman said at the tomb of the great soldiers?

Shall we not with bowed heads and consecrated hearts say to the call of the Savior of our souls and the Head of our Church in these splendid days of Consecration, April 18-25, "Master, we are here?"

"Master, We are Here."

W. A. HARPER, Secretary
Organization and Publicity Men and Millions Forward Movement.

The Supreme Hour

For the Christian Church there has never been a more important period than that which concludes the work of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. It is amazing to see what is being accomplished in so short a time. The campaign has afforded an opportunity for thought and activity that rarely ever come to a people. Men and women are having more optimistic views of church life. They are seeing the opportunities of the church from a different angle. All of it has come as a result of personal effort. The pastors are doing their best. The co-operation of the efficient captains has stimulated the work and kept it going even when the pastor and district director failed to get around. The results of this work are left to be seen in the future and will leave those who are opposing an occasion for regret. Let the churches make a diligent effort for the final drive.

E. M. CARTER.

Wadley, Ala.

Great Spiritual Awakening

The Men and Millions Movement has taken hold of the hearts of our people in the Norfolk District as nothing else has ever done. The Movement has so gripped, and stirred, and moved upon us that we are really living now in a new day in the Christian Church so far as Norfolk is concerned. Not only is enthusiasm in service running high, but a great spiritual awakening is in progress.

The District is safe on her one per cent enrollment of Life's Work Rerercuits, and has already gone far over the top in the enrollment of Tithers. And we feel confident that the results of Life-Dedication Week will safely put the District up to the goal of ten per cent increase in membership, if not beyond. We are working and praying to the end that victory may be realized during Consecration Week.

G. O. LANKFORD,
District Director.

VICTORY JUST AHEAD

Victory is just ahead. Those who have doubted victory in our Men and Millions Campaign have been few and their number has become fewer and fewer as the campaign has gone forward. Success is assured and all of us are glad. The success so far is due, and will be due, to the united effort and prayers of the people. The organization has been an instrument in the hands of the people for use and the people have used it. Every part has been essential. No one, save God, is due the victory that is just ahead.

Next Sunday the final message is to be delivered and the acid test of the Movement launched. The Four Minute Men have been doing a good work. Theirs has been the part of informing and inspiring, and reports coming from the field, justify my confidence in each worker. My hope is that each Four Minute Man will prepare a great message this week and pour his whole soul into the work on next Sunday. The message may make or mar the success of the local church. It is a privilege and trust of the people, of the Church, of God, and certainly no one will dare do less than the very best.

Final, final, final, the final march. On to victory, all brave soldiers in the lead. The last message before battle is the one that goes down as immortal history. Sound it, say it, speak it, ring it clear and loud.

Victory just ahead. March! March! March!

C. B. RIDDLE, Secretary
Speakers' Bureau and Advertising
Men and Millions Forward Movement.

FINALLY, BRETHERN

Before another issue of THE SUN reaches its readers our dear churches will be going over the top in the final drive of this campaign of righteousness for Men and Millions, and the songs of joy will be heard in the land. From one side of our Zion to the other faithful men and women have wrought, labored longed and prayed for the glorious consummation we are now to witness, if God wills. Since January 30 men and women in ever increasing numbers and earnestness have prayed that our Heavenly Father would graciously bless, prosper and bring to glad fruition this glorious undertaking. Brethren and beloved, shall we not, all of us, in the spirit of the Master go forth now to do our best for the Kingdom?

ONWARD! ONWARD! ONWARD! EVERY MEMBER TO THE FORE

While we rejoice in a well-founded hope, and praise God for His gracious leadership in the great work already done, let us not relax our efforts, nor relinquish our hold on the handles, till the last furrow has been turned and the last lick struck, for the cultivation and the reaping of this great, bountiful harvest. There is danger of over-confidence. We have learned to believe in our people. That is well. They do, they have ever done, what they set out to do. This brings inspiration, confidence and hope. But we must not rely upon past efforts, or past achievements. We must give to this task all that is in us, for it is by all odds the most stupendous task we have ever undertaken.

To the attainment of our goal we must have the co-operation of all. In team work every man counts. Now we must have the help, the sympathy, the co-operation of the weakest church as well as the strongest. The strength, the power, and the perfection of all depend upon the activity, the co-operation of each. "I in them and they in us that they may be made perfect in One," prayed our Lord. We are made perfect in One as we co-operate in Him and become workers together with Him.

Full instructions have been sent out as to how every church is to proceed in the final campaign of April 18-25. All is asked or desired or prayed is that every church will follow the plan laid out, and do their best. Candidly I do not believe there is a church of our numbers which cannot go and will not go "over the top," if a faithful, honest effort is made, after the manner of the plan mapped out and sent to every church. If we will not let fright or dread or distress overcome us, and will simply put on the campaign and do our best all will be well.

Brethren and sisters, in a matter of such moment to our Church and the Kingdom, can any church withhold its effort and co-operation in such a time? We are on trial for our future. The ages to be will look back upon what we do in this Movement this week and next. Shall we disappoint them? God of our fathers forbid. Together brethren and our greatest, biggest and best task for the Master will be done. God help each and all to do their best now for Men and Millions for the Master's use.

J. O. ATKINSON, Chairman Campaign Committee Men and Millions Forward Movement.

POINTERS

Some men are always willing to give—to the object not then being presented.

There are those who are as "close" as this: The devil himself does not love stingy being.

A good time, indeed, for the new tithers to begin the practice of their stewardship.

Money is the acid test. How many will be able to stand the acid?

The period of preparation is passed and now is the time for action. The success of the Movement largely depends upon one hundred percent membership subscription. For the first time in the history of our denomination every man woman and child member has the privilege of making a subscription to a great movement—the greatest in the history of the Christian Church. A small part of our membership had the privilege and joy of putting over the mission and Elon drives which, strengthened their loyalty, revived their spirituality and enlarged their vision. My ambition and prayer is for the entire Brotherhood to have the same blessed experience which can only be obtained by full participation in this Movement

A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

(Special Message for The Sun)

After a short consultation between the pastor, Rev. E. T. Cotten, and a few members of the Windsor Christian church, Windsor, Va., Wednesday evening, April 7, it was decided to put the church over the top on the last objective of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. The time set for the great, but glorious, job was Friday, April 9.

We felt that since the Windsor church, one of the smallest and weakest of the forty-two churches of the Eastern Virginia Conference, had obtained its one per cent of life recruits,—and that for missionary work; had gained its ten per cent of its members as Tithers; and feeling that we would surely reach our goal in the increase of membership in a few days; with great faith in God and our people, we believed our church could be the first in the county, first in the Eastern Virginia Conference, and probably, first in the State to go over the top in raising our quota of one hundred dollars per member.

LET US MOVE FORWARD

WORKER OR SHIRKER, WHICH?

Men and women and pastor were busily engaged all of Friday afternoon. At nine o'clock Friday night, April 9, the church had raised its quota of one hundred dollars per member, and we sang praises to God, the Giver of every good and perfect gift, and prayed our thanks to our Heavenly Father, feeling a new inspiration and a new desire burning within our souls to go out into the community, to be more loyal servants of our Master, to make our church a light for Christ which will be seen afar.

A SAMPLE

The laymen are interested. Evidence of that is seen and found every day. Here is a sample of what is being found in many cases. This is a letter sent a speaker after he had addressed a certain church on its mission in the great undertaking:

"Since hearing your most excellent address today on our Men and Millions Forward Movement, I have begun to realize what a small part I am doing for it.

"I will do all I can for it in my ehneh, and will pay what I can, but all of this will be a small part considering the bigness of the thing. I am signing a Tithers' Card and am going to use every influence to get my boys to do all they can. I want them to learn to want to do these things themselves, and then I will feel sure they will be headed in the right direction.

"This thought comes to me tonight, (and I feel that the Lord is directing me in it): I want to offer to you my services, subject to your call from now on to the end of the Campaign. If you have a call for any place that you cannot find any one to fill, I will be glad to go anywhere and try in an humble way to talk plainly to the people on the different objects of of the Movement. I am not offering this proposition to further any merit on my account, but merely to offer my services to help, as far as my capacity will allow.

"From now on I am going to use every opportunity locally and elsewhere to help further our cause."

FOUND IN OUR MAIL

Brother T. J. Holland, Wray, Ga., writes encouragingly of the work in his section.

A good student of human psychology writes: "The Men and Millions Movement will put new life, push, drive dynamic, enthusiasm, and determination in the Christian Church, and will begin a new era in Education, Evangelism, Missionary Activity, Social Service, Liberality, and give the Church a new vision of the Kingdom of God on earth. It will promote the spirit of Brotherhood, Righteousness, Consciousness of Kind, and Sense of Power for Christian Progress."

Brother Elmer Cook, Edinburg, Va., sends this message: "Have secured two life-recruits and twenty-five tithers and have a good chance for more."

AS SEEN FROM THE OUTSIDE

Miss Mamie Bays, Charlotte, N. C., special newspaper correspondent, sent the following message to the press on April 9:

"The latest report regarding the progress of the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention are of such nature as to be distinctly gratifying to the campaign committee and to the entire membership of the Church. Already a number of individual churches have conducted the every member canvass of their entire membership and have passed the goal of securing $80.00 per member from every member in pledges to cover the coming five years. The every member canvass in these churches has been made in advance of the time set for the entire Church canvass, which is April 18-25, and the success attained in these churches in which the canvass has been made encourages the campaign committee in the belief that in the church-wide canvass to be conducted two weeks from now the effort will be equally successful.

"Of the five objectives of this movement, four of these being preliminary to the financial drive, two are known to have passed the goal with a safe margin. The first of these was the drive in the interest of life work recruit, the goal of which was to secure at least one per cent of the entire membership of the church to enlist in some form of definite Christian service. The second was a drive to secure pledges from at least ten per cent of the membership of the church that they would follow the Scripture direction regarding tithing their income. The third preliminary drive is now drawing to a close, the objective of this being to secure an increase of at least ten per cent to the membership of the Church as the result of personal work upon the part of the present membership. The result of this drive will be known in a few days, and judging from reports already received, the promise is that it will be crowned with success.

"The single word Forward will constitute the theme of this campaign the week of April 11-18, which is the week immediately preceding that which will mark the close of the campaign. During this last week preliminary to the financial drive for $80.00 per member from every member of the Church effort will be made in a special way to impress the entire membership of the church with reference to its responsibility regarding stewardship."

A GOOD REPORT

A special series of revival meetings began in the First Christian church, Norfolk, Va., on March 21, and continued through Easter Sunday. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Morgan, did the preaching through the entire meeting, and the interest was great from the very beginning. The attendance was the largest in the history of the church, and there were professions and additions at nearly every service. The pastor had the hearty support of the two large Junior and Senior choirs, and also by the members of the church.

EVERY MEMBER TO THE FORE

SUCCESS CROWNS EFFORT

The great climax of the meeting came Easter Sunday, when the pastor at the morning service, received four members, consecrated eight babies, and gave the communion to the largest number that has ever received it on a single Communion Sunday. At the evening service of that same day there were nine additions to the church, and the pastor baptized thirty-four persons. This church has had a splendid growth for the last four years, and the church appreciates the work of her pastor, and has high hopes for the future, and also expects to make good with her part of the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention. Since Pastor Morgan has been on the field, the First church has added 230 members to her membership, built new Sunday school rooms, paid the debt on the parsonage, and made splendid progress along many lines.

MAY 9TH SALVATION ARMY SUNDAY

An appeal to the ministers of America to make May 9 "Salvation Army Sunday" has been sent out by Evangeline Booth, commander of The Army. Pastors everywhere have been asked to devote that day's services, or a portion of them at least, to the work of this vast organization, either through sermons preached about the Army and the fundamental, cardinal principles of its endeavors, or by friendly pulpit references to it and the Christian nature of its labors.

May 9 has been chosen as the date of this Salvation Army Sunday because it immediately precedes this year's appeal for support. Under the new plan of organization a single annual appeal is made, and the old tambourine collection method is practically dispensed with.

The plan of particular recognition for the Army on May 9 has sent with wide approval and support from the pulpits of America. Many ministers have already made known their intention to devote their entire service to a consideration of The Army and its work, while others have asked that Army Officers occupy their pulpits on the day when it is hoped to call the attention of the whole country to the work as well as the needs of this great group of Christian Workers and earnest evangelists.

The day will be observed not alone in churches, but will also be made a time of service by The Army's workers and officers wherever they go. Special gatherings will be held for prayer and praise, that the members of this mothering army and those for whom they labor, may be still more inspired with sacrificial and humble devotion to their work.

CHURCH LEADERS WOULD BANISH TURK FROM EUROPE

A memorial has been presented to the President, the Vice-President and to the Speaker of the House, by a committee representing the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, headed by Bishop William F. McDowell of the Methodist Episcopal Church and Rev. E. O. Watson, Washington Secretary of the Federal Council, appealing to the government to exclude Turkish rule from Europe and to take some definite step toward the assuming of America's share of responsibility for the welfare of the subject races of the former Ottoman Empire.

BIBLE YEAR

The Governors of thirty-six states have written the New York Bible Society commending its efforts to make this year 1920 Bible Year. Letters are being received every day from other Governors. The members of the Cabinet, and the Mayors of some of the largest cities have written to the Society in praise of its project. Some of these letters give strong endorsement to the Bible and its influence upon civilization, and commend that it be more frequently read, and applied to present day problems.

Two series of meetings are now announced as part of the program for Bible Year. The first will be held April 21 and 22 at noon and also in the evening of April 21, in the Marble Collegiate Church, Fifth Avenue and 29th Street, and will be addressed by Dr. A. C. Dixon. The second series will be in the second week of May, from Tuesday to Friday, at noon and in the evening, and will be addressed by Mr. Paul Rader of Chicago. Of the May meetings, those at the noon hour will be held in the Marble Collegiate Church, and those in the evening will be held in the Gospel Tabernacle on Eighth Avenue and Forty-Fourth Street.

The idea of Bible Year, which is being promoted by the New York Bible Society, started in Great Britain, where the Lord Bishop of Dutham is President of the Movement. The purpose of Bible Year is to set forth the value of the Bible upon the individual and national life, and to increase interest in the Bible and Bible reading.

DEVOTIONAL

MUSIC EXPRESSES GOD IN THE LIFE

Heathenism has no hymn book. Buddhism, Brahmanism, Confusionism, Mohammedanism and Paganism do not break forth into songs of joy. How could this be expected when their religion inspires only fear and dread. Charles E. Scott, of China, describes the Buddhist chant as weird "with a vein of sadness in them as of joy unattained, of hope unrealizable," and goes on to say, "they give many people a sense of unutterable homesickness."

"To one who knows heathen conditions it is impossible to expect lightsome, joyous music, for there is no real joy-producer. In a land packed with hidden horrors of heathenism—such horrors as its homelessness; much married but without home life; such horrors as its helplessness in the presence of superstition; such horrors as its hopelessness as it faces the future, and afraid to die; such horrors as its hideousness in its outrage upon girlhood, maidenhood, and wifehood, making beasts of fair sex." In the face of such conditions no one could expect a song. The Chinese believe that music comes from supernatural beings.

God Himself is a song, and the life in which Jesus is supreme is a song-life. The first earthly song of which we have any record in the Bible is that of Moses, when God set Israel free from bondage. With great enthusiasm they sang:

"I will sing unto the Lord for he hath triumphed gloriously.
The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea
Jehovah is my strength and song,
And he is become my salvation."

When we let God take supreme control of our lives and allow Jesus Christ to live and abide in us then our life itself is turned into a constant song. Sin is discord and it is only when the life is free from the slavery and bondage of sin that it sings.

The Israelites sang when God delivered them from Egypt's thralldom, but when the spies were sent out and brought back with them the report: "There we saw giants," all the congregation lifted up their voices and wept. Israel wept when she failed through disobedience and unbelief, but she sang when she was victorious through faith. Israel could not sing while in captivity, but weeping she hung her harps upon the willows and cried,

"How can we sing Jehovah's songs
In a Foreign Land?"

But when the temple was cleansed of all uncleanness and the incense began burning, then the sacred word declares: "And all the assembled worshipped, and the singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded; and this continued until the burnt offering was finished." Why did they sing upon this occasion and weep in the other? Because God was with them.

George Whelpton says, "There never has been a deep religious awakening that has not made music its handmaid. When Martin Luther began his great reformation, one of his first steps was the adaptation of Scriptural texts to some of the best music of the Roman Catholic church." It is said that his master-piece, "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," accomplished as much for the Reformation as did the translation of the Bible.

D. L. Moody saw the great need of expression, to the world, Christ in the life other than in words—so there sprang from his work Gospel hymns which created a new era in church music in this country. When God commissioned Moody to be a stirring evangelist, he commissioned also Sankey to carry the sacred story in song, and his songs swayed great audiences and softened their hearts. A beautiful voice, though it be artistically perfect, no more makes it possible for its possessor to produce a message in song, than a theological equipment with the Spirit of God left out qualifies a minister to preach the saving grace of Jesus Christ. It takes a regenerated heart to sing God's praise as surely as it takes a regenerated heart to preach Christ. All other singing offered as worship is an insult to God. Jazz music is simply the result of jazz morals, but God in the life—Christ in supreme control causes us to burst forth into thanksgiving and praise. In Revelation 15 we hear them singing the song of Moses and song of the Lamb, which means that the life into which has come the Christ, will sing through eternity.

USE AND HAPPINESS

Christ was thinking of use and happiness when He called His missionary recruits to Him and began the counsels which we call the Sermon on the Mount. He wanted them to be happy, just as God wants us to be happy nowadays. But He offered them suggestions of a care-proof, sin-proof, pride-proof kind of happiness which would neither crumple nor spoil at the first touch of opposition or heat; a kind of happiness that would go as a travel companion with them on the mission for which they were sent. Some of us have an idea of a sort of happiness laid up in a napkin, held apart from others, unspoiled by use. But Christ would make us happy by putting all our powers to use in our relations with our fellow men, a social happiness, as we say nowadays. There is no real, fire-and-frost-proof happiness except for a witnessing church and busy men. That mother of James and John dreamed of them on thrones, but Jesus knew that a throne was the unhappiest place unless it had been earned by service. His word to the brothers—and his word also to us—is: "Not so shall it be among you; but whosoever would become great among you shall be your minister." The unhappiness of a useless life is merely an index of its immorality.—Isaac O. Rankin.

Plenty of time to go to shows, to amusements, and do other things, but little time to devote to the Kingdom's interest. Where your treasure is—well, that your heart will be also.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

BRIEFS

Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne began a series of meetings with the Third Church, Norfolk, Va., last Sunday,

The Board of Polity of the Department of Religious Education of the Convention, held a meeting in Burlington a few days ago, preparing its recommendations to the Convention.

A CHALLENGE TO EVERY CHURCH

Already leaders in the Methodist and Baptist churches unhesitatingly assert that the churches of their denominations that failed to function in the Centenary and 75 Million Dollar drives are disintegrating, dying. It cannot be otherwise in our Brotherhood. God cannot, He will not let a selfish, self-centered Church live. It is a case of life or death with us, beloved. Let us earnestly pray and labor that it may be life, new life, the abundant life of devoted service for the Kingdom.

(Quotation from article by Dr. W. A. Harper in this issue):

EDITORIAL HIGH LIGHTS

SELFISHNESS

Selfishness blinded Judas. The money was so close to his eye that it shut off from his vision everything else. The sweetest music, and the only music, he could really appreciate was the jingle of coins. He lived for this world, and everything had to be subservient to his one aim—the making of money. This is an appropriate epitaph to put on the tombstone of such a character:

“Here lies old Ten Per Cent;

The more he got the less he spent.

The more he got, the more he craved,

And if he gets to heaven, we will all be saved.”

He measures everything by the money standard. Thirty pieces of money—sixteen and two-third dollars—weighed more on his scales than a man—even the Son of God. Let us not spend all our time condemning Judas; let us examine our own hearts and see if we are in danger of selling our Lord and Master.

OF GENERAL INTEREST

On April 9 Representative Claude Kitchen was stricken with paralysis following an impassioned address in opposition to the peace resolution. This is said to be Mr. Kitchen's second stroke. Reports this (Monday) morning say that Mr. Kitchen is resting well.

Another great railroad strike is about to endanger the country's transportation. The strike seems to be unauthorized.

The Senate continues its effort to bring about a peace resolution.

"When I survey the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of Glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride."

Put it over.
Put it over on schedule time.
We can "possess the land."

STIR ME, LORD

"Stir me, Oh! stir me, Lord, I care not how,
But stir my heart in passion for the world!
Stir me to give, to go—but most to pray:
Stir, 'till the blood red banner be unfurled
O'er lands that still in deepest darkness lie,
O'er deserts where no cross is lifted high.

Stir me, Oh! stir me, Lord! Thy heart was stirred
By love's intensest fire, 'till Thou didst give Thine only Son, Thy best beloved One,
Even to the dreadful cross, that I might live;
Stir me to give myself so to thee,
That Thou canst give Thyself again through me!"

A REQUEST

I am receiving a number of letters requesting special prayer and some of these letters give only the initials or the first name. They are worthless to me unless the whole name is given. Write me how you are suffering and with what disease—whether spiritual or physical, or both. I would be glad to know the ages of those who make requests and, if possible, should like to have a picture of those whom I do not know.

I will give a date when I will offer special prayer and I hope that it will be profitable to all applicants. If I do not answer your letters immediately, I will as soon as I can fix a date.

FROM OVER THE SEAS

FROM JAPAN

The regular visits of THE SUN are much appreciated out here in this distant corner. Its cheering accounts of the general spiritual advance, including as a part of its well balanced arrangements a large scale giving for missions and other general interests, by the Southern Convention, is a ground of hopefulness.

During the dark days of the war, we hardly dared to attempt to look very far ahead. I am afraid that it would have been a case of "men's hearts failing them for fear." The war is mostly in the past, the vast harm it has done every good cause is outstandingly apparent. But also there is evident a new spirit of determination on the part of Christ's people, and that this extends to practical things more than ever. You will be glad to know that this reaches the Christians of this land,—in our own church and in other churches. We are touching realities as never before. I think the optimism of times "before the war" has come back to us;—of course, chastened by our recently acquired knowledge of the depth of Satan,—the volcanic forces of evil lying so near the surface.

During the war it was a matter of general remark among intelligent Japanese that the social progress of their country was at issue. If Germany won the militarism and general social conservatism, copied on Prussian models, was to continue here, and perhaps even be keyed up. If the allies won, Japan would enter on more democratic ways, along the lines of British models. Japan still remains especially responsive to general world movements, and that forecast is being fulfilled in a very marked degree.

All this is not without its relations to the advance of the Kingdom of God here. More than ever, the way is opening for us. God has placed before us an open door which no man can shut. Pray for our work here.

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

The writer will not fall out with the weather man any more. Some weeks ago the weather man said it would be fair weather and we commenced to get some ground ready and planted one bag of Irish potatoes and expected to put in a hard day's work the next day but in the night it began to rain and has rained every few days since, so we have not been able to plant any more potatoes.

Last fall during the Thanksgiving offering season we had several rainy Sundays and the Thanksgiving offerings were cut short on that account, so we had it pictured out in our mind that Easter Sunday was going to be a beautiful warm sunshiny day so everybody could be at church and the Thanksgiving offerings would be large and we would raise the largest offering we have ever raised. To our disappointment in this section it was rainy and part of the day stormy, and many of our people did not get to go to church, so we are afraid The Easter offerings will be smaller than they would have been on that account.

At this writing the weather is clear and it looks now as if we may plant potatoes and beans in the next few days. With sixty children to feed we are always anxious to get things planted early in the spring and that will help to cut expenses in the eating line.

Our Easter offerings started off nicely in this report and we expect a better report for next week. It is our aim this year to get every church to make this offering. We want to have the satisfaction one time of knowing that every church in the Southern Christian Convention made the Easter offering. We are expecting an offering from your church and will keep looking for it till you send it in.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—Grandma Atkinson gave me a dime and thinks that I am old enough to join the band of cousins. What do you think about it? I will be one year old tomorrow, April 1. I am just getting over with the measles. I can't go out of doors yet and that hurts most as much as having measles. With love to all the cousins.—Alma Atkinson Hobby.

We are glad to have you join the band of cousins. You are old enough to join. You should be glad that you are through with measles. It caught me when I was a grown man and lasted me a long time.—“Uncle Charley.”—

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am going to join the band of cousins. Enclosed you will find a dime for March. I go to school at Truette. My teacher's name is Miss Ruby Lee Strain. I am thirteen years old and am in the eighth grade. My father is Rev. G. D. Hunt. I guess you know him. When you come to Wadley again, you must come to our house. With love to you and the cousins.—Staley Hunt.

I think I met your father in Wadley, Ala. I would be glad to visit in your home and will some time when I am in your section.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am sending 25 cents for the orphans. I have been thinking I would write you for some time. I am not so well and am quite fretful. When mamma gets her switch I am a better boy. Best wishes for all of the cousins.—J. B. Taylor.

The switch has good effect sometimes, doesn't it? I remember when my mother used it with good effect.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I hope you and the orphans are well. We have lots of sickness near us but none in our home. I wanted to send my dime sooner but I can't write. I had to wait until some one would write for me. Now, I will just send a dollar as an Easter offering. Love and best wishes to all.—L. M. Veasey, Jr.

Our little folks are all well now. We had eggs for Easter. Easter Monday was a very unfavorable day to get out much.—“Uncle Charley.”

SOMEBODY'S GRANDFATHER

Who does not love the boy who shows respect for old age! Recently in one of the waiting rooms in the depot of a large city there entered a bright-faced young boy leading by the arm a man with snow-white hair. The latter was old and trembling and looked around him most fearfully.

The boy escorted him to a seat and placed the basket and bundle he was carrying on the floor beside him. Then with a word or two he went away. He returned presently with a porter, to whom he spoke some words about the one sitting down. Then, with a hearty handshake, accompanied by a bright smile, he started in the direction of the door. A gentleman was going out at the same time who had witnessed the advent of the boy and the old man. He said as the door was reached: "Your grandfather, I suppose. Going on a journey?"

"Not mine but somebody's grandfather," was the reply given, with a little laugh. "I found him on the corner as I was going to school. He had lost his way to the depot and was in trouble."

"That was very bright and kind of you," the gentleman said, with an appreciative look that made the blood surge to the boy's face; but the latter only said: "Thank you, sir."—Exchange.

GEORGE WASHINGTON THRIFTOGRAMS

Washington, the successful builder of a nation, gave voice to rules for personal and national success which are as applicable in this 1920 year of necessary thrift as in his day. Here are some of his words on the use of money and of resources that might have been written for the present situation in America:

I am no more disposed to squander than to stint.

Economy makes happy homes and sound nations. Instill it deep.

It is not the lowest priced goods that are always the cheapest. I cannot enjoin too strongly upon you a due observance of economy and frugality.

Keep an account book and enter therein every farthing of your receipts and expenditures.

Promote frugality and industry by example, encourage manufactures, and avoid dissipation.

Reason, too late perhaps, may convince you of the folly of misspending time.

There is no proverb in the whole catalogue of them more true than a penny saved is a penny got.

Nothing but harmony, honesty, industry, and frugality are necessary to make us a great and happy nation.—Exchange.

A TRUTHFUL BOY

How people do trust a truthful boy! We never worry about him when he is out of sight. We never say: "I wonder where he is; I wish I knew what he is doing." We know that he is all right, and that when he comes home we will know all about it and get it straight. We don't have to ask him where he is going or how long he will be gone every time he leaves the house. We don't have to call him back and make him "solemnly promise" the same thing over and over. When he says, "Yes, I will," or "No, I won't," just once, that settles it.—Robert Burdette.

THE NIGHT WIND

Have you ever heard the wind go "Yooooo?"
'Tis a pitiful sound to hear!

It seems to chill you through and through
With a strange and speechless fear.

'Tis the voice of the night that broods outside
When folk should be asleep,

And many and many's the time I've cried
To the darkness brooding far and wide

Over the land and the deep:

"Whom do you want, O lonely night,
That you wail the long hours through?"

And the night would say in its ghostly way:

"Yooooo!"

Yooooo!"

Yooooo!"

My mother told me long ago

(When I was a little lad)

That when the night went wailing so,

Somebody had been bad;

And then, when I was snug in bed,

Whither I had been sent,

With the blankets pulled up round my head,

I'd think of what my mother'd said,

And wonder what boy she meant!

And "who's been bad today?" I'd ask

Of the wind that hoarsely blew,

And the voice would say in its meaningful way:

"Yooooo!"

Yooooo!"

Yooooo!"

That this was true I must allow—

You'll not believe it though!

Yes, though I'm quite a model now,

I was not always so.

And if you doubt what things I say,

Suppose you make the test;

Suppose, when you've been bad some day

And up to bed are sent away

From mother and the rest—

Suppose you ask, "Who has been bad?"

And then you'll hear what's true;

For the wind will moan in its ruefulest tone:

"Yooooo!"

Yooooo!"

Yooooo!"

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR

APRIL 25, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

Subject: Ruth's Wise Choice.—
Ruth 1:14-22.

Time: About B. C. 1173.

Place: Forks of the Jordan.

Golden Text: Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.

Junior Topic: Ruth and Naomi.

Senior Topic: The Power of Personal Influence.

Additional Material: Matt. 5:13-16, Ruth 1-2.

The Story of Ruth

The lessons studied so far this quarter have been lessons of war, resounding with the tramp of soldiers and the clang of arms. Today we revert to one of the intervals between these outbreaks and study a lesson of peace. The transition is from great movements and commotion to simple character and quiet life of the home and field. The story of Ruth to me is the most charming, simple story of the Old Testament. Between the books of Judges and Samuel, it is a cool, green valley between two mountains of tumultuous war, a spirit oasis between two wide deserts of sin.

A Firm Decision

When Naomi's husband died she had left two sons who were married to two Moabite girls—Ruth and Orpah. In ten years, however, these sons had followed their father leaving Naomi in a strange land with her daughter-in-law. Therefore, she determined to go home to Bethlehem alone. Considerate of the welfare of Ruth and Orpah, she advised them to return to their homes where they could marry again. This suggestion was accepted by Orpah but Ruth was made of different stuff. She had a love for her mother-in-law that had no thought of physical separation.

Two Good Women

What a fine picture this attempt at parting must have been. On the one hand an old woman about to brave the perils of a long, lonely trip thinking of daughter-in-law and her well being. On the other hand a faithful young girl unwilling to forsake her old companion and helper declines to leave her is the most beautiful poem of love and duty in all literature.

A Motto For 1920

It is a carol of scripture every day of our lives is a day of some decision. Problems of varying magnitude are before us all the time, in the home, in the Sunday school, in our business. Will we leave good enough alone and make no effort to decide for ourselves as did Orpah? Or will we say with Ruth, "entreat me not to leave thee?" Our harvest field is the world. The grain is ripe to bursting and the night comes on. Men and women of North Carolina will ye go into the field?

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR

APRIL 25, 1920

(J. Vincent Knight)

"Christian Principles in Public and Personal Health."—I Cor. 6:19-20.

One of the things the war has brought about is a more careful study of the principles of public health, and health conditions about us. In former years the Church had little to do with this part of the work, and sought to leave the physical and mental life of the individual to some other agency to work. Little was said of the laws of sanitation in our religious periodicals compared with that of today. But in recent years we have learned that one of the greatest virtues of the Christian life is cleanliness, and that it is the business of the Church to champion the cause.

The New Testament Scriptures are filled with teachings of this nature. Special emphasis are laid on the principles of holiness, human helpfulness, responsibility for others, the law of infection, and many other minor facts that concern the uplift of humanity. In every case the emphasis is laid on total abstinence from things that are unwholesome and unclean for the human body.

Christianity begins by healing the individual, but continues through the family, community, State, Nation and the world. The slogan—"Swat the fly and save the world," is not a bad one after all. The principles of public health, and public safety as a whole should be one of the things that our forward movement should not lose sight of, for it is a part of the great program of God and should be emphasized.

Our young people to a large extent should have charge of this work. It would be a fine plan to have several members of the Society bring something to this meeting dealing definitely with health conditions in the immediate community, and show something of the needs of the community and then take definite steps to improve conditions. The abolition of the cigarette, dope, etc., should be encouraged in this meeting, and our young men and women encouraged to cast their vote for health boards that will be clean men and women, and that will take a public stand against the filth and dirt of the average community.

The epidemics of Influenza in 1919 and 1920 should be taken as a warning against unsanitary conditions, and as an incentive to use our best efforts to make living conditions about us more wholesome. Let us remember that the Church has a bigger job than simply getting men saved—we must keep them saved, healthy, strong—and ready for the most active service. A sick down-cast army would never have won the war, and sick indifferent people will never win the world for Christ.

MARRIAGES

ANDERSON-WYATT

On Wednesday evening, March 31, 1920, at 7:30 o'clock, Miss Myra Banks Anderson, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson, Burlington, Route 5, became the bride of Mr. Walter Lemuel Wyatt, Burlington, Route 3.

While Miss Frances Whitted, a cousin of the bride, played the wedding march, a little nephew and niece of the bride, entered the parlor strewn a path of violets. Then entered the bride and bridegroom, and the ceremony that made them one was performed while "Winter Tales" was played very softly.

The parlor and dining room were lovely decorated with ferns and other floral arrangements.

The bride is a popular young lady of her community, and the groom is a prosperous young farmer and a member of Long's Chapel Christian church. The bride is a member of Cross Roads Presbyterian church. Their many friends wish for them a long, happy and prosperous life.

J. F. APPLE.

PETERS-DEAVERS

Mr. Forest E. Peters and Miss May Florence Deavers motored to my home on the evening of April 5, 1920, and were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. They were accompanied by several relatives of the bride. Mr. Peters is a well known barber in Harrisonburg, and his bride is the amiable daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Deavers near Harrisonburg. They have many friends who extend congratulations, and best wishes for a long and happy married life.

OBITUARIES

NELMS

Mrs. Janie M. Nelms, wife of Mr. Joseph M. Nelms, died at her home near Suffolk, Va., March 23, 1920, at the age of sixty-two years, eight months and twenty-four days. She was a good Christian mother and will be greatly missed in her home, community and church. She was taken ill and died very suddenly, living only a few hours. She leaves a devoted husband and seven loving children: Mrs. R. H. Joyner, Mrs. J. B. Joyner, Mrs. R. C. Luke, Mrs. W. E. Thawley, Chas. W., R. Wesley, and Hurley C. Nelms. She leaves seventeen grandchildren, one sister, three brothers and many friends. Funeral services were conducted at Bethlehem Christian church, by the writer and pastor, where she has been a faithful member for years. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery. The much bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of their many friends.

H. H. BUTLER.

SHARPE

Charlie Edward Sharpe died February 29, 1920, at the age of thirty-seven years, ten months, and twenty-five days. He was married to Miss Bessie Sharpe in November, 1906. To this union were born eight children, four boys and four girls. The widow and seven children survive; also a father, eight sisters and seven brothers.

Brother Sharpe was a deacon of New Lebanon church and also Sunday school superintendent. He loved his church, and the church has lost one of its most faithful and loyal members. He will be greatly missed in his church and community.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, and interment made in the church cemetery. May God comfort and bless God bless the sorrowing.

W. L. WELLS.

OYMENT

George Lensy Oyment was born June 7, 1877, and died March 30, 1920, aged forty-three years. He was married to Semora Lineberry July 13, 1897. Five children were born to this union, two having preceded him to the spirit world. A widow, three children, two brothers, and one sister survive him.

Brother Oyment professed faith in Christ a few months ago and united with the Christian church.

Funeral services by the writer and interment made in the town cemetery. May God bless the surviving.

W. L. WELLS.

HOLMES

Brother M. C. Holmes, Sr., at the age of eighty years, passed away in the faith which had sustained him these many years.

He leaves to mourn their loss, three daughters and three sons. He was a member of Oak Level Christian church. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor at the Flat Rock Baptist church, where he was laid to rest. A good and well-beloved man is gone.

B. F. BLACK.

HOLMES

Brother M. C. Holmes, Jr., died of Influenza, at the age of thirty-nine years, leaving a wife and eight children in bed with the disease. These, together with two brothers and three sisters mourn their loss. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to this distressed and bereaved family. He was a member of Oak Level church. The body was laid to rest beside his aged father. Services conducted by the pastor.

The New World Christ Is Making

Robert E. Speer

WE MUST be unfinching in describing what that world is going to be, for men are going to make sacrifices for it just in proportion as they believe it to be a desirable goal. It will be a new world in which the principle of competition shall have given way to the principle of association and fellowship. It will be a new world in which the principle of unity shall have replaced the principle of division, or in which at least the principle of division will see itself only as the servant of the principle of a larger synthesis. It will be a new world in which the sacredness of property will find its sanction only in the greater sanctity and dignities of personality and human life. It will be a new world in which the social and individual ideals and services will be reciprocal and complementary. It will be a new world in which brotherliness and friendship will have displaced all antagonism except the war against evil. It will be a new world in which obedience to truth and duty will find its ground in the Will of a transcendent, sovereign God. It will be a new world in which Jesus Christ will be the head of humanity and His life and spirit will do for men what no injunctions or ordinances can ever avail to do. That new world, held before men's eyes, will be worth as many sacrifices as men were willing to make for what was held before their eyes in the four years that have gone by. And if only that amount of sacrifice could be called out, those ten million lives and uncounted billions of wealth, it would suffice to change the face of the whole world in less than twenty-five years.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

CONSIDERATIONS FOR THE CONVENTION.

—A FEW HUMBLE SUGGESTIONS—

STATISTICAL TABLES

If memory serves us correctly while we write, there was a committee appointed at the last session of the Convention to make out a uniform table to be used by Conferences in making reports for publication. You can take The Christian Annual and it will be difficult to find the same table of any two Conferences agreeing in every respect. It is true that they have the same items and work on the same principles, but a uniform listing of subjects for each Conference and for each tabulated subject would facilitate matters in convenience as well as saving time. Printers' ink alone takes a hand in this. If the like tables in each Conference were made uniform it would not be so difficult to do the mechanical work on these. It is true that each job is separate but by present-day methods of printing, a number of lines just alike can be cast from one type setting, etc.

CONFERENCE SUPERANNUATED FUNDS

In each Conference we have a small superannuated fund for the benefit of our retired ministers. The appropriations from this fund in each Conference are pitifully small. In some Conferences there are no claimants for the fund, while in other Conferences there are claimants and no fund.

Should we not assemble these various funds and place them in the hands of the Convention to be used instead of each Conference trying to do a little work and making a miserable failure at that? The pooling of these funds will work to the same advantage as they do now, and by their combination should be able to serve in a larger way. For example, suppose that an aged minister has lived in a Conference for twenty years and has received but little aid from this fund because of its smallness. Under our government he can transfer his membership to another Conference and automatically become eligible to all benefits. He has done his work in one Conference but another Conference is called upon to assist him in support. Here is another example: Suppose that a man gives twenty years of his best services to a Conference where the fund in question is large, and by some circumstance, he transfers his membership to a Conference where the superannuated fund is exceedingly small. By this step he is to get nothing in return to assist him in his latter days, but at the same time has done a good and noble work for the Church. May we not consider another point? Some Conferences may not have a claimant for the fund and the money lies idle, while some worthy minister in his old age goes unsupported.

A further case are not necessary. We feel that the Convention can see the wisdom of uniting the superannuated fund of the various Conferences and make it a combined force for larger good. The assistance can be rendered regardless of where the man is located. Each Conference can make recommendations, and on this the Convention Board for the fund can act.

THE CHRISTIAN ANNUAL

The Christian Annual, it seems to us, will have to come in for a bit of consideration. Up to a little more than a year ago The Annual sold for twenty cents the copy, and the number taken by each Conference, together with a little advertising, met the expense of printing and mailing. Such is not the case today, for the last issue of The Annual delivered to the churches cost $915.62, while the income amounted to $482.25, leaving a deficit of $433.37. This should be no surprise since practically everything has more than doubled during the last two years, while the above figures indicate that the expense of issuing The Annual has about doubled.

The cost of this publication as set forth above covers mechanical work, wrapping and mailing. All the editorial work, proof reading and time of looking after the work by the Editor was done gratis.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN

THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been a problem with the Convention for several years. It has only one consoling fact in dealing with this continued problem and that is that other denominations face the same issue. We have read very closely during the last several months, and at the same time entered into correspondence with other publications and find that THE CHRISTIAN SUN is fairing as well, and in many cases better, than the average church journal.

A few facts should be given the Brotherhood, and especially the delegates to the Convention that they may have them for reflection before the reading of the report of the Board of Publication.

It took $2,571.87 more than the total income on THE SUN to maintain it from May 1, 1918 to April 1, 1920, a period of twenty-three months. This deficit was made up by the Convention. The Editor received $1,793.87 for his services during the twenty-three months, which was an average of $77.99 per month. From the Publishing Agent account he received $313.09, which brought his average salary per month up to $88.35. He spent of his own money (for which there was no appropriation made) the sum of $598.00, or an average of $20.60 per month expense from his own pocket. This reduced the Editor's monthly average to $67.75. This was an average of $16.93 per week for his work. Up to January 1, 1920 we had extra help only part of the time, but due to the demands of the Church in other directions, and the increased amount of work to be done, we were forced at the beginning of this year to employ an office helper for all her time with a salary of $18.00 per week, an average of $1.07 more per week than the Editor has realized during the past twenty-three months.

Friends will certainly understand us when we say that we are discussing the office and not the officer. We do not know the Convention's mind; we have never sought the position, and have no desire whatever to seek any position in the Church except of its own wish. We are only stating the facts that the Convention may know a few things when the nominees are placed before the Convention for election to this place.

Nine months ago book paper could be bought for eight cents per pound. Five months ago the plant that does THE SUN's printing purchased an ample supply of paper at about nine cents per pound. Today many of the wholesale paper houses do not have a ream in stock and the minimum price delivered is about sixteen cents per pound. The budget for THE SUN during the next two years must certainly be large enough so that the paper will meet no embarrassment.

We have figured very closely from every standpoint, and unless conditions materially change, a subscription price of $3.00 will scarcely bear the expense during the coming biennium.

This information should certainly convey to the delegates of the Convention a few facts that they will be called upon to consider. Is THE SUN to be reduced in size? Is the subscription price to be increased? Is the Editor to be provided with sufficient help at the expense of the Convention, or will he be asked to furnish his own help? If he is to have no help, he is thus reduced to an office boy and not an Editor. He is deprived of the privilege of study, of research work, in-forming himself of the great problems of the day and being able to intelligently bring these things to the consideration of the people. Is the Church after a certain number of hours per day or a certain type of service?

These questions are not for us to answer; they are for the Convention to consider and for the man who feels himself constrained to accept the editorship of this paper to fully ponder.

If these facts embarrass you, dear reader, remember that they have all too long embarrassed us. You may regret to see them in print but the Church ought to know, and we have told the story.

OUR MISSION WORK

Our mission work has been a chief asset during the last several years, and especially during the present biennium of our work. Editorially, we have said but little along missionary lines, except in the way of suggestions and items intended for inspiration. Other contributions to THE SUN have discussed practically every phase of the work and we felt it the part of wisdom to consider other things because the discussions on missions were amply as well as ably done.

The Church has raised quite a bit of money for missions and will raise far more. Results along missionary lines are never quickly achieved. The Church will never regret the money it is spending for missions, but we feel that the approaching session of the Convention should take some very definite steps as to the mission work carried on and supported by the Southern Christian Convention.

Shall we continue to operate through the American Christian Convention Board, or shall we enter other fields and establish our work direct and disburse our funds in a direct way? Shall we continue an evangelistic type of mission work, which usually closes when the missionary leaves or takes a furlough, or shall we outline an educational missionary program and build schools and correlate our work around these educational centers? Shall our program provide for the sending of our best educated men and women, or the "whosoever will" class? Are we willing to build permanently and lay a foundation in an educational way that will perpetuate itself in years to come, or shall we endeavor to evangelize before we enlighten? Shall we continue to provide insufficient homes for our missionaries and then ask them to set up models of present-day living and expressions of Christian development? Shall we continue to accept a man's sacrifice as part of the salary as a missionary, or shall we stand for a salary sufficient to give the missionaries opportunities for a larger and better work?

These things, dear brethren, are before you for consideration. They are only suggestions thrown out. Let them waste upon the desert air or bring them to fruition is the question for you to settle.

Men and Millions

COME—LET US DO IT

I hope there is not a member of the Christian Church South who will not be a contributor to the funds of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. This is one of the opportunities we all have of contributing to the same fund with full assurance that we will be signally blessed. If any member fails to contribute and sees the good results that we get out of it, for the funds are nearly all used South, I think he will regret very much his actions.

Come brethren, come sisters, let us all come up to this work. You have the privilege of making your own subscription. It may be small, but I hope everybody will do something.

Now, let me say to the boys and girls, contribute something if it is but a little, that you may have a part in this good work. Don't think you are too young, for you are growing up in the Church for usefulness. Don't think you are too old, for I am one of the oldest members of the Convention and yet here I come with my mite.

Now, I want to say, come preachers, come people, come parents, come children, all come to the fund and may we make a mighty strong pull for success. Some pull, some push, some to the wheel, but let us move right forward and success is ours. Don't be afraid to contribute a little to the good cause of the Master. It is His cause that we are working for. I hope we will have no one in the team that won't contribute something. Learn to be self-denying. Deny your tobacco for a season, your cigars and cigarettes and you children deny yourself your candy. Say, "I am going to do something for the Master."

When I came in from prayer meeting last Wednesday night the good Lord impressed upon me to write just what I am writing and I picked up my pencil and went right at it.

Now, we will all unite, preachers and people, children and grown folks and over the top we will go and when we get over there, we will sing: "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow," and we will go to the Convention the 27th singing the same and when we get there the first thing I want us to do is to sing the Doxology and then for work.

CHURCH PAPER AND CHURCH PEOPLE

R. A. L. Veazey—I don't want to miss a single copy of the dear old SUN.

Mrs. A. I. Reeves—I think more of THE SUN every day.—

C. J. Felton—THE SUN is like a letter from home to me.

REV. JAMES W. WELLONS, D. D.

YOUR FRIENDS SALUTE YOU

Your friends salute you, Rev. J. W. Wellons, D. D. Your message is fine, and it will be read by the Brotherhood with great pleasure and will do a wonderful good.

We present your likeness, dear "Uncle" Wellons, that the four thousand new subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN may see your face. All of them are your friends, and many of them are your acquaintances, while all of them have heard of you. Most of this large number will soon be dropped from our list and we take pleasure, therefore, in permitting your friends to see your face.

And all this, our beloved friend, is done without your knowledge. Charge it to one of your warmest friends—a man who loves you and appreciates you.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The whole Church is thinking, in these days of Men and Millions; and these two are the concrete representatives of spiritual and material values. Man represents God as no other being represents Him; made in His image, endowed with faculties that are like His, man represents Him in the earth. The Lord said unto Moses: "I made thee a God unto Pharaoh;" and Paul says: "We are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us." The incarnation was the finest example of this great truth. Jesus was "God manifest in the flesh." Man is the divinest thing in the world. He can know God. He can think God's thoughts after Him. He can love like God. He can use God's laws. He can create new forms of beauty and utility. He can serve others in their necessity. He can translate the harmonies of the spheres into the melodies of sweet praises. Men ought to engage our study, our service, and our love. The service rendered to others is accepted as service unto God. "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." We put the emphasis on Men because men are of more value than any known creature.

Millions here stands for money and money represents all material values. It is the only thing that stands for all values in all the world. The credit of nations is estimated in terms of money. The wealth of nations is estimated in terms of money. The estates of men are estimated in terms of money. The value of labor is measured by money. All human values are estimated in terms of money. It is the index to civilization, the badge of power, the wand of progress. All things materially are measured by money. As the Kingdom uses Men and Millions both are essential to its efficiency and extension. It is a contradiction in terms to think of loving God and men without contributing to the support and expansion of Kingdom interests. Educational institutions, as colleges and religious journals; benevolent institutions, as orphanages and hospitals; missions and churches, all demand material help as well as spiritual intercessions. Money can be spiritualized, so to speak, just as art-material can be put on canvass so as to portray a great art conception. Millions can help men to transform benighted nations into civilized peoples. Pigments in the hands of the painter become Madonnas and Last Suppers. Money in the hand of the Christian becomes bread for the hungry and clothes for the naked. The money end of the Campaign is the opportunity to transform material into spiritual values. It is fine for men to make money, but it is finer when money is used to make men. Money always makes men, when men use it for best purposes. This campaign is the greatest opportunity for the membership of the Convention to become one hundred per cent contributors to the cause of the Kingdom. As man is the concrete expression of God's noblest work; and as money is the best concrete expression of material values; contributing Men and Millions is the best concrete expression of the religious life of the people. What will be your contribution?

W. W. STALEY.

RETURNING BY THE MONEY ROUTE

If this nation of ours has fallen away from God, or is falling away from God, then it must come back to God in the way that it went from God. If money,—money-getting, money-making, money-spending—is the path on which we have strayed away, then it is the path on which we are to come back.

This was the path that Israel travelled on its way to its awful doom to tragic destiny. You can almost hear now the wail of one of that nation's final prophets as it rings out down through the corridors of time crying, "Come back, come back, oh my people of Israel, come back to the God of your fathers." And then we hear the voice of the apostate nation crying back in echo, "How, and by what way can we come back?" Then the voice of the prophet of God rings out clear and strong, "Come back by the money route. Come back by the way in which you left, and your God will be found ready to receive and welcome you in that way."

But they would not come back even when the way was pointed out; and Israel's day of doom was on, and her wanderings as a scattered people had begun.

Turn to the last of the prophets in our Bible arrangement, Malachi. Begin reading at the seventh verse of the third chapter and you will find colloquy I have written above. Listen at that prophet's voice of plea and prayer: "Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts." Then the prophet voices the query of his erring people and asks in their behalf, "Wherein (by what way) shall we return?" Then the prophet interprets to them the unmistakable voice of God in these wonderful words, "Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me." Then the people again inquired: "Wherein have we robbed thee?" Then the answer comes clear and plain and straight: "In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation." They had gone from God through the desecration of His sacred tenth. They must come back to God by the consecration of His sacred tenth. The tenth of all our increase is holy unto the Lord whether we so regard it or not. If we desecrate it we go from God by the money route. If we dedicate it to Him we come back to Him by the money route.

In this great campaign for righteousness and peace and truth in the Master's name we are seeking our way back to God. Very many are finding Him by the money route—by the way in which they went from Him. By the desecration of their money, piling it up, making it, spending it upon themselves, their indulgences and their variety, they have strayed far from God. In these weeks of a most glorious campaign in the Master's service, many of our members have seen a new light. They want to come back to God, live more for God, do more in His name. And they have decided to consecrate more of their means to His work, dedicate more of their savings to His service. And happiness and joy fill their hearts.

We are to have a new day in our dear Christian Church. Many of our laymen have discovered new fields of service, and a new joy in service. They will not be willing to fall back into the old ruts. They will never more be content to give so little to the Master's cause, nor do so little in the Master's Kingdom.

In this our glorious consecration week hundreds and thousands are finding God anew. They began to earn money years ago, and in their rapid and energetic rush for gain they strayed away from God, became estrayed from Him, His service, His cause. Now they are discovering how far they have strayed away, and they are finding their way back—by the very way in which they went, namely, by the money route.

The Bible has a message for us in these days of money, money, money. It always has a message for the very times and conditions in which men and women live and think and act and go astray. The reason why the Church must talk money now is because the world will not have it, will not understand you, otherwise. The world's thought is now largely of money. To enter the realm of their thought and influence their thinking and their doing, you must carry message into their thought-realm. This is the method God has employed through all the ages. He has spoken to men and women in and through the thought of their time. He ever and always speaks in a voice that the people can interpret, if only they will give heed.

"Ye have gone from me by the money route. If you would come back to me, come by the same way. Behold I stand and wait." Lord God of our fathers, help us of our dear Christian Church to come back to Thee during these days when Thy voice is clear and the way is still open.

J. O. ATKINSON.

LA GRANGE, GA.

We have enrolled four persons for Life Work and thirty as tithers in our church. We have also added ten percent to our membership. Eight new members were added Easter Sunday, thus making thirteen new members this year. We are not satisfied with what we have done and want to make fifty percent by the end of the year.

The Lord has blessed us and our work and I hope He will lead us on to victory.

BEULAH CHRISTIAN CHURCH

We have received the following message from Mr. W. M. Warren, Phoenix, Ala., a member of Beulah Christian church: "Life-Recruits, 3; New members, 16; Tithers, 17. We have been blessed in every undertaking so far. Now comes the final drive and we all trust that we will go over the top for God. All this from a membership of fifty-one."

SEE FROM THE OUTSIDE

I have been reading with a great deal of interest and pleasure of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. It is just wonderful to read of the different churches as to how they are going forward with their work. We would have thought this impossible twelve months ago, but Christian people, with the Lord on their side, can do wonderful things for Him.

This campaign will make all that are Christians better ones, and who knows how many will be brought into the Kingdom because of this? Who can tell what a blessing these young life-recruits will be to the world? That alone will be worth the effort that the Christians are making. It is a great and glorious privilege for the members as well as the pastors to be soul-winners. Of all that has been published or said, the picture of our Savior has appealed to me most. When we look into His face and think of how He has suffered for us, how can we refuse to make sacrifices for His sake?

I am not a member of the Christian denomination but love the very name Christian and wish so much I could have a part in this Forward Movement. I pray for its success in its every cause. I know that all those who have a part in the undertaking will be proud to know that they have done their duty, in spite of the many obstacles which will rise up with every great undertaking. The more difficult the undertaking the more pleased will our dear Savior be when He sees that nothing is too hard for His children.

NORTH HIGHLAND, (COLUMBUS, GA.)

We are moving along nicely with the Men and Millions Forward Movement so far and are expecting the dear Lord to give us the victory at North Highland. We have just closed our revival. Brother J. W. Wilingham did the preaching and did it well. I am sure that all who heard him were inspired to do greater things for the Master and to go forth in the discharge of their duty. The meeting was an inspiration and benediction to my soul.

THE AIM OF THE CHURCH

Congressman E. E. Holland sends this as the aim of the Church: "The Christian Church shall not drift into satisfaction with its work and with its growth; it shall undertake and shall accomplish great things. It need not strive to surpass others; it should strive to do its duty."

DENOMINATIONAL HEADQUARTERS

(Editorial)

Among the many things for the Convention to consider from April 27 to 30 will be the matter of Convention headquarters. The Burlington church has loyally and beautifully supported a campaign to build a new church building. The edifice now stands as a monument to the city of Burlington, a pride to the local congregation and a big asset to the denomination. The building is modern, ample, constructed of the best material and of the best workmanship. Just across the street from this magnificent structure stands the old church building. This building is three blocks from the city post office—in the very heart of a growing city. The old church property is worth something over $10,000.00, and we understand that the Board of Trustees is this week drafting a proposition to submit to the Convention. We are not authorized to say this, but understand that the proposition will involve the giving of this valuable property to the Convention, provided that the Convention will accept it and build thereon a suitable and ample building to be used as denominational headquarters.

Where is the home of THE CHRISTIAN SUN? It has none save by space donated to it by the Burlington Printing Company. The office space thus donated is used for the business career of the paper, while the Editor is forced to retain an office on the third floor of another building nearly two blocks away in order that he may have a quiet place to study and work.

Where is the headquarters of our mission work in the Southern Christian Convention? On the fourth floor of the First National Bank building of Burlington a little 12 X 16 rented room is occupied for that purpose. The Field Secretary lives four miles away. You say that his office should be in his home. Very well, dear reader, but when you have once tried the keeping of a public office in your home you will change your mind. Then too, the Mission Board is incorporated, and each incorporation is required to hang out a sign showing its place of business. Would you like to have a sign put over the door of your home?

Where do the Convention committees hold their meetings? Sometimes in a hotel in Greensboro, Raleigh or Suffolk. The Mission Board, too, meets where it can and it is without a home.

We are rapidly approaching the time when a man must go into the field to care for the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work. We wonder if he is to have headquarters wherever he hangs his hat.

And what about that Secretary of Education that must, in the very near future, take to the field to stimulate and arouse our people to a greater appreciation of education? Is he to have regular headquarters, or are we to look up his address in The Annual, or inquire of some friend where to find him?

All the preserved volumes of THE CHRISTIAN SUN from its early beginning lie like a pile of trash on the floor in an open building with no insurance to cover them, nothing to protect them from fire. No place to keep this valuable history and the history that we are making every day. What shall our answer be to this alone?

Shall we have denominational headquarters or shall we, like the Nomads, continue to roam and camp when the night overtakes us?

We have thought and thought and thought over this proposition for many months. We have stripped it of its every objection and we have marshalled every objection to it; we have weighed it in the balances and we have not found it wanting. Will our Convention approach this matter with seriousness, in a business like way and take definite steps, or will the conservatives be content to limp along in the same old way?

We consider Burlington a logical place, geographical-ly and otherwise, for Convention headquarters. Our membership here represents the oldest and best and most substantial families. Alamance county is a veritable hot bed of Christian churches. Burlington is a commercial center; affords every facility for convenience and accommodation, and is growing by leaps and bounds. A dozen handsome dwellings a week spread their structure on high priced soil and the wheel of commerce turns faster each day. Burlington's printing plants are modern and up-to-date. And brethren and beloved, if we are to build denominational headquarters, let us not make the mistake of placing our Convention officers in some place where printing must be secured by Parcel Post.

Are we progressive, or are we just plodding along? Our answers in action to some of the foregoing questions will tell the tale as to whether we mean business for the King and the Kingdom, or whether we are just trailing behind.

We quote the following from a letter received from Rev. C. J. Felton, Oshawa, Ontario: "I rejoice with you in the spirit of faith and enthusiasm manifested in the Men and Millions Forward Movement. It is a great day for our dear old Church."

Next week's SUN may come from the press earlier because the Editor must get away to the Convention.

DEVOTIONAL

REAL CHRISTIANITY AND RECRUITS FOR THE MINISTRY

A truer experience of essential Christianity would solve the entire problem of securing leaders. Essential Christianity offers the best solution of the individual, the social, and the universal problems. A Church people who really believe this and are working it out in daily life will find leaders.

Essential Christianity is a way of life adequate to every experience through which man may pass. Jesus' personal religion, that this is God's world, that God is His Father, and the Father's will is the one law of life, that good will is the Father's will for us, that service is the chief way in which good will expresses itself, that personality is of supreme worth and therefore sacred, that we find life for ourselves and bring it to others by giving it out in love and sacrificial helpfulness, that the Kingdom of God is the supreme good, that this life is not all but that immortality is no more to be doubted than the fact and goodness of God—this personal religion of Jesus gave him the very strength of his Father and enabled him to meet and conquer all obstacles with calmness and courage.

Jesus asked us to join him in this same adequate, personal religion. He held the same standards and ideals for us that he held for himself. He taught that every resource available for himself was available for us.

Do we Church people know much about this kind of Christianity? Or do we live as if God were dead, as if Christ and Paul and others had never demonstrated an adequate Christianity, denying our Christianity by worry, fear, selfishness, and materialism? Then we wonder why there is no power in our religion, or why people go to Christian Science.

Essential Christianity will solve our social problems, industrial, civic, rural, political, interracial, and international, if it can get a chance through the lives of enough people. There is brain enough in the world if it can only be put at the service of good will instead of serving selfishness.

The problem is to get Christianity out into everyday life, to get it really applied to living. It is a fine thing to get people into the Church, but only as a means of getting Christianity into their lives. If we had all people in the Church and they lived in the home, in business, in politics, in social life, in religion, in racial and international relations as the average Church member now lives, we not only would not have a kingdom of God, but we would still be, as we now are, three quarters pagan. If we had perfect religion on Sunday and it failed to get out during the week into all that we do, it would be of little consequence.

That stupid, even devilish, anti-Christian division of life into sacred and secular ought to go to the scrapheap. The whole idea of Christianity as something to get us into a place of safety rather than getting us under the real work of the world is simply pagan.

When we don't attempt to do business for the glory of God and the good of our fellow men, we are pretty likely to be doing the devil's business. Doctor, lawyer, teacher, business man, employer; employee—all people through all vocations are as responsible to bring in the kingdom of God as is the minister through his ministry. And this is to be done in and through the vocation itself, not by making money out of un-Christian attitudes in the vocation and then giving a bit of it for Church and benevolent purposes. A Christian ideal which we have behind six days a week is a fake and a travesty on Christianity.

Essential Christianity is the best solution of the universal problem. God is the only adequate answer to the riddle of the universe. Too many of us worship the God of things. Christ called people who laid up treasure for themselves and are not rich toward God fools. The world of materialism has gotten into the Church. Our lives deny that we really believe God the great ultimate.

These are primary reasons why we have difficulty finding leaders. The permanent remedy is not to be found in scurrying about, but in more real Christian living. When we live as if we believe Christianity means the supreme good of the world, when it becomes for us adequate to every experience, when convinced that it offers the only solution of our burning world problems, the question of leadership will be answered. That kind of Christianity will produce an abundance of great leaders.—F. M. S., in Congregationalist and Advance.

REGENERATION

Several descriptions of regeneration are given in the Scriptures. It is represented as imparting to the sinner a new heart and putting a new spirit within. The heart may be softened by sympathy and melted by eloquence, yet it will remain the same hard and sinful heart until changed by the Spirit of God.

Before regeneration we can do nothing acceptable to God, for He declares in Hebrews 11:6—"Without faith it is impossible to please Him." One evidence of this change is love to Christians, I John 3:14. "We know that we have passed from death unto life because we love the brethren." Another evidence is the presence of the Holy Spirit in our hearts.—I John 4:13. "Hereby know we that we dwell in Him and He in us, because He hath given us of His Spirit." Another evidence is love of God's ordinances and the services of the sanctuary. Can we say we had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of our God than dwell in the tents of wickedness? An evidence, also, is our love for the Word of God.

The Bible is God's letter to His children and the neglect to read this should alarm us and cause us to fear that we know nothing of a regenerated heart. If we love God we will keep His commandments. The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, meekness and temperance. All these may not be apparent in the heart, but if one is found we may know that all exist, for they constitute a golden cluster.

Do we love Jesus supremely? Do we love the service of God? Do we desire to be holy, and do we love God's children? Do we hate sin and uncleanness? If so, we are regenerated—we are born of God. Without regeneration it is impossible to be saved, and for one to die without this change of heart such a one will not be permitted even to see the glory of the Christian's rest, for Jesus Christ, the final Judge, says: "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God."

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

ANOTHER SIDE OF THE QUESTION

I do not practice answering any kind of public print, but long ago people should have expressed themselves more freely, and now we must do so or we may regret it later.

THE SUN has been coming to my home for some time and I thought there was enough knocking people for not paying preachers, but I notice in an editorial in the issue of THE SUN for March 24, where there is much said about school teachers receiving too little pay.

Now, I believe in our children having the proper education and the teachers getting as much pay as they deserve, and if you will think for a moment I believe you will agree that seventy cents an hour is a fair salary for the teachers, and that is about the average price paid. As to the three months in which they do not teach, we are not responsible, because we are told in the Bible to work six days in the week. It seems to me that if their pay is so small as to not pay enough for teaching, they would be anxious to work when they could after school is out.

Of course, everything is running at an excessive rate but it seems to me that others, besides the teachers, are grumbling at the teachers' pay. It is true that teachers are the great factors in educational training and should have a fair price—and I think they are getting it.

As to teachers responding to the call of war, we can imagine that as large a per cent of these were forced into war as any other class of people—which in my opinion would be above ninety per cent.

Regarding the bricklayers, carpenters, office girls, etc., we can't expect a teacher to get as much pay as they for the work differs very much in class. I talked with an office girl the other day and she told me she received only $40.00 per month, working seven and eight hours per day, six days in each week.

All classes of working people are getting boosted in price except the old ragged farmer. He has to foot the bill for our Government and feed the whole crowd, too. Yet his cotton is cheaper than ever, compared with other things.

A CRIME AGAINST THE CHILDREN

(Greensboro Daily News)

Mr. Guilford County Farmer, can you hire a ditcher for $35.83 a month? Can you get a farm hand for that amount, even if you give him his board? In fact, if you could get one for that amount, without board, would you have him? Wouldn't you be afraid to trust him with a pitch-fork, for fear he would kill himself or some more valuable animal—a cow, for instance?

Mr. Storekeeper, would you be willing to have a clerk who was worth no more than $35.83 a month? We mean a full-grown man or woman, not a boy or girl. Wouldn't you be pretty well convinced that a clerk that would work for $35.85 a month had too little sense to be trusted behind a counter? Wouldn't you be afraid that such a clerk would be liable to give somebody two tens for a five, or to leave the molasses tap open after drawing a quart, or to flip a lighted match into the kerosene tank? Of course you would. In this day and time a full-grown hand that isn't worth more than a dollar and fifteen cents a day isn't worth hiring.

And yet Mr. Guilford County Citizen, you are today intrusting the whole future of your county to hands that you wouldn't have in your store, or on your farm. You are turning over children to people who work for $35.85 a month. The average salary of a teacher in the common schools of Guilford county is $430 a year—and we have the gall to call ourselves a progressive and intelligent community.

Guilford is not only at the bottom of all the great counties in North Carolina, but it is far below such distinctly rural counties as Scotland, Northampton, Edgecombe, Halifax and Nash. We are the 13th county in North Carolina in salaries paid teachers in the common schools. New Hanover leads, with Durham and Mecklenburg close behind; Buncombe is sixth; Gaston, ninth; Wake, tenth; and Forsyth, twelfth. Guilford, the largest and richest county in the State, disgracefully brings up the rear of the big counties.

You have to pay $2.50 an hour for a first-class plumber in this city. If he puts in a 10-hour day the mender of pipes draws two-thirds as much in one day as a teacher in the country schools draws in a month. Are faucets and bath-tubs nearly 25 times as valuable as children in Guilford? What other conclusion can be drawn from a comparison of the figures?

Guilford county occupies a low position in North Carolina; but even New Hanover, the highest, is shamefully low by comparison with the rest of the country. New Hanover pays an average of $580.36 to teachers in her common schools, whereas the average for the whole country is $606.

The University News Letter, which compiled the figures from the report of the state superintendent of public instruction, comments bitterly, "No wonder 700 of our common-school rooms are closed. And no wonder 7,000, or nearly half, of our common schools are in the hands of substandard teachers taken on temporarily in the emergency. It's a crime against the children of North Carolina."

CHURCH PROFESSORS WOEFULLY UNDERPAID

(Inter-Church Bulletin)

The ease of the college professor has now been taken by the Inter-Church World Movement which has found in a preliminary survey of education in the United States that the faculties of church colleges are almost universally underpaid.

Not so many years ago members of the faculty of the now famous Western Reserve University were asked to accept loads of hay or farm produce to make up for arrears of salary. It is said that on one occasion a quantity of pills that had come into the possession of the college were judiciously distributed in payments on salary balances long overdue.

Some advance has been made since those days, but there still are colleges in which professors would be glad to have their meager salaries, some of them amounting to only a few hundred dollars, eked out by a payment in fresh vegetables.

One of the purposes of the Inter-Church World Movement is to put church schools and colleges on a financial basis that will permit of paying salaries that will enable men and women of character and ability to devote their lives to work in denominational schools without sacrificing their chance of a comfortable living.

THE COOK'S AIDS

That Scorched Milk.—To avoid scorching milk when scalding it for use in any recipe calling for milk and sugar, add the sugar before heating. The syrup formed in the bottom of the sauepan prevents the milk from sticking on and burning, a condition to be avoided when making cornstarch pudding, cream pie, custard cake filling or when setting bread with a milk sponge. It is also easier to make a smooth custard if the sugar has been added to the milk first.

Ham Mousse.—Two cups finely chopped ham (cooked), one teaspoon made mustard, few grains cayenne, one tablespoon granulated gelatine, one-half cup cold water, one-fourth cup hot water, one-half cup heavy cream. Pound chopped ham in mortar with mustard and cayenne, soak gelatine in cold water, dissolve in hot water and add to mixture with cream beaten until stiff. Turn into mold. Chill, remove from mold to cold serving dish and garnish with parsley.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

If the pie filling is wet, add a spoonful of flour—it will prevent lumping.

Run the cocoanut through the meat chopper the next time you are having fresh cocoanut layer cake—it's easier than grating.

The fish that is split, seasoned and then fried is much better than the one that is fried whole.

Fried eggs from part of the menu in many households at this season of the year—if you put a pinch of flour in the grease in which the eggs are fried, it will prevent the fat from spattering.

When you are putting white furs away for the season remember that corn meal cleans them very satisfactorily.

IN SECULAR CIRCLES

It is thought that Delaware may yet ratify the suffrage amendment, and thus make the 36th State to endorse the Constitutional change.

The big railroad strike that has been threatening the country for several days seems to be about over. The strike was unauthorized and officials have stood firm in filling vacancies made by strikers.

Dr. James Markoe, a well known surgeon, was shot to death in St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, New York, last Sunday by an insane man.

Four men were killed at Walnut Cove, N. C. last Sunday. Officers attempted to break up a gambling den which caused a real war for the time.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Our Easter offerings have started off splendidly and it is very encouraging. The amount is climbing on toward two thousand dollars. We raised more than three thousand dollars last year; let us make it five thousand this year. See that your church makes the offering. Don't rest till that is done.

While we had two rainy Sundays right at the time to make this offering, it will not be too late to take this at your next service. It will count just the same when you send it in. It will help reach the goal and will give you a part in the great work. It will help make the little children happy and will aid in giving forty more little fellows a home. It will make you better. It will bring you happiness and joy. It will help the little fellows now to help themselves when they are grown. It will lift the cloud of despair and fill their lives with hope and sunshine. It will help them to overcome the loss of father and mother, and give them an opportunity in life to grow up to be useful. It will take away the handicap under which they would have to go through life. It will give them an opportunity to stand shoulder to shoulder with other boys and girls who have not been so unfortunate. It will be a blessing to them and will make you better. Make the offering and let it be liberal. Make some sacrifice that others may be helped.

Our good friends at Damascus church were very kind to us Easter and sent us a box of chickens for that occasion for which we are very grateful. Brother W. B. Fuller, the pastor, has a very warm place in his heart for the little orphans and takes a great deal of interest in the work here.

Foster Shoe Company gave us two pairs of Oxfords for the little girls. All these things come in very acceptably in this work.

Remember us in your prayers and in your offerings. Remember seventy little children, who are worthy of a place in this Institution, but have been turned away since November for the lack of room. Pray that God will put it in the hearts of our people to contribute enough money to build a home for the little children. Don't only pray for this cause, but give as God has prospered you.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl twelve years old. I go to the South Norfolk Christian Sunday school. We have a Junior Christian Endeavor Society. I am a member. We have twenty-four on our roll. I go to the South Norfolk public school. I am in the seventh grade. You will find enclosed 10 cents for the little boys and girls.—Louise Ferree.

I am happy to get your letter this week. I am glad you have become a member of our band of cousins. I have a very deep love for you South Norfolk people. You are so loyal to the Orphanage and the little orphans.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Unele Charley:—Enclosed you will find fifty cents as an Easter offering. I hope all the little orphans had a nice time Easter. I certainly had a fine time. I went on an egg hunt. Our school has just closed. We had a nice commencement. With love and best wishes to all the orphans.—Leona Ayseue.

I am real glad to get your letter and to know you had a fine Easter. Write often.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Unele Charley:—Enclosed you will find ten cents for the little orphans. I am a little girl twelve years old. I go to school and am in the fifth grade. Much love to you and the orphans.—Maie Woodruff.

I am glad you wrote to the Corner. We are glad to have the little girls write for the Corner. It makes it interesting.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Unele Charley:—I am a little boy most four years old. I have one little brother. He is just eighteen months old. His name is George McIver, Jr., but we call him Mack. I go to Sanford Christian Sunday school. My teacher is Miss May Gunter. She always gives me a card and one for little brother. Enclosed you will find two dimes for the little orphans, who have no father or mother to support them. With love and best wishes.—J. P. and Mack Brannon.

You are two dear little boys. I am glad you go to Sunday school. I know you have a splendid teacher.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Unele Charley:—I am sending you twenty cents for the little orphans. My mother reads to me about them.—Fred Campbell.

I am glad your mother takes THE SUN and you get to hear about the orphans. I am glad to have your letter this week.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Unele Charley:—I am sending you ten cents for April. I would like to send more, but I have not been able to work, as I am going to school. I will send more when school is out and I go to work. I like to do something for the poor little children who have no parents. I hope all are well and will not take the “flu.”—Teresa Carter.

Our little folks have escaped the “flu” so far and I hardly think they will get it now. Glad to have your letter for the Corner.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Unele Charley:—I am a new comer to the Corner. Enclosed you will find twenty-five cents for the little folks. I am a little boy twelve years old. I am in school. My teacher is C. E. Gerringer. I am in the fifth grade. Bring the cousins to see us this summer and we will give them some good Georgia melons. Love to all.—Carl Abell.

You must plant a great patch of melons. If I bring the little orphans down there we will eat lots of them.—“Uncle Charley.”

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

BURLINGTON LETTER

A good evangelistic meeting closed at the Burlington Christian church, Thursday evening, April 8. Rev. Victor Lightbourne was with us and rendered excellent service. His messages were forceful, heart-searching and uplifting. He was tireless in his efforts to reach men. A great service was held at the Crystal Theatre on Sunday afternoon for men. Services also were held in the theatre on week days. The attendance was fine throughout the entire meeting, and the interest grew from day to day. The last service was the climax of the ten days. At that service there were about twenty decisions and reconsecrations. During the entire meeting there were more than forty decisions and reconsecrations. The church was greatly revived and blessed. The unchurched people could not be induced in any large numbers to attend the services. On last Sunday thirteen united with the church and there are others to follow.

Mrs. Lightbourne rendered splendid service in song.

We are glad to welcome to our city Brother Lightbourne and his family.

We are enjoying the new pipe organ which was recently installed. It was built by the Austin Organ Company of Hartford, Conn., and if we had to place the order for it now it would cost $6,500. With the new organ and the new building we are excellently equipped for service. There are signs of improvement already apparent. The Sunday school is running up in its attendance. The largest number present last Sunday we have had on any ordinary day. The offering for the Orphanage went beyond $220.00.

The offering on third Sundays for our Missionary has been averaging more than $80.00 recently.

The indebtedness on the new building is being provided for. On a recent Sunday $10,000 was raised. It will require between $7,000.00 to $8,000.00 more to clear the church of debt. This will be provided for as soon as we can find time to give it proper attention.

J. W. HARRELL, Pastor.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Dear Brother Riddle:

I send two dollars as renewal to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I have been in bed most of the time since Christmas but I am a little better now.

I have taught school over forty years, have been principal of schools in Caswell and Forsyth counties, Chairman of the high school and graded school in our town four years and a member of the County Board of Education nearly twenty years. I never expelled a student or had one to insult me in all my teaching. I am now a little over seventy-five years old and cannot do anything because I am so feeble. I do wish I could teach sometime again.

A STORY OF TWO DOGS

By Mrs. C. Conant

When I was a little child and lived in my father's house we had two dogs named Buff and Hunter; Buff was a large old watch dog, Hunter a young hound with long, drooping ears and liquid brown eyes which had a pitiful, beseeching look in them; but his eyes were deceitful, for he was a very merry dog, with a faculty for getting into serapes, from which Buff stool ready to help him out. They were nearly always together, and in time Buff trained Hunter to be almost as faithful in guarding the premises as he was himself. My father often had to be away from home, and whenever he was gone Buff left Hunter to sleep in the barn while he went completely around the house and slept on the ground under mother's window to watch that nothing harmed her. I have known him to stay under the window at night in the cold rain and frosty November weather for three weeks together.

Why did he leave his warm nest in the barn to do this duty which was never required of him? To be sure, when father was going away he would say, after bidding us all good-bye, "Buff, you must take care of mother;" and Buff would wag his tail and look as if he wanted to say, "I always do, doctor."

We had a little spotted fawn given us, and we thought of course the dogs would worry and perhaps kill it, but from the very first day they seemed to understand they were to care for it, and soon the deer and the dogs were the merriest play-fellows possible. The deer would tease and bother them until they would bark at him, when away he would go over the gates and all the fences with the dogs in full chase, but as soon as he stopped they did, and they would all return together in fine humor at the frolic. But woe to any other dog who ventured to take a part in this fun! Buff and Hunter would punish him savagely, while the deer would throw back his head and start in a straight line for home, taking such long bounds as soon placed him in safety. He grew to be a magnificent creature, with large, branching horns, and was quite the terror of all the old ladies in the neighborhood, he having a special dislike to a red shawl which at that time nearly every woman wore. When he saw one coming he would station himself at the gate, or if he was at a distance he would take the gate in a flying leap, and, landing by the frightened woman's side, he would compel her to stop, and then stand over her with one foot raised ready to strike her if she ventured to move. Many and many a time have we had to send Buff to drive him away from one very fat old woman whom he disliked exceedingly. This deer was very fond of chasing and playing with the children of the family, but he never injured them, although he was a rough playmate; and we found it quite a relief when he, having broken his leg, betook himself to the woods to search for the moss the deer always eat when sick or hurt. He never returned. The dogs mourned and hunted for him for weeks, and after a little time the children often wished him back, for he was a lively fellow, and kept us wide awake with his mischief.

Buff had a curious habit of visiting our relations. He would choose a fine morning and start off, leaving Hunter at home. First, he would visit an uncle of ours who lived a mile away. Here he would spend the morning, and after dinner continue his journey to another uncle's who lived two miles farther. He was always warmly welcomed here, and he would remain until nearly night, and then return home in fine spirit after his holiday. Buff grew old, and fat, and lazy, but he could not bear to resign his duties or give up his pleasure of going with his master on his annual hunting trips to the Adirondaeks.

About this time he had a little black dog given us which was named Major on account of his promptness. He was a very cunning, knowing dog, and was kept in pretty good order by Buff and Hunter, who evidently thought he was a very young dog which had to be humored somewhat. He finally came to grief by his love of mischief. We had told him, and the dogs had tried to teach him, that he must not chase the lambs, but he could not resist the temptation, it was such fun to see them run, and father said when they went for the fall hunt Major must go and not return, but be given away, hoping a change of place would change his character. Finally they all started, the men excited and the dogs barking joyously.

Three weeks afterwards the men and Buff returned. The little Major they shut up in the shanty with food to last him until another party went into camp. But where was Hunter? No one could tell, as he came about thirty miles in their company, and when they stopped for the night he disappeared. The third day after we all supposed him lost he appeared, so utterly tired out and so footsore he could only crawl along. He looked gaunt and thin with hunger, but by his side trotted Major, his head erect, his spirit as gay as ever. Buff met them at the great gate and escorted them to the kitchen. Father was called, and he divined at once that Hunter had gone back to release his friend and to bring him home, supposing he had been accidentally left. We learned afterwards that Hunter, after traveling all day over the rough mountain roads, had only rested a few hours and then started back in the darkness and alone to rescue his friend. He found Major shut up in the shanty, and released him by breaking the window. Then they both started for home, over fifty miles distant. The dogs had evidently talked the matter over together, and had decided to go home with his master while Hunter turned back to search for the lost dog. Can you tell me what instinct prompted this dog? From this time Hunter was treated with great respect, which he accepted as his rightful due. He lived to a good old age, and died lamented.

Old Buff was shot through the jaw while guarding his master's safe. We fed him bread and milk with a spoon for weeks, and he recovered only to be shot again, and this time fatally. He was mourned more sincerely, and more missed, than many an unfaithful man, for he "was faithful unto death."—Chicago Advance.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR

MAY 2, 1920

(J. Franklin Morgan)

"How to Show Sympathy."—Matt. 25:34-4. (Consecration Meeting).

The topic for this meeting is a very appropriate one for a Consecration service. Many people have sympathy, but few know how to show it. In this Christian Endeavor meeting we should endeavor to learn how to let the other fellow know we have a "fellow feeling," one for another which is a very simple definition of sympathy. To sympathize is to feel for another, and in many cases it is to suffer for another, in their troubles, and in other cases to rejoice with men in their joys and successes.

To make this meeting a success, make each one feel that you are all one, and that you have gathered as a great family—each one feeling and showing his interest in the other, and not in himself. This condition can be brought about by kind words and sympathetic attention to each other, and especially to the strangers in the meeting.

Then the Scripture should be read, the topic stated, a few sentence prayers made, followed by a period of personal testimony by endeavorers as to how they have been helped by expressions of sympathy in the form of kind words, lovely deeds and unselfish acts. Others will tell of the reward of living sympathetic lives. The lives that are filled with the best interest of others, and how this life has brought blessings to them.

We can all show our sympathy for the sick by visiting them, for the well by rejoicing with them, for the sorrowing by comforting them, for the burdened by helping them with their load. Let each of us go out from this service determined to make our sympathy known to those who need it, and to make others happy by showing them the interest we have in their welfare in life.

KING PINE

Surely the pine is a king in the forest. Why? Because God set him there with his close-sealed armor, his broad-reaching arms, and his splendid plumes, to guard the land. Yes, and his wonderful feet, reaching wide in the sand, they are buttresses woven by God to hold the soil intact while the rain gathered by his inwoven branches, refreshes earth and man.

But man? Ah, he sees the pine as a quick giver of profit in lumber, and a preventer of profit from tobacco. So, down goes the pine before the army of profiteers, and little by little the sand hills of Moore county go back to unfriendly desert. Desert, did we say? Yes, and wisely, for with the pines removed from the sand, man could not, by all the artificial fertilization procurable, maintain agriculture here.

Again, King Pine waved his wand and thousands came here with wealth to enjoy the beauty, the fostering care and healthful breath of his domain. Birds sang therein, flowers bloomed, and man found here, as the result of God's handiwork, health, pleasure and comfort.

Have you all seen the desert of Sahara? This writer has, and knows how, after many miles through bleaching sand, one longs for the oasis. He knows, as all must realize who pause to consider God's laws, that, if the slaughter of King Pine's children does not cease here, the time will come when our springs of water will be dry and the spring of Northern wealth which is now fructifying Moore county, will turn its life giving current elsewhere.

God save King Pine!

A TEST OF EDUCATION

A professor in the University of Chicago told his pupils that he should consider the man educated, in the best sense of the word, when they could say "Yes" to every one of fourteen questions that he should put to them. It may interest you to read the questions. Here they are:

Has your education given sympathy with all good causes and made you espouse them?

Has it made you public-spirited?

Has it made you a brother to the weak?

Have you learned how to make friends and keep them?

Do you know what it is to be a friend to yourself?

Can you look an honest man or a pure woman straight in the eye?

Do you see anything to love in a little child?

Will a lonely dog follow you in the street?

Can you be high-minded and happy in the meaner drudgeries of life?

Do you think washing dishes and hoeing corn just as compatible with high thinking as piano-playing or golf?

OBITUARIES

SHARP

Charles Edward Sharp, son of J. M. and Ella Sharp, was born April 4, 1882 and died February 29, 1920, aged 37 years, 10 months and 25 days. He was married to Bessie M. Sharp November 13, 1907. To this union were born four girls and four boys. One little girl preceded him in death. In early life he professed faith in Christ and united with New Lebanon Christian church and remained a most faithful member till death. He was both deacon and Sunday school superintendent at the time of his death. He was a prosperous farmer and was looking to the future with bright prospects. He was strong and healthy until about a week before his death, when he was attacked by influenza which terminated into double pneumonia. His sudden death was a shock to his many neighbors and friends. This breaking up of a happy home calls forth the deepest sympathy for the widow and little fatherless children. Surviving are a widow, seven children, father, several brothers and sisters, and a host of relatives and friends. He was a devoted husband, kind father, loyal church member, and a friend to all. He will be greatly missed in the community.

Burial service conducted by pastor, Rev. W. L. Wells, at New Lebanon Christian church and interment in church cemetery. May the Lord comfort and bless the sorrowing and prepare us all for a happy eternity.

MRS. J. L. SHARP.

SARTIN

Stephen I. Sartin was born October 15, 1842 and died March 31, 1920, aged 77 years, 5 months and 16 days. He was married to Laura Hubbard in 1870. To this union were born eleven children, six daughters and five sons. He is survived by his widow and only two of the children—Mrs. J. J. Sutton of Burlington, N. C., with whom he was making his home at the time of his death, and Mrs. W. T. Corum of Reidsville, N. C. There are ten grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Brother Sartin was a member of the Methodist Protestant church of Fairview, from which the funeral was conducted by the writer in the absence of the pastor.

The end came suddenly, but not unexpectedly. Our brother was expecting the call at any moment. He had previously been stricken with paralysis. The day he died he had been down town. God bless and comfort the bereaved one.

J. W. HARRELL.

BARB

In the early morning of April 11, 1920, the death angel came to the home of Brother W. H. Hosaflook at Linville, Va., and claimed Sister Hosaflook's mother, Melinda C. Barb. Sister Barb had reached the ripe old age of 88 years, 1 month, and 10 days. She had enjoyed excellent health most of her life, and her death came as a surprise to her many friends. It was my happy privilege about seven or eight years ago to receive her into the Christian church at Linville. She proved herself a faithful member, and leaves many friends who respect her for her integrity. She was a general favorite in her neighborhood. Surviving are one daughter, 11 grandchildren, and 32 great-grandchildren. Funeral at Linville, April 13, 1920.

Allowance for Wear and Tear

The grocer observed that his best customer was a bit ruffled over something; so he strove to be obliging and pleasant.

"I think," he said blandly, "living is getting cheaper. For instance, a year ago those eggs would have cost you ten cents more."

He Should Worry

An old riverman, Mac Stone, had only one shirt. While he lay in his bunk in the old log cabin that he and his wife called home, waiting for his shirt to be washed and dried, his wife rushed in exclaiming, "Mac, get up quick! That drafted old cow has done chawed up your shirt!"

"Wal, my dear," he replied, "those that have got have to lose." And he turned placidly over for another nap.

Where Ignorance Was Bliss

A farmer saw a boy plucking apples from one of his best apple trees. He tried to catch him, says the Weekly Telegraph, but the boy was too quick for him, and so the farmer changed his tactics.

"Come here, my little son," he said in a soft voice, with a counterfeited friendliness, "come here to me a minute! I want to tell you something." "Not likely!" replied the boy. "Little ones like me don't need to know everything."

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

A POINT IN PLACE

Some weeks ago THE SUN made a comment on a news note taken from The Herald of Gospel Liberty—a note having reference to the acceptance of a position by Mr. Hermon Eldredge. The Herald commented that it was a compliment to the Church to furnish the man, while THE SUN raised the question as to whether it was a compliment or not, since there is work in the Christian Church for Mr. Eldredge to do, if only our leaders would build a program big enough to challenge him.

A very well informed and interested layman read the note in THE SUN and wrote us personally concerning it. In the note referred to in THE SUN we asked this question: "Why not give Mr. Eldredge work in our own denomination?" The Brother writing us says: "The same question might be raised about Marion Lawrance and other men who started in the Christian Church, but who could not find a place to serve in its ranks and had to go elsewhere seeking a place to use their talents."

Our layman friend raises a very important question and one that deserves our serious and prayerful consideration. Another quotation from his letter is certainly in order. Listen to it: "Miss Iola Hedgepeth was with us recently but spoiled a great address for our denomination by having to credit the M. E. Church with giving her the first opportunity of service. Miss Hedgepeth was anxious and determined to go to the mountains to do mission work. Had she gone on her own responsibility as a representative of our denomination we would have criticized her. The Methodist Church gladly accepted her services and now we want to take advantage of their initiative and use her as our worker."

Our Brother's letter interests us very much. He gives two reasons for this situation. Here they are, quoted from his pen: "The first is, our denomination was created for planting the seed only for others to reap the harvest, for we certainly have the fundamental principles for which the Master prayed, and which are now being recognized by practically all denominations. Perhaps we might not have given God the glory had the increase come within our own ranks. If so, let us thank God and take courage that He has given us the privilege of planting, for we can certainly see the harvest coming through others who are embracing and recognizing our principles. The second reason is that, either through oversight, ignorance, selfishness of our own leaders, or some other cause, we have not given our laymen and young converts anything to do, or allowed them to use their talents in our ranks."

As we write this note a letter is before us from Dr. A. B. Kendall, which will be printed in this issue, if space permits. Here is a quotation from Dr. Kendall's letter: "We have now the names of three Congressmen and two Senators who should be in our work, as they are members of the Christian Church elsewhere or were reared in the Christian Church." Dr. Kendall, after this information, adds these words: "By the way, that is a pretty fine contribution to national leadership from a body no larger than ours and there may be others of whom I have not learned."

We agree with Dr. Kendall that it is a fine contribution but it is an awful shame that we have lost them, and that knocks out of our sight all the "contribution."

We have two of our most promising young men in Yale University. They have bright hopes and a wonderful outlook. We know wherein we speak when we say that their ambitions for missionary work are higher than our own program, and unless we open the field for them they will place themselves in avenues of service larger than we have given. Their first duty is to the Kingdom and not to any denomination. Big men and great men have left us because we have not given them opportunity.

We wonder as we write these lines what forward steps the approaching session of our Convention will take. Shall we be narrow in our visions, circumscribed in our thoughts, small in our dealings, or shall we with faith and hope step out and reach out and reach up?

CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS AGAIN

We understand that Raleigh is to compete with Burlington in bidding for denominational headquarters. Good for Raleigh! There is nothing like having an ambition, even if you are small. Raleigh boasts of her hotels. Burlington has three—all that will ever be needed for official accommodation. Raleigh speaks of trains. Burlington has trains passing each way every few hours. Raleigh will call attention to Wake County's Christian churches. Alamance is dotted with Christian churches, and is the birth-place of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Providence church in Alamance County is the mother of all other churches in the County. Burlington has the finest church building in the Southern Christian Convention, none excepted. Burlington's church membership is 384 with new additions every month. Raleigh has an inadequate building with a membership of only 184. The Raleigh church was never famous for growth—other churches have sprung up around her and put her in the shade in a dozen ways. Burlington church leads in every way. The strongest, biggest and best bank in Alamance County is headed by an active member of the Burlington church. The leading business men in Burlington are members of the Burlington church. The Christian Orphanage is located near Burlington. The College is within fifteen minutes' drive of Burlington. The Mission Office is located in Burlington, so is THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and for the sake of humanity, let us not move our office of publication again.

Candidly, can we put the Convention headquarters where the local church is not the leading one in the city? Of course not. Neither can any small place be considered. A live and up-to-date town must be chosen where publishing facilities are good. Burlington can meet all the demands. Burlington is the place for Convention headquarters.

The Convention has not acted, but who doubts that her progressiveness will be less? Shame upon us if we continue as we are.

METHODIST UNIFICATION

For more than two years the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, have been wrangling over unification—the settling of their differences growing out of the war between the North and South. We have read both sides very closely, and have come to the conclusion that they have no differences that will bear the test of Christian fellowship and that the unification plan should be adopted. This is a day of union and co-operation and the world is looking on to see what two great branches of the same Church will do. Will they fail before the eyes of the world, and lessen the spirit of Christian unity?

REPORTS FROM THE MEN AND MILLIONS FINANCIAL CAMPAIGN

The reports from the Men and Millions financial drive are coming in nicely. This week's issue tells of many results, while many notes, letters, etc., have reached us too late for this issue. As a whole we feel confident that the goal will be reached. It is too early to have full reports from all churches, especially the country charges. It is our hope that every church, will during the next few days, endeavor to do what it can so that a good and glorious report may be the result.

DANIEL W. KERR

Most great men are rarely ever appreciated fully in their own day. This must be true of the late Daniel W. Kerr (pronounced Carr), founder and first Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

On Sunday, April 18, we had the pleasure of being at Union, near Burlington, and visited the graves of Rev. Daniel Kerr, and his wife, Rebecca. The following inscription is found on the marble shaft that marks the resting place of our pioneer in Southern Christian journalism:

Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

Born July 10, 1796

Died May 15, 1850

Aged 53 Years, 8 Months, and 5 Days.

Made a Profession of Christianity 1818

Entered the Ministry 1819

The monument bears a Masonic emblem, hence we presume he was a member of that Order.

On Mrs. Kerr's tombstone this information is given:

In Memory of

Rebecca

Wife of the Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

Born March 2, 1809

Died June 18, 1873

64 Years—3 Months—10 Days

Mrs. Kerr's grave is marked with a plain slab, and this has been broken and is now in bad condition. The marker was originally about three feet high, while the pyramid shaped monument to the grave of the husband is about six or seven feet high.

The graves are not beautified—briers are grown about them. Such should not be. The broken tablet should be replaced by a nicer one and the grounds beautified.

Later we shall endeavor to present a picture of the final resting place of these noble souls.

We hope that this note may interest some member of the Convention sufficiently to make a motion to put the graves of these two saints in first-class condition.

REV. J. W. WILLINGHAM

We get this from a letter addressed to Dr. J. O. Atkinson by Dr. J. P. Barrett: "Rev. J. W. Willingham died yesterday (April 19) from paralysis. He was stricken last Saturday night. He never spoke after he was stricken, and lived less than 36 hours after the stroke came." Our last meeting with Brother Willingham was at Suffolk, Va., December 30, last, when officials were called together to consider the Men and Millions Forward Movement. We were with him a brief period during the noon meal at the hotel. He seemed to be in good health and was looking forward to great things for the Church. We presume that a more detailed account will be furnished THE SUN.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

RELATION OF THE COLLEGE TO COMMERCIAL EDUCATION

In a number of respects the Regional Conference on Business Training and Commercial Education held in Columbia, South Carolina, on April 10, 1920, was a notable event. Representatives were there from Virginia, North Carolina, Georgia, and South Carolina. All who attended the meeting seemed to get much good from the Conference. There were three sessions: One at 10 o'clock A. M., another at 2 o'clock P. M., and the third session convened at 8 o'clock P. M. Dr. W. S. Currell, President of the University of South Carolina, presided with Dr. G. L. Swiggett of the United States Department of Education as honorary president.

During the morning session the subject of Commercial Teacher-Training was considered. The discussion developed the fact that there are very few teachers of Commercial subjects in the United States worthy of the name, especially in the high schools and colleges of the country; that the Commercial Schools and Commercial departments of our high schools train only for jobs, that these schools have not yet risen to the point where they train a man or woman, a boy or girl, to the point where the person trained in these schools are in a position to be masters in the work they undertake. The idea of these schools from the educator's standpoint, is too much simply the bread and butter question. Further, since we have so few real teachers of commercial subjects, the idea of the Conference was that our best colleges and universities should, as occasion offers, put in courses of commerce, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Commerce; and that these courses should in all respects in work and training be equivalent to the four year courses in arts.

The discussions on the floor brought out the idea that our present commercial schools and our commercial departments in high schools and colleges should give more rigid courses; that the courses now offered are not sufficiently rigid to meet the needs and demands of the business world of today. A two-years' course in higher accounting and in stenography and typewriting with strong courses in the laws of commerce social and Political Science, Commercial Arithmetic, Commercial English, and other allied topics should be given to meet the needs and demands of the business world of today. Thorough training in commercial subjects complete mastery of what the student professes to know, was the idea expressed by the Conference.

The afternoon session of the Conference was given over to the discussion of college entrance credits in commercial branches. Dr. Swiggett had prepared a list of all the colleges that accepted commercial subjects for entrance. The number of institutions in the States mentioned above that accept commercial subjects for entrance was surprisingly small. Two units was the greatest amount of commercial work accepted by any institution unless the institution had a School of Commerce and three units were accepted in one or two institutions in the South from students who were entering for work in this school. The deans of the school of commerce in two universities frankly expressed the idea that the work was so poorly done in the commercial schools and the commercial departments of high schools that they would rather have students enter the school of commerce with no knowledge of commercial subjects. But in the end of the discussion the idea seemed to prevail that students entering a college or university school of commerce might have four credits for commercial work; but if the student were entering to take any other course, only two units should be allowed. The general trend of opinion was that two units is a high maximum for any other course.

The discussion during the evening session covered a variety of topics relating to commercial education and training, such as general training, regional demands of business for students trained in vocational and professional commercial subjects. The idea seemed to prevail that wherever the business interests of the region or country demand it, colleges and universities should provide competent professors and offer men and women of exceptional commercial ability the opportunity to train themselves for the highest types of commercial work, for commercial leadership, for city managers, and for directors and managers in all kinds of commercial work.

It is the purpose of the Department of Education of the United States to hold these regional conferences in all parts of the country and study the conditions in the different districts. Then further conferences will be called and final reports made. It is hoped that much may be done by this means to get schools and the commercial interests of the country to co-operate and to provide the best grade of higher training for commercial students.

It was also the pleasure of the writer of this article to visit the great power plant, and station at Great Falls, South Carolina. The enormous dams of concrete, the great amount of water power developed, and the means by which man has succeeded in harnessing nature's forces gave us food for much thought. Generators were there running that developed five thousand horse power each of electric power. There within a radius of a mile are developed over three hundred thousand horse power of electric energy and this is distributed over several of the Southern states. And also we were pleased to note the contentment of the people who worked in the cotton mills belonging to the Southern Power Company. They are well paid, and the interests of the people are looked after, hence they have no strikes, lockouts, and other troubles that people have where labor and capital are at daggers points.

The Regional Conference referred to in the first part of this paper was held in the Chapel of the University of South Carolina. This is an old institution. Its buildings are old with the exception of three or possibly four new buildings of modern architecture that adorn one of the newer portions of the campus. Quite a number of these buildings were inspected hurriedly and every part of the campus was visited. One thing worthy of note and mention is the fact that the students seem to take pride in their university and they do all they can to protect her property. Not a single mark was on the walls, no painting of letters or numbers was seen anywhere. Everything seemed to be well kept and in the best of order. The library was a place of study and quiet. Nothing was found therein to detract from study and work.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IN THE COUNTRY CHURCH

(Edmund deS. Brunner)

Religious education is now recognized to be something much broader than the instruction received in the Sunday school. Indeed, even the name of that time honored institution is open to criticism. Bible school is preferred by some and Church school by most leaders. The country church should develop definite means of religious education both for children and adults and bringing pulpit, home and Church school into denite co-operation to the end that personal and social duty and morality may be interpreted in terms of rural life and applied in actual service with the parish and community.

This is the ideal but we fall far short of it. Whole denominations report from one-sixth to one-fourth of their churches as lacking in Church schools. In what other way can the young be influenced or more surely brought to the great decision for Christ than through this agency? On the other hand we find throughout America thousands of union Sunday schools unaffiliated with any church, lacking in supervision, and furnishing no opportunity for uniting with a church.

What then is the program in religious education for the country church? First there should be graded instruction in the Bible. To the early adolescent boy David is a hero, to the young man he is a super-successful leader and so on. The time has passed when one narrative can be studied by any given school as a whole and the best results attained. All schools can secure graded lessons if they desire them and they can be adapted to the needs of the small rural school.

In the next place the teachers who will have harder but more interesting work to do must be trained for it and they and the other adult members may be instructed through mid-week meetings or consecutive sermon presentation.

Third, the children in the Church school should be studied by their teachers and the pastor and the parents taken into confidence so that the church and the home may agree upon the objectives of character. This study must not be only during the hour on Sunday but whenever opportunity arises. Some of the most valuable material one pastor ever secured for dealing with his young folks he gathered watching them now and then from his study window as they enjoyed themselves on the church playground.

Fourth, there must be more use of the rich rural material in the Bible. The barn yard hen takes on a new meaning the child conceits it with the big lesson Jesus taught by it. And so through both Testaments, as indicated in a former article in this series, there lies ready to hand a wealth of illustration, suggestion, truth to him who, having eyes, sees and seeing, shows others.

In such a brief article it is not possible to do more than enumerate but any denominational Board can amplify these suggestions and make others. A final word may be said. In these days when there are a number of devices that in no way mar the looks of the church auditorium, no class should lack at least a curtained partition during the teaching session. The advantages of this need no proof and with the devices mentioned not more than eighty or a hundred dollars stand between this improvement and the Sunday school which meets in the church auditorium.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

FOUNDED

We have some of the most liberal people at North Highland that I ever saw. Last night (April 16) as wife and I were getting the children ready for bed, we heard some one say, "We are just coming right in," and there were about twenty or twenty-five people with arms full of good things to eat, such as flour, meal, lard, sugar, rice, bacon, ham, oatmeal, dried fruit, peas, butter beans, eggs, syrup, canned goods, jellies and preserves. This makes us feel under renewed obligations to God and our people. May God's richest blessing be upon the people of North Highland church, is my prayer.

ORPHANAGE DAY AT SOUTH NORFOLK CHURCH

Easter Sunday, April 4, 1920, will long be remembered by the members of the South Norfolk Sunday school. It was Orphanage Day at this church and pastor and people had been looking forward to the occasion with high hopes. The Sunday school had set as its goal $100 for the little orphans now being cared for at the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C. The Sunday school attendance has been steadily increasing both in numbers and in attendance during the last three years, and on Easter Sunday the number present on time was 223. And instead of $100, the offering went over the top with a total of $250. Our good brother and superintendent, Mr. B. F. Meginley, tried to thank the school for the generous offering, but words failed him. Not only was he happy and thankful, but every member in the school felt happy and glad that they had a part in the magnificent offering, for so worthy a cause.

But that was only a beginning of the good things the Lord had in store for His people here. That was the beginning of our revival meeting, and on that day seven souls were born into the Kingdom and added to the church roll. The revival has been in progress for two weeks, with professions daily. We have hardly been able to accommodate a single audience, notwithstanding the addition of a hundred chairs. Over five hundred people attended the services one evening and we had eleven professions. We have received fifty-seven members and a number of others have signified a desire to unite with us.

Brethren, pray for the pastor and members of the South Norfolk church. "Prayer changes things." When the Christian Church learns the secret of prayer, she will come into her own. I had rather be known as a praying preacher than as a preaching preacher. A minister can preach and minister after he has prayed, but he cannot preach unless he has prayed.

O. D. POYTHRESS.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Lord is blessing us here in the Washington work and we are moving forward. I think the most discouraging thing in our attempt to establish a work here is the lack of loyalty, the unwillingness to sacrifice on the part of some of the members of our churches who have come here.

We meet this excuse many times, "I am attending a church and Sunday school where there is a fine congregation and a big Sunday school class and the people are so nice to me; I just cannot give it up." I am forced to confess that nothing takes the wind out of my sails quite like that.

Sunday, April eleventh, was a red-letter day in our work, when I had the privilege of extending the right-hand of fellowship to twenty-one members. Nine others were received but they were unable to be present that day.

One of these came in profession of faith. Since then I have obtained the names of four more for membership.

Our attendance is showing a slow, but steady, increase and we have a most enthusiastic, genial people.

We continue to receive names of members who are here in Washington, six names being added to our list in the last week, one of these a Senator.

We have now the names of three Congressmen and two Senators who ought to be in our work as they are members of the Christian Church elsewhere or were reared in the Christian Church. By the way that is a pretty fine contribution to national leadership from a body no larger than ours and there may be others of whom I have not learned.

In our Men and Millions drives we procured twelve tithers, one Life-Recruit for the ministry, one convert and we hope to increase that number this week, and in our financial drive we have gone over the top over 100 per cent beyond our quota and the financial canvass far from complete.

We are still searching for a lot. Pray that we may succeed in obtaining just the right site.

If you have the names of any persons who are or have been connected in any way with the Christian Church who are now in Washington send me their names, and if possible, their addresses. Do not take it for granted that some one else has sent them in and do not postpone and then forget it but do it now. Other churches are getting our members because we do not have their names. Within the last month I have had the disappointing experience of being just a little late in getting the name and address of a fine, young business man, who had just gone into a Methodist church, and the wife of one of our deceased pastors whose letter had been sent for by the pastor of a Presbyterian church. We lost them because we did not have their names and addresses soon enough.

If any of your people come to Washington to stay, get their names and addresses to us as soon as possible and tell them, before they leave, to find their church home with the First Christian church, present address, Perpetual Hall, 1101 E. St., second floor.

A. B. KENDALL.

RICHMOND, VA.

It will perhaps be interesting to the readers of THE SUN to know something of the progress of the First Christian church at Richmond, Virginia. The church which was formerly organized on April 4, 1920, (Easter Sunday), has for its meeting place the William Fox school building, which is desirable from every standpoint as a temporary place of worship. It is useless to say, however, that the members are anxious to see the work on their church building started, and it will mean much to have the work begun at the earliest possible moment. The congregation is working with a determination which inspires. Dr. W. T. Walters, the pastor, has been handicapped to some extent on account of illness in his home, but he has been giving good service and is steadily building up a congregation. The past Sunday the Sunday school attendance was larger; morning service more largely attended, Christian Endeavor had larger attendance, as did also the night service than any previous Sunday. The membership of the church numbers 43. Subscriptions last Sunday amounted to about seven thousand dollars. The Ladies' Aid Society is doing good work, with a membership of about 25. You see we are not lagging.

(Report to April 24)

Brother C. H. Stephenson let the Sunday school notes for last week "slip" his memory and sent the ones for this issue too late. We have his promise that he will do so no more.

Why any local church chooses to stand aloof from denominational activity is more than we fully understand.

DEVOTIONAL

THE EVERLASTING ARMS

"The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms."—Deut. 33:27.

It is a glad privilege to feel that God is our refuge and strength and that His own arms are underneath us giving divine support to every one who is willing to learn and rest upon them. In every age, stage and condition they are reaching for the needy ones to fold them in His loving embrace; and all believers in Him realize the words of the text to be true.

The close of any great and eventful life, especially if it has been eminently useful to humanity, and been devoted to the service of the Lord, must be crowned with a circle of peace and inexpressible happiness. The life of Moses is replete with history—renown with great and wonderful achievements, and completely filled with greatness and goodness. After reading the history of Moses, and learning more about his leadership and eventful journey, we hear him as he comes to sing his last farewell song to the children of Israel, and there is much in it to touch the feelings and tender the heart. It must have been sad with them to hear him singing his last song, and to part with their great leader. He who had led them through the long journey of forty years—through the parting water of the Red Sea—over into and through the wilderness, on and on—was then taking the parting leave of them. No doubt many of his followers trembled with visible emotion as his familiar voice sounded over the plains of Moab and echoed softly at the base of the mountain upon which he was soon to die. As a good song sung by some splendid singer in the past is fondly remembered, so did the followers of Moses gladly think of the sweet strains as they flowed from the lips of their faithful leader.

Sermons and speeches delivered by many different speakers may have swayed, pleased and helped large audiences, but some favorite song sung by a gifted singer, has sounded sweetly to them, who listened with eager delight, all the time since. The pleasures of memory still fondly linger in those songs which sounded delightfully into anxious ears and helped to fill the soul with gladness. This meaning will be seen more clearly and better understood when you remember the glad songs your fathers and mothers used to sing by the blazing fire in the old home; and they are still fresh in the mind as the morning dew. That tender, sweet lullaby that induced many of you to sleep is also pleasant to remember, and all of those nursery songs which mother used to sing for you will be precious to you all your days. Many are still lingering this side of the great boundary line who cherish those early songs, and they sometimes hum them over and over until time appears to move backward and they live over again in imagination, the happy days of childhood. It matters not how high you have ascended in the literary world, it makes no difference how wealthy you are, nor how much honor and greatness you have attained, nor how gorgeously laureled and garlanded with splendid achievement, the early and the simple life of the dear old home will ever appear precious to you.

The lost have been restored by song. Years ago a party of white children were captured and taken away by the Indians. Some time after a mother who had lost two children in the capture visited among the Indians, and many white children were among them, but it had been so long the mother could not tell which were her children until she thought of and began to sing an old nursery song. Then the two children ran up at once exclaiming as they came, "Mamma! Mamma!" There is still great power in the old home songs and mothers have a lovely and wonderful influence over their children. Let the fond mothers not neglect to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. As the lost children were found by singing the cradle song by their mother and returned to her tender embrace, so may singing spiritual songs help bring back to the Father of all the wandering and lost children of men. In it they can hear the invitation of Jesus calling them tenderly and lovingly to himself that He may bless, comfort and save them.

Listen at these helpful words from one who had been deeply down in sin, but had come back to God, when he says, "God is our refuge and strength." Do not let us forget that God is strong, and that His strong, everlasting arms are supporting us. What you and every one wants and greatly needs is strength. If you were asked today, "What is the greatest thing you need?", what would you say? I cannot tell what your answer would be, but can suggest what it should be. The answer ought to be STRENGTH. You want refuge, you desire protection in many ways; but you need strength—you need more power. Many are weak, physically, intellectually and spiritually, and the very best thing first to do is to make an earnest effort to get more of these three important things. But seek first the kingdom of God; get into the kingdom first, and the divine laws of God will enable you to get strong all over—in every needed way. By obeying the Bible laws you will get stronger. Try it then and see for yourself, for by rightly observing them is your only hope of getting better—growing stronger. O, what a power you would be if you were strong! Disease, luxury and self indulgent habits have made millions weak. Let all such try to improve their health and get more strength. This can be partly done, at least, by prudence and prayer, and self-denial. That is what a good many folks will not do. To do so is taking their privileges from them they say. But if you want to get well, be strong, and follow Jesus, you must deny yourselves. These old truths dressed in modern style are still attractive and helpful. Do you want to be well again and healthy? Then, you must abide by and practice them. You need, yes, you want power from God among men to be able to play well your part on the stage of life. You who have fallen out by the wayside, come back into the everlasting arms of God and be strong in body and mind. Which will you do? The choice is yours. Stop now, turn to the strong hold, and be folded in His everlasting arms.

After Moses acted his part to the congregation of Israel, he then pronounced his blessing upon the twelve tribes in the most beautiful and comforting language he could employ. He gave words of praise, encouragement and blessing for each of the tribes; and his parting words were not only admirable but were very instructive. The last words of any one, when in full view of the end of his life-journey, are honest and true. Some may read these lines who very well remember the last words of a loved one. Said one recently: "I remember the last words my father said to me. He inquired of me concerning my future prospects of life's business. Then after a moment of quietness, he said: 'Be good and true, and meet me in heaven.'" Then emotion stirred the heart too deeply to give a reply. A last talk—the very last blessings—a last look by kind ones are still gladly remembered by many, and the thought of their fond association is greatly cherished. Do you not think of some who left good examples which, if imitated, would greatly help you? Doubtless, you have often been reminded of them, of their sweet counsel, and of the valuable admonition how to live, and reach the end in the right way.

Good examples and influences are blessings in the fullest meaning, for they not only help to bless and save—but they live on through endless cycles of time. The great blessings given by an honest, loving mother to her children will never be fully told. When you were hungry, fretful, troubled, discouraged or sick a dear mother could comfort and help you with tender words and kind acts as no other living mortal could. Her footsteps were welcome sounds, her presence in the sick room almost angelic, here eyes flashed quickly with maternal love, her smiling face gave joy to the anxious heart, while her willing hands administered to every need. When the precious old soul could help you no longer—when her work was done, and the time of her departure was near she wanted you to sit down by her—then in a low, weak voice said, "Be a good child and meet me in heaven."

The blessings which a Christian life gives are not fully estimated. Moses communed with God, and that is the main reason why he was such a great and good leader—he was led by Divine power and directed in the right and safe way. This leads us to say that heads of families—the leaders—ought not only to be moral, honest and upright in every thing, but they ought to be Christ-like, and followers of Him wherever He leads. The blessings which a Christian life bestows upon humanity are so many they have never all been told, nor fully estimated. You already know it is the surest life, the best life, the most useful life, the greatest life, and the safest life that can be lived. It would be very wise for all who have not entered the Christian life to do so without any delay. Jesus in His great words is inviting you today. "See that none render evil to any man, but ever follow that which is good, both among yourselves and to all men."

Your soul has been touched often by hearing the word—by reading a sermon, or hearing it delivered by some man of God. Then you were almost ready to yield and become a Christian. While the light of revelation and reason has been turned on the dark way of sin you have admired their beauty and truthfulness. When His everlasting arms are under us we may be sure of, at least, three things: Security, protection and rest. Each one of us then will do well to pray. O Lord, reach down Thy everlasting arms and draw us closer to Thee. And when He lifts us up in His loving embrace we can truly feel that we are safe.

The last blessing of Moses upon the last of the twelve tribes is proclaimed in these suitable and impressive words: There is none like unto God * * who rideth upon the heaven. The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms. What a benediction of praise and honor! With what confidence and love; with what deep and profound feeling did he pronounce these benedictions! Was it not beautiful and lovable in Moses full of the spirit of God thus to give his parting words to the children of Israel?

The eternal One has been your refuge all the time. In infancy, in youth, in mature years, in old age and declining years, He is still with you. In all the different ways of life learn to abide in Him. Lean upon His arms now—lean upon them forever.

BESEECHING US

"I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."—Romans 12:1.

Jesus Christ stretches forth His hands, pierced with cruel nails, for you and me. He says: "My child, I saved you from the guilt of sin, I brought you from death unto life, by my mercies I beseech you." You say, "Lord, what do you want me to do?" He answers, "I want your life for my Kingdom." Give your life to me and I will return it to you henceforth a life as you never knew before, a blood-stained hand that holds you and me, which takes your life and draws it into the sea of God's great plan and makes it a weapon in God's hand for the glory of His Kingdom.

Our Father above is not hard. He knows how little we have to give, compared with what he has given us. He is not grieved that we know so little of real consecration. All that He asks is that we give our lives to Him. Give your life to God without fear. However stumbling or faltering our consecration may seem to us, if it comes from an earnest, loving heart, it is acceptable to Him. Dear young friends, dedicate your lives to God. Think what Christ has suffered for you. Trust Him to lead you in the path which is best for you. Surely you can trust the One, Who died for you. Trust Him and all things will end in the highest blessing for your life and the Kingdom of God.

Now is the acceptable time. Make your choice for life. Dedicate your young life to the ministry, a noble calling. If you will not do that, resolve to be a soul-winner. Live Christ, speak for Him whenever you have an opportunity. Don't be merely a church member, but let your friends see whom you love and obey. Don't grieve your Savior with a life that is unbecoming to a Christian.

He is our best Friend. He will stand by us when earthly friends fail. What would this world be without Him? He is not satisfied with taking your spirit to heaven. He wants to use your life while here upon earth. You are now face to face with a decision. Next to accepting Christ as your Savior, it is the most important question you have to decide. It is the decision to consecrate your life to God. Can you not do this for Jesus' sake?

THE LORD'S DAY

There was never a falser proverb than that which is so often flippantly repeated: "The better the day, the better the deed." The truth is, the better the day, the worse the deed, if the deed itself be unworthy, for it is then a profanation of a sacred time.—The Christian Nation.

By far the best way to help men with their temptations is to bring them to Christ. It may be of some service to a man if, in the time of trial, I put round him the sympathetic arm of a brother; but it is infinitely better if I can get him to allow Christ to put round him His strong arm. This is the effectual defense, and no other can be really depended on.—James Stalker.

It is an easy matter for the hungry to eat and for the thirsty to drink, and for the tired and fatigued to rest, but that is not easier than it is for the grateful heart to give thanks unto God, "from whom all blessings flow."

Men and Millions

A WORD OF GRATITUDE AND CHEER

The glad and happy response from all sections of the Brotherhood to the great demands for time and prayer and money has cheered the heart of the field workers as nothing else could. Marvelous is the only word that adequately describes the manner in which our people have arisen and girded themselves for the Lord's work as represented in the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

I am thinking now of one man who had been invited to be Captain. The duty of his office had been fully explained to him. He was overcome with a sense of responsibility. He declared he could not undertake it. Then he became suddenly grave. His countenance brightened. His voice rang out: "Yes, I will. I am not living this life for myself, else I might as well be dead. I will do it." His church is now over the top. His spirit has stirred many another heart in this splendid cause. For each such instance of devotion my heart goes up in gratitude as I write this line to THE SUN.

And now for the cheer. Telegrams will today, I feel sure, reach this office that will bring us so near the top that by a few days more of solid team work we shall go safely over. Here is one from that city in our Brotherhood which certainly might be excused if any could. The town was stricken by tornado, and yet with a quota of $2,950, our LaGrange, (Ga.), church has passed the $5,000 mark. A mission church has sprung from it during the campaign and it, too, has undertaken to raise $500 and will do it. Is that not cheer?

Dr. Charles Rowland's district has gone over the top and his salary has been increased $500. Dr. I. W. Johnson's Berea (Nansemond) church oversubscribed and added 50 per cent to his salary. Is this not cheer?

Rev. G. O. Lankford wires that the Norfolk district is over $8,000 and the drive still on. Is that not cheer?

A body of the finest business men in Virginia laid down their work during Consecration Week and in their automobiles with their wives accompanying, went out into Nansemond County and put the country churches over, after the Suffolk church had oversubscribed her magnificent quota of $125,000. Is that not cheer?

"Rejoice and again I say, 'rejoice.'"

And Yet

And yet some our churches have not been able to function. They were hindered by smallpox and other sickness, by bad roads and inclement weather, by other hindering causes. They are our brethren though, and they desire to do their part. Here is the cheer even in their situation. They send out the Macedonian cry for help. That is cheer. There is hope where a desire dwells to do the Lord's will. They shall have the help, please God. Our Convention in session will provide for that.

Again let me say I am grateful for the response that has come, cheered by the results, and hopeful as to the final outcome of our splendid cause. Let us render praise to His name for His unspeakable blessing upon us in these rich, rare days.

W. A. HARPER.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The final week of the Men and Millions campaign is examination week. The grades will be determined by the work done in the four subjects of the course. Some churches will excel in one part and others in other parts; but all have learned something of value in this school of Christ. High-grade students always feel the happiest when reports are made. It will be so in this school. Those churches that have done something and have taken the whole course of Life-Recruits, Tithing, Life-Dedication, and Consecration will be better qualified to succeed in the Lord's will in the future. It has been a high-grade, high-pressure term, and the whole school will enjoy vacation. The term of school was too short to pass all to higher grades, but all have been benefitted, if they have given attention to the lessons assigned. The literature has been good and it has been free to the students. It was well graded and sweetened by the spirit of the Gospel. It has been unselfish and benevolent from beginning to end. The teachers have been patient and the work has been tense.

But we should remember that it has been a school only; we have paid our tuition, or promised to pay it, and now we must enter the field for life-work for Him Who has honored us with opportunity and talents to serve in the Kingdom. The years before us will lure us on to continuous activity in the Kingdom.

Like anxious students, we await the final report to know how many churches have reached the goal. The day of this final report will be Commencement Day in the Southern Convention. It will be the greatest day in our history. It will begin a new career of activity in our ranks. It will clear the field of indifference and set men in their place. It will change the leadership in some churches. The leadership of the future is to be a leadership of service and not the leadership of personal importance. The humblest, the strongest, the faithful, are to be the leaders of the new time. "He that is greatest among you shall be your servant." Christians must learn to love and to serve, and not to imagine slights and feel offended in church relations, for the Kingdom needs the united help of all. Work for the Lord is the panacea for all the frictions and feelings among the people of God. Self-importance is the bane of human happiness and the destruction of human service. Love settles all differences, unites all interests, sweetens all tempers, satisfies all parties, and crowns all efforts. Love is of God. Love makes us like God. The close of this campaign ought to be a day of rejoicing, a prophetic day, and a day of new beginnings. Reconstruction should begin with this day and the church should lay her plans for one united, continuous, effort to take possession of the promised inheritance.

W. W. STALEY.

THE ONLY SOLVENT

The New York Tribune of a recent date, very pertinently says, "The only solvent for the turmoil of the world is the spirit and message of Christ. Never before has its need so challenged Christianity's power to serve. From every corner of the earth the discouraged, the disappointed, the bewildered people are crying out to the Christian Church, 'Come over and help us.' The happy, fortunate people of America cannot turn a deaf ear to the world's cry."

With this sentiment the writer most heartily agrees. The world is in turmoil. Nations have been made destitute by the ravages of war. Empires have been impoverished through bloodshed and wholesale devastation. America on the other hand has prospered tremendously at the expense of the nations less fortunate than she. We are, therefore, on trial before God and the angels as we have never been before. Great opportunities always put people on trial. Surely our Heavenly Father has given us the opportunity of the ages. Will we enter in or will we shirk? How can any church be contented to go along in the same old way? How can any Christian people reconcile themselves to a program of littleness when a world's need on a great scale cries out and when programs of service challenge to energy, to effort and to activity?

Our Men and Millions Forward Movement means that we of the Christian Church are willing to put on a program of righteousness somewhat in keeping with the world's need and with our opportunity. We are measured in this world not by what we have, or by what we are, but by what we do for our God and for our fellowman. We shall all be judged by the deeds done in the body, not by the creeds which we have got into our system.

We are more or less bewildered. We know not what a day will bring forth. We have tried and we are trying various and sundry national and international, political and economic solvents for the world's distress, and now we are coming more and more to see that the only real solvent for the turmoil of the world is the spirit and message of Christ. Soon our day of opportunity and of service will be over. Ours is the privilege and the opportunity to make known the spirit and spread far and wide the message of Christ. No individual is any larger than the service he renders to the world. No church is any smaller than the size of the service it renders to the world. The individual and the church are measured by the Christian standard of service and are large or little in proportion to the amount of service rendered. If we cannot render service in a day and time like this, with the means for service which our Heavenly Father has placed so abundantly within our reach, when shall we render that service? It behooves us, it behooves the church, to carry on in His name in a most marked and energetic manner in these days of need, of turmoil, and also of opportunity. "We must catch a new vision; we must give by a new standard; we must serve with a new energy."

J. O. ATKINSON.

PORTSMOUTH, VA.

We note in THE SUN the results shown by other churches throughout the Southern Conference in reference to the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

We are glad to say that the little church at the corner of Washington & County Streets has rightened its corner by going "over the top" in its quota during this movement. We are proud to say that we have given the results required by the Men and Millions Committee. We would like to state that Captain J. F. Brothers and his co-workers deserve much credit for their good work.

We extend to all Christians a cordial invitation to our Sunday school as we believe that they will enjoy themselves.

Our pastor, Rev. Henry W. Dowding, will leave for an extended European tour April 23 via the Chesapeake Line for Baltimore enroute to New York, from there he will take the White Star Line for Europe. Dr. Dowding expects to visit his sister living at Bath, England, and from there he will visit all important cities of England and France. He will be accompanied by the church board to the steamer.

CONVENTION BULLETIN BOARD

Much speech making does not make a Convention. Thinking and acting is the thing we need.

While you are apologizing for a second speech, just go along and make the speech and get done with it.

Those framing reports should consult The Annual to see what former adoptions have been carried out before making new ones.

Three smiles and a handshake for the same price as a frown. Take the former.

Don't forget that the Entertainment Committee has a burden. Help to make it lighter.

Over-eating is a dangerous thing. It may cause you to vote the wrong way on some important matter.

If you sing at home, sing at the Convention. If you don't sing at home, sing at the Convention anyway.

The Convention meets only once in two years. Certainly you can take the time to stay till the last day.

Be on time. Attend each session. See Raleigh some other time.

Be thinking about where the Convention is to meet in 1921.

Pray that the Convention may do the Lord's will, and that each attendant may go home to do His work.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Our Easter offerings still climb upward and have reached the total amount of $2,273.81. Eighty-five churches have contributed toward this amount. There are one hundred and forty churches to hear from yet. I truly hope each church in the Southern Christian Convention will make this offering. Remember friends, that this money goes to take care of the little helpless ones, and what cause could you contribute to that would reach more worthy object than the little helpless orphan child? To my mind a little child that has lost its father and mother is the most pitiful little being we have. If you had a little orphan lamb in your lot you would not turn it out to perish, but you would put yourself to a great deal of trouble to give it something to eat that it might live and grow and develop into a large sheep. How much better is the little helpless child! Give them a chance, too. See that your church makes this offering. I am counting on you.

At the close of the sixth school month the following received $1.00 for making an average of more than ninety-five:

Louise Jones, 96 8-9; Mattie Lee McKinney, 95 4-9; Earl Churchill, 95 2-3; Coy Franklin, 95 2-3; Frankie Frederick, 96 3-4; Eugenia Hilliard, 97 1-2; Thelma Thomas, 95 1-3; Vernon Sandlin, 95; Lawrence Fields, 96 2-5; Wilson Collier, 97 1-3; Lala Brady, 98 2-3; Joe Howell Jones, 96 1-6; Ella Frederick, 96.

The following made an average of over 90:

Wellons Goss, Pauline Andrews, Hubert Terrell, Irene Jones, Z. T. Jones, Evie Pierce, Eunice Bradshaw, Eliza Cheek, Hattie McKinney, Allie Lee Pierce, Marvin Franklin, Clarence McKinney, Kinsman Wicker, Burnice Morelen, Clarence Fields, Garner Hilliard, George Thomas, Swamoah Witherspoon, Walter Betts.

It does our little folks much good to get on the honor roll and they rejoice still more when they reach a general average of 95 and pull the Superintendent for $1.00.

Dear Uncle Charley: Do you think little boys are bad? Mother and daddy say they are, but I suppose that is because I ran away today. I am sending dues for the last three months.—Oliver E. Young, Jr.

I am glad to have your letter this week. It is the only one I have for the Corner. I was afraid you had forgotten "Uncle Charley." I often think of my little friends who wrote for the Corner and miss you when you fail to write.—"Uncle Charley."

(Deferred from last week)

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am another new comer to the Corner. I am a little boy nineteen months old and have lots of teeth and can talk some. I can feed the chickens for mamma. Enclosed you will find fifty cents for the orphans. When I come to see grandmother I will try to come to see you all. With love.—Raymond Eugene Geringer.

I know you are a fine little man if you feed mamma's chickens.—"Uncle Charley."

SYMPATHY

A plump little girl and a thin little bird
Were out in the meadow together.
"How cold that poor little bird must be,
Without any clothes like mine," said she,
"Although it is sunshiny weather!"

"A nice little girl is that," said he;
"But O, how cold she must be! For see,
She hasn't a single feather!
So each shivered to think of the other poor thing,
Although it was sunshiny weather.

THE STORY OF "TRAMP"

He was just a stray dog when he came one night to the house of some kind people who took him in. Later they had to move away, but they got him a home with his present owners. He had been called "Tramp," which is not a very good name for a dog that has a home. He is of no particular breed, a little bull-dog, a little of everything else—in fact, he is just a plain dog—but every one who loves dogs knows that it isn't the breed but the dog that counts.

From the very first he liked to be close by the baby and would sit for hours beside the cradle where she slept; and when she was taken out for a ride, Tramp walked sedately beside the little carriage.

One morning both master and mistress went away to do some errands, leaving the baby asleep in its bed, the two older children playing near by, and of course Tramp on guard as usual. Suddenly the two older children, both under seven, saw flames at the head of the stairs, and in another moment the whole upper floor was on fire. They screamed and ran out of the house, and the neighbors, hearing their cries, came running into the yard. They reached there just in time to see Tramp dragging the baby by its clothing. He came out the back door, then he crossed the yard, and dropped the child into a snow-bank. Brave little dog, his first thought had not been for himself, but for the baby; and seeing the danger which threatened, he had lost no time in bringing her to safety. Since that day Tramp has been considered one of the family, and the best in the house is none too good for him.—N. J. Snell, in our Dumb Animals.

THE POLITE KITTEN

Once upon a time an old mother cat called her two grown kittens and said to them: "My sons, as you are big enough to go out and seek your own fortunes, I shall set forth upon a journey I have long wished to take in search of new catnip fields. Before I go I will give you a bit of advice: Be kind and polite." So saying, the old cat bade her children farewell.

"I shall go to your farmhouse," said the black-nosed, big kitten to his little gray brother; "I shall go to your farmhouse and demand the best they have. I shall be fed upon cream every day and rest upon silken cushions. What is your plan?"

"I will go to the same farmhouse that I may be near you," answered the little gray kitten, "and I will promise the family to catch mice for them all the days of my life if they will give me a name and call me their cat."

Accordingly the black-nosed kitten walked up to the front door of the farmhouse and savagely meowed to be let in.

Soon the door opened, and a woman said gently: "What sort of a wild beast have we here? Go away; we do not need a kitten."

Then the gray kitten ventured into the farmyard, chasing butterflies, chasing his own tail, jumping up in the air to make the baby laugh. The little gray kitten played happily about all day, and then at sunset cuddled against the kitchen door and purred so loud that when the hired man brought the milk from the barn he said to the kitten: "Step in, step in, pussy, and have a saucer of milk."

The little gray kitten stepped in, washed his face, and waited politely until the farmer's wife offered him a saucer of milk.

As for the black-nosed kitten, he became the barn cat and caught mice for his living ever afterwards. And he was never known to speak politely except to his brother, Peter, the handsome house cat, who was fed on cream and allowed to sleep on silken cushions, with his mother when she returned from the happy catnip fields.—Churchman.

THE WAY TO THE MOON

When mother tucks me up at night,
She thinks I fall asleep;
But she would open wide her eyes
If back again she'd creep.
For when a lovely, shining light
Fills all my little room,
It really is a silver stair
That leads up to the moon.

I go climbing, climbing, climbing up the stairway,
When the great big world is quiet down below;
I go higher, higher, higher on the moon-beams,
'Mid the clouds that stretch above as white as snow.
I'm going to the beautifullest country,
And though it takes some time, I'll get there soon;
I go climbing, climbing, climbing,
While the fairy bells are chiming,
Till I'm at the silver doorway of the moon.

When mother says, "It's time for bed,"
I do not wear a frown;
But quickly hurry off upstairs
And warmly cuddle down.
Though mother says my eyelids close,
She must be wrong, I'm sure;
I know I tread the shining path
And reach that little door.

I go climbing, climbing, climbing up the stairway,
While the great big world is quiet down below;
I go higher, higher, higher on the moon-beams,
'Mid the clouds that stretch above as white as snow.
I'm going to the beautifullest country,
And though it takes some time, I'll get there soon;
I go climbing, climbing, climbing,
While the fairy bells are chiming,
Till I'm at the silver doorway of the moon.

MISSIONARY

PITY RUSSIA

The Missionary Review of the World carries in its last issue a letter from a Christian woman of Russia to England. While the appeal is heart-rending it lays bare the present religious situation in Soviet Russia in a marked manner. Bear in mind, reader, as you peruse the letter herewith attached that hundreds of thousands in America would have, if they could, the same conditions here as in Russia:

"The message does not suggest any possibility of human help, but is a call for intercessory prayer on the part of Christians everywhere. A few extracts from the message portray conditions in vivid terms: "Children-loving England, cast a glance on our children * * Hundreds of them are daily dying of hunger, neglect and infectious diseases. But death is not the worst. Children—masses of them—are bribed by specially good food (more rare in these hard times), by flattery, over-indulgence, theatres, dancing, and other similar attractions to renounce God, never utter His name, never pray, never go anywhere they can hear anything about Him except in blasphemy. Imagine a large company of children listening to the following speech: "Dear children, we have called you together to tell you that now everything is yours. You are the masters and have a right to all you see * * * You can take, use, do whatever you like, and need not at all mind stealing, for you can always leave off" (Exact words used.) * * * The schools are now mixed, morals indescribable, literature of the worst kind is distributed among the girls and boys, no supervision, no restraint, no religion, proper teaching is set aside, and dancing put in its place. According to the latest decree parents have no right to keep their children home! Communist schools are to take them, keep them, educate them according to their views, and lest any should escape, babies will be taken from their mothers directly after their birth.

"The educated classes are doomed to extermination, and that object is pursued with relentless cruelty. Men of science and culture, delicate women, the aged and the youthful are constantly turned out of their homes with no means of subsistence. The universities are closed or at the point of extinction, the students scattered. All expressions of opinion, all free action, all meetings and associations are forbidden, all initiative killed, the voice of conscience silenced, spies are hunting for their prey everywhere * * *

"A book and a weekly periodical are being circulated among the Russian people. The book, called THE RED GOSPEL, is a caricature of our blessed Gospel and full of blasphemous attacks on the Scripture. The periodical, THE RED CHRIST, bears the same character. Almost all other printed matter is prohibited or hidden out of sight.'"

What shall we do to stem the tide of gross materialism and worldliness now flowing over our country?

A MAN OF FAITH

In the death of Rev. Dr. A. B. Simpson at his home in Nyack, N. J., last October our country and the world lost one of the few men of really great and inspiring faith. Dr. Simpson quit a Presbyterian pulpit to found and father an organization which came later to be known throughout the world as "The Christian and Missionary Alliance." Through the agency of this Alliance, whose soul and spirit was Dr. Simpson, influences went out to all parts of the earth. He believed in prayer and laid before God the needs of missionary work as he saw and felt and was burdened with those needs. God gave him the victory and millions of money poured into the coffers of the Alliance, and missionaries went forth under the auspices of the Alliance to the uttermost parts of the earth to carry the message of Christ. A brief summary of some of the results of this one life is given in the April Missionary Review to this effect:

"The results that have followed the daring faith of this one man of God are beyond computation. His example has inspired many other similar movements and has led to an increase of consecration, prayer and giving in nearly every corner of the globe. It has been estimated that during the years of his service Dr. Simpson administered over six million dollars in foreign mission work. One hundred and eight main stations and four hundred out stations have been opened as Gospel centers in sixteen different mission fields, which contain over forty million people who depend upon this one agency for the Gospel of Christ. Over three hundred foreign missionaries and six hundred native workers are caring for one hundred and eighteen organized churches that have a present membership of over ten thousand adults, besides thousands of adherents. One hundred and forty-five Sunday schools have been established in these dark lands, in which seven thousand, six hundred and eighty-three children are enrolled. There are now two hundred and sixty-one day schools with five thousand, eight hundred and seventy-eight scholars, besides seven Bible Training Schools with one hundred and seventeen students, mainly young men, preparing to carry the Gospel to their own people. The native church abroad gave two dollars and twenty-one cents per member during the past year, and the value of mission property in foreign lands is about half a million dollars."

Dr. Simpson's life and labors are high testimony to the view held by Dwight L. Moody, namely, when a man places himself entirely and unreservedly in the hands of the Lord, to be used as He sees fit, there is simply no telling what God can and will achieve through him.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR

(J. Vineent Knight)

"Cultivating High Ideals."—Col.
3:1-4.

Our ideal is the thing we love best. Men know our ideals by the way we live, for we generally do the things we like to do best. That is why the world knows a real Christian. Their ideals are always high, and often men envy them. The real Christian should cultivate high ideals of sympathy, knowledge, purity, integrity, sacrifice and service. To do this in a successful way one must.

Recognize the Hope of His High Calling

Every successful man in law, medicine, journalism, or public ministry of any kind, looks upon his calling as the highest one that God could give him, and it is not conceit on the part of the Christians to do it. God calls for men and His call is greater than any earthly calling that men can have for making money or a great reputation. The call comes from the supreme heights of heaven, and should fill one with the greatest hope of success in life, for God will always be present with us. Our hope of this calling brightens with every step of the way, and the great need is for men to know that here is the greatest opportunity of life.

Concentrate His Power and Purpose

No creditable estimate has ever been placed upon the power of one's purpose. Paul emphasized the power of unity in one's purpose. "This one thing I do." We need to recognize the value of having an undaunted purpose, and in our search find the very highest ideal possible. It may be in athletics, social service, Christian education, mission work, or some form of ministry. Whatever that great life purpose be, all the powers of the life should be concentrated thereto.

Press Toward the Mark

There is much to be found in the power of persistency. Too many of our Christian Endeavor workers are too easily discouraged. They become discouraged and quit when the real thing needed is persistency. He who becomes discouraged and doubts misses his ideal, because he is defeated in his purpose before he undertakes the work. Matters not how our ideal is so long we keep our eyes on the goal ahead, and press in the direction our great ambition lies. Decide early, Christian Endeavorer, just what your greatest ideal in the Christian life should be, and recognize that it is the greatest thing in the world that God would have you do—concentrate all the powers of your purpose to that work, and press forward with all your might in the cultivation of those high ideals, remembering that whatever our hands find to do should be done with all our might.

"LEST WE FORGET"

The time is rapidly approaching when our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies throughout the bounds of the Southern Christian Convention will be gathering in their Annual Conventions. Is your school or Society alive, active, and getting ready for the final reports? Do you want to see your school in the front ranks, or would you prefer to have it in a dying condition, for the lack of your help? I am taking it, for granted, that every one who reads this article, belongs to some Sunday school or Christian Endeavor Society, and I want you to get busy now in your individual field "lest you forget." "The victory may depend on you." Wouldn't it be fine if we could have every school and Society represented? We can do it. Practically every school and Society has been closed more or less since our last Conventions, but we can overcome this to a great extent if we get busy now; and with a full attendance every Sunday from now until the Conventions meet, our reports will show up O. K. The Board of Religious Education is ready and anxious to aid you in any way possible. Call on us for anything, that may be of help to you. Line up for the biggest and best Children's Day in June.

BRIDGES

On April 4, 1920, Johnnie W. Bridges, aged twenty-one years, eight months and fourteen days, died at his home near Antioch Christian church. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. W. Bridges and was a bright and intelligent young man and beloved by all who knew him. He was an expert salesman, traveling for a firm in Norfolk, Va., and though very young, was making success in the business life. He made a profession of Christ at the early age of nine years and united with Antioch Christian church. He will be missed by his church, home and community, but our loss has no doubt been his gain. He said to his dear mother several times before he died: "I am saved, I am saved." This is consoling to his dear parents and many friends. Funeral services were conducted at the church and the remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery. Besides his father and mother he leaves one brother, Hobby Bridges, Norfolk, Va.; two sisters, Mrs. L. H. Horne, Zuni, Va., and Miss Martha Lorine Bridges, Windsor, Va. May the Lord comfort the dear bereaved ones.

UZZELL

Mrs. Mary M. Uzzell, wife of L. E. Uzzell, died at her home near Antioch Christian church, Isle of Wight, Va., April 18, 1920, aged forty years, five months and twenty days. She was taken ill and died very suddenly, not living quite an hour. She was a good Christian wife, mother, neighbor and friend. She was one of the most faithful members of Antioch Christian church and will be greatly missed in the church, Sunday school, neighborhood and home. She had a good and happy home here and is now, no doubt, living in the beautiful home beyond the clouds where sorrow and death can never enter. She leaves a devoted husband, two daughters: Mrs. M. T. Barrett, and Miss Mateline Uzzell.

The funeral services were conducted at her church by her pastor and her remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery. The bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of their many friends.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

TOWARD THE FIFTH MILE

With this issue the present Editor starts in his fifth year as Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It seems only yesterday that the Convention called us to the task. The days have passed rapidly. We have endeavored to do our best at all times. The work has not been without its pleasures and displeasures. Our efforts have been, and will ever be, to make the best possible paper. We appreciate very keenly the confidence placed in us and we start on the new term with renewed hope, with a greater spirit of optimism, and sensible of the responsibilities upon us. As we journey along we ask for no greater privilege than service and covet no great assistance than the prayers of the Brotherhood.

WE APOLOGIZE TO RALEIGH

We understand that the Raleigh church misunderstood our editorial—"Convention Headquarters Again"—in last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We certainly wrote the article in a vein of humor and had no intention whatever of giving any offense. We endeavored to review the two places—Burlington and Raleigh—as to their fitness for denominational headquarters.

We were moved to make this review because of a news note that appeared in the News and Observer on Sunday morning, April 25, which we presumed was caused to appear on the approaching hour of the Convention's opening.

What we said is said and we have no power to withdraw it, or any misunderstanding that it has caused. We can only repeat that we did not, in any way, mean to give offense and are deeply grieved if any member of the Raleigh church feels hurt over what we said concerning the work at Raleigh.

We apologize to Raleigh. We have no power of making them accept our sincerity, but we have it and know that the Raleigh people are too big in heart, liberal in spirit, and gracious in generosity to hold in mind and heart any offense that they may have taken through any misinterpretation of what we meant.

HAPPENINGS OF THE CONVENTION

The Southern Christian Convention met in its twenty-sixth session with the First Christian Church, Raleigh, N. C., on Tuesday night, April 27, 1920, at 8:00 o'clock. The body was called together by Dr. W. W. Staley, President, Suffolk, Va. Dr. W. S. Long, Chapel Hill, N. C., led the Convention in the prayer.

The committees were appointed as follows:

Credentials—I. A. Luke, W. E. Lindsay, Rev. R. L. Williamson; Press—Rev. J. P. Barrett, E. L. Moffitt, Rev. C. B. Riddle; Finance—K. B. Johnson, C. A. Hines, L. R. Jones; Nominations—C. D. West, D. R. Fonville, Rev. C. E. Newman; Resolutions—Rev. L. E. Smith, Rev. Herbert Scholz, W. P. Lawrence; Appointments—J. A. Williams, A. B. Farmer, Rev. J. L. Foster.

President Staley's address was "The Convention Outlook," which is published in full at the close of this brief sketch of the Convention's happenings.

The Convention was saddened by the report of a telegram announcing the sudden death of Rev. E. K. McCord, acting mission secretary, Dayton, Ohio. Special prayer was offered, led by Dr. L. E. Smith, Norfolk, Va.

The Convention sermon was preached by Evangelist A. Victor Lightbourne, who used a theme, "The Sacrament of Life." It was listened to with rapt attention. After the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered and home assignments made.

- WEDNESDAY MORNING

The Wednesday morning session was featured by reports of the Field Committee on the Men and Millions Forward Movement. The report showed 222 life-work recruits secured during the campaign, 2,589 tithers, and 2,522 members added to the Church. The money so far raised in the campaign is $1,724,172.25 with 94 churches as yet reporting nothing and many of the churches having made only a partial report.

It was decided to continue the present officers and to continue the essential features of the Movement perpetually and to carry the message of the Movement in every church of the Brotherhood. From now until July 1 is designated as Consecration Period, during which time the field officers of the Movement will visit every church not having so far reached its quota in the drive and help them put it over.

The morning session also heard the report of the Executive Committee, of the Revision Committee on principles and government, and of the Committee on Temperance. The report on Temperance was submitted by Rev. J. W. Holt, Burlington, N. C.

Following the report on Temperance Rev. R. L. Davis, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of North Carolina, gave an address on world prohibition.

Motion offered by Dr. J. O. Atkinson to appoint a committee to recommend a definite plan for Ministerial Relief.

Dr. N. G. Newman read the report of the Revision Committee, the work approved and the Committee continued with the same power.

Report of Treasurer W. C. Wicker was read. Total funds handled, $84,000.00. Moved that the report be referred to the Finance Committee.

Secretary Johnson read the report of the Executive Committee and matters needing attention therein referred to a Special Committee.

During the Wednesday morning period of the Woman's Board of the Convention was also in session in a separate room. We were not privileged to be present but the following was reported as part of the happenings:

Following the president's address Mrs. W. T. Walters spoke on "Missions;" Mrs. J. J. Lincoln, "Jesus and Women;" Mrs. C. H. Rowland, "Woman's Interest in the Kingdom," and Mrs. W. R. Mitchell on "The Women of our Church."

The Conference Presidents, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Mrs. W. T. Walters, Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Miss Minnie Edge, made brief statements regarding the work of the State Conferences.

The President of the Woman's Board recommended to the Convention the publication of a monthly magazine by the Board to be known as "The Christian Woman's Monthly Magazine," the first issue to appear in September of this year. The Financial Goals of the Woman's Boards were fixed at $25,000.00, which is a considerable increase over their previous goals.

The afternoon session of the Woman's Convention was given over to the subject of Missions. Dr. J. W. Harrell, during the session, spoke on "Our Women and the Home Field," and Dr. J. O. Atkinson on "Our Women and the Future."

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

The chief work of the Convention Wednesday afternoon was the considering of the report of the Board of Missions, made by Rev. J. O. Atkinson, Secretary. Col. J. E. West spoke on "What We Are Trying to Do," while Rev. G. O. Lankford spoke on "Our Missionary Effort and Its Benefit to the Local Church." For fear that we should fail to do justice to the report rendered we dare not quote the undertakings of the Board lest we should overlook some, but take it for granted that some official will give a digest of the program undertaken.

However, one of the principal things considered by the Board was the undertaking of definite work in China, the same to be carried on and nurtured by the Missionary interests of the Southern Christian Convention. The Board reviewed in connection with this work, the exceedingly small salaries paid to ministers and missionaries. One of the strongest notes was struck, it seems to us, when Col. J. E. West declared that he believed that the greatest need of the Christian Church was more and better trained ministers and also more salaries for them. The Convention certainly approved more ample support for our ministers and urged the local churches, as well as the Convention officials, to see that every church do its full duty by its minister.

EVENING SESSION

The Convention and the Woman's Board Conference met in joint session. The session was given over to the presentation of the great theme of Christian Missions. The devotional services was lead by the first president of the Woman's Missionary Board, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, who was followed by an address on "Woman's New Day of Christian Service," by Mrs. W. A. Harper, the present president of the Woman's Board.

Mrs. Harper declared: "The submergence of women till now is one of the anomalies of history. This is essentially a new day in its understanding of woman's place." She said there never was a need for the so-called "new woman" and that she received less pity by the genuine woman than her brothers accorded her. "The service of women," she said, "will be Christian in the complete sense, they will minister to all of life, not only the spiritual but to the mental, the physical, and the social as well." In conclusion she declared the basis of all social service was not in the gift or service itself, but in the sharing of the sense of brotherhood, and ministering not in their own name but in the name of Christ.

The concluding address of the evening was made by the Rev. Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor of the Third Christian church of Norfolk, Va., whose theme was "The Missionary Challenge." Dr. Smith spoke passionately the theme of Christian missions under the four great heads of obedience, prayer, faith, and salvation. He declared that he was glad he lived in this present time when every man, woman, and child of the Christian Church has been challenged to do full duty for the cause of the Kingdom.

Other features of the evening service were a piano solo by Sam Davis, until recently a moving picture expert but since his conversion in a "Billy" Sunday meeting, has been associated with Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne in the conduct of evangelistic meetings, and by a solo "He Lifted Me," sung by the Rev. Charles Butler.

The evening closed with a Missionary Pageant given by the Junior Missionary Society of the Raleigh Christian church. The play was entitled "America for Christ," and the splendid manner in which the young people of the church presented this sketch merits much applause.

THURSDAY MORNING

The Thursday morning session of the Southern Christian Convention heard an address by Mr. John King of Suffolk, Va., on "Tithing. During his discourse he brought out the fact that tithing in time and talent, as well as money, was needed in the advancement of the Kingdom.

Three items from the Woman's Board were carried over to this morning's session of the Convention. The first of these was the report of the president of the board, Mrs. W. A. Harper, to the Convention regarding the work of the women during the last term. By a comparison of the results of the woman's work for the last several years, and the rapidity of their increasing goals, Mrs. Harper showed the remarkable progress of this work and its vital importance in the life of the Church.

Mrs. C. H. Rowland then rendered a discourse on "Woman's Interest in the Kingdom," in which she very vividly brought out the large place the women of the Church occupied with reference to home and foreign missions. Service and sacrifice was her theme, both of which she said was characteristic of women and appealed to their nature.

The concluding speaker of the morning was Miss Bessie I. Holt of Burlington, N. C., who gave a heart-to-heart talk on the young people's work. She declared that the young people were the hope of the future with reference to the continued progress of the Church, and it was the duty of the Church, the parents, and the ministers to give their time and attention to getting the young people to realize they belonged to God, to interest them in the Missionary Societies, the Sunday school, in the study of the Bible, to keep their bodies pure—temples for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, and last but not least the investment of their lives for Christ.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The afternoon session heard the report of the President of the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage, Mr. W. K. Holt of Burlington, N. C., in which the Convention take a deep and abiding interest providing for its support through offerings by the Sunday schools, the churches, and individuals. The report of President Holt showed the Orphanage to be free of all debt, with sixty children, and with a neat sum in the bank, and with assets in addition to this of $75,000.00 to $100,000.00. The plans are now maturing to erect a new building to accommodate sixty more children at the Orphanage and to this plan the Convention gave its hearty endorsement.

Superintendent Charles D. Johnston of the Orphanage, delivered an address entitled "Ministering to Others," with applications to the Orphanage, greatly accentuated as it is now by the large number of orphan children due to the deaths of parents caused by Influenza during the past two years.

COMMITTEE ON SUPERANNUATION

The Special Committee on Superannuates appointed made the following recommendations:

1. That the Convention appoint or elect a permanent board on superannuation, one member from each Conference.
2. That the various Conferences turn their superannuated funds into a common fund along with a similar fund to be raised by the Men and Millions Forward Movement to be known as the Convention Superannuated Fund.
3. That at the age of seventy, or earlier in case of disability, to be decided in each case by the board, all ministers who have been actively engaged in the ministry for the twenty years preceding thereto, or at the discretion of the board, shall receive annuities from the fund as follows: (a) unmarried ministers $200 a year, (b) married ministers $300 per year, (c) widows $200 a year during their widowhood and membership in the Christian Church, and dependents, in each case, to be decided by the board.
4. That the committee on supernannuation in the various Conferences be kept intact so as to recommend to this board those worthy of help in the several Conferences, and help in every way possible in properly and justly administering this fund.
5. That the amounts herein named be increased from time to time as funds are available and the needs demand.

CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS

It was definitely decided to establish Convention headquarters and a special committee was appointed to work out the details and report later. The two churches bidding for these headquarter offices are Burlington, N. C., and Raleigh, N. C.

The Board of Publication made report, the same being read by Dr. J. P. Barrett, Columbus, Ga. Regardless of the extreme high cost of print paper and all mechanical work going into THE CHRISTIAN SUN, there was no effort made to reduce the size of the paper nor to increase the subscription price. The commission basis as salary for the Editor was discontinued and straight salary set of $2,000.00 per year.

EVENING SESSION

The evening session was opened by Rev. W. M. Jay, Suffolk, Va., who conducted the devotional exercises. Dr. A. B. Kendall, pastor of the Washington, D. C., church, sang the campaign song of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, of which song he is the composer, the congregation joining in on the choruses.

The feature of the session was the address of Governor T. W. Bickett. Dr. W. A. Harper, President of Elon College, introduced the Governor.

Governor Bickett said that he had never learned to say "no" to the call of the people of North Carolina for service, and that particularly was this true with reference to the churches.

"When the war began," declared the Governor, "the duties of the office of Governor of North Carolina were multiplied many fold. Certainly ten times as much work is developed upon the Governor in times of war as in times of peace. The Governor is held responsible by the Washington authorities for keeping his state in line for the prosecution of the war. It would have been impossible for me to have discharged the numerous and heavy duties and obligations that devolved upon me if it had not been for the enthusiastic and consecrated support that I received from every nook and corner of the State of the churches of North Carolina. The churches believed that we were fighting a righteous war, and we should have given up in despair in North Carolina and in the nation except for the consecrated efforts of the ministers of North Carolina, and of the gospel of North Carolina. I shall go down to my grave with a heart full of gratitude for these great spiritual dynamoes.

"I believe in the Church," declared Governor Bickett, "and I believe in its missions. I believe in education. I believe that ignorance is the mother of poverty, and the handmaid of crime; that knowledge is the gateway to truth, and that truth is the gateway to power." He said that he was educated in a Christian college, and was glad that he had been under such an influence. "Christianity," he said, "without education will produce bigotry. Education without Christianity will produce Germany. If there was ever a time when liberty, truth, justice, and mercy called for Christian citizenship that hour is at hand."

DR. COFFIN'S ADDRESS

Following the address of Governor Bickett the President of the American Christian Convention, Dr. Frank G. Coffin of Albany, Mo., spoke on "Christian Education for the Day." Dr. Coffin insisted that there are four great elements in education making it worth while, the motive, the mind, the message, and the man. He declared that the sole education that is worth while is the education of the soul, and pleaded not only for the continuance of the educational program of the denominations as exemplified in Christian colleges, but for the saturation of the whole educational system of the public schools from the primary and grammar grades to the great universities of the State with the spirit of Christian truth.

The concluding number of the evening was a song service given by the children of the Christian Orphanage. The songs and recitations given were of the highest order and nothing seemed to touch the members of the Convention so much as the spirit of this moment. An offering was made which amounted to $110.00.

FRIDAY MORNING

The Board of Trustees of Elon College presented their report and recommendations. The recommendations were thoroughly gone over and all adopted.

The report of the Board of Education sets forth the Convention's conviction as to the needs of Christian education in a democracy since through such education lies our progress, endowed in the formative days with the spirit of unselfish altruistic service.

In speaking of Elon College the report reads as follows:

"The pride of this Convention's heart educationally is our own Elon now fast approaching her thirtieth anniversary commencement. This institution conceived in love and hope, brought forth in poverty and devotion, baptized with the high purpose to provide men and women with the privileges of higher education under positive Christian influences, had through these thirty years justified our every hope and rewarded our every sacrifice. With the pride of humility and gratitude for service rendered we point to Elon as the largest single contribution our Brotherhood has made in constructive statesmanship to the Kingdom of God.

"In 1889, the year Elon was chartered, we had seventy-two ministers, two of whom were college graduates. We now have 100 ministers and sixty-one of them are college graduates. In 1889 we had 17 licentiates, none of whom were college men. Now we have 22 licentiates and one-half of them are college men.

"The distribution of the 368 full graduates is indication too as to the faithfulness with which our college has lived up to her high profession of Christian service.

"In this day too when the materialistic tendencies of the times are being lamented, it is highly suggestive to consider how the Elon graduates including the class of 1920 and those in universities for further preparation have been distributed professionally for each of the three decades of her history."

The Convention also expressed its gratitude to the Church for having responded so liberally to the Standardization Fund, which now totals $381,000.00 added to the permanent funds of the College as endowment. The statement was also made that the present assets of the College were $1,010,465.96.

The Convention made very plain its attitude with reference to standardizing agencies and used this vigorous language: "It is our conviction that more things than buildings, equipment, and money are required to make a real college, and these Elon has in abundance, with her scholarly faculty of Christian men and women, her Christian atmosphere of altruism and brotherhood, her thirty years of proved service in the cause of humanity and of God. We resent any attempt on the part of standardizing agencies anywhere to reduce so vital an institution as a Christian College to a more perfunctory sum in arithmetic. Issues of the Kingdom must not be dealt with in such Philistine fashion."

It was decided to use the money that shall come to Elon through the Men and Millions Forward Movement for its equipment.

It was voted to pool all the ministerial educational funds of the Conferences at Elon College and for the Board of Trustees of the College to use these funds as in its judgment seemed wise and for the interests of the Church.

The Convention decided to found an educational institution for the Georgia and Alabama Conferences, and appointed a committee on charter and location, consisting of W. A. Harper, chairman; L. E. Smith, and G. O. Lankford.

The Convention rose to its feet in memory of the life and work of four ministers who have fallen during the last two years of membership of the Convention. The brethren were Dr. W. T. Herndon, Asheboro, N. C.; Rev. L. I. Cox, Elon College, N. C.; Rev. H. A. Albright, Seagrove, and Rev. J. W. Willingham, Phoenix, Ala., and of two distinguished laymen, Trustees of Elon College, who have died in the same time, Mr. Willis J. Lee, Bennett Creek, Va., and Mr. D. S. Farmer, News Ferry, Va.

The Convention officers were elected as follows:

President, Dr. W. W. Staley; Vice-President, Dr. J. O. Atkinson; Secretary, Dr. I. W. Johnson; Assistant Secretary, Rev. J. F. Morgan; Treasurer, Dr. W. C. Wicker; Editor of Christian Sun, Rev. C. B. Riddle; Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

The Convention voted that Elon College should accept all life-work recruits on the same basis as ministerial students.

Upon resolutions and adoption the Convention rose to its feet as an expression of appreciation of the hospitality accorded the members of the Convention by the Raleigh congregation, and of the grateful appreciation of the publicity accorded its sessions by the local press.

(We are conscious of the fact that we have not covered all the good things undertaken and endorsed by the Convention, but to get all in a session of that nature, is a task beyond us.)

THE CONVENTION OUTLOOK

(Address before the Southern Christian Convention by President Rev. W. W. Staley, D. D.)

THE CHIEF function of this Convention is to organize and direct Conferences and administer institutions. Conferences would remain isolated and disjointed units, as a Kingdom force, without the Convention. Their union in ONE BODY gives strength and efficiency. The Southern Convention fosters FOUR INSTITUTIONS: Publications, Missions, Education, Orphanage; and in doing its work, looks in FOUR directions. It looks backward, inward, upward, and outward. The backward look is historic; the inward look is a revelation; the upward look is spiritual, and the outward look is progressive. The four institutions, in their origin and development, are historic, and can be seen by looking backward.

I. PUBLICATIONS

The Christian Sun was founded in 1844 and is seventy-six years of age. Publicity precedes action and achievement. The Scriptures announced the coming and mission of Jesus. The Bible was the ORGAN of the KINGDOM, telling of the "Wonderful Counsellor, the MIGHTY GOD, the EVERLASTING FATHER, the Prince of Peace." The Christian Sun is the ORGAN of this Convention and, without it, other institutions would suffer or die. Ministers and laymen have not appreciated the value of the Church paper. The press is the silent force that fashions public sentiment, inspires action, and determines the course of history. It puts its ear to the door of the cottage and the palace, the mill and the office, the home and the church, and reports the thoughts and plans of the world. It raises up and casts down men and measures. The Church paper is to the Kingdom what the press is to the world; and it deserves the liberal support of the Convention and the people.

II. MISSIONS

This was made a part of the Convention program in 1887—33 years ago. Rev. D. F. Jones and wife went to Japan in that year and the work has advanced, steadily, at home and in foreign lands, since that beginning; and the prospect is that the Convention will, in the future, raise FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS a year for MISSIONS. Missions takes its logical place, after publicity, to extend the Gospel to "every creature." The Convention has no mission unless it is missionary, and "the field is the world." That concept of the Kingdom opens up geography, history, science, humanity, and endless opportunity. The Christian religion is the only religion that is missionary with a benevolent motive.

III. EDUCATION

Elon College opened its doors in 1890—thirty years ago. Education is essential for the work of the Kingdom. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ." A Church college is useless unless it aids in building up the Kingdom. It is primarily and fundamentally a Christian institution. A little plan for endowment, by asking the Conferences to contribute a small sum from each church, annually, was adopted by the Convention held in this church in 1898—twenty-two years ago, and it has been copied by other denominations. That plan now yields $3,000.00 per year, which is 3 per cent on ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS. Half of the active ministers in the Conferences composing this Convention are graduates of Elon College, and 90 per cent of the churches are served by them. These facts discover to us the value of the institution.

IV. THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

Its doors were opened in 1907—thirteen years ago. It takes its place, logically, in the field of Christian benevolence; opens a channel through which all can work, even poor mothers and little children—and they do. Such institutions do not exist beyond the range of Christian society, and it is the Church at work for the unfortunate. It develops human sympathy, Christian benevolence, meets universal approval, and secures financial support. It puts Christian life into other lives, demonstrates the reality of Christianity, and keeps alive the spirit of real help.

In these four departments, the work of the Convention is large, permanent, and increasing in usefulness; and a fifth—a Christian hospital—may some day be founded and supported by the Convention.

The inward look is a revelation of our weakness and of our strength. The recent campaign for MEN and MILLIONS has discovered great resources of capable men and money. The power of numbers and the value of littles has been made plain to all who have taken this great campaign to heart. It has revealed, also, many willing spirits who have not been called into active service before. The workers have looked upward for help and the spiritual life of the Church has been touched by a new impulse and a new power. An altar has been erected with no fire under, but the flame from above has lighted the wood and consumed the sacrifice. The inward look has been a revelation of latent ability for service, and means not dedicated to the use of the Kingdom. The backward look, the inward look, the upward look, have united to give a forward vision that has brightened the future with a greater purpose than we had ever known. The outlook is brighter, fuller, more inviting than the past has been.

Three things loom large in the outlook for the Convention:

FIRST—Lay-Activity. Men and women in the Church have learned to work. They now understand the meaning of "Son, go work today in my vineyard," and they are more willing than ever before to obey. They have learned that "we are laborers together with God," and they are happy in this partnership with the Lord. A new day of lay-activity is dawning, and in the noontide of every-member service the world will be brought to Christ.

SECOND—Systematic Giving. Tithing is systematic as well as Scriptural. Giving is good, but systematic giving is better. Weekly or monthly offerings, through envelopes, introduces a system that has its reflex action upon the mind and heart of the giver. The very thought of it, and the habit of it, improves the soul. Giving is the one thing that makes us like God. "God so loved that He gave."

THIRD—The Evangelistic Spirit. Working and giving develop the spiritual in man, and the church membership, in the future, will have more real soul in it, in worship and work. Men and women will give more time and prayer to soul-saving, and that will enrich the spiritual life of all. These three things will improve the institutions of the Church by improving the constituency of the Convention. The Convention has a broader view of the world and its obligation to the world, and that will intensify its love and its service for others. The Convention can function best through its institutions, leaving details to Conferences; and the Conferences can function through the churches, and churches through its members. All great organizations rest on individual men and women, and hence personal character includes all the rest. Jesus is the one individual character that inspires all good men. This Convention was organized in 1856, but its outlook was never so bright as at the present time, and this prospect imposes greater obligations and responsibilities upon the leaders and the members. They must be more intelligent, more spiritual, more industrious, and more liberal. Consecration is the great word—consecration of talents, time, and money to the WORK of the KINGDOM.

REPORT ON THE MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT TO THE S. C. C.

The Men and Millions Forward Movement has just begun. From all over the Church comes the insistent plea that it be conserved in some form and that this session of the Convention provide for this very thing. To those whose vision and suffrage brought the Movement into existence and to those who have labored as best they could on its behalf this plea is a most satisfying evidence of our Father's leadership in it all.

History

The history of the Movement is set forth in the literature that has been widely circulated, but since this report will become a permanent record a brief statement of its origin will be in order.

On December 9, 1919, Col. J. E. West was speaking before the Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference in session at Portsmouth, Va. Under inspiration he declared it his conviction that the hour had arrived for every member of the Christian Church to be given an opportunity to contribute to the general enterprises of the Church through an every member canvass and for an effort to be made to interest all in the Kingdom's work.

On December 12, 1919, an unofficial group of our workers at the suggestion of the Mission Board gathered in Suffolk, Va., to consider the matter. This group memorialized the Conference and Convention Executive Committees to launch such a Movement.

On December 30, the Conference Executive Committees of the Conferences met in Suffolk and recommended to the Convention Executive Committee that such a Movement be undertaken. That very day the Convention Executive Committee approved and the Movement that has stirred our people as they have never been moved before began.

On January 12, 1920, in Raleigh, the Movement was finally organized and the actual work undertaken. In the days since what has transpired is comparable to a spiritual revolution in the Church. Democracy in religion matched democracy in nation, in a genuine popular uprising to make the world safe for the cause of Christ through a co-operative effort to propagate that cause.

OFFICERS OF THE MOVEMENT

The officers of the Movement were elected as follows:

Campaign Directors

- Dr. W. W. Staley, Chairman, Suffolk, Va.
- Dr. I. W. Johnson, Secretary, Suffolk, Va.
- Congressman E. E. Holland, Dewey Hotel, Washington, D. C.
- Senator J. E. West, Senate Chamber, Richmond, Va.
- Hon. K. B. Johnson, Cardenas, N. C.

Campaign Committee

- Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Chairman, Field Secretary, Elon College, N. C.
- Rev. C. B. Riddle, Secretary, Speakers' Bureau and Advertising, Burlington, N. C.
- Dr. W. A. Harper, Organization and Publicity, Elon College, N. C.
- Superintendent C. D. Johnston, Executive Secretary, Elon College, N. C.
- Mr. C. D. West, Treasurer, Newport News, Va.

THE FINANCIAL GOALS

The financial goals were set at $2,000,000 apportioned as follows:

The Special Mission Fund, already raised.....	$ 125,000.00
The Elon Standardization Fund, already raised....	375,000.00
From Regular Sources, including Conference Apportionments, Missionary Association, Woman's Missionary Societies, and for the Orphanage	250,000.00
For Church Extension, to be raised in the local Churches, expended there, and reported to the annual Conferences	500,000.00
New money in this Campaign to be subscribed during Consecration Week	750,000.00
Total.....	$2,000,000.00

The new money to be raised in the Campaign was tentatively to be distributed as follows:

1. For Missions, Home and Foreign.....	40%
2. For Christian Education, consisting of.....	40%
(a) Loan Fund for Ministerial Education.
(b) Founding an Educational Institution for the Georgia and Alabama Conferences.
(c) Elon College.
3. The Christian Sun	5%
4. The Christian Orphanage	5%
5. The Care of Our Veteran Ministers, Their Widows, and Orphans	5%
6. The Board of Religious Education for the Promotion of Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Work	3%
7. For the Southern Christian Convention.....	2%
Total.....	100%

It has been made plain to every one, however, that the Convention itself could revise this tentative schedule in any manner it might elect.

THE MOVEMENT OBJECTIVES

The objectives of the Movement were set as follows:

1. One per cent of our total membership in some line of definite Christian service as a life-work, such as the ministry, or in preparation for it.
2. Ten per cent of our total membership enrolled as tithers.
3. A ten per cent increase in our membership this year.
4. One hundred per cent of our membership subscribing to the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

HOW IT WAS TO BE DONE

Team-work was from the very beginning known to be the only hope of the Movement's success. This principle was applied first of all to the field officers, whose duties were defined as follows:

(a) Field Officers

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, as Chairman, presides at the regular Thursday morning counsel-meetings of the Committee, and as Field Secretary keeps in touch with all the departments, aids in the execution of their plans, delivers the message of the Movement in strategic places, is to put on preliminary canvasses in a few Churches in advance of the general canvass, will work especially for Life-Recruits, and is the general field man of the Movement.

Rev. C. B. Riddle, as Secretary, keeps the records of the regular Thursday morning counsel-meetings of the Committee, as Secretary of the Speakers' Bureau, is responsible for the delivery of the message of the Movement by the spoken word to all Conventions and to every Church, and as Secretary of Advertising gives out all press notices and does all the advertising of the Movement through newspapers and posters.

W. A. Harper, as Secretary of Organization and Publicity, is responsible for the plan of organization, for the appointment of and training of the workers, and for the production of the literature of the Campaign.

Superintendent Charles D. Johnston, as Executive Secretary, is auditor of accounts during the campaign and collector of the funds after they are raised.

Mr. C. D. West is the permanent treasurer of the Movement.

(b) Organization Officers

An organization was then provided for each Conference, for each of thirty-five regional districts, and for each local Church. In all these units recognition was carefully provided for ministers, laymen, and lay-women.

(c) Training Conferences

These organization officers were trained in a group of our pastors, a rally for each Conference, and a rally for each district. The District leaders were to carry the educational feature directly to the local Church. In addition a final training Conference was held on plans for the final drive attended by the district leaders. Considering the health and weather conditions prevalent, each of these gatherings was a signal expression of the people's interest.

(d) The Spoken Word

The Secretary of the Speakers' Bureau by a Flying Squadron had a message of inspiration delivered in every Church. The Four-Minute Speakers did splendid work in the local churches.

(e) Literature

Through the literature mentioned below sentiment and inspiration were provided in every congregation. The following literature was issued and sent out for distribution:

In addition to the literature mailed out, we have on the average sent out 1,500 personal letters each week giving directions for the conduct of the various drives and stimulating zeal for and interest in the cause.

COST OF CAMPAIGN

The Executive Secretary reports that the Campaign has so far cost $12,801.11.

WHAT HAS BEEN ACCOMPLISHED

All reports are not in yet. The local leaders have been so desirous of getting beyond their quotas in all the objectives that they have withheld sending in what they have done in some instances. They will report later and the results will be published in The Christian Sun and in pamphlet form for distribution. We give here what has been reported, though all financial credits will have to be compared with the cards to be sent to the Executive Secretary before we can be sure of their accuracy:

Life-Work Recruits	217
Tithers	2,589
Additions to the Church	2,522
Regular Sources	1,700
Life-Dedication Week	822

Money Raised

Special Mission Campaign	$128,000.00
Elon Standardization Fund	381,600.00
From Regular Sources (to come in annually).....	250,000.00
For Church Extension (to be reported annually)....	500,000.00
During Consecration Week	464,572.25
Total	$1,724,172.25

This leaves $275,827.75 to be raised to complete the $2,000,000.00 goal. Some of this we know has been provided, but it has not been reported.

COMPLETING THE WORK

We recommend that the Field Officers with the Organization Forces and such assistance as they shall need carry on the work of the Movement till every Church is reached and that this work be completed by July 1, 1920. Let us call the months in between, Consecration Months.

FURTHER RECOMMENDATIONS

We recommend further that the Men and Millions Forward Movement organization be kept in tact as far as possible until the next session of the Convention and that continued effort be made to conserve the work undertaken during the campaign and that the organization be encouraged to develop the spiritual interest of the Church and Kingdom during the next biennium,

ADVANTAGES OF CONSERVING THE MOVEMENT

The advantages of conserving this Movement are many. In the first place, it will be an injury to any local church that has been unable through its own leaders to function in this Movement to be let alone in its defeat. We can render no finer service in genuine Christian Brotherhood than to give to these brethren of ours the stimulus of a great undertaking well done.

When the present objectives have all been realized, the Movement through its organization, can turn its attention to such other items of progressive Church work as increasing the circulation of The Christian Sun, inducing all members to unite with the church where they live, following up the Life-Work Recruits, formulating plans for utilizing the Four-Minute Speakers as a constant force in the local Church, and in many other ways.

FINALLY

In conclusion, we would express profound gratitude to our Heavenly Father that He ever put it into the hearts of our leaders to launch this Movement. We wish to thank our leaders for entrusting to us, in our weakness, the conduct of this matchless cause. And we wish further to record our deep appreciation for the fine spirit of co-operation and sympathy which has greeted us in our plans on every hand, not only from our ministers but also from our laymen and lay-women. We cannot individualize here, but God knows the devotion and sacrifice that have made possible the success we have as a people achieved and in that Book that never knows an error in its records each faithful heart has received that credit for duty well done which shall never cease to gladden and rejoice throughout eternity.

HELP SOMEBODY TODAY

“Look all around you, find some one in need,
Though it be little a neighborly deed.
Many are waiting a kind, loving word,
Thou hast a message, O let it be heard.

“Many have burdens too heavy to bear,
Grief is the portion of some everywhere.
Some are discouraged and weary in heart;
Some one the journey to Heaven should start.

“Help somebody today, somebody along life's way;
Let sorrow be ended, the friendless befriended,
Oh, help somebody today!”

CHURCH PAPER AND CHURCH PEOPLE

C. D. S. F., Virginia—I love to read THE SUN better every year that I take it. I don't ask any questions about what the cost is; I take it just the same.

G. C. B., Alabama—My wife cannot get along without THE SUN. She has read the paper a number of years. We don't want to miss a single copy.

It is an easy matter for a pastor to fall into the habit of doing what his people demand of him. To do so is all right, provided it is the forward step.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

POUNDED

At our April appointment at New Elams the good people of that place began pounding their pastor on Saturday and continued the attacks, intermittently, but at times, with much vehemence, until we were compelled to leave the community for our other appointment Sunday afternoon. Space here forbids the itemized inventory which includes flour, hams, sugar, coffee, syrup, cereals, all manners of canned fruits and vegetables, a few articles of wearing apparel, and a purse of $11.50.

This is our first year with these people, but their love and loyalty, expressed in their devotion to church and pastor readily responding to the Kingdom's demands, as they understand them, make serving a joy.

Brother S. M. Rowland and his good wife were visiting us the week-end mentioned above. Consequently, we were pounded "on every side." They having brought us a nice ham a supply of butter, and a new axe complete with handle (what's the suggestion?)

However, aside from their gifts, the visits of these two dear Christian friends always mean pleasure and profit to me.

The Lord help us to be more worthy of our place among such faithful and generous co-workers and friends.

B. J. HOWARD.

NORFOLK, VA.

It was my privilege to spend last Sunday in Norfolk where I attended church as I usually do on the Sabbath. It was the Third Christian church which is located in one of the best resident sections of the city. To say that I enjoyed the services goes without saying, but I want to say it anyhow through the columns of your paper. I had heard before that this was one of the most active churches in the city and I am sure now there can be no doubt about it. They have a wonderful organization, thoroughly departmentized and every department functioning. The Sunday school was crowded. At the eleven o'clock service Rev. Victor Lightbourne, evangelist, preached. He was completing a two weeks' meeting, which I understand was a great success. I have heard many of the country's leading evangelists but few whose presentation of the gospel is more convincing than that of this man. Mr. Lightbourne is a comparatively young man, wonderfully well versed in the Scriptures, educated, of striking personality and a forcible speaker.

At the evening service the church which I judge seats something over five hundred, was packed to the doors. Chairs were brought in from a neighboring church but these were not sufficient and some were compelled to stand. While the sermon was a masterpiece of power, the music was equally good.

In fact, I have not heard in many a day such singing as I heard at this service. These people certainly know how to sing, but maybe the man at the piano had something to do with it—a blind musician, Sam Davis. I learned that this young man was on the stage drawing a big salary until he heard Billy Sunday in his recent Norfolk campaign. This ended his stage career. He "hit the trail," and a few Sundays ago joined this Third Christian church where he will evidently be a great asset. I am not much of a musician, but I do know good music when I hear it.

In my travels I have heard some of the great artists, but never have I heard any one who can play like this fellow. He is a wonder. He learns the most difficult selections in a few minutes, and in his rendition the author himself would often not recognize the music. His playing thrills one and it is difficult to sing for listening to him. Twenty-two people, nearly all adults, joined the church at the two services I attended Sunday. I learned that 140 persons have joined this church since February 1, and that the membership has doubled within the past year. I submit that that is a record few, if any churches, have made in the same length of time. The membership is now over five hundred. The regular offerings Sunday amounted to $495.70.

The pastor, Dr. Smith, announced that Sunday marked the closing of some sort of a big drive which the denomination had in which the quota of this "little" church, as they call it, was $12,000. They raised $16,000.00 which made the total offerings of this church last Sunday $16,495.70. Now that's what I call "going some." I heard something during the day about a new church building.

Pity they haven't it now. Whenever I have opportunity I shall attend service here again. It's an inspiration.

TIMOTHY THOMAS.

April 26, 1920.

RICHMOND, VA.

A letter from the pastor, Dr. W. T. Walters, under date of April 19, gives most encouraging reports from our work in Richmond. "We had a good day yesterday," writes Dr. Walters. "Thirty-seven out at the morning service, thirty-five in the evening, forty-two at Sunday school, and a good attendance at the Endeavor. We have forty-three on our charter and others have requested us to hold it open. We decided to put on a campaign for our building fund in conjunction with the Men and Millions Forward Movement and then let the church make a subscription to the general fund out of the fund subscribed. We will send in one thousand dollars (nearly twice the quota). The subscriptions yesterday from 72 per cent of our membership was seven thousand dollars. The other members will be canvassed this week and we hope to make it eight thousand dollars."

The writer was in Washington some days ago and Dr. A. B. Kendall told us that Washington would easily reach its quota in the Men and Millions Movement, that the church had been organized, the First Christian church of Washington, but the charter was not completed as several wished to unite who were not present, some thirty or more having already signed the charter. He found Dr. Kendall very hopeful and also very busy trying to find our people who have gone to Washington. SUN readers could help him very much if they would send in names of our people from the various churches who live in Washington. His address is Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., 806 Taylor Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

We feel very much encouraged at the glowing promise and prospect of the work at Washington and Richmond. Inexpressible is the pity that we did not begin Christian churches at these vital points a half century ago. Numbers and great strength have gone from us because of this sad lack. Shall we not now with commendable and Christian zeal put forth special effort to encourage those who at these places are hungering for a church home, the home of their heart and their choice?

J. O. ATKINSON.

HOLLAND, VA.

Sunday, April 18, was a glorious day in the history of Holland Christian church when the last and final objective of the great Men and Millions Forward Movement was reached. Col. J. E. West was the speaker of the day and he gave us much inspiration and courage to press forward. If our Christian denomination had many such laymen as this loyal noble-hearted man, we believe that no task for the Master would be too great for us to undertake. We had well canvassed the membership during the week previous and on Sunday our people were ready for the final drive.

After the opportunity was given our deficit, which was just $1,000.00, was raised in about five minutes. Notwithstanding the fact we had during last year completed and dedicated a handsome church and the members felt that they were pledged to their full capacity, but when we approached them and helped them to realize the responsibility of each one to his church, and what a privilege it is to have a part in this, the great movement of the Christian church, they readily made their pledges.

The few who did not support the cause were mostly non-church goers and this fact that helps us to realize the importance of the command, "Go ye out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come that my house may be filled." Our numbers have been increased and surely our Church is spiritually much stronger because of this Forward Movement.

The committee and team-workers have expressed themselves as having spent some of their most pleasant days during the campaign. As Captain, I wish to express my appreciation to each one for their hearty cooperation. Undoubtedly the Christian church has had a new vision and we believe that all the time and energy spent during this Men and Millions Forward Movement is well worth while.

W. J. HOLLAND.

AN ENCOURAGING LETTER

The following sounds good to the Mission Secretary and he thinks it will look good in THE SUN:

"Dear Brother Atkinson:—

"Three more charter members received since last week. Five additions to our Sunday school last Sunday. Seven new members for the Christian Endeavor,

"The campaign for funds for the Men and Millions Forward Movement, was launched and $6,924.00 has been raised. One thousand dollars ($1,000) of this amount will be sent to the general fund and the remainder retained and used as a part of our church building fund. We hope to have every one of our members make a subscription on this before it closes next Sunday.

"The first subscription to the church was made by Mr. K. T. Crawley, of the Presbyterian church, and was for $25.00 which amount was later raised to $35.00.

"We had the largest Sunday school, the largest morning and evening congregations and the largest attendance at the Christian Endeavor we have had since starting the work.

"Visitor were present from Petersburg, Va., Durham, Clayton, and Kinston, N. C.

"We want every member of the Christian Church, who lives in or near Richmond, with us next Sunday.

"At 11 A. M., the pastor will preach on "The Church Getting a Vision;" at 8:00 P. M., on "The Development of the Plan of Salvation." 9:45 A. M., Sunday school; 7:00 P. M., Christian Endeavor.

"W. T. WALTERS, Pastor,

"Box 812 Richmond, Va."

Richmond's quota in our Men and Millions Movement was $650.00. The church put on a joint campaign for the Movement and for local building fund with results as stated above.

"THE BIBLICAL VIEW OF THE CHURCH"

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, N. C., Mission Field Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention, writes:

"I have read with growing interest and appreciation the second edition of your "Biblical View of the Church." Every student in the Christian Church preparing for the ministry should read this book. Its plan is well laid and its execution is admirable. It goes to the very heart of problems vital to Bible and ministerial students, students in particular. I enjoyed the first edition which was worthy of its great and good author, but the last edition is a very great improvement of the first. It should have wide reading and close study. It will result in great good in years to come. I enclose a dollar for the copy you sent me, and also thank you for the same.

"J. O. ATKINSON."

This book can be obtained for $1.00 from the author, Dr. J. G. Bishop, Dayton, Ohio.

An educational conference is being held in Greensboro this week and is being attended by many educators of the country. The object of the meeting is to consider new problems of education.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

This report is gotten out a little earlier for this issue as the Superintendent wanted to attend the Southern Christian Convention and had to get it off before he could leave.

It will be a splendid week to attend the Convention as the ground is so wet that we will not be able to plough any till the last of the week and can go with a contented mind. We have been greatly hindered this spring on account of much rain and have done very little toward planting a crop. We would get discouraged, but in all our life we have never seen a year yet that there was not at some time, weather to plant and at some time in the fall weather to gather in, and we fully believe that time will come this year.

Our Easter offerings are coming in nicely and it is very encouraging. The total amount, including this report is $2,884.00. One hundred and fourteen churches and Sunday schools have taken and sent in the Easter offering. It would bring cheer to our heart that words could not express if every church and Sunday school in the Southern Christian Convention would make this offering this year. Take a part and if your school or church has not made this offering make it at your next service and mail it in. The door will not be shut. You shall have a hearty welcome. You will be the better. We will be the happier. We will all rejoice together. Last year we raised $3,500.00. We ought to do much better this year. Will you have a part?

One hundred and ten churches are to report yet. If your church is in this delinquent list make up your mind when you read this letter that you will see to it that your church shall be on the other list and see that an offering is made for this Easter offering. May the kind Master fill your heart with love and sympathy for the little helpless children.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed are our dues for this month. Hope all of the little folks are well. Guess they have found the dogwood blossoms and are now enjoying going barefooted. Love to all the little ones.—Frank and Herbert Burton.

Yes, from the amount of dogwood blossoms the children have brought me, I think they must be plentiful. I was glad the dogwood blossomed so early as the winter shoes were worn out and I did not want to buy more.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: We went to preaching yesterday and had a good service. We all like Mr. Black and enjoy hearing him preach. We are now looking forward to Mothers' Day which is next third Sunday. Wish you could be with us. We had a good time when our school closed. We had two nights and one day. Wish all the little girls and boys would fill the corner with letters each week. Enclosed find a dime for W. T. and one for myself. With love to you and all the children.—Virginia Pearl and W. T. Ayscue.

Glad you had a good time at the close of your school. Our school days should be very happy days to us.—"Uncle Charley."

CHILDREN'S DAY PROGRAMS

By order of the Board of Religious Education three of our good women who are experienced and interested have prepared a splendid program for Children's Day. These programs will be for free distribution and we trust that every school in all our churches will observe Children's Day this year. The programs will be ready about May 1. Address orders to

MIGHT HAVE LOST HIS CHANCE

"I don't suppose you know that this is my last week of school," said Jim Warren, dropping his Cicero on Roger Pelham's front porch, and balancing himself on the veranda rail.

"What! Oh, you don't really mean it, do you, Jim?" Rogers stopped twirling his tennis racket, and gazed at his friend in distressed astonishment and doubt.

"Fraid I am." Jim looked away across the lawn. "Goin' to work for old Doc Stevens—two dollars a day to start, and a good chance to work up."

Roger was stunned and silent for a moment, and then burst out thoughtlessly: "Jim, you're a fool! I didn't think you were that sort of a quitter!"

Jim's eyes flashed angrily, but his low voice was well controlled, as he answered his friend: "I'm not a quitter, Roger, I have to go to work. I'm sixteen years old now, and I don't feel I have the right to let my mother pay for my education any longer. It's time I did something to help her, and here's my chance."

"Oh, but, Jim," Roger pleaded "think what it's going to mean to you! Staying in school now would mean an investment, not a waste of money. Two more years of high school will mean money later on, even if you can't go to college. You want to look ahead, and see what you're going to be ten years from now. If you take this job, where will you stand at twenty—and how far will you be at thirty! Look at Ted Bates. He left school when he was fifteen, and he's doing just about the same thing now that he was doing then—driving Wilson's delivery wagon. He's been dead sorry he quit ever since. I tell you, Jim, the average fellow that quits school in order to earn some money right away loses out in the long run. Stay, if you can—it's only two years more; surely your mother can let you do it."

"Oh, I know you're right, Rog," Jim answered desperately, "I don't want to stop, for I know that any kind of a future, and any chance of a steadily increasing wage requires education and training. But, Rog," Jim looked straight at his friend, "you've no idea how hard father's death hit us. It isn't only a question of wanting to help mother—I—I must help her!"

Roger was silent for a moment; and then a sudden thought came to him.

"Jim," he exclaimed, in such intense enthusiasm that Jim turned in surprise, "I know what you can do to help your mother out, and still finish school. Suppose you could get some money to pay your own schooling, and could buy your clothes with money earned at week-end jobs. Would that be all right?"

Roger waited eagerly for Jim's answer, which came thoughtfully, "Why yes, I guess it would, but where," and Jim laughed a bit scornfully, "may I ask, is the money to come from?"

"Boy, haven't you heard about the Junior Red Cross scholarships that you can have if you apply to the superintendent of schools?"

"Seems to me that I have heard something or other about them, but you see, I really haven't paid much attention to the Juniors; been too busy looking around for odd jobs," Jim apologized for himself.

"Well, you'd better pay some attention to the Juniors, for they're mighty fine, and they are going to mean that you'll get a chance in this world that you wouldn't get without them. Now, you come with me, and we'll write to the superintendent, and just you forget about that job with Doc Stevens."

Two years later Jim Warren was graduated from Willoughsby High School with the highest record of any student that had ever attended the school. His two years, given him through the Junior Red Cross scholarship, had meant for him the chance of a lifetime, as Roger had predicted, for Jim had received a scholarship for an engineering college, and, through the influence of his principal, had been offered a position by one of the professors which would enable him to work his way through college, and this meant some support for his little mother at home.

There are lots of Jim Warrens in America. Perhaps some of us know them. Have they all had a chance? Or, are there some, like this Jim, who "haven't paid much attention to the Juniors," and who haven't heard of the Junior Red Cross scholarships? If they have not heard, tell them, today, to write to their city or county superintendent of schools, and he will tell them how to get their "chance" in life—the chance that Juniors want all boys and girls to have!—Richmond Christian Advocate.

ORIGIN OF "HELLO"

You should try to learn the old wolf hunter's call because you know the wolf is a scout, and that should be the scout call.

This call was used in France first and afterwards in England, but there are no wolves in England now, and the bugle call has been forgotten in both countries; therefore we "paint it green and call it our own." Even though William Tell and Robin Hood bugled the same calls before America was discovered, we can make it American the same as we have made the old French wolf hunter's cry American. French was spoken in English court circles, so the titled wolf hunters used the French cry of hab le loup or a' lou loup, loup being pronounced loo, the cry being la loo; the English put on the H and made it halloo, and we made it hello, which is an American expression, as all the telephone girls know.

So the old wolf hunter's bugle calls which came here with the Huguenots will also be American when blown through the wooden trumpet of the flat-boatsmen.—Dan Beard, in Boys' Life.

NOTES

Many items had to be crowded out this week to make room for Convention reports.

THE SUN was delayed a little this week that the Convention matter might appear. On time next week.

Rev. James Lightbourne, brother of Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne, has accepted the Memorial Temple work and expects to enter upon the work this month.

The Elon Summer School, scheduled to be held this summer, has been postponed by action of the Convention. The action was taken because the Men and Millions Campaign had not been completed.

We are pleased with the many new subscribers that are coming in. Many of the Men and Millions teams are assisting us in securing new subscribers—and they are doing so without asking. Fine!

The review of the Convention given on other pages does not, we are sure, take in all that could be, and should be, said of the work done. We hope to have access to the minutes in a few days and will give an editorial review of some of the reports.

There will be all day services at Union Ridge Sunday, May 9. Sunday school at 10:00 A. M., preaching at 11:00 A. M., and at 2:00 P. M. The morning program will be a memorial service and the afternoon a Mothers' Day service. The church is hoping and planning for a great day.

The Board of Religious Education of the Convention has issued a fine Children's Day program and offers it free to all schools desiring to use it. The distribution is in the hands of Miss Bessie I. Holt, Burlington, N. C., to whom persons may write. It is free. Send for a supply.

REV. E. K. McCORD

Rev. E. K. McCord, Dayton, Ohio, one of our missionaries on furlough from Japan, and for sometime Acting Mission Secretary, passed away on Monday afternoon, April 26. He was in his usual health and in his office at work, we understand, when a stroke of paralysis came upon him. He started for the stairway and succeeded in making his way down one flight of steps when he collapsed. He never regained consciousness and died two hours later. We regret that we have no definite facts concerning his life, but hope to give them next week.

Brother McCord was one of the sweetest spirited men that it was ever our privilege to know. He was earnest, sincere, spiritual, and a man of power and influence. His passing is a great shock to the Brotherhood at large and his place will be difficult to fill.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 16, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

Subject: Victory Under Samuel.

Golden Text: Prepare your hearts unto the Lord, and serve Him only.

—I Sam. 7:3.

Leading Thought: The Lord will help when we turn to Him.

Junior Topic: A Great Leader Praying.

Intermediate and Senior Topics: Victory Through Prayer.

Adult Topic: Qualifications For Leadership.

Additional Lesson Material: Ex. 18:13-26; John 1:5-9; Acts 6:1-7.

Time: About B. C. 1120.

Place: Mizpah, Beth-car, Bethel, Gilgal, Ramah.

Persons: Samuel, Israelites, Philistines.

Our last lesson told of calamities—the destruction of the family of Eli, the crushing defeat of Israel, the capture of the ark of God by idolaters. The chosen race was in very deep distress, and sin was the cause of their trouble. A return to God by sincere repentance was their only hope. “Righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people.” Israel learned, and then forgot, and had to learn again and again. Other nations have done as Israel did. Today we study about a well planned, vigorously executed, divinely aided revolution. Today’s lesson brings us back to the same battlefield, twenty years later. This second battle with heathenism was first fought and won in the battlefield of the people’s hearts. Then they won at Ebenezer. “Twenty years Israel lamented” and Samuel said. “If ye do return unto the Lord with all your heart prove it” by putting away your strange gods. When Samuel rallied the people at Mizpah he did not say, “Prepare your weapons, sharpen your arrows, polish your swords, and string your bows.” He said, “Return to God, prepare your hearts unto the Lord, and serve Him only.”

The hardest battles we have to fight are not with swords, bayonets, or forty-four center metre guns, but with prayer, sacrifice, and service under the command of our great leader,

Jehovah. If we want God’s presence and help, we must give up willingly, every idol, every indulgence that is a real hindrance. It may be a pleasure, a wrong way of making money, selfishness, greed, or association. The real battle is silent, hidden in each, and every heart. The place where we lose battles, meet defeat and lose God’s presence is this unseen battlefield. The same is equally true with every victory.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC FOR MAY 16, 1920

(J. Vincent Knight)

“Religion Pays.”—I Cor. 3:18-33.

“Does your religion pay?” was asked by a foreigner who came to our country seeking wealth. When told that it did, he grasped it—later to learn that he was no richer by having done so. He then dropped it, claiming that religion was a failure, and a worthless article. The story is negative, but presents a clear picture of the thousands who are disappointed because they cannot see any earthly gain by having embraced the Christian religion. Yet, religion does pay, and needs no argument in its defense, for only the thing needed is to try it out.

This meeting should be a personal testimony meeting. Ask a number of the oldest members of the Church to attend the meeting and give their own testimonies as to how religion pays them, and what rewards they get in this life by being a Christian. This will be strengthening to the new members of the Society, and will show that religion is not a thing that has all its rewards coming in the future years. Emphasize the fact that religion is a thing that pays dividends from the beginning of one’s Christian career to the vast eternity of God where men reap the final reward for their labors.

Then ask a half dozen persons each to tell in one minute, why their religion pays. Too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the fact that religion pays greater dividends than any other thing in life. Get a number of Christian business men and women to discuss the question from the standpoint of dividends paid on life investments. It would be a fine thing to have all the business men and women of the Church invited to attend this meeting and give testimony.

A fine climax in closing would be to get several Endeavorers to bring before the meeting facts and figures showing where religion has paid in the physical, mental, social, and spiritual world, in the development of a four square man, and read the first Psalm, as an illustration of what it takes to make up the four square man.

JONES

Mrs. Fanny Jones died, at her home near Sunbury, N. C., April 23, 1920, at the age of seventy-seven years, four months and sixteen days. She leaves to mourn their loss six children: Mrs. R. L. Jackson, Mrs. W. J. Proctor, Willie, James, Henry and Robert Jones and twenty grandchildren.

Surely a good Christian mother has gone to reap her reward in Heaven and no one will miss her more than her youngest son, Robert, who had always lived with her. Heaven seems a little nearer to her sons and daughters because they have a dear mother waiting there to bid them welcome some day.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer and the body was laid to rest in the family burying ground.

W. B. FULLER.

PIERCE

Brother B. F. Pierce passed away April 1, 1920, at the age of eighty-seven years, three months and twenty-eight days. He had been a faithful member of Damascus church for fifty-eight years, and was admired for his unblemished character. For several months he had been in feeble health and when the end came it was without a struggle. Surviving him are his widow, three sons: W. C., L. M., I. F., and one daughter, Mrs. W. H. Speight, all of Sunbury, N. C., twenty-six grandchildren and twelve great grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at the home and interment made in the family burying plot.

W. B. FULLER.

A LITTLE FUN

Only a Hint

Mrs. Gadabout—Are you still bothered with the awful Boresome family coming to dine with you every few evenings?

Mrs. Gabalot—Oh, no; they finally took the hint.

Mrs. Gadabout—What did you say to them?

Mrs. Gabalot—Oh, nothing was said, but we served sponge cake every time they came.—Indianapolis Star.

One Right Left

"I know a man who attended one of these bolshevik meetings that are held every now and then," writes a reader.

"This man, after listening to a number of bolshevik speeches, rose and shouted indignantly:

"Have the taxpayers no right' "

"The chairman waved his hand in a soothing way.

"Sure they have, mister," he said. "They have a right to pay the taxes." —Selected.

The Great Unwanted

A crowd of pretty girls were taking tea the other afternoon when a ragman passed.

"Old rags!" he yelled. "Old rags, old bones, old iron!"

And then, as he trudged slowly along the street, he yelled again:—

"Old copper! Old tin! Old bottles! Old papers! Old shoes!"

The prettiest girl in the group made a dramatic gesture of despair.

"Girls," she said, "he wants everything but old maids."—Selected.

The Way of the West

A football player—name not given—had strayed into the Far West, and was instructing a group of eager cowboys in the rudiments of the game.

"Mind," he observed, "if you can not kick the ball, kick the opponent. Now, let's get busy. Where's the ball?"

"Bother the ball," came the reply of a keen pupil; "let's get on with the game."—Selected.

Why He Supported Him

The candidates are abroad in the land and the voters who watch their movements will appreciate the story of the Irish political candidate who felt sure that a certain elector was against him but who was surprised to have that elector call and announce that he would support him to the limit. "Within the other day ye called at my place and stood by the pigsty and talked for half an hour, ye didn't budge me an inch," said the visitor. "But after ye'd gone away, I got to thinkin' how ye reached yer hand over the rail and scratched the pig's back till he lay down wid the pleasure of it. I made up my mind that when a man was as sociable as that wid a poor fellow crathure, I wasn't the bhoys to vote agin him."—Selected.

Eye Bothered Him

Only a few days ago a returned soldier went into a dentist's office to get a tooth extracted. He wore a D. S. medal, but the thought of having a tooth pulled was more than he could stand and he demanded gas. The dentist waited in a fever of impatience for the soldier to "go under," but the latter was nervous and insisted on keeping one eye open even though he had taken enough gas to float a balloon. Finally the dentist cried: "Let yourself go. Close that eye, you idiot." Somewhere from the back blocks of dreamland the patient murmured sleepily, "Can't. It's glass."—Selected.

Flying Sparks

Ask Lloyd George if the President is "disabled." He knows.—New York Morning Telegraph.

Congressional motto seems to be: "Never put off until tomorrow what you can postpone until after the election."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Mr. Gompers' opinion about a separate labor party is that it would not work.—Columbia Record.

Jud Tunkins says the impression that a dollar is worth only 50 cents depends a great deal on whether said dollar is bein' spent or pursued.—The Washington Star.

HOW I BECAME MY OWN GRAND-FATHER

I married a widow who had a daughter. My father visited our house frequently, fell in love with my step-daughter and married her. Thus my father became my son-in-law, and my step-daughter my mother, because she was my father's wife. My step-daughter had also a son; he was of course my brother and at the same time my grandchild, for he was the son of my daughter.

My wife was my grandmother, because she was my mother's mother. I was my wife's husband and grandchild at the same time, and as the husband of a person's grandmother is his grandfather, I became my own grandfather.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

THE TURMOIL OF NATIONS

It is a long established custom of Church papers not to take part in politics, and this editorial is no attempt whatever to break away from that custom, but to guide, if it can, in the proper thinking of its readers.

It has now been a year and a half since the Armistice was signed, and though lasting peace has been predicted every day since then, it is yet to be realized. The sad part of it is that it seems that we are farther from it now than we were when the Armistice was signed.

It seems that the high ideals on which the war was won have been cast to the wind. We told fathers and mothers that their sons were going to battle for a good and righteous cause. We still maintain that position but the world lies prostrate before those great ideals and the men who proclaim them dare not rise to substantiate their claim. The Church did its part in helping win the war and found therein a new impetus and renewed strength to help win the world for Christ. Churches planned large programs and are executing those programs beautifully. The Church seems to have found new ideas and new ideals.

No one seems to dare to say what is in the background of this great social unrest. The war brought us together. We thought together and we fought together. We lifted our flag of liberty and spread our banner of unity before the eyes of the world. The world applauded us as a nation and we wore our honors with dignity and delight.

Push back the curtain. What can be seen? Strife, uneasiness, greed and a dozen other children of selfishness that tramp the nation's ideals under their feet. Partisan politics seem to be in the saddle while men risk their all to make and to gain.

It has always seemed to us a poor philosophy to place a man in the penitentiary for manslaughter and brand him a criminal for life and then license nations to go forth to war and kill, not by the single man, but in great numbers. And the pity of it is that the more they kill, the more we applaud. There must be something wrong with our ideals.

What is a nation? Is it bonds and buildings and banks? Far from it. There can be no nation without people, and there can be no people without personality. Personality is the chief asset beyond all wealth and activity and plans and programs. We must so change our ideals that a nation that goes forth to kill be judged a criminal just as an individual that goes forth to kill is so judged. We believe with all our heart that the world has been moved toward this ideal for centuries. It has been a long process. Idealists have stood on the shore of time and looked for the incoming ship of peace. We have dreamed of a time when war should be no more; a time when we could stack arms and never pick them up. The ending of the recent world war brought its multitude of disciples to think in this direction. The question that these disciples are asking now is whether we have reached that time or not. This question is vital to the Church of the living God and every human soul is interested in its answer.

We dare not answer it. The near future is fraught with too many great possibilities to answer the question in the negative, while the horizon of political unrest is surging too strong for us to answer in the affirmative.

We believe that it is God's will that great and good things come to pass. Such things come to pass through human instrumentality, and where human efforts fail the plans of God are retarded. He chose men and not angels to carry out his program. We have wondered what would happen if the children of God would turn their faces toward eternal strength and pray with an uncompromising faith that the ideals of the Master, the ideals of the world, would be realized. God cannot do great things unless we have great hearts and live great lives. We believe that present conditions can be overruled by the hand of God, but we must remember that they must be overruled by the hand of God through us. When the spirit of God prevails the thrones of kings and monarchs crumble. Political bosses and world demagogues cannot stand a power supreme if only the Christian world would help to bring that power through lives that are dedicated to the Master's service.

GIVING THE CHURCHES A CHANCE

There is always more or less hindrance in the way of every great undertaking. This world is so arranged that all of us cannot do the same thing at the same time and in the same way. The weather, also, never suits all at the same time. It is a good old world after all, full of variety and meets our demands far better than we meet its.

The Men and Millions Forward Movement, it seems to us, suffered many handicaps. Just as the machinery was ready to start, the Influenza epidemic struck the country, then bad roads, and on and on.

Some sections managed to overcome these impediments and have practically finished the final canvass, while others have not. The Convention, in order to give every church full time and a fair chance, voted to extend the time to July 1. The Field Committee, has therefore, set at the task of giving every church that has not functioned a chance. And as we understand it, this chance is not only to cover the final drive but to undertake, if it chooses, any of the other objectives.

We realize that many churches are willing and anxious and ready to do their full duty and set free any obligation that they have to the denomination at large, if only the way is made plain and assistance offered them.

It is our earnest hope and desire at this time that every church may have a part in the biggest undertaking ever launched by our people. God grant that any objection, uneasiness or selfishness may be banished and that each church not yet functioned rise to its height with the great opportunity offered by the campaign.

THE DIVORCE EVIL

We were very much interested in the discussion on the divorce evil at the recent session of the Convention. The brethren were more outspoken on the subject than we have ever heard them in either Conference or Convention. The matter of divorce is certainly growing in this country. In our opinion there is no one set reason why this growth, but multiplicity of reasons which can only be removed by the changing of some of our ways of living and systems of education.

This note from the pen of Judge Joseph B. David, of the superior court in Chicago, who has been one of the principal judges in the divorce branch of that court, is pertinent in this connection: "A divorce is no longer a stigma on a woman's name, it seems; it is an asset. She seems to attract more men. Our modern attitude seems to be to laugh at the solemnity of marriage. Sitting here day after day, I have just about reached the conclusion that the more divorces a woman has, the more men she can get. All that wealthy couples have to do nowadays to circumvent the divorce laws is to cut across State lines. There should be a national divorce law or uniform laws in all the States. The idle woman is the most frequent applicant for a divorce, but it is hard to say whether men or women are the worst offenders. I really believe that many women ask for divorce just by way of diversion or excitement. They have too much time on their hands. More men are accused of infidelity than women, however."

BEAUTIFYING THE CEMETERY

We have made it a custom every year about this season to call attention to beautifying of the church cemetery. The memorials are now on and this means that the cemeteries will be cleaned and beautified.

There are two ways of beautifying a cemetery. One is to keep all the grass cleaned away and nothing but the bare dirt showing, while the other is to plant flowers and sow grass seed and let God's acre become a place that is beautiful and inviting. Cleaning the grass from the land means the taking of the soil with it and leaving the surface to be exposed to washing rains. Soil should be brought into the cemetery rather than taken out, and lawn grass should be sown instead of allowing broom-straw and other wild vegetation to become deep rooted in the ground.

Let us keep our burying grounds beautiful, not by being raked bare but by flowers and grass and other green vegetation.

The wholly unexpected death of Brother McCord has plunged those at The Publishing House into such a shadow of grief that it is very difficult for any of us to continue at work through these days of new-made sorrow. There are few men who ever have labored here who were so unanimously loved and respected by all those associated in this building as he has been. Cheery and friendly and likable even to strangers, the more intimately one knew him the more charming became his personality and the more exceptional the type of his friendship. With some of us this friendship has matured through a long period of years into a deep and mutual affection.

As the message of his death is carried throughout the Brotherhood, there universally will come a sense of great loss to those also who knew him more as an official than as a friend. For his every official act and relationship carried so much of his loving heart and his great soul in it, that those who knew him only in his public capacity loved him but little less than we who cherished the closer association and the more intimate relationship. During those long years as a missionary in far-away Japan, he enshrined himself in the hearts of our people; and this admiration and esteem has quickly ripened into affection under the warmth of his loving personality as during these few years here in America they have met him face to face.

How great the loss to our Church, many will not recognize until the years reveal the great breadth and fine qualities of his service. For he was characterized by both a modesty which hid his worth and by a timidity and self-depreciation which caused him to shrink from public attention or opportunity. He had an ingrained antipathy to titles and show, and sought ways to escape honors rather than to court them. Because of this, he never gave the public a fair chance to appraise him at his real worth. He was one of the most full-rounded men we have ever had among us. In Japan, he had not only merited high esteem for his great service in our

THE LURE OF THE IMPOSSIBLE

Because weather conditions, and innumerable other difficulties, hindered in the brief time we have had for our Men and Millions Campaign, there be those who seem to think we are up against the impossible. Maybe it is time we adopt, and use the "The Song of the Panama Canal Builders." Here is a stanza of it:

"Have you got any seas that they are uncrossable?

"Have you got any mountains they can't tunnel through?

"We specialize on the wholly impossible,

"Doing the things that no one can do."

In the spirit of that song our Panama Canal was opened.

Have we of the Southern Christian Convention be lured by the seemingly impossible, and really make the impossible our specialty? About ninety of our churches have so far made no report, have done little or nothing in our Movement? Can these be moved to action in this time of crisis and of trial? Shall we pray it through beloved, and then follow our praying with our doing? May God help us.

SUFFOLK LETTER

It is not too late to pray and work for the Men and Millions Forward Movement. The time has been extended, by vote of the Convention, to July first. To reach every church and every member, for any cause, is a great task; but it is a worthy task. It will be impossible, no doubt, to reach every member for the two parts of the four items in the program—that is, tithing and subscriptions to the quotas allotted to the churches; but many will be reached who have never been reached by personal work before. Surprise meets all who really and honestly help in this great Movement. It is a double surprise. The individual worker is surprised at the response of those approached and surprised at his own aptness in doing such work. Many who hesitated to serve have come back happy and rewarded by the work itself. The campaign has put a new vision into the minds of the laymen and a new sense of privilege in the whole Church. Ministers themselves have discovered their own weakness and their fears. They have been timid in asking large things of the people, and they know now that the people would rather undertake large things than small things.

There is no reason, at least none has appeared, why the goal may not be fully reached in all the four parts of the great program. Patience and persistence, faith and discretion, work and example, will achieve almost any Christian undertaking, for God helps those who help themselves in a good cause.

Experience in this campaign has revealed a willingness on the part of the members of the churches to do their duty gladly when they fully understand the purposes, the plans, and the objectives of the Movement. It takes time to get any great idea before the constituency of any organization. The members of the Christian Church are just as willing as members of other denominations to do their full duty in the cause of the Master. This Movement is so new, so big, and so spiritual, that it staggers men when first presented; but when it is explained, considered, and understood, it appears as an opportunity for serving the Master and not as a burden imposed by human authority.

Its great value unfolds in four parts as the program laid out the work in four parts. 1. It is a Movement, and that means that it makes it possible for members to do what they could not on their own initiative. The Movement creates a spirit, an atmosphere, that inspires workers. 2. It enlists the laymen, men and women, in Christian service. The human family loves to work and this Movement furnishes opportunity for united service. It gives every member the privilege to give—that is a great privilege and unites the forces for success. 4. It puts the Church on a new plane of activity. It combines the physical, mental, spiritual, and benevolent resources of the Church in one united and cooperative work for God.

A LETTER WITH THE RIGHT SPIRIT

(Editor's Note:—The following letter was sent to Dr. W. A. Harper while attending the Southern Christian Convention in Raleigh. In addition to this letter being read to the Convention, many telegrams were received from Brother Darden, and read before the body. Every message told of something accomplished in the campaign.—C. B. R.)

My dear Dr. Harper:—

We had a glorious time at our Victory meeting for Nansemond county last night. We had a good crowd from the county—every church being represented. I called the roll in order in which each church went "over the top," beginning with Berea and ending with Liberty Spring.

Nansemond county accomplished in all objectives as follows:

Life Recruits	16
Tithers	306
Members added	153
Subscription	$268,298.00
"Over the top"	$ 9,398.00

and reports still coming in.

Short talks were made by every Captain as the roll was called, of course, being welcomed by Capt. W. S. Beamon on behalf of the Suffolk church.

We had a solo by Mr. Wilkins of Norfolk and a quartette by Brothers Felton, Brinkley, Farrar and Mr. Wilkins. We also had the Campaign "Battle Cry" and a prayer by Mrs. Bullock. There were several speeches made by Suffolk's Four-Minute Men. I never attended a meeting in my life that I enjoyed more. Everybody was enthusiastic and it was a genuine Thanksgiving meeting.

I feel confident that the Christian denomination has awakened to its duty, not only to its own particular Church, but to the entire denomination. We all feel that it is the beginning of a new day and I believe that we are all going to make an effort to do more for our Maker than we have ever done before.

I am glad that I have lived to see the day when men and women are willing to lay down their all for their Christ.

I am leaving for Mt. Carmel church and I hope I will be able to wire you Friday morning that Mt. Carmel has "gone over." I am praying and expecting to carry this church over before I sleep tonight. This will be the last church in Isle of Wight, Nansemond and Southampton.

I hope that the members of the Convention will make many plans for the betterment of our denomination as I am thoroughly convinced that the goal cannot be too high for the Christian people to reach, if they continue to go forward as they have in the past several months.

I have had the glad news from Cypress that they are going to begin right away to build a new church. They had a mass meeting last Sunday night and raised by subscription five thousand dollars from a few members for this purpose. You can see that the workers in this drive have not only accomplished the objectives set, but they have gotten the other members of the denomination to do something for their Heavenly Father.

With all good wishes for you and each member of the Convention and regretting that I cannot be with you in person, I am

Sincerely yours in the work,
J. M. DARDEN.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

HIGH POINT

Our revival meeting began April 11 and closed April 18, 1920. We were unable to secure the first man we tried to get to assist in preaching. Rev. J. W. Knight, Stokesdale, N. C., came to our aid on Monday night and stayed until Friday night. Brother Knight is a deep consecrated and devoted man to the service of the Kingdom of our Christ. He did some good preaching and made a splendid impression during his short stay.

The attendance was good from beginning to end—larger than it was last year. As to visible results, there were four professions and two additions to the local church. We are expecting others soon. The church manifested much interest throughout the meeting. All honor, praise and glory to Christ our King for what was accomplished.

On Easter Sunday the Easter offering was taken for the Orphanage which amounted to $21.00. Our Sunday school continues to give one-half its offerings to other causes, one Sunday to the Orphanage and one to Missions each month.

On Saturday night, May 1, 1920, about 8:00 P. M., a representative portion of the church met for the second quarterly business meeting. A good interest was manifested and evidences of progress being made. The deacons reported that there was a larger percentage of the membership taking more interest in the church, no friction that they knew of and a spirit of harmony prevailed.

Since the meeting the painting committee is going to complete its solicitation of money to paint the church. We have almost enough funds on hand to do the work. There are a few pledges to be collected. It was also decided to stain the inside wood-work of the church.

The church unanimously decided to hold a "Community Day Service" the first Sunday in June. There will be two services, one at eleven o'clock; luncheon at the church, and another service before going home. One service will be a Memorial or Rally by the Woman's Missionary Society.

May the Lord continue His blessing upon this people.

NORFOLK LETTER

Thinking the Church at large and especially friends of the Third Christian church of Norfolk, might be interested in knowing something of our activities, progress and prospects, I come with this communication.

Dr. L. E. Smith came as pastor January 15, 1919. He found a membership of 242. There has been constantly added to the roll until 266 have been received since he came. We now have over 500 members. A large majority of the ones added during this time have been adults, many husbands, and wives, a great many of them active workers and men and women of influence in church and community.

Brother Smith is a bundle of energy and an untiring worker, a scholar, a student, a thinker, an orator, a splendid pastor and with all a man of splendid spirit and consecration.

His salary was advanced $200.00 on January 1. While he was away at the Convention at Raleigh, the Official Board got together and as a result another salary increase to the extent of $500.00 was voted by the congregation at the Sunday morning service, making now a salary of $3,000.00 per year, and at the evening service at the close of the service he was surprised by the announcement that he was being presented with an automobile, a fully equipped Ford Sedan. This in a feeble way will show something of the hold he has on his people and their love for him.

Now a word as to the future. Most SUN readers know we are worshipping in a temporary building have been hoping and planning a long time for our new church building. Combination of circumstances have kept us from beginning before this, and as we have waited conditions have changed from time to time, and what we had thought of at one time as being sufficient would later appear to be inadequate.

So from one plan to another we have gone until now we are having completed plans and hope to begin active building operations early in next year, one of the best and most up-to-date churches in our denomination, in the North or South. In fact, by way of seating capacity that may be thrown into one auditorium and for equipment for Sunday school work it will not be surpassed by any church in this city. The combined auditorium will have a seating capacity of between 1,800 and 2,000 and we will be able to take care of a Sunday school of 2,000 people. You may probably think we are aiming too high, but the need exists, the people are here. We have the greatest principles any Church ever had. We have a preacher and leader second to none, and our God is good and great, able to do great things through us if we will let Him. Pray for us that we may be kept humble and willing for Him to work His will through us.

J. W. MANNING.

SALEM CHAPEL

Sunday, May 2, we had a large congregation at Salem Chapel. An offering was taken for the Orphanage which amounted to $57.00. It was indeed a busy day for Salem Chapel church. Communion was administered to a large number. We next organized a Sunday school and held a quarterly meeting, after which we gave a letter of dismissal and elected three deacons. A memorial service was planned for the first Sunday in June. We will arrange to remodel the church building in the near future. These are splendid people and are always ready to do their duty.

CHRISTIAN CHAPEL

In the absence of our regular pastor the second Sunday in April, the appointment was filled by Rev. B. J. Howard. Brother Howard used a very appropriate text for the occasion, using the words concerning giving to Caesar that which is his and to God that which is His. Never before was the text presented so plainly to the hearers as it was on this special occasion.

This was the first time that many of us had heard Brother Howard but we consider him a man of deeds as well as of words. We shall be pleased to have him visit us again.

own Church, but he had by sheer worth won for himself no little interdenominational prominence in his own field. A missionary with all of his heart and soul, and one who had spent almost a quarter of a century in the foreign service, yet he was as much alive to the tremendous task for the Church yet unaccomplished in America as he was to its unfulfilled responsibilities abroad. There was no man among us who saw more clearly the true balance and perspective of both home and foreign missions than did he. This was characteristic of all of his thinking and work. He never failed properly to appraise the value of all of those departments of the Church in which he himself was not particularly engaged. This, together with his good sound sense, made him one of the safest counselors and truest statesmen we had among us.

He had been a pastor and a missionary, untrained in office work, and unused to the imperative and wearing routine of office life; and yet he took up the manifold duties of his official position here in Dayton and carried them with the adaptability and ease of one to the manor born—a thing very few preachers ever have been able to do. He loved it. And no man ever has been more eminently fitted for the great variety of labor which the position requires, than was he. He was one of our most popular speakers, and the constant calls for his service in this capacity kept him continually on the go. He was competent in business administration and as an executive. And he surprised every one by showing himself to be almost instinctively an editor. Not only was he especially adapted to editorial work, but he was fascinated with it and labored far beyond his strength to continue the mission magazine at a high standard at the same time that he carried an increasingly heavy amount of work along other lines. There was almost no limit to the hours he labored. Seven o'clock found him at his office in the morning, and far into the night he was still planning or writing. He ignored the cautions and protests from us all, and continued at such a strenuous pace that sooner or later the body must break—and presently, without warning, the brittle thread of life snapped under the strain. It was the price of long continued overwork! And it is due the Brotherhood that they know. For few of them ever have realized the terrible strain under which the most of their denominational men in Dayton have worked and are working. In order to save the Church the expense of assistants, your officials here are doing far more per man than almost any other office in Dayton either expects or permits—and the marvel is that Brother McCord is the first one to break under the strain.

His spirit was most magnanimous—generous not only with his money and with his life; but—an even more difficult virtue, sometimes—generous also in tolerance and forbearance and in appreciation of those wholly unlike himself in thought and action. None surpassed him in the exacting discipline to which he subjected himself in all of the finer qualities of unselfish manhood. To him, the Christian faith was no mystic and insubstantial thing; but a living reality springing perennially in the thoughts and deeds of every-day life. He translated his love for Christ into the activities of every passing hour far more than he did into any speech or language. To him, living was a sacrament and love was as the blessed bread; and in his home, and in his office, and in his church and out among men anywhere and everywhere, was that same attentive, loving, untiring devotion to his Master to which we are accustomed in the hours of worship.

“Church members may be divided into three classes in a mere skeleton outline—wishbones, jawbones, and backbones. The wishbones are always languidly hoping that the Church will somehow grow without their effort; the jawbones, of course, do the critical talking; and the backbones get under the heavy burdens and carry them.”

I. W. P., North Carolina—I don't see how a member of the Christian Church can do without THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

MISSIONARY

MISSIONARY TRAINING IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Rev. George H. Trull, of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, N. Y., writes a highly interesting article in the May Missionary Review of the World, using the above caption as his theme. I wish every Sunday school teacher in our Convention could read Mr. Trull's message. Here is the first paragraph: "The sensitiveness of children to good impressions and their ready response to enthusiastic leadership give charm to the work of the teacher of childhood. Enter the Elementary Department of your Sunday school or any other department and before you are gathered bright, eager children, mischievous perhaps, 'wrigglers' doubtless, but alert and quick to respond to truth presented on the plane of their interest and intelligence. In their minds is no prejudice, no indifference, and little, if any, selfishness. They are open-minded, ready to listen to mission fact and story. Impression struggles to find expression in doing at once something for starving Armenians, the little widows of India, the fisher folk of Labrador, or the Indians in their tepees—according to the story they have heard."

Mr. Trull then relates some instances, which any Sunday school class could emulate, of how very small children worked, sacrificed, saved and brought to Sunday school money with which to aid objects of need which teachers had told their classes about. The key person in the Sunday school is the teacher. And whatever gets upon the mind and heart of the teacher will soon be brought to the minds and hearts of the pupils.

If one wishes to know why so many of our Sunday school classes know so little about the needs, conditions and opportunities of non-Christian lands, the knowledge is found in the fact that our teachers themselves know so little and care so little themselves about these non-Christian lands. If our teachers knew and care the pupils would soon know and care. And very quickly thereafter those same pupils would not only be giving their savings, but some of them would be giving themselves, to help reach and help save the millions of children who have never heard of Christ, and never will hear of Him unless these self-same children now in our Sunday schools shall send, or go to tell them of their Christ.

Oh! for teachers (and preachers too) with a missionary vision and passion! I was much moved by one incident Mr. Trull relates of what he saw "happen" in a mining region of Pennsylvania in which is a Sunday school with one teacher in it who has the missionary passion and zeal. The school of 400 is in a small town and is made up of people of moderate incomes, workers together and no capitalists. This teacher began praying and pursuing for the missionary cause years ago. He would himself have been in the foreign field if the Lord had opened the way. Denied this privilege he determined to do his best to help, and make it possible for others to carry the message.

He learned that it would take $1,250.00 a year to support a missionary. He planned that there should be two offerings the year to reach this, one at Christmas, the other at Easter. The needs of the field to which this teacher hoped to send a missionary from his school were kept constantly before the school for months before Christmas. Children of various classes were asked to save their nickles and their dimes, that each class might make a good showing when the first Christmas offering for "their own missionary" should be taken. When the appointed Christmas Sunday came class by class of the school sent its offering in cash to the platform. When all the classes had reported and the total was added it was found that $1,384.85 had been given in cash. No Easter offering was needed for the purpose, as the Christmas offering had gone "far over the top" of the required $1,250.00. As to how these children secured their money Mr. Trull gives one instance: "An Italian girl of fifteen in a desperately poor family, the eldest of seven, worked all summer picking berries and selling them to help support the family. Her mother allowed her to keep two cents a week on each quart of berries in order to buy for herself something she might want. This girl, instead of spending the money, brought it in each week for the class missionary fund. This girl brought in more of that Christmas offering for missions than any other girl in her class."

It is truly said that the only requirements for a live, active, missionary Sunday school class is "a worthy object, enthusiastic leadership, consecrated effort and sacrificial giving."

How great indeed is the need that our Sunday school teachers know and become burdened with the obligations and opportunity of our non-Christian peoples. Every Sunday school teacher easily has the privilege of obeying our Lord's command, "Go ye into all the world, teaching."

J. O. ATKINSON.

OBJECTING TO HYPOCRITES

The man who finds fault with the Church because "there are so many hypocrites in it" should be consistent. He should refuse to eat bread because he had once found a loaf that was sour. He should refuse to partake of mutton because he had once seen a hog in the field with the sheep. He should refrain from marriage because some homes are unhappy. He should refuse to indulge in fish because he had found frogs, muskrats, and snapping turtles in the same pond. Of all the idiotic types that a preacher has to deal with, there is none equal to the man who will not come to Christ because some poor soul has fallen from grace. It is bad enough to be a hypocrite, but he will have to take an upper berth to the man who is a fool.—United Presbyterian.

BE THANKFUL

Life without thankfulness is devoid of love and passion. Hope without thankfulness is lacking in fine perception. Faith without thankfulness lacks strength and fortitude. Every virtue divorced from thankfulness is maimed, and limps along the spiritual road.—J. H. Jowett.

DEVOTIONAL

JESUS AND WOMEN*

The record of our Lord's ministry on earth does not show that He preached a gospel or taught a doctrine peculiar either to women or to men. He preached to the multitudes (men and women). He ministered to the multitudes (men and women). Jesus never had men's meetings nor women's meetings. He taught principle, not method. Principle is for all and for all time. Method may be for all or for a part and is for the times. We might do well in this present time to be sure our methods do not run counter to Jesus' principle. Wherever Jesus dealt with the crowds, He set up no line of distinction either of class or of sex. Whatever Jesus had to say He said to both men and women. So often He talked and mingled with publicans and sinners. They came to Him together and they heard Him together. If it be probable that the publicans always were men, not by the rarest strain of imagination could we suppose that the sinners always, or all, were women. In the home where Jesus sometimes went, His friendly intercourse and kindly ministrations were directed alike to either sex. Indeed, the line of sex-distinction, in-so-far as Jesus' teaching and preaching, His loving and blessing, and even His calling and commissioning are concerned, seems to be invisible. It is said of Him and of us. He bore our griefs, carried our sorrows, wounded for our transgressions and by His stripes we are healed. He said to all, Come unto me. He said to all, Go ye into the world.

In all the affairs of life, the most distinctly masculine characteristic is to lead. It is divine. I speak this advisedly. Man was created for leadership. When man's leadership takes on the air of lordship it is reduced to egotism or bigotry and becomes very human. Man is head. God made him so. But man in his humanity is a very incomplete, unfinished creature, hardly more than a diamond in the rough. The diamond (the divine) is there, just as real, just as big perhaps, but somewhat hidden and with something lacking. In the affairs of life, the most distinctly feminine characteristic is to serve. It, too, is divine. When woman's service assumes the role of servitude it is reduced to weakness and loses the power to supply those spiritual qualities which supplement and reveal the best that is in man and which refine and give to the hidden gem its luster and perfection. Nothing short of the two opposite poles of character—the manly and the womanly—divinely blended, can make a perfect humanity.

To please man is a strong faculty in the woman-heart. It is a human faculty. It was God's plan, not that we should sin, but that we should meet the test as male and female, each endowed with the particular graces and functions which differentiate and which give to each an identity and a personal responsibility. The Father knew all things. He knew the bigotry of man, the weakness of woman. He knew wherein each would fail and He left nothing unprovided for. He sent Jesus. Jesus redeemed from the fall. He redeemed men and women alike. In the garden man and woman were a perfect pair. God knew that perfection would be lost. He also knew it would be regained. The first prophecy gave to the world the dawn of hope; a hope that would ballast all things until there should come the time for the fulfillment of that prophecy. But there were to be long years and hard years and dark years before the day-break of restoration. From the fall to the advent of Jesus into the world was four thousand years. The first sin had reduced woman, primarily, to a struggle, not only physically, as was the lot of man, but socially, religiously. However, as the sequence to her inherent right, woman found a place, even in the church.* With what distinction individuality she held that place in the religion of Israel is very apparent. That as a prophetess she held a place beside the prophet is not to be denied. No distinguishable line of rank or eminence can be drawn between Miriam and her brothers. Deborah was both a prophetess and a judge. Neodiah is mentioned as among the "rest of the prophets." And Huldah, it seems, was a prophetess high in authority in the matter of scripture interpretation above even the King himself. That the order was continued unto the time of Christ seems also to be sure. There is Anna to whom the title is directly assigned, and Elizabeth and Mary to whom it is assigned by implication at least. And so it is clear that women, equally with men, could be regarded as organs of the prophetic spirit both in the days of Israel and in the early Christian Church.

But woman's work in a public way always has been pursued under difficulties. It would not be easy to say when the conception arose, but gradually something crept into the minds of men (was it that old, innate bigotry?) that tended to the disparagement of women, to the discouragement of their wish and their effort to express themselves socially, spiritually. Their talents, more or less, were minimized and ridiculed, their ability discounted. They must be always in the background, always subservient. According to Jewish law women could not testify at court, they could not enjoy the social liberties that men enjoyed. Perhaps men could not understand nor divine the proper use of women's gifts and attainments. Man seemed willing to acknowledge woman as his help-meet only in a servile sense. Men could not see that women there, as now, wished to be co-workers only, not usurpers. Certainly men acted (as some men act now) as if they thought their own positions and interests were jeopardized and finally would be overthrown. And so Jewish leaders began to throw about women a restriction that was unnatural, unscriptural. So far and no farther could women go because men constituted themselves a governing power. Such was woman's imposed social and spiritual status that in time men came to where they were ready to bless God. He had not made them "a slave, a gentile, nor a woman." And it was into a time like this that Jesus came with His gospel of love and light.

The prophetesses mentioned in this paper we said were of equal rank with the prophets of their time. But was their service equal? Or, if it were, is equal service necessarily a similar service? How was the gift of prophecy in the case of women expressed in that day? How should it be expressed in this day? Where the Psalmist says: The Lord gave the word, great was the company of preachers, it is well understood that the word for preachers is feminine. But was this preaching an official act performed as a priest would have performed it, or as a preacher today would perform it? We think not. It probably was more like the recitation of lyric poetry, or the chanting of inspired song, or, to bring it up to modern times, the presentation of subjects by women at this Convention as compared to the sermons and addresses delivered by men. God's purpose and will would not be overthrown. Men need not have stood in fear of women usurping authority. Men need not fear such a thing now. God gave to women a place in the church, a place in the affairs of state, but by his power and wisdom, largely because of natural endowments and for physical reasons. He, in a sense, regulated and circumscribed that place. He would see to it then and now that His own omnipotence should not become impotent. Some tasks, in the church and out of the church, are essentially men's tasks and vice versa. It will be always so. Men's sphere and women's sphere never can be the same. Man is the foundation stone in the building of God's eternal Kingdom, woman the keystone. Were either removed, the structure could not stand.

Schurer, in some of his writings, makes mention of a woman as ruler of the synagogue. Just what were her duties in that capacity is not fully stated, but it seems to be clearly enough shown that the ruler, even though a man, did not himself lead the prayers nor expound the scriptures. Why, then, should men so misunderstand and misjudge the purpose of women in their public life? Could not men see that equality of gift did not involve identity of use? Jesus saw it. He recognized woman's ability. He recognized the adaptability of woman's make-up to the churches' needs; of man's make-up. Jesus came to set up His church and to give to both men and women a place in its organization and conduct, but not a similar place. The administrative side of the church could be easily manned. The love side needed development. Jesus did not expect men to be women nor women to be men, nor that either should do the other's work. He called both and expected both to be His disciples, His co-workers. If He was kinder to women, it was not in a sense of preferment, but because they were women and could both receive and give kindnesses better than men. His gospel was a gospel of kindness and love. He found women responsive and ready, ardent devotees of a principle that gave to the woman-heart the largest avenue for spiritual expression, for spiritual life. Jesus found in woman the faith, the sacrifice, the devotion without which the church could not perform its mission. The woman touch was the one quality or agency the church could not do without. Even to glance at a woman on the street was to transgress the narrow code of the Pharisees. Jesus swept aside such petty prejudice. In the finest, truest sense, he welcomed women among his own and became their friend and deliverer. To a woman member of an outcast race He spoke the finest message of His ministry. In His sight the mite of a widow woman was greater than the largest of the rich. Yes, Jesus bestowed upon woman great consideration for two reasons; first, because her birthright had been ignored and trampled upon; second, because her service and ministries were so much finer, so much more lavish, so genuinely natural, voluntary and fitting. When anxiety and grief laid their heavy hand upon Him, it was in the company of women that He found new strength and quiet and comfort. One who lived long ago (Gaius), so long ago that his knowledge must have been nearly first hand, said: "I will say again that when the Savior was come, women rejoiced in Him before either men or angels. I read not that ever any man did give unto Christ as much as one groat, but the women followed Him and ministered unto Him of their substance. 'Twas a woman who washed His feet with tears, and a woman who anointed His body to the burial. They were women who wept when He was going to the cross, and sat by His sepulcher when He was buried. They were women who first were with Him at His resurrection morn, and women who first brought tidings to His disciples that He was risen from the dead."

Jesus' heart had in it the blended qualities of both sexes. He was impartial. To be fair to men He did not have to be unfair to women. He recognized His debt to women and He paid it most royally. He paid tribute to whom tribute was due. And from that day all womanhood has stood and stands upon a plane of dignity and power because Jesus, first and greatest among the teachers of the world, welcomed woman and lifted her to her very own.

How are we, dear women, going to occupy this high and holy plane—our God-given, sin-lost, Christ-restored place? Forgetting the things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, are we going to set our aim and mark on the highest pinnacle of faith and press toward it? The climax of opportunity is upon us. Jesus said of Himself, "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." Our mission, fellow Christians, is the same. Jesus left the work of the Kingdom in our hands, in your hands, and mine. If I fail or if you fail to bear witness to the truth in whatever way God has called or shall call us to do His will, we grieve the heart of Him who lifted us to a place of power and purpose equal with himself, and we lose our share in the Kingdom's glory. And that is not all; some one else loses. "Ye shall not see my face except your brother be with you," is as applicable to us—yes, to us, the women of the church—in our relation to humanity and our obligation to the King of kings, as it was to the sons of Jacob in their relation and obligation to their brother, the reigning King of Egypt.

The times have changed. Christ is the same. His call is the same. The Kingdom-work yet to be done is not different from what it always has been, but it cannot be done in the same way. We must find the best way and do our best work—men, women, all. Whether we work as a whole or in groups or divisions, what matter, if but the work be done, effectually, successfully, in the name of Jesus and for His sake? The times have changed and the times are crisis. The world must be saved for Jesus and saved speedily. Already God's judgments are in the earth. The world is a great, open field on which is staged now the final battle of righteousness against sin. The army of our Lord's hosts needs recruits; it must have recruits. Cannot, will not, we who already are enlisted, each resolve not only to do our part—ever an increasing, enlarging part—but labor arduously to the end (which, still, will be but a beginning) that the full woman-power of our Church may release itself from self and selfish aims and rise to the opportunity and the need of the hour?

"I heard him call—Come, follow—

That was all.

My soul grew dim, I followed him.

I rose and followed, that was all.

Who would not follow, if they heard him call?"

*Delivered by Mrs. J. J. Lincoln before the Woman's Conference of the Southern Christian Convention.

A MAN OF PRAYER

In passing through Northampton, I went into an old cemetery, swept off the snow that lay on the slab, and I read these simple words: "Sacred to the memory of David Brainerd, the faithful and devoted missionary to the Susquehanna, Delaware and Stockbridge Indians of America, who died in this town, aged 34 years, October 8, 1847."

That was all there was. He did his greatest work in prayer. He was in the depths of those forests alone, unable to speak the language of the Indians, but he spent whole days literally in prayer. What was he praying for? He knew he could not reach those savages, for he did not understand their language. If he wanted to speak at all, he must find some one who could vaguely interpret his thought; therefore he knew that anything he should do must be absolutely dependent upon the power of God. So he spent whole days praying, simply that the power of the Holy Ghost might come upon him so unmistakably that the people should not be able to stand before him. What was the answer?

Once he preached through a drunken interpreter, a man so intoxicated that he could hardly stand up. This was the best he could do. Yet scores were converted through that sermon. We cannot account for it only that it was the tremendous power of God behind it.

Now, this man prayed in secret in the forests. A little while after, William Carey read his life, and he was so moved by it that he went to India. Payson read it as a young man of twenty years, and he said he had never been so impressed by anything in his life as by this story. Murray McCheyne read it, and was powerfully impressed by it.

But all I care is simply to enforce this thought: that the hidden life whose days are spent in communion with God, in trying to reach the source of power, is the life that moves the world. Those living such lives may soon be forgotten. There may be no one to speak a eulogy over them when they are dead. The great world may take no account of them. But by and by, the great moving current of these lives will begin as did that of David Brainerd, who died at about thirty years of age. The great missionary revival of this age is due more to the prayer and consecration of that one man than of any other.

Jonathan Edwards was watching over him those months while he was dying of consumption, and he said: "I praise God that it was his providence that he should die in my house, that I might hear his prayers, and that I might witness his consecration, and that I might be inspired by his great example."

When Jonathan Edwards wrote that great appeal to Christendom to unite in prayer for the conversion of the world, which has been the trumpet-call of modern missions, undoubtedly he was inspired by this dying man.

Life is a mission.

The aim is service.

The law, sacrifice.

The strength, fellowship with God.

OBJECTIONS TO THE INTERCHURCH MOVEMENT

(From an editorial in the Sunday School Times.)

The Interchurch World Movement, taken as a whole, seems to be more concerned with what men can do for God than with what God can do for men.

It is more interested in the natural than in the supernatural; it is stressing great organized activities of a merely human sort far more than the superhuman, omnipotent activities of the Holy Spirit.

It is "playing up" more power far more than spiritual power.

And it seems to be concerned not at all as to where the money comes from, provided only the desired amount comes; this means the much criticised policy of going out into what has aptly been called the "no man's land" of the unchurched, unbelieving population for money to do the Lord's work.

A well known Christian layman of large means, who is using his resources for true evangelism and Christian testimony, has written to the Sunday School Times: "One of the principal danger spots (in the Interchurch World Movement), in my mind, is the purpose of its promoters to cultivate what they call 'no man's land,' to get the financial assistance of multi-millionaires who have no church connection, but who like to be in anything that is big. I think evidences are not wanting that they are counting largely upon financial help from this source. I think you will agree with me that this is a very serious matter and is almost sure to bring the church of Christ into a seriously compromised situation, and it will find itself about where Nehemiah would have found himself had he accepted the proffered help of Sanballat and Tebiah."

Severe condemnation of this financial policy of the Interchurch World Movement was recently made by the Continent, a journal that has been enthusiastically supporting the movement as a whole. Discussing the adoption of his policy by the New Era Movement of the Presbyterian Church "under pressure of Interchurch policy," the Continent said that now "the menace suddenly looms from little to large, and silence is no longer possible." It showed the peril and disaster of such a policy, pointed out that it was "reversing the apostolic ambition to get men to give first their own selves to the Lord," and expressed the hope that "this financial excursion into 'no man's land' may return empty-handed," with the ensuing results that the church should "conclusively make up its mind to pay its own way through the world, and its next excursion into 'no man's land' should be 'evangelistic,'"

The spirit, the atmosphere, the pervading "genius" of the movement seems to be such an appeal to the world in general as shall challenge the world's natural interest in "big," commanding things. The "offense of the cross"—which is always, according to God's Word, an offense to the natural man—is certainly not found in the literature or the publicity advertisement of the movement. A recent sheet, for example, sent out to editors by World Outlook, the official organ of the Interchurch World Movement, stated that the magazine's list of contributors now included such authorities as—and names in the world of business and of the national government were mentioned, "and other writers of national and international reputation." Then this official organ went on to say: "In other words, World Outlook has launched the definite policy of making Christianity appeal to everybody, in this period of unrest, even to the most skeptical. * * * Its main object is to show the practicality and attractiveness of Christianity, not creed." Such a statement needs only to be read to understand its regrettable significance. Christ, not "Christianity," as the only Savior of sinful, lost men—that is the offer which the Christian church is commissioned by its Head to make to the lost world. And that offer is not "attractive" to any man until he has seen himself as a lost and loathsome sinner in the sight of God, but in spite of that a sinner so loved by God that his only Son was given as that man's substitute and ransom. This note is not present in the propaganda of the Interchurch World Movement.

As readers of the Sunday School times know, this journal has carried several advertisements of the Interchurch Movement. This was done in good faith, both the publisher and the editor of the Sunday School Times believing that the good and the bad, the wheat and the tares, were so intermingled in this great movement, as in so much else of the professing Christian church today, that its advertising ought not to be excluded. But a further, fuller study of the whole matter, with all that is involved, has led the Sunday School Times to reverse its position in this, and it is glad to assure those readers who were troubled by the appearance of the advertisements in these columns that they are not to be continued. For even in the case of Interchurch advertisements that in themselves might be free from objection, the Sunday School Times now feels that their appearance in its pages would be misunderstood as implying its endorsement of the movement as a whole.

One of the most indefensible statements in the advertising (though it was passed by when it appeared in these columns as seeming to be a detail not essential to the main theme of the advertisement) was the quotation credited to Bushnell: "One more revival, only one is needed: the consecration of the money power to God. When that revival comes, the Kingdom of God will come in a day." In view of the characteristics of the movement which have been discussed above, this emphasis, this note, is plainly not important, but too significant now to be overlooked. The Continent, already quoted, in a recent editorial which did not mention the Interchurch Movement, said: "The mind of the church needs to be deviated from its present abnormal trust in money. * * * The church lacks a dozen other things more seriously than it lacks money. * * * The church might be ten times as rich and generous as the most golden dream of the big-budget makers ever imagined and still be nothing but an organized travesty of spiritual fact, if payers are not also pray-ers."

It is because of such facts as the foregoing that the Sunday School Times refrains from endorsing the Interchurch World Movement, and would counsel its readers to take these facts prayerfully into account in determining what relationship, if any, God would have them bear to the movement.

In saying this, the Sunday School Times wishes it understood that it is by no means necessarily "closing its columns" to all use of any material or information which may come from this vast organization. The "surveys" the movement is making, the statistics and data it is gathering, can be of great value to Christian workers and may well be utilized as a challenge to the church of Christ to do its duty and fulfill its obligations in evangelism and prayer and stewardship.

In refraining from endorsing or commending the movement as a whole, and in expressing its conviction that the movement is likely to hinder and harm rather than to help and bless the true church of Christ in her true mission, the Sunday School Times is by no means alone. Entire evangelical denominations have already taken this stand, and many individual Christians, or sub-divisions of evangelical denominations, are, from quite different viewpoints and for different reasons, refraining from fellowshiping with this new factor in church life.

The principle of rightful co-operation is sound and scriptural. Such a movement could be truly dedicated to the Lord Jesus Christ, and be blessedly used by the Holy Spirit to the honor and glory of the Name which is above every name. But this would necessitate a humble accepting of God's methods as revealed in his Word, rather than man's methods: a following of the supernatural program of grace set forth in the humbling challenge of the Lord Jesus Christ through the great apostle: "For behold your calling, brethren, that not many wise after the flesh, not many noble, are called: but God chose the foolish things of the world, that he might put to shame them that are wise; and God chose the weak things of the world, that he might put to shame the things that are wrong; and the base things of the world, and the things that are despised, did God choose, yea and the things that are not, that he might bring to naught the things that are: that no flesh should glory before God." (Cor. 26-29).

UNSEEN ACQUAINTANCE

History has made you acquainted with so many of the world's great and good people. With some of them you made the acquaintance long after they had finished their part in the task of life. Their works followed them, and they are living in them. So to you they were pleasant company, full of interest and silent, vital power. If it were silent, you felt that it was good, safe company to keep. You know already that the silent forees are the most powerful ones. It is a great privilege to be acquainted with some people you have never seen, and your mind was glad to have the silent influence of the printed page, flowing with their words of helpfulness, brightness and cheerfulness. Some are living today with whom you are acquainted intellectually, but not personally, and that acquaintance has wonderfully helped you along the way you have already come. They have caused you to go up the way with greater energy and more ambition. And what you learned from them has been an inexpressible joy to your devotion and aspiration. Having made the acquaintance of many people you have never seen, you were delighted with and helped by them, and your life has been made larger and better by the unseen acquaintance. "Acquaint now thyself with God, and be at peace."

A HALF-DOZEN DON'TS

Don't forget to spell pray occasionally without an "r".

Don't have too many visions lest people come to regard you as visionary.

Don't issue checks on the bank of heaven except you have a deposit; your paper may be protested.

Don't imagine that it is your business to dance every time the devil begins to tune his fiddle.

Don't discredit yourself in the estimation of others by asserting that you have not sinned for ten years; they know better.

Don't expect promotion if you are doing the least work possible, and stealing five minutes every chance you get.—Religious telescope.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Our Easter offering is still coming in nicely and we are as grateful as can be for the loyal support of the churches and Sunday schools in this work. It is encouraging to have such loyal support and it gives us new energy to put forth our best efforts to make the work a success.

With sixty children to feed and clothe and care for at the present high prices makes one keep on their thinking cap to keep the expense account from running away with us.

While we do our very best and do without everything that we can possibly do without, still it will run up. We hope, however, that things will get normal again in the near future and we will not have to live at nerve tension all the time.

Our Children's Home fund is still growing, too, and we hope in the near future to have enough money in sight to commence the building. It ought to be a pleasure and a joy to make a contribution for this building. It will be a happy investment.

A home for the little tots, the sweetest little things in all the world. Though deprived of father and mother and homeless, they will be happy and the vacant place in their lives will be filled as far as possible if you will give them this home. Don't you want to make a wise investment? One that will bring you joy and happiness? One that will give you a great deal of pleasure? Then invest in this home. We have some pictures of the proposed building. If you want one, write me and I will be glad to mail you one and then you can see what you are investing in. I feel sure when you see the picture of the new building you will want to have a part in its construction.

LETTERS FROM THE CHILDREN

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl thirteen years old. I want to join the band of cousins. I have been reading the children's letters in THE CHRISTIAN SUN and I enjoy reading them very much. I am sending ten cents for this month. I will try to do better next time. You must come to see us and bring all the little cousins. Your friend.—Annie Kate Myhand.

We would be delighted to visit you and hope to this fall.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—It has been a good while since you have heard from us, but we have been thinking of you and the little cousins just the same. I hope they are well and are enjoying themselves. The beautiful spring weather makes us all enjoy life. Vacation will soon be here, as we have only 28 days more to go to school. We go to the Presbyterian Sunday school, but enjoy THE CHRISTIAN SUN very much and always look forward to its coming. We are sending you 50 cents each for brother and me, and Mamma sends $1.00, all for the little cousins. We hope they will enjoy it as much as we do giving it. Even though a little, we must remember the old saying, “Giant oaks from little acorns grow.” With love.—Flonnie and James Strange.

We thank you for your contribution. It will help to swell our total amount.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl twelve years old. I am very much interested in the little orphans, and want to join the band of cousins. I am a member of the Antioch, (Va.) Christian church and go there to Sunday school also. Mr. Elisha Bradshaw is our superintendent. I am enclosing daddy's check for $11.10, five dollars for daddy, five for myself to be used in the children's home fund; 10 cents, my dues, for the cousins and one dollar for Miss Bettie Roberts as an Easter offering.—Bunie Mae Butler.

You are a splendid little girl and we are real glad to have you write for the corner. You must write often.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I wish very much to join the band of cousins. I am a little boy eleven years old. I have one brother, Samuel, seven years old, one sister, Orië Mae, two years old. We all have a good time together. I am enclosing five cents to the little cousins that I earned this morning, also Samuel and Orië Mae are enclosing five cents each for the cousins. Much good luck.—Andrew L. Ayscue.

It was “big hearted” of you to earn five cents and then send it to the orphans. We are glad to have your letter this week.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am late again this month. Daddy has gone to the Convention this week and mother has had lots of writing to do for him. We have just closed our revival. Eighty-five new members were received. I hope all the children are having a good time playing out of doors. It has been raining here since Sunday and I can't get out. Please find enclosed fifty cents, my dues for April. Best wishes to all.—Olive D. Poythress, Jr.

Yes, I rejoice with you in your Sunday school raising such a fine Easter offering. Our little folks have a fine time playing out doors. I wish some one would donate a “Fun Full play ground set.”—“Uncle Charley.”

THE ADVENTURES OF LITTLE TOAD

Once a little toad came near being run over by a big lumber wagon, and this is how it happened: He was out walking in the sunshine, not far from home, in his cool and shady glen. When he tried to cross the road he fell into a deep rut. There had been heavy rains, you see, and the wheels of passing wagons had cut deep into the road. The little toad was so happy that morning that he had gone along with his head in the air, singing and doing high hops and not watching his steps, when down he went, bump! into that rut.

Said the little toad: “I took a tumble!”

At first the little toad was not worried. He tried to scramble out, but he could not get out. The walls of the rut were straight up and down, and they were deep.

Even father toad with his long arms would have had hard work to climb out of such a place. Then, just as the little toad was beginning to feel frightened, along came a horse and carriage. It looked as though the wheels of the carriage would surely strike the little toad and crush flat. But the man who was driving was careful to keep his wheels out of the rut. Yet one wheel, as it went around and around in passing, sent little bits of earth pelting down upon the poor little toad. That really did frighten him.

When the horse and carriage were gone the little toad said: “Next thing I know I shall be run over!”

He was so badly frightened that he put his hands over his heart. Indeed, that seemed to be all he could do. As he sat there, winking and blinking and thinking, the little toad heard a sound like distant thunder. It came nearer and nearer:

“Rumble-along,
“Rumble-along,
Rumble-along.”

That was what it said.

The earth shook. A lumber wagon was coming, and it was the wagon's heavy wheels that were singing that rumble-song. Nearer and nearer it came, and louder and louder the wheels were saying:

“Rumble-along,
“Rumble-along,
Rumble-along.”

The horses' feet kept time to the music. The horses's feet said:

“Go-down,
Go-down, down-down,
Go-down,
Go-down- down-down.”

Instead of lying flat on his face to die in the rut, the little toad did the only thing he could do to save himself—he danced up and down, up and down, up and down, and he waved his hands wildly.

When the lumber wagon was so near that the little toad could hear the driver singing:

Hail, ye heroes, heav'n-born band!”— just like that, a boy suddenly stepped out from somewhere, to cross the road. The boy was waiting for the lumber wagon to pass when he saw the little toad dancing up and down and waving his hands wildly. When the boy saw the little toad, he, too, began to wave his hands wildly. “Please stop your horses! Stop your horses!” he called to the farmer.

“Whoa, whoa, whoa!” said the farmer. And the horses stopped.

“Do you want to climb in and have a ride, Bub?” the farmer inquired cheerfully.

“No, I thank you,” answered the boy. “But you were going to run over this little toad.”

The boy stopped over and picked up the little toad. “You wouldn't want to kill him, would you?” asked the boy.

“Indeed not!” answered the farmer. “I am glad you stopped me in time to save the useful little creature's life. They tell us that toads eat so many insects that destroy our crops that every toad is worth $20 a year to a farmer. Long life to the little fellow! I am glad you saved his life. Get-up, get-up!"

Immediately the wheels of that lumber wagon began once more merrily singing:

"Rumble-along,
"Rumble-along,
Rumble-along."

And the horses' feet kept time:

"Pat-the-ground,
Pat-the-ground,
Pat-the-ground"—

like that.

"If I were you," said the boy to the little toad as he placed him gently on the ground, "if I were you and had just had a narrow escape like that, I should trot right along home to my mother."

So home went the little toad to his mother, just as fast as he could hop and skip. When she heard his story, the mother toad kept the little toad tied to her apron strings, so to speak, all the rest of that day. And this is the foolish little song the father toad crooned until sunset:

"Sing a song of happiness,
Sing a song of joy!
Sing a song of little toad
And a kind-hearted boy!"

NOTES

NOTES AND PERSONALS

The Elon College commencement embraces the period of May 23-25. A special effort is being made to get all the former graduates and former students there for the occasion.

There will be memorial services at Bethlehem (Alabama) next Sunday, and all day services planned. There will be speaking in both morning and afternoon with dinner served on the grounds.

Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., writes: "The meeting here with Lightbourne and Sam Davis fills the church at night; the afternoon meetings well attended, and the four daily prayer meetings in the four wards report increasing interest."

We are requested to announce that a rate of one and three fourths cents per mile for round trip tickets will be allowed from any point in North Carolina to the Baraca-Philathea Association to be held in Wilson, N. C., May 27-30. Mr. A. V. Anderson, Wilson, N. C., is chairman of the Convention committee.

We are reprinting in this issue an editorial taken from The Sunday School Times regarding the Inter-Church World Movement. The position taken by The Times is worth considering, even by those who favor the Movement and have entered into its work. The undertaking is so great in its scope that every side of it is worth considering.

Little Miss Martha Keith, ten years old, of Addor, N. C., writes us a letter and says: "I saw in THE SUN, in the Little Folks Department, a note 'Can you read this?'—There is so nothing wrong with a church member who says that the church is a beggar and that he is tired of being hounded for money." Miss Keith translated the sentence correctly and in very neat form, and we appreciate the interest shown by this little girl.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

The only cost of living that has not increased is the cost of eternal life.

The only wages that have not changed are the wages of sin.

The only homes free from profiteering are the mansions above.

It is better not to live by bread alone.

It is better to go into that vineyard whose Lord gives each one his penny.

It is better to dwell where the rents never change.

It is better to have our citizenship (i. e., conversation) where moneyocracy is unknown, and all men are born free and equal because they are born again.

ONLY ONE POWER

There is only one power that can draw after it all the multitudinous, heaped waters of the ocean, and that is the quiet silver moon in the heavens, which pulls the tidal wave into which merge all currents and swell breakers, as it rolls around the earth. And so Christ, shining down, lambent and gentle, but changeless, will draw in one great surge of harmonized motion all the else contradictory currents of our stormy souls. "My peace I give unto you."—A. Maclareu, D. D.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 23, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

Subject: Israel's First King.

Time: About B. C. 1095.

Places: Unnamed city where Samuel met Saul, Ranah, Cribeah, Mispah, Bethel.

Persons: Samuel, Saul, Israelites.

Golden Text: Only fear the Lord, and serve him in truth with all your heart.—Samuel 12:24.

Leading Thought: God offers the young great opportunities.

Junior Topic: Saul chosen as King.

Intermediate and Senior Topic: Kingly Qualities in Saul.

Adult Topic: The selection of leaders.

Additional Material: Luke 6:12-16, Acts 9:13-19.

Faithful Samuel

Today we learn about the change in the form of government that took place in Samuel's old age; the change that made Israel a kingdom and Saul a king. The chief figure in the lesson scene is Samuel, when he became the recognized leader of Israel, the nation was in a most deplorable condition. As a power they had become a by-word and a hissing among their neighbors. Samuel aroused them to a consciousness of their sin and led them back to loyalty to God. During his long career, he was a giant among great rulers, and his greatness found its surpreme cause in the fact that he was pre-eminently a man of prayer. But Samuel was getting old. A change must come within a few years at most. Dissatisfaction became so general that "the elders" representing all the people appeared before Samuel, and asked him to organize for them a government like that of the neighboring nations and to give them a king. Samuel was deeply grieved, and went to God for guidance. God told him to explain to Israel what such a change would involve, and then if they still insisted, to grant their request under protest. Samuel told all the words of the Lord unto the people, and they said: "We will have a king." Under Samuel Israel's government was revolutionized and the prophet was never greater than during this old age trial.

Astonished Saul

Peculiar and romantic were the circumstances in which Saul was called, and chosen to be the first king of Israel. It was while he was seeking the strayed asses of his father, and had wandered far from home in search of them over a region in which he was a complete stranger, and hearing that the prophet of Israel lived in one of the hill villages, he climbed the steep slope and met him half way up. Samuel was told in a secret communication with the Lord that this was the man He had chosen to be the first king over his people.

Saul, the farmer, who was anointed as the first king of Israel, belonged to the tribe of Benjamin. Hear him as he answers Samuel, "Am not I a Benjamite of the smallest of the tribes of Israel? and my family the least of all the families of the tribe of Benjamin? Wherefore then speakest thou so to me?" What amazement must have come to Saul as Samuel heaped upon him honor after honor, finally assuring him that by the authority of Jehovah he was king.

Saul was a changed man. Twenty-four hours before he was without aspiration or expectation, had even given up hope of finding the asses. He had never had interest enough in Israel, or Israel's God to know or care who Samuel was. Now, his whole being was throbbing with an ambition as mighty as ever stirred an angel's heart. God was with him.

Then the men of Israel, twenty years old and upward, were called together at Mizpah to chose their king by lot. Samuel, still giving expressions of warnings, said: "See ye him whom the Lord hath chosen." And all the people shouted, "God save the king." Israel had passed through a revolution and had become a kingdom.

We, in the United States, are just now very much interested in electing a President, and may he who is elected, be one who shall realize that God calls him, and is ready to guide in the great work of being leader of a great people. Said Lincoln, "If we do right, God will be with us, and if He is with us, we cannot fail."

DECREASE IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

According to the first annual report of the Federal Council of Churches, a decline of 10,000 schools with a decrease of 3,500,000 pupils within a year is revealed. Our Board of Religious Education is getting into action none too soon. This Board plans, as per vote of the Southern Convention at Raleigh the other day, to begin a vigorous campaign both for increase in the number of schools and for increase, as well as efficiency, of pupils in the schools and also for increase and improvement of our Christian Endeavor Societies. The Board has both a gigantic task on its hands as well as a wonderful opportunity for service.

There are in our country today, in round numbers, 56,000,000 people under twenty-five years of age. Of this number the Catholics claim about 9,000,000; the Jews 2,000,000; Protestants about 18,000,000. Allowing to all these sects all they claim there still remain 27,000,000 young people in the United States who do not go to Sunday school and have no religious training of any kind. Two out of three—69 percent—of all our young people who never go to a religious school of any kind, or have religious training.

Here is hoping our Board of Religious Education will soon have a wide-awake, active man in the field, informing and improving our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work on every hand.

J. O. ATKINSON.

There's not a burden that cannot be taken away by Jesus Christ, if we will come to Him. You know how they did when He was on earth. Well, He is "the same yesterday, and today, and forever." He is the unchangeable Christ, and He knows how to cure distress today as ever. If we will only come to Him with our burdens and troubles, He will hear our cry.—D. L. Moody.

TURNER

The death angel passed over the home of Mr. George Washington Turner, April 18, 1920, and took from our midst Brother Turner. Brother Turner had been a member of Third Avenue Christian church, Danville, Virginia, about three years. He said before his going that he felt that he was going to rest with Jesus.

Brother Turner was sick for two weeks before his death. It was my privilege to visit him once during his illness, but he was not conscious of my visit.

He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, one daughter, three brothers, one sister, and a host of friends.

The services were conducted by the writer at the home at three o'clock Monday afternoon, April 19.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—WOOD

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has seen fit, by the hand of death, to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. A. A. Wood, be it Resolved:

1. That the Ladies' Missionary and Aid Society of the First Christian church, has lost a consecrated and valuable member, one whose presence and interest in the work was always an inspiration to her co-laborers and whose Christian fortitude and calm acceptance of the Master's will throughout her long illness shall always be remembered as an example to the followers of Christ.

2. That it be further resolved that we extend our sincerest sympathy to the bereaved loved ones and commend them to our gracious Heavenly father for comfort and consolation and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be placed upon our records, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

HITS AND HAPPENINGS

The Wonders of Chemistry

Flattery is a sort of moral peroxide—it turns many a woman's head.—Boston Transcript.

“I never saw a ranting ‘red,’
Nor anyone who knew one,
But deportation, it is said,
Will make each red a blue one.”

Playing Safe

The black-haired boy had a mighty contempt for the tow-headed boy.

“Huh,” he said, “your mother takes in washing.”

“Of course she does,” the tow-headed satirist reported. “You didn't think she would leave it hanging out at night unless your father was in jail, did you?”—New York Times.

Schoolboy Definitions

Edward P. Mitchell, editor of the New York Sun, in an address showing the debt of our present-day langnage to the tongue of the Greeks and the Romans, gave the following schoolboy definitions: Ammonia, the food of the gods; congregate, to all wrinkle up; interloper, one who runs away to get married; demagogue, a vessel containing beer and other liquids.

Fighting the Wolf

Two middle-aged English women were talking of the war and the means they'd adopt to earn a living, should married men be forced to join the army.

“Well,” said one, “if the worst should come, I can keep the wolf from the door by singing.”

“Marie, you can,” said the matron very earnestly, “that is, if the wolf has a correct ear for music.”

Released Fables

“Fables that grandmothers can begin to relate to their grandchildren:—
“There was once an apartment to let—”

“There was once a company unthreatened by any strike—”

There was once a very poor coal merchant—”

“There was once a man who was able to eat cut slices of bread with real butter.”—London Opinion.

Young America

A five-year old lad accustomed to run away across the field to a neighbor's, saw his father coming after him one day after such a forbidden escapade. The lad's face clouded, in memory of what had happened and in forecast of what might come to pass. Gazing intently at the approaching father he said seriously:

“I do wish my daddy would stay at home and tend to his own business.”

A Fortunate Alibi

An Irish farmer, walking up in the night, saw an apparition at the foot of the bed. He reached out for a gun and perforated the ghost with a bullet. In the morning he discovered that he had made a target of his own shirt.

“What did you do then?” inquired the friend to whom he told the story.

“I knelt down and thanked God that I hadn't been inside it,” said the farmer.—Onward.

A New World Creed

BE LIEVE in a new world wherein Christ shall be made triumphant; and in the bringing of His principles to men, that His example and teachings shall prevail among the people of earth. I believe that He alone can save this world from the evils that beset it, and that the tenets of His righteousness must be incorporated in the lives of mankind, if justice and right are to be made secure. I believe that I have a personal, daily duty in building a new world. I believe that I, as a Christian, must do my utmost, here in my own community, to propagate these principles, if my life is to be made rich and full, and if other lives are to attain that measure of Christian knowledge and achievement which is their due and need. I pledge to God and myself the ordering of my hands, my brain and my heart to His purposes in my circle of living, that the Church of Christ may move on to the certain fulfillment of her glorious destiny.—Quoted from article in The Christian Work.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

"Belief in God is the basis of all health. Belief gives rise to hope, and hope is one of the most powerful stimulants to which the body can be subjected."

TAKING STOCK OF OUR MANHOOD

We are now taking stock of our manhood, or at least reviewing the prospects that we have enrolled during the Men and Millions campaign. The life-recruits secured bring to our man-power great encouragement and promise to greatly replenish our inadequate supply of men and women for Christian service. No one will deny that we are in great need of more ministers, missionaries and general helpers. Many churches are without pastors and many places need to be filled but cannot because we do not have the equipped and qualified strength. And these churches that are without pastors are not all in the country districts, but many of them in the cities. Newport News, Va., Holland, Va., Dover, Del., and such places as these are without a pastor. The money question is not to be considered; the only item is that we are unable to find the available men.

It is not enough to take stock and announce that we have so many life-recruits, and that so many will present themselves this fall at our College for training. We must carefully list each one of these young people and follow them up with our prayers and influence and our money, to see that the best of opportunities are theirs, and that none shall need for the best possible equipment for a life's career. It is very true that all the life-work recruits secured will not enter into full service. Some will be taken in death, others have their plans changed, and a few may fall out of the ranks through indifference and carelessness. But this only argues further for our best support, interest and co-operation in behalf of those who make good in the pursuit of their ideals. God will hold us responsible for these young persons whom we have influenced to consider active Christian service. Some may fail because we fail and shame upon us if such should occur.

Let no one weary in well doing. These sons and daughters of ours cannot be brought to maturity of their plans over night. Months will not accomplish the task, neither will one or two years, but four or more years will be the length of their pathway of preparation. These years will be the testing time of their strength, of their faith and of their manhood and womanhood. Our interest, our time, and enthusiasm in behalf of the cause for which they are working must not die. The songs that we have sung, the prayers that we have offered, the speeches that we have made, and the pleadings that we have uttered must not die with the breath with which they are breathed, or return unto us void. We must follow these young people through the vista of time and silently guide those in whose lives we trust and for whom and of whom we have hoped. The Kingdom of God is not built in a day, and the beauty and the glory of a soul eternal is not perfected with one single expression of life, but step by step it is crowned into the likeness of Him Who is our Christ.

Recruiting our ministry is only begun. It is for the Church to plan a large and constructive program that will embrace the Kingdom's every interest and challenge every noble emotion of those who have laid all at the Master's feet.

COMMENCE—MENT TIME

The study of the division of the first word under which this article is captioned will probably throw some meaning on our endeavor in the following paragraphs. Let the reader change the above heading to read after this fashion: Time to Commence.

We know of no season of the year that must bring more joy to the youth of our country than the season embraced by May and June. The coming of the flowers reminds us of a renewness of life—the passing of things and the coming of things more permanent. The rose in the garden sheds its sweet odor and elicits our praise; the lilies of the valley turn our minds to the resurrection morn, and every roadside bedecked with a multiplicity of flowers remind us of a garden that shall bloom ever, where season shall not change nor friends pass away.

Two angelic characters present themselves that strike deep into the noble emotions of manhood. These characters present themselves in the form of the young girl graduate and the June bride. Ordinarily one looks out in one direction of service and the other in another, while sometimes in the same direction. There is pity and pathos thrown about the feet of each. The young woman who graduates is not finishing her life's preparation but is just commencing to do a life's work, while the other links her arm into the circle of wifehood. Pity and pathos do not characterize each case, and not any case for that matter save to show that life's duties, while joyous, are serious and that the life lived cannot be lived again.

But the thing about which we are thinking, while ink runs a little too free from our pen, is the young graduate, whether it be a young woman or a young man. Commencement season—a season in which to commence. How we so often confuse it with the finishing time! The emphasis that we often hear placed upon it in public addresses moves us at times to ask if we have not really misunderstood the term. Commencement is not a time of finishing, but a time of beginning—beginning to live that larger life of which every soul is capable.

Aside from the false emphasis that it is the season of finishing instead of beginning, there is that great display of diplomas that is too often misunderstood. Sometimes the high schools offer a beautiful diploma that presents in appearance the same as a diploma from a college or university. We candidly believe that many parents as well as many recipients of these beautiful ornaments, are confused and misled as to their real significance. How often have we heard a parent say that his child graduated, without attaching to his sentence the name or standing of the school from which the child graduated! The emphasis is too often put on graduation and the thought on the diploma and not on what is behind the diploma and the meaning of graduation.

Let us not impress upon the boys and girls who graduate from the high school that they have finished and that there is no other graduation for them. To do so is to limit beyond comparison the great possibilities in manhood and womanhood, as well as to defeat the splendid systems of education which our country affords. And as we shall impress upon them the need of a larger preparation to meet the challenges of a new age and a new day, let us remind them that every step of their preparation should be marked and measured by Christian ideals.

GIVING OUR MEN A CHANCE

During the recent session of our Convention we were very much interested in the discussion of bringing home to the churches the voluntary adoption of a minimum salary for our ministers. The Convention took the matter seriously and was enthusiastic in its every issue. THE CHRISTIAN SUN has spoken again and again in behalf of the underpaid minister—the man who is giving more than he is receiving. We are confident that universal approval has not been given to all these articles, but we are as sure that they have been approved by the majority as we are sure that electricity furnishes light by which to write this note. Because some have taken issue with us for constant pleading in behalf of our loyal ministry has not in any way subdued our enthusiasm for the cause.

We still contend that no minister can do his best while he is brooding over financial matters. No preacher can give his best services and best serve his people when he must worry over how he is to meet his grocery bills instead of preparing sermons.

We are greatly rejoiced to hear and read of the reports from all parts of the Brotherhood that salaries are being raised. They ought to be raised, and if there is a church that claims that it is paying for more than it is receiving it is the duty of that church to give the pastor his resignation and set him free to do some other work. We believe that God calls men to preach, but we also believe that God calls men to help pay the servants of God.

We have young men in our pulpits today who are discouraged and despondent because they are not receiving enough to properly support them and their families. It is a shame, a pity and a tragedy. It is a shame from the standpoint of honesty, a pity because of their families and a tragedy to thus throw a stumbling block in the way of the best possibilities of their manhood. Brethren and beloved to whom we are speaking, the Convention has no power to say what a church shall pay but leaves it with the pastor and the people. The Convention leaves the matter to that democratic spirit of the Christian Church, which democracy is too often stifled over trying to find expression through some soul that has never known the joys of giving. The day is here when we must pay our preachers and expect them to be preachers of the first magnitude. The conditions of the world challenge the Church and the Church must challenge its every enlisted man. There is no time nor place for a small program. Let us be up and doing, liberal in spirit, generous at heart and willing to give every man a chance to give expression to his best.

EDITORIAL CHIPS

There are those who think of the great plan of salvation as being complicated because it is great. No man ever truly and earnestly sought the Christian life and failed to find it.

An intelligent church membership is the surest and safest asset for definite work. The denominational paper is the best medium through which the church members can fully acquaint themselves of the denominational work and thus become intelligent of its needs.

A genuine revival goes beyond church membership; it puts the church on the doing list. A real revival of religion is always in order and no church has become so Christ-like that it did not need it.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

THIRD CHURCH

Dr. L. E. Smith and the faithful at Third Christian church, Norfolk, have worked wonders. Within a year the temporary hut of a building has been enlarged from a 300 to 500 seating capacity, and the larger room has now been filled with zealous worshippers. Some 225 members have been added within the year and still they come at almost every service. Last Thursday night there was a reception tendered the new members by the old. New members wore roses. Old members wore a warm smile of welcome and a most hearty handshake. There was a delightful musical recital, speech making, ice cream and cake program. The pastor presided and was wreathed in joyous smiles. The music and recitations were glorious. The address on behalf of the old members to the new was fitting and cordial; that in response by a new member was delightful and appropriate. The writer spoke a piece about the Glory and Prerogative of the Church and the ladies served flowers, ice cream and cake and everybody was happy. The blue print of plans for the great new church edifice was an exhibition and elicited lively interest. A campaign for funds with which to build is to be launched directly, and one sees already, in vision, a great stone structure, supplanting the present little wooden-frame building, raising its lofty head high above the buildings of rapidly growing Park place. Dr. Smith and his people are doing a great work for the Kingdom and for the denomination here, and one in which every member of the Christian church should take a pardonable pride. Brother J. M. Darden of our Mission Board was present at the Thursday evening meeting and greatly encouraged the pastor and congregation by his presence and deep interest.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The Lightbourne-Davis meeting, which opened in the Suffolk Christian church on May 2, will close May 16. Victor Lightbourne is the Convention Evangelist and Sam Davis is a far-famed blind pianist who was converted in the Norfolk Billy Sunday meeting, and is now a member of the Third Christian church of Norfolk.

The congregations have packed the church from the beginning. It is the largest auditorium in the city and no such congregations have ever attended a single meeting in Suffolk. The interest has equalled the attendance. Many say that Lightbourne outclasses Sunday as a preacher. His messages are Scriptural, classic, luminous. He not only grips the attention, but challenges the conscience. His illustrations are gathered from history, literature, and personal experience. His earnestness appeals to the heart, and his manliness appeals to men. There is no more capable evangelist in this country.

As to Sam Davis, the blind pianist, he is a marvel. Blind from childhood, his musical soul, without external hindrance, has developed into a fountain of harmony. He has musical training, of course, having been educated in the Institution for the Blind in Raleigh, N. C., and subsequently in the New England Conservatory, in Boston; but he has more than musical education; he has the soul of a musical genius, and improvises in his playing in a way that embellishes the finest written compositions. To say the least, he is a wonder.

The two, together, make an attraction that draws the people, and that is an important factor in evangelistic services. The first thing is to assemble the people, then create an atmosphere, and then witness the work of the Holy Spirit. These three elements at work in a community will win the otherwise indifferent to Jesus Christ. The gospel in that way vindicates its power and proves itself a "savor of life unto life, or of death unto death."

What the church needs is a consistent Christian life on the part of its membership. Evangelistic meetings would then escape the criticism of outsiders, who point to the unfaithful as their excuse for holding aloof from the church. But making allowance for all conditions, evangelistic campaigns are essential for spiritual awakening in the church and spiritual excitement in the community. The only danger in evangelistic efforts is reaction. If old members of the church would see the example of regular attendance upon all the services of the sanctuary, new members would be encouraged to do likewise. "Forsake not the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is: but exhort one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." It was the regular marching around Jericho for seven days that brought the power of God down to destroy the walls of that city. The victory at Jericho should not suffer defeat at Ai. The great revival should not spend its force in the enthusiasm of the days of its continuance, but the spirit of it should live through the year and find its fruition in heaven.

POUNDED BY MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Monday afternoon, May 3, the Woman's Missionary Society of the Chapel Hill church met with Mrs. R. F. Brown at the parsonage. Just as we were at the close of a very interesting program we noticed Brother W. E. Lindsay drive his car into the backyard. Just then some one said, "Rev and Mrs. Brown are wanted at the back door," and before we could have time to think we were being pounded.

Among the good things they brought were butter, coffee, meat, rice, macaroni, oatmeal, cocoanut, fishroe, canned fruit, salmon, starch, California peaches, sweet potatoes and chocolate.

We feel so grateful to each of these good ladies for these thoughtful expressions of their appreciation and pray God's richest blessing upon each of them and ask Him to make us truly worthy of serving such a people.

NORTHERN ALABAMA

The work at this place is moving along nicely. We have begun our building—have it planned and most of the weather boarding up. We desire to thank the Alabama Conference for the nice donation to the work at this place. The cost of the work has already amounted to about five hundred dollars. It will take something like a thousand dollars to build and equip the church but if we had one hundred and fifty dollars we might be able to complete the structure. The house has cost the writer not less than one hundred and twenty-five dollars and if I had been asked a year ago if I could give that amount on a church building, I would have said that it was impossible. However, what I have given has been with a free will. All of the members have helped willingly. It has been a hard pull on account of the small membership.

If it is the Lord's will, we trust that we shall soon have a church home of our own. The Methodist people have been very kind to us in permitting us to use their house, but yet that is not like one of our own.

Brother Elder is doing a great work here. He lives quite a distance away but he seldom fails to meet his appointments.

We desire to thank Dr. J. O. Atkinson for the grand speech that he made at the Alabama Conference last fall, concerning this work, for we feel that if it had not been for that speech these steps would not have been taken. We would be glad to have Brother Atkinson visit the field some time in the future.

I trust that every church will go over the top in the Men and Millions Forward Movement.

THIRD CHRISTIAN CHURCH, NORFOLK, VA.

The work at the Third church continues to move, and to move in the right direction. Since February 1 we have received into the fellowship of the church 145 new members and since March 2, 1919, we have received 267 which more than doubles the membership and strength of the church in every way since that date. God has been good to us and has wonderfully blessed us.

On April 9, through the courtesy of the Evangelistic Committee of the Southern Convention, Evangelist Victor Lightbourne, gave us two weeks of his valuable service in an evangelistic effort. Mr. Lightbourne is certainly one of the great preachers of the day and is one of the coming evangelists of this country. I have heard most of the leading evangelists in the field and, in my judgment, he is the most attractive, the sanest, and the greatest preacher of any, outside of Billy Sunday and perhaps Bob Jones. Few men can attract and hold an audience as he does. And now he has an added attraction. Sam Davis, the famous blind pianist, and perhaps the greatest pianist in this country, is thinking of taking the field with him. Mr. Davis has recently united with the Third church and is one of the finest spirits and most talented men that I have ever met. Any community or church will be fortunate to have these workers in their midst.

Sunday, May 2, was a red letter day for the church and pastor. Our large temporary auditorium was filled, the sermon was delivered, five new members received, five children consecrated, twenty-three received the ordinance of baptism and the congregation unanimously advanced the pastor's salary to three thousand dollars. The pastor thought certainly that the day was about over but not so, at the evening hour the auditorium was again filled for worship and at the close of the service, after the benediction, the pastor was again held up by his good congregation and presented with a Ford Sedan car. The people had a mind to give and a will to do. God bless their generous noble hearts and continue to prosper them. Could a preacher fail to love and serve to the best of his ability those who treat him thus? I am grateful to them and to Almighty God.

We now face the task of erecting a suitable building in which to worship. We are soon to make our canvass for funds, we need, we crave the prayers and thoughtful generosity of the Brotherhood at large.

L. E. SMITH, Pastor.

Norfolk, Va., May 5, 1920.

FORTY-SIX YEARS AGO

Forty-six years ago I became pastor of the Christian church at Morrisville, N. C. This was one of my first charges. At this time I had charge of the Haw River Academy in Chatham County. After an absence of forty-four years, I was at Morrisville again last Sunday and preached morning and evening to good congregations. This church has a good Sunday school, with Brother E. W. Clements as superintendent and his son a teacher of the first Bible class. To say that I enjoyed this visit, poorly expresses it. I spent both nights with our dear Brother and Sister Clements. Brother Clements is looking well and thinks he will be able to walk without his crutches by and by. The church feels, deeply, the loss of Brother James Moring. They speak highly of their young pastor. God bless this church.

P. T. KLAPP.

A CHURCH THAT DOES THINGS

It is not usual for a Sunday school to have a larger membership than the church of which it is a part, but this is true of the Third Christian church, Norfolk, Va., where I attended service again last Sunday. It is unusual also to find a larger number of adults than children in Sunday school.

The members of this church seem to feel that the entire family should attend Sunday school as well as church. This department of the church is a bee-hive of activity. I understand that it is an unusual thing for a teacher to be absent.

The preaching service Sunday morning was especially interesting and impressive. Thirty-three persons were baptized and five children consecrated. Several new members joined. Following the Communion the new members were formally received and given the right hand of fellowship. The line extended around the entire church auditorium. It was an inspiring scene. At the close of the morning service the pastor was notified of an increase of $500.00 in salary. At the evening service he was presented with a Sedan automobile.

The main topic of conversation in this church now seems to be the erection of a new building. They need it.

HAW RIVER

In the campaign of the Men and Millions Forward Movement, the Haw River Christian church secured seven tithers and raised $1,236.00. One week was taken to canvass the entire membership of the church.

DANVILLE, VA.

Our church has raised the money to pay off the indebtedness, and has gone over the top in every way in the Men and Millions Forward Movement, with the exception of the membership drive. We are expecting to go over the top with that before the time expires; as we have taken in half of our number and are expecting to begin a series of meetings the fifth Sunday in this month which will last for two weeks, or as long as interest will demand. Rev. J. Lee Johnson is to do the preaching during the meeting.

At the eleven o'clock hour we are planning to dedicate our church. Dr. J. O. Atkinson is to preach the dedicatory sermon for us. We will have dinner on the ground at noon and also at 7:45 in the evening. All those who are interested in our church at Danville and who can possibly avail themselves of the opportunity, are cordially invited to participate in the services of that day.

In regard to the work in general, it is very pleasant indeed as pastor to labor in the church and Sunday school. Last Sunday we had 194 present at Sunday school and are looking for many more additions during the summer months. Among those things which are of interest to our people in this Sunday school is the adult class which is taught by Brother Browder; also the attention given the little folks. The singing both by the choir and the children at Sunday school is a real inspiration to any one who has the opportunity of visiting this church and Sunday school. To God be all glory and praise for the success of this work.

JOSEPH E. McCAULEY.

RICHMOND, VA.

May 1607, the first permanent settlement of the English speaking tongue was established in North America at Jamestown Island. At that time the nations of the world were ruled by the iron hand Autocrats. Many pilgrims left their mother countries to cross the briny deep to hunt for freedom in the wilds of America, until the little settlement began to grow in leaps and bounds and practically covered the entire Atlantic Seaboard territory.

The mother countries always kept on the alert, both eyes open for they saw rich gains to be had from this coming nation, and the result was many wars between the two leading European nations for supremacy, but at last England, our real mother country, gained full control and after gaining control over the colonies she still made life a burden for them.

But the day of freedom was to come. A little farmer boy was born and reared on the farm in Hanover county, a few miles from this city. This boy made a failure in all his business ventures until he began to practice law, and with this practice he began on the right scale. His first important case was a battle with the Autocratic Church of England, so the fire of freedom was kindled and continued to burn stronger and stronger until we find him going to the front, with the most powerful weapon that was ever made, and while we stand and look we see him hurl the most powerful projectile that was ever hurled at Autocracy, "Give me liberty or give me death." It was a well directed aim and it gave Autocracy a crashing blow. Democracy had won a complete battle—liberty, yes a government of liberty, where we could worship the true and living God to the very dictates of our own conscience, that shot was fired in less than one hundred miles of Jamestown Island and it was fired in a church of the true and living God, old St. John's, Richmond, Va. Service is still held in the old church.

In 1794 Old Lebanon, Surry County, Va., almost half way between Richmond and Jamestown, we find Rev. Rice Haggard with a powerful weapon well trained, and while we look he fires it at Religious Autocracy. His aim was perfect. Religious Democracy has come and come to stay.

So my dear beloved brethren, is the above event a coincident, or is it a great event that should go down in history? I feel like we should feel as Samuel of old, "Ebenezer hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

But one other thing: While we feel glad of the above incident, there is one sad thing connected with it, and that is for a century and a quarter our work was neglected in this city, the capital of the State, where the events happen. Yes, the Christian Church was founded only a few miles from this city, and our work has lain by the wayside until Easter Sunday. A new day had dawned, a beautiful day—not too hot nor too cold—when a little band of forty people, who love the principles of the Church that rejects all man-made creeds and accepts the Lord Jesus Christ as the Head of the Church.

Yes, the First Christian church of Richmond is established, and we thank our precious Heavenly Father that He has not only given us a church but has sent us one of the greatest leaders in the Church, Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., who has in a short time won the highest esteem from every member of the church. We all love him, and every member is a loyal subject, the United States is not any stronger united than our little band of workers is.

We are glad the Men and Millions Forward Movement did not forget us. It asked us for over six hundred dollars, (no doubt they thought it would be a large donation). We thought the amount was small and instead of hundreds we made it thousands, and then some, notwithstanding the fact that our dear pastor was handicapped nearly all the time. First his dear companion, Mrs. Walters, has been very ill, but the prayers for her speedy recovery have been without ceasing, and he has a big amount of work on hand in the Forward Movement. But the seed has been sown and they have fallen on good ground so the plant has, and will continue, to grow. Every week we are finding ex-members of the Church who are willing and ever ready to return to the Church of their first choice.

So my beloved brethren, I beg you to please remember the First Christian church of Richmond, Va. in your prayers, and do not forget that if you visit the Old Dominion's capital, and stop over Sunday that you can worship with some of your brethren at 2300 Hanover Avenue. Sunday school at 9:45; service at 11 o'clock; Christian Endeavor at 7:00 P. M.; service at 8:00 P. M. If you expect to come this way make it so you can stop over and pay us a visit. Write Dr. W. T. Walters, our beloved pastor, or myself and we will see that you are safely conducted to our place of worship.

JNO. L. CARR.

1317 Porter St., Richmond, Va.

P. S.—I desire to state with great pride and give credit to our young Brother, Rev. H. J. Fleming, for much of our success, for it was last year at the Christian Endeavor Convention that was held in this city that the writer met him and stated to him the need of a Christian church in this city. Brother Fleming at once became interested and after he returned to his work at Newport News he wrote me several letters and also took it up with Dr. Atkinson, our Mission Secretary. So I shall always remember our young Brother, and trust the good Lord will always bless him wherever he locates.

THE HOME OF REV. A. W. ANDES

On May 14, 1920, at the invitation of Rev. A. W. Andes it was my good pleasure to accompany the above named party to his home near Mt. Clinton, about six miles west of of Harrisonburg. The father of this home is a minister of the Gospel, of patience, prayer, and perseverance, who is always on the job. The mother of this home is one of the best women of Rockingham County, Virginia. With her prayers and enthusiasm she is doing a great deal of work among the women in the Virginia Valley Central Conference. God has blessed this home with three bright little boys, brim full of their mother's enthusiasm, who make this home a place of real pleasure and happiness. Needless to say I enjoyed this visit. Words cannot express the delight it brought to me. I shall not soon forget the quiet love and sacredness that seemed to prevail at this home.

Men and Millions

GROWING STRONGER BY SERVICE TO OTHERS

Our Men and Millions Movement is an opportunity presented to our Christian hosts to see whether we can co-operate. It is far more than any man made measure to obtain funds with which to do church work. It is a measure that enables each of us to realize that we may be of service to all. The church as well as the individual may become self-centered and lose sight of the value and worth of co-operation. We are by nature co-operative beings, that is to say we need and are strengthened by co-operation.

Very often in our annual Conferences we hear delegates say, "A few of us have all the paying to do, all the financial burden to bear and it hurts." These delegates are right in saying it hurts. What really hurts, however, was not the amount the few had to pay; but the fact that the many would not help. Three brothers in the family have the work about the house and lot to do. When two of the number are sick, or are away from home for cause, one does the work and it does not hurt him. But when all three are there and two should help, but are indolent or "lazy" on the job and will not help, then it does go hard with the one to have all the work to do. It is not the amount of work that hurts; it is the lack of expected co-operation that hurts.

Now, in our great Movement, the churches that have gone well over the top have not given, nor worked to their hurt. But these churches have a right to expect the co-operation of their sister churches. Failing of this expected co-operation there will naturally be a feeling of hard and cruel burden-bearing. Every church that goes to the work and goes over the top then not only gets the buoyancy and benefit of its own efforts; it gets the joy and happiness of encouraging, of boosting, of helping, of inspiring others. Each can help the other and each does help the other in co-operating together for the Master's work and in His name for a great task.

We have, in this Movement, set ourselves to a great task. Thousands have already got great blessings and joy from the Movement. Some churches are stronger, happier, more active in all good words and works because of this Movement. But invariable it is those churches which have put the Movement on, and by dint of vigorous and persistent effort, have done their best and so have achieved victory.

We are to keep on till every church has been given a chance. For the sake of the local church, for the sake of the help, courage, activity, strength, growth, which the Movement brings to the local church, great indeed is the pity that every church in the spirit of brotherly love and co-operative fellowship does not put on the Movement and do all possible to carry it through. We should be co-workers together with God in this great task for His Kingdom.

J. O. ATKINSON.

DEVOTIONAL

HINDERED PRAYERS

Not all the prayers we offer are available. Do you pray? "O, yes, I pray, but the answer to my prayers does not always come, and I often get discouraged, because I do not receive the help or blessings for which I ask." There is a cause for this, or there may be several causes. Sometimes it may be for lack of faith or persistence in praying. You have prayed and prayed and do not feel any better, nor receive the help and health for which you pray. You get tired in your feet and knees waiting so long for the promised blessings. If you have prayed to have your diseases healed and you are not cured, there must be some reason for it. While you prayed you did not use the means within your reach, perhaps. Prayer and faith will not do all the healing in your case. There must be works, too, to help accomplish the desired curing effects—you must help yourself all you possibly can; and you must help God to heal you by using the medicine and the things your case needs.

In my first charge there was an old man who used to pray that people might help God in their devotional services. He was severely criticized for that way of praying about helping God. But he was right in that simple petition to God. You must help God to help save and bless you. Because He works in while we work out, and this is a blessed privilege which we ought to greatly enjoy. O, His wonderful saving power when we work together with Him! The reason, then, we have not been more fruitful in good works, is because we have not helped Him to work with us.

Some diseases never will be cured by faith and prayer alone; they must have other treatment. If healed at all, they must have the right remedy applied, and if the remedy cannot be found, failure to cure them will likely be the result, unless nature comes in and helps the healing. Christian science and faith do not reach the case, nor never will alone. God has the power to do anything, but He does not do everything we want Him to do. He provides the means and instruments for people of intelligence and skill to use, and when we think and work with God we may expect great results to follow. You must work with physical, intellectual and devotional energy, while He works with divine, saving and healing power. Christian science may do as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. It does not reach the bottom of causes to produce desired effects. Your attention may be charmed by pleasing objects and the beautiful things in nature may lead the mind out into the fertile field of thought and investigation, but that by itself does not cure diseases, nor bring Jesus into your life.

You find it difficult sometimes to pray; you do not know how to pray as you should. Your petitions do not ascend the throne where Jesus answers prayer, and then you feel discouraged, dissatisfied with yourself, and far away from the joy of your deliverance. Then you so gladly remember that the spirit makes intercession for you with groanings which cannot be uttered. The heart trembles with joy and the lips quiver with inexpressible happiness because the spirit intercedes.

Your prayers are often hindered because the way to God is obstructed. The way of communication between Him and you has been obstructed. Something is in the way, and you feel it. What is it? You do not know, perhaps. Then look for the cause and remove it, or else the way will remain blocked. You go into a telegraph office to send a message. You give it to the operator, and he tries his instrument, but the message does not go. Something is wrong. The wire has been cut, or some obstruction hinders or prevents it from flashing to its desired destination. Think of the prayers you have offered up—written up, thought up—started up to your Father—but they did not go. They were hindered prayers. They did not go—something was in the way. What was it? Did you pray to God to bless you and everybody, and at the same time hate your brother with all your heart? You may feel very keenly something your brother said about you, or did to you, and he may not have acted in a lovable way, and everything about him may be repulsive to you; and if that is the, or one of the hindering causes, it must be removed some way before you get the full, free joy of forgiveness and happiness. You know what the Bible tells us about that kind of business. This, then, is one great obstruction which may be in the way. This very thing has been the trouble with many who would not like to confess it. It not only has been the trouble, but it is the trouble with so many today who are high up in the Christian profession. God forgive and soften our cold, strong hearts with thy love and with the joy of salvation.

The world is drifting out into the turbulent sea of discontentment, neglecting to pray as it ought, and forgetting God. Hindered and neglected prayers helped to do it. We must come back to God as our only hope of help and deliverance. We can say, "Lord, help us as we come to Thee with the wireless message of a sinful, troubled soul. May it reach the mercy seat, from which Jesus answers prayer."

MISSIONARY

THE MISSIONARY MOTIVE

The writer met an ex-service man recently who after the armistice was signed and he was released from active army duty in France, went with a number of other navy men practically around the world, particularly visiting China and Japan and making a stay of several weeks. This man was not particularly impressed with missions and foreign missionary work because, to quote his own words, "he and the others knew too much about it."

I find not a few people who are either indifferent to missions or are opposed to missions. This indeed is strange in the light of Scriptural teaching. I should have said to the ex-service man that his opposition to missions was opposition also to the life, teachings and direct commands of our Lord Christ. There is nothing plainer in Scripture than the missionary command, "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel to every creature." Christ's direct teaching of this single movement should be a sufficient motive for undertaking missionary work, and yet many people talk and act as if they could treat lightly the teachings of our Lord. Add to this command on the part of our Lord, the unmistakable fact that those who have sought to carry it out have been signally blessed, and wonderfully prospered. We must somehow develop a passion for missions; that is, to say, a passion for our Lord's service in saving the world. The reason why we are doing so little at home is because we have done so little abroad. Until we get a faith large enough to reach those whom we will never see, we will never do our part by those whom we shall see. We find this paragraph in a missionary magazine which is to the point:

"Chief among the sustaining motives of the Christian life is a missionary passion. The missionary spark, fanned by information and appeal, burn into a flame of illuminating and purifying power, without which any Christian life grows weak and futile. The missionary motive is the direct opposite of selfishness. It centers desire upon the welfare of others without expectation of reward, which is the noblest, most God-like form of love. It diverts ambition from self to neighbor, from the glorification of self to the glory of God. It widens the interest, broadens the horizon, enlarges the sympathy, multiplies personal contact, uplifts the vision, thus giving to the Christian something worth living for. The missionary motive reaches into every phase of life, glorifying the commonplace, giving impulse to zeal, and reward for sacrifice. In our churches are multitudes of Christians, saved, but joyless and all but useless. They need to be gripped by the missionary motive as they were by the love of Christ when they were converted. The teacher and preacher cannot impart this passion unless they themselves are moved by it."

As we may develop the missionary passion, the missionary work will be done and results will be achieved in the name of our Master.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

A CHILD—YOUR SECOND CHANCE

I found these striking facts the other day which to me are very significant:

"A child is your second chance. Yet what are the churches doing for the children of the United States?"

"Only about half of the 53,000,000 children in the United States are enrolled in religious schools of any creed. Some religious workers may say that we 'are holding our own.' But who is holding the rest?"

"But we are not holding our own. In 1916 the reported enrollment in Protestant Sunday schools was 21,888,521. In 1920, according to Interchurch statistics, it had shrunk to 15,617,060.

"Members of other creeds take better care of their children than Protestants do. Jewish children receive every year 335 hours of religious instruction. Catholic children receive 200 hours a year. Protestant children average 24 hours.

"Much of our Sunday school work is in the hands of teachers who are untrained and unguided. The public schools provide one supervisor for each 82 teachers, but in the Sunday schools one person must supervise 2,716 teachers.

"Much of the trouble comes from the fact that we have carried on our religious education in a poverty stricken manner. One typical city church is spending three times as much for music as for its Sunday school and twice as much for its janitor service. Every member of that church gives each year: $1.48 for music; $1.07 for janitor; $.48 for the Sunday school."

J. O. ATKINSON.

THE HEADWATERS

"This stream doesn't look half as large as it did when I was a boy," an old man observed. "It isn't as broad, and it isn't as deep. Something must be amiss with the headwaters."

Something was amiss. The source of the stream was a marshy spot in the heart of a deep woodland, and, within the last few years, the tract had been cleared, and the summer sun had had its way with the upper reaches of the brook, and the springs which fed it.

When a boy, hitherto energetic and enthusiastic in his school work, begins to yawn over a hard lesson, and lag in his recitations, ten to one something has gone wrong with the headwaters. By one means or another, he has fallen out of touch with the secret ambitions and ideals which sent him forging ahead at such a splendid pace earlier in the term.

Sometimes the stream of our Christian lives dwindles to a mere rivulet, or the current grows sluggish, simply because we have cut off the headwaters, by neglecting our Bibles, or forgetting to pray, or letting other matters crowd the thought of God out of our minds. A stream can't flow, if there's nothing in it, and a lamp can't burn if there's no oil to feed it. There isn't a single descriptive figure used in the Bible to represent the Christian life which doesn't make the fact plain that it can't be lived without keeping up connection with the Headwaters.—Charles T. White, in East and West.

THE THINGS WORTH WHILE

It is happiness to have some one "glad you are alive." No wonder that poor girls take their lives when they come to feel that not one face lights up because they are in the world, or would be shadowed if they left it. We who have the friends know how much of all earth's worth to us lies in certain eyes and faces, certain voices, certain hands. Fifty persons, or perhaps but five, make the wide world populous for us, and living in it beautiful.—W. C. Gannett.

NOTES

Elon commencement May 23-25. Meet former friends and class-mates there.

Rev. W. P. Minton has taken up the affairs of the late Rev. E. K. McCord and we understand will give up his school work and move to Dayton.

The Christian Orphanage children gave a recital at Long's Chapel last Sunday morning and at Burlington that night.

We are in receipt of a splendid program carried out by the Richmond church Sunday, May 9, at which time Mothers' Day was appropriately carried out.

Dr. D. A. Long will take up his pastoral labors at Mt. Auburn this month. He has been in Florida for some time and during his absence Rev. B. F. Black has served as pastor.

The North Carolina Christian Endeavor Convention will be held in Greensboro, June 11-13. Each Society in the State is asked to send at least one delegate. The State president is Rev. J. V. Knight, Greensboro, N. C.

Send us the news of your church and community. We have no way of knowing things unless our friends tell us. What we publish is not all there is to publish, but all we have.

Holy Neck, of the Eastern Virginia Conference, has called Rev. W. M. Jay for all his time and he has accepted. Holland is now looking for a pastor. Brother Jay has been serving Holland and Holy Neck—giving one-half his time to each church.

Good reports are coming from the Third Church, Norfolk, Va. An increase in salary from $2,500.00 to $3,000.00 and then an automobile at the same time is a good indication that the Third Church means to give its pastor a chance.

The Editor had the privilege while passing through Greensboro a few weeks ago to drop by Palm Street church. He found the church in a great revival, being conducted by Rev. J. G. Truitt and the pastor, Rev. J. V. Knight. Much interest seemed to prevail, many conversions had been reported and the membership united for a great season of spiritual blessings.

We have received a copy of the New Orleans Convention Booster, a four page publication boosting the third All-South Christian Endeavor Convention that is to meet in New Orleans, La., July 8-11, 1920. The copy of The Booster we have in hand carries the face of Rev. J. V. Knight, Greensboro, N. C., and the announcement that he is to enter the field of Christian Endeavor September 1, and will have charge of the States of Virginia and North Carolina.

Many churches have requested assistance in completing their Men and Millions campaign, and so the Field Committee has arranged to give these churches assistance. Several pastors have volunteered to help and the work is to go forward at once. We feel confident that all the churches will co-operate in any way they can to give full encouragement and assistance to the work by July 1, the time set by the Convention for the work to close.

Ex-Governor of North Carolina, Robert B. Glenn, was found dead in bed in Winnipeg, Canada, Sunday morning, May 16. He was at the time of his death a member of the United States Boundary Commission. He was born in Rockingham County, North Carolina, August 11, 1854; was a member of the Legislature, 1881; Solicitor for the State, 1886; United States District Attorney, 1893-7; Governor of North Carolina 1905-9. No more loyal and lovable Governor ever served North Carolina and his going will be mourned.

Elon's thirtieth commencement is scheduled to take place on the days of May twenty-third—twenty-fourth inclusive. Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., pastor of the Third church, Norfolk, Virginia, is to deliver the Baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, May 23. Dr. Smith graduated from Elon in 1910. The President of the College will deliver the usual Baccalaureate address on Sunday evening. Hon. S. E. Everette, a member of the class of '93, will deliver the Alumni address. One of the chief items of the commencement will be a reunion of former students and graduates. The College is giving a special invitation to all students of former days to attend the entire exercises of the commencement.

CELEBRATION OF THE PILGRIM TERCENTENARY

This year marks the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Mayflower at Plymouth Rock. The coming of the Pilgrims to America was part of a movement so significant to the history of modern institutions and times that the facts concerning it should be made known to the widest possible circle. In a very true and profound sense the Mayflower carried with her the moral destinies of the world. These Pilgrims were the pioneers of civil and religious liberty. They were heralds of a faith which, tested by the heroic men it has produced, and the heroic works it has wrought, challenges comparison with any faith by which men have been moulded and inspired. Their confidence in the revealed work of God, their zeal for religious liberty, their faith in popular government and popular education, and their sense of their obligations to men as well as to God, are among the great and high qualities, and solid virtues for which these men made their sacrifices.

To recover the sense of the value of these principles; to emphasize the spiritual significance of the coming of the Pilgrims; to make the spirit of the Pilgrims the basis of an appeal to heroism, consecration and the spirit of sacrifice, which is so necessary if we are to meet the new and pressing problems of today, are the chief objects for which the American Mayflower Council was instituted.

The American Mayflower Council is a general organization and has offered its good services in co-ordinating the program and proposals of the various committees and commissions that are planning to observe the Tercentenary Year. This Council is working in close cooperation with the English Mayflower Council. The Netherlands Pilgrims Committee, The French Committee, and the Canadian Tercentenary Committee.

The President of the United States and the Honorable William Howard Taft, are the Honorary Chairmen; Dr. Henry van Dyke is Honorary Secretary. The Chairman is President Henry Churchill King of Oberlin College. Mr. Henry Holt, Editor of The Independent, is Treasurer. Rev. Charles W. Gulick, is Executive Secretary and has associated with him a Secretariate composed of Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, Rev. Stacy R. Warburton and Rev. Linley V. Gordon. The Vice-Presidents representing various sections of the country, are: Rev. Frank Mason North, New York; Mrs. P. V. Pennybacker, Texas; Mrs. Philip North Moore, Missouri; President Henry Pratt Judson, Illinois; Major Robert R. Moton, Alabama; Hon. J. A. Macdonald, Toronto, Ontario; J. Willis Bacr, California; Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Colorado; Dr. Myles Standish, Massachusetts.

THE WORLD MATTERS

The Southern Baptist Convention was in session at Washington, D. C., last week.

Congress has passed the Peace Resolution by a majority of five, but President Wilson is expected to veto the measure.

Continued trouble goes on in Mexico. Additional police force has been stationed on the border to help keep order.

Transportation has been greatly tied up in sections of the country. The Government has been asked to make a hand to help relieve the situation.

AMELIA

On the second Sunday in this month Amelia church observed Memorial and Mothers' Day with appropriate exercises in remembrance of our loved ones who have gone before us. Rev. P. E. Lindley was with us and had charge of the 11:00 o'clock service. He brought us a timely message that reached every heart. Several said that it was the best day they had spent at Amelia church in a great while.

After the sermon, Miss Ida Smith, Mrs. Victoria Barns and Mrs. Amelia Austin acted as a committee in arranging the flowers, and the children carried the floral offerings to the cemetery, marching two and two. Flowers were placed on every grave and the cemetery was beautiful to look upon. Appropriate exercises were held at this time after which dinner was served on the grounds.

The writer had charge of the afternoon service and the sermon was preached especially to the young people, the text being Psalms 119:9.

It is a great joy to serve a people as those at Amelia. They seem to have caught a new vision of service and are looking forward to things that are higher and holier in life. We are looking forward to the greatest year in the history of the church.

MAGNIFYING CHRIST

How can we live so that Christ will be magnified in our body? By living so that we will bring no reproach on His name. The Christian life is worth while. If we are not true to the vows we made at the church altar, we are worse than if we had never professed to know Jesus. We are a stumbling block to others. We hear the unsaved say, "I am as good as some that is in the church." They forget that each one will have to give an account to God. May we live such faithful lives that no one will be kept away by our indifference.

Many times neighbors meet together and it seems everything and every one is spoken of except Jesus. Why are we so backward to discuss religion? If an unsaved person is present, he will wonder why, if Jesus is so precious to them, they don't say more for Him. Oh, my friends, when our hearts are filled with the love of Jesus, as they should be, we will not be too timid to speak His name in praise. If we look to God in prayer, "we can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth us." Philippians 4:13. Our hearts are too full of worldly matters. Christians, don't let us ever forget that our every word and action is taken note of. So let us press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling God in Christ Jesus. Philippians 3.14.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

The Children's Home fund has reached and passed the $6,000.00 mark. We hope to see it reach $10,000.00 in the near future.

The Easter offerings have been coming in nicely and we have on the offering this year $3,406.53. It has not quite reached the mark for last year. We ought to do better each year and we will be disappointed if we do not reach the amount received last year for this offering.

Quite a number of our churches and Sunday schools are still on the delinquent list. I want to insist that if your church is on this list, that you redeem yourself by having the offering taken and mailed in. We will rejoice with you in making this offering. Don't forget the Children's Home. You want a part in the building that will give the little tots a home in which to live and be happy.

Our little fellows still work hard to get the $1.00 prize in school. For the seventh month the following earned the $1.00 prize by making an average of 95 or more:

Lala Brady 97 1-2, Joe Howell Jones 96 1-6, Swannanoa Weatherspoon 96 1-3, Wilson Collier 95 5-6, Clarence Fields 95, Lawrence Fields 95, Allie Lee Pierce 95, Eugenia Hilliard 96 5-8, Kinsman Wicker 95 1-8, Clarence McKinney 95, Marvin Franklin 95 1-6, Frankie Frederick 95, Hattie McKinney 95, Ella Frederick 96 1-7, Emma Moreland 95 2-7.

Those making 90 and over: Walter Betts, Vernon Sandlin, Joe Lennard, Thelma Thomas, Maggie Lennard, Lula Johnson, Irene Jones, Hubert Terrell, Earl Churchill, Coy Franklin, Eliza Check, Pauline Andrews, Louise Jones, Mattie Lee McKinney, George Thomas, Pearle Goodwin, Walter Wicker.

The Orphanage Singing Class gave a concert at Mt. Zion church in Orange County, on the second Sunday morning, and at 3:30 in the afternoon at Mebane. They were greeted by a large audience at both places and we hope the people enjoyed the children as much as the children enjoyed the program. The offering at both churches was splendid and the children were very happy over the day's work.

The captain of the Men and Millions Forward Movement at Mt. Zion tells me that practically all the membership of that church has been visited, and while they still lack several hundred dollars reaching their goal, he hopes that other subscriptions will still be obtained.

The captain of the Mebane church was feeling very happy over their victory in the Men and Millions Forward Movement. That little church with a membership of fifteen and with a quota of $1,500 had quite a task to do. I visited that church some weeks ago and made a talk on the Men and Millions Forward Movement and at that time they hardly thought it could be done, and I thought it quite a task myself, but told them that while we might not see our way clear to make the subscription at the present time, we could subscribe in faith and trust God to open the way by which we could meet the payments as they came due. This little band of faithful workers will reach the goal, and with this quota, with a membership of only fifteen, and some of that number children, it ought to encourage all our churches to do their best in this great Movement for the Church. This Movement gives every individual an opportunity to have a part and to make a subscription. Let us all have a part in this great undertaking for Him who did so much for us. Let every church do its best. If you have not made your subscription, see the captain of your church and make it. This is your opportunity. Don't lose it.

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley:—I was glad to see my letter in THE SUN last week. May, the month of roses, is with us again, yet it is real cool this morning. I guess you would like to know who I am, so I will tell you. My name is Vivian Gray Lewis, and Revs. J. W. and J. P. Barrett are my great uncles. I suppose that you know them well. I am enclosing my dues for April. I will send you my May dues very soon. Love to all the little orphans.—Vivian Gray Lewis.

I am well acquainted with your uncle, J. Pressley Barrett. He is one of my best friends and a loyal supporter in the Orphanage work. You must write often.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am enclosing ten cents for the little orphans. I will send more when I get my pay for chopping cotton. I would like so much to come and see the little cousins sometime. You must bring them to see me. With love and best wishes.—Teresa Carter.

You ought to have me to help you chop cotton. I chopped cotton when I was a little boy, a long time ago.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—We are enclosing our dues for this month. Do the cousins have any little kittens? We have three. Mother tells us we are naughty for playing with them so much. She tells us we might kill them. We do not want to kill them, for we think they are such cute little cats. Love and best wishes to all the cousins.—Frank and Herbert Burton.

Our little boys have some pet squirrels. They will run all over the room and don't bite.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—Here I am, a little girl three years old, but not too young for my offering to help the little orphans. When my mother was a little girl she was a member of the Corner. My mother is a member of Pope's Chapel church. She reads the letters of the children from THE SUN to me each week. I am enclosing twenty-five cents. With love.—Mary Louise Snook.

I am real glad to have you join the Corner. I know your mother feels proud of you.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl twelve years old. My mother has been a subscriber to THE SUN for seventeen years. I enjoy reading the children's letters and feel sorry for the children who have no parents. Father sometimes gives me money for doing little jobs, so I am enclosing ten cents of it to you. I have four brothers and four sisters. If this does not find the waste basket you may hear from me again. With best wishes to the cousins.—Ruth M. Sanford.

Well, Ruth, I appreciate your letter and hope you will write often. I like the name “Ruth.” The story of “Ruth” we find in the Bible is such a pretty and touching story.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little boy seven years old and wish to join the band of cousins. I enjoy reading the children's letters. I enclose a dime. Love to all the cousins.—Frank Bray.

I have often heard my grandmother speak of Petersburg, Va. I had the pleasure of passing through your city sometime ago. You have a real nice town.—“Uncle Charley.”

REAL MONEY TALKS

A bright new Ten Cent Piece in Ann's red pocket-book clinked happily against its neighbor, a Copper Penny.

“Heigho!” it said. “This is a great world. A little while ago I was nothing but a chunk of ore in a silver mine.” The Indian listened politely, but said nothing. But, then, Indians rarely talk, you know. Little did it matter to the Ten Cent Piece, however. “All the more chance for me,” it thought to itself as it rattled on. “Tons of pressure on me, and out I came with two handsome faces.”

The Ten Cent Piece rolled nearer the Penny and thrust its shining face close to the bronze Indian's head. But the Penny never winked an eyelash. Indians don't you know.

“Clink, clink!” sang the Ten Cent Piece as it danced to a far away corner of the pocketbook. “How happy I am! Yesterday a piece of ore and today a great traveler. Many coins have rolled past me. There was one that was taking a pretty little girl to the movies and another that was to be traded for candy and still another, I remember, which was helping to treat a very fat little boy to a chocolate ice cream soda. How envious I was of all of them! But I've grown wiser now and wouldn't change my lot, no, not even to see the funniest clown at the biggest show in all the world.”

“Perhaps you have heard about the Junior Red Cross and the good they do with their pennies,” said the Ten Cent Piece, chattering on in spite of the fixed stare of the Indian. “There's Ann's brother, Jake, for instance. He carried the milk to the creamery to earn enough so he might contribute to the fund for little war orphans, and I've heard Ann say that Beatrice, the city cousin, made some extra Junior Red Cross money by painting cards. I guess there are as many ways of earning as there are Juniors.

“But I've saved the best till the last,” laughed the happy Ten Cent Piece. “Ann is soon going to take me out of her pocketbook, and then, oh, happy day! I am going into a fund which is to make well a little crippled child. Just think of being able to give so much happiness!”

S-nap! The pocketbook was wide open.

“Goodby, goodbye!” sang out the Ten Cent Piece merrily. “Maybe you will catch up with me on my travels, friend Penny. Stranger things than that have happened.”

“The need of the day is performers and not reformers,” said Governor Coolidge of Massachusetts. The members of the Junior Red Cross are the best little performers in the world.

Sunday School and Christian Endeavor

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR MAY 30, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

Subject: Jonathan and His Armor Bearer.—I Sam. 14:1-16.

Golden Text: Be Strong and of Good Courage.—Josh. 1:6.

Primary Topic: A Story of a Brave Prince.

Junior Topic: How Two Men Put an Army to Flight.

Intermediate Topic: The Value of Initiative in Christian Work.

Senior Topic: Our Foes and How to Overcome Them.

Additional Material: I Chron. 17; Rom. 15:20; Heb. 11:2-29.

Time: About 1085 B. C.

Places: Gilgal, Mishmash, Geba, Bethel.

Saul had reigned two years, or more, when the campaign against the Philistines came upon the Israelites; and of the army who had won the victory over the Ammonites, Saul retained three thousand men whom he stationed in three strongholds. Jonathan, his brave and noble son, was in command at Geba. Samuel by divine direction had given Saul orders to tarry at Gilgal until he arrived to offer sacrifice unto Jehovah. He was not to begin a war until he had the blessings of God upon it. When the Israelites saw how vast an army was opposed to them, their hearts failed, and many of them began to desert their leader, by taking to the caves and dense woods; and when Saul saw his soldiers falling away from him, he became very impatient at the delay of Samuel—God's prophet—and offered the sacrifice himself. He owed everything to God, but failed to trust Him, or His prophet; therefore, Samuel foretold that Saul's house should not continue.

With supreme trust in God, Jonathan proved to his father, Saul, and the Israelites where their true source of power lay. He was a true, genuine hero of faith. He proposed to his armor bearer that the two alone, attack an army of thousands. He was confident "there is no restraint to Jehovah to save by many or by few." With the God of heaven, it is all one to deliver with a great multitude, or with a small company, and Jonathan believed this with all his heart. His friend, the armor bearer, possessed the same faith in God, and was loyal to the core. It is pleasing to note his beautiful and impressive answer "do all to which thine heart inclines: behold I am with thee: according to thy heart." These two young men, full of enthusiasm, courage and faith in God, "climbed up" and the panic which these daring young men caused in the outpost rapidly spread throughout the camp, and was increased by the hand of God in a great earthquake. The first sight we get of Jonathan he is fighting against the enemies of God, and he dies engaged in the same warfare. He believed in prayer, he lived with God, and entered into the spirit of divine covenant. Happy are they who rise above depression and misfortune into the clear heaven of fellowship with God. The one thing we need most in our Sunday schools today is enthusiasm—zeal for the present day tasks that loom up before us. It has been said that enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity and truth accomplishes no victories without it. History affords at every turn some impregnable fortress which was the despair of the wise and prudent, but was carried by some enthusiast, with a rush. "Don't be afraid of it," said Moody, for it means in God. Do you believe in your Sunday school? Have you faith in God? Have you the courage to attempt the seeming impossible? Are you enthusiastic in your service? Our Captain is calling. Shall we advance, or retreat? "Be strong and of good courage."

THE BOARD OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

The Board of Religious Education is the successor of the Young People's Convention of the Southern Christian Convention. The Board is expected to do its work through the Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies of the Conferences.

During the past two years the Board has been endeavoring to discover the nature of its work and to make a beginning. During the past biennium the Board has been wholly without means, only as it has been able to borrow and raise a small amount through the Children's Day services. The Board is hoping to have sufficient funds at an early date with which to prosecute its work, as it is to share in the Men and Millions fund.

The Raleigh session of the Southern Christian Convention adopted a financial program which will help to gather funds for the work of the Board. All of the Sunday school conventions are asked to raise ten cents per member for the work and to send to the Treasurer of the Board eighty per cent of the amount raised. This will put the Board in shape to do real work for our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies. All Endeavor Societies are asked to do the same thing. It is hoped that all will be glad to do this and thus put the Board of Religious Education in a position to greatly advance the work of our young people. We must do something very definite for our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor work.

The Board has been authorized to place in the field at the earliest possible date, a full time Secretary. The matter of his selection, remuneration and work has been placed in the hands of the Board. Pray that the right man may be selected and that he may be willing to take up the work.

The Board has prepared and sent out sample copies of the 1920 Children's Day program. All schools are urged to use our own program. These programs are free of charge. Order from Office of Mission Board of Southern Christian Convention, Burlington, N. C.

MARRIAGES

DUCK-BRADSHAW

On April 20, 1920, Mr. Lafayette Edward Duck and Mrs. Evie Mary Bradshaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bland of Walters, Va., were united in marriage.

H. H. BUTLER.

SMITH-JOHNSON

On Sunday afternoon, May 9, 1920, the marriage of Miss Flossie May Johnson to Mr. Walter E. Smith was solemnized in Amelia Christian church, Rev. P. E. Lindley officiating.

These are prominent young people of the community and are members of the Amelia church. They will make their home at Clayton, N. C.

Their many friends wish for them a long and happy married life.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD.

BYRD-RAWLES

One of the most beautiful home weddings that the writer has ever witnessed took place on April 24, 1920, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Rawles, 400 Armstrong St., Portsmouth, Va., when their daughter, Erna May, became the bride of Mr. Harvey Rogers Byrd.

The ceremony was witnessed by only the immediate friends and relatives of the couple, and in the absence of the bride's pastor, Rev. H. W. Dowding, the writer read the words that made the happy couple one.

The maid of honor was Miss Frances Rawles, sister of the bride, and the best man was Mr. Lewis Byrd, brother of the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony the delighted couple left for Washington, D. C., and other points north.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Byrd wish for them all the happiness that life can bring.

J. F. MORGAN.

WEDDLE-WRIGHT

Miss Charlotte Lynwood Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Shaw Wright, and George B. Weddle of Roanoke, Va., were married on April 24, 1920, at nine o'clock P. M., in the Portsmouth Christian church, Washington and County Streets. Rev. J. F. Morgan, pastor of the Berkley Christian church, officiated.

The bride was given away by her father. She wore a dress of blue-trieotine with hat and gloves to match and a corsage bouquet of bride's roses and sweet peas. The matron of honor, Mrs. Rose Kneeburg, wore white georgette and carried sweet peas. The bridesmaids were Misses Buena Monell, Eloise Monroe, Lydia Gort and Elsie Marshall. The flower girls were Gladys Brothers and Ruth Wright, the latter a sister of the bride. The ring-bearer was John Vermillion, Jr., attired in white. He carried the ring in the heart of a rose. The best man was M. M. Thomason of Houston, Texas. The groomsmen were Robert W. Benbury, A. J. Halame, Fred Marty and Charles Huske.

The Lohengrin wedding march was played as the bridal party entered the church. Robert Snellings sang, "The End of a Perfect Day."

Mr. and Mrs. Weddle will reside at 603 Washington Street.

J. F. MORGAN.

OBITUARIES

WALKER

Thaddeus Harold Walker, the infant, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Walker of Burlington, N. C., died April 22, 1920, aged 26 days. His death resulted from bronchial pneumonia. Physicians did all in their power to save the little life, but God in His wisdom claimed it for Himself. In heaven's delightful clime the little life shall continue to unfold and gladden the heart of the great Father above. Beautiful is the promise, "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: He shall gather the lambs with his arms, and carry them in His bosom."

The funeral service was conducted from the home by the writer and the interment made in Pine Hill cemetery.

J. W. HARRELL.

WYRICK

James Martin Wyrick died at his home in Guilford County, May 10, 1920, at the age of 79 years and 17 days. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife, a daughter and three sons. He was a Confederate soldier in the Civil War of 21st Regiment, Company M. He fought under General Lee and was on the battlefield when Jackson was shot. He was a man whom everybody seemed to love who knew him.

His funeral was conducted at Apple's Chapel by the writer. He joined this church years ago, and still held his membership here at his death.

The funeral was attended by a large crowd. May God bless the bereaved ones.

J. F. APPLE.

NORWOOD

Miss Susie Jones Norwood died at her home near Virgilina, Va., on April 20, 1920, at the age of sixty years. She was a widow of Mr. Scott Norwood, who died about eighteen years ago. She leaves to mourn her death two sons, Ballard and Marshall, and two daughters, Mrs. William Stovall, and Mrs. John Watkins, all of Virgilina, Va.

Sister Norwood had been afflicted for more than twenty years but bore her suffering submissively. Since girlhood she had been a member of the Union Christian church and was loyal to her church and loved her Savior.

The funeral was conducted at her home by the writer and the body laid to rest in the family burying ground.

C. E. NEWMAN.

JONES

Mrs. Blanche Rogers Jones, daughter of the late John Rogers of Christie, Va., died at her home in Virgilina on April 9, 1920. She leaves to mourn her death her husband, Mr. Benard Jones, and five small children. She assured her loved ones that she was entering upon that state of rest prepared for the faithful.

The burial services were conducted at the grave in the town cemetery, and the body laid to rest to await the resurrection morn.

C. E. NEWMAN.

BUTLER

Mrs. Malinda Butler, widow of the late Jethro Butler, passed away on April 20, 1920, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mrs. Mary E. Holland, Boaz, Va.; Mrs. J. E. T. Joyner of Walters, Va.; eighteen grand-age and a member of the Western Branch Baptist church. She leaves two daughters, Mary E. Holland, Boaz, Va.; Mrs. J. E. T. Joyner of Walters, Va.; eighteen grandchildren, twenty great grandchildren, and one brother, Mr. Elisha Butler, of Buck-horne, Va.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. L. F. Paulette of the Baptist church of Holland, Va. Her remains were laid to rest in the family cemetery.

H. H. BUTLER.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—JOYNER

Whereas, God, in His infinite wisdom and mercy, has called unto Himself our beloved deacon, Brother P. T. Joyner, be it Resolved:

First. That in his death Johnson's Grove church has lost a true and consecrated worker, whose works will live forever.

Second. That while we deeply lament the loss of our departed brother, we know full well that it is his gain and bow in humble submission to the will of God.

Third. That we wish to extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this hour of grief, and commend thine to the Father Who is ever near in time of need.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy spread upon the minutes of our church.

The Point of View

The donkey's song is not a pretty song;

You would not wish to hear it all day long;

Yet when the humans cry: "The donkey brays!"

How do they know? Perhaps the donkey prays.

To ears attuned—but not to yours and mine—

The donkey renders harmonies divine. Yet should your voice and mine in paens blend,

Who knows what donkey-ears it might offend?

—Ada Kyle Lynch, in Life.

Too General

Director General Hines said of a diagnosis of the railroad trouble:

"That diagnosis won't go down. It is too general. In fact, it reminds me of a young wife I know.

"Her two-year-old baby was crying terribly one day at the lunch table, and her mother-in-law entered the room and said:

"What on earth is baby crying about?"

"The young wife made a distracted gesture.

"It's either," she said, "that she wants more mince pie, or that she has eaten too much."

Baked Redskin

Lord Grey said at a farewell dinner in Washington last winter:

"We English are sometimes very ignorant of you Americans. When we misjudge you it is through ignorance.

"An English lady came over to tour the States. On the evening of her arrival in New York she uttered at dinner a low cry of horror.

"Whats the matter? said her husband. 'For heaven's sake, what's the matter?'

"She held the menu out to him.

"My dear, look at this!' she cried. 'Baked Indian pudding!' Can such things be in a civilized land?'"

The great ocean liner rolled and pitched.

"Henry," faltered the young bride, "do you still love me?"

"More than ever, darling," was Henry's fervent answer.

Then there was an eloquent silence.

"Henry," she gasped, turning her pale, ghastly face away, "I thought that would make me feel better, but it doesn't"—Ex.

A New International Order

DR. FREDERICK LYNCH

WE ARE going to have a new international order. Selfish forces are trying to go back to the old order of national isolations, national selfishness, balances of power, secret diplomacy, vast armaments to sustain all these things. They will not succeed in spite of all the machinations of old men and the selfishness of certain groups. The people will not go back. The new order is coming in some form. The war has taught the peoples that they are a community. Some form of a League of Nations is coming. The European nations are already in it. America will eventually be there—she cannot stay out. But no new order, no new world organization, good and great as they may be, will save the future, or preserve justice, freedom, rights of the weak and peace unless the nations in the new world family learn unselfishness, co-operation, brotherhood and service as the laws of life. The only real hope of the world, whether in a league or not, is in nations ordering all their actions and relationships by those same eternal laws and teachings of Jesus Christ that govern the relations of all Christian men. The Church has this great gospel for the new world. What a call to youth to be the statesmen and prophets of this new world order!

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

WHY SOME CHURCHES FAILED TO MOVE IN THE MOVEMENT

Some of the churches have not seen fit to enter fully into the work of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. They had a reason, at least an excuse, a better program and expect to come along all right some day, somehow and in some way. We are thus reminded of a story of "Uncle Rufus" who came to work late. His employer asked him about the clock that he had given him.

"Where's that clock I gave you?"

"In my room, sah."

"Don't you wind it up and set the alarm?"

"Yes, sah. Every night, sah."

"But don't you hear the alarm in the morning, Rufus?"

"No, sah, dat's the trouble with that clock. The thing goes off while I'm asleep."

A great many churches let a good thing go off while they are asleep. A great and good thing comes along, but it gets away while they are asleep.

HAVE WE HAD THE RIGHT CONCEPTION?

Have we had the right conception about what it means to be a missionary? We wonder at times if we have. We cannot speak from experience since we have not been to the foreign fields, but our conception of going to the foreign field is not what some picture it to be. A place of hard work, trouble, privation, loneliness, and a dozen other things, is the way that some paint the possibility of such an undertaking. It may be all these and yet have that charm about it that satisfies and allures one on to that great work of carrying the Gospel to all the world.

We have wondered if the average idea about being a missionary has not kept many from entering wholly into the work. It is not always pleasant to separate from friends and loved ones, but if we are ready to give all for Christ and His cause, then the separation, it seems to us, becomes a side issue.

If you want to get big things done you must give big hearts big things to do—and you must not teach them that it is a thing to cry over, but a thing to rejoice with and be exceedingly glad. We have read some where poem "In Africa" that is only an example of what is challenging us to go into all parts of the world with big hearts, glad hearts, ready hearts, to make good in joyous tasks.

"If you could stand in Africa tonight,
And see the moonlight on those green-elad hills;
If you could hear the youths' wild, minor trills,
Dancing their life out, in the calm moonlight;

"If you could know the pity of their plight
Without God, in a world of deadening ills—
Then you would know the deep despair that fills
The heart of sin-sick Africa tonight.

"And God says, 'Go,' to all who name The Name.
And out of darkness reach those hands for Light.
Upon us be the burden of the shame
That Christ reigns not in Africa, tonight.'"

THE PAPER SITUATION

The publishers of the country are being hit hard by the paper pinch that has come in a larger degree than ever before. Publishers thought that paper was high a year ago, but such prices as they are now forced to pay is indeed alarming. The worst of it, however, is that it cannot be secured at any price, except in a few places and in certain grades and quantities. Many publications have suspended—possibly a thousand during the last six months. Those that have not suspended have been forced to cut down in size. The first step was to continue to increase subscription and advertising rates, but that will not do any longer. More money will not get the paper when it cannot be bought.

We note among the papers that have been forced to reduce in size is The Christian Endeavor World, Boston, Mass., and that publication looks the situation squarily in the face and pleads with its readers to be patient. THE SUN passes along the same news for the good of the public. We have not been forced to reduce but may have to any week. We have enough paper in sight to take us to July 1 and after that date we have only promises on file for hope.

LAWS THAT ARE SELF-ACTING

(Editorial in The Herald of Gospel Liberty for May 13, 1920)

It is very unfortunate that here and there in the Christian denomination an effort has been made to give out the impression that in the Forward Movement plan there is some sort of conspiracy to cripple the churches which do not co-operate with it and to put out of business those ministers who will not try to educate and fit themselves for modern church work. And certain editorials in The Herald and certain statements made by leading officials are quoted as the basis of such assertions.

The editor is very free to say again, and to say it strong, that the churches which will not take hold and do, are going to die; and that the preachers who will not read and study and try to train themselves, and who will not work and work hard and intelligently to build up their churches, will be out of a position before many years. But it would hardly seem to be necessary to explain, least of all to ministers who are used to preaching about the laws of God, that these penalties are self-acting, and do not need any board or any officials at Dayton to put them into effect.

God does not require any one to help Him to enforce His laws. They are automatic. They take care of the situation themselves. And one of those laws is that un-missionary churches and selfish churches will die; and that churches which try to stand off alone and let the other churches in its conference or the other conferences carry the work of the denomination, will soon lose its spirituality, and then will soon be dead. Conference and denominational officials do not have to kill it—it just dies! And nobody can keep it from dying unless it repents and does differently. Nor does one have to be a prophet to foretell this—but only a historian who knows the history of our own and other churches and the history of our own and other conferences.

And whatever may have been true of the ministry in the past, every man who knows the situation among the churches today knows that the preachers who will not read and study and get away to summer school, or something of the kind, now and then, and who do no pastoral and other organization work in their churches, and who try to be farmers or business men and preachers too, are losing out more and more. There is a larger number of churches every year who simply will no longer hire such men. And it is not the fault of the denominational officials or the Forward Movement, either. The editor has written a score of churches and almost begged them to take certain men who needed work badly—and they have replied that a few years ago they used that type of men, but that they cannot do so any longer, because their young folks are going to high school and college and simply will not attend and take an interest in church unless the pastor is doing a work that is worth while. The country people are fast becoming the most intelligent congregations in the world, and more and more they refuse to employ any pastor at all unless they can have one at least as intelligent and wide-awake and progressive as they themselves are. It is time that that be said to our ministers very frankly—for there is not a week goes by that this office does not have one or many letters from laymen saying that same thing very bluntly.

If only the preachers would stop to think for a single moment, they would see how this very state of affairs worries the denominational officials. There is no other one thing which gives them so much concern today. It is up to them to keep the churches supplied with pastors, and to help the weak churches, and to keep the denomination growing and our churches in a good condition. Even from a selfish standpoint, it would be a fool idea for them to want to kill churches and throw pastors out of work. We are almost desperate to find men that the churches will use and be satisfied with in this new day. And so the Forward Movement and the Home Mission and Educational and other departments are planning to co-operate in every possible way to help men to hold their churches—not to lose them. That is the very object of the summer school at Defiance and Elon and Palmer and the Seaside Chautauqua—to assist the preachers, so that the churches will desire them and pay them better salaries. We in Dayton cannot force churches to hire men that they do not want. But we can help the men to make it possible to so train and equip themselves in up-to-date work that the churches will be anxious for them and pay well to get them.

But if the churches refuse to co-operate with each other in the denominational enterprises which make schools and colleges possible, and which thus makes it possible to help the preachers to equip themselves for work, they will find themselves, in less than a generation, without pastors that they can use—and they will die. And if the preachers will not take hold of the opportunities and privileges for self-development and self-training which the denomination is trying at such great expense to give them, but keep on in a way that will put them where the churches in a few years—when they grow a little older—simply will not hire them, they will either have to quit the ministry or else to work here and there at shameful little salaries on which they cannot live. But nobody else will be to blame for such a sad outcome but those churches and those men themselves.

It is a pitiful thing to see churches dragging blindly along to their own death and to see preachers drifting to where in a few years they will be down and out with no church willing to give them work—and we men here in Dayton will do anything and everything we can to prevent such a pathetic tragedy. But the laws of God are certain and sure—and they bring their own penalty upon those that will not fulfill the conditions of spiritual strength and growth.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

BURLINGTON LETTER

The mid-year business meeting of the church was held May 19. The reports showed that the first six months in the new building had marked a splendid advance in every department of the work. The Sunday school has leaped forward in the matter of average attendance and enrollment in a very gratifying manner. The offerings for Orphanage, Missions, and Sunday school purposes show a large increase. The Missionary Societies, Christian Endeavor, and Ladies' Aid have been very active and have done good work. The Missionary Society has been conducting a mission study class which has proven very helpful.

Though the current expenses of the church have been greatly increased, the congregation has readily adjusted itself to the new demands and so given as to enable the church to meet all bills promptly. The current expense budget has practically doubled. In the last canvass the need was simply expressed and nearly all doubled their pledges for current expenses, and did much more for benevolences, when the special campaigns are taken into account. To date the church has given on the special drives $22,165.20. This has been done while we were building. During the past six months of this Conference year the church has raised in cash and paid on the new building $23,000.00 and secured pledges to cover entire cost, with the exception of $6,000.00. The building committee is confidently expecting to pay off the entire debt this year. We are exceedingly grateful to them for their splendid service and trust that their purpose shall be fully realized.

At the mid-year business meeting the church voted to increase the pastor's salary to $2,400.00. The pastor is deeply grateful for this action and expresses the hope that he may be able to render a larger service in coming days. He fully appreciates the loyal support his people are giving him in his effort to lead them in the great work of the Kingdom. God bless the good people of the Burlington Christian church in the splendid things they are doing for Him and His cause.

The congregation has recently tendered the Southern Christian Convention the old church for Convention headquarters. The matter is now in the hands of a special committee, appointed by the Convention in its last session. If our offer is accepted we shall be glad to have the offices of the Convention here.

The report of the superintendent of the Sunday school showed that the school had contributed since November the first, to the Orphanage, $626.32; to support of missionary, $587.09, and $250.00 to Sunday school purposes, which made a total of $1,463.41 to all purposes.

The superintendent of the Christian Orphanage and his singing class were with us last Sunday evening. Their program was greatly enjoyed by the congregation and a free-will offering of $78.38 was made on the Children's Home. Come again.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND KINGDOM SERVICE

Have you noticed the very large number of boys and girls in every community, and in every congregation, who are not enlisted in Kingdom service of any kind, and whom none are trying to enlist? The hope of our Christian cause is in our young people. These young people are active, eager, alert, impressionable. That which can be done for their minds, and their souls, now with ease and effectually will be done with great difficulty and inefficiently, if done at all, later in life. We need missionaries in the foreign field very much indeed. Is anything being done to impress these young people with the daring and heroic life of the missionary? Frightful superstitions, grinding poverty, blinding ignorance, unspeakable evils prevail in non-Christian lands. Is anything being done to acquaint our boys and girls with these conditions, and with the distressing needs of all peoples in heathen lands?

If these needs, if the pitiable conditions that obtain in pagan countries, were brought to the mind and the heart of our boys and girls, they would give heed; they would act. There is nothing that boys and girls like as much as they do activity, deeds, the license and the liberty of doing things.

The writer faced a country congregation of, say, three hundred people on a recent Sunday afternoon. Count one hundred parents of the number. Then count fifty between the ages of seventeen and twenty-five. There were left a hundred and fifty boys and girls there. He wondered what those boys and girls knew of the peoples and places that did not have the Gospel; of the needs and conditions in non-Christian lands? And he wondered further what was being done by church or Sunday school, or any other body, to acquaint these boys and girls with conditions of peoples in pagan lands, and of their relationship to these peoples. If we would give these boys and girls the right sort of chance they would sit up and take notice—and in a few years would be doing things.

Our Sunday schools should be training camps for Christian service. Are they? Our Sunday school classes should be bee-hives of activity for the Master. Are they? We might as well teach the Almanac in the Sunday school as to teach the Bible or the Quarterly, unless the Bible and the Quarterly lead to deeds, activity, service. Even the Bible is not a book to be learned, just for the sake of learning it. It is a means to an end. The end of Bible learning is right doing, Christian service.

Our boys and girls are ready to be taught of the world's needs, and of the world's opportunity, and of their relationship and duty thereto. And then they are ready and willing to do. Are we seeking the proper approach to their minds and hearts, and are we giving them the teaching, the information, the training they are going to need, that they now need, to carry forward the Kingdom's work? Are we doing our duty to the boys and girls of our Christian congregations?

CHAPEL HILL

This church has just closed the best revival in its history. Rev. J. Lee Johnson did the preaching with great acceptance and satisfaction to all who heard him. His messages were not "classic," but Scriptural, spiritual and powerful. What the world needs, after all, is not "classic" preaching, but a spiritual presentation of the Word of God. This Brother Johnson does in a fearless, pleasing, and powerful manner, "and the people heard him gladly." He opens up the Scripture and brings his hearers closer to God. The people of the town and University were agreeably surprised at his ready command of the Scripture, his aptness of interpretation, and his power of application. I doubt if we have a man in the South who is his equal.

The results of this evangelistic effort were very satisfying. There were eighteen confessions, and fourteen additions to the church. There are several others who will join soon.

Since coming to this field last November I have received into church fellowship thirty-three new members. This increase may not seem large to those who do not know the local situation, but this lacks but little equaling the total enrollment when I came here. We expect to more than double the membership before the year is out. At present I feel much encouraged over the work here, notwithstanding the circumstances and discomforts under which we have labored since coming here. The clouds are beginning to look brighter and we can see the dawning of better things.

The church here has responded to the various drives and launched an extra drive for funds to pay for the parsonage, having subscribed $3,250.00 for that purpose. In addition to this there is now in the making a plan to raise money to pay off the indebtedness on the church. We expect to dedicate the church this fall.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The Lightbourne-Davis meeting, in the Suffolk Christian church, closed Sunday night, May 16, including three Sundays and the two weeks between. The attendance, from start to finish, was the largest in the history of Suffolk. The interest was equal to the throngs. People gathered an hour before the time for service, and remained in rapt attention to the close. Many from other churches and from no church were enthusiastic in their interest and co-operation. It had the characteristics of an old time protracted meeting—everybody singing, praying, and talking about the meeting. One man told me that in the shop where he worked, nearly all the men were accustomed to swearing every day; but after the meeting had been in progress a few days, he heard no more profanity from any man. The extent of a revival cannot be estimated as it works beyond the church into the community in so many places and among so many people. Delegations came from Oakland, Bethlehem, Holland, Holy Neck, and Franklin.

This meeting brought in all ages from very young children to old persons. The meeting for school children, on Thursday afternoon of the first week, was large and enthusiastic; the meeting for the aged, on Thursday afternoon on the second week, was fine, though that was the only rainy day in the series. Cars were sent after old people and they enjoyed it very much. The meeting, for men only, on Sunday afternoon, May 9, was very large and very much enjoyed. It looked like the whole city was lining up for Christ.

To give some idea of the results of the meeting, so far as known, there were 154 cards signed for membership; of this number 138 united with the Christian church, and the remainder with other churches in Suffolk. The Suffolk church had received 100 new members from Life Dedication week, at the close of the Men and Millions campaign; and 9 members had been received before that time since the last annual Conference. These three groups of new members make 247 added to our roll since the Conference last November. Our membership now goes over a thousand. These two movements, Men and Millions and the Evangelistic services, have set members to work under a new spiritual impulse and I am hoping to run additions up to 300 during the Conference year. It will reward any church to put on the Men and Millions campaign, in all of its four parts.

One would think that the big sum this church subscribed under Consecration Week would have prevented large offerings for our revival; but the contrary was true: the total offerings amounted to $1,915.61; $1,330.20 paid to Victor Lightbourne; $200.00 to Sam Davis; and the ladies presented Mrs. Lightbourne and Mrs. Davis, Sam's mother, at the last service on Sunday night, with a purse of $100.00—in gold each; and the remainder to their expenses. This was the largest offering ever made at one revival in Suffolk, even at union services. Suffolk rejoices and commends Lightbourne-Davis to other churches for revival meetings. There are none better, and we doubt whether there are any other two their equal.

Men and Millions

REJOICING IN VICTORY

In the churches where all four of the campaigns of our Men and Millions Movement were put on and carried to a successful conclusion there is much rejoicing and there is great enthusiasm. What a grave pity indeed it was, and is, that all of our churches did not enter, with whole heart into the labors, efforts and tasks of the Movement! Here was and is a platform of righteousness and brotherly love broad enough for all to stand on and strong enough to hold up all who will get upon it. There simply can be no good, safe, and sufficient reason why every church, every pastor and every person of us should not undertake whole heart, and zealous effort, the work of this Movement. Had there been such a reason, because of doubt, delusion, or misunderstanding, in the beginning, that reason no longer exists. A tree is judged by its fruits. The fruits of this Movement, in the congregations that have entered in and gathered the full harvest, are victory, growth, new life, spiritual awakening, brotherly love, ready and willing co-operation. No one who sees the situation, and has observed the results, can fail to rejoice with the churches that have "gone over the top," and pity those who have failed to do so.

The Movement was designed, and is yet urged, to give every man, woman and child in all our churches the opportunity of undertaking some definite thing, or making some specific offering, or sacrifice, in the name and for the sake of our Christ. If any design, scheme or purpose, could be nobler or more needed than that in a time like this, the writer does not know and cannot conceive what it is, or may be.

Because of unfavorable weather and other conditions some of our churches have not yet put on the campaign, and have not entered into this program of fellowship and co-operation. Such churches, to delay the matter longer, are not only injuring themselves and retarding their own growth and progress, but they are injuring a whole denomination and retarding the growth, power and progress of the whole Convention. We are co-operative beings, and the power and progress of the whole depend upon the efforts and deeds and co-operation of each. Any church not doing its best in a time, and a program, and a task like this, hinders and helps retard the growth of the whole denomination; for this is a program and a task which is worthy of all of us and needs all of us.

By July first, according to the decision of our recent Convention, every church of our number is to be given a chance, and every one is to be urged to do his best in this the noblest, the most righteous, and the most worthy of all the tasks and programs ever adopted or undertaken by us.

Come with us, brethren and beloved of every church and congregation, and we will do thee much good and no harm. We want all our churches to enjoy the growth, development, power and victory that some are now enjoying because of what they have done in this Movement.

J. O. ATKINSON.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT

By C. M. Cannon

Elon College, May 24.—The thirtieth Annual Commencement exercises began here Sunday under most favorable auspices, with great throngs of the alumni and former students present. The attendance on the commencement bids fair to eclipse any previous record, since the Alumni Association has had a special committee in the field to bring in the Old Guard for the great reunion on next Tuesday, afternoon and evening, which is entirely given over to the alumni.

It was therefore fitting that for the first time in the history of Elon an alumnus should give the baccalaureate sermon. Dr. L. E. Smith, of the Class of 1910, of the Third Christian church of Norfolk, Va., spoke a thrilling message to the seniors and their assembled friends this morning. Dr. Smith's theme was "The Offering of a Life," based on Acts 3:6. It was a heart to heart appeal for that heroism in living which war calls for in dying, and particularly for a life of self-forgetfulness in the service of mankind.

Speaking directly to the graduating class Dr. Smith pictured the various calls for service coming up from every strata of society. Out of such a babel of voices he declared it would take balanced minds, stout hearts, and stalwart characters to stand the test and to meet adequately the needs in fulfillment of humanity's mission in a time like this. Urging each to the amplest investment of self in the cause of the race and of the Kingdom Dr. Smith concluded his discourse by showing that only life, and not creed, not profession, not purpose, but only life, can satisfy the demands on college men and women in this era.

Baccalaureate Address

Obident to the traditions on the Hill President Harper spoke to graduating class at the evening service. It was his final word to the Class of 1920 and he evidently desired to give the newly commissioned pilots on life's voyage a wholesome supply of good ballast for the troubled sea ahead in these days of unrest and uncertainty.

These days of reconstruction challenge every ideal of life declared President Harper, and therefore it behooves us to inventory the fundamental goods of life in order to stabilize our actions and hold our program of service in the safe course of progress. These fundamental goods the speaker found to be three in number, God, man, and the organized life of the social order, all of which the speaker declared to be fundamentally and essentially good. There is no standing room in God's universe for a pessimist he insisted, for even if the way is dark and the clouds lower all around, good is at heart of things and all will turn out well.

God is good he urged. He is no absentee landlord, interested only in collecting the rent from His tenants, nor an outraged tyrant dealing justice to His miserable and recreant subjects, but our Heavenly Father, vitally concerned for good in every circumstance that even remotely touches our life. Such is the new conception of our Father God according to Dr. Harper's theology.

And man, too, is good, he said, not merely some men, but all men. We must bring ourselves to the point of accepting this as a basis of dealing with our brothers. Whence then the evil in man? he queried. Evil in a world created by a beneficent being is necessarily possible in the development of moral freedom is the answer, for men could not be a moral being without freedom, and freedom makes entirely possible the commission of sin.

In speaking of the goodness of the organized life of man, Dr. Harper admitted the injustice now present in it, but saw its removal not by the renouncing of organized social life, but by its purification. He urged the seniors to be ready to join with Bolshevist, Red, or any one to remedy the evils of the social order, but to oppose any man or organization of men even to the point of bloodshed who aimed at the overthrow of the organized life of society. Our day needs to understand that authority is not evil. Misdirected authority is evil, he admitted, but a more fatal evil still would be for each individual to act for his own selfish interest alone. We must not forget ourselves nor let any one else forget that freedom is a social fact as well as an individual prerogative and that we are our brother's keeper whether we wish to be or not, and that he is our keeper too. In terms of this mutual duality of relationship all the problems of individual authority and social ethics must be worked out, with brotherhood and equality as the foundation stones of social control.

In concluding the president reiterated his plea for optimism as the antidote to the restlessness and confusion of life on every hand, and optimism sure and steadfast because based solidly on the goodness of God, of man, and of the organized life of the social order ministering to man in the spirit of Christian brotherhood.

Elon College, May 25.—Cowen's "The Rose Maiden" was rendered by the Elon Choral Society last evening, with Prof. Edwin M. Betts as conductor. The great choruses of the Cantata to the accompaniment of the pipe organ and grand piano brought forth spontaneous outbursts of applause, as did also the solos by Prof. Alexander and Miss Fisher. About one hundred voices took part in the Cantata. The annual celebration of the Choral Society has become one of the outstanding events of the Commencement session.

In the afternoon the Society Representatives spoke. The speakers and their subjects were as follows:

DEVOTIONAL

DELAYED ANSWERS

We are to be thankful that sometimes God delays answers to our prayers. The disciples desired to call down fire upon the Samaritan village, but permission was not granted until after Pentecost. Then that which was burned up was opposition to Jesus.—Ex.

FAITH

I don't understand the hills,
Or the bounding sea,
Or the laughing mountain rills—
How they came to be.
I don't understand the sun,
Or the twinkling star—
How they ever were begun,
But I know they are.

So with faith—its mysteries
I can't analyze,
Holding certain verities
Too deep for my eyes;
But I know this heart of mine
Rises from despair
Into joy and peace divine.
Knowing they are there.

—John Hendrick Bangs.

HOW WE GROW

Nothing will take the place of inner communion with the Lord for widening our minds and reassuring us of His presence in His world. Much valuable information about God may be reported to us, eloquently and persuasively. But it will leave us as it found us, unless we verify it at first hand. "Grow in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," in the knowledge of Him, not in knowledge about Him, not in a world of even the most silvery echoes, but in immediate touch with Him. We grow as we speak to Him in prayer, as we keep our lives steadily before His grave, searching eyes, as we put away our conceit and let ourselves be guided, as we realize that if we are ever to lead others it is only as we allow ourselves to be led by Him. Take our eyes off Him, and we stop our growth. But in constant communion with Him we are kept fresh and vital.

"In Christ I feel the heart of God
Throbbing from heaven through earth;
Life stirs again within the clod,
Renewed in beautiful birth;
The soul springs up, a flower of prayer,
Breathing His breath out on the air."

—British Weekly.

We thank Thee for the dear and faithful dead, for those who have made the distant heavens a home for us, and whose truth and beauty are even now in our hearts. One by one Thou dost gather the scattered families out of the earthly light into the heavenly glory, from the distractions and strife and weariness of time to the peace of eternity. We thank Thee for the labors and the joys of these mortal years. We thank Thee for our deep sense of the mysteries that lie beyond our dust, and for the eye of faith which Thou hast opened for all who believe in Thy Son to outlook that mark. May we live altogether in Thy faith and love, and in that hope which is full of immortality. Amen.—Rufus Ellis.

In Woman's Realm

THE WOMEN OF OUR CHURCH*

By Mrs. W. R. Mitchell, Suffolk, Va.

I am proud, for our women in our Church have done some praiseworthy and notable things. In no whit have they hung behind the men. In fact, I suspect that if the returns were all in, it has rather been the other way. And this is, after all, as it should be. The first woman was named "EVE" because she was to be the mother of all living; that was her God-appointed work, and woman has lived up to it ever since. Every good work, I verily believe, has been "mothered" by the women. Sometimes it has been born in secret, in the night-time, as it were, in some quiet home, and has emerged into the daytime of life, without the mother ever being known. Sometimes women have borne and nursed the tiny, flickering life until, grown to full strength and size, it has gone forward, like a sturdy man, on its own two feet. Such has been, for instance, the work of the women in temperance and missions.

I suppose we all remember it was in a woman's prayer meeting in England there was borne the thought of foreign missions, and the first foreign missionary sent out by the English-speaking race, so far as I know, was William Carey, sent out by the women, and for a long time, supported by those women. The coats and garments made by the Dorcas of our churches have clothed not only the poor, but the missionaries as well, by providing for their wants as they went about doing their Master's work. Who can tell how many stitches have been set to make the money that has poured through our missionary coffers since the work began? How many of our bravest and most vitally interested men might have given up in discouragement, had it not been for the women behind them, upholding them, strengthening them, urging them on, and everlastingly and always holding up the cause of missions to the Father in Heaven.

We are reminded, too, that in our Church, much of our mission work started through the Sunday schools and the Children's Societies, and back of every such effort, we may be sure, were mother hearts, women working and laboring for the growth of the Kingdom. It was a little girl who, in 1878, gave the first dime through this channel, and it was a woman, Miss Donna Murray, who published the first letter in the Children's Mission column of "The Herald of Gospel Liberty." The little girl who gave the dime, grew to womanhood, and is now one of our women missionaries in Porto Rico, supported by one of our own churches in the South, and known by name to all of us, and, personally to many, Miss Olive Williams.

Many women were among our pioneer preachers, a fact we often forget, and in fact, we have now, some forty ordained woman ministers, none as yet in the South, however, although there are today, as a result of our Life-Dedication campaign, many girls, large and small, who have offered their lives in service to Christ.

I am indebted to a splendid article by Mrs. A. V. Morrill, herself a woman fired with missionary zeal, President of Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, and a most charming and persuasive speaker and writer, for many of the facts which I shall give, in regard to our women workers of the earlier days. Women have always been prominent in the work of our Church from the beginning. The first woman preacher of whom we have any record appears to have been Nancy Cram who, in 1812 went to Charleston, New York, and there began a work which resulted in the organization of a church out of which came an unusually large number of Christian ministers. Her heart was so full of this work, and she spoke so convincingly and eloquently that in the four short years of her service, she brought hundreds to Christ, preaching often in groves because no house was large enough to hold the crowds. Among those converted under her preaching was Mrs. Abigail Roberts, possibly the best known of our preachers in those early days. There is a record of at least four churches organized through her efforts.

The first Christian church in Canada was organized through the efforts of a woman, Mrs. Mary Stogdill. It is said that on the fifteenth anniversary of the first Christian church in Canada, there were thirty church organizations, every member of which, except those who joined by letter, were brought to Christ, directly or indirectly, by Mrs. Stogdill. Surely, she was like Lydia, entertaining the ministers in her home and then going to found churches in Thyatira.

The first woman ordained by any church since the fifth century was a member of the Christian Church, Mrs. Melissa Terrell, in 1866, these others having preached without ordination. Almost every section of our country has had its splendid woman preachers and missionaries, who followed the example of the daughters of Philip, the Evangelist, or Phoebe a servant of the church, the first woman missionary to Rome; or Priscilla whose labors in the Lord were a cause of rejoicing throughout all Asia.

We have had at least four women home missionaries, possibly more; and as you know, we are planning this year, in our Southern work, to add another to the list, Miss Iola Hedgepeth, who goes out to work among the mountain people in Virginia this fall, God willing.

Antioch College was the first co-educational college in America and two of our women, Miss Pennell and Mrs. Holmes were members of the faculty. Since then, many of our finest women have helped to mould character in our schools and colleges. A woman, Mrs. Wilson of Philadelphia, built the first dormitory at Franklinton College, and also generously endowed the college. A woman, Mrs. Lois L. Sellon, was the one who, through her persistent and untiring efforts made possible the Aged Ministers Home at Lakemont.

It is hard to mention names among the women who have done so much in missionary work. But this we can say, that since our first missionary Rev. David Jones, went out to Japan, accompanied by his wife, there has been found no woman who was willing to let her husband go alone to the mission fields. She has gone along with him, helping in the teaching and preaching, as well as in the home-making, and in many ways, hers, I am sure, has been the harder task. Home means more to women, generally, than it does to men, and these women have left home and all it stands for for the sake of Christ. We are reminded, oftentimes, in reading of their lives, of the old conundrum, "Why did the Pilgrim mothers have more to bear than the Pilgrim fathers?" And the answer "Because the Pilgrim mothers had to bear all the Pilgrim fathers bore, and to bear with the Pilgrim fathers besides." Read a record of the day's work from the life of any of the wives of our devoted missionaries—the way in which they must mingle home cares and church cares, and yet live such lives and keep such homes that both lives and homes are like candles shining in the darkness of heathenism, and pointing the way to the light that lighteth the world, and see if there is one of these women who deserves less than the best that we can give her. Some splendid Christian women have gone out alone, like Miss True, Miss Mishler, and Miss Williams, of all of whom we are proud, and their lives, no less than those of their married sisters, have told the story of Jesus even before their lips had learned the foreign tongue of the people among whom they labored.

After the organization of the Womens Boards of Missions, the Foreign Board in 1886, and the Home Board in 1890, the work of the Missions went forward with renewed zeal. The names of the officers of these Societies is like a muster roll of heroines, always in the forefront of the battle. Every conference had its splendid women leaders, such as Rev. Ellen G. Gustin in the New England Convention, who, by unceasing work and prayer, helped forward the great cause. And as we look abroad over our land, and see the conference boards organized in our conferences, one after the other, and read of the hundreds of Societies that have been organized in our churches through these parent boards, we are constrained to believe that in deed and in truth our women broke the alabaster box, and the perfume is filling all the room.

Perhaps it may be news to some of you that it was a woman who first succeeded in having a column of The Herald of Gospel Liberty set aside for missionary news, when some of the men seriously doubted whether we would ever have news enough to fill such a column. That column became the parent of our Christian missionary, and its founder was Mrs. Emily K. Bishop, the President of the Home Mission Board practically ever since its beginning, a woman whose power for good through our Church and every department of it, will never be known till all the records are opened before the great throne. A woman wrote the first missionary tract was sent out by our Church, and it is women who have given most liberally to the permanent funds of the Mission Boards; it is women who have built the Santa Isabel church; who have sent the automobile to Rev. Mr. Caldwell, our missionary among the lumber camps of Washington, who have started the work in the capital of our nation, at least from the financial end. And while we are thinking of the women of our Church, let us not forget those women of a darker hue than our own, those splendid Japanese women who have come out from the darkness of heathendom, and made such sacrifices as you and I have never been called upon to make, of friends, kindred, old associations, all that they have held most dear, and who are spending their lives as Bible women in devoted service of Christ; living, some of them, miles from any other Christian workers, alone, yet not alone, for their Master is beside them, we may be sure, as they go on their way; and He alone could tell adequately the story of their ministry.

And coming down to our own Southern Christian Convention, I believe we may say, without the shadow of boasting, that if it had not been for women, the work here would never have made such giant strides as it has done. It was a woman who first wrote to The Christian Sun, urging that the work be carried on. It was a woman who urged and pleaded and implored until our women and men became interested, and the Southern Christian Convention, in 1912, authorized the organization of Women's Boards for Home and Foreign Missions. The Eastern Virginia Conference had the first conference board organized in July of the same year. It is worth remembering that meeting for organization. A committee of ladies asked for a little room in which they might meet and talk with those present at the Southern Christian Convention who were interested in Missions. Before the hour set the room was full, the hall was full, and people were crowding to enter. To the astonishment of all, it was necessary to open the main room of the church, to hold the little committee meeting, and the spirit of enthusiasm that radiated from our first leader in the South, Mrs. C. H. Rowland, spread through the women and—yes, the men—who had gathered to see what we were about, until we all, I truly believe, felt the coming of the Pentecostal fire, and went forth to publish it abroad.

I cannot take the time to tell you how the work has gone since then, how our Societies have multiplied, of the work of our Young Peoples Societies and Willing Workers. I cannot even stop to speak the words of appreciation I would like to speak for our leaders, under whose splendid efforts these results have been accomplished, for my time is rapidly drawing to a close, and I want to say just a word in regard to the work still to be done.

We have made a splendid beginning, but there are more things ahead of us. The Interchurch World Movement and its surveys have shown us the need in our own States for Home Missions. We are told there are five million girls in the United States outside of cities, and I suppose an equal number of boys. We have more country churches than city churches, and some of these boys and girls must hear the gospel through us, or they will never hear it, for only about forty per cent of the people in our homeland are connected with the church today.

Porto Rico, we know, is a fertile field today, growing and expanding, and yet Godless. Shall we let business and money-making take complete control of these people, or shall we send missionaries and yet more missionaries to these people, especially the women and children who need us so tremendously?

Japan, we are told, is at the crossroads. It has been a country of agriculture, but its limited amount of space will no longer sustain its nearly fifty-eight millions of population. It is turning more and more to industry. But while the colleges are full of men, learning these new ways, the factories are full of women. These factories are running on anything but Christian principles, and women work there twelve to fourteen hours a day, in a state of virtual slavery, escaping, many of them, either to lives of shame or of sickness, after only a few months, or years, of such life. More girls take their place. What shall we do for these girls? Our sister women? I might go on and mention every country in the world where the principles of Christ are not known. From all these lands the cries of the women are going up day and night. They are calling to us, who have the light, Come over and help us, O women of the Christian church; you know our needs, our burdens are the same, our hopes are the same, but oh, while your lives are spent in the bright sunlight, adoring a God of love, we are hidden away in darkness, fearing, we know not what, and going down into everlasting darkness.

NOTES AND PERSONALS

Rev. G. C. Crutchfield changes his address from Elon College to Kernersville, N. C.

Rev. H. J. Fleming will leave this week for Kittery Point, Maine, where he goes to accept the pastorate at that place.

This issue is sent out one day late in order to get in the Elon commencement and we trust that our friends will be repaid by waiting.

Rev. C. E. Geringer changes his address from Richland, Georgia, to Elon College, N.-C. Brother Geringer, we understand, is open for work and will consider any church or churches.

The Headquarters Committee, appointed by the recent session of the Convention, held a meeting this (Wednesday) morning but, we understand, failed to reach any conclusion as to what steps to take.

We call attention again to the Children's Day program prepared and issued by the Board of Religious Education of the Convention. The program shows thought in preparation and should be in the hands of every church and Sunday school for use. June is the month set aside to hold children's exercises in each Sunday school and here is hoping that each school will fully co-operate. Copies of the program can be had FREE by addressing Miss Bessie Holt, Burlington, N. C., who is entrusted with the work of distributing the literature.

SOME FIGURES TO THINK ABOUT

The Home Missions Council gives circulation to the following: There are 202 denominations in the United States. Thirty-one new denominations were born in ten years and seventeen died. Of all the people in the United States 41,926,854 are church members, an increase of 6,860,000 in ten years, or twenty per cent. There are 227,000 churches, an increase of 15,000. The value of church property is $1,676,000,000, an increase of $420,000,000 in ten years. There are 15,721,815 Roman Catholics. From this number should be deducted fifteen per cent for infants and children, all of which are included in the Roman Catholic statistics. Less than one-third of the church members in the United States are Roman Catholics. The Roman Catholic proportion in the total membership was 40 1-2 per cent in 1906, in 1919 it was 37 1-2 per cent. In ten years the Roman Catholics gained 10 3-5 per cent while the Protestant churches gained 23 2-5 per cent. The Baptists gained 26 1-5 per cent; the Disciples 24 4-5 per cent; the Presbyterians 23 1-5 per cent; the Methodists and Episcopalians 23 1-5 per cent; the Congregationalists and Lutherans 13 per cent. The Universalists are losing, having today only 59,000 members. The Unitarians have only 82,000. The percentage of men in nearly all Protestant Churches is increasing. It is now 43 9-10 per cent. The average ministerial salary among the northern Methodists is $1,223, among the Congregationalists $1,343, Northern Presbyterians $1474, Episcopalians $1,632 and Unitarians $2,080.

FIRE LOSSES

The Journal of Commerce, compiling from its daily records of fires in the United States during the month, gives the April fire loss $22,108,750 against $15,484,750 for 1919, and $20,108,900 for 1918, an increase of 15 per cent and 20 per cent respectively. For the four month period the loss is $113,350,700 against 94,024,925 in 1919 and $98,586,135 in 1918. Fire insurance companies do not consider this fire loss abnormal, when looked at from the standpoint of percentage of values, as compared with previous years. The higher valuation placed on all classes of property in addition to the normal increase by production, they say has caused a great gain in fire premium income. This gain is shown by Connecticut Insurance Department statistics showing premiums of the companies reporting to that State on their 1919 operations of $491,023,763, a gain of $57,235,724 for the year. On the other hand the risks these companies have assumed and have yet to carry to maturity are enormous, amounting to $86,187,979.966, an increase of $10,279,823,413 over the previous year.

terests of the churches, has been at the very center of the Christian situation throughout the world in these trying recent years and spoke his message out of rich and ripe experiences.

Without mentioning the war, its gruesome presence in a Christian era of the world's history furnished the clearly discernible background for Dr. Macfarland's theme. He viewed it as the Cross of Mankind, from which by implication the world is to receive political and social salvation. Speaking of the Cross of Jesus he said: "The moral beauty of Jesus' character centres in the Cross, which shone before Him and which beckoned Him on from the very beginning of His splendid life. Here, again, the meaning of the Cross has been greatly limited by human philosophic speculation. It has been obscured as a living inspiration to living men, with their duties and temptations, with their noble aspirations to be inspired and their moral weaknesses to be shamed. The Cross does not mean much to men until it becomes the symbol of a great, unutterably noble life. Looked at in this light every man who wants to be strong and noble might well have a crucifix ever before his eyes.

"The moral power of Jesus is one great revelation of the Cross. It was a voluntary Cross. Amid all the variations and vicissitudes of Jesus' life, with all its lights and shadows, He walked undeviatingly in one straight path from the Jordan to Calvary. Expediency found with Him no place with her beseeching subtleties. The consideration of consequence exercised no guiding or repressive hand."

Elon College, May 25.—The afternoon and evening of the last day of commencement were given over to the Reunion Exercises, under the leadership of Mr. C. C. Fonville, '10.

At night Hon. S. E. Everett, '93, gave the Alumni Oration. Mr. Everett is a lawyer and chose his subject from the profession, "At the Bar," being his theme.

"We stand 'At the Bar' of Time," he said, "every one of us, and we are tried, with the past as evidence for or against us, the present as our trial, and the future, our sentence. I speak in the terms of the law, but those terms are not something arbitrary and artificial, they have risen out of our common experiences.

"The indictment," he continued, "which I bring against the nation, the community and the individual has two counts, which are these: forgetfulness of God and of one's duty to his fellow man. This land of ours was settled by men and women seeking a place in which they might, with freedom and conscience, worship God, but I fear we have grown lax through the days that have passed. We trust in our own strength, forgetting we are but a child nation as yet, for the life of a nation is measured by centuries, not by years. We have grown proud as we viewed our wonderful achievements, and I fear that unless we give God the glory, our civilization and glory may depart as have those of Assyria, and Athens, Greece and Rome, and all other peoples who have forgotten God. Neither an army, nor navy, great laws, or philosophy, science or efficiency can make a great enduring nation. To have a great nation it must be composed of the kind of people of whom the prophet wrote, 'Blessed is that people whose God is Jehovah.'

"We have forgotten our duty to our fellowman, whether in the community or the nation. The oldest question in the world is the question, 'Am I my brother's keeper?' and every community has lived or died by the answer it returned. In my position as Government Appeal Agent, I came to realize more and more each day how each man who filled in his questionnaire was being weighed and measured and sifted.

"There is a thrill about making lives that never comes from making money, and the man who so uses his money finds it an ever new joy. Men are rapidly coming to see that human life is the infinitely greater value than material wealth. Man must, if he would exist, begin to think in terms of brotherhood. The world is too small and men are too close together to exist unless they can live as brothers. Along this path of human brotherhood, as along the path of every untried adventure, there must be leaders, men who will blaze the trail, such leaders are being selected by God today for the tasks of tomorrow; they must be trained and prepared. It is in the teaching of the laws of Christ that we shall find safety. If we are to finally be able to plead "Not Guilty" to this indictment, we have but one hope; that hope is democracy and Christianity. We must not forget the pit whence we were digged, nor the rock from which we were hewn; we cannot forget God and live.

"How shall we train our boys and girls so that we shall accomplish our ends? It can only be done by the right kind of education in home and school. We must train our children in such schools as this, in the Christian homes of America, to stand firm for the right, and in the faith of their fathers. How shall we escape the doom of past civilizations. There is only one way. It is an old way, a plain way; it leads back to the constitution our forefathers gave us, back to the home fires on the family altar, back to the Christian school and college, back to God!"

Alumni Banquet

Following this address of Mr. Everett, a banquet of seven courses was served by the Guilford Hotel Caterers in the College Dining Hall, closing in the wee small hours of the night, and terminating Elon's thirtieth commencement.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

I want to give you a part of two letters I received this week. The first one reads like this:

"There are three children here whose mother died of flu and the father, while able to work, is unable to care for them as they should be. There are two boys, 5 and 9, and a girl 7. Is there any possibility of your taking them at the Orphanage?"

The other one from a splendid, good woman who has put up a hard fight to keep the little girl with her that she is now asking us to take, reads like this: "Everything is so high priced that it takes all I make to live. I can't hardly wear decent clothes. I work overtime at night is the way I get my clothes. I worked most every night last week and it makes me feel very bad to lose so much sleep. I do all my cooking, washing, ironing and sewing at night after I get home after ten o'clock. Hardly ever get the chance to go to bed before one or two o'clock and get up at six."

I have said NO to eighty children since last November. There is a great opportunity for the Church to serve. Will we make use of the opportunity?

Our singing class gave a concert at Long's Chapel the third Sunday at eleven o'clock. The congregation was large and the offering good. The Men and Millions Forward Movement is moving on encouragingly in this church and we truly hope that they will reach the goal by July first. The captain is more encouraged than when I talked with him last.

The program was also rendered in our Burlington church at 8 o'clock on the same day and the audience was very appreciative and the offering good. Our little folks enjoy giving these concerts and it brings the people into closer touch with the work and gives them an opportunity to see the children they are helping to support and see what little orphan children can be taught to do.

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little boy seven years old and I want to join the band of cousins. My teacher's name is Miss Wallace. I like her fine. I am enclosing ten cents for the orphans. Best wishes.—Charles Cook Howell, Jr.

Here comes a little boy from the far sunny South, where oranges grow. I would like to visit you some times and eat oranges with you. We are glad to have your letter and want you to write often.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl ten years old. I enjoy reading the children's letters very much. Please find enclosed ten cents for the cousins. I hope they are all well.—Margaret Daughtry.

We are glad you enjoy the children's letters and are pleased to have you as a member of the corner. Write often:—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—We are going to have a Mothers' Day at Liberty on the sixteenth of this month. I wish all the cousins could come. I am sending ten cents for May. With love.—Leona Ayscue.

Our singing class certainly did enjoy their visit to your church last year. We hope to come again some time.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I guess you think by this time that I have forgotten you and the cousins. It has been a long time since I have written, but hope to do better in the future. I am enclosing twenty cents for my little brother, Paul, and twenty-five cents for myself. Lovingly.—Alma Ruth Duke.

I knew you would not forget me. I have been expecting your letter. I hope to see you again some time.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—We had a good day at Liberty today. I wish that you could have been there. Mamma saw you at the Convention. I suppose we can go when we get to be grown-up. I am enclosing our dues. Rev. J. C. Stuart gave W. T. his dime, and I water the flowers each night for my money.—Virginia Pearl and W. T. Ayscue.

You are a sweet little girl to water the flowers and I hope you will have good luck with them. You must come to see us some time.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I want to join the children's corner. Yesterday was my birthday. I was eleven years old. My school closes today. I passed on all of my examinations and so was promoted to the sixth grade. I am sending you ten cents for the eousms. I hope to be able to write each month.—With love.—Dorothy Moore.

You are a smart little girl to pass on all of your studies. Tell mamma to give you a dollar.—“Uncle Charley.”

A BIT OF JUNIOR SERVICE

He was a wee bit of a lad in a small town of Tennessee. While other boys could run and play he was compelled to sit alone because of a twisted foot. Recently the surgeons sought to straighten his foot, and after being out of school several weeks he became alarmed lest he should drop behind his class, and he struggled out of the house, walking a long distance to school. When he arrived there he was too weak to study and had to be sent home. Immediately his classmates, who were members of the Junior Red Cross, voted to use some of their funds to hire a teacher to go to the boy's house and hear his lesson every day. When he returns to school next year, well and strong, he will be up with his classes and can sit with the Juniors who did so much to make him happy.

MORE OF THE AMERICAN DISH

Children of the United States are wonderful boys and girls in the eyes of the children of Europe. That is why the American dish, mush and milk, is becoming popular across the sea.

In Albania the children, brought up on quaint customs, voiced many objections when lined up at Junior Red Cross school before a steaming pot of cornmeal mush. The tattered children, each hugging a big white bowl, filed past the kettle and received a portion of sweetened mush, flooded with rich milk. One black eyed youngster of ten, wearing a red fez, came back and handed his bowl to the American girl in charge of the dining room.

“I never ate that before, and I don't know what it is,” he pleaded. Others were gazing in wonder at the contents of their dishes, but not eating.

“Oh dear,” said the Red Cross girl. “Why, American children love that dish.”

“Is that what the American children eat?” chorused the little Albanians. The laughing girl assured them that it was.

There were a few minutes of busy breakfasting and the American girl felt a tug at her apron. The black eyed little youngster in the red fez was holding out his empty bowl like a young Oliver Twist pleading for “more.” And behind him the others were lining up again with empty bowl. “Some more of the American dish,” they were clamoring—and thereafter mush and milk was daily demanded by little Albanians who hope to be like American boys and girls.

DAVID CURLEY

David Curley is a little Navajo Indian four years old and knows how to speak both English and Navajo. His rabbit died, and he held funeral services at the grave. The subject of the sermon was “Praise God,” and the main thought in his prayer was “Praise God,” and in closing he sang “Praise God, from whom all blessings flow.” He had his mother write a letter to his sick father and told him if he would pray hard he would get well, and added: “When Satan comes to tempt you, just say, ‘Get behind me, old Satan man.’”

David is like all Navajos, quite nomadic. He likes to go about and climb the hills and can beat his sister, Alice at this. Sometimes he gets discouraged when she lags behind, and on one occasion he had climbed to a little promontory too steep for Alice, who remained at the foot with bonnet in hand and showed no signs of going farther. David called to her and said: “Come on up here; if you get sick, Jesus will get you well.” David has a great big generous heart for a four-year-old; for when the school children are anywhere near the house, he goes inside and comes out with his arms full of bread and cookies for his playmates and gives a feast, thinking nothing of the scolding he will receive when his mother finds it out. He is the son of a Navajo preacher and is very religious, thinking nothing is impossible with God, and he will not tolerate any lack of reverence. They sat down to eat, and he did not know the blessing had been asked, whereupon he set out to call for grace, saying in loud tones: “We didn't pray.” His idea of property is that everything that does not belong to him belongs to Jesus; and if he finds you eating candy, he will say: “Did Jesus give you some eandy, and is it good?”

The only time he is bad is when he is hungry. All his religion leaves him then, and he looks on the dark side of everything. However, just as soon as he gets some of his mother's good Navajo bread he is happy again.

We sang at church Sunday, “Are You Ready?” and he went home singing the same tune to revised words, “I want Money.” His grandfather is a leader among medicine men, but the little four-year-old has almost converted him; and when they met the other day the old man said: “I believe the new way is right, after all. Pray for David to become a preacher to these thirty-five thousand Navajos who want and need Jesus.”

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON FOR JUNE 6, 1920

(C. H. Stephenson)

Text: I Samuel 15:13-26.

Time: About B. C. 1079.

Places: Ramah, Carmel, Gilgal, and the Land of the Amalekites.

Persons: Samuel, Saul, Amalekites, Agag, Kenites and the people of Israel.

Golden Text: Thou has rejected the word of the Lord, and the Lord hath rejected thee. I Sam. 15:26.

Leading Thought: God cannot help those who will not follow His directions.

Junior Topic: How Saul Lost His Kingdom.

Intermediate Topic: Why Saul Failed.

Adult Topic: The Strength and Weakness of Saul's Character.

Additional Material: I Samuel 13:28-31.

The purpose of this lesson is to teach the importance of obedience to God. Just how much time intervened between the events studied last Sunday and those of today's lesson, we do not know.

Today we study of Saul's great struggle with moral and spiritual forces, a struggle in which he so failed as to prove that he was no longer worthy of being king of the chosen nation. He deliberately disobeyed the voice of God, and to disobey is to lose the favor of God, of man, of self, and every admirable element of character. To obey is not drudgery, not the ignoble act of a slave, but is a delight, and the noblest act of prince or king. To obey is a fundamental virtue. It is one of the first lessons taught to the child; it is a vital part of his education in home, school, trade, business, and religion. Obedience is the true sacrifice; disobedience is the essence of idolatry. No substitute for obedience can be acceptable to parents, teachers, or God. "If ye love me, keep my commandments."

VIRGINIA VALLEY CENTRAL SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

The Convention met with the church at Concord, May 12, 1920. In spite of the rain the first session was well attended and the following two days sessions were largely attended. The most of the time the house was filled to its capacity. The schools were well represented and their reports showed that they were well organized and doing good work. The foundation is evidently being laid for a great and good work in the bounds of the Convention. We are expecting great things from this convention.

The Convention was royally entertained by the good people of Concord church and community. Evidently they have not been materially effected by the high cost of living. An abundance was provided to satisfy our appetites and much left over each day.

Rev. W. C. Hook delivered the annual address, which made a strong impression upon the Convention. He made us feel the need of genuine Christian character and its value in the work of the Kingdom. Rev. N. H. Frauel, of the Reformed church, brought a timely message on the Interchurch World Movement, or larger co-operation of Christian forces. Rev. B. J. Earp spoke very effectively on the little child and made a strong appeal for the Christian Orphanage. An offering of nearly thirty dollars was made on the new building. Rev. A. W. Andes was down for an address, but he had not delivered it up to the time the writer left. Mr. R. A. Larrick spoke on "The Great Purpose of Christian Endeavor." The writer spoke on "The Power Needed in the Sunday School," "The Need of Religious Education," "The Means for Religious Education," "The Sunday School That's Different," "Christian Endeavor in the Extension of the Kingdom."

The department secretaries of the Convention presented splendid reports. They showed that the secretaries had been at work as well as the schools. Following the report of each secretary there was a round table discussion, in which many splendid facts were brought out. These were very helpful and we trust will result in much good work being undertaken during the next year.

The Convention gladly accepted its part of the new financial program for the Department of Religious Education, adopted by the Southern Christian Convention a few weeks ago. The amount asked of the Virginia Valley Central Convention was $200.00. This was budgeted among the schools. The Board of Religious Education is very grateful for this action and trust that all of our Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Conventions will as gladly ratify the action of the Southern Christian Convention in reference to this department.

"What Bible Reading Will do For Us."—Ps. 119:97-104. (Consecration meeting).

A famous bishop once said: "People will not be better than the books they read." I do not know precisely what the bishop meant, but I know what I should mean by the words he used. The books we read indicate what we are, or make us what they are. Normally we turn to pages which say the things we are thinking, or pander to the moods we secretly encourage. On the other hand books are germinant, full of seeds of good or evil. One cannot rise unimproved or unhurt from a book. To waste time on trashy literature means distinct loss to the reader. As we read, so are we, book and soul reacting upon each other. Let us then read a Book that is worth while—the Bible.

We should follow a system in our Bible reading. So often we wait until night time to do this—when our minds and bodies are tired and we do not grasp the real joy and pleasure there is in Bible reading. To the mind of this writer, the most appropriate time for Bible reading is in the early morning—and no more fitting time could be chosen than at the breakfast table. A chapter or two read at this time, when the mind is fresh, followed by prayer, will do more good, in my opinion, than several chapters read just before retiring.

MARRIAGES

MANN-BROWN

About 6:00 o'clock in the afternoon of May 15, 1920, Mr. Willie H. Mann of Moncure, N. C., and Miss Myrtle Brown of Merry Oaks, N. C., were united in marriage at the home of Mr. J. W. Womble, Sanford, N. C.

The ceremony was a quiet one and was performed by Rev. B. J. Howard. The groom is the son of Mr. Richard Mann, and the bride is a daughter of Mr. William Brown.

They will probably make their home at Moncure, N. C., where they have many friends who will wish them joy.

OBITUARIES

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—COPELAND

Whereas, God the Maker, and Giver of mankind, saw best to remove from earth to Heaven our neighbor, friend and co-worker, the beloved wife of J. R. Copeland, therefore be it Resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to our Father's will knowing that He maketh no mistakes and that our loss is Heaven's gain.

Second, that the church has lost a faithful member and the Missionary Society one that was ever ready to do her part. The family a faithful and loving wife and a devoted mother.

Third, that we offer our heartfelt sympathy and prayers to her loved ones bidding them to trust in the same dear Savior that they may be as she was, resigned to His will.

Fourth, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy spread on the minutes of Liberty Spring Christian church records.

COPELAND

Mrs. Mollie Copeland, daughter of the late William and Mary Rawles, was born in Nausemond County, Virginia, January 18, 1862, and died April 22, 1920, at the age of 58 years, 3 months and 4 days. On February 22, 1900, she was married to Mr. John R. Copeland. She left a devoted husband, and one sister, Mrs. A. H. Savage. She was a faithful member of Liberty Spring Christian church. She was a true Christian and lived a beautiful and consistent life. She was a devoted wife, and her home was a model of mutual love and sincere devotion. She was greatly afflicted but bore her suffering with Christian resignation. She will be greatly missed in her church and community. Her devoted husband and all the members of her family circle have the sympathy of many friends. The funeral was conducted by the pastor at Liberty Spring church.

I. W. JOHNSON.

JUSTICE

R. A. Justice, M. D., was born March 4, 1862, and departed this life May 10, 1920. He married to Miss Ellen Bowles November 1, 1882. He joined Oak Grove Christian church twenty-two years ago, and transferred his membership to La Grange Christian church fifteen years ago. He was one of the charter members of the LaGrange church.

Brother Justice was a physician of the highest quality. He ministered to the soul as well as to the body. He was known in western Georgia as a man of prayer as well as a physician. To know him was to love him and his friends were numbered by the thousands. He leaves a wife and one sister, a host of friends to mourn his death.

Funeral services were conducted at the home by his pastor, Rev. C. W. Hanson.

W. M. CROWDER.

TUCKER

Margaret Annie, daughter of W. B. and Vernie Tucker of Raleigh, N. C., was born November 28, 1919, and died May 17, 1920. The parents of this beautiful child both professed faith in Christ today (May 18) and will unite with the First Christian church, Raleigh, N. C., tomorrow night.

D. A. LONG.

EDWARDS

Mrs. Fidelity Moring Edwards, wife of J. D. Edwards of Durham, N. C., died at Watts Hospital at six o'clock P. M., May 10, 1920, at the age of 76 years.

Surviving the deceased is her husband and one son, C. R. Edwards of Durham; also a sister, Mrs. B. A. York of Lincoln, N. C., and a brother, E. C. Moring of Kannapolis, N. C.

Sister Edwards, a daughter of Alfred Moring who, for many years before his death, was Treasurer of the Southern Christian Convention and known and greatly beloved by all who were accustomed to attend these gatherings. Her brother, Hon. John M. Moring, died several years ago, and F. O. Moring of Raleigh, another brother, died last January.

When I first met Sister Edwards she was a modest girl in her teens and in school. From time to time I have been in her company, in church, in her home, and in society, and I have always been impressed with the conviction that she was a true Christian. As a wife and mother she was gentle, affectionate, and exemplary in all things.

Funeral services were held in the Christian church, conducted by the writer, assisted by the pastor, Rev. S. C. Harrell, and Dr. Walsh of the Baptist church.

Floral designs were many and very beautiful.

W. S. LONG.

BOGGS

Jackson O'Kelly Boggs, son of John O'Kelly and Annie Laura Boggs, was born June 22, 1918 and died May 13, 1920. He was buried at Liberty, N. C., the following day. "Jack" was a great favorite. A large number of people attended his funeral. The little boys and girls formed a line of marching and carried beautiful flowers to place on the grave.

D. A. LONG.

BROY

Clarence L. Broy was born January 17, 1897 and died May 5, 1920, aged twenty-three years, three months, and eighteen days. He made his home with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Broy, near Wood's Chapel church. He was not a member of any church, but expressed himself a short time before his death as feeling that his sins were forgiven him. Funeral services at Wood's Chapel, May 7.

A. W. ANDES.

HILLYARD

Emma Virginia Hillyard, wife of Brother J. D. Hillyard at Mayland, was born September 15, 1845 and departed this life April 14, 1920, at the age of seventy-four years, six months, and twenty-nine days. Surviving besides her husband are one sister and two sons. Both sons are in homes of their own, and thus Brother Hillyard is left alone. However, the sons are kind and dutiful boys, and Brother Brother Hillyard can look to them in his declining years.

Brother Hillyard's home has long been the stopping place for the preachers who came to Mayland, and many will learn with regret that the home is broken up, and that Brother Hillyard is left so sad and lonely.

Funeral services at Mayland, April 16.
A. W. ANDES.

ZIRKLE

On May 15, 1920, Sister Fannie J. Zirkle, a faithful member at Antioch, was called home from labor to reward. Sister Zirkle was born February 1, 1844, and was, therefore, seventy-six years, three months and fourteen days old at the time of her death. She is survived by her husband and two sisters. Her death is especially sad because her husband is blind and almost helpless. For a number of years she has given him the most faithful care and attention and much sympathy is now felt for him that he is left alone.

For many years Sister Zirkle has been a pillar in the church at Antioch, seldom ever missing any service and always at her post of duty. She will be greatly missed. Funeral services at Antioch, May 17. May God bless the bereaved ones in their loss.

We've Noticed the Same Peculiarity

Jack was looking over the dictionary and once he laughed aloud.

"Why are you laughing?" inquired Dot. "Is your book interesting?"

"No, not interesting," answered Jack, "but amusing. It spells words so different from the way I spell them."—Sacramento Union.

His Limited Reading

The hoary-headed examiner glanced over the top of his spectacles. "Are you sure," he inquired, "that this is a purely original composition you have handed in?"

"Yes sir," came the answer.

"But you may possibly, sir, have come across one or two of the words in the dictionary."—The Liverpool Post.

Magnanimity

Collection money was to little Tommy one of the essentials of church-going. Every Sunday morning he saw that his penny was ready. One day just as the ushers began to take the collections, Tommy noticed that a guest in the family pew was not duly provided. Sidling along the seat he whispered: "Where's your penny?" "I didn't bring one," replied the lady. Time was short and the matter was urgent, but Tommy was a quick-witted kiddy. Thrusting his penny into the lady's hand, he whispered: "Here, take mine! I'll pay for you and I'll get under the seat!"—Philadelphia Record.

The blizzard in Boston caused this situation, described in a Boston paper: A clerk who had to commute to his work in town, telephoned to his office one morning: "I'm sorry, but I'll not be able to get to town to work this morning; I haven't reached home last night, yet!"—Mt. Holyoke News.

So Walter claims them for his own
And stows himself inside 'em.

Next Sam's fat legs they close invest,
And, when they won't stretch

Spring Stuff

The spring is here!

So, love, get out your winter clothes,
Your cloaks and capes and coats of fur,

Hot-water bags for freezing toes—

You'll need them now that spring's astir.

Have all the windows weather striped,
ped,

And start the second furnace, pray,
Some extra coal I'll order shipped

Before the spring gets under way.

The spring is here!

The sleigh must now be overhauled—

They'll finish it in time, I trust—

And on the way uptown I called—

The pipes, you know, are like to bust—

To have the plumber send his men

To swathe them all before the freeze.

What's this? It's snowing now again!

I think, my dear, I—I have to—sneeze!

The spring is here!

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

SUNDAY OBSERVANCE A NECESSITY IN CONSERVATION

Human beings will certainly learn one of these days that the laws of God are based on economy in material things as well as economy of a man's spiritual life. The constant call that so and so is a Sunday necessity has widened the way from time to time for increased work on the Sabbath day. But with all the great prosperity that we have brought by our work and economic laws, God is reminding us all the while that His laws must be observed and, while we are not always willing to admit their strict observance, we face them in our every task.

The Sunday newspaper is no doubt the product of a demand, but we are of the opinion that another demand will have to decrease the size of the Sunday paper. The size of the Sunday paper, we believe, is one of the principal reasons why the shortage of newsprint. The Sunday paper is an extravagant waste of materials as it now appears. Not only is it an extravagant waste of materials, but its almost unending list of topics lead thousands to read rather than to attend church.

Advertisers have, somehow, took to the fancy of using the Sunday paper as the best advertising medium. They no doubt have arrived at this conclusion from results. But results can come in one form and then go in another. We need a little clear thinking upon the part of advertisers and publishers and we need it badly.

We had the privilege some days ago of reading a letter written to the editor of the Daily News, Elgin, Ill., by Marshall Field & Co., who had been asked about using the Sunday paper as an advertising medium. Here is the letter in full:

"Answering your inquiry of the twenty-fourth ultimo, we will say that during fifty-odd years of business, Marshall Field & Company never have advertised in Sunday newspapers. They have followed the rule that six days for labor and the seventh for rest was best for employer and employee.

"We regard Sunday advertising as an unnecessary infraction of this very wholesome, many-century-old religious dictum, and are glad to follow it.

"We are said to have the most wonderful display windows in the world, covering four sides of a block. The curtains of these windows are lowered from Saturday night until Monday morning, though we have been urged by many people to allow this display to go forward on the Sabbath Day.

"These decisions were made and have been carried out by the founders and owners of this institution, because they have always tried to govern their actions by their interpretation of the effect upon the public morale. As their example is followed by many merchants, they have striven to mould their policies along the highest ethical lines.

"Marshall Field & Co., feel that the fact that they do not commercialize Sunday makes for better citizenship."

Having seen the big stores of Marshall Field & Co., and know something of the great business that is carried on by that firm, we are very much impressed by this letter. The third paragraph is a very strong testimony of what that great firm thinks of keeping the Sabbath holy.

THE COUNTRY'S FINANCIAL CONDITION

There seems to be a little tightening of money at the present time and some fear a collapse of the world's finances. Our opinion is that no such thing need to come if proper precaution is thrown around our enterprises and the right view of the situation taken. The financial world is purely that of confidence. A panic never comes from the actual lack of money, but the confidence of its possessors in allowing it to circulate. Business is never bad until we think it is bad. America is the land of plenty and opportunity, and it would be a shame upon us to allow a collapse in the money market. England with her handicaps received from the war is forging ahead. Germany has always flooded England with her goods, but now Germany has lost her ships, her colonies, and also her right to trade with England, and this gives the mother country a great opportunity.

With production the lowest in the history of the nation, surely no mill can afford to stand idle; and if the American people will be optimistic enough, no mill will stand idle. Prices can be lowered without a panic. In fact it would be better to have high prices rather than to have a panic. Prices can be lowered by increasing production, and production can be increased by more work, and more work can be had by a willingness upon the part of thousands to work a little more rather than to remain idle while money is plentiful.

THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE CHURCH

In a pamphlet on Christian Aspects of Economic Reconstruction, written by Herbert N. Shenton, a professor of sociology in Columbia University and Chief of the Reconstruction Division of the Council of National Defense, he frankly discusses the Church's peculiar responsibility. He says: "There is an ethical element in every problem of economic and political readjustment and reconstruction. The Christian Church is not only entitled to an expression of its opinion concerning these phases of economic and political reconstruction, but it is under heavy obligation in these days of extreme crisis to give to its membership and to all mankind clear and unequivocal opinions concerning these problems."

The pamphlet is one of a series of studies of the effect of the war upon religion made by the Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook, a representative group of church leaders appointed by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America and the General War-Time Commission of the Churches.

Professor Shenton says further: "The Church must to the best of its ability tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, about the right and the wrong in social and industrial conditions, relations and activities. It must protect every sincere search after the truth and every sincere statement of findings. It must be peculiarly tolerant of those who venture into new fields of thought in an endeavor to find fuller truth. If He is the truth, then each new revelation of the truth becomes a new revelation of Him. To falter in this effort to find the truth is betrayal of confidence; to fail to make the best endeavor is self-annihilating sin.

"Will organized Christianity have the vision and courage to undertake this task? Only careful planning, investment of funds, setting aside of otherwise useful men, patient waiting, individual sacrifice, and extensive co-operation can bring forth worth-while fruits of research. There must tremendous effort, but not undue haste, nor must such research be limited to groups especially set aside for this purpose. A spirit of inquiry must spread throughout the Church. We need a central board which will challenge every group of men and women in this land, who live together, work together, think together, worship together, to join in this search after the things which are good.

"Every economic group is represented in the Church. There are bankers, lawyers, tradesmen, manufacturers, advertisers, retailers, laborers, farmers, and still others, all of whom are avowedly Christian men and women. During this period of reconstruction, each of these groups is challenged by unusual opportunities and responsibilities for making all the readjustments in their own economic field tend towards a more Christian social order.

"Bankers, realizing that by their loans they control to a considerable extent the policies of the business world, must put to themselves the question whether loans are to be made primarily for private economic profit or to promote human welfare. Lawyers, realizing more intimately the importance of legislation in the attainment of social justice, should, at this time, seek to prevent selfish legislation often sought by exploiters of their fellowmen, and to promote such legislation for human welfare as is more easily attained during this period of rapid reorganization. Manufacturers are called upon to remember that production is for the common good and that private management is justified only when it demonstrates that it is in the best interests of the general welfare. Consumers must become more solicitous about the working conditions under which the commodities they purchase were produced than about the bargain prices at which they can procure them.

"There are those who are dismayed because at such a time as this no great leader stands out head and shoulders above all others in the Church. Perhaps we sometimes forget that the strength of a democracy is less likely to be found in this type of leadership than in a multitude of leaders scattered through every walk in life and found wherever men dwell and walk together. The leadership of the Christian Church will doubtless in these days be found not in one man but in the many. The remarkable readjustment of our nation to the new conditions imposed by war was made possible because of just such leadership in every part of the nation, and in so far as the Christian Church can bring into activity just this type of leadership, just so far will it be able to build its principles of living into the new social-economic order."

We have received the following invitation which will be read with interest by many readers of THE SUN:

"Mrs. Geneva Edgerton DuRant requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her daughter, Ethel Geneva to Mr. Mark Clinton Lassiter on Tuesday evening, the eighth of June, at half after eight o'clock, Methodist church, Snow Hill, North Carolina."

Miss DuRant is a member of the Class of 1912, Elon College. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

VICTOR LIGHTBOURNE AT SUFFOLK

Rev. Victor Lightbourne has just closed a two weeks' evangelistic campaign in the Suffolk Christian church. This church, the largest in the city, was packed to its capacity through the entire period, and hundreds were turned away. Mr. Lightbourne's previous engagement of five years ago had left him many warm friends in Suffolk who were eager to listen again to his stirring messages. Interest was manifested from the beginning, and the meetings resulted in a great religious awakening that will be felt, we trust, through the years to come.

The saving power of Jesus Christ which lifted this talented young man from the depths of sin into a life of service for the Master shows in his work, and it is this power manifested in his life and words that bring the great results he is achieving. Truly he is a man called of God. He is an earnest worker. His sermons are Biblical, clear, deeply spiritual, and bear evidence of his sincerity. There is nothing sensational in either the subject matter or the manner of its presentation. They bear all the elements of truth, and bring strong appeal and conviction to his hearers.

Mr. Sam Davis, the blind pianist, who was recently converted in the Billy Sunday meetings in Norfolk, has joined Mr. Lightbourne in the work, and his playing adds much to the success of the meeting. The life of this young man is another evidence of God's power to save. Although he is deprived of physical sight, God has given him a spiritual sight and enabled him to "see" the great and noble task set apart for him to perform. His music is full of spirit and enthusiasm. He has won a place in the hearts of the people of Suffolk, not only through the medium of his wonderful talent, but his attitude toward the Kingdom and its work.

Mr. Davis was ably assisted, throughout this series of meetings, by Mrs. C. R. Wallace, the regular organist of the church, and these two, with their spirited playing, were a tremendous asset in bringing up the quality of the work done by the chorus of forty voices. Certainly the singing was far above the average. The solo work of Mrs. Bradford Kilby, Mrs. Lightbourne and others, was of the first order.

We feel that the Southern Christian Convention is to be congratulated on having been able to secure the services of Mr. Lightbourne and Mr. Davis, and we predict for them great success in the work they do in His name.

POUNDED

After the regular preaching service at Mt. Olivet (R) the first Sunday night in May, some one informed me that I was wanted at Brother C. A. Life's, just opposite the church. My first thought was that there must be a wedding on hand, but upon reaching Brother Life's house, a different surprise awaited me. One of the rooms had been converted into a regular grocery store. A real pounding indeed! We found sugar, eggs, lard, rice, coffee, cereals and all manners of canned vegetables and fruits. Words fail to express the appreciation of Mrs. Hook and myself, for the kindness of these good people toward their pastor and family. We only pray that we may be more worthy of serving such faithful and generous co-workers and friends.

In connection with this, I want to say that this church has taken on renewed life and strength in every department during the last year and is coming to the front line with some of our stronger churches. During our revival meeting last year, there were fifty-two conversions, most of whom united with the church.

In the financial drive of the Men and Millions Forward Movement this was the first church in the Valley Conference to go over the top.

W. C. HOOK.

NORTH CLAYTON, N. C.

North Clayton Christian church was organized April 25, 1920, with a membership of forty-five. Brother Willie Pleasant was elected Secretary and Treasurer. Brothers L. P. Card, C. P. Hill, and J. B. Harrison were chosen for Deacons. The same brethren with S. B. Stephens, and the pastor, added constitute the building committee. This committee selected and secured an option on one-half acre building lot at a price of $650.00 subject to the approval of the Home Mission Board of the North Carolina Christian Conference. Drs. J. O. Atkinson and W. P. Lawrence of this Board met with the local committee on May 18, and after carefully reviewing the town of Clayton, agreed with the committee that we had chosen the most desirable place for our cause, and recommended that we secure title without delay. On May 27 the church committee paid the $650.00 and received a deed made to the North Carolina Christian Conference, approved by Dr. Lawrence. We expect to make the canvass for building funds in September, and begin the church building soon after. We have been holding services in a hall over the bank. We shall need to move elsewhere because it has already been proven that the hall is insufficient to accommodate the congregation. The prospective church was given a quota of $500.00 on the Men and Millions Forward Movement. $710.00 has been pledged, and sixteen tithers secured.

We earnestly ask the prayers of the Brotherhood that God's blessings may be upon our efforts, that we shall in no distant day have a strong church at North Clayton.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The high cost of living has received almost as much consideration as the world war. From the highest governmental sources to lowest consumer, remedies have been suggested without results. Government officials have done nothing more than draw their salaries and keep up the agitation; consumers have done nothing more than complain and continue to purchase. Housewives go to market in two thousand dollar automobiles and then complain at the cost of beef and eggs. It does seem as if the people were making mountains out of mole-hills, and wasting words on natural conditions.

A few facts enter into the cost of living and these facts enter also, into both "high" and "low" cost of living. War turns loose great sums of money; wages increase during wars; speculation becomes the normal business condition; recklessness follows and a great wave of extravagance floods society. Prices soar and it takes years to reduce life and business to pre-war conditions. That some men and some corporations take advantage of such conditions for fortune-making is only a sign of the lowering standards of honesty and golden rule methods. It is not strange when men kill one another for years they will rob one another years afterward. War lowers the standards of religious relations and human considerations; and it is only the natural sequence of battle. If men shot one another yesterday, it is no surprise that they cheat one another today. The only thing government can do is to punish profiteers.

Moreover, the fundamental in economics is supply and demand. When supply is scarce, prices will rise; when demand is great, prices will rise, even if supplies are abundant. The demand in these times is very great. The prices paid for labor by the Government, during the war, and the increase in wages in all other departments of activity, has forced the market of all products upward; and they cannot come down while labor remains up. Departments of government suggest an increase in production of food-stuffs; but the high price of money-crops, as tobacco, increases the acreage in crops for money, and decreases the food-crops. Besides all this, the people were never so well clothed, so well fed, so well amused, so well housed, and so well schooled as they are today. There are more automobiles today than there were buggies five years ago; all classes work fewer hours and have more luxuries than at any period in American history.

It is well to keep in mind that panics come when the cost of living is low. They tell us that Regional Banks will prevent panics; but they cannot prevent dull times; and dull times will come when the cost of living, and the cost of labor, run low. Another fact is worth the time to consider it, and that is, that no condition protects every class from the burden of living. The present time and the present conditions come as near making all prosperous as any conditions in this country since the founding of the Republic. Instead of complaining, we should be thankful. When people come to recognize the source of life and of living, and to cease robbing God by withholding what is due Him then they will cease to rob one another.

So far as this scribe can see and understand present commercial, industrial, and social conditions, they are the best in our history, the best in the history of the race. If Christian people will lift spiritual conditions up to the level of these conditions the world will enjoy a revival beyond any since Pentecost. To Christianize industrial, social, educational, and political conditions, is a task worthy of our thought, our prayer, or efforts, and our money. It seems that the spirit of the times prompts men to want more and give less; what the world needs is the spirit to give more and want less.

A SAD ACCIDENT

Sunday, May 23, 1920, Rev. John Taylor and family of Cragford, Ala., had been out to church, and on their return home, Brother Taylor lost control of his car, and ran off of a bridge resulting in the death of his wife, and he himself receiving some severe injuries. Their little son did not get hurt but a little. This sad accident occurred late Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Taylor lived until eleven o'clock when death came to her relief. She was a devoted wife and mother, a faithful member of the Christian church at Cragford, was secretary of the church and Sunday school. Her death was a terrible shock to the people of the town. She had every assistance that kind hands and loving friends could render. The good people of Cragford cannot be excelled in any town or community when it comes to rendering assistance to the sick and suffering. Sister Taylor leaves a husband, one little boy, Vester, a father and mother, several brothers and sisters, a large circle of relatives and friends.

Brother Taylor is one of our coming men in the ministry, but on account of circumstances over which he has no control now, he has no church work this year. Sister Taylor's father, Brother Clifton, is also one of our ministers and is pastor of Macedonia church this year.

Sister Taylor's burial was in New Harmony cemetery Monday afternoon. Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Brother Roberts of the Methodist church.

WORK OF AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY

275 miles of Bibles would reach from New York to Boston, on to Lowell and just run over into New Hampshire. And that is the kind of path the American Bible Society could lay with the Scriptures published by it during the past year.

The annual report of the Society, just made public, shows that over 3,400,000 volumes were issued during 1919. Of these about 350,000 were Bibles, 550,000 Testaments, and 2,500,000 portions of Scriptures.

Nearly 140 million Scriptures have been issued by the Society during its history of 104 years.

During the World War 6,678,301 Testaments were distributed among the belligerent forces of all nations.

A novel feature of the year is the completion of the great Mandarin Version of the Chinese Bible, which has cost several hundred thousand dollars and took 25 years of work on the part of the translators. This version makes the Bible accessible to over 400 million people, or one-fourth the population of the world; more people than were ever reached by any one translation in history.

NINETY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY

The American Tract Society has just celebrated its Ninety-fifth Anniversary, May 12, in the Marble Collegiate Church, New York, closing a year which the President, William Hall, characterized as one of the most successful and encouraging since he had been identified with the Society.

Mr. William Phillips Hall was re-elected President. Rev. David James Burrell, D. D., L.L. D., was re-elected Vice-President. Bishop Charles S. Burch, Rev. A. Z. Conrad, Ph. D., D. D., and Bishop Luther B. Wilson were elected Honorary Vice-Presidents, in place of Rt. Rev. David H. Greer, Rev. R. R. Meredith, and Rev. J. M. Buckley, D. D., deceased.

The Annual Report, presented by Dr. Judson Swift, General Secretary, reviewed the work of the past year, and contained the following salient statements:

New Publications

There have been added during the year to the Society's already extended list seven new publications, five of which are volumes and two envelope tracts, as follows: "The Furnace for Gold," by Emma S. Allen, and "The Victory Life," by John T. Faris, D. D., the former winning the first prize and the latter the second prize in the Society's contest for the best manuscripts available for publication; "A Manual of American Citizenship," by Rev. Edwin Noah Hardy, Ph. D., and "The Resurrection and the Life Beyond," by David James Burrell, D. D. The tracts were "The American Home," by Edgar Whitaker Work, D. D., and "The American Church," by Dr. Burrell. "Las Notas Explicativas" is a volume of notes on the International Sunday School Lessons in Spanish for 1920. The total number of publications for the year, including volumes, tracts and periodicals, is 2,045,875, many of which have been in French, Spanish, Portuguese, and in the dialects of India and Africa. The grand total of the Society's publications in all languages and dialects issued at the home office during the ninety-five years of its history reaches 840,843,750 copies, and the number of languages in which the Gospel Message has been published by the Tract Society totals one hundred and seventy-eight.

Christian Literature Sunday

Sixty millions of non-church-going people in America and the hundreds of millions in non-Christian lands who never heard of Jesus can be reached through the printed page. The American Tract Society, conscious of this ever-growing need, has been persuaded that a particular Sunday should be set apart during each year in order that churches, Sunday schools, young people's societies and Christians generally might have their attention called specially to the religious literature branch of service so necessary to the extension of Christ's Kingdom. Accordingly, the last Sunday of January of each year has been the date appointed, henceforth to be known as "Christian Literature Sunday." Its first observance last January was very successful.

Missionary Colportage

The Society's missionary colporters during the year have made 207,644 family visits, distributed 47,459 volumes of Christian literature and conducted 3,418 religious meetings. The grand total of missionary colportage for the eighty years since this line of service was entered upon is 19,400,069 family visits, 17,607,583 volumes distributed, and 611,249 religious meetings held.

Without Price

When Jesus sent forth the twelve he said, "Freely ye have received, freely give." From the beginning the American Tract Society has distributed many of its religious tracts without money and without price, sending forth its millions of pages of leaflets to the Army and Navy, the seamen in our ports, to the reformatories, penal and charitable institutions, and to the lumbermen and miners and the ranchmen in the West.

The total value of free distribution for the past year was $14,739.42, making a grand total of free distribution since the Society's organization of $2,706,797.41, the equivalent of 5,376,220,081 pages of tracts.

Latin America

The issuing of the Sunday School Notes in the Spanish language for 1920 has been one of the most needed and long-sought publications that has been prepared for the mission churches and Sunday Schools, and it has been received with enthusiasm and strong commendation.

The Tract Society has issued during the past year 1,084,200 volumes, periodicals and tracts in Spanish, making the grand total of publications in Spanish and Portuguese 19,216,663, amounting in value to $709,351.41.

The press gives out the report that General Wood has spent over one million and two hundred thousand dollars on his campaign for the nomination for the presidency.

Congress is conducting an inquiry into the expenditure of the candidates who are aspiring to the presidency.

BETHLEHEM

Two weeks ago we overlooked making mention of the splendid memorial service held at Bethlehem (Alabama). Rev. J. W. Holt, pastor, reports a fine time and the attendance was large. Miss Bessie Holt addressed the audience in the afternoon. The pastor was presented on the occasion with a beautiful serap quilt by the Ladies' Aid of the church. Bethlehem and other churches have remembered Brother Holt in substantial several times during the past year.

Many friends attending the Elon commencement called to see us while passing. We were glad to see them and always welcome THE SUN's friends.

When we look into the long avenue of the future and see the good there is for each of us to do, we realize, after all, what a beautiful thing it is to work and to live, and be happy.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

PLAY AND PROFIT IN YOUR GARDEN

There may not be much financial profit by playing in your garden, but it gives you physical exercise, and that of itself pays well, it helps to exercise the body and mind also, and is a very diverting and healthy work. Many have not the time nor inclination to do this kind of business. They are so full of work or literary pursuits they do not find the time to give it any attention, but it will pay them well to take the time. The fresh morning air about five and six o'clock is purer and better to breathe. After "tired nature, balmy sleep" has quieted and rested you, this morning exercise will tone up your relaxed nerves, and cause you to feel manly and good. The inviting opportunity—studying the growth and development of plants—growing fine, tasteful dainty berries from May until November—getting the first gleam of the rising sun—taking a good full, free perspiration, and a careful reaction, all of which things will greatly help any one who has the ability and inclination to do them. Do you need tuning up, toning up and sweetening up? If you do, these three free things will wonderfully help you. Your health is worth much to you as well as your religion. Some people are full of religion, but have little health. You can enjoy better religion with better health. Some do not have much health nor much religion. They do not look healthy—they do not act like religious folks. They are grunters, groaners, growlers, grotesque growlers. There is always too much or not enough of anything of everything. A good, long, strong early morning walk, or playing—plodding and plowing in the garden would help them.

Some may be afraid that their tender, fair hands will tan outside and blister inside. You may partly avoid that by using suitable gloves. Tender, fair hands are nice to have—they look well—but health and strength are necessary. The writer once lived in the home of a preacher. He was fat, fair and funny and thought himself fine looking; but had great dislike for the garden hoe and the wood pile ax. He wielded a bright pen, and prepared long, well written sermons, entertaining his readers and hearers with words of beauty and thoughts well constructed, but did not love to wield the ax and the hoe. They were not congenial company for one of such scholarly attainments. He died comparatively young and it might have been the same dear habits he had and his great antipathy for physical culture caused his sad and early death.

You can play in your garden. You may be a good ball player, pitch and run to the delight of yourself and the admiration of your friends, with some joints knocked out of place, but the garden play is most desirable. You need not exercise too violently. This habit is cultivable and needs cultivation. Cultivate yourself and your garden at the same time, and keep step with its needs, taking notice of the great improvement in yourself and your garden. No matter how small your space is—try and see how much you can grow on it. Hoe your garden frequently—get it ready to work while you sleep. Make something and plenty of it. Keep down and out the grass and weeds. Do not wait too long between the time you work. It is best to hoe often to prevent the grass from getting so deeply rooted. It lets the air and water into the ground and causes elements of plant food to come in and make the plants grow and produce good results. Repeated attention then, as you know, is essential. Keep right on keeping on until you learn how to develop the resources which are waiting to be used. Out in the open, studying nature will not disturb your devotion and meditation, but will bring you nearer to God, and help preachers, as well, to preach greater and better sermons.

A MOTHERS' DAY SERMON

(Rev. J. G. Truitt)

John 2:12, "After this He went down to Capernaum, He and His mother."

On this great day, set apart as Mothers' Day, and in the presence of this large number of mothers and also in the presence of the "great cloud of witnesses" composed largely of mothers gone before us, let us consider Mary and Jesus—the true mother and true Child.

Two thousand years ago while God was crowning Mary with the glory of motherhood men and women were heaping upon her the slurs and insults of their own sin-fed souls. So vile was this stream of influence that honest Joseph himself was about to become contaminated with it. But angels were commissioned to abide with this mother, as no doubt, they have attended all true mothers from that day until now. From the day of the Child's conception until His manly bosom was pierced by order of the Roman State Mary knew what it was to suffer for her son. Other mothers have had their souls pierced with a sword but none so much as the mother of Jesus.

But let us move hastily into the setting of our present text: "After this He went down to Capernaum, He and His mother." After what? After the marriage feast at Cana, to be sure. Mother and Son were there. They were together. Things were about to begin to happen. Oh! how many precious, self-sacrificing mothers have been left out of the beginning of achievement; out of the beginning of success, but not so in the case under consideration. For thirty years the mother had been on the inside of her Son's every movement, and now when Jesus was about to show the world that He had power over the ordained and established laws of His Heavenly Father she should have an active part in the demonstration. Now when Cana and the countryside all around would see for themselves her pent-up faith vindicated she was there.

Two great things I see there the first of which is Mother's faith in her child. Mother's faith in her child! It changed Egyptian slaves into a moving, living monument to the majesty of God; to victors over the organized might and power of man; to possessors of vast lands beyond the Great Seas and behind unbroken walls! Mother's faith in her child saved young Washington from being the servant of a mid-shipman to make him Father of His Country. Many a man is a man today because at the crucial period—and thank God at the non-crucial period, in season and out of season—his mother had faith in him. I am glad I have a mother that has faith in her son—yea in her five sons and her daughter—a mother that has faith in God, mountain-moving faith and can get to Him with her prayers. Ah! even an earthly mother's faith in a heaven-born King paved the way for His changing of water into wine.

And the second thing I see in this Cana experience is the Son's faithfulness toward His mother. Faithful to carry her with Him in the beginning of His "mighty works." Never ashamed of her. Glad to honor her by granting her wish; by stepping into things which were humanly no concern of theirs to perform a miracle concurring with her desire; by making her a part of His first marked achievement. It is at this place in life many mothers have had occasion to weep. After the toiling and sacrificing have given you the place she has coveted in her heart of hearts for you; will you be ashamed of her drooping shoulders, her faded dress, or her broken speech? Do not be puffed up on artificial culture. You can never be cultured higher than your mother. Oh! you may know an igneous rock from a sedimentary one, you may be able to give the more than eight hundred forms of a Greek verb but mother has the eternal culture of the soul. You be a Lord Chesterfield, or an Aaron Burr! Oh! but one of the humblest of her kind was the mother of the Son of God! You may be dressed in royal apparel but "strength and honor are her clothing; and she shall rejoice in time to come." Jesus set the great example—He loved His mother and was faithful to her.

When Frank McGlynn became famous "after fifty fameless years" in speaking of his mother this is what he said: "If she were only living now my happiness in the good fortune that has finally come to me would be complete * * * * We want her to know it when we have done her credit. The man who cannot take his achievements to his mother, as a tribute to her, misses a satisfaction which nothing else can bring him."

"And they went to Capernaum together"—ever together! How beautiful the picture! In the toils and tests of life she was with Him. No honor is greater than the companionship of a great friend. None is more capable, under all circumstances, of that kind of companionship than mother. Next to Christ Himself she abides. Even to Calvary's heights she goes with us.

I have grown away from childhood. Often I have been to God in prayer, sometimes in trial and sometimes in triumph, by the seashore and on mountainside, in season and out, but ever and anon at nightfall the last prayer I utter is:

"Now I lay me down to sleep, etc."

A mother's greatest comfort is in prayer. A praying mother is the holiest benediction God can give a child. No sweeter, holier recollection can stir a soul than for the child, after years of warfare, to vision the mother in prayer. No touch is so blessed, so enduring, as the touch of her hand upon the head when we knelt at her knee.

"I have worshipped in churches and chapels;
I have prayed in the busy streets;
I have sought my God and have found him
Where the waves of the ocean beat.
I have knelt in the silent forests,
In the shade of some ancient tree;
But the dearest of all my altars
Was raised at my mother's knee.

"I have listened to God in his temples:
I have caught his voice in the crowd;
I have heard him speak when the breakers
Were booming long and loud.
Where the winds play soft in the tree-tops
My Father has talked to me;
But I never have heard him clearer
Than I did at my mother's knee.

"The things in my life that are worthy
Were born in my mother's breast,
And breathed into mine by the magic
Of the love her life expressed.
The years that have brought me to manhood
Have not taken her from me;
And that has kept me from straying
Too far from my mother's knee.

"God make me the man of her vision
And purge me of selfishness!
God keep me true to her standards
And help me to live to bless!
God hallow the holy memory
Of the days that used to be,
And keep me a pilgrim forever
To the shrine at my mother's knee."

MOTHER LOVE

One day, when mother was away,
She left a lunch for me;
The fresh-laid cloth was white as froth
Upon a silver sea.
A vase of flowers was at my place,
And under every dish
A note was laid whose words conveyed
A tender mother wish.
The air, although she was not there,
Still seemed to hold her smile;
A faint perfume was in the room,
As though she passed the while.
Today they say she is away
And never may come back,
Yet shall I gloom her sunny room
And pall my mind in black?
Has she not left her words to me
On every table spread?
Does not her love still rest above
And bless my daily bread?
The bloom of every flower's perfume
Brings back her constant smile,
And on my brow, aye, even now,
Her soft lips touch the while!

Edmund Vance Cooke,

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Our total income for the year to the present amounts to $11,534.69. This is far better than our Church did for the Orphanage in the years gone by. It was hard for a number of years, when the Orphanage was first established, to raise $5,000.00 a year. I believe I remember when "Uncle Jim" Foster set the goal at $5,000.00 for the year. But a dollar then would buy as much as three dollars will buy now and our children have just as good appetites now as they had then, and can eat as much with just as good relish.

So if it took $5,000.00 to feed and clothe fifty children then it will take $18,000.00 to feed and clothe sixty children now, but it did not take that much to feed and clothe them at that time; some of the money went into improvements and repairs and other necessary expenses. It does not take the $18,000.00 to feed and clothe sixty children now but we must make improvements, buildings need repairs and other buildings need to be built and we like to lay aside a portion in the savings account to have any time we should need ready money.

But the year is not half gone and we hope to reach the $12,000.00 mark in this month. That is splendid. It is encouraging. But we will need a lot of money this year to make some improvements that we will have to make, and then when we commence the Children's Home we will need $25,000.00 to build it. We hope to break the record this year and raise $30,000.00 for the Orphanage.

Would you not like to see this done? If you would, then see that your Sunday school gets on the list of giving Sunday schools. Give to missions; give to the Orphanage; give to every good cause. It will make you better. It will increase your love for the Church and the Master's work. It will open a fountain of joy in your heart. It will bring you a new vision in life and service. The reason we have so many dead church members is because they have never made a sacrifice for any cause and have never had the opportunity to drink at the fountain of joy that comes from sacrifice.

A church member went to his pastor one day and said to him that he was not enjoying his religion. The pastor knew that he was a very close man and did not do any service in the Master's vineyard to make him enjoy his religion. The pastor said to him, "I know a poor family that lives on a certain street in this town and a number of the family are sick and they are very poor. Get you a basket and fill it with something they can eat and don't send it, but take it yourself, and give it to them, talk with them and pray with them and comfort them." The next day the pastor called on this merchant and his face was lit up with a new light. He was enjoying his religion. He had learned the secret.

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am enclosing ten cents and I want to join the corner. I live in the country and will say that I like it better than town. I like to help mother feed the chickens. With love.—Cecle L. Mercer.

I am real glad you have joined the band of cousins. It keeps us in a happy mood to have the corner filled with letters. I think I have visited your home. Haven't I?—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—We want to join the band of cousins. Our father takes THE CHRISTIAN SUN and we enjoy reading it very much. We are enclosing ten cents each for our monthly dues. With best wishes for all the cousins.—Harriet and L. C. Jr., Mann.

Here are my two little members of the corner with their bright little letter to bring cheer and comfort.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I saw my letter in print so I will write again. Where do the little cousins attend preaching? I go to the Christian church at Oak Grove. E. M. Carter is our pastor. Mamma, Papa and I went Saturday and his text was, "Personal Love," taken from Acts 21:28. His text on Sunday was, "Well done thou good and faithful servant." I am iving you these texts thinking maybe some of the cousins might be interested enough to look them up. I am enclosing twenty cents as my monthly due. I will have to stop and help mamma.—Annie Kate Myhand.

We attend Sunday school and preaching at the college and our little folks enjoy going there. Dr. N. F. Newman is our pastor and he is a good one. Everybody loves Dr. Newman.—Uncle Charley.

Dear Uncle Charley:—Here I come again with my time for the orphans. I am out of school now and am busy helping Papa on the farm. I hope the orphans are well and happy.—Carl Abell.

I know you are glad school is out. Most little boys and girls are. I hope you will raise lots of cane syrup and get your church to make up a barrel next fall and send it to us.—Uncle Charley.

Dear Uncle Charley:—When Daddy saw my first letter in THE SUN he said that he must give me the next time. I thought then I would write early but you see I am late. I have the whooping cough now and Auntie can hardly find time to write for me. I do hope the little cousins are well. I am enclosing my dues. Love to all.—Alma Atkinson Hobby.

I am real glad to have your letter this week. I hope you will write often.—Uncle Charley.

FLOWERS FOR HER SOLDIER DEAD

Rosamund Satterthwaite, granddaughter of a famous general in the Civil War, was rather proud of her long name, and sometimes tossed her head when the other girls called out, "Hullo, Rosy! Give us a bite of your apple." But she was a good-natured little thing, and the bite was always cheerfully given. Rosamund's uncle was the commander of a G. A. R. post, and was going to make a speech on Memorial Day before the soldiers' graves were decorated. Most important of all, she was to wear her red dress and new hat and occupy a special seat on the platform. When the open-air part came, she would head the procession with a cluster of white roses to drop on the first of the green mounds beside the path.

Memorial Day came at last, with the music, the speeches, and the crowds. Rosamund at first felt shy with a thousand pairs of eyes fastened on her. Then she thought of her new dress and sat up straight. The speech-making was over, and Rosy, clutching her flowers tightly, was just straightening her new hat when she noticed a gray-haired old lady in the audience, her face buried in her handkerchief. She was dressed in dusty black and evidently very poor. The procession started for the cemetery. Rosamund walked proudly beside her uncle at the head of the column. Many of the people carried costly flowers, some very cheap ones.

The old lady, who happened to be near, had none at all—only the handkerchief, with which she wiped her eyes as she hobbled along.

Rosy ran to her side. "What are you crying for, ma'am?" she whispered, softly.

"I didn't mean to," said the old lady, starting timidly. "I was thinking of my boy who was killed at Bull Run. He's buried up yonder."

"And you haven't any flowers? Take these for him!" said the little girl, impulsively, putting almost the whole cluster of white roses into the withered hands and darting back to her uncle.

This is why the general's granddaughter had only one white rose to decorate with after all, to the surprise of everyone except Commander Satterthwaite, who had seen the whole affair, and whose arm stole around the little girl and held her close to him all the way home.—Sunshine.

HIS PARADE

Little Boy Blue was sitting on the gate-post, waiting for the procession, for it was Decoration Day. He wore a tiny blue suit and a blue cap, and that is the reason why he was called Little Boy Blue, although his real name was Augustus.

"I wish they would let me march," he said to himself, drumming his heels against the fence. "Perhaps they would if I had some flowers."

So he hopped down from the post, and filled his chubby fists with white oxeye daisies and buttercups that looked as if they had just been varnished with some kind of shiny gilding. Little Boy Blue thought they were the prettiest flowers in the world.

By this time the music grew louder, and Little Boy Blue could see the flags and the soldier caps at the end of the long street. Nearer and nearer they came, and the cornets and drums made such a delightful noise that the little fellow could hardly keep his feet still.

"Oh, do let me march!" he called out. My grandpa was a soldier."

"To be sure!" said one of the men. "He was our old captain."

And the tall soldier took the little boy by the hand, and they marched along the street together. And the flags waved in the wind, and the band played its best, and even the drum major was not as proud and happy as Little Boy Blue.—E. H. Thomas, in Youth Companion.

KENTUCKY'S 'MOONLIGHT SCHOOLS'

These schools were first opened in the autumn of 1911, the result of the plan worked out by Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, superintendent of schools in Rowan County, Kentucky. The avowed object is "to eradicate illiteracy from every county in the State." In Kentucky alone the number of schools has grown from fifty in 1911 to more than six thousand, while twenty-six additional States have adopted the idea and formed commissions for the stamping out of illiteracy. A State Fund of $75,000, administered by the Illiteracy Commissions, while local teachers serve without pay.—Kind Words.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

THE FUNDAMENTAL GOODS*

Hold fast that which is good.—I Thess. 5:21.

These days of reconstruction challenge every ideal of life. The times are perilous. Change, unrest, dissatisfaction, uncertainty—such are the characteristics of the hour. Sad is the decline of idealism since November 11, 1918. Ideals always unite. It is the distribution of the victory achieved through loyal devotion to ideals that divides and segregates. The finest altruism of history inspired our people as we took up the cause of humanity in the World War. No such instance of sacrifice on the national scale had ever graced the annals of mankind as the spirit in which America entered the war on behalf of human right and freedom. President Wilson was during these trying days the spokesman of the nation's purposes, a genuine preacher of righteousness. The heart of the people safely trusted in him.

But behold our situation today! Altruism departed when the Versailles Peace Conference assembled. The League of Nations designed to embody in solemn compact the noble ideals for which we entered the war has been unable to command the approval of our Senate on purely nationalistic grounds. Selfishness has gained the ascendancy among our law makers. Party politics and the scramble for partisan advantage have dishonored the noble idealism actuating our nation in its war activities. Class is now arrayed against class. Strikes, lockouts, bitterness, distrust,—these fill the headlines of our newspapers and crowd our life with anxious cares. The very foundations of life and of character appear to be giving away. In such a time we can do no better thing than take stock of the fundamental goods underlying our structure of life, since they are the rudder of our hopes, the polar star of our purposes and aspirations.

And let it be remembered before such inventory is attempted that even the severest storm at sea does not so much as disturb the tiniest grain of sand resting peacefully on the bottom of the ocean. Calm and serene and undisturbed it rests there, oblivious of all the tumultuous upheaval on the surface above. So it is in the social order. There is no occasion for pessimism. Though the sea of our life be tossed with giant billows of unrest, the wreckage of ideals greet the eye on every hand, down beneath the surging mass of confusion lie the stable bulwarks of wholesome living, the foundations of life and of the social order, unshaken, serene, prophetic of the ultimate triumph of the altruism which in our best moments has ever brought out the noblest in men. Steadfast, sure indestructible are the fundamental goods of life. In such an hour as this they are the anchors of the soul, the spur to noble endeavor, the inspiration to carry on to completion the work so nobly begun.

And the first of these goods is God. God is good. Let us never forget that fact. God is no absentee landlord, interested only in collecting the rent from His tenants. He is no outraged autocrat, dealing out justice to His miserable and recreant subjects. He is vitally interested in everything that touches our life and He wills only the best for each of us. He is "our Father," our Heavenly Father, our loving Heavenly Father. He is more ready to bless than we are to be blessed. Through the centuries He has been patiently endeavoring to reveal Himself to us, first through the law, then by the prophets, then through the life and sacrifice of His Son, and now through His Holy Spirit witnessing in the hearts of right-visioned men. In moments of the holy exaltation in these days our great souled seers catch luminous glimpses of our Heavenly Father's purposes for us and always they discover He is good.

When the war broke out and atrocities more befitting savagery than civilization were perpetrated by those who represented themselves as the most enlightened people of the world ah! well do we recall the dismay that came upon us all "God does not care for us," "The Church of Christ has failed,"—these and similar outbursts of despair were heard on every hand. But the men in the trenches did not find it so. "The Comrade in White" was personally known to thousands there and the goodness of God, despite the suffering and hardship of their life, comforted them in every experience. And out of the carnage and death over there, these men came to an understanding of the goodness of God, of His loving concern for all our life, that to the world at large and to them in particular is worth all its cost to comprehend it.

God is good and everything He created is good. What makes it seem otherwise is the limitation of our knowledge. There is no standing room for a pessimist in all the universe of God's benevolence. Malthus may proclaim a pessimistic theory of population, but the verdict of experience is against him, for with every increase of population God provides new resources of sustenance for the fuller and ampler development of life. The intelligent understanding of the laws of God's universe and the applications of those laws to the support of life, or what is the same thing, the discovery of God's purpose for us and co-operation with Him in working it out, such is the answer to Malthus and all other pessimists. God is good altogether good, benevolent, loving in His designs for our dealings with us. Let us never in any moment of despair lose sight of this fact. It is fundamental for each life and for the larger social order in which each life is to express itself.

And the second good grows readily out of the first, man too is good. We must be as ready to believe this and to live in accordance with it as we are to believe that God is good and live conformable to that truth. It is easy to believe that some men are good, but we must go further than that. We must understand that all men everywhere are good, essentially and fundamentally good, or else God cannot be good. A good Creator could not create an evil creature and continue to be good. Any belief in the essential iniquity of our brothers is slander of God. We cannot believe in the goodness of God and deny the goodness of our brothermen or of ourselves.

How then should we account for the evil in our life? How then shall we account for the United States Senate? How shall we account for Germany? These questions are really one and are readily answered. The solution of the problem of evil in a world created by a beneficent Being is no discredit of that Being. Such a situation is necessarily possible in the development of moral freedom. God could have made us all perfect and have kept us free from evil or error. He did not elect to do so, because then sweet freedom would have been denied us, and freedom is the most cherished attribute of our nature. God created us in His own image. He is free, and so are we. Being free, we can choose to do good or evil and in our limited sphere of knowledge we have often chosen the evil. This is not God's will concerning us. His great, loving heart aches when we choose the evil way rather than the good. But He loves us still, is ready to forgive us, yearns to reinstate us to fellowship and harmony with His own goodness. Were He in anger to afflict us for our misdeeds He would not be good. Were He to have denied us freedom, we could not choose the good, and moral excellency would be impossible for us to achieve. He made us in His own image, and the il in us and in our life is due to our departure from the type our fundamental nature. The doctrine of total depravity—hence came it anyway? It is now fully discredited, wars, and rumors of wars, selfishness and iniquity to the contrary notwithstanding. No man can look upon the sweet face of a new born baby and believe in total depravity. This outworn theory of human nature was manufactured out of the fertile imagination of musty theologians in the attempt to account for the wreckage of life as witnessed in adults who had misused their freedom and in support of an untenable theory of salvation. We have reversed the process of generalization now, and take our start not from some pitiable derelict of humanity, but from the innocent babe in the image of God. And our problem is not so much how to get the evil out of life, as how how to keep it from getting into the life at all. We recognize the perfection of man as ideally set forth by Jesus in His Sermon on the Mount.

This brings up the whole question of religious education, in the home, the citadel of Christian nurture; in the school, the melting pot of all ideals; in the play life, capable of teaching the youth the very finest principles of conduct; in the industrial life, crying out in its chaotic rivalries for the Brotherhood of man; in the Church, the seminary of spiritual democracy, sanctifying in the spirit of the Nazerene the whole of life. Religious education is the hope of the world, provided it has the Christian basis. Too often we have waited till the child has become the hardened sinner. The history of the world reveals very few Samuels, dedicated in their childhood to the Kingdom and nurtured at every stage of their ripening life in the ideals that make choosing good the normal and natural in conduct. It is well to convert the hardened sinner, but it is better to train the child so that it will not become a hardened sinner at all. It is beautiful to throw out the life-line to a ship-wrecked brother, but it is better to construct a ship that can withstand the storm and the waves. Revivals are good, but the orderly bringing up of young life in the nurture and admonition of the Lord is better so that at the moment of awakening conscience the soul of the child may as readily acknowledge Jesus as Savior as the sparks fly upward.

What a responsibility therefore rests upon adults, and upon parents and religious teachers in particular! Let us at once acknowledge our obligation to God and to the youth around about us to give ourselves to this privilege of our seniority as the finest avenue of our service to mankind. The man who devotes himself in consecration to making conditions wholesome for the fruition of young life will know the real satisfaction of living. He may never acquire fame or wealth, but he will acquire a crown of righteousness which can never be taken from him. Those of us who have the prospect of long years of service before us can select no worthier field of investing our lives than this of leading the faltering steps of the young into paths of holy and righteous conduct. We are responsible for our young brothers and sisters. They hopefully look to us. God cannot hold us guiltless if we fail in any particular to give the best we have to these whose dependence upon us is the divinest challenge to us to invest ourselves for the God Who is good and Who has made us and whom we love.

And this brings us to the third fundamental good, of which we must not in this day even for a moment lose sight, that the organized life of man too is good. We need this steady concept constantly in the foreground of our consciousness in these tumultuous and trying days of unrest and uncertainty. The arrogant Bolshevik, the defiant Red, shall not, we pray, shake our faith in the essential goodness of the organized life of men. The Bolshevik and the Reds are our brothers too, our brothers in very deed, but with mistaken notions as to the inmate iniquity of the organized life of men. There is no denying the fact that injustice and oppression have embittered these brothers of ours against the social order and led them to array themselves against all social authority as essentially evil and iniquitous. We owe these brothers of ours not vituperation, not wholesale denunciation, not bonds and imprisonment, but a social order purified of evil and inspired with Brotherhood. To denounce the government we have would bring us naught but anarchy, a social order essentially anti-social and so destructive of our very life. Liberty devoid of social conscience is anarchy and anarchy is but another name for the destruction of all freedom. There can be no freedom, not even existence, where every man is a law unto himself.

Those of us, therefore, who have seen that the organized life of man is good, even as God is good and as the men who constitute that life are good, have a duty of enlightenment to perform for our day, a solemn duty capable of great betterment for the race. It will require courage of the sternest quality to perform this duty, but we dare not shirk it. Our situation is not more difficult than Paul's in the first Christian century. The Roman Government was in those days persecuting the infant Church. Yet Paul counselled obedience to constituted authority and declared that the Christians need not fear it if they did good only in their lives. He went further and called the Roman magistrate a "minister of God." What a changed world this would be today, were all men to recognize the officers of the law to be what Paul declared the Roman magistrates to be, ministers of God!

And yet is this not exactly what they are? God is partner in all our life. He uses the instrumentalities of our creation as avenues of expression for His purposes and plans for our life. Because the instrumentality in some particular is imperfect, He does not decline to work through it. His method is through the good we have to lead us to the better we may attain and on to the best to which we are as His children the rightful heirs. Let us speak this message to the dissatisfied of our brothers today. Let us agree with them that imperfection is present. Let us remotivate them so that they shall be sympathetic with the orderly processes of social development and zealous co-workers in making the social order good throughout.

But in respect to our fundamental view that the organized life of man is good and that social control is good we can entertain no compromise. Our radical brethren must be brought to accept this viewpoint or we can never co-operate with them nor they with us. In so far as the Bolshevik and Red discern the imperfections of our social organized life, we will labor with them to eradicate those evils. But in so far as they aim at the destruction of all social control, we are against them. We earnestly hope we can convince them of the error in their conception, but if we cannot, we must in the interest of the highest good in life resist any attempt on their part to overthrow the good we have. It is no more un-Christian to fight even to the extent of bloodshed for the salvation of the social order than it was for our Master to shed His blood for the world's salvation.

Our day needs to understand that authority is not evil. Misdirected authority is evil, but a more fatal evil still would be for each individual to act for his own selfish interest alone. Freedom we have said is essential to us as creatures made in the image of God, but freedom is a social fact as well as an individual prerogative. No man can live to himself. My freedom ends where my brother's freedom begins, and all the rest of our relationship must be worked out in the spirit of social Brotherhood and equality. So it is that social control becomes essential to life, and anything that is essential to life is good, since God is good and man is good. The goodness of the one necessitates the goodness of the three.

Youth in this day chafes under parental authority, and yet parental authority is absolutely essential to the perpetuity and proper functioning of the home. If it true that the Puritanic home is gone. It was right that it should go. It was autocratic and therefore unfit to abide, just as autocracy in Government has had to yield in the demand for democracy. But parents are not for this reason to resign their fundamental duty to exercise proper authority in training up their children. God expects it, society must exact it, and in case parents are unable properly to govern their children in the larger interest of mankind, the State reserves the right to step in and take the child away from such incompetent parents. I have not myself lost hope of the American home. My conviction is that in the days ahead home government will be Christian in America and that the finest type of manhood and womanhood in history will come out of these homes. My conviction is based on the serious concern throughout the nation for the proper conceptions of religious education which we have said is the hope of the world.

This is the day of self-government for college students. To me it is a great day. I view with eminent satisfaction the growth of the self-government idea on this campus. I rejoice in every success that it achieves and I devoutly pray for the day when it will have become an ideal means of social control, expressive of the high ideals of life and conduct for which I am happy to say Elon students enjoy an enviable reputation. But I am frank to say this most desirable aim cannot be attained till every member of the college understands and practices in his own life the fundamental conception that self-government is more than a government of self, that it is also a willingness to yield the self to be governed in the larger interest of the whole college community. Freedom is a priceless possession. It is individual and social at once. The individual must not undertake selfishly to enjoy his freedom, else he becomes an anarchist. True freedom is found in organized social life designed to assure to each personality the opportunity for fullest and freest development, which development must in its essential nature be social in that it recognizes the oneness of humanity and the Brotherhood of man.

Such are the fundamental goods of this and of every time. We who now pass out of the choice days of preparation into the arena of action wherein our ideals are to be tested in terms of actual experience in the laboratory of life need especially to keep our eyes focused on these goods as the Gibralters of our hope and the inspiration of our life's program. We shall find many disconcerting things in the universality of life, things that will cause us to pause and examine the fundamentals of the faith we entertain respecting God, respecting man, respecting the organized life of the world. We shall find a world made by God ungrateful to Him in much of its life. We shall find man made in the image of God selfishly pursuing his own designs and refusing to recognize the claims of Brotherhood written unmistakably in every heart. We shall find the organized life of the social order failing in many instances to function helpfully in terms of justice and equality, with power and wealth and the means of intelligence concentrated in the hands of the few and by them manipulated to oppress the many. We shall find all this and we shall be tempted like a preacher of another time to declare "all is vanity and vexation of spirit." Let us not say it. For the vexation of spirit through which we shall be called upon to pass in ferreting our way out of the maze and chaos of the present time will not be in vain, not if we keep steadily in the foreground of our consciousness and as the mainspring of our life's action that God is good, that man is good, and that the organized life of man is good essentially, and that wherein man the social order are not good, it is our duty, our privilege, our service of life to make them so, looking ever and always to the God that is good to us for so splendid an undertaking, even the undertaking of making man and the organized life of man good and God-like in reality.

*Baccalaureate Address delivered before the graduating class of Elon College, Sunday evening, May 23, 1920, by President W. A. Harper.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS*

Why are we interested in young people? I wonder if we are really interested. Let each one ask himself or herself the question and then talk to the Lord about it.

It is dangerous to neglect the training of our young people for Christ. Turn to Eccl. 12:1 and you will find these words, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when thou shalt say, 'I have no pleasure in them.'" The day may come when they do not care for spiritual things, have no pleasure in them. It is a natural thing when we have something that means joy and gladness to us, to want to share it with others. When our Creator has remembered us in so many ways, don't you think we should remember Him? When we do, it always brings joy and gladness to our hearts, and we must tell others.

There are today two children out of every three looking into faces of mothers who cannot tell them of the love of Jesus. Why? Because they do not know Him themselves. We are told that in India a missionary found two children on a rubbish heap. She took them to the mission and cared for them. Jesus said, "Suffer little children and forbid them not to come unto me for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

In Mohammedan lands women are considered little better than beasts and to be without brains. Until the missionaries established them, there were no schools for girls in the Orient. Our missionaries tell us it has not been an uncommon sight to see a woman harnessed with a donkey to a plow with a man driving.

Mothers in Southern Alaska offer their daughters for sale at the price of $50.00. When Jesus said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest," He was including these poor girls and women. How can they come when they have not heard of this wonderful Savior? Young people are active. They must be doing something, so then it is natural for them to go and tell. If youth is active then let us give our young people something to do worth while in order to use up their energy. Let us make the Society attractive. Let us leave out some of the don'ts and put do in its stead.

Solomon says, "To everything there is a season, a time, to keep silence, a time to speak." (Eccl. 3:1-7). Now, as I see it, it is a time for Christians to speak and act. There never was a time when the world was offering so many attractions to draw the young into the world and worldly things. While the evil one is so busy, what about us as Christians? Should we keep silent and let them be caught in the net, or should we be up and doing, holding Christ and the higher, holier, and mighty things before them; making the work more beautiful and attractive (not with questionable amusement) but the beautiful things of the Christian life? The only real and lasting joy we get in this world is through service to Christ. Then let us do our best to get the young to invest for God, time, talents, temples.

I. Our Time is God's and we have no right to waste it. In Psalms 24:1, we find the proof of this: "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein." I feel that if Christ were here walking upon earth today He would not only say, "Take heed what ye hear," but would add, "Take heed what ye read." So much of God's time is spent in reading the things that make "dwarfs" of us spiritually. If we could only get the youth to realize the great influence on character building the things they read have, I am sure they would feel that they have none of God's time to spare on some things put before them today. There is only one Book that can develop the divinest things in man's nature and make him the well developed Christian, and that is the Bible. So do not neglect to use some of God's time reading and studying God's Word. I feel here to offer a word for the parents. Some one has beautifully expressed it in these words, "The home is the heart of the world, and the Child is the hope of the future." Now, those who are responsible for the world and the future, must keep the fountain head pure, or they are fighting a losing battle. We speak of occupation. To my mind the greatest occupation in the world is the rearing of children in the fear and love of God. All other products of man are perishable but the children God gives them are immortal and it is the business of every father and mother to select every means possible that will help in any way to fulfill best, the responsibility to their own flesh and blood. Children have an instinctive appetite to know what is going on in the world. Let us have information and amusements free from objectionable features for them. "To obey is better than sacrifice." How many parents today are sacrificing everything for their children, when it comes to temporal things, but what about obeying when it comes to teaching them about Christ and His love? One great need today is leaders for our young people. If we could only impress the older people with the need and necessity of leaders, I feel some who think they do not have time, would sacrifice some selfish pleasure for one afternoon or evening a month. We have time for everything until it comes to service for the Lord.

II. Talents. The parable of the talents teaches us that every one has at least one talent. How are we using the one, two, three and more God has entrusted us with? Are we using them for His glory, or for Satan and his host? God has entrusted us with these talents for use. Are we going to hide them, or shall we be ready with our increase when the Lord calls? The Bible teaches us that God will take from us these talents if we fail to use them for His glory. We are so prone to think of our talents as our money. Our boys and girls are of more value than money. What is most needed today is consecrated boys and girls for His service. If God gets first place in our hearts there will be no trouble about our money. He will get that.

III. Temples. Would we dare take some things into the house of our friends that we defile these temples of ours with? We are very careful to keep the floors of our earthly temples polished and carpeted—what about these bodies of ours—temples of God? Do we keep them clean with pure thoughts, pure words, pure acts? We have no right to contaminate these bodies of ours with the sins of earth. I refer again to Psalm 24:1. God has a place for every boy and girl in His great program. Will we fail him or will we be true to Him? God needs your energy, wisdom, thoughts, prayers, time, and youth. You need to give your energy, wisdom, thought, prayers, time, and the parable of the rich young ruler teaches us you need to give your money. I hope and pray that our young people will invest for God in the future as never before. Society needs the best we have, not the perishable things that spring up in a night, are gone, but the wholesome, fruitful things. Why do artists use Bible characters for their masterpieces? They want something that will stand the test and criticism. That is what we want and need in society today—something that will stand the test. The only joy that comes to us in this life comes from consecrated lives to Him. All others fade and perish. It is not what we leave here in dollars and cents that count, but the influence from the lives we have lived. Let us today ask ourselves, ministers, laymen, and youths, the question that the prophet Micah asked, "What doth the Lord require of thee?" A dead fish drifts with the current—it takes a live one to swim against it. What we need today is live Christians, boys and girls, men and women ready to stand for true principles of discipleship. There is today at the lowest estimate 2,500 boys and girls in the Southern Christian Convention connected with our churches—children of our church members, who should be in a Young Peoples Missionary Society, studying and working to advance Christ's cause at home and in the foreign field.

May the pastors and churches of the Southern Christian Convention become a united force to pray and work to help the youth to see the beauty in Christian service that the great army of young people may dedicate themselves to Christ and the church with glad and grateful hearts—ready to serve wherever the Master calls.

"Long and loud the Master calleth;
Rich reward he offers free;
Who will answer gladly saying,
Here am I; use me."

*Address delivered before the Raleigh session of the Southern Christian Convention.

HISTORY IN THE MAKING

President Wilson, as expected by nearly all, vetoed the Peace Resolution on May 27. The resolution provided that the war be considered closed with the Central Powers.

Presidential candidates are now very busy seeking votes for the nomination. Both Democrats and Republican forces are spending large sums of money to win.

The proposed bonus for soldiers has been indefinitely tabled and the outlook for it now is not hopeful.

President Wilson has asked that Congress authorize a mandate over Armenia.

Premier Millerand, of France, has obtained from his government the largest vote of confidence ever received since its formation.

May 30 was a great memorial day for France. The American dead of the recent war were honored by having their graves decorated.

A great wave of price-cutting in clothing seems to be sweeping over the country, but high prices in general is said to be affected very little.

The North Carolina State Board of Health is opening up its usual summer campaign against typhoid. This is a great work and should have the co-operation of all.

MARRIAGES

LOKER-TAYLOR

On Tuesday afternoon, May 4, 1920, Miss Ollie Mae Taylor and Mr. Amos J. Loker were united in marriage by the writer at his residence, 91 Broad St., Harrisonburg, Va.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Taylor and is an accomplished young lady. Both Mr. and Mrs. Loker are prominent young people of the community and loyal workers in the Linville Christian church.

A Strange Message

One night during the United Enlistment campaign Superintendent Nicholes, of Columbia River Conference, retired exhausted by the strenuous work. The telephone bell rang and he got up to get a message from Bishop Washinger and Doctor McDonald, interpreted by the telephone operator as this: "Ring several companies standard plans with cooties on their backs." Mr. Nicholes said to his wife, "Those fellows have gone crazy in the movement."

When he received the actual message it was this: "Bring several copies standard plans with quotas on the back."

That Straw

During the meeting of the Board of Administration, somebody spoke of the "straw that broke the camel's back," and Rev. W. L. Childress, of Roanoke, Louisiana, got up and said that when he stopped over night in New Orleans, he slept on the bedtick that had that straw in it.

Booze Trying to Commit Suicide

An Irishman was found with a very earnest look on his face whetting his knife.

"What's the matter Pat, are you going to commit suicide?"

"Yis," he replied, "but not on meself."

The liquor interests are working day and night to commit suicide on the Democratic or Republican party.

Bib Chief Firewater is out for the scalp of a political party and the scalping will be done by a wet plank, not by a choppenhawk.

Good Morning

Good morning, Brother Sunshine;

Good morning, Sister Song.

I beg your humble pardon,

If you've waited very long.

I thought I heard your rapping;

To shut you out were sin.

My heart is standing open;

Won't you

walk

right

in?

Good morning, Brother Gladness;

Good morning, Sister Smile,

They told me you were coming,

So, I waited on awhile.

I'm lonesome here without you,

A weary while it's been.

My heart is standing open;

Won't you

right

in?

Good morning, Brother Kindness;

Good morning, Sister Cheer,

I heard you were out calling,

So, I waited for you here.

Someway I kept forgetting

I have to toil and spin,

When you are my companions;

My heart is standing open;

Won't you

right

in?

Striking the Conquering Blow

WE, as a Church must wake up. Now is the opportune time to strike the conquering blow. In the life of an individual there are psychological moments—moments when the mental anchorage has been disturbed by some unforeseen storm, breaking asunder former ties and setting adrift the mind upon the sea of uncertainty and discontent. Likewise the moorings of the world's mind have been disturbed by the recent storm of fiendish war and has been cast at sea, and wireless cries for help are now being sent continuously * * * it is time that Protestantism should wake up, raise her drowsy head from her pillow of ease and lethargy, and by her men and millions stand defiantly and boldly erect, rebuke the winds and say to the sea, "Peace be still," and rescue the perishing world.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

"It isn't the rooster's early rising that makes him unpopular; it's his talking about it."

PARAGRAPHIC COMMENT

The world is fast correcting its way of thinking that labor is a curse; that religion is an escape from hell, and that money is power.

Great men do not make great times, but great times make great men. Large tasks and great responsibilities find the best in us and draws that to the surface.

In our Men and Millions Forward Movement we have proven ourselves as good starters of big and lasting things. Let us also prove ourselves as good finishers.

These are days when real estate is going up, and yet there is such a thing as some of its coming down. We have read of a location in New York that a saloon keeper once refused $75,000.00 for, and the other day it was sold for only $638.00. Thank God for a land that rather have $638.00 than $75,000.00 when the difference is to be made up of a substance that destroys homes and lives.

Eleanor H. Porter, the author of "Pollyanna," went to her reward on May 21. Mrs. Porter was the author of several books, all of which have the optimistic spirit. But her writing of "Pollyanna" brought to the world a real piece of "glad" literature. No one can read a chapter in "Pollyanna" and not think better and have a great incentive to be a larger hearted person. Mrs. Porter is dead, but "Pollyanna" lives on to bring sunshine to gloomy lives and kindle hope. May we strive to leave such an heritage!

The custodian of this office has been entrusted of late to securing men to fill various appointments. It would take all of this issue to record some valuable and interesting experiences. Men for public speaking seem to be about as scarce as men for other things. Laymen have been of a very great service. They respond beautifully. Here is a sample: Our telegram: "Can you fill appointment for _____ at _____ next Sunday?" A layman's reply: "Will fill appointment or have it done."

We met a preacher the other day, who said that he believed in a modified prohibition law, and that laymen had gone to the extreme about prohibition. (For the sake of any suspicion, he was not of our tribe.) We told him that his acquaintance we were glad to make, his private opinion we respected, but had little confidence in his judgment. The prohibition lid may be tight, but not too tight. If whisky as a stimulant saves one life, it destroys a hundred in other ways. Tighten the lid—hold it tight.

The 1920 issue of the Elon College Annual, The Phisical, surpasses all former editions and reflects well upon those who produced it. But above all it reflects upon the institution that produces men and women who produce fine and interesting things. The issuing of a college annual is a work for the brave above the average, and that is what a college is designed to do—produce men and women above the average. A college training discovers and develops latent possibilities; and in all persons are great possibilities, and that is why all young persons should seek a college training.

The quotation that, "A little learning is a dangerous thing," has been too many times grossly misunderstood. The little must be considered. It is the little that is dangerous and not the learning. Letters are often received at this office criticizing some department of the Church, but they are usually based on a little learning and not on learning. To waste paper, ink, time and postage replying to them would place us in position to be criticized for extravagant use of public money. These critics may be honest and earnest, but they jump at conclusions and speak when they know not. And when we say that they need learning instead of a "little learning" we mean that they need information and not a college education, for instance.

One night last week two young men were killed near Johnston-Salem, N. C., as a result of an automobile turning over, and the car was capsized because the driver "lost his head, he "lost" his head because he found whiskey. Some one made the liquor and the maker is, we see it, a party to the killing of the young men. Prohibition laws register public opinion, and the enactment of these laws give us an idea as to how public men feel about the results of the liquor business. When public conscience is awakened to the point of action these laws will be rigidly enforced and that will mean the saving of many lives that are snuffed out because liquor had its cause.

Every editor is supposed to have a waste-basket, at least the public thinks he has. This office has two, but that does not mean that they are to hold the rejected manuscripts. In fact, if we correctly sense the situation from other periodicals, fewer manuscripts find their way to the waste-basket in this office than in the average editorial room. (A compliment to THE SUN's contributors and the high minded aspirations of our people). But here is the point: Eighty percent of the first-class mail in this office during the past two years has been Government documents and letters, and from what has appeared in other papers, the same is true in other offices. A workman in the Government printing office told us the other day that books were carried out of the binding rooms by the truck load and burned. The Government spent $4,679,177.16 for paper alone last year. It cost the country $422,798.73 to print Congress speeches last year, and we doubt seriously if five percent of them were even looked at after they left the press. Over thirty millions of such copies were printed and distributed, while Church papers have had to decrease in size and some go out of business for the lack of paper. THE SUN this time last year was printed on paper at a cost of less than ten cents the pound, while this time it is looking a gloomy situation in the face, being printed on twenty cent paper with quotations of twenty-two cents for additional supply. When will the Government lead in economy?

Forty of America's leading clergymen and officials of various religious organizations are under appointment to visit nineteen European countries this summer representing the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. More than twenty-five of these delegates have already definitely arranged to make the journey; most of them will also attend the various international conferences to be held in Switzerland during July and August. The objective of this second American Expeditionary Force is the cultivation of international friendship and especially an endeavor to restore the shattered confidence in the United States on the part of the peoples who have been shocked at our failure to ratify the Peace Treaty and to enter the League of Nations. In explaining the purpose of the Federal Council's "friendly visitors," Rev. Arthur J. Brown, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, New York, and Chairman of the Committee on Fraternal Relations of the Commission on Relations with Religious Bodies in Europe, says: "We feel that such an association of our religious bodies would materially contribute to the success of the League of Nations. We deeply regret that up to the present time our own nation has not officially entered into the League. We believe that a large majority of the American people, and especially of the clergy and laity of our churches, are in favor of the League and earnestly hope that the United States will soon become a member of it. Meantime, we feel that Christian men should make all the stronger effort to develop those moral and spiritual associations between the nations which are, after all, the things of highest importance."

AS A SECULAR PAPER SEES THE WORLD SITUATION

Said the Pittsburgh Leader a little time ago: "Human management of the affairs of the universe is failing. Without divine intervention, the world and its people will plunge into chaos. America is rent asunder by the spirit of defiance of law and order. There appears to be no man or men big enough in this land to stay the rising tide of disaster. * * * God alone can save. * * * In prayer alone exists hope. The people of America must go down on their knees and ask for divine aid."

Returns from the primary held last Saturday are not complete. Robert N. Page, O. Max Gardner, and Cameron Morrison were the aspirants for the nomination for Governor. Page, at this hour, has been eliminated. Morrison and Gardner seem to have about equal strength.

Dr. D. A. Long called to see us yesterday. He is supplying the pulpit at the Raleigh church for Brother Eastes, who by the way, has resigned the Raleigh work on account of his health, to take effect July 1.

SOME ESTIMATES OF THE BIBLE

(Governor T. W. Bickett of North Carolina)

"Speaking as a layman and not as a minister, I want to say to the young men and women of the State that there is to be found in the Bible more eloquence, more logic, and more wit than in any book that I have ever read."

(Governor L. J. Frazier of North Dakota)

"I believe the religious and moral life of the nation depends upon the teachings as laid down in the Bible, and that as we increase our knowledge of its contents, and apply to every day life, there is a corresponding increase in the richness and usefulness of our lives."

(Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois)

"If the spirit of the Bible were to enter and to hold the hearts of men for a single day, a divine restfulness would succeed the unrest which now menaces civilization."

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

DECORATION DAY

On this day our country is stirred with a spirit of devotion for our dead heroes who fought to preserve it through its days of peril and strife. Fresh laurels and sweet scented flowers are placed upon thousands of graves while the living hosts of veterans, old and young, march with a majestic yet solemn tread. Decoration Day is here.

It is a glorious occasion now presented, in which we can see and review our past national life, to still endear and hold sacredly within our hearts and memories those moral issues decided and gained for us by our forefathers, brothers, and comrades down to the present page of our history. We hallow and pray blessings through this devotion, giving "honor to whom honor is due."

But such a day as this should teach us more than a mere remembrance of our past. One great trouble, or the problem with us, is that we worship our past too much out of proportion to our regard for life activity which lies before us.

It seems always easy to celebrate, but sometimes difficult to consecrate ourselves in the life of our nation. Especially is this true when it comes to carrying out the "great silent" tasks of influencing its millions to Christianity; placing higher ideals within its growing manhood; keeping this manhood employed in a constructive rather than in a passive or destructive life-program.

For the cause of these no bugle call of one effort is able to arouse so many marching battalions into ranks save that it shall be backed by a greater responsiveness to the ideals which our nation's greatest leaders and teachers would have us follow. If carried out, these tasks will mean still more greatness, happiness and longevity for us.

The day comes to a close, processions end. May the remembrance of our part be fond, but the resolve for our future be stronger.

DEDICATION OF NORTH DANVILLE, VA. CHURCH

The fifth Sunday of May was a victorious day for the loyal and faithful of our North Danville, Va. church. The exercises opened at 11:00 A. M., with a beautiful and appropriate song service. Rev. J. E. McCauley, the young and beloved pastor, had charge of the services and after an appropriate prayer, introduced Rev. Brother Guion of the M. E. church, who has been of continued and invaluable service to our people during this building and debt-paying program. He spoke words of greeting and good cheer. Rev. P. T. Klapp, who has been deeply interested in the work from its beginning, read a historical sketch of the organization and building. He was a pastor in the early days of the work and made many warm and lasting friends. Following the history the building and grounds were properly dedicated to the Lord's service. It is a comfortable, creditable and worthy brick building. The auditorium will seat 300 persons and there are three Sunday school class rooms besides. The church is located for service and is in a thickly settled community that affords wonderful opportunities for growth and development.

The membership and friends served a great dinner for the assembled hosts, and there was abundance of the best with much to spare.

In the afternoon the service was for the young people especially. Miss Bessie Holt spoke to the delight of the large audience and then called for Christian workers. She was made happy in the ready response and a Woman's Missionary Society and a Young Peoples Missionary Society were both organized with good numbers in both.

There is a host of young people in this congregation and it will be more than a pity not to enlist them in some sort of Christian service and Kingdom activity.

We certainly have a membership in this church that has wrought well. Noble sacrifices have been made to build the church and pay it out of debt, and now they are justly happy.

Rev. J. Lee Johnson was to begin a series of meetings the week following dedication, and the people were both ready and anxious. Our Danville people are of the right sort and it was a privilege and a joy indeed to be with them on dedication day.

J. O. ATKINSON.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Jesus was the only benevolent character the world has ever known; and the Church, built upon Jesus as the only foundation, is the only benevolent institution in the world. The state is a splendid institution, but it exists for itself and its own people. The Church looks beyond itself and its own land to other peoples and other lands; spends its money and uses its men and women to win the world to Christ. It is true that many individuals in the Church do not have the spirit of the institution and, by that much, the Church is weakened and hindered in its work; but the real Church is like its Founder Who, though He was rich, yet for your sakes, He became poor, that ye through His poverty might be rich." That is a wonderful sentence, and gives us the real character and mission of Jesus; and the real spiritual Church is like its Founder.

The ideal Church is not one denomination in competition with another denomination, congratulating itself upon its superior numbers, gifts, institutions, and trying to outstrip others; but it is an ideal institution offering its men and women, its men, itself, for the salvation of the lost. Jesus Christ "gave Himself for us, that He might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto Himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." That is the spirit of Jesus, and it should be the spirit of His Church. People sometimes say, "That men ought to give till it hurts;" it is better when they give until they enjoy it. Reluctant giving hurts; but cheerful and liberal giving feels happy. If you try to raise money in the church for any benevolent cause, you can see that those who are unwilling to give are the unhappy ones. Watch them the next time you try to raise some money. Isaiah says of Jesus: "He shall see of the travail of His soul, and shall be satisfied." The mother looks into the face of her babe and is satisfied; and the true mother is most like Jesus in her love, her offering, and her satisfaction.

In war you hear most of those who risk all; or, as Paul puts it; "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus, my Lord, for whom I have suffered the loss of all things, and do count them but refuse, that I may gain Christ." The poor widow threw in two mites, all that she had, and Jesus said she cast in more than all they who cast in of their bundance. Giving is the test of real Christian service. shouting is sounding brass without service. Critics say people give for show; but that is a rare fact. Giving may be done grudgingly or of necessity; but God loves the cheerful giver. Giving is characteristic of Jesus. He gives His love. He gives His life. He gives His Spirit. He gives His grace. He gives His example. He gives His prayers. His Father gives from the beginning. He gave man His entire Creation. The sun, the stars, the moon, the earth, the mountains, the planes, the oceans, the rivers, the forest, the flowers, the seasons; and His son. Men who do not give cannot be like God, nor manifest the spirit of Jesus Christ.

W. W. STALEY.

WHY NOT?

The second annual session of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Conference will be held at Elon College, July 13-15, 1920. Are you interested? If so, read just a little part of our conference minutes:

"Resolved, That this Conference set aside the second week in July of each year as our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Week, and during this week there be no protracted meetings, or other church activities to detract, or keep any one from attending the Convention. And that the pastors of our churches become the pastors of our Sunday schools also, and set a high standard for the superintendents, teachers and pupils."

What will you do with the proposition? Will you be loyal to the actions of your Conference? I believe that you will, and I feel just like we are going to have more pastors, superintendents, officers, teachers, and pupils at the coming Convention than we have ever had before. Why not? We want every Christian Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society in the State represented at the Convention. Why not?

A full report from each school, and each society, tabulated in the minutes of the Convention, would furnish interesting and inspiring reading matter for 1921. Why not? A live, wide-awake and progressive delegation from each school and each society, active in the coming Convention would make the thing hum, and possibly be the means of converting some of our leading Christians who have outgrown the Sunday school. Why not? "The victory may depend upon you!" Will you do your part? Begin now, and be proud of your school and its report at the Convention! Why not?

C. H. STEPHENSON, Gen. Sec'y.

KITTERY POINT, MAINE

The work here has a forward look to it. The folks are expecting to do great things for the Kingdom this next year and I, as pastor, believe that a great and good work will be done in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

The people are willing and ready to work and are bending every effort to see that the Kingdom does not lag at this point. The prayers of the Brotherhood are asked for the pastor in order that he may wisely and faithfully guide those under his care into the paths that lead to the Cross and the light of the great white throne.

Verily, a greater calling never man had than the telling of the Gospel story and it is the present pastor's earnest wish to be of as much service as he can be for the Lord in this part of the field.

My best wishes go to friends I have in the South and may God's blessing rest on His children wherever they be and under what name, or creed.

H. J. FLEMING.

FIRST CHURCH, GREENSBORO, HAS ANNIVERSARY

The First Christian church, Greensboro, N. C., celebrated its twentieth anniversary Sunday, June 6, by holding a special service. We glean the following items relative to the church from the attractive two-color program used on the occasion: Charter Members—Mr. R. S. Petty* Mrs. R. S. Petty*, Mr. L. M. Clymer*, Mrs. L. M. Clymer*, Miss Ava Danley (deceased 9-2-03), Mr. J. P. McAdams, Mrs. J. P. McAdams, Mr. G. W. Ellington (deceased 5-26-11), Mrs. G. W. Ellington*, Miss Grace Ellington, Mrs. Jno. W. Truitt (deceased 7-7-17), Mrs. Jno. W. Truitt*, Miss Vienna Truitt (deceased 4-4-14), Mrs. Jno. R. Foster*, Miss Effie Lowe*, Mrs. S. J. McCauley, Mr. E. H. Holder, Mrs. E. H. Holder, Mr. C. E. Thomas, Mr. Robt. Klapp, Mrs. J. G. Anthony*, Miss Florence Lillard, Mr. R. E. Andrews, Mrs. R. E. Andrews, (*Surviving members still active in the work of the church); Some Facts—The idea of a Christian church in Greensboro was first presented to North Carolina and Virginia Conference, November, 1899, by Home Mission Committee composed of Rev. J. W. Holt, S. A. Holleman and H. V. Simpson. Rev. L. I. Cox began the work early in 1900 and completed the organization June 3, 1900, with 24 charter members, whose names appear in this program. Mr. L. M. Clymer has served the church as secretary for 20 years. Two of the pastors who served the church have gone to their reward. The church has doubled its membership 21 times during the 20 years. The church, supported by the Conference in 1900, is now raising approximately $50,000.00 in the Five-Year Forward Movement work. *Church Pastors—Rev. L. I. Cox, Mission pastor and organizer, 1899-1902 (deceased 1919), Rev. L. F. Johnson, D. D., 1903-1908; Rev. J. W. Bolton, 1909-1910, (deceased); Rev. L. E. Smith, D. D., 1911-1912; Rev. H. E. Rountree, 1913-1914; Rev. P. H. Fleming, D. D., 1915-1918; Rev. J. Vincent Knight, 1919-1920. (*Dates calculated by Conference years.)

WINDSOR REVIVAL

The people of Windsor, Virginia, were privileged, for ten days to listen to the forceful and impressive sermons of Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne, and to hear the thrilling, soul-stirring music of Mr. Sam Davis, a blind pianist. We would affirm the words of commendation written by Dr. Smith and Dr. Staley, in previous issues of THE SUN, regarding both the evangelist and the pianist. And, further, we believe the sermons and Brother Lightbourne's manner of delivering them are unexcelled in some respects by even Billy Sunday. We feel this after hearing Billy Sunday in Syracuse, New York in 1915, and in Norfolk, Virginia, this year. We feel, too, that the pianist's playing during the invitation moved some to take their stand on the Lord's side. Though converted only a short time, his pleasing personality, thoroughly consecrated life, linked with his wonderful musical talents makes him a saving force and greatly enhances the evangelistic efforts of Brother Lightbourne.

There being no church large enough to hold over four hundred people, the school auditorium was engaged, and what was surprising to many, it was filled the first night. The crowds were the largest ever seen in Windsor during a revival, and after packing in about eight hundred some nights, many had to be turned away. Delegations came from the surrounding country and towns, even from Dendron, a town 35 miles away. The largest delegation was present the first night from Mt. Carmel and Colossee churches. And from these delegations many reconsecrations were made and some professions, too.

While numbers do not always indicate the results of a revival, we feel safe in saying there were at least 200 reconsecrations and 35 professions. Nearly all attendants were members of some church as was shown by uplifted hands. The whole town has been awakened. The three churches are working closer together with a sweeter spirit of union, a thing needed so much in small towns, and large ones as well. We are holding union prayer meetings on Wednesday nights, that which was not done before the revival. Prayer meetings are held in some home one afternoon each week. These prayer meetings were begun a week before the revival began, and during the meeting, the greatest interest was seen in all three denominations. Baptists, Methodists, and Christians led the meetings, held them in various homes, and with glad results. Women prayed who never did so in public before. Some led for their first time. The town is small, but four prayer meetings each afternoon were held at the same time. Where such interest is shown in prayer service, the Lord will always give a revival, a spiritual awakening.

For the benefit of many who wanted to know the results of the offerings, who could not learn during the meeting, we report that the freewill offerings were good, considering the size of the churches. The hotel and other running expenses were paid, the traveling expenses of the pianist and evangelist were paid and expense of their return to Norfolk and Burlington, N. C., respectively. And the balance of the every night collections and all the envelope offerings amounted to $200 for the evangelist, and $50 for the pianist.

Sunday morning following the meeting, twenty-two members were received into the Christian church, and a glad scene that was. Never a happier one in that church. After the service the pastor and wife were presented with $40, and a fine Smithfield ham, for their services and her singing during the revival.

With such an increased interest in Sunday school and church work and a unity stronger than ever among the church people, the future looks very bright for the town of Windsor.

THE INTER-CHURCH WORLD MOVEMENT

It goes without saying that the past few years have been times of great testing. Men have been tested, nations have been tested, and institutions of all characters have been tested. Truly it has been a testing time.

The Inter-Church World Movement was born during these testing times to help meet some of the needs and bear the burdens of the world's testing. In infancy some doubted its future, had little hope in its life and gave little assistance to help it grow into great and noble service. Others saw in the young child that future that only a mother can see, and thus took it to bosom, nurtured it, guided, and assisted it with prayer, tears, and dollars. It grew rapidly and as it grew it was not a favorite child with all the household of Protestantism. It was watched and trusted by many who had prayed, and do pray, for the Kingdom to come. Good and great men placed their hopes, their time, their all, in it and saw in it the great triumph of united effort for world service for God and humanity.

But this child had to go through the time of testing and now lies prostrate before the great ordeal performed upon it by theological surgery and denominational "healing." Gone? Yes the Inter-Church World Movement has spent itself and is now endeavoring to wind up its affairs—affairs that are complicated, yet built upon earnest hopes, noble aspirations and well founded ideas.

Some of our brethren share the thought that the crisis of the Movement has passed and that it will re-establish itself and finally function. If it be for the Kingdom's good, we trust that we are wrong in our conclusion. We have studied the situation closely, read at length, weighed ideas and thoughts on both sides and have come to the conclusion set forth above.

The chief cause of the Movement's collapse was its failure to raise $40,000,000 from the "Friendly Group"—a group of men and women outside of the Church that would, it thought, contribute $40,000,000, or more. This item scarcely reached $3,000,000. As a whole the denominational campaigns succeeded. The co-operating bodies agreed to underwrite certain sums and, on the strength of these underwritings, the Movement borrowed something over $6,500,000 and was to pay this back out of the amount secured from the "Friendly Group," which group could not be found in making the canvass. The Movement is now about $5,000,000 in debt and the underwriting boards are called upon to make good their guarantees.

It should be said in this connection that the leaders of the Movement agreed with the 30 co-operating bodies that when all expenses were met from the amount obtained from the friendly group that each communion participating would come in for its pro rata part of the remainder. This failing to happen has helped to heap further criticism upon the Movement. Whether this is selfishness or not we leave to our readers to decide.

The Movement has now a running expense of nearly $1,000,000 a month and no definite source from which to draw. The larger denominations co-operating are falling away because they have agreed that they cannot reconcile their people to the Movement. This statement can be borne out by reading the reports of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in session in Philadelphia two weeks ago, also reports from the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church which has just closed a two weeks' session in Des Moines, Iowa.

In the broadest sense the Movement has not been a failure. It has done a vast amount of good, brought thousands of men together to think over and discuss great problems of the Kingdom's growth. The Movement has possibly set in action thoughts which may one day bring out its chief aim through some other medium.

The leaders of the Movement admit that they have made mistakes. Mr. James M. Speers, Chairman of the Inter-Church Executive Committee, in speaking before the Presbyterian General Assembly in Philadelphia last week, said:

"Now, we have made mistakes, errors in judgment. Yes, we are quite ready to admit, friends, that the Movement was projected on too large a scale. Not too large a scale in view of a world literally staggering under burdens that only the love of God in Christ could lift—but too large when you consider that it had to be done on such a scale as should allow us to co-ordinate its parts. Again, we all recognize that any such movement can only go forward as it goes forward in step with its consistent parts, and we are constrained to realize, in view of the lack of approval, that it would have been better had we gone forward more slowly so as to have carried with us our constituency. Then we made another error in judgment in thinking that it was possible to raise any very large sum of money from people outside of the Church. The so-called Friendly Citizens group isn't to be found. Especially after thirty denominations in their individual drives had combed the ground clean. Anybody who had any connection with the Church was called upon by some one. We hear of one case where a man was called on by at least six different denominations. And so the field of the Friendly Citizens that we thought we had did not exist.

Now, then, we made one other error in judgment, and that was in holding out the hope that the constituent bodies co-operating in the Interchurch were going to get something for nothing. That is an exploded idea, but every once in a while we return to it. We held out hope that we could do all that we hoped to do and that it would not cost the co-operating churches anything. We were honest in making that statement."

A Continuation Committee has been appointed to see if pledges can be secured by July 15 to guarantee $10,000,000 to carry on the work for another year. The securing of this amount will determine the immediate future of the Movement. The failure to secure these pledges will mean that the underwritings will have to be paid by the co-operating bodies.

The collapse of the Movement should not be considered as a failure of Protestantism to unite on a basis of definite action. The work, according to the thinking of many, was launched on a scale too large. Not too large, as Mr. Speers says, to do what should be done, but conservative men, have been afraid of its machinery.

One writer says that the eclipse is but for a moment and that the Movement will emerge from its troubles and be a blessing to the world.

The following taken from the recent Cleveland, Ohio meeting, expresses the interest and enthusiasm of those who have been in close connection with the Movement:

"At the last session of the General Committee in Cleveland, 150 field agents of the Interchurch, who were in the city, were called in to sit with the committee. The desperate financial plight was placed before them for the first time.

"These men had gathered from practically every state in the Union. They had just come from their homes where they had been in touch with the body of the population. They knew the sentiment that overwhelmingly favored co-operative action among the churches in such great problems as home and foreign missions. Young men, sincere, with their hearts committed to the tasks over which they had been laboring, they refused to admit even the possibility of the failure of the Interchurch idea. In one of the most remarkable demonstrations ever witnessed in a religious gathering, these men demanded the continuation of the work. One after another they arose and pledged everything they possessed to the cause to which they were willing even to give their lives. Some men went so far as to bring forward the deeds to their homes. Large numbers of them pledged a month's salary. So great was the fervor that in this little group $24,000 was raised in a few minutes toward a fund to continue the campaign for the money the Interchurch needed."

This is but a partial review of the present situation of the Movement, and we have taken for granted that our readers are familiar with the founding, the program, and the work undertaken by the Movement.

DEVOTIONAL

WAYFARERS

Out into the cold, worn, changing world goes a weary traveler looking for a better country. One with changeless scenes, perennial blessings where eternal spring abides and fadeless flowers grow. Imagination, faith and hope invite him onward as he climbs the hills and descends the beautiful blooming valleys which are extended in glittering and picturesque splendor. At the start of his journey he takes a silent unseen companion with him. It was He Who walked with two on the way to Emmaus. After taking Jesus into his life the way appeared smoother and better all the time and all the way—causing his face to shine with radiance of heaven as he passes onward and upward.

Jacob was a wayfarer—a traveler, and he came to a certain place and tarried there all night, for he was tired with the journey. Taking some stones of the place he used them for his pillow as he lay down to sleep. The dream he had must have been delightfully pleasant with the great stair-way with its topmost step reaching to heaven while the angels went up and down upon it with their snowy robes gleaming in the mid-night darkness with the light shining from the heavenly world. The Lord God stood above it. This transporting vision made him so glad that his early waking thoughts impressed him, because that was the gate of heaven. The very same stony pillow that rested his head as he was dreaming such a sublime dream he put up the next morning. A pillow and a pillar. It served two purposes—a double service. He named it Bethel—God's house. There he dedicated that stone, and dedicated and reconsecrated himself to God. What a sweet peace and a dear, deep heart feeling of superlative glory must have filled his soul!

All of us are wayfarers. Every one is equal in one respect; and that is each one is traveling to the end of his journey—whether it be long or short. It is best to be pleasant and happy on the way as much as possible. Special efforts to live that way will greatly reward him who tries it. Begin to do this by living in the realms of higher, greater and better thinking. For as you grow and develop in this practice, you will soon see a wonderful improvement. Cultivate a beautiful imagination and it will help you to cross dangerous ways, and light up the dark night of adversity, affliction and despondency. The kind of thoughts you mostly entertain will leave a deep impression upon the features as they perform their part in the great drama of life. Our manner will very naturally be formed and influenced by them. In the midst of delightful contemplation the mind is still searching for and following after God.

In looking over a very great, large art gallery there was so much in it to study and admire. There was one picture which the artist conceived and painted to the delightful admiration of all who saw it. Among the great display of artistic skill there was an indescribable and never-to-be-forgotten painting—consisting of what appeared to be an oak log with a man sitting at one end and a woman on the other end with a good looking little boy and a beautiful little girl in the middle of it. The expression on their faces was calm and lovely showing that they were happy as they were sitting there to rest a while on the great journey of life. Under the picture in distinct letters was the word "Wayfarers." Many hearts throbbed with inexpressible pleasure while the silent tears rolled down many a cheek as they stood gazing at the matchless painting.

THE ENDURING CROSS

(Methodist Protestant)

The religion of the cross is not out of date, nor will it ever be. There are wise men who think that the church must get down to the position that the salvation of the world is a financial, and a sociological proposition. There is no doubt that financial support is involved, and that there is a sociological side to the gospel of grace, but we are old-fashioned enough to believe that these things, as important as they are, cannot be considered as the most vital things. If the cross lead men to the appreciation of the spiritual and eternal verities, the money to carry on the work of the kingdom will come, and man will seek to deal justly with his fellow-man.

The old cross stands for God's estimate of the horror and ravage of sin in the souls of men. The trouble with this world is a disease deadly and ruinous. Sin eats a doth a canker, so destroying the divine ideals of men that they miss the mark of holiness, and go after the things which only destroy what they vainly declare they are trying to save. When an immortal creature seeks to feed his soul upon the husks of sin, he poisons his spiritual nature, and becomes carnal and doomed to death. The old cross declares that the trouble with the world is sin, and that the end of sin is spiritual death. The world will never get beyond the point where the emphasis of the ills of man must be placed upon sin as their producing cause. The natural religion of man is a myth, and salvation by culture is a vain delusion.

The old cross stands for sacrifice as a cure for sin "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin." God gave His Son to die for men because there was no other way to save men from sin. "The wages of sin is death," and a perfect man must pay the wages if man is redeemed. The whole history of man is a commentary upon the truth, that to save the world somebody must die for it. The crimson thread runs through all the warp and woof of human history. The bloom upon the cheeks of humanity today was painted there by the sacrifice of those who sleep in the cemeteries of time. Not by getting but by giving, not by living but by dying, does anybody become a saviour of his brethren. Selfishness is homicide to the brotherhood.

The old cross stands for measureless compassion of God for His children. However boldly and independently we talk, we all need somebody to love us, and to care for us. It is not in any man born of woman to order his ways. We are pilgrims and strangers upon earth, treading unknown paths, meeting enemies on every side, tormented by devils within and without, and facing every day a mysterious eternity. A part of the human race is always in procession to the cities of the dead. Disease lurks in the home and destroys our peace. When a man came to this city offering healing to diseased bodies, the streets were lined with such a picture of human suffering as was never seen here before, and the man's compassion drew the multitude as much as his doctrine. There are shadows on every hearthstone one time or another. It is a suffering humanity which throngs our streets, or sits in silent helplessness in our homes. What the world needs is some one to love it, to have compassion upon it. The passion and temper of our lost humanity is largely the result of its pain. The message of the cross is a message of love and immeasurable compassion. The cross declares that the White Comrade, Jesus, is on all our fields of pain, and His eyes are wet with compassion as He stands with us, or above us in our anguish. "God loves us," says the cross. He will never leave nor forsake us, is the assurance of its rugged beams. It is not the love of soft hands and gentle words, but the love that goes out into the mountains, with torn feet and pierced hands to seek and to save the sheep that is lost.

The cross will endure as long as man is man and life is life. We cannot get along without it any more than the world can get along without sun, moon and stars; any more than a helpless child can get along without the quenchless love of motherhood. Out of the infinite depths of human sin, and human sorrow the cry goes on forever for a God who loves, and who saves. Better wages and better homes and better food and better treatment may come, and ought to come to the oppressed and persecuted everywhere, but these things can never take the place of the cross. These foolish men who would banish God from the world, and His holy word from the heart, that they may reach an ideal condition, a millennium of social peace, are like the son who slays the mother that he may find a perfect home. They both have slain their only hope of perfectness and peace. At the foot of the old cross, where the crimson stream of a Saviour's blood washes away sin, we must all come, that we may have peace on earth, and eternal life in heaven.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

It was a very great pleasure to have the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage with us on May 26 in their annual meeting. We all regretted very much that Brother B. D. Jones was called home on that morning on account of the death of a relative and Brother C. D. West was detained on his way to the meeting on account of serious illness of his niece.

All the other members were present and we had a very harmonious meeting. The regular routine work was done and then it was decided by a unanimous vote of the members present to build the Children's Home. W. K. Holt, Chairman of the Board, John R. Foster and Chas. D. Johnston, were appointed the building committee with instructions to commence work at once, or as soon as the plans and specifications are ready.

We hope to have this building complete and paid for and ready to present to the Board at its annual meeting next May. Will you help us to make this possible?

Our good friend, Mr. M. Orban, Jr., of California, sent us a check this week for $500.00 to help us get this building ready for the little tots who have been pleading for a home.

Our Singing Class had a very pleasant day at Apple's Chapel the fourth Sunday in May and gave their song service there.

We have had the pleasure of visiting all of Rev. J. F. Apple's churches and he has given us a warm welcome and his people in all his churches have been very kind to us.

Our little folks enjoy giving these services and expect to visit a number of the churches during the summer. It gets our people in closer touch with the work and shows them that the money given toward the support of this Institution is well invested.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: Guess you think we have forgotten you, but mother has been busy and has not had time to write for us. She thought I was taking whooping cough so I missed Sunday school last Sunday. but it was just a bad cold. We are going to try and have a Children's Day in June. Wish you and all the children could be with us on that day. Enclosed find twenty cents (20) for May. With love to all the cousins.—J. P. and Mack Brannon.

But for your letter our corner would be blank this week. It would have been a pity, too. I hope we will have lots of letters next week.—"Uncle Charley."

A LAYMAN'S MEN AND MILLIONS ADDRESS*

"Believe in my mission, greet life with a cheer,
There is a great work for us to do, and that is why I am here."

Again: "Wist ye not, that I must be about my Father's business?"

As we have passed the first three objectives in the Men and Millions Forward Movement we will spend our time today on the fourth objective, namely, the securing of two million dollars.

We do not like the terms raising, begging or asking in the sense of favor or charity when applied to increasing or securing money for the Church. It carries a false idea. Just how it came about, I do not know. It thrusts upon the Church the stigma of spirit of dependency, humility and charity. It puts the Church in the past tense. It makes it an object to be acted upon, rather than to act. It carries the idea of invalidism and death. We repeat, this is absolutely wrong and criminal. We should look for other terms. Terms that will carry the true idea of thrift, progress and life itself. Yes, put the Church in the world's mind, just where it is, and just where it belongs. Let the world realize and know that the Church in the broadest sense is the very foundation of all things in life that are worth while. That the Church is as essential to home, democracy, peace, prosperity and happiness as the unit one to the multiplication table or the English alphabet is to the English literature.

Since the Church is not an imaginary something, or an object of beggary, but an independent, active and essential force whose business it is to give, rather than to receive, then we should use the terms investment or taking so much stock, when money is needed for the Church as an institution. So, this morning we are simply holding a stockholders' meeting with the idea of increasing our stock.

The National Bank of Suffolk some time ago issued announcements to her stock-holders advising them of a special meeting, on Thursday, April 1, 1920 at 5:30 P. M., to consider the advisability of increasing her capital stock. The bank stockholders were evidently pleased with her past business, and I venture to say that the most enthusiastic stockholders were those that had the most invested—that had the greatest number of shares. I understood, when the meeting was called, a great percentage of the stockholders were present. A motion was made and carried to increase her capital stock from one hundred and forty thousand to five hundred thousand dollars. The indications were that the stock would be readily increased to the desired amount, and those present, who took new stock did not feel that they had made a donation, or been begged, or been asked. Why? They invested—they expected something in return. Had they not expected dividends they would not have been present at the stockholders' meeting, and the stock would have never been increased.

When the members, or stockholders, of Mt. Carmel church, as an institution, are notified that they are to have a meeting to increase her capital stock, do they come promptly, one and all, to shoulder their part, or do some of them stay away—follow at a distance—and circulate the news that the meeting is to be another one of those "begging schemes?" I am afraid that a few of us belong to the latter class. Why? I am unable to explain fully. However, there is something woefully and distressingly wrong.

Ignorance, I am inclined to think is a great factor, but remember: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." When the church member can be made to feel and know that his investments, or stock, in the church pays him definite, direct and concrete dividends, he will be more liberal. The more liberal he becomes, the more interest he will manifest, the nearer he will approach the true Christian life. The banker in the truest sense, is the one that has the most invested.

To reach and develop a person through investment or material means may seem contrary to Biblical teachings—may seem to have the stinch of materialism. In this Men and Millions Campaign the average leader or preacher tells us that of the four objectives to accomplish, the two million dollars will be the easiest, because by getting the men first you can get the millions. This is no doubt true, and should be emphasized. But is it not reasonable to carry it further, and say that if you cannot get the man first, do not give up, but get his money on moral grounds if on no other, and if this is accomplished you have broken a great barrier between such a man and his God. The dollar has been leading the average man for all time. The world's commercial enterprises have recognized this, and as a result business or commercialism has today, gotten the world by the throat. But remember, the dollar was gotten first. The spirit of the times seems to march to the tune, "Where the Almighty dollar leads me I will follow, yes I will follow, I will follow all the way." So it seems that it is a challenge to the Church to direct this metallic march. Money is powerful, and with it thrift and life are manifested. A thrifty enterprise not only interests those who have invested, but those on the outside, the more thrifty the business, the more the man wants to invest, and sooner or later, you will get the man. The old saying must be true that, "there are more ways than one to kill a dog." So let the Church, if possible, get the man first, but if it fails, then by all honest means get his money. The Church must fight the world on business principles. "The devil must be fought with fire."

The Church has been believing and praying for centuries and still sin and wars have been running wild. One thing the Church needs is for her faith and prayers to be supplemented with the dollar. Remember, the dollar is nothing within itself, but the reason it is almighty is because it represents so much of man's time, energy and work. It is man's potential energy—energy stored up during the six days—the days that God commanded man "to labor and do all of his work and on the seventh rest." So it represents six-sevenths of man's time. Yes, the dollar represents time and work, and by works was faith made perfect."

Is it not time for a Church revolution? It seems that silk hats, long frock coats, priestly robes, and priest-craft have served their purpose and we are now entering the sack suit age. There was a time when the ability of the old time, all-wise family physician was determined by the height of his hat, the length of his coat and the wise air he manifested. He labored but hardly ever presented a bill for his services. Medicine under such a regime became almost to a stand still. Progress was practically checked. It was only when the sack suit fellow came along, and began to puncture his wise dress and manner with surgical findings and post-mortem examinations, did medicine begin to progress, and the old, wise family physician stepped aside, and is now known only as a family fossil. As long as the average preacher will accept unusual favors from the public, and be pleased with the church member "pounding" him, his salary will continue to remain on the average of six hundred dollars per year. Is the church member to be blamed when he can secure services from his leader for a pound of sugar, a piece of bacon and a few pennies? Is not the preacher defeating himself and the cause of the church? When he accepts such compensation for his services, it seems the church work is cheapened and weakened all the way along the line.

Custom, feeling or sentiment has its mission, but its greatest field is initiative—is in the beginning. The home life had its beginning in sentiment and feeling, but later when duties and responsibilities of the home began to multiply sentiment and feeling could no longer meet the necessities, so they had to give way in a great measure, and could only serve as flavoring agents for hard physical work and wise thought governed by true business principles.

Likewise with the Church. It is not high time that the Church should resort to business, and use sentiment and feeling as flavoring agents on Sundays and holidays? Let the Church be recognized as a place of work for the Master rather than a place for worship, because the latter is in a great part embodied in the first if executed in the proper spirit. Is it not time that the architectural design of churches should be changed? They are usually built on monumental or tomb-like design with a cemetery as a yard or nearby, which carries the idea of past memories, sadness and death. Would it not be better to build the church on plans suggestive of business, thrift and life, as the true mission of the Church is for the living and not for the dead. "I came that ye may have life and have it more abundantly."

The church is to prepare mankind to live and not to die. Live primarily and fundamentally here, and not for the life hereafter, as the first life truly lived encompasses and determines the latter, which needs no special thought. It seems that one of the greatest forces in the average church member's life, that causes him to be a Christian is from the fear of the torments of hell hereafter. If they did not have hell staring them in the face for all eternity, they would seemingly do to suit themselves. Some philosophers and religious sects have attempted from time to time to explain hell away and thus destroy future fear. The hell-fire fearing Christian came about evidently from past teachings. He conceived the idea that the Church was to prepare him for the hereafter and not for this life, and let this old world take care of itself. He would read the Bible, seemingly, to learn how much, to which they would have to conform, to get by and be saved. This is a sad state of affairs when the world is at the mercy of the Church to be saved.

Are we not selfish Christians? The average prayer usually closes with this idea: "Oh Lord! may we so live here that we may land in New Jerusalem and be saved when we die." Is not the emphasis made at the wrong place? Is not this a selfish idea? Would it not be better to close our prayers with this thought: "May we so live here that our life will be an example to cause others to live a better Christian life here, and thus save this old world from sin and destruction."

The average church member apparently gives to the church abstractly and not definitely—negatively and not positively. They still seem to have the idea that God dwells in some far off place or mountain and not "among men." We must know and realize that God and His Church is not a dreamy, abstract, foreign something, but a concrete, definite, active, personal something. Something for you and something for me. So we the members, or stockholders of Mt. Carmel church, have met here to increase her stock, a business institution.

In the first place it is the business of the directors or leaders to give an idea of the dividends that the church has paid. In the second place the advantages to be derived from such as increase in stock,

What the church is paying in dividends materially can best be seen in a far off rural section. Locate, if you will, in a section of country where there is no church accessible. You can buy the land for $10.00, or less, per acre. Build a church in this locality and later the church will give birth to a school, and your $10.00 per acre land will immediately increase in value to twenty, to fifty dollars or more per acre. This is what has taken place in old Mt. Carmel neighborhood. Your farms have not increased in value, because of war conditions or unforeseen circumstances, but it is primarily and fundamentally due to the prayers and material efforts of our sainted fore-fathers and mothers, which resulted in erecting a small church here many years ago. Get this fixed in your mind. Remember that the church gives the value. This is one of the strong inducements that the real estate agents put on their advertised farm property for sale, namely, "it has church and school advantages." The real estate agent knows that everybody else knows, whether saint or sinner, that this enhances the value of any farm land almost 100 per cent.

But let us go back to the little far off country church and see what she is doing. She is a paying institution when the farmers can get together and build a small church at the cost of from one to two thousand dollars, and in a short while, go home and find that this investment has doubly increased the value of their farms. This is wonderful, and equally true, and no other investment can bring such fabulous and personal dividends.

The church dividends do not stop here. Under the influence of this little country church and school, children are reared, become of age and give to the town and city good country-bred citizens. There they locate and build better stores, larger factories, better equipped schools and stronger churches. The townsmen will wake up one morning, and tell his wife that the lot he bought on the edge of town for $100.00 a short while ago, he has been offered $1,000.00 for it. Why this increase in investments? Because of the little country church at a distance. The little church gave birth to the citizen, that moved to town, that enhanced the town's material value. The material value of any town, or country neighborhood depends upon its true citizens, and not by any mere chance or commercial clique or cut. You men of the rural districts may organize you Farmers Unions and the men of the town may organize their Chambers of Commerce and Business Men's Associations with the idea of building up the farms and towns materially, but it can only be brought about, and increased permanently in proportion to your true citizenship. Effort other than through true womanhood and manhood is a farce, and "becomes as sounding brass or tinkling symbol."

We have already seen that church dividends do not cease with material profits. The church gives birth to schools and through these institutions the young minds are molded, which mold determines the destiny of future generations.

"Write upon wood and it will soon decay,
Write upon brass and it corrodes away,
Write upon marble and it crumbles into dust,
But write upon the immortal mind of childhood and it will live and glow throughout the eternal ages."

Again the church pays dividends not only in this life, but in the life to come. Yes, it gives life everlasting.

Now with an institution that pays such fabulous and personal dividends—dividends that far exceed all other institutions—it seems that it would not be difficult to increase the church stock to almost any amount. We believe that all of her stock will be taken, if Mt. Carmel church, as an institution,

Miscellaneous

The News Letter, issued by the University of North Carolina, is a weekly visitor that never escapes our attention. It is a five column sheet printed on one side only, but always contains valuable information. Its chief object may be to advertise the university, but we give it the credit of not commercializing its articles by making them take the same road—to its own institution. The first and fundamental thing for every institution, regardless of its character, is to give service and results will take care of themselves.

Mrs. Harper's announcement in this issue will be of interest. The women are to have weekly contributions in THE SUN. Mrs. J. W. Harrell becomes responsible for the work and her first work will appear next week. This addition to THE SUN should be of special help to it and of real benefit to the Church.

These summer days are more inviting to working in the garden than doing office work, reading, editing "copy" and writing editorials. Sometimes one may dig up fresh thought while digging up fresh dirt.

We have come to the conclusion that both Democrats and Republicans are disgusted with Congress and that a house-cleaning would be for the good of the Nation.

A NEW CONTRIBUTOR

We introduce our readers to a new contributor this week—Mr. J. E. Massey. Mr. Massey graduated at Elon College in the Class of '19, studied in the New York University, New York City, last summer and had the Elon College Graded School in his charge during the past eight months. Mr. Massey is making a specialty of journalism and has agreed to let us have something from his pen every week. We shall look forward to the coming of his articles.

AN INVITATION

Mr. and Mrs. John Meade Fix invite you to be present on their twenty-third anniversary at the marriage of their daughter, Carrie Meade, to Mr. Robert Hamilton Therrell, on Thursday evening, the tenth of June, nineteen hundred and twenty, at eight o'clock, at the First Christian church, Burlington, North Carolina.

Cards read: At home after June twenty-third, Burlington, North Carolina.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

Mr. and Mrs. James Patterson Montgomery announce the marriage of their daughter, Sadie Josephine, to Mr. Melvin Cicero Stafford on Thursday, the third of June, nineteen hundred and twenty, Burlington, North Carolina.

Cards read: At home after June fifteenth, Burlington, North Carolina.

HINTS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Sprinkle salt on a beet stain on table linen while the stain is fresh. After standing for awhile it can be washed in warm water and soap.

Using condensed milk solves the sugar problem in cooking.

Brown sugar will correct a dish if it is too salty, but it is hard to remedy food that burns.

Putting a piece of bread in pea soup prevents the peas from sinking to the bottom and burning.

Kerosene is excellent for cutting grease and so freeing the dirt. It, however, should be used in small quantities.

Washing soda, borax, lye and ammonia also cut grease and are good to soften water. Use one teaspoonful of borax, two tablespoons of ammonia to each gallon of water.

Make a small oil cloth apron and keep it hanging near the sink to wear while washing dishes.

The juice of apple pies will not run out if the pies are placed in a very hot oven until the edges of the crust are baked together, then cool the oven off and let cook slowly until apple is done. The edges of the lower crust should be wet with cold water before the upper crust is put on, then press the edges together.—Marie Lyndall Darrach, in The Christian Herald.

AN EXPLANATION

There appeared an article on pages 14 and 15 of last week's paper on "Our Young People and Missions" with no name signed. The paper was written by Miss Bessie Holt, Burlington, N. C., and delivered before the recent session of the Southern Christian Convention. The Convention voted that the address be printed, and when given us for publication by Miss Holt we failed to note that the paper did not bear her name, and let the article get into print without giving credit. We regret the oversight, but glad to make the correction.

I'D LIKE TO GO

It seems to me I'd like to go
Where bells don't ring, nor whistles blow,
Nor clocks don't strike, nor gongs don't sound,
And I've had stillness all around—

Not real stillness, but the trees'
Low whispering, or the hum of bees,
Or brooks' faint babbling over stones
In strangely, softly tangled tones.

Or maybe the cricket or katydid,
Or the songs of birds in the hedges hid,
Or just some such sweet sounds as these
To fill a tired heart with ease.

If 'tweren't for sight and sound and smell,
I'd like the city pretty well;
But when it comes to getting rest,
I like the country lots the best.

Sometimes it seems to me I must
Just quit the city's din and dust
And get out where the sky is blue—
And say, now, how does it seem to you?

For The Rural Dweller

How Women's Clubs Benefit Communities

The chief relief for the past undesirable conditions of country life has been realized through co-operative endeavors of the woman's club.

The woman's club makes the best institution for up-building the home and community and bears great responsibility for socializing country life. Farm home life was never sufficiently broadening until women took a larger part in community affairs.

On the women depends, to a greater degree than we realize, the nature and extent of the movement for a better life. By having clubs, women have learned more about science, sanitation, cooking, decoration, household management and economies. They have learned how to decrease household labor by use of labor-saving machinery and system. They have exchanged ideas until now they have well planned and conveniently arranged homes.

Women's clubs have affected all classes, as women have come in touch with the wider world. Some results of women's clubs are enlarged social activities, love for home and higher and better things. Children in homes have learned to be of more assistance with the work.

Every worker for rural progress has possessed vision but no one has seen it more clearly than the worker in women's clubs.—Mrs. J. E. Daniel, in The Progressive Farmer.

Light Work for Work Stock Early in Season

The season is late, or at least spring work is behind the usual schedule in most parts of the South. But nothing is gained by overworking the work stock early in the season. Too much work early in the season may add a few hours at that time, but it often means the loss of ten times the work later in the season. It is easy to injure any work animal by overwork before he becomes properly conditioned early in the season. This is particularly true of the animal that has not had regular work during the winter, especially during the first really hot days of spring. Gradually increase the work day after day, but start out easily with an animal until his muscles become hard and accustomed to the work.

Working too hard early in the spring before in condition and feeding too much hay, especially in hot weather, are the two most common causes of trouble with the work stock.—The Progressive Farmer.

Varieties of Peanuts

Attempts to grow the Virginia variety of peanuts south of North Carolina have not been very successful. The number of poorly filled pod is greater in this variety when grown farther south than is the case with the small Spanish peanut. In case you wish to grow a little larger peanut than the Spanish, we would advise that you try the North Carolina or African peanut. The Spanish peanut will give better results for hog pasture.—R. Y. Winters, in The Progressive Farmer.

MISSIONARY

'GO YE INTO ALL THE WORLD'

Foreign Missions is the topic of many discussions nowadays. If we follow the teachings of the New Testament we are compelled to believe in foreign missions. God requires us to give Him our best. We, our time, and money belong to Him. Our Savior said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel." He knew that all of us could not go, but I know we who cannot go, can help others to spread the gospel. Luke 10:1 reads like this: "After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before His face into every city and place whither He Himself would come." Now read the second and fourth verse in this chapter. If it is not right to send money to missionaries, why did Christ send these seventy out with neither purse, scrip or shoes? Can anyone imagine the joy of these disciples when they returned bringing this message to their Lord? Even the devils are subject unto us through Thy name. I believe the returned foreign missionaries are just as happy over what they have done.

Many have mistaken ideas of missionary meetings. They think money is the chief aim of the meeting. Of course, we pay our monthly dues and more if we like, but one is amply repaid by entering into the earnest prayers and splendid articles which are usually read. We are happier Christians when we are doing something for our Savior. May you this year be able to say: "Take my life and let it be consecrated, Lord to Thee. Take myself and I will be ever only all for Thee."

MRS. J. W. HARRELL WOMAN'S BOARD EDITOR

The Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Christian Convention in session at Raleigh in April appointed Mrs. J. W. Harrell, Burlington, N. C., to edit a page in each issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN and the Christian Missionary.

Mrs. Harrell desires that each Society and every missionary worker among the women shall send her items of news and plans of work that she may make her page breezy and inspirational. Let everyone begin at once to do as Mrs. Harrell requests.

A COLORED STORY

"Funny thing happened in my town last week," said the chatty man in the railway carriage.

"What was that?" asked the interested individual.

"Black, a white man, and White, a black man, thought a fellow named Brown was pretty green and tried to sell him a white horse. But Brown was well read and he deceived them both. In fact, he got all the money they had."

"And now?"

"And now Black and White are blue."

can promise her members or stockholders, that the increased stock will pay the flattering dividends that the stock now invested brings. This, the church can do, and will do. Yes, can promise more. Your dividends will be in proportion to your investments. Remember, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

No man can expect anything without investing something. To receive something without a personal investment would be receiving something that belongs to another. To receive a thing that does not belong to you, is getting it under false pretense. To enjoy material prosperity and all other dividends that the church is paying and throwing around us daily without taking stock in the institution is nothing more nor less than cowardice and dishonesty. Since this is a fact, we just as well realize it, and let it soak in. There are none of us knowingly who wish to be dishonest or live the life of a parasite. We can only exist through investments or through a parasitic existence.

Hear me! Woe unto ye parasite, ye drones of the hive, who lives cowardly and dishonestly on his neighbor, who gets something for nothing. Where do we stand this morning?

We, as a Church, must wake up. Now is the opportune time to strike the conquering blow. In the life of an individual there are psychological moments—moments when the mental anchorage has been disturbed by some unforeseen storm, breaking asunder former ties and setting adrift the mind upon the sea of uncertainty and discontent. Likewise the moorings of the world's mind have been disturbed by the recent storm of fiendish war, and has been cast at sea, and wireless cries for help are now being sent out continuously. So it is opportune time, yes, high time, that Protestantism, that the universal Church should wake up, raise her drowsy head from her downy pillow of ease and lethargy, and by her men and millions, stand defiantly and boldly erect, rebuke the winds, and say to the sea, "Peace be Still," and rescue the perishing world.

NATIONAL NOTES

Senator Smith, of Georgia, has introduced a bill to reduce the president's salary to $50,000 to the year and to limit his tenure of office to one term of six years.

Louisiana has defeated the Woman Suffrage bill, according to a press note given out under date of June 2.

Washington reports indicate the poorest cotton crop ever known in the South.

President Wilson's plea for a mandate over Armenia has been rejected by Congress.

NOTES

Rev. R. A. Truitt changes his address from Ansonville, N. C. to Mt. Airy, N. C.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson left last week for Georgia and Alabama for a trip of several days.

Brother C. A. Henton, Keezletown, Va., who is seventy-one years young, writes that he is enjoying THE SUN and cannot do without it.

The twenty-second annual session of the North Carolina Christian Endeavor Union meets in Greensboro, N. C., June 11-13, and a great session is promised. Rev. J. V. Knight is president. Many speakers of national reputation are scheduled to address the meetings.

In every mailing room a copy goes astray occasionally. Then the mail is lost in transit. If you should miss a copy of THE SUN, drop us a card and we will supply you if we can. We usually have a few extra copies.

Brother Roy A. Larrick, Winchester, Va., writes under date of May 11: "Dr. I. W. Johnson, of Suffolk, Va., was with us last Sunday and preached at both morning and evening services. We surely appreciated his coming and giving us these services. Had fine crowds at both services. Our Sunday school last Sunday was the best in attendance we have had for at least a year. The Sunday school offering was for missions and was the best we have had for some time. What we want now is a good pastor, can you tell us where we can get one? We expect to get our Sunday school orchestra started Sunday. That will be a big help to us." Brother Larrick's note was delayed in this office by an oversight. We regret that we cannot cite Winchester to an available man. Oh, the need of more men!

DR. HARPER'S NEW BOOK

We have just received as we furnish final "copy" for this issue a copy of Dr. Harper's latest book—"Reconstructing the Church." It is issued by the Fleming H. Revell Company, New York, has 188 pages and represents in mechanical appearance a high class piece of workmanship. The content we have not read, but expect to do so at an early date and review it in these columns.

The introduction to "Reconstructing the Church" is written by Marion Lawrance. We quote this from the closing paragraph: "The book is readable, necessary and timely. The Church needs to get a new grip on herself if she is going to measure up to ideals entertained by her best friends. This book points the way. As I have read it my heart has been thrilled as it has seldom been thrilled before and I can readily believe that the reading of this book, especially coupled with the the author's other books, and really taken to heart, would usher in a new day in our Church reconstruction."

MARRIAGES

JOHNSTON-PEARCE

On Thursday evening, April 15, 1920, at 8:30 o'clock, Miss Mary Ruth Johnston and Mr. Elwood N. Pearce of Dunn, N. C., were united in marriage at the Graham Christian church, Graham, N. C. Rev. F. C. Lester, pastor of the bride, officiated.

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Just before the ceremony, Miss Louise Moore played "Traumeri," followed by "Believe me if all Those Endearing Young Charms" and "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee," sung by Mrs. W. I. Ward. To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march the bridal party entered. First came Mr. Warren McCulloch, of Greensboro and Ben G. Johnston, brother of the bride; next came Lewis W. Strickland and George A. Pearce of Dunn. These were followed by Miss Frances Moore, as bridesmaid and Prof. F. F. Myrick, of Elon College, as groomsman. Next came the maid of honor, Miss Lucile Johnston of Burlington, followed by the ring bearer, Little Miss Sarah Johnston. The bride entered on the arm of her father, Mr. C. D. Johnston, and was met at the altar by the groom with his best man, Dr. John A. Jenigan, of Dunn. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for a trip to Asheville after which they will make their home in Dunn, N. C., where the groom holds a responsible position.

for it until he was called to the higher life of service with Jesus. He leaves five sons, the Rev. L. F. Johnson, D. D., pastor of the Vanderveer Park Christian church, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Hugh, Charles, and David of Greenville, S. C.; Robert of Raleigh, N. C., and one daughter, Mrs. Liva Holt, also of Raleigh, N. C. He was buried in the Greenwood cemetery, High Point, N. C. by the side of his faithful wife, who passed on several years ago.

May God bless his memory, and cause his influence to still live with us.

A FRIEND.

EDWARDS

On the ninth day of May, 1920, God called home our dear sister, Othela Wells Edwards. She would have been nineteen years old had she lived till June, having an earnest worker in our class.

She was a faithful member of Liberty Christian church, but after her marriage to Hill T. Edwards she joined New Bethel Baptist Sunday school with him and was a nearnest worker in our class.

We offer the following resolutions:

1. That we cherish her memory, extend our sympathy to the bereaved husband, parents, sisters and brothers, and pray that her noble spirit may be incentive to us to be more faithful and more loyal to our Lord.

2. That while we are greatly saddened by our loss, we bow in humble submission to Him Who doeth all things well.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun, one to the family and be recorded in the minutes of our Philathea Class.

MRS. P. A. DUKE,

Committee.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—SHARP

Whereas, our Heavenly Father has seen fit, by the hand of death, to remove from our midst our beloved Brother, Charles Edward Sharp, be it resolved:

First, that New Lebanon Christian church has lost a consecrated and valuable and loved member in the uplift of the Kingdom as an example to the followers of Christ.

Second, that we extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved ones and commend them to our most gracious Heavenly Father for consolation and comfort.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. HORAS P. MOORE.

CHILDREY

Mr. C. R. Childrey was born June 27, 1849, and died May 29, 1920, aged seventy-one years, eleven months and two days. His wife survives him, also one daughter and three sons. He was a member of Centerville, Virginia Christian church. The burial services were held at the grave in the Bailey-Childrey burying ground by Rev. J. L. Foster, pastor, Sunday, May 30, at 3:30 P. M., in the presence of many friends and neighbors. He had suffered much for the past three years. Peace to his ashes.

JAS. L. FOSTER.

CASSADAY

Mr. Elbert Cassaday died near Waverly, Va., May 13, 1920. He had been in declining health for about three years.

Mr. Cassaday was born in Livingston County, Michigan, June 12, 1868, and was married to Miss Bessie Salmon December 1894. He leaves two sons, Mr. Verner Cassaday of Norfolk, Va., and Mr. Harold Cassaday who lives with his mother and Mrs. Blanchard B. Cox of near Waverly, Va. They moved to Virginia about six years ago.

The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved family. Burial services at Waverly cemetery by the writer, assisted by Rev. A. N. Lewis of the M. E. church. Beautiful flowers were the numerous tokens of friendship and sympathy.

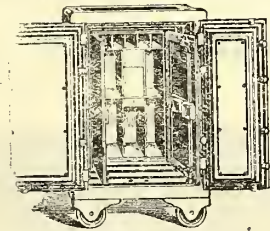

JAS. L. FOSTER.

JOHNSON

Archibald Rufus Johnson departed this life May 29, 1920, at Greenville, S. C. He was born in Chatham County, N. C., September 3, 1852, and lived most of his quiet, useful life in that State, moving only a few years ago to Greenville, S. C.

He was a man quiet and inconspicuous in everything he did, yet with a character so deep that the influence of it could be felt by all about him. He united early in life with the church and lived faithfully

What the Late Carnegie Had to Say About Stewardship

"The duty of the man of wealth is to set an example of modest, unostentatious living, shunning display or extravagance; to provide modestly for the legitimate wants of those dependent upon him, and after doing so to consider all surplus wealth which comes to him simply as trust funds which he is called upon to administer in the manner which in his judgment is best calculated to produce the most beneficial results for the community. There is no mode of disposing of surplus wealth creditable to thoughtful and earnest men save by using it year by year for the general good * * * The man who dies leaving behind him millions of available wealth which was free for him to administer during life * * * dies disgraced. Such, in my opinion, is the true Gospel of Wealth."

(Dr. A. S. Hobart in Exchange)

THAT is a hope that will not disappoint its possessors. It might be said that “it is well to keep up a cheerful mind in all this trouble, better than to despair; but, after all, it is only an optimistic speculation. We do not know what the reality of the future may be. It may all turn out to be a beautiful mirage or a rainbow made by faith shining through our tears. How do we know?” We know by the fact that now in this present life we have the first fruits, the beginning of what is promised. “Well, what is that? Pray tell.” It is this: The love of God is already shed abroad in our hearts. We have now the most evident and satisfactory results. We love God, whereas we used to fear him. We war against the evil desires of the flesh which once we served. We cherish a hope which once was a stranger to us. Our tempers are softened; our tongues are being tamed; our bitternesses are getting sweetened; our ambitions are getting more spiritual; our vision of ourselves is enlarged and uplifted. We love to read the teachings of Jesus. We delight in the company of such as worship God. Indeed, in all that is permanent about us we may say without exaggeration that we are “new creatures in Christ Jesus.” Such are the things that guarantee our hope is founded in truth. That hope will not put us to shame.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

EDITORIAL

CHRISTIAN CHAPEL

Christian Chapel is located in Chatham county, three miles Southeast of Merry Oaks, N. C. The edifice is well located, neatly built and painted. The Conference Annual gives the value at $1,200 and the estimate is low enough—in fact too low. The membership numbers 160. Rev. J. E. Franks is the much loved pastor. It was the Editor's pleasure to be there last Sunday and to address the large and appreciative audience on the theme "Above All is Humanity." We were given good attention—a thing that all public speakers appreciate. We shall be glad when opportunity turns our footsteps that way again.

AN IMPORTANT QUESTION

We note that the recent General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church inserted in its rules that each of its ministers should answer this question: "Are you in debt so as to embarrass you in the work of the ministry?"

On the surface, that looks as if the Church is prying into personal affairs, but when we consider that when a minister is sorely handicapped when he is in debt and that the Church suffers because of it, the wisdom of knowing a minister's financial standing is apparent. Of course, the inquiry is made for the purpose of helping. The question at least registers the rising tide that the public is willing to place the servant of God above the starvation line.

NEWPORT NEWS, VIRGINIA

Rev. E. H. Rainey has taken up the work at Newport News, Virginia. His address is 1042—24th Street. In a letter to us we find the following: "I have taken up the work with the East End Christian church and find a good people. Most of them seem to be hearty supporters of THE SUN. Of course no member of the Church can afford to do without it." That sounds good to us to hear of a young man taking that view of the situation upon entering regular work. Some of our young men meet a little opposition, perhaps, in circulating the Church paper and they close up on the subject. The results tell. The churches that do great things are those whose memberships read the Church paper. One of the best things that a pastor can do is to get the Church paper into the homes of his people.

MISSING A GREAT OPPORTUNITY

The Men and Millions Campaign was, by vote of the Convention, extended to July 1. This was done that churches not already passed their goal might have that privilege and opportunity to do so. Several churches have appreciated the extension of time and have gone forward to show that appreciation. Others have done very little, and thus remain in that group of churches that have not caught the vision of a larger service. These churches are missing an opportunity that is great in their behalf. These churches do not see it in this way, but some day they will realize that the local church that does next to nothing for conditions beyond its own community will have to close its door.

THE INDUSTRIAL JEW

As representing nearly forty Home Mission Boards of America the Home Missions Council in this year of moral stress, economic change and social reconstruction is carrying out a program of co-operation in the strained racial relationships existing between the colored and white people of this country and between the native Americans and the recently arrived or industrially advancing Jews. The total Jewish population of the country is almost four millions. In the garment making areas of our great cities, in stores, brokerage houses, and arts of trade one emphatically realizes the part which the Jew is playing in our economic life. He still is the Jew though largely without allegiance to the synagogue or loyalty to the religion of his fathers. Still less is he affected by Christianity. Of all the million and a half in Greater New York there are no more than 2,000 Christians. Through its Committee on Plans and Policies for Hebrews the Home Missions Council is seeking for the various denominations doing work among Jews to formulate a literature, to outline a program and to develop a method that shall more earnestly and broadly meet the spiritual demands of the Sons of Israel.

THE DIVINE COMMAND TO WORK

(Manufacturers Record)

Every man is under a Divine command to work with no Divine permission to loaf. "Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work" is the voice of Almighty God, and from the day when it was uttered, all the way through the Old Testament and the New, there rings the cry of work.

"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread."

Under this Divine command no man can escape his duty to work without violating God's law.

The loafer, whether he be rich or poor, is violating one of the fundamental laws of creation and is living contrary to the teachings of the Bible.

Every man must work, not grudgingly, not as though work were a curse, but with his heart full of thanksgiving that he has the privilege of working. It has been well said, "Thank God every morning when you get up that you have something to do that day, which must be done, whether you like it or not. Being forced to work and forced to do your best will breed in you a hundred virtues which the idle never know."

The idler can never be happy. The loafer knows that loafing is a harder job than the hardest work he ever did.

As every man is under Divine command to work, no man has a right to yield obedience to any organization which says he shall not work.

The man who permits the labor leader or anyone else to say he shall not work is yielding his own God-given independence and violating the Divine command which tells him he must work.

The labor leader, whether he be of high or low degree in public office or the paid agent seeking to earn a living by keeping others from work, is assuming the prerogatives of the Almighty and undertaking to put at naught the commands of the Eternal.

It is false to say that every man has a right to stop working whenever he so desires. In one sense there is a modicum of truth in it, but broadly speaking every man is under obligation to his fellow-men to do his part in the world's advancement and in producing the things which civilization needs. This is pre-eminently true while the world suffers for lack of food and other products.

The farmer who loafs on his job adds to the sufferings of the world by lessening the food supply, and is therefore a slacker in the hour of the world's suffering.

The day laborer or the mechanic who seeks by inefficiency, or slack work, to lessen his output is robbing his employer as much as if were stealing money out of the cash drawer. More than that, he is robbing his fellow-men, and even his fellow-laborers, because only through increased efficiency and increased output can we find a way to solve the problem of supplying the world's needs and of providing the transportation with which to distribute that which has been produced.

The employer or the rich man who loafs because he feels that his wealth gives him the opportunity of doing so, is in this hour of world need not only violating the command of God, but he is robbing the world of productive potentialities which he makes of no avail by reason of his idleness.

Except for the preservation of health and that degree of rest and change which gives to a man the physical and mental strength for greater work, no man has a right to be idle until the world has been saved from the dangers which face it.

The command to love God and to love our fellow-man is no stronger than the command to work. He who fails to work to the utmost of his ability can lay no claim to be a follower of or an imitator of the Son of God, who labored mornung, noon and night, or of the Creator Himself, who issued the Divine command that men should work six days in the week and rest on the Sabbath, and through the sweat of their brows eat their daily bread.

If in schools and churches, in family life and on the public platform; if by the nation's leaders these everlasting truths from the throne of Heaven were properly proclaimed, idleness would become disreputable; the street corner and poolroom loafer would be regarded, as he indeed is, a vampire, sucking the nation's blood. The loafing rich man and the loafing or workshirking poor man would see themselves as God sees them, and as their fellow-men must see them ere the world gets back to a realization of the true dignity of work.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, GREENSBORO, OBSERVES TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Sunday, June 6, 1920, was a great day with the First Christian church of Greensboro. The occasion was the twentieth anniversary of the church. Programs had been prepared for the services which embraced both morning and evening hours. The morning hour was spent in song, prayer, and by giving out interesting data concerning the work. A historical sketch of the church was given by Mr. R. S. Petty, who was one of the first charter members. Mrs. L. M. Clymer read a paper covering the history of the church during the twenty years of history. The pastor read messages of greeting from Rev. J. W. Holt, Chairman of the Committee, who started the question of a church in Greensboro, and from Drs. L. F. Johnson, L. E. Smith, P. H. Fleming, and Rev. H. E. Rountree, former pastors of the church. Two of the church's former pastors, Rev. L. I. Cox who organized the work June 3, 1900, and Rev. J. W. Bolton, have passed to their reward.

During the twenty year period this church has been served by seven pastors. It was organized with twenty-four charter members, and for a long time was supported by the Mission Boards of the Church. During these years the membership has doubled twenty-one times, and it is no small matter of insignificance to note that the small company supported by the Mission Boards twenty years ago, now carries a budget of more than $3,000.00 per year of its own, and has within the last twenty months, raised nearly $50,000.00 for the Forward Movements of the Church.

At the close of the morning service the present pastor was re-elected and his salary raised to $2,100.00 for the next year.

At the evening hour the service reached its highest pitch. An excellent musical program, arranged by Mrs. C. N. Herndon and the Junior Christian Endeavor workers, was given. Following this the pastor preached the anniversary sermon, using as his theme, "The Place, Plan and Purpose of the Church." At the close of the service seven united with the church, bringing the number uniting with the church this Conference year to thirty-one.

As a whole the service was one of great interest, and helpfulness. Thanks to the above mentioned ministers for their contribution to the service. Their messages were filled with helpful words of commendation.

The present pastor of the church has been on the work twenty months, and during this period there has been seventy-two additions to the church, and every phase of the work has been steadily advancing, and during the whole period I have served here there has not been a single jar of any kind in the work. The church boards claim that the church is in fine condition for work and prospects for another year are very bright indeed.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT, Pastor.

June 7, 1920.

PLEASANT GROVE, VA.

The people in this community sought to honor their dead by having special services in remembrance of them and by bringing beautiful flowers with which to cover their graves. The large auditorium was well filled. There were delegations there from more than fourteen different churches. The pastor preached from Christ's words pronounced at the tomb of the brother of Mary and Martha: "Lazarus, come forth." We are not told that Christ ever visited the cemetery to bury the dead, but He did go with sorrowing sisters to bring to life Lazarus—their beloved brother. And today with His help we can have resurrected into our own lives the virtue and goodness of those who have gone before us.

Flowers were profuse. Roses, sweet peas, gladiolas, carnations, magnolias, poppies, and pinks, and many others had been gathered in lavished abundance by tender hands in loving remembrance of fathers, mothers, kinfolks, and friends. The flowers were in themselves cause for inspiration, having within them suggestion of the greatness and goodness of God. They bore of the fullness and beauty of the noonday sun and yet within their mysterious, tiny, hidden recesses might be seen the pale, far-away, bewitching beauty of mid-night stars. Little children, assisted by their elders carried them to the cemetery where they were distributed upon every mound after which Brother P. W. Farmer dismissed us with an appropriate prayer.

SUFFOLK LETTER

"Drives," "enthusiastic movements," "floods," have their place in the course of human progress, but the "regular," "constant," and "unfailing" activity keeps the world moving. There is a lot of waste in the flood in the river; it is the never-failing flow that keeps the mill going. It must be admitted, however, that were there no conditions for flood the stream would run dry and the mill would cease to grind. It is well, therefore, to recognize the value of the great movements and the regular work; the value of the brilliant enthusiast and the plodding worker; the spectacular performance and the obscure service. These opposites co-work in a common cause and are as essential as day and night. The day cannot say to the night, "I have no need of thee," of thee." Were it all day there would be no rest. Were it all night there would be no life. The flood of light that gives life to the world by day, makes the flowers and the harvests; but the quiet of the night reveals the stars and gives rest to earth's toilers.

The campaign, the revival, the enthusiasm of crowds, the inspiration of united effort, the publicity of talk, all give color and success to the work; the quiet, continuous, labors that follow discourage many souls; but it should not be so. Think of the roaring river at its flood. It falls over the great dam like a cataract; crowds stand on its banks and watch its mesh of waters. When the flood has passed the quiet stream continues to turn the wheels that grind the grain, and few stop to take notice of its serviee; but it is that whole year of turning the wheels that grinds the grain or lights the city. The river looks so tired when it is low; the people move so slow toward the church after the revival; but they keep the church going; they turn the wheels of the Sunday school, the Missionary Society, the Christian Endeavor Society, the Aid Society, and the fires that warm the building. The pastor's sermon may seem poor after the great sermon of the evangelist, but it is the bread that feeds the hungry through the whole year; and the congregation could make that sermon better by prayer, attention, and help. The congregation makes the preacher unless he does not possess the right kind of man out of which to make a preacher. Pastor and congregation must have confidence in each other and co-labor for the edification of the people and the salvation of souls; and the surest way to success is to plan and work for something beyond the local church. Nothing is so death-dealing in its results as self-centered service. The God-like in man works for others. God shows Himself in His works. "The heavens declare the glory of God." His whole creation is a revelation of His wisdom, benevolence, and love for man.

W. W. STALEY.

"TIMOTHY THOMAS WRITES AGAIN"

Dear Mr. Editor:—

I was in one of the leading towns in a distant State recently when I inquired of a friend as to the number of churches and the denominations represented in the town. Among the five denominations mentioned he named the Christian Church. I have recently, Mr. Editor, become very much interested in your Church so I decided to attend this particular one the first opportunity.

It proved, however, to be of another "faith and order"—it was a Disciples Church. I don't know much about the different denominations, but this one seems to go by two or three different names. In some places it is known as the "Church of Christ." I learn upon investigation that there is not a great deal of difference between these two faiths. If this is true, Mr. Editor, why can't they get together?

It is probably the Master's plan to evangelize the world through agencies organized and working along different lines, but why such a multiplicity of denominations—seems to me there are too many. As it is today there must be considerable overlapping and consequently much wasted energy. See if you can start something, Mr. Editor, that will bring these two denominations together. I will back you up. I do not like to think I am going to one church, and when I get there find I am somewhere else.

I think the Christian Church should advertise its principles more extensively. It seems to have the platform upon which the religious world must unite if it ever does.

I like the method adopted by the Third Christian church. They have the platform of the Church printed on a large roller screen in the rear of the pulpit.

By the way, the members of this church are much worked up now over the proposition of erecting a new building. The enthusiasm is really "catching." I feel it "taking" on me whenever I attend church there. I think I shall have to help them out some myself. I really think, Mr. Editor, that the entire denomination should have part in the building of this church. I understand that it is not only to be the largest in Norfolk, but decidedly the largest and handsomest church in the entire denomination. But that is characteristic of these Third Church folks. They never do things by halves. They are not satisfied with anything but the best.

At the evening service last Sunday the pastor showed various views of the church by use of the lantern. One cannot appreciate what the church is going to look like until he has seen it thus enlarged. It is really going to be a very magnificent structure. The first subscriptions are to be taken next Sunday. I think I shall make it a point to be there. I want to see the thing well done. These people have the reputation of being conservatively reckless when it comes to contributing to the Lord's cause.

I believe the Master is not satisfied with any but the most whole-hearted service. These people know how to give it and in such service they are being wonderfully blessed.

TIMOTHY THOMAS.

NEWPORT NEWS CHURCH

I took charge of the work at this church the first Sunday in June. I find the people here very active in all departments of the church's activities. During the Men and Millions campaign they went far over the top in the financial quota of the local church. The amount asked for from this church was $7,500.00 and $11,500.00 was raised. In addition to this eleven new members were secured for the church. All of this was accomplished without the aid of a pastor as the church was without a pastor the greater part of the time that the campaign was going on.

The most encouraging feature about the work here is the active part taken in the services by ex-service men. We have them filling such important places as church song leader, president of Christian Endeavor Society, Sunday school teachers, and in fact they seem ready and willing to assist in any way possible with the church work. The young people generally are very active in the church. May God send His richest blessing upon them and direct the efforts of their pastor as he shall attempt to lead them in the way of life.

E. H. RAINEY.

"Here at the station we find a man and his wife gathering maps and pamphlets, folders, guides for their trip to California. They wish to make all provision for the journey, and next to have a good knowledge of the land of their destiny. How wise we all are in relation to the affairs of this land of our sojourn! What a lot of drifters, floaters, aimless wanderers religiously there are all about us who don't know where they are going, but are on their way—somewhither."

STATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION

What speakers, delegates, pastors and visitors called the greatest session of the North Carolina Christian Endeavor Convention is now a matter of history. The speakers were men and women of international reputation and the speakers pronounced it the best State Convention they ever attended. The sessions which were held in the First Presbyterian church, Greensboro, N. C., were simply beyond description when thought of from the standpoint of inspiration, enthusiasm and actual work. We had no long speeches and complicated arguments. One speaker spoke eleven seconds over time. It was a Convention of business, interest, planning, and working to the point of actual service.

The closing session of the Convention can never die in the minds of the hundreds who went to the municipal theatre listened to the message of Arthur J. Smith, of New York, and witnessed that most excellent consecration service. Three things made it great to this writer: First, it was conducted by one of his strongest, and most amiable friends—Karl Lehmann—who had done more to influence his life for right than any living man. Second, one of the volunteers is a member of his own pastorate, and a very dear friend; and third, the great number who came in the last moments, and signed covenants for life service at home and across the sea.

Of our own churches in this State—Burlington, Graham, Haw River, Durham, Henderson, Raleigh, High Point, Reidsville and Greensboro were represented. Dr. A. B. Kendall, of Washington, D. C., brought us strong messages in the Convention. He, with Dr. Price of China. Dr. Dexter of Chicago, L. C. Little of Louisiana; Miss Grace Hooper of Nebraska; Karl Lehmann of Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Dr. Arthur J. Smith of New York were the principal speakers.

No one can tell the value of such a work as this. The writer is happy because he had a part in this great work in a small way. In spite of the fact that his own brethren in the ministry, and layman of the Conference have knocked him, and tried to cripple his pastorate in the Greensboro church he has no regret, for when he thinks of the fifty-nine who have volunteered for the mission field since June, 1919, and knows he had a small part in it, what does he care for the knocks? Keep it up, the other fellow will rest while you knock me.

The missionary goal for our church in the State was set at $1,000.00, and a committee composed of R. C. Boyd, High Point; Miss Sharpe, of Reidsville, and Miss Annie Simpson of Greensboro, were appointed to handle this affair. This money is a part of no special fund—will be handled for the Church by the Christian Endeavor workers through the churches and will be used as an inspiration to help encourage Christian giving among our young people.

The writer in closing this article wishes to thank the Endeavorers of our Church over the State who attended this Convention and helped the Convention in one of its very best sessions. Also to most heartily thank Rev. F. C. Lester of Graham—the only pastor of the Christian Church of North Carolina who attended the Convention. May this session inspire these young people of our Church to undertake great things.

The Work of Our Women

(All items for this department should be sent to Mrs. J. W. Harrell, Burlington, N. C.)

In the last issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN a notice appeared that the women of the Southern Christian Convention would supply a page in each issue of THE SUN and The Christian Missionary. We believe that this will be of untold value to our Woman's Mission work if properly conducted. I was asked to receive and arrange the matter for publication. So please do not expect me to do the writing. This is your page and we do most earnestly desire that every department of our work may be represented in these columns. We want items of news from every Conference Board, each local Society and each department of the work. When you organize a new Society, either Woman's, Young People's, Willing Workers, or Cradle Roll, write to me about it. Tell me of your plans and methods; perhaps it will inspire others to greater activity.

The month of June calls for the observance of Cradle Roll Rally Day. By all means observe this in your Society and make it the very best and happiest meeting of the year. Send us a report of your Cradle Roll Rally meeting.

You have doubtless received a copy of the program for Missionary Rally Day, prepared by Mrs. Fred Bullock. This splendidly arranged program should be given in every church some time during July or August.

The women of the North Carolina Conference have adopted Rev. H. S. Hardeastle as their representative on the foreign field. They are endeavoring to raise $1,200.00 annually by personal pledges for his support. Mr. Hardeastle is now at Yale preparing for his work. The women are gathering funds to him out as soon as he has completed his education. We hope that many individuals and Societies will send in their pledge of $10.00 to Mrs. W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

It is time to begin laying plans for the July meeting of your Missionary Society. This is Literature meeting. Have your Literature Superintendent write for leaflets to be used in connection with the program and also some for distribution. In our Society the Literature Superintendent has a leaflet or tract to hand out to each one at every meeting. This week we are giving the miscellaneous program for July.

Literature Meeting

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of God."

Hymn: "Tell The Story."

Quiet Time With Word, Joshua 1:1-9.

Possibilities of a Missionary Leaflet.

The Story of Mary Reed.

Song: "I Love to Tell The Story."

Presentation of souvenirs and enrollment of new subscribers to The Christian Missionary by Superintendent of Literature.

Missionary Doxology.

(Use some leaflet or tract for souvenirs).

Those who are using the Standard program or the program based on the Mission Study book will find that program in next week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Many of our Societies are not using the programs based on the study books and we believe they will find these miscellaneous programs helpful. Anyway, we will print them monthly. You will find splendid helps and suggestions for carrying out programs in The Christian Missionary.

Health Hints

TYPHOID FEVER

Typhoid fever is an acute communicable disease due to the presence, first in the intestinal canal and later in the blood of the sick person of a living moving germ, microscopic in size, called the bacillus typhosus. It is distinctively a filthy disease that in a great majority of instances gains entrance into the body through taking food or drink contaminated with some bodily discharge from a person who either has or has had it. Certain persons have the disease and recover from all symptoms of it but continue either regularly or intermittently to discharge the germs from their bodies. As with all the communicable disease it is most often contracted from the least suspected person, place or thing, because the amount of human excrement necessary to convey it is so small as to be unrecognized by the ordinary senses.

The typhoid death rate is said to be the best index of the sanitary intelligence of a community.

As the health of the State at large is governed by the health of the individual members of its population, it is therefore evident that public health is largely a matter of personal responsibility. As an individual who should be proud of his citizenship in this State, what are you doing about the conditions which are responsible for the shameful typhoid situation? You may ask what you can do, in reply to which it may be said that you may do much by precept and example. First: as a precept, lend your moral support to the activities of the State department of health in its campaign for sanitary closets and typhoid vaccination. Second: as an example, have nothing less than a modern sanitary privy on any occupied property you may own and take typhoid vaccine as a protection against the chance of infection from some insanitary privy belonging to some one else who has less intelligence and decency than yourself.

WHY TAKE A CHANCE?

Many people still attribute illness from communicable diseases either to Bad Luck or Providence when such illness is really due either to ignorance or criminal carelessness.

As an illustration: Typhoid fever is caused by a human-filth-borne germ which gains entrance to the body through a mixture of ignorance, carelessness, dirty hands, surface privies and flies.

Typhoid germs are in the bodily discharges of those who are either ill with the disease or who, as so called "carriers," harbor them after recovery from the symptoms of this disease.

Ignorance or criminal carelessness makes it possible for these germs to be collected in the filthy surface privy, whence they are transmitted to your food or drink by the equally filthy fly, by animals or by other agencies.

Let us repeat that it is neither Bad Luck or Providence that causes you to have typhoid fever; the typhoid fever germs are the sole cause and you literally "eat 'em alive" in the human filth you take into your mouth.

You should be ashamed to charge typhoid illness to Providence; to do so is a confession of your own ignorance. The illness was due to somebody's ignorance or carelessness, perhaps to your own.

Vaccination against typhoid, as an immediate preventive measure, followed by installation or properly constructed sewers and water systems or sanitary closets, will practically banish typhoid. As a good citizen of North Carolina, are you doing your part to banish this disease which is such a deadly reaper in this fair State?

Perhaps the greatest hindrance to public health work is the indifference of the individual who is willing to take the chance that he will have no illness from typhoid or other communicable disease. He has been fortunate in escaping for a period of years, and if he thinks about it at all, reasons that he can take the chance that he will continue to do so. Yet we know that a relatively fixed percentage of people, who continue to live under existing sanitary conditions, will die from typhoid because that chance is taken.

Stop taking chances. Take typhoid vaccine.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

A LIBERAL DONATION

The Children's Home Fund now totals in cash $9,088.40. Watch it grow. Let us make it $10,000 right quick.

There was one thing that happened in our report last week which has not happened before since we have had charge of the work, if our memory serves us right. Not a single Sunday school in North Carolina had a credit in the Sunday school monthly offerings. What a pity. It almost made me weep. So you see we have some disappointments, but we have many joys.

We wrote to one of our friends last week and told him that the Board of Trustees had decided to build the Children's Home and commence work right away, that we needed quite a lot of money to put up this much needed building, and that eighty little children had made application for a home since November and had been turned away for the lack of room. This week I received a letter from that dear old man enclosing a check for $3,000.00 to help in this great work. He is not a member of our Church, but is a man who has a big heart full of love and sympathy for the little helpless orphans and is willing to make some sacrifice that they may have a home and care.

We notice that quite a number of our Sunday schools have not made monthly offerings this year, and we want to say to these Sunday schools that if there ever was a time we should have your love, your prayers, your sympathy and your help it is now. The cry of the orphan child has never been so touching as now. So many fathers and mothers were carried away in the epidemic of "flu" that many mothers left with little children have done their best to keep them and provide for them, but the present high prices have made it impossible and many of them have sought the Orphanage as the only refuge for relief. We have taken one pitiful case after another till our building is full to overflowing and still many plead for a home.

We need your help as never before because we have sixty children to feed and clothe and prices have soared to the mountain top and are still going up.

I like the idea of giving one Sunday's offering to missions and one to the Orphanage, and the other two Sundays to bear your own expenses. Try it one year and see if your school does not make much better progress than ever before. Try it out.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a poor little girl six years old, yet I want to help the orphans. I enclose a dime and hope you will find a place for such a little offering. Lovingly.—Mary J. Keyton.

We appreciate small offerings, too, and they are gladly received. They are never too small for us to give your credit for them.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl ten years old. I enjoy reading the children's letters very much. I earn my money to pay my dues by sewing for Mrs. F. H. Pickard. With love.—Vula Fogleman.

Now you are a smart little girl to sew to make money for the orphans. We are glad to have you join our corner.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—We are enclosing our dues for this month. We hope the little cousins are well and happy. Love and best wishes for them all.—Frank and Herbert Burton.

You are faithful members of the corner. We appreciate your letters.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am a little girl nine years old and I have a little brother six years of age. We wish to join the band of cousins. I enjoy reading the children's letters very much. I have been chopping cotton lately and I wish the little cousins could help me. I wonder if you have any cotton. We are enclosing our monthly dues, ten cents each. I will write again soon. Love to all.—Nellie and Bill Hill.

We have no cotton; but have lots of tomatoes, potatoes, cabbage, etc.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I guess you thought the money which I told you to find enclosed was lost. I forgot to put it in, so I am sending 25 cents for May and June. Grandma is visiting us now. We enjoy having her very much. I have a baby brother three months old. I will not forget my money this time.—Dorothy Moore.

You must take good care of that little brother of yours. Little brothers are mighty nice to have around.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I haven't seen my daddy in nearly ten days. He is still working in behalf of the “Men and Millions Forward Movement.” I will be glad when he comes home. I am sending $1.00 for May and June. Grandmother Poythress was ill last month and mother and daddy took me up to Charlotte to see her. Mother let me go barefooted today for the first time and I am some happy boy. Love to all the cousins.—Oliver D. Poythress, Jr.

I saw your father a few days ago and he was looking fine. Your mother made you wear your shoes for a long time. Perhaps you couldn't find her any “Dogwood Blossoms.” I will send you some next year.—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley:—I want to join the band of children that sends money to the little orphans and writes nice, interesting letters to the corner. I wanted to join in May but Sister has been sick and couldn't write for me before now. She is up now and is down stairs with us again. I hope the little boys at the Orphanage are enjoying the farm like I am.—J. O. Atkins.

I am glad your sister is better. I know you miss her very much when she is sick.—“Uncle Charley.”

I hope you know what it is to be sensible to the presence of God. Religion seems to me to consist in that.—Erskine of Linlathen.

WHEN PEERIE SPOKE

“O, wee—why—me—my! O, come here! O, dear, there he goes! O, he'll be lost! Come back, Peerie, come back, pretty, pretty Peerie! O, boo-hoo—he's gone! And he had just this minute said my name for the very first time!”

That was exactly the way Lally was talking to herself when her little parrot escaped from his cage.

In and out among the acacia branches he went, hiding from Lally and then showing himself again. Then he flew over the canyon, down toward the sea!

Lally picked up his cage and ran after him. Once she saw him swaying on a holly bush. “Peerie,” she called. “Come back. Please come back! You'll be so cold when the sun goes down, and there is no one to put the cover on your cage for you!”

“How silly I am,” she added, as Peerie disappeared. “I've still got the cage, and the cover is at home, but Peerie—O, dear! O, dear! I wonder if I'll ever see him again?”

She placed the cage beside the bush, opened the door, and then hid. She thought perhaps Peerie would see his pretty wire house and just walk inside and hang head downward from the top perch, the way he always did when he first entered it.

“O, I know!” Lally jumped up. “I ought to have the kind of food he likes best. If he sees apple seeds in the dish, he will be sure to want them. Then he'll go in.”

She ran back to the house. There were some apple cores on the kitchen table, and these she brought back to the place where the cage was. She took out all the seeds and placed them in the middle of the floor of the cage. Then she hid again; but though she waited until tea time, no parrot came. Sadly she went home. All night she dreamed of poor, shivering Peerie.

The next morning she ran down to the same place. From a little hill she saw something moving inside the cage. “Peerie, Peerie! You came back back!” she was shouting, running swiftly now. A saucy mocking bird was there eating the seeds.

“You get right out!” scolded Lally. “They're not your seeds, and you're not lost. O, if only you were Peerie and could talk!”

She turned the cage around so that it would not be so easy for other wild birds to find the open door, and then she went home for breakfast.

“What shall I do now?” she asked herself when she had finished. Usually this was the time when she gave her pet his bath, cleansed his house, and put out fresh food and fater for him.

“I'll carry the sand and lettuce and seeds down by the bush. Maybe if he sees me working, he will fly down to my shoulder the way he does on other days,” she said.

She had taken the bottom out of the cage and was strewing it with fresh sand, when suddenly there came hoarse little call: "Lall-ee, Lall-ee-ce-ee!"

"Peerie!" cried joyfully Lally, jumping up and holding a bright lettuce leaf in one hand, the cage top in the other. From behind the holly bush came Peerie and perched on Lally's head. And that is the way she took him home.

She was saying to herself: "Maybe he was there all the time, and if he hadn't said my name I might not have seen him at all."—Yetta Kay Stodard, in the Presbyterian.

THE DOG THAT SAVED THE SHIP

For a dog to plunge four times into a raging sea, at the bidding of his master, to the rescue of shipwrecked sailors, argues pluck and devotion which would be reckoned heroism indeed in a man or boy.

Such was the feat performed one day by a black retriever, on the occasion of a wreck at Fraserburgh, Aberdeen.

During the height of a gale a bark was observed helplessly driving before the wind, and the greatest excitement prevailed among the anxious watchers on the headland when it was seen that the vessel was making for the rocks at Rosehearty.

The Fraserburgh Life Saving Brigade was telephoned for, but before they could arrive the vessel was among the breakers, with great seas sweeping over her. Fears were entertained that the ship would break up and the crew be lost.

There was no possibility of launching a boat, owing to the rocks and the violence of the waves. The crews were seen clinging to the trail board, expecting every moment to be engulfed. So great was their danger that they tied a rope to a piece of wood, in the hope that it would drift ashore.

Then it was that Mr. Shirran, a Roschearty banker, relieved their anxiety. He had a fine black retriever, which he ordered off for the stick. The noble animal at once obeyed. Plunging among the breakers, he made for the ship. The waves were too much for him, however, and he returned.

Again he was sent off, and many times he was completely lost to view. Once more he returned without accomplishing his object. It was pitiable to see the anxious sailors watching their only present hope of rescue.

The dog was again sent off, but without avail. Yet a fourth time the animal breasted the billows, and after a heroic struggle he reached the stick. The swim back, handicapped with the weight of a heavy rope, was a great task.

Several times the dog was overwhelmed, and hope was abandoned; but at last the victory was obtained, and the noble animal fell, panting, on the shore, dropping the stick at his master's feet.

Communication was thus established between the vessel and the shore. Immediately afterward, the brigade arrived, and with the life-saving apparatus, saved the crew from the wreck.—Young England.

MISSIONARY

IS IT NOTHING TO YOU?

Though the wide, blue water separates the East from the West, though the wings of the American Eagle are mightier than the voice of the Eastern nightingale, and the colors of Red, White and Blue more splendid than the bright Asian sunrise, yet just is the Creator whose hands decorated the West with the beauty of American roses and whose brushes painted the East with lovely cherry-blossoms and chrysanthemums; yet merciful is He who made the Heart of the West, big, tender and brave enough to plunge into the flaming fire of the recent world's war to save humanity.

Even today, the pitiful cry of the refugee and the sound of the firing gun are still ringing in your ears and your hearts are tender toward the wounds of the war, to those whose homes are torn and whose hearts are broken, and whose dear ones had their lives snuffed out like candles in the raging tempest of war. When you think of those heroes who now lie cold in the land where the red poppies grow your hearts ache for them because they died for humanity.

Horrible was the war, great was the suffering, and sad is its memory! Yet, we rejoice today because even now ere the smoke of the battle has scarcely cleared away, the wounds of the maimed have healed, and the groans of the dying have ceased and sad eyes are learning to smile and dance in the brightness and joy of a better day.

But the sorrowful fact we now must face anew is that out through the non-Christian nations, even away back before this recent war began, there was more of misery, more sorrow and tears, more tragedy and horror than the war brought to the world. Suffering was there ages before the war, and it is still there. Immorality, ignorance, heathenism have been and are spreading their suffering and death across the vast fields of non-Christian lands and it is the women and little children who suffer most. And the poor women, Oh! how tragic and horrible is their suffering!

Just think of woman who lives completely in the dark, stuffy back-ground, the woman who is actually a slave in cruel bondage and like a dumb driven animal bought and sold at the husband's convenience.

Look at rows and rows of pale, hopeless looking baby-faces behind the great machines of factories. These girls are working hard, twelve to fourteen hours a day, to provide the world with silk dresses. What comfort or hope, but death is there for them? Death? Yes, many of them are dying within the walls of those prison-like factories, and their names and shameful sacrifices are forgotten. Then see the pathetic little figures of the heathen children with dull, sad faces and emaciated bodies. The red sears on their little heads and tiny bodies show where hot irons have been used to let out the evil spirits of sickness.

Listen to the prayer of those young girls whose hunger and thirst for the Western civilization and freedom are great, yet are bound fast by the chains of heathen traditions and customs. Behold the sad conditions of over one hundred thousand Hindu widows who are under ten years of age, and over one thousand of them are not yet one year old. They are cursed and blamed for their husband's death, and are condemned to drudgery for their lifetime.

And think too of a poor girl whose soul and virtue are sold to be a toy or plaything of beast-like men who insult human virtue and murder human happiness. She prizes her chastity as much as you Americans, and she is just as modest as your daughter, your sister or your friends. To her purity is more precious than her sad, broken life. It breaks her heart to sell it, but it breaks it worse not to, because her aged parents are dying with want of food or medical care, and her little brothers and sisters are freezing by the cold fireless stove.

Now, should you be less tender toward these suffering people?

Is it nothing to you that they are weeping because of lack of a little comfort and hope?

Is your heart cold toward many who are passing through the dark valley of shadow of death at this moment without any knowledge of God or truth of Christianity?

Do you not care that there are millions of people today to whom the price of Calvary's cross, the hope of Resurrection the great saving power of Christ are unknown?

Shall you deny these people who, from darkness of misery and ignorance are crying out to you for light and hope?

Indeed, this poor beggar of starving India is bad off because he is cold and hungry, but he is worse off, for he does not know that he is a child of God.

This China man is a pathetic figure because his heart is heavy of his sins, but the greatest pathos is in the fact that he does not know that there are both pardon and saving power in Christ.

It is a great tragedy for this blind woman of scorching Africa to die of thirst, within reach of a spring, but the greater tragedy is that there is no one to tell her of it, or to lead her to it.

Today, you are proud of your nation, your states, your churches and yourselves for the beautiful work that has been done during the war to bring a righteous victory and to make the world better, but to our sorrow, we must acknowledge that there are yet thousands of unhappy men and women and children who are suffering in the cause of hideous heathenism, and living under the roof of false gods.

Because men must worship something, and since they know not God, the Father, they are trying and struggling hard to find the faith and comfort in worshipping the images and idols which they make but the terrible feeling of yearning for something better and higher and nobler is not satisfied.

Therefore in agony and great need, they are stretching out their arms toward your land of stars and stripes and crying out for your mercy.

In vain you Americans sacrificed and fought and died for Christ and Democracy unless you now make the Christian Democracy safe for two-thirds of this great world to whom the love of Christ the right of all mankind, the dignity of womanhood, the glory of childhood are unknown.

It is true that there are many non-Christian people and scores of poor suffering souls in this glorious country of yours. You cannot, therefore, help but feel the heavy weight of your responsibility and duty.

Often do we hear people say, "Why should we help those ignorant heathen far away in strange lands when there is so much to be done among our own people at home?"

Indeed, it is not meant for you to take the bread of your child and cast it to a dog; yet do not even dogs eat the crumbs which fall from the master's table?

Today your duty and my task is to speak and serve humanity and bring the weeping hearts and the wondering souls of the world to the throne of Grace on behalf of Him who still is saying, "Come unto me."

NEW YORK LETTER

Two great varieties of problems with which the Church has to deal today are those of the extreme rural communities and those of the great cities.

At present I have a chance to observe a few of the problems of a great city, possibly the largest one in existence. According to the latest census estimate Greater New York totals near eight millions of people.

In so large a city it is impossible to find much that is normal. It is a place where the rich are extremely rich while the poor are extremely poor. Also it is a place of many contrasts in speech, manners, customs, and religious beliefs; that one finds it very difficult to draw definite conclusions about its people. He must judge them more or less according to their general tendencies, for the great mistake of so many people has been to judge from the extreme cases either of the "down and outs" or of the "up and outs."

In sections of the city like Greenwich Village or Bowery, where it seems that poverty and vice is so rampant, there is little in the sound of a church bell for its people. Many of these people have never been inside of a church. Their condition has grown out of generations of sin and shame. In order to accomplish anything, Christian workers must go to their doors, administering to their needs not in words, but in deeds. Their physical needs must first be attended to, then they will realize the spirit of Christ that fed the multitudes and heal the lepers, that words from the hearts of the administrators will have meaning rather than otherwise be of emptiness.

The Salvation Army and a handful of missions have done a wonderful work for such needs of the city. By administering first hand, they have helped to make its environment more wholesome and fit to live in. But the task is far from completion. Prohibitionists have produced a marked effect, yet prohibition is negative, telling people what they shall not do. The work here must be positive, active, Christian work.

THE ECHOES OF TIME AND THE WHISPERING OF ETERNITY

The high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity. Isaiah 57:15.

Time and eternity are full of vital interest to many anxious waiting ones. The first had a beginning and will have an ending—the second has no ending, and will continue forever. What a deep, long, profound and stupendous subject to contemplate! It is too great and illimitable for our understanding, and we can only hope to realize the happiness which awaits the faithful and obedient loving children of God.

The echoing voices of time have been heard coming over the hills and valleys of the world bringing messages of gladness mingled with sorrow to the multitudes who have walked together the eventful ways of life. The sweetness and beauty which have been extracted from this experience has often brought inexpressible joy to these pilgrims as they went on rejoicing in hope of a better country. And I hear many of them repeating these impressive words from the pen of a beautiful and eloquent writer, and for the sake of their appropriateness they will be admitted here: "Don't keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Fill their lives with gladness. The kind words you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go while their ears can hear them, and while their hearts can be thrilled and cheered by them. The flowers you intend to put upon their coffins bring to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave. If my friends have alabaster boxes of fragrant perfumes laid away which they intend to break over my dead body, I rather they would bring them out and open them in my tired, lonely and sad moments that I may be cheered and refreshed by them while I need them. I rather have a plain coffin without flowers, a funeral without a eulogy than to have a life without the sweetness of love and tenderness. Let us learn to anoint our friends before hand for their burial. Post mortem kindness casts no fragrance backward over the weary way."

Some of the forces of nature have been developed, utilized and partly controlled by man but time and the tides have no one yet been able to change or reverse. The tides continue to ebb and flow as they did when first put in motion by the laws of nature, and by God Who created them. And it is not supposed they will be changed by any human effort, but will continue on as they have until the angel shall put one foot on the land and the other on the sea, and declare by Him that lives forever that time shall be no more. How mysterious and wonderful is this marvelous, silent and unknown power! Many would be glad to take hold the wheels of time and reverse them—but they cannot—they will not run backward but will speed on in their rapid motion towards eternity, until the last revolution has been made.

The echoes of time have been repeatedly heard in the softest melody as well as in the deepest and loudest thunder tones. By them many hearts have been quickened into nobler impulses, grander, purer and sweeter lives. Some, however, have lost the joy they imparted and are drifting down the way of life with sadness and disappointment. But there are so many splendid echoes coming over all the discouraged ought to be cheered by them, and be inspired with new life and greater activity. Now is the time to change the habits and correct the mistakes, because in some cases it will soon be beyond the possibility of doing so.

Between the silent stillness of the echoes of time the imagination still lingers and hears the soft, sweet voices of loved, fond ones, sounding with the same mellow tones as they did when life was new and strong. And some time we feel we would like to talk back to them and ask questions about many things which impress the mind, but as that cannot be we have to wend our way onward with ignorance of some things we wanted to know. And it is best as it is because even if we had any means of communication with the departed it would doubtless give a great deal of unhappiness. When the voice is once hushed in the last silence it is still forever. The idea of talking with the dead through a medium is absurd in the fullest sense, and contrary to sound reason; and we have no confidence in any such tricks and believe them to be the outcome of a wild, deluded imagination. To talk with each other, and not be together at all, nor see one another would give but little if any satisfaction, and would lead to continual unrest and unhappiness. To dream of our departed loved ones gives a little pleasure. The dreams are so natural and like life we are perfectly delighted with them even during their short moments, but when we awake and find it is just a dream how disappointed our feelings and what sad memories they bring fresh to the mind. Many have had these pleasant dreams and have been made exceedingly glad by them, but how sad was the waking and parting delusion of those times. None can tell but those who have experienced them. To be with those we love is happiness, and to be separated from them with no hope of seeing or meeting them is unhappiness.

Just a few of the echoes of time with their pleasant and unpleasant episodes have been noticed, the remembrance of which causes the heart to quicken at each pulsation with telling emotions of gladness or regret. The words redeeming the time, because the days are evil may be clearly seen over the pathway of time, and the reader of them can understand them in all the relations to the conditions surrounding him.

To enter upon the unseen and unknown eternity is a thought which ought to claim our sincerest and profoundest attention. Time and eternity may be illustrated with a ring. Cut a ring and it has two ends—one end representing the beginning of time, the other the ending of time. Then put both ends together by welding and you have an endless ring. So eternity is a circle of infinity, extending out into endless and boundless profession. Eternal hope is the one great thing which can inspire the soul and bring it nearer to God for if in this life only we have hope in Christ we are of all people the most miserable. A hopeless life and a hopeless eternity are most unpleasant to contemplate. But if we can have precious hope in this life and a glorious hope for eternity, we can entertain thoughts which are inexpressible and full of gladness.

Let each one say, I want sweet, inspiring hope which touches the heart with noble impulses, and helps the life to live for higher and better things. Out of self into that restful peace of mind with God we desire to come into the dear friendship and fellowship with the Lord. The imagination can hear the soft whisperings of eternity inviting us to be forever with Him.

All our knowledge of eternity is limited and imperfect. The Bible only mentions eternity once—but other words meaning the same are often used. The word is so profoundly impenetrable that only one time in the whole Book is it used and that is enough. And Isaiah the sublime prophet has the great distinction of using it. None but a great mind influenced by the spirit could conceive and portray such a lofty thought concerning eternity. May it be the happy privilege of every one to live forever in the presence of the high and lofty one that inhabits eternity.

REPENTANCE, CONVERSION

(By Rev. J. G. Bishop, D. D., Dayton, Ohio)

Nothing very attractive in that caption!

Perhaps not. Those two words, however, are big with meaning. The very first requirement of John the Baptist's prefatory gospel was, "Repent ye for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," (Matt. 3:2). Repentance was also the first required duty enjoined by Jesus Christ Himself, (Matt. 4:17, and Mark 1:15).

Doubtless the Apostles, and early ministers, in their teachings, patterned very closely after the examples thus given. Indeed after Christ had chosen His twelve Apostles, and sent them out under their first commission, two by two, the record says, "They went out, and preached that men should repent." (Mark 6:12). Of what other truths they preached under this, their first commission, no record is given, but the fact that this one, and only one truth of the gospel, is mentioned in this connection, certainly places a powerful emphasis upon the importance of repentance.

Paul, in his last journey to Jerusalem, which proved to be the closing up of his itinerary among the churches, in rehearsing some of his teachings, said, "I have showed you, and taught you publicly, and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greek, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," (Acts 20:21).

But, one may ask, why the emphasis on this first practical step the sinner must take to find his way to God and to heaven?

God our Father is not arbitrary in thus requiring repentance. Its necessity is absolute, growing out of the nature, or condition, of things. If the impenitent were translated into heaven while still loving and continuing in his sins, heaven would be a hell to him. Heaven is a pure and holy place. Its inhabitants are pure and holy beings. Those there from this world have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

Conversion

We use the term conversion here in the sense in which it is generally used to express that change which seems more vividly expressed by two other words. (1) Regeneration. Titus 3:5. "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration and renewing of the Holy spirit." Note closely the meaning of the words: "Regeneration."

(2) A New Birth. John 1:12, 13, "As many as received him, to them gave the power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name, who were born * * * of God." John 3:3, 8. Note carefully, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." * * * "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." (The italics are mine.) That the nature of this new birth is spiritual is made plain by verses 6 and 8.

At this idea of the New Birth, Nicodemus stumbled. He could not understand how this could be. No marvel that he stumbled. "The natural (unregenerated) man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." 1 Cor. 2:14.

But Nicodemus could not be excused for rejecting, or neglecting, a compliance with this doctrine of the new birth because he could not understand and explain its operation. So neither could he tell "from whence the wind cometh, or whither it goeth." He could both see and feel its effects. And so with genuine conversion—then and today. The feelings will soon be made manifest in the conduct of a changed life.

There is a necessity, an absolute necessity for this change of heart and life. Christ says, "Ye must be born again," and without this we cannot see, or enter into the Kingdom of God. This is not an arbitrary requirement. It is founded on a philosophical principle, growing out of the nature of the case. Man's nature being as it is, and things being as they are, man's happiness in heaven would require the new birth, or regeneration, even if the Scriptures said nothing about it. So far as we know, there can be no real delight, joy and happiness in this world, or in heaven, without an affinity between the individual, and the place, things, persons and society to be enjoyed.

If it were possible to translate the impenitent, unregenerated sinner into heaven, heaven would prove a hell to him. With him there is no affinity with what heaven means, its society, pure and holy beings, God our Heavenly Father, Jesus Christ our blessed Saviour, the holy angels, the innumerable company from "all nations, and kindreds, and people, and tongues, clothed in white robes, washed and made in the blood of the Lamb, which white robes represent the righteousness of the saints." Rev. 7:9-17. And into this heaven "There shall in no wise anything enter that defileth, worketh abomination, or maketh a lie; but they whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life." Rev. 21:27.

There are just two roads leading through this life; the broad road leading downward! and straight and narrow road leading upward—Heavenward. In which one of these roads are we travelling? To which place are we going?

"AND THEY TAKE HIM WITH THEM"

"When even was come, He saith unto them, let us pass over unto the other side." And the Word tells us they took Him with them. Oh, blessed thought, Jesus does not leave His followers to make the journey to the other side alone. Jesus is ready and willing to go with any child of God, anywhere God's children can legitimately go. But are we willing to have Him with us everywhere we go and in everything we do? Are we transacting business just as we would if we realized the presence of Jesus with us? If we knew He were standing by our side watching our weights and measures, would we need to change them?

Do we always seek pleasure and recreation in the place and way Jesus would share it with us? Or, are we sometimes going where we have to leave Him on the outside? There are places those nail-scarred feet will not go. There are things those dear nail-pierced hands will not touch. Sometimes it comes to the parting of the ways, where it means the giving up of our plans and desires, or giving up Jesus. The choice must be made between Jesus and the world. Which wins?

The true Christian does not try to change the walk He has mapped out for them, but follows wherever He leads. They avoid the places Jesus will not go. They turn away from the dance, the card party, the theater, the billiard room and the immoral picture show. They avoid the desecration of the Sabbath. Spirit-led Christians know the Lord's day is a holy day, instead of a holiday.

We need not only to take Jesus with us in everything, but we need to keep Him with us all the way. There is safety only when He is near. We are not able to battle alone with the storms of temptation; the trials and troubles which come to all here. We are not able to meet alone the terrific onslaughts of Satan, but we need the One who alone was able to put the tempter to flight, to meet our temptations for us.

The storms of life overtake us just as the storm overtook that little company that night upon the lake. When the storms of life come, we need, we must have, Jesus with us. There are times when no other hand can help. There are tempests which no other voice can still. Jesus always eases when His followers are overtaken by the rough winds of the world. He quickly and gladly responds to their first appeal for help.

There is not a trouble or trial of any kind which comes to one of His faithful followers, but He is ready to go with that one through it. He is master of them all and will send the great calm if we but appeal to Him, if we let Him take control. We are not to seek Jesus only when the cares and trials of life press upon us. The strength and vigor, all the powers of our life, a continuous, unbroken service belong to Him. Will you give Him what rightfully belongs to Him, that you may have the blessed Lord and Master with you always as you make the journey to the other side?

MINNIE LOHR.

Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

From thee is all that soothes the life of man,
His high endeavor and his glad success,
His strength to suffer and his will to serve.
But O thou bounteous Giver of all good,
Thou art of all thy gifts thyself the crown.
Give what thou canst, without thee we are poor,
And with thee rich, take what thou wilt away.

—William Cowper.

A SLIGHT MISUNDERSTANDING

One morning, according to the story, an old man was busy in the back yard with a saw and hatchet, when the next-door neighbor came to inquire after the health of his wife. The wife, it seems, had taken a severe cold. "Good mornin', Mr. Smith's," said the next-door woman. "How is Mrs. Smith this morn'?" "Jes about the same," answered the aged Mr. Smith. "She didn't sleep very well last night." "Poor dear!" sympathetically remarked the neighbor woman. "I s'pose that's her coughin,' ain't it?" "No, it ain't her coffin," testily Mr. Smith, still keeping his eye on his work. "It's a hen house!"—Boston Advertiser.

Muriel—I don't intend to be married until after I'm thirty.

Mabel—And I don't intend to be thirty until I'm married!"—Life.

Small Dorothy was very restless the other night and was unable to go to sleep. Finally she said: "Papa, please sing to me that always makes me tired."

A FRUITFUL EXPERIENCE

Forgiveness is a fruitful experience. Our past sins are not only a stain on the soul, a brand on the memory, and burden on the conscience; they are also a pollution of the mind, a fetter on the will, and a barrier to better word and deed. Forgiveness not only reconciles, but it cleanses, and unburdens, and unbinds, and renews. The joy and peace, and sense of freedom, the eager leap forward to selfish service arises from the sense of forgiveness in the soul. "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow," writes one penitent, revealing the thirst after holiness which forgiveness creates. "There is forgiveness with thee that thou mayest be feared," cries another, who had been in the depths, as he is moved to a new obedience. "The time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles," says one apostle, as he felt the potency of forgiveness to inspire him to sanctification.—W. M. Clow, in Presbyterian Standard.

MARRIAGES

STAFFORD-MONTGOMERY

In the early glow of a lovely morning and amid the sweet fragrance of flowers, a quiet, beautiful wedding occurred in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Montgomery, Burlington, N. C., when their only daughter, Sadie, became the bride of Melvin C. Stafford, on Thursday, June 3, 1920, at 8:30 o'clock.

The home was lovely in its decorations of green and white. An improvised altar, banked with ferns and quantities of roses and greenery artistically arranged, with an arch twined with ferns and flowers beneath which the couple stood, formed a lovely setting.

The bride wore a going-away gown of blue, with accessories to harmonize and carried a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. The ceremony was characterized by extreme simplicity and impressiveness. Only the immediate family and a few intimate friends were present.

Immediately after the ceremony by the writer, the young couple left by automobile for Asheville and other places of interest. The bride is one of our most popular young women, having lived here all of her life. She has, by her lovable traits of character, won for herself a host of friends. She is also active in church circles, being a teacher in the Sunday school and treasurer of the church. She is a graduate of Salem College.

Mr. Stafford is a promising young business man, being connected with the Holt-Granite Manufacturing Company, Haw River.

May the blessings of our Heavenly Father attend this young couple through life.

J. W. HARRELL.

BROWN-FRANKS

Bruce Lynn Brown, of Apex, N. C., and Miss Lillie Rebecca Franks of Apex, Route 2, were united in matrimony at the home of Mr. S. M. Rowland, near McCullers, N. C., Sunday, June 6, 1920, at 6:00 P. M. Only a few relatives and friends witnessed the ceremony. After the ceremony, a few of us accompanied the bride and groom to the home of Mr. Norman E. Brown, the groom's brother, where a sumptuous supper was served.

The groom is a member of Wentworth Christian church and the bride holds her membership at Catawba Springs of which church she has been organist for several years.

They will make their home in Apex, N. C., where Mr. Brown is engaged in the garage business. Best wishes for a happy life.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

THERRELL-FIX

Miss Carrie Meade Fix became the bride of Mr. Robert Hamilton Therrell, June 10, 1920, at 8:00 o'clock P. M. The ceremony that united them in holy wedlock was performed at the First Christian church by Rev. J. W. Holt, assisted by Rev. J. W. Harrell. The church was filled with interested friends and spectators attesting the popularity of this young couple. They left on the west bound train for Asheville, N. C., and other points of interest. They will be at home in Burlington after June 25. Many valuable presents were received from friends and relatives.

J. W. HOLT.

SLADE-JUDKINS

On the morning of June 10, 1920, at the Christian parsonage, Dendron, Va., Mr. Garney Clyde Slade and Miss Carrie Smith Judkins were united in marriage. They were unattended and immediately after the ceremony they left for Washington, D. C., and other points.

The groom is a successful farmer and a member of the Union (Surry) Christian church. The bride is a member of New Lebanon Christian church and daughter of deacon E. J. Judkins.

They have the best wishes of their many friends.

W. D. HARWARD.

HOLSINGER-BURKETT

On May 27, 1920, I united in matrimony Mr. Shackman Holsinger and Miss Nannie Burkett. I was in a revival meeting at Dry Run at that time, and by arrangement I met the happy couple at the home of T. C.

Myers in New Market and performed the ceremony there. Mr. and Mrs. Holsinger are members of the church at Concord, and live in the community there. They are splendid people and have the best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy married life.

OBITUARIES

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—

WILLINGHAM

Whereas it has pleased God in His infinite wisdom to remove from our midst on April 19, 1920, our beloved pastor and honorary member of the Ladies' Aid Society of Benlah Christian church, Phoenix, Ala., Rev. J. W. Willingham. Therefore, be it Resolved:

First. That in his death the Ladies' Aid Society has lost a faithful member, who was ever ready to devote his time and help in their work.

Second. That while we deeply feel the loss of our pastor and member, we will cherish his memory, and try and emulate his good work.

Third. That we extend the bereaved family our sympathy in this hour of sorrow and grief.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on our minutes, that a copy be given the family, and a copy be sent The Christian Sun for publication.

MRS. O. D. CHADWICK,

MISS JESSIE KINSY,

MISS ESTHER HIGHTOWER,

Committee.

KITCHEN

Miss Pearl Kitchen, daughter of Mr. E. L. Kitchen, of Wakefield, Va., departed this life May 21, 1920, aged twentyfour years, nine months and twenty-eight days. She was a member of the Wakefield Christian church and a graduate of the Wakefield High School, and a young lady of splendid qualities. She was conscious for some time before her going that the disease that had taken hold of her body would soon terminate her earthly life but death did not seem to have any terror for her.

After funeral service, conducted at the old family cemetery, the body was laid away to await the resurrection.

W. D. HARWARD.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—WILLINGHAM

Whereas God in His wisdom has called unto Himself our beloved pastor, Rev. J. W. Willingham. Therefore be it Resolved:

First. That in his death Beulah church has lost a faithful pastor, whose work will ever live.

Second. That while we sorrow and lament the loss of our pastor, we feel that our loss is Heaven's gain.

Third. That we extend the bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this hour of grief.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy be spread on our minutes, and a copy be sent The Christian Sun for publication.

RITENOUR

George Morgan Ritenour was born April 17, 1854, and died May 25, 1920, aged sixty-six years, one month, and eight days.

Brother Ritenour waited until rather late in life to connect himself with the church, but it was my pleasure a few years ago to receive him into the church and administer the ordinance of baptism by immersion. From that time until death called him up higher he was a faithful member of the church at Dry Run. He is survived by his widow, four sons, three daughters, and two brothers.

Funeral services were held at the home on May 26.

NEW TRAIN SCHEDULE

At the request of the North Carolina Corporation Commission, the schedule of the new trains between Greensboro and Raleigh, to be established by the Southern Railway System on Sunday, June 20, in connection with the inauguration of special summer service for the accommodation of tourist travel, has been changed and these trains will be operated as follows:

Leave Raleigh 6:00 A. M., arrive Greensboro 9:20 A. M.; leave Greensboro 7:00 P. M.; arrive Raleigh 10:20 P. M.

These trains, to be known as Nos. 15 and 16, will make all local stops and will be operated during the summer season to relieve the heavy through trains of local work.

At the same time the schedule of No. 11 will be changed so as to cut out the wait of two hours at Raleigh, its schedule to be as follows: Leave Goldsboro 10:35 P. M.; Selma 11:25

P. M., Raleigh 12:40 A. M.; arrive Greensboro 4:00 A. M. The schedule of No. 112 will be quickened to make arrival Selma 5:10 A. M., and Goldsboro 6:10 A. M., in order to make important connections.

Principles of the Christian Church

- (1) The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- (2) Christian is a sufficient name of the Church.
- (3) The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- (4) Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
- (5) The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all.

STRUGGLING FOR EXPRESSION

This is not the only age that has given birth to changes and reforms. The pages of history are dotted with changing events, passing customs and time-worn theories. To say that this age surpasses all other periods in such is not to overestimate the situation. In former days changes have come in sections at a time, whereas all parts of the world seem to be undergoing a change now; and thus the struggle for expression is world-wide and not local.

The thoughts of men are expanding—expanding in the realm of Brotherhood. Men are seeking for an expression of love for all humanity, and yet the forces that curb our actions and check our activities are trailing in the dust and refusing, it seems to us, that full and free and unlimited expression that is so much needed in a time like this.

The other day we found a very busy business man sitting in his car all alone in a mood of seemingly deep and serious thinking. Approaching him, we soon found that he was thinking over some things that had recently come under his observation. "Where is that fine altruistic spirit that we developed some months ago?" this business man queried. Let us quote again from his conversation: "The small sect and class spirit seems to be getting stronger in the absence of any united force to unify the world feeling that we are brothers." That is the tragedy of the situation. Great and good men have their hopes and hearts centered upon a new world, while every class and sect is endeavoring to see how little and selfish that it can be; how little it can give and how much it can get. The recent attempt to get all denominations to become a part of a world program was almost a failure. Each communion was afraid of losing something, thus refusing to accept one of the first and fundamental laws of nature—that to live there must be something given up.

The far flung battle line that reached around the world to curb the Hun's career carried with it the prayers of a united people. As the line was drawn to home territory a new world was to be built. November 11, 1918 has been proclaimed as the second greatest event of the world, and yet it may be a day of mourning for us. The world's idealisms seem to fall on that day. There flashed across the country the news, "the war is over"—and all of us accepted it without a doubt. All races fought together, homefolks of all colors united to aid the boys at the front, while the nation's big heart beat with single stroke. It was a world and not a party issue. During the war all of us had a part, but we were content to turn over the settlement of affairs to politicians who have always loved parties more than people.

"The war is over!" Is it? Not at all. "It is the last war," we hear some one say. Never so long as selfishness lurks in our hearts and men distrust each other.

The world is struggling for expression. The voice of brotherly love is crying above the swan song of greed. There is a mighty fight going on between the old order and the new. The Brotherhood of Man is about to be wrecked upon the rock of "variance."

Thus the case is presented. There is a cure, there is a remedy, there is a balm in Gilead. The Church has it, and if our senses are not unbalanced, the ministers have it in their hands to lead in giving the world expression to its heart throbs. Today is their time and opportunity to bring chaos and confusion to conciliation and write above the storm, "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

"Behold all things have become new"—except a certain type of sermons that continue to be used. To shun hell is not the aim of religion. To be happy, alone, is only half the joy of being a Christian. To get men to cry in church is not a full and final testimony of a changed heart. Tampering with the feelings of human beings without a program to translate those feelings into activity for humanity's good is but slow, yet sure, suicide. To get a man saved is to get him interested in helping to save others. Men are getting tired of accepting Christ and being "canned" and abeled "Christian" without having "in action" also added. The ministers have always led in all great things. Will the voice of the pulpit rise to the occasion and sound that keynote that shall give expression to the struggle of human hearts?

*"It is all right to spend money to make character;
It is all wrong to spend character to make money."*

PROHIBITION LAW IS UPHELD

What is considered to be of great interest to lovers of decency and morality is the recent decision of the Supreme Court that national prohibition is constitutional, and therefore, must stand. The decision was rendered on June 7 by Justice Van de Venter, the Court deciding by unanimous vote. The following conclusions of the Court are reprinted in full below:

"1. The adoption by both houses of Congress each by a two-third vote, of a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution sufficiently shows that the proposal was deemed necessary by all who voted for it. An express declaration that they regarded it as necessary is not essential. None of the resolutions whereby prior amendments were proposed contained such a declaration.

"2. The two-thirds vote in each house which is required in proposing an amendment is a vote of two-thirds of the members present—assuming the presence of a quorum—and not a vote of two-thirds of the entire membership present and absent. Missouri Pacific Railway Company vs. Kansas 248, U. S. 276.

"3. The referendum provisions of state constitutions and statutes cannot be applied, consistently with the constitution of the United States, in the ratification or rejection of amendments to it. Hawks vs. Smith—U. S. 276—decided June 1, 1920.

"4. The prohibition of the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation and exportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes, as embodied in the eighteenth amendment, is within the power to amend reserved by Article V of the constitution.

"5. That amendment by lawful proposal and ratification has become a part of the constitution and must be respected and given effect the same as other provisions of that instrument.

"6. The first section of the amendment—the one embodying the prohibition—is operative throughout the entire territorial limits of the United States, binds all legislative bodies, courts, public officers and individuals within those limits, and of its own force invalidates any legislative act—whether by Congress by a state legislature, or by a territorial assembly—which authorizes or sanctions what the section prohibits.

"7. The second section of the amendment—the one declaring 'the Congress and the several states shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation'—does not enable Congress or the several states to defeat or thwart the prohibition, but only to enforce it by appropriate means.

"8. The words 'concurrent power' in that section do not mean joint power, or require that legislation thereunder by Congress, to be effective, shall be approved or sanctioned by the several states or any of them; nor do they mean that the power to enforce is divided between Congress and the several states along the lines which separate or distinguish foreign and interstate commerce from intra-state affairs.

"9. The power confided to Congress by that section, while not exclusive, is territorially co-extensive with the prohibition of the first section, embraces manufacture and other intra-state transactions, as well as importation, exportation and interstate traffic, and is in no wise depended on or affected by action or inaction on the part of the several states or any of them.

"10. That power may be exerted against the disposal for beverage purposes of liquor manufactured before the amendment became effective, just as it may be against subsequent manufacture for those purposes. In either case it is a constitutional mandate or prohibition that is being enforced.

"11. While recognizing that there are limits beyond which Congress cannot go into treating beverages as within its power of enforcement, we think those limits are not transcended by the provision of the Volstead act, while liquors containing as much as one-half of one per cent of alcohol by volume and fit for use for beverage purposes are treated as within that power. Jacob Rupert vs. Caffey, 251 U. S. 264."

This means that the liquor business in this country is doomed, so far as legal right to sell is concerned. Of course, most of us thought so all the time, but a few have continued to howl and complain.

"He who does nothing for others does the same for himself."

HENRY CLAY KING

Brother Henry Clay King, Senior Deacon of Long's Chapel Christian church, passed to his reward June 17, 1920. Brother King was one of the Editor's closest friends and rarely ever failed to call to see us when he came to Burlington. It was our privilege about two years ago to preach several times at Long's Chapel for Brother W. C. Hook, pastor at that time. Brother King was always there, the first to meet us and the last to leave our side before departure. He loved his church, his neighbors, his friends, and always had good things to say about them. He was cheerful, full of sunshine and always ready to enjoy a clean and wholesome story. The people loved and respected him. He was the kind of man that sat in the "Amen corner" and every member knew his sincerity when he spoke. Brother King not only loved his local church, but was interested in all the workings of his denomination. THE CHRISTIAN SUN was next to his Bible and he made it a point to remind the younger members that they should have it in their homes. His friends mourn his passing; his children call him blessed. Truly a good and great man has left us.

PASTOR AND PEOPLE

NOTICE

The annual session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday School Convention will meet with the Isle of Wight church on Wednesday and Thursday, July 21-22, 1920. This announcement is an invitation to every school in the Conference to plan now to be represented.

It is earnestly desired that all life-reeruits in the Conference be present, especially on the second day of the Convention for a recognition service. Pastors and superintendents, help us to make this service a success.

G. O. LANKFORD, Gen. Sec.

NOTICE

There will be a meeting of the Educational Committee of the North Carolina Conference at Elon College, N. C., during the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention scheduled to meet July 13-15. All applications for ordination, licensure or admission to the Biblical class at the coming Conference, should be made at this meeting. All candidates and others having business with the committee are requested to be present.

N. G. NEWMAN, Chairman.

Elon College, N. C.

NOTICE

The North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention will meet at Elon College, July 13, 1920, at 8:00 P. M. The General Secretary is making the effort of his life to "pull off" the biggest Convention yet. As chairman of the Music Committee, I am asking you to begin to plan now to attend every session of the Convention and take an active part in the music. The Convention last year voted that we use "Awakening Songs," a book published by The Redeemer Co., Commercial Building, Philadelphia, Pa. If you do not have a copy of this book, please get one at once and get familiar with the music. If you sing, be sure to bring your book. If you play an instrument in the orchestra, be sure to bring that instrument. The Music Committee will be glad to have your help. Come.

Yours for better music,

GEO. M. McCULLERS, Chairman,

MRS. J. W. PATTON,

PROF. E. M. BETTS,

MISS MAY STEPHENSON,

JOHN R. BROWN,

Music Committee.

NOTICE, PLEASE!

The second annual Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Christian Conference will meet at Elon College, N. C., July 13, 14, 15, 1920.

Every Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Society within the bounds of this Conference should be represented with a live, wide-awake and progressive delegation. Will you do your part? If you have an orchestra or a part of one, please take it with you to the Convention. "Awakening Songs" the song book adopted by the Convention last year will be used. Please bring all you have. The opening session will be at 8:00 o'clock, Tuesday evening, July 13. There will be six sessions of the Convention and we want you to attend every one of them. Get busy and stay busy—talking, preaching, and boosting the Convention, please, until same becomes history.

C. H. STEPHENSON, Gen. Sec'y.

PLEASE DO

As an officer of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Christian Conference whose business it is to work in the interest of Christian Endeavor, I have sent report blanks to each church that has a Society, so far as I know. Not knowing the officers of the Societies, I wrote the Sunday school secretary asking that the blank be handed to the proper person, filled out and returned to me at an early date. Please do this.

My list of churches having Christian Endeavor Societies may not be complete. I have no way to find out except as some one shall tell me. Here is the list as nearly correct as I am able to get it: Burlington, Chapel Hill, Danville, Elon College, Graham, Greensboro, First church, Haw River, Henderson, High Point, Morrisville, New Providence, and Raleigh. If you know this is not correct, please tell me what is wrong. Please do.

If your Society has not elected its delegates to the Convention at Elon College, July 13-15, then do so at once. Please do. We want every Society represented in this the biggest and best Convention. Elon is the place we all like to go. "Come on, let's go."

REIDSVILLE

On June 2 we began a series of evangelistic meetings with the Reidsville church and continued for ten days. We had no other ministerial help except one sermon preached by a Baptist pastor. The interest in the meeting was fine from beginning to end. The attendance was good throughout the entire meeting. There were a goodly number who professed faith in Christ and seven reconsecrated themselves to the Lord's service. Twelve united with the church consisting mostly of heads of families, making a total of about twenty-seven added to our church roll this Conference year.

The work here, generally speaking, is encouraging. We are planning and praying to make this our best year for our Reidsville church.

W. L. WELLS.

Reidsville, N. C.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD

As Brother Lee Johnson, the beloved pastor at Wake Chapel, was not able to be present at the memorial exercises, I preached for his people. The cemetery was cleaned off nicely and every grave was garlanded with flowers. Friends of the departed were there from a distance, and every old acquaintance was renewed, and many a new acquaintance was formed. The memory of joys that are past are sweet to the memories, but are mournful to the soul.

The First Christian church at Raleigh, N. C., recently accepted the resignation of their pastor to take effect the first of next month, on account of his health. I preached for him a few times during his vacation. He is much improved and is now ready for evangelistic service, wherever God, in His providence, may call him.

Brother B. F. Black had charge of the work at Mt. Auburn and gave great satisfaction to the entire community. I have been filling my appointments regularly since my return from Florida. The church at Mt. Auburn, under the splendid leadership of Brother J. A. Kimball and others, secured, in cash and good pledges, for the Men and Millions Forward Movement, over fourteen thousand dollars. Yet this is one of our small rural congregations. I preach there once a month, on the second Sunday. I demand no salary. Their free-will offering to me, in cash, every time I go, is thirty dollars. One-third of this I promptly give to the treasurer to aid in paying the pledge of the church for Forward Movement.

The protracted meeting at Mt. Auburn will begin the second Sunday in July. Quarterly conference will meet on the previous Saturday at 3:30 P. M. If we work and pray as we should, I see no reason why the membership of the Christian denomination may not be doubled in less than two years. Let us close our shields and press for victory.

DANIEL ALBRIGHT LONG.

SUFFOLK LETTER

This letter treats of pastorates, parsonages, and pastors. By pastorate is meant a church, or a group of churches, in charge of a pastor. The word parson means a minister or shepherd of a flock or congregation. There is no law in a congregational form of government to compel churches to group together into a pastorate; but common sense and religion should lead churches, unable to employ a pastor alone, and adjacent to one another to unite in a group and agree upon a pastor. If churches of the same denomination cannot unite in work and worship how can any one hope for united effort on the part of different denominations? Many of the weak points in rural churches could be corrected by voluntary union into groups of churches served by a resident pastor.

Pastorates call for parsonages. A parsonage is the resident of a parson, and a parson is simply an ecclesiastical person. Two or more churches united into a pastorate could easily erect a parsonage in a central position to make the congregations easy to reach by the pastor, and the pastor easy to reach by members of the congregation. The pastorate, whether a single church, or a group of churches, should provide a parsonage for their pastor; and, in rural districts, it should have sufficient land attached for horse, cow, garden, and such acres for grain and hay as would make living expenses economical. Such provision would supplement salary and make it easy for the congregation to pay their pastor. Every consideration makes it obligatory upon congregations to conserve their strength by union into pastorates large enough to support a pastor. Any other policy, in this age, means loss if not failure in Kingdom work. A resident minister of ordinary talent is of more value than a brilliant preacher residing at a distance. The parsonage is a building; the pastorate is a group of churches; the pastor is a person.

This person, or parson, is important; and he is more important, in this day, as a pastor than as a preacher. A century ago, preaching was the main work of the minister. Books were few, newspapers were rare, education was limited to the few, and the preacher could hold the congregation for hours. He was the source of information without question. Communities hung on the message from the pulpit; but now almost every home reads its paper; children crowd the school rooms; travel and telephone communication increase intelligence and information. The sermon does not have the same attraction, nor the same acceptance as in former days. The pulpit has not lost its force and its power, but it does its work largely through pastoral service. The preacher must visit the sick, come into touch with people in a personal way, and that must be done outside of the pulpit. The preacher touches the congregation; the pastor touches the individual. The non-resident preacher cannot do the work of a pastor. The great preacher fits only a few congregations; the great pastor fits any congregation. Compare the preaching of Jesus with His service for the afflicted and see how He set the example for us. Pastorates, parsonages, and pastors go together; and they go together beautifully, mutually, and successfully.

W. W. STALEY.

PUPIL OF FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE

While many were celebrating the centenary of Florence Nightingale as a tribute to an historic figure, Mrs. Emma Randall Lawrence, of St. Paul, remembered the "Lady of the Lamp" as her personal friend and instructor. Mrs. Lawrence was a student nurse under Miss Nightingale in her famous Surrey Nurses' Training School and Hospital. When the Nightingale Centenary was observed in St. Paul, Mrs. Lawrence, now 76 years old, donned her neat gray and white stripped uniform of the Nightingale Training School with its gaufered bobbinet cap and thus gave an intimate touch of the "Angel of the Crimea" to the gathering.

"The chance to be a support and comfort, to make others happier to lend our strength to those who are weaker, to pass on to another something of the blessedness God has given us—is the supreme honor of life."

DEVOTIONAL

HOME

Whether living in an humble tenement with poverty's grim look, or in palatial luxury and beauty there is something about the word home which has a sweet sound and a special charm in it. There is a natural instinct in everything for home life and association. Strange it is too, that everything can find the way back home after being away for a long time. This is noticeable in animals and birds.

As much as has been said, sung and written about this subject, it has not all yet been told, nor have precious thoughts and delightful memories of it ceased to flow through the soul, still filling it with gladness. It has lost none of its zest and sweetness, and sounds into delighted ears just as new and fresh as ever.

The busy, rushing crowds passing in so many different ways are going home. After attending to the duties of the day, week, month, or year, they are looking for home. Coming home—going home are dear words to them, and all up and down the private and public ways there is a very glad coming home—a pleasure inexpressible. It trembles in the heart with feelings too glad to tell. Actions only and looks can portray the transporting pleasure of these deep feelings. Travelers, visitors, fathers, mothers, brothers and sisters, acquaintances, friends, lovers, relatives, business folks from short and long distance, are coming home. Yes, coming home today, tonight, tomorrow, or soon. Many a good-bye is said—a few words, some tears, sad looks mingled with hopeful ones—then they are speeding away round the curve or passing over the waves of the deep, homeward—homeward bound. Amid this going home many take their last passage. They are going to their earthly homes for the last time. There are many at home awaiting their coming with anxious look, and the meeting will be a joyful one. The greeting will be unusually interesting and happy, and they will appreciate the old home as never before. What they have seen of the greatness and grandeur of the world has delighted and helped them to understand it better. What they have seen—the great things—the fine cultured people they have met, and many other things have wonderfully impressed them. The old home may look very common in comparison, but there is a restful, natural, helpful, comfortable feeling about the dear old home they did not find away. When you sit once more in the old home chair you feel happy and more comfortable. After getting home you unbuckled, unlocked, and laying aside your visiting formality the style of the times, putting off assumed expressions and adjusting home-life impressions, you feel just natural and good. Your style of manners and your education may not suit the exacting so well, and you have to be more particular and careful while in their company, but the old folks and the young folks at home know how to take you just as you are, and better understand your ways, means and fashions.

Do not forget that there were many at home who could not get away. Different causes kept them at home. Some did not have the means, nor wealthy relatives and willing friends to take them to the seashore, and other places of healthful and prominent interest. If they could they gladly would have gone, and it was not always convenient with them to have ample means at their command. Others are too old and infirm to stand the strain and rush caused by traveling. They have almost completed their other journey, and are waiting patiently to take passage over the great dividing line. Many passionate impulses, good or bad, perhaps both, have engaged their time, but they are looking for the immortal crown and everlasting prize. While in this vale of changing conditions, they are looking for endless joy in a country where they never get needy nor grow old. Through the imagination and the realization also we see many diseased, sick, paralyzed and helpless ones in the old home, or in their stopping places, who would like so much to move once more upon the stage of human activity. Let us not forget these ones left at home, for these are those who need our prayers, help in some way, and our sympathy. These home-stayers are heroes of patience and self-denial. Deal with them gently, talk to them kindly, and have patience as they bear the heavy burden of affliction. For, when on the summit of physical power, or in the midst of health, means activity, industry or human greatness, when your admiring friends circled gladly about you with words of honor and praise, how proud you stood before them.

Please let me congratulate you, who stay home most of your time, on the blessings which our Father has already bestowed, and may each one of you, though strangers to me, be greatly cheered with the glad thought of living in the palace of the King which will be immortalized with everlasting life.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

THE LEGAL RIGHT TO REMAIN IGNORANT

The legal right to remain ignorant is annually granted to thousands of children in States where child labor and education laws are backward. According to an account of the administration of the Federal Child Labor Law soon to be published by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, only 783 children out of 19,696 to whom certificates were issued, or less than four per cent, had attended or completed the eighth grade, though completion of the eighth grade is generally regarded as necessary to secure even the rudiments of an education.

Only one of these five States has a compulsory school law for children up to sixteen, even when unemployed, and that law permits many exemptions. Both parents and children, through ignorance of the value of schooling, are apt to take advantage of the legal right to dodge an education. In a recent study of school attendance in Cleveland it was found that 2,550 children were so irregular in their attendance at school as to interfere with their studies, and that the reasons for staying out of school were in many cases trivial. Among foreign groups, children were kept at home on bargain or market days to act as interpreters for their mothers.

In addition to lax school attendance laws, three of the five States permit children sixteen years old and younger to go to work even if they cannot read or write, or have never been to school. Two require only that the child applying for work shall have gone to school for a brief period during the preceding year. Among the other States in the United States twenty-three require the completion of a specified grade, and twelve more and the District of Columbia require the ability to read and write.

None of the five States where children were granted certificates makes any provision for continuation schools in order to make up for defective education in childhood. Only eighteen States in the United States have laws which make such provision. England, under the Fisher Education Act, which went into effect April 1, is rapidly establishing continuation schools throughout the country, and will shortly compel attendance up to the age of eighteen. Every effort is being made in that country to get teachers with the best training and to arrange suitable courses of study for working children, in order that they may have every opportunity not to grow up illiterate because they have been unfortunate.

For The Rural Dweller

BEAUTIFYING THE HOME GROUNDS

Cultivate Shrubby.—To get the best results from the shrubbery the soil around it should be cultivated for the first few years, or at least until the ground is completely shaded by it. By keeping the ground stirred and any weeds or grass pulled out, one will have done a whole lot toward insuring success with newly planted shrubbery.

Trim the Grass off the Walks.—Nothing makes the place look more ragged than to let the grass grow out over the edges of the walk. Therefore, the thing to do is to keep it trimmed off. Use a square shovel or any other convenient implement and cut it off square, and in a straight line. The best way to do this is to stretch a line along the edge of the walk so the edges can be kept straight.

Keep the Dirt Walks Rounded.—Keep the walks well rounded if they are dirt walks. To keep these walks in the best condition one should, at least once every month or six weeks, throw the dirt up from either side of the walk into the center, rake it over with a garden rake and pack it down, so as to give a well-rounded effect. If this isn't done every now and then, the result will be that the walk will soon be flattened out and will naturally be unattractive.

Still Time to Plant Flowers.—There is still time left for planting some of the summer and fall blooming flowers, such as petunias, nasturtiums, etc. It would have been better to put these in earlier, but if you haven't put them in go ahead and put in a few now.—The Progressive Farmer.

BATTLE WITH THE WEEDS DURING JUNE

It has been well said that June is a month of weeds. And for this reason, one of the first suggestions that comes to me as of the most important things to be done on the farm during June is the fighting of noxious weeds. Weeds passed by during June will mature seed later and restock the farm for another season. If we fight weeds successfully, we must have the tools in proper shape. The plows should be at "razor edge" all the time. A dull sweep that bruises weeds instead of clipping them off when it strikes, is not only lost motion, but means the difference oftentimes between a clean crop and a weedy one. A little shop on every farm where the plows can receive sharpening at the noon hour and at night when the men have come from the fields, is one of the greatest assets to modern farming.

What is said of the plows, can be said of the hoes. Although, personally, I do not like to say very much about hoes in June—for we like to cultivate the crops in such manner early as not to need the use of the hoe later—nevertheless, one must needs use the hoe some, and a dull one is not only more laborious to use, but does not do as good work as a sharp one. For this reason, one will get excellent results by carrying a good steel file to the field, and giving the hoes a few straps every once in a while. I have little sympathy with the fellow who thinks it a loss of time to stop and file his hoe or sharpen his plow.—A. M. Latham, in The Progressive Farmer.

IT COULDN'T BE DONE

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he with a chuckle replied
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one,
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in with the trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That "couldn't be done"—and he did it!

Somebody scoffed: "O, you'll never do that—
At least, no one ever has done it;"
But he took off his coat and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew—he'd begun it.
With a lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That "couldn't be done"—and he did it!

There are hundreds to tell you it cannot be done:
There are thousands to prophesy failure:
There are millions to show you, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it;
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That "cannot be done"—and you'll do it.

Ireland is still facing desperate troubles of rioting and terror. National disorder seems to be on the increase.

The Work of Our Women

(All items for this department should be sent to Mrs. J. W. Harrell, Burlington, N. C.)

GOALS

It is our purpose to emphasize the goals set by our Woman's Convention Board. Do not fail to read our President's report which appears in this issue, and note the goals recommended by her and adopted by the Convention.

Our financial goal for the biennium has been increased to $25,000.00. This is a challenge of a great and worthy task. It calls for faith in our Heavenly Father, and it may call for sacrificial giving. Shall we meet the challenge? The women of the Southern Convention will meet this challenge with a faith that takes no denial. It will mean work and faith and sacrifice, but we are willing, yea glad to render any service for our Master that His Kingdom may be extended in the earth.

Our organization goal calls for fifty new organizations during the next two years. It will not be difficult to reach and pass this goal. There are many churches where there are no missionary organizations whatever. Some are just waiting for some one to come and help them. They want to organize but do not know how to go about it. Write to your Conference President, or to Mrs. W. A. Harper, President of the Southern Convention Board, and they will assist you.

Our women are ready and willing but leaders are not available. There are many splendid women, with qualities of leadership and great capabilities. The great need is to discover this leadership and train and develop it.

There is some key woman in every church, who would be willing to undertake this work. It will mean so much to you and to your church.

Shall we not catch the vision of a larger missionary service. "Where there is no vision the people perish." Pray that God may give us a vision of the world in its need and sorrow. Pray that He may give us a vision of the opportunity and responsibility which is calling us to a larger service.

Miss Bessie Holt organized a Woman's Missionary Society, also a Young People's Society in Danville, Va., recently.

The Missionary Cradle Roll of the Burlington Christian church held its annual rally Monday afternoon, June 6, at the church. The superintendent and her assistants had arranged a splendid program. A large number of mothers and babies were present to enjoy this most happy occasion. At the close of the program the mite boxes were collected. Amount received through mite boxes and dues was $10.41. All were invited to remain for the social hour when refreshments were served. We now have thirty-five babies on our Cradle Roll.

Program For July

(Reprinted from the Christian Missionary)

(Based on chapters 3 and 4 of "Christian Americanization," The Language Question and Arrested Assimilation).

Use as invitation a flag postal card, or a common card bearing a flag sticker, or in some other way calling attention to our national colors.

Upon the card write the words, "One flag, one language, one soul—loyalty." Give also place and date of meeting.

Have flags conspicuously displayed at place of meeting.

1. Hymn, "Our Flag is Flashing Near and Far."

2. Scripture, a Pentecostal Blessing. Acts 2:1-21. Let the devotional leader read this and then call for the following Scripture references on the laws of the stranger, which will have been assigned previously to four different members: Ex. 22:21; Zech. 7:8, 14; Lev. 19:33; Deut. 24:17, 18.

3. Prayer, for the interpretation of the Spirit so that there may be understanding and Christian love of foreign-speaking peoples. Pray also, that the foreigner's faith in America be not destroyed, and that America's faith in him be justified.

4. Paper: "Language—a Bond or a Barrier." Make a thorough study of chapter III, and draw your own conclusions relative to this topic. Write a ten-minute paper on the subject. Please send a copy of this paper to 1227 Home Ave., Dayton, Ohio. The paper first reaching this address will be published in the Woman's Department of The Herald of Gospel Liberty some time in June or July. If they come early enough more than one paper can be used.

5. Discussion: Why I want to keep my Native Language. Three or four speakers can bring out the reasonable argument and methods mentioned in Chapter III. (Watch Woman's Department in Herald of Gospel Liberty).

6. Reading: "Extracts From a Family Letter." Pp. 83, 84.

7. Readings, as to lack of assimilation. Let the leader introduce this topic with a word about Racial Cleavage P. 71, and then call for Old World Animosities, p. 72, to be read or told by one member, Old World Authorities, p. 73, by another, and Old World Habits by a third. Let the leader sum up the chapter, using the thought suggested on p. 75; also Capacity on p. 77 and Isolation p. 97.

QUIZZ

Review the questions on previous chapters and add these five:

1. How many adult foreigners cannot understand English? (Two million. See p. 46).

2. What good reasons are there for families continuing to speak a foreign language? p. 52.

3. What incentives for learning English can be offered? p. 64-66.

PRESIDENT'S BIENNIAL REPORT—1918-1920

(Mrs. W. A. Harper)

I feel that we women have every reason to be grateful for the work God has enabled us to accomplish despite the Influenza and other hindering causes during the last two years. The reports of the various departments will, I am sure, rejoice our hearts and confirm us in our belief that we are engaged in a great work of the Kingdom.

The Budget System

The best thing we have done perhaps during the two years since we last assembled has been to adopt the budget system in our Conferences and to assign a definite allotment to each organization. When our workers know what is expected of them, they try to do it. It goes without saying that the budget is our minimum, and the fact that every Conference has passed every goal set proves that the women so accept it.

The Virginia Beach Meeting

At our Board meeting at Virginia Beach held in July, 1919, we applied this budget system to the officers of the Board in the following division of the field:

That the Vice President assist the President in her work.

Secretary collect and print in permanent form the minutes of the next Conference Conventions.

Corresponding Secretary collect and tabulate on cards all societies, their officers, and other vital facts connected with them, and by installments print them in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. They should also appear in the minutes to be printed by the Secretary.

Treasurer to get a full financial statement from each Conference Treasurer and to exhibit for the biennium not only all money sent to her but raised from other sources as well by the societies and to have a chart prepared for the Convention Hall, showing the financial growth of our Women's Work. Superintendent of Young People organize twenty new societies in addition to the work now being done.

Superintendent of Cradle Roll organize thirty new societies and get full report by the Conventions meeting. Superintendent of Boys' Work organize thirty new societies. Superintendent of Literature and Mite Boxes furnish monthly in THE CHRISTIAN SUN a list of good books for all grades of missionary societies as well as a list of literature for free distribution and to secure 500 additional subscribers to The Christian Missionary.

Mission Secretary, Dr. J. O. Atkinson, help our officers in any way that shall occur to them and him, but particularly as a Rally Day speaker, society organizer and pamphlet writer.

Each officer was informed of this action and I am sure the reports immediately to follow will demonstrate the wisdom of this division of duty.

The President's Work

As president, during the two years past, I have done what I could in a general way to stimulate interest in our work. I have written to THE SUN, The Christian Missionary, and to individuals as I had opportunity. I could have done more, if I had had more stenographic help, though what I have done has been a genuine pleasure to me.

I have prepared two rally day programs for the months of July and August of each year and sent them to all our societies and to some leading woman in churches not having societies. I have asked Mrs. Fred Bullock to prepare this program this year. I believe this is a very helpful plan of strengthening our present organizations and of laying the foundation for new organizations where we now have none.

At Virginia Beach I recommended that each month beginning in September we print three thousand copies of a pamphlet on missionary themes for free distribution among our women. These pamphlets as you know have so far appeared each month. They have been sent to a leader in each society, in each church not having a society, and to each pastor. I hope these pamphlets have been studied and read. If they have, I feel sure that they have done great good.

The pamphlets so far printed are:

- WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM
By Mrs. W. A. Harper
- MY MONEY AND I
By Dr. J. O. Atkinson
- GOD'S MISSIONARY PROGRAM FOR HIS CHURCH
By Dr. W. A. Harper
- JESUS AND WOMEN
By Mrs. W. A. Harper
- MISSIONARY ZEAL IN MISSIONARY LITERATURE
By Rev. C. B. Riddle
- OUR WOMEN AND THE MEN AND MILLIONS FORWARD MOVEMENT
By Mrs. W. A. Harper
- MY MISSIONARY CREED
By Dr. J. O. Atkinson
- THE FRUITS OF MISSIONARY ZEAL
By Dr. W. A. Harper

Four others are to be printed as planned as follows:

- For May—Woman's New Day of Christian Service
By Mrs. W. A. Harper
- For June—Rally Day Program
By Mrs. F. E. Bullock
- For July—History of Our Woman's Work
By Mrs. C. H. Rowland
- For August—Our Purse Holders
By Mrs. J. W. Patton

Our Financial Goals For This Year

At Virginia Beach we recommended the following financial goals for this year:

Georgia and Alabama	$ 250.00
Eastern Virginia	4,500.00
Valley Virginia	500.00
North Carolina	2,500.00
Alabama	250.00
Total	$8,000.00

The Conference Financial Goals

When the Conference Woman's Boards met they adopted the following goals:

Georgia and Alabama	$ 250.00
Alabama	250.00
Valley Virginia	500.00
North Carolina	4,700.00
Eastern Virginia	5,000.00
Total	$10,700.00

This total includes the $1,200.00 the women of the North Carolina Conference plan to raise to support Rev. H. S. Hardeastle as a missionary as well as a similar amount for the Eastern Virginia women to support Rev. H. S. Smith.

Recommendations

1. That our goals be set for the next two years as follows: Money to be raised, $25,000.00; new organizations, 50; new members added, 2,000; new subscriptions to Christian Missionary, 500; and that apportionment committee apportion these to the Conferences.

2. That we adopt the regular Mission Study Book, which are Home Missions, "The Church and The Community"—R. E. Diffendorfer; Juniors, "Mr. Friend-O'-Man of the City That is to Be"—by J. T. Stockiug. Young People—"Serving the Neighborhood," by Ralph E. Felton. Foreign Missions, Adults—"The Bible and Missions," by Helen B. Montgomery; Juniors—"Lamp Lighters Across the Sea," by Margaret T. Applegarth.

WHY WE HAVE FLAG DAY

For nearly a quarter of a century, June 14 has been celebrated as Flag Raising Day by the public schools of America. It is done to show respect and honor for the flag of our country, and to teach all children to love the flag and the nation of which it is the symbol.

June 14 was selected for Flag Day because that is the birthday of the real Stars and Stripes. On that day in 1777, the Continental Congress passed the following resolution: "Resolved: That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

It was the sight of this glorious flag, floating over Fort McHenry near Baltimore, during the battle of North Point, which inspired Francis Scott Key to write "The Star Spangled Banner," which was afterward adopted as our national anthem.

We should all memorize the Salute to the Flag used in the schools of the nation, as follows: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

SONG OF THE GRASS BLADES

Peeping, peeping here and there,
 In lawns and meadows everywhere
 Coming up to find the spring,
 And hear the robin red breast sing.
 Creeping under children's feet,
 Glancing at the violets sweet,
 Growing into tiny bowers,
 For the dainty meadow flowers.
 "We are small, but think a minute
 Of a world with no grass in it."

TONY STAYS BY THE FLAG

"It's a new one, Jim," Harold said, "a brand new flag. My Uncle Dave gave it to me."

"She's a bonny flag," answered Jim. "Let me hold her a minute."

"Hold it carefully," Harold said; "for it's the flag of our country, and we must never let it get torn or dirty. My Uncle Dave says so."

"Me, I hold-a da flag," said a little voice behind them. There was Tony Retelli, his big black eyes staring at the flag, and his hands stretched out.

"Oh, my, no!" cried Harold; "you might get it dirty."

"Or tear her," said Jim.

"She's a bonny flag."

"Please," begged Tony.

"No," said Harold firmly, "but we'll have a procession and you may march behind."

So Harold and Jim, carrying the flag between them and whistling all the tunes they knew one after the other, marched down the street with Tony walking behind. Tony could not whistle, but he could sing, and he sang "Mia Maria" just as nicely as he knew how. All the people they passed smiled at the procession. Pretty soon Harold stopped.

"Let's salute the flag," he said. "We'll put the stick in this crack in the sidewalk. There, see how straight it stands? You salute it as we do in school, and I'll salute it."

"Me s'lute," begged Tony.

"Oh, you don't understand!" Jim said.

"No, he doesn't understand at all," agreed Harold. "What's that? A hand-organ! Maybe a monkey!"

He and Jim started to run. Around the corner and down the street they raced. They found the hand-organ, and yes, there was a monkey. They asked the organ grinder what his name was and what the monkey's name was. They watched two little girls dance. They had a fine time until the organ grinder began to play something. What was it?

"I know that piece," said Jim, "we play it in school."

"It's the Star Spangled Banner," said Harold. "Why, my flag! Didn't you bring it?"

"Your flag!" cried Jim. "Didn't you bring her?"

They ran back as fast as they had come up the street. They didn't wait to say "good-bye" to the organ grinder or the monkey.

"S'pose it falls down—gets walked on," Harold gasped.

"Or a dog tears her."

"Somebody steals it."

They almost flew around the corner, and then they stopped and looked at each other. They were ashamed. The flag, waving gently, was standing straight up in the crack. It hadn't fallen down, no dog had played with it, nobody had stolen it, because, standing beside it with his hands at his side, and his head up, was Tony.

"She stuck," he explained; "so me, I couldn't come. Me, I stay by da bon' flag."

Together Jim and Harold pulled the flag stick from the crack. They looked very sober. The procession facing the corner formed in line with Tony, a wide smile on his face, falling in behind. But the procession went only a few steps before the leaders stopped and spoke—both at once.

"I guess Tony ought to carry the flag," was what they said.

So Tony, with the flag over his shoulder and a wide, wide smile on his face, led the procession.

"After a while we'll teach him to salute her," Jim said; and Harold answered "Sure!"—The Mayflower.

Unless the Spirit of God be upon us, we have no might from within and no means from without to rely upon. Wait upon the Lord, beloved, and seek strength from Him alone. There cannot come out of you what has not been put into you. You receive and then give out.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Health Hints

TYPHOID VACCINATION NOT DANGEROUS—PREVENTS TYPHOID

The time for the opening date of the vaccination campaign against typhoid fever is but a few days off. And as the time draws nigh, many citizens probably find themselves in a sympathetic position with a certain colored trooper from North Carolina in the last few minutes before an early morning attack upon a treacherous German stronghold. The conversation that took place between the negro soldier and his lieutenant was about as follows: "Dave, in a few minutes we are to go over the top in an attack that will be a fight to the finish. Do you wish to make a will before we charge?" "Will nuthin; the only will dat I's thinkin' 'bout is, Will I git back?"

No doubt many of you are asking yourself, as you think of your duty about getting vaccinated, is it any good? Will it prevent typhoid fever? Will it hurt me, or keep me away from my work? And there are, no doubt, a few people with an unfortunate imagination who are really wondering if they risk their lives by being vaccinated. To those of you who are thus perplexed, please receive the assurance from your State Board of Health that vaccination will prevent typhoid fever, and that there is no danger or bad effects that can result therefrom.

The best illustration of the value of typhoid vaccine is seen in the case of the armies of the world. Typhoid fever was practically unknown in the Allied Armies of millions of men necessarily living under unfavorable sanitary conditions. This absence of typhoid was due to a great extent to the fact that every soldier was vaccinated immediately upon his entrance to the training camp. During the Spanish American War, typhoid fever killed more soldiers in the American Army than did the Spaniards' guns and bullets, because none of them were vaccinated. Since the introduction of typhoid vaccine, the typhoid incidence in the army has been reduced thirty-five hundred per cent. And if every citizen in North Carolina would faithfully perform his duty about getting vaccinated, then we could begin to make the funeral preparations for our old enemy, typhoid.

The fact that no harm can result from typhoid vaccination has been clearly demonstrated by the administration of approximately three million doses to people in the State of North Carolina. Of this number of administrations in our State, do you know of any permanent bad effect that has been wrought as a result thereof? The vaccine may cause a slight headache and a chilly, aching feeling of the body, which appear in ten to twenty-four hours. This reaction is rarely severe enough to prevent one from pursuing his daily work. The arm is sore around the site of the vaccination for about three days. Usually however, the soreness is not sufficient to prevent the use of the arm, and it is often noticeable only when pressure is made upon the site of vaccination. The reaction in children is relatively milder than the reaction in adults. The severest reaction that might possibly result from vaccination would be extremely mild as compared with a case of typhoid fever. In vaccination you run no risk. By failing to get vaccinated you do run the risk not only of being sick for a long time, but of losing your life. One person in ten in North Carolina has typhoid fever. So after all, when the truth is known it is really more dangerous not to be, than to be, vaccinated.

AMERICAN MAYFLOWER COUNCIL MEETS TO PLAN NATIONAL CELEBRATIONS

More than sixty members of the American Mayflower Council and representatives of the affiliated organizations met in New York City, Friday, June 11, to consider plans for the various celebrations that are to be held in connection with the Mayflower Tercentenary in November and December of the present year.

An international aspect was given to the meeting by the presence of two delegates from the Mayflower Council of England, Principal Alfred E. Garvie of New College, London, and Dr. W. Nelson Bitton, home secretary of the London Mayflower Society. Principal Garvie, who is one of the most eminent of British churchmen, is outspoken in his satisfaction at finding the American people back of the League of Nations, in spite of the failure of the Senate to ratify the covenant. His statement that he is sending word back home to his friends in England that "they must not judge the conscience of the United States by the acts of its politicians" was roundly cheered by the members of the Mayflower Council.

OUR FRONT PAGE

Just what our readers think of the front page this week we cannot tell, but for us, we like it. In fact the front page is the woman's new hat to us. Some weeks we do not have the article or arrangement that we would prefer, but if the "hat" is not exactly what we went to market to get, we take it and hope to suit ourselves better the next season (the next week). We are pleased with this week's front page—we like our new hat, don't you? Not only are these children subscribers to the Men and Millions Forward Movement, but the parents are liberal subscribers to the fund.

The photographs for these cuts were furnished us by Mrs. John King, Suffolk, Virginia, one of the many good women who worked faithfully and enthusiastically during the campaign.

NATIONAL NOTES

William G. McAdoo, whom Democratic leaders have been boosting for the nomination as candidate for the presidency, has announced that he will not permit his name to be used in the San Francisco Convention. He states that he is not financially able to accept, and that he will not permit his friends to pay the enormous expense involved.

Congressman Champ Clark is to be one of the men placed in nomination at the coming Democratic Convention, so it is announced.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

PLANTING AND REAPING

The Singing Class had a very pleasant trip to our High Point church on the first Sunday and rendered its program there in the afternoon. A large audience was present and the best attention was given. We trust the good people of the High Point church enjoyed the program as much as the children enjoyed giving it.

On our way back we took advantage of the opportunity of paying the Methodist Protestant Orphanage a visit. Brother Garrett and his kind wife gave us a warm welcome and showed us every courtesy possible. Their Singing Class rendered us a short program and then called on our Class for a selection which they gladly rendered. We enjoyed the visit very much and wish Brother Garrett and his helpers every success possible.

We are having the warmest weather of the season at the Orphanage. Our boys are working hard to get all the crop worked so we can be ready for harvest. We have about forty-three acres in wheat and oats and to cut over that much land is no little task. But we are very well fixed for the job. We have a new reaper which we bought last year and will use the tractor to pull it this year, so if nothing breaks, we hope to have a quick job of it. But when the harvest is over our work is just then beginning, as we want to put all of this land in soy beans and corn so we can fill our silo this fall and have plenty of feed for our cattle. It takes work but we were taught to work in our younger days and we still like it.

We hope to get started on our Children's Home in a short while. The Building Committee is laying plans now to get the work under way. We hope to get this building complete and ready to turn over to the Board at its annual meeting next May. We also want to have it paid for in full. Let us all work together to that end.

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley:—Aunt Lilly sent me some money for the orphans but mother has been too busy to write. I like gardening and daddy says I do it well. I have two long rows of beans that I have worked and they are in bloom. I ran away one day in the spring and caught the "flu." A little girl had it and I wanted to see what it was like. I found out. I enclose ten cents.—Ralph Bain Newman.

Now, I expect you wanted to see the little girl and had the "flu" for an excuse. We have our first mess of garden beans today, June 16. It has been so cold and dry that our garden is late.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—Mother said you once visited our home in Berkley. We would like to have you visit us in the country. We live near Miss Brother's home. I am enclosing twenty-five cents for the cousins.—Cecil L. Mercer.

I certainly had a pleasant visit to your home and hope to visit you again some time. Your father and mother were real kind to me and I enjoyed myself splendidly.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—School is out and we have more time to write letters. I had the "flu" and missed three weeks from school, yet I made my grade. I will be in the fourth grade next year. Emma Atkinson and I are just opposite in our likes. I like to spell but do not like to read. Brother Charley says the teacher ought to have extra pay to hear me read. I enclose ten cents.—Helen Newman.

I am glad you made a grade this year. To miss a grade at your age don't seem to amount to much, but it counts one year and it is a pity to lose a whole year.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley:—I am interested in gardening too. Daddy says I don't use good judgment. I was in a hurry to plant my watermelons. Daddy didn't have the land ready so I planted them in the woodpile chips. Some times I run away. I don't mean to be bad, but just want to visit my neighbors.—Leon W. Stagg Newman.

You must send for me when your watermelons get ripe. We have a nice patch, but some bugs swarmed in them yesterday and killed several hills before I knew it. We gave them a good drink of Pyrox and I did not see any this morning.—"Uncle Charley."

"RECONSTRUCTING THE CHURCH"

I have read with profound interest and satisfaction Dr. W. A. Harper's latest book, "Reconstructing the Church," just out from the press of the Revell Company.

In these thirteen chapters he has condensed a volume of virile thought, which will make the thoughtful sit up and take notice. He realizes the new day and interprets its significance, not harshly nor rashly, but with a sound judgment which analyzes, clarifies and unifies. It is a book by a great leader, and will help to make leaders who will lead to a better time and a more effective service.

A Ringing Book

This is a ringing book, a book that will arouse the torpid, stimulate thinkers, challenge leaders. It believes in the past, but only to get a future out of it. It is awake to the enormous tasks of present-day Christianity, sees how it is hampered, impatiently longs to free it from its fetters. This is no book for the satisfied, but for the gloriously discontented. It is a prophetic book; it will make reformers. Let no one read it if he objects to jolts.

Abounds in Practical Suggestions

Dr. Harper's last book on "Reconstruction the Church" contains a message that one cannot read without being refreshed in the challenge presented by this eminent layman. He meets the problems in the affairs of the present-day church in sympathetic approach and catholic spirit. This book abounds in practical suggestions and gives promise of a better day in the reconstruction of the church.

"CHRIST IN WORD AND WORK"

Christ in Word and Work, the latest volume by Dr. Martyn Summerbell, is a book of rare insight into the fundamentals of the Christian message and program. Calm faith, prophetic vision, statesmanlike comprehension characterize this series of studies and cause them to stand out like a rock of Gibraltar in our uncertain time. Particularly is this true of the concluding chapter which has the challenging title, Christ's Demand on This Age, but it is consistently true of each preceding chapter.

No one can read this book and not be strengthened in his inner faith and inspired in his outer courage to undertake the practical working out of the Master's plan for the world and its redemption. We need more such books.

"HOW READEST THOU?"

A famous Bishop once said: "People will not be better than the books they read." I do not know precisely the words he used. The books we read declare what we are, or make us what they are. Normally we turn to pages which say the things we are thinking or pander to the moods we secretly encourage. On the other hand, books are germinant, full of seeds of good or evil. One cannot rise unimproved or unhurt from the reading of a book or magazine. Even to waste time on colorless literature means distinct loss to the reader. As we read, so are we, book and soul reacting upon each other.—George Blake Peck.

TWO FELLOWS WE KNOW

Mr. Meant-to has a comrade,
And his name is Didn't-do;
Have you ever chanced to meet him?
Did they ever call on you?

These two fellows live together
In the house of Never-win,
And I'm told it's haunted—haunted
By the ghost of Might-have-been.

MARRIAGES

APPLE-JEFFREYS

On June 9, 1920, at 5:00 P. M., Mr. James Franklin Apple and Miss Lollie W. Jeffreys were united in marriage by the writer at the home of Mr. C. G. Jeffreys, Alamance County, N. C.

There were present a few relatives and friends of the contracting parties to witness the ceremony.

Mr. Apple is a prominent young minister of the Christian Church. He is pastor of three good country churches. Mrs. Apple is an influential young person in her community and church, Long's Chapel, her husband being her pastor now.

A little more than a year ago Brother Apple officiated in the marriage of the writer. I am glad to return the compliment.

They will reside at Elon College. Their many friends and this scribe wish for them the blessings of a long, happy and peaceful life.

CAPERELL

Sister James Caprell departed this life May 29, 1920, at the age of seventy-four years.

She leaves to mourn their loss, three sons and one daughter. The deceased was a faithful member of Pope's Chapel, and had been since a child. We will miss her sweet spirit and kind words; but she has gone to her reward, while we are left to toil on, with a hope that some time, some where we shall meet again.

She was laid to rest beside her loved ones, who had gone on before, in the family plot at the church of her early choice. Services conducted by her pastor.

B. F. BLACK.

WILLIAMS

At the age of seventy-nine years, Sister Ann Williams laid down her earthly armor, and God said, "Come up higher." Her son, Rev. D. M. Williams, a student of Elon College in 1890-91, was no doubt looking for her as her spirit, somehow, winged its flight to those portals, which lead to a city whose Builder and Maker is God. What a happy reunion!

The deceased leaves to mourn their loss one brother and one sister: Sill Pearce and Vandelia Davis; three children: Mrs. Nora Hall, R. E. Williams and David Williams.

Funeral services conducted by her pastor at Oak Level Christian church and the remains laid to rest in the family plot. May the Lord comfort the dear ones who will miss mother so much.

B. F. BLACK.

EDWARDS

At the age of nineteen years, Sister Othelo Edwards, the young wife of Brother H. T. Edwards, was called to her reward, while the young husband, mother, father and twelve brothers and sisters are left to mourn their loss. Services were held in Liberty church (U.) where the deceased was a faithful members, conducted by her pastor, assisted by the Baptist pastor of Bethel church, Brother Mitchner.
