THE CHRISTIAN SUN

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION

VOLUME LXXIII

BURLINGTON. N. C., JANUARY 5, 1921

NUMBER 1

This Good Year

THE EDITOR

This good year of one thousand, nine hundred and twenty-one, will be good only as you and I make it good!

This great year will be prosperous only as right dealings, honesty, and the Golden Rule are practiced. If we rob our fellowmen, or God, of that which is rightly theirs, we will help to make it a year of adversity.

This happy year can be joyful only in proportion as we put the joy and song into it. If we sing, the world will sing too; if we frown, the world will frown back at us.

This year should find the peoples of the world working toward a definite goal that all peoples may be happier; that mankind may be safer, and suffering alleviated.

If the spirit of mercy, of charity, and benevolence, and the passion for the world's redemption, are not in our hearts, this good year, we shall abuse that privilege which is given us and hinder His coming.

EDITORIAL

It matters not what New Year brings, The Christian soul exultant sings; It's what we bring of Christian cheer That makes a helpful, glad New Year!"

LET US RESOLVE

LET US resolve—we of the Christian Church—that during this good year of 1921:

THAT we shall be "workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth"—II Timothy 2:15.

THAT our form of Church organization, which we have outlined and adopted as our way and method of promoting His cause, shall be strengthened by our devotion to, and loyalty for, it.

THAT preaching of the Word in an unadulterated form shall be the high and holy mission of those of us who have taken upon ourselves that sacred and solemn office.

THAT teaching little children that Jesus is love, and older ones that God is good, be the high aim of our Sunday school teachers.

THAT no church, large or small, shall go without regular periods of worship—and that greater knowledge of God be the motive of each worshipper.

THAT the cause of missions shall be carried to every home, every heart, and taught in every public utterance.

THAT our Orphanage shall be the "child" of our hearts and that we shall love it to that point of regularly contributing for its support.

THAT the cause of education shall be serious with us, remembering that "where there is no vision the people perish" (Proverbs 29:18)—and Elon College is our College, built by our people, maintained by our people, and richly deserves our support in every way.

THAT our Church papers, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, The Herald of Gospel Liberty, The Christian Missionary, and others, should be in every home; that these publications are ambassadors of service for the Kingdom, and their cause must not suffer.

THAT we are stewards of the most High God, possessing and not owning, and that we must render an account of our stewardship (See Luke 12:42-43).

THAT every interest and undertaking of our Conferences shall be our delight to do, looking toward the Kingdom's progress everywhere.

THAT the work of our Convention have our best thought, wisest counsel, and hearty support, realizing that it is the directing body of our Southern work.

THAT the lines and boundaries of our denomination shall not be the limit of our labors, our love, our charity, and thought for the Kingdom's growth; that our Church practice in all things its great Bible principles, looking toward the world adoption that giving is better than getting—and finally remembering that the Kingdom on earth must come through a united Christendom.

ANOTHER CRISIS FOR THE CHURCH COLLEGE

HERE is, in our opinion, another serious crisis for the average Church college. For that matter, few denominational colleges ever get out of the crisis period. The forward programs of the State educational institutions keep the Church institutions on the go to keep to a degree of educational rating. This, however, is the march of progress, and is only the result of natural growth and development. Competition is not only the life of trade, but the medium through which improvement is usually made.

The public is demanding, as never before, better houses, better conditions for living and work. This is also natural, for the Church has been preaching for years a social gospel and calling upon the country's industries to provide better equipment for their employees. The call is being met rapidly. Large industrial corporations are providing special villages under private control for their workmen.

The average building on a college campus, whether the school be State or Church controlled, is built from the standpoint of economy, or measured by the limitation of money. It will be easy to challenge this statement, but not hard to prove, if left in the hands of those who make the planning of buildings, for the future, their study. Present need is too often the deciding point of too many public buildings. The consequence is, instead of one or more modern buildings on a college campus, there are many small structures that are not meeting present day demands.

But the crisis. The State colleges and universities are already at work in developing modern plans and programs. The State institutions get their money by appropriation; the Church institutions by education. The State demands the money, while the Church must educate its people to give the money. This means that the State will reach the standard quicker, and hence the financial crisis of the Church college.

The putting into the curricula of present day arts demand a different type of buildings. No girl can be interested in the important art of home economics where there is no place to demonstrate and put into practice the book instructions. In fact the average girl is prejudiced against domestic science because she cooks and house-keeps like her mother, who is to her, the model. Modern methods and equipment help to overcome this prejudice easier than anything else.

Henry Drummond tells us that a man becomes a part of all his environment. If this be true—and we think so—the average college student demands a good environment. A refined gentleman may be educated in a log hut. But that does not mean that all refined ladies and gentlemen will accept such. Far from it.

Colleges not only teach books, but ways of living. The social fabric taken from college life would mean next to the product of a monastery in this age. How can a college give the best possible expression to young manhood and young womanhood where there is no beauty and comfort of buildings; where there are no attractive grounds and beautiful gardens?

The whole catalogue of studies could be named and each would demand the best of equipment. Art and beauty, whether man-made or God planned, are but principles of books expanded—or, that is, books are but nature vaguely explained. Comforts and conveniences are adjuncts to man's larger expression of life. Man abuses them when misguided. The business of a college is to guide and direct and bring every possible source of influence to bring man's dormant best to the surface.

Denominations had just as well get ready to modernize their educational plants. The hand-writing is on the wall. The modern home has put the "no compromise" spirit into the hearts of our young people. It will result in dealing with conditions as they are, and meeting a demand that the Church will, in the near future, be compelled to meet. The sooner the denominations get to thinking about it, the better.

PAGANISM

Christmas has come and gone again. It brings certain reflections and leaves its stamp and impress upon us. Christmas is a reminder of the world's greatest event. There are no exceptions.

Christmas is to remind us of Christ, and that means to remind us of all good things, for around the principles of the Master, all good things center. It is, then, a sad story to relate that many choose to thwart the purpose of Christmas and turn it into a season of eating and feasting; a season of noise and general disturbance. Cannons, guns, and fire-works all come as a part of the Christmas with too many. A shame upon our civilization that we celebrate the birth of the world's Redeemer by such pagan methods. Jesus came to save life, and not that life should be lost. But guns are fired, thus increasing accidents and adding to the average daily loss of life. In some sections fire works are freely exhibited, thus increasing not only the danger to life, but to property.

Oh, that it were in our power to persuade every minister in the country to preach from this theme just before Christmas of this good year: "How Jesus would Celebrate Christmas."

IN THIS ISSUE

You will miss a real treat if you fail to read Bro. Stanley Harrell's message on "Ministering to the Expression of Life". Turn to page five and read the first paragraph at least.

Dr. Stley continues his philosophy for the year 1921. His message on page nine will interest you, as all others have no doubt done. By the way, Mr. Business man, take your lesson from Dr. Staley's article this week.

The world is starving—that is, a large portion of it is. Think of it! We mean you, brother reader, who are here in a "land of plenty". A glance at Dr. Atkinson's article on page eight will begin to tell you about Europe's condition. Better still: It will tell you how to help.

"Who is J. E. Massey?" a person asked us the other day. Bro. Massey is one of our young men, a member of Concord church in Caswell County. He is a graduate of Elon College, and is now doing post-graduate work in the field of Journalism in Columbia University. His thoughts on page four are worth having in mind. Turn and read.

The Orphanage report is away upon the hill this week. However, not so far off that you cannot touch it and send it a little higher. Page eleven will give you facts, with the grand total on page twelve.

If you desire to know where the Editor is going to do his visiting during the next few weeks, take a peep at page thirteen. Of course we may be hindered, but here is warning to Andes-Johnson-Banks-Howard-Carter Company that they are liable to hear us rapping on their doors any day.

Pages fourteen and fifteen will reveal to our readers what we have decided to do with "Pastor and People" articles. The change, we trust, will be pleasing. Anyway how do you like it?

Those of you who have been reading about the Federal Council of Churches will find a continuation of the subject by Dr. Coffin. See pages seven and eight.

The "Bulletin" takes the place of "Notes" and we hope to group under this heading each week, items of interest.

"Called Home" is a change from the not-much-used word "obituaries". "Solemn Vows" is an attempt to divert the thought of some that getting married is not a solemn thing. See page sixteen for these changes.

No man, save the fellow who has tried it, can even begin to enumerate the "ten thousand things" that an editor must do, or at least is expected to do. We desire no honor for the editorials in this page, but if they add anything to the cause of Kingdom progress as reflected through Christian ideals, we shall rejoice and be glad. At least read the first and join in to help carry it out. We also ask a reading of the front page.

And finally, we enter upon the New Year with an ambition to make a creditable paper. This issue is an attempt at improvement. Help us make it better all the time. We think of The Sun's interest by day and dream of it by night. We "love" it and "love" the work. New Year greetings to all!

AID TO THE FARMERS

"Let the United States extend credit to Europe so that Europeans can buy our products," says the American Farm Bureau Federation. That seems to be the only way of giving relief to the American cotton and wheat farmers at the present time, in the estimation of the farmer's organization. These farmers are selling far below the cost of production, is the belief of a number of legislators who see the hardships which are brought on the producers. Being pressed to action by the farmers' organizations, congressmen from various farming States of the South and West have made moves to aid the farmers and alleviate them from the situation into which they have been placed during the last few months.

The New York Annalist pleads for the farmer and demands that he have a longer credit than the wholesale and retailers of goods. It bases its plea on the fact that the farmer has but one "turnover" a year whereas the latter have several; that the farmers spent a whole year in making their crop, whereas the wholesale and retail classes have clearance sales and dispose of their supply of commodities several times during the year. The Federal Reserve Board and the local banks are disposed to loan to the merchants but have little disposition to loan to the farmers owing to the depression of prices of farm products.

Since the farmers have been refused the aid of local bankers, the only solution is for them to turn to the European consumer who cannot buy because of his lack of credit. "Give the European credit", seems to be the key to our present economical ills.

THE CRIME WAVE

America is being menaced by a wave of crime, with murders, burglaries, plunder, lawlessness and violence unprecedented since a number of years. It seems that the effect of this wave is registered highest in the large cities. One thousand criminals of the Chicago underworld were rounded up and arrested in a spectacular raid. In New York City, since January 1920, there have been more than one hundred unsolved murders, and property loss to the amount of $3,100,000. In Chicago and Philadelphia there have been equally proportioned degrees of violence and loot. As high as fifty hold-ups were made during one day in and in the vicinity of Philadelphia. Pittsburg, and number of cities over the United States have suffered more or less from the increase of criminals.

But one notes that a large per cent of this crime has been committed during the last few months. In New York City a great deal more of murders and robberies have happened during December than during October or November, which suffices to indicate that there must be some reasonable cause for such plunder.

The war is said to be the underlying cause of the present crime wave, which is analyzed as being essentially a restless spirit resulting from the breaking away from the established social and economic order of 1914. The readjustment of society and industry to a peace basis has brought this restlessness to the surface, so that men, instead of persevering in the face of hard times, seek to earn a living in the easiest possible way, the way of crime.

While the war may be ascribed as the underlying cause of the nationwide prevalence of crime, in no way can it account for the increase of criminal actions which have become so evident in the last few months. Rather the consequences of the war, unemployment, the shutting down of factories because of temporary economic conditions, and the abolition of war-time industries, have, more than anything else, caused the present increase in crime.

The idleness fostered by unemployment has caused much crime, but ex-President Taft says that the lax administration of criminal laws in many lower state courts has also been a great incentive to criminal behavior. The police forces in cities as large as New York, Chicago and Philadelphia have not been large enough to cope with the increase of outlawry. Inefficiency in municipal methods or rounding up murderers and bandits has likewise invited crimes which might have been avoided had the higher municipal authorities seen their shortcomings sooner.

FRANCE ABLE TO FEED HERSELF

Last year France had to import 41,000,000 hundred-weight of wheat; this year she is practically able to feed herself. The harvest of the country has been so good that the French Government has been enabled to cancel contracts for the import of South American wheat.

The seven million acres of agricultural soil which were made unfit for cultivation by the ravages of war have been almost completely remade. Only one-fourth million acres remain uncultivated, and in a few months this will be restored and put into cultivation. Within the last two years, France has made rapid strides in recuperating her natural resources.

THE LYNCHING RECORD FOR 1920

There were 61 persons lynched in 1920. Of these, 52 were in the South and 9 in the North and West. This is 22 less than the number, 83, for the year 1919. Of those lynched 53 were Negroes and 8 were whites. One of those put to death was a Negro woman. Eighteen, or less than one-third of those put to death, were charged with rape or attempted rape. Three of the victims were burned to death. The charges against those burned to death were: rape and murder, 1; killing landlord in a dispute, 2.

It would correct much prayer nowadays, and save from unreality, if God should stop and say: "Just what is it that you want?"—Record of Christian Work.

CONTRIBUTIONS

MINISTERING TO THE EXPRESSION OF LIFE

(Address delivered before the North Carolina Christian Conference at Parks Cross Roads, November 16, 1920, by Rev. Stanley C. Harrell.)

WE of the Christian Church have been too long content with the idea that the business of the church is only to save souls. Now lest I shock some good brother or sister who still holds that idea, permit me to say that Christ never once referred to the saving of souls as being either his work or the work of his church. He never even used the term. With Christ it was to save men and women, boys and girls, to save them in their entirety, body, mind, heart and soul. The only instance where we could say that Christ saved only the soul of a man was the thief on the cross. And that is certainly not typical of the work of either Christ or his church. I hold that to save souls only is in no case desirable and in most cases impossible.

Dr. W. A. Harper in his "Reconstructing The Church", says: "There is no devotional life. There is no spiritual life. There is no any sort of life but just life. Life is a unit, a unity, an entirety, not an apartment, not even a departmental affair. It is one, or it is nothing. How unphilosophical, therefore, it is to speak of the devotional life, the moral life, the intellectual life, the spiritual life, the physical life, the innumerable other sorts of life to which the compartment-artists have introduced to us. Life is one. Our departmental conception of life has in the past done us much hurt. It has brought us into contempt. It has driven from us many whom our hearts yearned to reach. It has differentiated where no differentiation was proper and mystified the most natural and normal experiences." Dr. Harper never spoke a truth of more far-reaching significance. If he will continue to preach that truth until every Christian worker accepts it and applies it together with its logical conclusions as to methods he will have rendered an incalculable service to the Kingdom.

For the church to attempt to save souls without giving due attention to the circumstances and conditions that have placed the soul in danger is just as foolish as for a doctor to attempt to stamp out malaria by giving pills to the suffering patients and paying no attention to the breeding places of the malaria carrying mosquito. It would be just as logical for a doctor to say that the brain is the most important organ of man. Save the brain and let the rest of the body take care of itself. But doctor, we argue, the patients lungs are being rapidly destroyed by tuberculosis, and the doctor should add, never mind the lungs the brain is the thing we want to save. Let us take care of that.

And while we are referring to diseases and doctors let us bear in mind that modern medical science holds that most disease is due to the lack of proper exercise. This is more properly in line with our subject. For it shall be our contention that most disorders that effect the members of the church is due to the lack of the proper exercise. We have failed to teach them how to exercise their energy in the proper way. I know many good folks who think that religion is on the decline because people no longer shout in revival services. Did you ever see an engine standing at the station suddenly begin to blow off steam, making an awful racket and filling the air with clouds of vapor. And did you ever notice that it never does that when it is pulling a long train of cars up a steep hill? For me that illustrates the shouting Christian. He is simply blowing off steam that he has no way of converting into more practical and useful purposes. Christians do not shout today because their energy has been diverted in more useful channels. If you keep on feeding the fires in your locomotive it has to blow off steam or burst. And the same is true of Christians. The task that confronts the church is to provide means to use every ounce of energy of its members. And to apply that energy so that it may be used to do the work which confronts the church. We have been content for many years to spend all our efforts to stir the emotions of our members and create religious impressions. Now it is time to begin to teach them how and to provide the means whereby they may express their emotions and impressions.

The neurologists tell us today that practically all the nervous and mental disorders from which people are suffering are due to repressed inclinations and natural impulses. The peculiar cases of the war called "shell-shock" are an illustration of this. A man found himself facing dangers and horrors unspeakable. The natural reaction was fear and loathing. But he felt it his duty as a soldier to repress these feelings. His nervous system charged with impulses for which it was denied expression broke under the strain. Whenever you have impressions without expression one of two things always happens, if the impressions are sudden and powerful there is a break-up as in the case mentioned above. If the impressions are gradual they slowly become weaker due to the hardening of the emotional nature till the impressions entirely disappear. On the other hand an impression which finds a legitimate expression is strengthened with every recurrence. I know a man who has expressed his impulse to help crippled beggars till now he never passes a cripple without giving him alms. While the mass of men have repressed their impulse of pity until they pass the same cripple without ever being conscious of his appeal.

Now, accepting Dr. Harper's contention that there is just one kind of life, namely, life, we may recognize the fact that life finds expression through the activities of body, mind and soul. But that is not dividing life. I know a housekeeper who uses electricity to make the toast and coffee, sweep the floor, and light the house.

But it is all the same kind of electricity. We hold that it is the business of the church to save men. Therefore it is to the interest of the church that men be safe-guarded and given suitable methods of expression for body, mind and soul. For we want to save men, and save not only all men but all of man.

Let us take first the expression of life through bodily activity. All men are endowed with a certain amount of energy that is going to find expression some way. Now if the church will provide for its youth suitable play and athletic activities it has met a two-fold need. It has given a way to use the surplus energy in wholesome and helpful ways and it has met the need for play and recreation. I hope that every one of you read that splendid article in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of November 10, 1920, "The Justification of Play". Maybe it did not impress you as it did me. But had you been with me in France where there were a thousand or two of boys for whose welfare I was responsible and had you seen what I saw you would have felt differently. Now picture the conditions. Hundreds of boys with nothing much to do. Anywhere they turned a wine shop in which to regale themselves. On most every corner a girl waiting to lure them into vice. Now could you have been with me and seen how these boys turned out almost to a man for baseball, football, movies, sings and even checkers, turning their backs on the temptations of drink and vice to spend their time in wholesome play and recreation; and could you have seen how when there was nothing to offer them they slipped away in little groups or singly to the things I have mentioned above you would be ready to say with me that every dollar you gave to the Y. M. C. A. and kindred activities was of the best investments that you ever made, despite all that has been said to the contrary. You would be ready to say with me that it is not enough to pray that our youth be kept away from temptation; but you would be ready to say let the church provide those things that will keep them away from temptation. I cannot tell you here what to provide, but I can only try to convince you that provision should be made by our churches for recreation and play, believing that what saved soldiers in France will be good for your boys at home.

But we must pass on to the expression of life in mental activities. And here again, we are face to face with a subject which demands a whole volume to be said. I am not even going to touch on the phase of religious education that our churches should provide and which, please God, I believe they some day will provide. I leave that for those of larger ability to outline for you. But I must say that I believe with all my heart that no church can afford to fail to see that its youth is provided with an ample supply of wholesome literature, and comfortable and inviting surroundings amid which to read it.

We come now to the expression of life through spiritual activities. The church has for a long time been insisting that its members ought to do something, without ever telling them what to do, or showing them how to do it. Here I am reminded of the story of the business man who placed a large placard in his office bearing the motto: "Do it Now." That same day the cashier departed taking with him what funds there were in the safe. The bookkeeper eloped with the stenographer, and the office boy took the day off to attend the baseball game. It is not enough to insist that the folks in the churches ought to do something. They should be told what to do. I find there are very few in the church of which I am pastor who are not willing to work when I outline a definite task and lay it before them. I find them even eager to do it. I am persuaded that many are doing nothing in the church for the very same reason that the men gave the Master when he found them standing idle in the market-place at the eleventh hour. "Sir no man hath hired us." And remember that because of the fact that no man had assigned them a definite work they received the same as those who had worked all day.

And then again we who have been doing things for so long forget that there was once a time when we didn't know how to do them. Take the case of leading public prayer. It seems sometimes to us preachers that anybody ought to be able to do that. But I recall very distinctly the first time I ever tried it. Dr. Harper called on me in a Christian Endeavor prayer meeting and it scared me so that I trembled most as much as I did the first time a German shell landed in my immediate neighborhood. We must teach the folks how to render Christian service. If we should spend three-fourths of the time that we now use bawling out the folks for not doing anything in the teaching of them how to do them, we would find our tasks being accomplished, our problems solved, and our people growing strong in the Lord and the power of his might. When Jesus said, "Faith without works is dead", he was telling us that unless we provide the opportunities for faith to find expression in service that our faith is as good as dead now. For there is no life without faith and no faith without works.

THE CITY CHURCH PLANT

THE church in any of our large cities faces opportunities limited only by its zeal and equipment. Unreached adults and neglected children and youth, challenge it to aggressive effort and progressive steps. The possibilities on every hand for real service call the church to take her rightful place at the center of the life of the community, to act as the means of developing youth for Christian leadership and citizenship. To accomplish this holy mission, the church must be properly housed.

In the planning of the physical plant of the church, the purpose of the institution must be kept clearly in mind at every step. Never should the attainment of the real goal be sacrificed to narrow prejudice nor sentiment based on needs and ideas of days gone by. The best of architects, experienced in church building, should be secured to plan and direct. Best results in the future demand a man of ability for this task and justify the additional expense incurred.

The city church must provide for the needs of all children, but in planning its building must consider the agencies already at work providing for these needs.

There should be no duplication of activities. A city church for example, located near a splendid city library, does not have to maintain the library really needed by another church located elsewhere. The church must guide, stimulate and support the efforts of other institutions.

All these considerations must help determine the city church needed. Another factor of vital importance is the location, for upon the situation depends much of the real usefulness of the church. It should be in a growing part of the city, in a section not already over-churched. The committee may well prefer location in a residential section away from distracting influences, but accessible to the majority of the members.

In external appearance the church should express its aim. Dignity should be combined with grace and artistic beauty. Constructed of genuine material, it should stand, an edifice worthy of the work it is destined to perform.

If there is more than one structure, care should be taken in the arrangement of the buildings on the lot. Appearance demands this as well as provision for future additions. The grounds surrounding should be planned to harmonize with the buildings. This space may also be utilized in part to provide a play ground for the city child. The church must recognize his physical as well as his spiritual needs. Tennis courts will appeal to the youth. The grounds surrounding the church have a large contribution to make.

The day has come when church leaders are taking religious education seriously rather than as a minor issue. This advance in thought demands a change in building. The church must provide facilities for normal development. This is vastly more important than a large auditorium required only on special days.

Some few wealthy churches in cities may build three buildings, the church, the church school and the community house. The vast majority of churches, however, must begin with a single building for all purposes. This will be a church, built to serve humanity seven days a week, and twenty-four hours a day. Many plans for churches have been tried, and approved or condemned. The plan just now which has the greatest appeal and the largest promise is known as the "Cedar Rapids Plan". The plan was first conceived because of a deep desire to hold in the church the boys and the girls of the teen age.

Briefly, the plan provides for three floors including the basement. The basement has a large assembly room, available for social purposes with kitchen and service room adjoining. A gymnasium, with lockers and showers, is in the rear. Also there is a small chapel providing ample room for committee meetings or small gatherings of any kind. The main floor contains the church auditorium in semi-circular shape. A wide corridor separates this room from a row of rooms providing for the beginners and primary classes, office and study, parlor and two class rooms. All departments above the Junior, worship in the church auditorium. The second floor has a wide gallery, which adds to the seating capacity of the church. In the rear is the Junior Department, and fourteen class rooms for the use of the Intermediate Senior and Adult Departments.

From this brief outline it is seen that such a church provides opportunity for separate class room. With consecrated teachers this means efficient work. The child's spiritual nature may be developed rather than neglected and stunted. His religious education receives the same stress which his public school has been having all along. In such a building, properly equipped, the real worth of the church is expressed and recognized. The church of this type can and will make religion real and give it an appeal to all ages and classes. Such a building, modified perhaps to suit peculiar needs, furnishes the means for accomplishing the purpose of the church and the church school. Worship, instruction and training in Christian service through actual expression are provided for. Such a church may truly be one which we are glad to enter, and from which we go with a sense of inspiration and help for daily life.

THE FUTURE PROGRAM OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

By Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D.

BECAUSE of the peculiar experiences through which co-operative movements have been passing, unusual interest centers about the future program of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Perhaps at few times in its history has this feature presented more critical aspects than now. The recent education toward religious co-operation is unprecedented, yet its progress in a practical program experienced a halt so sudden that it threatened the popularity of the idea itself. What the Council outlines and accomplishes will determine the rehabilitation of the ideals of union and the extent of co-operation which they will stimulate.

It should be remembered that any program of fusion in religious work must be a compromise between the eager unionist on the one hand and the reluctant federationist on the other. It is therefore better to go forward with slackened speed than to run into the ditch with impetuosity. To the Christian Church any program of co-operation which thirty denominations unanimously adopt will seem academic and inadequate. Other denominations exceed us in other lines of training, but in this practical one of union we are not surpassed.

The plans projected are carefully balanced by the experiences of past years and the demands of present conditions. They embody no significant departure from former methods of work and consist largely in intensifying and extending efforts already well begun.

That post-war conditions require a closer cohesion of religious forces is undebatable. This was forcefully set forth to the Council by Charles Adams Brown, Chairman of the Committee on the War and Religious Outlook, in the final report of that committee under the title of the "Church Facing the Future." The report emphasizes the need for the employment of a Christian internationalism with wider ramifications of a genuine Christian Spirit through missionary and other channels. It places no small part of responsibility for the whole world upon the Churches of America. By the same committee the race question in our own land is thrust to the fore as was that concerned with the application of Christian principles to modern industry. As helpfully related to those questions the committee recommends "Christian Principles Essential to a New World Order" by W. H. P. Faunce, "The Church's Message to the Nation" by Harry Emerson Fosdick, and "The New Home Mission of the Church" by Dr. Shiver. The program proposed to meet the unusual conditions now upon the world is a united method of study and effort adequate to present requirements.

Plans were laid to prosecute a more vigorous campaign of evangelism by a thorough study of its need and an encouragement of its practice by every discoverable method. The importance assigned to this subject was noticeably increased beyond any previous pronouncement of the Council.

The fundamental purpose of the Federal Council in the beginning was "for the prosecution of work that can be better done in Union than in Separation," and interpreted to be:

"I. To express the fellowship and catholic unity of the Christian Church.

"II. To bring the Christian Bodies of America into united service for Christ and the world.

"III. To encourage devotional fellowship and mutual counsel concerning the spiritual life and religious activities of the churches.

"IV. To secure a larger combined influence for the churches of Christ in all matters affecting the moral and social condition of the people, so as to promote the application of the law of Christ in every relation of human life.

"V. To assist in the organization of local branches of the Federal Council to promote its aims in their communities."

The highest interest in the Council circled about the Report of the Committee on Methods of Cooperation which related especially to the future plans of the Council and its constituent bodies. Rapt attention was given to its presentation and its adoption was accompanied with great enthusiasm. Excerpts from the same follow:

"We desire to set forth first our clear and positive conviction that there is work to be done in the name and for the sake of the churches which it is the legitimate business and the duty of the Federal Council to do. There is no other agency representing the churches to do it.

"We have in mind the forms of service presented in the report at Cleveland.

"To provide points of contact between the denominations through their recognized representatives, in order to facilitate understanding and sympathy between them:

"To study the program of cooperative tasks, suggesting measures and methods by which such tasks can be done effectively; and undertake whatever work properly falls within its sphere:

"To speak with care and a due sense of responsibility for the churches on those matters on which there is a general agreement;

"To serve as a clearing house of information about those things that are being done by its constituent bodies and other organizations affiliated or cooperating with it;

"To be an organ of publicity through which that which is of interest to all may be effectively conveyed to each and to the public;

"To function in other forms of cooperative work for which there may be no adequate provision."

"And there are also other concrete needs not now provided for in the Council's agencies which in our judgment call for some provision, either directly by the Federal Council or indirectly through it by related cooperative agencies. These include (1) the friendly and mutually assisting integration of the denominational promotional or forward movements, (2) the provision of some board or committee of forethought and outlook which will study and plan for us all, with no administrative authority, but to suggest approaching needs and the requisite preparations to meet them. (3) Some adequate arrangements for supplying information and interpretation regarding the work and activity of the churches. (4) An adequate, continuous, and wisely directed endeavor of all our forces in behalf of a more general acceptance of true principles of stewardship both of money and of life. (5) Some facilities for the general relationship of all the Christian organizations and activities of women which would provide them with a common meeting ground and clearing house and make the facts of their work and relationships accessible to the churches. (6) Some central study of the problem of lay activities in the churches and some helpful interrelation of the denominational efforts to deal with this problem. (7) The promotion of "works of serving love," of those deeds of mercy and benevolence in which Christians unite and which powerfully express their common faith. Many other suggestions have been made to us, but enough has been said to show the wide field of need and opportunity before the cooperative agency which the churches have created and may now use."

As a part of the report of the last mentioned committee the Council adopted the following:

"1. The Council believes that the time has come for fuller action on its part in the fulfillment of the purpose of its establishment 'for the prosecution of work that can be better done in union than in separation.' The Council instructs the Executive and Administrative Committees to plan the work of the Council in accordance with this view, ever having in mind its truly defined field of constitutional action and taking such steps as will maintain the closest possible relationships between it and the constituent denominations.

"2. The Council authorizes the Executive Committee, as assured resources may warrant, to strengthen the Secretarial Staff of the Council by the appointment of such additional secretaries as it may deem necessary to enable the Council to carry forward a larger work with the confidence and support of the churches.

"3. The Council requests the constituent bodies to provide for the support of the Council and its work on the scale of $300,000 per annum for the next two years, and it asks these bodies to accept their equitable apportionment of this amount, as may be suggested by the Administrative Committee.

"4. The Council authorizes such a conference with the interboard agencies as has been suggested, for the purposes specified, with the understanding that any general plan of cooperation involving the denominations in any way not already approved by them in connection with the Federal Council or the inter-board bodies must be referred to the denominational courts or other authorities.

"5. The Council approves the statement of the Committee on Methods of Cooperation with regard to the readiness of the Council to adjust its organization, within its constitutional character and responsibility to the churches, in any way that may be necessary to enable it to be of service to the churches or to any of their agencies.

"6. The Council expresses the conviction that out of the experiences and discussions of the present time there shall come the achievement of a richer form of expression of that 'spirit of fellowship, service, and cooperation' in which the Federal Council began and which it is its duty and its joy to promote."

Altogether the Federal Council has set for itself the largest task of its history and by so doing will help to inaugurate a new era of Christian activities.

A COVENANT IN BEHALF OF THE STARVING

So far as history records or reveals there was never as much hunger for bread, never so many starving people in the world as there are at this time. America is favored and blessed as no nation ever has been; but in Central Europe, because of the cruelty and devastation of war, and in Northern China, because of the worst famine ever known to man, men, women and children, more largely the last named, are simply dying by the thousands daily for lack of food. Three and a half million children in Central Europe and five times that number in Northern China will perish for want of food before the next harvest, unless American bounty and benevolence shall keep them alive. If the starving of the earth today were to form themselves into a bread line, allowing two feet of standing room to the person, that bread-line would extend all around the circuit of the earth on which we live.

No wonder the churches everywhere are getting anxious, active and uneasy. The people who are blessed of God in a time like this and will not hear and heed the ery of hunger as it wells up from millions of hungry, perishing human beings must be hard-hearted and pitiless indeed.

The writer was at our Dover, Delaware church the other day. The week before, the members of this church had agreed to fast on Wednesday at noon and on the following Sunday bring to church the price of this meal and send it to the sufferers. On the first Sunday over $160.00 was realized. And the people were very happy, so much so that they agreed to keep up the custom for six months to come. Accordingly a covenant was drawn up by the pastor and submitted to the members for their signatures individually. Here is that covenant which seems a wise and worthy one:

We the undersigned, knowing the tragical situation that exists in Armenia and in China by reason of the absolute lack of food and other necessities of life—there being more than three and half million women and children in Armenia and fifty million in China who are threatened with actual starvation unless relief is sent regularly until the next harvest; and realizing that the price of ordinary meal in this country will keep alive a woman or child in those countries for a week, we gladly and freely covenant ourselves to fast one meal each week for six months in order to enter in a small way into the fellowship of their suffering, and in recognition of our obligation to those less fortunate than we; and we agree to give the amount said meal would have cost as our minimum offering each Sunday to the famine stricken of China and the starving of Armenia, the offerings to be designated for these two purposes each alternating week. The amount thus given is a sacrificial offering and above our usual contributions to the local church and to benevolences.

It is understood that all those entering into this agreement, who can, will observe the fast Wednesday noon each week, so that by all entering into the fellowship at the same time a larger spiritual blessing will come to all those participating. Those who cannot observe the fast Wednesday noon will do so some other meal during the week.

We further covenant ourselves to pray during the fast hour in behalf of the suffering millions, and to pray also that the people of America among all classes will give generously and prayerfully to this the greatest need the world has ever witnessed.

It is suggested that those observing the fast gather around their bare table at the meal hour to talk over the contrast between the situations here and over there. Even the children who are six years old or more can well enter into this experience, as it will impress upon their minds the gratitude they should have for their daily blessings which they naturally assume will always be theirs. The sight of the bare table will impress upon the minds of the whole family most forcibly something of the feeling of the hopelessness that must come over the people in those distressed lands whose tables are bare not only for one meal but for every meal. Hungry, but having no food for that meal, and knowing there will be none for the next, and the next, and the next unless the Christian people of America send it, they continue to pray that we will send them bread.

Every person who enters this covenant will thereby be the means of keeping alive at least one person over there. And besides this the spiritual reaction that will come to our lives and to our church as a result of this practical Christian service will be most gratifying. It is not a big sacrifice, but it will mean the saving of a life for everyone who is willing to enter into this covenant.

The offerings are to be brought to the church or Sunday school each Sunday, and will be immediately forwarded to the proper agencies for distribution.

Names of those entering the above covenant:

Whether every church adopts this identical covenant or not, it is time for every Christian to inquire what his duty and privilege is in a time like this.

J. O. ATKINSON.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The year 1920 closes and the year 1921 opens with a pessimistic mind in the field of business; but this pessimistic mind may find the optimistic mind in the field of religion. Reactions in business are as fatal as reactions in religion, unless the better lesson of hope is learned in the school of adversity. The hardest lessons strengthen the mind most, and the hardest experiences develop strongest character in those who are exercised thereby. Hard times may be chastenings which, "for the present, seem grievous" nevertheless, afterward, yield the peaceable fruit of righteousness to them that are exercised thereby.

The whole world had run mad after dollars and pleasures. War had left a moral condition of unrest, licentiousness, dishonesty, and speculation that was leading to social and commercial bankruptcy. The Golden Rule was left out of the equation of human intercourse; and the young had no high standards of social and industrial integrity. Collapse always follows extravagance in speech, in conduct, in business, and politics. Such collapse means discouragement to the inexperienced, whether young or old.

But it is well to remember that the same land, the same money, the same population, the same necessity is here, and that human society will go on with its life and work. Expenditures will be less; pleasure will be reduced; independence will wane; but we will live on and learn our lessons as others have done before us. Prosperity is the bane of mankind. Adversity is the mint in which genuine gold is coined. This year 1921 should be a year of reflection, sane living, and return to God. If this does not bring people more regularly to the house of God—the "House of Prayer"—severer judgments may follow. This year, with its disappointment to farmers, labor, speculators, manufacturers; in fact, to all classes, opens well, compared with 1918, when influenza was digging new graves. Health is a big asset as 1921 opens with fine weather, and, to the grateful soul, with hope.

This is a time, above all others, when the people of God should practice self-denial and meet their obligations to the Lord and His Church. Never were so many written obligations in the hands of church officials, promises to pay to the churches of all denominations, and this is no time to put the Lord off. His claims come first as "in Him we live, and move, and have our being." If we put His claim aside, He may put our claim aside, because He wants to bring us to Himself. The prodigal's return shows where to go when failure stares us in the face. The father could not help his son until he returned; but then the best the father had was his to enjoy. The world cannot satisfy the needs of man and especially the needs of his soul. Listen to what Jesus said: "I have bread to eat that ye know not of." There is food for the soul as well as food for the body and mind. This year should have the best of our energy, our faith, and our service.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

LAUNCH OUT

(Address before the Woman's Missionary Conference, Holland, Va., By the President, Mrs. C. H. Rowland.)

Whenever we come to an occasion of this kind, our minds naturally revert and we take a retrospect of the year through which we have just come. As we do so on this occasion, we are impressed with the fact that great and far-reaching events have transpired on our church life. Soon after we adjourned last year, some of the leaders of our Church, during the sitting of the Christian Missionary Association, in the same church in which we had met, presented the idea of launching a movement that would be something of a test of our strength, as a denomination and which would give to every man, woman and child in the Christian Church the opportunity of having a part in it. This met with a hearty response throughout our Southern Christian Convention and our Men and Millions Movement, the history of which is familiar to us all, was the result. This was the most stupendous task ever undertaken by our Church and we believe its results will be more and more evident each year, both in funds, from those who have learned of the claim that God has upon them for a definite part of their possessions, and in increased workers from those who have felt His claim upon them for life service. In every church our women contributed largely to the success of the movement and none rejoiced more than we that such progressive steps were taken.

Scarcely had this campaign come to a close when all of our hearts were bowed in grief over the sudden taking away of one of our most beloved and useful missionaries, Rev. E. K. McCord, who fell asleep April 26, 1920. The passing of this great and good man necessarily made a great gap in our missionary ranks which we must endeavor to close up in order that the work may go on unimpeded.

Again, during the year we have had two new missionary families to go out and take their places on the firing line—Mr. and Mrs. McKnight to Japan, and Mr. and Mrs. Martin to Porto Rico. How much of cheer and encouragement this has meant to the missionaries and workers on the field we cannot know. While we should rejoice that our forces are thus increased, yet we realize that the number sent out is by no means in keeping with the increased need of workers if we are to take proper care of the fields already occupied, to say nothing of the places that have not been touched and are looking to us for help.

We have been successful in organizing a number of new societies this year. We must not let up in our efforts along this line until the women and young people of all our church have been enlisted. We believe that the grouping of our churches with a superintendent to direct will be the most effective way of accomplishing this. We would recommend to your consideration such a grouping as used in our Men and Millions campaign be adopted and that a superintendent be appointed for each group whose duty shall be to foster the work in the district wherever it is already begun and endeavor to organize where there are no organizations. It seems to me that we must come to some such practical plan as this, as we have no one who is sufficiently free to do the work alone.

At our last meeting in Portsmouth $1,200 was reported as having been raised for the purpose of a Foreign Missionary. There was no candidate offering to go at that time, and it was decided to put our money on deposit until Rev. H. S. Smith who was then at Yale University should be ready to go out. He is seeking to make thorough preparation and it will likely be another year before he is ready for service. He is hoping to go to China, and, together with Rev. H. S. Hardeastle, whom the North Carolina Woman's Conference having as their Living Link, open up a work there. We should make them and the work they are contemplating a subject of prayer, and continue to raise funds against the time when they will be ready to sail.

Last year we set out to raise $1,200 for the Washington, D. C. work as our Home Mission Special. How well we have done on this our Treasurer's report will show. This field needs our prayers and sympathetic interest as well as our means. Here we have an able worker, Rev. A. B. Kendall, who has gathered together about forty members. There are possibly two hundred of our people in the city and no doubt many of these will join in as soon as something permanent in the way of location and building has been decided up. They have been greatly handicapped, on account of having no suitable hall in which to worship. Our Mission Secretary says that the work here is promising but that it will require patience, perseverance and prayer. I have told you this that you may appreciate the difficulties they face and may be the better able to give them your sympathy and support. It seems to be that we will want to continue our support here.

Would that I had the power to portray to you the great opportunities that are ours as co-workers with Christ. There is one Scripture that comes to my mind that I believe our Lord would be saying to us of the Christian Church today, "Launch out into the deep and let down your nets." We have hung around the shore already too long. We need to launch out into the deep of a prayer life. Robert E. Speer says one hundred prayers would double the workers on the field. Have we not one hundred here today who could do this and not only increase the number of workers but enrich our own lives. How our missionary here from Porto Rico would rejoice if his workers were doubled. How the Japan workers would rejoice! When the Christian Church becomes in earnest in prayer, new fields will open to us and new opportunities will be afforded us and the church at home and abroad will throb with new life. To your knees, O! Christians.

We need to launch out into the deep of the world's misery. We who are so blest sometimes forget that one half of the world is bowed down in sin and ignorance; that there are one billion heathen living in darkness and despair; that India has twenty-two million child widows; that two-thirds of Japan is not yet reached by the Gospel; China with one-fourth of the world's population has only five hundred physicians; that there are one hundred and twenty millions unprovided for in the program of any missionary society. The pathos of it all would break our hearts if it were not that we have heard it so often that it has ceased to distress us. We need to pray that God may save us from becoming calloused and cold towards the sorrows and sufferings of others. We are willing to give that we do not need for ourselves in time and money, but are we willing to give that which costs us something? Are we willing to give that best gift? The message that Paul gave to the Corinthians comes to us today. Not yours, but you, it what the Master would have! So let us labor a little more zealously, give a little more heartily, pray a little more earnestly during this coming year for the need is so great and what we do, must be done quickly.

OUR ORPHANAGE

CHRISTMAS AT THE ORPHANAGE

In our financial report this week we came very near reaching $28,000.00 up to this time. Just a little more than $2,000.00 to raise to reach the goal. Every member in our Church should want to invest something in the Children's Home. The walls are up, the roof is on, and the windows are ready to be put in.

Don't you want to invest something in this new building for the little tots? Mail your check now and it will count in helping us reach our goal for the year. Help us now. We need your help right at this time. Then you will always be happy that you have something invested in this building.

Christmas was a very happy time for our children. A number of the churches and Sunday schools sent them presents and all enjoyed the presents they received. It was a happy time Christmas eve, when we called out the names of all the children and presented the first presents that came in for them.

"Old Santa" stopped at the First Christian church in Greensboro and left a treat for the Orphanage and next day two machine loads containing flour, oranges, apples, hams, sugar and many good things to eat came to visit us and made us all happy.

Our good friends of the Suffolk church sent us a box containing many useful articles for the use in the institution.

First Christian church, Berkley, Norfolk, two boxes with presents for each child; J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va., 100 lbs. candy, box oranges, bag peanuts; John King, Suffolk, Va., one box 50 lbs. candy; F. J. Strader, one box Apples; W. H. and F. M. Society, Fall Creek church, Ind., one box clothing; John H. Davidson, Westerly, R. I., one box presents for children; Class No. 8 First Sunday school, Troy, Ohio, one box presents for each child; Ladies Bible Class Third church, Norfolk, one box presents for each child; Ladies Union church, Va., 25 cans fruit; Ladies Aid Society, Pleasant Hill church, Albion, Ind., one box clothing; Riverside Hosiery Mills, 10 doz. Hose; Holland & Lee Co., Suffolk, Va., one bag peanuts; Mrs. T. E. Green, one box presents for the little children; Ladies of the Bethlehem church, E. Va. Conference, 17 1/2 gallons can fruit; Burlington Christian church, one box of towels, soap, spool thread, pins, apples, oranges and many useful articles; Mrs. T. J. Bentley, Springboro, Pa., one nice quilt; Salisbury Cotton Mills, 252 yds. cloth; Willing Workers Class First church, Goshen, Ind., one box of clothing for a little girl; Sunday school class First church, Goshen, Ind., one box clothing for girl; Miss Rosa Best, one quilt; Philathea Class First church Burlington, one box clothing for girl; Rev. P. T. Clapp, two barrels corn, one barrel flour; Ossipee Cotton Mills, 100 yds. outing; May Hosiery Mills, 15 doz. hose; Holy Neck High School, (Va), one box apples; Ladies Aid Society, Sanford church, one quilt, two pair sheets, towels, etc.; Farmers Co-operative Store, Oronoque, Kans., 63 pair shoes, 5 coats, 8 caps and scarfs; L. Banks Holt Mfg. Co., 50 yds. chambras; Lakeside Mills, 100 yds. gingham; Mebane Bedding Co., one mattress; Mrs. G. Bynum Gay, one box clothing and toys; Ladies Gill, Christian church, Boston, Mass., one box clothing; Mary E. Baird, Lincoln Kans., one quilt.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: I guess that all the children up there are looking for Santa Claus, and I hope that he will find them, and you, too. Mama says that Christmas comes mighty often, but I don't think so. W. T. is sick with a cold but I hope he will be better by Christmas. We had a Christmas tree at our school last week on Friday and we had a good time. Enclosed are our dues for December.

Hoping you and all the cousins a merry time.—Virginia Pearl and W. T. Ayscue.

Yes, our little children had a good Christmas. "Old Santa" was real kind to them and all of them received presents.—"Uncle Charley.

Dear Uncle Charley: We couldn't go to Sunday school last Sunday when our sisters took their Thank Offering, so we are mailing you a dollar each.—Eric and Kendall Whitaker.

We are very grateful for your liberal Thank Offering. It was real kind of you. I trust that you had a real nice Christmas.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am sending the children at the Orphanage a little Christmas gift of $1.00. This is my first Christmas in the world, but you may expect a little gift from me every Christmas in my life.—Margaret Lillian Cotten.

I am glad to see this little girl make such a beautiful start in life. "Charity" first. Love for the helpless and unfortunate. A splendid beginning.—"Uncle Charley."

VIEWS

Hello! Is that you Mary? Did you ask me if there were a Santa Claus? Why certainly there is a Santa Claus! Yes, he comes down the chimney, and up from the cellar, and through the front door, and by any route by which he can get into the house, and he is a joy-bringer, and a jolly good fellow. He brings gifts to you and loves you. Who is this? Oh, you are Mary's father, are you? You say we should not talk that way to Mary. You get off the line, you modern Mr. Primp. I am talking to a child, not to an old fossil. Yes, Mary, don't you let anybody make you believe there is no Santa Claus. Every child has a right to her fairy land, and she has a right to roam through all its enchanted isles.—The Methodist Protestant.

The devil is greatly interested now in having the ministry of the Christian Church to "soft pedal" redeeming grace through Jesus Christ. For he wants the world to take its eyes off our Lord and place them on that infinite word "God", the Anglo-Saxon word for good. Jesus Christ makes the human mind the conception of deity personal. We as Christians can have no other god than he brought to this earth. We want none other.—Exchange.

Since he armistice was signed, more than two years ago, many great changes have taken place—some for the better and some for the worse. The saddest and most far-reaching change has been from that attitude of deepening idealism and spiritual outlook of two years ago to an almost positive absorption of social ideals and strivings into gross materialism. Not in a long time has life been expressed so largely in terms of getting and receiving in a sensuous mercenary way as in this year of grace.—Christian Advocate (Nashville)

PARSONAGE AFFAIRS

A GREAT POUNDING

One of the greatest poundings I have ever had was thrust upon me by the generous hearted people of Concord when I went there to hold a quarterly conference on Saturday before the second Sunday in October. It was a complete surprise to me, and its generous proportions added still more to my surprise and my joy. Then several of the Bethlehem people attempted to finish the job by piling on some more. Every body at my house rejoiced and was glad except the Ford, and it even did itself credit by hauling the things all home at a single load. Now, if I could be a better preacher and pastor for the people who so generously contributed toward our winter supply of provisions I would feel still happier.

A. W. ANDES.

A NEW HOME AND A GREAT POUNDING

That is what they called it, but it was more. Yes, Christmas presents came with the pounding. We received in this pounding, including presents, some of almost every good thing to eat, such as cereals, sugar, canned fruit, jellies, salad dressing, olives, coconuts, butter, cheese, sausage, back bone, spare rib, potatoes, dried fruit, currants, flour, coffee, meal, bread, pound cakes, and a number of other things including Tanglefoot, to catch the few stray flies, brooms, silver ware, cut glass, candy for grandma and the children, stockings for wife and me, etc. etc., which means a big turkey gobbler and other things, including cash. Now this pounding was the product of, not only Wake Chapel church, but of friends of other churches, giving us a glad welcome to our new home at Fuquay Spring. This pounding went on for two days, including the day before we moved and the day after, so, that when we arrived at our new home we found rugs on the floors, lineolium on all the kitchen and butler's pantry floor, and a splendid new stove to cook all the good things that were brought.

One man waked up who didn't know we were being pounded, so he said: "There's my collards close by go and get them when ever you will." He went away and sent sugar also. Another friend, who is not a member of any church (and I am praying for him that he may be saved) gave good things and also said he was going to give us a Christmas turkey.

Well, I can say two things I believe, truthfully: First, I appreciate these things with all my heart, and want to be a better and more faithful servant of God to the people. Second, that it makes me feel small and not worthy to serve them.

Now, friends of the brotherhood, as long as I have a plenty to eat, you are cordially invited to come and dine with me, and to make my home your home, and may the richest blessings of our heavenly Father graciously be upon all who so kindly remembered us and bring us all together in that better place where there will be no need of pounding, but ever a glorious fellowship.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

PASTOR ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF GOOD SERVICE

On the second Sunday in December at our regular preaching service at Shiloh, after I had pronounced the benediction, I was speaking to the members, and two of the leading men of the church, Bros. J. E. Stout and W. J. Moffitt, took me by the arms and started out of the church, as if I was under arrest. They led me through the crowd that parted the way, seemingly for officers with a convict, until they led me to my Ford and said, "How do you like your ear?"

Then I knew what had taken place. The people had laden my Ford with many good things to eat, and money. When I came home and broke the news to Mrs. Banks, who was sick, we went through the lot and found almost everything in the kitchen catalogue.

I want to thank these good people through THE SUN to let the brotherhood know about this generous gift from the good people at Shiloh and to inspire some other church to arrest their pastor in the same way.

No one knows but those who have experienced it, what a joy comes to a fellow's soul when such a thing is done.

God bless these good people and that I may serve them more efficiently is the prayer of the recipients.

A. T. BANKS (AND WIFE.)

A PARSONAGE STORMED

A few nights ago, as we were sitting quietly by the fireside at home, suddenly we heard the laughter of merry voices on the street. Then there came notes of music, and the sound of feet on the steps at our front door. I proceeded to the door to find the cause. On opening the door a band of young people began to file in. As a result, the Sunday school Class No. 2, of the Wadley church, with their teacher and superintendent, replenished our pantry with flour, macat, syrup, sugar, coffee, and such like.

By their teacher, these gifts were presented, and were accepted with sincere thanks. After a few songs and a prayer, the happy class went their way. As we reviewed the "remains", our hearts went out with sincere gratitude to all who took part. And, here's wishing for each a merry, merry Christmas.

E. M. CARTER.

AND STILL ANOTHER

At New Elam church Sunday, December 12, I found something of the real Christmas spirit, though it was yet two full weeks ahead of Uncle Santa's regular schedule. After the morning service I was introduced to our little Ford, which was hardly recognizable because it had been given the appearance of a grocerman's delivery wagon. There were too many good things to eat to mention here. These were supplemented by a few checks, bank notes, etc.

Several of the good ladies of that church are responsible for the surprise, and informed us that "these are a few Christmas presents."

The New Elam People know how to care for their pastor. God's blessings be upon them.

CHURCH NEWS

VALLEY LETTER

I held a revival meeting at Joppa in the early fall resulting in two conversions and additions to the church. I then held a meeting at Bethlehem resulting in five conversions and additions to the church. Following this I held a meeting at Timber Ridge, resulting in ten conversions, and eight additions to the church. In this meeting I was ably assisted by Rev. G. O. Lankford of Berkley, Va., who did the preaching during the first half of the meeting. Pastoral duties in his own field then called him home, and I did the preaching myself during the remainder of the meeting. The people there liked Bro. Lankford very much both as a man and as a preacher. It was a great pleasure to me to have with me a friend and school-mate of former days. Being situated as I am I seldom have the pleasure and profit of association with any of my ministerial brethren.

Rev. R. P. Crumpler is filling the Page pastorate made vacant by the resignation of Rev. B. J. Earp. I have not seen him since his arrival here, but presume he is getting along well with his work.

Rev. C. A. McDaniel is getting a good hold on the situation at Winchester. The people there are very much pleased with him, and the prospects are fine for his doing a good work there.

Rev. J. C. Barrett has recently arrived to take some of the pastorless churches of the Conference. He is located in Harrisonburg, and will work his churches from there. He has hardly gotten started yet, but so far as I hear he is making a good impression at the outset. We still have several churches that Bro. Barrett can hardly take into his field. I feel very sorry for them, but I see nothing that can be done for them at present.

I feel that the Church everywhere will have to realize more forcibly than ever before the Master's exhortation, "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest." There are so many open doors of opportunity and need everywhere. Oh, that there were more efficient laborers to enter, and help win the world for Christ!

A WORD FROM NEWPORT NEWS

The Lightbourne-Davis meetings began here on the night of November twenty-third, and closed December fifth. Readers of THE SUN already know of the strength and force of Lightbourne as an evangelist and of the wonderful talent of his assistant. It will be sufficient, then, for me to say that they were up to the standard already set in their work. To me personally, their work was a real inspiration. And from the remarks I have heard I think that is the feeling of practically every one who attended the services. Brother Lightbourne's strong personality, his intense earnestness, his cultured and dignified bearing and his deep spirituality, impress, inspire and impel those who come in touch with him.

The weather and a revival conducted by a large Baptist church in this section of the city at the same time as ours, interfered considerably with the attendance. So there were not the great crowds attending the services which have greeted these brethren in other places. But the house was, several times, well filled, while at the closing service, the house was packed and some turned away.

The visible results were about twenty professions, a great number of reconsecrations and an awakened interest on the part of many. Nineteen new members have already been received into church fellowship and there are several others who will possibly unite here later. But Brother Lightbourne's influence is felt here in a much wider sphere than our individual congregation. While in the city he spoke at two noon meetings held in the great ship yard and in other ways came in touch with many people of the community. Next Sunday afternoon he has been invited by the Y. M. C. A. religious work director, to return to the city and speak at a great mass meeting for men, to be held in the auditorium of the Industrial

Y. M. C. A. While his work is in itself powerful, he is assisted in a great manner by the services of Sam Davis. It is inspiring and encouraging to see a man of such remarkable talent devoting all his energy and power to the spread of the gospel of Christ. Let us pray that the Father will send forth more such laborers as these into the harvest fields.

My work here is starting off very well. I find the people loyal and willing to work.

C. J. FELTON, Pastor

WINCHESTER, VA.

The Mission Secretary was, by invitation, at Winchester, Va., Sunday, December 19. Rev. C. A. McDaniel, the newly installed pastor, and his interesting family, wife and two girls, have been most cordially received and are happy in the confidence and fellowship of the Winchester church, where they have come to serve. Bro. McDaniel besides being a man of power in the pulpit, has a fondness, a skill and a voice for music which he uses to a great help and profit in his ministry. He rendered a solo, words and music of his own composition, at the morning service which was exceedingly appropriate, attractive, and inspiring. He like his distinguished father, (author of "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart" and other familiar hymns) is a writer of music of considerable repute, and an interpreter of song in a wholesome and masterful manner. His young daughter presides at the piano at church and is herself, a real musician in gospel service. The McDaniels are a musical family and a real asset to any church or community. Winchester is most fortunate indeed in securing them. Mrs. McDaniel is enlisted in every good work of the church and Sunday school and is an intelligent and sympathetic worker among the women and young people. One can readily foresee, and safely predict, a real constructive program of steady, healthful growth in our Winchester church, Sunday school Christian Endeavor and auxiliary Societies under the consecrated, spiritual leadership of Bro. McDaniel and family.

The Sunday school is a live and vigorous one. Roy A. Larrick is the wide-awake superintendent. Morris

E. Cather is the alert Secretary. Harry W. Seabright is the efficient Treasurer, and from the minute the school opens till time of closing there is something doing. It is a working and a constructive school. It is interested in missions, the Orphanage, and every other good thing that's going. By the way, if you want a live Sunday school with "pep", push and punch in it, one that is wholesome, happy and resourceful, you must put live wires at the head of it. One can tell in five minutes after entering a Sunday school room whether the officers are alive and on the job or not. Their spirit electrifies or paralyzes the whole school. That school is fortunate indeed that has officers in charge who know what they are there for—and then go after results and keep on going till results come.

Another word about the church. The writer was privileged to see the last annual report of the Church Treasurer, Roy A Larriek. It is a perfect model of neatness, accuracy and accountant's skill. One could heartily wish that every church treasurer in all our Convention could take the same pardonable pride in keeping the church finances straight, accurate and presentable as does the Treasurer of our Winchester church. Every penny is accounted for, and discernable at a glance, both as to source of income and object of expenditure. A church is fortunate indeed that has a treasurer that adorns his report with the genius of detail, the spirit of perfect accuracy, and the joy of neat, attractive service. It was the sage pen of George Eliot, was it not, that wrote "A thing well done makes that thing desirable to do". One wants to be a church treasurer prosaic and interesting as such work is, after seeing Larriek's manner and method of doing the thing.

The writer was housed, and gloriously entertained under the friendly roof of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Richards. Bro. Richards is a king in the apple market, and Sister Richards is a queen in all domestic arts, and in every church activity—a real leader in Christian service. One is inspired by the benedictions of such a home and is made most happy in the fellowship of such friends.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The congregation has changed its meeting place from Perpetual Building and Loan Hall in the down-town district to Stansbury Masonic Hall, Brightwood. The building is now well lighted, and heated and equipped with a new baby grand piano. It is located in the field which has been chosen as a suitable place to develop our work.

The Rev. Albert Godley, of the Purity Association and a servant of God, well known among our people at large, recently paid us a visit and brought a splendid message at the Sunday morning service.

Our Christmas exercises took the place of the sermon on Sunday morning December 26. Mrs. Kendall was chairman of the Committee on Program, and is deserving of much commendation for the splendid manner in which it was carried out. Some of our members were sick and some out of the city for the holiday season, but all those who had a part in the program performed their part well.

One distinct feature of the program was a tableau representing four holidays (including Christmas) by the Misses Lois Scott, Naomi Boyce, Mercy Cross and Lillian Vigross. The pastor gave a very appropriate chalk talk illustrating the Star of Bethlehem and the offering is to go to Near East relief.

 Benediction by the Pastor

Dean Brown preached a sermon of great simplicity and power, using as his text, Acts 5:15. "They brought the sick into the streets that the shadow of Peter might overshadow them." The topic was "The Power of Personality" and the great audience was wonderfully edified by the discourse. The singing was of a high order, as it always is at our Dover church, and the entire program was seemingly much appreciated and enjoyed. The church was festooned in evergreens for the occasion, and the happy throng that nearly filled the main auditorium was in a happy mood for the great and glad occasion.

Dr. Helfenstein, although pastor for only about two and a half months, has already won the hearts of his people and there was rejoicing in every quarter that the Lord had led in choosing and securing this man as their pastor. Unless every sign fails, Dr. Helfenstein will soon have not only a great congregation, but a powerful organization as well, for worship and for work in the Master's vineyard. His people are ready, united, willing and anxious, and with such a leader, intelligent, consecrated, energetic, wide-awake, there are infinite possibilities for service and Kingdom development at Dover.

After the program was concluded at the church, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Benson, loyal and loving hearts of the congregation, gave a beautiful supper at their hospitable home to which the speakers of the program and several intimate friends were invited. This prolonged and intensified the joyous fellowship of the evening, and gave to Dean Brown of Yale and Dr. L. E. Smith of Norfolk, the opportunity, which they employed to the rolicking delight of all, of telling some of their best stories and convulsing everyone with unspeakable laughter. Dr. Brown is as joyous at the supper table as he is edifying in the pulpit; and Dr. Smith is as eloquent in relating a dream and as delightfully startling in his conclusions, as he is pointed and powerful in portraying moral issues or in driving home a great spiritual truth. All of which, and much more that could be said, indicates that the party at the royal home of the Benson's was a perfect delight, thanks to the good ones who planned and provided it.

On Tuesday, Bro. Chadwick, Dr. Helfenstein, and the Mission Secretary drove to Wyoming, where at 10:00 a. m. we met the official board of the Christian church there, and several other faithful and loyal members, in a conference looking to the securing of a pastor for full time for the churches about Dover. The beloved and lamented Dr. A. W. Lightbourne not only planted the Dover church, but was instrumental in planting several others near by. Dr. R. S. Stephens, Rev. Wilson C. Moore and Bro. J. B. Chadwick, deserve great credit for keeping these churches alive and active. These churches are now desiring, as they richly deserve, a pastor who can devote to them full time service. A committee of five was appointed at Wyoming, and committees from the other congregations are to be solicited to cooperate with each other, and our Mission Board, in securing a much needed man for this important and ready work. There is great promise, and large opportunity for our Christian cause in Delaware and we need only the courage and wisdom to enter in and go forward.

BOGGS-JONES

On Saturday evening, December 25, 1920, Mr. Henry Boggs and Miss Marie Jones were united in marriage. They came to the parsonage of the Rose Hill Christian church and the writer said the words that made the two one. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few immediate friends. The happy pair have the best wishes of their many friends.

CALLED HOME

VAUGHAN

Mrs. Louisa S. Vaughan, wife of R. T. Vaughan, died December 19, 1920, aged 80 years, one month, and ten days. The only son preceded her to the spirit world. The husband, one brother, Mr. W. M. Cobb, Franklin, Va., and one sister, Mrs. J. K. Fox, Adams Grove, Va., survive her. She leaves many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Mrs. Vaughan united with Union Christian church when a girl, and when Bethany church was built she changed her membership to that church, and when Bethany disbanded she transferred to the Franklin Christian church. She was a consistent Christian, and loved the church with her whole heart. She was faithful to her home, to her church and to her friends.

The funeral services were conducted from the home by the pastor, and the interment was in the family burying ground near the home. A good woman is gone. The blessings of our Father be upon the bereaved husband and the loved ones.

C. H. ROWLAND

ROTH

Mrs. Lula Varner Roth, aged 34, died almost suddenly at her home in Chapel Hill on December 4, 1920.

Besides a large host of friends and other relatives, she leaves an infant child, a husband, father and mother and one brother.

The funeral services were conducted from the Chapel Hill Christian church of which she was a loyal and devoted member. An old teacher of her's, Rev. Mr. MacDuffie, and Rev. E. L. Baskir, both of the Baptist Church, took a part in the services.

B. J. HOWARD

POOL

Adeline Pool, wife of Hugh Pool, died December 26, 1920 at the age of seventy-two years. She professed faith in Christ at an early age and joined the Christian church at Shiloh, Randolph County, and remained a member until the organization of the church at Antioch where her membership was transferred. She was faithful in attending church services until ill health prevented. During her last days she told her husband that she was ready to die and was only waiting for the summons to come. She is survived by her husband, one brother and four sisters.

Funeral services and interment at Shiloh Christian church. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

W. N. HAYES

RIDDLE

Mrs. Eunice Riddle, wife of Bro. Kemp Riddle, passed away December 18, 1920, at the age of twenty-one years.

Mrs. Riddle had been a sufferer for several months, during which time she fought valiantly to stay the hour which meant parting from her young husband and infant child, father and mother, two brothers and four sisters, besides many sorrowing friends.

She was a consistent member of New Elam Christian church, from which place the funeral service was conducted by the writer.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—WICKER

On December 11, 1920, through a divine will, righteous, but mysterious dispensation of God's Providence, the cold hand of death removed from our midst our beloved and much adored friend, Mrs. D. A. Wicker.

She passed away at the tender age of twenty-nine years. All through her long and extended illness she remained patient and cheerful and expressed herself at all times as being willing and ready to meet her Savior.

This should be a great consolation to the bereaved husband and children that their irreparable loss and bereavement are her eternal gain and happiness.

Whereas, the Divine Ruler of the universe in His mysterious providence has seen fit to remove from us our worthy and beloved sister;

Therefore be it resolved:

First. That in the death of this noble and good woman the husband has lost a good, dutiful and faithful wife, the children a tender and loving mother.

Second. That our Missionary Society feels the keen loss of a good and faithful attendant and the community a beautiful character and a woman of many warm friends.

Third. That we cherish her memory for her noble qualities of heart, her true friendship and her faithfulness to her family as a loving wife and a most patient and enduring mother.

Fourth. That we deeply sympathize with her bereaved husband, her children, her sisters and brothers in this, their great sorrow, and point them to the great Comforter, who doeth all things well.

Fifth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, also copies to The Christian Sun, The Sanford Express, and the Woman's Missionary Society of which she was a true and faithful member as long as her health permitted.

Locating Him

Jenkins was sitting down to breakfast and was astounded to see in the paper an announcement of his own death. He rang up his friend Smith and asked, "Have you seen the notice of my death in the paper?" "Yes," replied Smith. "Where are you speaking from?"—The Christian Register.

No Retreat

THE EDITOR

THESSE are days of the downward trend with prices, money values, and economic changes. The Church went forward under war-time impulse. She had room to go forward, and it is regrettable that it took a world holocaust to cause her to throw out the life-line to a greater number of sinking men. But the life-line went out. It must stay out. The Church must send it out to a greater distance and extend its length. No retreat! No retreat!

"He hath sounded out the trumpet and onward is the watch-word of the hour. The Church cannot retreat. There is no place for her in a backward move.

Keep up the standards. Level up and not down. The watchman of the night is still unable to answer the question: "What of the night?"

No retreat for the Church. Let her tell the world that she can sound a "march" but cannot sound a "retreat".

"Out of the darkness of night
The world rolls into light:
It is daybreak everywhere."

*“For right is right since God is God,
 And right the day will win;
 To doubt would be disloyalty,
 To falter would be sin.”*

THE ART OF SERVICE

There are those who seem to have the art of serving. They are at the command of all things that are good and fit into every need and necessity. Sometimes we wonder if such persons are naturally adapted or if they have cultivated the habit from childhood. We are willing to grant the natural adaptations, but we feel that all of us may become more useful in service by cultivation of the habit.

The sense and duty of service should be instilled into the child early in life. The child should be taught that service is a noble thing. We are worth our place in the world only as we are able to render service to our fellowmen and to our God. Where there is service there is little selfishness.

PAYING OUR MEN AND MILLIONS PLEDGES

Making a pledge is easy; paying is the hard part, especially when money is scarce. News comes from many sources that payments on the Men and Millions Fund are lagging behind. Such a condition is only natural with the present money situation. The Church Boards should not, and we know will not, become discouraged. We also know that those who made pledges will not become despondent and say that they cannot meet them. It may be an evident fact that they will be difficult to meet now, at least in full. But all these pledges were made in good faith and we have the confidence in the people to believe that they will be paid.

It is simply a case of all of us doing the best we can, placing our trust in the Lord, and see that His cause does not suffer.

PROTECTING THE PUBLIC

Dr. W. P. Lawrence (No, it is now Hon. W. P. Lawrence) has introduced a bill in the North Carolina Senate to require all railroad crossings and state highways to be either overhead or undergrade crossings.

The great toll of human life that has been taken in recent years warrant some action along this line. It is true that the providing of such crossings would require a considerable outlay of money, but on the other hand each accident usually results into a big damage suit against the railroad company—and the company loses.

Human life is sacred and every possible effort should be made to protect the public. It is a matter of vital concern.

A TESTING

The Chicago Post, whose editor is an active church member, recently fell upon a unique plan of testing of the fraternal spirit of the Chicago churches. Reporters of The Post dressed in clothes of the outcast, or down-and-out, attended the Sunday services. A few gave them the glad hand, many passed them by, while others laughed at them. Here is some of the editor's language on the experiment: "Here were men who, by all appearance, stood in need of a pull upward. It was evident that they were ill clad and cold; it would have been natural to suppose that they might be hungry and jobless. Their immediate physical discomfort and material need formed the points of contact from which advances could be made to the needs of the spirit. Jesus never failed to make such points of contact. It is in no carping or ungracious humor that we note the Churches failed. It is beside the point to say that if any one of these men had asked for material assistance he would have been given it. The manifest poverty which evoked from the unchristian an avoidance should have called forth from the Christian something more to the immediate purpose than a kind word and a friendly smile."

DISARMAMENT

Much is being said nowadays about disarmament, all of which is in season. This same talk should have been going on many, many years ago. True it is that such has been advocated for a long time, and the discussion has never been taken into serious consideration. The seriousness of the situation seems to be getting into the mind of the people now. Here is the hope of THE CHRISTIAN SUN that the people will become so interested in the matter that some practical solution will be offered, and accepted, to take the place of mighty guns for the country's safety.

There are two schools of thought on the subject of disarmament. One is that the presence of a large force on land and sea will insure safety. The other is that so long as we train men and buy guns they will be used. The first idea has never worked. The latter speaks for itself.

It is true that no nation can disarm when others will not. Hence, it is necessary that nations get together on some basis and agree and carry out the agreement. It is for the lack of confidence that nations continue to build battleships and maintain a large army and navy force. Let the nations get together on some workable plan.

THE FLAG AND THE STAR

Just before Christmas some public minded, and no doubt well meaning man, advocated the placing of the American flag at the top of each Christmas tree. The Greensboro Daily News, which always writes sanely and soberly, paid its respects to the idea in its issue of December 24. "Why a Flag" was the topic under which The Daily News had the following to say:

But why should anybody stick an American flag at the top of the Christmas tree? The sort of patriotism that finds expression—and usually its only expression—in sticking American flags around in places where they don't belong fatigues us excessively. We sometimes suspect, indeed, that the excess of flag-waving patriotism in this country has tended to choke the growth of real patriotism. We could do with less cheering the flag if we might have less dodging the tax-collector.

This, however, strikes us as a particular ill-advised display of national colors. Are we undertaking to naturalize the Child of Bethlehem? It would be a typically American undertaking. We have recently assumed the monopoly of all virtue, all wisdom, all justice, all truth, and informed the rest of the world that, as soon as we get a new President in the White House, he will undertake to settle all the affairs of mankind on a better basis than they could possibly settle them for themselves. What more natural than that we should assume that the Child, if He were on earth today, would promptly apply for admission at Ellis Island, and should consequently raise the Stars and Stripes above His star?

After all, He who was born in Bethlehem had only one star; the American flag has 48. Naturally, then, the American flag is 48 times better than the banner of the Prince of Peace—just such blasphemous conceit led Germany to her downfall. Are we as addle-pated as the ridiculous figure that once strutted up and down the halls of Potsdam?

THE MOB SPIRIT AGAINST NEGROES

"There was no series of mob violence against Negroes during 1920 comparable to the succession of 1919 in Chicago, Washington, Omaha, Knoxville and Elaine," according to the report of the Joint Committee of the Home Missions Council and Council of Women for Home Missions. The report continues: "In the latter case though six Negroes have been hanged it growingly appears that for those still in prison justice is more nearly to have its sway through the courts of Arkansas than was feared a year ago. The one exception in the year 1920 of wholesale slaughter of Negroes is that of Ocoee, Orange County, Florida. An election riot is responsible for the deaths of thirty or more Negroes and of white people reported as two at the minimum, eight or ten at the maximum. Particularly gruesome as revealing lack of discrimination by mobs was the death of a colored mother of Ocoee and her two weeks old infant. Though the extent of its influence has been exaggerated in the press, evidence of the revival of the organized methods of the Ku Klux Klan in a number of centers in the South is strongly against it. It is to be hoped that the passing of the tense situation of election time, the rising tide of inter-racial good-will throughout the South and the impossibility of frightening the Negro as in his less civilized state of forty or fifty years ago, as well as other factors, will stay the tendency toward this secret organization of lawlessness. The lynching record for 1920 in the country as a whole, white and black together, stands at 59 as against 77 in 1919. This number includes the three Negroes hanged in Duluth, Minnesota, on June 15 and the three white men murdered in Santa Rosa, California, on December 10."

A WORTH WHILE INVENTION

The other day we were asked to call by a brother minister's study for a consultation. We gladly complied with the request and we feel that the trip gave us a knowledge of something that should be of benefit to our ministerial readers.

Did you ever happen to lay aside the notes on a sermon, some illustration, some poem, or something of the kind, and have difficulty in finding it? In short, haven't you been taking your sermons out of your note book, packing them up in some table drawer about your study, and then have the pleasure (?) of finding a certain sermon when you needed it on short notice? Let us presume that you have had these difficulties with more added.

The fellow minister who called us into his study for counsel has, it seems to us, worked out something that is practical and will meet a great need in the pastor's study. We refer to a sermon filing case designed and made by Rev. S. W. Taylor, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church, Burlington, N. C. Brother Taylor is a preacher of the first magnitude and lays no claim to cabinet making, yet he has made the model cabinet with his own hands and every part and particular is modern, well finished, and would grace any pastor's study. He has devised an index system that works by numbers so that he can catalogue and keep for quick and ready reference any research work that he may do. The cabinet is about 3½ or 4 feet high, about 12 inches wide, contains four drawers for numerical and alphabetical filing in large envelopes of sermons, notes, manuscript leaves, etc. There is one additional drawer for manuscript paper, your loose leaf note book, etc.

Brother Taylor has not only followed practical lines in working out the cabinet and system of filing, but has invented a "follow block" to hold the large envelopes in place, this block being removable in an instant. The Government is soon to grant him a patent on his invention and a furniture manufacturing company is now working on some of the cabinets. It appears to us that Brother Taylor has designed and made perfect a useful thing for the pastor's study.

THE QUESTION OF DISARMAMENT

No other question seems more paramount at present than the question of disarmament. The nations of the world are aroused to the point where they have got to make a decision either for or against disarmament. Two years have passed since the signing of the Armistice of the War against Prussian militarism, and Germany is unquestionably beaten; yet, at the beginning of the New Year, the present world powers look back and find that since the war very little has been done towards actually casting away the future prospects of the enemy, militarism, against which they fought.

The League of Nations has discussed the question of disarmament pro and con but has been unable to decide upon any definite program so long as large powers like the United States, Russia and Germany are not represented in the assembly and fail to agree to any similar plan for disarmament. Japan, for example, though a member of the League, could not consent to disarm while her American neighbor talks of building more battle-ships and increasing the strength of its already powerful navy.

Since the League of Nations has been blocked in its attempt to effect disarmament among its members, the decision has involved more and more upon the United States. The result is that this country is responding to the situation. Following the campaign of The New York World the American press seems to awaken to the cause of reduction of armament. Statesmen, Congressmen and Senators are nearly all agreed that there must be a world conference immediately, and that some kind of a reduction of armament be made before it is too late.

PROHIBITION ON AMERICAN SHIPS

Wherever the American flag flies there will be prohibition according to the decision of William L. Frierson, acting Attorney General of the United States with reference to the area of application of the Eighteenth Amendment. Thus, whether an American ship be in American waters, on the high seas or in foreign waters, the prohibition act will apply equally with those on board as if they were in the United States. The opinion rendered by Mr. Frierson is that "the National Prohibition Act does not contain any language limiting the territory within which it is to be in effect, and is in force throughout the jurisdiction of the United States."

ONE-THOUSAND-DOLLAR-A-PLATE DINNER

Mr. Herbert Hoover made a speech to more than a thousand of the wealthy citizens of New York City in the Commodore Hotel, telling them of the necessity for immediate relief of the starving people of Europe. After Mr. Hoover's speech, a dinner was served which cost each member of the audience $1,000, yet, no one ate more than nineteen cents worth of food. The rest went for the relief fund, and the lives of more than 200,000 people were insured until next harvest time.

Mr. Hoover made this suggestion:

"Put an empty chair at the table at every meal. The sight if it will remind you of the suffering children in Europe, the invisible guest, whom your gift of $10 will keep alive till next harvest."

MOTHER'S PENSION MOVEMENT

In order that mothers of the United States may not suffer and lack the cares of home life, forty-eight states have now adopted some form of Mothers' Pension according to the annual report of the Chief of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor. The rapid extension of the movement for mothers' pensions indicates the value which American people place in their home life. The principle of the movement holds that the children should not be taken from their mothers because of poverty alone. Large grants have also been made in many states for the relief of suffering mothers, but these have not been adequate to supply their needs.

PURITY

By Wightman F. Melton

Some say that heaven is far away—

To find it one must go!

But heaven came to me one day:

I looked unto her face and, lo!

No mark was there of sin or greed,

Or human woe or human need,

And loveliness was there, upon

Her sky-born features, every one;

Her forehead fair,

Her soft, brown hair,

Her lips and glorious eyes

Suggested paradise!

And now I am resolved to be

Champion to her purity.

SANE SAYINGS

If you intend to go to work, there is no place better than where you are. If you do not intend to go to work, you cannot get along anywhere.—Abraham Lincoln.

Love is an awakening, an inspiration, dulling the edge of resentment, sharpening the eloquence of wit, impoverishing distinction, guaranteeing equality, and proclaiming the omnipotence of God.—Willis George Emerson.

We are in danger of getting so used to things that we do not realize their worth. It is bad for a man to get used to God's love, to the comforts of home, and the blessing of health. It is a bit of the hurt of sin stupefying our senses when it is so. We should aim to cultivate the same freshness of appreciation of our blessings as when these blessings came.—S. D. Gordon.

CONTRIBUTIONS

THE COUNTRY CHURCH PLANT

THE country church's greatest need is leaders and equipment. It is a sad fact that most of our young people who receive the required amount of training for leadership, are called away to other fields; or on their own account, seek employment elsewhere. Our rural districts need the help of a well disciplined, well organized church. Today the farmers of North Carolina have three hundred and seventy-five boys enrolled in our State University. This number exceeds the number of sons, of men, of any other vocation by two hundred and fifty-six. When these men complete their training they will be taken from the country by the lure of the city and by the unattractiveness of the rural districts.

Country churches are called upon to minister to a majority of our people because of the distribution of our population. They have a splendid opportunity for expansion because of the well grooved church-going habit of country people. And the people need the guidance of well trained leaders. If we undertake to remodel our present rural churches without making a change for betterment in leadership, we will be guilty of an inexcusable crime. The need for a more efficient leadership is manifest in the fact that during our late war a large mass of men were assembled who were found separated from and even ignorant of the Christian faith. A large majority of this group were men from rural communities. The revelation of the extent of this ignorance goes to show something of the educational task of the church.

Someone has said that when our people ever see a need they will rally to the cause. I trust this statement is no mistake. If not, the rural church must arise from its rest; shake off the weariness of slumber and like the right arm of a great strong man reach out in efficient service to those who are in need.

And now for the equipment. In most of our rural communities we have a large, spacious, one-room building for a church. This building is hot in summer because of poor ventilation: It is cold in winter because of improper heating. The grounds about the church are unkept. These are the reasons why the country church cannot hold its boys and girls. And this is the reason for many boys and girls growing up without knowing Jesus Christ.

A new day has dawned and it must be well used if we would do our duty by the rural church. In the first place allow me to say that many new churches will have to be built. A few already have a good housing capacity. Many can be remodeled. If a church is to be built do not build it for this year; but for years to come. Build a modern church for a prosperous people. Have it simple and yet beautiful. A calm, stately beauty which will command respect and attention. The country church should be the community center. Around it should center the religious and social activities of the community. Adequate rooms must be supplied, well ventilated and well equipped. A gymnasium will be needed. Where this is impractical a large playground should be arranged. The grounds about the church should be well kept. A beautiful hedge and flowers will add much to the life of a church. Often have I been to a small town and would notice the attractiveness of the grounds around the station; go from there to the church only to find a cold, desolate looking building. Pleasant surroundings make a happy people and a satisfied community can serve God best.

Some churches can greatly improve their ability to serve by the curtain system. Others by building additional rooms. The country church should rarely ever be more than one story high. Let the one room of the old church be the auditorium. Around it build as many rooms as needed and have the rooms well equipped and attractive looking. Be sure your church will measure up with the average home in your community.

OUR MERRY CRIPPLE

Her many friends, and they are legion, will learn with regret that Miss Iola Hedgepeth, Fancy Gap, Va., who is doing such effective work for us in the Virginia mountains, fell from a wagon just before Christmas and broke her arm. "I was on my way", reads her letter, "to a store to purchase or see about some things for my school children's Christmas party. As I went to step from the wagon I fell on both hands, crushing my left arm about the wrist joint. The folks did their best to secure a physician immediately. Being unable to do so, an auto was called from Hillsville. The trip to town—quite a long one—was of course painful, but I bore it very well. One of the best old women I ever knew went with me. They took me to a most competent doctor, but reached there too late for a successful setting without putting me to sleep. After the anesthetic and the operation I was unable to start back the long trip over the mountains the same day. We started on a car early next morning but the car broke down and we had to walk most of the way back, as we simply could not secure a conveyance. I came as far back as the house of the good old lady who went with me to the doctor's and she has cared for me in her home till today when she brought me back to my boarding place. Am quite torn up and broken down, but am well cared for and am trying not to see the dark side. School will be suspended for some days, perhaps, and many of my plans for Christmas for these dear people will have to be given up. It is too early to say how I can get along, but I am enjoying the fire, reading and trying to write. The Lord is blessing me with all the kindness and comforts that these friends can offer. With the hope of resuming my full duties in a few weeks, I am playing the "Glad Game" by rejoicing that it is my left arm and not my right that is broken."

Miss Hedgepeth is a genuine "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" (Yes, or a second Pollyanna—C. B. R.) and can be cheerful under trying circumstances. By the time these lines are in print we trust she will be at her school again. She regrets most of all that her school children, who had never known what Santa Claus and Christmas were, had to wait till another year to find out. As soon as she is able to ride she is to have a horse that she may get around over the hills without broken arms, and today I am writing her to purchase a gentle horse for the work, one of our generous-hearted, wide-awake missionary Sunday schools, having said I might do so and they would pay for the horse.

I am wondering what school, or church, or person, is going to donate that organ she needs at her Sunday school services. It will be a timely gift, and one most helpful for the work—if you know of any one who has an organ that can be given for such a purpose, I will pay the freight.

THE SUBURBAN CHURCH PLANT

When building a church for a suburb the first thing which is to be considered is the location. Many times the location of a church on the outskirts of a city is so located as to be disturbed by the noise of a mill, or some other kind of works. Hence it is impossible at most times to have successful weekday services. The church should be located on one single block out of reach of all other buildings and any noise that would likely disturb any service.

The next thing to claim the attention is the site. It should be carefully located in the block which has been obtained for the building. The church should be far enough from the walk to have shrubbery and flowers around the front of the building. Proper arrangement will add to beauty and effect.

Now comes the building proper. For the suburbs, a building of a capacity of about two hundred in the Sunday school is necessary. Present day conditions demand a school of this size to have an auditorium which would seat at least three or four hundred on special occasions. The cost for a building, which I shall map out, should be about $10,000 under normal conditions. In order to build it at this cost, and have the rooms for the different departments, it should be as follows: For the Beginners—one class room large enough to be divided into two by a curtain or a folding door. For the Juniors—one room large enough to be divided into four by curtains. The primary department should have one class room so as to be divided into three. The Intermediate class room should be large enough to be divided into four rooms by curtains. The Seniors should have a room large enough to be divided into two rooms. The Adults should have two rooms, or one large enough to divide it with curtains.

By a plan of this kind, and the school properly divided and classed according to grades and age, there would be an accommodation for two hundred. This would make five department rooms and seventeen class rooms. All of these should be on the same floor with the church auditorium. In the basement there could be the library, heating plant, and a gymnasium. The basement could be used in extremely bad weather.

As for the athletics and play grounds, I do not think that it would be necessary for the church to go to that expense in a location of this kind, as usually the owners of the manufacturing establishments have play grounds already equipped. The thing that would be necessary in that case would be to have the church to see to the direction of the grounds. However, if the industrial plants did not have a play ground properly equipped, the church could do so on the back lot of the church yard. In this way each phase of life could be protected and cultivated by the church school in the suburban districts.

CONFRONTING CIVILIZATION'S CRISIS

(A New Year Appeal By Laymen For Prayer)

These are troubled times. Every thoughtful person faces the New Year with deep concern. The world outlook is deemed gravest by those who best know international conditions. Our own favored America fronts many-sided problems that will tax our every resource. We are surely in the midst of days of destiny.

In the realm of individual life the times are testing our soul-stuff. Business men are carrying burdens that fairly break hearts. Many workingmen and their families are already experiencing the bitter pinch of real want. The weight of the world's woe is pressing heavily upon us all. Human spirits everywhere are hungry for comfort and guidance.

What shall we do about it all? For do something we must: the hour is too critical for drifting.

The laymen who sign and issue this paper so do because of a deep conviction that only by spiritual forces may our civilization be saved from the unprecedented perils that beset it. The only way out is the way up.

Holding no ecclesiastical positions, and representing, quote unofficially, various branches of the Christian Church, we take this unusual step of appealing directly, through the public press, to men and women of all faiths, who believe in an Omnipotent God and in the power of prayer, to join us in a common and concerted and continuous exercise of intercession, to the end that humanity everywhere, torn as it is by dissension, and suffering many kinds of ill effects of the world-war, may turn to the patient Father in Heaven for new motives and guidance and succor.

Our world will never get right with itself until it gets right with God. Only spiritual remedies can cure the present ills of mankind.

Therefore we call upon all who believe that the living God hears and answers prayer to offer daily petitions in behalf of our troubled world—with all its international strife and jealousies and self-seeking; with its industrial unrest, its social unrest and its political unrest,—that the Lord Almighty may suffuse the hearts of all people everywhere with a consuming desire to seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness. Then all other things needful may be added unto us, as promised by our Lord Jesus Christ.

We crave for ourselves and for our time a revival of the sense of the reality of God, and of our dependence upon Him, and of a spirit of loyalty to Him.

Because of the extraordinary part he must take in the affairs of our nation and of the world at this most difficult time, we also ask that daily prayer be made for the President-elect of the United States, that he may be illumined and sustained for his trying tasks by the very power of the Highest.

As says the Apostle: "I exhort, therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions, thanksgivings, be made for all men; for kings and all that are in high places; that we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all godliness and gravity."

Nor can we forget our stricken President, for whom we would also tenderly pray.

By way of the throne of a prayer-answering God, even the least of us may wield a power for patriotism and for universal good will beyond all human calculation.

"Pray for my soul. More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of. Wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain,
If, knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friend?
For so the whole round earth is every way
Bound by golden chains about the feet of God."

So we entreat all spiritually-minded persons, in whatever ways and at whatever times individual judgment may suggest, to engage, privately or publicly, in daily prayer that the very gravity of present world conditions may drive us all to the Eternal God who is our refuge, and who is the only Light in our darkness. In Him we shall find peace and good will, and power for the task of remaking the world.

"All things, whatever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive."

Manufacturers Record

The Old Year opened in a blaze of almost limitless activity and prosperity. Formers and mechanics were as prosperous as merchants and manufacturers. The demand for labor exceeded the supply. No one who wanted to work lacked the opportunity. The Old Year ends and the New Year will open, with many people out of employment, with stagnation everywhere as compared with the activity of twelve months ago; but it is in the power of the American people to make the New Year, before it closes, show prosperity as wide and employment as general as was the condition twelve months ago.

Inherently every condition justifies optimism and activity. We have had no epidemics of disease to sweep over the land, no drought to destroy our crops, no floods to wash away railroads and bridges, and no earthquakes to shatter down our structures; we have simply been suffering from the unwise action of men in financial leadership wholly incompetent for their task.

We have been paying the penalty for some of the wild extravagance and graft and kindred work of the last eight years, and more especially of the four years of war.

We are paying the penalty for the nation's cowardly surrender in 1916 to the railroad brotherhoods, which inaugurated an era of turmoil and unrest in labor and created the impression in the minds of millions of people that they had a right to bring on a revolution and demand that all of their wishes be fulfilled just as the railroad men had accomplished their aims by the nation's cowardly breakdown when the pistol was held at the head of Congress and the Administration.

But we can put all these things behind us. We have raised abundant crops, our barns are bursting with riches of food and feed. The shelves of the world are bare of the things that we can produce and have in abundance. We only need courage under the leadership of the hour to go forward to a greater prosperity than that which ushered in the year that is now passing out.

Then, up with the spirit of optimism! down with the spirit of pessimism! Let all Americans unite for the unbuilding of the whole country, for putting aside class hatred, for the greatest efficiency in work and the largest pay which the business can stand, for suppressing graft and honoring honesty, for that patriotism which can find expression in working for the business advancement of the country as wholesomely as it worked for the saving of the nation from barbarism.

The future is ours; the opportunities limitless. If we make the most of the situation, the coming year will bring an abundance of prosperity to every nation and to every industry.

Put your shoulder to the wheel!

LIGHTBOURNE AND DAVIS

Rev. Victor Lightbourne has just closed a wonderfully successful year as evangelist of the Southern Christian Convention. Since last June there has been associated with him, Sam Leonard Davis, a blind pianist of wonderful worth and merit. These two together make an effectual team for evangelistic service, as Lightbourne has a marked pulpit power and is safe and sane in his evangelistic methods of presenting his message; and Davis has wonderful power in attracting an audience and in bringing the people to worship through the melody of music. They have had great meetings wherever they have been and are doing a work in the field of evangelism not heretofore equalled amongst us.

Any pastors or churches in our communion, North, South, East or West, desiring a great evangelistic campaign should write Dr. C. H. Rowland, Chairman Evangelistic Committee, Franklin, Virginia.

The work these evangelists have done commends them most highly and no church will make a mistake in securing their service. Thus far their audiences have been limited by the capacity of the building in which they held services. Dates are now being made for the year 1921 and it is hoped that many of our churches will avail themselves of this opportunity. The past years' results in increased membership to the churches, the renewed spiritual activities and the revivals that have attended these services warrant the conclusion that any church is highly favored that secure this talented pair for an evangelistic campaign.

PROTECTION OF THE SABBATH AS A CIVIL INSTITUTION

The following resolutions were recently adopted by the National Reform Association at its annual meeting in Pittsburgh, Pa.

WHEREAS, The Lord's Day from the beginning of the American Republic has been regarded as a civil institution and a source of great moral and material benefit to the whole people and consequently has ever been given legal protection by the State; and

WHEREAS, Certain anti-Christian and un-American forces have conspired together to break down the legal safeguards whereby the right to the enjoyment of the weekly Rest Day is secured and

WHEREAS, These antagonistic forces are seeking to bring this institution and the laws by which it is protected into disrepute by misrepresentation, ridicule, and caricature, and by falsifying the purpose of the forces that are laboring for its maintenance; Therefore

RESOLVED, That the National Reform Association, holding its annual meeting in the city of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, place before the public the following declaration concerning the American conception of the Weekly Rest Day and of the attitude of this and other reform organizations toward this institution and its legal safeguards.

1. The existence of this institution and of laws for its protection have ever been distinguishing features of our country and form a most important part of the argument of the Supreme Court of the United States in the famous Trinity Church case leading up to the declaration that "This is a Christian Nation."

2. Rest Day laws are designed to protect the people of every rank and occupation in their right to a day of rest from secular activities one day in seven. They lay no positive obligation upon the people to perform any religious act, but are merely prohibitive of such activities as invade this right.

3. The constitution of the United States itself safeguards the Rest Day right of the President by the words "Sundays excepted" in the clause giving him ten days for the consideration of bills passed by Congress.

4. Official orders relating to the various departments of government protect the right to a day or rest of the employees in these departments.

5. Forty-six States of the American Union have laws safeguarding the weekly rest day, the full physical and moral benefits of which however, have been much impaired by the multitudinous exceptions made to the application of their prohibitive clauses.

6. With scarcely an exception the courts of our country have declared these laws to be constitutional and a source of great material and moral benefit not only to individuals but to the nation itself.

Without exception, and with singular insight into the true significance of this institution, the courts have drawn the proper distinction between the functions of the State and the functions of the Church in this matter. It is distinctly recognized that no statute can properly require the performance of any religious act; that many things pertaining to Sabbath observance must be left to the individual conscience and to the educational and disciplinary influence of the Church; that the function of the State is fully performed when it has secured to all the people the right to the enjoyment of this institution by stopping its own machinery on the day designated by law and by securing the cessation of all activities that prevent its proper observance and which promote public immorality. Moreover, some of our courts even recognize the fact that the weekly rest day is a divine institution; civil government therefore as God's institution for promoting civil order is acting within its own proper sphere when it affords legal protection to the day of rest in so far as it is a civil institution.

7. As Christian citizens we are devoted to the maintenance of the Sabbath because of its vital relation to our political system, its influence upon our national character, its bearing upon the physical, mental and moral well being of the people, its absolute necessity if our free institutions are to be preserved, and because it has been divinely ordained for the benefit of individuals and nations.

We therefore condemn as un-democratic, un-American and un-Christian all efforts to abolish this institution or to render the laws by which it is protected inoperative. We protest against the insidious efforts now so frequently made to nullify rest day laws by the introduction of athletic games and sports on the condition that no admission fee is charged. The institution is nullified when the day is secularized even though no commercial feature is involved. We pledge ourselves to the maintenance of the American as opposed to the Continental theory of the Lord's Day and will strive to preserve it in its integrity and to secure the consistent enforcement of the law by which it is protected.

GIVING

By C. Vernon Fox, M. D.

"Give and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again."—Luke 6:38.

Every good work, performed with right motives, in God's way, is accompanied or followed by blessings of some kind upon him who does it.

It is a divine law that the good we do comes back to us again.

"Give, and it shall be given to you." "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy." "He that soweth bountifully shall also reap bountifully." "Cast thy bread upon the waters and after many days it shall return."

Emerson says, "Life consists in benefit," then asks the question, "Who is greatest, he who receives or he who confers the most benefit?"

Jesus answered the question when He said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant: even as the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

Jesus taught that true religion is more than a code of morals, that it is a life of love and of sacrifice for the benefit of others. Nothing more directly fosters love, and nothing more clearly proves love than the giving of gifts.

The happiness of God is in His Infinite Beneficence. When we give, in sympathy and love, we share in this divine beneficence, we become in part like God, we find our greatest joy in being kind and merciful to those in need. To love, to bless, to benefit is to be God-like, no other activity is so blessed or so divine. Alas! for him who has never experienced the joy of being a benefactor.

All giving that is worthy the name involves love, self-denial, and sacrifice on the part of the giver. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son,"

SUFFOLK LETTER

No organization can live and make progress without an organ through which to keep its constituency informed of its activities and to propagate its principles. "Mail order houses" send out their catalogues by the car load, all over the country; political parties have their papers to represent their political doctrines; religious denominations have their papers to propagate their doctrines and to keep alive denominational activities. The Herald of Gospel Liberty, the oldest religious paper in the world, edited by Rev. A. M. Kerr, D. D., Dayton, Ohio, is the organ of the American Christian Convention. Without that paper the constituency of the Christian Church would know very little about its activities or its prospects. Even with that great paper, issued every week, there are members of the Christian Church in the United States who do not know that Rev. F. G. Coffin, D. D., is President of the American Christian Convention. Without The Herald of Gospel Liberty, ignorance on the part of the Church would be appalling. All ministers and Church leaders at least, should take The Herald.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is the organ of the Southern Christian Convention. It was founded in 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr, and it is a singular fact that the founder and first editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and the present editor of The Herald of Gospel Liberty, have the same name—Kerr. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is now published at Burlington, N. C., and edited by Rev. C. B. Riddle. Every family in the Southern Christian Convention should subscribe for THE SUN. The cost of $2.50 per year is small—less than five cents per week; yet Christian men will pay five cents on the train for a paper and think nothing of the cost. No preacher or family can keep posted as to the work of the Church unless they read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. A little thought and analysis of obligation on the part of Church members would double the subscription list which would greatly increase the usefulness of the paper. I do not now remember a Church member who lost interest in the Church who read THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I have known members to drop their subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and then lose interest in the activities of the Church. THE SUN is an essential factor in the life and development of the institutions of the Southern Christian Convention. How could Elon College, the Christian Orphanage, and Missions live without THE CHRISTIAN SUN? To subscribe for THE SUN is to help, indirectly, all these worthy and benevolent institutions. A member of the Church cannot spend $2.50 in any other way that will do as much good as $2.50 spent for THE CHRISTIAN SUN for a year.

One other thing, laymen should speak to their neighbors and persuade them to subscribe for THE SUN. Do not leave this task to the preacher. It is a layman's job; and it is a privilege, too. When you secure a subscription from your fellow member, you do him a kindness, and he will do more for the Church. Let every subscriber try to get one new subscription in this good month of January 1921.

W. W. STALEY,

THE BULLETIN

PERSONAL

Superintendent Johnston of the Orphanage gives a fine report in this issue. Let us help him to reach the goal.

A loyal subscriber writes and asks forgiveness for being three days late with his renewal. We have decided to forgive him.

Dr. Atkinson on another page of this issue tells of a painful injury sustained by Miss Iola Hedgepeth, our mountain missionary teacher.

We have received bulletins from Richmond, Va., and Raleigh, N. C., churches indicating that forward steps are being made by each of these churches.

We entertain the hope that pastors in planning for the year's work will keep in mind the service of our Evangelist, Rev. Victor Lightbourne, and communicate with Dr. C. H. Rowland, Chairman, for engagements.

Our good friend, John Hall, a member of the Burlington church, has led all the salesmen in his district for a number of years in selling Star Brand Shoes. During 1920 he sold $779,516.00 worth of shoes—an increase over 1919 of $179,312.00. Some salesman! Some shoes! Some money!

In giving a summary of last week's CHRISTIAN SUN, we failed to mention the article by Miss Lucy Eldredge on "The City Church Plant". We had in mind to make special mention of this, as it well deserves it. However, in checking over the proof sheets it was overlooked. Two articles on the same topic appear this week by Messrs. Scott and McCauley. We invite attention to all these articles and feel that they are timely.

Rev. J. F. McCulloch, D. D., Editor Methodist Protestant Herald, Greensboro, N. C., preached at the Burlington Christian church last Sunday morning. Dr. McCulloch is not only a hard worker in the field of Church Journalism, but a sweet spirited associate and a good preacher. THE SUN'S Editor was glad to have Dr. McCulloch and Rev. S. W. Taylor, pastor of the Burlington Methodist church, to dine with him and his that day.

Brother John King, Suffolk, Va., who is a great churchman, business man, and enterprising citizen (though he says he is just a farmer growing "hogs and hominy") has sent out a dispatch calling upon his fellow citizens to give up the idea of profiteering and get to work. He says "that farmers, jobbers, and retailers must join hands and save the farmer—the goose that lays the golden egg."

WHAT TO DO WITH THE ANNUAL

The following instructions should be observed in distributing The Christian Annuals:

Virginia Valley Conference—Sell at twenty-five cents the copy—that being one-half price.

Alabama Conference—Distribute among the churches to the best possible advantage.

Georgia and Alabama Conference—Distribute among the churches to the best possible advantage.

Eastern Virginia Conference—Sell at twenty-five cents the copy and remit to H. Woodward, Treasurer, Suffolk, Va. Proceeds to go to credit of Conference Fund.

North Carolina Conference—Distribute among churches to best possible advantage.

WISDOM

Few laws are killed by executing them.—The Houghton Line.

Mix a bit of enthusiasm with your religious convictions and you will be a missionary.—The Universal Leader.

It is only in remote places and narrow minds that bitterness of spirit is perennial.—The Congregational and Advance.

Did you ever discover that the meaner a man is, the more he wants his wife to be an angel?—Western Christian Advocate.

The trouble with some pastors is, they have never established a listening post near the trenches of the enemy.—Western Christian Advocate.

OUR ORPHANAGE

NEARLY TO THE GOAL

Our report this week pushes us above another rung in the ladder. Just $1,150.00 more to reach the goal, and two more weeks to reach it. Are you anxious that we reach it? I am extremely anxious to reach it. To reach it means that we will break all records in the year 1920.

We will be compelled to close our books for the year 1920 on January 19. If your church has not sent in its Thanksgiving or Christmas offering please see that it reaches me by January 19. If your church has not taken the offering please take it on Sunday, January 16, and mail the check on Monday so it will reach me on time.

If you want to see us reach the goal and want to invest something in the "Children's Home" mail me your check for whatever amount you want to invest and I will be very grateful to you. If you have subscribed to the "Children's Home" fund and your payment is due mail me a check for that and I will count it on the December report.

I know we have a great many members in our Southern Christian Convention that would be glad to mail checks to help reach this goal if some one would call their attention to it. Many who never gave very much would give much more gladly if given the opportunity.

I have done my best whether we reach the goal set or not. I will be happy to reach it. I will be disappointed not to reach it. It is in your power to see that we do reach it. I will still have that abiding faith in you and believe with all my heart that you will see that we do not fail.

Miss Annie Staley, Mrs. R. H. Rawles and Mrs. Geo. W. Nurney made sixteen of the little children happy Christmas by sending them Christmas presents. The Gate City Candy Company made all the children's lips sweet by sending them candy kisses.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: I have been intending to write to you ever since Christmas but I have been enjoying my holidays so I have not taken time to write.

I know all of the cousins enjoyed their Christmas. I did. I got some beautiful presents Christmas. I got a pocket book, handkerchief, ring, pair of kid gloves, and two boxes of stationery.

Enclosed find twenty cents for December and January. I hope all of the cousins had a merry Christmas and a happy New Year.—Dorothy Moore.

"Old Santa" was real good to you so you had good reasons to be happy. I am glad you enjoyed Christmas.—"Uncle Charley."

A BOY'S DOG

By Frances C. Hamlet

They say he's just an ordinary cur—

My pup;

An' all the 'ristocratic dogs in town

Are higher up

In ped-i-gree!

(That means dog families, an' 'bout what Good dogs should be.)

But he's a dog—four legs, two ears, a tail—

An' not

A dog in town has more, 'cept ped-i-gree!

If so, now what?

He's got sense, too, inside his homely head,

About

Like folks; that time I couldn't swim

He pulled me out.

The stylish dogs won't chase a stick

Or bring

A package; just trot in the park

Upon a string!

His color doesn't matter; long ago

I cried,

But now I know

That though they call him just a yellow cur,

He's white inside!

CAST

The auctioneer glanced at his book. "Number 29," he said, "black mare, aged, blind in near eye, otherwise sound."

The cold rain and the biting northeast wind did not add to the appearance of Number 29, as she stood, listless, with head drooping, in the center of the farmers and horsedealers who were attending the sale of cast army horses. She looked as though she realized that her day had waned, and that the bright steel work, the soft, well-greased leather, the snowy head-ropes and shining curps were to be put aside for less noble trappings.

She had a curiously shaped white blaze, and I think it was that, added to the description of her blindness, which stirred my memory within me. I closed my eyes for a second and it all came back to me, the gun stuck in the mud, the men straining at the wheels, the shells bursting, the reek of high explosive, the two leaders lying dead on the road, and, above all, two gallant horses doing the work of four and pulling till you'd think their hearts would break.

I stepped forward and, looking closer at the mare's neck found what I had expected, a great scar. That settled it. I approached the auctioneer and asked permission to speak to the crowd.

"Well," he said, "I am supposed to do the talking here, you know."

"It won't do you any harm," I pleaded, "and it will give me a chance to pay off a big debt."

"Right," he said, smiling; "carry on."

"Gentlemen," I said, "about this time a year ago I was commanding a battery in France. It was during the bad days, and we were falling back with the Hun pressing hard upon us. My guns had been firing all the morning from a sunken road, when we got orders to limber up and get back to a rear position. We hadn't had a bad time till then, a few odd shells, but nothing that was meant especially for our benefit. And then, just as we were getting away, they spotted us, and a battery opened on us good and strong. By a mixture of good luck and great effort we'd got all the guns away but one, when a shell landed just in front of the leaders and knocked them both out with their driver; at the same time the gun was jerked off the road into a muddy ditch. Almost simultaneously another shell killed one of the wheelers, and there we were with one horse left to get the gun out of the ditch and along a road that was almost as bad as the ditch itself.

"It looked hopeless, and it was on the tip of my tongue to give orders to abandon the gun, when suddenly out of the blue there appeared on the bank above us a horse, looking unconcernedly down at us.

"In those days loose horses were straying all over the country, and I took this to be one from another battery which had come to us for company.

"I turned to one of the men. 'Catch that mare quick.'

"In a few minutes we had the harness off the dead wheeler and on the new-comer. Pull? Gentlemen, if you could have seen those two horses pull!

"We'd just got a move on the gun when another shell came and seemed to burst right on top of the strange mare. I heard a terrified squeal, and through the smoke I saw her stagger with a mighty effort to recover herself. I ran around and saw she'd been badly hit over the eye and had a great tearing gash in the neck. We never thought she could go on, but she pulled away just the same, with blood pouring off her, till finally we got the gun out and down the road to safety.

"I got knocked out a few minutes later, and from that day to this I've often wondered what had happened to the mare that had served us so gallantly. I know now. There she stands before you. I'd know her out of a thousand by the white blaze; and if there was a doubt there's her blind eye and the scar on her neck.

"That's all, gentlemen; but I'm going to ask the man who buys her to remember her story and to see that her last days are not too hard."

She fell at a good price to a splendid type of West County farmer, and the auctioneer whispered to me, "I'm glad old Carey's got her. There's not a man in the country keeps his horses better."

"Old Carey" came up to me as we were moving off. "I had a son in France," he said, "in the gunners, too; but he hadn't the luck of the old mare"—he hesitated a moment and his old eyes looked steadily into mine—"for he'll never come back. The mare'll be all right, sir," he went on as he walked off, "easy work and full rations. Reckon she's earned them,—"London Punch.

PARSONAGE AFFAIRS
POUNDED AGAIN.

Money seems to be scarce, but from the amount of good things we receive from our beloved brethren and sisters there seems to be no scarcity of good things for the pantry.

Saturday, I received my first pounding on New Year's day, but it did not stop and they brought in the good things Sunday too.

This pounding was given by the generous people of Catawba Springs church and community, and was one of the richest we ever received. It almost filled my Ford to its capacity, and you could tell it was loaded by the way it pulled the hills. Butter beans, preserves of different kinds, jellies, dried apples and peaches, pickled pears, canned berries, canned peaches, canned tomatoes, coffee, rice, honey, meat, sausage, tomthumb, butter, soap, gold dust, soda, salt, cereals, starch, corn meal, sugar, sweet potatoes, cake, walnuts, oranges, apples, sewing thread, and green-back, and some of these in abundance was what made "Tin Lizzie" cough so hard.

Well my pantry seems almost to groan to hold what is piled up in it, and it begins to look like a small grocery store. And every time I think about it my heart goes out in love for the dear people who have remembered me so kindly. Then, too, it makes me take a retrospective view of my work as pastor and I just wonder if I am not over paid. Well I am sure I do not deserve all these good things. Makes me feel like I have something that doesn't belong to me. But the generous people just love to give and I pray that God will help me by His Spirit to give better service and a fuller Gosvel. May our dear Father richly reward every one who gives or has a desire to give.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

The publishers of The Youth's Companion will, as always at this season, present to every subscriber whose subscription ($2.50) is paid for 1921 a Calendar for the new year. The tablets are printed in red and olive green, and besides giving the days of the current month in bold legible type, give the Calendar of the preceding and succeeding month in smaller type in the margin. It is a rich and practical piece of work.

CHURCH NEWS
WASHINGTON, D. C.

The inhabitants of the Capital City have been enjoying a most delightful autumn and winter. No low temperature, no snow in sufficient quantities to mention, we having had but one snow storm this season and the snow lasted only about one day. Many of the days have been like spring days. The work here goes on slowly, with its full share of discouraging elements and some encouraging ones.

In November we moved into a new hall, located near the district where we have been anticipating finally locating. Our hall is a beautiful one and we are now able to hold an evening as well as morning service; this we were not able to do in the hall we formerly occupied.

We had a very pleasant entertainment at the Christmas time, consisting of reading, recitations, tableaux, and music. An offering was taken for the Near East Relief and $94.65 received. We felt that this was good for our little flock.

We are very slowly reaching the community where we are working, but hope that there may come a break soon.

I had the joy of leading a Mohammedan Turk to Christ in his home a few days ago and he, and his wife, who was a member of one of our churches, have united with the Washington church. Next Sunday we are expecting to receive a father, mother, son and daughter into the church.

Could we by some strange method, seemingly unknown to me, persuade all of our people who are here in the city to be sufficiently interested in the work come and unite with us and help in building up the work we would have a nice body to begin with. This however seems to be one of the difficulties of the work. We do not know what changes the change of political parties will have on us. We hope that we will not lose any of our workers that we now have and that some good strong workers may come in who will take hold with us and help to push the work along.

We have organized a choir since moving into our new hall and it has been giving us some very good music. We are hoping to organize a Christian Endeavor Society this month. While we were in the old hall we were unable to have an Endeavor society as we could only have the hall for two and one-half hours in the morning.

Brother Irving W. Hitchcock who has taken a course in advertising and has a printing press of his own, is doing some fine work for us along the line of church advertising, getting out something in the line of advertising and distributing it in the neighborhood every week.

We have the beginning of a Sunday school orchestra and hope that we may find more to unite with our orchestra and add this pleasing musical feature to our work. Remember the Washington work at the throne of grace. Unless God build we labor in vain.

A. B. KENDALL.

COLUMBUS BRIEFS

The Christmas season was observed by the majority of the people in the usual way—shooting fireworks, drinking whiskey, and many other elaborate contrivances of desecration. A prohibition officer from Washington, D. C., was here a few weeks ago and after some investigation stated that Columbus is the safety zone for prohibition violators. This was a very serious charge and it was vigorously resented by many of the officers of the law here. But from personal observation I think the prohibition officer was entirely correct. The lid is off.

Despite the fact that the majority desecrated the sanctity of the season, the churches made a heroic effort to safeguard the purpose of Christ's Advent. The Rose Hill Christian church was one of the many churches that held appropriate services Sunday morning, December 26. "The Advent of Christ in Narrative and song" was given by the pastor and choir. Three five-minute talks were given by the pastor as follows: "The Star of Bethlehem," "The Angelic Announcement," and "His Earthly Mission." Following each narrative the choir rendered appropriate music. It was said by many to be the most impressive Christmas exercise ever given here.

A watch service was held at the church on the closing night of the year in which many of the members and friends in the community took part. The exercises consisted of songs, talks, readings, and closing the old year and entering into the new year with a prayer led by the pastor.

Our mid-week service for the next several months will take the form of an open forum. In addition to prayers and songs, perplexing Bible questions will be asked and discussed by two or more speakers representing opposite sides. In this way it is hoped that the church will function as a distributor of information as well as inspiration.

Every phase of the church organization has been recast and every member of the church has a place on a committee.

The Sunday school has voted to study missions once a month with Mrs. Brown as superintendent. We confidently look for a revival of missionary interest. The school will give one offering a month to missions, and one to the Orphanage and keep the other two offerings for local expense.

R. F. BROWN.

NOTICE TO PASTORS AND CHURCH OFFICIALS

The patriotic Christian citizens are up against a serious situation. Mr. Bailey reports over three thousand stills taken in North Carolina, in the past year, out of a total of fourteen thousand for the nation. From all parts of the state come reports of liquor selling. The sentiment is strong for "the other fellow" to report the violator to the officer and thus help enforce the law. Many want to shift this burden upon the shoulders of another, and some are lacking in grace and grit sufficient to meet the duties of Christian citizenship by thus reporting the violator. The liquor traffic goes merrily on and everybody is learning that the enactment of laws does not stop it. This condition will continue until the Christian citizens decide to take a hand in the enforcement. Citizens and officers can stop the lawless liquor traffic, but the law cannot. "Blind tigers must go."

A Law-Enforcement Convention will meet at Greensboro, in the First Baptist church, February 2 and 3, 1921. It will convene at 10:00 a. m. Every phase of this subject will be discussed by men who have had experience in enforcing the law and who are able to help others. If the churches and Sunday schools will avail themselves of this opportunity and send delegates, these delegates will carry back some knowledge, inspiration, and enthusiasm that will make the blind tigers go. If the preachers will come they will learn the difficulties of the officers and how the pastor can aid in this work, and maybe they can say or do something that will inspire and help somebody else.

To this convention all are eligible who endorse the slogan "Blind Tigers Must Go." An effort will be made to get together officers and citizens, men and women, preachers and laymen and to begin a movement that will never stop until the liquor traffic is killed. "Blind tigers must go!" Will you come and help to start such a movement?

R. L. DAVIS, Superintendent

SOLEMN VOWS

PURYEAR-O'GEARY

Married at my home, Virgilina, Va., on Sunday, December 26, 1920, Mr. John Rubert Puryear and Miss Alice O'geary. These are popular young people and will reside on the groom's farm near Virgilina.

C. E. NEWMAN.

MORRIS-TUCK

Mr. Willie Morris and Miss Bessie Tuck of Virgilina, Va., were married at my residence on Sunday evening, December 19, 1920. Both are members of Union Christian church and excellent young people. They will reside near Virgilina, where the groom is engaged in farming.

C. E. NEWMAN.

TUCK-RICE

Mr. James Tuck and Miss Mary Francis Rice were married at Virgilina, Va., by the writer on Sunday afternoon, October 24, 1920. Mr. Tuck is the son of the late Thomas and Kate Tuck and is engaged in farming. The bride is the daughter of Mr. John Rice. Both are popular young people and members of Union church.

C. E. NEWMAN.

JONES-ADAMS

On December 29, 1920, there was a pretty marriage at Wake Chapel church, when Miss Kathrine Adams became the wife of Mr. Boyd H. Jones. Mrs. Jones is the attractive daughter of W. S. Adams, a merchant at Varina N. C. Mr. Jones is a farmer and a splendid young man. He is a son of the late Rev. John A. Jones.

The church was beautifully decorated and the house packed to overflowing.

We predict for them a happy association and may the Father's richest blessing rest upon them.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

TERRELL-ELLIOTT

Mr. Claud Jones Terrell of Gastonia, N. C., and Miss Janie Louise Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Elliott of Burlington, N. C., were happily united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents Wednesday, January 5, at 9:00 a. m., the writer officiating. Only a few invited guests were present. The impressive ring ceremony of the Christian Church was used and the bride was given away by her father. The groom is an electrician and is a promising young man; the bride is a modest, amiable, popular young lady of Burlington, whose scores of friends will join in wishing the pair a long and happy married life.

BARKER

Mrs. Nancy Barker, aged 93 years, four months, and twenty-nine days, departed this life December 30, 1920 at her home in Alamance County, N. C. Her maiden name was Tate. Her husband, Emerson Byrd Barker, preceded her to the grave by about fifty-six years. To them were born three children, Geo. W., Jesse N., and Mary S., now Mrs. J. D. Wilkins. She has one sister living, Mrs. Elsie Ross. She has fourteen grandchildren, five great-grandchildren, all living except one, Nannie Barker who died this year. She has one child dead, Jesse N.

The funeral was conducted from Union Christian church, by the writer assisted by Rev. J. W. Holt. Her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

She was a member of Union Christian church, and truly a mother in Israel has fallen. She came to the grave in peace and was buried in a good old age.

P. H. FLEMING.

MOORE

Miss Salina Ann Moore departed this life December 23, 1920, at the age of 76 years, eight months, and nine days. She made her home with her niece, Mrs. E. N. Newman, near Epsom, N. C.

Sister Moore had been confined to her room for fifteen months.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at Burnell Tabernacle, M. E. church, twenty miles from Henderson. Her remains were laid to rest in the family plot, where all of her loved ones, of her immediate family, rest from the toils of earth.

She leaves to mourn her loss, one brother, a number of nephews and nieces, and a host of friends. She was a faithful member of the M. E. church. In all of her afflictions she was cheerful. She died in the faith, trusting to the Lord who helped her to live and believe, have and labor. Surely her Christmas gift must have been a crown of light to her.

B. F. BLACK.

TURNER

Robert Edward Turner, the little son of Robert Lee and Odessa Turner, was born November 5, 1914 and died January 5, 1921. Thus living to be six years and two months old. Robert Edward was a member of our Reidsville church Sunday school and a bright affectionate little fellow. He was sick for about four weeks. Everything was done that human hands and medical skill could do, but all in vain. God saw best to take him. The Lord's will be done. May God cheer and comfort the broken hearted father and mother and other near relatives and help them to meet their dear one in the home of the soul.

Funeral services in the Christian church conducted by the writer assisted by Rev. Coleman, pastor of the Methodist Protestant church. Interment in the church cemetery at Mizphria.

Lottin B. Scott, son of John and Nancy Scott was born September 7, 1844, and died at his home near Semora, N. C., December 19, 1920, at the age of 76 years, three months and twelve days. He was twice married and is survived by five sons, four daughters, several grandchildren and the companion of his last marriage. The surviving children are William Scott, of Stokesbury, W. Va., Mrs. Florence Apple of Washington, D. C., Alvin, Ernest, Robert, Clyde, Ethel, Mamie, and Arnold of Semora, N. C.

Brother Scott served four years in the Civil War. He united with Lebanon Christian church about thirty-five years ago and remained a member until death. His occupation was farming and merchandising. He was about the average in intelligence and a good conversationalist. He had many friends who feel a loss in his departure. Brother Scott had been in failing health for several months and the last two months was confined to his home. He bore his sufferings with Christian patience. His devoted children and faithful companion did all possible for him.

The funeral was at Lebanon Christian church, conducted by the writer, on Monday, December 20, 1920 and the burial in the church cemetery. May our Heavenly Father comfort the sorrowing loved ones and guide them in the ways of right and duty.

C. E. NEWMAN.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. NELL GRAY WEST

On Wednesday morning, December 15, 1920, the dews of life's evening silently condensed upon the brow of one of God's noble women, young mother in Israel, and the sweet spirit of our Nell took its flight to that land where there is no night. Her going was sudden and unexpected and family and friends were overcome by the touch of His unseen hand—by the Voice that silently had called her into life eternal. His loving hands had guided her; His loving heart had blessed her, and just before her passing, there was an exclamation of a sight of wondrous beauty which I believe only those who die in Christ can so manifestly reflect in their last thoughts of the lines "to live in the hearts of those we leave behind is not to die".

Nell Virginia Gray was born in Suffolk, Nansemond County, Virginia, November 4, 1886. She was the youngest child and daughter of the late Alfred L. and Hester Elizabeth Gray, both of whom pre-deceased her, having died in the home in Waverly which was then, and since has been, the happy fireside and the supreme source of earthly joy to this devoted and faithful young wife and mother whom we miss and mourn as only those who deeply love can do.

She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Waverly, Virginia, having united with the denomination of her choice in early childhood. She loved her church, honored and supported it, and in her death it loses one of its most loyal members.

On May 27, 1916, she was united in marriage to Captain Oscar H. West, of Waverly, who survives her with two of the three children born of their union, Oscar Jr., and Little Elizabeth. Little Oscar Gray West returned to the Giver the day on which he first saw the glory of God's light.

Truly a life of love and labor for home, help-mate and children has fallen asleep, a life whose devotion was unbounded, whose sacrifice knew no ends and whose faithful heart and hands knew no idleness. Yes, if ever we would question the call of the death angel, it would seem just now in the taking of one so greatly needed. But let us give thanks in even so sad a Divine manifestation of the unerring wisdom of God that He has taught us to know even He chastens those whom He loves. God gave and God has taken away—be it ours to submit to His will.

No flower has greater sweetness than that comparable to the fragrance of her life, or can charm with its nature-painted colors of richest hue like the sweet face of her whose image is so indelibly and perfectly stamped, not only upon memory's walls, but upon the faces of her two little darlings. God bless you little ones. May your little lives comfort immeasurable Daddy's broken heart, and in years unborn may you come to know the beauty and full meaning of "Youth fades, Love droops, the leaves of Friendship fall,

But Mother's fondest hopes outlive them all."

Helpmate, may God sustain you and guide you; may you trust Him and may He bless you. And as you shall hear no more the sound of the voice that is still may you give thanks to your Heavenly Father that, when the eventide came to her who was so dear to you, He granted it as lightly as He could, and that when His angels sang her to rest beyond the sunset's radiant glow you could know the peace that comes from the consciousness of having brought so much happiness and sweetness into her life. This to her was more than coronets.

Besides her husband and children, the deceased is survived by one sister, Mrs. P. Fleewood, three brothers, E. L., J. D., and H. A. Gray, all of Waverly, and a host of near relatives and admiring friends to each of whom her taking is a personal loss. Family and friends, to you be peace—that comforting peace so sweetly radiated by this gentle, unassuming life and so beautifully recalled by a friend who in this hour of trial said, "Earth is a better place in which to dwell because she was here; Heaven is brighter with her there".

The burial services were conducted from her late home Friday afternoon, December 17, by Rev. Victor Lightbourne, who just five years ago read the vows uniting Oscar H. West and Nell V. Gray, assisted by Rev. A. N. Lewis, pastor of the deceased, Rev. Jas. L. Foster and Dr. W. W. Staley. Burial was in the town cemetery. Music at the home and grave was rendered by friends, the selections being the same used at the burial of her mother.

The wondrous wreaths of flowers sent by sorrowing friends to mellow the sadness in the home, and to cover her mound, by their color typified the purity and by their fragrance the sweetness and the love of one who is forever gone but can never be forgotten.

Farewell dear Nell, sweet be thy slumber. Ever will our memory be:

"Like the lingering charm of a dream that is fled,
The rose's breath when the rose is dead,
The echo that lives when the tune is done;
Sunset glories that follow the sun,
Everything tender and everything fair,
That was, and is not, yet still is there."

MISCELLANEOUS

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Write down your garden plans for next year now before you forget them.

A few minutes each day spent with pencil and paper in a rocker, shortens the work and clears the brain.

Do not urge guests to eat more than they want; it is rude. Do not load the table; it is not healthful.

No farm is modern or progressive, however fine the cattle or machinery, if the farm house has not running water and other conveniences.

Encourage father to raise a few sheep. They will yield a blanket or two each year. Wool is the warmest, lightest and most comfortable bed covering there is.

Silk stockings should be washed as often as taken off the feet. When you stitch in the silk stocking drops, do not wait to remove the stocking, but rub a piece of wet soap on at once to stop the run.

A good habit is to have a covered kettle into which scraps of fat can be dropped to be tried out twice a week. Strain and boil with a few slices of Irish potato to remove flavors or odors.

When buying a soap for the face and hands, be sure to get the very best that you can. Harsh soaps in time ruin the skin, cause the pores to become enlarged and are harmful in general. Get a pure, good soap, that is not highly scented.

The following is from a will. It gives food for thought for our everyday lives: "I beg the pardon of all I may have either offended or grieved; and I myself forgive, from all my heart, all who may have hurt me in any way, just as I myself do beseech the Lord to forgive me the faults of which I may have been guilty."—The Progressive Farmer.

YES, HE'S SOME MAN

He may wear a last year's straw hat; his finger nails may need manicuring; his vest may hang a little loose and his pants may bag at the knees; his face may show signs of a second-day's growth; and the tin dinner bucket he carries may be full of dents and doughnuts; but don't you call him "the old man." He's your father.

For years and years he has been rustling around to get things together. Never once has he failed to do the right thing by you. He thinks you are the greatest boy on earth, bar none, even though you plaster your hair back, wear smat clothes, smoke cigarettes, and fail to bring home a cent. He is the man who won the love and life partnership of the greatest woman on earth—your mother. He is "some" man and not "the old man."

If you win as good a wife as he did you will have to go some.—The Silent Partner.

THE CAUSES OF THE PRESENT HARD TIMES

The situation, so far as it regards agriculture—and it is agriculture which has been hit hardest—may be summarized in a few words:

1. The poverty of Europe has seriously crippled the market for our goods. The latest figures we have on the depreciation of foreign money (October 21) show that the English pound, formerly worth $4.86, American money, is now worth only $3.46. The French franc, with a pre-war value of 19 cents, is now worth only 7 cents. The Italian lira has declined from 19 cents to 4 cents, and the German mark from 24 cents to 1½ cents.

2. The Federal Reserve situation we have already discussed. We need men with better understanding of agriculture on the Reserve Board. We also need a more consistent Federal Reserve policy, instead of an extremely lax policy on year followed by a severely strict one the next year.

3. For Secretary Houston's place we need a man less ultra-conservative. Able man that he is, he is bound by ancient precedents. McAdoo knew how to meet an unprecedented situation in an unprecedented way. Secretary Houston is precise, formal, and regular in position where elasticity and vision are absolutely essential.

4. Agriculture has never had a square deal in the management of the country's finances. Money is ten times more readily available for financing manufactures and commerce than for financing agriculture. The Federal Farm Loan Board must be put to work again as soon as the Supreme Court acts—put to work with whatever adjustment may be required to make it fit the court's decision. But this is not enough. Some plan for short time credit must be worked out. Mr. Lever's plan to have the Federal Farm Loan Board issue securities based on warehoused farm products is the best idea yet presented in this line. Every farmer in America should help him work out this plan. The war finance corporation should also be revived.

5. Many merchants are not cooperating as they should in meeting the new situation. They were perfectly willing to mark up goods on their shelves when war forced prices upward. Many are not willing, however, to mark down goods on their shelves, now that war's ending has forced prices downward. We heard a day or two ago of a merchant who had shoes on hand when the war came on. He had marked them up at a profit. Shoe prices rose, and he marked them up again. Shoe prices took another rise, and he added another profit. Yet while making three profits on the shoes then sold, we doubt whether he is willing to lose one profit on what he now has on hand. Such action on the part of retailers is delaying buying and is also foolish because it is driving trade from retail stores to mail order houses. The cotton farmer lost out in 1914 when war began, and now in 1921 he has seen crop values cut 66 2-3 per cent. Retailers should count up the extra profits they made in war times and be willing to share some losses with customers now.

6. Manufacturers who made such enormous profits a year or two ago should also be willing to keep running at some loss now rather than throw employees out of work and temporarily destroy the farmer's market for his crops. Unfortunately, however, manufacturers have been tempted to shut down and thereby both get cheaper cotton and also have an excuse for heavier cut in wages of employees.—The Progressive Farmer.

THE EDITOR

THE other day we glanced at this: "California, the world's finest war vessel, will cost $15,000,000.00." In another column on the same page: "Deaths from famine increase in China. Americans and British in Shanghai raise $5,000,000.00 for relief."

The world builds to kill and spends to save the dying. She puts too much into battleships and not enough into Christian education. Little children die from hunger while millions are spent to kill those who survive.

Mankind longs to love and be loved. The spirit of genuine brotherhood broods over the face of the earth, while mothers hold their boy babes in their laps and pray that they may escape war's horrors.

Can the world not trust Him whose heart bleeds for our confidence in humanity. Oh, Lord hasten the day!

What would Christ say if He should appear in Congress halls where the nation's money is appropriated for battleships? Faith, trust, confidence, where are thy sponsors?

Down with guns! Up with love, trust, salvation and brotherly love. Let us feed the world with the bread of earth and the Bread of Life and not with shells and gas.

"God has forgotten us" a hungry little girl waited to her sister. The sister's lips trembled, but she bravely replied, "No, God has not forgotten us, He has told somebody to help us and that somebody has forgotten us."

CONSERVING OUR MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT

The 1920 session of the Southern Christian Convention set its approval on conserving the Men and Millions Forward Movement by adopting the following paragraphs:

"That the Men and Millions Movement Organization be kept intact, as far as possible, until the next session of the Convention, and that a continued effort be made to conserve the work undertaken during the campaign, and that the organization be encouraged to develop the spiritual interests of the Church and Kingdom during the next biennium.

"The advantages of perpetuating this Movement are many. In the first place, it will be an injury to any local church that has been unable through its own leaders to function in this Movement to be let alone in its defeat. We can render no finer service in genuine Christian Brotherhood than to give to these brethren of ours the stimulus of a great undertaking well done.

"When the present objectives have all been realized, the Movement through its organization, can turn its attention to such other items of progressive church work as increasing the circulation of The Christian Sun, inducing all members to unite with the church where they live, following up the Life-Work Recruits, formulating plans for utilizing the Four Minute Speakers as a constant force in the local church, and in many other ways."

The Field Committee of the Movement—J. O. Atkinson, W. A. Harper, C. D. Johnston, C. D. West and C. B. Riddle have it entrusted to them the matter of keeping alive and conserving the Movement and its objectives.

Meetings have been held from time to time, plans discussed and some work done. A recent meeting was held and definite steps taken to assist in all phases of the work, aid in collections, etc.

Mr. J. A. Dickey was elected by the Board to render service in the field in such ways as conditions may demand. The Board bespeaks for him the heartiest cooperation and thanks in advance all who may assist him in any way.

Pastors are in position to keep the Committee in touch with conditions and needs and to render assistance in many ways. Tithing should be continued, Life Recruits counseled and encouraged, and other objectives of the Movement conserved.

Correspondence is solicited, and letters may be addressed to J. O. Atkinson, Chairman, Elon College, N. C., or to C. B. Riddle, Secretary, Burlington, N. C.

A TEMPTATION TO BE AVOIDED

These are "Panicky" times. Money is not plentiful. Financial appropriations are being cut. Some lines of industry have been able to reduce wages. Collections are poor. Churches are getting behind with salaries, assessments and pledges. "Hard times" is the cry and the pastors are hearing this wherever they go.

The average pastor is big-hearted, willing and ready to help. To some, we understand, has come the temptation to ask that their salaries be reduced to help the people tide over.

The average pastor has never had a decent salary. Many churches have redeemed themselves during the past two years by making the salary adequate. Was it because money was "easy", or because the man was worth the price? If the man was worth the price then, he is now; and it is easier for a whole church to bear the sacrifice than to ask one man to do it.

Conditions are only temporary. Business conditions are already improving. It is no time to cut the salary of your pastor. Shame upon that church that will take advantage of any generous hearted pastor when he offers to have his salary reduced.

We move that every pastor asking his salary be reduced be fined one hundred dollars, the same to be paid by the church and the amount turned over to the pastor's wife.

EUROPEAN RELIEF FUND

We have given space in two or three issues of THE SUN to articles concerning the critical food conditions in several parts of Europe. We have been asked where to send funds. We have given the information on several occasions because there are several channels through which money may be sent. Brother W. B. Fuller, who is always on time with such matters, has forwarded THE SUN a check for $37.74 from two of his churches. We have decided to say to individuals and churches that THE SUN will receive and transmit promptly any money sent to help save the starving children of Europe. We have also arranged for an official record of all money received and will acknowledge the same each week through THE SUN. All money sent by Sunday schools or churches should be counted as part of the finances for the year. "Other Purposes" on the church letter fully provides for this and we trust that any Sunday school or church deciding to send a donation will let the amount be recorded before remitting, so that the church, the Conference and the Convention will get due credit for the donation.

The cries of little children, and their invisible hands stretching across the waters to us, challenge our love, our loyalty, and our liberality. May each reader of THE SUN do his or her part in this time of great need.

The following contributions are acknowledged:

A GOOD SHOWING

The report of Bro. Chas. D. Johnston, Superintendent of our Orphanage, in this issue of THE SUN is one that the Church has reason to rejoice over. The raising of $30,000.00 is no easy task, especially when the money must come from the same Sunday schools, churches, and individuals that have always been called upon to render this aid. And these same sources must be looked to for support in 1921.

The report reveals many things. It shows that a good man is in his right place, and that giving is a gradual process of education. Year by year the figures go upward. They go upward and the education of giving passes down the line. $30,000.00 is a big sum for a people to raise when the same people help in raising other sums that are larger. Yes, the amount looks large, but ten years from now it will look small.

Onward! onward!! onward!!! Three cheers for the Orphanage and for every man, woman and child who helped to raise that $30,000.00. We know not their names, but the Father does, and that is sufficient.

SOME COMMON SENSE

The press carries the announcement that President-elect Warren G. Harding, has requested only a simple affair for the inauguration in March. Elaborate plans were being made for a great "ball" and the spending of an enormous amount of money. Hats off to Mr. Harding, or any other man, who has the common sense to call off such uncalled-for things, especially in a time when the people are already heavily taxed and half the world in great need. Mr. Wilson did the same thing. We are glad to see Mr. Harding taking the stand he has.

We do not need dances, and other such things on these occasions. To us the occasion is solemn. Mr. Harding needs the prayers of the people, and regardless of how you voted, or how you expect to vote, Mr. Harding is soon to be our President and the true Christian will carry our Chief Executive's burdens to a throne of grace.

A CONTEST

Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, the newly elected Editor of the North Carolina Christian Advocate has challenged through the columns of his paper the Biblical Recorder for a subscription contest. The Advocate puts up its challenge in definite language. The Recorder has accepted the challenge and the months of February and March have been named as the time that each paper is to compete in securing new subscribers.

Brethern, we shall watch you. Go to it. A good idea. Best wishes from this port.

A NEW CORRESPONDENT

Not exactly that, but rather an old correspondent takes up his pen again. "Our Virginia Letter" by Dr. J. P. Barrett, a former editor of THE SUN, found on another page, will, we are sure be read, appreciated and looked for from week to week. Dr. Barrett has promised us at intervals since he left The Herald office to contribute something to THE SUN as a regular thing. At last he has consented. We welcome this new feature and speak for it a wide reading.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE ANNUAL

The following instructions should be observed in distributing The Christian Annuals:

Virginia Valley Conference—Sell at twenty-five cents the copy—that being one-half price.

Alabama Conference—Distribute among the churches to the best possible advantage.

Georgia and Alabama Conference—Distribute among the churches to the best possible advantage.

Eastern Virginia Conference—Sell at twenty-five cents the copy and remit to H. Woodward, Treasurer, Suffolk, Va. Proceeds to go to credit of Conference Fund.

North Carolina Conference—Distribute among churches to best possible advantage.

The revised edition of the "Government and Principle of the Christian Church" is not out. In fact, so far as we know the manuscript is not ready for the printers. We cannot fill orders yet. Neither can we supply the old edition much longer, as we have less than six copies of two cheaper bindings on hand. This is for the information of several who have made inquiry and sent orders.

The Methodist Protestant denomination in North Carolina is soon to establish a college. Burlington, High Point and Greensboro are bidding cities. We understand that High Point and Burlington are the two places uppermost in the minds of the committee.

On January 12, Cameron Morrison was inaugurated as Governor of North Carolina to succeed Governor Thos. W. Bickett.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

THE YEAR 1920—A RETROSPECT

The progress of the world during 1920 is described by the Christian Evangelist in terms of the following question: "Did the World Backslide in 1920?"

In answering this question The Evangelist puts forth these facts and considerations of successes and reverses of the notable year:

"When the war ended the nations were in the most exalted state of altruistic and prophetic purpose, but we dropped back to the sordid fallacy of organizing civilization about money and markets rather than about life and human brotherhood.

People were probably more confused in 1920 than since the Napoleonic wars. They felt great changes impending.

The year 1920 was one of intense partianship, which halted the international leadership of the United States in world affairs.

There were about 5,000 strikes during the year, the storm-centers of which were the coal mines, railroads and steel mills. But in spite of strikes, the year closed with a more reasonable spirit in both employer and employee.

The League of Nations came into existence which has done much to pacify the nations and create a universal respect for right of all people whether great or small.

It was the first saloonless year in our national history.

It may fittingly be called woman's year. The Nineteenth Amendment to the Constitution conferring the full right of citizenship on women was passed.

The past year was also a giving year, being especially marked by great giving for education, medical and scientific research. We read of magnificent gifts ranging from $50,000 by individuals to $474,000,000 by Rockefeller institutes.

Finally, on the whole, 1920 was a great year for churches. In spite of the failure of the Interchurch World Movement, the Christian Union idea made progress in both scope and clearness."

PROPHETS

"All flesh is grass," the prophet cried,

"And hope is vain that we shall ever view

A better world; 'tis evil that men do."

The certain prophet of the Lord replied,

"Thou speaketh false! Thou art a blind guide!

For spirits of with'ring grass and evils new,
This like a rock standeth—true:

God lives! And He shall reign, whate'er betide."

Today we hear the voice of those whispering that
That "peace will never come," that brotherhood

Which seeks to draw all men within its sphere

"Is but a source for fools," O God, we pray,

Raise up to us a prophet wise and good,
To speak Thy word of praise without fear.

—Charles Burges Ketcham in Christian Advocate

NEW YEAR PROSPERITY PREDICTED

In the opening of the new year, in no responsible quarter is there a disposition to deny the fact that 1920 has ended amid economic and industrial conditions that involved suffering and privation from unemployment and high prices to a considerable part of the working people of the United States. But a confident belief and expectation is forthcoming from manufacturers, merchants and bankers that the present economic crisis will be followed by a general resumption of production on a sounder basis.

An outlook on the labor situation, however, furnishes some ground for uncertainty. As indicated by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, "Labor faces a year of solemn portent." This portent Mr. Gompers discerned in the wide-spread movement for the "open shop" which he said aimed at the "destruction of labor's voice."

IRELAND'S HOME RULE

At last Ireland has a home rule. For the first time since the Act of Union united her with Great Britain (in body though not in spirit) in 1801, a Home Rule bill has been passed by both Houses of Parliament. Its passage, however, was not without stubborn resistance on the part of the Protestant Ulsterites. But Lloyd George conciliated them by establishing two Parliaments instead of one in Ireland with a Council serving as a connecting link between the Parliament of Ulster and the Parliament of the rest of the country.

Home rule is a reality but Ireland still protests. Even the Irish Nationalists who do not demand complete independence, are not content with the Home Rule Act of 1920. Sir Horace Plunkett who has been considered a moderate on questions concerning his country, has stated that the new rule is rejected by four-fifths of Ireland and that nothing short of a Dominion form of rule such as is now enjoyed by Canada would content the Irish people.

FAMINE IN CHINA

If relief is not carried to China, at least twelve million people will perish from hunger this winter according to the report of Mr. J. J. Underwood, correspondent of the Seattle Times after recently returning from that country. The crisis in China began with the failure of last spring's crop in the Chinese provinces drained by the Yellow River. During the summer locusts devastated the crop. Then in addition to the failure of the spring and summer crops, a big drought came in the autumn annihilating the crop and now there is scarcely any vegetation left on which to live.

Special wireless telephone apparatus will transmit President-elect Harding's inaugural address to every army post, to every battleship and to various cities where "inaugural parties" will be held, so states Edward B. McLean, Chairman of the Inaugural Committee.

CONTRIBUTIONS

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

WE are living in a day of conflicts—they come from almost all directions and from the circles of all classes. Interests of the East are against the interests of the West, and the interests of the North are considered as inimical to the interests of the South. Legislation favorable to the cotton states is against the states of some other section and we are becoming more and more determined that “my state must have what it wants, no matter what happens to any other section of our common country.” This is not right, it is not Christian, it is not even neighborly. Our country needs a few good lessons in “living and letting live,” and in some way we shall get them. How, I do not know, but God knows and that is enough till the people generally learn to do better.

Which way are we going? Is it upward or downward? You can avoid the question if you will, but it will not down at your bidding or mine. It is looking us in the face, and we will continue to have it staring at us till we come to be candid enough and brave enough to admit the truth and then go to work, like honest men, and try to correct wrong conditions. A man may muffle his ears to keep from hearing the rattle of a snake, but the muffle will not stop the rattlesnake. The snake must be driven out of hearing, or he will do mischief and somebody is going to pay the penalty for giving the snake too much liberty.

We are suffering from what is called “a crime wave” in various parts of the country, and we are going to continue to suffer until we learn to let God have His way with us. We must recognize His law and obey it, or the “crime wave” will go yet higher and will sweep the whole country as with a besom of destruction. I am not an alarmist, but when the cloud is rising and the thunder is crashing, I prefer to get under a protecting hand, and in this instance, as I see it, we have no sheltering hand open to us but to stop and turn about, and turn to God.

It may be that some one will ask: “Is it all dark and forbidding? Is there no light on the horizon?” Oh, yes! Now and then we see some good lift its head above the horizon and take its stand for righteousness. There is such a star on the horizon just now. It is just at this time appearing as a western star. In the city of Chicago there recently appeared a new daily paper. Its chief distinction, so far, is the fact that it announced in its advertisements that it will be conducted as a Christian paper, and so far it looks as if the editor meant what he said, for in fact many of his editorials are so thoroughly Christian that they would be regarded as in place in our best religious papers, not that everything in it is Christian. The end to be gained, as I understand it, is that nothing un-Christian shall blacken its fair name, and so it seems to be an accomplished fact that at least one of the great daily papers of our land is Christian. The editor seemingly does not feel ashamed to speak out in his paper for truth and righteousness any more than the preacher in his pulpit feels ashamed to stand for the great and fundamental truths of the Word of God. The name of the paper is The American Daily Standard. It is edited by Mr. J. Clover Monsma, and it is published at 215-217 West Superior St., Chicago, Illinois.

Our modernists need to stop and think before they go much further, or they may bring to pass a situation much like that now said to be existing in Germany. We know Germany has been regarded as the home of real modernism—they have gone forward in the ways of their own choosing till they have almost nothing left, and now it is announced that the State Church of Germany is nearing ruin. It is said the present state of the Church in Germany bids fair to cause internal factionalism, equal to a violent civil war. Such a situation, looked at from a merely humanitarian standpoint is to be deeply regretted, but in the Providence of God it may work out for good. If it should it will not be to the credit of modernism.

ACCORDING TO THY FAITH

THE Lord does not manifest Himself in great power to those of little faith, neither can He do any mighty works in the life or through the life of one whose faith is small. The works of God cannot be made manifest in the life of one whose faith is weak or wavering. Our Lord demands a faith which does not shrink when foes oppress or when difficulties present themselves. A faith which holds in every time of trial. A faith which does not waver though those about us are wavering in their trust in Him. Though those about us are being driven from one belief to another.

When that father came to Jesus and said, “If thou canst do anything, have compassion on us, and help us,” Jesus compelled that father to take that “if” out of his petition before He would work in his behalf. Doubt has to be removed and be replaced by an unquestioning faith. Jesus works for us according to our faith, always. Jesus said to that father “if thou canst believe” what you ask can be done. “If thou canst believe” the boy can be healed. He is saying to you and to me, “If thou canst believe” that seemingly insurmountable obstacle can be removed. “If thou canst believe” those difficulties, unpleasant as they are to meet, can be overcome. “If thou canst believe”, that heavy burden which you are bearing can be lifted.

If you are not receiving from the Lord, are you sure you are not wavering in belief? “All things are possible to him that believeth”. But the one who wavers in his faith, “Let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord.” The man or woman who is going from one doctrine to another, accepting the theories of men instead of the doctrine of Christ, need not think they can possibly receive anything from the Lord. Something may be made manifest in his work. It may seem to prosper and grow, but his fruit will wither. The fruit which remains will not be there. Jesus taught as one having authority. We must submit to His authority; we must accept His word as final, we must believe on Him, in Him, yield to Him and then He to whom all power has been given, manifests Himself to us according to our faith. Whether it was a Roman ruler or a blind beggar, whether it was a synagogue ruler or a loathsome leper came to Him believing in His power, it was done unto them according to their faith. It was not the touch upon the hem of His garment which healed the woman, but it was her faith in the wearer of that garment which saved her.

He is the same yesterday, today and forever. So are the requirements upon our part just the same as they were when Jesus was upon the earth. The same obedience, the same faith and trust as when our Lord was here in person. "If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me." "If our heart condemn us not, then have we confidence toward God. And whatsoever we ask, we receive of Him, because we keep His commandments, and do those things that are pleasing in His sight." "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it. If ye love me, keep my commandments." "But without faith it is impossible to please Him; for He that cometh to God must believe that He is, and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him." "Being confident of this very thing, that He which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ." "Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." Can you follow these directions which the Holy Spirit has had recorded and bring your life so completely under His control that the Lord may be able to do great things for you, because of the greatness of your faith?

It is time for somebody to enter protest against the various organizations from Government experts, chambers of commerce, newspapers, business organizations, and agricultural colleges, to the friendly orator who speaks at farmers' meetings, against their gratuitous suggestions to farmers as to what to plant, how many acres, and how, in a word, to run their business. It goes by the facts of history that farmers know how to manage their business as well as any other class of citizens. A smaller percentage of farmers have failed in their business in the one hundred and forty-five years of this Republic than any other class. They have been the backbone of this country in all its history. They have furnished the leaders in politics, in war, in business, in education, and in literature. The farmer has produced the best type of Christian character, the highest type of domestic and personal virtue, and the fewest of the criminal class.

Most of the gratuitous advisors to farmers seek to exploit them and to profit by their productions. If the farmers were to hold meetings to advise bankers, manufacturers, newspapers, colleges, and merchants, such groups would take it as a joke, or resent it as an intrusion. It is not the function of one class to run the business of another class; but it is the function of all classes to treat one another in fairness. The farmer might make himself more independent by self-denial for a year so as to be in shape to make his crop without credit. In Franklin County, North Carolina, the farmers did not get out of the hands of the merchants until cotton went to 5½¢ in 1893. Then the farmer paid his debts and got on his feet, when merchants refused to "run him". High prices inflate credit and debts and payments are made on low prices. This leaves farmers in financial trouble and merchants, too. Cash business, in the long run, is best for all classes, so far as retail trade figures in the equation of community prosperity.

It is time for farmers to assert their own rights by attending to their own affairs without listening to those who pretend to be their friends or are really their friends. Farmers hold no meetings to tell merchants how to run their business. The Kinston Chamber of Commerce, Tobacco Board of Trade, Merchants Association, and Bankers held a meeting January 6, and sent out ten thousand copies of their resolutions to the farmers of North Carolina, requesting farmers to reduce acreage in tobacco for 1921 fifty percent of the acreage in 1920. Such meetings imply an opinion that farmers do not know how to manage their business. Left to his own experience, his own good sense, and his own judgment, the farmer is capable, reliable, and successful. The exhortation from Washington to the least Chamber of Commerce to increase products in 1920 rendered no real service to farmers.

THE FIRST PRINCIPLES OF OUR CHURCH

The principles of the Christian Church begin: "The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church." How I wish those words with all their meaning could be written in unfading letters upon the hearts of all our people everywhere! "The Lord Jesus Christ"! My! what a benediction! What a prayer! What a challenge! In our zeal and enthusiasm for whatever work we may be doing in the Kingdom of God let us not forget that Christ is the heart of the whole situation. Couple with the above sentiment the words: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me," and before your eyes comes the picture of a rejected Christ, of a bleeding Savior, of Roman soldiers, and of weeping women! The Christ, the Cross, the Christian Church,—holy words they are, because of the Christ—words worth giving one's life for, because of the Christ,—words that should make us indeed and in truth a people with Christ our only Head.

In this New Year as we work shall not that thought be ever before us? It is ours to present the crucified Christ; it is His to draw. Too often, I fear, would we do the drawing rather than the lifting up. But oh! what a privilege to hold up to the world the Savior of men! What an incentive for the president of our Convention, the president of our College, our Mission Secretary, the presidents and members of our Boards, the presidents and officers of our Conferences, the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, the superintendent of the Orphanage, and the pastors and Christian people of every church and congregation—"The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church." With what fortitude and assurance shall we labor when we realize it is not for ourselves but for Him, and that each enterprise and every duty has its place and power because of Him.

"UNCLE WELLONS" AND THE NEW YEAR

I received during the Christmas and New Year one hundred and nine letters and cards. Many of them had two or three names with congratulations for rounding out my 95th year the first day of January, and for the New Year. I want to thank all and wish that I could write each one, thanking them for their kind remembrances. May God bless every one with a rich blessing in this life and a home of rest in the world to come.

Now, I am going to write a letter to the whole CHRISTIAN SUN family that may hit rightly with many of us and I want all to read it several times until it is fixed in our minds.

What habit are we guilty of that the Bible condemns and nature disapproves? Let us stop right here and ask ourselves the question. Now if the Bible condemns it let it go right now, or if it is objectionable to nature or health. You may say, "I can't give up a habit". You are mistaken; you can give it up if you want to. God will help you.

But there are many who are joined to their habits and reading this will do them no good. But, Oh God, save the young people! Stop right now.

Again there are so many whose hearts are filled with hesitancy and this is standing between them and their God. Let us stop and decide today that we will carry it no further.

Now do not stop to think of the past—let that go. A difficulty cannot be settled by going over the past. Bury it so that it cannot be resurrected. Go to your brother or sister and have a talk about the matter; offer him or her your hand and ask that what you have said or done that was wrong be forgiven. Let the matter be settled forever and be just as you were before the trouble came up. This is the way to settle difficulties—I have settled many this way.

Now if there is difficulty between pastor and the people of the church, or families in neighborhoods, try this way and it will smooth away all difficulties and we will have a grand year of success in the SUN family.

J. W. WELLONS.

AN APPEAL TO ALL CHRISTIAN PEOPLE

There are no words adequate to set forth fully the appeal of the starving people of North China. At least fifteen millions of our fellow men, according to the most reliable dispatches, are face to face with actual starvation, and more than forty millions are in the midst of famine conditions that cry for urgent help.

Pressing appeals to help the needy in Europe and Asia Minor are already before us and must be met, and now in addition there comes the superlative challenge of the China famine. For a century we have been sending our missionaries to that land to carry the most precious treasure that we possess. Shall we who have sent these messengers to the Chinese people now fail to give them that which will make the preservation of their very lives?

The China famine also presents a special appeal to the churches of America because there is no great organization to deal with the problem. A national committee has been appointed by the President of the United States which is making a public appeal, but the emergency is such that there is no time to build up an elaborate agency adequate to handle the problem. On the foreign field the work of relief has already been organized, chiefly through the cooperation of our missionaries, so that all funds will be administered promptly and efficiently. For securing the indispensable support at home, reliance must be placed on the churches. Foreign mission boards and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America are joining in an appeal to the churches to meet the crying need.

Our giving must be prompt, generous and sustained. Ought not every church to make an offering unexampled in generosity to help meet this tragic situation? Ought not every disciple of Him who fed the hungry throngs have a share in this ministry of love in the name of Christ? Clearly this is a call from Him who has compassion on the multitudes and says: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me."

It is suggested that offerings be sent directly to Vernon Monroe, Treasurer of the American Committee on China Famine Fund, Bible House, Astor Place, New York City. If preferred, however, contributions may be sent to any foreign missionary board, and by it will be transmitted promptly.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

MISSIONS AND THE SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER

This sentence attracted the writer: "No Sunday school would have a teacher who openly violates any one of the Ten Commandments; yet thousands of teachers in our Sunday schools openly disobey our Lord's last and most often repeated command, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The Ten Commandments were given of God through Moses; the last was given of God through His Son. To say that the Ten are more important than the Last is to say that Moses is a greater teacher than Jesus. And another accusation is made by the same author in these words by a great writer, "The average Sunday school teacher cares so little about the great work our Lord has laid upon the Church that he or she feels no obligation whatever to train his or her pupils in missionary lines."

The reason why these accusations are laid against the Sunday school teacher is (1): Because of the fine opportunity the teacher has for fostering the missionary spirit, and, (2): Because of what some teachers have accomplished along this line.

The Sunday school is the logical place for laying the foundations of missionary work, and the Bible is its text-book, which is also essentially a missionary book. World-wide salvation is the central theme of the Book, and no teacher who loses sight of this fact can teach successfully in the Sunday school. The late B. F. Jacobs declared "A Sunday school worker who is not a missionary worker is out of place."

Now since the Bible is the text-book in the school and is also through and through a missionary Book, the trouble with the class or the school in not being missionary is not the Book, but the teacher. I wonder if in this enlightened age of missionary needs, and missionary deeds, Belle M. Brain is justified in saying "The average teacher, even when willing, knows little or nothing about missions and is, therefore, unable to teach a missionary lesson successfully."

Now with as much real, interesting, thrilling literature published on the subject of missions as there is, it seems to me a teacher would have to be blind and indifferent indeed who is ignorant on the greatest topic of all time. The greatest missionary Teacher and enthusiast Who ever visited this planet was Jesus of Nazareth, and all teachers who know and teach that life must of necessity drive home the central thought and theme of His teachings, namely, That all the wide world is to be saved through Him. "And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me."

Every teacher must know that there are two promises of God in the Book and that each is as sure of fulfilment as the other: 1. God promised His Son to the world: 2. He promised the world to His Son. John 3:16 contains the first, "God so loved the world that he gave His Son". Psalm 2:8 contains the second, "Ask of me and I shall give thee the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." We teachers are co-workers together with God in helping fulfill that promise to His Son. And that is why He gave the Great Commission as His parting farewell message to the world "Go ye and teach all the nations".

Some fifty years ago one of our great Protestant churches—the Methodist Episcopal (North)—resolved that every one of its Sunday schools must be a missionary society, and all its teachers missionary instructors. No wonder that Church today has missionaries in more lands, and teaches the gospel in more tongues than any other evangelical Church in America; and no wonder that the children of the Sunday schools in that Church gave $400,000 to missions in 1902, and nearly a million dollars last year; and no wonder that Church could and did put on the greatest campaign for funds and men and women for missionary work, a few months since, that had ever been witnessed in all the world.

The writer agrees most heartily with John R. Mott in saying that "The Sunday school is in some respects the largest undeveloped resource of the Church." And with Belle M. Brain that "Of all the organizations within the Church, none offers so promising a field for fostering missionary interest and prosecuting missionary work as the Sunday school."

Now the teacher is the key to the situation in the Sunday school, and if by some means the teachers in our Sunday schools for this good year of our Lord 1921 could be induced to learn of missions and teach missions in all their lessons to all their classes, it would be the biggest gift to missions ever made in our Christian Church. May God lead them to this great truth, task and opportunity.

MISSIONARY BOOKS FOR THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Bear in mind that Rev. C. B. Riddle, Publishing Agent, Burlington, N. C., has on hand, or will secure any book that Sunday school workers may need with which to interest their classes or schools on the subject of missions. Missionary Superintendents, or Secretaries of Missions, or Teachers, should have on hand such books as these: "The Why and How of Missions in the Sunday School" by Brown; "Five Missionary Minutes" by Trull; "Fifty Missionary Hints Every Boy and Girl Should Know" by Johnston; "Graded Missionary Education in the Church School" by Biard. These are small volumes, and inexpensive; but they are worth while. We wish they were all in the hands of all our Sunday school superintendents and teachers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS, HOW LONG SHALL WE WAIT?

The evangelization of the world waits alone upon the willingness of the workers in the Sunday school. For among the scholars in the Sunday schools of today are the missionaries of tomorrow. The scholars of the Sunday schools of today are the heirs to the countless billions of dollars which represents the wealth of the Christians of North America. The scholars in the Sunday schools of today are to be the administrators of the vast commercial enterprises which belt the globe and cover the continents and traverse the seas. The scholars in the Sunday schools of today are to be the directors of those industries whose impact upon the unevangelized lands shall largely effect their response to the gospel message. How heavily then rests the missionary responsibility upon the present-day leaders in the Sunday school! The world will be evangelized in that generation in which the Christian teachers of its youth determine that it shall be done.

And all the while that the Church has been so slow to obey the command of Christ and to answer the need of the world, vast multitudes have failed to hear the message of redeeming love.

"In a mission school for girls, an Indian maiden heard the story of Jesus and with the characteristic devotion of youth, dedicated her life to missionary service. She filled out the missionary application blank as best she could, for there was one question which puzzled her greatly. The question referred to her father and mother and asked, "To what Church did your parents belong, and what was the nature of their Christian experience?"

The Indian maiden pondered long over the question, and then wrote in answer these searching words, "Father and mother died before the missionary came."

How many fathers and mothers will die before we do our duty in sending missionaries or carrying the gospel message to them?

FROM OUR COLLEGE

A WORTHY EXAMPLE

Mrs. T. W. Strowd has just donated to the Elon College Library the books of that sainted minister of the Christian Church and life-time devoted friend of Christian education and of Elon College, the late lamented Rev. T. W. Strowd.

These books were the inspiration of Brother Strowd's ministerial labors and they will prove a corresponding value to the young men and women who shall through the years we trust gather here for study and life-impressions. How thoughtful of Mrs. Strowd to place these books here.

On the permanent record books of the College Library and on the fly leaf of each separate volume will be placed this simple, but expressive inscription: "Donated by Mrs. Strowd in memory of Rev. T. W. Strowd."

A most worthy example—this.

LACY IRWIN INGLE—AN APPRECIATION

Death is always sad in the young and promising. The passing away of Lacy Irwin Ingle, a member of the class of '21, on Thursday morning, January 13, is especially sad. He represented the finest type of student, diligent and faithful in his studies, interested in all phases of college life, vitally concerned in the moral and spiritual activities of the campus and of the Christian life, popular with his fellow students because of their appreciation of the real worth of his character and integrity of manhood, contributing toward paying his college expenses by honest and conscientious work at off-hours—such is the record in brief of this splendid young man.

The College community, faculty, students, citizens, are deeply saddened by his departure. He was taken sick Sunday. Tuesday by the advice of his physicians he was taken to his home four miles away. Wednesday blood poison had unmistakably developed. Early Thursday morning his soul took its flight to the Heavenly Home.

As I think over the death of this exemplary young Christian and ministerial student, the one comforting thought is the type of Christian life he lived. There is no question as to the safety of his spirit. But to him religion was a life to be lived and a program to be realized. He was of a very practical turn of mind and religion to him was something workable and practical. I knew his views covering the vital things of life and I had observed his practice. For his senior thesis he was making a careful study of the question of curriculum for the Sunday school. His plans were laid to enter Union or Yale Divinity school this fall. His aspiring spirit did not know the better thing God had immediately in store for him. Heaven is richer than he is there. Sweet and precious through the lengthening days of life will the memory of him be to those of us who knew and loved him for his worth.

PASSED THE GOAL

Our financial report this week pushes us beyond our goal—passed two rungs in the ladder on the home run and passed the goal. We wanted to close our books for the year and make this last report for the year 1920 and so a number of our friends in Burlington came to our rescue and pushed us beyond the goal set.

In my final words for the year 1920, I want to say that the Church has been real kind to us during the year 1920 and has stood by us as loyally as we could ask for. While I have given you my best during the year, it has been the Church and the friends of the little orphan children that have made the success possible I have only done my duty. I want to thank each and every one who has been so kind to me in this work and stood by me so loyally during the year and assure you that I am grateful. In the work I have forgotten self, the success of the work for the cause of the little helpless child has been my constant thought. I have given you my best efforts.

We praise God for all the success that has crowned our efforts in the work during the past year and give Him all the glory.

I wish for each and every one who has helped us a most happy and successful year in 1921.

A CERTAIN BOY

He doesn't like to go to bed,
And getting up is worse;
To washing, too, I've heard it said,
He's just as much averse.

And as for school and studying
When he would rather roam,
He hates it more than anything
But doing jobs at home.

I must admit that it is true,
Though 'tis a sorry boast,
Whatever he is told to do
Is what he hates the most.

I do suppose that if he chose
What he should do all day,
He'd play and eat a while, and then
He'd eat a while and play.

BENNY BLUEBIRD IN WINTER LAND

Benny Bluebird was in trouble. He lay on the ground in a strange grain field, where the storm of the night before had flung him. The rain had beaten upon him, and the hail had torn his feathers. He was half frozen and so sore he could scarcely move. No wonder—his left wing was badly crushed. And his tiny stomach fairly ached with hunger. Though insect time had long since passed (for it was late October), he glanced around in hope of catching something on the wing. Then he looked squarely into a pair of bright rollicking eyes. A plump, bustling bird teetered on a tree above, looking at him in a curious, friendly fashion.

"A dee dee, a dee dee! Pee-wee-ee," chirped the newcomer, which in your language and mine means: "Hello, Bulecoat! What are you doing here?"

"Tootle-loo! Tweet-tweet!" twittered Benny, which is bluebird for: "I got lost in that awful storm, and my wings hurt and I can't fly."

"You don't say." Down flew the stranger excitedly. "I'll bet it hurts a lot. Say, what's your name? Mine's Charlie Chickadee."

"Benny Bluebird. My tribe started south yesterday for the winter, and I got separated from them in the storm. I s'pose I shall never see them again. They'll think I'm dead."

"How mean of them to go off and leave you!" cried Charlie Chickadee.

"It was really my own fault." Benny hung his head and looked very much ashamed of himself. "My mother told me to keep close to the flock, but I kept dodging off and running races with myself on the side. First thing I knew the flock was away ahead, almost out of sight. Then before I could catch up a big, black stormcloud burst right on me, and the rain banged me against a tree. I thought I could find my way alone until the storm hurt my wing."

"Find your way alone! I should say not!" exclaimed Charlie. "Of course I could find my way, because I've made the trip before, but not a youngster like you. Born only this summer, too, I'll bet." Chuckling, he suddenly darted across the field, soon returning with a chickadee even fatter and more bustling than himself. He introduced her as his sister, Cheepy.

"My sakes, Charlie, he's half starved!" cried Cheepie, hopping around Benny and looking him over with her sharp eyes. So off they flew to the orchard next door, where they made their home, returning with fat grubs in their mouths. These Benny gobbled from their bills while they chattered over his story and examined his crushed wing. They also gave him loads of advice about what to do for it. They showed him where to drink at the little brook in the orchard, fluttering ahead of him as he hopped painfully toward it.

Benny shivered and asked the chickadees when they expected their tribe to start south. They only laughed at him and told him that this was their winter home and that they had just come. "The people at the farmhouse are fine to us, 'specially the little girl," they twittered. "O Benny, wait till you see that little girl! We'll show you!"

Bennie couldn't understand it at all. He was glad, however, that the jolly little chickadees were to stay with him in Winter Land. They were very good to him. They brought him cankerworm moths, which they dug out from under the bark of the apple trees. They showed him where a fieldmouse's winter store of grain was hidden. They found a hole in a big rotten elm stump, in which he slept snug at night. They introduced him to their chickadee friends, and he found them a lively lot. When the other birds tried to torment him, the chickadees pounced on them in a body and drove them away. As his wing healed and grew stronger, he began to fight back, and he soon taught the quarrelsome birds to let him alone.

One day, while Charley and Cheepy were boosting him with their wings, he flew to the top of the apple tree in which they lived. Proudly they showed him their box house, which they said had been made for them by the little girl at the farmhouse. Benny had never seen a wooden nest before, as his babyhood home had been made of grass and hair and feathers stuck in the top of a fence post. Charlie and Cheepy, however, had found their wooden house waiting for them, and all they had to do was to drag in a few leaves and feathers. They were so cozy that the fiercest storms never touched them.

Benny did not recover the use of his wings a minute too soon. The next day the wind blew a gale and the air was full of snowflakes. For two days the storm raged and the ground disappeared under white drifts. The trees were coated with ice so that the bird could get no more insect eggs. Benny wondered in dismay if there was a single mouthful of food left in Winter Land.

The chickadees chuckled heartily at him. "A dee dee!" they cried. "Come on, Benny. We'll show you where we can get the finest breakfast!"

So away they flew with the rest of the flock almost to the dooryard of the farmhouse. There on the snow lay a great scattering of hemp seed on which a flock of sparrows were feeding. A pink-cheeked little girl in a coat and cap and mittens stood on the walk and tossed out bread crumbs from a huge bowl. The minute she saw Benny she gave a squeal of delight and called: "Mother, come and see this new kind of chickadee, with a blue coat! Why—ee, it must be a bluebird! Now, why didn't it go south?"

Benny began to understand why Charlie and Cheepy liked to live in Winter Land. The little girl was always giving the birds bread-crumbs parties. Also she persuaded her father to build them a regular festival tent of dry branches, draped with dead vines, in one corner of the garden. Here the birds gathered during storms and kept dry while they ate the seed and crumbs she gave them.

The winter passed all too quickly for Benny. One mild March day he spied a trace of green amid the melting snow on the farmer's lawn. It made him so happy that he began to sing as though his little throat would burst with melody. A flock of birds passing over the garden stopped to answer him in his own language. It was his own colony of bluebirds returning from the south.

Benny almost stood on his head, he was so glad to see them. They were amazed to see him so plump and contented as they had felt sure he would die of cold and hunger. When they urged him to go on with them to the old summer home, he looked at them longingly, then refused. "Tootle-loo, tweet-tweet!" he sang, swaying back and forth on a budding branch. "The people here like us; and if they hadn't fed us all winter, we'd have starved. There's a little girl here that has an apple tree of her own in the orchard. She's asked me to live in it all summer. Last year the cankerworms ate up a lot of her apples. This year they won't get a single apple, 'cause I'm going to watch over that tree and eat those worms. Tootle-loo! Tweet-tweet!"

VALLEY LETTER

Several of my churches observed Christmas in a very appropriate way this year. Dry Run, Bethlehem, Mayland, and Concord prepared special Christmas programs, consisting of appropriate exercises, that at Concord being prepared under the supervision of Mrs. A. W. Andes. These programs were well rendered in each case, and were much enjoyed by the large audiences that assembled for the occasions. Each program was concluded by the distribution of gifts to the members of the Sunday schools. Each remembered their pastor by placing a gift on the tree for him and members of his family. The Dry Run tree produced a pocket book containing $13.00; the Bethlehem tree, an envelope containing $15.00; the Mayland tree, an envelope containing $6.00; and the Concord tree, several gifts of various values for the pastor and his family.

Bethlehem, not yet feeling satisfied with what the Christmas tree had borne for their pastor, got together a large quantity of good things to eat, loaded them into two automobiles and drove to the pastor's home under cover of darkness on the night of December 29. The pastor and wife were brought into subjection while this delegation from Bethlehem took possession of the house, and carried in packages, boxes, and bags until we were almost bewildered. We enjoyed the company of this jolly crowd immensely, but they soon bade us good night, and left us to our fate. We then set about straightening up the house a little, which had been thrown very much out of its usual order. The pantry and cellar are not down to normal yet, and if any of our friends think of taking a meal with us this winter, now would be a good time.

Well worthy of mention also is a pounding on a smaller scale received about the middle of December, and administered by Mrs. Fred Hilyard at Mayland in the form of a large box well packed with quite a variety of delicious things to eat. It was a complete pounding all by itself.

In addition to the above donations many smaller gifts have been received too numerous to name separately. For all these things we are very grateful indeed, and know not how to express our appreciation. If we knew how to be better servants of the good people whom we try to serve we would count it a joy to render better service to them for their many expressions of good will. May the Lord help us to do better work for them all.

These substantial gifts are all the more appreciated because of the nature of our work. We have a large field, demanding at least twice the amount of work we can give it, and so we take no time to raise chickens or a garden or keep a cow or hogs, but spend all our time and strength in the work to which we feel called. The need for church work is so great and the laborers so few that we feel that the Lord and the church must have as much of our time and strength as possible.

May this year 1921 witness great growth in the kingdom of our Lord.

A. W. ANDES.

POUNDED

The congregation of New Lebanon Christian church on Christmas eve gave their pastor a genuine country pounding. The pastor was present at a Christmas entertainment given at the church on the above date, and at the close of the exercises, which were highly entertaining, the pastor was presented with many good things to eat, such as flour, fresh sausage, canned fruit, butter of the rarest kind, eggs, dressed chickens, preserves, potatoes of both kinds, apples, oranges, raisins, candy, oat meal, corn flakes, and other food articles. They know how to make a pastor's heart rejoice and the pastor and family cannot find words to express their sincere thanks and appreciation to these good people for this bountiful supply.

W. L. WELLS.

AND STILL ANOTHER

Mrs. Newman, the children, and myself are very grateful to the members of Union church for a pounding given us on Friday, December 31, 1920 consisting of coffee, sugar, flour, meats, a purse of money, and other things. We are also thankful for many kind remembrances from friends of our other churches.

C. E. NEWMAN.

A PROBLEM SOLVED

Much has been said about the problem of the country church. I notice recently, that most of the pastors reporting "poundings" have charge of country churches. So it looks like one phase of the problem is being solved, so far as the H. C. L. in reference to the folks at the parsonage is concerned. And this problem is finding its solution at our house.

On New Year's Day an automobile—no Ford—bearing good things to eat stopped in front of our door and was unloaded to our delight. One day later I was in Wakefield and our good friend, Bro. J. H. Harris, informed me that a supplement to the pounding was waiting for me at the Farmers' Store and for me to drive my Ford around. I obeyed orders. The Ford also had been doing service in bringing good things from the people at Union and New Lebanon. One man from Union sent me a car load (R. R. car) of nice oak wood already for the stove. The folks at Dendron and Burton's Grove also remembered during the Christmas time. We want to express our thanks to all these kind friends.

These material things help in a real way and are not without significance in the solving of the higher problem that confronts the church and the minister. His services can be more effective when he can have the expression of the appreciation and cooperation of the people.

Brother Editor we would be glad to have you visit us as you make your rounds to see the other brethren to whom you have given notice.

W. D. HARWARD.

AN APPRECIATED GIFT

The first Sunday evening I was beginning the services at Ivor, Brother E. N. Johnson, one of the leading members of the church, came to me and said that Brother Reams (the Baptist pastor) had an announcement to make just before the singing of the last song. So just before I announced the last song Brother Reams made his announcement.

Brother Reams began by saying that the Ivor Christian church had a great way of doing things and doing them in the right way. I could not imagine what he was going to say, or do, until he said that the church wanted to present me with a Christmas gift, and handed me an envelope containing a twenty dollar bill. It was quite a surprise to me, but indeed a glad one.

The members of the church have been very kind to me, and are doing everything possible to make my stay here pleasant. I have never been among people that I liked better. I feel under many obligations to them and shall strive to be a more faithful pastor.

W. B. FULLER.

ORANGEPORT, N. Y.

The Christmas season has been spent pleasantly in our section. The Sunday school had a Christmas tree. The exercises were good on this occasion and every member of the school was remembered. The pastor and his family came in for their share of the remembrance. Several useful gifts were received. One gift with no name attached was five new crisp five dollar bills. One for each member of the family. When the exercises were over an offering was taken for the Near East sufferers and something over $30.00 was received.

Our annual meeting was held on the evening of January 3. Reports from the different departments of our work were encouraging and shows all our work on a firm financial basis. Among other things done during the year the church and parsonage were fitted with wiring and fixtures for electric lights. "The week of Prayer" was observed. Owing to the condition of the roads and sickness our congregations were not as large as they would have been otherwise, but our meetings were interesting and we trust profitable.

And now the year 1921 is before us. We hope to make it our best year.

RICHMOND LETTER

We were glad recently to have Dr. J. W. Wellons preach for us. Owing to sickness, the writer was unable to attend, but those who had the privilege of hearing the sermon were highly pleased with it. We trust that God may spare him to make us many more visits.

The members and friends of the Ladies' Aid Society gave us a liberal pounding in the way of a Christmas donation, which was highly appreciated and much enjoyed.

Our Sunday school presented an interesting program on December 19, after which a treat was given the children.

We have a loyal band of workers here and gradually we can see progress. Our last quarterly report to the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, showed that fifteen new members had been received during the quarter and $1,145.18 raised by the church and $93.60 by the Sunday school.

We have started our mid-week prayer meetings at the parsonage. The attendance and interest has been good.

The city of Richmond furnishes many advantages for the help of a minister. I have recently had the pleasure of hearing Drs. John R. Mott and Fred B. Smith. I am taking lectures through the University of Virginia Extension Course and also at the Union Theological Seminary. These advantages, which are without expense are a great advantage to any one engaged in any form of Christian service and are well worthy of consideration by the Committee in selecting a place for the Headquarters of the Southern Christian Convention.

Richmond has a population of 171,667. There are 106 Protestant churches with a membership of 70,000. The increase in population has been 4,400 per year for the last ten years or enough to require at least two new churches every year. We should have been on the field years ago and much has been lost by the delay but there is still a bright opening for us and we feel that the work is going to be a success.

POUNDED AGAIN

We want to take this method to express our appreciation to Class No. 1, of the Wadley Sunday school for its pounding in, meat, sugar, syrup, rice, coffee, sausage, and such like. Then, while we were visiting in the community of Oak Grove (Ga.), the first days of this year, they remembered their pastor with articles for the pantry such as, meat, sausage, sugar, coffee, dried fruit, canned fruit, peaches, preserves, tomatoes, pickles, syrup, and potatoes. For all of which we want to thank one and all who took part.

BOULDS-PIERCE

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Pierce was the scene of a pretty wedding Sunday afternoon, December 26, 1920, when their attractive daughter, Miss Carrie Lee Pierce, was led to the altar of matrimony by Mr. Claude Eldredge Boulds of Portsmouth, Va. The parlors were filled with relatives and friends while the ceremony was performed by the writer. The bride wore a navy blue velour suit with hat and gloves to watch. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of bride's roses and lillies of the valley. A sumptuous dinner having been served previous to the marriage, the bridal party attended services at the Bethlehem Christian church of which both bride and groom are members.

CALLED HOMETAYLOR

Selena Hester Shook was born July 19, 1883. A little over a year ago she was married to Chester W. Taylor of Washington, D. C. On December 22, 1920 she died in a hospital in Washington, aged 37 years, five months, and three days. The husband accompanied the remains to the home of the parents of the deceased, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Shook, McGahysville, Va. Burial services were conducted by the writer in the Reformed church there December 24. During my pastorate at Mt. Olivet (R) several years ago sister Taylor was a faithful member of the church, and, though absent from the church, I understand, remained faithful to the end. For some time prior to her marriage she was a popular trained nurse. Besides her husband she is survived by an infant child, her parents, four brothers, and four sisters. May the Lord bless and comfort the bereaved.

A. W. ANDES.

BOWDEN

Annie Lee Bowden, the only child and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh T. Bowden of Zuni, Va., died December 22, 1920 at the age of 12 years, three months and twenty-two days. She was acting as Mrs. Santa Claus at Gay's school house on the night of December 21, at a Christmas entertainment and accidentally caught on fire. She was carried home and departed this life next morning. She left us and went to be with her Savior. She was very bright and interesting, well grown for her age, and greatly loved by all who knew her. She was a member of Mt. Carmel church and also a member of the Sunday school at Antioch where she will be greatly missed. She is now with Jesus and the angels. Some one said on the night that she caught fire that she looked like an angel. The dear parents and grandparents have the deepest sympathy of their many friends.

The funeral services were conducted at Mt. Carmel Christian church, by the writer and the pastor, Rev. E. T. Cotten, and her remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery.

May God bless and comfort those dear parents who were so devoted to their sweet Annie Lee. We shall all meet again if we are faithful to Him and there will be no sorrow in Heaven.

H. H. BUTLER.

BOWDEN

On Tuesday evening, December 21, 1920, at Gay's school, about 9:30 o'clock, just at the end of a very nice entertainment, while Santa Claus was preparing to deliver the presents to the children, Annie Lee Bowden, the sweet, attractive, and only child of Mr. and Mrs. Raleigh T. Bowden, caught fire from a candle on the Christ. mas tree and was burned so seriously that she died Wednesday about 6:00 a. m.

Annie Lee was twelve years old on September 1, 1920. She was a member of the Sunday school and Willing Workers' Missionary Society of Antioch Christian church. Annie Lee was such an affectionate, lovable child, to know her was to love her. It was the saddest death many of us have ever witnessed. She will be sadly missed by her Sunday school class, the Willing Workers' Missionary Society, her daily schoolmates, her loving teachers, and the whole community.

Her body was laid away in the cemetery of Mt. Carmel church of which she was a member. There were many and beautiful floral tributes of love.

Therefore, be it resolved, in behalf of Antioch Sunday school:

1. That we thank our Heavenly Father that He gave us such a beautiful life, if for only a short while; and

2. That while we shall miss the sweet association of Annie Lee we will cherish in our memories fond and sacred recollections of her.

3. That we extend to her family our tender sympathy in their sorrow and commend them to the sustaining grace of our Heavenly Father and

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her parents, a copy be printed in The Christian Sun and The Suffolk Herald.

Respectfully submitted,

CROSS

William Joseph Cross died at Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., December 29, 1920, aged 46 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucy S. Cross, one son, W. J. Cross, Jr., and one adopted daughter, Isabella Cross, four brothers and two sisters, many relatives and a host of friends.

Brother Cross was a faithful member of the Franklin Christian church, and had been one of the Board of Deacons for a number of years. He was one of the most faithful members of the church, and was ready to serve in any capacity, and was anxious to do his part under all circumstances.

His great love for flowers was known by all who knew him. He gave much time and attention to them, and not only his own home, but many others were made brighter because of them. His church was often made beautiful by his choicest plants.

A kind and loving husband, a faithful and devoted father, a good neighbor, a noble citizen, a choice spirit, a Christian gentleman has gone from us, and we have the richest heritage of his life which is more valuable than gold. The funeral services were conducted from the church by his pastor assisted by Rev. M. A. McLean of the Baptist church.

THE BULLETIN

Among those who paid THE SUN office a brief visit since last issue were Rev. B. F. Black, Franklinton, N. C., and Bro. W. E. Lindsey, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Dr. P. H. Fleming desires to extend thanks through THE SUN to members of his churches, and to friends, for recent kindnesses, gifts, presents, and remembrances in general.

President Harper, on another page, tells of the passing of L. I. Ingle, a member of Elon's 1921 Senior Class. It was the Editor's privilege to know this young man, and to know him was to love him. To parents and bereaved friends THE SUN extends sympathy.

Rev. B. J. Earp is now at his father's home, Milton, N. C., and is open for work wherever he may be needed. Bro. Earp went to Vanderbilt last fall to take a post-graduate course, but had to give up his studies on account of the condition of his eyes.

Brother Elisha Bradshaw of the Eastern Virginia Conference has moved his family to Elon College and has entered school there. For a number of years Brother Bradshaw has been doing Christian work wherever opportunity presented itself. He desires now to further prepare himself for ministerial work which he anticipates entering later. Brother Bradshaw is one our most loyal and consecrated men.

Rev. H. W. Dowding has resigned as pastor of our Portsmouth, Virginia, church, his resignation to take effect March 1, 1921. The pastoral committee of this church is composed of Brothers W. S. Hanbury, J. C. Ellis, and J. F. Brothers. Any person desiring correspondence with the committee may send the same to Brother Ellis whose address is 510 Mt. Vernon Avenue, Portsmouth, Va.

BURLINGTON CHURCH

(Editor J. F. McCulloch in Methodist Protestant Herald, Jan. 13)

The editor was called to service in the Christian church, Burlington, last Sunday. They have no pastor now, but have called Rev. Mr. Lankford and are expecting him in a few weeks. Dr. Amick is to preach to them next Sunday morning. They have built an imposing church recently, having outgrown the capacity of their former building just across the street. The new church including the ground cost $58,000. They are already taxing the capacity of the Sunday school rooms, but have provided in the basement for much more room. The congregation includes many of Burlington's substantial business men. They are to be congratulated on having such a splendid house of worship. May they so use it as to gain a place in that house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. We much enjoyed our entertainment in the home of Rev. C. B. Riddle and wife. Bro. Riddle is editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and is somewhat prepared by his experience to appreciate the situation of the Herald's editor. To add to our enjoyment of the visit, Rev. S. W. Taylor, pastor Burlington M. P. church was invited, and brought over by Bro. Riddle in his car to take dinner with us. A pleasant surprise at the dinner table was the finding of a check by our plate calling for $254.50 for European Famine Relief. This was contributed by our Burlington Sunday school and brought over by the treasurer, Mr. Herbert Wade. In the afternoon a short auto ride with Bro. R. F. Williams took us to Glen Raven to hear Bro. Andrews' sermon and address to the congregation at that place. The evening train returned us to Greensboro in time to hear Bro. Stubbins' sermon in Graee church.

PLAN OF PEOPLE'S CHURCH IS SUCCESSFUL

(Index Dover, Del.)

The movement inaugurated by the People's Christian church Sunday school on Sunday, December 12, that of fasting at noon on Wednesday, December 15, and giving the price of that meal as an offering to the starving Chinese, proved to be popular.

It was announced at Sunday night's service at the People's Christian church that the offering for the day both in school and church, as the result of the fast, was $142.47. This amount will be sent to the proper authorities either through The Christian Herald or Literary Digest.

Fully one hundred members of the church and Sunday school pledged themselves to practice the mid-week fast for six months and bring the offering to the church each Sunday for the needs of the people across the seas.

TOBACCO

The Golden Leaf Crown North Carolina And She Leads The United States.

Tobacco is king in North Carolina, and it entitles her to first rank among all states for this crop in acreage and value. Kentucky has long held first place, but the 1920 crop has put her in second rank, by $27,000,000 below that held by North Carolina.

Our total of 582,000 acres, produced a $97,182,000 tobacco crop. The acreage in the state was increased 11 per cent, the production 11.8 per cent, and the total value decreased 44 per cent since 1919.

The quality was poor, it being pappy or devoid of wax, quite spotted and irregular in color, with much evidence of unripe curing. The color was variable but fair. The Alamance and Caswell counties area produced the best and about the only good tobacco in the state. Quite a slump in prices occurred late in November and December, excepting with the best qualities.

The United States crop was increased four per cent in production and yielded sixty-five per cent less in value. The national average for this crop was 796 pounds, valued at $168 per acre at 21 cents per pound.

The state's tobacco crop averaged $167 per acre, while the average of all crops was $45.00. This means that the tobacco value is equal to about thirty per cent of the total value of all crops, while it had but twelve per cent of the acreage.

It was in Scotland. The young man, it being Sunday, wished to give the young lady a treat. He went into a shop and asked for chocolate creams.

"I dinna sell chocolate creams on the Sabbath," said the old lady behind the counter, severely.

"But ye selt sweeties to the women that has just gane oot," said the young fellow, who had seen the transaction through the window.

"Ay, some ecclesiastical confectionery, but nae chocolate creams," said the lady, and went on to explain: "Ecclesiastical confectionery is pepperment draps, pan darps and ginger lozengers—but nae chocolate creams."

He Couldn't Tell

"Where were you yesterday, Tommy Cribbs?" asked the teacher.

"Please, mum, I had a tootache," answered Tommy.

"Has it stopped?" asked the teacher, sympathetically.

"Don't know," said Tommy.

"What do you mean, boy? You don't know if your tooth has stopped aching?"

"No, mum; the dentist kept it."—Los Angeles Times.

Ira Andrews, the newly elected city clerk of Terre Haute, is active in Sunday school work. On a recent Sunday he advised the children of his class that the morning study would be about Ruth.

"Now," said Andrews, after introducing the subject, "who can tell me anything about Ruth?"

Up went a little hand in the rear of the class.

"Well, Willie," asked the teacher, "what do you know about Ruth?"

"He made twenty-nine home runs last season and thirty-four already this season," was the answer.

Point of View

A gentleman, who was searching for his wife in a crowded department store, remarked to a saleswoman, "Is there anything on earth that would reconcile a man to such a crowd as this?"

"Yes, sir; being one of the firm," was the prompt reply.

WOMAN

A woman is queer, there's no doubt about that.

She hates to be thin and she hates to be fat,

One minute it's laughter, the next it's a cry,

You can't understand her, however you try;

But there's one thing about her which every one knows—

A woman's not dressed till she powders her nose.

You never can tell what a woman will say,

She's a law to herself every hour of the day.

It keeps a man guessing to know what to do—

And mostly he's wrong when his guessing is thru;

But this you can bet on, wherever she goes

She'll find some occasion to powder her nose.

I've studied the sex for a number of years,

I've watched her in laughter and seen her in tears;

On her ways and her whims I have pondered a lot,

To find what will please her and just what will not;

But all that I've learned from the start to the close

Is that sooner or later she'll powder her nose.

At church or a ball game, a dance or a show,

There's one thing about her I know that I know—

At weddings or funerals, dinners of taste,

You can bet that her hand will dive into her waist,

And every few minutes she'll strike up a pose,

And the whole world must wait until she powders her nose.

Conscience

HERE is a moral law—at least an intuition—that not so much endeavors to guide us, though it does, as to let us know when we do wrong. Tennyson, the great seer of his day, wrote:

“He that wrongs his friend
Wrongs himself more; and ever bears about
A silent court of justice in his breast,
Himself the judge and jury, and himself
The prisoner at the bar, ever condemned;
And that drags down his life.”

THAT sting of conscience that we have wronged ourselves the more when we have wronged another is a silent witness that speaks in unmistakable terms.

BUT conscience is no guide. Kings and emperors have gone forth to kill and to slay because of conscience. The Kaiser's conscience no doubt prompted him to plunge the world into slaughter beyond description.

CONSCIENCE is safe only when squared with God's law. “I am the way, the truth, and light,” says the Master. Conscience can be mis-led.

IT matters not so much what conscience tells us as it does what we have told conscience.

"It's good to have money and the things that money can buy; but it's good, too, to check up once in a while and make sure you haven't lost the things that money can't buy."

PASTORLESS CHURCHES

There is much talk going the rounds of the Church press these days about pastorless churches. We see the statement that one denomination in the South has 1,048 charges without pastors. On each of these charges there are from one to four congregations. And so on down the line the call comes and the cry goes out: "More preachers". The praying for the Lord to send more laborers is not relieving the situation.

There may be this reason for such a lack of laborers: There may be too many selfish congregations that think only of local interest and God is withdrawing from these. When the average church begins to think more of others than it does of self; when it gives more to outside causes than for local interests; when it becomes deeply concerned about preaching the Word to all the world, men (and women) from the ranks will rise and say as Samuel of old—"Lord, here am I, send me."

SHOULD A PASTOR OWN AN AUTOMOBILE?

Without arguing the question, we say yes, if conditions demand it.

It is not a matter whether the pastor is able to buy it or not. If conditions demand it, he should have the automobile and his church or churches should pay for it.

The other day we saw a beloved pastor in our city visiting on the outskirts of the city. He was tired. He had walked many miles, made a number of calls. With a good car he could have made many more calls. That is not all. He returned tired in body and unfit for his evening's reading.

The pastor who fails to visit, soon finds himself moving on; and it is a big task to reach all the people without a modern conveyance.

If your pastor does not have a car, and needs one, buy it and teach him how to handle it.

Rev. O. E. Goddard, D. D., writing in The Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tennessee, concerning the Centenary Revival, says these very striking and noteworthy things:

It was once thought that to mention money in the midst of the fervors of a revival meeting would prove disastrous, would throw a coldness on the meeting, might kill it. Now we know that a meeting that would be chilled or killed by a Biblical deliverance on money ought to be chilled, killed, and buried. Simply accepting a title to a mansion in the skies, simply singing, "I'm glad salvation is free," simply feeling good, is not the whole of religion, according to the New Testament. The fact of God's ownership and consequently man's trusteeship are so fundamental that it seems strange that these truths should have even been regarded as less spiritual than any other truths. An exclusively emotional revival not based upon God's eternal truth is a curse. To delude people with the notion that they are religious because they can cry is a crime. To suppose that the only function of the Holy Spirit is to stir the emotions is a puerile notion of Christianity that ought to vanish. The Holy Spirit does move men's emotions, but his more important function is to produce the fruit of the Spirit. According to the Bible, "the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance." He who has these fruits is a spiritual man, be he emotional or unemotional.

FEBRUARY AND THE SUN

February has always been a good month for THE SUN, financially speaking. One would not think it that way, when he realizes that the larger per cent of subscribers are farmers. Despite the Editor's personal efforts at fall Conferences, February and March usually go beyond October and November.

We realize that money conditions are not normal and we are anxious to be of the largest possible service to every subscriber. However, here is our hope that February will be a banner month for THE SUN's income. It is sorely needed. The Board of Publication is now up against its biggest problem and a liberal response in February will greatly help.

Of course pastors will help us as usual—for which we thank them.

Bishop Robinson (Methodist), of India, does not seem hopeful for church union on the basis of the Lambeth Conference. He writes:

When the Church of England shall have set its house in order—that is to say, when it has got rid of the Establishment, relinquished prelatial in favor of constitutional episcopacy, foresworn forever Apostolic Succession, sent Anglo-Catholicism to its own place (the bosom of Papalism), revised its Articles of Religion (John Wesley has provided an admirable revision), accorded its laity a rightful place in its councils, and placed sundry objectionable doctrinal teachings on a sound and secure Scriptural basis—then, and not until then, will it be in the position of vantage from which as a free, independent and evangelical Christian body it can enter into negotiations for union with the Free Churches.

"SUFFOLK LETTER" THIS WEEK

Readers will miss this week the usual heading—"Suffolk Letter". On page seven may be found Dr. Staley's usual weekly contribution. "If I Were a Layman" is the heading that we have selected for it. The article strikes us as being full of truth and fundamental in principle. Prominence is given it because of its value, as we see it.

There is another purpose that we have in calling the article "If I Were a Layman" and giving a page display. We trust that it will cause some layman to write on the theme—"If I Were a Preacher." Let us have an article by some one. Make it about one page in length and it will have prominence, and proper attention.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

Some church janitors heat the building as if the preacher were going to talk on "ice", while others expect all the fire from the pulpit.

Some young preachers feel that the first thing to do is to develop the "parsimonious" voice.

This country needs a genuine baptism of law enforcement. Fines mean only high license. There is too much profit in some vices to stop an offender by fines.

SALOONS AND EDUCATION

"The closing of the saloons is sending many young people to college." Thus declared William Jennings Bryan in a recent interview with a reporter for the Ohio State University Lantern. "Five years ago we spent three times as much money on intoxicating liquors as we did on education. A part of that money at least has been diverted to educational channels. Five years ago less than ten percent of all the pupils in the common grades entered high school, and not over two percent ever went to college. If only four percent now go to college, we can see why the university halls are filled to overflowing."

"Remedies never come until after the disease." declared Mr. Bryan in regard to the inability of educational institutions to handle properly the vast numbers which come to them. "We may feel sure that thinking people will not see our colleges and universities decline for lack of funds or on account of intiquated systems of education. One proposed remedy is the establishment of junior colleges to take care of those just starting to college. Another is the extension of high school to make it cover the first two years of the college course. There is a growing tendency in favor of the extension of high school work in this manner, and, if it is adopted, twice the present number of students can finish their education at college without making the colleges any larger than they are today."

Dry leaders of Holland have announced that they will make a determined effort to secure the adoption of a local option bill in the next session of the Netherlands parliament.

The Honor System continues to be the subject of discussion in American colleges. It has recently been adopted in the Military Department of Colorado Agricultural College by the students of Ohio State University, Gustavus-Adolphus College, Minnesota, and Valparaiso University, Indiana. Other student bodies having the same under consideration are Bethany College, West Virginia, Coe College, Iowa, University of Michigan and Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College.

There are 1,176 higher institutions of learning in the United States. This list includes all the universities, colleges, professional schools, colleges of agricultural, mechanical, technological and mining science, normal schools, theological seminaries, and junior colleges.

Mary Garden, world-famed opera and movie star, recently said in regard to prohibition: "I hope the whole world goes dry. Prohibition is a good thing for this country, and it will be a good thing for the world, I mean it."

THE CHRISTIAN ANNUAL

The Christian Annual is out. The mailing started today (January 20). The Annual contains 188 pages, is from the press of the W. H. Fisher Company, Greensboro, N. C.

The book has errors in it. Of course it does. I do not know where they are, but they have been in every edition and I have not been fortunate enough to break the record.

More than one-half of the original manuscript of The Annual was carefully typewritten and verified. Each line of the entire book was read by copy twice. Some of the tables had three readings by copy. In addition to these readings by copy, each page had two additional readings. More than one month's work, in all, has been put on The Annual.

And this one other thing: There are those who complain about The Annual being late each year. They forget that you cannot take an armful of manuscript into a print shop one day and get a complete book the next. Not only this, but this year the press work was held up for three days waiting for vital information about one Conference that should have accompanied the original copy. Later the work had to be suspended for eight days waiting for the proceedings of one organization.

We are not worried—in fact, smiling because the job for this year is over. This, too, is a little amusing: After repeated requests for mailing instructions, there are over 1,200 copies for which no mailing instructions have been furnished, at this date.

Brethren, if you should mention about The Annual being late, remember to be charitable.

THE CRIME OF COMPETITIVE ARMAMENT

When one considers that ninety-three cents out of every dollar collected by the United States Government today goes to pay for past and future wars, it becomes quite obvious that the present increase of armament is nothing short of crime,—even from a financial standpoint. According to a recent number of the Literary Digest, only one per cent of the Government expenditures goes to education; and the remainder of the one hundred per cent, after expenditures for wars, goes to labor, the former and the public. The big reason for such a ratio of expenditures seems to be competitive armament, and the United States is a leader in the race.

The extent of our naval expenditures for 1921, the New York World notes, are nearly $700,000,000, as compared with naval appropriations of about $400,000,000 in Great Britain, and about $150,000,000 in Japan. It is planned that the United States build six new battle-cruisers costing $23,000,000, so that by 1924 this country will have "incomparably the biggest navy in the world." One of these battleships, as it was pointed out by Mr. Hoover, would cost more than the sum needed to save the lives of three and a half million starving children in the war-devastated areas of Europe.

The solution of the problem seems to rest, to a great extent, with the United States, Great Britain, and Japan. With these countries leading in the crusade against competitive armament, the other countries, will follow. The frank discussions between the great powers, and recent reduction of the United States army to 175,000 men, have already given considerable hope in regard to the problem; yet, there is need of much more being accomplished. Every nation must pull together in both army and naval reductions until the spirit of competitive armament is banished.

THE DEBT OF HONOR

One of the saddest aftermaths of the war is revealed in the figures made public by Surgeon General Cummings concerning the number of American soldiers suffering from tuberculosis, mental diseases, and other afflictions which can be charged to their service to their country. Instead of declining, the number of patients have increased at a rate of 1,000 a month, and it is expected that by the time the height of the ailments have been reached in 1927 or 1929, from 30,000 to 35,000 patients will be under treatment in care of the Government.

Analyzing the 19,019 War Risk Insurance patients for the week ending January 1, 1921, it was shown that 7,586 were suffering from tuberculosis, 5,680 from neuropsychiatric ailments, and 5,743 were undergoing general treatment. In order to provide additional beds for these patients and improve the facilities of the hospitals, the Surgeon General has requested a sum of $30,000,000. This is believed to be little enough to devote to the adequate care of the men who gave their health and their reason for their country's defense.

THE INCREASE OF ANTHRAX

The attention of health authorities all over the country has been attracted by the recent increase of anthrax, a deadly disease contracted from animals in the process of tanning their hides and from the use of animal products. In New York City, there have been more cases of the disease in the last year than in the two previous years, and a similar ratio has been reported from other parts of the country.

Most of the cases have been contracted from the use of cheap shaving brushes. Of the thirty-four cases in the last seventeen months, eighteen were contracted in this way, and fifty per cent of the patients died. Other cases were caused from animal hides, and skins infected with the disease.

Though anthrax is rare compared with other better-known diseases, its increase has incited the Government to prevent its future increase. Law has been made to the effect that no more shaving brushes shall be made of horse hair. Health authorities in various states have also taken steps of enforcing stricter rules of sanitation among the workmen of tanning industries.

THE LIFE-RULE OF DR. CHAPMAN

It is always interesting to study the life-rule of a great man, particularly if his life-rule has been put into practice. Though one cannot hope to adopt the life-rule of every great man, there is invariably something about the spirit and process of a great life which attracts you, and seems to even become a part of your own soul.

In the case of J. Wilber Chapman, the great evangelist, one has a feeling of this kind. This is what Fred C. Ottman says in his biography of Dr. Chapman:

"People perplexed with religious problems pressed him for a solution. To an inquiry in reference to certain amusements and rules to govern the religious life, he replied:

"It is a very difficult thing to make a rule for another to live by. The rule which governs my life is this: anything that dims my vision of Christ, or takes away my taste for Bible study, or cramps me in prayer life, or makes Christian work difficult, is wrong for me, and I must as a Christian, turn away from it."

So he regulated his own conduct and nothing better could he prescribe for others.

Rev. A. J. Cook, of Cape Town, Africa, while touring the United States recently gathering the facts regarding the results of prohibition in this country, said that in South Africa, prohibition had become an issue already. The drys there hope for a new law allowing some form of local option, in another five years. Five years later, or in 1930, they hope to have prohibition measure enacted into law.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

DID some one say there is no such thing as a new birth, from the spiritual standpoint? If you hear him say it, tell him to be particular where he thus speaks, for if he does not, some people will find out how ignorant he is in spiritual things.

Did some one say we have a new religion? And what is it—this new religion? Oh, they say it is just culture without the new birth—that and nothing more. Well, that may be a new religion, but it is an awfully poor one. Ignorance! Verily the wisdom of the world is foolishness with God. The truth is, a new religion, in which the supernatural is left out, is so near no religion, that it can never save a soul from sin or death.

In 1917, during that awful spell of "German frightfulness", when no steamer was safe on the sea, within certain territory, the Kariua was torpedoed. One of her passengers was the Rev. Archdeacon Dennis, a missionary of the Church of England. He went to his death with the steamer on which he was traveling. He had with him at the time a bulky manuscript—an English-Ibo dictionary, which he had prepared to aid in the great work of evangelizing the people to whom he had been sent as a missionary. The manuscript was lost of course, as was practically everything on that ship. Strange as it may seem, that great dictionary (in manuscript) has been recovered—it was washed ashore on the coast of Wales, and it will doubtless yet be published. The God who took care of Jonah in the sea, took care of this manuscript in its watery grave, and in due time brought it forth, yet to be a mighty power among the people for whom it was prepared. Only the hand of Jonah's God could have taken this manuscript from the ship as it rested in the depths of the sea, and brought it back to life. The day of miracles seem not to have passed away.

Some one has said that God is never in a hurry, and while that is no doubt true, let us not forget that He always gets to His work on time. Some four or five hundred years ago, Spain once severely persecuted the Jews. She was cautioned of the danger of laying her hands too heavily on God's chosen people. She spurned the thought and declared that Spain was prospering in the time of this prosecution as almost at no other time in her history—as she saw it, she thought she was safe, that God was not keeping watch over His own, but alas, she was mistaken. God was not in a hurry to take vengeance on the Spaniards, but what of the facts today? In those days she was one of the great and proud nations of the world, but today she has been reduced to a fifth rate world power, and it may be less than that, for we may now add to the fact of her weakened condition, as a nation, for she has now lost almost the whole of her once gigantic colonial empire—practically all that remains of her colonial possessions is the island of Fernando Po, off the coast of Africa. The Jews have been a rebellious people, but they are still the chosen people of God—the people to whom God gave His first great truths for the world.

I have seen the sea when it was piling itself up in heaps—it was a wonderful sight. I think the sea of human thought is much like the sea of waters—human thought is piling itself up, and so much after the method of the deep. We scarcely get settled on an idea, before some one tries to turn it over and make it seem as nothing. No doubt we are living in a day of human progress, but which way are we going,—up or down? Many are talking of social service—and they have been at it for several years—but what is the gain so far? The best thing we have seen on social service which has in it real and vital power, comes to us from a report made by the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, claiming to set forth the views of the Presbyterian Church on Social Service, and with it all Christians may be in hearty accord. It says:

"We believe that all true social progress begins where Christ began—with repentance, a change of heart. We would not divorce our social from our individual gospel, but on the contrary proclaim the need of personal conversion with redoubled energy. We believe that the fundamental vice of our time is not so much any particular thing that we do, as the spirit which animates the doing of it. We proclaim, therefore, as the fundamental need of our time, the Spirit of Jesus Christ, and to advocate such changes in our conduct of industry as shall more perfectly express His Spirit."

That is worth thinking about on the part of people who are interested in the spread of the gospel to the ends of the earth. Of course, those who believe in a new religion, a religion in which there is nothing supernatural and no new birth, will not be satisfied with it, but Christians cannot afford to adopt any form of Christianity in which Jesus is left out. Let men and women who are true to the truth and loyal to the colors of the faith, which was once for all delivered to the saints, stand by the truth as revealed in the Bible and so follow Jesus even to Gethsamane, if need be.

KANAMORI

Last night, Mrs. Long and myself, went to Hyde Park Presbyterian church, Tampa, Fla., to hear the minister of the gospel who is often called "The Moody of Japan," also "The Billy Sunday of Japan." The building was packed. Among other things he declared that the common people of Japan "do not want war with the United States." "The people of my country," said he, "are profoundly grateful to this country because of the part played by America in opening up Japan to modern civilization."

Kanamori, during his early years, was a member of the "Kumamoto Band" of thirty Japanese, who learned the English language with the use of the English Bible, planning to criticise and oppose Christianity. Being converted by the teachings of this Bible, however, they took a solemn oath on a hilltop, during the night, signing in their blood their pledge to spread Christianity throughout the Japanese Empire. Kanamori became pastor of a Tokyo church, was later swept from his faith by German rationalism, and for twenty years lectured in all parts of Japan on "Thrift."

The death of his wife served to lead him back to his old faith, and he has since devoted himself to preaching the gospel throughout Japan. He has preached in many places in the United States, and will continue to do so until next June, when he will return to Japan. He is called: "The Man of One Sermon."

He has condensed the fundamentals of the Christian religion into one three-hour sermon, at the close of which he requests his audience not to come again themselves, but to send their friends. He has witnessed thousands of converts. No church building in Japan is large enough for his audiences. He is determined to place his one sermon in every home in Japan. The object of his American tour is to raise money to put this sermon in book form, in the Japanese language, which can be done in Japan, at a cost of five cents per copy.

GENERAL PERSHING FOR CUTTING ARMAMENTS

(From the account which appeared in the New York Times)

"There is another thought that forces itself upon our attention tonight. As we contemplate the causes of the World War and realize its horrors, every right thinking man and woman must feel like demanding that some steps be taken to prevent its recurrence. An important step would be to curtail expenditures for the maintenance of navies and armies. The estimates recently presented to our Congress for naval and military purposes contemplates an appropriation for the next fiscal year amounting to more than $5,000,000 for every working day in the year.

"It is a gloomy commentary upon world conditions that expenditures several times greater than ever before in peace times should be considered necessary, especially when the most rigid economy in governmental administration is essential if we would avoid national bankruptcy. But we are only one of the many nations that contemplate taking upon themselves such an enormous burden in addition to their tremendous war debts.

"The world does not seem to learn from experience. It would appear that the lessons of the last six years should be enough to convince everybody of the danger of nations striding up and down the earth armed to the teeth. But no one nation can reduce armaments unless all do. Isn't it, then, time for an awakening among enlightened peoples to the end that the leading powers may reach some rational agreement which would not only relieve the world of this terrible financial load, but which in itself would be a long step toward the prevention of war?

"Ours is not an aggressive nation. We want no territory, and we have no designs on other people. If other nations have the same attitude, it seems unreasonable not to believe that all would be willing to prove it by consenting to limit armaments. Unless some such move is made, we may well ask ourselves whether civilization does really reach a point where it begins to destroy itself, and whether we are thus doomed to go headlong down through destructive war to darkness and barbarism."

THE BULLETIN

Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne and singer, Davis, are holding a meeting at Elon College this week and we understand that the outlook is fine.

Mr. J. Byrd Ellington, Ridgeway, N. C., one of THE SUN's loyal and devoted friends, called to see us this week.

Rev. and Mrs. D. P. Barrett were scheduled to sail from New York last week back to Porto Rico, but are detained on account of sickness of Mrs. Barrett, who is suffering with a rheumatic attack, rendering her almost helpless at times.

The University of Michigan has 6820 students enrolled, 1420 of whom profess no religious preference. Only another indication of America's big missionary task at home.

AN APPRECIATION

Dear Brother Riddle:

I extend to you and the Brotherhood through the columns of THE SUN my sincere appreciation of the many kind letters of sympathy that have been written me. My eyes have greatly improved since leaving the University, and I feel strong and well and ready to serve my Church to the best of my ability.

IF I WERE A LAYMAN

REV. W. W. STALEY, D. D., LL. D., PRESIDENT SOUTHERN CHRISTIAN CONVENTION

If I were a layman I think I would recognize certain fundamental obligations and privileges as a member of the church. I would recognize that the financial burden and conduct of the business rests upon laymen. I would seek to inspire the membership of the church with a real sense of this financial obligation and business privilege, and to cultivate in the mind of the congregation a sentiment of loyalty to all the institutions and enterprises of my denomination. I would further help to create the sentiment that my pastor should devote his time and talents to spiritual service in the preparation of his sermons, the visitation of the sick and the disconsolate. His time should all be employed, but not in social visits or financial matters, but in sympathetic touch with the unfortunate and in bringing the unsaved to Christ. A church is not a constituency to be manipulated for social, financial and benevolent ends, but an organic body of men and women, with obligations and privileges to be worked out for the glory of God and the salvation of men; and more, it is the body of Christ with His Spirit as the life thereof.

If I were a layman I would regard it my duty to attend the regular services of my church as much as to attend to my regular business, in farm, store, office, or school. The most important business in the world is the Lord's business, and that is the reason why Matthew says: "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you." The weakness of the church is in making its business secondary in the life of its constituency, and the secularizing of the ministry by leaving so many business interests on his mind. If I were a layman I would, therefore, go to church regular, pay to the church liberally and systematically, pray for my pastor, aid him, by information, at least, in his pastoral work, and then I would demand of my pastor a sermon, and not a lecture, or address, on Sunday. I would want his sympathy in my daily task, whether in the kitchen, the shop, or the field; but I would want him to preach the gospel on Sunday and live it during the week.

If I were a layman I would be a regular subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, a regular member and attendant at Sunday school and prayer meeting, serve on committee when appointed, and try to get other members to do likewise. I would not absent myself from church because I did not like the preacher, for I would consider it my duty to be loyal to Christ and the church first, and always. By going and praying for my pastor I might help him to preach better; if I stay away, I would make myself worse. If I had a sorry horse, I would work him and try to improve him or get rid of him, I certainly would not feed him and plow in another man's field with his horse.

If I were a layman I would work to make my church and its grounds as good as my own home; and if I were a rich layman, you can see that I would do much for my church. If in the country I would advocate a settled pastor in a neat parsonage on a few acres of land, if the community justified it; if not, I would at least try to inspire the membership with a willingness to pay liberally for two services a month. It pays to invest faith, means, time, and service in a cause which has blessed the world. Christian civilization, with its wealth, its conveniences, its government, its schools, its boundless opportunities, is the product of the gospel as proclaimed and maintained by the church. The preacher is not the head of the church: Christ is the head and the minister is His messenger; and the minister is the servant of the laymen who make him, or hinder his success.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

OUR WASHINGTON WORK

The Mission Secretary is much pleased to receive Vol. I No. I of "Individual V. I. P." issued by Bro. Irving W. Hitchcock, 801 Allison St., N. W., in the interest of the First Christian church of Washington, D. C. The abbreviations "V. I. P." stands for "Vision, Initiative, Perseverance". (And here is devoutly hoping our faithful flock in Washington will continue to manifest these noble virtues; for if they do we shall one day have a church in the national capital that all of us will be pardonably proud of.)

"Vip" carries a roster of officers of our Washington church, also that of the Bible school. There is a fine cut of the school on one page, and with reports, explanation, news notes, goals, and other church news, "Vip" makes interesting reading to those who are concerned for our work there.

Comes also a letter from our dear good friend, Sister J. I. Joyner enclosing a dollar, and asking that our people generally be appealed to through THE SUN, and The Herald of Gospel Liberty for funds with which to build a church in Washington. It may be said that our Mission Board employed Dr. A. B. Kendall and rented a hall for services more than a year ago, and the results are quite gratifying thus far. We have recently secured a beautiful and comfortable hall in the locality in which we hope to secure a lot and begin building at no far distant date. It takes time, patience, perseverance and prayer to plant and carry forward such a work as we contemplate in Washington; but by the help and leadership of the Divine hand it can be done. And many of us have our hearts in the work and we have every reason to believe that God is leading in the work and pointing out the way.

I wish we had thousands as loving and loyal and true as Rev. Albert Godley who visited the work and wrote of it as follows to The Herald of Gospel Liberty:

"Washington—our church here is organized and has a very efficient man of prayer and of work as pastor in the person of Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D. It was my happy privilege lately to stand upon the plot of ground in Washington, proposed as a site for the church edifice and a parsonage. The selection is a very wise one. The object of the Christian Church is to save souls in Christ's name. There will be many in a very few years to be saved in that vicinity; and there are many there now, no doubt, who need membership in a church of truly Bible principles. The building should be large and well equipped for service, not for mere show. The prayer of faith, self-sacrifice, and patient hard work—and the paying into His treasury the Lord's tithe will result, by His grace, in a strong and useful church for the Christians in our Capital City. No doubt we have 50,000 members in America who will gladly put a dollar—some much more—into this great enterprise, promising of so much and lasting good. I send Bro. J. F. Burnett a dollar towards this long neglected but vastly important work. I wish I could send a thousand dollars, but my means are very limited. Bro. Burnett will direct it to the right channel when the proper treasurer is named."

The Mission Secretary, who is also Mission Treasurer is glad indeed to receive all the help he can get in carrying forward the Washington work.

ANOTHER SUNDAY SCHOOL BEGINS THE YEAR RIGHT

I was delighted to see in last week's SUN that our Rose Hill, Columbus, Ga., Sunday school had decided to begin the year right by electing Mrs. R. F. Brown, Mission Superintendent, and that the school will give "one offering a month to missions, and one to the Orphanage." "We confidentially look for a revival of missionary interest," says the pastor. He will not look in vain, we predict. And that school will find new power. Marion Lawrence, the great Sunday school leader never wrote truer words than these: "The Church, Sunday school, or individual, with a world-view of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ and recognizing responsibility thereto will grow in spirituality and in power. We have forgotten all too long that the way to have plenty at home is to "make a little cake" for God first. The more our Sunday schools know about missions the more they will desire to help the cause. The more they help, the greater will be their interest in their home work."

And Dr. F. N. Peloubet, the late author of "Peloubets Select Notes for the Sunday school has also declared the great truth in these words: "The Sunday school which will be in the front line will be a missionary school, deeply interested in spreading the gospel, widening the horizon even of the younger pupils, and building them up in an unselfish desire to help others in the great work of the Church. The missionary interest is the saving of the Church, the enriching of the Church, the broadening of the Church."

I feel that the missionary message is to be carried to the pupils in our Sunday schools before there will ever be a real missionary awakening in the Christian Church. And because I want to see ours a missionary Church, that is to say, a growing, broadening, spiritual Church; I want our Sunday schools to become missionary in spirit, knowledge and activity.

THANKS

We, the people of Sand Hill Community, Upshur County, Texas, want to thank the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention for sending Rev. H. W. Elder to visit us. We think him a grand man and a great preacher. He did us a great deal of good and the seed sown will be gathered up many days hence. We can not express how glad we were to have him with us. We pray the Lord to bless him and all the Church. Pray for us and our work in Texas, at Sand Hill Christian church.

OUR ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

The year 1920 has passed and we are very grateful for the loyal support you gave us. We feel more encouraged than ever before. We had a good year in every way.

But there is greater work to do in the year 1921. We want to ask your most loyal support that we may do a larger work. The Children's Home is to complete and pay for and we must put forth our best efforts to do it.

An average of sixty little children enjoyed a home in the Christian Orphanage last year. Many are now appealing for a place and we hope to be able to comply with their requests as soon as the new building is complete.

We reached the largest goal last year we have ever set. Shall we go back this year or forward?

A FINE LETTER

Dear Brother Johnston:

I am writing you in reply to yours of November 1, last. You may think my answer long delayed. I have not been the pastor of any church for some time. Next month, the 19th, if I live so long, I will round the eightieth milestone. I am comparatively a poor man. I am a pensioner on the bounty of my Government. Being a tither $15.00 of my pension goes into the King's treasury each quarter. I am careful to set aside a tenth of even my smallest earnings so that I may have something to give to the various calls. In my childhood days I trod the path of a homeless orphan. I know what comes to such, sometimes. Some of those experiences may be bitter memories. May He who took little children up in His arms and blest them, bless and care for those under your care and protection. May God bless and guide you in your good work. I am enclosing my check for $10.00.

Your brother in hope,
G. A. BROWN.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: I want to join the band of Cousins and enclosed you will find five cents for this month. I am a little girl nine years old. My teacher is Miss Bruce Walker. With love and best wishes to you and all the little orphans.—Mary Watkins.

You are a good little girl and the little girl to start off the corner for the New Year. I give you a warm welcome to the corner.—"Uncle Charley"

CHILDREN CHARMERS

PETER PAN

I have a little doggie,
His name is Peter Pan;
He barks at sister's Kitty
As loudly as he can.

Kitty climbs the apple tree
And sits down on a limb,
And says: "How are you, Peter Pan?"
And then she winks at him.
And Peter Pan says: "O, dear me!
I wish that I could climb a tree."

HOW THE SUNDAY CAME OVER THE MOUNTAINS

"I wish it weren't Sunday!" sighed Davy.
"So do I!" echoed Peggy.

Grandmother True looked up from the big book spread out upon her white apron and smiled. "Isn't it 'most time for a story?" she asked. Whereupon the two wings of her flowered ehintz chair were hastily occupied, and little hands began smoothing her goldie-silver hair. "To make the story come faster," Grandmother True said.

"There was a little boy in this story, and he was your Grandfather True. His father was a missionary preacher, who believed that God called him to leave his Eastern home and start out to the west with a party of pioneers and build a little church there. It was the longest train that ever came over the plains. No, not a train of cars, Davy, but a train of big wagons, all drawn by great, slow oxen,

"Of course all the people in the train were eager to get settled in their new home. It would take them months to make the journey, at best, and no one wanted winter to catch them in the mountains beyond the plains. The heavy, jolting wagons were uncomfortable, and they had to be on the lookout for Indians, who were not very friendly to the white men at that time and were likely to be hiding anywhere along the road.

"So, one Sunday, when the whole train stopped as usual to give the oxen their seventh-day rest and to hold a little service, some of the men came to Great-Grandfather True and asked to have a talk. They explained that there were a great many in the company who felt that they ought not to take out a whole day every week just to rest and worship. They had figured that by taking out the Sundays they would lose nearly a month before the long journey was ended. The provisions might not last, the Indians might come, the winter would overtake them—in short, nearly every one felt that they should keep going every day.

"Great-Grandfather True listened quietly. 'I'm sorry you feel this way,' he replied, 'but we will take a vote, and those who wish to go on of course must not be held back.' It was found that three-fourths of the party were determined to go. They all loved Great-Grandfather True and those left behind, and many were in tears at the separation. It was decided that those who went ahead should drop notes along the way if there was danger from the Indians.

"And sure enough, it wasn't very long before the smaller company began to find notes tied to fagots along the way—'Indians! Beware!' At every note they trembled and prayed and armed themselves, but kept on their way. Only on Sunday they stopped to rest the oxen and to worship."

"But didn't the Indians fight them?" asked David anxiously.

"If you'll believe it, not once!" replied Grandmother True. "To be sure, just as the little band came at last to a mountain pass, there in the distance they saw a group of horsemen riding toward them in great haste.

"The Indians! To arms!" shouted some one; and every one, even the women, manned a gun. But what was their relief to find only a band of soldiers who had come to meet them and escort them through the dangerous lurking places of the red men.

"On they went, and finally, just as they came to the last ridge of the mountains, what would they see, just ahead, but the other part of their train, creeping slowly along the winding trail. They could hardly believe their eyes, for they had supposed them safely arrived in their new home in Oregon by this time.

"Great-Grandfather True looked at the rugged trail, and then at the patient oxen. 'It is too hard for them,' he said. 'It will take longer, but we will go round the Mountain.' And take longer it did. They were all so glad to find themselves at last, safe and sound, with the oxen in fine condition, in the first camp of their new home.

"But where were the others?"

"All at once, looking back they saw them coming slowly down the mountain side. It was night when they at last came up, the tail end of the procession after all! Such forlorn, scraggy-looking oxen you never saw. The children were crying with hunger, for, in climbing the steep trail, the end of their provision wagon had fallen out, the boxes burst open, and nearly all the remaining provisions were lost. O, so happy were they to find that Great-Grandfather True had food and to spare. And O, what wonderful tales each party had to tell the other!

"Next day was Sunday; and though there was much to be done, what do you think that the captain of the larger company said?"

"He said: 'We will all rest with you today and hold a thanksgiving service to the good God. We think that there must be something in keeping Sunday, after all!'"

"Grandmother," said Davy thoughtfully, when the story was done, "I think Sunday is a pretty good day, don't you? I'm glad Great-Grandfather True brought it way out here."

Grandmother smiled, as little Peggy chimed in: "Me, too!"—Sunday School Times.

WINTER

'Tis winter—gloom invests the earth
And overhangs the sky;
The heavy clouds, on wood and stream,
Are frowning sullenly;
The frost's chilled hand, it touched the brook
That warbled in its bed—
Its fitful pulse has ceased to beat
Beneath the ice we tread!
But though the gusts howl o'er the hills,
And from the maddened gale
The snow in drifts are hurrying
To hide it in the dale,
And to the tempest bends the tree,
The maple and the linn,
Yet reek we not the storm without
If there be ealm within!

SMILES AND BLOSSOMS

Smile upon the troubled pilgrims
Whom you pass and meet;
Frowns are thorns, and smiles are blossoms,
Oft to weary feet.

Do not make the way seem harder
By a sullen face;
Smile a little, smile a little
Brighten up the place.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

CHRISTIAN CONTENTMENT

It is marvelous what the Lord can do for the peace of mind of those who trust Him. Outward circumstances may be very disagreeable and even calamitous, but real contentment is not dependent on outward things. It is an inner condition, a state of mind and heart. We cannot make people happy by means of fine houses, automobiles, rich dinners, large bank accounts, amusements, pleasures. Some of the most miserable people in the world are sated with these things. Rejoicing in the Lord takes place when Christ dwells in the heart. Then a person may be comparatively indifferent to what is going on outside.

It has been said again and again that worry rather than hard work is the thing that kills men and women. How often we see the human face deeply lined with the furrows of anxiety. There are many things about which we are prone to worry—our health and the health of our loved ones, the future of our children, business perplexities, financial problems, questions pertaining to the spiritual life. The Master says, "Be not anxious." He declares that the Heavenly Father who feeds the birds of the heaven and clothes the lillies of the field with more than kingly glory will take care of His children. They who have attained unto genuine Christian contentment are not dishonoring their Lord and Master by sinful anxiety, by worrying and fretting over what may happen. Trusting themselves with childlike faith to their Lord's keeping they rest serenely in Him. They trust Him for today and for tomorrow.

Christian contentment expresses itself in fervent, grateful prayer. The more we talk with God and the closer our fellowship is with Him the more thoroughly we become convinced that it is well with our souls. Many of the happiest moments in our lives are those which have followed prayer seasons.

Our peace of mind is influenced very largely by the things that we habitually think about. It is quite evident what kind of life a man will lead who thinks persistently and earnestly upon the things that are true, honorable, just, pure, lovely and of good report. Meditating upon these virtues, he adopts them as life principles and life habits. We are told by those who ought to know that the present generation is characterized by superficiality in thinking. They read trashy literature and are contented with the thrills of the "movie" picture. There are multitudes today who are crazed with a morbid desire for cheap amusement. They will not take the time to think seriously of the great issues of life. No wonder there are so many discontented, disquieted people. The very peace of God possesses him whose mind is a storehouse for things true and lovely.

Faith in the God who gives, produces genuine contentment. Why should a Christian be anything else but happy when he knows that the infinite resources of God are at his command, that every spiritual need of the life of man will be abundantly supplied out of the unmeasured treasures of God? A person may be quite poor according to the world's standards, but if he has God as his Father, Savior and Comforter he may count himself as among the really rich ones of the earth.

If we have Christ as our closest Friend, if day by day we are trying sincerely to do His will, then it really matters not what outward circumstances may be. There may be trial, burden bearing bereavement, tragedy, but in the depths of our souls there will be a great peace and the consciousness that God will make everything to work together for good to them that love Him.—United Presbyterian.

"SAFETY FIRST"

But not at all cost. Prudence is far from being the highest word in the vocabulary of the soul. Not a single great undertaking for humanity would ever have commenced on the principle of "safety first." Life's greatest achievements represent somebody's risk. The last thing that Jesus considered in His ministry of redemption was the threats of His foes. Indeed, those same foes paid Him the highest compliment possible when they said derisively, "He saved others, himself he cannot save." "Safety first" as a caution to travelers by land or sea is well conceived. But "safety first" as a rule for the thoroughfare of life itself may be altogether pernicious. Moreover, one may sometimes need to take risks with his body for the sake of the health of his soul.—George Clarke Peck.

MY TROUBLES

I took my troubles up the road
All on a summer morning;
The sun from out its blue abode
The meadows was adorning.
My troubles were a sorry pack;
They clung like care upon my back.

And there was Doubt, a dubious thing,
And there was foolish Fretting;
And there was Sorrow, with its sting,
And hollow-eyed Regretting,
A grievous brood to bear along
When all the air was filled with song.

Then I came to the wide, free crest
With naught but sky above me;
A soothing wind my cheek caressed;
Methought it seemed to love me;
And there breathed upward from the earth
The fragrant messages of mirth.

And seeing far below me roll
The lands so green and spacious,
My troubles lifted from my soul,
And life again grew gracious.
And so I trod the downward road
Without a trouble for a load!—Selected.

Flashes From Other Pens

Many Standards of Happiness

A recluse in Chicago, who had lived for years in apparent poverty and with most miserable surroundings died last week. His will said that he left all his possessions to the United Charities of the city. In a box were found gilt-edged securities worth several hundred thousand dollars. He no doubt felt great satisfaction in thus living and saving. There are many standards of happiness and many ideals that are held in human life. It does not answer always to judge according to appearances.—Herald and Presbyterian.

Must Not Secularize Church Schools

This surely is not the time to secularize our Church colleges. Now it is the profound conviction of many thoughtful business men, statesmen, and all patriots that a far deeper religious life is needed in America, and that conviction is extending and deepening as never before in our history. We must look to our public schools for elementary training in fundamental religion and to all colleges, State and secular, to carry it farther. In their earlier history the Methodist colleges were centers of revivals, spiritual deepening, religious life service, and Bible study. The vast funds given to them were for such religious training. What is it ethically to do otherwise?—Eastern Methodist.

Pulling the Load

The Baptist relates the familiar story of the pastor who dreamed that he was pulling the wagon which contained his Church and supposed his congregation was pushing. The task grew so heavy that he looked back and discovered that nearly all had climbed into the wagon. The Baptist says that it might have been worse—that some of them might have pulled back, which would better describe the Baptist churches of the present—the pastor pulling, a few pushing, others pulling back, and the rest riding. It does not claim that the Baptist Church has a monopoly on this plan.—United Presbyterian.

If You Have the Money

Build that needed house now. Paint that dwelling, that church, that school. Repair that fence and make the farm look more tidy. Build that highway; it is badly needed. Pave that street; it will help your town. Improve the water works and extend the sewerage system, for they will better the health of your town. Build that church, that school, that courthouse, and go ahead with everything that shows you are a red-blooded American, with faith in your country. Now is the time for men—real men—to lead off and do things. Cowards only are slackers. The patriot can do as much in this time of peace for his country as he could do in war. Let's all play ball!—Manufacturers Record.

Sunday or Dempsey-Brennan?

Last winter the daily newspapers of New York set up a great howl about the costliness of the Billy Sunday meetings. The month that Billy Sunday spent in New York cost less than the Dempsey-Brennan prize fight in Madison Square Garden on the evening of December 14. The door receipts at this disgraceful affair were $209,852. As far as we have observed the city press has made no charge of wasteful extravagance. "How long, O Lord, how long!"—Watchman-Examiner.

Does It Pay?

"I got out of that business," said a young man who had finally decided to enter a profession, "because there were too many temptations in it. I am not going to stay in any business that is always subtly suggesting a sacrifice of principle or conviction that ought to be sacred. If a man is in a business that cramps his soul and endangers his ideals, he had better get out of it." This is true enough of many kinds of business, but it is not true of the business of the Master's kingdom. Whatever the Christian may have of wisdom or talent, of patience or courage, of devotion or resourcefulness, Christ will use; and in using them there will come into the life of the individual enlargement of happiness, an added peace and power. He who sacrifices his convictions and principles for business success is paying too much for it.—Forward.

The Sensitive Church

God pity a sensitive Church! The first thing it does is to show evidences of being afraid of criticism by the world. If it seeks to land blows upon the body of evil, it must be prepared to take some in return. If it dares to give punishment, it must be prepared to take at least a little on its own account. But the tragedy of Church life is found in the attitude of a thin-skinned pastor who is afraid to speak out and reluctant to stand for something definite because he is afraid some one will criticize his actions or opinions. The shepherd of the sheep must be willing to go forth even in the face of the storm and expose himself to the jaws of the lion and the midnight maurader if he is to save the sheep from the influences that seek to destroy them. A delicate man seldom makes a good shepherd.—Western Christian Advocate.

The Burglar

There is only one point at which man's will is not free. It is so free that it can even bar the door of the heart against life. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock," says Life, Incarnate Life in Christ Jesus; "if any man . . . open the door, I will come in." "If", but the latchstring is inside. How sad that so many other guests are more welcome—gold, pleasure, fame. But there is one against whom the free will of man is not sovereign. "You will find it spoken of in Jeremiah 10:21," says Dr. A. T. Schouffier in his book, "Studies in the Highest Thought." "For death is come up into our windows. That is the way death comes in. It cannot come in by the door, because we would never admit it. So it comes in by the window when we are not looking . . . We can keep life out, but we cannot exclude death." Which shall it be—the door opened from the inside or the window "jimmied" from the outside?—Sunday School Times.

CHURCH NEWS

FOUNDED—AND BABY REMEMBERED

The members of the four churches which are endeavoring daily to serve, have been very kind indeed, in the way of poundings upon us. But they have not waited for any set season or united poundings. All through the year we have been surprised by individuals or families with hams, lard, eggs, butter, chickens, and other good things at various and sundry times.

Nevertheless, two big surprises came recently in the way of united poundings. Last Tuesday we were called out to a Buick car in front of our home to behold the back of it filled with good things to eat, too many to name here, from the Mt. Zion church. The next day, while attending a meeting of the Ladies Aid Society at Windsor, we were compelled to allow the good ladies to fill the back of our Ford with all sorts of eatables, the list of which would take too much space here.

In expressing our heart-felt appreciation of all these gifts we wish to include the baby shower given by the ladies of the Windsor church for our little Margaret Lillian. All of these things are a great supplement to a minister's salary, especially in the times through which we are now passing, and also a sign of appreciation of a pastor's service.

We feel truly thankful for the thoughts and gifts of each and all. May the Giver of every good and perfect gift pour out upon you a double portion of His spirit.

CALLED HOME

REDMON

Hattie Keeble Redmon was born August 21, 1891. Married to Willis Redmon, October 3, 1909 and died January 5, 1921. She united with the church at Mt. Zion about fourteen years ago. She was always faithful to her church and performed every task, relative thereto, with a ready, willing heart. The church has lost a faithful member and the home a devoted wife and mother. She leaves a husband, two children, a sister, six brothers and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss. It was the writer's privilege to serve her as pastor, officiate at her wedding and by her request, preach her funeral, assisted by her pastor, Rev. J. D. Dollar. Her body was buried in the old church cemetery there to wait the resurrection.

May the Father who doeth all things well comfort those who are bereaved and guide them to the Port of eternal happiness.

E. M. CARTER.

GUNTER

C. T. Gunter was born March 5, 1850, and died after a two weeks' illness of pneumonia, December 29, 1920. He was born and reared in Chatham county, and spent the greater part of his life there, where he had a large circle of friends. He moved to Lee county about 15 years ago, and by his optimistic spirit and genial disposition won many friends.

He was twice married and was the father of four children. His second marriage was to Clotilda S. Gunter, who with his only living son, Irvin, survive him.

When he moved to Lee county, he united with Bethlehem M. E. Church, and was a member of this church when he died. He was one of the charter members of Center Grove Christian church and was one of its most faithful members and loyal supporters when he lived in that community.

He was a kind friend and greatly beloved, a good husband and father, and an obliging friend.

The remains were buried at Buffalo, and his funeral conducted by the writer.

T. E. WHITE.

RIGGSBEE

The church and community of Turner's Chapel were shocked on January 4, when the news spread, telling of the sad occurrence at the home of G. W. Riggsbee. Mrs. Riggsbee, who was subject to fainting spells, is thought to have caught fire, and when found everything in her room was burned, and she was so badly burned that she was never able to explain it satisfactorily. She was rushed to the hospital, and after untold suffering, passed away January 7.

She was a daughter of R. B. Webster and was 55 years old. She married G. W. Riggsbee, and they had five children. The husband and four children are still living. They are: George F., Pittsboro, N. C., Mrs. Bessie Cooper, Colon, N. C., Mrs. Mattie Jones, Durham, N. C., and Miss Ethel Riggsbee, Colon, N. C. She is also survived by four brothers, J. B. Webster, Columbia, S. C.; E. L., Oklahoma; C. E. of Camden, S. C., and W. B. Webster, Colon, N. C.

She had been a member of Turner's Chapel church since its organization. She was a great sufferer, but never complained. Her kindness, and her afflictions so bravely borne, won the hearts of all who knew her.

GILLIE

W. H. Gillie was born December 10, 1840 and died January 11, 1921, aged eighty years one month and one day. He was married to Francis Elizabeth Wall in the year 1866. To this union were born nine children. Eight sons and one daughter. Bro. Gillie professed faith in Christ in early life and united with the M. E. Church about 25 years ago he withdrew from the M. E. Church and united with Happy Home Christian church where he remained a member until death. For the past 25 years Bro. Gillie was afflicted with rheumatism. For fifteen years before his death he was unable to walk. He was a great sufferer but he bore his sufferings with great patience and without a murmur. He was a good man. When he was able he attended his church and was a liberal giver. Eight children survive him. Funeral services at Mt. Carmel M. E. church conducted by the writer and interment in the church cemetery by the grave of his wife who preceded him to the spirit world some ten years ago. May the "God of all comfort" comfort the sorrowing.

SCHAEFER

Mrs. Eveline Francis Harris Schaefer was born September 30, 1842 and died December 27, 1920, aged seventy-eight years, two months and twenty seven days.

She married John Schaefer February 11, 1872. He died October 27, 1911. To this union were born four children, William H. Schaefer of Wilmington, N. C., Mrs. Hattie Klepper of Baltimore, Md., J. Wesley Schaefer of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Mamie Harris of Carrollton, Va. All her children survive and attended the burial services held from the Waverly Christian church. The deceased was reared in the community of Waverly, Va., and spent most of her life in Sussex County. In early life she joined Spring Hill Christian church and remained a loyal member till her death.

She was the last of the large Harris family that had been so closely identified with the Christian churches of this section. She was preeminently a church woman. A Christian of the old school. She believed in testifying for Christ. She believed in praying for saints and working to bring sinners to the "mourners' bench" that they might repent of their sins and find peace to their souls. She was faithful to her church when in reach of it and loyal to her denomination at all times. We are grieved to lose this mother in Israel.

The beautiful flowers that covered the casket in the church and the grave in the cemetery but spoke the love and esteem in which her life as a relative, friend, and Christian was held.

The remains were buried December, 30, at 2:30 p. m., in Waverly cemetery to await the final resurrection. Services were conducted by the pastor.

MEMOIR OF REV. J. W. WILLINGHAM

Rev. J. W. Willingham was born May 19, 1866 and died April 19, 1920. Brother Willingham was licensed to the ministry of the Christian Church by the Georgia and Alabama Conference in 1903 and was ordained elder in 1904.

During his ministry Brother Willingham served as pastor of the following churches: Brown Springs, Union Hill and Beulah. He was pastor of the last named church at the time of his death and was doing a most acceptable work, and was loved and esteemed by the church and community.

In the time of the greatest usefulness of our Brother, and in the triumph of a living, growing faith, he entered into the rest unto which he was faithfully striving to point others about him.—Georgia and Alabama Christian Conference Proceedings.

McCAULEY

J. Marshall McCauley departed this life at his home near Glencoe January 19, 1921, at the age of seventy-six years, two months and sixteen days. He was married to Sarah S. Garrison December 4, 1877. To them were born six children, four are living—three sons and one daughter. His wife, two brothers, two sisters and five grandchildren survive him. He was a soldier in the Civil War and was twice taken prisoner. He had been a worthy member of Union Christian church since 1864. A good citizen and kind father has gone home. Funeral services at the home and interment at Bethel M. E. church conducted by the writer.

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE

Benefits of Prohibition Plainly Seen

The conversion of the majority of the people of the United States within three years to national prohibition as the only effective means of overcoming the horrible evils of alcoholism is a very remarkable, probably an unprecedented, phenomenon in political industrial and social history. It is distinctly an effect of the war, of the experiment of war prohibition in the camps of the improvised American army and in the communities that surrounded them. The prohibitory amendment to the Constitution was the wonderful results.

Politically, the effective means is to bring woman's suffrage into force all over the country. There is no doubt in anybody's mind that the women voters of the country will be on the side of prohibition by an immense majority, and that universal assumption is in itself persuasive in favor of prohibitory legislation in the several states.

Industry Sees

Industrially, a strong effect on public opinion will be produced by the collection and publication of the results already obtained by many employers of labor, large and small, as to the effect of prohibition on the efficiency and productiveness of their several establishments. Already many employers are convinced that prohibition increases efficiency among their employers, because it diminishes causes of absence from the works and also renders the individual workman more effective at his daily task. Such testimony from employers, collected and published by agencies which command public confidence, would naturally and properly have a strong effect on public opinion concerning the industrial effect of prohibition. Any increase in the industrial productiveness of the country will be welcomed and properly maintained, especially if it be accompanied by an improvement in the public health.

Society Sees

The good social and family effects of prohibition can best be seen and reported by physicians who are largely employed in city, school and corporation services; by nurses, whether school, district, maternity or out-patient, and by social workers employed by hospitals, churches or charitable organizations. All these classes of observers are in position to see the good effects of prohibition on men, women and children of all classes, and their observations and comments would be readily accepted by most intelligent persons who are interested in the comfort, moral welfare and happiness of the whole people.

Drink and Hilarity

The advocates of prohibition are usually represented as ascetics or "joy killers." There is a rather common apprehension that the exclusion of alcoholic drinks will diminish cheerfulness and hilarity in all social gatherings and in general the gayety of human intercourse. It is a fact that alcoholic drinks used at any social gathering will increase laughter and other inarticulate noises in the company and will produce more boisterous merriment than "soft" drinks will. This phenomenon results from the diminution of self-control, conscious or unconscious, which alcohol produces in the human subject. It has nothing whatever to do, however, with real pleasure or enjoyment in social intercourse.

It is now a fact that total abstainers enjoy rational intercourse with their fellow beings less than those who use alcoholic drinks. They need, however, to be supplied by their hosts, or the company, with other sources of pleasure and satisfaction, such as music, dancing, good acting, good talk, humor and wit. Modern civilization has much to gain by shutting our Bacchus and his devotees, but should at the same time give place and welcome to Minerva, Ceres and Diana, with all the muses and the graces.

"Good society," or rather a conspicuous section of it, needs to be reformed in respect to lawless violations of the prohibition amendment in private houses and public assemblies. In this respect one section of good society is setting a bad example to the rest of the community, all the worse because it is set by persons who belong in a large part to the better educated and wealthier class, which ought by right to possess and illustrate the better manners. The effective punishment for such offenses is exclusion from polite society.

The Churches See

Since the adoption of war-time prohibition churches have had good reason to reconsider their duty with regard to effective reduction of the evils which attend the use of intoxicating drinks. Some denominations have maintained for many years a steady policy of promoting total abstinence; but most denominations have taken no decided action on the subject. The war having demonstrated that the alcoholic evil can be greatly reduced by vigorous action on the part of the national government, the several religious denominations may well consider whether the demonstrated effectiveness of prohibition in war times can not be carried over into peace times, with a general recognition on the part of the public of the widespread good results from prohibition legislation, and that its great contribution to the common welfare justifies the necessary restriction of individual liberty. It is by no means to be wished that total abstinence should be erected into a church dogma; but it is desirable that the dutiful and patriotic citizen should not oppose the civil methods of contending against the demonstrated evils which accompany the use of alcohol.

Life Insurance Sees

The well-recognized fact that life insurance can be sold to total abstainers cheaper than to other people needs to be brought to the attention of all reflective and provident Americans, no matter of what descent or present status. It speaks volumes for prohibition. It ties prohibition up in one bundle with thrift, frugality, regard for community well-being, and thoughtfulness for descendants and posterity.

Wine and Beer Bad

The contest against pure or thorough-going prohibition in this country takes the form of advocating the public sale of light wines and beer. To get rid of distilled liquors would be in itself a wonderful promotion of public health and happiness, as Russia proved in her short-lived suppression of vodka; but American experience goes to show that it is difficult to prevent the illicit sale of spirits in saloons authorized to sell only wines and beer of specified low alcoholic content and all experience teaches that the habit of depending on alcoholic stimulation can be passed down an indefinite series of generations on light wines and beer only or chiefly. Since physiology and biological chemistry now teach that each man will be better off with no alcohol than with any under all circumstances, it follows that the best community policy is thorough-going prohibition. It is fortunate that under existing conditions both capital and labor can transfer themselves without loss of either time or money from a noxious industry to some harmless or beneficial one, the demand for both buildings and labor being at present sharp. How precious a privilege is that escape!

It is a moving thought that if the United States succeeds in enforcing the prohibition amendment other nations will emulate her example, and the human race may throw off a crushing burden of waste, disease and suffering.—Charles W. Eliot, President Emeritus Harvard University, in New York Post.

CHILD TRAINING AT HOME

Nature Study and the Child in the Home
By Ellen Eddy Shaw, Curator, Brooklyn Botanic Gardens.

All mothers who wish to establish in their children a love for Mother Nature should take active steps to arouse their interest in the wonders of it. In many ways, activities in the home leave even more lasting impressions than similar activities in school. We cannot separate homes and gardens and Nature and children. What then can we do this winter with our little folks?

When cold weather comes in city or country, we might take little excursions out into the parks and fields, or, if we have them, into our own gardens and help feed Nature's children, the birds. The wood pecker, the blue jay, the robin, and the English sparrow seldom change their homes in winter, so no matter in what part of the country we live, we are sure to find some feathery friends who will appreciate our neighborliness.

Let us have some fun with the birds and encourage them to come around our homes; for birds are not only beautiful, but they actually do work for us by eating insects which destroy our plants and trees.

I knew of one little boy who was very fond of birds and who loved to have them about him. One sunny winter morning when he was playing in his garden he noticed a wood pecker tapping the south side of a maple tree.

He approached the tree very quietly and stood near enough to it so that he could see many tiny holes or wells which the bird had driven into the bark. He was surprised to see that the bird hopped from one hole to another in its effort to catch the sweet sap as it oozed slowly out of the different holes!

The little boy was so impressed with the wood pecker's need for food that he decided to help feed any feathery friend that might come to his garden. He saved bread crumbs and dried them in the oven, then he mixed them with some grain which his father bought for him. Every morning he sprinkled some of this dry mixture on the ground where the birds could easily find it. One day he went to market with his mother and bought a piece of suet, and, with his father's help, fixed a piece of fine chicken wire over it and tied it to a limb of the maple tree. The chicken wire prevented the larger birds from carrying the suet away but the smaller birds could easily peck through the wire and get some fat which helped to keep them warm and which was hard for them to find in winter time.

The little boy enjoyed feeding the birds very much and he found that they depended upon him when the ground was frozen and they could not find food for themselves. He was particularly delighted to find that some of them became so tame that they would gather around him when he sprinkled their food upon the ground.

MISCELLANEOUS

THE PRESIDENT'S FLAG

One of the many perquisites that President-elect Harding will enjoy when he enters the White House is the flag which will be his alone to use and which is distinctive from any other flag flown in the world. It is used by the president in his ex-officio capacity of commander-in-chief of the army and navy. It is not flown over the White House ordinarily.

This flag, which is no doubt unknown to many in our land, consists of the coat-of-arms as it appears on the president's seal, set in a blue field and flanked by four stars. The four stars are the symbol of high command—the same as those of an army general or navy admiral.

When the president boards a U. S. vessel his flag is hoisted and if possible 21 guns are fired; when he leaves, another salute of 21 guns is fired and at the last gun his flag is lowered. Should the president embark in a boat his flag is usually displayed from the bow, in which case passing naval vessels parade the full guard, four ruffles are given on the drum, four flourishes are sounded on the bugle, the national anthem is played by the band, and officers and men salute. If aboard ship the president is saluted by passing naval vessels and all naval batteries with the regular 21 guns.—The Pathfinder.

THE BETTER PRAYER

I thank thee, Lord, for strength of arm
To win my bread,
And that beyond my need is meat
For friend unfed.
I thank thee much for bread to live,
I thank thee more for bread to give.

I thank thee, Lord, for snug thatched roof
In cold and storm,
And that beyond my need is room
For friend forlorn.
I thank thee much for place of rest,
But more for shelter for my guest.

I thank thee, Lord, for lavish love
On me bestowed
Enough to share with loveless folk
To ease their load.
Thy love to me I ill could spare,
Yet dearer is the love I share.

—Robert Davis.

THIS AND THAT

"I wish now," said the lecturer, "to tax your memory."

A wail in the audience: "Has it come to that?"

Small Boy. "Please, mother wants to know if there is a sugar trust."

Grocer. "Yes my lad."

Small Boy. "Well, will ye trust 'er wi' a couple of pounds?"

Teacher (reading from the "Vision of Sir Launfal"). "Oh! what is so rare as a day in June."

Boy in the front seat. "A red-headed Chinaman."—Boys' Life.

Dentist (to patient who is opening his purse). "No, don't bother to pay me in advance."

Patient. "I'm not. I was only counting my money before you give me gas."

Teacher. "Now, Robert, can you tell me how a bat hangs with his head downward?"

Bobby. "Please, miss, do you mean a chimney bat or an aerobat?"—Boston Transcript.

"I am afraid this high cost of living is going to introduce another innovation in the average kitchen."

"What is that?"

"The foodless cooker."—Baltimore American.

"Can you imagine," said the facetious teacher of natural history, "anything worse than a giraffe with a sore throat?" "Yes, sir," came the answer from one boy. "What, pray?" asked the teacher in surprise. "A centipede with corns."

Dad was not greatly pleased by the school report brought to him by his hopeful.

"How is it?" he demanded, "that you stand so much lower in your studies for the month of January than for December?"

Samuel was equal to the emergency. "Why, dad," said he, in an injured tone, "don't you know that everything is miked down after the holidays?"

Good Study

Several Ohio lawyers once gathered in Judge Wilson's room after adjournment of court and were discussing the retirement of a member of the bar. Among them was one whose practice was worth $25,000 a year. He said: "I have been practicing several years and am well fixed. I have thought I would like to retire and devote my remaining years to studies I have neglected." "Study law," put in Judge Wilson.—Western Christian Advocate.

Church Music

THE EDITOR

CHURCH music may become so commonplace that we may forget its place. The music of the church is essentially a part of the worship, and often that part that the larger number of worshippers can enter into.

The music of the hour of worship often makes or mars the sermon. A great song by great hearts provoke great feeling of joy and good will. This gives the preacher of the hour greater impulse and new vision of his task. When harmony of song does not prevail, the atmosphere is not filled with that unity of purpose so necessary for a medium of soul expression.

Sing, sing, sing aloud the praises of Jehovah. "Sing His praises forever". Teach the children to sing; be a singing people, a singing church.

"Blest is that church whose people join in song,
Harmonious hearts make congregations strong;
Music, God's gift, to God's own uses bring,
Let every soul rejoice; rejoicing, sing."

CHRISTIAN UNION AND A LEAK

We believe that it was Editor Kerr of The Herald of Gospel Liberty that pointed out some time ago one great leak for the membership of the Christian Church—that leak being the medium of our continued preachments about union.

From the smallest to the largest gatherings of our denomination there is always emphasized the spirit of union and often times some "courting" proposition comes up and is submitted to some other denomination. All these things THE SUN's scribe has advocated, sanctioned, and helped to do. We have been wondering, however, just how far that our denomination should go in this matter and how long the matter should be kept up.

These actions have at least made one big impression on the average member. They have impressed him that the spirit of union is so prominent that if he desires to change his church membership that nothing will be lost. It, therefore, sums itself up in making for each member of the Christian Church an easy and plausible excuse for uniting with some other denomination.

We believe in Christian union and what we have stated are simply facts and principles for the consideration of our readers.

The writer firmly believes in a long courtship, for personal reasons which are not here stated. But we believe that a courtship can be too long and nothing gained thereby. It may take denominations longer to get married than individuals, and so it may be a case of our impatience. But when nothing is being accomplished by constant courting, we see no good reason to keep up the "calling" and the "courting".

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, North, have been "courting" continually since the fall of 1916; and if we rightly interpret the four leading Methodist papers that come to this office (two from the North and two from the South) these two divisions of the Church are hardly "loving" after four years of constant courtship. And this further testimony: A leading layman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, said to us the other day that all that had been accomplished by the Committee of Unification was airing the differences and that was all that would ever be accomplished, as he saw it.

Here is another witness, which we find in The Christian Advocate, (New York) under date of January 20 of this good year: "Bishop H. M. Du Bose of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in three suggestive articles in The Christian Advocate of Nashville, entitled Looking Forward, summons his Church to rid itself of its sectional title and, taking on the character and program of an American Church, to address itself specifically to the conquest of the West. He says: 'To my mind there is one incomparable exchange for the present name, and that is 'Methodist Episcopal Church in America.' That is the original title of Methodism. We are in all essentials original Methodism. . . . May I live to read in the Journal of the General Conference of 1926, these words, 'The Thirty-fifth General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in America (being the twentieth General Conference since the constitutional separation of such Church in 1844)!' The Bishop thinks this would be a tremendous stroke, for 'It would put our Methodism in an impregnable historic position and would give us a continent-wide evangelical vantage. He that runneth may read.' "

We endorse Bishop Du Bose's words "looking forward", and have often wondered how the great Methodist denomination can afford to divide itself sectionally. We believe that you agree with the Bishop. But listen to what Editor Joy of The Advocate adds to the fine expression of the Bishop: "Bishop Du Bose now resides in California, where the exuberance of the fruits and flowers has a tendency to express itself in the ideas and language of new-comers. It is not strange that a transplanted Georgian soon discovers that no Church can do much outside business under a sectional name. Yet he must remember that he has episcopal colleagues who take pride in the sectional designation and would bitterly oppose a change. 'South' is historic enough for them. However, this is a free country, and if the Methodist lack the grace to get together as they should, the next best thing is for the several Churches to do their utmost, each in its own way but with all possible cooperation, with the common aim to make America Christian. The objective is not denominational aggrandizement, but the promotion of righteousness. The one thing which ought to be impossible for either church, or for any Evangelical Church, is to waste a single man or a single dollar upon competitive work. California is a section where in the past this principle has been honored—in the breach!"

These quotations speak for themselves as to how union progresses with itself, that is one denomination trying to unite itself as an American body and not a "North" and "South" Church.

There are more people who believe that Christ's prayer that His people should be one, meant one in spirit, rather than one in denomination.

An organization can be so big that its machinery will break down. The Interchurch World Movement is a fair example. Denominational divisions are only a breaking up into separate units of the great army of Christ that is marching forth to victory. Denominational heads stand as captains and in this way the last soldier is brought in personal touch and contact and goes forth to do his work. If there were only one denomination the average church member would be so far removed from service and personal contact that it would become a "do as you please" society. Interest would be lost, personal contact destroyed, and the forward march of Christianity would become checked by trying to operate through a huge machine.

A CHURCH CALENDAR

It seems to us that the Christian Church should have a calendar—a well planned program to be carried out through the year at stated times. We understand that "Objectives" are being worked out now, which is getting at the same plan and principle.

The calendar for each year should be worked out by a commission from each of the Conventions and read at the fall Conferences, suggestions received, revision made, and published in December to take effect January first.

The whole Church—the whole denomination—should be pulling and pressing toward the same goal and at the same time. We are too small in numbers to be divided in interest and energy. Certain things may be more easily worked in some sections than others but the outstanding aims of the Church should be stressed by a united Brotherhood.

Our Forward Movement and Men and Men and Millions Movement are drawing us to the place and point of stressing definite things at definite times. The Field Committee of the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Convention is just now arranging for periodic expression to different phases of religious activities.

Let us go forward in these things and find our way to a definite and well defined program for the whole Church. "United we stand; divided we fall."

SEEING CHINA'S SITUATION

Rev. Wilson P. Minton, our Mission Secretary, writing to THE SUN's Editor recently, had this to say about Japan, which it seems to us, should entertain the thought of the Brotherhood:

"This trip has revealed a great many things to me about our own work and also about the mission work of Japan from the standpoint of other denominations as well. The more I see of Japan and the more I study her position in the Orient the more convinced I am that we have here the strategic mission field of the Far East. Not that, but she is bound to figure largely in the affairs of all the world unless her relationships with her neighbors far and near is tempered with Christianity the world will suffer for it. As she stands now, she has practically no religion. Great efforts are being made to instill patriotism more deeply in the hearts of her people by stressing anew the religion of Shinto; and Buddhist is still rampart all over the Empire, but it seems that in spite of all that, great masses of the people are without any religious convictions whatsoever. If the forces of Christianity could step in in a really adequate way NOW the tide could be turned toward the Truth that would make this nation free and that would make her a force for righteousness forever. But to do this thing, every denomination must increase its missionary force both in men and equipment with all possible speed. Japan is a hard field to work in but the challenge from the standpoint of the far reaching effects of mission work here is appealing to the strongest type of men—men who do not fear to grapple with a hard problem through the help of the Heavenly Father."

ONE BIG FIGHT OF THE CHURCH

We get the information from the Northwestern Christian Advocate that a recent survey was taken in Iowa of the classification of the mail that went out over the rural routes of that State. During the month of October one carrier distributed 3,690 papers, only twenty of which were of a religious kind. The mail route is thirty miles long and these twenty papers of a religious nature went to only seven families.

There are two things that every pastor knows and knows well: That it is difficult to get people to attend church and to take the Church paper. The regular attendants at church are usually those who read the denominational organ. It would not be so bad if all those who absent themselves from church would read the official organ of the denomination. But such is not the case.

The one big fight of the Church—of all denominations—is to get the Church paper into the homes of the people. And what is an added proposition is getting it read after it enters. The burden rests upon the whole Church and it is an issue that cannot be evaded and put aside. It keeps coming to us and we must meet it.

There is no "back to normal" with the Church. "Back to normal" is a poor slogan for anything. "Back to"—we do not like it. The Church is satisfied too often with stale things and not willing enough to go forward. If the world war does not push us forward, our boys have died in vain. Back to nothing—forward to something.

You have your way of doing things, of organization, and development. If the other fellow does not do as you do, or as you think he should do, remember each soldier can fight better in his own armor.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

UNEMPLOYMENT, BUT HOPE IN THE FOREGROUND

A survey of the existing unemployment in manufacturing and city industries made by the Department of Labor, brings out some extraordinary figures. It seems almost unbelievable that 3,473,466 persons, or one-third of the working population in these lines, should be idle, yet the unrest prevalent during the last few months, in part, reflects the extent of this extremely large army of idle people.

According to the statistics, the highest percentage of unemployment is found in Michigan where it has reached 82 per cent. In New York the average is 28 per cent compared with 38 per cent in Massachusetts, 43 per cent in Connecticut, 44 per cent in Illinois, and 50 per cent in Indiana and Ohio. The startling proportion, however, is that all of this has taken place during so short a length of time. Only six months ago all of these industries were proceeding at the top notch.

But prospects are brighter for the future. Banks are functioning as usual. Confidence is not lost and credit has not disappeared as in the financial crisis following other wars and panicky times of the last half century of our history; and most of this feeling of confidence is due to the backing of our present Federal Reserve System of finance. The reopening of mills, and the extension of full hours of work in the present hours of turmoil show that better times are not far off; probably within a few months, rather than within a period of five years, as was the case after the financial crisis of 1893.

HOW PROSPERITY IS GIVEN

Prosperity in business depends upon the good faith and righteousness of the man, is the estimation of Roger W. Babson, head of the Babson Statistical Bureau of New York. In a recent address he told how, in examining the statistics of business changes, he tried to find the underlying causes, of depression and of prosperity. He said that "a period of depression is the result of unrighteousness, dishonesty, extravagance, and inefficiency which develop in the latter half of a period of prosperity; and secondly, that a period of prosperity is a reaction from the righteousness, industry, integrity and thrift which develop in the latter half of a period of depression."

He further says: "It is not railroads, steamships, or factories which cause our prosperity; it is not bank clearings, foreign trade, or commodity prices which give us good business. All these things are mere thermometers that register the temperature of the room. Prosperity is based on those fundamental qualities of faith, temperance, service, and thrift, which are the products of religion. The fundamentals of prosperity are the Ten Commandments."

COLLEGE IDEALISM

American colleges are challenged with the duty of "manufacturing men and women who are not afraid to have ideals", says Shailer Mathews, Dean of the University of Chicago, in a recent issue of the Independent. Taking the instance in which Berea College (Ohio) elected its new president from Oberlin College, both of which are noted, not so much for their scholastic training, but, for their high ideals and Christian character. Dean Mathews showed how the American colleges are being challenged with the responsibility of devoting more attention to this very essential part of education,—training of character—or, to the moral as well as the technical obligation of education.

Dean Mathews sees that the present tendency in American colleges is to center too much on "producing specialists and miscellaneous job-finders", and he believes that "sooner or later they will lament their lack of teachers who believe they have a moral obligation to their pupils."

LIMITING EDUCATION

The recent action of Princeton University to restrict the number of its students to 2,000 indicates an all-to-prevalent change in the educational policy of a number of American institutions of higher learning. It is that change which indicates that such institutions desire not to be distinguished for their numbers, but for their quality. In one sense it is a race between higher institutions to sacrifice in the number of their educated in order to gain prestige by those who are permitted education.

In regard to this instance The New York World says: "No doubt popular universities have much to gain from the economic side by limiting the number of their students. It will counteract tendencies toward expansion which under the increased demand for college education have subordinated the scholastic to the commercial functioning of college administration, and impose onerous burdens on presidents to finance swollen development. Very probably the character of college instruction would improve if only the best promise were accepted. But there is another and more pertinent obligation which must be fulfilled in order to maintain a truly democratic and American spirit in education, we have a promise to the uneducated and undeveloped. American colleges are under obligation to provide higher education to all who seek it."

According to statistics from Washington, the cost of living has decreased in the past several months, eight cities showing an average of 15%.

There are today 115,000 tubercular children in Vienna, according to a comprehensive statistical study of the child health situation in the Austrian capital, made by the American Red Cross. Tuberculosis is the most appalling factor in the present day conditions in Vienna, and of the 115,000 children infected 16,000 are in urgent need of surgical treatment.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

IF we ever needed to be on the alert, in the cause of prohibition, it is now. It is true we have constitutional prohibition in the United States, but the enemy of the movement for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, was never more active than now. For a long time they did not believe constitutional prohibition was possible, and the enemy rested well and comfortably, so assured were they that there was no danger, but one day they woke up to the fact that the prohibition amendment had been passed by Congress, and then they were compelled to believe they had been too well content for what they regarded as their best interests. Now they are working with all the power at their command to defeat the constitution of their own government. The dry forces must never let up till the liquor business is dead and beyond the hope of resurrection. Steady, brethren! Let us stand in our places and do our best.

The one gigantic task for the people of the United States today is to see that the prohibition law is enforced. There is no surer way to defeat the cause of prohibition than to allow the law to go, not enforced. Non-enforcement of the law will bring the whole thing into disrepute and break down the eighteenth amendment to the constitution. Enforce the law and ultimate victory may be counted as assured. Neglect enforcement and failure is certain. As a whole, the people will not stand for non-enforcement. A law that cannot be enforced the people will not stand for, but enforce the law, and the liquor business will soon be a thing of the past. By the time the next generation has reached mature age, the fight of the liquor traffic will have been defeated and sent to its grave from which it may not be resurrected.

During the year 1920 there were admitted to the United States 454,119 immigrants. This is another reminder of the fact that, though we fail to carry the Gospel to heathen lands, yet we cannot shun the responsibility of evangelizing the world. If we do not go to the world with the Gospel, the world will come to us without the Gospel and force us to action, or they will heathenize us. It still stands a choice before us—We may do as we please, but the responsibility is with us. We must call them to repentance under the Gospel, or they will heathenize us because we try to keep the Gospel all to ourselves. Which shall it be? I vote to give them the Gospel. How do you vote on the question?

And what do you think of the "milk and water" religion, recently mentioned in these letters? It is the kind of religion that claims to have nothing but life, not spiritual life, not devotional life, but just life. Surely that does seem to be something new under the sun. Is that possible? Can there be real Christianity when there is no spiritual life, no devotional life, not anything but just life? Well, we doubt it. You just as well claim that a tree can bring forth apples when it has no power to bring forth bloom. Indeed last summer I saw just such a tree—it was growing down by the water's edge. It had life, that and nothing else. It had no flower-life and no fruit-life. There it stood just absorbing everything about it to consume all it could get on its own life. It was a living thing, but that was all—it had no parts of value. It used its life for itself. How much religion there is in the world just like that—it has nothing for any one but itself. Now it seems to me that a religion which has no life for anything but itself is not the religion of Christ, and I cannot believe that I have any need for that sort, nor do I believe that the lost sinners of this world need that sort of religion. This "milk and water" religion may do for such as do not need the work of grace (if there are any such) which we call regeneration. Let us be glad that the religion of Jesus Christ is still spiritual and devotional, issuing into the great Eternal Life which Jesus gives to them that believe and obey Him. Can it be possible that a religion which has just life, not spiritual life and not devotional life, can be the religion of Jesus? We think not. But if it persists in claiming to be religion, the religion of Jesus Christ, then when it has done as much for lost humanity as the Christian religion has done, we shall be willing to share honors with it. Will it accept the challenge? We believe not only that they cannot, but that they will not. A religion without the blood of Christ and without the atonement cannot measure up to the essentials of salvation.

J. PRESSLEY BARRETT.

FOUR-SQUARE

I—Growth

The New Jerusalem as the seer of Patmos observed it lay "four-square". Growth too expresses itself in the same way. Witness what is said of the growth of Jesus—"And the child grew in wisdom and in stature, and in favor with God and man."

The normal life grows in these four directions. Only idiots fail to develop in wisdom. Growth in wisdom is to be distinguished from growth in book-knowledge. Wisdom ought to be enhanced by study in the schools, but the consequence does not necessarily follow. Many great scholars have lacked wisdom. Many wise men have lacked scholarship. Wisdom is discernment of the inner significance of the experiences of life and of the race. Jesus grew in wisdom and so should we.

The physical dwarf is a monstrosity. So natural and normal is physical growth that any interruption of it occasions surprise. But the development of a sound body is more than a matter of years. Positively speaking it includes also play, proper food, work, sleep, and the application of sanitary and hygienic principles. Negatively it includes abstention from all hurtful things, such as alcohol, tobacco, dancing, and intemperance in every form. Our bodies are the temples of the Holy Ghost and should be kept socially pure.

The normal life can no more leave God out of its program than it can leave out food. In Him we live and move and have our being. Jesus increased in favor with God. As we have larger experience and more ample opportunity, it is our pleasure, our joy, our privilege to merit His increasing favor. We should be scrupulously careful ever to choose His side of any question.

And finally, in order to be four-square our development should include the approval progressively of our fellowman. This approval is not to be sought for by flattery or favoring, as it is the legitimate by-product of the normal, daily life well and conscientiously lived. The life that seeks popularity will not meet the test of four-square growth. The life that receives the favor of brothermen as our unearned increment of living is the real life that counts. Such a life may be crowned with a cross and nails through hands and feet and a javelin-pierced side, but such a life is worth all it costs. Earnestly seek it; covet it.

Mental, physical, spiritual, social—such are the ingredients of the life that is four-square in its growth. Such a life God yearns for each one of us to live for Him.

W. A. HARPER.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The 1920 census shows that 51% of the population of the United States dwell in towns and cities. This is the first time in the history of this country that the urban population has out-numbered the rural population. This increases the obligation of the Church to plant herself more firmly in the towns and cities. So much is written, in recent years, about the "problem of the country church", that one would conclude, if he did not think for himself, that religion would decline if something were not done for the country church. A little careful observation and thought might reveal the "problem of the city church". Here is the great problem for Christianity. When Jesus "was come near, He beheld the city, and wept over it." We are not told that He wept over the country. He "wept" at the grave of Lazarus and over the city of Jerusalem.

If Jesus were near some of our modern cities He would weep again. Immigration is one menace to city life. Foreign languages, foreign faiths, foreign customs, group themselves apart from native groups and lose their place in Christian worship and service. The absence of homes of their own makes city population a moving population. They have no fixed or settled habitation. It is a moving people as well as moving pictures. The proximity of the people, with the absence of neighborliness, is also a bar to religious development. Besides this, all forms of vice are within reach of the young and in the most attractive form. Here the forces of unrighteousness clothe themselves in beauty, play enchanting music; offer carnal delights, and win the inexperienced into ways that lead from God and the Church. Temptations of all kinds lure the young into fields of pleasure rather than the way of the Lord.

Some people pity those who dwell in remote country districts because they know so little; those who dwell in the city deserve more pity because they know so much. Much of the evil in the country is sent out from the city. Obscene literature, lascivious pictures, vulgar shows, and all the arts of sin are carried from the city into the country.

Again many people going from the country, where they have enjoyed friendship and worship, become enamored of the sights and entertainments and lose their habit of Sunday school and church. The atmosphere is tainted with moral disease. As malaria, rising from cesspools and swamps, may be taken into the lungs and disease the body, so moral sentiment and conduct may poison city atmosphere and disease the moral life of those who breathe its death-dealing poison. The contact with evil is contagion itself. The problems of Christianity and of the Church is in the city. In fact the problem of civilization is in the city. The downfall of nations has been the downfall of cities. Witness Babylon, Ninevah, Greece, Rome. The ruins of cities are graves of nations. If city church problems can be solved, country church problems will take care of themselves. What this day needs is a great awakening as to the value of country life, and the need of a more consecrated spiritual life in city churches. "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord", is a good text for the people in the city churches in this year of question marks. The church life is too close to the life of the world. In the dance, in the card club, in the joy ride, in the Sunday desecration, the church mingles too much with the world. City life needs a Christian atmosphere that is socially pure, commercially honest, intellectually sound in the faith, and absolutely separate from the worldly.

CHRISTIAN UNITY GATHERING

(Syndicated Matter)

Plans have been made for the most notable Christian unity conference ever held in America to meet at the Second Baptist church, St. Louis, February 2-4. It will be attended by more than a thousand delegates from various Protestant bodies of the Middle West in particular, although many from the East will attend. No program of its kind has ever been put on anywhere before. It will not be in the interest of any one denomination or any one Christian-unity movement, but all Christian-unity movements will be officially represented, and delegates from all denominations will be in attendance. The St. Louis committee is composed of Rt. Rev. F. F. Johnson, Protestant Episcopal bishop, chairman; Rev. Dr. W. C. Bitting, pastor Second Baptist church, vice-chairman; Rev. Dr. D. C. MacLeod, pastor Central Presbyterian church, secretary; Rev. Dr. A. H. Armstrong, secretary of the St. Louis Church Federation, assistant secretary, and Rev. Dr. George A. Campbell, pastor Union Avenue Christian church, treasurer; besides a minister and layman on the committee from each of the following bodies: Congregational, Baptist, Disciple, Evangelical, German Methodist, Methodist Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal South, Protestant Episcopal, Presbyterian in the U. S. A., Presbyterian in the U. S., United Lutheran and United Presbyterian. The conference is under the auspices of the Association for the Promotion of Christian Unity, headquarters of which is in Baltimore, Rev. Dr. Peter Ainslie, president, and Rev. Dr. H. C. Armstrong, secretary.

The program is of unusual interest, and has awakened general enthusiasm throughout the Middle West. The conference opens at 2:30 on February 2, with an address by Dr. Ainslie, outlining the scope of the conference and emphasizing how the various movements toward church unity represented in the conference supplement each other in helping forward the unity of the church. Following his address will be the question, "What Does My Denomination Mean by 'The Church' and 'Church Unity'?" This will be answered in brief addresses by the following speakers: Rev. Dr. W. H. Giestweit, pastor Third Baptist church, St. Louis, will answer for the Baptists; Rev. Dr. S. H. Woodrow, pastor Pilgrim Congregational church, St. Louis, will answer for the Congregationalists; Rev. Dr. F. W. Brubam, president of the United Christian Missionary Society, St. Louis, will answer for the Disciples; Rev. Dr. C. B. Spencer, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, Kansas City, will answer for the Methodists; Rev. Dr. John S. Bunting, rector church of the Ascension, St. Louis, will answer for the Protestant Episcopalians; Rev. Dr. B. P. Fullerton, St. Louis, will answer for the Presbyterians; Rev. Dr. John Baltzer, president of the General Evangelical Synod, will answer for the Evangelicals; Rev. Dr. W. E. Wheeler, pastor St. Mark's United Lutheran church, St. Louis, will answer for the Lutherans; Rev. Dr. J. H. C. Fritz, dean Concordia Seminary, will answer for the Missouri Synod of the Lutheran Church.

These addresses will be written and given over to a committee on findings. This committee will make its report on the last day of the conference.

On the evening of February 2 the Lambeth Appeal, which was formulated last summer at Lambeth Palace by the bishops of the Anglican and Episcopal Churches, will be presented by an Episcopal bishop, followed by conference. On February 3, in the morning session, the World Conference on Faith and Order will be presented by Mr. Robert H. Gardiner, secretary of the World Conference and a prominent attorney and banker of Boston. That afternoon the American Council on Organic Union of Evangelical Protestants will be represented by Mr. Henry W. Jessup, distinguished lawyer, son of the well-known missionary educator of that name, born at Beirut, Syria, now professor of law in the New York University and author of a number of books, to whom perhaps more than any other is due the credit of this Protestant plan of union. That evening Christian unity on the mission fields will be presented by Rev. Dr. Arthur J. Brown, well-known author and traveler, and for 25 years secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

On the morning of February 4, the World Alliance for Promoting International Friendship through the Churches will be presented by Rev. Dr. H. A. Atkinson, secretary of the Carnegie Peace Union and a member of the Executive Committee of the World Alliance. That afternoon the Christian Endeavor movement will be presented by its founder, Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark of Boston; also that afternoon the Universal Conference of the Church of Christ on Life and Work will be presented by the Rev. Dr. Frederick Lynch, editor of The Christian Work, New York, author of numerous books and one of the American leaders in problems having to do with international friendship. Dr. Lynch is one of the secretaries of the Universal Conference and helped in its organization.

After each address two hours or more will be given for conference and free discussion. The last evening an address will be made in the interest of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America by Prof. Herbert L. Willett of Chicago University and author of many valuable books.

This conference is unique in that it is strictly a Christian unity conference, being interdenominational, and each party having freedom to discuss the plans presented and the outlook for Christian cooperation. It includes movements for Protestant unity as well as movements for the unity of the whole Church—Protestant, Anglican, Eastern Orthodox and Roman Catholic. It likewise includes theological, ethical and social approaches, as well as approaches by polity. It is, beyond any doubt, the most comprehensive presentation of Christian unity that has ever been made, and it is no surprise that it has awakened such great interest. Ministers and laymen of all denominations will be in attendance; likewise, many women, who will take part in the conference.

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK

How would you like to live in a neighborhood where there were neither churches nor Sunday schools? Would such a neighborhood be likely to produce men and women of strong character who would be useful citizens? Strange as it may seem, there are many places in our land where the people are just as ignorant of the Bible and its truths as though they lived in the darkness of a heathen country. What may we expect of the boys and girls who live in such places? In the mountains of North Carolina, Virginia and Tennessee we find thousands of boys and girls who are growing into manhood and womanhood without the refining and uplifting influence of Bible instruction. Word comes to us describing the condition of five mountain counties in Tennessee with a population of fifty-two thousand, less than one tenth of whom have ever attended a Sunday school; similar conditions prevail in North Carolina and Virginia. The white population is of North Carolina and Virginia ancestry, and is engaged exclusively in lumbering and agricultural pursuits. It is not uncommon to find families of from seven to eleven in a single home, and not a Christian among them. Many boys and girls from five to twelve years old are found who never heard a prayer or attended a religious service of any kind. They are a people of strong natural endowments, frugal and industrious. The only religious workers outside the country towns are occasional circuit riders and a few old time preachers of a bygone generation who boast of their lack of "book larnin'" and that texts for the day's sermon "pop" into their minds "jest as they walked up the steps". There are large neighborhoods where not over three or four are church members. Here is a field with no standard of life worthy of our race, decaying and starving spiritually for lack of the uplift and inspiration which the gospel gives to men and communities. Here lie buried the social, intellectual and spiritual forces only waiting to be awakened from their long slumber into quickening power by the Word of God.

The above is a statement by The Presbyterian Board of Publication and every word of it is vouched for by Miss Hedgepeth who sends us the facts.

We are trying to help these mountain people. Our own Miss Iola Hedgepeth has "gone for us" and opened a day school in Carroll County, Virginia. In a district five miles by four there are 138 people, men, women and children. There is not a church, day school or Sunday school in all this district, save ours. Miss Hedgepeth now has seventy pupils enrolled and she is seeking to carry intelligence and the Gospel to these people of our own race, tongue, and country. She needs help. We must send other teachers and preachers. Will your class, will your school not have a part in this great and good work?

HOW A DOLLAR WON HIS HEART

When I was a little fellow about nine years old, there was a great famine in India. The minister told us in church that there were thousands of people dying over there, and that one dollar would save one person's life. Then I saw a picture in the papers and magazines of people who were starving. They were so thin, like skeletons, and their eyes were sunken. And I wondered how I should feel to have no breakfast, and no dinner, and no supper, and none the next day, nor the next. I thought about my dollar, that would save one life. But I thought I could not spare that dollar. I had worked hard for it, worked in the hayfield, and earned one dollar and fifty-five cents. Oh no, I could not spare a whole dollar. Then I thought about the people who were dying and I could not stand it any longer. I had an awful fight, but I gave up that dollar. I sent it to save somebody's life.

But that dollar was my treasure. It was so much to me that when it went to India, my heart went with it. I thought about it all the time. I wondered what kind of a person it was whose life I had saved. I read everything I could find about India. All the time I was in school and in college I was interested in India. Then they told us in college that in India thousands of people were dying without knowing of Jesus, the Bread of Life, and they were hungry for Him. And I felt just as I did when I heard of the famine. I wanted to go feed them. I wanted to tell them about Jesus. So now I am going to follow my dollar. I give my life to India. I want to carry the Bread of Life to those people.—Testimony of a Young Missionary.

FOURTEEN PERSONAL QUESTIONS FOR EVERY CHRISTIAN TO CONSIDER

Did you ever stop to consider that :

"The only one of the twelve apostles who did not become a missionary became a traitor?"

"God had an only Son, and He was a missionary"?

"The world will be evangelized in that generation in which the Christian teachers of its youth determine, by God's help, that it shall be done"?

"Discovery has made the world a neighborhood; missions will make the world a brotherhood"?

"If Christianity is false we ought to suppress it; if Christianity is true, we are bound to propagate it? Am I doing my full duty in this"?

"No interest in missions betrays either woeful ignorance, nor willful disobedience"?

"Indifference to missions is treason to Jesus Christ, and this is the worst kind of treason"?

"The great commission, 'Go ye into all the world', etc., is the most often repeated command of our Lord, and is as imperative as either one of the Ten Commandments"?

"For every dollar you give away to convert the heathen abroad, God gives you ten dollars worth of purpose to deal with the heathen at home"?

"We should expect great things from God; and attempt great things for God"?

"The Church is the greatest institution in the world and the Sunday school is the greatest organization of the Church"?

"The chief reason for the lack of interest in missions is that the membership of the church were not, in their youth, while yet in the Sunday school, given a missionary vision"?

"The Sunday school teacher and worker who is not a missionary worker is out of place"?

"Ours will be a missionary Church, that is to say, a growing, powerful Church, when our Sunday school teachers become missionary teachers, and not till then"?

OUR ORPHANAGE

HELP FINISH NEW BUILDING

The Christian Orphanage had a splendid year in 1920. It had an average of sixty children in its care during the entire year. Its present building has been full to the limit of its capacity during the entire year. More than one hundred children were refused admittance because we had no room for them. To meet the many pitiful appeals, the Board of Trustees undertook to build another building, and at the end of the year that building was almost completed on the outside.

It is a handsome structure and will give ample room for at least sixty little children. We want to complete this building by the first of May and have it ready to dedicate and turn over to the Board of Trustees at the annual meeting in the month of May. We want every dollar paid and have it free of debt. It is to care for the little helpless tots and we do not want a dollar of indebtedness on this building when the doors are opened for the little children to walk in and possess the beautiful home. If every one will do his duty and give something we feel sure we can carry out this plan.

It seems to me that every member of the Christian Church in the Southern Christian Convention would want to invest something in this splendid building that is to be a home for the little tots (God bless their little hearts) for years to come and think of the many little lives that will be trained in this building and the many useful boys and girls that will go out from this home in years to come to be a blessing to society and do service for mankind.

A small contribution would not hurt you but if each member of the Christian Church would send us a small contribution, oh, how rapidly it would run up our bank account and how easy it would be to finish this building and pay every dollar of its cost. Help us to do a larger work this year.

TWO LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find twenty-five cents as my dues for December and January. I hope that you and the little orphans had a pleasant Christmas and that this year will be a prosperous and happy year for you all. I would be glad to visit the Orphanage and see the little children. With best wishes for you all, your little friend.—Ruth M. Sanford.

We would be very glad indeed to have you visit us and see the little children. I hope you will visit us this summer.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I hope that your little folks do not have as far to walk to school as I do. I walk when the weather is not bad and I think two miles is a long distance, but I haven't missed a single day so far during this school and hope that I will not have to miss any. Enclosed you will find our dues for January. We hope that this year may be the Best Year for the Orphanage. A happy New Year to you and all the cousins.—Virginia Pearl and W. T. Ayscue.

When I was a child I walked a long distance to school and had a muddy road. I am glad that you can go to school every day. You must hurry and come to Elon.—"Uncle Charley."

GENERAL NEWS

The Sixth World's Christian Endeavor Convention will be held in New York City, July 6-11, 1921.

According to reliable dispatches there are now at least fifteen million people face to face with actual starvation and more than forty million in the midst of famine conditions in Northern China.

President-elect Harding has requested that the inauguration ceremonies be very simple. He has asked that he simply be allowed to take the oath of office, make a short address and go to work.

CHILDREN CHARMERS

MOTHER SAYS

Mother says:

If you're thoughtful and polite;
 Go to bed at eight each night;
 Always hasten to do chores
 And give up chairs to visitors,
 Weed the garden, carry wood,
 And be very still and good—

Mother says:

If you're faithful in your task;
 Never beg, but only ask;
 Fold your napkin, say your prayers;
 Put no gum upon the chairs;
 Keep your bureau drawer quite neat;
 Never walk through pools, but on
 The sidewalk till the mud is gone;
 And say "Thank you" often, and
 Sit erect and walk and stand;
 And wash well behind your ears;
 Always wait until it clears
 To wear your best clothes and not fail
 To hang your coat upon its nail—
 You will find the people where
 You live, like to have you there!

Our house has a pleasant yard.
 I am trying very hard!

A FAMOUS APPEAL

This is a story of a dog rescued last year by the National Canine Defense League of England.

"Bobs" belonged to a London school girl, and had been picked up by the police while he was out in the street without his muzzle. Witnesses at the police court accused him of ferocity, and the magistrate sentenced him to death. Immediate execution was averted by some children, who picked Bobs up in their arms and ran away with him, eventually taking him to his home, where a state of seige prevailed for two days, the police constantly demanding the dog, but failing to secure possession of him.

After making careful inquiry, and having examined Bobs, the League decided on entering an appeal against the decision of the magistrate, being influenced not only by the particular circumstances in the case of Bobs, but also by motives of larger policy, for it was becoming evident that drastic action must be taken to prove that dogs and dog-owners generally had a right to justice and fair play. Bobs became a national dog hero. Hundreds of photographs were taken of him, and for many days the newspapers devoted columns to his case.

The League collected over 20,000 signatures from dog-lovers to a petition praying for his reprieve, and it became evident that the death sentence could only be carried out in defiance of public sentiment, for Bobs had become one of the best known and most widely discussed dogs in history. The children especially were interested in him, and followed the development of the appeal with intense anxiety. Two barristers were engaged on behalf of the League and at the Clerkenwell Sessions Court the fate of Bobs hung in the balance. A motor char-a-banc full of witnesses for the defense drove to the Court, Bobs occupying the front seat and looking complacently at the forty or more photographers and cinema operators who assembled to secure pictures of the event.

Fifteen witnesses were called for the prosecution, and during the hearing of the case the chairman suggested that the League should allow the conviction to stand on condition that the death sentence was not carried out. Mr. Curtis Bennett, who appeared on behalf of the League, refused to accept the suggestion, and the chairman asked for Bobs to be brought into the court. This was done, and Bobs was placed upon the bench in front of his advocate, while Mr. Curtis Bennett made an eloquent and convincing appeal on his behalf, adding that he was prepared to call fifty witnesses for the defense, including the highest expert evidence procurable.

The exemplary behavior of Bobs immediately created a profoundly favorable impression, and the chairman of sessions without hearing any witnesses for the defense, said that the majority of the magistrates had come to the conclusion that Bobs was innocent of the charge of ferocity, and therefore the conviction would be quashed, Mr. Curtis Bennett agreeing that Bobs should be kept under control in the future. Outside the court a large crowd of sympathizers assembled, and there was a scene of great enthusiasm, cheers being given for all who had helped to save his life, including the League.

This case, which was described by a London newspaper as "the greatest dog drama in history," was a successful effort to secure common justice for the mongrel dog of a poor London school-girl, and typifies the spirit which animates the League.—Our Dumb Animals.

The amount "reported from last week" for the Chinese Famine Fund in THE SUN for January 26, should have been $43.74 instead of $43.73. Mrs. J. H. Seawell should have been credited with $5.00 instead of $8.00. The grand total should read $56.74 and not $56.73.

THE AMERICAN DAILY STANDARD

We are now receiving at this office The American Daily Standard, which was referred to in a recent article in THE SUN by Dr. J. Pressley Barrett. The paper has been reaching us only a few days and we are not in a position as yet to give definite review or criticism. It is a ten page, eight column, paper and is endeavoring to cater to news items, and editorials "Christian in character, truthful, clean and entirely fit to be read in the home circle". The paper seems to have a wide survey from which it gleams quite a bit of news and carries a splendid cartoon on the front page of each issue. The rates are as follows: One year, $10.00; six months, $5.00 three months, $2.50, or one month 85 cents. The Standard's address is 215-217 W. Superior St. Chicago, Ill.

WILL REMAIN IN THE HOME FIELD

Many CHRISTIAN SUN readers who are deeply interested in foreign missionary work will learn with regret that Rev. H. Shelton Smith, Yale Station, New Haven, Conn., will not be able to "go for us" to the foreign field. Brother Smith has been in Yale two years making intensive preparation for missionary work abroad and it is a sore disappointment to him that he must now relinquish a long cherished design. His wife's health will not justify his going to a foreign field, and much as his sympathy and interest in the foreign work press him, he feels it his duty to remain in the home field. Brother Smith has another year yet in Yale, but the church that secures his services will be most fortunate indeed. Already a successful pastor, of some years experience while a student in Elon College, his three years in the Divinity school of Yale should serve as a most helpful aid in fitting him for great and effectual service. Here is hoping and praying that our Heavenly Father will call some one to take Bro. Smith's place for foreign service.

THE PORTSMOUTH CHURCH ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING REV. H. W. DOWDING

Rev. Henry W. Dowding has resigned after a pastorate of nearly four years in the Washington street church, Portsmouth, Va. He gave as his reasons for this action his desire to engage in Christian work not directly connected with the regular pastorate and his wish to see the church prosper under a more active ministry. He will close his work March 6, provided another pastor can be secured by that time. He expects to take another trip to Europe where he spent three months last spring. Upon his return from Europe he will be open to engagements for special work and will reside in Portsmouth where he has lived for nearly fifteen years. He will be glad to correspond with any pastor looking for a splendid field.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Official Board of the church:

Whereas, We, the members of the Official Board of the Portsmouth Virginia Christian church, having received the resignation of our pastor, Rev. H. W. Dowding, who has notified this body that the resignation is final, find it a very painful duty to act on same and it is with the deepest regret that we accept this resignation.

Therefore, be it resolved: That we feel grateful for the way he has preached the Gospel of Jesus Christ in its fullness, which has been a great inspiration and blessing to its many members, and we pray that he may still continue in the work for the Master and that our Heavenly Father will abundantly bless him and his family.

OFFICIAL BOARD,
J. S. WRIGHT, Clerk.

CHURCH NEWS

HOLLAND, VA.

I have now been with this field within five days of four months. I have been greatly interested in the work and the people. They are a whole-souled and liberal people. I am glad for all the good that has been done by my predecessors and wish that my good fortune, under the blessings of God, may bring to my labors here no less of good fruits. Rev. W. M. Jay, my immediate predecessor, still lives in Holland. He is serving the Holy Neck church as pastor, and from reports reaching me is doing a fine work there. He is very cordial and cooperates with me by attending our Wednesday night services and taking part in same. He is also often with us in our Sunday night services, as he has no night service ordinarily.

The Holland church is a fine field for usefulness, if one may be equal to the tasks before him. They take great interest in whatever concerns the church and cheerfully cooperate in my efforts to promote the work here. Soon after coming here, Deacon I. A. Luke's Sunday school class gave the church a very handsome Pulpit Bible, which is greatly appreciated. These young people are a blessing to the cause, and I am hoping and praying for their largest usefulness in the work. Our Sunday school is credited with having as fine teachers as any school of my acquaintance. It is not often that any one school is blessed with two sisters who have the reputation, and justly, of being very fine teachers. They are Mrs. Rosa Daughtry and Mrs. Norvella Holland. They are grand-daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Dempsey Jones of blessed memory, whose place in Holy Neck church, years ago, will be remembered by the older ministers of the Conference, and many of our laymen. Their grand-daughters, named above, are an honor to the memory of their forefathers. We had some difficulty in finding a teacher for one of our primary classes, but not long since, Mrs. I. A. Luke consented to undertake it. She is a daughter of the late Rev. Robert H. Holland. Already she has shown her high fitness for the place. Her class has largely increased, both in attendance and in interest and the outlook is very hopeful. Other teachers are also doing a good work, with good prospects for future development. Our Sunday school is a great asset to the Holland church.

We have good music, both in the Sunday school and in the regular church services. Miss Brown is our Sunday school pianist, and she does her work well. Then our church music is under the care of Mrs. Wilson J. Holland, who directs the music. She is doing a most helpful work. Our church organist is Mrs. J. G. Holland, wife of our beloved physician, Dr. J. G. Holland, who is a son of the late Rev. R. H. Holland of blessed memory in these parts. Mrs. Holland is truly given to her work, sparing neither time nor expense to make her work highly successful. Then we have a male quartet, which is promising much valued service. The singing of the Holland church is very good and is growing in interest and efficiency.

The church is carrying a financial burden which is not easy to handle, and yet so far it seems to be right up to date. Bro. J. P. Dalton is treasurer, and so far he has not been one hour behind in paying the pastor's salary, and in meeting the necessary current expenses of the church. With these facts before us, I think we have cause to look for larger things in the work of the Holland church in the years to come. Bro. Wilson J. Holland, who is the Captain of the Men and Millions Movement, does not forget to keep that good work before the people, and we are hoping for good collections in that line. One thing that is making the work more difficult is the depression in business, and yet we hope in due time to come out all right.

We have met but one serious drawback since coming here and that is, we have our household goods still packed. This is due to the fact that not a place for the pastor's residence can be found in the community. We are boarding in cramped quarters, but making out the best we can for the present. The church is hoping to build a parsonage in the near future, and this is encouraging, but to remain away from one's household goods for months and months, well, to say the least of it is depressing, but there is no use crying over what cannot be helped, and it is true that there is not one place in the town or community that can be had for the pastor's home—but I am writing too lengthily a letter, and must stop for this time.

PEOPLES' CHURCH, DOVER, DEL.

The Peoples' Christian church, Dover, Del., is now going ahead at full steam, under the leadership of our new pastor, Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein, M. A., D. D. We are now in the midst of our volunteer canvass for church expenses and benevolences and the indications are that we will go over the top. This is a new departure but is meeting with success. The attendance at all services is showing a marked improvement especially that of Sunday night, and the pastor is giving strong sermons. He is a good mixer and is making new friends each day.

The campaign of giving up one meal a week for the starving children of Europe is proving most successful, more than $500.00 having been raised thus far, the campaign being started on December 19, 1920. We think this a very good showing. The pledge is for a period of six months, and is attracting attention both at home and abroad. Two persons from Ohio have joined with us in the pledge, and are sending their weekly contributions.

We have added a new device in our church for the benefit of our members and visitors who are deaf. The ladies of the Missionary Society have had installed "The Acousticon", a wonderful little instrument that carries the faintest sound to the listener and enables a deaf person to hear perfectly all that is said. The instrument is simply a complete telephone system with transmitters and receivers, ten of the receivers having been installed in different parts of the church. It is proving a great blessing.

Our people are already beginning to think and plan for the coming of the Conference in the fall and are looking forward to the visit of our Southern friends. You will find our doors standing wide open to receive you,

CHURCH CLERK

RICHMOND, VA.

Just a line to let you know that our work at the First Christian church of Richmond, Va., is moving along fine.

We indeed feel like the good Lord has greatly blessed us as well as our work, or His work, which we are trying to build up for His cause. The work is about eight months old and now we have eighty-four church members. A good Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. Our attendance is on the increase.

The Lightbourne-Davis meeting was a big success for our church as the people of the city learned what and who we were. Before we were often taken or looked at as one of the "Disciple churches", as they have several churches here and call themselves "Christians".

Everybody who heard Brother Lightbourne was delighted and says that he is the greatest they have ever heard, and Sam Davis is a real genius. You will certainly have to hear him to know what a wonderful man he is.

In conclusion, I must say a word for the Young Men's Bible Class, which I have the honor of trying to teach. Under the auspices of this class a prayer service was organized and during the summer months and up until the revival we met at appointed class members, homes. The result was additions to the class and also to the church. I think every member has a great interest in the class. Brethren, pray for our success in the Capital City of the Old Dominion.

JOHN L. CARR.

A DOUBLE POUNDING

It seems a pity that one should have so many good things to eat when there are others by the millions starving. Well, we haven't entirely forgotten those starving peoples while we are receiving bounties.

It seems that poundings are in order nowadays. Anyway they keep coming. The good people that I serve seem to have an abundance of eatables and are not satisfied until they divide with their unworthy pastor and his family.

Last Saturday, January 23, was our regular appointments for Pleasant Union and Christian Light. Saturday night we were invited back to the church at Pleasant Union and received a gracious pounding of good things. Some who could not be there at night came with blessings Sunday and others who heard what was done hailed us on the road and continued to pile on provisions in our "John Henry Ford".

So we reached Christian Light Sunday evening with the back part of the Ford almost full. When we had concluded service here and went out of the house, I found that the pounding had multiplied and filled the front seat till there was hardly room for me to sit. Well, I was astonished and confounded. So many good things in these two poundings, too numerous to mention, that expressed a great people's love for a stammering faltering pastor.

God bless them every one. It is a real pleasure to be a servant of such generous hearts. Yes this was such a load that before I arrived home, poor little Flivver, grunting and panting under the strain, had to give vent to its feelings with a blow out. I couldn't get to my tool box well, so had to go in on the rim. The first time I ever enjoyed a rim ride.

And one of the most enjoyable parts of a pounding is to see wife and children "cut a caper" when we drive up to the back door. Wife enjoys every piece of it as she unwraps and packs away. Then she wants to go with me to see these good people every one.

But the best is, that we took an offering at both of these churches for the China sufferers, and received, at Pleasant Union forty dollars and over, and at Christian Light, over fifty dollars. May our Lord add his blessings.

MEMORIAL TEMPLE NEWS

The present pastor, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, has now been at the Memorial Christian Temple, Norfolk, eight months.

We are weak and need the prayers of our people of the Southern Conference, for:

1. That the Temple members may not become discouraged.
2. That those members now holding aloof from the Temple will come back and work.

3. That all differences may be put aside and a spirit of Christian cooperation established.

In September we planned a budget for this Conference year and at the close of the first quarter we find that our people have responded splendidly.

Between Thanksgiving and January 15, the Temple has given three personal subscriptions, the church and the Sunday school, $140.42 to the Christian Orphanage.

The Sunday school responded at the Christmas entertainment to the Near East cry with a gift of $103.00.

We have had the walls of the Sunday school room redecorated and the wood work, including the benches, refreshed with varnish.

We have been able to find thirteen of the twenty records of the Sunday school between the years 1900-1921. Three times only in those thirteen years has the school begun the year more auspiciously than we have this year. There is only a difference of nine between the largest attendance and the smallest attendance of these past four January Sundays. So you see our school has possibilities.

We are very proud of the two men who lead our school: Mr. J. J. Pitt and Mr. E. M. Albright.

A class of young men has been organized and under the able leadership of Mr. Hermon Butts. They have grown from a membership of two in October to fifteen in January. On the night of January 27, this class gave a banquet as the initiation of a membership campaign. This class of young men will also support the church by acting as an ushers union.

Evangelist Victor Lightbourne with his pianist, Mr. Sam Davis, begins a series of meetings with us January 30. We ask your prayers for the success of this meeting.

ROSEMONT AND BERA (NORFOLK)

Christmas exercises were held at Rosemont on Tuesday night December 28. The program had been well prepared and was delightfully rendered. The house was packed to the doors with people who seemed to enjoy the exercises of the evening. It has become a custom with this church to make an offering each Christmas to some worthy cause, and this year the offering which amounted to a little more than $250.00 was made in the interest of the Near East Relief.

On Thursday night, December 30, a splendid program in keeping with the Christmas idea was given at Berea. The exercises gave evidence of intensive preparation and were enjoyed by the large audience present. During the evening Santa Claus sprang a surprise on Superintendent W. F. Hodges, and presented him with a nice gift from the Men's Bible Class of the Sunday school. An offering for Near East Relief, amounting to about $40.00, was received.

The pastor and his family were remembered by Berea with an automobile (not a Ford) load of provisions for the pantry, and by Rosemont with a substantial purse. For these evidences of good will on the part of the people we are endeavoring to serve, we desire to express sincere and grateful appreciation.

REVIVAL AT ELON COLLEGE

The evangelistic services at Elon College, conducted by Rev. Victor Lightbourne and Mr. Sam Davis began Sunday January 23, and closed January 28. There were twenty-four definite decisions and a large number of reconsecrations. Fifteen were received into the church.

This was the best meeting held here in recent years. The interest was deep and the attendance large from the beginning. The young people in their own private way worked faithfully and efficiently among their fellow students. Mr. Sam Davis' wonderful playing was soul inspiring and contributed greatly to the success of the meeting.

This is the third meeting Brother Lightbourne has held here and his continuous development as a preacher and revivalist is a subject of frequent comment. Our people were more than ever delighted with him and his efficient service. I most heartily recommend Bros. Lightbourne and Davis to our churches and wish they could be in every one in the Convention. I know no other evangelist whose work is of such high order and whose methods are so sane and safe.

SOLEMN VOWS

PILAND-PULLEY

A pretty marriage was solemnized Saturday afternoon, January 22, 1921 when Mr. Isaac Newman Piland and Miss Gladys Ianthe Pulley were united in holy wedlock, at the home of the officiating minister. A solo and the wedding warch were rendered by Mrs. Cotten. The bride was becomingly attired in a blue tricotine suit beautiful fox fur, chic black hat, and gloves to match. A number of relatives and friends witnessed the pretty scene. After an extended trip through the South, Mr. and Mrs. Piland will be at home, near Suffolk, Virginia, February 1.

E. T. COTTEN.

NIBLETT-STEPHENSON

At the home of the bride, near Burton's Grove Christian church, on the evening of January 11, 1921, there was a quiet marriage, when Mr. Lloyd F. Niblett led to the marriage altar Miss Mamie A. Stephenson. The ring ceremony was used and was performed by the writer. After the ceremony the happy couple motored to Dendron, Va., where they now reside.

The groom has a position as foreman in the employ of the Surry Lumber Company. They have the best wishes of their many friends.

CALLED HOME

WILKINS

The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Wilkins of Liberty church, Nathalie, Va., aged about two and a half months, died on January 16, 1921 and was buried in the Liberty church cemetery.

It is sad that death should claim this little one, yet our great and loving Father knoweth best. "For of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Blessed hope that in Jesus is given
In our sorrow to cheer and sustain,
That soon in the mansions of Heaven
We shall meet with our loved ones again.
A FRIEND.

PIKE

Rosa Lee, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Pike, was born December 29, 1920, and died January 4, 1921 at their home near Greensboro, N. C. She was the only child of the home and was only permitted to stay long enough to entwine the hearts of the parents and then called home to be an angel.

The funeral was conducted by the writer from Hines Chapel church in the presence of a large crowd which had gathered to share the sorrow of the sorely bereaved parents. Burial in the church cemetery.

May God bless these young parents and help them to live for Him.

SMITH

Daniel Brooks Smith was born May 2, 1843 and died at his home near Brown Summit, N. C., January 15, 1921, at the ripe old age of 77 years seven months and thirteen days.

On February 13, 1861 he was happily married to Miss Sarah Jane Simpson. To this union were born seven children, five boys and two girls, all of whom survive him except one son, Rev. William A. Smith, who was a ministerial student of Elon College, and died July 17, 1896.

The living children are Henry B., McLeansville, N. C., Robert R., McLeansville, N. C., Turner, who lives at the old home, C. W. Smith, Spencer, N. C., V. O. Smith, Brown Summit, N. C., Mrs. L. G. Faucette, Monticello, N. C., and Mrs. G. W. Apple, Greensboro, N. C. There also survive, two brothers and one sister: Messrs. Abner and Anderson Smith, and Mrs. Rachel Wyrick all of Gibsonville, N. C.

Brother Smith gave two years and nine months of his life in service in the Civil War, and was not wounded during this time. He belonged to Co. K, 47 N. C. Regiment, Capt. Faucette Pettigrew's Brigade. He was taken prisoner April 2, and on April 30, 1865 was carried to Hart's Island, N. Y.

In early life he professed faith and united with Hines Chapel church of which he remained a member until his death. Surely another good man, husband and father has gone to his reward. God has smiled on this union in a very gracious way, having called one of the five sons into the ministry, he having died a number of years ago. He has surely called one of the twenty-eight grand children into the ministry, Rev. H. Shelton Smith, who was a class mate of the writer in College, and who served as Chaplain in France during the recent war, and is now in Yale University taking further study for life's work, and truly we cannot tell yet as to what God will do in the lives of the eight great grand children.

The funeral was conducted by the writer from Hines Chapel January 17, in the presence of a congregation that taxed the seating capacity of the church. The floral offerings were large and beautiful. The body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await God's call.

To the wife, sons and daughters, brothers and sisters and all who are grieved, may God send his love in an hour like this.
C. E. GERRINGER.

STROOP

Mrs. Noah Stroop, Luray, Va., R. 3, died January 22, 1921, aged 73 years and 11 days. She had been a member of Leaksville Christian church for more than fifty years. She died firm in her faith in God. Although she had been practically an invalid for something like thirty-five years, she accomplished a great deal of good during her life in the way of helping and securing assistance for these in needy circumstances in the neighborhood, and in many other ways. She was a faithful wife, a loving mother, and a good neighbor. She is survived by her husband and five children.

The funeral services were conducted in Leaksville church, on Monday, January 24, by her pastor, the writer, assisted by Rev. A. J. Painter and Elder J. B. Jenkins. The body was buried in Leaksville cemetery. May the grace of God, the loving sympathy of Jesus, and the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit sustain the grief-stricken husband, children and grandchildren in their deep sorrow and heavy loss.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

MITCHELL

W. D. Mitchell was born July 23, 1855 and died January 21, 1921. He was married to Miss Emily Knight February 14, 1875. To them were born fourteen children, eleven of whom are now living. He joined the Christian church at New Harmony in August, 1889. A more loyal member we have never had in all this section of our work. He gave of his time and means and was scarcely satisfied with what he had done for he often gave for others. He believed that the Lord would bless a cheerful giver and that those who gave freely would always have something to give. He was often called to serve on the official boards of his Conference which he did with pleasure, and satisfaction to all and, at the time of his death he was a member of the Home Mission Board.

Brother Mitchell was an enterprising citizen; a man of strictly honest dealings and was always interested in the development of his community and the country at large. He was a man of industrious habits and as a result he had accumulated a great deal of wealth. When the present financial crisis came, his health also failing, he suffered a complete physical and mental break-down which resulted in the taking of his own life. In his death his companion lost a kind and loving husband; his children, a faithful father; the church, a loyal member, and his pastor, a true friend.

His funeral was conducted January 23, by the writer assisted by Revs. G. D. Hunt, and E. M. Carter at the Christian church at Cragford (the house built largely by his own means) in the presence of his family, a large company of relatives and a host of friends, estimated at near three thousand. The floral offerings were many and beautiful. His body was buried in the cemetery near by with Masonic honors by a large body of his fraternal friends who came from many lodges throughout the section.

May the Lord bless the dear family and all those who mourn because of his death.

C. W. CARTER.

SCARBOROUGH

Benjamin T. Scarborough was born in Surry County, Virginia, December 2, 1843, and died at his home, in the same county, January 18, 1921, aged seventy-seven years one month and sixteen days. He was first married to Mary Eliza West, who departed this life July 11, 1895. To this union were born thirteen children, seven of whom are living.

He was married a second time to Carrie Clements in 1896. There were four children by this marriage, all of whom, with the widow, survive him.

He was a well known and highly respected citizen in the community. He was a Confederate veteran in the Civil War. He was a charter member of Union (Surry) Christian church, where he was a faithful attendant as long as his strength permitted. Burial service was conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. J. E. White, pastor M. E. Church, South. The body was laid away in the family cemetery.

THE GRACE OF STEWARDSHIP

By Dr. J. H. Jowett

There are three judgments in the matter of giving in which I hope we shall all be agreed.

And the first judgment is this: we are apt to be gravely deceived about the extent of our beneficence, and we vastly exaggerate the amount of money we give away. The majority of people have no idea of the range of their beneficence. They do not know how much or how little they give in the course of a year. But the bias of their estimate is always on the side of generous judgment. The people who do not know how much they give always give less than they think they do.

The Paralyzing Power of Money

And the second judgment is this: there is a strangely paralyzing power about money, and it so restricts the heart that the more we get the less we are inclined to give. And this is surely what the Lord was meaning when He spoke of "the deceitfulness of riches". Riches can make a man think that he is growing bigger when all the time he is growing less. He estimates his size by the inlet of income, and not by the outlet of beneficence. While the inlet is expanding the outlet is contracting. But the deception is frequently more deadly still. His growth in riches is often accompanied by a corresponding growth in fear. It is one of the pathetic ironies of life that men who are growing in wealth have an increasing fear of poverty. And the fear puts them into bonds and they are afraid to give of their treasure lest none should remain. I want to see a very wealthy man in New York to ask him to help an exceedingly noble cause. His fear immediately answered my appeal, and he spoke as one who was on the verge of poverty. "I really cannot give any more!" The word was apparently sincere, and it was accompanied by a sort of sigh which confirmed its reality. "I really cannot give any more! What with one thing and another I do not know what we are coming to!" Fear seemed to haunt the man. It determined his thought and his speech and his services. A few weeks later he died, and his will was proved at over sixty millions! And I wonder, I wonder if at the end of the day he heard the messenger of the Lord saying unto him, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee, then whose shall these things be?"—Christian Advocate.

A NEAR RIOT OVER EDDY

Cairo is a Mohammedan city, and the missionaries there have had numerous experiences in dealing with the native population on the occasions of religious gatherings. Therefore, it was not surprising that they anticipated the recent visit of Dr. Sherwood Eddy with a bit of fear and trembling. The largest hall in the city, seating two thousand people, was rented, but four thousand tickets of admission were distributed with the idea that many receiving tickets would not care to come. When the time for the meeting arrived, it was discovered that all of those holding tickets were on hand demanding admission, and the police had to be called to quell the near riot. An overflow meeting had to be arranged so that those disappointed by the failure to get into the first meeting might be accommodated. This circumstance is pointed to as one of the evidences that the Christian missionary can make a considerable impression even upon a Mohammedan population.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

SOME LAUGHS

His Mistake

He longed to find the road to fame,
But not a highway bore that name.

He thought to glory there must be
A level path that he should see;

But every road to which he came Possessed a terrifying name.

He never thought that fame might lurk
Along the dreary path called Work.

He never thought to go and see
What marked the road called Industry

Because it seemed so rough and high
He passed the road to Service by.

Yet had he taken either way
He might have come to fame some day

If I have prayed by beds of pain,
Lord, then I have not lived in vain.

We ought to acquaint ourselves with the beautiful; we ought to contemplate it with rapture, and attempt to raise ourselves up to its height. Pastor-ship

THE EDITOR

WE often hear the fact lamented that so large a number of church members fail to take their church letter, or membership, with them when they move from one community to another. To say the least of this practice, it spells weakness for any denomination.

But there is another ship that has a weakness and is not church membership. It is pastor-ship. There are those who may be willing to move their church membership but not willing to move their relation-ship with their pastor. They form a special attachment for some pastor and regardless of who is their pastor thereafter, there is no measuring up to the former pastor. They send for the former pastor to marry their young and bury their dead. There is no sane philosophy in arguing against friendship. It is good to see great ties of friendship. But our opinion is that if your present pastor is good enough to be your pastor he is good enough to perform all the necessary services for your church, your family, and for your community.

Your pastor is your pastor. He deserves full recognition and is worthy of all that you may be able to bestow upon him. You will never make him bigger, better, or greater, by giving some one else his job. The Kingdom must go forward through cooperation, love, loyalty, justice, good will, and not by personal preferences and personal feelings.

"It is the business of the preacher to fill the pulpit and the business of the people to fill the pews."

A CENTRAL LITERATURE STOREHOUSE

WHAT is becoming a problem in our Southern Convention, a problem that must be sooner or later solved, is a sufficient supply station for literature covering the different phases of our work. Nearly every week and sometimes more often, there filters into this office requests for some blank, leaflet, booklet, or something that we cannot supply. It is true that we endeavor to carry a general line and have at our command an abundance of ready references and catalogues, but it would be surprising for the public to know how many times during the year that THE SUN office is called upon for mite boxes, missionary leaflets, material for special day exercises, and a number of things of that kind which we do not carry, and cannot carry for the lack of funds. In practically every case we can cite the inquiring friend where to get the needed thing, or forward the order to the proper place. But while we are spending time, using stationery and postage in writing or forwarding the orders and practically the same postage sufficient for orders and practically the same postage be sufficient for mailing.

Today we had an order for mission study books and the order was promptly filled. At the same time and from the same person were requests for treasurer's blanks for the local missionary society, and a schedule of the week of prayer. Thus we are able to fill one order out of three. Neither Conferences or Conventions have placed these things with us. We can only serve the public by giving information and then the order must be sent elsewhere, causing more work, more waiting and more expense.

We believe that the time has come when there should be a regular superintendent of literature in our Convention with permanent headquarters. This superintendent should work under a Board made up of one member from each of the various Boards of the Convention that create and need literature for the extension and expansion of these departments. Yes, the office should be made permanent so that churches and individuals would know where to get supplies. It will not do to leave these things in the hands of a chairman or the superintendent of literature, usually appointed or elected. It is true that the name of such an office remains in the Conference or the Convention, but each time that a new officer is elected, invariably the headquarters for such officer is changed, and this changes the place to apply to for literature. By the time the general public finds out where to get these things a new superintendent is elected and the public must be educated again.

One office and one officer could handle all the literature for the Convention Boards and all the Conference Boards thereof. It would be incumbent upon the different and request the public to send to this office for supplies, and not to officers.

Suppose a person wants some information about Elon College. He can get this information from the President's office by writing. There is on file there catalogues, booklets, pamphlets, leaflets, etc. At the same time he desires some information on missions, and so the application for this literature would go to the office of our Field Secretary. Suppose then that he should desire some literature on the missionary work carried on by the women, this must be secured from another place, from another party and, oftentimes someone, or The Christian Annual, must be consulted to find out where to get the party carrying the literature. And so on and on. It takes much letter writing, to say nothing of the inconvenience.

A few days ago a good sister wrote us for a few mite boxes, saying that she did not know who had the work in charge. It was incumbent upon us to give the matter attention. This case, with others already cited, points out very clearly the need of a centralized literature bureau.

Let us come together with our distribution of literature and handle it centrally and economically. Let us locate the office permanently so that people may know where it is and where to send for supplies. We are losing time, losing money, dissipating energy, while a little getting together would solve the whole problem.

What housewife can find the time to write letters or answer letters and send out literature in some department entrusted to her care and always do it on time? Suppose that she goes away for a week, is sick, or has a sick child in the home and a request must be indefinitely delayed.

Let us put the service of this part of our Church into a centralized office and then put emphasis upon the office and not upon the officer, for officers change and pass away, but offices do not, as a rule.

This message may not line up to the rules of unity, coherence and emphasis, for we have jotted down thoughts on the subject just as they come to us, and hope that in the passing of time along that some good may be wrought for the Kingdom's progress.

"HE WENT ABOUT DOING GOOD"

There is lying before us as we write, an issue of a certain Church journal carrying on its front page the likeness of a good and noble man, with this great sentence as the editor's highest tribute to him: "He went about doing good." We have taken this as an illustration and calling no names because it is possible that few of our readers know the party.

"He went about doing good." No greater epitaph can be written upon the grave rock of mortal man. We are measured in this life by the good that we do. How wonderful it is when we can go about and do good and have it said of us that we went about and did good. It was the greatest testimony to the noble life of Christ Jesus.

As we think about how noble it is for a man to go about and do good, we are reminded of the late Chas. D. McIver, once President of the State Normal, Greensboro, N. C. McIver said this: "Write me as one who loves his fellow men."

When a man loves his fellow men he will go about and do good. He will go about doing good to his fellow men because he loves his fellow men.

Oh! that we could say to the young men and women of our churches that the great and unending avenues of service are always opening to them to go about and do good. And if they love their God, their church, and their fellow men, they will go about and do good.

Let our aim in life be to serve our fellow men, and to serve our God so that when the evening shadows fall and we look down the sunset valley and hear that "one clear call for me", may there be no doubt in our hearts and no "moaning at the bar". Let our mortal bodies be turned to mother earth and live for no greater name, no greater fame, than to have some one chisel upon a rock "he went about doing good", and erect it where we sleep, not for self glory, but to point out to the unborn generations the path of service that they may go about and do good to their fellow men.

DELAWARE DOINGS

From The Delaware State News we glean some items of interest in regard to the Peoples church at that place. They are:

Pastor Helfenstein was the speaker at an annual Brotherhood banquet, First church, Irvington, N. J., January 20.

The St. Paul Brotherhood of the Peoples church gave its annual banquet on Thursday, January 13. Brother L. B. Hayes was toast-master, and from the splendid write-up given, the occasion was a great and good one indeed. We note editorial comment about the occasion.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Peoples church is doing active and progressive work. This Society is taking an active part in the interest of our mountain work.

The pastor, Dr. R. C. Helfenstein is to preach a special series of Sunday night sermons during the month of February. The theme is to be "The Ideal Home Life", the different subjects to be, "The Ideal Husband," "The Ideal Wife", "The Ideal Young Man", "The Ideal Young Woman", "The Ideal Twentieth Century Home."

A WORTHY AND UNIQUE BIRTHDAY OFFERING

The Methodist Protestant, Baltimore, Md., being so hard pressed for funds for which to carry on its work, decided some weeks ago to build a printing plant of its own as its final attempt to live. The paper has been in the service of the Methodist Protestant Church for one hundred years and is calling upon its readers to make a birthday offering during the year of its anniversary to help pay for the plant. The birthday offering idea was launched only a few weeks ago and we note that the response is liberal and encouraging to its promotion.

We commend the idea and wish for the publication an abundant success. There is no evading the issue of standing squarely behind the publications of the Church. The Church has all too long felt free to call upon its publications to plan, push and promulgate every cause, without taking into consideration that every issue is another obligation added to the Church's honor to support the Church press in an equitable and adequate way and manner.

Writing to the Siler City Grit about high and low prices, "Long Shanks" relates his experiences with prices during the Civil War. As a shoe-maker he sold shoes in the 60's as high as $85 a pair. He carried to Egypt (now Cumnock) a barrel of flour and one pair of shoes and sold them for $410, and paid $13 for a two ounce bale of snuff. Cotton sold for $1 a pound and calico $1 a yard. People made sweet potato coffee and burned corn cobs and used the ashes as a substitute for soda.—Sanford Express.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA

BY J. O. ATKINSON

I talked with a man the other day—Bishop Lambeth of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—who is just back from the famine district of China. He says that the condition of suffering, starvation and death are beyond all description. In a city where he spent a night a thousand refugees died in one night from hunger, cold and exposure. They are dying now by the thousands daily. If our Sunday schools, our churches, our Christian people in the comfortable homes of America will not hear and heed this call for mercy and for help, it seems to me nothing can ever touch or move us. The writer happens to know that hundreds of our people of wealth and large business interests are giving their time to the matter of relief, collecting and forwarding money, etc., without charging or receiving one penny of compensation. Take Thomas W. Lamont, for instance, whom President Wilson has appointed Chairman of our National Committee to collect and forward funds and direct affairs looking to relief. Mr. Lamont is an associate of J. Pierpont Morgan, a great banker himself and I heard a man whose veracity I cannot question say that "Thomas W. Lamont is one of the best, if not the best, man in America. He is bending his every energy and using his great influence, and employing his time to help save as many as possible of these poor, starving Chinese, and all without one penny of compensation of any kind." I have just received from Dr. F. W. Bible whom I personally know, the following:

"The five northern provinces, Chili, Shensi, Shansi, Honan and Shantung, are all affected. The actual famine zone covers 100,000 square miles with a population of 45,000,000 Chinese. Nearly one and one-half years of continuous drought, during which the normal rainfall has decreased from 25 inches a year to less than 3 inches.

45,000,000 Chinese are directly affected; 15,000,000 are facing immediate starvation and will die without our help; 10,000 are already dying daily.

The famine, unless halted by American relief, means the break-up of civilization in North China; in fact the complete collapse of a vast region commercially, economically and morally, which is certain to persist for a generation to come.

An opportunity to help a friendly nation in distress, to strengthen existing ties, to expand our trade and to have the consciousness that we have saved the lives of 15,000,000 human beings who would have died without our help. To feed, and save lives:

3c. will save one life one day

$1 will save one life one month

$5 will save one family one month

If the American Committee for China Famine Fund has no representative in your community, give your contribution to your bank, your church or send it to Vernon Munroe, Treasurer China Famine Fund, Bible House, New York City.

All funds collected by the American Committee are transmitted to the International Famine Relief Committee at Peking. This committee acts as a clearing house for the five regional committees in the famine area; the Peking Committee (including the Red Cross,) the Hankow, Tientsin, Honan, and Shantung Committees, all of which are represented on the International Famine Relief Committee, and whose members are working among the famine victims.

China is in the grip of the worst calamity in history. She turns to us as her oldest and richest friend, whom she has learned to trust. We cannot ignore her call and let these helpless people die without an effort to save them.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE

God has a plan for every life, and while our young people are in the stages of development we should be careful to give them the proper instruction. If exercise is necessary for physical development, then it is more necessary for spiritual development.

What right have we to expect our young people to be missionary when we do not give them instruction and an opportunity to develop? A great responsibility comes to each and every one to propagate the truth; a responsibility to see that all good things become common property. If we note history we find we were one time objects of missions ourselves and yet some of us today are not willing to help see that this good thing (Christ in our own hearts and lives) becomes the property of those less fortunate. We are guilty, are we repentent? Are we doing all we can to interest our youth in our churches, Sunday schools and homes today, to acquire the knowledge of higher, holier, and better things? We make every sacrifice when it comes to temporal things for our young folks, but what about it in spiritual things? Youth is full of life, energetic, active. Why not then give our young people something worth while on which to use up their energy? Why not give them something to read to take the place of some of the unwholesome literature of today?

It is our privilege, opportunity and our obligation. I often receive letters like the following which I am going to give that you may see what some of the young people of one church did when given a chance:

Henderson, N. C., R. F. D. 1, January 18, 1921

Dear Miss Holt:

This is the first time I've written to you since you left. We have had six meetings at every one of which we have had new members. We have now 50 members on roll. I ordered some Willing Workers pins, from David C. Cook some time ago. We have raised nearly $15.00. We are going to open our Mite Boxes in March.

Miss Holt I am writing to ask you to send me some leaflets to add a little to our work. We have our meeting first and then our mothers have theirs while we are playing.

Hoping to hear from you soon.

Your friend,
CAROLINE MACON

President of Willing Workers, Liberty, (V.) Christian church.

This Society was organized last July with fifteen charter members, and I am wondering if any other Willing Workers Society organized hardly six months ago has now fifty members or more?

All our churches or Woman's Societies could have a Willing Workers Society by a little effort. How we wish all would try.

We are grateful to our little friend Caroline Macon and trust we may have many others who will follow this splendid organization.

BESSIE I HOLT, Superintendent Y. P. W.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

IF there were no other evidences that sin is still in the world than the degeneracy of the great festival days in the Church, then we should have abundant proof of the presence and working of sin. It is true now that most of these great days have been dragged down to the level of sin itself. Think of how the average American celebrates Christmas Day, by fire-crackers, shooting "bees", horse-racing, drunken carousals, theatre parties, card games, and what not, and you will have evidence of the degeneracy of Christmas Day as it is pretended to be kept in honor of the birth of Christ. Alas, how has the sacred day fallen into unholy hands! Take Easter, which we are now approaching, kept in commemoration of the resurrection of our Lord. It is now used to hold Easter balls, and many other things wholly unbecoming on such an occasion. Take Hallowe'en, or All Saints Evening, originally kept to emphasize the triumph of Christianity over the Pagan religious systems of the Roman world, but now it is used for the most hideous outbreaks of fun and frolic. What does it all mean? It only means that there is a real degeneracy going on along many lines in the walks of men and women.

Shall new converts to the Christian faith in heathen lands teach men and women in the Church? Well, it seems that they are doing that very thing, and they are doing it most impressively, as well as truly. The papers are telling us of the life and work of General Feng Yu Hsiang of China. Only a little while ago he was in heathenism, but later he became a Christian. He now commands one of the most remarkable armies in the world. He has under his direct command 14,000 soldiers. He seeks to lead his men aright, both morally and spiritually. It is said that in this army of 14,000 men, there is not a man who smokes, not a single man who indulges in gambling, does not have anything of immorality tolerated, does not have any theatricals. Most of the officers are sterling Christians, taking pleasure in leading their men to Christ, conducting Bible classes for them. Is there a single church in the United States in which there is not to be found a single tobacco smoker? Alas! how we drag Christian ideals into the dust of sin, and then some even think it strange that the Church of Christ does not prosper—does not flourish like a green bay tree. But how can it, when its own members delight to follow the world rather than Christ? We are in a day that calls for heroes for the truth. Many love the bad habits of sin more than they seem to love their Lord. God pity us and call us to repentance and to true life in Christ.

Famine conditions in the East are awful. Men, women and children are dying of starvation by the thousands, perhaps by millions. America is answering the call for help to feed these starving ones, and money is being raised in large sums, and still the need is not met and the people in five provinces in China continue to die of starvation. The call now is for gifts from every one who can spare much or little that the starving peoples of the East may be saved from death by starvation. Can you help and will you do it? Can you not get others to help and will you do it? Try, try, and keep on trying till relief is given.

We have much of schools of method for the advancement of the cause of Christ. We dare say that schools of method may be helpful among living men and women, but what can a school of methods accomplish among spiritually dead people? Let us see first that the people are born again, and from above, and then with new life in them, let us put them into schools of practice, where they may be taught what true Christianity is and how to practice its teachings. Then we may do well to have a school of methods in which living men and women may be taught how to use to best advantage the life they have. That will be far better than teaching people methods when they know so little, if anything of real life and practice. Let us learn to do things in God's way, lest we crowd out His plans by the introduction of men's ideals. Ah, God's ways stand so much and man's ways mean so little, when they stand apart from God.

A MUCH ENJOYED VISIT

Wednesday afternoon, January 10, I stepped in to see our Brother Wellons, or as he is better known to us "Uncle" Wellons. I found him in a comfortable room well supplied with good books, paper, and religious literature and undoubtedly in the presence of the Lord. He was very bright although he is in his ninety-sixth year. He seemed to be looking ahead for an opportunity to work for God by looking out for something that he can do to help humanity and still feels that God has a work for him to do. I praise God for men of that spirit. Too many are inclined to give up when their opportunity is not as great as someone's else might be. I wish that all of us might have the spirit of Uncle Wellons, that is, not to give up as long as we have life and an opportunity.

I truly believe that we will find opportunities if we seek for them for they are all about us every day. Many of us are waiting to be able to do something great and scorn the little things of life. It is very seldom that God calls a person to some great task at first. And then, too, it is little things that count. We never know just how much a good friendly hand shake or an encouraging word will help someone. We have too much teaching and not enough practicing of the social and Christian life. We teach and plan high ideals and then often times fail to put them into practice. There are opportunities all about us; let us ask God to show them to us and to help us use them. A poor girl in New York who was rescued from the slums and died a year or two afterwards was used by God to lead about one hundred people to Christ while lying upon her death bed.

The visit was a real inspiration to me, and my prayer is that God's richest blessing may rest upon Brother Wellons, that he may yet have much time to serve Him by his life being submissive to the Christ, that His life may be lived through him. May God give us more men of Brother Wellons' type in character, spirit and faith, is my prayer.

SUFFOLK LETTER

The religious life of the world was deranged by the World War, and it is as difficult to restore moral conditions as it is to restore civil conditions. The world cannot engage in war and Jesus remain on the throne of the human heart. There is not a single interest of mankind that was not thrown out of gear by the war. Consider labor, prices, social life, commerce, education, domestic life, religion; all of them were put into abnormal relations and activities. Business, government, home, the marriage relation, all went wild, and it shocks the nation to come back to normal relations. War leaves the nation criminal, licentious, dishonest. When men kill each other and glory in victory, it is no surprise that they do other things without compunction of conscience. Men who take the life of men may take the virtue of women. It is an easy transition from the larger crime to the less, and hence war continues its destruction and waste long after the guns are silenced.

What the world needs is a great spiritual revival that will transform mankind from murderers to rescuers. If men would invent as many ways to save men, as they did to kill men; if they would work as hard to feed men, as they did to starve men; if they would strive as hard to love men, as they did to conquer men, a new day would dawn. The world has neglected its own heart. It knows too much and loves too little. It eats too much and feeds others too little. If the world would play less and pray more, it would bring mankind closer to God and to one another. Money and pleasure are the idols of this reckless age. It seems to be a game of chance, in the exchange, the store, the mill, and the parlor. Divorce threatens to destroy the home; the dance, the young; and speculation, business.

Human schemes cannot bring us out of the wilderness into which war has led us. Legislation cannot change the human heart nor reform the world. It must be a new pentecost in answer to a long season of prayer. The conscience of the world is seared; moral discernment is dulled; and the heart is callous under the blight of war. Reaction may save us from ruin, but it must come through an enlightened conscience and a tender heart, out of which "are the issues of life". The family altar, and praying parents, could do much toward rescuing the perishing. It was the parents, the older heads, that kept Isarel from going into Caanan at the end of two years; and it cost them their lives and their children forty years in the wilderness. If the old folks had led the way when Caleb and Joshua told them they could, the young people would have followed. The young did go in after thirty-eight years. Do not blame the young people too much. If this generation of mature Christians does not lead the way, it may be a generation before the young people enter into the new day of simple honesty, simple virtue, simple faith, and a freedom which the world has not yet known. That day will surely come, and "we are well able to overcome" the barriers in the way of progress in all that pertains to the interest of mankind. But it requires the faith that overcometh the world.

INFORMATION WANTED

The writer greatly desires the name and address of every Sunday school Superintendent, Secretary and Teacher in every Sunday school of our Southern Christian Convention. A blank was recently sent all our pastors, with returned self-addressed stamped envelope, asking for this much needed information. The pastors are responding, but if they can hurry up this information it will be greatly appreciated. So far about half of the schools are reported. We want every school. It is our desire and purpose to furnish from time to time Superintendents and teachers with valuable and helpful missionary data and information that can be used to telling effect in the Sunday school class, or for brief reading or talks before the school. If the pastors will help in this great task by sending in their blanks properly filled out for their schools, it will materially aid us, and we trust will be of real benefit to the school and the Kingdom. Thank you brother.

J. O. ATKINSON.

A little girl had been taken to church for the first time, and she was somewhat surprised by the general style of the building, which was quite unlike anything she had previously seen. "Whose house is this?" she asked. "It is God's house," her mother answered. The child took another critical view of the building. "It is a very nice house," she finally soliloquized. "We have never called here before."—Selected.

IF I WERE A PREACHER

BY LAYMAN L. D. RIPPEY, ALTAMAHAW, N. C.

I would preach the Lord Jesus Christ and Him crucified to a dying people. I would do it as an humble servant of God and the people. If my sermons were not full of the Holy Ghost I would go to God in prayer for divine unction from on high until I did feel in my heart that I had that power. Then I would preach love in every sermon, and I would never feel that I had really preached unless my sermons were full of the power of love. I would tell the story of Jesus just as often as I preached.

I would visit my members just as often as I thought my visits would be of spiritual benefit to them and I would visit others in my congregations, or that should be visited because of their location, and in a modest way let them know that I was interested in their happiness both in this world and the world to come.

I would attend all funerals when requested if it was possible for me to do so, and do the best I could to help console and comfort the bereaved.

I would do all in my power to live and act a Christian life, letting my light so shine that the world might know that there was a reality in the religion that I taught and professed. I would preach and teach honesty, truthfulness, sobriety and moral decency in all my sermons. I would preach and teach my congregations the financial obligations incumbent upon them as church members and believers in Christ.

I would be temperate in all things and not drift into extravagant ideas, speech or dress. I would try to take care of my family in a substantial way, feed, clothe, and educate but never allow, if possible, the sign of extravagance, waste or haughtiness to exhibit itself. I would teach my family, if I could, both wife and children, that my influence for good to some extent depended on their demeanor at the church and in the town and community in which I preached.

I would not allow myself to hide behind the pulpit to preach one of my member's "funeral" while he or she was yet alive. Neither would I be too abusive, and the finest, cleanest language possible I would use in my preaching. If I felt called upon to refer to any incident that had happened that would cause the minds of my congregation to think on impure things I would step back and blush and show my modesty.

INTRODUCING THE WRITER

Brother L. D. Rippey, Altamahaw, N. C., is one of our devoted and consecrated laymen. He is a member of the church at Bethlehem (Alamance), one of her deacons and loves his church and denomination. Brother Rippey is a farmer, miller, merchant, and a Christian gentleman of the first magnitude. Brother Rippey is a liberal giver to every good cause, a kind neighbor, loved by all who know him, and enjoys their confidence. He is a believer in education, in Elon College, the Christian Orphanage, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and in fact every department of the Church's work. Hear Brother Rippey as he speaks from his heart.

The American Committee of the China Famine Fund has asked all the churches in the United States to observe February 6 as a special day of prayer and appeal for the starving millions in northern China.

In THE SUN's issue for January 26 we had an article by Dr. W. W. Staley on "If I Were a Layman". We suggested that some laymen write on "If I Were a Preacher". At this writing we have received two articles—one from Layman L. D. Rippey, Altamahaw, N. C., and the other from Layman John King, Suffolk, Va. We received Bro. Rippey's article first and hence his this week and Bro. King's to be printed in THE SUN for February 16. We trust that many more will be sent us—also more articles on "If I Were a Layman".

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

MISSIONARY TALKS IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Miss Mary Kratzer, Secretary Linville, Va., Sunday. Sunday schools would have at least a five minute talk for January says: "We are very grateful for your offer to help us in our work for missions. It is our purpose to have a mission talk every first Sunday by some member of the school."

Now that is fine, I wish most heartily that all our Sunday schools would have at least a five minutes talk at least once a month on the all important topic of missions. This is the heart and secret of the whole matter. There is no better place in all the world, unless it be in the home, to teach the great theme and lessons of missions than in the Sunday school. And why any school should object to a five minutes talk on missions say once a month, if not every Sunday, on missions is more than we can understand. Such a program means a bigger, better, more progressive and more interesting Sunday school.

OUR "MERRY CRIPPLE" HAD HER CHRISTMAS

A recent letter in THE SUN told about our Miss Hedgepeth breaking her left arm as she was going to a mountain town to get some things to enable her dear mountain folks to have their first Christmas; and of how she was "playing the glad game because it was her left arm and not her right that was broken". She did not, however, give up her plans for Christmas because of a broken arm. After telling in a recent letter that she has seventy pupils in her school, that she needs help, etc., but is very happy in doing what she can, she gives these personal lines about that Christmas effort: "Oh! I wish I could tell you about my (or their) Christmas 'tree'. I have wanted to write it to THE SUN, but was not physically able to undertake anything much the first two weeks afterwards. Now it is too late for THE SUN but I must write you a line about it any way. The folks from all over this mountain came. They gathered for Christmas all of them, for the first time in the memory of the oldest. They came in throngs. Fortunately after my arm break, packages came containing, everything 'Christmasey'. Toys for every little one, pencils, writing pads, handkerchiefs, etc., for larger ones and books, candy and nuts for everyone. With enough extra to remember some who had not been able to enter school and smaller ones. Every old and afflicted person in the community was remembered. Many hearty handshakes I received with words of praise, gratification and encouragement. I just wished that every one who had had a part in helping me make the occasion a happy one could have had my feeling. Never before have I felt more that I was walking hand in hand with Christ Himself than on that day when Peace, Joy, and Good Will among these humble mountain folk seem to reign to a degree of entire satisfaction. I look upon it as the climax of my year's service here. Yet in the future we may be able to say simply. 'It was a small seed sown in good soil to spring forth in due season with fruit no less than that of which God's Kingdom is worthy'. I am so grateful to Sunday schools, Societies and friends who sent the gifts that enabled me to give these dear people their first sight of real Christmas."

Miss Hedgepeth is a busy woman, and is so pressed she cannot find time now for writing to THE SUN and she will be surprised to discover the liberty I am taking with portions of her business and personal letters. She is doing a real, genuine Christian home missionary work which merits our deepest interest and should evoke our constant prayers.

In closing a recent letter she says, "Not one family in twenty-five here have a Bible in their home, nor could they read it if they had it. Illiteracy is the main cause of conditions in the mountains. These people would read their Bibles if they could read anything. My arm is healing nicely and walking through heavy snows, I am going on with my school work."

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND MISSIONS

It is greatly to be desired that the year 1921 shall find, before its conclusion, every one of our Christian Sunday schools learning, studying, teaching, hearing something about missions. As a great Sunday school worker has declared "The Sunday school is the biggest organization in the Church and missions is the biggest business of the Church". So when the biggest organization of the church turns its attention seriously to the biggest business of the Church, something good and great will happen. What a glorious day for our dear Church when every Sunday school of the Church shall have regular, emphatic, direct missionary instruction in one form or another. "Missionary day in our Sunday school" should be the brightest day of the whole month in the Sunday school.

A growing number of our schools now take one offering a month for missions and on that day some one of the school, selected for the purpose, gives a brief talk or reads a short paper on missions.

(Our Burlington school that leads all has a three or five minutes talk on missions every Sunday. No wonder that school now gives so liberally to our Orphanage and supports a missionary in Japan. It has been having a brief paper or talk on missions every Sunday before the whole school now for years.)

The following schools sent in reports for January of offerings made; and best of all back of the amounts contributed is the opportunity these schools had of hearing and learning at least something about missions. We wonder again and again and again why all our schools do not join the list of those who in keeping with a vote of our Southern Convention, and of all our Sunday school Conventions "take one offering a month for our Orphanage and one offering a month for missions, and retain the other two offerings for current expenses of the school." For every school should certainly do as much for others as for self.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELDCOUNCIL OF CHURCH BOARDS OF EDUCATION

Owing to the inability of Dr. W. G. Sargent, Secretary of the Department of Education, to attend the annual meeting of the Council Church Boards of Education, it was my privilege to represent our Church.

The meeting was held at Wallace Lodge, Yonkers, New York, January 3-4. About twenty denominations were represented. The sessions were characterized by a spirit of sweet Christian fellowship and an earnest desire to cooperate in advancing the moral and spiritual interests of our educational institutions.

The Executive Secretary, Dr. Robert L. Kelly, showed himself a master in having matters in a business shape to present to the Council and in contrast with the most of the meetings of that nature, a three day program was completed in two days. The speakers on the various subjects were well prepared and brought strong helpful messages, which gave much food for thought.

Among the problems discussed by the Council were the following: The influence of the Greek Fraternities upon the religious life of the student. Statistics show that Fraternity men do not, as a rule, take much interest in religious work. It is considered one of the gravest problems in religious work among students.

The influence of state schools on morals was discussed at some length, and in the course of the discussion, it was brought out that the president of one State normal learned that 85% of the teachers sent out from his institution were not called back for a second term, and upon investigation he found that in almost every case it was due to the morals and conduct of the teacher.

A resolution was passed, requesting all colleges to recognize Religious Educational work in their institutions. A committee from the Council, in conjunction with a like committee from the Sunday School Council of Evangelical denominations, is working on a major course of Religious Education for colleges and hopes to have it ready for submission within a year. The tentative report of the committee shows the outline of a strong practical course which, when presented, will doubtless be adopted by many colleges.

The budget of the Council for the ensuing year was placed at $24,500. The Executive Secretary, through his work in the Educational Survey of the Interchurch World Movement, secured a vast fund of useful information, a part of which it is hoped to make available for the public through this budget.

It was a helpful and inspiring meeting and much enjoyed by the writer. Before leaving for home I had the privilege of attending the opening session of the Association of American Colleges, at Hotel Astor, New York.

OUR ORPHANAGESUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

We were made happy this week to receive a check from Mr. B. N. Duke, of New York City, for one thousand dollars to be used in building the "Baby Home". Mr. Duke is not a member of our Church but is interested in the little orphan children and gives this donation to help us meet the many urgent appeals we have. Mr. Duke has helped us before in a small way, but he feels interested in our work here because he sees in the Children's Home a wonderful opportunity to do much good for the sake of the little helpless tots.

We also received from little Miss Ruth Teague Riddle a whole savings "bank" full of money, bank and all, and we had to break into the bank to get the money. It amounted to $1.58. This little girl says she has made part of this money shining "Daddy's" shoes. When little girls three years old can earn a whole savings bank full of money and then donate all of it to the cause of the little orphan child she is making a mighty good start in life. We older children ought to take notice and consider how much we are doing.

The First Christian Sunday school, Irvington, N. J., sent us a box of towels and soap. This was from the primary class.

Waverly, Va., Christian church, one box containing quilts, can goods, towels, etc.

Spring Hill Sunday school, soap, towels, handkerchiefs, etc.

Mrs. D. H. Freuch, Albion, Ind., one box clothing, etc.

Ladies Aid Society, Ingram, Va. church, one nice quilt; Ladies Aid Society, Antioch church (Val. Va.), five nice quilts, gingham, dried fruit, beans, etc.

A Request

There is one request that I want to make of every Sunday school in the Southern Christian Convention. It is this: That your school give one Sunday's offerings each month to the Christian Orphanage and one to missions. Begin this now at the first part of the year. That is the time to make new resolutions and stick to them. I want you to do this because I know it will put more life in your Sunday school and give you a more tender feeling toward the helpless and make you more interested in the cause of missions. I believe Dr. Atkinson has made you the proposition if you will do this, and at the end of the year if you are in debt, send him the bill for the deficit and he will pay it. I told Dr. Atkinson sometime ago if he did not have the money I would loan him enough to meet all these bills if I could borrow it. Try it for this year and see how you succeed.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: I was three years old last November. Daddy edit's THE SUN and I get to read the children's letters first. I am sending you my "practical bank" which I have been keeping for the little orphans. Do not know how much is in it—you count it and tell me. I earned part of this money shining Daddy's shoes. I go to Sunday school every Sunday. Miss Allie Malone is my teacher. We little tots make an extra offering the first Sunday for the Orphanage. I can sing "Jesus Loves Me" and many other little songs that mother has taught me. This is my first letter. I have been so busy bringing in stove wood for mother that I just haven't had time to write. Bye, bye.—Ruth Teague Riddle.

You are certainly a nice little girl to send Uncle Charley a "bank" full of money for the little orphans. You had $1.58 in the bank and I wish many little girls and boys would join the band of eousins this year. You must get you another bank and make "Daddy" let you shine his shoes often.—"Uncle Charley".

Dr. J. P. Barrett, Holland, Virginia, will preach for the Burlington congregation, Sunday, February 13.

The recent report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, or North Carolina, Dr. E. C. Brooks, shows a marked advance along educational lines in this State for the past two years.

MINUTES OF THE WOMAN'S BOARD OF THE EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE

The Woman's Mission Board of the Eastern Virginia Conference, met in the Christian parsonage, Suffolk, Va., Wednesday, January 19, 1921, with the following members present: Mrs. C. H. Rowland, President; Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Corresponding Secretary and Treasurer; Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Superintendent Young People; Miss Mary Andrews, Superintendent Cradle Roll; Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, Superintendent Literature and Mite Boxes; Mrs. W. D. Harward, Recording Secretary. The meeting was called to order and Scripture read by the president. Prayer by Dr. W. W. Staley.

The goal for this year is $5,500 from all sources. Women's Societies reported $500 for last quarter and $114.00 on Thank Offering.

Mrs. M. L. Bryant was instructed to pay $125.00 out of the general fund to Mrs. C. H. Rowland for literature to be used in the Societies.

There was raised on specials last year, $2,325.00, this being $75.00 below the goal set.

Mrs. Bryant reported that she had received a letter from Miss Iola Hedgepeth, our missionary in the mountains of Virginia, stating how the people up there appreciated the contents of the boxes sent to them by the different Societies just before Christmas, and how by these the Christmas entertainment meant so much more to them.

It was decided that District Rallies be held in different parts of the Conference during the latter part of April. Dates suggested as follows: Nansemond, April 22; Gates Co., April 24; Wakefield, April 26; Waverly, April 27; Isle of Wight, April 28; Norfolk, April 29.

It was decided to urge all Societies to observe the special day of prayer, February 18, 1921, as designated by a Joint Commission of the Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions and the Council of the Women for Home Missions. This day of prayer to be for the deepening of the devotional life of our people and the quickening of their faith and zeal for greater mission activity.

Mrs. Rowland was asked to write to the presidents of the different Societies, giving information concerning the work of the present year, and Mrs. Leathers was asked to write to presidents of Young People's Societies for the same purpose. The Woman's Conference is to meet in October, with Damascus church, Gates County, N. C., the date to be announced later.

After discussing many things of interest, in connection with the work, the Board closed what was felt to be a profitable day's session. Adjourned to meet, subject to the call of the president.

MRS. W. D. HARWARD, Secretary.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

POSSESSING ALL THINGS

There are two kinds of riches: The uncertain and the true. One is temporal, the other spiritual. One is seen, the other is unseen. But the material may be turned into a spiritual asset, even by beholding that which "seemeth" to belong to some one else.

True riches may consist, in great part, in knowing how to do without. Knowing how to be abased and how to abound. How to be full and to be hungry, how to abound and to suffer need. Having nothing yet "possessing all things".

This is no doubt strange language to many. They seem to prefer riches that they can "realize" on. How can one who has nothing, at the same time, possess all things? How can one who is poor make many rich? May be he can not explain to the satisfaction of some. But he says I have read in the Book of inspiration that, "All things are yours" and that, "God hath given us all things richly to enjoy". He says, "I go out through this great country and I enjoy looking at the beautiful farms. I see broad fields filled with beautiful golden grain. The owners have worked hard and they are being rewarded." But it may be that they do not realize how fruitless their labors would have been without that which my heavenly Father has furnished. He provided the seed, He gave the sunshine, He sent the rain. These men may reap the fields, pull down their barns and build greater, in order to have a place to bestow their goods. But I know that in the true sense my Father owns it all. "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein."

"I remember" says he, "that the father said to the boy who stayed at home, 'son all that I have is thine' ". Then he says, "I have not been at home all the time. I was a prodigal and came to feel that I was no longer worthy to be called a son. But I am at home now and from the way my Father treats me and the experience I have, I am sure that I am a son. And I hear Him say to me now, 'son all that I have is thine' ". As long as I have a Father who owns broad fields of grain and cattle upon a thousand hills I am not going to worry about something to eat."

He looks out across the meadow and sees a beautiful bed of lillies, and he says, "As long as I have a heavenly Father who can furnish clothing like that for a lilly, I will not worry about what I am to do for clothing". Then his heart begins to overflow with singing, "My Father is rich in houses and lands, He holdeth the wealth of the world in His hands". "Singing I go along life's road, praising the Lord, praising the Lord, Singing I go along life's road for Jesus hath lifted my head." "Thou, O Christ, art all I want, more than all in Thee I find".

I had beautiful colors to work with—
 White, blue like heaven above,
 And tangled in all the meshes
 Were the golden threads of love;
 But the colors were dulled by my handling,
 The pattern was faded and gray,
 That once to my eager seeming
 Shone fairer than flowers of May.

But alas, not the half of my pattern
 Was finished at set of sun;
 What should I say to the master
 When I heard him call, "Is it done?"
 And I threw down my shuttle in sorrow
 (I had worked through the livelong day).
 And I lay down to slumber in darkness.
 Too weary even to pray.

In my dreams a vision of splendor,
 An angel, shining-faced,
 With gentle and tender finger
 The work of the weavers traced.
 He stooped with a benediction
 O'er the loom of my neighbor near,
 For the threads were smooth and even
 And the pattern perfect and clear.

Then I waited in fear and trembling,
 As he stood by my tangled skein,
 For the look of reproach and pity
 That I knew would add to my pain.
 Instead, with a thoughtful aspect,
 He turned his gaze upon me,
 And I knew that he saw the fair picture
 Of my work as I hoped it would be.

And with touch divine of his finger
 He traced my faint copy anew,
 Transforming the clouded colors
 And letting the pattern shine true.
 And I knew in the moment of waiting,
 While his look pierced my very soul through,
 I was judged not so much by my doing
 As by what I had striven to do.

There has been appropriated $1,222,367 by the American Bible Society for the printing and distribution of Bibles during 1921. This is the largest amount ever created in one year for the circulation of the Bible.

A bill to censor moving picture shows is now before the State Legislature in North Carolina. We trust that despite of the opposition of those financially interested, the members of our Legislature will realize that we owe more to the children of our whole State than to those few who make fortunes out of the moving picture show, and that they will put childhood above money in the passing of this bill.

The poor fellow, as the world would call him, went on back home feeling that although he had nothing, yet he was "possessing all things".

Reader can you imagine about how he felt and about what kind of an experience he must have had?

GOD'S MEN

God saves the world through a few chosen men who are willing to receive a great ordination and work in harmony with the divine purpose.

To perceive something of the import of God's commission to his men and something of the grandeur of soul of those who hear his voice is but to review the footprints of the faith of Abraham, Moses, Isaiah, John the Baptist, Peter, John, and Paul.

"Quit you like men" rings from Ararat to Olivet, and to the end of time; but there are few mighty men in any age who break through the lines and bring water from the well of Bethlehem.

Hardships, the minimum of self and the maximum of service, heroism at the highest, and the victor's crown are comprised in the call of God. The way is narrow, and few are they that find it.

Nehemiah traces the glorious restoration of Jerusalem to "the good hand of God" and "some few men with me."

In searching among the early records it is found that Peter and John and James were "reputed to the pillars."

Paul was a "chosen vessel" to bear Christ's name to the Gentiles, ambassador extraordinary, entering all great centers from Antioch to Rome.

Christianity is a great adventure, and a few lonely Christian martyrs are the pioneers of human progress.

Every little Church in Christendom has its "chosen vessel," its "three mighty men," its "pillars," its "few names that are worthy," its "remnant of grace," its "three hundred," into whose hands God will deliver Midian.

We shall look in vain across the world for truer benefactors than such as these. They guard the faith; they keep open the gates of the temple; they battle for the Lord; they bear witness to truth; they minister; they save the lost; they have the morning star—"some few men" of a good courage who fear God and take their own part. The beauty of our Lord God is upon them.

This is an exclusive fellowship. No man can enter who serves two masters, whose quest falls short of the kingdom of God and his righteousness.—Christian Standard.

THE WEAVER

I sat at my loom in silence,
 Facing the westering sun;
 The warp was rough and tangled,
 And the threads unevenly run.
 Impatient I pulled at the fibers—
 They snapped and flew from my hands;
 Weary and faint and sore-hearted
 I gathered the broken strands.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

WITH THE IMMIGRATION GATES AJAR

Just as the force of gravity pulls water from one side of a pail to another, so the force of human need and want brings the immigrant to this country from starving and disordered Europe. America is the promised land to these sojourners in the blighted lands of the world. With food, shelter, and opportunities for advancement, the United States is truly a land of dreams for them. Europe and the homeland no longer tells the story of home but the horror of famine, disease, and devastation. So it is not to be wondered at that the European immigrant is arriving here by the wholesale. Depression and a sense of more ideal conditions attainable on this side of the Atlantic have driven him here; and with the immigration gates ajar, many more immigrants may be expected.

According to the World's Work, the Committee appointed to investigate the conditions of prospective European immigration reports that there is a world-wide demand for steamship accommodations. Many of those anxious to sail for America must wait because the departing ships have no room for them. In the month of October alone, 75,665 would-be Americans arrived at Ellis Island; and in a single day in November, as many as 16,000 landed. Experts say that the number of arrivals by the end of the year will exceed a million and may reach two. Yet, estimates place that number at less than one-tenth of those who wait.

The Commissioner of the Hebrew Immigration Aid Society said that no less than three million Jews in Poland would come to America at once, could they but find ship room. From two to eight million Germans are said to be ready to start in this direction as soon as steerage accommodations become available. And in all parts of Central and Southern Europe the greatest hope that the poverty stricken persons entertain is to reach America safely.

A NEW KIND OF COLLEGE

This new kind of college is a practical college, and its promoter is President Arthur J. Morgan of Antioch College (Ohio). Though the idea of practical education is not a new one, the idea of having a college produce "employers rather than employees" to suit the industrial needs of the country according to the Morgan plan, is admittedly something new. The idea is this: Antioch College plans to have a group of factory buildings on its campus designed for the accommodation of a number of small manufactories, having from twenty to fifty workmen. But these workmen are not scheduled as the average workman in various industries. They are the students themselves, and they devote one-half of their time in these establishments, and the other half in the theoretical preparation of their studies. Thus their work permits theory and practice to combine. Beside this it permits them to become self-supporting so that they are able to pay for all their expenses while they are studying.

The plan of such a college is not narrowed to exclude students of the liberal arts and to benefit industrial promoters and managers of the future only. There is provision made to train men for other professions in similar way. Whether such a plan will work seems to be unquestionable with some educational authorities. They feel that experience lends sufficient proof to support the new kind of college, which is to be put into operation during the coming year. Admittedly it will afford a rather narrow kind of education compared with most colleges where liberal arts are taught nearly all of the students; yet this kind of college seems to represent the tendency toward more practical education; and this bids to be the supreme tendency of the future.

GROWTH OF METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL ENROLLMENT

It is evident from the 20,305 increase in the number of their pupils, that the Methodist Episcopal Sunday schools of the country are making some progress in their work, according to Dr. W. S. Bovard, Corresponding Secretary. At the meeting of the Board of Sunday Schools of the Church, Dr. Bovard also announced that there is a total world increase in the Sunday school enrollment to the amount of 49,932 pupils.

In view of the large membership of the Church, and the natural affiliation of the children of its membership each year, this is not a very great increase; yet, such an increase is deserving of public attention. The proportion of this gain in Sunday school membership to that of other schools illustrates the fact that the Methodists are comparatively successful in their year's work.

Among the other accomplishments of the schools in America and in Europe, it was announced that they had subscribed $420,000 for the relief of the people starving in Central Europe, the Near East, and China.

COTTON MILLS PLEAD FOR PROTECTION

Cotton manufacturers of both North and South have appealed to the House of Ways and Means Committee for protection against a "flood" of goods being imported from foreign countries. The foreign manufacturers, owing to their cheaper labor and expenses of operation, can produce cheaper goods than the manufacturers of this country, who are still working under depressed conditions.

Until a few days ago less than half of the country's cotton mills were active in the production of goods. Many of the mills have been working on a part time basis, consequently the workers have had a hard fight to make a living. Should the mills be curtailed still further in operation, more depressing times would come to the workers. In consideration of these problems, it is thought that some inducement will be made to keep the mills in a state of production in spite of the threats from outside producers.

Some one giving his or her postoffice as New Hill, N. C., wrote THE SUN office a business letter some days ago, but failed to sign any name. We shall be only too glad to reply to the letter and give the information if the person writing will please let us know to whom to make reply.

Quite a number of subscribers renewing their subscriptions to THE SUN send only $2.00, instead of $2.50. We are confident that this is an oversight because we experienced the same thing for some time after the advance in price on June 1, 1917. When only $2.00 is received, only ten months credit can be given.

Rev. Pressley E. INFORMATION

The Executive Committee of the Board of Religious Education was in session at Burlington one day last week planning for active work of that Board. Dr. W. T. Walters of Richmond, Va., was the only one in attendance from a distance.

The Mission Boards of the two Conventions were in session at Dayton, Ohio, last week and we understand took some forward steps along missionary lines. At the time of this writing we have not received a communication to give us something definite as to what took place but have promise of it for release next week.

A bill was considered by Congress last week which provided for the reduction of the regular army to 175,000 men during times of peace. The bill was passed, but Mr. Wilson would not sign, giving as his excuse that world conditions forbid a reduction in the standing army at this time. President Wilson's veto was overruled by the House by a vote of 271 to 16, thus declaring by the act that the standing army shall be reduced from 280,000 to 175,000.

GENERAL COMMENT

We are glad to have placed upon our desk a copy of the minutes of the Sixtieth General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. The volume contains valuable information and the reports of the different departments of the denomination show marked progress. We have also received a copy of The Year Book of the United Brethern Church, which contains reports of the various departments of that communion to the General Conference.

By the way, the minutes of the Presbyterian General Assembly contains a few more pages than our Christian Annual, and sells for $1.00. The year book of the United Brethern Church contains one hundred pages less than the Christian Annual with only two pages of tables, the remainder of the book being uniform type, and this publication sells for 35 cents. There should be no objection to the 50 cent price of the Christian Annual.

Bad roads, bad weather, and sickness are often given as an excuse for country people not attending church regularly. All these things have their consideration, but argue the more in behalf of the Church paper. The Church paper should be in every home and most certainly in those homes where certain conditions forbid regular church attendance.

Business conditions are getting better. Practically all the manufacturing plants in this section of the State, at least in THE SUN's town, have resumed operations. Bying conditions continue weak but we are of the opinion that things are slowly adjusting themselves and that for the better. Prices are as low as they can hope to be and the buying public should not expect further reduction except on special cases.

Governor Morrow of Kentucky is receiving the congratulations of the public press upon his stand against whiskey and the violators of the prohibition law. Here is one of the Governor's pronouncements in this connection: "I can not and will not pardon any man for having violated the local-option law. Whiskey is an outlaw, defies all law, and becomes only a spirit of utter evil. The commonwealth has reached the condition where its authority to maintain law and order is being openly, persistently, and brazenly challenged by the impudent, open, and notorious violation of the prohibition law by threats of the lawbreakers against informers, intimidation of those who oppose this illegitimate business, and by influences coming from this business which threaten to corrupt the source of all authority. The violation of this law is far worse than the ordinary evils of drink. It has become a sinister power which seeks to corrupt the law itself, to subvert the agents of law enforcement into participation and partnership in the commission and palliation of crime."

The Christian Advocate, Nashville, Tennessee, tells of a subscriber who addressed a former editor of that paper who had been dead twenty years. Without some experience in this line we would be inclined to take it as a joke. But not so. The present Editor of THE SUN has been in charge nearly five years and frequently renewals are mailed to his predecessor. Not only this, but every week mail is addressed to Elon College, N. C., when THE SUN was moved to Burlington April 1, 1918. During the past week four renewals were sent to Elon College, two of these being from prominent officers of the Convention. And one more: If we recall correctly it has been nearly twenty-five years since THE SUN was printed in Raleigh. The other day we received a renewal addressed to THE SUN at Raleigh, N. C. The letter was sent to Greensboro, then to Elon College and then to Burlington. We fully believe The Advocate's story.

STARVING PEOPLE

Mr. Graham Patterson, editor of The Christian Herald, delivered an address at the Academy of Music, in Raleigh, last Sunday afternoon, on the conditions in China. Mr. Patterson gave some very impressive facts and figures. He says, of the four hundred million people in China, three hundred and fifty million never get a full meal and are hungry all the time.

Forty-five million people are now facing starvation in China. There has never been anything like it in the history of the world. They are dying at the rate of twenty thousand a day. It is estimated that no fewer than twenty million will die, despite our best efforts to save them. Seven million lives were lost in the late world war, while nine million Chinese have already starved to death.—Biblical Recorder, January 19.

"MISSIONITIS"

(Home and Foreign Fields)

"Missionitis" is the term applied by a writer to describe a disease that sometimes afflicts church members. Its chief symptom is described as a feeling of numbness and deadness at the mention of missionary matters, accompanied by fidgeting and restlessness when missions becomes the subject of sermon or conversation. Acute attacks, often involving spasms, the writer claims, are produced by appeals for money, but the afflicted individual is very careful not to expose himself to this aggravation of his disease. A careful diagnosis reveals serious heart trouble, complicated by affection of the eye, ear and spinal column. Remedy: Honest self-examination, prayer, Bible reading, missionary literature, giving. Take regularly until relieved.

A CHILD IS CRYING BEYOND OUR DOOR

Read the following wonderful poem and permit it to sink deep into your heart and mind. Let's all forget our fault-finding and criticisms, and try love and kindness for a while, and help others.

A child is crying beyond our door
In the cold and the wind and the wild downpour.
(How can we sit at ease within?)
A child is calling beyond our gate,
Starving and stark and desolate,
(How can we bid the feast begin?)

The doors of the world are heavy and tall,
But the cry of a child can pierce them all,
(The cry of a child in anguish sore.)
And though it sounds from a land apart,
'Tis at our threshold and at our heart
(A child is crying beyond our door.)

How may we sit content and warm
When a child is lost in the night and storm?
(The night of hunger, the storms that roar.)
How may we break our bread in ease,
Hearing the voice of the least of these?
(A child is crying beyond our door.)

CALLED HOME

VINCENT

Miss Martha A. Vincent departed this life at the home of her sister, Mrs. A. K. Roney, Haw River, N. C., January 25, 1921, in her seventy-fourth year. Funeral services were conducted from the home, by the writer, and the interment was in the cemetery at Cross Roads Presbyterian church, of which deceased had been a member since early life.

A good woman has fallen asleep and gone to her reward. Sweet be her sleep till the Master bids her awake.

P. H. FLEMING.

BROWN

Lilly Franks Brown was claimed by death on January 18, 1921. She was a daughter of Bro. T. M. Franks of Catawba Springs church. Lilly, for several years was organist of Catawba Springs church and performed her duty well.

About a year ago she was married to Bruce Brown, a member of Wentworth Christian church, and made their home in Apex, N. C.

She leaves behind, the husband and a little baby, besides father, mother, brothers and sisters and a host of friends.

The burial was at Wentworth Cemetery where a large crowd gathered to pay their last respect to this splendid young girl.

May our heavenly Father's richest blessings attend those so sadly bereaved, and bring us all together in a heaven of rest.

J. LEE JOHNSON.

LEWIS

Mrs. Nannie Lewis, aged eighty years, departed this life January 2, 1921, after a few days illness. She was a faithful member of Pleasant Grove Christian church for a number of years and it may be said of her that she did what she could.

She leaves one brother, Alfred Jones, and one sister, Mrs. Robert Strange, Ingram, Va., and a host of relatives and friends, as was shown by the large attendance at the burial. In the absence of her pastor, Rev. W. C. Hook, the funeral services were conducted by the writer.

MAN

(In reply to the poem on Woman, by Edgar A Guest, appearing in The Christian Sun, issue January 19, 1921.)

Man knows he's a wonder, of that there's no doubt—
He's pleased if he's thin and pleased if he's stout;
He knows all the women for his glances are vieing
(Oh yes, we understand him without half trying)—
He knows something else that we must surely mention,
All that women does, its to catch his attention.

Oh, we know the trend of Man's talk all right—
Criticizing the women when they're out of sight;
No "guessing" what this Lord of Creation will do
(I have seen it quite often and so have you)—
He will stand on the corner, hat slightly awry
While he stares at the women who are passing by.
Yes, he studies woman with exacting eye
And what ever she does he wants to know why;
She has faults and whims—he has never a one
This most perfect creature under the sun—
But this we've learned from the start to the close
Man is looking her way when she powders her nose.
At church, on the street, at the show— everywhere
Man watches to see what the women will wear—
But, as Man must run the affairs of the world
Why spend his time idly among the "gay whirl"—
And why stare if she powders her nose with a vim
Since Man "knows that he knows"
It is done just for HIM?

Find Your Place

THE EDITOR

FIND your place in the world and then endeavor to fill that place. The world's occupations are now overcrowded with misfits. The world is the better off if we do what we are fitted to do, rather than what we want to do. There are men in the pulpit who should be behind the plow, and men behind the plow who should be in the pulpit. God does not call every man who seeks the office of an elder or approves some who refrain from it. The world's honest work is God's work and it is our duty to be about our Father's business in such a way that we may do the most good, render the largest service, and help mankind the most. Drudgery is not to be avoided. The hours of pain and pleasure come, but if it be in God's work, there can be rejoicing in either. The mill's product is its test of efficiency and the character of its product is a sign of its rightful use. It matters not so much of how much we do as how well we do it and how long it will stand the test of time. There is a job for every man and a man for every job. Happy is the man who finds his place in world and Kingdom service and works there with content, dismisses honor and fame, and seeks to leave behind him a better world than he found.

FREE TUITION

There is a bill now pending before the Legislature of North Carolina which provides for free tuition to every native born white boy or girl. The bill is fathered by Senator J. Elmer Long of Alamance County. We have endeavored to get the full text of the bill and see what strings, if any, are tied thereto; what conditions, if any, are called for in the measure. The bill is vital to the interests of every denominational college in the State. The Church institutions are already finding it difficult to meet the many liberal advances of the State institutions.

We have interviewed one college president in person, and others by correspondence concerning the bill. One college president writes: ". . . . it is practically a universal custom in all the States and we cannot hope to escape it, for we will follow in line sooner or later. . . . the denominational colleges must always realize that they work under severe handicap. They cannot afford to accept State money along with State supervision, and the State cannot well afford to give State money where they cannot have State supervision"

This same college president says that it is his opinion that the State should fix a uniform tuition charge which will be allowed to every young man or woman who goes to an institution of college grade and let the State pay the tuition to the institution in which the person takes his or her education. To this same opinion President Harper of Elon College says: "I would favor such a bill (referring to Mr. Long's bill), if it should be made to apply reasonably to every boy and girl in the State who, having finished high school, desired an education. . . . High school graduates should apply to the State Superintendent of Public Instruction for a scholarship in some institution of higher learning in the State, the State Superintendent to issue to such an applicant a warrant on the State treasury in favor of such institution, which the applicant may select for his college course. If the applicant should make good in his freshman year, a scholarship could be granted for the next three years, conditioned always on the applicant making good in the previous year. One college president writes that he does not seriously contemplate the passing of such a bill as proposed by Mr. Long.

We hope to have more definite information concerning the bill in time for a further editorial next week.

WOMEN AND THE MINISTRY

More and more there is growing a feeling among the religious denominations and sects of the country that women should be accorded the same right to serve in the ministry as that which is now enjoyed by men. According to a recent issue of the Literary Digest, this is taking place in spite of the view hitherto taken by so many men and women alike,—that it is "unscriptural" and inconsistent with her natural endowment for women to seek this position in the pulpit which has so long been the heritage of the stronger sex.

In order to determine the growth of this movement, The Woman Citizen (New York) made a survey recently of seventy-five of the one hundred leading denominations and sects of the United States and found that forty-three or considerably more than one-half of those heard from, were either encouraging the advent of women into the ministry, or were making no attempts to debar them from that function of the Church any longer.

It was found, however, that most of the Churches admitting women to the ministry were not of the extremely large denominations so much as of the smaller denominations. Though a number of branches of the Baptist, Presbyterian, and Methodist Churches were in favor of and encouraged the movement, the largest of those sects which have been admitting women to the pulpit were: Unitarians, Congregationalists, Universalists, Friends, Christians, (not Disciples) Christian Scientists, Shakers, Church of Nazarine, and the United Evangelical Church. According to figures of the survey, the Christian denomination had the highest proportion of women ministers. There were 1, 019 men and 68 women composing its ministry.

Although some religious sects have been permitting women ministers for more than two hundred years, the larger propensities of the movement have been confined to the last score of years. The International Women's Preachers Association composed of fifteen denominations, is for the most part, following the trail of Emily Grace Briggs, who twenty-two years ago was the first woman graduate of Union Theological Seminary. The organization has made plans for rapid growth and is being recognized as a forceful and effective means of letting the world know the breadth of its vision and the sincerity of its desires. According to its plan this body of women (and it has many men supporters) has been "organized to develop acquaintance and fellowship among women preachers to secure ecclesiastical rights for women, and to encourage young women to take up the work of the ministry."

WHO WILL DO IT

What minister in the Eastern Virginia Conference will challenge, for self and other ministers of that Conference, the ministers of the North Carolina Conference for a subscription contest for THE CHRISTIAN SUN? If no one in that Conference will put the challenge, what minister in the North Carolina Conference will put the same proposition to the Eastern Virginia brethren? Who?

Will the ministers, or laymen, of the Alabama Conference challenge the ministers, or laymen, of the Georgia and Alabama Conference for a contest to increase the subscription list of THE CHRISTIAN SUN?

THE SUN appreciates the kind words received from many sources on its recent editorial on "Another Crisis for the Church College" The American Daily Standard, Chicago, reprinted the article in full on its editorial page, and did so without request or suggestion.

There is a cross roads—one road going one way and one another—that all of us must some day come to in some of life's problems. The road to take is often the one big question. God, and He alone, is the true guide in such hours.

There is another side of forgetting—there is the need of it as well as horror of it. Forgetting is a great art and one that will help us if we use it in forgetting the unworthy things.

There is no cost to a smile, and so often a smile cheers a life. Add to the day's trial a smile and help your fellow toilers along the way.

A man's worth is judged by the service he renders to his fellowmen.

Shortly after THE SUN went to press last week we heard of the illness of Rev. P. T. Klapp at his home near Elon College. Brother Klapp has been very sick but is better at this time, we are glad to report. The Brotherhood will remember him in prayer for his recovery.

Dr. J. P. Barrett, Holland, Virginia, preached two acceptable sermons to the Burlington congregation last Sunday.

Since this is a layman's day, we wonder if ten laymen in the North Carolina Conference will challenge that number of laymen in the Eastern Virginia Conference for a subscription campaign for THE CHRISTIAN SUN? Think it over, or rather think it through.

The Virginia Valley Conference is about equal in membership with either the Alabama, or Georgia and Alabama Conference, and so what a fine thing it would be for one of the Conferences in the far South to challenge our Valley brethren to get THE CHRISTIAN SUN into more homes!

If you have a kind word for some one, say it to that one. Banish the clouds by sunshine. Life is too short to lose any time in doing all we can for humanity.

We know of a good layman in another Church in North Carolina who deems it worth while for all preachers of his denomination to read the daily papers, and so gives annually a large sum for such a course. We endorse the idea and commend the act of this layman. No one can keep posted and not read the daily press—and of all men who should be posted it is the minister. Read a good daily paper.

In these days of readjustments, it is a false idea that Church work must get on the drag.

Remember your pledge to the Men and Millions Fund and do your best, with the help of God, to pay it. Every department of the Church needs the funds and needs them badly.

Being good is not enough. Be good for something.

AN EPOCH MAKING DAY

TUESDAY, February first was just such in the history of the Christian Church. On that day authorized members of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention met with the Foreign Mission Department of the American Christian Convention and adopted the program of advance work mentioned on page four of this issue. We cannot go into detail here except to say that in point of enlarged outlook and genuine Christian spirit of cooperation this meeting was one of the best in our history. The desire upon the part of every person present was for a common understanding of and a mutual effort toward the will of God, and we confidently believe our desire has been fulfilled.

Personally, I feel more strongly than ever before that the whole Church is back of the whole Foreign Mission program and that the years to come will only serve to deepen this conviction. The spirit of the meeting was beautiful, and when we had reached our decision, guided as we believe we were, by the Spirit of God, we enjoyed to the full a season of genuine Christian fellowship.

Yes, it was an epoch-making day; and as we throw ourselves into the challenging task set before us it will be with continued thanksgiving to God for the privilege of this larger share in the work of His Kingdom.

WILSON P. MINTON.

Rev. R. F. Brown, Columbus, Ga., writes under date of February 7, that "Mrs. Brown has been seriously ill for three weeks but is now improving."

We acknowledge an invitation from the Clio Literary Society, Elon College, N. C., to its annual entertainment Tuesday evening, February twenty-second, nineteen hundred and twenty-one. The main part of the program to be rendered is a play in four acts, "Nathan Hale".

A New Missionary Field

ONE of the most momentous meetings in the history of the mission work of the Christian Church was, doubtless, that of the Foreign Mission Board of The American Christian Convention and the representatives of the Mission Board of The Southern Christian Convention, held at the Publishing House, Dayton, Ohio, on February 1, 1921. It was the first time ever that the two boards have been linked together in this way, and the Holy Spirit sealed the meeting with such rare manifestation of good favor as will surely lead to a new and larger unity and oneness in the thought and work of these two boards. With much enthusiasm, plans were perfected for promoting by far the largest and most attractive foreign mission program ever attempted by the Christian Church; and already the forward Movement in both Conventions is making available funds for the launching of this larger undertaking. The Southern Board is to send $21,000 in cash to the general mission treasury by the first of next October, $12,000 of which is to build a night school and kindergarten at Naka Shibuya, Tokyo; and $9,000 to complete the new Mission Home in that city. Further, the Southern Board pledges that, beginning with October 1, it will undertake to raise a minimum of $25,000 a year for the next five years, its funds to be forwarded quarterly to the mission treasury, for foreign missionary work. A new field is to be opened in China within the next two or three years. Fifty percent of the annual contributions of the Southern Board are to be devoted to this new work, and fifty percent to the Japan and Porto Rican fields. The Mission Board of the A. C. C., besides its other work, undertakes to contribute twenty percent as much for China as the amount given by the Southern Board. The particular field in China is to be chosen by a joint committee of the two boards; including the chairmen and mission secretaries of both boards. But the whole China proposition comes only in connection with the building up and strengthening of the work which we already have in Japan. Our work in Japan and Porto Rico will not be permitted to suffer any curtailment because of the opening of new work in China. The program is one of enlargement. The building of a chapel at Santa Isabel and the development of the industrial work are included in the Porto Rican budget for this year. Japan is to have a series of dormitories built by our church in connection with colleges and universities, with a missionary and native worker in charge of each, to win and mold future leaders of that great country. The minutes of this meeting, together with the full program, will be ready for publication in an early issue. It is sufficient now to say that the construction of the dormitories will begin as soon as the other building projects are completed, and of course this and all the enlargements contemplated must depend upon the amount of money furnished. That the entire Church will respond with an enthusiasm and generosity which will confirm the wisdom of these plans and the faith of these boards, seems inevitable. A new tide of love and service is surely beginning to move in the Christian Church with irresistible force to carry us to these larger things for the Kingdom.

FOUR-SQUARE

II—The Church

The church is preeminently a place of prayer. It would perhaps be nearer the truth to say that the life of the church is dependent upon prayer. A praying church is a victorious church. Any other sort of church is a weakling. How the spirit is revived in the house of prayer! Worship is necessary to man and prayer is the soul of worship. Too often we have like the Samaritan woman emphasized the place of worship. It is the spirit of worship that counts with God. Too often also we have like the disciples not known how to pray. The church is obligated to teach us to pray and where to worship. This is the first stone in the spiritual edifice we call the church. We need a revival of prayer and worship in our life. We can get it only through the church.

The church in the next place is the disseminator of truth. Now the church has been conscious of this prerogative through the centuries, but has not always been keen to discern the truth. Bigotry has often ruled in the hearts of priests and people alike and dogma has often sat enthroned there unwilling to be tried by the faculties given us by the Creator as the guides of life. "The truth shall make you free," but the church has forgotten this at times. When scientists discovered the world is round and revolves around the sun, the church anathematized them. When the spirit of brotherhood and social solidarity possessed the hearts of many and compelled them to declare the individual gospel incomplete without its social complement, the church in many quarters classed the prophets of the larger truth as heretics. When reverent scholars approached the question of the Bible's making and coming to us from the historical standpoint, they were styled skeptics. The religion of Jesus Christ has nothing to fear from scientist, prophets, historian, or scholar, or any other source. It is truth that is the life of the church and truth will make the church free. The triumphant church will include all truth.

The church does not exist for itself. It should in the third place give, give liberally and gladly. "It is more blessed to give than receive," said Jesus. His Church will demonstrate the truthfulness, the blessedness, of that principle. A church that does not give will die. God cannot prosper a church that sponges on the community; He cannot do it and keep His word. The church is not a sponge to absorb, but a standpipe to distribute. It must give.

And finally it will serve. "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Let this be written over the entrance way to every temple of the Most High. Let it be practiced too. The church as a servant must not hesitate to enter any open door, nor to force open a door that does not stand open. She will minister to all of life without apology. Whenever her sons and daughters go, she must go. Whatever they are interested in, she must be interested in, with that purifying, uplifting, sanctifying influence which is her constant and eternal prerogative. She will in the days ahead clear herself of the charge of vagrancy nor will she permit loafing on the part of her adherents. She and they alike will delight to serve the Kingdom of God.

W. A. HARPER.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

"EVEN PROPHETS MAY BE DRAGGED DOWN TO THE LEVEL OF THEIR AGE."

"The prophets of the Lord have always been opposed to the age in which they lived. Whenever the ministry has fallen into accord with the age, it is not the age that has gone up, it is the ministry that has gone down. A reproachful, corrective, stimulating voice should always be characteristic of a spiritual ministry. No evil shall be able to live in its presence and no custom, how fashionable or popular soever, should be able to lift up its head without condemnation in the presence of a man, who is filled with the burden or doctrine of the Lord. We should have persecution revived were we to revive the highest type of godliness. Sin has not altered, but righteousness may have modified its terms; the earth remains as it was from the beginning, but they who represent the kingdom may have committed themselves to an unworthy and degrading compromise. Ever more shall the wicked hate the godly, unless the godly take down their banners and are contented to live in dumbness and in traitorous submission of the truth. Again and again is the prophet encouraged in his work. God would seem to be almost afraid that the prophet would be swallowed up in fear. 'The fear of man bringeth a snare'."—Rev. Joseph Parker, D. D.

We hear much said of "blue laws", as if they were the miasma of human society. Whenever a measure is proposed which some one dislikes, it is quite sufficient to characterize the measure as a "blue law". That is generally quite sufficient to stem the tide in its favor. The world, however, does not like the best things—its people like to have high ideals boiled down until almost any mixture will pass for the best. Lax laws do not produce well in human society—blue laws do in the main. The greatest men of this country, since the day its history began, were men who were reared under "blue" laws. The greatest men this country has produced were New Englanders. Prior to, and immediately following, the Civil War, New England gave this country her ablest men and her most gifted women—practically these men ruled the nation, but in a large measure they did the thinking for the people not in a large degree they were reared more or less under the "blue" laws. A thousand times better for the welfare of human society are the "blue" laws than are the lax laws of recent years. The extremes of the "blue" laws may have been bad in part, but not nearly so bad as are the extremes of the lax laws of our days. Let us have a rift back to what is reasonable in the "blue" laws of the long ago.

A thing that has just life, that and nothing more, well, its accomplishments must be very small and not of much value. Take a tree that has just life and nothing more, it may be worth a few dollars, but at best it cannot go far beyond that. On the other hand, take a man or woman, who in addition to having just life, has a robust, intellectual life, a strong spiritual life, a pure devotional life and a strong moral life, and then try to estimate the difference between the value of just life as it may be exhibited, in a tree or in a man, and a life which has in its make up, not only life, but life adorned with intellect, spiritually, devotional and a strong and pure moral and social life, and you will get some idea of the difference between the value of "just life" and a life which is richly adorned by all of these phases of the higher life as God has given it to us. I wish my religion to have more in it than just life.

J. PRESSLEY BARRETT.

A GIRL'S INFLUENCE

Every person has an influence over some one, either for good or for bad. Girls especially should strive to build and maintain a character so that their influence may count for something good. A girl has, or should have, a wonderful influence in the home, the church, and the community. In the home by being honest and industrious, always speaking the truth to father, mother, brothers and sisters, and act in such a way that all may have the utmost confidence, and thereby have an influence that would mean much in the home circle.

In the church she would live a straight-forward Christian life, that she may develop a Christian character that would count for good, and mean much to her in this life, fit and qualify her for the life to come, and thereby wield a wonderful influence over the unsaved, that they may see in her the reality of the religion of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

And in the community the girl who would have an influence for good should be ever on the alert to render true kindness in some way to all with whom she may come in contact, for it always pays to be gentle and kind to every one, doing good in every way possible, and in some way render true service to friends, for we are commanded to love every one, and do unto others as we would have them do unto us.

The girl who does this will build a character and reputation that will cause her to have a wonderful influence for good in the home, church, and community.

ESSIE L. BLANCHARD.

Rev. D. P. Barrett and family will leave Elon College this week for New York and will sail from that place, February 19, for Porto Rico. The brotherhood will remember them in prayer for a safe voyage.

SOCIAL RELIGION

For quite a while, there seldom comes a religious journal but there is not a great deal in it concerning Social Religion, or Christianity. It is interesting to read. But in my thinking along this line I should rather recommend, for the Church of the future, one that is thoroughly imbued with the "Old Time Religion". The kind which affects every sense of man's nature. That which looks not to the cleansing of the outward, but the inner part. The wise man said: "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

It could be possible, however, that my views are not correct; that, instead of placing the emphasis on the spiritual side it would be best to change and Christianize worldly pleasure. But that seems to me to be a hard task as long as we accept the writing of Paul who said: "Seeing that we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses", it would be difficult, I fear, to keep away from Pharaseeic religion.

The Church, so far as it is concerned, might engage in things christianized, but it would take a long time to convince the lovers of pleasure that those things, of right, belong to the Church. I fear that with many it would be too late. So I feel that the emphasis should be for a deeper spiritual life and things questionable will lose their charm.

SUFFOLK LETTER

WHAT men call "hard times" is psychological as well as actual. A single consideration will discover this. There are as many people and as much money in this country as when business was booming. But men and money are idle. Neither has value except in activity. Money is the circulating medium. It is no more than common paper unless it is moving. But prices are like rivers. They get so high and then must fall. Hard times are the mistakes men make when prices are high and discovery of such mistakes when prices are low. People do not make business blunders when business is dull. That is the time they correct mistakes. Men eat too much when they are well and take medicine to correct the mistake when they get sick. The nation is financially sick now and must take its medicine. Strength will return after the medicine takes effect. The world may starve with warehouses full.

Religious life and business life go up and down together. There seems to be no escape from floods and draughts in this world. The great ocean teach a better lesson than the rivers. The ocean keeps much the same through all the centuries. God has said to the sea, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed." But the ocean is always full. The surface may be disturbed by winds, but in her depths there is calm. So one may say of business. The surface is agitated by an atmosphere of recklessness and extravagance; but underneath the talk and shifting currents there is a point of calm and safety that must pull all back to peace. It is even so in religion. Currents of evil flood the times and the church, doubt and discouragement seize the very elect; but underneath indifference and inactivity the fire of faith smolders and waits for a breath from God to blow upon it and make it blaze again. The ocean is never still. The church is never still. On the surface and edges the waves and wavelets keep stagnation out. Prayer is that silent force that keeps the church in motion as gravity and revolution keep the ocean in ceaseless activity.

The world is in revolution. We are just beginning to know a little of the geography of the continents, and of the races of men. The world-war has discovered to us the sin of war, the greed of mankind, and that we are really "members one of another". We are just having our eyes opened to the vast program of Jesus. It includes the world. Every Christian should be interested in His program. Nothing less than a missionary program to save the world touches the mission of Jesus. He gave himself. We must give ourselves. That means all that we represent, not that we are to give all our possessions away, but act as God's stewards in the use of what we have. We are to "give as the Lord has prospered us." It is a false standard to "give till it hurts", for giving little hurts some people; but to give "as the Lord has prospered us" is the standard, whether it hurts "or brings joy". There is such a thing as "hard times" in religion as well as in business. That is the time to work harder and deny self. It is no time, now, to grow lukewarm in paying Men and Millions pledges. If one cannot pay promptly keep the obligation on the heart and finally pay all. When God does not send the rain this year for crops, He sends it next year, "While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, and day and night will not cease."

THE BULLETIN

Rev. Sion M. Lynam of Elon College will conduct both the morning and evening services at the Burlington Christian church on February 20. The subject of his sermon for the morning will be "Completing the World", and for the evening service "How to Make Christ Real."

We are publishing this week the second of a series of articles on "Four Square" by President W. A. Harper and feel that the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will be interested in reading these. There are several more to appear and will be printed one or more each week until the series is completed.

ELON SUMMER SCHOOL

The Board of Trustees of Elon College in session, May 1919, authorized a Summer School of Religious Education of Christian Methods to be instituted at the college, the same to have its beginning in June of the following year. This date was interrupted on account of the activities of the Men and Millions Forward Movement. However, the same plans are to be put into operation this year and the date set is May 26 to June 10. Bulletins are being mailed out this week in the interest of the School and these give in detail the plan, the program and procedure. An able faculty has been provided and this movement upon the part of our people should prove helpful in many ways. The coming together, the fellowship, instruction, and plans for larger and more progressive work should be forward steps in our work in the Southern Christian Convention. We shall have more to say on this subject later.

INTRODUCING THE WRITER

Our second article on "If I Were a Preacher", appears on page eight of this week's issue and the writer is Layman John King, Suffolk, Va. Brother King is one of our leading laymen of the Eastern Virginia Conference. He is manager of the John King Peanut Co., and is also a farmer, one who believes in growing "hogs and hominy", to use his own language. He is a busy man, yet never too busy to attend his Conference and give his whole hearted and unstinted service at all times for the good of his denomination, regardless of where the mission is to be performed. He is John King today, tomorrow, and always. His fellow townsmen call him "John" as a mark of affection and because he likes it better than "Mr. King". He supports, in a whole souled way, every enterprise of the Christian Church, preaches by "blockade" wherever opportunity presents itself, and his favorite text is found in Malachi 3:10. Read his article—it will help you.

OUR KINDRED IN THE MOUNTAINS

In this issue of THE SUN we are beginning what seems to us the most illuminating exposition we have any where seen of evil, social, moral and religious conditions in the mountains of Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. We count ourselves most fortunate indeed in being able to give our readers these wonderful letters, and it is only by the great courtesy and kindness of the editor of The Atlantic Monthly that we can do this. If our readers will imagine our own Miss Hedgepeth writing these articles, for she would write them if she had time and opportunity, they will get first hand and very vivid knowledge of a people, our kinsfolks, who, by no fault of their own, but because of climatic and geographical conditions, are without educational and Christian advantages, and so represent a clear case of "arrested development". We trust our readers will carefully read every line of it for it will give us a clear insight into conditions which we have in our mountain work are facing and are trying to relieve.

IF I WERE A PREACHER

BY LAYMAN JOHN KING, SUFFOLK, VA.

IF I were a preacher I would first go to my closet and find out from the allwise Being if He wanted me to preach.

It would not be necessary to hear the still small voice to be assured of my call to the ministry, but I would have to be conscious of the fact that the Lord wanted me to preach, and that I had enough religion to sustain me in my efforts.

I would not want to be burdened with the assurance that some other had been called and I had answered.

I would then begin preparation for this work by laying a concrete foundation, and then I would continue the erection of my building by putting in every brace and prop so that when the winds began to blow against this old frame it would stand against the blows of the world.

I would put this old building up with the best material, if I had to cook, wash or wait on the tables, sweep the campus at the colleges, or do anything that was honest, it mattered not how humiliating, until I had taken my "Sheep Skin" to tack up in my study before going out to brace the storms of the world.

I would not wait for a call from some big church. I would go where the Lord sent me and try to make the small church a big one.

I would give as much time to the preparation of my sermons as I could so that when I went before my people I could talk to them from the shoulder and not have to holler loud to fill in. I would try to give them nuggets of gold rather than wagons loads of hot air.

I would not handle politics from the pulpit, or get into heated discussions on the street, but I would vote my convictions as I believe it is a preacher's privilege to vote as much so as the layman.

When my town undertook to clean up from vice and other sins I would not go down before the investigating committee and tell what I had heard. Hearsay is not evidence. If I could not tell what I saw and knew I would stay at home rather than be criticised and hurt my influence.

If I had accepted help from the Mission Board, or my Church to help me complete my education I would not leave that Church and join some other denomination until I had paid back every dollar, it mattered not what my convictions were.

If I had served a church for forty years and some of the young blood in the church were to begin to clamor for a young preacher I would not become discouraged and resign, so long as my eye-sight was good and my forces unabated, if my usefulness still obtained.

If I served a pastorate I would try to locate either in the country or in town where I could be of the best service to all these churches. I would try to be to my appointments on time to help in the Sunday school.

I would try not to be jealous of the preacher who could draw larger congregations, or preach bigger sermons than I could.

I would not want to hold revival meetings and do all the preaching, even though I knew I could not get up a "grunt" much less make people happy enough to shout, but I would want to get the best revivalist I could to do all the preaching, and praying too, if this would save souls.

I might have a hard time to get the church back to old time meat and bread, after they had been fed on pastry, but would try to finish up my menu with dessert to leave them with a good taste in their mouths.

There are many more things that I would try to do if I had the space to mention, but of all things I would try to get my Church paper into every home represented in my church, and I would certainly subscribe to it myself, and read it, and try to write interesting articles for the paper that would help the Church and make the paper more attractive.

OUR ORPHANAGE

PASSING THE GOALS

This week's report puts us beyond the second mile post for this year. We must reach and pass twenty of them for the year 1921. Eighteen more to reach. Let everybody put his shoulder to the wheel and give us a push. At the end of the year when the books are closed be able to rejoice with us in the success of the work. In the raising of twenty thousand dollars to help feed and clothe the little fatherless ones. We hope each Sunday school will make a monthly offering this year for each month. In your home of plenty, surrounded by all the blessings of life, don't fail to remember there are many little children who are denied the good things of life and are handicapped for the lack of opportunities that our people could so easily supply.

Do not think that because you made an offering last year that it will feed and clothe the children this year. But rather be glad that you have the opportunity and the privilege to make an offering this year to help in this great work.

I very often read in other orphanage papers where people have died and left in their last will and testament a portion of their worldly possessions to some orphanage and to be a blessing to brighten the lives of many little children as the years go by. It is a settled fact that when we take our departure that we will carry none of it with us and I hardly think we could build a more lasting monument than to leave a part of the blessings that God has given us for the benefit of the orphan children at the Christian Orphanage. I often wonder how many of our people who have written that sacred document have left a bequest for the benefit of the Christian Orphanage.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

EASTERN VIRGINIA WOMAN'S MISSIONARY NOTES

The Eastern Virginia Woman's Board met in Suffolk, January 19, and thoroughly canvassed the work outlined for our societies for the coming year. The Secretary will give an account of the proceedings. As President, I want to call attention to the District Rallies as arranged for. The first one is to be held in Southampton County, Thursday, April 21, followed by one in Nansemond County on April 22. On Sunday 24, there will be one in the Gates County District. On Tuesday 26, there is one arranged for the Wakefield District. On Wednesday 27, there will be one held in the Waverly District. On Thursday 28, there will be one in the Isle of Wight County District, and on Friday 29, one in Norfolk District. These districts include the churches as listed in the Men and Millions, and the superintendent's name for each can be found in the Woman's Conference Proceedings as found in The Annual.

The object of these meetings is to get the women from the Conference to assemble and discuss plans and problems, and to create interest and enthusiasm in our work among our women. Dr. J. O. Atkinson and Miss Bessie Holt will be with us in each of these meetings and bring us messages of general interest. The superintendents will prepare a program and see that it is carried out, secure a place for holding the meeting, and get in touch with each church in her district and have general oversight over the meeting. Much of its success depends on her, but we believe each one of them will do her best to make a success of these meetings. Let each woman contribute something to help them in their efforts, by praying for them, by speaking a favorable word, and by attending.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

INFORMATION ABOUT MISSIONS

The greatest theme of the Bible, and the biggest problem of the Church, is Missions. It is not to be supposed, therefore, that we can learn the missionary problem in a day, from reading one book, or hearing one sermon on missions. Sometimes a book, an article, a sermon gets us started. But getting the missionary spirit, acquiring the missionary information and inspiration is a matter of study, prayer, education. I see this question, and it is to the point:

"How can I keep informed about missions?" A writer in the Missionary Monthly makes answer in five points: (1) By spending some money on my missionary education; how much has it cost thus far? (2) By reading missionary books and magazines; how many have I read this year? (3) By joining a mission study class; is there one in my church? (4) By attending missionary conventions; how many have I attended? (5) By contact with missionaries; how many do I know?

The Methodist Episcopal Church reports sending out 275 new missionaries for the U. S. to foreign lands during the year ending November 1, 1920. The largest previous number sent out by this Church was 96 in 1917.

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA

Under date of January 21, Pastor W. T. Walters writes: "We had our largest combined attendance last Sunday. One new member was received. I am still much encouraged with the outlook here." A recent visit to Bro. Walters revealed to us the fact that a most valuable site has been purchased for a church building. There is ample room also for a parsonage and a nice lawn. The combined lots—there are three in one—cost us $16,800.00 and are in a growing residential section of the city. About $12,000.00 of the purchase price of the lots has been paid. They are beautiful corner lots and are only one block from two street car lines.

We shall have to erect a costly and commodious building on those lots both for the sake of the work, and to be in keeping with the section of the city in which they are located. We have a good, substantial growing constituency and membership in Richmond, and nothing less than that which is ample and substantial and inviting will satisfy or prove worth while. Richmond invites our attention and is worthy of our prayers and our support.

THREE REASONS WHY

There are three good and indisputable reasons why all our Sunday schools should have Missionary Sunday and give one offering a month for missions.

1. It gives the school something else to think about, and others to do for, than themselves. We might as well study the almanac as the Bible unless our study of the Bible leads us to do for others. If the school thinks only about itself, and how it may live, and get money to buy its own literature, it is entirely self-centered. All Sunday schools should take a missionary offering monthly to keep from being selfish.

2. If we give to missions in the Sunday school our interest and love for missions will soon be awakened for missions. "Where your treasure is there will your heart be also." If we are ever to win the hearts and the minds of our young people to missions we have got to give them the chance to give of their earnings, and savings to missions. One of the missionaries in India today is there because as a child in Sunday school he gave a dollar to India missions. If our children give their means now they may later give their lives.

3. We want our schools to be loyal. The Southern Convention and all our Sunday school conventions have voted that this is the thing to do—all our schools give one offering a month to missions. They have all to gain and nothing to lose by this wise decision.

HERE AND THERE—BUT MOSTLY EVERYWHERE

Germany's war indemnity, as fixed at a recent meeting of the Supreme War Council, will be $56,000,000,000. Many nations think this indemnity too light, although Germany has declared that she will not accept it. France alone expended $60,000,000,000 in the war.

It is interesting to note that of our twenty-eight presidents, President Harding is the first of the Baptist denomination.

President Harding's salary will be the same as President Wilson's, but by a decision of the Supreme Court one-fourth of his salary will be taken up by the income tax.

A bill providing for five additional hospitals for the shell shocked and tubercular war veterans, at a cost of $13,000,000 was passed by the House on February 7.

The Boy Scouts of America celebrated their eleventh birthday on February 9, by paying their mothers some tribute.

The imports of the United States amounted to $8,828,000,000, during 1920. Exports amounted to $5,279,000,000.

On February 1, President Wilson made his first public appearance since his tour in behalf of the League of Nations last fall, which was interrupted by his illness in September.

The American Red Cross in China has built an eight-mile road through the famine territory in China, connecting two of the leading cities. Lack of proper transportation and communication has been one of the causes of the present famine, and this road will help to relieve the present famine sufferers as well as to help prevent further famine.

Ex-Speaker Cannon has served longer than any other man ever has in our House or Senate. His career in Washington began in 1872 when he came to Congress for the first time. To Representative Cannon we owe much of our country's development and he has been spoken of as a "landmark to our country's improvement". He has served under ten presidents.

Vice-President elect, Calvin Coolidge, is now in Asheville, N. C., where he has gone for a few weeks' rest preparatory to taking up the duties of his office.

As a result of the tornado which struck the Gardner settlement about one mile from Oconee, Ga., at noon on February 10, two white people and thirty negroes are dead. Approximately thirty people were seriously injured, about five of whom are not expected to live. Several buildings were blown down and some forty homes destroyed.

THE SCHOOLMA'AM OF SANDY RIDGE

"A Glimpse of Economic, Moral and Spiritual Conditions in Our Mountains."

(Reprinted from The Atlantic Monthly by permission)

BY IRENE HUDSON

Sandy Ridge Mission, June 1, 1918.

Dear Boy,—

Here I am on this wonderful mountain-top, the new schoolma'am of Sandy Ridge. From where I am sitting on our little two-by-four porch, I look out on peak after peak, covered with a dense growth of laurel and ivy. Through the haze I can see the Blue Ridge, fifty miles away, in Tennessee and North Carolina. One actually has to see these mountains to realize why the people have become so isolated. The mountains are like so many hummocks, with hollows in between, each little hollow being a separate unit walled in on all sides. It's fine to be up at the top of the world, with this indescribable refreshing air and expanse of view. At night the stars seem so close, I feel as if I could reach up and touch them.

The nearest mining-camp, Dante, is five miles down a steep, rough trail through the underbrush and creek-bed. We get our supplies from Montgomery Ward. These have to be hauled up the mountain from the freight station seven miles away. There are few wagons because the roads are so impassable. Winter and summer they use sleds. My trunk and box of books came rattling up the mountain yesterday tied to a sled pulled by the thinnest mule I have ever laid eyes on.

The Mission consists of a two-room log cabin for us to live in and a thirty-by-fifty-foot log schoolhouse. First of all, I must tell you how it all started. Several years ago some of our neighbors went down to Dante to peddle berries. Deaconess Williams was so kind to them that they became friends, and she consented to come up and have Sunday school for them. There was only one little one-room cabin available. When it was pleasant they had Sunday school out under the big walnut tree. When it rained, somehow they scrouged into the cabin. With its one door and porthole of a window, the cabin had once been a favorite place for newly married couples to start housekeeping. Then it was used as a stable, until it became Sandy Ridge Mission. Deaconess had the old puncheon floor taken out and made into a porch, and a new door and window cut.

For two summers in this cabin the two workers lived and held Sunday school, and cooking and sewing classes, and even entertained the Bishop and Archdeacon. Then the neighbors suggested that they would get out logs for a schoolhouse and help raise it, if Deaconess would provide a teacher. So the schoolhouse was built. I shall have the second term of school ever taught here. Using one wall of the cabin, and one wall of the schoolhouse, a connecting room was put up, with five sides and no corner a right angle. We call this Middlesex, and use it for a kitchen and living-room. It has a lovely old sandstone fireplace and broad, low windows, through which we can see for miles on either side of the Ridge. A huge denim-covered screen marks where the living-room ends and the kitchen begins. We have been putting up some Venetian blue prints on the gray, weather-beaten walls. With the shelves full of our own precious books, we are developing a decidedly cozy atmosphere. The old cabin, contrary to mountain custom, we use exclusively for our boudoir. Rain or shine, we eat out on our little puncheon-floored porch, where this prairie-raised mortal feeds on view as well as food.

July 28, 1918

I have just come from Troy Howard's, five miles around the Ridge. His daughter Ellie is dying, by inches, of tuberculosis. Her mother died of it six years ago, leaving Ellie, then ten years old, to bring up a family of six younger children. At that time, Deaconess suggested that she find homes for some of the children. Troy asked the. They said, 'We'll hoe corn and work all the time if we kin only stay with Poppy' (the mountain children's name for father). So Ellie struggled along. For the last six months she has been in bed, while a younger sister takes up the burden. Whenever Ellie has a bad spell, they send word to the neighbors. All come who can, for fear Troy might be alone when she dies. They have a great fear of death. The older people come out of courtesy and sympathy. The young people come to spark and have a good time. Her friends have just as much as buried Ellie already. In speaking of someone being very sick, the expression is, 'We're lookin' fer 'em to die.' A woman resembling the description of Betsy Trotwood was there this afternoon.

'Law, it's a sight, how you've fallen away!' she said to Ellie, cautiously, standing way off by the door.

Josiah Howard, Ellie's unele, and I came back on horse-back about eleven-thirty, leaving Mrs. Josiah and Miss W——— to stay the rest of the night. The moon east curious shadows in the woods. A heavy, languid humidity enveloped us as we rode along. Josiah can read very little and write less, but he has that innate fineness that shows itself in his manners and conversation. We are very fortunate to have him for our nearest neighbor.

The people think it strange that we are not afraid to stay alone at night. They have the primitive fear of darkness. Only the young bucks think of being out after dark. They often spend the whole night, just scouting around, or building a fire and going to sleep beside it. Some nights they collect all the boys and dogs on the Ridge, and have fox-hunts. Such yipping and yelling you never heard, up one ridge and down another. They think it great sport these glorious moonlight nights.

Another question that puzzles the mountaineer mind is, why we are not married?

July 29, 1918

Miss W——— got in at 6:30 a. m. We had a combination breakfast and dinner at noon. Then I set out for the funeral preaching. The custom is to have a funeral preaching every two or three years for all the people who have died during that time. Each one is buried at the time of his death, but the preaching is reserved for a later day, when it is convenient for more people and more preachers to get there. Sometimes a man will be married again, and his second wife will be one of the chief mourners at his first wife's funeral preaching. This custom is dying out to some extent. The burying and preaching together are becoming more common. Today there were five people to be preached for and five preachers. There was much shouting. Most of it was knocks at all the other denominations and praise for the old Baptists. One has to be baptized to be saved, and one may be saved just as often as there is enough water in the creek and a preacher handy to perform the ceremony.

This is the most democratic community, I believe, that exists. You see, there is only one class. People exchange work, but no man works for another as a servant. Being as remote and isolated from the rest of the world as if they were on a desert island, they have no conception of any other condition of society. I am having sent to you Horace Kephart's Our Southern Highlanders. It is the best book published on the mountains. So far as I have been able to observe, he is very accurate.

Until one realizes how much hard work it requires to get their daily bread, and physical obstacles life presents for them, one cannot appreciate what is back of what the outsider calls shiftiness. They are not the heavy, sturdy peasant type, which we are accustomed to see among our immigrants, who thrive on the hardest kind of labor. They are slight, delicately built, aristocratic Anglo-Saxons. Each year, from inbreeding and malnutrition, they become physically weaker; and because they know nothing about fertilizing, the land is less fruitful. Most of all, they need someone to teach them how to farm. I wish we could import a few Swiss to show them how to terrace the land. Every now and then I have to remind myself that they are living according to eighteenth-century standards, the heritage of two centuries having passed them by. All the sterling qualities of the Anglo-Saxon race are awaiting development.

Here are some of my aristocrats. Yesterday, as I was going to preaching, I met some strange women on the road, and stopped to talk.

'Would it hinder ye to stop in to Litty Coburn's and git the chew of terbaccer I left with Litty's gal, and fotch hit to my gal Dillie?' asked one of them. 'She's at the Preaching and, poor gal, she hain't got nary a bit.'

I stoppel at the next house. Litty's gal, Bessie, gave me a wad wrapped in newspaper, which I carried to Meeting and delivered as instructed. Litty's house has no windows, no chairs, no table, no stove. The furnishings consist of two beds, one safe (cupboard), one huge walnut chest. She and her three children cook their meals over a ramshackle fireplace, and, begrimed with smoke and ashes, sit on the floor and eat them.

If you had the toothache up here, the Tooth-Jumper would take the tooth out, with one lick of his hammer on a nail, deftly adjusted at the base of the tooth. He isn't any good unless he can do it with one lick. At least that is the old-time way of doing it so they tell me.

Sandy Ridge Mission, August 2, 1918

Dear Boy,

Poor Ellie is suffering a great deal. I'm afraid she can't live much longer. I went over there last night about 9:30. It was a wild night, with the wind blowing a gale, pouring rain, and dark as pitch. Every house along the road was closed up tight. Only the flickering firelight through the little portholes of windows showed any signs of life. It was right spooky, stumbling over the stones, through the thick woods. The haunts were all out, especially around the Burying-ground.

When I arrived at the Troy Howards', all were amazed that I had come alone, but poor Mr. Troy was delighted to see me. He has not slept more than a couple of hours for weeks. I persuaded him to lie down and rest, promising to call him if Ellie were worse.

The house has two rooms. In the middle of the largest of these is Ellie's bed, between two open doors. Back of it, in the two corners, are two other beds, the sleeping quarters for the seven other members of the family. After placing the three least ums in one bed and covering them tenderly with dirty remnants of quilts, and removing his coat, Troy Howard himself tumbled into the other bed, and in a few minutes was sleeping audibly.

Behind the head of Ellie's four-poster bed sat Mrs. John Howard, an aunt, and myself, on two dilapidated, home-made chairs, the only chairs in the house; between us a small rickety table, on which was a can of insect-powder, a Bible without any cover, a rusty tin cup for Ellie to drink from, a bottle of patent cough-syrup, and a sort of kerosene torch, whose light, flickering in the wind, cast strange shadows on the wall. In the adjoining room, around the fireplace,—in which burned a sickly fire,—on the floor and on a long, narrow bench, sprawled the three older children and two neighbor young people, who had come for the novelty of the occasion. All expectorated freely on the floor and in the fire—a habit quite prevalent, whether chewing or not. A long table, covered with dirty dishes and crumbs from supper; a very small battered cookstove; a few shelves with a handful of dishes; and a barrel minus several staves, containing the family provisions of meal and flour, were the furnishings of the room. Under the floor occasionally squealed a pig or rabbit. To replenish the fire, I picked a stick off the floor. To my great dismay, I found that I had thrown into the fire one of the props that kept the floor from falling in. Unconcernedly, one of the boys ran out and brought in another stick to put in its place.

Ellie moaned. Sometimes she struggled for breath, as she tossed restlessly on her bed, calling for Poppy again and again. The only thing that quieted her was my cool fingers on her burning forehead. Mrs. John was much disturbed, but never went near Ellie or offered to help me raise her up to drink. The mountain people have an instinctive fear of sickness, especially tuberculosis.

Ellie's hay-mattress had grown humpy. The bedding was indescribably dirty. She had on a black woolen shirt and calico waist over her under clothes which she had worn in bed for two months at least. I longed to freshen up her bed and make her clean and comfortable. She refused to change the clothes she had on, or to let anyone touch her bed, partly from pride and partly from not wanting to make work for anyone. Poor little Ellie! At sixteen she has already borne more than a woman's load.

The children continued their hilarious time around the fire, quieting down only when I went in and suggested that they refrain from waking up their father. As it drew near midnight, it became more difficult for them to fight off sleep. Fat, sloppy Osie Kirby, hung half asleep, over one end of the bench almost pinning skinny Columbus Rose to the wall. (I wish you could see him ride a kicking, plunging mule over fences, without a sign of a saddle. Loose-jointed and impossible to kill, he can stick like a leech.) Savanny Howard was spread full length on the other end, while underneath the bench the two small Howard boys waked up betimes to pinch the girls' legs and replenish the fire. Thus they continued until 1:30 a. m., when Savanny came in to reach down the lantern hanging over our heads, with which to light home the Amazon Osie. I have said that the mountain girls are slight of stature and that they never go out at night. Osie is the necessary exception.

Their company gone, the young Howards prepared to retire also. Savanny took off her shoes and shredded pair of white stockings, and crawled in with the little girls. The boys, having no shoes to remove, crawled in with their father just as they were. With a jerk at the 'kivers' all were immediately asleep.

Mrs. John and I continued our watch. The fleas nearly devoured us alive. You may know they were ferocious when even Mrs. John was disturbed by them. My skirt and stockings were wet from the walk through the rain. So far I had been too much occupied to notice it. I shivered when I sat still. At times Mrs. John reared her head on the table, and went off completely. I leaned my elbows on my knees, and my head in my hands, with all the heaviness of sleep, but kept awake. Meanwhile Ellie moaned in her sleep, Troy Howard snored, the rabbits ran in and out, chasing each other round the floor, hunting for something to eat, and all of the night noises went on out-of-doors. Sometimes Mrs. John sat looking intently at the Bible, although she cannot read. About every twenty minutes, she asked me the time.

'Hit's a long night when a body sets up,' she reiterated several times. Mrs. John has a strange habit of looking fixedly at you, and mumbling along with you everything you say. If she can't quite keep up with your speed, she at least repeats the last few words of your sentences after you. It is as if she felt that you needed encouragement and her continuous approval. We grew chummier when we repaired to the bench by the fire. Then she told me all the sickness she'd seen in her family, and I told her all about my family and where they lived. Before retiring, Troy Howard offered us the only food ready for eating in the house—some green apples off their run-out trees. Mrs. John ate several, and the children ate a great many, but no food had appealed for me under the circumstances.

After an endlessly long night the dawn gradually appeared, lighting up the rags and dirt even more painfully than the torch and the firelight. Mrs. John set out for home, having been before. I stayed on, with nothing to do but replenish the fire and wait for Mr. Troy to wake up. At 6:30 he bestirred himself, looking like a different man after the first eight-hours' sleep in weeks.

'Jes' stay,' he urged, as I began putting on my cape; 'I'll rouse Savanny up to git ye some breakfast.'

He didn't say, 'Thank you'. That expression is not used. However, he showed much gratitude and solicitude in asking as I said good-bye, 'Kin ye git some sleep when ye gits home?' Troy Howard lives in a hovel, but he knows more about loving his children and the essential qualities of a home than the most successful man in the land.

The mist was everywhere as I walked the five long miles home. I was too weary and flea-bitten to care much about anything but physical refreshment. Miss W——greeted me with a cup of hot malted milk and some oatmeal crackers. Stopping only long enough to scrutinize each article of clothing as I took it off, and to demolish two fleas, I dropped into bed and slept for four hours, waking to devour a huge dinner.

THE INTERCHURCH, ETC.

The only reason we can conceive why the Interechreh World Movement has not, like McGinty, plunged headlong to the bottom of the sea (of oblivion) dressed in its best suit of clothes, is that the Interechreh World Movement has not got any best suit of clothes. If there is a good word to be said for it, the apologist might hire a hall, even if he delivered his fustion to empty benches. The Methodist Episcopal Church has gone into the hole one million four hundred thousand dollars on the Interechreh World Movement. And of that one million four hundred thousand dollars more than one million dollars has had to be borrowed at the banks, and on that sum interest is being paid.—Central Christian Advocate.

CHURCH NEWS

HOPEDALE CHURCH

We are making a determined and earnest effort to secure enough money to finish our church building at Hopedale, Alamance Co., N. C. We have spent $1,200.00 or more on the building and will have to spend $500 or more to complete it. Our local congregation has given and secured from their friends in the community all that has been spent on the building so far, with the exception of an appropriation of $225 from the Mission Board of the N. C. Christian Conference. We want to get into our new church. Recently friends have given me $65.00 for the work which enables us to start again. I am wondering if there are not many CHRISTIAN SUN readers who will send me one dollar each to help in this most worthy task.

Thank you, dear friends for any amount you may send. It will be acknowledged in THE SUN.

Yours gratefully,

R. H. COBLE.

Burlington, N. C., R. F. D. 5

P. S.—Bro. Coble is much interested in seeing Hopedale church finished, and I feel that every dollar sent him from this appeal will be greatly appreciated, judiciously handled and properly expended. I join with him in hoping that we shall soon have a neat, comfortable church completed and ready for us at Hopedale (Formerly Big Falls Cotton Mill).

HISTORICAL REFERENCES

Editor THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

The enclosed poem, entitled "The Closing Year", was published in THE SUN in the forties, at which time the paper was, if I am not mistaken, published by Rev. W. B. Wellons. My brother-in-law was a minister of the Christian denomination and he took the paper. At that time I made my home with my sister, Mrs. Martha Jeter. I cut this poem out and have kept it ever since.

It was during my stay with my sister that I formed the acquaintance of several ministers who made their home there while going from Halifax County, Pleasant Grove church, to Caswell County.

The first sermon I ever heard preached by a minister of the Christian Church was in a little cabin just below Mrs. Jim Wells', and it would hold about 25 or 30 people. There were eleven members, four of these being colored people. Sometime after this, Lebanon was built and is now a flourishing church with school near by. I remember a great many who preached there and the Longs were among my favorites.

I am 87 years old and my sight is very bad, making it very difficult for me to write these lines. I love to read THE SUN—it brightens my room every week. I enjoy reading the articles written by ministers I have met at Lebanon and have heard preach. God help them all. My evening of life will soon close and I hope to meet each of them over there in the Beyond.

THE CLOSING YEAR

The God of love, has guided me,
Safe through, another year;
And may He help me now to be,
More humble and sincere.
Tho' I am weak, and feeble here,
His hand supports me still;
And helps me to submit my care,
To His—blest, sovereign will.

Though troubles oft beset my way,
A gleam of joy will start
Within my breast, whene'er I pray
To cheer my doubting heart.
Thy grace dear Lord, can bear me thro',
Tho' trials great I meet;
Then let me meekly here pursue,
A place beneath Thy feet

Indulgent Savior, be my guide,
Throughout my life's short day;
And keep me ever near Thy side,
And teach me how to pray.

Let meek submission ever fill,
My weak and trembling heart;
And from Thy holy sacred will,
O let me ne'er depart.
Before another year shall close,
Perhaps my weary eyes
May sweetly on my God repose
Far, in the upper skies.

Oh! sacred hope, 'tis sweet to know
When days on earth shall end;
With holy joy, our souls will go,
To rest with God, our friend.

NEWPORT NEWS

Our church in the little city by the sea is moving quietly along. We may not be accomplishing as much as some others are doing, but we are by no means idle.

At our quarterly business meeting, the first Wednesday in January, an official Board was appointed and this board has organized and is getting down to business. At this meeting we also discussed the need of a new church building and as a result, a building fund has been started and a special treasurer appointed to care for it. An official letter has been sent from the secretary to the various organizations of the church asking for their cooperation and that they make every effort possible to aid in increasing the fund.

The choir has recently reorganized and is now rendering effective aid in the regular church services and in programs given by the several organizations. We have talent here and our task is its development.

The Sunday school is doing a good work and only needs more room and equipment to do a much greater work than it is now doing. Last Sunday the school voted to make a monthly offering to missions. We are already making a monthly offering to the Orphanage.

On Tuesday evening, February 8, the Woman's Missionary Society held its Mite Box opening and gave a Missionary Classic. This was enjoyed by those present, but the attendance, especially by the older people of the congregation, was not as large as it should have been. The offering for the evening together with the contents of the mite boxes amounted to a little more than thirty dollars.

Our church building is receiving two new coats of paint, and the appearance is being very much improved. When you come to Newport News, don't forget to look for the white church on the corner of Roanoke Avenue and Forty-third street.

Three members were received into church fellowship Sunday evening, February 6. This brings the total received during the present conference year to twenty-two.

There is a big field for service here. But our people need to realize, as most of our churches do, that we are not small and doomed to stay small, but our possibilities are unlimited, if we will only launch out into the deep at the command of the Master.

CALVIN J. FELTON.

A WORD OF THANKS

To those of my congregations who have so kindly remembered us from time to time in the way of donations and words of appreciation for service rendered, I wish to express sincere thanks for myself and family.

To Union for donations here and there extend over several months; and to Haw River for frequent very kind remembrance; and to individuals at Pleasant Hill who remembered us from time to time. Quite a surprise awaited me last Sunday, February 6, at Pleasant Hill when I went to my Ford after preaching. It was literally loaded with too many things to mention. There were things in it from the field, the garden, the dairy, the poultry yard, and the orchard. I wondered how I was going to get in it. But after skillful arranging and packing assisted by members of the congregation, I managed to get in it and drive home. There may be kinder people than those I serve, but I do not know where to find them.

A MESSAGE TO CHRISTIAN ENDEAVORERS

If I could never send another message to Christian Endeavorers, I would say "hold fast to the pledge", not in a slavish spirit, but with the freedom wherewith Christ makes us free.

Hold fast to it because it emphasizes our high ideal to do only what Jesus Christ, our Master, would like to have us do.

Hold fast to it because it adds to our weakness trusting His strength in which alone we can achieve success in any work for Him and our fellow men.

Hold fast to it without prayer and without Bible, to which it commits us, we can do nothing abiding or worth while as Christians.

Hold fast to it because it demands loyalty to the church as well as to Christ, for without definite and strenuous loyalty to the people of God with whom we have associated we shall disastrously scatter our influence and our power.

Hold fast to it because it enforces the duty of testimony and outspoken allegiance to Him whose we are and whom we serve. Expression is as necessary to religious growth as the impression of truth. A plant cannot grow unless it expresses its life by its leaves and its flowers. Strip off the leaves of a tree for three successive years and it dies. A bird if it lives will surely express itself in song.

Every honest word for Him in the prayer meeting, every simplest service on a committee is an expression of our love.

A Christian if he would grow strong must express his love for Christ in words and songs, and deeds.

Hold fast to the pledge because it has been and is the main cable of devotion to the prayer meeting which is the power house of our movement.

Hold fast to it because it has been the inspiration of all our many committees and of our multifarious welfare work, for soldiers, and sailors, prisoners and shut-ins, for children in fresh air camps and for people in all conditions of distress.

Hold fast to it because it is the bond of our world-wide fellowship. In a hundred different languages, in more than a hundred different denominations, in every continent and in all the great islands of the sea simple, reasonable, practical in spirit and purpose if not in exact phraseology.

Condensed into a line it is to strive, not boastfully or vaingloriously, but to strive earnestly, persistently, humbly to do whatever Jesus Christ, our Lord would like to have us do.

This is the gist of Christianity. This is the pith of Christian Endeavor.. This, please God, will give strength and perpetuity to our movement in the long years that stretch before us.

To all the Endeavorers who listen to these words I give my best wishes and my affectionate greetings.

SOLEMN VOWS

EGGELSTON-PARSONS

At the Christian parsonage, Waverly, Va., February 2, 1921, 4:20 p. m., Mr. Albert Eggeston and Miss Grace Parsons of Sussex County, Va., were quietly married. Their friends wish for them much happiness and great success in life. The marriage services performed by Rev. J. L. Foster.

COLLIER

John Wesley Collier, aged thirteen years and four months passed to his eternal reward January 4, 1921. He was a professor religion and loved the Sunday school. In the Christmas entertainment he acted his part well and was the first of his little band to be taken. May God comfort and sustain the bereaved in their sad experience.

AUNT CORA.

PACE

Mary Frances Pace was born October 1, 1878, died December 25, 1920, making her age therefore 42 years, two months, and twenty-five days.

At an early age she joined Bethel Christian church and was a consistent member until death. She was a faithful attendant at services until ill health prevented. She leaves one daughter, three brothers, and one sister. She will be greatly missed in her home, community, and church.

Interment at Bethel Christian church. May the Lord comfort the bereaved.

I. T. UNDERWOOD.

HUFFMAN

Parker Brevard Huffman, son of Lawrence M. and Opal A. Huffman, died February 8, 1921, aged 4 years five months and nine days. The funeral services were from the home conducted by the writer and the interment was in Pine Hill Cemetery, Burlington, N. C.

Parker was a bright and interesting little child and very fond of his parents and all the home folks. He endeared himself to all who knew him.

He said during his sickness, "Some one is calling me" and it was not very long thereafter till he fell asleep. He has gone to be with Jesus.

He was fond of music and especially the song:

"Jesus loves me this I know,
For the Bible tells me so;
Little ones to Him belong;
They are weak but He is strong."

May the blessed Christ comfort those who mourn.

P. H. FLEMING.

CHEEK

George Washington Cheek died at his home near Long's Chapel, February 5, 1921, aged 80 years and 15 days. Bro. Cheek was twice married and to each marriage there were born three children, four of whom are living, two by each marriage. His last wife preceded him to the grave by about seven years.

He was a member of Long's Chapel Christian church and had been for a number of years.

For some years he had been afflicted. He bore his afflictions with much fortitude.

The funeral services were from the church conducted by the writer, Rev. J. F. Apple taking part. The interment was in the cemetery at Long's Chapel church.

A land mark has been taken away from the home, the church and the community. Let those who mourn look to Christ and find comfort.

MISCELLANEOUS

AN INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SERVICE FOR YOUR EASTER COMMUNION

The approaching Easter would be a most appropriate season to install the "Individual Communion Service." Our offer to send a Service to be used on trial will enable the church to become acquainted with the superiority of this cleanly method over the old method before purchasing.

The fact that so many thousand churches now use our outfits is a guarantee of the merits of our system.

Order Early for Easter

We suggest that churches intending to use the Service at Easter or before, should send their order in as soon as possible, owing to the large demand for Services at this season.

Any wishing to make memorial gifts of Services, or any having orders which require engraving, are especially requested to forward their orders early, so as to be sure to receive their goods in ample time for use when wanted.

A MAN'S SENTIMENT

Girls that are wanted are good girls— Good from the heart to lips; Pure as the lily is white and pure, From its heart to its sweet leaf tips. The girls that are wanted are home girls— Girls that are mother's right hand; That fathers and brothers can trust too, And the little ones understand. Girls that are fair on the hearthstone, And pleasant when nobody sees; Kind and sweet to her own folks, Ready and anxious to please, The girls that are wanted are wise girls, That know what to do and say; That drive with a smile and soft word The wrath of the household away.

The girls that are wanted are girls of sense, Whom fashion can never deceive; Who can follow whatever is pretty, And dare what is silly to leave. The girls that are wanted are careful girls, Who count what a thing will cost; Who use with a prudent, generous hand, But see that nothing is lost.

The girls that are wanted are girls with hearts; They are wanted for mothers and wives; Wanted to cradle in loving arms The strongest and frailest lives. The clever, the witty, the brilliant girl, There's a constant, steady demand, But, oh! for the wise, loving, home girls, There are few who can understand. —Washington Hatcher.

THREE LAUGHS

Poor Dog

So often we call a man a dog when we want to reproach him. And yet, a dog Doesn't lie. Doesn't swear. Doesn't drink. Doesn't cheat. Doesn't swindle. Doesn't smoke. Doesn't flirt. Doesn't pretend. Doesn't borrow. And wouldn't even resent it if you called him a man.

"Strong"

Two baseball men, in training in the South, were idling about a station platform one Sunday morning, watching a crowd of colored people collecting to take the train to a camp meeting some miles down the line. "They turn out strong here, don't they?" remarked one of the boys. An old darkey woman overheard the remark, and turned on them quick as a flash: "We may be strong heah, suh, but when we git 'ter heaven we won't smell, praise de Lawd."

Couldn't Fool Him

Billy Sunday stopped a newsboy the other day and inquired the way to the post office. "Up one block and turn to the right," said the boy. "You seem to be a bright fellow," said Sunday. "Do you know who I am?" "Nope!" "I'm Billy Sunday and if you come to my meeting tonight, I will show you the way to heaven." "Aw, go on," answered the youngster. "You didn't even know the way to the post office."

Overcoming Our Enemies

THE EDITOR

OVERCOMING our enemies cannot be done by physical power. It may overcome for a season, but not for a lasting period. There is no place in the work of the Kingdom for evil to overcome evil. The Lord Jesus taught us to overcome evil with good and love those who hate us—all this for His sake.

The billions now about to be tied up in evils to help overcome other evils is logic that will not stand the Master's love test. Less for instruments of warfare and more for Christian education would come nearer meeting the Christ standard.

The nations of the earth are the nations of God, and Christians are the children of God. When we go forth to kill we begin to hate one of our Father's nations, and we cannot love and hate at the same time. ("Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter"—James 3:11)

Let this nation, this nation that is called Christian, bring about measures of love and not instruments to kill and conditions for strife and hatred. Less guns, more grace; less ships for soldiers and more for missionaries.

EDITORIAL

"Have we yet to learn, in Senator Ben Hill's words, that education is the one thing for which no people ever get paid too much; that the more they pay the richer they become; that nothing is so costly as ignorance and nothing so cheap as knowledge?"

A LARGE ASKING

THE North Carolina State educational institutions are asking for eighteen millions of dollars for a building program to cover a period of six years. It is the largest sum ever asked for at one time by these institutions. To support this asking the fact is cited that 2,308 students were turned away last year from the twenty-three colleges for lack of room.

We confess that this is an issue of vast importance at this time. There are pros and cons about the measure.

So far as we know, and can find out, the number of students turned away for lack of dormitory room, is correct. We have heard rumors to the contrary. Regardless of what the outcome of the bill is, THE SUN shall endeavor to verify the statement of the number of students refused admittance for lack of room, and hopes to report later.

That the number of students seeking admittance to colleges last year is increasing no one will deny. Friends of Church educational institutions have never built ahead of the needs of those institutions, and it is reasonable to think that those who provide for the welfare of State institutions have done the same way.

The Church colleges and State colleges are not in competition. The State is under obligation to provide for the education of its people, and the Church is likewise under obligation to provide both education and Christian training for its members. All true educational institutions are working to the same end. The State works from a standpoint of duty; the Church works from duty plus Christian training.

An advance of the State institutions means an advance in the Church institutions. There is getting to be too much emphasis in numbers and too little said about quality of work. State institutions have to advance to be true to the growth of the State. Likewise the Church colleges must advance to care for the ever expanding work. An advance of one should not be taken as rivalry, but as an onward march of education's progress.

Whether the $18,000,000 bond issue at this time is needed we are not able to say. From all parts come the call for help. Since beginning this editorial, the daily press brings the information that one State institution turned away 161 last fall for lack of room. This same institution reported 250 last December. The figures 161 are made up from the various counties of the State and possibly the discrepancy in the figures come from outside territory, but even then it looks like there has been some guess work done in making out the items of appeal.

The $18,000,000 bond issue asked for covers a period of six years and strong appeals are being made for its enactment. The measure is to be considered this week and our opinion is that it will be passed.

If the State institutions need the $18,000,000 they should have it. There are good men on both sides of the budget idea. THE SUN does not claim to be qualified sufficiently to say which side is right. The State should, however, recognize in making such large appropriations that the Church institutions form a great and important part of the State's educational program and should do nothing to hinder their continued advance. The Church colleges in North Carolina could not begin to meet the demands without the aid of the State institutions, and the State institutions would be paralyzed without the co-operation of the Church schools.

Right or wrong, here is the duty of every educational institution: to do all in its power to banish illiteracy; bring to the highest possible standard the education of the people and train them for the highest standing in citizenship—that standing to be measured by Christian character, education of the heart as well as the head. The matter of education is too sacred for institutions to vie with each other about.

FREE TUITION

Last week we commented on a proposed bill to grant free tuition to any young man or woman who may apply for the same at the State University. We have thought over the matter, entered into correspondence with educators of the State, including the President of the State University, and feel that there is no occasion for being alarmed over the bill. It is our opinion that the bill is not being seriously considered and that it will not be passed at this time. Should such a measure, however, become a law it would not materially change the present status or do harm to Church colleges, since free tuition is a very easy thing to get at any State institution.

This reminds us to remark that the custom of granting free scholarships has been dragged from its original meaning. A scholarship is supposed to represent honor and distinction. Sometimes it does and sometimes it does not. It should always represent these qualities. There is not a college in the State that has not granted many scholarships for policy sake, or to make it the final appeal for securing of some student or students. There should be a limit to scholarships in all educational institutions and that limit should be published in their catalogues and in the public press.

THE SUN calls upon the colleges of this and other States to make free tuition mean something and not to be handed out just as a drawing card. There should be some outstanding merit in the circumstances and in the student before a scholarship is granted. The students in any college have a right to know the ones of their number who are receiving free tuition and to know why they are receiving it.

A LECTURE OF THE BETTER TYPE

The other night it was our privilege to hear a lecture on the subject of "Law Enforcement", given by Dr. Madison Swadener in the Christian church of this city. Dr. Swadener's address did not deal of local problems or dictatorial advice on how to enforce the prohibition laws. The speaker rather based his address on educational lines, and we mean educational, in its broadest meaning. The speaker presented facts and logic that convinced. He did not abuse men, but rather magnified measures; he told not how to deal with persons, but how measures. He told not how to deal with persons, but how to live by principles.

We have never been anything but a prohibitionist, yet we believe that a great many prohibition speakers have done about as much harm as good. They have been extravagant in their language, and exhausted their physical resources before an audience telling of a few bums and drunks. At best they could only hope to get a following through the aid of disgust and contempt for whiskey. They have not presented the great facts of harm, injury and danger that alcohol has wrought upon the generations of men. As a rule they have not told of the loss of property, life, and efficiency in manhood. In short, they have not based it upon an economic basis. But all these things Dr. Swadener presented and his impression was abiding and lasting.

It was the pleasure of THE SUN'S scribe to introduce Dr. Swadener, and we saw fit to summarize his address at the close in this fashion: "The speaker of the evening is not a skeptic of living principles, but rather a scholar of the first magnitude; he is a critic in the broader meaning of that word, constructive and not destructive; a man who has magnified measures to us rather than resorted to the abuse of men; he has held up before us the living principles of individuals and nations, rather than to take our time in a tirade upon persons and personalities. He has added to our moral obligation because of the enlightenment which he has brought to us. We have a new duty to perform, a new task to do. Let each one of us, as we pass from this tabernacle, resolve that bringing the Kingdom to earth consists not only of praying but of paying; not only of waiting, but of working—and finally, not with one or two of these, but with all of them."

THE MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT—ITS FUTURE

The men and Millions Forward Movement of our Southern Convention has taken a great deal of time, engaged much thought, and created much interest. The best that can be said of the Movement is that it was seed sowing season. The harvest is yet to be reaped.

The life recruit cards will be of no assistance to the Church unless each signer thereof gives and grows in Kingdom-service. The cards that enlist tithers remain only in a material way unless there is a continued educational growth in the matter of tithing and stewardship for those who signed and for the thousands who should have signed. So in every phase touched, only the seed has been scattered. Some have fallen upon ground where there are stones, and some have fallen upon soil that is fertile. Both need cultivation.

The Men and Millions Forward Movement was the greatest undertaking of our Southern churches and it will be a great pity if we fail to conserve this undertaking in every possible way.

No minister in the Convention should feel that he is to look upon the work that is yet to be done or to speak of it in a compromising attitude. The program is one that challenges our faith, tests our loyalty, and will prove our devotion.

Let us nurture and cultivate the seed that has been sown, looking at all times to a larger work for the King and the Kingdom.

SPEAKERS FOR ELON COMMENCEMENT

Announcement has been made of the speakers for the approaching Elon commencement, May 22-24. The Baccalaureate Sermon is to be preached by Mr. Hermon Eldredge, who was camp general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Camp Upton, Long Island, during the entire war, and under whose direction the various religious organizations of the country staged their experiments in Christian activities. It is the first time in the history of the College that a layman has been asked to give the baccalaureate sermon. Mr. Eldredge is a forceful speaker and is at present engaged in Church federation work in Erie, Pa.

The college authorities also announces that the Literary Address on May 24, is to be given by Governor Cameron Morrisan, Governor of the State. This will be his first appearance at a college commencement since his election as governor.

The Alumni Address, closing the commencement on May 24 will be given this year by Prof. G. C. Davidson of the Class of 1904. Professor Davidson is well known among the Alumni of the college as an orator and they express much satisfaction that he was chosen for this occasion.

INTERNATIONAL FINANCE

At this time when foreign countries are so frequently seeking loans of the United States, either to help feed their poor, or to stabilize and further the plans of their governments, it is interesting to note that American bankers have advanced a loan to the Republic of Chile amounting to $25,000,000, and to Denmark a loan of $15,000,000. Both of these loans are given to countries of good economic status and are made payable at rather distant dates.

On the other hand, in the cases of Austria, Czechoslovakia, and other countries of Central Europe, there is a grave hesitancy on the part of bankers to advance loans, because of the unstable financial and commercial conditions of those countries. In other words, American bankers plead that these countries must have what is termed "necessary qualifications" and means of backing up loans before American finance can be applied. Yet these countries are the ones in greatest need of such loans. Probably they could easily pay reasonable loans at a moderate distant date if the financiers had sufficient confidence in advancing such credit.

In a situation like this it is easily seen that the only means by which these countries of Central Europe with little credit and starving children can be alleviated of their misfortune is through the benevolence and good will of a people or element of people not entirely controlled by "good business methods,—as so called in the financial world today. This "good business" promoted few loans to the real countries in need. But with more good will permeated by a Christian spirit in our finance, loans would be advanced primarily for the most urgent human need and the happiness of the most unfortunate people. Of course financiers are easy targets for philanthropists, but at the present time the former people are given an especially good "show down" in their policies of international finance. Good will and something more than "good business" policy needs to be extended to these countries of Central Europe; and such a good will must be offered by the American people as well as by financiers.

Bishop Nicholai of the Council of Serbian Child Welfare in a recent speech at Columbia University said that the trouble with Europe since the French Revolution has been bad leadership,—and more—the lack of Christian harmony and fellowship between the different classes of its peoples. "The fault of the present turmoil", the prelate continued, "is due to the educated rather than the uneducated classes." He describes the peasant as a noble quiet and calm spirit considerably more Christlike than that of the average leader who has taken life with a wrong philosophy and who rules in an un-Christian manner, and whose knowledge as a whole is "only a constant source of danger". He feels that America can give Europe more than bread and milk. He says that "America should feed Europe some of that morality which forms a basis for her present charitable and Christian behavior."

THIS AND THAT

Congress has reconsidered the matter of an apportionment to the House of Representatives and has now decided not to increase the number of men in that body. It is a fact that a larger House would cost the country practically a million dollars more each year, and this fact together with the argument that a larger body would really be less efficient in business seems to have influenced Congress in this wise decision. In the last one hundred years the number of Federal officers in this country has increased comparatively ten times as fast as the population of the country has increased. What we need in our government offices is efficiency, and not necessarily numbers.

The contest between the Biblical Recorder and the North Carolina Christian Advocate is going ahead with great interest and enthusiasm on the part of both denominations. The Methodists adopted as their slogan, "We'll beat the Baptists, or bust"; and the Baptist have, therefore, taken as their slogan, "Beat the Methodists, we must."

Such a friendly rivalry is a great stimulus for a paper. Both papers are making a great effort to win, and indeed they have everything to win. As to which journal will get the largest number of subscriptions in the final wind-up is only one phase of the matter. Through a contest like this there are people who will subscribe for a church paper, when they would not do so ordinarily. Many who have been merely negligent about their Church paper will subscribe and eventually grow to realize and appreciate the real worth of a religious paper in the home, and their need for it. There are many, also, who receive their paper regularly and who read and enjoy them, but who do not seem to remember the date on their label, that it is past due perhaps, and that it takes finances to run a Church paper as well as any other enterprise. To many will such a contest be a reminder.

We think that such a contest would be a fine thing for our own denominational papers, as suggested by our Editor some time ago. Think what it would mean to the papers, to our Church and to our people. We would have everything to gain, and nothing to lose.

Federal health authorities have become alarmed because of the increasing number of cases of typhus among immigrants arriving in the port of New York, and busy studying methods to prevent the introduction of this dread disease in the United States.

The New York Bible Society has furnished to the hotels of New York alone over 40,000 copies of the Bible.

III—The Sunday School

THE Sunday school is the teaching enterprise of the Kingdom. As its first characteristic then it should keep this function prominent and foundational. The curriculum of instruction therefore is of primal importance. The building and equipment likewise call for earnest attention. But the corps of teachers is the issue of largest concern. Note that I said corps and not corpse. So many times the teaching force is a body of death to the Sunday school. This brings up the whole question of teacher-training and of supervised teaching. The Sunday school is potentially an institution of marvelous power for imparting the precious principles of the Kingdom. Let us be alert to every promising method of transforming its potential into kinetic energy.

Worship too, should characterize the Sunday school that is on to its job. In discussing the church we found worship to be the foundation stone of its spiritual edifice. Worship in the Sunday school should prepare for the spacious spiritual sweep of the church service. In order to do this it should be graded by departments. If a separate assembly room is impossible for each department, it is certainly possible in some way to provide for the training in worship in at least two groups, consisting of the Beginners', Primary, and Junior grades in the one and with the remainder of the school in the other. The question of disorder in Sunday schools is very largely soluble by graded worship, providing an adequate and becoming means of expressing the heart's deeper longings to God. If we will but consider that a disorderly Sunday school is an immoral institution, we begin to sense the importance in the development of Christian character of providing for it adequate facilities for training in worship.

In the third place the Sunday school should serve. A Sunday school that exists merely to keep itself alive is an impertinence, and appeals to people to attend such a school, however frantie, will not, cannot permanently avail. From the Beginners' Department on into the Adult Department, training in service should be provided on an organized basis. A beginning can be made with the four special days now almost universally observed—Thanksgiving, Christmas, Easter and Children's Day. These days can be made occasions of service to the Kingdom through careful preparation and methods sanctioned by approved usage. But service is a constant need of the spiritual life, just as food, water, and air are of the physical life. So the program of social service should be extended to cover the entire year, expressing itself through ministry in the name of Christ to the local church, the community, the larger work of the organized Kingdom, and animals. Babies and larger children, unfortunate families, the aged, the benevolent organizations of the local church and of the denomination, and animals are the most appropriate objects around which to weave an organized, graded program of social service. Unless the Sunday school teaches service and practices it, a self-complacent church will later prove inadequate to reach the world for Christ.

And finally the Sunday school should lead to the salvation of the young life entrusted to it. If it fails here, woe is the Church, for eighty-seven per cent of our church members come from the Sunday school. Yet we now lose fifty per cent of those who resort to it for its ministry. Our teaching, our worship, our service aims in Sunday school work have their proper fruiting in the winning of the young to Jesus Christ as their personal Savior. We must not fail here. Let us on bended knee learn from Him the methods by which our hearts shall rejoice in victories for His name in the saved lives of the boys and girls whom we teach.

SECTARIAN BASKET BALL

CARLYLE SUMMERBELL

The other evening I sojourned to the high school gymnasium to enjoy the spectacle of a basket ball game between boys of about 16 years who represented the Christian and lads of same age representing Methodist Sunday school. The girls of our Sunday school offended my old-fashioned prejudices by changing a popular yell to the following:

*"Hit 'em high
Hit 'em low.
Christians. Christians, GO! GO! GO!"*

They did, and the final score was 17 to 2 in favor of the "Christians". I do not think I would write this article if our boys had been beaten.

How much after all our Protestant competition in America is like a basket ball game! We spend our time in building up an organization, which may cumber the ground, and be a curse to the next generation instead of a blessing, when all of God's people need to get together. Ministers work to pull folks in this church or that. Money is lavished to keep up the game. We hold a meeting and say our score is 60 and we note the Methodist is only 59. And we cannot help but being glad we have a live organization. Nobody wants to belong to a dying cause. And so numbers count. But alas! we only have one life to live. Shall we stand for principles, or organization, or our social set, or our part of the country, or our kind of baptism, or our theology? Is organization in religious matters the first principles? What is the big game of life?

An organization is always more or less of a compromise. It is like the tariff, a give and take proposition. It is a basket ball game of competing teams. We have about 200 competing basket ball teams in America today, everyone of which believes it is nearer to the truth than its neighbors. What they need is a sense of humor apparent to students of the New Testament. Is the work yours or the Father of All? What team are you on?

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ", has not been heard by competing Protestantism.

SUFFOLK LETTER

MARRIAGE is a divine institution and is the union of one man and one woman during the life of both parties. "Whosoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery; and whosoever marrieth her that is put away from her husband committeth adultery"; and "adulterers cannot inherit the Kingdom of God."—Luke 16:18 and I Cor. 6:9-10. This sacred relation satisfies human nature in all of its requirements, and is the foundation of the home; and the home is the unit of strength in Church and State. It is the spring from which all the streams of human society are supplied. The springs are the purest waters in the world. Corrupt the springs of the world and all the streams will be defiled. The best home in the world is the Christian home. I have seen the stream back into the spring in a time of flood and make the fountain as muddy as itself. We are living in a time when the back-water of society is polluting the homes of our land. Modern discoveries and inventions; modern organizations and intercourse; the printed page and the moving picture; new methods of education and child-training, have combined to transfer the idea of home to community service. The home has, in a way, surrendered its rights and its responsibilities to public sentiment and public guardianship. Parents seem satisfied to let their children get their ideas of manners and morals from others rather than from the teaching and example of the home. This is no individual thought, but the common opinion of this age in which so much is written about child welfare and child-training.

Home life is almost ancient history in the country today. The fireside is unknown. The parlor music is a victrola. The models for children are in public places. The love is there. The good desires are there. The sacrifice is there. But the home tie is not there. The joy of home is not there. The power of example is not there. Many parents feel that their children know more than they do. They have seen more. They have been to school more. Society works such demands upon children that parents yield their place and are submerged by the thought and customs of the times. Prayer in the home is for the sick, the aged and the bereaved. Prosperity, like too much rain, has spoiled the home. The Israelitish nation did not produce Moses; it was the peasant home or Amram and Jochebed; the Israelitish commonwealth did not produce Samuel; it was the peasant home of Elkanah with his praying wife, Hannah, that gave that great man to the nation; Jesus came from the peasant home in Nazareth. What this day needs is the Christian home. The Sunday school cannot do all. The public school cannot do all. The community center cannot do all. Children need home. Young people need home. Old folks need home. The Church needs it. The State needs it. This age needs it. Separation of people by ages is intellectually, psychologically, socially and spiritually false. The old need the association of the young and the young need the influence of ripe experience tempered by love. The family group is the purest, the sanest, the sweetest, the wisest group among men. Home, Sweet Home!

W. W. STALEY

THE BULLETIN

The North Carolina student Volunteer Union will hold its annual session in Durham, N. C., February 25, 26 and 27. Elon is to be represented by ten volunteers.

Mr. Sion H. Lynam, a student in Elon College, preached for the Burlington congregation last Sunday, holding both services. Bro. Lynam's messages were well received. He is blind, a graduate of the State School for the Blind, now a freshman at Elon, and is a promising student.

A Sunday school institute will be held in Burlington, N. C., for the benefit of the schools in Alamance County, March 2, 3, and 4. The principal speaker will be Marion Lawrance, the noted Sunday school worker of the world. Mr. Lawrance will be present during the entire session.

Rev. G. O. Lankford is this week in the bounds of the Alabama and Georgia and Alabama Conferences in the interest of our proposed school in that section. Other members of the committee on location are Dr. W. A. Harper and Dr. L. E. Smith, but they could not make the trip at this time.

We are glad to receive other articles on "If I were A Preacher". Dr. Staley's article some weeks ago on "If I Were A Layman" caused these to be written. The American Daily Standard, Chicago, Ill, has published without request, Dr. Staley's article in full, and we anticipate the editor of that paper will take notice of the articles by the laymen.

INTRODUCING THE WRITER

Bro. W. L. Cooper, Norfolk, Va., whose article "If I Were A Preacher" appears this week is an active consecrated member of the Christian Church. He was a member of the Suffolk Christian church for about twelve years and while in Suffolk was Secretary and Treasurer of the Cooper-Riddick Co. He is now book-keeper for the Woodhouse Electric Co., Norfolk. He is an aggressive member of our Third church, Norfolk, and is clerk of the church and secretary of the Official Board.

He is faithful to his church and loyal to the denomination in every particular. He does his work in a quiet way but you can always count on him to do his part. We are glad to have his article.

AN INTERESTING BIBLE

Brother T. W. Lawrence, Seagrove, N. C., one of THE SUN's loyal subscribers, has in his possession a Bible which, we think, contains historical data that will be of interest to SUN readers. This Bible was the property of Christian Union Christian church (Randolph County) until during the Civil War, the year 1863, when the church was burned by deserters. These people revered the Bible enough to remove it from the building and place on a stump near by. It was later found and placed into the hands of Rev. J. S. Lawrence, a minister in the Christian denomination, and father of Brother T. W. Lawrence. Upon the death of Rev. J. S. Lawrence the Bible was handed to this oldest son. The Bible is in good condition.

Figures given out by the Department of Commerce at Washington show that the trade of this country with Germany was more than three times the amount in 1920 than in 1919.

IF I WERE A PREACHER

BY LAYMAN W. L. COOPER

I WOULD consider my work the most important man could do, but to do it successfully, I would be sound in doctrine, faith and principle. My heart would be thoroughly regenerated by divine grace and my teachings would be according to truth. I would be more willingly in this service under the constraining power of the Holy Spirit. For if I do this thing willingly I have a reward, but if against my will a dispensation of the gospel is committed unto me. For though I preach the gospel I have nothing to glory of, for necessity is laid upon me, yea woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel—I Cor. 9:16-17.

I would study consistency in my own life, remembering that I am looked upon by the people as a sample of Christian character. I would devote much time to prayer and endeavor to let my life be of constant devotion to the work of my Master among men. Christ told Peter to feed His sheep. The people often suffer for want of the pure gospel, and the preacher is to blame. I would possess divine grace, otherwise my preaching would not be acceptable. I would possess what I profess. I would practice what I preached, for to attempt to preach without truth would be like firing a gun without shot, and that kind of a gun never hits the mark.

I would be very careful to keep my promises, and be punctual in meeting engagements. I would know my people personally, visit them in their homes, look after the sick and needy, the discouraged and unfortunate. My life would be a prayerful life devoted to the highest and best ends of men. I would ever be mindful of my congregations, especially as to the spiritual welfare of all.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

PROGRAMS OF PROGRESS

Be it known that, in these stirring and chaotic days of reconstruction, the churches are not idle, not all of them at any rate, and that the Kingdom's interests are not neglected. I have just seen in type this report from the United Presbyterian Church: "More than half of our members are enrolled in our Family Altar League. One-fourth of our members are tithers, and our goal is to enlist one-third of the total membership as tithers. We are now giving $21 per member, per year for our missionary and educational work. In February of this year our pastors are all asked to preach a stewardship sermon on each of the four Sundays; we are using stewardship lessons supplementary to the regular Sunday school lesson, and we are preparing stewardship topics for the Young People's Societies."

And the report from the Southern Presbyterian Church is even more encouraging and progressive. "In the last ten years our membership has increased 54 percent and our gifts to benevolence has increased 189 percent. In our annual program the three months, January, February, March, are devoted to stewardship and the financial campaign. We request that three sermons on stewardship be preached. This year (1920) our actual gifts for missions, not including education, were $11.81 per member. Our goal was $3,500,000. We passed this and went to $4,403, 874."

Many other similar reports from the Churches show that the Kingdom's interests are not being neglected.

But we all of us need to be active in the Master's cause, and to reemphasize the fact that if the Church in our day is to function and go forward it must put on, and keep on progressive, workable, up-to-date, cooperative programs.

MISS TOSHIO SATO

Many of her friends will learn with pleasure that Toshio Sato who graduated from Elon College last commencement has been faithfully at her post in the school room teaching and doing missionary work since September 1, 1920. Mrs. Fry, Principal, in whose school Miss Sato is teaching writes under date of January 18: "Her work here is perfectly wonderful. If it has flaws, I have not seen them. She is always well, happy and busy for God. She says she is going to educate a poor niece of hers, in our school, with a part of her salary. She will also give her mother some of it." The salary which Miss Sato is receiving for the "perfectly wonderful work she is doing" is $30.00 a month, and the same is paid by Third church, Norfolk, Va. We wonder what Toshio requires for herself, when we consider what she is doing with "part of her salary". She at any rate is a noble Christian girl and is worthy of all that has been done for her.

A SUNDAY SCHOOL THAT STUDIES MISSIONS

For several years our Burlington Sunday school has given a few minutes (usually five) of its time, on reassembling from classes, to some one appointed for the purpose to talk, or read something on missions. Out of this has grown an active and a very liberal Sunday school. The writer happened to be present at this school when its wide-awake Secretary, C. V. Sellars, read an abstract of his report for the year 1920. It was as follows:

First Quarter—Average Attendance, Officers 9, Teachers 10, Scholars 181. Collections for Sunday-school Expense, $95.67. Missions, $295.41. Orphanage, $133.70. Total for First Quarter, $524.78.

Second Quarter—Average Attendance, Officers 9, Teachers 13, Scholars 201. Collections for Sunday-school Expense, $109.58. Missions, $208.90. Orphanage, $318.55. Total for Second Quarter, $637.04.

Third Quarter—Average Attendance, Officers 8, Teachers 12, Scholars 173. Collections for Sunday-school Expense $100.86. Missions, $213.41. Orphanage, $163.76. Total for Third Quarter, $478.03.

Fourth Quarter—Average Attendance, Officers 9, Teachers 12, Scholars 213. Collection for Sunday-school Expense $112.68. Missions, $232.29. Orphanage, $351.19. Total for Fourth Quarter, $696.16.

Grand Total for Year	$2336.01
Total Members Enrolled	225
Average Attendance for Entire Year per Sunday	192
Average Collection for Entire Year per Sunday	45.69
Average Collection per Scholar, per Sunday
for Year	23c and fraction
Total Number Joining the Church from the School
During Year	20

Bro. Jno. R. Foster is the devoted Superintendent and Bro. C. V. Sellars Secretary and Treasurer. I wonder if we have any other Sunday school that gave in the regular offering last year $967.20 for the Orphanage, and $950.00 for Missions. When this school began to take a monthly offering for missions many feared it would hurt the Orphanage collections; but instead it greatly stimulated it.

And then best of all twenty members of the school were converted during the year and took their rightful places in the church.

This church has now been without a pastor since about the middle of November, but the congregations have not fallen off. Prayer meeting attendance on Wednesday nights has increased, and last Sunday five members were received into the church.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

EVEN AS JESUS COMMANDS

WHEN Jesus chose His disciples it was that He might train them in obedient service. That they might go wherever He chose to send them, that they might do whatsoever He told them, that they might teach whatsoever He commanded them. The Master was going away in a short time and He needed faithful, obedient servants to carry forward the work while He was away.

When our Lord sent His disciples into the village to prepare the way for His last entry into Jerusalem, before His crucifixion, we find the disciples "went and did as Jesus commanded them". If His disciples from that day to this, had obeyed His every command as they did then, there would be a greater stir in the world today, than there was when the King, "just and lowly and having salvation", came riding into Jerusalem. What a day, what an opportunity that was for the multitudes assembled there! But how fickle men are. Just a few days, and Jerusalem was again astir, but this time they were crying "away with Him."

Every disciple of the Lord's is a soldier under orders. We have no right to question His commands. If we are not obedient to our great Commander's orders, we fall under His condemnation. He knows our ability, He knows our strength and our weakness. He knows our resources. It is our place to trust and obey. It is His place to prepare the way and supply the need. Those who trust Him fully and those who obey Him unquestioningly, with one accord will testify to His faithfulness in doing His part. He never fails. Men deceive themselves into thinking they can fix up a character which God will accept. But not so. Jesus never did, never will compromise. He demands obedience to His every command, not once, but always, unto the end.

The disciples did not substitute; whatsoever He said they did. They did not come back with the finest conveyance to be had in those parts, although after walking with the Master so long, they knew the best was not good enough for Him. They did not forget Jesus' command, but they did the will of their Lord. They remembered and did even as Jesus commanded. That is not always an easy thing to do, but our Lord did not promise ease to those who respond to His "follow me". Ease is what most people are seeking. We like the easy chair, the Pullman car, and the automobile with the easiest riding qualities, regardless of cost. We forget those people of "all nations" He commanded us to teach cannot even hear of the "Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world", unless they have a teacher. The teachers cannot answer His "go ye" unless His disciples give of their means to send them. To one He is saying "go", to another He is saying "give". It is "go" or "give" to each and every disciple. The one who goes must sacrifice many things. Those to whom He is saying "give" ought to be no less willing to give up some of the comforts and luxuries which they feel they have earned, that those of all nations, which our Lord and Master wanted reached, may have an opportunity to become His disciples also.

Jesus taught us that one soul is worth more than all the world. Does it mean as much to you as your own personal comfort, or pride in your possessions? Does the value of one soul for which the Lord Jesus died, mean so much to you, that you would be willing to give up that high-priced, luxurious, easy-riding car and make a cheaper car serve your purpose that you might answer His "give ye" with the difference in price, so that those who are ready to respond to His "go ye" may have the opportunity to tell the people of all nations of this wonderful Savior? The disciples did even as Jesus commanded. Will you? The harvest time is here. The reaper's work will soon be done. Will you have many sheaves to lay at His feet? Are you sure you will have any when the Lord of the harvest comes?

MINNIE LOHR.

NEED OF THE INDWELLING PRESENCE

The church will never be able to do the work that she ought to do in the world by organization alone. Whenever any great task is undertaken by any church the first thing that we think about is organization and the getting together prominent and influential men. If this sort of thing had been sufficient for the world's need, God would not have sent His Son into the world to suffer and die. Neither will preaching alone save the world. Unless our organization, our plans, our machinery of all sorts, and our preaching, all breathe the spirit of love and devotion and are the outward expression of the indwelling Spirit of the Christ, then we are of all men most miserable. But when our hearts are gripped by his love, and when our lives are filled and controlled and directed by his Great Spirit within us, then the plans will take care of themselves and all our efforts will be effective.

What we need today as a church is not so much more prayer as we need the indwelling presence of the abiding Christ. It is not prayer that gives us confidence but the Christ who hears our prayers. We need Christ-filled men and women today. We must have that before we can do anything else. And when once we let him in and give him the place he ought to have in our hearts, then we shall have the power to do anything that lies within the will of God. And as we face these days that are just ahead of us, and as we undertake our tasks, which sometimes are overwhelming, let us do so in the spirit of the great apostle who said, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me."—Ernest Hunter Wray.

According to reports there are a million men unemployed in England today, with the same conditions existing in France, while the general business situation tends to become even worse.

"Find enclosed check for my thirty-second annual payment for THE SUN, and it grows better."—I. A. Luke, Holland, Va.

OUR ORPHANAGE

WHO WILL FURNISH A ROOM?

Mr. Luther Cates of Burlington, N. C., made the Orphanage a present of a nice young Jersey milk cow to give milk for the little children who will be in the "Children's Home" when it is finished. This is a very much appreciated gift as nothing is such a blessing to an institution of this kind as plenty of milk and butter. The children are all fond of milk and for several years we have had enough without buying any.

The Third church, Norfolk, Va., sent us last week, a box containing a present for each child (A delayed Christmas present) and the children enjoyed having Christmas repeated again. The church also shipped a barrel of flour and a barrel of groceries which came in real good and is a great help to us in the work. I often think that every church in the Southern Christian Convention could do this and get a real joy out of the gift. I feel sure no church can get up a contribution of this kind for the orphan children without getting pleasure out of the undertaking. What if each church would make up a box each year and send to the Orphanage, what a small sacrifice it would be to the members of the church!

The Building Committee hope to get the "Children's Home" completed and ready to turn over to the Board of Trustees at its annual meeting in May. It would look good to have all the rooms in this building furnished all new and looking clean and inviting when it is turned over to the Board. I wonder if our Ladies Aid Societies in the Convention could do this and be real happy because they had this opportunity to serve.

There will be three dormitory rooms with twenty single beds in each. In this case a Society could furnish a certain number of beds. I would suggest that you let me buy the bedsteads, springs and mattresses as I can buy at factory prices and get all the beds alike.

The blankets and quilts and sheets the Societies could furnish as they can be made at home. But I would rather you furnish the money to buy the bedsteads and springs and mattresses.

There will be four rooms for matrons that will require one bed, one dresser, one small table, one rug, and two chairs.

I trust the Ladies will begin to think about this matter and let me hear from them. It is a splendid opportunity to render a loving service for the little helpless children. I want the good women to have this part in this splendid undertaking.

There will a dining room to furnish with crockery, knives and forks, spoons, etc. Also a range for the kitchen. I had the good fortune to buy a Majestic range last year for a very low price. Had been used just a few months; good as new. I wish I could find another bargain like it, unless some friend wants to give us a new range.

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley: We are two little boys who wish to join the band of cousins. We are four and seven years old, respectively. Here we come with our dues for February. If this letter doesn't get into the waste basket we will write again. Wishing you and yours all prosperity for the year 1921 and with love to all the cousins.—Ossie and Dennis Harris.

We are glad to have you join the band of cousins and hope you will write often this year and help to keep the corner bright and cheerful.—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: How are all the cousins getting along? Hope they all keep well. It has rained nearly all of the week here and we were more than glad to see jolly Mr. Sun today as the clouds had kept him hid for many days it seems to me. Enclose find 10 cents for my dues for this month. I hope we have more letters next week as we had only one this week. Give my love to all of the cousins. Your little friend.—Dorothy Moore.

We have had much snow here since your last letter and our little folks have had a fine time coasting. They used all the nails I had to make sleds.—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find five cents for this month. I have a long way to walk to school and over a muddy road. I would like to visit you and the little orphans.—Mary Watkins.

THE SCHOOLMA'AM OF SANDY RIDGE

BY IRENE HUDSON

August 5 1918

I began morning school last Monday, and I'm worn to a frazzle already. I have thirty children, ranging in age from five to thirteen years, bright and feeble-minded all together, in all stages of development. The children run as wild as little savages at home, and see no reason why they shouldn't have the same privilege here. They think nothing of yelling out in school. If I scold them, they run off and hide an don't appear at school-time. The day before school began, I spent in deep consideration of the formidable mysteries of the 'Course of Study for Virginia Rural Schools,' hoping that a kind Providence would somehow see me through. I have divided them into three groups, but even at that, in my phonics class I have children from five to twelve years old. Fortunately I brought with me a lot of my kindergarten handwork materials, and some blessed wall-paper samples. When things get too thick, we construct chairs and tables out of wall-paper. At such times you can hear a pin drop, the children are so delighted with the paper and the idea of making something. The big boys have promised to make us a doll-house, so that these beautiful rose-covered chairs can really function.

Little feeble-minded Gillard Coburn has learned what the letter A looks like. He cuts it out of paper and writes it on the board and the desks and the floor and the books. In fact, he is so delighted with A, he will have nothing to do with B, or any more of their family. Gillard is a great trial. If I let him be with the other children of his age, he feels badly when he can't do as well as they. If I give him some handwork off by himself, his feelings are hurt because he can't be with the others. With twenty-nine other little problems, I can't devote the morning to him, poor child! He should be in a feeble-minded school, but his mother would never consent, being feeble-minded also. She is Litty Coburn of the windowless, chairless, and stoveless house.

The first day of school the children were here before we were up, they were so anxious for school to begin. Cornelis Marshall brought two of his children in to me. With the air of a millionaire father presenting his children at the most exclusive school in the country, he imperiously said, 'I've fotech my young uns an' I wants ye to whup 'em an' larn 'em'.

I like the quaint, indirect way people have of saying good-bye. Here is an example:

Josiah Howard, about to depart: 'I reckon I better be a-goin'.'

John, the host: 'Don't rush off'.

Josiah: 'I'll have to be gittin' on'.

John: 'Jes' stay all night'.

Josiah: 'Cain't. Jes' you uns come down with me'.

John: 'Reckon we uns'll not go'.

This isn't just once. The same kind of conversation goes on every time they part. Even if they just stop to talk a minute on the road, one politely starts the signal to move on by saying, 'Well, you all go down with me.'

'No, I can't. You jes' go round with me', the other returns, moving on, too.

When I first came, I was very much amused at Jim Dyer, a man working for us. Every night before he went home, he would come to the door and say, 'Well, you and Miss W—— jes, go down and stay all night'.

At first I didn't know what kind of reply to make to Jim Dyer's inviting two maiden ladies down to spend the night. I finally discovered that that was merely a polite way of bidding us good-bye. We, to have been equally polite, should have said, 'No, we can't go down, Jim. You stay with us'.

August 15, 1918

Ellie Howard died on Wednesday. Miss W—— went right out. As no one else undertook the job, she prepared Ellie's body for burial, putting on a clean white nightgown that she took with her. The women were not satisfied with that, but sent one of the men off to Dante to buy new material for burying-clothes. Cornelis Marshall usually makes the coffins, and does it very neatly. Somebody foolishly persuaded Troy Howard to send off for a 'store' casket. This will cost twenty-five dollars at least, and there is hardly a bite to eat in the house; but poor Troy thinks that Ellie must have the best.

Thursday afternoon, when we arrived for the burying, the yard was swarming with people of all ages, standing around saying hardly a word. The burying clothes had not arrived, nor had the men finished digging the grave. Finally a woman appeared with the clothes. We shooed out the children. While two girls held up a sheet over the doorway, we dressed Ellie in the finery that came from the store. It fell to my lot to put on the long silk gloves. Ellie never having owned a pair in her life-time, the women thought she ought to have them when she was buried. I wanted to get up and shout that I would have nothing to do with decking out this empty shell of a body with emptier finery; but appreciating the loving spirit of the women, I picked up the gloves and, with much stretching and tugging, pulled them onto the stiff, cold hands. When she was all dressed, we put her in the black, shiny box, with fancy brass handles, which the women gazed on admiringly. It seemed to me I read scorn on Cornelis Marshall's face, when he saw it.

Her few little treasured possessions ('tricks', they call them) were put in with her—a red heart-shaped box containing some old hair-ribbons and a tooth-brush, from the Mission, and her doll, from the Mission Christmas tree. The doll's dress being dirty, a woman took it off and made a new one. The women were well satisfied with their labors, except for the fact that they had not been able to get any shoes. You see, they believe that at the Last Trump the graves will be opened and people will come out of them as they went in. They did not like the idea of Ellie walking round in her stocking feet.

The preacher kneeled down in the yard and prayed and sang a hymn. Then the men carried the coffin up a steep hill, just a little way from the house, to the buryingground, the women singing all the while. Where they got the breath, I'm sure I don't know. It was all I could do just to climb. The preacher prayed long and loud, dwelling on the shortness of life and exhorting all to mend their ways and be saved, especially appealing to Troy Howard and his children. Poor Troy was so grief-stricken and worn out by staying up nights with Ellie and working daytimes, that the words of the preacher wrought him up to a wild frenzy. The tears fairly gushed out as he swayed back and forth on the ground, calling out to God and to the preacher to have mercy on him. After it was over, Mr. Josiah took Troy and the six children home for the night, for Mrs. Josiah to mother.

A visit is a great occasion. The other day I was over at Mrs. Josiah's. She was peeling apples to dry on the roof, when Emmet rushed in yelling, 'Mammy, Mis' Rose an' Dillie, and Connie, an' Orbin, an' Troy are a-comin' round the pint.'

'Hain't I the luckiest woman to have so much company come to my house!' exclaimed Mrs. Josiah.

'But it makes you such a heap of work,' I remonstrated.

'Law, hit's a sorry woman as wouldn't be proud to have company', she replied.

Mr. and Mrs. Josiah are fine. It's a real joy to go over there. Many nights after supper I visit them. It's so homey and cosy to sit with all the eight children round the fireplace. They ask me about my home and the strange, level country where I live; and I ask Mr. Josiah about what they did on the Ridge when he was a boy, and about his father and grandfather. Sometimes 'Pap' is there (Mrs. Josiah's father). He tells us ghost stories that his father told him, until the children's eyes fairly pop out of their heads. As the least uns fall asleep in somebody's arms, they are dropped into the beds behind us, and the stories go on. It's hard to break away from such a fireside.

September, 21, 1918

Cornelis Marshall's boy, Richmond, told me the other night that since he was nine years old, he has always been drunk on Saturday night until the last two years. Even once in a while now Richmond doesn't appear for a few days, and we know he's off again. It all began when his older brother started taking him along on his weekly carousals. For a time old Cornelis had a still of his own, where Richmond could get all he wanted. Then the 'Revenues' put a stop to that. After that, Cornelis and Richmond together went off to the nearest mining-camp for their weekly spree. Is it any wonder that nineteen-year-old Richmond has the brain of a boy of ten? The old Baptists have such a hold on Cornelis of late, that he no longer imbibes. Moreover, it is not so easy to get.

The mines are being opened up just half a mile from us. That means work and high wages for the men, but it also means the entrance of a demoralizing influence. You see, the mountaineers are living according to the standards of the eighteenth century. When the mines open up, they bring with them the degenerating side of twentieth-century commercialism. We are trying to bring them the best influence of the civilization that has passed them by, but we and all the other social agencies at work are such a drop in the bucket! It's a mighty big step from the eighteenth to the twentieth.

Up to this time they have had practically no money. When they begin working in the mines, they will get five dollars a week and up. The simple mountain boys lose their heads, their money, and their self-respect in the corrupting life of the camps. It all has to come because these mountains are rich in the coal and lumber that the world needs. Would that the schools might come first!

November 20, 1918

A week ago Miss W—— came down with the flu, so I've been cook, nurse, water-carrier, fire-tender, and everything else combined. She had been nursing flu patients and was all tired out. The doctors are all so busy and so far away, she wouldn't let me get one for her, because she knows so much about nursing herself.

Yesterday I had to go down to Dante for medicine. One of Josiah Howard's children came over to look after the fires and gave Miss W—— her meals. Coming back, I got started later than I expected, forgetting about the short days. Just as I struck the foot of the mountain, it began to rain and darkness enveloped me, so that I could not see any trace of the trail ahead. The bag full of medicine and grapefruit that I carried cut into my shoulder. My long heavy rain-cape weighted me down. I slipped and fell, being unable to catch myself. Every step forward, I took two back. The only way I had of knowing where I was, was by feeling with my feet. Finally I felt the familiar creek bed. Splashing through the water, wet up to my knees, stumbling over the stones, I followed it in the blackest darkness I have ever experienced. So long as I was in the creek, I could find my way; but the difficulty was to discover where the trail turned off the creek into the woods. Taking a wild chance, I climbed up the bank. The underbrush scratched my face, sharp sticks stuck into my legs. Stretching out my hand to save myself from falling, my full weight pressed a chestnut burr into my bare palm. Tears came to my eyes from the pain of it. Crashing and floundering through the trees, I lost all sense of direction. Absolute despair came over me. I knew I was lost and that I'd have to wait for morning to come. The wind made unearthly noises through the trees as I sat quietly on a stone to wait.

The idea of Miss W—— sick in bed, waiting and worrying, started me searching for the lost trail again. In a second I stumbled onto it. I had been scrambling within a few feet of it all the time. Then followed a steep climb, but a sure trail, until I reached Mr. Josiah's perpendicular cornfield. I wallowed round in the mud, until I became so faint and nauseated that I sat right down in the mud to rest. One of the bottles of medicine hit a rock and dripped over me. How I made the last pull to the top, I don't know. It seemed to me I rested more than I climbed. The broken bottle contained the medicine I went after specially for Miss W——. However, she enjoyed the luxury of grapefruit so much that the trip was almost worth it.

The old flu got me too. I'm in bed down here at Deaconess's. No one will give me credit for being very sick, because I am such an obstreperous patient, threatening to break up the furniture generally if they don't comply with my wishes.

You see, Miss W—— came down here to recuperate, leaving me alone there. The Josiah Howards took the flu. I stayed up two nights with little Sabry, who has pneumonia. One morning I woke up with a temperature and cough and headache. I decided I'd better get off the mountain while I could. I cleaned up the house, took the cat to Mrs. Lulars, and walked down to Dante. Deaconess gave me the luxury of a hot bath in a bath-tub, and put me to bed, and my head has been about to crack open ever since. I can't take long getting well because the poor Josiah Howards are all down with it, except Mr. Josiah. He has to keep going whether he feels like it or not. I've got to get back to help him. The mountaineers don't get work done ahead. They take out coal for a few days. Every Friday they take enough corn to mill to last until the next Friday. Water has to be carried from the spring for the stock and the house. When there's only one to do everything, it's almost an impossibility. The neighbors are all so afraid of the flu, they won't go in to help. In the camps the people are dying in hundreds.

December 11, 1918

It is 1:30 p. m. I am writing by the light of the Josiah Howards' fire. Mrs. Josiah, Orine, and Sabry have pneumonia. As they are resting pretty comfortably tonight, I haven't much to do. Mr. Josiah is snoring loud enough to raise the roof. Poor man, he's had his hands full with all of them sick. Miss W—— and I take turns staying nights with them, since we came back from Dante. The pneumonia patients are still very sick, but the rest are all up and around. It's hard to take care of them because they wear all of their clothes to bed and are afraid to change them for fear of taking cold. I don't believe there'll be any squeamishness left in me after this job on Sandy Ridge. The Josiah Howards are so appreciative of everything we do that it's a joy to take care of them, no matter how much our olfactories may be offended.

December 27, 1918

Christmas has been a day for the women to look forward to with fear and trembling. For their lords and masters, 'takin' Christmas' means drinking and shooting. Our friends have predicted dire happenings at our Christmas trees, but so far nothing unpleasant has occurred. Today there were several men here whose joviality left no doubts as to what rested in their back hip-pockets. The very sight of the revenue officer almost started a fight out in the yard. The appearance of such a personage, to the mountaineer, is like waving a red flag before a bull. However, it soon quieted down and there was no more disturbance. The only Christmas casualty I heard of was a boy shooting his mother in the leg in a drunken fit of rage.

After the tree we all walked down to Dante, to have dinner and stay all night with Deaconess. It was just cold enough to make you want to breathe from your boots up. The snow began to fall in the morning. By the time we went through the woods, the laurel and ivy were weighted down with a feathery white covering. We tramped on a soft carpet, which now and then gave way and sent us sprawling most unceremoniously.

We stopped to say 'Howdy' to Noah Howard in passing.

'My folks is all down with the influenzy, and Marie's had a turrible fevers one her, so's I hain't had a chanet to strip fer three weeks', announced Noah.

He is another of the great unwashed. Stripping weans taking off dirty clothes and putting on clean ones, bathing being an unknown institution in these parts. How can they bathe, with no wash-basin, a large family living in one room, and water to be carried from the spring, maybe a block away? Some of these nights, when I stand almost in the fireplace, with the wash-basin on a chair, the wind blowing through the cracks, and my breath visible in every direction, I wish that I might dispense with the ordeal.

January 25, 1919

Iva, Josiah's oldest girl, wants to get married. Patton Edwards has been 'talkin' to her' for some time. Last Sunday he went to see Iva's unele, Paris Kirby, to put his case before Josiah. Mr. and Mrs. Josiah have no objection to Patton, but Iva is only sixteen, they think she ought to wait. Mrs. Josiah was just sixteen when she was married, so her words don't bear much weight. I think the wedding will be very soon.

March 1, 1919

I went to two weddings the other day, one at Josiah's and the other at Cornelis Marshall's. The Howards had been making preparations for a week. First they scrubbed every board and piece of furniture in the house and washed every article of clothing; then, with the help of their kinswomen, set in to make cakes and pies. When Mrs. Josiah came over to invite us, we asked what time the wedding would take place.

'Whenever we kin get the dinner up,' she replied.

As I learned later, the dinner was the piece de resistance of the day.

At nine o'clock in the morning people began to arrive, on foot and on horseback. At ten, Orine and Nancy came after all our dishes. At eleven-thirty, we went over. The women had a table outdoors, rolling out dozens of biscuits. The old men stood around, talking and swapping; the young ones cut all kinds of shines with the horses and mules. Columbus Rose had a large audience watching him put life into cadaverous old mules you would think had lost the power to move. The children yipped and yelled and set the dogs to fighting, having the wild kind of time they like. The biscuits being all rolled out, the women made the dumplings, and dropped them in leisurely fashion into a boiler, in which two chickens were cooking over an open fire.

At length the dinner was 'done got up', and the bride changed her dress. There were two rooms (houses they call them) to this home. This space would not hold the bountifully spread table and the hundred people present, so the ceremony was performed in the backyard. When the women announced that dinner was ready, the boys and girls, jeering and laughing, dragged the blushing bride and groom into the yard. The old Baptist preacher, in a brown mackinaw, took his place in front of the bride and groom. The 'waiters' (attendants), two boys and two girls, were shoved into their places on either side of the bride and groom. The preacher tied the knot in very short order, saying only a few of the sentences of our prayer-book service. The words were hardly out of his mouth when an uproar began, everyone hollering and yelling at the top of their lungs. There was hardly any more solemnity to this ceremony than to the primitive marriage custom of jumping over the broomstick.

The bride, groom, waiters, and preacher sat down at the first table. I was supposed to have a seat with them, but there was one seat missing, so I stepped out. As I was not so aggressive as some of the rest, it was the fourth table before I got my turn at the dinner. While it was being served, the children swarmed round, on our feet and under our feet. To keep them quiet, their mothers gave them hand-outs of pie, cake, and biscuits, and they helped themselves out of the dumpling-pot. Gravy and pie running down their fronts, they squeezed in amongst us.

The chicken had given out long before the fourth table but there remained dumplings, baked ham, potatoes, pickled beets, pickled beans with ham, rice, biscuits, coffee stronger than moon-shine, three kinds of canned fruit, cocoanut and chocolate cake, and dried-apple pie.

The man on my right had served eight years in the penitentiary for killing three Italians. He went into their saloon down in one of the camps. Because these men did not do some trivial thing he wanted, he pulled his gun and shot five, killing three of them. When the constable got there, he was laying them out. The court gave him fifteen years, but he got out in eight for good behavior.

It took so long for me to get my dinner at the Howards', that by the time I got to the Marshall cabin, Richmond and his bride were 'done' married. Mrs. Marshall insisted that I sit right down and eat. Cornelis Marshall in his greasy sweater, which hadn't been off his back, day or night, all winter, and the dirty, dingy old lean-to of a kitchen, where the wedding supper was spread, did not stimulate my appetite, as I was already too full for utterance; but Mrs. Marshall's hospitality was so sincere that I forced down some more beans and cake, for fear of hurting her feelings.

Richmond, the ne'er-do-well,—age nineteen—married a woman of thirty-five, with four children, the eldest fourteen years old. Richmond is out of work. Neither of them has a cent, or an article of furniture to start house-keeping with; but that does not seem to worry them. For the last five years the bride has been living with those of her relatives whose dispositions could stand the strain.

The wedding in this case was even less of a ceremony than the other. The bride laughed all the time that the same brown-mackinawed preacher was talking. When the ceremony was over, she announced that she expected to be married two more times before she died. A little later, when I arrived, the bride and groom were both chewing tobacco, as the corners of their mouths evidenced, and the groom's sister had a lower lip full of snuff. Poor Mrs. Marshall is heartbroken over this wedding. Iva's is the more typical mountain wedding.

According to custom, Iva and Patton spent the first night at her home. The next morning, on horseback, the newly married couple, followed by family and friends, led the procession to the groom's house eight miles round the Ridge. There they were to have another big spread, called the 'Infare'. In the procession were two wagons; in one of these was Maggie Rose, an aunt of the bride. Just at the top of the hill, in sight of the house, she got out of the wagon. Uncovering the baby she held in her arms, she found it was dead. The children were sent to the house, where dinner had begun, for fresh horses. They got to playing and forgot what they were sent for. The father, becoming impatient, grabbed the dead baby and set out for home, the mother, carrying a larger child, vainly trying to keep up with his frenzied strides. They did not stop until they came to their home six miles down the mountain. Seemingly the only effect on the Infare was that it broke up unusually early, so that the men could get off to dig the grave.

HINTS AND HAPPENINGS

The Doughton-Conner-Bowie road bill in North Carolina providing for road bonds of $50,000,000 was passed on February 17 by a vote of 91 to 22

President-elect Harding has announced his first cabinet member—that of Secretary of State, Charles E. Hughes.

After eighty years of struggle the movement in Holland for religious education in the public schools has attained victory, and the public schools there will now have a five year course in the study of the different religions.

February 15 marked the 101st anniversary of the birth of Susan B. Anthony, pioneer suffragette, whose life was dedicated to the cause of woman suffrage. Universal suffrage was obtained during the centennial year marking her birth.

For two years the women students of the University of Wisconsin have made an average higher scholarship than the men.

According to recent figures about 2,000,000 tons of sand was used in the manufacture of glass in the United States in the year 1920.

A bill providing for private ballot in North Carolina has been voted down by the House.

THE BY-LAWS OF THE MOVIES

SIR: Every person appearing on the screen in the guise of a "minister" (generic term) should wear the collar of a Roman Catholic priest, the hat of an English (C. E.) vicar, the frock coat of a Presbyterian and the spats (preferably white) of no clerical person on God's earth. He should carry an umbrella, indoors and out, and when performing the marriage service (which is his only function in the movies besides getting laughed at) he should read it out of a Bible, in which, of course, it never was printed.—New York Tribune.

CHURCH NEWSA GREAT RECEPTION

We moved from LaGrange, Ga., to Lanett, Ala., the first day of February. The church had a nice six room house ready for us, all furnished with water, lights, and fuel, and for which we are thankful to these people.

We want to thank the Mill Company for this good home and the interest that they are taking in the pastor and members of the Christian church and not ours only, but all the churches in Lanett. On Tuesday evening after we arrived at our new home, along about 7 o'clock we heard a knock at the door, but before we could get to the door to open it the crowd began to come in and march through the hall. The people kept coming until I began to think that a six room house would not hold them. They found their way into the dining room and put good things upon the table until I feared that it would not hold of poundings, but this was a sure enough pounding.

Brother Young, the pastor of the hold up under such a load. You have Methodist church, was present, and gave a beautiful talk. I tried to respond but I was so overcome with the crowd and the great pounding and such a wonderful reception that I do not know now just what I said, but I was very glad and happy. I feel unworthy of so many good things but it inspires me to do more for the church and for the Lord. We want to thank every one that took part in this reception, and to say to all that by the help of God we are going to do our best for you all this year. I have a fine set of men and women and boys and girls in the Christian church at Lanett. We have a fine Sunday school and I am delighted to be the pastor of this church.

May God bless the Editor and readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

H. M. GRAY.

A GREAT POUNDING

The good people of Bethel church, Caswell county, N. C., and also friends of that church and community gave me a great pounding on February 14. The pounding consisted of sugar, coffee, ham and other meat, chickens, butter, eggs, canned goods, dried fruit, soda, rice, lard, pickles, oatmeal, etc. In addition to these things I received a nice pair of shoes, a purse of money, and other things that a preacher and his family need.

Our hearts are made to rejoice because of this kind remembrance. May the blessing of the Heavenly Father be upon these good people and help their humble servant to render better and more efficient service.

PEOPLES' CHURCH, DOVER, DEL.

Readers of THE SUN may be interested to know how we made out in our canvass for the budget system of our church finances. After three weeks of preparatory study of stewardship and tithing, with three sermons on the subject, the canvass was launched the first Sunday in January and was continued for three weeks. It was the every-member volunteer campaign and more than 90 per cent. of the membership responded. With the final windup we will more than go over the top. The per centage of increases was double that of past years, our average weekly collections for the month of January being $120.00.

In addition to these funds raised, the average weekly offering for the starving children of Europe have been $69.83. This campaign was launched December 19, 1920, a great many of the members signing a pledge to do without one meal a week for six months and to give the price of that meal to the fund.

In addition to our increase in finances we are growing in numbers, twenty persons having joined the church since Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, our pastor, came to us, and our congregations are growing each Sunday. He is giving us fine sermons and with his fine personality and enthusiasm in the work he is making new friends each day.

He commences his extra meetings the middle of March and will close them on Easter Sunday night. We are hoping for great results from this effort, and he asks the prayers of all his brethren that God may bless his efforts in the Dover church.

The Brotherhood has been reorganized and gave its annual banquet on Thursday evening January 13, with 126 present. The menu was served by the ladies of the church and it was a fine one. Addresses were delivered by prominent men of the church and community. Hon. Everett C. Johnson, Secretary of State, paid a glowing tribute to the memory of the founder of the Church and the Brotherhood, the late Dr. A. W. Lightbourne, of sainted memory, and to his sons, now ministers of the gospel.

We feel greatly encouraged at the bright outlook for our church and are putting our shoulders to the wheel with the determination to win, by God's help.

E. E. BENSON, Church Clerk.

WELCOMED AND POUNDED

It is very evident that the people of my field have decided upon one, or both, of two things:

That THE SUN's Editor meant what he said when he gave notice some time ago that we might expect him to see us—or that it would be an awful hard job to convince their pastor of a welcome back to this field. Even before we had landed here with our little stock of house-hold and kitchen furniture, the Chapel Hill people began what seems a perpetual "pounding"

With such a variety of gifts and such a regularity in the giving, they have left us almost entirely to the newspapers for our information regarding the "high cost of living". But it is no new thing for these people to be constantly proving their love and loyalty to their pastor.

Martha's Chapel

During the three years since I began working with the good people at Martha's Chapel, they have many times and in various ways proven themselves the generous hearted people that they are; but not until a few Sundays ago did they resort to the "pounding" method. And they did this like every thing else they do in the interest of their church—in fine style. It took careful packing for me to get sitting room (and that is not much) in my Ford car. I can not itemize the inventory here. But safe to say we have enough good pork sausage and enough sugar to last us until summer.

The Lord be praised for His blessings and help me to be to this people a better pastor and co-worker in the interest of our Lord's Kingdom.

BYRD

Mrs. Bessie Gardner Byrd, wife of C. O. Byrd, aged 35 years, died February 8, 1921. She was a great sufferer for two years, but no one ever heard her complain. Every thing that medical skill could do was done, and no one was ever watched and nursed with more care than she was.

She was a member of the Franklin Christian church, and was a member of the choir until her last sickness. She was one of the most faithful in her attendance, and was seldom absent from any service. She was guarded in her speech, faithful in service, and patient in suffering. She is survived by her husband, four sisters and one brother.

The funeral services were conducted from her church by the pastor assisted by Rev. J. A. Chapman, pastor of the M. E. church and Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va. Our prayers and sympathy to the heart-broken husband, and the bereaved loved ones.

C. H. ROWLAND.

PARKS

On January 19, 1921 the Lord saw fit to take another of the faithful members of Parks' Cross Roads Christian church in the person of Mrs. Annie E. Parks who was born July 7, 1853. In May 1870 she was married to T. B. Parks. To this union were born twelve children, six of whom still live, to wit: John W., George H., H. Colen, and Thomas B. Parks. Mrs. Ada Kelly of Philadelphia and Mrs. W. M. Dorsett.

In early years she united with the M. E. church at Concord. After marriage she moved her membership to Parks' Cross Roads with her husband.

As to character, she was above reproach. She was gentle, kind and devoted to all that was good. She was patient in all things and always ready to do deeds of kindness to all who came her way. She died in the triumphs of faith at the home of her daughter in Philadelphia. Her funeral was conducted from Parks' Cross Roads church in the presence of a large crowd of people.

GILLIAM

Mrs. Susan A. V. Gilliam, widow of the late Joseph H. Gilliam, departed this life at the home of her son, W. H. Gilliam, in Morton's Township Alamance County, February 14, 1921 at the age of 62 years 4 months and 17 days. She leaves six children, 22 grand children, three brothers and one sister. Her husband and four children preceded her to the spirit world.

Sister Gilliam joined Bethlehem Christian church years ago and was loyal to her church. Truly a good woman is lost to the church, the home and to the community. Funeral and interment at Gilliam's Baptist church, conducted by her pastor.

OUR PRESIDENT

WARREN G. HARDING becomes President of the United States this week. He may not be of your political faith, or your choice, but he is our President and the chief executive of our great republic. He needs not criticism, but our sympathy and our prayers. He faces a great task, a big job, and shoulders a responsibility that few can comprehend.

Nations are at war with each other in spirit. Cannons have ceased to roar and guns have silenced, but the germ that shall bring bloody conflict again is yet to be exterminated.

Let the people be of one mind to eliminate the evils of the land; let them pray for the man and the men who shall lead us during the next four years.

YOUR READING THIS WINTER

Here is a sincere hope that many readers of THE SUN made use of our suggestion in the early part of the winter to take advantage of the winter evenings for reading. It is so easy to form the habit of reading for a short time each day, or to let the time pass without availing ourselves of the opportunity of intellectual development.

But just reading is not sufficient within itself. The kind of reading matter is the thing of all importance. Read good books, good papers, good magazines. The streams are already polluted with a slush of rotten trash that should never be permitted to pass from the press.

DUE ON DISCONTINUED SUBSCRIPTIONS

From June 1, 1916 to March 1, 1921 THE CHRISTIAN SUN has charged the sum of $524.29 against discontinued subscriptions. This covers a period of five years, lacking three months. We feel proud of our constituency in bringing to us no greater loss than this amount during this period. Part of this, however, will not be a loss, as we have the promise from good and faithful men and women that many accounts will be paid.

These accounts are distributed as follows:

North Carolina	$176.75
Virginia	222.37
Georgia and Alabama	113.23
Other States	11.94

Total as above.....$524.29

At this time we have a very large amount due on subscriptions that are still running. We sympathize with subscribers in the present financial depression, but express hope that THE SUN will be remembered by all. Do not discontinue your subscription now, or at any other time. THE SUN needs your help and every home in the Church needs THE SUN.

A SUGGESTION

This paper desires to suggest to the churches in the Southern Convention that they give their pastors a vacation during the approaching spring or summer. As a specific suggestion we consider it fitting that each church taking advantage of this to send its pastor to the Summer School of Methods to be held at Elon College. This would be advantageous from two standpoints. The brethren would have the opportunity of meeting with each other and at the same time have a fine opportunity for additional study. It would be a good thing if all of our pastors could meet together once a year to study, discuss, plan and pray over the objectives of the Church. Why not let the School of Methods be the beginning of just such a good thing?

THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, Dover, Del., in an article in The Herald of Gospel Liberty under the caption "The Fields White Unto Harvest", says these very important things among others in his splendid article:

"And the church of the living God in too many instances has been unfaithful to her mission of holding Jesus Christ before men as the only hope of the individual life. She has been constant in holding Christ up as the hope of the community, the hope of the industrial order, the hope of the nation, and the hope of the world. But somehow through the shuffle of readjustments, the individual has been lost sight of in the proclamation of the gospel from many of our pulpits. In other pulpits, much has been said about the Kingdom of God, and great pronouncements have been made upon the conditions and demands of the Kingdom; but in many instances the King Himself has been seemingly forgotten. At least the Kingdom has been emphasized to the neglect of the King. Many of us in our passion for the kingdom, have for the moment lost sight of the King. And our Kingdom without a King has failed to meet the needs of men and has, therefore, failed to appeal to them. Too many churches have lost their balance of emphasis. They have been absorbed so much in telling men what they ought to do, that they have forgotten the primary consideration of explaining what they ought to be.

"We have been so much interested in our social service propaganda, which is such an all-important part of the church program, that we have allowed the note of the evangel of personal salvation almost to die out. We have failed to realize that in order properly to "Socialize" we must also "Evangelize"; that in order to "Christianize" we must also "make Christians"; that if we want to "save society" we must also seek to "save the individual". Many pastors have been content to eulogize God as man's heavenly Father, and to give elaborate and beautiful eulogies on Christ as the obedient Son of God, and the elder Brother of man; but they have failed to point men to Christ as the Lamb of God which taketh away not only the sins of the world but the sins of every man or woman who puts their trust in Him."

THE CHURCH AND CHEAPNESS

The other day we saw a man buying something for a church and he insisted that the owner of the article about to be purchased "sell it at the very lowest figure since it is for the church."

How does it come about that a church must expect something for nothing? What line of reasoning have we followed to conclude that the church should have a special price? Has the church magnified herself by posing as a beggar? Who has caused her to pose as a beggar?

Few individuals ever succeed who become "bargain hunters". Parasites become poorer than those upon whom they feed. Merchants develop an unfriendly attitude toward certain customers because they take so much time in trying to get the price down. What then, does the non-church man think of the church when it must get the "at cost" figure before it buys?

Does littleness pay the church? Does a "poor" salary for the pastor, scanty allowance for repairs, and stinginess for enlargement appeal and develop a people? Do the laws of economy, the laws of general business, fail when applied to God's institutions? Have we not made the church a beggar by begging for it? Did God intend that we should drag the name of His institutions into the beggar class? We think not.

"THE CHURCH'S SYSTEM OF EDUCATION"

There has been sent out by the Board of Education of the Southern Christian Convention a handsome two-color poster stating definitely "The Church's System of Education". Under Group I are named the Cradle Roll, Home, Beginners', Primary, Junior, Intermediate, Young People's, and Adult Departments. Group II embraces the Service Chautauqua, the Summer School of Methods, and Elon College.

A proper study of this outline will unfold the steps of growth in the educational advancement of the child. The poster is sent out to be placed in every church and pastors will be rendering service to the Church to see that this card is prominently displayed. Not only that, but we suggest that attention be called to it, the pastor going over each item carefully. This card may well be used as the basis of an address or sermon.

PREACHERS AND YEGGMEN

Lumberton, Feb. 26.—The only man whose appearance convicted him was a preacher. Chief of Police D. M. Barker of Lumberton, was advised to meet a Seaboard train and arrest three yeggmen, who were reported to be on the train. Chief Barker made ready, having plenty of officers at the station to take care of the situation. The train came in and the officers looked the passengers over. Only one man among the passengers had the appearance of a yeggman. He was nabbed by one of the officers. This one proved to be a minister of the gospel and had his credentials along to prove it. The officer "let go" when he was convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that he had arrested a preacher.

This brings home to us the lesson that personal appearance has something to do with how people estimate a man, especially a minister. It is true that the dress does not make the person. This does not, however, argue that good appearance is a sign of badness.

We heard a charge recently to some candidates for the ministry. The speaker declared that one of the best investments for a minister was a good razor well and frequently used, and then added that a little shoe polish well applied was likewise always acceptable to the public.

The public puts a premium upon a minister's good appearance and it is right that it should.

STEWARDS

The Methodist doctrine on money and the Kingdom is that a man is a steward of his possessions. We find the statement in a Methodist paper that in an area of many thousand subscribers to the Centenary Fund of the M. E. Church not a man has cancelled his subscription who is a good steward. In concrete expression, those who set aside a definite portion of their income have not cried "hard times" and begged to be excused of their vows.

That, it seems to us, is the one fundamental thing that the Church must enlarge upon—the matter of teaching the people to consider a definite portion as the Lord's part. One-tenth is the generally agreed amount and is Biblical. This matter of giving when we can, or when we feel like it, is not a safe foundation on which for us to plan the Lord's work.

When we have taught our people sufficiently the doctrine of stewardship, the Church's financial needs will be met, "drives" will be no more needed, and our institutions and enterprises will not suffer.

AN OVERSIGHT

Denominational leaders set aside February 27 to March 5 as a prayer period for our schools and colleges. We overlooked calling attention to this in time for its full observance. We are sure, however, that our schools and colleges will be remembered in prayer. Not only the institutions, but the students that their footsteps may be guided in aiding in world problems.

Automobile accidents in the United States claimed 1,474 more victims in 1919 than were killed in accidents on American railways, according to comparative figures compiled by the Southern Railway System from official reports recently issued by the Census Bureau and the Interstate Commerce Commission. Deaths from automobile accidents showed a total of 7,969, an increase of 444 over 1918, for the Census Bureau's registration area, comprising about 80 percent of the country's total population. Sixty-six of the large cities had 3,808 deaths from automobile accidents. In railway accidents the report of the Interstate Commerce Commission shows that 6,495 persons were killed, this figure being lower than for any previous year since 1898 when the number of persons using the railways and employed on them was much smaller than in 1919. In the total of 1919 are included 2,553 trespassers and 1,882 other persons, not either passengers or employees, of whom a large percentage were the victims of collisions between automobiles and railway trains.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

JAPAN AND THE KOREANS

The cruel methods employed by the Japanese Government in exterminating the Koreans who have moved into the Chientas district of China, and the general attitude of the Government toward the Koreans, have caused considerable comment among thoughtful people of other countries. Among these, Dr. S. H. Martin, Canadian Presbyterian medical missionary, gives an astonishing account of the way the Christians of Korean extraction are being ruthlessly exterminated. He states that more than 15,000 Japanese soldiers have been sent in the Chientas country, burning the homes and destroying the food supplies of the Koreans, and that he has the names of thirty-two villages where murder and fire have been used.

According to The Christian Advocate (New York), the protests of Dr. Martin brought an official statement in behalf of the Japanese War Office written by Major-General Sato which admits the charges and says:

"Speedy executions and the burning of houses have been rendered necessary, because the Chinese have expressed anxiety that the Japanese shall accomplish their task of stamping out outlawry and Korean plots as speedily as possible, then withdraw. It is a coincidence that many of the plotters that have been executed have been Christians, but plotters in many cases ally themselves with missions for the sake of the security thus afforded."

The statement is taken as a clever piece of Japanese diplomacy. The facts as presented by the Advocate show that many Koreans, especially those not content to remain in Korea under Japanese rule, crossed the boundary into China during the past two years. Among these are numerous Christian converts; while villages made exodus together as did the Pilgrims or the Huguenots in former days.

Japanese mandatory authorities in Korea, believing rightly or wrongly that plots were laid against them in these colonies, sent an army of invasion—"a punitive expedition"—into China to "smash the center of trouble", as General Sato says, regardless of the fact that many innocent persons would probably suffer.

The Advocate would have these "boundry breakers hailed to a court of justice", and it believes that international law should be enforced for the protection of innocent people.

PAYING THE WAR BILL

The apparent magnanimity of the $55,000,000,000 indemnity which the Allies have laid against Germany for her conduct in the Great War has caused a number of financiers in this country as well as in Germany to protest and "plead for mercy". But, on the other hand the question of payment has been summed up under the following question by the Literary Digest: "Shall Germany or France pay the War Bill?"

It seems that if the Allies are to take the blame of "footing the bill" from Germany that it will fall on France whose financial status and means of paying her national debt is far below that of the nation which she has helped conquer, considering man-power and manufacturing enterprises. Though there are many things to be considered in a just settlement of the bill which will lead toward a better possible feeling between the two nations, it must be remembered that Germany has caused the needless destruction of thousands of towns, villages, farms, railroads, factories. In the conduct of her ruthless warfare in France, while her own soil remained practically untouched. Someone must settle for this destruction—either Germany or France.

According to the proposed plan of the Allies, Germany will be given 42 years in which to pay this indemnity. By allowing the period of time cover a considerable number of years, it is thought that Germany will have more time during which to "get on her feet" and recuperate her industries so that the strain of payment will not be greater than the people can bear. In spite of the present strength of protests of the German government officials and the sentiments which they are catering to in the United States in their own behalf, no doubt an approximate of the indemnity as fixed at present will have to be accepted.

HOW IS A COLLEGE STUDENT TO MEASURE HIS INTELLECTUAL GROWTH?

The official "exam" and quizz are not altogether satisfactory, though they may serve to pass him up the grades which lead toward his "sheepskin".

Another means of measuring his intellectual growth is given by Pres. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, in the form of a set of questions which the student may propose to himself and which should be able to answer. He says:

"Ask yourselves, am I gaining in correctness and precision in the use of the mother tongue? Am I gaining in those refined and gentle manners which are the expression of fixed habits of thought and conduct? Am I gaining in the power and habit of reflection? Am I gaining in sound standards of feeling and appreciation? Am I gaining in the power of growth? Am I gaining in the power to do merely efficiently? By these answers one may determine for himself whether he is being educated."

THE KANSAS COAL STRIKE

It seems that Kansas is prepared for coal strikes. At least, a trial of her preparedness is being demonstrated since the recent strike of the Kansas Coal-Miners Association, in which President Alexander Howat of the Association and the members of the district board were ordered to be arrested for violation of the new Industrial Court Law of that State. The idea of this law is to do away with the "tie up" made in industry on account of unnecessary strikes.

GO-TO-CHURCH SUNDAY GOOD MOVE

(The Following Good Advice Was Read Recently By Miss Mamie Pickard at a Get-together Meeting at the Christian Church Chapel Hill, North Carolina.)

SOME one in Joilet, Ill., conceived the idea of Go-to-Church Sunday and the movement started and now it has become a world-wide movement. Many good results have been accomplished from this movement. One woman said that she never knew that any one was interested enough in her church affiliations to care whether she was there or not.

Every Sunday should be a go-to-church Sunday, of course, but unfortunately there are many church members who have fallen into the habit of making Stay-at-home Sunday, Automobile-Sunday and Outing or Visiting-Sunday more frequently on the calendar than the Sundays that they occupy their seats in the church.

When we joined the church we entered into covenant both with man and with God. With church members we promised to labor for the coming of the Kingdom. With God we promised to serve Him and obey His command. Have we kept this covenant? How may we serve Him? One way we may serve God is to get the church-going habit. We are all nothing but a bundle of habits and why not good habits? We can make ourselves just about what we want to be if we try hard enough. Church work like all other work worth doing is hard, and requires patience and persistence. We often times make mistakes and failures and think that we are not making any progress. What we need it to have faith in human nature and above all to have faith in God. He will bring success out of failure and triumph out of apparent defeat. Try again. Try it in a different way. Try it with fresh prayers. Try it with more frankness. Try it with greater enthusiasm. Every good plan can be worked and every good habit formed. If we fail at first because of some failure in the method, or the time, or the persons that tried it.

This solemn covenant with God is not satisfied merely by attending meetings, necessary as that is. It is not satisfied by any perfunctory outward observance, however scrupulous. It is satisfied only by the hearts longing for the Kingdom of God that gives us no rest till we are doing all we can toward that great consummation. Lets ask ourselves the question, does our church membership mean this to me?

Most of us are pretty well absorbed in work during the week. Sunday makes a definite break, which will not only permit a fuller development of home life, a relaxation, a chance for those who are shut in (the office, store, or pondering over their studies) for the week, but invites a consideration of finer ideals. The act of worship, the contemplation of the great problems of life and destiny, tend to broaden the horizon and take us out of the petty affairs of daily occupation. We never go to church (if we go with the right attitude) that we do not find the sort of service that brings inspiration and richer life.

The best reason for church-going is that we may know that Christ wants us to go. Our faults and sins are no reason why we should not go to church, but the very reason why we should go. Some one has said that the Sabbath without church-going is like a church without a foundation. Longfellow says that the Sabbath is the golden clasp which binds together the volume of the weak.

One fundamental reason why parents should attend church is that it will help to form ideals for their children. If parents do not go to church the children will not have even ideals and will be absolutely indifferent.

Then if we can help others to form ideals by going to church we are keeping our covenant with God and with man. Our church expects this much of us and this is no more than it has a right to get but no church will ever get from its members what they should until they receive their desires and longings.

The church-goer is progressive. He never attends church meetings without coming away stronger. Then let us begin now.

WHY SUPPORT THE CHURCH PAPER?

BY C. G. SHUTT.

1. Because it is such a tremendous factor in the development of the home life and Christian character that it is indispensable. You just can't get along without it. Talk to me about getting along without socks or without sugar in my coffee or without grease in my biscuit or cut out wheat bread altogether and live on corn bread, and I will listen to you; but please do not intimate to me that I might get along without my Church paper. Talk about economy! Eliminating the Church paper from the home is the poorest kind of economy. That is like running an automobile without oil to save the oil. Sure to be a wreck down the road! Yes, and thousands of homes have been wrecked which might have been saved by throwing out the blood-and-thunder rot in time. People often allow such stuff to creep into the home because it is cheap. Cheap, nothing! You pay a big price for literature; no matter how cheap, which proves to be a factor in helping to break up the home. Just wait until Sallie Jane, you daughter, runs away with some no-account fellow, and you wish to know why. Just drag out a small cartload of cheap stuff about elopements, divorces, and so forth which have been accumulating in the girl's room, and you can read the "why" on the surface. Great heavens, this is no fancy picture; it is real. That poisonous rot is now stacked up in your girl's room; yes, and in your boy's room too. If you do not believe it, go in and nose around a little. Sometimes a man is fined heavily for what the courts call "negligent manslaughter." Firearms or poisons are thrown about the place just any old way; and the children get hold of these things, and a funeral follows. Possibly there should be more fines and bigger fines of that character. But what shall I say of the criminal carelessness which allows the devil's arms and poison in the shape of corrupt literature to lie about the house to start the boy or girl on the road to ruin?

2. We say that we believe that the kingdom of God is first, and the development of that part of our nature which is nearest to God is paramount to all other things. But don't you know you will have a very, very rocky time convincing your children and your neighbors that you believe that the kingdom of God is first while you have from two to six papers coming into your home regularly which represent various other interests, but not a thing in the way of a paper to represent your Church or your religion? Under such conditions have not your children a reason to even doubt your sincerity?

3. The Church papers have been the pioneers of all moral reforms that have gone on from time to time in the land. Everybody knows—or everybody ought to know—how the great daily papers fought the prohibition measure to the last ditch. "Yes," says one, "but they came over at last." O, yes, they came over, but they came over after the religious press and the pulpit had silenced their guns by creating such a powerful public sentiment that they were overwhelmed.

4. The Church papers are the molders of public opinion, while, as a rule, the great dailies find out what public opinion is and cater to it. The tone of the secular press on the Sunday question which is now being discussed is sickening, silly, and horribly disgusting. Why this attitude on the part of the secular press? I can tell you why. These papers know that it is popular to break the Sabbath. There is the secret of it. The world, the flesh, and the devil have gone into a combine to destroy the Christian Sabbath, and the daily papers are in a hurry to join the combine. Though the Christian Sabbath is one of the pillars upon which our Christian civilization rests, all manner of ridicule and sport is made by the daily papers of the measure which proposes to throw safeguards around the Sabbath.

5. No Christian man can afford to go without the information which the Church paper contains. You can well afford to stand by your Church papers for the good they have already done. Brother, renew that ADVOCATE by all means. Do not once think of giving it up.—Christian Advocate.

S. S. AND C. E. FIELD SECRETARY

At an adjourned session of the Board of Religious Education which met in Raleigh September 21, 1920, Miss Lucy Eldredge was elected all-time Field Secretary for Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. To some of our people Miss Eldredge needs no introduction as she has been at our College (Elon) for the past three and one-half years. She is now taking with her senior work a course in Religious Education. We feel that we are very fortunate in getting such a competent and consecrated young woman to take up this work, for as the old saying goes "to know her is to love her." We know our people will be glad to hear that Miss Eldredge will be at our Sunday school Convention ready to serve when she can. She expects to take up the work July 1, 1921, and will have temporary headquarters in Burlington until work is more fully developed then other arrangements will be made according to the demands of the work. We want every Christian worker in the Southern Christian Convention to remember daily in prayer our Field Secretary of Sunday school and Christian Endeavor of the S. C. C.

We must, dear friends, be up and doing to help our young people. It's our opportunity, let's do our best to save them for Christ and His Church.

DENOMINATIONAL SUCCESS

(Editorial in The Methodist Protestant)

HERE is much talk in these days about the waste of resources through denominational cleavages. We are told that things might be a great deal better if all Christians were in one Church. We very much doubt the truth of that statement, and we have a greater doubt concerning its wisdom, and yet we are not averse to union, organic union, where it can be done without force.

But organic union seems a great way off just now. We are therefore interested in asking the question, since denominations are likely to persist, what is necessary to denominational success?

One thing necessary is to have a firm hold on the eternal verities. Whatever difference of administration there may be, and however wise it may be in organic type, no denomination has a right to exist, let alone to persist, that has not a firm hold upon the truth as it is revealed to us in God's holy Word. We have not yet been able to see how any other source of the truth as it is in Jesus, can come to us who are His Followers. In the last analysis there is much of spiritual truth that has to come by faith. It is out of the realm of reason. It belongs to the realm of faith. The truth as it is in Jesus is the first element in a successful denomination, and we believe that our own church can claim that we stand for the revealed truth.

But another element in a successful denomination is found in the character of her ministry. Are they men of God? Are they trained for their work? Do they know the power of the resurrection of the Son of God? Have they put all upon the altar, and have they learned that sacrifice is the badge of a divine call to the ministry? When God commanded Ananias to open the eyes of Saul of Tarsus, He told Ananias that He would show Saul "How great things he must suffer for My sake." There is no change in the office of the Christian ministry which does away with the hardship of service. A denomination is a success that can show a ministry baptized by the Holy Spirit, and counting all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus.

The denomination whose ministry has found the cross will eventually win the crown.

But another element of denominational success is the character of its membership. Are they holy men of God? There is an idea abroad that spirituality is necessary only to the ministry, but that idea did not come from the Bible, or from Jesus Christ. No denomination can succeed unless it is made up of people who are born from above. Where there is no spirituality in the membership there may be assemblies, and audiences, and organization, but it is not a church. Only as the Spirit of God is allowed to have His way in the heart, can we find success in the church.

But there must be denominational unity, if we are to have denominational success. A divided denomination can never meet God's will. It is absurd for an army to go into battle when the various regiments are fighting among themselves, as it is for a denomination to go forward into the Lord's battles, when the various units, that go to make up its strength, are bitterly hostile one to another. A divided denomination is a hindrance to the progress of the kingdom of God, and can never succeed. Those who are responsible for the division are not saints, but sinners. As a denomination we are not ready to say that we have organic unity. Here is one point in our weakness. We are not a successful denomination judged by its standard.

A successful denomination must recognize that the work of saving the world is a supernatural work, and the new birth is also a supernatural work. We must know that only as God co-operates with us, can we succeed. Ethical goodness can never save a denomination from the condemnation of God. A man, or a church may be ethically good, and at the same time spiritually powerless. A successful denomination must have the blessing of God upon it, and God will not bless a denomination that has not taken His will absolutely as the law of its life, and conduct.

These are some of the elements of a successful denomination. There are others, of course, but how do we measure up to these? It is enough for us to consider that question just now. We want to succeed. We want that kind of success that God wants. We can have it if we are willing to go to Calvary. We believe that the supreme word of the admonition of God to the workers in His kingdom today is—sacrifice. Dare the Church go to Calvary. Upon an affirmative answer to that question waits the salvation of the world.

FOUR SQUARE

IV—Christian Endeavor

Some Christian leaders would merge Christian Endeavor with the Sunday school class. There is some duplication of work in theory at least now. Christian Endeavor, however, stands for some things which are not undertaken by the Sunday school. Coordination of the activities wherein common ground is occupied will relieve all duplication. It is the duty of Christian statesmanship to work this problem out.

In the first place Christian Endeavor is the training school of the church. It is the laboratory wherein Christian principles are experimentally to be tested out and the impetus given for larger things in the days ahead. Christian Endeavor recognizes that a time comes when training should cease. For those who have reached that stage it provides honorary or Alumni membership, but discontinues active membership. Some friends of the Sunday school have been bold enough to say that it too needs a definite curriculum, with graduate courses provided, and when these have been completed, the pupil should sustain an honorary or Alumni relationship to the school. There is much to be said for this. Certainly Christian Endeavor is wise in terminating the period of apprenticeship and in insisting that those who have been trained should take up the journeyman's obligations in the Kingdom's service.

Christian Endeavor, too, deserves our most ardent approval in that it stands preeminently for loyalty to Jesus Christ and outspoken allegiance to Him. It is good in the presence of our peers to witness for Christ. Many a wavering faith has been greatly steadied by testifying in the Christian Endeavor prayer meeting for Jesus. Such testimony is doubly worth while since it comes not from a question proposed by the teacher as in the Sunday school class, but from an inescapable impression within. In Revelation we read that Satan was cast out of Heaven by "the blood of the Lamb and the word of their testimony." How important then that young life should have opportunity freely to testify for Him!

Christian Endeavor too, is loyal to the Church and its enterprises. The observant pastor of a worthy Christian Endeavor Society knows where he may always go for willing service, gladly rendered, whenever occasion arises. And the wise pastor always sees to it that such occasions constantly arise. Some organized classes have become self-conscious and proceeded along paths of their own choosing, without reference to the Sunday school as such or to Church. Cooperation, loyal support, willing service—such is the spirit of Christian Endeavor. Such is certainly its aim. Its committee work should be coordinated with the social service program of the Sunday school.

And finally Christian Endeavor stands unequivocally for fellowship with all God's people. What a crowning characteristic this! In February 1881, denomination aloofness, not to say sectarian selfishness, was the outstanding characteristic of organized Christianity in America. Behold, what changes the intervening years have wrought! Why? Because in those separatist days God sent Rev. Francis E. Clark to say to the oncoming generation of young people He wished His people to fellowship one with another. And now the Federal Council of Churches has come, and now conventions are held every year and many times during a year in America and throughout the world to discuss the meaning for us of Christ's prayer for the oneness of His followers. Thank God for the broad Christian fellowship of Christian Endeavor! Thank God for Francis E. Clark! This far-seeing prophet by his leavening Movement has shown us the way of "denominational disarmament." Who follows in his train?

W. A. HARPER.

IF I WERE A PREACHER

BY LAYMAN W. A. HARPER

THE more I am associated with ministers and know the sacrifice of their lives and the agony of their hearts for the gospel's sake, the less I am inclined to give them any advice. I feel like taking off my hat reverently and breathing a prayer on their behalf. What I shall say, then, will I hope be interpreted in the light of this love I entertain for the ministers of God, among whom I am happy to number many precious friendships.

I shall take it for granted that the minister is assured of his call from God, for no man would otherwise enter upon such a work of sacrifice. I shall also take it for granted that thorough preparation has been made, for no man called of God should be willing to dishonor Him with half-efficient service. I shall also still further take it for granted that the minister is in the field of labor to which God and the brethren have called him, with his sole motive the service he can render because of Christ. My experience convinces me that I am thoroughly warranted in taking all these items for granted. Thus spirited and prepared the minister arrives on his new field. What would I do, were I in his place?

I think I would adopt a Church Year. I would not perhaps give public announcement to this, but I would adopt and work toward its realization. I might not get it working well immediately, but that would not discourage me. I would press steadily on, remembering the Kingdom's law of growth, first the blade, then the ear, and then the full corn in the ear. I would let the Church Year of my adoption be flexible and readily adjustable to the general program of my denomination and the cooperative efforts of sister Churches. But what is a Church Year? I have fully discussed this in Chapter IV of "The New Church For The New Time", but I may briefly here say that it is putting system into the work of the Church. The experience of the Christian world seems to indicate that it should begin with October and provide by periods, differing in different congregations, for growth in numbers, the raising of the local budget, benevolences, growth in fellowship and grace, various types of training and instruction, worship, the regular Christian festivals, social service, evangelism, missions, and every other good. I would not wait for things just to happen. I would plan definitely and prayerfully for them and so be able to use them tellingly for the development of my parish. I should like to go into detail here, but space forbids.

I think I would recognize the educational need of the day. The strength of the Roman Church is its educational program. The strength of Protestantism is its evangelistic spirit. Its weakness is Catholicism's strength. Jesus was first of all a teacher and the teaching function of the Church is primary in importance. I think I would set about constructing a strong system of religious education in my parish, beginning with the Sunday school, aiming to bring it up to the accepted and approved standards, and coordinating all the educational work of my Church with it, for example the missionary societies, Christian Endeavor, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and the rest. I would also, I think, provide for week-day religious instruction, for a Daily Vacation Bible School, and for the training of my leaders in all departments of Church work. I would also endeavor to link my local educational program up with the larger program of my denomination, or rather I would recognize that my local work is part and parcel, fountain-source, as it were, for the larger denominational work. Being engaged in the work of Christian education, I would understand that my Sunday school is a foundation stone of my Church college and I would everywhere impress that my young people should hopefully look forward to the time not when they ought, but when they can go there to prepare themselves for life and service in the Church.

I think I would magnify my obligation to preach a full gospel, as God gave me to understand it. I would not be polemical nor sectarian nor sensational nor opinionated in my discourses. I would search for themes of messages in the Scriptures, the books of devout Christian writers, and the social order round about me. I would seek the guidance of the Most High for my sermons. I would be a prophet of the Lord to the profit of my people and the Kingdom. I would hold up the life of Jesus as well as the teachings of Jesus for my people to follow, and I would expect their lives to increasingly grow into the likeness of His. If they did not, I would resign.

Finally for this time, I think I would recognize the difference between the functions of the priest, which as an ordained man it is the custom of the Church for me alone to perform for my people, and of the preacher, which I would share with my people, men and women alike. I am myself a lay-preacher on occasion. I know from what my fellow-laymen say to me occasionally after a little talk that our ministers could greatly reinforce their own messages by a freer use of laymen and laywomen in their pulpits. We laymen would rather not do it, but the right method of approach will bring us to accept any responsibility for the Kingdom's and our minister's sake.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

A recent writer in one of the great Church papers of Virginia hits the mark squarely when he says:

"Heresy cannot stand poverty and struggle. It (heresy) must be well fed and clothed, or it refuses to function. Heresy belongs to big salaries and important positions, but when men face sin and fight it with no other equipment than the sword of the Spirit, they must hark back to the old rugged cross of Calvary!"

How true!

"Yea, I'll cherish the old rugged Cross....
Till my trophies at last I lay down;
I will cling to the Old Rugged Cross....
And exchange it some day for a crown!"

"Revolutionizing the Rural Church" was the subject of a paper recently published in The Religious Herald. The paper was originally prepared for and read before the Virginia Baptist Ministers' Conference. It is certainly a timely discussion—the country church, and all others, so far as I know, evidently needs to be thoroughly revitalized. But how can it be done? That is the great question at issue. The writer of that article presents some excellent points, but it is not clear to my mind that he sees his way clearly to gain such an end. He suggests a number of means, and in the main his suggestions are very good, but they seem to come short of the one essential and that is the immediate presence and power of the Holy Spirit, as the life-giving agent. There is no hope for the Church apart from the Spirit's power. It took the coming and operation of the Spirit to revitalize the Church at Pentecost, and nothing short of His power and operation can now do that work. The Church needs the revitalizing of its life today just as much, and may be more, than it did on the day of Pentecost. Let us seek His help to gain this great end!

He is a slave who dares not stand alone with God! How many good people there are who are bound hand and foot by the ties of society—the dictations of a few men and women who have set themselves up as standards of right. It is now stated through the public press that some of the most awful gambling dens in existence have been found to be operated by women. This is an outrage, not only upon womanhood, but also human society. A writer is one of the Church papers says:

"I have seen a church with a goodly number of 'high flyers' who play cards, dance, drink, attend races and gamble."

It is a shame that these elements must be permitted to carry on such a business to the detriment, not only of the church, but also to the ruin of society and to the personal damnation of many souls. These people are slaves to sin and to the customs of society.

"They are slaves who dare not be In the right with two or three!"

This is the day of study classes. We are seeking to learn of missions, and that is a splendid thing to do, but if your study is not backed in the right way, it will mean but little to you and the cause of Christ. Your study should be backed by a life which is surrendered to God. Knowledge is a great power in the world, if it be backed by a life which has been touched by the mighty hand of God.

There has been a bit of interesting discussion of late over the election of a new Bishop (Episcopal) in the State of New York. Referring to this matter, The Churchman (Episcopalian) says, and we think its remarks are most suggestive of what ought to be:

"The next Bishop of New York must build the Cathedral, we are told. A cathedral is the last thing which this great city needs. It is filled with stone, and brick, and mortar. Is there religion enough among us to be housed in a mighty nave? If we have the gospel, a tent will serve our needs. If we do not trust Christ, cathedrals are only a mockery. And we do not trust Him. We put our trust where civilization is staking its confidence—in the power of money."

It is a shame, not that the Church has not money, but that it is publicly affirmed that the Church is putting its trust in money. Alas! when shall we get the true spiritual sense of life? Why do we not more surely seek to do the things which Christ has commanded? If we have Christ, we may have fellowship with Him in a tent, but if we do not have Him in our hearts, then no amount of money can build a cathedral that will bring Christ to us.

SUFFOLK LETTER

A TRAGIC accident occurred at Myrtle, Virginia, February 17, 1921, in which two were killed and one badly injured. Ralph Pierce, sixteen-year-old son of Jack Pierce, driving a new Ford car, in which sat his sister, Mary Lily, age twenty-one and three days, and his brother Herman's wife, Myrtle Irene, age sixteen, two months and eighteen days. The Norfolk and Western "Cannonball" fast train, does not stop in the village of Myrtle, and it is a grade crossing. The train struck the car as it crossed the track. Ralph was badly injured and the other two were instantly killed. Ralph is in the Virginian Hospital in Suffolk and the two young women are in premature graves in the churchyard of Bethlehem Christian church, three miles from Suffolk.

Herman Pierce and Myrtle Irene Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Pierce, were married by Rev. Dr. I. W. Johnson on last Christmas day, and the bride came to this tragic end just fifty-four days after that happy Christmas.

Mary Lily is survived by her parents, six sisters and five brothers. Myrtle Irene is survived by her husband, parents, one sister and three brothers; and both leave many relatives and a host of friends.

The excitement in and around the quiet village of Myrtle that fatal afternoon was the saddest in its history; and reminds me of April 18, 1887, when James

M. Luke and his sister, Mrs. J. C. W. Wright were killed by a tornado near that same village of Myrtle. I had married Mr. and Mrs. Wright on December 16, 1886, just four months and two days before this death and double funeral occurred. Mr. Wright was unable to be at the funeral having been carried hundreds of yards into the forest by the wind; and Ralph Pierce does not yet know that his sister and brother's wife were killed. He does not remember that he was in the car.

The funeral services in Bethlehem church were held on Saturday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, February 19, conducted by pastor E. T. Cotten, Rev. H. H. Butler, Dr. I. W. Johnson and W. W. Staley. Cotten read Scripture lesson and made announcements; Butler made the main prayer; Johnson read lesson and offered prayer, and Staley spoke briefly on Romans 8:28. A quartet from the Suffolk church rendered "Abide with me", "Looking This Way", "Safe in the Arms of Jesus", and "Nearer My God to Thee". Mrs. E. T. Cotten, Mrs. A. D. Brinkley, Mr. W. W. Ballard, and Mr. R. J. Brinkley were the quartet, with Mrs. I. W. Johnson at the piano.

The church was packed to the limit of its capacity, both aisles were filled with people who stood reverently through the entire service. That double funeral of these two young women of that congregation was the most solemn occasion ever known in that church. It was a sermon, a spiritual lesson, a heartsearching scene. To look into the face of that young husband, and those grief-stricken families was enough to break a heart of stone; but beyond that sad hour was the hope of reunion in the "Home of the Soul". The church mourns the loss of members, the community weeps with them that weep, and I understand the family has hardly been able to eat since the awful shock.

Two white coffins covered with banks of beautiful flowers. Two graves, side by side, lined with white. A weeping throng. "Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust", and nothing remains but memories of dear young lives and hope of seeing them again clothed in white.

W. W. STALEY.

"I have been taking THE SUN forty-eight years. I love the paper more all the while and look forward for its coming as I would the return of an expected member of my family."—J. R. Hinton, Sr., Sunbury, N. C.

"THE CHRISTIAN SUN was a welcome visitor to my home in childhood. It was the first paper I remember seeing my mother read. My parents joined the Christian Church in 1892 and have loved THE SUN ever since."—Mrs. W. A. Hand, Tifton, Ga.

OUR WHOLE CHURCH UNDER OUR WHOLE FOREIGN MISSION PROGRAM

FEBRUARY first will be long remembered by the members of the Foreign Mission Department of the Mission Board of the Christian Church, the representatives of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention and Missionary, Rev. E. C. Fry, for on that day they met together to consider the tremendous responsibility of our Church in its missionary task abroad. It will be remembered also because of its delightful fellowship, its fine spirit, and the manifest leading of the Spirit.

We are confident that the entire program and plans worked out through a full day and evening of study, conference and prayer, will be of great inspiration and full of assurance to our whole brotherhood. All the decisions were unanimous, the discussions were most sincere, frank, thorough. We feel sure that it was most profitable for so many of our missionary leaders to counsel together how our whole Church might more adequately undertake for God the challenging task He has for us. It was a real pleasure for the Mission Board to have the presence, inspiration, fine spirit, brotherly counsel of the representatives of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention.

The plans and enlarged program will be made known through the Church papers and the office of the Foreign Mission Secretary. We must earnestly appeal to every member of the Christian Church now to pray more sincerely, give more sacrificially, and encourage in a most aggressive way our foreign mission work. If the whole brotherhood may catch the spirit of the meeting of the first day of February there will be a going forward with our whole mission work.

We were all delighted with the states-manlike survey and report brought to us from his recent study of conditions in Japan by our Foreign Mission Secretary, Rev. W. P. Minton.

WARREN H. DENISON.

OUR ENLARGED MISSIONARY POLICY AND PROGRAM

IN creating the present Mission Board, Incorporated of the Southern Christian Convention, the following fundamentals were formulated as a basis of the Board's procedure: (1) "That we affiliate with the American Christian Convention in our mission work, and that the Board (herein provided for) be and is hereby instructed to work out such a plan of affiliation as will bring home to this Convention a sense of responsibility and need in the home and foreign field, and lay before the people of the Convention such information as will cause a deepening interest in our mission work. (2) That the Mission Board herein provided for shall be charged with the responsibility of collecting and expending all mission funds coming into its treasury by virtue of its official connection with the Southern Christian Convention, and shall seek in every way possible to promote the missionary interests of the Convention" (Adopted at Franklin Va., by the Southern Christian Convention May 2, 1918.)

As the method of affiliation with the American Christian Convention never had been worked out "so as to bring home to the people of the Southern Convention a sense of responsibility" in doing its Foreign Mission work, after much unavailing correspondence and representatives from each Board had passed from the one to the other, it was deemed wise by the two Boards to have a joint session and go over all points in the matter, that there might be a thorough and comprehensive understanding of the polity, position and programs of each. Accordingly on February 1, 1921, the authorized representatives of the Southern Board, namely, Pres. C. H. Rowland and G. O. Lankford, Brethren K. B. Johnson and J. A. Williams, and J. O. Atkinson, met with the five members of the American Christian Convention, Foreign Board and Rev. W. P. Minton, Mission Secretary in the mission rooms at Dayton, Ohio.

Rev. W. P. Minton, Secretary, made a full report of our missionary needs as they now obtain both in Japan and Porto Rico and also set forth a budget, calculated to supply these needs, ample to challenge the faith and the resources of all our forces. The Southern Board had never desired, or had any disposition to have, any separatist movement; but did very much desire, as had been expressed frequently, to know just what we were doing in the foreign field, and what was expected of us to do, in order that the sense of obligation and responsibility might be brought home to us of the Southern Convention. We were most happy to find that the American Christian Convention Board was as ready and as anxious for us to have this direct information and this sense of our personal responsibility as we ourselves were. We found that to carry out our enlarged program for Japan and Porto Rico, which seems absolutely essential if our work is to continue and to develop in these two fields, a total of $94,853.99 should be had; which amount was scaled to $76,870.99 in the final make up of the present year budget. To this budget we were already practically pledged, and the $76,870.99 must be raised if we were to maintain our honor and credit in the work this year.

Now that the people of our Southern Convention might know what they were doing, and feel the full obligation of doing it our Southern Board proposed that as our part of this program for the present year we undertake to finish in Tokyo, Japan, the mission home at a cost of $9,000.00 additional; and that we also build the kindergarten and night school at a total cost of $1,200.00. (In this connection it may be inserted that the Kindergarten and night school is all our building, and that kindergarten and night school work is now about all, so far as schools are concerned, left open and untrammelled by the Government of Japan for the educational missionary worker.) The American Christian Convention Board was happy to accept this proposition and to undertake the larger program in the light of such a proposition.

If our people are willing to carry out a program of this magnitude for the present year, it was believed that a work in China would appeal to many and that with the China work added neither the Japan nor the Porto Rican work would suffer, but all would be helped. Accordingly it was decided that "50 per cent of the foreign funds of the Southern Christian Convention should, after the $21,000 above referred to shall have been paid in, go into a work in China, and that this amount would be supplemented by a 20% increase from the American Christian Convention Board for a period of five years". It was found that we could begin a very safe and promising work in China on a basis of $15,000.00 a year for the first five years, and the Southern Board will undertake to supply half this amount; a like sum going into our already established work in Japan and Porto Rico.

The American Christian Convention Board will furnish us ample reports, quarterly and annually so that our people may be advised through THE SUN, and other printed media fully of what is being accomplished.

Without going into minor and uninteresting details, it may be said, as was so well said in last week's SUN by Secretary Minton and Chairman Denison, the meeting was a most fortunate and happy one, and is bound to be church making in its outcome. The finest Christian fellowship prevailed throughout, and there was rejoicing on the part of all present that we had the faith, as well as the fellowship, to undertake such a program of real progress for our mission cause in the foreign fields. The closest cooperation of all our mission forces and factors, and absolute unity of purpose and objective, seem assured as the outcome of joint meeting at Dayton, and February 1, 1921 will be long and lovingly remembered by all who were privileged to sit in Conference as visitors to, or members of our Mission Boards.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

MISSIONARY RALLY DAYS

The Woman's Mission Board of the North Carolina Christian Conference is arranging for Missionary Rally Days to be held in every District in the Conference during the month of May, using practically the same districts as in the Men and Millions campaign. The object of these meetings is to stimulate the work of the women throughout the Conference; increase the number of missionary organizations and open up to our women a larger field of service for the Master.

Leaders for the various Districts, also dates, will be announced as early as possible.

MRS. W. H. CARROLL, Chairman.

A WOMAN MISSIONARY IN CONGRESS

Miss Alice M. Robertson, Congressman-elect from Okla., and the only woman member of the new Congress, was for many years a Presbyterian home missionary among the Indians. She has recently sent to her home mission board a request for prayer and expressed the hope that she might still be of service to the board. A part of her platform while in Congress is, "I am willing to give six days full service a week and work as hard as any man for the six days, but on the Sabbath I will rest."

HOW A WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY HELPED MAKE A GREAT CHURCH

The congregation of Euclid Avenue Christian church (Disciples) Cleveland, Ohio, supports a whole mission station in Africa, preachers, teachers, nurses, medical missionaries and all. Do you wonder why, and how? A few facts about the Woman's Missionary Society in that church tell the secret. "This organization has a circulating library of two hundred books which are kept busy. Three hundred and fifty women of the congregation are subscribers to the Disciples Missionary Magazine, The World Call. Every Thursday afternoon a group of women of the Society meet at the church for prayer, and a program of personal visitations is carried on continuously. The missionary idea is the outstanding interest of the congregational life."

If we had a few missionary Societies like this one in some of our Christian churches we would soon have a dozen mission stations where we now have one, and hundreds of missionaries where we now have tens—and we would soon have a live, growing and powerful Christian Church in the United States and in Canada.

Of the total number of country homes in the United States thirty-two percent are equipped with running water.

"I have been a subscriber to THE SUN for over forty years and want it to continue to shine in my home."—Mrs. Edd Cobb, Franklin, Va.

OUR ORPHANAGE

HELP COMPLETE THE BABY HOME

Our new building (The Baby Home) or a home for the small children, will soon be completed. It is our one hope and desire to be able to turn this home over to the Trustees at their annual meeting in the month of May complete and every dollar paid.

If all our people could visit the Orphanage and see this new building, which will be a credit to our denomination, I feel sure that each one would want to help us accomplish this one long cherished hope and desire.

It will be a home for many little children, fatherless and motherless and helpless and in need, for many years to come. So each dollar you invest in this home will be a good investment for you and will return to you in years to come many times larger in the service of boys and girls who have been trained in this splendid home.

In order to carry out this plan we are going to ask each church and Sunday school to make us a liberal "Easter Offering" either on Easter Sunday or one Sunday in the month of April so we may, with the individual offerings, and we hope they will be many, be able to pay every dollar on the new building and open it without a single dollar of indebtedness.

I know if the Sunday schools and churches will do this that the Ladies Aid Societies will furnish the building. I have never called on the good women since I have been in this work to furnish anything needed, but that they have always come to my rescue gladly and I feel sure in this undertaking they will be only too glad to do this. It is sometime before Easter, but I want you to begin now to make your plans for this special offering and then work your plan. Let every church and Sunday school have a part. Let every individual have pride enough in his church and denomination to want to give something for this great undertaking in his Church.

TWO LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: I am a little girl nearly three years old, and I want to join the band of cousins. My father is dead and mother and I live at grandfather's. I go to Sunday school every Sunday at the Monticello Christian church. Miss Lelia McKinney is my teacher. Enclosed you will find ten cents, my dues for this month. Love to the little cousins.—Parnelle Rudd.

I sympathize with you in the loss of your father. My little baby girl lost her mother and she often sits on my knee and gives me lots of her little hugs and kisses. You must write often.—“Uncle Charley”.

Dear Uncle Charley: Daddy gives us all his pennies to send to the orphans and carry to Sunday school. I was three years old last September and brother will be two years old in April. Daddy is a doctor and is away from home most of the time, so we have to help our mother. We hunt up the eggs and feed the chickens. We have twenty-five little chickens. We are sending you $1.00 for the little orphans.—DeLacy and John Carter Foust.

I wish you would let me come down to see you and help you hunt eggs. I could be a little boy again.—“Uncle Charley.”

THE BULLETIN

Several notes on this page should have appeared last week but were crowded out for lack of space.

Rev. Victor Lightbourne and his assistant, Sam Davis, began a meeting with our High Point congregation on Sunday, February 20.

Brother John H. McAden, Semora, N. C., is in Edmund's Hospital, Danville, Va., for treatment and will be glad to hear from any of his friends.

We shall be glad to receive any item that will be of interest to the Brotherhood and will consider it a personal interest and kindness when any member of the Church can furnish any such items.

Bro. M. J. W. White writing under date of February 14 says: “The Lightbourne-Davis meeting closed last night. The church and Sunday school rooms were full to the overflowing. The Temple has been looking like old times.”

The contributions to the Chinese Relief Fund continue to grow and we are pleased to receive these donations and forward them to the A. C. C. office. All contributions will be acknowledged through THE SUN and a complete record kept in this office.

We have received a very unique little paper entitled The Holy Neck Herald, issued from the study of pastor W. M. Jay. The publication is 8½ X 11½ inches and has 16 pages. It is to be published monthly for “the promotion of Christ's Kingdom on earth”, and is designed especially to promote the interest and work in the Holy Neck church. May it continue to shine and herald the good news.

Rev. C. W. Hanson, LaGrange, Ga., in writing under date of February 21 says: “Our work here is going along nicely. Sunday, February 20, we received eight members. This makes nineteen members received since the Convention. Last Sunday at 11:00 Miss Blanche Crowder, a little girl, preached for us. The house was packed full and we had a great meeting. Miss Crowder is only 12 years old. She is a wonder. She is a member of the LaGrange church No. 2, and has been with us only a short time. I desire the prayers of the Brotherhood that God may richly bless this little girl's life and that the Spirit may lead her in her work.”

APPROVAL

Dear Brother Riddle:

When I read your editorial on “Union and Leakage”, I thought I would write and tell you how I liked it. I thought it was fine.

I have been hearing union from the brethren ever since I united with the Christian Church and I hollowed for same as loud as I could, but not a union with other denominations. Yes, I believe that when Christ prayed that they might be as He and His Father were one, He meant one in spirit. Efforts have been made with the Disciples of Christ and others; it has always been a failure except with the Christian Baptist.

Let us work friendly with all Christians endorsing fellowship, but let us be loyal to our own Church, and emphasize our five cardinal principles.

W. G. CLEMENTS.

HARDING'S CABINET

President-elect Harding has named the following men to compose his cabinet:

Secretary of State—Charles Evans Hughes, New York.

Secretary of the Treasury—Andrew Mellon, of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of War—John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts.

Attorney General—Harry M. Daugherty, of Ohio.

Postmaster General—Will H. Hays, of Indiana.

Secretary of the Navy—Edwin Denby, of Michigan.

Secretary of the Interior—A. B. Fall, of New Mexico.

Secretary of Agriculture—Henry Wallace, of Iowa.

Secretary of Commerce—Herbert Hoover of Calif.

Secretary of Labor—James J. Davis, Pennsylvania.

HERE AND THERE—BUT MOSTLY EVERYWHERE

On February 19 the United States Senate passed by a unanimous vote on the amendment to the Dillingham immigration bill, which will decrease the number of aliens permitted to enter this country yearly from five percent of the number now resident in this country. This will bring the total down from 592,000 to 350,000. In voting for the amendment Senators declared that immigration at this time was harmful to both the health and industry of this country. The typhus menace has become alarming and already three Americans in New York have died of this disease. Labor conditions in the country now do not provide adequate work for the number of our own citizens, let alone more foreign laborers. An effort is being made to divert immigration to the western coast, labor conditions there being more favorable.

Higher railroad passenger fares in North Carolina will become effective on March 29. This decision was rendered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, overriding the authority of the North Carolina State Corporation to fix passenger rates in the State. It has been reported that this ruling in the State with other cases is to be tested in the United States Supreme Court.

Ethelbert Stewart, government price expert of Washington has declared that food is now 21.5 percent cheaper than six months ago. This percent is based on substantial commodities and not on seasonable changes, which are often deceptive. Potatoes and sugar, for instance, has decreased in price more than 30 percent.

Dr. D. A. Long expects to reach Manson, N. C., on Saturday, March 12, 1921 at 2:30 P. M. He is to preach at Mt. Auburn on Sunday, March 13, at 11:00 A. M. Dr. Long earnestly desires all those who desire to subscribe for THE CHRISTIAN SUN and those whose subscriptions are about to expire to have the cash ready Saturday.

We are following the custom of the leading Church papers this week by presenting the face of the people's choice for President of the United States. This is done first, as an item of interest, and second, because of custom. The presenting of the President's face after the election, and at this time, is no indication that THE SUN, or any of its personnel, is either for the coming administration, or against it. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is not in politics, but deems its function to serve the Church and the public. We certainly would feel humiliated to know that any of our readers would offer criticism for our recognition to the man who is to be our chief executive during the next four years. THE SUN at all times endeavors to reflect the spirit of the Church—a spirit of liberality, open mindedness, and loyalty to God and country.

INTRODUCING THE WRITER

Our fourth article on "If I Were A Preacher" is by Layman W. A. Harper and can be found on page eight. Dr. Harper is too well known to readers of THE SUN to need any introduction. His article, we are sure, will have a wide reading.

THE SUN office has a supply of "The Church and the Community" on hand, also "The Bible and Missions", and shall be glad to fill orders promptly. Order before you need them.

In last week's issue of THE SUN a note appeared saying that Mr. Hermon Eldredge would preach the baccalaureate sermon at the approaching Elon Commencement. The note further said: "It is the first time in the history of the College that a layman has been asked to give the baccalaureate sermon." Dr. I. W. Johnson calls our attention to the fact that Bro. Eldredge is a minister—a licentiate—a member of the Erie Conference. We find from the ministerial directory that Dr. Johnson is correct. The note appearing in THE SUN was an excerpt of a news item sent from the College under President Harper's signature and so we refer the case to him.

Rev. J. C. Barrett, Harrisonburg, Va., writes that Antioch, Linville, and New Hope churches gave him and family an old time Southern pounding shortly upon his arrival in his present field. Brother Barrett further writes: "The churches in the pastorate are going to make the Every Member Canvass and all make it in the same week. At the close of the week we expect to have a get together meeting at Harrisonburg. The Sunday school rooms of the Methodist church have been secured for the occasion. We expect to have Dr. W. T. Walters with us, and also hope to secure the presence of Dr. J. O. Atkinson. We are planning to buy or build a house for a parsonage at an early date."

DISTRICT RALLIES

In a recent issue of THE SUN attention was called to the district rallies to be held by the Missionary Societies of the Eastern Virginia Conference. This week Mrs. W. H. Carroll calls attention to this same work in the North Carolina Conference. THE SUN hopes that every woman in our membership (and men too) will become deeply interested in these meetings and use every possible effort for their great success.

NOTICE

At a joint meeting of the Mission Board and the Executive Committee of the Missionary Association of the Alabama Conference, it was decided to hold a Missionary Rally on May 28-29, which is the fifth Saturday and Sunday. Any church wanting this meeting, will please notify Rev. C. M. Carter, Wadley, Ala., Rev. J. J. Hughes Route 4, Roanoke, Ala., or me at Wedowee, Ala.

CHURCH NEWS

THE TEMPLE REVIVAL

Our revival began Sunday, January 30, and closed Sunday, February 13. With the exception of the second Thursday evening the weather was excellent throughout, but that evening's service was probably the best service of all.

Evangelist Lightbourne and pianist Davis were earnest and strenuous workers from the first lifting of voices in praise to the final benediction. Mrs. Victor Lightbourne sang gospel solos at almost every service and Mrs. Victor is a great favorite at the Temple.

Cottage prayer services were held daily, and a fine spirit was manifest at every meeting, and the influence emanating from them is uncalculable. One day seventy-six women attended these prayer seasons.

The first week the evangelist preached along doctrinal and consecratory lines, especially emphasizing prayer and loyalty. Then followed the invitation for consecrations, which was responded to in a manner peculiarly gratifying to the pastor. They came one by one, from this and then another section of the church; creating a subtle atmosphere of earnestness and sincerity. The second week the invitation to the unsaved was extended and many came, but alas several deeply convicted ones turned their backs on the pleading, imparting Christ.

From the second Sunday on the doors of the church were opened and so far thirty-six have been received into our fellowship. Of these twenty-eight were over fifteen. On Wednesday evening, the 16th, fourteen were baptized by the pastor, five by sprinkling and nine by immersion.

In all 122 persons came forward, and seventy some of these were decisions for Christ, the others being consecrations. During the two weeks 3867 people attended the services. On the 20th we held a most successful afternoon service and that evening the congregation taxed the capacity of the auditorium and Sunday school room.

I have only high praise and deep appreciation for the spirit and preaching of my brother Victor. Evangelism is indubitably his field. The people of the Temple cannot find sufficiently extravagant language with which to express their praise of him nor can they convey to me the great forward stride he has made since his first meeting with them, seven years ago. Our young men, besides giving him a ring, have voted to name their class "The Young Men's Victor Bible Class."

For Mr. Sam Davis I have wonder and admiration. His work at the piano was a revelation to me. I was skeptical but I am now his ardent supporter. He is an artist used of God.

HOLLAND, VA.

The work of our people in Eastern Virginia is moving slowly but hopefully. The business depression which is hindering in almost every conceivable line of activity, is of course, hindering the cause of the Church in a measure. The farmers are feeling this depression most keenly. Farm products fell almost the whole distance at once—from high to low prices. If every thing had fallen in the same way at or near the same time, it would not have been so trying upon the farmer, but when one line went down and most other things stayed up, at least for a quite a while, the situation was at once serious.

The Holland Christian church has felt the weight of this depression, and yet it has nobly met the demands upon it in a most heartening way. This being the first year the church has undertaken to support every Sunday services has put the burden on it doubly as heavy as in other days, but I have yet to hear any serious complaint on account of the unusual expenses. So far the first day of the month finds the current expenses paid or money in hand to pay them, and we feel that is very good.

In other lines of service the church is also active. The Willing Workers, a missionary society, made up of the children, is under the care of Mrs. W. V. Leathers and Mrs. J. P. Dalton, and their labors have been fruitful of much good. I was greatly surprised to see these young people manage their work so well. Miss Sarah Norfleet Daughtrey is the president of the Willing Workers, and she does her work admirably—indeed, I do not believe many of the older people would preside with the dignity and readiness with which she presides. All honor to the ladies in charge and to the little folks for their good work.

Mrs. B. W. Council is in charge of the singing of our Christian Endeavorers. We have a very active society and we are looking for and expecting to see some good things as a result of their labors. The Endeavor singing is doing well and Mrs. Council is doing her part to make it so.

Bro. Elmo J. Norfleet is one of our good Sunday school workers—he is Secretary, and he gives attention to his duties, and is practically always in his place at the opening of the school. His statistical reports, as displayed on the blackboard every Sunday morning, are well worth following.

We have a male quartet which is doing us good work and we are hoping and expecting some fine singing from them. We also have a boy's quartet which is doing some good work and we are hoping soon to have them doing such excellent work that our nearby neighbors will be sending for them to hear them sing the sweet songs of the church.

We regret to report that Bro. W. H. Norfleet, a deacon in the Holy Nark church, has been ill since last October. He is a resident of our village and is loved by all.

The many friends of Bro. and Sister W. Q. Peel will deeply sympathize with them in a recent misfortune. On Monday afternoon, February 14, their home was broken into and $380 were stolen from them. They do not ordinarily keep money in the house, but he had just gotten together money to pay up his dues on the Standardization Fund for Elon College and on the Men and Millions account and also some money for his church expenses in Holland. Two arrests have been made, and it seems that there is little doubt but that the right parties have been apprehended, and yet we cannot tell what may be the verdict of a jury. Bro. and Sister Peel are now far along on life's journey. They have the sympathy of the people of the community. This writer had the honor of uniting this couple in marriage over forty years ago while pastor of Holy Neck church.

Rev. W. M. Jay has recently started The Holy Neck Herald, in the interest of the local work of that church. The first issue was quite a success and will no doubt serve a good purpose in the work of that church. Bro. Jay is still sick and unable to fill his pulpit on Sundays. He failed to catch the whooping cough when a child, and now he is paying for the oversight of his childhood. He is, however, doing well, and will likely soon be out and at work.

GOLDEN WEDDING

On February 16, 1921 Mr. and Mrs. Jackie Holt celebrated their golden wedding day. Their two sons, Sam Milton, and Hubert Holt were present. Also a brother of Mr. Holt, several grandchildren, great grandchildren, nieces and nephews, together with several friends were present.

Among the many presents was a rug, a water set, jewelry, and some money. Dinner was served and many were the good things enjoyed by all. Mr. Kelly conducted the prayer. Rev. Mr. Carden was to be present, but could not come on account of illness in his family.

I was glad that these dear old people had lived to celebrate their fiftieth anniversary, and may God's rich blessing continue to be with them.

CALLED HOME

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—ROBERTS

Whereas; it has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom to take from us our beloved friend and co-worker, Mrs. M. M. Roberts on January 21, 1921; therefore be it Resolved:

First: That in her death the Windsor Christian Sunday school has lost one of its most faithful members.

Second: That the entire community suffers the loss of one of its best friends and citizens.

Third: That while we feel our loss keenly and grieve with the bereaved husband and son, we commend them to the God in whom she so faithfully trusted.

Be it further, Resolved: That our sincere sympathy be extended to the bereaved family; that a copy of these resolutions be sent them; that a copy be published in The Christian Sun and that a copy be recorded upon the minutes of our Sunday school.

WILLIAMS

William Benjamin Williams of Norfolk, Va., departed this life January 31, 1921, aged seventy-six years and five months, at the home of his son, Nathaniel Williams.

He was a member of the Pickett Buchanan Camp of Confederate Veterans and was greatly beloved by all who knew him. He was a brave soldier and a fine Christian gentleman. He was a member of Providence Christian church.

He leaves four children, three sons and one daughter, William H., Nathaniel W., and Benjamin M. Williams, and Mrs. S. W. Wilbur. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. H. P. Drummond and Mrs. S. A. Etheridge, and fifteen grandchildren, together with a host of friends. His funeral services were conducted at the residence of his son, Nathaniel Williams on February 2, 1921, by Rev. H. Butler and Dr. N. G. Newman of Elon College, N. C., assisted by Rev. Arthur Wynn of the Methodist Episcopal church. His remains were laid to rest in Elwood cemetery by the side of the grave of his wife who preceded him nearly twenty-two years ago. God bless and comfort the dear bereaved ones.

H. H. BUTLER.

MOON

John T. Moon departed this life at his home, Hopedale, N. C., February 20, 1921, being in his 27th year. He is survived by his wife, two small children and three sisters. He had been sick for about twelve months. His many friends were very kind to him during his lingering illness.

The funeral services were conducted from the house by the writer and his body was laid to rest in the Pine Hill cemetery, Burlington, N. C., to await the resurrection morning. May the Good Shepherd sustain and keep the widowed mother and children.

P. H. FLEMING.

An examination story from the London Morning Post: They wanted him badly at college, but unfortunately there was an entrance examination, from which not even the most promising of Rugby three quarters could claim complete exemption. It was only an oral questioning, and yet one had to get fifty per cent to pass. The matter was left in the hands of a sporting young don and his protege got through. Later on it appeared that only two questions had been asked. "The first," said the examiner, "was the date of Trafalgar; he got that wrong. Then I asked him what the chemical formula for sulphuric acid was. He said: 'I don't know—really I don't.' Well, that was right, for it was obvious that he didn't know. So I passed him with fifty per cent."

The Easter Message

For the pre-Easter Period and the Easter Week of Prayer.

March 20-27, 1921

(Federal Council Message)

HE Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, with the Commissions on Evangelism of the constituent churches, unite in an Easter call to prayer and consecration. Never before has our country been so moved to evangelistic effort. From unexpected sources the Church is assured that its spiritual message is the one for which the whole world is longing and in which the hope of the world is centered.

The reports of spiritual ingatherings which come to us from all the churches are full of encouragement. Federated movements are taking form in our leading cities and towns, and the evangelistic note is being sounded from our pulpits. Home and Sunday school are uniting in spiritual training and asking for a definite acceptance of the life and teaching of Jesus Christ by all our young people.

Now is the time to put forth every effort that Easter may mark the culmination of the most effective movement toward righteousness which our nation has ever seen. Human hatred has done its worst. Let us meditate on the love which stopped not at the Cross and let us hear the challenge of Him who hung upon it—“And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me.”

Easter means the endless life and ultimate triumph of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ our Lord. Let us join in a solemn sacramentum to hasten its coming!

"The man who is searching for grievance will have no difficulty in finding one. When a man is supersensitive, there is a hidden sting in the sweetest words of a friend."

WOODROW WILSON

THESE lines are penned on March 4, and at noon, when President Wilson becomes Private Citizen Wilson. We can, therefore, write of him as a citizen and not as President for any party. Concerning Mr. Wilson the opinion of the world is divided, as it has always been divided concerning the Presidents, from Washington to Mr. Harding. Mr. Wilson is the greatest scholar that has even been honored Chief Executive of this Republic. He is a man of ideals, great visions, and works with increasing energy. He went in as the people's choice for President, and possibly one of the most popular men of his age. He retires by a vote of the same people who placed him in office, despised and hated, rejected and crucified, by the opinions of his own party, as well as by the bitter pangs of his political opponents.

Mr. Wilson has suffered the fate of every man of his make-up. The world knows only a few of such men, though their number is legion. Every public man who has dared to live ahead of his day has been crucified on the cruel cross of public opinion. Mr. Bryan was ahead of the thinking of his party, and being more outspoken than any other candidate for the President's office, was crucified by public opinion in the attempt to become the people's leader.

Mr. Wilson has not failed; he has not been able to get the people to live up to his ideals. Mr. Wilson is peculiar in his make-up. He considers that the President and his cabinet members are superior to Congress, but he has not been able to make either Congress or the people see it in this light. His spirit of domination, we believe, is practically unconscious to him, just as it is to every dreamer of dreams and great idealists. But, nevertheless, the people could not see it this way.

History has yet to reveal the greatness of Woodrow Wilson. One by one his opponents will go away, and generations as yet unborn will worship his name, just as the present generations are worshipping the names of other great Presidents, though they were despised and hated in their day. Mr. Wilson believed, with Tennyson, that in all human events one common course runs, and that a brotherhood of men will be the final consummation of the world's program. Tennyson breathed his ideas in poetry; Wilson expressed his in prose. Today we crown Tennyson; today we crucify Wilson.

Thorn-laid and uncertain is the path of the public man. He stands before the world and the world applauds. The same world sneers and scoffs him to shame.

"SOMETHING EASY"

THE other day a good sister was kind enough to tell us of her appreciation of the editorial pages of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and remarked that she read all that we wrote. She concluded, however, by saying: "Why don't you write something easy. You seem to deal with facts, illustrations, suggestions, etc. Write something easy."

Now, we confess that we do not know exactly what was in the mind of this reader and we would certainly be glad to write in a manner diversified enough to suit the taste of all our subscribers. "Something easy". What does that mean? When we worked on a farm and had to follow a mule all day, we thought of other things that were easy. Later we were privileged to do some of the "other things" and we find that they were not easy. Later we thought that going to school would be easy and we experienced that, and we were disappointed again. We thought that getting a college education would be easy, but such a thought had to fade, and did fade. For years we have had a common inclination to edit a paper. To ninety-nine people out of one hundred, such a task would seem to be an easy job, but our experience is that no one is so qualified to speak on the subject as the man who has tried it.

We no longer look for "easy" jobs and soft pedal positions. Scratching around for subjects to write on each week is no easy job—it is more difficult than doing the writing. Speakers can repeat, digress and elaborate, but an editor's time is measured by so many inches, and his thought must be boiled to its lowest degree. A speaker can repeat himself before the same audience, for audiences change, and no one takes the sermon or address in shorthand for comparison. A list of subscribers remain practically the same and each subscriber has copies of previous issues for comparison.

We are now trying to write an "easy" editorial for our subscriber and all of her kind, and trust we may make it easy enough to fully define some of the "easy things".

The other night we journeyed to prayer meeting and saw but few going that way; there was a great host going in the direction of the moving picture show. The prayer meeting subject was a discussion of some of the fundamental principles of life. We have every reason to believe that the scenes at the movie were "easy and light". At the prayer meeting people received instruction; at the movie they received entertainment. We presume that this is a good definition of "something easy".

The other day we met a young man—one who had decided that his math was too hard, his rhetoric too specific, and his language work too exacting. He had decided to quit school and find "something easy". He will still be hunting "something easy" as the years come and go.

Not long since we slipped in at the rear of a church and took a seat with the humble laymen, not permitting the pastor to know that we were one of his kind. It is a good thing for one pastor to hear another preach. We heard a few re-hashes of an old sermon, some stale and time-worn stories. There was nothing vital, concrete, and to the point. He told his people what an awful calamity would come upon them if they did not live right; he did not inspire the people by great example and hold up before them world-tasks to be solved by the help of the Lord. We presume that this type of preaching was "something easy", and it was "easy" to hear it.

A few weeks ago a young man sat in our presence and told of the great ideals that he had, and how he hoped some day to reach them; and yet he had not made any start toward those achievements. "It is difficult to start", he said—and then it was that we knew he was following the line of least resistance.

One day we journeyed to the country-side and we saw a farm house that needed painting, a barn-yard poorly kept, and animals shivering from cold because of the large cracks in the stalls. The man had money, he had servant help, but he did not have vision and energy, and push and "pep". He liked "something easy", and so he did not resist decay in his property. The housewife was still without conveniences. She thought it was "easy" as it was.

As we journeyed home we saw another farm with lesser possibilities, but there was paint on the house, order and not chaos in the barnyard, and every nook and corner was radiant with the touch of an industrious hand. We do not know, but presume that both of these men can write out the definition of "something easy" and each will be entirely satisfied with his own definition.

We chatted one day with a young woman. She was "just crazy" over a new hat and a certain young man's automobile to her was "perfectly beautiful". She giggled at all she said and stared at all we said. She had her lap full of fashion sheets, dime novels and love stories. She could not name the Governor of her State or any two of his co-officials. She found no pleasure in the daily papers, except "Bringing up Father", and "Mutt and Jeff". She was hunting "something easy", and we are thinking now when she gets a husband (of the only kind that she can get) she will continue her journey of life hunting "something easy".

It is just as "easy" to write this editorial but there is nothing to it—that is to the class that we are talking about, for they are not going to read it. They are hunting "something easy".

Thank you, kind sister, for giving us a subject. It is "easy" to write after we get the topic. How do you like this editorial, anyway? It is "something easy".

IN THE AGE OF AVIATION

In spite of the contentions of Congress that it was impracticable to have a transeontinental air mail service, it might seem that the recent thirty-three-hour flight across the continent would produce more convincing reasons for a more liberal policy toward that branch of national service. This flight was the more remarkable feat because of the adverse weather conditions under which it was accomplished. Yet, the House celebrated the occasion by cutting the Senate appropriation of $1,500,000 to $1,250,000, after a rather violent harangue by Representative Tincher of Kansas, who denounced the air mail service as a "pure waste of money and a graft on the public treasury."

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

TO HELP EDUCATE MEXICO

Our idea of a "bandit Mexico" is beginning to vanish. Perhaps we are having a reaction against the popular regard of our Southern neighbor as a land harboring only Villas, "greasers"—men with slouched trousers, high pointed hats, and villain-like looks, seeking only to pillage and plunder. Mexico has some real manhood in her, and this cannot be denied.

Through the efforts of the American Chamber of Commerce in Mexico, originally at the suggestion of Mr. W. A. Peairs of Des Moines, Ia., there is a movement to discover some of this manhood. This movement is "to promote the exchange of educational opportunities between the two countries for deserving young men in college, universal and technical courses; and ultimately to help uproot that feeling of distrust which has so long been prevalent between the two peoples—the American and the Mexican.

The efforts of the Chamber of Commerce have something more than a commercial value. They will not only help cement the trade relations between the two countries, according to Mr. Peairs, but will also provide a panacea for Mexican political ills in such a way as to bring about a better spirit of cooperation which has been almost wholly lacking in the past.

Fifteen institutions of collegiate grade, including colleges and universities in every part of the United States have signified their willingness to establish from one to four scholarships for Mexican students. The University of Texas has taken the initial step of giving free tuition to six such students. Business men in the communities of these institutions have also joined in the work of this education by providing part-time employment for these students so that they will in part, earn their own way.

"We don't want young men to come here with plenty of spending money," says Mr. Peairs in a recent address on the movement to educate Mexico. "They should have to earn their way in order to learn America. The rich Mexicans have sent their sons to European schools. It is not the sons of the rich that we want, so much as the sons of the peons. They are ambitious, and it is not realized generally how much they want education."

LEST SCIENCE BE FORGOTTEN IN RUSSIA

Again it seems that Russia is beginning to see the need of her science and literature which has suffered such a severe relapse at the hand of the Bolsheviki. By many it is thought that practically all of the educated and highly intelligent people of this unfortunate country have either been killed or pressed into insignificance by the new regime. Though this is in part true, it is not wholly true. There are a few of the "intelligensia" still living in Russia who are no longer depressed as in former days, and whose science and literature may have a chance to survive the shipwreck of its former state.

This belief is confirmed by the recent investigation of a committee of English writers and scientists who are earnestly concerned about the welfare of their fellow workmen obscured by the present isolation of Russia. Among the scientists which the committee has been able to get in touch with are such great names as Pavlov, the psychologist and Nobel prizeman; Karpinsky, the geologist, and Borodin, the botanist. Most of these men live in North Russia. They once held up their heads with those of any other country in the world, and could they only "get a few books from other parts of the world," the committee believes that they might even now be doing a little work.

These Russian scientists lead a life of great privation and limitation, sharing the consequences of the almost complete economic exhaustion of Russia. At first the Bolsheviki were regardless of and hostile to them, but according to the report of the committee, the Government has apparently come to realize some of the importance of scientific and literary work to the community. The duty of the rest of the world is to get books and literature to these men. The flower of the mental life of Russia must not be lost.

A PAUSE WITH A CHANGE

Just as the present administration changes with the new, the world looks on. England looks, Japan, Germany, beaten, and France victorious yet humbly stationed look on—not for political reasons, or so much for reasons of trade, but to see what we mean by the policy, "safety first". Will safety first or "America for America" mean more than a safe-guard of domestic rights, or the expression of a hearty good-willed individualism on the part of the United States? Or, will the in-coming heads of our Government interpret the much-used phrase in the sense that this nation will be an aggressor in the field of armament, a nation boasting of power and natural advantage?

We should have faith in our nation, and above all, faith in her leaders at this time of change. Let us hope that the United States will be a nation with an integrity above reproach; that we will live and cherish our history our past leaders, including former President Monroe and the Monroe Doctrine—but cherish and love all of this only that it will help weld and build up a broken world. Let us steer our ship of State straight lest history should repeat itself and a new and subtle danger should arise out of what we term our "good intentions".

The choice for president of Yale University to succeed Dr. Arthur T. Hadley, resigned, falls upon Dr. James Rowland Angell, professor of psychology, and acting president of the University of Michigan. Dr. Angell is the son of the late Dr. James B. Angell, President of the University of Michigan, and graduated from that institution in 1900. He is considered by the Yale corporation as the ablest educational administrator in the United States at this time.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

As in the days of Paul, this day seems to be beset with the teachers of false doctrine. This fact has become so conspicuous now that few seem to be surprised at all when they hear false doctrine set forth. Some seem to be asking: Are all of our young ministers going to be swept off their doctrinal bases, and so give place to every kind of doctrine? For the encouragement of these dear brethren who fear for the future, let me say that while they do well to be alarmed, they may rest assured that the Lord is not going to leave Himself without true witnesses to the true faith. Not all of our young men are going to accept the false doctrines so common among men now. We are giving below an extract from a letter from the pen of one of our brightest young ministers, now a student in one of the really great Theological Seminaries of this country. Writing to a friend, he says:

"Just a few lines to tell you how very happy I am, especially since last Wednesday, a day set apart here for prayer and communion with God. You know that this seminary is called by Yale and many other big schools 'old moss back', 'old timey' and narrow because it takes such a firm stand for the true faith as handed down by the fathers. Every class is begun with prayer—the Bible is taught to be absolutely true and every miracle a miracle. Well, this day of prayer was one of the greatest days of my life. On it by most complete surrender Christ has become so much more real to me. I can actually and certainly feel the Holy Spirit abiding within. Prayer to me since is so much sweeter and easier, and I am doing much praying each day.

"I have been praying for several months to know just what God would have me do during the summer. Several things have been offered me by men, but I want God's proposal. He has answered my prayers, and I am fully convinced that it is His will for me to preach—spend my vacation preaching His blessed Gospel. Toward this I have set my face in faith that since it is His will, He is going to open the way—place and opportunities. One such place has been opened already and in due season others will be. I shall be ready for such work from April 29, to September 20. Will you not as one of my dear old guardians in the faith help me to intercede for the people to whom He is going to send me. Pray that I may go in the power of His Holy Spirit."

To me that letter has the right ring and I believe there will be many doors open to this dear young minister during the coming summer to do much work as he desires in this line. Let our brotherhood pray for him that he may have access to the hearts of the people to whom he may be sent of the Lord. Let us give him all possible encouragement as a man who has the right spirit and who will give no uncertain sound in preaching the gospel. His letter, as given above, was not written for the public, and therefore we cannot give his name, but if any of our pastors or churches should desire his name and address, these can be had by applying to this writer at Holland, Va., enclosing a postal card for answer. We thank God that in these days of apostasy, here is a young man who is keeping his eyes fixed on the Cross and what it means to men, who cannot be swayed by the tempests of error, even though it is the popular thing with so many people. God bless that young man, and if wise in His sight, we trust the Lord may bring him to the front in the near future as a defender of the faith which was once delivered to the saints. The Church needs this class of young men—needs them by the hundreds and by the thousands. Let us have them in Jesus' way—let the whole Church get to praying that the Lord will send more laborers into His vineyard, and we shall see this kind of men entering the ministry.

WHOSE FEELINGS SHOULD BE CONSIDERED?

Occasionally an article appears in some Church paper condemning the practice of calling an ex-pastor back to a former field for funerals, weddings, etc. The burden of the argument usually is that the present pastor's feelings might be hurt, or his influence in the community impaired—all of which sounds pretty thin to me. Often the present pastor is a new man on the field. He has not had time to win his way to the hearts of the people, and possibly may not have used well the opportunities he has had. Not every preacher, either new or old, does his full duty to his people, or can win first place in every heart in the community even when he does his best. Then the ex-pastor may have been in the home on former occasions when sorrow and affliction were there. He may have been the instrument in the hands of God in leading the deceased to Christ or into the church. It may have been the request of the deceased that this particular preacher conduct his funeral service, and this request may have been made years before death came. Having been with the family in times of joy and sorrow the ex-pastor is naturally nearer and dearer to the family than any other preacher, and when their hearts are lowed down with grief they naturally turn to him and want him present. It is a trait of human nature with us all that in times of great sorrow we seek the companionship of our dearest friends rather than that of strangers or those who have not been quite so near us. Even Jesus did that in the hour of his great agony in the Garden of Gethsemane. Peter, James, and John had been a little nearer Him during His earthly ministry than the other disciples, and He chose them to watch with Him. No family, in time of sorrow such as death brings into the home, should be made to feel that their own feelings and desires and the request of their dear departed dead should all be ignored in order to keep some little pastor from getting offended and going pouting around with his mouth drawn down at the corners. If the pastor is not big enough a man to keep sweet under such conditions he is too small to be of any great service anyway. If he is the kind of man he ought to be he will go on doing his duty to the best of his ability, working with his people, winning his way to their hearts by his real worth to them, and then when he becomes the ex-pastor he too will leave a vacancy in hearts and homes that no one else can fill quite so well as he. Let the feelings and desires of the broken hearted be considered first.

OUR MEN AND MILLIONS MOVEMENT

To The Captain and His Co-Workers:

There are two classes included in the contributors to the Men and Millions Forward Movement to which I desire to call to the attention of Captains and their co-workers in each local church. There are other classes that constitute a very large percent of the contributors, but there are two in particular that I desire to call attention to now.

First, those who pledged an amount that they felt required no special consideration on their part, but on the other hand they felt absolutely certain beyond a doubt that they could meet the obligation without any trouble or sacrifice on their part. Depending entirely on their own strength without any thought of a higher power or the weakness and infallibility of human plans, they pledged. Today in quite a number of instances our Heavenly Father has seen fit to convince His people how absolutely necessary it is to acknowledge his sovereignty even in things that we consider within our own strength. A number of men and women pledged small amounts, expecting to pay them as they had in most instances always paid their church obligations—by dropping in five, ten, or twenty-five cents, if they had no smaller change. But now we are about face with our human laid plans and we have got to do what we should have done at first—ask God's help and make some sacrifice on our part. Yet we are better off on our knees before God in our poverty than standing in our own strength. Our plans have, as they always do, failed to materialize as expected and some are, as their vows to the church, throwing up their hands and attempting to satisfy their conscience by exclaiming hard times, absolutely disregarding the countless blessings that we are enjoying over our brothers in other lands. Captains and co-workers, here is the golden opportunity to render a most worthy service to your fellow men, your church, and your God. These weak brothers are on the point of making an awful decision, a decision that may mean their loss to all that is good and noble. They are about to collapse morally for lack of strength and knowledge of Christian duty and the fact that they attempted to do something without taking into consideration a higher power. Your words of encouragement and explaining to them their Christian duty and privilege. They cannot see it and are in need of your assistance. Will you not help them face the issue with confidence and to place that confidence where it should have been in the beginning? That is the crux of the situation. They are failing in their own strength and do not realize where the trouble lies. It is a glorious opportunity for the Captains and co-workers.

Conditions at present in some instances are somewhat analogous to the time that the disciples experienced when they were face to face with the fact that Christ was soon to leave them and they were to be thrown upon the mereies of a cruel world. They had become accustomed to following in His footsteps and experiencing little or no sacrifice on their part. And now it was suddenly to change and they were to face the testing time. You remember how Peter, who had never experienced such a test, boastingly swore allegiance and fidelity unto the end. Too, you remember when the real test came and Jesus was on trial, this same Peter, standing in his own strength, lost in moral courage, and when asked if he knew this man on trial actually turned his back and denied Christ. This same Christ is on trial today and some of our brothers and sisters are on the point of denying Christ. Can you not, brother Captain, save them the awful agony that is bound to follow? They will, like Peter when he realized his condition, weep bitterly.

In the second place there are the men (and mostly they are men) who like the old colored man that had the "fluenza" and when asked how sick he was replied, "Boss, I's so sick dat every mawnin' when I git de paper I looks to see if my name is in de casualty list." There are some who pledged because they wanted to be "good fellows" and really believed that something would turn up that would excuse them for their vow. They have been looking daily for a signal that would in an appealing way help to overcome their conscience and now they are shouting "there it is, I told you so." This is the casualty list, but I am glad that there are very few in this class. They, too, like Peter, are standing around warming their hands while the young man of Galilee is being crucified. What they need, brother Captain and co-workers, is a better understanding of their Christian duty, encouragement and real genuine sympathy on your part that they may take courage and stand up like the men that they are. They do not understand the meaning of sacrifice and loyalty. To you is given the opportunity of helping them to see their duty and to assist them in doing it. You can save them the agony that Peter met if you will not wait too long, but go to them with sympathy in your heart and a real desire to serve them. To aid your brother in this testing time, a time when Christians above all others, should do their duty and face the opportunity, is a great privilege of yours, and a rare one it is. The testing time is here—what will you do with it? Will you stand warming your hands when our brothers are wavering and Christ is on trial? No. Your loyalty has been tested and you stood the test in the great campaign last year and all that is necessary is a revival of that loyalty and fidelity and a realization of the great opportunity that you now face and that faces your brother.

V—The Great Commission

The Great Commission is the Magna Charta of world redemption, yet its first implication is personal. Before I can enter upon the crusade to which it challenges me I must first of all be a disciple. I myself must be saved before I can become interested in the salvation of others. First and foremost then the Great Commission is a challenge to the individual to become what he is duty bound thereafter to undertake to get others to come.

But he dare not stop with his own salvation. Religion is more than a personal matter. I mean of course the Christian religion. It is only a partial truth to say that Jesus came to save me. He came to save me that I might witness for Him and so, under His blessing, be the means of salvation to some one else. Salvation that ends in me is selfish, and there can be no selfishness in Christian redemption. If I am not vitally concerned for my brothers to know the joy that is mine because of my salvation, I may rest assured that sooner or later I shall become cold and lose my salvation. There is no self-salvation. What could be more dissatisfying than for a single soul to be saved! Brotherhood is the pregnant word of the Christian faith and social solidarity based on that faith the Christian goal for the human family.

The Great Commission too has implications for the social order, for the organized life of man. Have we not learned that it is insufficient to make Christians out of the individuals constituting society, while the institutions that minister to their life are untouched by the spirit of Christian truth? Suppose the governments of the world had been Christianized, could there have been a world war? Was it not a right thing to pass the prohibition act? Do we not need a censorship for motion pictures and other forms of amusement? Is there any institution or organization for which our Christian Great Commission does not have a vital throbbing message? How about the press? How about industry in all its forms? How about higher education and also the public schools? These and others touch our lives constantly. Can our lives function to their full capacity until these institutions have been brought under the vital sway of the Christian religion? We have been rescuing the perishing and binding up the wounds of the robbed and throwing life-lines to the shipwrecked. Well, and good. Let's continue to do these things. But let us go further and find why there are perishing ones to rescue, why robbers wound our brothers and theirs, why ships are wrecked on the moral ocean of life. Having found out the "why", let us apply the balm of healing to the sore spot or the surgeon's knife, as the diagnosis may require. Let us make the social order safe for the Christian. AND let us not stop till all those whose business we have too been won to our Christ. They are our brothers too, and for them Jesus died. The salvation of the Great Commission is personal, social, and societal. We must never forget this.

But now we come to a peculiar tender thought. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to the whole creation," says our Great Commission in the original language of the New Testament. "To The Whole Creation." Let us gild it in memory's innermost recess of the heart. And what does it imply? Nay rather, what does it require? It both implies and requires that if a man is a Christian, not only his family and friends and the brethren in non-Christian lands, but also his horse and his dog and his cat shall know it. Even the wild creatures of the field and the forest will know it. What a precious thought! God too cares for the sparrows. The Great Commission makes us like Him also in that respect.

PETER PEEPER'S PEEPING

Dear Mr. Editor:

As I am going here and there, up and down the earth, seeing what I can find out in the ranks of my fellowmen, good, bad and indifferent, I wish to give a report of some things which have come within the range of my peeping. I like good things very much, and so as a rule I shall talk of the good things I have seen or may see in my peeping journeys, and yet, now and then, I may find some things not so good, and for the sake of warning, I trust you will allow me to indicate from time to time tendencies as I have seen or may see them, which promise evil to the individual and to humanity.

The other day I got a peep into one man's life, and it so impressed me that I feel like I may let you and your readers take a peep with me at the heroic in that man's life and work. I mean just what I say, that man's life and work for as I see it, a man's life without his work is not so very valuable after all.

The other day a great man fell in his tracks and his tracks were many, but there is one incident in his life to which I wish to direct attention. It is quite unnecessary to say that this man was a great man, for no man could hear what he heard and do what he did, and not be a great man.

I refer to the Rev. Alexander Whyte of Edinburgh, Scotland. He is pretty well known in all Christendom, as a great preacher and a mighty man of valor. Mr. Whyte had a great battle with the Lord one day, and there is no question as to who won that battle—Mr. Whyte did not, the Lord won it, but this battle was different from most battles—for in this case defeat meant victory—a glorious victory for God and truth, and Mr. Whyte as well. Mr. Whyte died in his sleep last January and went to his glorious reward.

The battle between him and the Lord was a very sacred matter. I will not dare to spoil the telling of it by using my own language, I will let Mr. Whyte tell it in his own way. It came to him one day as he was walking through the Scottish Highlands. Hear his own words, as follows:

"What seemed to me to be a Divine Voice spoke with all-commanding power in my conscience, No! Go on and flinch not. Go back and boldly finish the work that has been given to you to do. Go home and spend what is left of your life in your appointed task of showing my people their sin and their need of My Salvation." And it is said that Mr. Whyte obeyed the command. He went to work and spent the remaining days of his earthly life in finishing his task—showing God's people their sin. What a task that must have been! Old Habakkuk, one of the Old Testament prophets, had a similar task given to him of the Lord, and he went to that task, trembling but never faltering. The British Weekly, referring to Mr. Whyte's death and the task given him of God says:

"What a gift he was to his Church, to his nation." Yes, surely he was a great man, in charge of a great task, which he accomplished in a noble way.

It is not a popular thing to preach the preaching God gives to His people now and then, but it is a worthy task and its accomplishment brings a blessed reward. These great men are not always popular, but there is something greater than popularity—it is loyal faithfulness to the God-assigned task.

I got another peep the other day, and it was sickening. What do you suppose I saw? It was one of our popular preachers. He was running after a great bubble, which is called popularity. In his flight he lost his hat, but seemed to pay no attention to his loss at all. The one thing he wanted was popularity, and in his hurry to get it, he had his gaze fixed on it high in the air, and not observing what was under his feet, he stepped over a precipice, and down he went, and then he was further than ever from grasping his prize. The truth is he had lost all in the pursuit of the vainest thing a man ever laid his eyes on. What poor silly creatures some of us are—we throw away the true gold of life and give our time to chasing a butterfly—human popularity.

I met another man the other day—he was the Rev. Giles Goeasy. He was alive to everything that tends to make life a bubble, but he did not like to carry a burden for the cause of Christ, nor for any one else—he was determined to take life easy, no matter what came next. You may depend upon it, he will get nowhere, and that is all he deserves.

I am on my rounds and when I get something that ought to be known, I expect to tell it right out in meeting. You may say that Peter Peeper is peeping into other people's business, but you wait and see if I am.

PETER PEEPER.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Much has been said and written upon the dearth of ministers in recent years and in all denominations. One of the causes assigned for this shortage is the small salaries received by ministers compared with salaries and wages in other fields of service. If that is the real cause, the shortage is a blessing rather than a loss to Christianity; otherwise the ministry would be commercialized. Some things might well be considered in the examination of this question.

The last quarter of a century has made ministerial education the easiest in human history. Schools have given free tuition, churches and individuals have furnished money, either as gifts, or easy loans, so that any candidate for the ministry could pass through college, and many seminaries have given scholarships to young men preparing to preach the gospel. Preparation has been made easy, and then pay for service has been raised above the ratio of past years. By comparison with other years in salaries and expense of living, the balance is in favor of the present time. The demand for full-time service has increased to such extent that the ministry, financially, is more tempting than in the past. There must be some cause, other than financial, for the dearth of ministers and ministerial students.

The easy conditions of modern conversion and entrance into the church have lowered the standard of conviction, confession and regeneration; and this has lowered the standard of the divine call to the ministry. The age has fallen into the idea that the Church can make ministers. We cannot "buy ministers", as Joseph Parker says, with money. The more money employed in this field the smaller the number entering the ministry. Higher salaries will not supply the demand. Religious stock has been watered, so to speak, and the whole world has been commercialized. No intelligent and honest laymen will want to pay ministers less, but more; and they will want to pay them promptly; but that will not draw men into the ministry. Man cannot be brought into the ministry by ballot. Matthias was brought into the place of Judas in that way, but nothing is known of him except what Peter said when he nominated him. They named two, Joseph, called Barsabas, and Matthias, and then prayed the Lord to show which of these two He had chosen. Then they cast lots and the lot fell upon Matthias. He was a man-chosen minister and nothing is known of his ministry. The thing which the Church is authorized to do is: "Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into His harvest." Matt. 9:38; Luke 10:2.

The times demand a genuine divine call to the ministry and a genuine human conviction of such call. With such a call and such a conviction the man who surrenders comes forth for life-service. There is no easy place for the minister; but there is satisfactory place and a great reward. The ministry is not a self-chosen calling, nor a self-chosen place for service. It is the highest, the holiest, the most sacred service for man. This does not minimize other lines of service; it simply differentiates the ministry from all other callings and professions. The man called should surrender himself for life, without reserve, to the work of the ministry; and the chief thing in the ministry is preaching "the Word", "Preach the Word; be insistent in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all long-suffering and doctrine." II Tim. 4:2. We do not set the proper value upon preaching. "The preaching of the cross is to them that perish foolishness; but unto us which are saved it is the power of God." I Cor. 1:18. God "spoke, and it was done; He commanded, and it stood fast." Ps. 33:0.

God will call men into His service as they are needed and as they are found. Judas is the example of the minister with the commercial spirit. He fell from his place, lost his money, his life, and his good name. "The love of money is the root of all evil." But this commercial age creates an atmosphere that poisons all who breathe its subtle evil. Prosperity has tainted our thought, weakened our faith, released us from a sense of dependence upon God, and left us barren of the deepest convictions and the willingness to serve at the price of self-sacrifice, which is the heart of the gospel lived and taught by Jesus Christ.

OUR BIGGEST UNDERTAKING

Our Men and Millions Forward Movement is the biggest movement ever undertaken by us as a Church. Already we are undertaking larger things in building churches, and in caring for those already built, and in enlarging our mission work as a result of this movement among us. To do the things any Church ought to do, takes money. Unpaid pledges do not meet bills nor build churches nor pay the salaries of missionaries. Every person who has made a pledge to the Forward Movement ought to feel that it is just as much an obligation as any other, and he should esteem the payment thereof as a joy and a great privilege to have a part in a great and good work. It is to be hoped that during the Forward Movement "Self-Denial" period all unpaid pledges will be paid up to date. The forces of evil are not lagging behind, and we must not. Come on, folks, it is a great work; let us go ahead at full speed.

A. W. ANDES.

RALLYING OUR FORWARD MOVEMENT

I notice that the Campaign Committee of the Men and Millions Forward Movement has decided to designate April as "Self-Denial Month" in the hope of keeping alive an enthusiastic interest in this movement. This idea has my hearty approval and endorsement. The Campaign Committee may count on me for full cooperation in its endeavors to rally our forces anew in the interest of this cause.

It would seem that we should look upon the launching of this movement last year not merely as an event, but rather as the new birth of a larger and fuller life and service to be experienced by the Church. This movement is not an event that has passed, a thing that was finished months ago; it is with us now as a living, moving, extending responsibility and opportunity. The work of the movement is not finished; it has only begun. The blessing of it has not all been realized; the larger blessing is yet to come.

For about a year now, because of the birth of this movement many of our churches have been living a new life and doing a larger service than was hitherto thought possible. But the greater possibilities are before us and not behind us if we will keep the Forward Movement moving forward. We cannot move forward by standing still, nor stand still while moving forward.

Let it be our united prayer and undivided aim that we rally all our forces again and advance to the heights we have not yet attained.

G. O. LANKFORD.

Berkley, Va.

SELF-DENIAL MONTH

Will all our pastors and others interested, announce it publicly, and make it known whenever practical that April is to be "Self-Denial Month" with us of the Southern Christian Convention. There is great financial depression and in order to give or pay money now for other things than bare necessities, requires real courage and genuine sacrifice. But we should not allow our obligations to the Church, and the Kingdom suffer now. Making the sacrifice will bring the greatest joy and satisfaction. Plans have been made for church work and obligations this year and for the next four years on a basis of our pledges to Men and Millions. Brethren and sisters, if there is any way to avoid it we must not let these pledges go unpaid. When it was easy we paid. Now when it is hard we should make the more determined effort to pay. For it is the hard things, and not the easy, that our Lord requires of us, and that He delights to honor and reward when done.

For the sake of the larger blessing, and for the sake of progress and growth on our Lord's work, let's all of us make April "Self-Denial Month" and so save as to meet our pledges and obligations to our Lord's cause.

G. CAMPBELL MORGAN

This distinguished minister from London, England, preached and lectured in St. Petersburg, Fla., this winter, for about two weeks. He is tall, slender, bright-eyed, has long slender fingers, an æolin harp voice, quiet manners, and graceful gestures. A few thoughts from one of his sermons using the following subject "Faith", and text "Jesus answered and said unto them, this is the work of God, that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." John 6:29. ".....Faith then is a work; an act, not a sentiment, not something that comes to a man apart from himself, without reference to himself. I can believe or I can refuse to believe. Faith is a work."

".....Unless you recognize that Jesus was far more than one among other teachers,.....you must give up the picture that the New Testament gives you of Christ."

".....The first thing that you have to do is to crown Jesus." ".....The work of believing on Him is not an act; it is an attitude. It affects all the thinking, all the speaking, all the doing." ".....Is your difficulty intellectual? Follow the gleam. It is not noontide, but the gleam is upon your life; follow it; crown him.....put God at the center of your life and say: 'Here am I; so help me, God; and God and I are mightier than any sin that has ever yet mastered me'" "Repent, believe—these are the two great words that mark the beginning of the Christian life."

HINTS AND HAPPENINGS

On March 5 at 10:00 p. m., the Clarence Barker memorial Hospital at Asheville, N. C., suffered a fire loss of practically $75,000. Owing to the heroic work of nurses and firemen the flames were not allowed to spread from the south wing, where it originated. No patients were injured, and it is thought that the loss is covered by insurance.

Renewed earthquakes in the Kansu and Shensi provinces of China have already killed more than 250,000 people. These figures are given out by reliable authorities and are thought to refer to the total number of deaths in this and former earthquakes in the same districts. The famine relief committees are sending investigators into these districts.

After eight years spent in the Wilson Cabinet, Secretary Joseph Daniels returned to his former home at Raleigh, N. C. on March 6, and has resumed his former work as Editor of The News and Observer.

The consumption of whiskey in this country has dropped from approximately 89,000,000 gallons in 1917 to 5,000,000 gallons in 1920. More than a million dollars has been estimated to have been saved in the past year by the people of this country because of the prohibition law. The Senate Appropriation Committee, at the request of the National Anti-Saloon League, has recently increased the appropriation bill for prohibition by $400,000, and regulations to further restrict the distribution of whiskey, which is now confined to manufacturers and wholesale druggists, have been drawn up to be placed before the new administration, for their approval, it is hoped.

According to reports of the Red Cross 20,000 children below the age of fourteen are killed by accident each year. During 1917 the percent of children killed by accident was larger than the percent of deaths due to epidemic disease.

Of all the ears sold in 1920, two-thirds went to users in agricultural districts.

Will pastors and our Sunday school superintendents who have not done so please send name and address of all Sunday school teachers to Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary, as he has valuable matter he wishes Sunday school teachers to have? More than half of schools have reported but he wishes all.

Bro. W. E. Lindsey, a member of the Board of Publication of the Convention, has moved from Chapel Hill to Mt. Airy, N. C. We regret to see Bro. Lindsey get out of the Christian Church area. We move to appoint him "Advisory General" of our mountain work—that being twenty miles of Mt. Airy.

President Harding's inauguration was one of the simplest in the country's history. President Wilson accompanied Mr. Harding to the Capital but was unable to attend the inaugural services.

Champ Clark passed away in Washington on March 3. He had served in Congress for twenty-six years.

Burlington church, neighbor churches of the city and surrounding communities enjoyed a rare treat March 2, 3 and 4 by having the privilege of hearing lectures on great themes of the Sunday school by Mr. Marion Lawrance and Mr. D. W. Sims.

The Editor and family had the privilege of worshipping with Dr. P. H. Fleming and his Pleasant Hill congregation last Sunday. Pleasant Hill is one of our large country churches and Pastor Fleming is carrying forward the work to the satisfaction of all.

"WHITER THAN SNOW"
TONIGHT the country around about is wrapped in a thick blanket of snow. Aided by the moon and the stars I stand at my window and look out upon it. What a scene! Magnificent evergreens silently bow beneath their snow-white burdens, broad stretches of unbroken landscape are mantled in myriads of moonlit diamonds, and the moon paints pictures of many buildings and trees upon marginless pages of white. All night long last night and all day today the snow-burdened winds have ceased not to do their work. But now, at midnight, all is quiet. And such a calm after the storm! Such soft pretty whiteness! Such sweet lessons fill my soul! Turning my face upward toward the stars I whisper to my blessed Redeemer "Purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean; wash me and I shall be whiter than snow."

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE FOREIGN MISSION BOARD

The Foreign Mission Department of the Mission Board of the Christian Church met in special called session (an adjourned session from the annual meeting of October 18-20, 1920) in the Foreign Mission office, Dayton, Ohio, with all members present. There were also present at the invitation of the Board, Rev. E. C. Fry, of Utsunomiya, Japan, four members of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention, namely, Rev. C. H. Rowland, D. D., Rev. G. O. Lankford, Mr. J. A. Williams, and Mr. K. B. Johnson, together with the Secretary of the Southern Board, Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D., Dr. A. M. Kerr, Dr. Thomas, Mrs. Bullock, and Mrs. Helfenstein.

The President, Dr. Denison, read Scripture selections from the sixth chapter of Isaiah and the second chapter of Ephesians, after which the entire body engaged in a season of earnest prayer.

The Secretary for Foreign Missions read a lengthy report covering his recent trip to Japan and outlining a proposed program for our future work, including first of all a period of intensive foundation laying to be followed by a gradually developing program of advance work both in Japan and Porto Rico and in union enterprises. This proposed program was supplemented with a suggested budget covering the probable cost of the same, with special reference to the year upon which we have just entered. The report was thoroughly discussed.

The following request and proposition from the Southern Christian Convention Mission Board was read:

"We, the authorized representatives of the Southern Christian Convention Mission Board request The American Christian Convention Mission Board to put fifty per cent of our (S. C. C.) foreign funds into a work in China, this amount to be supplemented by a twenty per cent increase from The American Christian Convention Board for a period of five years. This five year period to begin as soon as the Southern Christian Convention Board shall have paid into the treasury of the American Christian Convention Board funds sufficient to build a night school and kindergarten building at a cost of twelve thousand dollars ($12,000), and finish the mission home in Japan at a cost of nine thousand dollars ($9,000) in addition to the amount already on hand for that purpose. The above conditions being met, the Southern Christian Convention Board agrees to put fifty per cent of its funds into the general fund for foreign missions.

If this agreement is entered into the Southern Christian Convention Board will undertake to raise twenty-five thousand dollars ($25,000) as a minimum for the next five years. Moreover we agree to send funds quarterly and hereby request such report of funds, expenditures and results quarterly as our foreign mission secretary can conveniently furnish, and a copy of his annual financial report in detail, including results achieved on the field.

It is agreed that the selection of the province in China to be occupied shall be left to the chairmen and Mission secretaries of the American Christian Convention and Southern Christian Convention Boards jointly.

C. H. ROWLAND, Chairman,
J. O. ATKINSON, Secretary.

There being present and entering into this agreement C. H. Rowland, G. O. Lankford, J. A. Williams, K. B. Johnson, and J. O. Atkinson."

After full and frank discussion, the following motion of Rev. W. P. Fletcher, seconded by Mrs. M. T. Morrill and others of the Board, was adopted: "Resolved that the Foreign Mission Department of the American Christian Convention Mission Board, accepts and heartily endorses the request and proposition of the Southern Christian Convention Mission Board and that we proceed at once to enter into the prosecution of the enlarged program therein outlined."

The resolution was unanimously adopted, after which Mrs. M. T. Morrill led us in earnest prayer. The evening closed with a period of most helpful Christian fellowship and a strong conviction that the Christian Church is now launching a most worthy forward step in foreign mission, with the whole Church behind the whole task.

The Secretary was requested by motion, to send copies of the request of the Southern Board together with our acceptance, to all members of American Christian Convention and the Southern Christian Convention Mission Boards.

Voted that it is the policy of this Board to develop its educational work in Japan along the following lines:

- The establishment of kindergartens at various places.
- A night school and kindergarten at Naka Shibuya.
- Conducting Christian dormitories at strategic centers.
- Providing suitable theological education for accepted Japanese candidates for the ministry.

The dormitories are to be erected as soon as the more pressing matters of purchase of land, and erection of a mission home and of the Naka Shibuya night school and kindergarten building have been accomplished.

The regular Japan budget including Japanese and missionaries' salaries on the new scale, language school, travel, repairs, taxes, etc., was voted in the sum of $22,155. Additional Japan funds were authorized in the sum of $27,750 to cover the amount still needed for the mission home, kindergarten and night school at Naka Shibuya, furlough travel of missionaries, etc.

The regular budget for Porto Rico was voted in the sum of $7,924 and budget for extension work for that island work was authorized in the sum of $12,240. This last includes the Santa Isabel Chapel and other advance steps, but the work on the chapel is held up temporarily until better conditions prevail.

A budget of $1,801.99 was voted for union enterprises in which the Christian Church has a recognized part, and a total budget of the year including administration was authorized in the sum of $76,870.99.

In keeping with the action of other boards working in Porto Rico the Board voted that the Foreign Mission Secretary and Dr. J. O. Atkinson be requested to visit the island as soon as practicable to study our work and needs there in view of the forward steps we are taking. No time has been set for the proposed visit.

The following resolution was adopted as presented by Mrs. M. T. Morrill: "That we express our most sincere sympathy with Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Martin and our deep appreciation of their beautiful faith and utter self-forgetfulness for the sake of the Kingdom. As to the matter of Mr. Martin's return to the States we are agreed that he must use his own best judgment. Under the existing family circumstances we cannot find it in our hearts to lay upon him any obligation."

The President, the Secretary and Mrs. M. T. Morrill were asked to present recommendations for the revision of the manual at the October meeting.

The Secretary was asked to investigate the possibility of providing insurance for our missionaries through the Board.

The minutes of the entire session were approved by the Board and later approved by the members of the Home Mission Department by a correspondence vote.

W. P. MINTON, Secretary.

OUR MOUNTAIN MISSIONARY

Miss Iola Hedgepeth gave us a pleasant surprise last second Sunday morning when she came into our service at Wakefield. She was on her way to pay a short visit to her people. As this visit was to be a surprise there was no one at the train to meet her. We were sorry for her delay but very glad that she took advantage of the opportunity to be in our Sunday school session and church service.

She delivered a splendid address before the school, seemingly to the delight of all present. She was also at Burton's Grove Sunday school in the afternoon and gave a very helpful message there.

She impresses those who hear her that her heart is in the work that she has undertaken for the helping of the mountain people. The work is prospering in her hands and because of the enlarged opportunities to help the people who desire to be helped she feels that there must be additional outlay and more workers on the field.

If all of our schools and churches could hear the message that she has to deliver I feel sure that there would not be delay in granting her requests for reinforcement.

OUR ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

We have had so many Sundays with unfavorable weather that congregations have been small and contributions are coming in slowly. I believe our financial report this week is less than any report in four years. We truly hope that each Sunday school will come to our rescue and stand by us this year. We have sixty little children to feed, clothe, and care for, and whether the income is large or small, they are hungry three times each day and wear just as many clothes. When our income is less than expenses we cannot cut down our expense account to meet it as our expense account runs about the same each month unless we have some extra expense.

Now is the time, too, that we want your help as we are trying to finish up our "Baby Home" and get it ready to turn over to the Board in May. We want to have it paid for. Since the weather is more favorable the work is moving on very nicely. We are now doing the cement work on the outside and it is making a different looking building. It is going to be a real pretty building when complete and we will all be proud of it.

Many little children are pleading for a home, and we are saying "no" because we have no more room till this building is complete. While we have some depression in business let us not forget the widows and orphans. If it is a real sacrifice to give let us make the sacrifice that the little ones may not go hungry while we have plenty and to spare. Don't forget the Easter Offering in your church. Fourth Sunday in this month is Easter Sunday.

LETTERS FROM THE COUSINS

Dear Uncle Charley: This month has passed so quickly, it seems, that we have decided that we would write for this month and March now. Enclosed you will find our dues for the two months. We have had such fine weather for the last few weeks that it has made the time too. W. T. says he is going to hitch the calf to his wagon when he gets large enough. W. T. will be three years old next Sunday, so I know that he and the little calf will be a match. With love to all—Virginia Pearl and W. T. Ayscue.

W. T. must not let the calf run away with him when he hitches him to the wagon.—“Uncle Charley”.

Dear Uncle Charley: This is my first letter to you. I would like to join the band of cousins. Mama reads to me about the little orphans, so I decided to keep a mite box that I might help them a little. I am nearly six years old, and earn my pennies by helping mama when papa is gone to preach. I enclose one dollar for the orphans.—Billy Andes.

You are a fine little boy. It is real good of you to help the orphans—we have sixty little fellows here now—I want you to come to see us sometime.—“Uncle Charley”.

Dear Uncle Charley: I want to be a member of the band of cousins too. I have been saving up some pennies in my mite box to send to the little orphans. My two-year-old brother, Raymond, found my mite box and tore it all to pieces, scattering pennies in every direction. So I will not wait any longer to get more, but will send one dollar now to the orphans. Come to see us sometime and I will pop you some corn.—Roy Andes.

I am real glad to have you join the band of cousins. I would like to visit you and let you pop me some corn. I am very fond of it.—“Uncle Charley”.

A WELCOME LETTER

Editor Christian Sun:

Will you allow an outsider a little space in your valued paper? I am a regular reader and enjoy the splendid articles which appear regularly.

Being engaged in orphanage work, Superintendent Johnston's reports are always interesting to me. I rejoice with him when I read that some one has given a nice Jersey milch cow, a box filled with good things, a liberal donation, and the regular Sunday school offerings.

I want to add a few words to what he has already said about the Ladies Aid and Missionary Societies furnishing those rooms in the Children's Home building. If one church thinks it could not furnish a dormitory room itself get a sister church to unite and furnish a room. Find out from Bro. Johnston just what it will cost and don't take the cheapest room but make your selection with the most expensive one. Just send your money to the Superintendent and save the freight. He gets special prices and can buy just exactly what he needs.

Here is an opportunity to make a beautiful memorial to a father, mother, wife, husband, son or daughter. While you have established this memorial you are help-slip by. We have some little chickens and a little calf, in care for some unfortunate orphan that might become a disgrace to mankind but by your kind act save it to the Church and be a valuable citizen.

I rejoice with you in the progress you have made and wish to see you go on to much greater success.

No one solicited this, but I have written because of my interest in the orphan and because I was so favorably impressed with the work of the Christian Orphanage, and especially, the Children's Home.

Yours in the work,

H. A. GARRETT, Supt.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY

I am today, February 25, enroute home from a trip to several points in Georgia and Alabama in the interest of the proposed school for that section of our Church, authorized by the Southern Christian Convention through our Men and Millions Movement. The Location Committee had received definite invitation to visit six different communities, as follows: Wadley, Abanda, Dickert and Roanoke Ala., and Columbus and Americus, Ga. At all of these places I was received with great interest and enthusiasm, far surpassing the expectations of the Committee. Strong bids for the school are being formulated at the places visited, and these bids are expected to reach the Committee not later than April 1.

The interest manifested in this school project on the part of these Georgia and Alabama towns indicates, I think, in no uncertain way, that a great opportunity has presented itself to the Church, an open door through which we may enter, and in so doing, accomplish for our work in the far South what Elon College has done for the Southern Christian Convention. God gives us the faith to believe that it can be done and it will be done.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

A FEW THOUGHTS ON CHRIST'S LAST COMMAND TO HIS DISCIPLES

(By Mrs. Mattie Jenkins, Luray, Virginia—a member of Leaksville Christian Church.)

How precious are the last words of our friends. How we treasure them. How we try to carry out every last wish and request of our loved ones. Surely Christ is our best friend, because He has done more for us than any one else ever has or can do. He left His home in glory; came to this sinful world; and bore all manner of hardships. He was mocked; spit upon; wore a crown of thorns; and died a shameful death on the cross for us. Oh! How He must love us; He has now gone to prepare a place for all that love and obey Him. Just before He left this earth, He told His disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. This command is just as applicable to us, now, as it was to the disciples, then. How eager we are to hasten to carry out our Savior's last and most important command. But, alas, how slow, how careless, and unconcerned we are about it. It is now nearly two thousand years since He gave this command, and there are yet millions and millions of souls in heathen darkness, dying—dying every moment—without the gospel. Suppose they were your own. Suppose they were mine. They are Christ's own; and He loves them and died for them the same as for you and me. Oh! Why are we so slow? Christ said: "If ye love me, keep my commandments." If we love Him with all our hearts and minds and with all our souls and strength as He has told us to, we will obey Him. "O, but we can not all go." No, that is true. But we can work and pray and give to send some one who can go. "But we need so many things at home." Surely we do. But there isn't anything we need half so much as the heathen need the gospel. Christ never said "Wait until you get everything you need at home before you go." If your child was starving for bread, would you say: "Wait until I get a pair of shoes or a hat for myself." No, you would get the bread first. There are millions and millions of God's children starving for the Bread of Life. Will you say "wait"?

"Go unto the nations far and near,
Gather the lost ones in.
Tell them of Jesus' love so dear,
Gather the lost ones in."

There are many ways by which we can help to give the gospel to the whole world. If you cannot go and preach, you can give.

Give your time and prayers.
Give your gold and silver,
Give your sons and daughters,
Give your best and give your all.
Give willingly, freely, and cheerfully for the sake of the dear One who gave His life for us.

VALLEY LETTER

While at Timber Ridge third Sunday in January I found the people were seeking an expression of appreciation of my poor service by giving me a genuine pounding. I do not know what I have done to merit such treatment at their merciful hands, but anyway they proceeded in a real old fashioned hospitable manner. And then to make me feel better some of them hinted that I might have a hard time getting home, from the effects of what I had already received, but that others would doubtless lie in wait for me next time. A preacher is just so constituted that a pounding of that kind makes him feel so good he knows not how to express himself. Mrs. Andes says a preacher's wife is built the same way. That is my trouble now, and has been several times this winter. I appreciate all these expressions of good will on the part of the good people of whom I have the honor to be the unworthy pastor. Every such expression from my people makes me wish I could be a better pastor for them and lead them into a more blessed fellowship with the Savior who is the giver of every good and perfect gift.

I had to miss my appointment at Timber Ridge third Sunday in February on account of snow.

Dry Run is now the scene of busy activities in building a church. The lumber has all been sawed, the saw mill man paid in full, and the work is going along as fast as they can push it. I have never seen people take hold of a job of church work better than they are doing at Dry Run. The land, most of the logs, the cutting and hauling and other work has been given free of charge. Again and again as I hear reports from Dry Run I am reminded of Nehemiah's explanation of the successful building of the Jerusalem walls. Here it is: "The people had a mind to work." When the people in any church have a mind to work they can do things. A willing mind in church work can accomplish far more than great wealth without the willing mind. The people at Dry Run are not wealthy as a rule. Most of them have the willing mind. They have willingly lent a helping hand to the outside calls that have come to them in the past. Now when they are bending every energy toward the building of a much needed house of worship they will appreciate financial assistance from any who are willing to help them.

SOLEMN VOWS

WHITMORE-CLARK

Thomas Bryant Whitmore and Lois Irene Clark, both of Dendron Virginia, were united in marriage at the Christian parsonage, in said town, on the afternoon of February 19, 1921. The marriage was a quiet one. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple motored to Wakefield where they took the train for a short wedding tour. They will make their home in Dendron where the groom is in the employ of the Surry Lumber Co.

MASSEY

Mrs. Annie Massey, wife of Mr. Henry Clay Massey, born August 5, 1851, died January 30, 1921. She had been in declining health for several years. She was the mother of six children, five of them having preceded her to the grave. She leaves a husband, one son, Adolphus, and many friends to mourn their loss. Funeral service conducted at the grave, interment in the family burying ground near Auburn.

A FRIEND

SHOWALTER

Mrs. Hattie V. Showalter, wife of Floyd Showalter, was born December 8, 1889, and died January 25, 1921. Her age was, therefore, 31 years, 1 month and 17 days. The death of sister Showalter, in the very prime of life, was unusually sad. She was a noble young woman, greatly beloved by a host of friends. Perhaps the saddest feature of her death is the fact that she leaves five small children—a pair of twins being only about ten days old at the time of her death. Much sympathy is expressed for the little motherless children, the broken-hearted husband, the sorrowing parents and two brothers who survive. The deceased was a faithful member of Antioch Christian church. Burial services were held at New Erektion Presbyterian church, January 26, assisted by Rev S. B. Hanau. May God comfort and care for the bereaved.

A. W. ANDES.

MINNICK

Mrs. Margarette Ellen Minnick was born September 2, 1852, and died January 30, 1921, aged 68 years, 4 months, and 28 days. The deceased lived for many years at Brandywine, W. Va., and was a member of the Disciples church there. Death, however, occurred at the home of a relative near Mt. Clinton, Va., where she and her husband were stopping temporarily. She is survived by her husband and other relatives. Burial services at Mt. Horeb U. B. church, J uary 31.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—SHOWALTER

Whereas it has pleased Almighty God in His wise providence to take out of the clayey tabernacle the soul of our sister, Mrs. Floyd Showalter who departed this life January 25, 1921, therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we believe the pure life and spotless character of our sister well worthy of imitation by us all.
2. That her death, though sad in the extreme, leaves us to mourn, not as those without hope, for we fully believe she has gone to be with the angels on the shining shore where we hope to meet her in the sweet bye and bye.
3. That the broken hearted husband, the five motherless little children, other relatives and many friends be admonished to imitate her virtues, and live in the faith of our Lord, that when the summons comes it may find them all ready to go as we believe she was.

4. That in her death the home loses a loving wife and mother, the community a good citizen, and Antioch church a faithful member.

MRS. A. W. ANDES,
MRS. T. L. DEEVERS,
MRS. W. C. WAMPLER,
Committee from Antioch church.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—LEWIS

Whereas; it has pleased our Heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom to call from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. Nannie Lewis, who died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Robert Strange, Ingram, Va., on January 22, 1921, and that in her death we have lost a devoted and faithful member, she having been a member for fifty-eight years; therefore be it Resolved:

First: That we, the members of Pleasant Grove (Va) church, do humbly bow to the will of an all wise Father, knowing that he doeth all things well.

Second: That we extend to her family our deepest sympathy, committing them to the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort.

Be it further, Resolved: That a copy of this tribute be sent to the family; that a copy be published in The Christian Sun and that a record be made on the church books.

Written by the church Secretary by the order of the church in session.

CHURCH SECRETARY.

MCCAULEY

Mrs. Susan R. McCauley, wife of W. H. McCauley, Shenandoah, Va., died February 25, 1921, of heart disease; aged forty-nine years, eleven months and three days. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, one son, three brothers and one sister. She was a grand daughter of Mrs. Diana Dovel of Page County Va., who celebrated her 101st birthday October 17, 1920 and who is still living.

The deceased was a consistent member of St. Peters Christian church, at which place the funeral was conducted by the writer, and her body was laid to rest in the church cemetery on Sunday, February 27, 1921.

May God comfort and keep the bereft husband and children.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

ROBERTS

Annie M. Roberts was born January 25, 1873, and died January 21, 1921, after a few weeks illness with pneumonia. Her last days showed a firm faith in God, peace of soul, and perfect resignation to the Lord's will.

She is survived by her father, Charles Fulgham; devoted husband, M. M. Roberts; devoted son, Oscar; brothers, A. J. Fulgham, J. A. Fulgham, C. R. Fulgham, G. G. Fulgham; sister, Mrs. Floyd Joyner, and other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon, January 23, by the pastor, at the Windsor Christian church, of which Sister Roberts was a member. The packed house was proof of her many friends. Interment was made in the Windsor cemetery.

E. T. COTTEN.

RASCOE

Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Rascoe departed this life at her home near Union Ridge, N. C., at the age of sixty-two years, one month and four days.

On January 6, 1881 she was united in marriage to J. G. Rascoe and to them twelve children were born. The husband, eleven children and twenty grand-children survive. She was a member of Union Christian church and had been for a number of years.

For about twelve months Sister Rascoe had been in poor health. She bore her sickness very patiently. When death came she quietly fell asleep. A devoted wife, fond mother, good neighbor and disciple of Christ has passed from labor to reward. May the dear Master comfort those who mourn.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. W. Holt, from Union Christian church, and the interment was in the church cemetery. The grave was banked with beautiful flowers.

P. H. FLEMING.

PIERCE

Roy Manning Pierce, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. I. H. Pierce, was born February 4, 1920, and departed this life January 29, 1921, at the age of eleven months and twenty-five days. He is survived by a devoted father and mother, one sister, and other relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor, Sunday afternoon, January 30, at the Bethlehem Christian church. Interment was made in the church cemetery.

FACTS ABOUT THE BIBLE

The word "bible" means "the book." The Old Testament was originally written in Hebrew on scrolls of parchment, linen or papyrus.

The Septuagint, or first translation, was the work of learned Jews, known as "The Seventy", at Alexandria, about 285 B. C.

The New Testament was originally written in Greek.

The first translation of the entire Bible into English was by John Wycliffe, about 1380.

Now it is translated into more than 500 different languages.

The very first book printed from movable type was the Bible. This work was done by Johannes Gutenberg in 1456.

The Bible is credited to about thirty authors, covering a period of 1,600 years.

The Bible contains 66 books, 1,189 chapters, 31,173 verses, 773,746 words and 3,566,480 letters.

The Hessians were defeated by a surprise attack from George Washington, because their general failed to read a letter of warning which had been placed in his hands. Many a Christian worker is defeated because he, too, fails to read the letters of God which, through the Holy Book, have been placed in his hands.

SALARY

The derivation of our word "salary" is very curious. In ancient times Roman soldiers received a daily portion of salt as part of their pay. "Sal" in Latin is salt, and when the salt was, in the course of time, commuted for money, the amount was called "salarium," or "salt money". Hence our "salary", and hence, no doubt, the expression "Not worth his salt"—that is, his salary.—Exchange.

CHURCH GROWTH

I note that the Southern Methodists last year gained in membership 286,361 and that Christian churches the nation over gained 667,007. In 1919 the gain was but 43,837, including the Catholics. Excluding them in 1919, the Protestant churches lost in membership in that year 114,163. In 1919 we thanked God for the Catholics; now we can thank Him for Protestantism too.

But there is one sad feature connected with this gain—we Christians have no part in it. During the year 1920 we have lost 106 ministers, 98 congregations, and 920 members. Why?

W. A. HARPER.

“A Church must send or end.”

DIGGING BACK TO THE OLD FOUNDATIONS

Denominations must dig back to old foundations—all of them must do it. There is no evading the issue, for it is written in large letters upon the pages of time. We do not mean to go back to old methods, lose any of the vision, or the progressiveness of the forward march. A world upheaval has thrown a lot of suds and soft sentiment around the foundations of the Church. And in too many instances the Church has eased herself upon these loosely laid structures. The Church must dig back to a solid foundation. A world brotherhood came very near being born while the world tossed to and fro in the agonies of war. That world brotherhood which came very near coming into existence was organized effort and does not, it seems to us, represent the real brotherhood that the world needs. There was a re-birth of our kinship during the trying days of war. It pointed out our inter-dependence and helplessness, without the interest of each other at heart. The League of Nations was designed to be the closing chapter of this struggle of blood and death, but differences of opinion ruled otherwise and the world marches on desiring to be free from “entangling alliances” to “alliances more entangling”.

But from the political viewpoint to that of the Church. In the Churches quest for riches, bigness, and honor she cast aside some of her foundation stones that had borne her up through all ages. The Lutheran points out that denominations have soft pedaled until most Protestants lack the courage to proclaim the great principles for which their denomination stands. This publication further points out that “the result is a general hazeness of belief among Christians which express itself in the commonly accepted creed that one faith, or one Church, is just as good as another.”

This feeling is particularly true with smaller denominations, though they may have the soundest and broadest principles. We have already set forth in a recent editorial that the Christian Church has lost members by its continued courting process. We believe that the Christian Church must get back to the fire and flame of James O’Kelly, Rice Haggard, and in later years, W. B. Wellons, instead of telling the world from every house top our similarity to other denominations. A product on the market sells better than some other product because it is better. When there is a difference in things a choice can more easily be made, but when there is no difference the average person will assume the “either one” attitude.

Now, there is in the Christian Church not so much a similarity, as a superiority, and unless we of the present day believe this, we need to take stock of our faith. It is the very foundation principle upon which the founders of our denomination began their great work. You do not have to compromise truth. All denominations are seeking, and have truth, but they do not have all truth. As soon as a denomination begins to repudiate its principles of declaration the world will lose respect for it. This is a great country because we are governing it on the foundations laid by sacrifices and the principles written in blood by our great forefathers. These United States of ours have their faults, but mark you, when we repudiate the famous Declaration of Independence, it will be no better than crime-stained Germany or blood-stained Russia. There must be an outstanding claim of principles, time and talent before an institution can come into the love and fellowship of all men. This great claim and these God-given principles the Christian Church has and it behooves every member to proclaim these good things. If O’Kelly had compromised his declarations with the Methodist Church immediately after declaring them there never would have been a Christian Church. And if we of the Christian Church compromise our principles today with every fad, fashion, and fancy that comes along then the day is not in the far distant when there will be no Christian Church.

The Presbyterians are digging back to old foundations the Baptist are taking an inventory of their colleges and seminaries with a “what do we believe?” interrogation. The Lutherans are going back to resurrect the spirit that aroused the passion of Martin Luther and made him bold enough to nail his ninety-five points of protest upon the door at Wittenburg. And so down the line the call comes to get back to a solid foundation.

We have as much love, esteem, and admiration for our sister denominations as ever, but we believe that each can do its work better and easier in its own way, and by its own methods. Such should not hinder the cause of the Kingdom. The great need is to be one in spirit, ever seeking the truth, with one vital aim, that truth shall make us free.

THE SUN calls upon the people of the Christian Church to exercise and live the principles of the Christian Church; it calls upon the members of the Christian Church to support the institutions of that Church; it calls upon the institutions of the Christian Church to exist for the Christian Church. If these conditions are not worthy enough to challenge us, then we have been led by false prophets, and dreamed with dreamers, But we have not!

This editorial is no attempt to answer President Harper's question asked on this page, but rather a review of some things as we see them. If this article should shed any light on the "Why?" we shall be glad.

A SUGGESTIVE MEMORIAL

It is a strange conception that many of us have that a costly marble shaft must be erected to perpetuate memory. There is no Bible for it and it is strange indeed that so often the custom is over emphasized. No marble shaft can serve humanity while it is placed at the head of a grave. There should be recognition, to be sure. But the memorial that means more than silent marble is that which serves humanity.

There is a need in our Southern work that must be met; and we are hoping that someone may meet this by perpetuating the memory of some friend. That need is an office building for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. THE SUN does not own its own building, has no office of its own, but rather is dependent upon existing circumstances. At present the Editor has a business office in connection with the printing establishment that prints the paper. But for the sake of a quiet place in which to work, he must maintain an office at his own expense in a building two blocks away. This makes the work inconvenient and takes time in going from one place to another that should be used for the cause.

It would be a fitting memorial for some person or persons to make THE SUN a gift of an office building. Such a building is badly needed, not only for office room, but for carrying a line of books, papers and church supplies. We are particularly handicapped in this line just now and we feel that we could greatly increase the sale of such supplies if we had an adequate place to put them on display. THE SUN being located in a town rapidly marching toward the 10,000 mark, with no such store, it seems to us that the Church is missing a rare opportunity for usefulness and financial advancement.

Who will consider this matter? The Editor invites correspondence and shall be glad to go into details with any interested friend. Who will meet the need?

THE EXAMPLE OF THE PEOPLE'S CHURCH

The example set by the members of the People's church of Dover, Del., in denying themselves of one meal each week to help the starving peoples in Europe is being recognized and appreciated. The Christian Work, New York, in its issue of March 5, 1921, speaks of the Dover congregation and commends the great and noble spirit.

THE ORPHANAGE EASTER OFFERING

The Superintendent of our Orphanage is this week mailing out 10,000 offering envelopes to be used by individuals, Sunday schools, and churches for the usual Easter offering for the Christian Orphanage. The Easter offering this year goes to help complete the Children's Home and should awaken our interest to make the largest offering yet.

There is a mathematics taught in the Bible that we may multiply by dividing, and that sometimes subtraction comes by adding. Strange logic, and yet it is true. We may have by giving, or lose by withholding. Let us remember this in making our Easter offering to the Orphanage.

SELF-DENIAL MONTH

Our Men and Millions Field Committee has designated April as the Self-Denial period in which the people are called upon to deny themselves of something and place the value thereof into their pledges that are due. Our faith in the people is such that we think that great good will come out of this suggestion and undertaking. Our people are liberal, loyal, and consecrated. They are, we are sure, doing all they can to combat high prices, deflated prices, and all other kind of prices. They are also ready and willing to do all they can for the denomination which they love. Our faith and hope lie in the people. They will not fail. They will deny self and sustain a great cause. They will respond to the request and we know that they will.

TEN THOUSAND A DAY

It is estimated that 10,000 human beings are perishing of hunger every day in the famine districts of China. In addition to the suffering from starvation, thousands are dying while we have plenty to eat, conveniences about us, and waste enough in our back yards to save thousands of these starving Chinese from death. We are told that in some sections the roots of trees are being used for tea or to make some kind of a stimulant to prolong life. How many as they read this will stop for a few minutes and think seriously upon the destitute conditions of our fellowmen in China?

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

TO FORM A COUNCIL WITH THE ALLIES

President Harding has already intimated that he will soon call a council of the Allies in order to promote the world association plan which was mentioned in his inaugural address of March 4 and which was sponsored during the late campaign of 1920. The first step of this plan as expressed by the President will be to lay it before the ambassadors of Great Britain, France, and other Allied powers and representatives of the existing League of Nations. This is to be done in the form of a conference supporting the present international court of justice rather than contradicting it in a direct way.

Though the general plan of an association of nations for the promotion of international peace and good will was first made public in the Republican Convention in 1920, the present plan to get representatives of the various governments together was worked out by Mr. Harding in broad detail at the meeting of his prospective cabinet members and associates at Marion after his return from his tropical vacation. Among those with whom he has taken counsel and with whom he is in constant touch are such nation-wide characters as Herbert Hoover, Charles Evans Hughes, and Albert B. Fall. William Jennings Bryan, long a supporter of world peace plans, and former President William Howard Taft, leading spirit in the League to Enforce Peace, both played important roles in the front porch discussions.

Whether such an effort to cooperate with the Allies will be successful in competition with the League of Nations is hard to tell. Time, patience and persistence only will prove the true worth of either. No doubt the League of Nations has already been of more value in adjusting international problems than we are inclined to think. It has the cooperation of practically every important nation except the United States and Russia, the latter torn and disrupted by internal revolution; and has been undoubtedly the greatest instrument since the Great War in keeping the nations of the world in touch with each other.

But a "League of Nations without the United States is a league without life-blood," says Premier Jan Smuts of South Africa. Already the Allies find themselves considerably lessened in strength by the absence of the American delegates at the reparations conference at London, and at the time of this writing, are involved in a further invasion of German territory in order to impress upon Germany the sincerity of their demands. The Allies are in constant need of the United States, probably more than the United States feels that she is in need of the Allies.

Yet peace is not completely established. Technically we are still at war with Germany, though in reality, we are not. Our President is not forgetful of this and he sees that we must receive the cooperation of the Allies in the furtherance of international peace. He realizes that he must not encourage foreign interests at the expense of the domestic, but in this realization it seems that he is not neglectful of the importance of the foreign problems. In order to accomplish the task he has before him, he has gathered about him in his cabinet some very capable men in whom the nation has confidence.

RUSSIA AGAIN IN REVOLUTION

Revolution in Russia is almost proverbial. But at present there are several phases of a revolutionary movement in that country which apparently may be welded into the besetting movement since the advent of the Bolsheviki in the late fall of 1917. According to the New York Evening Journal there are two separate sections of this revolution; one whose center is Petrograd; the other whose center is Moscow.

The most effective anti-Bolshevik movement it seems, is the one whose center is Petrograd, and whose immediate leader is Kozlovski. The artillery fire is being directed from Kronstadt and is proving a successful menace to its opponents in the initial stages of its operation, having almost completely demolished the Bolsheviki regiment sent against it on March 8. At that date its force numbered 37,000 soldiers, and was rapidly gaining adherents, even from the ranks of the Bolsheviki. The purpose of this movement is freedom of speech, press and individual trade. Its leaders are moderate socialists and trade unionists.

The other movement around Moscow is pointed out as being conducted by men dissatisfied with the leadership of Lenin and Trotzsky. In its ranks are more than 100,000 workmen who began a strike which ended in an armed contest between themselves and the Bolsheviki.

Reports indicate that back of the Petrograd movement Alexander Kernsky, who was the principal figure of the constitution government established after the downfall of the Czar, and who was driven from power by the Bolsheviki in the early fall of 1917. It is thought probable and hoped by many that he will weld Russia together again so that she will be in better standing with the Allies. Others believe that the Bolsheviki are "here to stay" and will not be ousted so long as they retain their present strength and have an army numbering 500,000 men.

VI—Education

WHEN education is mentioned, immediately the mind and its development appear in the foreground of consciousness. And it is right. Education is mental development. But what is mental development? Is the mind a vessel to be stored with useful and valuable information? Is it a muscle to be strengthened by certain, as it were, calisthenical or gymnastic movements? Is it a photographic plate, giving back what it receives? Or is it the instrument of a presiding genius, capable under the direction of that genius of creative acts? The answer to these questions will determine the method of education, but would not alter the fundamental conception that it is mental development. A trip to one of the great libraries of the world will convince even the superficial observer that man has endeavored to provide ample means of developing the mind, and the end is not yet, for more books are being printed this year than ever before. The same superficial observer by a cursory glance at the leaders of men in all generations will readily conclude that education has contributed tremendously to the achievements of the race. Certainly education must guarantee this essential development.

Contemporary with the thought of mental development through education was the complementary thought of spiritual ministry. Indeed it may with reasonable assurance be claimed that religious culture, rather than mental development, was the primary motive in education. In the early days religion was a chief concern of man, and not an incident of an otherwise busy career. The first educated men were the priests and ministers of religion and for their equipment the first colleges and universities were founded. In the educational development of our own country this fact admits no gainsaying. There would today be no universal education for the masses nor higher education for the leaders of our nation, had not the Church in America pioneered in education. But religion belongs in education not simply by right of priority of occupation. It belongs there by inherited right and necessity. Education without religion is a curse to a free people. Education without Christian character produces Kaiser Wilhelms on thrones, skeptics in professors' chairs, enemies of humanity in private life, and world wars in international relations. The educational system that leaves religion out is poison gas and no mask can be invented to withstand its insidious destruction. Education and religion, God had fitly joined them together, and what He hath united let no man or set of men essay to put asunder. The American people should give their best statesmanship to the implication of this truth for our public schools and institutions of higher learning under public control.

Education too has a ministry to the bodies of men. This is comparatively a new thought in educational practice. We have known all along that our body is the temple of the Holy Spirit, but we thought if we kept it clean we had met all obligation to the spirit dwelling within it. Never did it occur to our forefathers that the educational system owes it to the physical man to render his body not only clean, but also strong and vigorous and robust with health. So now the public school gives earnest heed to play and recreation and no college is complete without its gymnasium and its athletic grounds. Play and recreation make our bodies strong and vigorous and healthful, and so those instrumentalities deserve full recognition in the program of real education.

But education needs one more ingredient to render it four-square, and that is a social conscience. Strange as it may seem, great intellect, unquestionable integrity of character, strong physique do not necessarily motivate a man to serve his brothermen. Then why by the superiority they inevitably confer suggest to him the exploitation of his brothers. The strong, the strong in mind, spirit, and body, must be shot through with the spirit of altruism toward their fellows. Whether we will or will not, we are brother to all men. And whether we will it or not, what happens to our brothers happens eventually to us. The submerged tenth, if left to themselves will submerge the other nine-tenths. The highly favored, if they undertake to lavish their talents upon themselves in self-gratification, will fall under the unsparing hand of disease and moral degradation. I do not like to think of the curse we will bring upon our unhallowed heads by selfish appropriation of talent, which is certainly in God's thought a social asset and the common possession of all men. I delight to think on the benefit the life of unselfish service brings to the one who lives such a life and to those whom it benignly touches. Of this I am absolutely sure—the education that fails to equip with the social conscience is woefully inadequate in these days of world brotherhood and racial solidarity.

W. A. HARPER.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

WHAT are the churches doing? Oh, they are doing many things, some good, some not so good. However much good they may be doing, or not doing, there is one thing lacking in much of this doing, viz: We are praying far too little to meet the needs of the Church. You may say: "But how do you know?" I know by the fruit, the absence of the fruit, which usually follows much real prayer—we have not got the fruit and its absence proves the lack of prayer on the part of the people. Let me suggest that we busy ourselves more with the matter of prayer as a means of recovering lost spiritual vitality, for till such recovery is made, the Church cannot bring forth the fruits of the prayer life, and without that we cannot fill the place God has given us in the world. Why not make Easter Sunday, March 27, a day of Fasting and Prayer? The Church needs it and the world needs the help such a day might bring to the salvation of souls. In recent years we have given a great amount of attention to the material side of church life. Now let us face about and give much time and attention to prayer. What say you to using Easter Sunday as a day of Fasting and Prayer?

Perhaps there never was a day in the history of the Christian Church when we were doing so much for the liberalizing of our church people. We are giving more money to the cause of the Christ now than at any previous time in the past of our organized existence. This is well in a certain sense, but we ought to see that our well doing shall not in fact be changed by too much overhead expense. We should like to see a plain and commonsense statement, such as the people can understand, of the work that has been done in our general efforts to raise money for our cause—how many hundreds of thousands of dollars have we raised North and South, since we began the Forward Movement, and what it has cost to raise that amount of money. The people who gave the money surely have a right to know just what is the present state of our general treasury.

I am not a heresy hunter, but when heresy comes hunting me, I do not propose to be silent. When heresy (error) knocks at my door, I hope not to be asleep, and for the reason, I do not wish to give error any place in my life and thought. Truth has enough to contend with in its battle for righteousness without having the assistance of the messengers of truth. If error shall knock at my door, and I am sleeping, then, though a professed friend of truth, I am giving aid to the work of Satan's kingdom. And what ought to be done with me? Well, you know what they will do in military life, if a sentinel is caught asleep on his post—that fact alone shows the seriousness of sleeping watchmen! Brethren, let us wake up and see to it that no error is given place in our ranks. All error wishes is to be very friendly and sweet spirited till it can get a foothold on which it may seek to pull down the kingdoms of truth and righteousness. That much accomplished, then look out for special effort to pull down the strongholds of the mighty, and for one, I have not thought of being caught asleep in the Master's service. I may be so caught, but certainly I do not mean to be. When a man gets where he cares little for his own personal relation to the cause of Christ, and less if possible, for the introduction of heresy in the ranks of the army of Christ, then I think he had better wake up and go back to the mourner's bench and be quick about it.

Some one recently said: "More foundation work in ethics is laid in the grammar and high school by far than in the college." I think that may be true if the grammar and high school are kept on a high moral plane, but what must we expect when the grammar and the high school are themselves so full of ungodly amusements as to leave little chance for so impressing the pupils? If a high school boy or girl is kept in the atmosphere of the dance, the card party, or the theater party, while in high school, how can we expect them to come out with high moral ideas of a Christian character? We fear the devil has captured our high schools and turned them into nurseries for the promotion of sin. If so, why so? Is it not because somebody has neglected duty?

J. PRESSLEY BARRETT.

THE SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS

—The Seaside Chautauqua and School of Methods will be held at Virginia Beach, Va., July 18-24, 1921. The Executive Committee met a few days ago and planned for a great meeting. We earnestly desire that every preacher, Sunday school superintendent, and teacher, and as many others as can will attend. The cost will not be very much and the churches and Sunday schools ought to send their preachers and Sunday school workers.

The Program Committee has a strong program well under way. There will be many new features in the program this year, and the speakers and teachers will be the best to be had. Plan now to attend, and do not make a date to conflict with July 18-24.

C. H. ROWLAND, President

SUFFOLK LETTER

THE Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian church celebrated its ninth anniversary on Thursday evening, March 10, 1921. The congregation was large, appreciative, and religiously sympathetic. Mrs. John King, the President, had invited Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne, Mrs. Lightbourne, and Sam Davis, to conduct the service, with missionary address by Lightbourne. Mrs. I. W. Johnson and Mrs. W. H. Andrews worked assiduously for weeks in directing committees in canvass for new members, and their labors were abundantly rewarded.

Arrangements were made for the following Societies to sit in groups, with placards designating their positions: 1. Cradle Roll with twelve members and fifty-two new members making sixty-four members. 2. Wilting workers with thirty-nine old members and twenty-six new members, making sixty-five members. 3. Boy's Missionary Society with twenty-five members. 4. Girls Missionary Society with forty-eight old members and nineteen new members, making sixty-seven in all. 5. Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society with one hundred and eighty-one old members and thirty-three new members, making two hundred and fourteen members. 6. Men's Christian-Business Association, just organized with seventy members. This organization adopted its Constitution and By-Laws on the night before this great meeting. The men will seek to get every man in the congregation to unite with this Association for real Christian service.

The present membership in these auxiliary Societies totals 505.

Sam Davis made the piano speak in his inimitable way to the delight of the great audience; Mrs. Lightbourne sang two beautiful solos, and Mr. Lightbourne led the congregation with the church choir in inspiring gospel songs.

Then followed the missionary address by Victor Lightbourne. It was one hour long in delivery and twenty centuries long in its scope and artistic finish. It is safe to say that it surpassed any missionary address ever delivered in Suffolk. For range of historic vision and value; for apt illustration and biographical touches; for eloquent diction and spiritual application; the address was marvelous in its conception, composition, and delivery. He illuminates the pages of missionary history, gives the audience a new vision of missionary obligation, and inspires Christians with a new interest in this chief business of the Kingdom.

Had the public been invited the church would have been packed beyond its capacity; but it was meant to be a church meeting in the spiritual and active interest of its members.

The Christian Endeavor Society was not embraced in the above mentioned Societies, as many of the members belong to one of the above named organizations. The Societies in the above mentioned groups are distinct groups and do not cross one another. The Christian Endeavor Society numbers one hundred and they support a native pastor in Japan. The voluntary offering was $209.44.

It is an inexpressible pleasure to a pastor to be able to report such organized loyalty and activity among the members from the Cradle Roll to the grown-ups in the congregation. Members of the Cradle Roll are dropped from that Society at the age of six years.

Of the newly organized Men's Association, John King is President; Dr J. E. Rawls is Vice-President; H. Woodward, Jr. is Secretary; and R. C. Harrell is Treasurer.

W. W. STALEY.

A SPLENDID EVENING AT ELON

Elon sent sixteen delegates to the North Carolina Student Volunteer Convention at Trinity College last week and Sunday evening they gave their report. It was a soul-stirring occasion. All the principal missionary countries were represented by speeches as well as the different types of missionary workers demanded.

Mr. J. W. Fix, presided and the conclusion of the program presented the resolutions of the Volunteer Board for the incoming year. One of them was to raise at least $300 for missions among the students. After this was passed, he submitted the proposition to use this money to support an additional Japanese girl, graduate of Miss Fry's school in Utsunomiya, in Elon next year. This was unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

This will make two Japanese girls here next year. Miss Ito who is supported by the Young People's Missionary Society of the North Carolina Conference and the new one to be supported by the Student Volunteer Board and their friends. Is that not fine?

DENOMINATIONAL OBJECTIVE AND APPEAL

BY THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED

By The

BOARD OF CHURCH POLITY

Of The

CHRISTIAN CHURCH

REVS. F. G. COFFIN, J. O. ATKINSON, W. G. SARGENT, O. S. THOMAS, J. F. BURNETT.
Committee

That the present is unusual, disturbed, and uncertain none will question. Though it may create apprehension in some, to many it will appeal as a great opportunity challenging their best effort. However we may differ as to the significance of these days we are unanimous that their unprecedented character demands the most forceful Christian activity of which we are capable and, at the same time, thrusts upon us the unavoidable alternative of failure.

Perhaps, in the nature of the case, no Church has greater responsibility for these times than our own. Our liberality in fellowship, mobility of program, and latitude for many sincere faiths to work together without denominational disintegration—all mortgage our total resources to meet the world's present needs. We must make an exceeding effort in behalf of a complete unity and rehabilitation of a sundered world. The Christian Church has a mission as distinctive as in its beginning and more nearly possible of fulfillment.

If conditions are unusual they are not hopeless but they do demand unusual Christians. The Christian can no more limit his service and gifts to the measure of the past, even though it was a good one, than he can confine his expenses to the same date. The determining test for ourselves and the organization which we represent is whether we can enlarge to meet the new needs. There must be an enlarged service of a functionless Church. No one has a right to Christian satisfaction, except in and through Christian service, and who would be strong enough to help his fellows must guard his own health and develop his own muscles.

To accomplish what is before us the Joint Boards and the Board of Policy of the Christian Church find that the following features of our denominational objective and program should be especially stressed during the year 1921:

1. Fundamental to any attainment of our beloved Church must be the cultivation of efforts to plan and work together in order that there may be a solid denominational impact behind all of our efforts. We must unite for our projects, synchronize our plans and build our sectional programs either out of or into our general denominational program. Each convention, conference, church, and auxiliary society should adopt as a minimum of attainment the standards and plans of work of The American Christian Convention and its several departments. Territorial efforts should be in addition to these. The stronger convention, conference, and church should assist the weaker wherever possible.

2. The Forward Movement is the outstanding work of our Church. Into this our unlimited energies must now be put. Every section of our territory where it has not already been done, should, without further delay, put on the full Forward Movement program. Important as it is, no mere financial campaign can supply the need of the Church. If only filled treasuries result from this Movement, we will have failed. The other four points are equally important. These five objectives are of such character that they can only be realized by each member accepting a definite responsibility for their accomplishment.

3. Inasmuch as one-fifth of the financial goal of the Forward Movement is to be secured through the regular offerings for the general benevolences of the church, our people should be especially diligent and generous in these offerings. Unless our churches make a larger response to these departmental calls we will not reach the goal in this item.

4. A most pungent need of our Church today, in common with all other Churches, is a large force of workers. Many of our churches are without preaching because preachers are not available. We call upon all agencies of our Church to see that the need and opportunity for life recruits are frequently emphasized. This supreme use of life should be kept constantly before childhood and youth in the home, Sunday school, Junior and Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor, colleges, and elsewhere as frequently as opportunity permits. Its appeal should be often voiced in public discourse.

5. We urge our people to take into account the increased strain which the changed times have put upon the slender resources of our colleges and enlarge their support accordingly. The importance of these institutions to our denominational future was never greater than now, yet the support formerly given is not adequate for present financing.

6. Summer Schools of Religious Education are now so well distributed among us geographically that their benefit is within the reach of all. They make an inestimable contribution to efficiency in both pew and pulpit and are centers of as fine fellowship as our Church affords. We urge our ministers and people to attend such schools each year. We also suggest that our Church and conference boards give thorough consideration to the value of annual Church Efficiency Institutes. These may be held by single churches or in groups. In such institutes their field may be studied and analyzed, the church resources surveyed, weakness discovered and remedied, and training given in the official tasks of the church.

7. Our Church periodicals are indispensable to the prosecution of our denominational mission, yet their struggle for existence has never been greater. The pressure of this situation, caused by inflation of production prices, is unavoidable by those who have our publications in charge. There can be but one adjustment—our support must equal our need. The year 1921 should include an every member drive in every church for subscriptions to our Church periodicals. The results of an increased subscription list will be, more loyalty to the local church, a strengthened denominational unity and fellowship, and an increased support of the Church's enterprises, besides much blessing to individual lives.

8. The post-war period increases our missionary obligations. Our foreign force and equipment should be greatly augmented. The alien inrush to America has been resumed. Our Home Mission increase must equal the same ratio as our population. This will be possible only when our people have sensed the present strategy of missions and instituted an adequate program of education and maintenance in their churches.

9. Our church programs have been inadequate in the conservation of our youth, therefore our young people's organizations have been less vigorous than they might have been. We call upon our people to carefully re-analyze their whole church program having in mind the conservation of the young for the future church, and to make such revisions as will better serve this end.

10. An adequate program of evangelism should be placed well to the fore in the year's program. It will be stimulating to remember that the periods of most marked growth in the Christian Church are those in which evangelism received her greatest emphasis. The training for and promotion of evangelism by individuals, churches and all Church organizations should have the largest possible place in the plans of the church.

11. Nothing is more outstanding and significant in modern movements than the efforts of the various denominations toward union, federation, and cooperation. It is also inevitable that this tendency will increase. Christian churches should not omit from their message an endorsement of this new spirit of fellowship and should freely give their best efforts in the interest of the oneness of all of God's people. We urge that, so far as strictures of conscience do not prevent, they keep in understanding and cooperative touch with such interdenominational gatherings and movements.

12. For these several outstanding tasks, and many more unmentioned, we are altogether unequal. Let us therefore, everywhere, seek more largely that strength and guidance which alone is adequate. However trite its statement may seem to be, nothing can be more important than those practices of devotion which bring us near to God, give us an understanding of Him and His will and assure the continued blessing of divine strength. "Pray without ceasing and in everything give thanks."

WHAT BROTHER ELDREDGE SAYS:

Brother Riddle referred to me the matter as to Brother Eldredge's ministerial relationship. I referred the matter to Brother Eldredge. Here is his answer, so far as it bears upon the point at issue:

"In reply to your good letter and inquiry would say that I am a layman licensed by the Erie Conference to preach upon occasion....."

"Both the government and the railroads have declared me a layman....."

"Of course in a very real sense all Christians are ministers, but common usage and the dictionary class me a layman and there I class myself.

"I trust that there is no discord from my coming to preach the baccalaureate and if there is you will know of course that I am not thin skinned and a word as to what is good for the cause will be heartily accepted.

"I am not responsible for what Dr. Burnett calls me in the Annual. He has to use some general term and I will not try to add to his burdens."

Brother Eldredge has already been written that there will be no objection to a baccalaureate message from so good a minister or layman as he.

REDOUBLE OUR EFFORTS

I am informed of the plan and purpose of the Field Committee of the Men and Millions Forward Movement to make April Self-Denial month in order to awaken greater interest in the work undertaken. I want to add my endorsement to this plan. If we are to continue the advance that has been made in our work for the Master it is necessary that we redouble our efforts. Especially when almost every one feels the touch of the financial depression that is now sweeping over the country. Let us not withhold our support from His cause at this time—rather let us deny ourselves of something for at least one month in order that our obligations may be met.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

ACCORDING TO THE WORD OF THE LORD

WHEN the Lord says "tarry ye in this place," it is as necessary for that servant to stay where his Lord has placed him until the Lord commands otherwise, as it is to go out into the harvest field if His command is to go. When one of the Lord's own is sent into seclusion, it is because He has a plan for that life which cannot be developed in the hurry and rush of the world. A plan which needs constant, unbroken communion with the Lord that His purpose for that life may unfold according to His plan.

When the Lord sent Elijah to Cherith, telling him to hide himself there, drinking of its waters and feeding upon that which the ravens should carry to him, the Word tells us "he went and did according unto the word of the Lord". It is only when we do according to the word of the Lord, when we fully surrender to Him, when we obey to the letter, when we trust to the utmost, when we are ready to go where He sends or stay in the place which He designates, that we can experience the power of His might or His tenderest care. The brook was drying up. The resources seemed to be failing, but the Lord had said: "Get thee hence, and hide by the brook Cherith. I have commanded the ravens to feed thee there."

That command of the Lord's had tied the prophet to that spot. He had no right to move to another place or seek food elsewhere until the Lord commanded it. Even though the prophet had known of the widow's meal barrel he had no right to any of its contents yet, for the Lord had only promised to feed him at Cherith. Cherith it must needs be, with the bread and flesh morning and evening, quenching his thirst at the brook until the brook dried up. Then the word of the Lord came, saying, "get thee to Zaraphath, I have commanded a widow to feed thee there," Elijah would have starved if he had remained at Cherith after that. Many souls are starving to death today because they are going to the wrong place for food. They are feeding upon the bread which perishes, and drinking of the waters which fail. Jesus only has the bread of life. He alone can supply the living water.

When the Lord says Cherith we have no business in Zaraphath. When the Lord says Zaraphath we have no business staying in Cherith. If we go where He sends us, if we stay where He places us, obeying and trusting when all our resources seem to be failing, the lessons which we have learned in trust and obedience prepare us for God's next move. When the Almighty sends one of His servants into seclusion it is for special training. Morning and evening the prophet was permitted to see God's hand working for him, caring for him, providing for him. Morning and evening he was reminded God was not forgetting him. He never forgets the servant who stays where He has placed him. God never forgets the one who is obedient and trustful.

If God has commanded you to stay in lonely Cherith, it is worth while to obediently stay there just to see your Lord's hand working for you. To know that among the thousands of His people He is thinking of you and your needs. Not only thinking of them but that His hand is working to supply them. Have you obeyed Him so fully, trusted Him so completely that you know He is thinking of you, working for you, caring for you apart from all the world beside?

Or are you staying in Cherith's seclusion when your Lord has said go to Zaraphath? Or have you wearied with lonely Cherith's monotonous life and are you moving out before your Lord has said: "Arise, get thee to Zaraphath." Our plans are imperfect, they fail, they end in disappointment. God has a perfect plan for each of our lives. Obediently submitting to His commands brings perfect bliss. Will you do according to all the word of the Lord and know the fullness of joy which faithful obedience to His commands brings?

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

THE WEAKNESS OF MODERN LIFE

Rev. J. H. Oldham of London, Editor of the International Missionary Review, made a brief address at the North American Missionary Conference, Garden City, N. Y., January 20 that wonderfully impressed his audience of Christian workers gathered from various parts of the earth. He was trying to analyze the present moral and spiritual situation and discover the weakness of our modern life. "We are in a world of reaction," said the noted divine, "and how to break out of this house of cross materialism is the one thing needful now. The weakness of our modern life is that it has come to be secular. Life has come to mean not much more than what we do. This is too shallow. We have got to get back to the source of renewal. We need that life which is like a tree whose root is hidden deep. His leaf shall not wither. Worship must be created in our lives. The deepest need of our modern life is the breaking out in our lives of a created energy. It has cost God long ages to make this day; lay not on it clumsy fingers till He has passed His promise to make it good. It is not what we can do that counts; it is what He can do through us. We haven't the power, with all our plans and energies to reach and save this world, but He has the power and will release this power through us if we will let Him. All that is divine in the world is of God. That worship, and not work, should become central in our lives, and that we emphasize not our character, but the character of Jesus the Christ, as the foundation of being and of society.

THE BUSINESS "TIE-UP"

The Southern Methodists had on a large program in 1919 for missions. The same Church now has on an even larger program for Christian education. It may be thought that the constituency of that Church had gone the limit in giving for these "hard times". One of their ministers, Rev. H. C. Sprinkle, Greensboro, N. C., does not think so, and in a sermon on a recent Sunday said: "The year 1919, marked the beginning of a series of great movements to be conducted by the Southern Methodist Church. It was during that year that the Church subscribed over $30,000,000 for missionary purposes. "Yet," said Mr. Sprinkle, "the people of the Southern Methodist Church donated to their God less than three per cent of their combined income! It is generally taken for granted by Christian people that a man should give at least one tenth of his income to religious work. This being true," he continued, "it is easy to see that in a year of the greatest zeal, we have robbed God of at least two-thirds of the smallest amount He demands of us."

The pastor went on to explain that he simply called upon the members of the Church to do their full duty to God with their resources. "We hear the cry on every hand, that everything is tied up." Answering the above statement with this searching question, "What right have we to tie up God's money?"

Continuing the thought of Pastor Sprinkle one wonders if there are not many of us who are taking the "tie-up" in business as an excuse for not doing their best for God and His work. It is our fault, not God's, that calamities and business pressures come, and we should in such times do our best to meet our obligations to him. For now it requires real sacrifice, obedience and consecration to do so, and that is what the Divine heart desires.

AN APPRECIATION FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE A. C. C.

Rev. J. O. Atkinson, Mission Secretary,
Elon College, N. C.

My Dear Mr. Atkinson:

I have been very much delighted to learn of the happy arrangement for the further general prosecution of our mission work in all fields, with China added. It seems to me that this forward step offers very much for the future out-reach of the Christian Church, as well as the intensifying of its own spirit, and uniting all of its people in a concerted program. In my judgment, the things which will grow out of this adjustment will make for the finest esprit de corps we have yet developed in our denomination.

The good word coming from the South, is a constant cheer and spur to our entire denomination. May the Lord continue His good work through you.

Fraternally yours

F. G. COFFIN.

ANOTHER MISSION SUNDAY SCHOOL

Our Berea (Nansemond) Sunday school has joined the ranks of schools making an effort to become missionary in spirit and activity. The school has voted to have Missionary Sunday once a month and on that Sunday let the offering go for missions. Bro. E. W. Smith who is elected Mission Superintendent issued the following letter and program to each member of the school for his first Sunday's effort:

"Dear Co-Worker:

I am enclosing you a program for our first Mission Sunday. Only by your prayerful and undivided support can we make this just what it ought to, and should be.

"Won't you come, and won't you come by ten-thirty? I am begging that you come at least this Sunday and on time."

MISSION SUNDAY PROGRAM

Sunday, February 20, 1921, 10:30 A. M.

Opening song by school; scripture lesson by E. W. Smith; the Lord's Prayer led by W. H. Brinkley, school superintendent; 10:45: Address—E. W. Jenkins; Duet—Misses Mason and Marshall; 11:00: Teachers take charge of classes; 11:15: Mission Collection; Closing song by children led by Mrs. W. B. Warrington.

Yours faithfully,

E. W. SMITH, Mission Supt.

This is indeed a fine beginning and we predict that it means larger and better things for this school.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

MITE BOX OPENING, NEWPORT NEWS CHURCH

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of East End Christian church, Newport News, Va., held a Mite Box Opening in church auditorium February 8, 1921 at 7:30 P. M., at which time the following program was rendered:

BETHLEHEM LADIES AID

A working Ladies Aid Society is a big addition to any church. In fact, I never knew of any Ladies Aid Societies that were not a great aid to the church and the community as well. They are known for doing things rather than talking about them. Only a suggestion of a need or of a good deed that could be done, and the Ladies Aid is very active immediately.

This good sort of organization of the Bethlehem Christian church near Suffolk, Virginia, besides paying bills, and saving money for future needs of the new church, organized a Woman's Missionary Society over a year ago. Not many months since, on account of the distant territory of a portion of the church's membership, another Ladies Aid Society was organized with fourteen charter members. At the fourth meeting of the second Ladies Aid the membership numbered thirty. Now they are planning the organization of a second Woman's Missionary Society.

One of the characteristics of these societies is to remember the pastor and wife in the way of poundings. After one of their meetings some time ago, our ear was filled with hams, eggs, fruits, and other good things. Our appreciation of this wonderful remembrance was expressed but not through THE SUN. And now the ladies of this church have surprised us with an even bigger and better pounding.

After their last meeting, which we, including the baby, attended, one of the good women presented my good wife, for Margaret Lillian, a hand full of greenbacks. It was twenty-five good dollars. Money is scarce and a little is worth a great deal in this section of the country, and for this reason, the liberal gift is more highly prized and appreciated.

May the Lord greatly use us in His service and continue to richly bless the Ladies Aid and Missionary Societies all over the land.

HERE AND THERE—BUT MOSTLY EVERYWHERE

The first woman in history, it is said, to hold such an important position in a law-making body is Mrs. Mary Ellen Smith of Vancouver who has been elected Speaker of the House in the British Columbia Parliament.

The Western Chamber of Commerce, which is to be composed of representatives of each of the 21 counties from Watauga to Cherokee, was first started in Asheville.

By the ruling of former Attorney General Palmer during his last day in office, beer and wine will be given the same status as whiskey for medical and non-beverage purposes.

The Bellamy marriage bill which requires that a register of deeds cannot issue a marriage license to any parties without health certificates, signed by a doctor in the county in which the license is obtained, has been passed by the North Carolina Legislature. Failure to comply with this act will subject a register of deeds, or a doctor issuing such certificates to any parties not entitled to them, to a penalty of fine or imprisonment.

OUR ORPHANAGE

EASTER OFFERING APPEAL

For several years the Special Easter Offering for the benefit of the Christian Orphanage has been a real joy. Most of the churches in the Southern Christian Convention have been making this offering—in fact more churches have been making this offering than have been joining in the Thanksgiving offering.

Easter is a joyful season. It commemorates the resurrection of our Lord and Master. It brings to us new life, new hopes, new aspirations, new joys. It is the season when the trees put on their new suit of green, the flowers bloom in beautiful array and make the landscape a thing of beauty. The young men dress in their new spring suits and the girls lay aside their winter furs and heavy coats and dress in organdies and other pretty goods that make them look so pretty and sweet. Easter is a season that should bring joy and happiness to every one. It is a season that we want to not only be happy ourselves but every one wants to see every other person happy.

It is an opportune time to make special offerings for the benefit of those who have been deprived of the many blessings that make us happy—no father or mother to bless them on Easter morn or a home which they can call their own. No one to dye eggs red, blue or brown. No father to take the little boys fishing. No mother to dress the little girls in beautiful spring dresses. No, such as these will not have the joy on Easter morn with the bright expectations as other children will have. More than one hundred of such little children have been refused admittance to the Christian Orphanage during the past year because we had no room. Suppose we had had room and given them a place. These same little helpless children would have had a happy home and could have looked forward to a happy day Easter morn.

If there ever was a time we need your prayers, your sympathy and your help—it is now. We are anxious to complete our new building by the first of May and have it paid for. If your church will make us a liberal Easter Offering and every church in the Convention will do the same thing we will be able to present to the Church in the month of May a splendid building that will give a home to sixty or seventy little helpless children. Will you see that your church has a part in this offering?

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: We have been real busy in school and have neglected sending our dues for several months. We are enclosing $1.00, which is a part of what we made in our tobacco. We hope that all of the little cousins are well and happy, and will have a pleasant Easter. With every good wish and love to all.—Frank and Herbert Burton.

I see from your letter that you raise tobacco. When I was a little boy we raised tobacco too, and we thought it was great fun to catch the big worms.—“Uncle Charley.”

CHILDREN CHARMERS

IF AND PERHAPS

If every one were wise and sweet,
And every one were jolly;
If every heart with gladness beat
And none were melancholy;
If none should ever grumble or complain,
And nobody should labor
In evil work, but each were fain
To love and help his neighbor—
O, what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

And if, perhaps, we both should try
That glorious time to hurry;
If you and I—just you and I—
Should laugh instead of worry;
If we should grow—just you and I—
Kinder and sweeter-hearted—
Perhaps in some near by and by
That good time might get started;
Then what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me—for you and me!

FAITHFUL CHUM AND FEARLESS GUARD

By Albert Payson Terhune

If you live in a big city, don't keep a collie. It is as cruel as to keep an eagle in a cage or a deer in a cellar. But if you live in the country, you will find him a wonderful chum and a fearless guard. Besides, he is the easiest of all dogs to train for herding cattle or sheep.

This last is because of his ancestry. You know, in Scotland and in other countries, for many centuries, the collie was kept as an aid to shepherds and drovers. He was taught to handle sheep and cows—especially sheep—more efficiently than a dozen men could handle them. This, for centuries and centuries.

The modern collie has all these hundreds of years of training hidden away in the back of his queer, brilliant brain, ready to relearn it at the slightest chance. Sometimes, he remembers it by instinct—or part of it. For instance:

I knew a collie named Lad that had never seen a sheep in his life. A flock of twenty sheep were shut in a paddock on Lad's master's place, one evening, on their way to the county fair. In the night, the twenty sheep broke out of the paddock and stampeded. Now, mind you, Lad had never before set eyes on a sheep. Yet he went after that widely scattered runaway flock, and "rounded up" all twenty of them as skillfully as any veteran shepherd could have done it.

He did it without hurting or even searing any of the sheep. And, after that, he was so proud of his new accomplishment that he used to "round up" chickens and ducks and kittens and every other bird or animal he could find. It was the ancestral instinct working out.

The collie is descended more directly from the wolf than is any other domestic canine—except possibly the German police dog. And he has a wolf's quick brain and agile body and resourcefulness and unerring instinct. But he has lost the wolf's treachery and other of the latter's evil traits. A collie that has been brought up rightly has none of his ancestor's unpleasant ways. He is loyal and gallant and fun-loving and wise. Here is a case—a true story—to prove how he has clung to one wolf-trait, namely, the mysterious sense of direction:

A man named Roy M. Coe left Fort Scott, Kansas, and went to Albuquerque, New Mexico, to live. He took along his collie, Bud. The dog was not happy at Albuquerque. He wanted to get back to Kansas, to Mr. Coe's sister-in-law, whom the dog loved better than anyone else. Now, Bud had come to New Mexico in a baggage car. So he had not been able to see the country he passed through. Soon after he reached Albuquerque he disappeared. For eight months, nothing was heard of him. Then, in July, 1920, he limped into the office of Mr. Coe's sister-in-law, at Fort Scott, Kansas and lay down exhausted at her feet.

Bud had traveled nine hundred and fifty-six miles alone and through unfamiliar country, with nothing to guide him except that queer, wolf-like sense of direction. As I said, this is a true story.

In the old days, the collies were known as "shepherd dogs". It is said that shepherds, long, long, ago, caught baby wolves and tamed them and crossbred them with their own domestic dogs in order that the puppies might inherit their wild parents' cleverness. Then, after a few generations of this, the dogs were brought up among sheep to cure their savage tendency to kill the woolly creatures, and then were set to guarding the flock against their own fierce cousins, the wolves.

There are several theories as to how the collie got his name. The most likely of these is that he took it from the old English word, "coll", meaning "dark". For the first collies were either black or of very dark brown. "Coll" was pronounced like "coal". And in parts of Scotland you will still hear the collie called "coalie".

There are two kinds of collies—the rough and the smooth. In America the smooth collie is very rare. He is shaped like his rough brother, but has a coat almost as short and as harsh as a bulldog's. The rough collie is the type you are familiar with. He is found in three different kinds of coloring: the "sable", the "merle" and the "tri-color".

The tri-color collie is the collie whose principal hue is black and who has white and tan markings and usually a white chest. The merle is gray, with white chest and with tan on the cheekbones, and with black spots scattered here and there through his gray coat. Sometimes he has what is called a "marled eye"; one eye with a whitish iris that gives a false impression of blindness. Every other shade of color comes under the head of "sable", whether pale gold or dark brown, or red. There is also a "white" collie—white all over, except for a brown spot or so. But he is more or less in a class by himself.

Your collie needs all the exercise he can comfortably get. He needs plenty of fresh water to drink. He needs frequent hard brushings, if his coat is to stay beautiful. And while he is the easiest of dogs to train, he is much the easiest to ruin by wrong treatment in puppyhood.

If you own the right kind of collie, you own a treasure. If you own the wrong kind, the fault is not his, but the person's who brought him up.—The American Boy.

Last Sunday was a red-letter day for the Burlington church. The Woman's Missionary Society had planned the services and invited Dr. A. B. Kendall, Washington, D. C., to preach two missionary sermons. Dr. Kendall was at his best, and in his usual good style. The main auditorium of the church would not accommodate the people at either service. Dr. Kendall has many friends in Burlington and "the people heard him gladly." At the evening service Dr. Kendall spoke very complimentary of Bro. G. O. Lankford, who is to begin his work as pastor of the Burlington congregation April 1.

As stated sometime ago THE SUN enjoys having many readers who are not members of the Christian Church. This good note comes from a minister of another denomination: "Since I have so many bills to meet, I had almost decided not to take THE CHRISTIAN SUN any longer, but after considering the matter seriously, I have decided that I cannot do without the organ of the Church that I love. Therefore, I enclose check for the amount of $2.50."

Postmaster Ethredge, Selma, N. C., in renewing his subscription to THE SUN says: "Just cannot do without THE SUN. I enjoy reading Bro. J. P. Barrett's articles. It is like hearing from home to read his contributions." (Of course I enjoy all THE SUN). We welcome Dr. Barrett back to our Southern work."

We have received a copy of Elon's 1921 catalogue. A copy of this may be had free upon application to President W. A. Harper, Elon College, N. C.

Dr. Howard E. Rondthaler, President of Salem College, Winston Salem, N. C., will preach at the Burlington Christian church next Sunday morning and evening.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES

As we close our forms this (Monday) morning we note the announcement in the daily press that The American Daily Standard, Chicago, Ill., mention of which has been made in THE SUN, has been forced to suspend publication for lack of support. The Standard was started December 22, 1920, as a daily, Christian in principle and ethics and carried only news that was news, seeking to print a constructive type of matter instead of magnifying crime. We regret the meager support given such a paper, and in particular its forced suspension at such an early date. Is it a sign that people are not looking for something clean and truthful? The press in large headlines says: "Not the kind of paper the people want." It is too bad that such is true, it seems. This office is a subscriber to The Standard.

A SUPER-CHURCH

The Presbyterian Standard is somewhat fearful of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, and says that unless careful steps are made that the Council may become a self constituted body and put over many enactments that will not be rallied to by the membership of the constituent bodies. The Standard says: "The Council is rapidly becoming, in the exercise of un-conferred powers, a Super-Church. A few men assume to speak for united Protestantism and they put their ecclesiastical finger into many pies which we have no business."

We pass this mention and quotation on without criticism. We prefer to let our readers think for themselves along this line.

SOME STARTLING FIGURES

Dr. Henry H. Sweets, Secretary of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, has issued some very startling figures concerning his denomination. He says there are about 700 pastorless churches in the General Assembly their ministers dying and retiring at the rate of 54 per year, and that the last few years has shown a great decrease in candidates for the ministry. These figures are caused by abnormal and unusual times. As the pendulum of time swings in the right direction, and the people get close to God, the situation, we believe, will be relieved.

"If all the pastors and official members of our Church were faithful readers of our general organ, there would speedily come an advance movement in our ranks; we would become more loyal to Christ and his Church, and the pleasure of the Lord would prosper in our hands. We might learn a lesson from current heresies. The followers of Pastor Russell and Mrs. Eddy and other cults are busy day and night distributing their pernicious literature in hotels, reading rooms, fairs, and other public places. They even invade the sanctity of Christian homes and endeavor to unsettle the faith of believers."

It is stated and understood that the war and navy departments are to be merged into one and to be known as a department of defense.

Dr. Leon G. Broughton tells of a Baptist church whose annual report to the Association stated that no members had been received, none had died or been dismissed, none had married, nothing had been paid to the pastor, nothing for missions, or any Church benevolence. The report ended with this appeal: "Dear brethren, pray for us, that we may continue to hold our own."

It cost $10,960,290.00 to elect Mr. Harding and $2,237,770.00 to try to elect Mr. Cox, according to the final reports of the two National Committees.

CHURCH NEWS

HENDERSON LETTER

The attendance at Sunday school the first Sunday was the largest since I have been pastor of our Henderson church, perhaps in the history of the church. Under the direction of Superintendent D. I. Langston and his faithful co-laborers, the work is taking on new life in all its departments.

The following are some of the new phases of effort launched by the school: "Workers' Council", which holds a meeting monthly; Teacher Training Class meeting weekly. Two classes have recently been organized: "Gleaners", a class of young ladies; "The Victor Lightbourne Young Men's Bible Class." Others have been given names as follows: "Little Rosebuds"; "Little Workers"; "Jewels"; "Wellons Bible Class."

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society, with Mrs. W. O. Cunningham, superintendent, is one of the most active departments of our church work, and we think promises much for our church in the future.

A Home Department has also been recently organized, with Mrs. F. M. Harward, superintendent.

The Ladies Aid Society held its anniversary meeting in February. Several plans for raising money had been adopted, all of which proved fruitful.

Following the custom of some years past Fuller's Chapel suspended Sunday school work during the winter months. Some think this best. Generally speaking I favor the all-the-year-round Sunday school. The Sunday school at Fuller's will open the first of April. We are glad to state that while the Sunday school has been closed the church has not been inactive. Interest has been quickened by the Young People's Missionary Society, which holds meetings once a month, sometimes two. Miss Pattie Coghill is the efficient president of the Society. She has associated with her some faithful and earnest workers. We are expecting great results from this work.

R. L. WILLIAMSON.

FOUR CHURCHES

For some time I have been reading of the poundings given different ministers, and I have decided to write of the work being done in the four churches that I am trying to serve, namely: Mine's Chapel, Pleasant Ridge (R), New Hope (R), and Kallam Grove.

Last July, after we had returned from Georgia, I found Pleasant Ridge without a pastor, and as I was open for work, I accepted and went for the first time the fourth Sunday in July. I held our revival meeting in August without pulpit help, but we had a fine meeting, at the close of which I was called to serve the church for another year with an increased salary. Now these people have not given their pastor one of those extra poundings, but if a pastor ever served a church where the people are more liberal, hospitable, and progressive than these good people I would like to meet them. It is a real treat to visit in the homes of these people.

We have here a real live Sunday school, superintended by one of those Godly young men who is as fine as Randolph county has. We have prayer meeting every Sunday, and surely we are moving along here.

Mine's Chapel has been able to awaken a little and call their pastor for two Sundays. We do not have a Sunday school here, but are going to organize shortly. These are fine people to serve also, and it is enjoyable to be with them.

We go to New Hope and Kallam Grove on the second Sunday. New Hope is finishing her church building now and they are greatly in need of seats for the church. The membership here is small but they are very much interested in the work and I always look forward to my regular visits here with a great deal of pleasure.

Kallam Grove is also small in membership, but I am sure that as the spring opens the attendance will increase. I have not had the pleasure of visiting here a great deal because of having to return home where I am trying to fill the position as principal of the High School.

Last but not least, I must tell of our fine neighbors. I often wonder if any other people have such neighbors as we have. Every few days when I return from a hard day's work my wife calls me aside to show me the many nice things some one has sent us.

We are truly grateful to God for our many privileges and blessings and pray that He may bless each one in their service to Him.

RICHMOND, VA.

Our work in Richmond is moving along nicely and we are planning to hold our first anniversary on the first Sunday in April. We are making a strenuous effort to have one hundred members by that time, now lacking fourteen.

Our Sunday school is growing rapidly, as well as our Ladies Aid Society and Christian Endeavor. The Wellons Bible Class is now an organized class with a full set of officers and is making a great effort to increase its membership. The class makes a regular monthly offering to the Orphanage at Elon College. As we wish to be represented with our Church paper at our city Y. M. C. A., I am enclosing $2.50 to cover one year's subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. expresses his best wishes to the class for same.

I have the honor of trying to teach this class, and it gives me great pleasure to state that the work is on a mutual basis and our great aim is to make it one of the leading classes in Richmond. We all feel proud of the interest that has already been manifested. We hope that our brothers abroad will not forget us, especially when they are in this city. We certainly would be glad to see our gifted editor. Call to see us.

Brethren, pray for us that we may grow and become a great asset to the Lord's cause.

MISCELLANEOUS

Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew W. Mellon, is expected to announce soon as to whether the federal taxes can be reduced. One proposal put forward has been to reduce the total tax collection to $3,000,000,000 per year from the $4,000,000,000 now collected. This would mean an average of $200 less per year for the average taxpayer.

Rev. Norma Brown, twenty-one years old, set the record for being the first woman to act as chaplain of that body, and also the youngest person to do so, when she delivered the invocation in the Illinois Senate before the memorial ceremonies of the late Senator Edward E. Curtis last week. She is the pastor of the Carlock Christian church.

Chairman Clark of the Interstate Commerce Commission has stated that in his opinion there is little prospect for any early relief from high freight rates owing to the depression of business conditions, and states that the outlook at this time is probably not as favorable as in last December.

The state road law as enacted by the Legislature in North Carolina provides for bond issue of $50,000,000. The construction and maintenance of 55,000 miles of hard surfaced roads is contemplated under the plan. Bonds are to be issued at the rate of $10,000,000 per year, unless the work progresses to such an extent that it justifies issuing more than this amount. All fees derived from motor-vehicles, license fees, and a 1-cent gasoline tax will be used for the support of the State Highway Commission.

The historic cathedral of St. Peter and Paul in Chicago, the first edifice of its kind built there, was completely destroyed by fire on March 7. The cathedral was first opened on Easter Sunday, 1861. Loss is estimated at $100,000.

Mr. George W. Watts, one of the wealthiest men of North Carolina, died at his home in Durham, N. C., last week. Mr. Watts was in his seventieth year, and one of the State's most progressive business men. He was a Christian business man and used large sums of money for benevolent purposes. He held his membership in the Presbyterian Church, and while he was liberal to the institutions of that denomination, he did not confine himself to its avenues alone, but did much for the public good. He left about $200,000 for church and social institutions and willed the remainder to his wife, his child and near relatives.

EDITORIAL

WHY A FAILURE?

IN last week's issue of THE SUN we made mention that The American Daily Standard, Chicago, had suspended publication from lack of support. It will be remembered that this paper made its initial issue on December 22, 1920, and suspended with its issue of March 12, 1921, thus living only sixty-six days. The paper was an eight-column, ten-page publication; and, in our estimation, was clean, wholesome, reliable and trustworthy. Its editorial page was filled with constructive thought and made interesting reading.

Such men as Dr. James I. Vance were on the editorial staff, and such widely known characters as Mr. Marion Lawrance were on the advisory committee. Undoubtedly these great men were mistaken as to what the people wanted in the way of a daily paper.

There are a few things in connection with this incident that are worth considering. We are not apprised of how much capital stock was behind the publication, but it is an evident fact that the capital exhausted before the paper could be placed on a paying basis, and that no further capital was in sight. The paper was not the official organ of any Church or society, but rather it placed its trust in public opinion. This reminds us of what a plight the average Church paper would be in if it had no financial resource except its subscribers and advertisers. Without a subsidizing, 95% of the Church publications would go out of business in less than thirty days.

Those familiar with the newspaper game know the pulse of the people, and unless that pulse is struck, a financial failure is an ultimate result. This statement bears heavily upon the thought that the desire of Church members should be to have their own Church paper, but such is not the case. We know of no Church paper that could depend upon the Church membership for a living. Conferences, conventions and assemblies must provide the means to make the Church paper go.

It looks like a shame, a pity, and a waste for a small denomination to take time and talent and money to issue a paper to serve less than 10% of its membership. Yet this is the very thing that denominations are compelled to do, whether they be large or small.

One of the most difficult problems that a pastor has is to get the Church paper into the homes of his people. Rural letter carriers tell us that the number of secular dailies are increasing in circulation to the people in the country, while the Church paper, in proportion to the population is decreasing. (This also holds good with city dwellers.) It is evident that the cry is not so much for a daily as it is for a secular paper that carries the shame and the crime that is being daily wrought over the land. The promoters of The American Daily Standard must have thought that a daily was the desire of the people. It looks as if they were mistaken and based their figures upon the judgment of a very few.

Is this not an indication that there is something lacking in the homes in developing the appreciation of the denominational activities and for wholesome reading? We ask the question and let it stand on its own merits.

The discouragement comes to the average editor of a Church paper when he beholds the large number of people of his denomination with so few of them readers of the denominational paper, which it takes so much time and money to place before the people. The encouragement comes in thinking of the great good that the Church paper does in keeping constantly before the people every enterprise of the Church and seeking to blaze the way, holding up the banner of light in the midst of right or wrong. And then, too, the hundreds of letters that are received every year from happy homes and contented hearts, telling how the sunshine of the Church paper makes brighter the fireside and brings increased joy to life, make it all worth while.

"JESUS ON THE CROSS"

THE above topic was the subject of the Sunday school lesson last Sunday. Behold the picture, the Christ on the Cross. Dark was the hour for the life of the Christ-Man. It was also a dark hour for the world at that time. But behind the tragedy there was that great light for the world, which has blazoned forth increasing splendor.

No words can describe the agony in Gethsemane. It was the supreme sacrifice. How empty are the words when we use them in reference to those who die for country's cause! No dramatist can justly stage the scene. The beginning was in the Garden, and the climax is reached on a cruel cross. But the great scene works out the great redemption of mankind. "It is finished", was a hope for the world. The finishing of the great plan of salvation. How interesting the great steps of this part of our Master's life! His agony, betrayal, arrest, trial, denials by Peter, trial before Herod, and his final trial before Pilate, all mark great subjects for the greatest scenes ever staged before human eyes.

But Christ on the Cross. It was 2,000 years ago that this God-Man was nailed in a cruel manner to Calvary's tree. The suffering was intense, silence reigned, and darkness came. It would not be so bad if in truth it had been finished. But was it? Is not Christ still on the cross? Are we not crucifying Him with our neglect, and indifference? Is He not in agony over a sin-cursed world? The Christ called out, "Eli, Eli, lama, sabachthani?", meaning that, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me." We wonder if He is not crying out today, "My world, My world, why hast thou forsaken me."

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED

THERE are two questions that have been asked concerning last week's statement by President Harper regarding the fact that the Christian Church, during 1920, lost 106 ministers, 98 congregations, and 920 members. The first question is "Where did Dr. Harper get these figures?" The second, "Is the loss and average over the whole denomination or in certain sections?"

President Harper's source of information is a statement given in the Christian Herald of March 12, 1921, by H. K. Carroll, LL. D., who is a great statistician, especially in the compiling of figures of religious bodies. Some years ago Dr. Carroll compiled the first complete official census of the religious bodies of the United States.

We have completed some figures from the Christian Annual of 1910, 1915, and 1920, which should answer the second question.

*Composed of the Western North Carolina, Eastern North Carolina, and the North Carolina and Virginia Conferences.

If we have not overlooked anything, the churches of the Southern Christian Convention have sustained no loss in congregations in 1920. The 1920 Annual gives 102 ministers and 20 licentiates. The 1921 gives 106 ministers and 15 licentiates. This is a gain of four ministers, and loss of five licentiates, making a total loss of only one minister.

It is true that we have lost some ministers and members of our Southern work, but the increase has greatly overbalanced all losses.

We endeavored to suggest a reason in last week's issue for the loss in ministers and membership, and submitted it as a possible answer to President Harper's question. President Harper sends us word that we answered his "Why?"

The above figures would indicate that the loss being sustained in the Christian Church is not in the Southern Convention, but elsewhere. Possibly Editor Kerr, of The Herald of Gospel Liberty can give some light on the matter. Let us hear from The Herald.

EASTER

Some of the women of our company have amazed us. They went to the tomb at daybreak, and, finding that His body was not there, they came and declared to us that they had also seen a vision of angels who said that He was alive. Thereupon some of our party went to the tomb and found things just as the women had said; but Jesus Himself they did not see.— Luke 24:22-24 (Weymouth's Translation.)

—The morning light breaks and the Savior comes forth from a tomb of darkness to a world of light.

Immortality! The word breathes a spirit of hope and man says as he goes down to the grave, "I shall rise again."

Believe not in Christ? Foolish! Increasing millions pay homage to His birth and take cognizance of His resurrection.

"He is risen." A comforting thought. And He is here—not in form of flesh, but in spirit. He abides with us. He is not dead, but lives and invites us to live with Him.

The Easter season is a glad season. Enter into it with a reverent spirit and remember that Christ is its secret.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

A CUT IN THE BRITISH NAVY

The budget of the British navy has been cut $25,000,000, and the number of its capital ships has been reduced from twenty to sixteen as compared with thirty-eight ships of this kind in 1914. This cut went into effect in accordance with a recent announcement by Baron Lee, head of the British Admiralty, who says that his country is desirous of maintaining only a "one-power standard" among the other navies of the world.

Baron Lee states that this reduction of armament is being brought about to lessen expenditures and "affect drastic economies". He declares that British Government officials have agreed "to assume risks which they would regard as difficult to reconcile with the Government's declared policy"—a navy twice as large as that of any other country. Thus it seems that Great Britain is beginning to lead the way toward disarmament which has been talked about so much during the last few months. Though this is not an extremely drastic cut in that country's navy, it is thought that it will have an international effect, especially upon our own navy which has declared that it will continue the construction of ships until something definite has been decided upon.

Continuing the explanation of his policy, the First Lord of the Admiralty said:

"The Government neither commits itself to nor contemplates any building program in answer to that of any other power. Indeed, it trusts it may be possible, as a result of frank and friendly discussions with the principal naval powers, to avoid anything approaching competitive building either now or in the future."

DR. ANGELL'S VIEW OF EDUCATION

In the first address since he was elected to the Presidency of Yale University, Dr. J. R. Angell gave a discussion of what he believed to be the needs of American education before the New York and New Jersey section of the National Civic Federation. This sentence in the midst of his discourse sums up the situation:

"The most compelling needs of American education at the present moment as far as known by me are; first, increasing provision for teacher-training, both quantitatively and qualitatively; second, the complete revision of methods of taxation for raising school revenues based on a national study of conditions."

Among the things to be accomplished, in the opinion of Dr. Angell, is the "setting up in schools and colleges the machinery for the proper type of training for teachers accompanied by a change of attitude of the public toward the profession of teaching." He believes that the teachers should receive a greater consideration and expression of gratitude on the part of the public, since their service is unsurpassed in administering to the needs of the country.

UNDUE PUBLICITY

In addition to being an "age of aviation" and an "age of fast living," this is also an age of prohibition and propaganda. The wine that unlooses the tongue, undermines the reason, and the John Barleycorn, once so familiar to the average wayfarer—now victim of the "underworld", are still subjects of daily discussion, in many respects to an even greater degree than before prohibition came. Prohibition still has a number of subtle and keen antagonists who are seeking to carry out their desires through publicity in the daily newspapers and publications of the country.

So many of the cries about the difficulties of enforcing prohibition, about the great prevalence of liquor in spite of the workings of the law prescribed by the Eighteenth Amendment are nothing more than the efforts of anti-prohibitionists to create a false impression as to the success of this piece of social legislation. If these publicists could only make people believe that prohibition is a failure, that it is a means of causing rather than preventing crime, they shall have accomplished the big part of their mission. Then they would easily bring back the "good old days" in which sentiments of liberty arose and fell as from the "cup to the lip."

But people understand propaganda better now. Germany gave to the world many of its apostles, who were brilliant, but not too brilliant to be understood. Bolshevik Russia was not without error, and the people soon learned to suspect the plots directed at their Government. Although prohibition is in its infancy, it has been established long enough to disprove of the aged reign of John Barleycorn, through statistics, and better still through the sentiment of an ever-increasing majority of the country's trustworthy citizens. It, too, stands defiant of propaganda, it is believed will become resented more and more.

THE LEVER ACT UNCONSTITUTIONAL

The United States Supreme Court has made a ruling that has overturned a great many matters which most people thought were quite in keeping with the Constitution. It holds that certain sections of the Lever Act are unconstitutional.

It was under these sections that the Government most ardently directed itself against the strikers and profiteers. Under these sections the great coal strike two years ago was stopped and later went in pursuit of hoarders of oil, profiteers in foodstuffs and other necessities.

The reason for the unconstitutionality of the Act is that it is too indefinite. Too much of these sections depends upon the general opinions of the judge of the cases coming under its jurisdiction. A man was hailed into the Supreme Court as a sugar profiteer. After a lengthy discussion in the Assembly, he won his case, and now all the prosecutions installed by the Department of Justice in connection with the high cost of living will have to be dropped, until a new law is made or the old one is amended.

CONTRIBUTIONS

FOUR-SQUARE

VII—The Minister

THE minister is the most many-sided man of genius civilization has produced. I mean of course the minister as those on the outside conceive his duties. He is supposed to be capable of expert advice in every business or profession and to be possessed of a spirit that equals any circumstance. As a financier he is expected to dress himself and family equal to the best and thoroughly educate his children, paying his bills promptly, on a salary paid in spasms and not equal to the wage of the day laborer. The marvel is that he does it. But whatever else he may be or is expected to be the minister must be a preacher of the Word. No social grace, no charm of personality, no wisdom of worldly lore, no skill in finances can compensate for this fundamental conception of the ministerial fitness of things. And whenever a minister appears with a vital message, the whole world will tread the path to his doorway. Men's hearts hunger for spiritual nurture and the minister is the representative of the God to break to them the bread of life. The foolishness of preaching is yet and likely to continue to be the way of salvation to the lost. It is certainly the strength of life to the saved.

Next to preaching and in many senses a part of that service is the minister's function of reconciling. The spoken message of the prophet of God should have as its ultimate aspiration reconciling man to God and man to man. Harmony, fraternity, fellowship, brotherly love—such are the bed-rocks of Christian character. In generating, installing, cultivating these soul qualities of the first magnitude the minister is rendering an inestimable service. These qualities will solve the complex, competitive, conflicting issues of our life, and these qualities only. To take but one instance, the industrial problem can never be solved by organized labor demanding its rights, while organized capital opposes. Only the fellowship and love of the Master regnant in the hearts of men and in the organizations which express their ideals can bring us industrial peace. How important is the minister as a reconciler!

And then he is a comforter. Misfortune, disappointment, failure, sickness, disease, death, sin in single column or in battalions attack us all. How sweet and gracious in such an hour to have the representative of the Kingdom come to us with the balm of Gilead and the oil of conciliation! But he is equally a comfort in the hour of mirth and jollity. What more comforting as uplifting than for the minister of the young to attend their athletic sports or other social festal events! I have seen a great preacher and dearly beloved, lose himself in the enthusiasm of a basket-ball game. And I have seen that same preacher hold his congregation the next day with rapt attention. In joy and in sorrow, the minister is privileged to be the supreme personage, even as Jesus was at the wedding feast and at Lazarus' tomb.

Finally the four-square minister is a teacher. This characteristic of his calling requires utmost patience and rarest tact. He will find many times he can do the thing that must be done much easier himself than train some one else to do it. He must not yield to temptation here. The line of least resistance is oftentimes the pathway to defeat. It were better to get ten men to work for the Kingdom than to do the work of ten men. The minister must train his people to pray, to teach, to finance the Church, to be liberal in supporting all the enterprises of the Kingdom, to carry on the worship and other activities of the Church in his absence and even at times when he is present. This brings up the question of lay-preaching. Lay-preaching contains wonderful possibilities for the Kingdom. It is scriptural, it is effective, judged by experience, it benefits the layman and the people alike, and it greatly strengthens the minister's own message. I hope to see a revival of lay-preaching in our pulpits, for that will mean a revival of religion, which we most assuredly need. This revival will come when our ministers want it.

PETER PEEPER'S PEEPING

IF a man will keep his eyes open as he moves around even to the point of peeping into things as they come and go, he will see things, some of which will be very instructive and heartening. But the opposite will also be true, for he will see many things which, though they be instructive will not be heartening or helpful.

One thing I have seen as I have been peeping into present day tendencies, is how easy it is to get overwrought ideas of the importance of some people. Sure we are all important in a sense, that is when we behave ourselves and do the things we ought to do, and do them as we ought to do them. But when I spoke of overwrought ideas of the importance of some people, I had reference to certain people who ride into prominence on distorted appreciations of their power. Humility is very becoming to most of the mortals of this earth, but now and then we get exalted estimates of ourselves, based upon what a few unwise persons have said of our greatness. Now, it is a mighty good thing to be great, provided it is really true, but I know of few things which are less becoming to the average man, than to get the idea pushed into his brain that he has suddenly arisen to greatness, and all through the misjudgment of some well-meaning people. May God help us all not to think of ourselves more highly than we ought to think, for an over appreciation of ourselves is most unbecoming.

I took a peep into one man's life one day and I studied him with much care, not merely for one day, but for many days, and the closer and more deeply I got to see his life, the more deeply was I impressed that the biggest letter in the alphabet with him was and is, the letter "I". If I did not misconceive the great purpose of his life it was to do good in a way, but there was one trouble in this purpose—there was a fly in the ointment—it was a great big spark of vanity—so big that he seemed to get the idea that he had a right to turn everything he did into one big effort to put himself forward and to become popular with the people, and if I am not mistaken, this seemed to have been done to bolster up his fine thought of himself. What a pity he did not read Gal. 6:3, before he came to think so highly of himself. He so impressed one man that he called him Blarney, as expressive of the way he approaches people with fulsome praise in order to make people have a high ideal of his fine abilities. Indeed, I never heard of his visiting Ireland, but he is certainly proficient enough praising people who fall in line with the thought that is the great Mogul of his circle to have kissed the Blarney stone of Ireland. Indeed it is a pity that any man should be allowed to destroy his own usefulness by wearing a head on his shoulders for which his hat is too little.

What a pity that we all cannot see ourselves as others see us, for then we should get a better chance to find out our own many faults. Did you ever see a man or a woman, if you had the chance to live with him or her, that you did not see some glaring fault in their conduct? Now suppose you could help such a man or such a woman to see himself or herself as you see him or her, do you not think such a person would immediately try to do better. It might be wise to help such people to a better understanding of their own faults, not by going out and talking about them and their many weaknesses, to your friends or their friends, but in a prayerful and brotherly spirit go face to face with the erring one, and between thee and him alone, tell him his faults, and plead with him to change and to do better. I do not doubt that many a precious soul has been lost because no one was brave or kind enough to tell him his faults and pray with him that he might overcome and by grace live to the glory of God and to his own everlasting peace.

In my next I hope to tell you how a man was saved from a drunkard's grave by a friend telling him plainly that he was killing himself drinking.

PETER PEEPER.

HISTORY OF THE SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA

CHAPTER I

The idea of a Seaside Chautauqua originated in the forty-fourth annual session of the Sunday School Convention of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference, held in the Suffolk Christian church, July 23-25, 1913. On the last day of that Convention it was decided, by unanimous vote, "That we undertake to establish a Seaside Chautauqua at Virginia Beach." This decision was made after W. J. Lee, C. H. Rowland, R. B. Odom, I. A. Luke, and W. W. Staley had volunteered to guarantee the expense of the first year in the sum of one hundred dollars each, making the sum of five hundred dollars.

The idea, at that time, was to hold the Sunday School Convention at Virginia Beach, during the week of the Chautauqua. It was to be a combination of Convention, Chautauqua, and recreation. But the Chautauqua was to be a separate organization from the Sunday School Convention.

In the organization of the Chautauqua, officers were elected as follows: Rev. W. H. Denison, President; Prof. S. M. Smith, General Secretary; Dr. J. W. Manning, Treasurer; Rev. Geo. D. Eastes, Assistant General Secretary; and Rev. W. W. Staley, Recording Secretary. Rev. W. D. Harvard was President of the Sunday School Convention; Rev. Stanley C. Harrell was Secretary; and J. W. Folk was Treasurer.

The two bodies held meetings at Virginia Beach in 1914 and 1915; but the double meeting was not satisfactory, and the Convention was held, as a separate session, in Mt. Carmel church in 1916. From that time the Chautauqua held annual meetings of a week at the beach.

The original plan did not include territories or bodies outside of the Eastern Virginia Christian Conference; but the scope of the work was soon enlarged so as to embrace the whole Church; and the name finally adopted was: "The Seaside Chautauqua and School of Methods of the Christian Church."

The following were elected members of the General Committee: Rev. F. G. Coffin, Albany, N. Y.; Rev. F. H. Peters, New Bedford, Mass.; Rev. I. W. Johnson, Suffolk, Va.; Rev. L. F. Johnson, Berkley, Va.; Rev. M. S. Campbell, Callison, Ill.; Rowland Ford, Albany, N. Y.; D. R. Fonville, Burlington, N. C.; Rev. W. P. Fletcher, Ontario; Rev. J. L. Foster, Waverly, Va.; Ben T. Holden, Louisburg, N. C.; Rev. W. P. Minton, Goshen, Ind.; T. E. Brickhouse, Norfolk, Va.; Rev. Geo. D. Eastes, Norfolk, Va.; Rev. J. W. Harrell, Dayton, Ohio.

Central Executive Committee: W. H. Denison, C. H. Rowland, I. A. Luke, R. B. Odom, J. W. Manning, and W. W. Staley. The Chautauqua is supported by annual contributions from individuals, sale of tickets, and advertisements in the program. The first year showed the following result: Collections, $1,073.31; disbursements, $1,072.11; balance in bank, $1.30.

The first session of the Chautauqua was considered a fine beginning, and many took the regular course of study, attended the special lectures and the devotional periods, the vesper services by the sea, and the general lectures at night. The program covered almost every phase of Sunday school, Christian Endeavor, Missionary, and Church work, besides special lectures for entertainment at night. Revs. Martyn Summerbell, George Stuart, and A. W. Lightbourne were among the first who delivered great addresses at night. The song service was conducted by Rev. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk, Va.

The first session was held before the phrase "World War" had been coined. It was a time of peace. The whole world had settled down to the firm belief that commercial interests were so interwoven among nations that business would not permit war; but that very summer the guns began to roar, and the peace of the world was broken.

W. W. STALEY.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

OFTEN hear people talk of nature and its beauty, and they have a right to do so, no doubt, but if they are moved by the beauty of painted flowers, the sweetness of the fragrant woods, the glory of the rolling hills, the shining of the sea under a beautiful moonlight, or the grandeur of the mountains, then they can get a sight nearer home, where all of these are excelled for real beauty and true sweetness—they are all surpassed in a life which has been made beautiful in Christ. Right is always beautiful and what can be more beautiful than a life which has been made right with God and man? Nature is beautiful, we cheerfully admit, but the spiritual is far more beautiful. Let us learn to think and to talk of the beauties of the spiritual world—it is a realm of glory!

Some one has said that the hen has four calls to her brood, and the chicks seem to understand them all and at once act according to the mother call. Her calls are:

1. When she comes across some bit of dainty food, how she delights to call the little ones to feed on it. The little chick understands the call and hastens to answer.
2. Another call is when the hawk is hovering in the air just above the little ones, and then you hear her call to them to flee for safety. They understand perfectly well what mother means by that call.
3. When the twilight draws near she calls them to get together for the night, and they seem to understand perfectly what the mother hen means.
4. She has a call of yearning desire. She is solicitous for the welfare of her chicks, and she knows how to express that desire, and they readily understand what it means and they answer her call. Those are only little chicks, and yet they heed the calls of their mother, and it always pays them to do so. How much better is a man than a chick? Think of it! The hen calls and the little ones answer. Think again, God calls and the greatest handiwork of God shuts ears to the call and goes away from safety into danger, and yet man is the masterpiece of the handiwork of God, but with all his intelligence, he sets his face downward and chooses the miry paths of sin and ruin.

Naturalists tell us that there is a certain beetle which has two pairs of eyes, one under and one over, so that as it swims along, it may at one and the same time watch two worlds to protect itself from dangers within the water and the other two to protect itself from things above the water. How wonderful! But that is not so wonderful as the double vision which God has given to man. He has made man as the noblest of His works and endowed him with sight on the hills and in the valleys; with a means of watching what is for his good, and at the same time, that he may see what is dangerous to his lower nature and to his higher life, and still, how many of us refuse to use the sight God has given us for the preservation of our liberties and for the filling of a longing heart with His fulness till life itself shall take on a new meaning and we shall be transplanted into the region of the very thoughts of God, till we shall come to know Him as the fulness of all blessing to the heart that is seeking Him for salvation and rest and eternal happiness. The little beetle is wonderful, but the wonderful possibilities of man's vision under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, surpass all else in the creative work of God.

In these days of great movements, let us move as under the leading of God's Spirit. It is a great thing "to follow where He leads", that is true, but brethren, we very much need to make sure He is leading when we begin to follow. It is Saint John who tells us to try the spirits whether they are of God, and for the reason that there are many false prophets out in the world, and we need to make sure whether our leader is the Holy Spirit, or is it a deceiver, seeking to mislead us that he may bring reproach on the cause of Christ. It is better to be right than to be wise above what is written.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

EASTERN VIRGINIA WOMAN'S WORK

Our District Superintendents have been arranging places for our mid-year missionary meetings with the following results to date:

Southampton District, Johnson's Grove, April 21—Mrs. J. A. Williams, Supt.

Nansemond District, Berea, April 22—Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson, Supt.

Gates Co. District, April 24—Mrs. J. H. Seawell, Supt.

Wakefield District, Wakefield, April 26—Mrs. Faison, Supt.

Waverly District, Waverly, April 27—Mrs. Livesay, Supt.

Isle of Wight District, Windsor, April 28—Mrs. J. M. Raby, Spt.

Norfolk District, Rosemont, April 29—Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, Supt.

All of the Superintendents are at work, waiting and visiting the churches and we are sure good results will follow this series of meetings, if our women will avail themselves of them. All Presidents and Superintendents should attend and as many others as can do so. Dr. Atkinson and Miss Bessie Holt will attend each of these and, as many things of vital interest have transpired since our October Conference, there will be much to be brought to our attention. Let every one be a booster and, too, let us pray daily for God's blessings upon the meetings.

MRS. C. H. ROWLAND.

The penalties which the Allies have laid down for Germany's refusal to accept reparation demands include the occupation of three towns in the Ruhr valley, seizure of custom houses, the levying of a tax on German exports, and the establishment of custom line along the Rhine.

GLAD TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY

The Literary Digest for March 12, 1921

WITH GRATEFUL HEARTS we give thanks to Almighty God for a wonderful outpouring of love and generosity by the American people.

Three and a half million innocent children, helpless waifs of the war, were starving, and cold, and stricken with disease. They cried out across the sea, "Save us or we perish!" And the thirty-three million dollars needed to save these little ones from death has now been raised.

When, about four months ago, in response to a letter from Mr. Hoover, The Literary Digest published an appeal through the length and breadth of the Nation in the editorial, "The Slaughter of the Innocents," the great heart of America was stirred, as our own hearts had been stirred. Millions of fathers and mothers were moved with a deep and tender yearning and a quick impulse to succor these innocent sufferers. Millions of happy children, also, felt the eager thrill of sympathy and desire to help. Like an impelling vision, real and tragic, we could see those millions of tiny arms, bare and thin and trembling, stretched out to us in pain and want; we could see the sad little eyes searching our souls; we could hear the weak voices crying for food and comfort. We were told that the huge sum of money asked for could not be raised at this time. But we knew that the American people, in their great-hearted love for children, could not now be deaf, as they had never in the past been deaf, to a real cry of suffering from little ones whose desperate need was laid on their hearts as a sacred trust. And now, with a wonderful feeling of exaltation, we are able to say, It is done! and the millions of our fellow countrymen who have contributed to this Fund will share in the thrill of joy at the glad tidings.

Among the very first to respond to the appeal was President Harding. On the very morning after his election he turned from the deluge of telegrams and the imperative clamor of telephone calls and besieging visitors to consider with Mrs. Harding in the privacy of their own room this heart-searching appeal of suffering childhood, and then he dispatched to us his wonderful telegram, challenging Americans everywhere to give their most generous support, and sending his own personal check to give life and comfort to two hundred and fifty children.

During the four months since then, a great flood of life-saving gifts has been pouring in from all parts of the Nation. Many and many a "widow's mite," great in the spirit of love and real sacrifice which prompted it, has dropt from the heavy mail-bags together with the checks for thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars from persons of large means. Some checks have been given even in the millions, as well as one for five million dollars from that great American relief organization, of which we all are so proud—the Red Cross.

Churches of all denominations, literally by thousands, have demonstrated yet again, as they have done times without number in the past, that whatever their stately towers, or steeples, pointing upward to the sky, or their humble roofs gleaming in the sun, mark the gathering-places of God's people, there is to be found the ever warm and ready spirit of loving helpfulness for all who are in distress. And in these countless temples dedicated to the service of God and ministry to human need, the people were rallied to make special offerings, sometimes mounting into thousands of dollars from a single church, for the starving children of Europe.

From the schoolhouses of the Nation, East, West, North, and South, where the ideals of American liberty are instilled in the hearts of tens of millions of our own boys and girls, has come a great offering of sympathy and generosity for the cold and hungry children across the sea. In the imposing buildings of stone, marble, and brick, the pride of our great cities, where millions of children of every class and condition assemble, the enthusiasm of youth in this service of love was unrestrained; and in the little red schoolhouses nestling in rural valleys, dotting country hillsides, and sentried at the crossroads throughout the land, the eagerness of America's boys and girls to help the needy boys and girls of Europe found equal expression.

From Portland, Maine, to Portland, Oregon—from the Canadian border to the Mexican Gulf, from every village and hamlet and every town and great city of the Nation, the appeal of the starving children brought quick and generous response. Kiwanis Clubs, Rotary Clubs, Freemasons, Elks, Knights of Pythias, Moose, and all fraternal orders gave strong support. Local Red Cross and Junior Red Cross Chapters everywhere sent offerings. Daughters of the American Revolution did marvelous service. Twenty-seven thousand newspapers with the quick sympathy and public spirit which distinguish the American press, threw open their columns in support of the cause, many of them calling for local contributions which they gathered and turned in to the great Child-Feeding Fund. Not only did these editors give column after column of editorial and news space, but hundreds of them made large cash contributions of their own as well. Very early in the campaign those generous-hearted men who conduct the moving-picture houses of the country clamored for the opportunity to do their part, and they gave in prodigal measure in every part of the land. Great cities unlocked their community chests and gave hundreds of thousands of dollars in addition to all other gifts from their people.

Under the mighty impulse of this Nation-wide appeal to the heart and mind of America, and the awakening of the National spirit of service among scores of millions of our people, Mr. Hoover found the difficulties which had hampered and threatened to stop the relief work of his organization notably lessening, and he was able very quickly to enlist and coordinate in one great consolidated relief organization, under the name of the European Relief Council, the active support of the following eight national organizations: The American Relief Administration, the American Red Cross, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the American Friends' Service Committee, and the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee. Ex-Secretary Franklin K. Lane became the treasurer of this European Relief Council. Mr. Hoover, throwing all his tremendous energies into the work as Chairman of the Council, devoted his entire time and strength in the most tireless and self-sacrificing manner to an intensive campaign throughout the entire Nation, and State and local committees were quickly organized, in which literally scores of thousands of the leading men and women of America served night and day for weeks to the sacrifice of every other business and social activity. Mr. Hoover, setting an inspiring example of devotion and tireless energy, traveled from one end of the country to the other, directing the campaign, addressing public meetings everywhere, organizing "invisible-guest" banquets without number, even imperiling his own health by his intense and ceaseless application to the great task which has now been brought to a triumphant completion.

And now a new vision greets the eyes of Americans: Three and a half million pairs of little arms are stretched out to us across the sea, not in piteous pleading, but in the passionate gratitude of childhood. Three and a half million pairs of eyes are searching our souls, not with the haunting gaze of suffering and death, but brimming over with joy and love and thanksgiving. Three and a half million childish voices are coming to us on the winds from the East, and they are not piercing our ears with bitter cries of pain and want, but are sweet with laughter and the happy shouts of little ones whose suffering has been soothed away and whose sorrow has been turned into joy. And yet more. In three and a half million young hearts have been planted a love of the American Flag and an understanding of what it means that shall live through the years and grow into a strong bond of fellowship and peace.

The vast sum of money has been given with unfeigned joy and eagerness. Thousands have written to us with real gratitude for the opportunity and privilege of buying for themselves that precious and priceless thing, the life of a little child. And many letters and telegrams from organizations and State and city committees have testified that the effort expanded in carrying out this campaign has been a blessing to Americans themselves, as they have yielded to the warm glow of loving service and tender solicitude for God's own little children. At this time, therefore, we may lift united voices—those who have received and those who have given—in singing with reverent gladness, "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow!"

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES

In 1896, only twenty-five years ago, there were in this country only four automobiles, and in 1898 gasoline was sold for six cents per gallon.

An independent Christian Science Church is being organized by the followers of F. L. Lawson, of England, and is to be located in New York City.

A community hospital, the erection of which will cost approximately $250,000 is to be built in Greensboro, N. C., it was decided at a mass meeting held there March 13.

The fortieth Christian Endeavor anniversary convention which is to be held in New York during the coming summer, will also celebrate the seventieth birthday of Dr. Francis E. Clark, who founded this society forty years ago.

It is known that five men were killed, fifteen seriously injured and others missing as a result of the fire which occurred on Broad Street, Richmond, Va., March 13, and which caused a property loss of more than half a million dollars.

The opening of the new steel and concrete bridge over Roanoke River near South Hill, in Meeklenburg County, Virginia, makes the distance by highway twenty miles less from Richmond, Va., to Raleigh, N. C. The highway is already being used by tourists and is reported as being in good condition.

With the Rockefeller and Red Cross gifts to the Chinese Famine Relief Fund of a million dollars each, total contributions from the United States now total $3,210,758. This does not include the $500,000 appropriated by the Red Cross during last fall. Of this amount one million has been donated by the churches in our country.

Since the Armistice was signed and the former Kaiser Wilhelm has been in seclusion, he has written a book, supposedly for private distribution, in which he attempts to show that Great Britain was responsible for the world war. No complete copy of the book has been obtained, but enough extracts to indicate the general trend of the book.

From The Herald of Gospel Liberty we find: That Rev. G. A. Conibear, D. D., is to succeed the late Dr. MacCalman at Lakemont, N. Y.

That Dr. C. B. Hershey has resigned as President of Union Christian College, the resignation to take effect at the close of the present school year. Dr. Hershey desires to continue his university work.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL REALM

IT IS TIME TO GET BUSY

This beautiful weather reminds us very forcibly of the approaching Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention season, as well the preparing of the soil and sowing the seed. The second week in July is the North Carolina Sunday School and Christian Endeavor week, and I am wondering if you have given it some thought. The time is going to fly rapidly and unless you get busy now, you and your school are going to be unprepared. I want to see this year, every school and society in the State represented at the Convention and this means work for somebody. Will you do your part? It is a sad state of affairs when our three Conferences, united in one, fails to make as good reports, as one of the former Conferences did alone. This should not be, and somebody is responsible. Ask yourself the question—Lord is it I? Have I done my duty toward my child, my Sunday school, my Church and my God? Here is hoping that we all will wake up, and get busy in our Schools and Societies; and begin planning right now, for more and better schools, and to attend the coming Convention, with a good report and a full delegation. Miss Bessie Holt, Burlington, N. C. is General Secretary of the Convention and has the making of the program in charge. Write her and reserve for yourself and your school a place on the program. Volunteer your services, the Convention can use you, and God will bless your efforts. Our Conference has unanimously voted and set aside the second week in July of each year as our Sunday School and Christian Endeavor week. No protracted meetings, or other Church activities should be considered for this week. If you are loyal to the cause "a word to the wise is sufficient". All together now for a great Convention. Make this your slogan—Meet me and mine, at Reidsville, N. C., July 12, 13, 14, 1921. GET BUSY.

GIVE MORE THOUGHT TO CHILDREN

"The object of Children's Week, to be observed April 24 to May 1 is to arouse in the minds of the adults in the home, church and community, an increased desire to give the child adequate moral and spiritual development; to surround him with such environment and opportunity as will make his complete physical, intellectual and social development possible; and to cause each to assume proper responsibility to all these relations."

This quotation from the leaflet on "Arrangements" for Children's Week, (which will be sent free to you on application) gives in a few words the "Why" of this week when we lay aside for a short time the business of making a living, and consider seriously our duty as parents, as teachers, as Sunday school teachers, as members of the community, toward this younger generation growing up around, and our responsibility to them in helping them to make a life.

A neglected child in the community is as surely a source of infection as is a cesspool or a hidden still. We have often failed to realize that fact in the past; we have fought against the material evil and overlooked or minimized the spiritual evil.

What do the children in your community or your church or your home most need? Have you ever stopped to take survey of your neighborhood? Do you know how many children attend Sunday school, and how many attend day school? Have you any idea where the boys and girls spend their leisure time? Do you know how many hours are spent in the "movies", and how many at Sunday school? How many hours is the average teenage boy or girl in your town spending on the street, and how many at home?

Have you made the Sunday school and attractive place for them? Have you separate rooms for the different grades? Do you use Graded Lessons? Or have you said you "can't afford these things? But these are your children who are growing up either in love or indifference to your church and your Sunday school.

What about your home life? Are the children in your home and in the homes of your community being taught diligently the words and works of God? Are they growing up with a belief that Christianity is a fundamental necessity of the home, or are they considering it as something that father and mother work at on Sunday when the weather is right?

Prepare to take this week, and "GIVE MORE THOUGHT TO CHILDREN" and the atmosphere in which they are growing up. Send for the leaflet on "Arrangements", and it will tell you how best to prepare yourself on the point you feel most needs stressing in your community.

A GROWING YOUNG PEOPLE'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY

In July of 1920 I had the privilege of visiting Liberty (Vance) church. While there I organized a Young People's Missionary Society, with 14 charter members. Last Tuesday, March 1, 1921, by special invitation I visited this church again, the "Special Occasion" being a pageant "Christ in America" given by this organization, which has grown in the seven months from 14 members to 43, and are doing a fine work. I have seen this pageant given before, but never any better, every one taking his or her part with ease and efficiency. The costumes were all good, and the chorus the best I have ever heard at one of these pageants, I think.

I know I have never felt so grateful to my Heavenly Father for the opportunity of service and the results of service as I did that evening as I stood before that full house (and so many of them young people) that He had given me the privilege of being co-worker with such loyal young people.

A silver offering was taken at the door, amounting to about $20.00 which after expenses will go on their pledge for the year. I hope that more of our Y. P. M. S. and W. W. will follow the example of these good people and not wait until the year is near the end before starting on their pledges. Remember, dear friends, this is a rural church organization with the difficulties that so many of our rural churches have, yet they do things for the Master and his cause, regardless of difficulties. Now that the spring is here let's begin anew to enlist our young people for the Master. Will you not help dear friends? The good friends at Liberty entertained me royally while there, and I am grateful for all their favors. Liberty is a great church, and the possibilities for good there are immense.

BESSIE I. HOLT, Supt. Y. P. W

THE BULLETIN

Miss Bessie Holt is this week with Miss Iola Hedgepeth, Fancy Gap, Virginia, in the interest of our mountain mission work.

Evangelist Victor Lightbourne, and Singer Sam Davis, began a meeting in Waverly, Va., March 13. Pastor Foster writing two days later says: "Second service possibly 100 turned away for lack of room. Great preaching and great music."

Dr. Howard E. Rondthaler, President Salem College, delighted and spiritually edified the Burlington congregation last Sunday by two great sermons. Dr. Rondthaler is a pleasing speaker and has a great personality. He will be kindly remembered by all who heard him.

We call special attention to the article by Brother C. H. Stephenson, about the approaching session of the Sunday School Convention of the North Carolina Conference, and trust that officers of the various schools will take note of the matter.

Rev. W. C. Hook has been called to the Berea-Rosemont pastorate to succeed Rev. G. O. Lankford, who takes charge of the Burlington church on April 1. We understand that Brother Hook will not enter upon his new field of service until about June 1.

Great progress is reported for Christianity in India, the census of 1921 showing over 5,000,000 Christians there. In many parts of the country the new converts are more than the churches can assimilate. Many natives of power and influence are being converted and are becoming leaders, and it is hoped that in spite of the political dissension now in India, that a better government and higher religion will follow.

Chaplain H. E. Rountree, under date of March 5, writes from Port Au Prince, Haiti, as follows: "You may be interested to know that I have arrived safely at this port and am in fine health and spirit. It was a good voyage of nine days and most interesting. I arrived on the second of March and am agreeably impressed with conditions. My duties are of great magnitude, including about fifteen assistants in the morale department. Others will be required. When plans are made I shall have unlimited opportunities for good."

Rev. J. C. Barrett, Harrisonburg, Va., is showing commendable zeal in trying to form a real pastorate of the churches near Harrisonburg, and is seeking to put on a program of progress and activity among these churches. The churches participating are Antioch, Linville, New Hope and Mt. Olivet. A "get-together meeting" of representatives of these churches was recently held and a committee was appointed to look into the matter of buying or building a parsonage in Harrisonburg. This seems to the writer a very timely move in the right direction and here is hoping, for the good of the work, and the advancement of the cause, that the project will carry. The sooner our churches can group themselves into pastorates, and own a parsonage so as to have a pastor in the field for service, the better. Bro. Barrett was to be installed on March 22, and a great social and spiritual event was planned for the occasion, the M. E. church of Harrisonburg supplying the auditorium and entertainment room.

A BOOST FOR THE SUN

(THE HOLY NECK HERALD)

We wish to say a word to our membership about THE CHRISTIAN SUN which is heroically maintaining its existence under a heavy financial strain. We have never seen THE SUN appear in better form, and we truly trust that not a single member of Holy Neck church who is now a subscriber will show a falling religious temperature by allowing his subscription to expire without promptly renewing. Let not only every present subscriber renew when the time comes, and keep square with THE SUN office, but let those who are not now subscribers refuse no longer to withhold that support which is justly due THE SUN. Every person who has a growing interest in his church has just as vital a need for THE SUN's weekly visits to his home as THE SUN has for his support. A growing interest is rarely possible to one who does not take his Church paper.

In the issue of February 16 of THE SUN the editor suggests a series of challenges between Conferences. While we are not in position to issue such challenge, we would like to put a vigorous challenge to our local congregation. We challenge every home not now taking THE SUN that if $2.50 be posted with the pastor he will assure on return a manifold blessing in knowledge and inspiration from the 52 issues of THE SUN that will enrich the home. Will you face the challenge Christian?

The ignorance that you purchase by keeping the $2.50 is infinitely more costly than the knowledge, information and inspiration would be by paying the $2.50 for THE SUN.

Let's have THE SUN in every home of the church!

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

A TASK TO CHALLENGE US

In writing about the work in Japan that we of the South are to do this year, Secretary Minton, who is just back from Japan writes: "The urgency of the Mission Home is seen in the fact that at the present time the Garman, the McKnight and Miss Stacy are all compelled to live in the same house. It is simply impossible for us to think of continuing much longer with so few mission homes to house our missionaries. In view of the fact that Tokyo is a mission center, it seems wise to build another home there at the present time. Later on it will be necessary to build an additional home at Sandai. We ought to have at least one other missionary family in Sendai now, for the field is large—in fact too large for one missionary to handle." I am wondering what some of our pastors in the home-land would say if somebody would force about three families of them to live, have their studies and do their preparation work all in the same home? And I am wondering if we should not give these missionaries who go for us the best and most efficient equipment possible, if they are to be at all comfortable and do their best work? We should have built that Mission Home in Tokyo five years ago, and have by delay greatly handicapped our workers and have been compelled to pay heavy rents besides.

And then as to the building for a Night School and Kindergarten. The Japanese government now legally forbids the teaching of Christianity in the schools, though the schools themselves are owned and taught by Christians. This leaves an opening in her kindergarten and night school work only for Christian teaching, and we are, with others, taking advantage of this opportunity. Bro. Minton further writes of the need of this building which our Southern folks are to erect at a cost of $12,000: "The purpose of the night school and kindergarten building is defined in its name. The night school is to be conducted for the purpose of teaching English to the young men who follow some daily occupation but who are glad to spend their evenings in the study of English. Most of them, of course, come primarily to get the English, but in the night school it is possible to teach the English from the Bible, and results have shown that many boys who have entered a night school to study English have come out after some months of study, confirmed to the Christian faith. I visited a number of these night schools conducted by missions and by the Y. M. C. A., and I believe them to be one of the most fruitful sources of Christian effort in Japan. The building will be so arranged as to not only care for the night school, but also to house the kindergarten which we are now conducting in the little Japanese home in Naka Shibuya. We have a great opportunity here with a kindergarten now of some 40 children under efficient Japanese leaders. Miss Stacy is also connected with this work and at the present time is teaching several classes in connection with her language study. I am delighted with her work." We of the South have a definite and practical program of progress and of righteousness sufficient to challenge our faith and our prayers and our resources. God help us to enter in and do our part in His name.

WHY?

The Mission Secretary has this pertinent question (in confidence) from a very earnest and devout Christian woman in one of our growing congregations. "Can you tell me why so many preachers, and good ones, at that fail to preach missions? I mean no reflection on any one, but if the ministers would preach more, and not leave it up to the Woman's Missionary Society and the women in the Sunday school, the men would pay more attention, and they could do more for they usually carry the pocket book. One of our best Christian men, would not stay to our missionary services for a long time because he said it was just for the women."

We pass the question on for what it may be worth, and hoping it will find answer in some pastor's heart.

AT HIS POST AGAIN

Many SUN readers will be glad to learn that Rev. D. P. Barrett and family have arrived safely in Porto Rico and are happy to be back again at their work, after a "most pleasant sojourn or furlough amongst so many friends and loved ones in the States." He reports that Bro. Martin, who has been looking after the work in his absence is unwell and is in the hospital for treatment. Bro. Barrett sends love from himself and family, to all in the States who did so much to make them comfortable and happy while here.

Bro. Barrett has come to love the work and the people of Porto Rico, and to feel that his home is with them.

ANOTHER MISSION SUNDAY SCHOOL

Mrs. J. W. Manning, our good friend, and most capable and efficient Sunday school superintendent of missions in Third church, Norfolk, sends us the very gratifying word from her school. "I have been noticing in THE SUN the appeals made to the Sunday schools to give a monthly offering to missions and the names of many schools doing same. I have not seen the name of our Sunday school (the Third Christian church Sunday school). Perhaps you do not know that our school gives to missions every Sunday and has since its organization, thirteen and a half years ago. Each class has two envelopes, one for Sunday school and one for missions, and every pupil from the tiniest tot up is supposed to give in each envelope and they know distinctly what it is for, and drop a penny in each and if they have a nickel they drop two pennies in one and three in the other, whichever they desire to do. Many drop a nickel in each and many a larger amount. Many of us were trained to this at the Memorial Temple, from whence many of us came."

It may be said that Third church in connection with its Sunday school, supports two missionaries in the foreign field, Miss Williams in Porto Rico and Toshio Sato in Japan, and it is no wonder that the school and church are alive and active in all good works at home. Mrs. Manning's letter tells the secret of its power in large measure.

"MORE DECENTLY AND IN ORDER"

The writer had a personal letter from a very much interested and intelligent layman, with this line: "I feel very deeply that our Church services have lost much of power in their appeal to be 'pleasing' and 'bright' and they have become shallow. And I fear that we are becoming shallow with them. I would plead for more formality in our church worship or at least that things be done more 'decently and in order'. Ministers cannot face men with a message unless they have faced God and feel that they are His Messengers."

And this calls to mind a most pointed declaration appearing in print recently, viz: "The dearth of worshippers is largely due to a dearth of worship."

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONTRIBUTIONS TO MISSIONS IN FEBRUARY

Hank's Chapel, $2.65; Holland, Va., $14.50; Rose Hill, Ga., Class No. 6. $2.65; Wadley, Ala., $1.68; Holy Neck, Va., $5.67; Wentworth, $1.10; Phoenix, Ala., $1.50; Richland, Ga., $1.29; Rose Hill, Ga., $4.21; Graham, $2.57; Isle of Wight, Va., $2.50; New Providence, $2.90; Chapel Hill, $2.00; South Norfolk, $9.16; Henderson, $6.78; Lebanon, $2.00; Morrisville, $0.65; Burlington, $56.94; Third church, Va., 180.00. Total for February, $300.66.

A growing interest in missions is manifest in our Sunday schools for which we thank God and take courage.

OUR ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

Mr. W. H. Etheredge, Selma, N. C., has the pleasure of being the first man to make an Easter Offering this year. He sends a check for $5.00 with a letter full of encouragement. What if we had five hundred men in the denomination who would mail us a check for $5.00! We would have the "Children's Home" paid for by the first of May and everybody would be happy.

We have already received a number of letters from the good women of our Church asking for information as to the cost of furnishing rooms in the new building. I know the women of our Church will not let this pretty building go up without having some special part in it, and it will be a help for them to furnish the rooms. I know they will do this because I have never called on them yet, to furnish anything we needed at the Orphanage, when they did not gladly respond. They have always done more than I asked.

I visited the factories that manufacture beds, springs and mattresses this week and find that the bedsteads with a good cotton mattress with springs will cost us $25.00 per bed. These will be single beds and will require bed linen the usual size for ordinary double beds. By making the bed linen the same size as for double beds will be a great convenience to us in the work here and it will not cost much more.

We will have three dormitory rooms with twenty beds in each for the children. We will have three matron rooms with one bed in each, one dresser, two chairs and a drugget on the floor.

If we can raise $8,000.00 by May first, we will be able to pay for the new building and the good women will have it furnished by that time and we will open the doors for the beautiful little children as soon as the Board accepts it.

Do not forget the Easter Offering in your church and ask everybody to contribute something and have a part in the new "Children's Home". It will bring you joy and happiness.

SOLEMN VOWS

COULTER-LONG

A beautiful marriage occurred in the home of Dr. W. S. Long in Graham, N. C., February 23, 1921 when his daughter, Annie Ben, and Mr. W. S. Coulter, of Burlington, N. C., were united in marriage. The happy couple at once left for Savannah, Ga., and after some days were to go by steamer to Baltimore and thence to Washington and be present at the inauguration of President Harding. Their home will be in Burlington where Mr. Coulter is engaged in the practice of law.

The writer officiated at the marriage.

CALLED HOME

NEVILLE

Sarah Emeline Pritchard Neville, wife of David Neville of Chapel Hill, N. C., died March 8, 1921, aged 65 years 5 months and 6 days.

She was the mother of fifteen children; seven died in infancy, eight survive. Besides these she leaves her husband, three brothers, two sisters and many relatives to mourn her departure.

In her youth she united with the Christian church at Damascus, Orange Co. N. C., and always manifested a gentle, humble, and beautiful Christian spirit. Devotedly attached to her family, friends and church.

Many lovely flowers were spread over her grave.

Burial services by writer assisted by Rev. B. J. Howard.

W. S. LONG.

KNIGHT

Mrs. Margaret Knight, who was eighty three years and twenty-three days old, died March 7, 1921, at the home of her daughter Mrs. Lee Grimsley of near Ingram, Va. The deceased is survived by four children—Mrs. Lee Grimsley of Ingram, Va., Mrs. Joe Campbell of near Honeville, Va., Mrs. Carrie Dusing of Shepherdstown, Va., and Mr. John Knight of Berryville, Va.,—and several grand children.

Sister Knight had been a member of East Liberty Christian church for about fifteen years. About three weeks before she died, she told the writer that she felt that all was well with her soul and that she was ready to go to be with God.

The funeral was conducted in St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church near Ingram, and the body was buried in Bro. Sam Comer's cemetery, near by, on Wednesday, March 9, 1921. The funeral was conducted by the writer.

CHURCH NEWS

"SHORTS" FROM DR. LONG

Dear Editor THE SUN:

I preached at the First M. E. church, South, Florence, S. C., last Sunday, and attended the Men's Bible Class at the same place. My only living son, Joseph Cromwell Long, is president of said class. Two hundred and eighty-seven men were present last Sunday. The class offering was nearly one hundred dollars. This, I was told, is the largest Bible Class of men in the State of South Carolina.

Mrs. Long will remain with Joseph and his family a week or two before returning to North Carolina.

I reached Raleigh two days before the Legislature adjourned. I called at the Governor's office; also took a look at the Solons in the lower house, and the Conscript fathers in the Senate Chamber. As usual, with legislative bodies and Christian Conferences, everything nearly, conspires to cause a ram and jam at or near the hour for the sine die adjournment.

I called to see brother W. B. Mann. He is, you know, one of the most prominent members of our Church here. For a year he has been too feeble to either go to his store or attend church.

Brother Knight and his good wife are hard at work in the Master's cause. Members and friends of the Christian Church living in Raleigh, or who may visit the city, would do well to attend the First Christian church and aid in complying with all requests of the North Carolina Conference and Southern Christian Convention.

LANETT, ALABAMA

I have been a constant subscriber to your paper for several years and it affords me great pleasure to glean from its pages information about the Christian Church and what its members are doing. A new spirit seems to have been born in the ranks of the Church. Great things have been accomplished and still greater things are being attempted. The Christian Church is coming to the front with the larger denominations and has put on new life and is doing its share of work which cannot be done by any other religious body. Activity is the life of any organization and I am glad to see the Christian Church moving along with such progress.

The writer is especially interested in the Sunday school. It is one of the greatest institutions in the Church. Many can be helped along life's rugged way through the influence of the Sunday school that could not be helped in any other way. We have a fine Sunday school here and the attendance is 50% better than it was during the first quarter of 1920.

Rev. H. M. Gray has moved here and is on the ground with us. The Lanett pastorate has been deprived of the privilege of having a pastor here for many years. Brother Gray and family moving here has served to inspire the members, and the outlook is encouraging.

LUCIUS MÓBLEY.

MT. AUBURN

Three times this winter I have gone to this church to fill appointments for the pastor, D. A. Long, who was absent in Florida. On each visit the weather was inclement and consequently the congregations were small. I was very anxious to have a good day that I might see as many of the good people as possible.

In the month of August 1860 I was at this church. Rev. John N. Manning was pastor and was conducting a protracted meeting. I had not been authorized to preach at that time, but was in October following. Bro. Manning would have me attempt to preach. I reluctantly made the effort. This was my first attempt at preaching away from home. That fall I became pastor of Pleasant Grove, Halifax County, Virginia, and served that church until 1865. Several times during that period I exchanged appointments with Bro. Manning, and was thus enabled to visit Mt. Auburn. Some years after the Civil War I was pastor of this church and became very much attached to the people of that church and community. The uniform kindness and hospitality they manifested was such that I shall never forget. I recall their names, in imagination view their homes, see their faces. On my recent visits I saw only one of the old friends of my first acquaintance, T. J. Haskins. He was looking well and in good cheer. While so many of those who worshipped there in other days have passed on before, I was glad to see that those who have come up to fill their places seem to be worthy descendants of their most excellent parents.

I was entertained while there by the Kimball brothers and Bro. Wilson. These brethren and their good wives know just how to entertain a preacher.

JUST FROM GEORGIA

Yesterday was a good day for the Rose Hill church. The Woman's Missionary Aid Society had charge of the services and an interesting program was rendered. Mrs. J. D. Johnson read an appropriate selection on "Christian women will be missionary women." Mrs. J. T. Terrell gave a reading on the theme, "The Bible the living need." The writer addressed the congregation, using as his subject, "The Influence of Missions on Civilization." The church choir furnished the music. A splendid spirit prevailed throughout the program and a special offering for foreign missions was received which was very satisfactory.

A special series of meetings began at the North Highland Christian church February 27 and closed March 12. Rev. J. D. Dollar, Roanoke, Alabama, did the preaching the first week and the writer preached the last week. There was a fine interest manifested from the very beginning, but the climax was reached on Thursday night of the last week when twenty people confessed the Lord as a personal Savior. Rev. A. H. Shepherd is the pastor and is doing good work.

Rev. P. L. Duke is the pastor at Phoenix City, and is doing commendable work. These people are planning to build a new brick church in the near future.

The work at Rose Hill is moving along in a very satisfactory manner. The spiritual life of the church (for there is such a thing as spiritual life here) seems to be greatly awakened. Our finance committee is working wonders in the church and our treasurer has reported a substantial balance every month since I have been on the field.

SELF-DENIAL MONTH

A Call to Loyalty, Liberality and Love.

The month of April has been designated as a self-denial period for all subscribers to the Men and Millions Forward Movement of the Southern Christian Convention.

Why This Call ?

Every department of the Church is in urgent need of funds. The present financial depression has been a hard blow to all Church institutions, as well as commercial enterprises. Our mission work, our College, our Orphanage, THE CHRISTIAN SUN—and in fact all departments of our Church, are needing the funds pledged for their support.

A Date and A Goal.

May 1, 1921 will complete the first year of our Men and Millions Forward Movement. The officers of the Movement are anxious that collections for the first year be 100%. They have labored earnestly, hard, and heroically. We must not fail them; we must not fail the enterprises of our Church—we must not fail ourselves.

Another Need.

Aside from the needs of our Church enterprises, there is that personal need of making good our pledges. We need to know the joy that comes from sacrifice. Paying our pledges to this great Movement will mean more to the individual members of the denomination than to the Church enterprises.

A Time Of Testing

The month of April is to be "Self-denial Month" amongst us of the Southern Christian Convention. Many of us pledged to make weekly, monthly or annual payments to "Men and Millions." And our time is out with April. Unless we pay up by the ending of that month our first year will be gone and we will be behind. Then the "catching up" will be difficult.

In order to meet this payment very many of us will certainly have to make real self-denial in April. We will have to deny ourselves something we really need, and have purposed and planned to have, if we meet our payment and so fulfill our moral and spiritual obligation.

It is a time like this that tests the faith, loyalty and devotion of a people to the uttermost. Now is the real time of our testing. Do we love our Lord, our Church, the divine work entrusted to our hands? We as a people will answer that during "Self-Denial Month". May God help us to stand the test.

EDITORIAL

"Through lack of knowledge of educational values, and their fear of an uninformed public opinion, the secondary schools and the colleges have very largely abdicated their place as leaders in modern life and have become the plaything of whatever temporary and passing influence may operate upon them."

TODAY'S EDUCATION

WE have just had an opportunity of reading the latest utterance, so far as we know, on the subject of education. President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University, in a 16 page pamphlet on "Making Liberal Men and Women" says some things that should be taught in every home and in every school room, and published in every paper in the land. Space forbids that we give Dr. Butler's message in full. This quotation from the early part of his message will set forth the thing that he says so well and so emphatically:

"In the past it has been usual to assume that whatever is done in the name of education, like that which is done in the name of philanthropy or religion, is of necessity well and deservedly done and is to be supported without murmur. There are, however, too many signs that education does not satisfactorily educate to justify or even ensure a longer continuance of this uncritical acquiescence. What is the trouble?"

This is in thorough accord with what a great educator said to us the other day when he declared that he and his faculty were often embarrassed because of the very poor preparation of many who sought admittance to the college of which he was president. "There seems to be no thoroughness", said this college president, in his criticism of the average high school. There are schools and schools today; and as President Butler points out, it is a mistaken idea to say that a school is good just because it is a school.

But what about President Butler's question—"What is the trouble?" There are many conditions that go to make up the answer, but in summing them up it seems to us that scholarship is becoming unpopular. In the days of the "three R's" there was a thoroughness that was well recognized. The men who graduated in "the university of the three R's" are no longer. The average child today has the original studies multiplied by three, and thus he is endeavoring to take from six to ten subjects in the same number of hours as of old. The consequence is that the average child is being forced to do things in a hurry, getting only a brief outline of what he is required to do and carries this system of study into all that he does. When he reaches high school it is the same program and principle. If his subjects in college are decreased in number, he is but little better off because of the study habit which he has formed.

This further quotation from President Butler's message will help to guide our readers in the study of our theme.

"The ruling passion just now is not to know and understand, but to get ahead, to overturn something, to apply in ways that bring material advantage some bit of information or some acquired skill. Both school and college have in large part taken their minds off the true business of education, which is to prepare youth to live, and have fixed them upon something which is very subordinate, namely, how to prepare youth to make a living."

This statement clearly shows that the thing that the average student is after today is the short cut to the haven of success. High schools and colleges have yielded to this demand until in practically every college there is linked up with it a kind of training or business department. There are those who graduate in these departments, and the average person so graduating leaves the impression upon the world that he or she is a graduate of a certain college. Whether or not they mean to leave this impression, the result is often the same. A few years ago it was our privilege to be in a home and to hear a member of the family speaking about another member who was to "graduate" in the next month from a certain college. It happened that we knew about the person and knew that this person was to graduate only in a small department of this institution. But we venture to say that the average person in this student's community looked upon him as a college graduate, when that person could not in so short a time meet the requirements expected of the average college graduate by the public.

Primary schools are trying to do too much; secondary schools have a program larger than ability; high schools are trying to teach everything; and colleges in order to meet the demands, are specializing. The administration of the average college will not tell you this, but only a slight study of the average college catalogue will reveal the truthfulness of this statement.

"We are doubtless passing through a period of reaction in education which will spend itself as periods of reaction have so often spent themselves before. The sure mark of a real reactionary is his contempt for all that man has learned and done, and his demand that the history of human achievement be thrown away and the task begun all over again on the basis of present-day dissatisfaction and distress. The sure mark of the true progressive is his acceptance of human experience, his desire to understand and interpret it, and his determination that it shall be made the foundation for something better, something Lippier and something more justly than anything which has gone before."

Is this not true? Have we not "thrown away the task begun all over again" in order to meet the present day demands. The demand of the day seems to be for a quick education, a degree, and a diploma. There is much more being said about getting a diploma than acquiring scholarship.

President Butler's utterances on this subject in his message rings clear when he declares that:

"This decline in educational power is primarily the result of a widely influential and wholly false philosophy of education which has operated to destroy the excellence of the American school and college, as these existed a generation ago, without putting anything in its place. It has been dinned into our ears that all subjects are of equal educational value, and it matters not what one studies, but only how he studies it. This doctrine has destroyed the standard of value in education, and in practical application is making us a widely instructed but an uncultivated and undisciplined people."

If these things are true—and we think they are—then we should get back to the home base in education. But where shall we begin? Shall we begin with the primary schools, in the colleges, or in the university? We should begin to apply the remedy where the symptoms first began, and that place is in the primary grades. Less subjects and more emphasis; less training and more culture. But the primary schools cannot remedy the whole situation. There must be a changing all along the line. Universities must stop doing college work, and colleges must stop doing the work of high and secondary schools.

There are so many primary students in secondary schools and so many secondary students in high school, and so many high school students in colleges and so many college students in universities that one class of students have begun to think themselves about as well prepared as any other class. No wonder it is so difficult to get a young man interested in a college education. No wonder that the public does not recognize to a fuller extent the college graduate.

Shall we dig back to old foundations in our education?

A GOOD SUGGESTION

Our good and progressive young friend, P. T. Hines, Raleigh, N. C., sends a good suggestion by saying that the Good Literature Committee of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Raleigh church has made a survey of the papers and magazines read by the members of the Raleigh church. The idea is splendid and we trust that other churches will undertake the same thing.

We believe that it would be good information for a pastor to know just what his people are reading. A physician always likes to know what medicine a patient has been taking before he prescribes. It may be that some of our pastors are not familiar with what their members are reading and so prescribe (preach) the wrong thing. Sometimes a pastor takes it for granted that the Church paper is in the homes of his people and that they know about the general activities of the Church, when as a matter of fact, they are not informed on the thing that he assumes they are. On the other hand it is possible for a pastor to worry his people by going into detail with some denominational undertaking because his hearers are already informed through the Church press.

How many of our churches will make a survey of the religious literature in the hands of their church membership?

THE DEMAND FOR RELIGIOUS BOOKS

In such an age of fiction and short-story writing and reading as this, it seems hardly believable that the buying public demand for religious books is likely to overbalance that for fiction; yet it is never-the-less true. The investigation and observations of the Publisher's Weekly show that the most spectacular and continuing records in book sales are often made in the field of religious books.

The average father or mother of an over-Puritanical judgment can scarcely appreciate the inclination towards religious questions and subjects of the present day. It remains for the book seller to disclose the fact that religious themes are becoming more interesting to the average reader than fiction. The Publisher's Weekly writes: "The reason for this may lie in the fact that a book which has caught hold of the religious aspirations of a reader makes immediately a worker for its increased circulation. A reader who has enjoyed a good novel may recommend it in a friendly way, but the reader of a book that has moved him to his innermost soul feels it his duty and privilege to get others to read. Pulpit as well as pew, Sunday school workers or platform speakers, take equal interest in extending this kind of book distribution."

RICE FOR STARVING ARMENIANS

The South has envolved a plan whereby it will feed the Armenians on $675,000 worth of rice and thus help solve the food problem of Armenia. Louisiana, long the large producer of rice in the rich black alluvial deposit lands, especially in the Teche country about 125 miles southwest of New Orleans, has taken the lead in the movement which will help the Armenians and at the same time move the heavy crop for which the market is stagnant. Quotas have been fixed for Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Alabama, and Arkansas, and the work will be carried on under the auspices of the Associated Rice Millers of America, in cooperation with the Near-East Relief Commission.

In carrying out this plan the first purpose of the relief committee will be to raise $675,000 and this amount will be expended in the rice markets of the South. The shipment will go direct to Constantinople and it is appropriate that the campaign will be concluded on Easter Sunday.

It is estimated by food experts that a cupful of rice weighing one-third of a pound will provide a single meal for five or six persons. Those in charge of the campaign say that they can buy and ship the rice to Constantinople at between three and four cents a pound. One hundred pounds would sustain a life for a year at a cost of three or four dollars.

As rice is the principal food of the East, there would be no problem or education in its preparation or use. This $675,000 worth of the staple which will be contributed by the people of the South will go a long way toward solving the problem which happily has no parallel in this prosperous land of ours.

PLANS TO AVERT IMMIGRATION FROM CITIES

Too much of the country's immigration is going to the cities—especially the large cities of the country. Evidently this fact is apparent to the new Commissioner General of Immigration, W. W. Husband, considering that he has expressed his plan to avert immigration from the cities and industrial centers and coordinate agencies of the Department of the Interior, Agriculture and Labor to place the newcomers on small farms.

The Commissioner General has conferred with Secretary of Labor, Dawes, and it was agreed that this plan would solve the immigration problem, and at the same time help greatly in correcting the economic situation arising from the flow of the population to the cities. Unemployment is still very great in industrial centers all over the country, and will probably remain rather stringent for some time in spite of the fact that the Government's efforts are being directed specifically toward the end of increasing employment. In this respect one can appreciate the significance of the proposed direction of laws in the solution of the greater industrial problem.

According to this intended change the future immigrants would for the most part, go to the farm; and here there arises another problem in the minds of many of the farming people of the country: Will these immigrants form a desirable mixture with the extremely individualistic nature and environment which is peculiarly their's? In view of this possible antagonism, the Commissioner General proposes to induce the immigrants to take up the redemption of the swampy and hitherto-fore untilled section of land, thereby subjecting the American farmer to no unnecessary inconveniences in carrying out the project. Then, as to racial antagonism, the immigrants would be clustered into small settlements rather than among the native farmers. Not being carried to extremes, this would permit them social enjoyment, and at the same time, aid them in the process of Americanization.

THE POPULATION MOVES WESTWARD

"Westward Ho!" still seems to be the national slogan, no less than in the days of the "Forty-Niners". As the East piles up its population in big cities, one almost forgets that the center of the population of the United States is moving westward steadily but surely.

More specifically speaking, "when the Census Bureau a short time ago completed its herculean task of counting the noses within the borders of Uncle Sam's domain," to repeat the words of The Literary Digest, it announced that the exact center of population was where the little village of Whitehall, Indiana, now stands. Still more specifically speaking, the modest home of "Uncle Jimmy" Herrin, on the edge of the village of forty-three inhabitants is the center, and the new landmark is placed close beside the kitchen doorway.

Of course, "Uncle Jimmy" appreciates the correctness of the calculations. But he will not stand as its guardian for more than ten years. If the rate and direction of this ever-changing hub of the United States continues, 1930 will place the landmark somewhere in the adjoining state of Illinois.

THE CHOICE OF ROADS

But to every man there openeth
A way, and ways and a way,
And the high soul climbs the high way
And the low soul groupes the low;
And in between, on the misty flates,
The rest drift to and fro.

But to every man there openeth
A high way and a low,
And every man decideth
The way his soul shall go.

WHY YOUNG PEOPLE SHOULD REMAIN FOR CHURCH SERVICES

THE subject suggests the idea that the attendance of young people at church services has not been, in the past, all that could be desired. If this be a fact there must be a reason. Let us see.

Has the youth of today been taught, in the home, the value of, and necessity for, divine worship? Have the church services been of such a nature as to attract and hold the youthful mind?

We fear there has been a laxity in the home along this line. We believe the activities of the church, in recent years, have been along negative rather than positive lines.

This would account for, in a large measure, what might seem to be indifference on the part of the youths of our land.

Their young minds and bodies full of life and energy seek the active rather than the passive side of life.

Beware! lest ye offend one of these little ones, by undue criticism, ere you have heard their case.

Young people should remain for church services first because—and to many of the ladies this is sufficient—the church is the University of the Sunday school; the training camp for the armies of the Lord of Host. Here one learns to put into practical Christian living the fundamentals which have been taught in the Sunday school. Here one's character is polished and adorned with those attributes which will enable him to pass, without blush or shame, all test in the school of everyday life. And by the blood of Jesus Christ all demerits are cancelled.

Here one learns to wear the whole armor of God. To fight the good fight, and having done all, to stand. And none should be absent without leave. Again, the church is the feeding ground of the soul. The green pastures, the quiet waters, the never failing spring of hope, to the lambs of His fold.

Within her walls is shelter from the storms and evils of life. Here the feast is spread. And the young find nurture and admonition for their souls.

Here are taught those never-dying principles, which, adhered to, will guide them in paths of righteousness, which leadeth to the Golden City.

To serve and be served.

Remember please the service rendered by the lad of the Galilean hills—who gave his loaves and fishes, which being blessed of the Master, was made ample to appease the hunger of the multitudes.

Remember, how the youth David—a mere stripling—slew the giant Goliath, and won victory and honor for the armies of the Living God.

*Delivered before the Community League of Waverly, Virginia, January 30, 1921, by Mayor B. E. White.

So may the boys and girls, of today, find opportunity for service to the church and to humanity, if they but equip themselves and wait upon the Lord.

John 21:15-16 teaches that the proof of love is service. First to the young, then to the full grown. When Jesus had been assured of Simon's love and sincerity, He straightway commanded service; in these words, "Feed my lambs". This being followed later by the command, "Feed my sheep".

Thus we have the order in which service should be rendered. If the church would interest and hold the young, it would be well to bear this in mind.

Second, because the church is the basic or fundamental institution of civilization. A permanent institution. Immutable as the hills, broad as the universe—eternal as God.

Historians in their research of the dim and distant past have not recorded the time when there was not some form of worship to a deity, seen or unseen, real or imaginary.

It is the very nature of man to worship, something, some object, some God. It is incumbent therefore upon the home and the church to train the youths of our land in the way they should go, and to teach them the living truths, concerning the one great Living God.

It is needless to say the training should begin in the home. It does either for good or evil, but alas! the home training is often more detrimental than helpful, to the development of those Christian virtues and manly attributes, which tend to make the best citizens. And thus, falls more heavily upon the church, the performance of a duty which it dares not shirk.

The development of the church is the development of humanity, but the church can be no stronger than the individuals who constitute it.

AWAKE! then ye sons and daughters of God, who constitute the body of His church visible.

AWAKE! ye ministers of His Gospel—who proclaim His Word—ye shepherds of His flock, and hear me when I declare that your words, your acts, your prayers, your lives mark the pathway into which their young lives are being led.

The perpetuity of the church, the salvation of the World, the coming of His Kingdom, rest upon you this hour.

CHRISTIAN DAILY NEWSPAPER FAILED

The American Daily Standard, America's only Protestant Christian daily newspaper, was forced to suspend publication.

Since this huge and novel enterprise was being watched by Christians and non-Christians in all parts of the country, it seems but fitting that a brief statement should be made at this time.

Last Christmas day the first issue of The American Daily Standard appeared. It was the intention of the publishers to satisfy the wants of many Christian people who had been clamoring so very long for a daily paper that honored Christ, that was fearlessly truthful, that eliminated stories of crime and scandal—in short, that was a decided help to the Christian family and the Church instead of an impediment.

We had the finest little plant in Chicago. Our force of employees was loyal, hard-working, and first-class all around. At the paper's demise the Chicago Daily News testified that we had produced "an excellent paper". During the last few days of our existence subscriptions poured in by hundreds.

And yet we collapsed!

The reason? Insufficient funds? Only partly. The chief reason, the fundamental reason, is a different one altogether. There are really various reasons, and these are so astounding and shocking in their nature, that we hesitate to divulge them on this occasion. We are writing a broad statement containing a full account of the reasons of our collapse and also containing our plans for the future.

For we have not yet given up the fight! Old Satan may think his victory final, but he has another thought coming!

Anyone that wants our broader statement can obtain same by addressing us personally at 441 West 63rd St., Chicago, Ill.

PERSONAL EVANGELISM

SOME OBSERVATIONS AND EXPERIENCES

By J. G. Bishop, D. D.

PERHAPS not since the Apostolic Age has the subject of Evangelism been brought to the consideration of the Church, from the pulpit and by the press, as at this time. Personal Evangelism is being stressed, as indeed it should be. We come into the world, not in groups, but as individuals, and so we pass out of the world individually. Even so, if we are Christians, we were "born again" as individuals, one by one. (John 3:3)

The object of this writing is to call attention to the manner I saw pursued by one successful preacher, in winning individual souls for Christ and the Kingdom.

A little over thirty years ago I was pastor of the Christian church in Vienna, New Jersey, and Rev. M. W. Borthwick was pastor of the Christian church at Baleville, New Jersey, in the same Conference. We joined teams, assisting each other in special evangelistic meetings, first at Baleville, then at Vienna. Baleville is, or was then, a small hamlet, but our church there had a large membership, drawing from the country round about. During those meetings the writer did the preaching and the pastor did the most of the house to house visitation. He had no bicycle, or automobile, but he had a good horse and buggy, and he knew how to use them. One afternoon he took me with him, and I made observations. He would stop at a farm-house, and we would go in.

After the usual salutations he would commence conversation, not in a promiscuous way to, or with, all present but to one individual—the husband, the wife, or some other member of the family of suitable age, as the circumstances might suggest, and this conversation was not about the state of the weather, the growing crops, or any other of the common temporal questions of the day, but it was on the question of that individual's personal salvation. In his adroit, but kind, earnest way he would soon diagnose the case—find out the religious status of that soul. Then he was prepared to intelligently deal with that soul, and show the way of life and salvation through Jesus Christ. He would show the awful danger of procrastinating this question of such momentous importance, and would urge the immediate acceptance of Jesus Christ as his (or her) Savior. If there was but one person, prayer was then offered; if there were more than one, the prayer would be deferred until the same process was used with each individual, with such modifications as the case might seem to require. By this time the spirit of penitence, in some cases, this afternoon, was visibly manifest. Then there was kneeling in prayer. And what prayers! Then about as fast as his horse could go we were taken to another country home.

The above is a sample of one of Brother Borthwick's ways of working. As a result many persons were converted in their homes. Why might it not be so today? Another beneficial result would be to ingratiate the pastor in the home life of his people.

Another notable occurrence illustrating the importance of Personal Evangelism. It was during this same meeting with Pastor Borthwick, at Baleville, New Jersey. As the congregation, in large part, came from the country for miles around, it was understood that if the night was extremely dark, or for other cause it was not thought best to have a night service, the church bell would not be rung, and there would be no service. Such a night came, and there was no service at the church. Several families, in which there were persons who were not yet Christians, lived in a small valley some two hundred yards away. Brother Borthwick lighted two lanterns. He, taking one, said, "I will go down and see if there is a prospect of our doing anything tonight. If there is not, I will soon be back. If there is such a prospect, and if I am not back by such a time, you take this lantern and come down."

He did not come back, and I went down. In one of the homes he had, sitting in a row, eight persons, six men, besides the husband and wife of the house. A short prayer was offered by the pastor, asking for the presence and divine blessing of the Lord—and he asked just as if he expected his request to be granted! Earnest personal work was then commenced. Brother Borthwick sitting in a chair just in front of the first one in the row, began, and in his kindly, adroit way would seem to banish all sense of fear and embarrassment, and so gain the confidence of his subject that he would have but little if any trouble in his diagnosing the case, finding out his views of Christianity, pro and con, and especially of his personal relation thereto. He was so tactful that if his subject attempted an argument, it was almost instantly warded off. If excuses were offered, they were answered most likely by the failure of the excuses given in Luke 14, in the parable of "The Great Supper". Indeed, Brother Borthwick seemed to have a Scripture quotation for every need, and every emergency. He hastened to press his subject to a decision to accept the Lord as his Savior, and pledge his life to His service. During all this time all was quiet, not a word was spoken, except by the two, as mentioned.

The writer then commenced a similar process with the next one in the row, and continued until a satisfactory result was reached. And this alternating continued until each of those eight souls had confessed Christ as his personal Savior, and pledged his life to the service of the Lord. The farther we progressed in this meeting of individual personal work, the easier it became. The Lord was there helping. After the decisions, what a season of prayer and thanksgiving we did have! Each of the eight converts joined in vocal prayer.

The writer's reason for giving the facts of this paper so minutely is the thought that perhaps from it some Christian worker, or workers, may gain some helpful suggestions for their labors in Personal Evangelism.

And as a stimulus and inspiration for such work, consider the value that Christ puts on a human soul, in Matt. 16:26: "What is a man profited if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?"—If it were yours, reader, or if it were mine?

PETER PEEPER PEEPING

In my last article, I promised to tell something of the effect of dealing squarely with the erring by going, not to his many friends and telling them of his sins, but by going to him and telling him plainly, but tenderly and kindly, what the facts are. I have in mind an instance of that kind. I heard a minister tell it, as coming under his own observation. He said that in one of his congregations (he was a country pastor) there was a fine young fellow, who, though he was not a member of the church at that place, he was a church member in a church in another locality. He seemed quite a model of a young man and had many friends. The minister ceased to minister in that community and so lost sight of this young man. Years and years after, he met him again! What a change had come! He was no longer the fine young man, but he was a bloated whiskey drinker, and looked as if he might live in a barroom, as they then existed. The minister wished to talk to him, but his circumstances would not permit him to do so. When he got home, he wrote to his friend of the long ago, and told him that he was sorry to see him in such a sad condition—bloated from whiskey drinking! He answered that he was not a drinking man, that he had not used as much as a pint of liquor in six months. Then the minister wrote in reply, telling him if that was correct, that he did not drink, then he ought to hurry to Philadelphia, or some other city, and get treatment for the cure of his malady, for he felt sure that he was greatly afflicted and so needed attention at once. That ended the correspondence, but the man saw that he was not deceiving his friends, but himself. He saw that at least some of his friends knew he was drinking. Quite a while passed, and the minister again saw the man. At once he knew that man had been reached—it was clear that he had quit drinking; his looks showed it. Candor in letting him know that he was not fooling his friends, that they knew what he was doing, led him to change. It was a thousand times better to let him know it, than it would have been to let others know it even once. When a man is going astray, go to him, not harshly, but firmly and tenderly, and tell him of his sins, and in many instances, you will win him.

Do you know what Jay-Walking is? That is a strange procedure, and yet a certain paper sends out this message, which though it may not interest the men, will no doubt command the attention of the ladies. Read as follows, and get at least a good lesson, and after you get it, go practice what it teaches:

Is "Miss America" Jay-Walking?

All jokes about the paucity and immodesty of female dress aside, how do you feel about it? I want to get a "close-up" on all you eligible young men. Tell me honestly what is going to be the percentage of shrinkage in "eligibility" among the female sex on account of your having walked the street with girls at whom you had to look the second time to be sure they hadn't forgotten to put on all the garments they were entitled to—and then you weren't always quite sure? And of dancing with girls from whom you would naturally have to choose mates the kind of dances that bring their bodies into swaying, clinging propinquity with yours in a kind of embrace that we have been accustomed to think of as being postponed until after marriage? And what about having to chew the bitter (?) quid of reflection "after the ball is over" that "your girl", or the one that would have been, has been giving to every other fellow with whom she danced the same kind of "bunuy hug" that she gave you?

Come now; at first it sort of fascinated you—the audacity of it; and you didn't think about the afterclap, the "triangle-film" end of it. But you can't make me believe that American young men are so jay-walking into matrimony (or celibacy) as not to have got their thinkers at work trying to figure out just how this debacle of feminine near-nudity and eclipse of modesty is going to make it easier to "love, cherish, and honor" her "so long as you both do live."

"Honor her"! If you believe she isn't jay-walking, too, with her common sense blindfolded and her judgment doped, can you "honor" her as a man ought to honor the wife of his bosom? You can't "honor" a semi-nude "wiggler."

I'm just putting it up to you. "Americus Sovereign," whether you're jay-walking through this mating period of your life, or sleep-walking.—John F. Cowan, in Christian Endeavor World.

FOUR-SQUARE

VIII—The Layman

MARVEL not that I put first among the four-squares of the ideal layman the cultivation of the prayer life. No Christian can have power without prayer. It is the dynamo of spiritual energy. To neglect it is to stop the machinery of the Kingdom in the development of one's own character and render one useless in the work of the Church. What a hopeful sign of the times it is therefore for 41 distinguished laymen from twenty states and representing nearly all the denominations of prominence to issue a summons to prayer, and to have them give as the reason, "Our world will never get right with itself until it gets right with God. Only spiritual remedies can cure the present ills of mankind. Therefore, we call upon all who believe that the living God hears and answers prayers, to offer daily petitions in behalf of our troubled world." The layman needs family worship in his home and in all his experience of life to have with him the spirit of prayer. The layman who prays will be ready to do the duties of a Christian. The layman who neglects to pray will grow cold and indifferent. Eventually he will lose his salvation.

The praying layman will attend his church, regularly, conscientiously, naturally. There will be no need of "Go-to-church" Sundays for him. He will be there. Members of churches who do not attend are advertising the poverty of their spiritual life. Church attendance is in most cases a sure index of spiritual temperature. What would you think of man who owned part of a business and did not look after it? What must we think of the layman who is partner with God in the Church of which he is a member, and who remains habitually away from his place of business? Our churches are not crowded because our spiritual vitality is so low. The only way to fill our churches is to fill the laymen with zeal for the Kingdom.

The four-square layman will give liberally to the Church and Kingdom. It will not be necessary to give oyster suppers or rummage sales or entertainments or lectures to fool out of his pocket book the money needful for the support of the Master's cause. His pocket book too, will have religion. He will know how to pay as well as how to pray for the Kingdom's coming, and he will be able gladly to do both because he has already given himself to the Lord. He will be a tither as the minimum expression of his obligation to the Kingdom. But he will give offerings over and above the tithe, as the Lord has prospered him. System and not spasm, privilege and not emotional appeal will be the essence of this giving creed. The ultimate motive however will be, in some small measure, to express through his gifts his appreciation of Jesus' sacrifice for him.

Finally he will work at his job. He will not be like a certain rich Christian whose son being asked what his father's business was replied: "He professes to be a Christian, but he does not work much at his job." Rather will he be like that celebrated cobbler who replied to a similar question, "My business is serving the Lord, but I cobble shoes to pay expenses." When a man takes stock in a material business, he immediately wants something to do to promote the business. The ideal layman feels a like sentiment with reference to the Church of which he is a member. He should do anything he is asked to do, rather he should honestly try. He will either find a work suited to his talent or create one. And he will not forget that not the Church alone, but the community and the nation and the world and all men have claims upon him as a Christian, which claims he will be glad to respond to wholeheartedly and with complete self-effacement. Like his Master, he will find his chiefest satisfaction of life in the service he can render to brethren in that Master's name and spirit.

W. A. HARPER.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

IHAVE been much interested in the figures which Dr. Harper and our editor have been giving us as to our decline denominationally. The facts seem appalling—What shall we do with them? Dr. Harper, it seemed to me was quite pessimistic, but I suppose when the figures were that way, he found it rather a hard task to be otherwise. I am glad the editor has shown that this decline is not in the Southern Christian Convention, and if not, then it must be north of the Mason-Dixon Line, but even then I regret to know it is so. I cannot help but believe, if the figures were full, they would show quite a difference in our favor in the North. Still in this I may be mistaken, and it may be just as bad as the figures make it out. If the figures given be true and the loss, as Bro. Riddle makes it out, is north of the Mason-Dixon Line, then I think it is a good time for our brethren of the North to learn a lesson. They have so steadfastly and persistently refused to enter into any real and aggressive organization of their work as to invite just this state of things. A loosely organized body can never do much in real aggressive work. Indeed, if they hold their own, they are generally considered as doing well, but the figures which are supposed to have been furnished by Dr. J. F. Burnett, Secretary of the American Christian Convention, show that our brethren North are not nearly holding their own. We insist that it is time they were doing the work they destroyed at the Springfield (O) Convention in 1914. At the Convention held at Troy in 1910, a Commission on Organization was appointed and the duty assigned that Commission was to prepare and submit to the 1914 Convention (which met at Springfield) a thorough and complete plan of organization. When the 1914 Convention met, this Commission presented a plan, by far the best, that was ever offered that body, so far as I am informed, and it was the result of much hard work, but a certain influence began to work to defeat that plan, and finally so emasculated it that it meant nothing in particular, and now the facts are telling on the bad work that influence did. For one, I am very sorry that our brethren North are declining so rapidly, as the facts seem so conclusively to show. The Southern Christian Convention is a hundred per cent better organized than are our brethren in the North.

They have many more people than we have and they are much more wealthy than is the Church in the South, and yet look the facts fully in the face, and tell us, if you can, why all this decline, practically all of it is north of the Mason-Dixon Line? In my humble judgment the answer is at hand—our brethren in the North are declining at the rate of 103 (taking off three for loss in the South) ministers, 98 congregations and 920 members per annum, while in the South we have lost not a single congregation and certainly very few members, if any. This is a most timely lesson and shows largely the value of a good and reasonable organization in denominational work. We are glad, since the facts justify it, that our Southern Christian Convention has been blest with such a lesson, vindicating the wisdom of their course in the matter of denominational organization. There may be some other reasons for the decline of the work in the North, but if so, they are largely on a par with this lack of organization. We believe the work of undoing the work of the Commission on Organization at Springfield in 1914, and the effects which have seemed to follow that unwise stroke of policy, should be put up to the next session of the American Christian Convention in the hope that that body, in the face of facts, as they are appearing, may see fit to adopt a thorough organization and get down to business at once, and if they will not do this, then I see no need for the Forward Movement, since we seem to go forward one step and slip back two. We are decidedly in favor of the Forward Movement, if in fact it be forward, but if it must go backward doubly as fast as it goes forward, as facts seem to indicate (as given in Dr. Harper's and Bro. Riddle's figures) then we fail to see that we are gaining anything, for we are going backward (in the North) under our Forward Movement faster than we ever did, before we undertook the Forward Movement, so far as I am informed. Brethren, it is time to do some thinking.

J PRESSLEY BARRETT.

"DIGGING BACK TO OLD FOUNDATIONS"

I cannot resist any longer the temptation of writing on what I have so many times deferred because I feared that I would have no cooperation. Knowing that I am orthodox, it is for you, Brother Riddle, since you have "broken the ice" to help me show our Church that we are allowing our leaders to give a mistaken idea of the intentions of the Christian Church, which wishes a full Bible, and is not in harmony with any clan, sect, or cult of fancy modernism. I have the great admiration for religion, other than as we see it, when sincerity exists, but because the Christian Church opens the full Bible and wishes to be liberal is no reason why her ministers and leaders (?) should apologize to any organization.

Those we ordain as elders and deacons have no right to be fusing this Church with any of the societies in existence. Our Sabbath school superintendents and teachers are elected to promote the Bible in the minds of our people and defend and elevate their faith, and to do anything to better community and municipal matters, but to stay out of alliances and to shun these "entangling arrangements" which come in various forms from the self constituted Super-Church. The Christian Church and her institutions have all they can attend to. Respect your Church and others will respect it, too.

Not only should our Church leaders be its defenders but all the professors in our colleges should be loyal members of the Christian Church and believers. These easy to please cooperators, broadfielders, family tie excuses, places of better opportunities, etc., had better be sounded out before they are followed where they themselves do not know. Rely on Christ's Church as originally laid out two thousand years ago.

PHILEMON

The Philatheas had charge of the prayer meeting at the First Christian church, Raleigh, N. C., on Wednesday night, March 9. The subject was "Paul's Letter to Philemon." Paul may have written many similar letters, but this is the only purely domestic letter of which we have any knowledge. It was written about A. D. 63, and Onesimus, the bearer of it, was accompanied by Tychicus, who had charge of two longer epistles to the Ephesians and the collossians. Philemon of Collossae had been converted by Paul. Onesimus, his slave, had robbed him and fled to Rome. While this fugitive slave was in Rome he came in contact with the greatest preacher in the Empire and was converted. Paul induced this converted slave to return to his master. Paul prays the master to welcome the slave and thief as a brother and as Paul's child in the gospel. Paul neither "orders nor recommends emancipation," says the sceptic. This is true, but Paul enjoins a treatment of slaves which would render emancipation either inevitable or unnecessary. When all men are loved and treated as beloved Christian brothers all forms of slavery will be ended and wars and rumors of wars will be no more.

Many of our workers should now be planning to attend this school of Religious Education. Pastors, Sunday school and missionary workers, and hosts of our young people. This is the place to send your son and daughter if you want them to catch a vision of Christian leadership and service. Churches should make it possible, where necessary, for their young people to attend.

THE BULLETIN

Brothers R. S. Petty, Greensboro, N. C., and J. P. Barrett, Holland, Va., each discuss in this issue the numerical problem of our Church. Read their articles.

Rev. H. S. Smith has accepted the Portsmouth, Va., church for the summer and will enter the work June 1. Pastor H. W. Dowding will remain with the church as near that time as possible before he sails for Europe.

A reader of THE SUN makes open confession by saying that he has been borrowing THE SUN from a neighbor but begs forgiveness by remitting $2.50 for a year's subscription. He is now a subscriber. Who next? Come right along.

Brother John Galloway Truitt, a student in Princeton University, takes time between classes to say: "Your recent editorial on 'Digging Back to Old Foundations' is most excellent", for which we thank a fellow student of by-gone days.

Dr. A. B. Kendall, Washington, D. C., in renewing his subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, adds this to his letter: "It seems to me that THE SUN has greatly improved in the last two or three months. Keep it up. I am enjoying it very much."

Rev. W. G. Clements, Morrisville, N. C., one of THE SUN's former Editors, is kind enough to say this: "Your editorial on 'Digging Back to Old Foundations' contains a bundle of truth, clothed in the garment of brotherly love. I want every member of the Christian Church to read it twice and digest well its every thought."

Mr. J. E. Massey, 524 W. 123rd St. New York City, who writes "The Observatory" for THE SUN spent the Easter season with his people in Caswell County, this State. Brother Massey is one of our promising young men, a graduate of Elon College, and is at present doing work in the School of Journalism at Columbia University.

Rev. Jas. L. Foster, Waverly, Va., sends this message for this week's issue of THE SUN: "The Lightbourne meeting is great. The largest audience ever gathered here. About one hundred reconsecrations the first week and possibly thirty conversions. The playing of Mr. Davis is inspiring. Lightbourne's sermons of very high order."

THE SUN will appreciate it if readers will keep in mind that obituary and marriage articles are published only when received within 60 days of the date of the event. We have a paper now—resolutions of respect—about a person who died last September. This paper was sent us once before, but about four months after the person died. Remember the time limit, and also remember that we are doing our best to treat all alike.

Dr. D. A. Long, who has enjoyed the balmy breezes of Florida during the past winter is now again with his friends in North Carolina, and he tells us that on a recent Sunday the friends of Mt. Auburn loaded him down with hams (note the plural), five dozen eggs, three pounds of butter, and four jars of delicious fruit. THE SUN's Editor has discovered how to tell when a preacher has been pounded. We will not divulge the secret here.

Bro. D. J. Mood, "The Printer", Smithfield, Virginia, a former publisher of THE SUN, in renewing his subscription, says: "I enclose check for $5.00 for two years' subscription to my Church paper. I say my Church paper, though I am associated with the M. E. Church now. It is only because I must be in and a part of some church, and we have no Christian church here. May THE SUN's rays reach farther and farther as the years pass."

Rev. A. T. Banks, Ramseur, N. C., writing under date of March 24, says: "We began a revival here March 15, with Rev. Geo. D. Eastes doing the preaching. The revival has been filled with interest from the beginning. Last Sunday the house was filled at both services, more than one hundred being turned way from the evening service. The revival is still in progress and will continue through April 3. Brother Eastes' sermons are of a high order and are appealing to all who hear them. You will hear from us again."

One of the loyal and liberal subscribers of THE SUN—a good and noble woman—says in a personal letter these heartening things in regard to the Church paper: "Since the organization of our local church, I have endeavored to get all members to take THE CHRISTIAN SUN. All of our members that are faithful and can be depended upon are subscribers, I think, and I believe that you will find this to be the case in almost every church. I think that anyone who does not appreciate his or her own denominational paper has missed something in Christian training. Those who want to find fault with their Church paper can do so."

A card from Mrs. Fry, Utsunomiya, Japan, carries the picture of her Christian Kindergarten school numbering 45 pupils and three teachers. Among the teachers is the face of Miss Toshio Sato who we learn is "doing the work of two" since she returned to her native land. Mrs. Fry is doing a most excellent work among the children of her community and her school of 45 shows the mark of the Christian training. As one looks upon the picture of these children whose mothers cannot tell them of Christ and see the kindly faces of Mrs. Fry and her Christian teachers one is forcibly reminded of our Savior's words "Suffer the little children to come unto me I forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of heaven."

Last Sunday was another good day for the Burlington church. The Sunday school registered nearly one hundred more than was in attendance on that Sunday one year ago. Miss Bessie Holt told the school of her recent visit to the mountains of Virginia to see Miss Hedgepeth; $144.50 was the amount of the regular offering, while the Busy Men's Bible Class reported $1,000.00 raised during its sitting, to equip a larger room in the basement of the church. The regular preaching service was given over to an Easter program rendered by the children of the Christian Orphanage. Mission Secretary Atkinson read the Scripture and offered prayer. THE SUN's Editor read the announcements and presided; after the exercises of the children, brief addresses were given by Superintendent Johnston and Dr. Atkinson. A special offering was received, which will be announced later in the Orphanage department of THE SUN. The evening service started at 6:45 by another Easter entertainment given by the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society, trained by Mrs. C. B. Riddle. At 7:30 Rev. W. F. Jordan, Elon College, N. C., who is in the employment of the American Bible Society, presented by stereopticon, many very interesting scenes, fully illustrating the power, the growth and popularity of the Bible. Brother Jordan was assisted by Prof. A. L. Hook. Those present spoke of the scenes as being the most interesting, educating and illuminating ever witnessed. Next Sunday the new pastor, Rev. George Otis Lankford, preaches his first sermon.

The citizens of Atlanta, Georgia have voted a bond issue of eight and one half million dollars for the improvement of their city. Four million dollars are to be used in the public schools of the city.

Within the last year more than five thousand Germans have left Germany and gone to Mexico. Large numbers have also gone to Brazil and other South American countries, and great numbers especially the best class, of Germans are preparing to leave the country.

Eugene V. Debs, several times candidate for the presidency of the United States on the Socialist ticket, but now serving a ten-year sentence in the Atlanta Federal Prison, on conviction violating the war-time Espionage Act, went to Washington on March 24 at the request of Attorney General Daugherty for the purpose of reviewing Mr. Debs' case. The procedure seems to be singular but Mr. Debs honored the confidence placed in him, and after his interview with the Department of Justice, returned to Atlanta and resumed his prison term.

A CHRISTIAN SOCIAL ORDER—WHAT WOULD IT BE?

In "The Church and Industrial Reconstruction", published by the Committee on the war and religious outlook of the Federal Council of Churches, the question is asked: "What kind of society would we have if the principles of Jesus Christ were consistently applied to man good; in which all lesser differences of race, or nation, and of class served to minister to the richness of human life?"

This answer is given: "It would be a co-operative social order in which the sacredness of every life was recognized and everyone found opportunity for the fullest self-expression of which he was capable; in which each gave himself gladly and wholeheartedly for ends that were socially valuable; in which the impulses to service and creative action would be stronger than the acquisitive impulses, and all work seen in terms of its spiritual significance as making possible fullness of life of all men; in which differences of talent and capacity meant proportional responsibilities and ministry to common good; in which all lesser differences of race, or nation, and of class served to ministers to the richness of all-inclusive brotherhood; in which there hovered over all a sense of the reality of the Christ-like God so that worship inspired service, as service expressed brotherhood."—Christian Advocate.

A SERIOUS PROVOCATION

When Charles Dudley Warner was a newspaper editor in the early sixties he was accustomed to write his editorials upon the war with fervid haste, regardless of all consideration of handwriting. One day a typesetter left the composing room and appeared at the editor's desk. "Mr. Warner," he said, "I have decided to enlist in the army."

With mingled emotions of pride and responsibility Mr. Warner replied that it pleased him very much that the man felt the call to duty.

"O, it isn't that," said the truthful compositor, "but I'd rather be shot than to set your copy." —Ex.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

THE GOOD WOMEN MAKE GREAT PLANS

ATENDING the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference at Holland, October 28, 1920, the Mission Secretary became deeply interested in the following resolution, which was presented to the Conference by Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Chairman of the Woman's Board of that Conference: "Resolved: that our churches be grouped according to the grouping used in the Men and Millions Forward Movement and that Superintendents be elected for the coming year, one for each district, whose duties should be to have general oversight of the work in her district and to arrange a district rally to be held in the spring."

This resolution, as discussed, was unanimously adopted by the Conference and the same carried to the Woman's Missionary Convention of the North Carolina Conference at Durham, November 13-14, and being thoroughly discussed there, was likewise adopted for the districts in that Conference. The Secretary is delighted to see from THE SUN of March 16 and 23 that the proper committees have worked out the dates and have secured Superintendents for each of the districts, and to learn that programs are being prepared, and that the good women are at work, each trying to get up a good rally in her district. The writer's understanding is that the women are trying to get delegates to attend these district meetings, both from the churches which have societies, and from those which do not. It was brought out in the discussion by Mrs. Rowland at Franklin that if the churches which do not have Societies would send two or three of its good women to one of these district rallies, it would be easy for those women to go back to their churches and organize a Society. These group meetings should certainly be of great value to our women's work and carry new life and activity into the Societies and into the churches. When our women begin a good work, they usually succeed in their attempts. Here is hoping that every Superintendent in every district will meet with the greatest degree of encouragement in their attempts to get good delegations on the day and at the places named. For the sake of keeping the places and dates, I give these again as they appear in THE SUN March 16-23.

Wake, Harnett, Johnson—Friday, May 20.

Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington, N. C., President of the North Carolina Woman's Conference and Mrs. C. H. Rowland, Franklin, Va., President of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference are very hopeful as to the Rallies, and through their Superintendents for the various districts promise a program that will interest all who attend. They advise that one very important feature in making the Rallies successful will be the cooperation of pastors, particularly of those churches which have no Society, as they will have to depend upon the pastors of these churches without Societies, to secure from their churches women to attend these Rallies. This is a most commendable effort on the part of our women to render real service to their churches in the name of the Master this spring, and we bespeak for them the heartiest cooperation of pastors and people in making these meetings interesting and profitable.

A WILLING SUNDAY SCHOOL

In writing of his Sunday school, Brother W. H. Scott, deacon of the church at Needham's Grove, says: "We are having a good Sunday school and ask the prayers of all of our good people for our success. Anything that we can do we are willing to do. We have painted our meeting house, and have a good preacher, Brother Edwards, for our pastor."

We have received names and addresses of the Sunday school teachers of the most of our Sunday schools and are mailing this week a bulletin to every teacher so far reported, which we trust will be of real service in their teaching. We are hoping that at a very early date we will have a complete record of the teachers in all the Sunday schools of our Southern Christian Convention. If any pastor or secretary has not yet sent the report requested I will appreciate it very much if same can be sent at once. The literature that we are sending out is free to all teachers and we are anxious that all should have it.

"I have been a subscriber to THE SUN for twenty-six years and a reader of the paper most of the time since my earliest recollection, and need and desire its continual visits."—R. H. Peele, Cambridge Springs, Pa.

OUR ORPHANAGE

DON'T FORGET THE EASTER OFFERING

The Ladies Aid Society of Mt. Carmel church, made and sent to us a nice quilt. The Ladies Aid Societies have been good to us along this line. I believe we have received some of the prettiest quilts this last winter that we have ever received. They came in real good to keep the little fellows warm and comfortable through the cold weather.

We received two Easter offerings this week. Our good friend in Durham sent us a check for $25.00 and Mrs. C. O. Ives, Norfolk, Va., sent us $5.00. I truly hope that next week will bring us many checks as we are reaching the point in our new building where we need funds to keep the work going. Our hearts' great desire is to finish the building and get it paid for by May 15. Can we do it? If you will lend us a helping hand we will. When an automobile is stuck in the mud a little push will sometimes help a great deal in making the engine pull it out. In this work a little push will inspire us to greater efforts. Will you be one to push and help us make this great desire come true? Don't forget the Easter offering.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Won't you admit a little stranger? My sojourn in this world is rather brief yet, but I've found it wonderful and I am very well pleased and happy. This is my first Easter. Isn't it a glorious one?

I am such a big boy—I can talk too, but no one understands my talking. I am quite mischievous and I keep mother very busy, and daddy, too, when he comes from school. I am sending you one dollar and I hope I shall send you many more.—Samuel Rufus Gay, Jr.

Glad to have you join the band of cousins. It was kind of you to send us a dollar out of your bank account. I hope you will come to see us sometime and see all the little children. You must write often.—“Uncle Charley”.

Dear Uncle Charley: Guess you think I have forgotten you and the cousins, but here I come again. I hope to write more now as I am a little older and can play in the yard without mother or daddy with me. I was two years old February 12. Of course I can talk enough to keep daddy company.

Hope you and the cousins are well and happy. Enclosed find check for $2.00—my dues for January, February, March and April. With love and best wishes—Olive D. Poythress, Jr.

I knew that you had not forgotten us, but thought you had been so busy playing this pretty weather that you had not taken time to write. My little boy plays basket ball, cat ball, and pitches horse shoes. I play with him sometimes and can beat him pitching horse shoes—“Uncle Charley”.

A GENEROUS LETTER

My dear Mr. Johnston:

I am sending a check as a little contribution to your work. You may use it either for the Children's Home or for the general work of the Orphanage as the need may be more urgent. Please accept it with my good wishes and love, as well as my prayers for you and the work which you are doing so well. Never a Monday morning goes by that I do not remember you and the work definitely in my prayer. I rejoice that we have you at the head of the work which must be so near Christ's heart. And it is because of my confidence in you and my love for you that I gladly share my resources with the work, and this in spite of the many demands that are made upon me. No phase of the Kingdom makes any stronger appeal to me than the Orphanage work and you can always count on me for a little help from time to time.

I hope that you are well and happy. I suppose that these fine spring days will call you out of doors to the farm work. I wish I could visit the good old Southland again, and I expect to do that very thing before I leave for over-seas service. You may be sure that I will pay you a visit whenever that event comes to pass

With every good wish and kindest personal regards. I am

Sincerely yours,

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

CHURCH NEWS

SOUTH NORFOLK REVIVAL

The revival services which have been in progress at the South Norfolk Christian church each night during the past three weeks, were brought to a successful close Sunday evening, March 6, with a record breaking attendance, and with a beautiful spirit prevailing.

The original plan of the pastor and people was to continue these meetings for two weeks, but at the close of the second week the interest was so great that it was unanimously voted to continue the meeting through the third week.

Thanks be to God the giver of every good and perfect gift. We have always been blessed with good meetings in our church, but the people of South Norfolk say that the meeting which has just closed was the best ever held here. From the very first service, when four professed faith in Christ and a large number of reconsecrations were made, until the close of the meetings, there were professions at every service.

I have never seen the people of South Norfolk flock to the house of God as they have during the past three weeks. We secured 200 extra chairs, and then were seldom able to seat the congregations; hundreds were turned away. Even on Saturday night the house was packed long before the hour for service. I think I can safely say that the average attendance for the thirty-two consecutive services would exceed 450. Our people prayed, and backed up their prayers with faith and good works, and God opened the windows of Heaven and poured us out a blessing that we were not able to contain. As a result of the meetings 125 persons professed faith in Christ and a large number of reconsecrations were made. We have received 102 new members—two by letter, and 100 on profession of faith. Fifteen have united with other churches in the community.

Brother J. F. Morgan, the efficient and beloved minister of the First Christian church, Norfolk, Va., very ably assisted us in the song services. Although suffering from a cold, I do not think he ever sang the gospel more effectively than he did in our revival here. With his enthusiasm and deep consecration, and with his sweet and appealing voice, he won the hearts of the people. It was indeed an inspiration and a real joy to have him with us. God give us more men like him.

By the request of the church, their minister did the preaching throughout the meeting.

In appreciation of their services during the revival, the church remembered Brother Morgan and the minister each with a handsome purse. Every organization of the church is active and all are praying and looking forward to the time in the near future when we will have a church edifice that will supply our pressing needs.

For all the wonderful blessings God has bestowed upon us, we give Him all the glory and praise.

Brethren we ask you to continue to pray for the people and the humble minister of the South Norfolk Christian church.

O. D. POYTHRESS.

HOPEDALE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

I had been notified that I was wanted to preach the first sermon in the new house of worship at Hopedale. So without being given further notice, conveyance came for me Sunday, March 20, and I was informed that I was expected to hold services on that day.

The need of a church building in the community of Hopedale was seen by Miss Susan Gant some years ago. She was afflicted with rheumatism and unable to attend church at Union, and donated a lot on which to build a house of worship nearby. The building was commenced, but a storm came and destroyed it soon after the framing was completed. The building was neglected for some time, until R. H. Coble was licensed to preach. This young man lived near the site, and he with many others realized the great need of a church in the town where the High Falls factory is located. They at once went to work and built a splendid edifice, costing approximately $2,000.00. The building is not yet painted, nor seated, and there are funds needed with which to do this and pay the indebtedness on the building.

I am very anxious to see this church completed because I know that much good will result therefrom; also for the sake of Miss Gant, who was a friend to the church, and a loyal supporter to its cause. She was a kind friend to the writer, and I hope to take part in the dedicating of the church which she loved.

RICHMOND, VA., SUNDAY SCHOOL

Our Sunday school is a little more than a year old. We have an enrollment of fifty-eight, with an average attendance of from forty-five to fifty. We are endeavoring to give the children of our school the proper start in Sunday school work by having Primary and Junior Departments. We have an Adult Bible Class which has set for its goal a total membership before we are two years of age—which will be next January. We have a Young Ladies' Class which shows much interest, and we are trying hard to get the young men of our Sunday school interested in a Young Men's Bible Class; we also have an adult mixed class. We are small but realize that we can grow more rapidly through organization, and we are trying to keep our school well organized.

In our work we have not forgotten those less fortunate than ourselves, and on the first Sunday in each month we receive a special offering for the Christian Orphanage, and have sent about $30.00 to the Orphanage this year. On the third Sunday we take a special offering for missions, and for this work about $10.00 have been collected this year.

We are asking the prayers of our Christian people throughout the Conference, for the success of the Richmond church.

J. W. PRICE.

THE PROSPECT FOR THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH IN GREENE COUNTY, VA.

At the suggestion of Dr. J. O. Atkinson, the writer made a partial survey of the opportunity confronting the Christian Church in Green County. Mt. Olivet Christian church, is a new building, with Sunday school rooms not quite complete, and the church not yet painted, situated in a very prosperous section of Green County, sixteen miles from Proffit, and a little over twenty miles from Charlottesville, Va., and at a fork of the road three-fourths of a mile from March post office. It joins a lot that has a three-room school house on it. There is a membership here of 250, or about that number.

Six miles from Mt. Olivet is High Point Christian church (with about 130 members) situated on top of the Blue Ridge. Six miles east of Mt. Olivet is a Union church that has never been completed, deeded to three denominations; Baptist, Methodist and Christians. Neither of the three denominations are holding services at this point. I preached in the afternoon here to about 150 people.

Eight miles from Mt. Olivet, over in Albemarle County, is Christian Chapel that is being supplied by Rev. Killis Roach. They have a membership of 70.

Mt. Olivet wants half time preaching and is willing to pay $350.00 per year to start with for the right man. To my mind here is a real opportunity for the Christian church. The business of the community is all handled by members of the Christian church. I believe that were the Mission Board to place a man there who met the approval of these people we would soon have a field that could take care of itself.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—NEVILLE

Whereas, God in his almighty wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst one of our beloved members, Mrs. W. D. Neville, on March 7, 1921, we the members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Christian church, of Chapel Hill, N. C., offer the following resolutions:

1. That the Society bow in humble submission to God's will, knowing that He doeth all things well and that our loss is her eternal gain.

2. That we endeavor to follow her example of humility and consecration to her Master's cause.

3. That we extend to her husband and children our heartfelt sympathy in the loss of a wife and mother whose devotion to her family was untiring.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved ones, a copy to the Chapel Hill News, and The Christian Sun and a copy placed on our Society minutes.

HARRELL

Elkanah Harrell, son of John Wesley and Delilah Harrell, was born in Nansemond County, Va., November 20, 1842, and died at his home in said county, February 6, 1921, at the age of 77 years, two months and seventeen days. On February 10, 1869 he was married to Miss Louisa Norfleet, who died on November 11, 1906. One sister, Mrs. Daniel Wilkins, and three sons and three daughters survive him: Rev. John Wesley Harrell, Troy N. C.; Jesse E. Harrell, Norfolk, Va.; Chammie E. Harrell of Nansemond Co.; Miss Hattie Harrell, Miss Lizzie E. Harrell and Mrs. R. E. Rogers of Nansemond Co., Va., also six grand-children.

Brother Harrell united with Cypress Chapel Christian church soon after the close of the Civil War, and transferred his membership to Liberty Spring church about fifteen years ago, where he was a faithful and consistent member at the time of his death. He was a quiet, humble man of God, willing to do his work faithfully without attracting any public attention. He did not aspire to have any public office or position in the church, but was always willing to be in his place. He was one of the most punctual and reliable men to be found anywhere. He was industrious, and everything he did was crowned by a deeply religious spirit. His children are all devout Christians, and are respected and loved by a large circle of friends. It was eminently fitting that Brother Harrell should be called home on Sunday morning about the time he usually went to church when he was able to go. His heart had felt many precious experiences as he had worshipped in the church militant, and it was his crowning joy to spend his first day—an earthly Sunday—in the land of endless day. The funeral service was conducted at Liberty Spring, by the pastor, assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley. A man of sterling Christian character has been called home.

Springtime

THE EDITOR

SPRINGTIME is nature's proud season. The earth takes on a new color and the flowers and trees bedeck themselves in gaudy robes of many colors. God is love, beauty and perfection. He is the Creator of all and His handiwork is displayed in nature's numberless forms and fancies. The lilies remind us of the purity of the Christian life and the untouched blossoms are symbolic of lives unscarred by sin. The streams of water gushing from mother earth are significant of a fountain to wash our sins away. Nature grows without noise, is a silent unfolding of creation's secret. And like this the love of God goes on and on silently permeating the hearts of men. Behold the creation of God! Behold His goodness, His love, His mercy, His all—His all for us.

The man with many themes is the man with many plans. "This ONE thing I do", said Paul. Doing the one thing well is the best indication for success.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH NEEDS A MAN

WANTED: A man. This is what the Christian Church, especially we of the South, must hang on our bulletin board some day.

But a man for what? A man to do that which we have never done, follow that method which we have never followed, and say that thing which we have never said. We need a man—we of the Christian Church need a man, a man to preach a gospel that we have never preached, and make a plea that we have never made, in a way we have never made it. We need a man to go throughout the whole Church and say to the young men, "Thou art the man." Not a man to call men, but a man to so magnify the great, the good, and the noble work of preaching and teaching until a voice shall say to those who hear, "Thou art the man."

It is for education's cause that we need this man. We need such a man to go in our smallest and in our largest churches to make a plea in behalf of education. We need a man to lay the burden of a larger and more consecrated life upon the poor boy, as well as to challenge the thought of the rich man's son. It is not enough to emphasize the widow's mite; the widow's son also must be called. We need a man not only to plead for the thousands from the pockets of our people but for the sons and daughters of our homes.

We need a man whose duty, whose whole duty, would be to inspire our young men and women to seek education's way, and to instill into their lives that desire for a larger preparation for a more useful service. Not all to be preachers, or teachers, or missionaries, to be sure, but that they may prepare for the larger and more stupendous tasks and undertakings of our God's Kingdom.

There is more in the desire of a young man's heart for an education than in the largeness of his own purse or of his father's bank account. There is more merit in a young woman's life who says, "I can, and I will" than in all her gold.

There are hundreds of young men and women in all of our churches who could be inspired for a higher education, a larger training, and better fitting for a more definite service if their lives could be gripped by some eloquent plea, or made to feel the responsibility of some great undertaking.

Our ministers, lay-workers, our college president, college faculty members, and all others, are already burdened too heavily with numerous tasks. What is every man's business is no man's business. Why can we not have a man to work solely in the interest of education? Would it not be a good investment for the Church and for Elon College? We need to have a definite educational program that does not stop with the adopting of some educational policy in our Conferences or Conventions. An educational program that spends itself in student campaigning during the summer months will never suffice. We need a man to give all his time in the interest of education—not solely pleading that our people patronize Elon College, or any other college but to awaken the interest of parents, sons, and daughters in the matter of education. The enrollment of our own college will take care of itself if we will put behind our educational program the proper emphasis, and it is our opinion that that emphasis will never come until we have placed a man in the field whose whole and sole business will be to preach the gospel of education.

And this one other thought: The headquarters of such an educational program should be located elsewhere than at our college. Nothing against the college, but such an arrangement would relieve any suggestion of "drumming for students". The commercial aspect, if you please.

And finally, it may be that such a plan as we have suggested would be economical—that is, the maintaining of such a man might be worth more for increasing the enrollment of our college, especially from our own denomination, than the spending of a large sum in general advertising.

THE MAKING OF GREAT MEN

RESIDENT Butler of Columbia University, calls attention to the fact that the present age is without a poet, without a philosopher, and without a notable religious leader.

A careful study of literature will reveal that in all ages one or more great poets graced the realm of literature; also that one or more philosophers interpreted the conditions of their age and, that some great religious leader was a real Moses of his day. Why is it that we have none of these now? Why is it that we have no Longfellow, no Burns, no Whittier, no Tennyson? Why is it that we have no Philo, no Kant, no Aristotle, no Mill? Why is it that we have no Luther, no Calvin, no Wesley, no Moody? There must be a reason.

How interesting and refreshing it is to read of the quiet and peaceful days through which these men came. It is true that some of them passed through stormy periods of history, but life was not so organized as it is now. The man of the poetic mind found time to live among the flowers, the trees, and the birds, and to live with the silent speech of nature. There was a time to study the action and activities of men; and to him who would be the interpreter of these things, there was a time for solitude, thought, and study. The great preachers whose names stand out most prominently on history's pages are the ones who listened to the "still small voice." They drank deep at meditation's fountains and "remained to pray."

Great souls are rarely ever born in the marts of commerce. Modern homes produce no more Lincolns and there are no more "country palaces" for Emersons to muse in. The altars of the home have been absorbed by a multitude of business and social engagements.

The average man is too busy and is trying to do too many things to feel the impulse of holy spirit, or catch the spirit of his age and become a prophet for his race. The average preacher is janitor, business manager, general conductor, and all, for his church. He pours out the vitality of his body and scatters his best thoughts pleading to a Sunday school class just before he stands before his congregation to break the bread of life. Would it not be better for him to be in his study alone with God? No congregation forgives for a poor sermon or allows any discount for such.

But back to our theme. No poet, no philosopher, or great preacher in this day? Papers are crowded as never before with verse of some kind, but literary standards will class the most of it as poor rhyme, and the best of it rarely ever ranks above current literature. Great men have time to think, to meditate, and to live with nature. Poets, philosophers, and great preachers are made in such an atmosphere, and in none other. Men are the product of the age in which they live.

ANOTHER QUESTION ANSWERED

The figures given in THE SUN for March 16 and 23 relative to our numerical strength have created widespread interest, and they should. Too many of us have worked along without being concerned where we were getting to.

One subscriber asks us to compare the figures given in the 1920 Annual with those of the 1921 Annual, and we are glad to give the following:

Church membership (S. C. C.) 1920 Annual	26,627
Church membership (S. C. C.) 1921 Annual	27,253
Gain for one year	626

Our correspondent predicts a loss due to our Men and Millions Forward Movement. The figures show for themselves. All Conferences show a gain in the 1921 Annual except the Georgia and Alabama, which shows a decrease of 166.

STILL ANOTHER

One subscriber asks us to exhibit the figures given in the 1919 Annual and compare them with the membership figures given in the 1920 Annual. Here is the finding:

Membership (S. C. C.) 1919 Annual	24,862
Membership (S. C. C.) 1920 Annual	26,627
Gain	1,765

Burlington has taken another forward step by installing, with much pomp and ceremony, a $14,000.00 white way, which adds greatly to the looks of the city.

During the past few days THE SUN office has had visits from Bros. J. D. Gunter, Sr., and Lacy Wicker, Greensboro, N. C., and W. E. Lindsey, Mt. Airy, N. C. We are always glad to have friends call when passing.

The work at the Burlington church took on a new aspect last Sunday by the presence of the new pastor, Rev. G. O. Lankford, and family. Bro. Lankford preached two very acceptable sermons to large and attentive audiences.

Bro. I. A. Luke, Holland, Va., one of THE SUN's loyal and devoted friends sends his renewal and adds: "May 16, 1888 Mrs. Luke and I were married and THE SUN has been constantly in our home since we had a home, September 10 of that year. Do not see how a real member of the Christian Church can do without THE SUN, and if he is a real member, he cannot." Bro. Luke always speaks so as to be understood and we quote him because it is a duplicate of what he tells the people at Conference and in Convention.

TARIFF BILL ON FARM PRODUCTS

In order to relieve the farmers and stock raisers of the country of the foreign competition which they are suffering from at the present time, President Harding has expressed his intention of influencing Congress to pass an emergency tariff bill. This proposed bill, so-called the "two-inch tariff bill" will be "confined solely to farm products," he tells a delegation of stock interests calling upon him a few days ago, presenting the situation facing them and the farmers.

It is significant that this is the first measure proposed by the new Administration solely on domestic problems, which will be explained in more detail in his first message to Congress at an early date.

President Harding plainly expressed that the bill will not be an executive embargo such as was exercised during war-times, but he told his visitors that he believed "Congress should pass a concise bill or resolution which would to all intents and purposes, place an embargo on farm products." While he did not indicate just what commodities should be covered by the measure, he made it clear that he desired it confined to those commodities adversely affected by foreign importations and in which an emergency exists.

THE SITUATION OF THE FARMERS

Agriculture in the United States is facing one of the most critical periods in its history, according to Secretary of Agriculture Henry C. Wallace in a recent address before more than 2,000 employees of that department in Washington. Unless a more equitable adjustment between the prices on farm products and other commodities is obtained this country may be forced to resort to the importation of foodstuffs on a large scale.

In the estimation of the Secretary, the present period is even more critical than that which followed the Civil War. There is a greater disparity today, he said, between the prices the farmers receive for their products and the prices they pay for other commodities than there was in 1865. He emphasized the necessity of cooperation by the urban as well as the rural communities in meeting the situation.

The rural communities must become better acquainted with the farmer's problems. As a means of bringing this about, agricultural clubs among the field workers of the department have been established in large cities. Reports to the Secretary's office show that by means of films, talks and other methods of education, these organizations are engaging the attention of the city dwellers in the precarious food situation of the country.

JOHN BURROUGHS, THE NATURALIST

John Burroughs, undoubtedly one of the greatest, if not the greatest of naturalists which America has produced, passed away a few days ago while he was about to celebrate his 84th birthday. Not only does he rank with Audubon, his fellow-naturalist, in respect to his insight and kinship with nature; his nature possesses that large simplicity of spirit which we are proud to think of as peculiarly American—that was the outstanding quality of Franklin, of Lincoln, Walt Whitman, of Emerson, of all our most typical American heroes.

While Franklin was at home in the court life of Europe, Burroughs made his acquaintance with the Chipmunk, the birds and the minutest as well as the most notable creatures of his natural surroundings. He belonged to the race that lived under the open sky. Not belonging to those men who are burdened with self-consciousness, but to those who are at home wherever life takes them, he lived a simple yet studious and eventful life.

He loved truth which is the inspiration of the scientist and he no less possessed the love of life which is the inspiration of the poet.

HERE AND THERE—BUT MOSTLY EVERYWHERE

The American Lutherans have just completed a year of relief work in Poland, where they have attempted to help the Poles to help themselves, by lending them money and by distributing large quantities of food and clothing.

An eighty-mile gale which struck New York on March 28, taking the roofs off houses and uprooting trees, caused accidents which resulted in two deaths. The wind was accompanied by a drop in the temperature from 78 to 37 within eight hours.

President Harding has called a special session of Congress to meet on April 11. The tariff question is reported to be the first legislation to be brought before the House at that time.

Statistics given out show that fewer divorcees were granted in the State of North Carolina in 1920 than in any other State in the Union, except South Carolina, which, of course, had no divorcees as they are not allowed in that State.

Another forward stride for education in North Carolina was made when Fayetteville citizens voted on March 29 for a quarter million dollar bond issue for the improvement of the public schools. The proposed program of improvement calls for five new school buildings.

Approximately one-half the population of this country is of voting age according to the 1920 census returns.

According to a recent census of the Indian population of the United States by Indian superintendents the total number of Indians in this country is 335,753.

CONTRIBUTIONS

ELON LETTER

Easter at Elon was beautiful in weather and likewise in spirit. A large number of visitors came as usual, alumni, parents, friends, and all were thoroughly welcomed.

The Psiphelians this year gave that exquisite literary gem, "The Princess," by Tennyson. So far as the audience could detect there was not a single flaw in its execution, not even a misplaced word, though it took nearly two hours to reproduce it.

The Freshman-Sophomore debate drew a large crowd on Good Friday evening and a very engrossing theme was discussed, the closed shop in American industry. It was a hotly contested debate, with three good speakers on each side and with the audience unable to decide until the verdict of the judges was rendered. The Sophomores who championed the principle of the closed shop, won by a two to one decision of the judges.

Speaking further of the debate, it is gratifying that College students should elect to discuss such an outstanding issue of the times. The relations of labor and capital are fundamental in our present day life. Every one of us is vitally and economically interested in the decision. The outcome is problematic at this time. Capital, speaking in the broad sense, is determined to oppose the closed shop to the bitter end, and labor is preparing to force its acceptance. The innocent bystander, that is, the consuming public, is bound to be injured in the conflict.

What is the privilege of the Church in such a situation? Is it to be hands off? Is it to take the side of capital or of labor? Labor unionists accuse the Church of sympathy with the capitalists. Yet these same unionists accept the Christian program, they say, as applicable to their claims. What is the Church to do?

She is privileged to say to both parties to the dispute that they are brothers; that the purpose in industry is neither profits to capital nor wages to labor, but the maintenance of life in terms of brotherhood; that both sides alike must accept the program of Jesus, involving not only the Golden Rule, but also His final Commandment to love one another as He loved His disciples. She is also privileged to bid them gather around the council table and through duly accredited representatives discuss and dispose of their differences. But suppose they will not do this. Then her duty is plain to condemn the party so refusing.

The Church is the only power that can save us from industrial revolution. Unless the Church accepts her opportunity, bitterness and heartache are in the foreground.

MY PLEDGES PAID

I want to say through THE CHRISTIAN SUN that I subscribed through Dr. Atkinson for missionary purposes and have paid the whole of my subscription. I subscribed also to the Men and Millions Movement to be paid every week for five years and I paid all that last fall. I had it in my mind and promised myself and the Lord that if I could, I would raise the money to pay both subscriptions while I was living, and I succeeded in doing so. I felt that these subscriptions should be settled and I have a receipt for the same.

I am glad to know that the subscriptions are being so well paid; but I want to say to those who can raise the money, to please settle their subscriptions to these causes even before they come due. It would be much better for you to be relieved, and the money that is so much needed would then be in use for the Church.

SUFFOLK LETTER

Who Died on the Cross?

CERTAINLY God did not die. The death of man could not atone for the sin of the world. If a human sacrifice had been sufficient to save the world, the death of Christ would have been unnecessary. But Christ must needs have suffered and this death becomes the magnet of all ages.

It was the God-Man who died. That unique person who was the Son of God and the son of Mary. The union of God and man. God manifested in the flesh, was a distinct personality, and the separation of the divine and spiritual from the material and temporal was a death—the death on the Cross. If we believe in the immortality of the soul, the real man does not die, but is only separated from the body: but that separation we call death. We know that those who live and believe in Christ shall never die: yet they are separated from the body, and we call that death. This prepares us to see that prolonged discussion of whether the Divine or the human died on the Cross is only a one-sided examination of this question. Neither died apart from the other; but the new man, Christ, died in the sense that the union of divinity and humanity was terminated by the sufferings of Calvary. In death it is not the body that suffers, but the spirit: the sting of death is sin; and that was what Jesus Christ felt so keenly on the Cross. He felt the pressure of the sin of man (all ages) pressing upon Him in that hour when the sun refused to shine, when followers fled, when enemies mocked, and His Father seemed to forsake Him. Darkness was over the earth and thicker darkness over His soul. The travail of His soul was the death agony, and He passed out of His body with the breaking of His heart. Jesus Christ died on the Cross for the sin of the world, and His blood cleanseth from all sin. The Roman soldiers said, "This is the Son of God." The dead come forth from the tomb, for nature reeled and cracked in the throes of such suffering. He gave up the Ghost and said, "Relieve my spirit, it is finished." His life closed by crucifixion, and the cross of shame was transfigured into a cross of glory henceforth. God lives, and man may live because Jesus Christ died: He died that we might not perish, but have everlasting life.

W. W. STALEY.

MAKING THE SACRIFICE

In reading the life of Abraham Lincoln recently this thought was found: No person has ever yet become to be great and useful in the world who did not have to sacrifice or deny self in some way. Self-denial and sacrifice are essentials to power and to service.

Apply this principle to a whole people and you have our reason and justification for self-denial month in the Southern Christian Convention. April has been designated such a month primarily because this is the last month in our fiscal year of Men and Millions, and secondarily because sacrifice is actually demanded of us at some time if we are to be a powerful and serving people. Unless we at some time are willing to make real sacrifice deny ourselves of something we really need, we certainly cannot pay the pledges, and thus meet our moral obligations to our Men and Millions Movement.

And the happiest ones of our number are going to be those who, when the month is ended, and the year closes, were willing to deny self and meet, at personal inconvenience and sacrifice our obligations to this our greatest Church task and movement.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

WOULD you like to read a real tribute of love? Then let me quote the following from the pen of Rev. J. T. Whitley, D. D., written for the columns of The Daily Virginia-Pilot of Norfolk, Va., concerning the beloved Rev. William B. Wellons, D. D., of blessed memory throughout our Church in the South. It seems to come from the heart. As many of THE SUN's readers will well remember that man, they will bear testimony to the fact that Dr. Whitley does not over state the worth of this beloved minister of the gospel. He writes this tribute of love under the heading, "The Gray Letter Days," and then proceeds to say:

Most of us are familiar with the expression "Red Letter Days," which indicates certain days in our lives, or in the lives of our friends, that have brought experiences of unusual pleasure. One's birthday is often a "red letter day," and so is the natal day of a member of the family or an intimate friend. To the child Christmas is apt to take high rank as a "red letter day."

But there are other days that bring experiences of unusual sorrow and pain, and these I have ventured to call "gray letter days," because they speak to us of leaden skies, of shadowed homes, of aching hearts. These lines are written on the sixteenth of February, which is one of my "gray letter days," since it is the anniversary of events that brought sorrow to the heart, and made large demands upon that sympathy which the sorrow of others always inspires. Let me be pardoned if I say just what is in my heart today.

Just forty-four years ago tonight—that is, on the sixteenth of February, 1877—there died in a neighboring town a friend whose memory I have cherished through all the subsequent years. He was the servant of God under whose ministry I consecrated my heart to Christ in the seventeenth year of my age. He became my pastor when I united with the church. He did not content himself with placing the name of the youth upon the church register, but gave him pastoral and friendly oversight, and in process of time laid a little responsibility upon him. When he found that the mind of his young parishoner was turning toward the sacred ministry, he gave kindly encouragement, imparted wholesome advice, placed the books of his library at his disposal, and led him to take part in the prayers and exhortations of social and revival worship. Later on he rendered material aid to the young student in his ambition to achieve a college education, and enlisted some of his friends in a plan to afford financial help. As the years went by, and his former protegee became his colleague in the ministry, his affectionate interest continued to grow, until that melancholy night when he told me farewell as I stood by his couch and saw him draw the last faint breath. Is it a thing to cause surprise, that the day of the departure of my cherished and honored friend, Rev. Dr. William B. Wellons, of Suffolk, should be one of my "gray letter days?"

The man who was Dr. Whitley's friend in the long ago, was also my friend in the days of my earliest ministry. If I had time and THE CHRISTIAN SUN had the space to spare, I could write of my recollections of the life and labors of this good man, a man who was abundant in labors for the uplift of humanity, and yet there are some among his acquaintances who found time to try to disturb his life and hinder his usefulness. Today many of these are almost forgotten, but the memory of the sainted William Brock Wellons is still fresh as a dew covered rose on a June morning, and his life is yet as fragrant in the circle of many who loved him as it was on that day in February when he bade farewell to the scenes of earth. If I were asked to name the man who had most influenced my life, I could and would easily name William B. Wellons as the man. When I knew almost nothing of the world, its literature, its work and its ways of doing things; when I knew less of the public men of that day, of their thought and work; when I knew practically nothing of the Church and its theology, or of its great mission to the world, it was William B. Wellons who took me by the hand and led the way to opportunities, which under the blessings of God, opened to me a field of usefulness, such as I never could have reached, and had he not undertaken for me as herein described. Blessings be upon his memory and upon his life work as a minister of the gospel. Not only did he help Dr. Whitley and this writer, but the number of young men he helped by encouraging them to undertake to accomplish something in this life, will not be known till we meet beyond the River. How many eups of cold water he gave to his fellow pilgrims, and especially to their children will not be known from human records, for he did so many good deeds without proclaiming it to the public. Oh, what countless sheaves he laid down at the Master's feet when the labors of earth had been finished, we shall not know here, but he has reaped his reward in the name of Jesus. Doubtless with him to be absent from the body is to be present with the Lord.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM NARUGO, JAPAN

By Rev. C. P. Garman.

Note: Narugo (pronounced Narungo) Japan, is one of the points where we are hoping to build a chapel this year, and we give to our readers this splendid account written by Brother Garman, in order that you may have a clear idea of the great opportunity before us in this field. The first official visit of the Foreign Mission Secretary to a preaching place in Japan was made at Narugo, and we were given a rousing welcome by the energetic young pastor, the Sunday school children and a number of the citizens of the town.—W. P. M.

RECENT developments at Narugo make a situation interesting to those who have at heart the progress of the Christian Church in Japan. A repetition of the situation as reported some two years ago may be worth while.

Narugo is a mountain town in the section of northern Japan for the evangelization of which the Christian Church has accepted the responsibility. It is a hot mineral spring resort, famous locally for years, and widely visited since the main railroad lines of north Japan, one east and one west of the central mountain range, were connected by the line laid through this section. This line which was finished some four or five years ago has been the means of largely increasing the population and wealth of the town. Also, tens of thousands of visitors annually seek health and recreation at the baths, some five or six thousand at a time during the popular season.

When Rev. Mr. Kitano and the missionary began visiting Narugo a number of years ago, they found an old man acting as self-appointed Christian evangelist, supporting himself by conducting a sort of library from which books were rented by the day or week. Between the visits of the pastor and missionary, the old man continued to hold meetings in the one little room at his disposal behind the book room which was also quite small. At these visits, public meetings were held at such rooms in the boarding houses as might be rented, but in the busy season often no room could be had. Seldom were consecutive meetings held in the same place. Temporarily our housing problem was solved by the conversion of the proprietor of a boarding house who always arranged to open a room for us.

Mr. K. Sumita, a theological student (supported by a men's class at Suffolk, Va., under the leadership of Mr. W. W. Ballard) spent his summer vacation here. We managed to find a little upstairs room which would serve as his home and as a place to gather the little band of Christians for prayer, but not suitable for public meetings of adults or children. Most of the meetings were held in the street where the boarding houses formed a natural pavilion at an end and both sides. It was an interesting sight when the old men and the student surrounded by the little band of Christians lighted by their paper lanterns held services here with song, prayer and sermon. The open fronts of the boarding houses and the street were thronged with listeners. Before the summer was over, the enmity of some young Buddhist priests was aroused. They also aspired to become the religious teachers and leaders of the town and its guests. An attempt was made to break up the meeting. First the Christians were charged with disloyalty because they worshipped a God above the Emperor. Mr. Sumita countered by asking them to whom the beautiful prayers of the late Emperor had been offered. Then the speaker was rough-handed, but the opposers were charged by the police to refrain from disturbances.

In order to settle the increasingly difficult housing problem, the little handful of Christians undertook to raise funds for a building. The old evangelist sold his remaining household articles and gave the receipts, ¥15.00. The student pledged ¥25.00 and solicited a gift from another student friend. The one farmer in the band gave ¥50.00 and his wife, who is a hairdresser, gave an equal amount. A clog maker, too poor to start in business for himself without help, pledged ¥25.00 and his wife, who peddles wares to the boarding house guests, equalled his pledge. Thus it continued until it reached ¥160.00, plus some trees which they solicited from a former resident who still owned property in the town. The manager of the little bank, which was started after the railroad was promoted, is also a Christian and he undertook to provide a little piece of ground which was to become his at the close of a deal which he was handling for others. At this juncture they sent a delegation to consult the Mission. We were asked to provide ¥340.00 as they thought that with what they had, some kind of building could be erected. But the land did not go through. At the same time building prices began to soar. Meantime their student pastor was finishing his schooling in Tokyo. The mission Board had kindly provided what we requested, ¥500.00 instead of the ¥340.00, but everything was held up.

After graduation last June, Mr. Sumita returned as their resident worker. He immediately set himself to work to acquire a suitable meeting place. Not a single house or part of a house offers itself. At last a request was made of the railway department of the government for the lease of a small plot of land not being used by them. Instead came the announcement that the plot would be offered for sale under sealed bids on Feb 1. With borrowed funds we have acquired the building site at a cost of ¥1300.00. ¥300 additional will be needed to repair a stone embankment on one side of it.

The members' hopes of a building suitable for a home for their minister and a chapel have revived. They are collecting their former pledges and soliciting more. The daughter-in-law of the old evangelist, formerly opposed to Christianity is soon to be baptized. Her husband, who has taken over the books and conducts a book store has made a substantial pledge. With the material donated, they estimate that they have ¥500 in cash and pledges and hope to erect a room this summer, to which they hope additions will be made later. No doubt, their faith will be rewarded for God helps those who not simply help themselves, but who undertake large things for Him.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

DEEPENING OF THE SPIRITUAL LIFE

Many of us think that placing emphasis on money neglects the spiritual life. The opposite is, or ought to be, true. Take the actual experience of a North Carolina pastor. Rev. A. L. Stanford last year put on a thorough-going Stewardship and Tithing Campaign in Main Street church, Gastonia, N. C., signing up a good proportion of the membership. As a result of this work the church decided to discontinue all collections in the church service and among the members, placing in the vestibule boxes in which the people placed their tithe offerings. The results have been astonishing.

"First of all, there is a deep spiritual life in the church, almost a continuous revival. The voluntary offering of the people placed in these tithing boxes pay all current expenses of the church, and in addition to this they are making a $100,000 addition to the church building and are building four churches for the cotton mill communities in the town and erecting a $10,000 parsonage for the pastor and paying their part for the presiding elder. Their Centenary subscriptions are also paid in this way, and all these claims are met month by month with money remaining in the treasury."

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS CONTINUE THE GOOD WORK

The list of Sunday schools contributing one offering a month to missions continues to grow. Shallow Ford school voted unanimously on a recent Sunday to give their third Sunday's offering each month to missions; the first Sunday's offering going to the Orphanage. Leaksville Sunday school, Luray, Va., sends in $2.00, under date of March 23 with the statement: "We have decided to give every second Sunday's offering to missions." Also Zion Sunday school (Lee County, North Carolina) sends its first offering, $1.60, having also decided to give one offering each month to missions.

The offering will give an opening for a missionary talk of a few minutes by the Superintendent or someone. And this information will create interest and consecration. We believe our Convention has struck upon the wisest possible plan for all our schools in asking that each give one Sunday's offering to the Orphanage and one Sunday's offering to missions—"as much for others as for self."

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

The one message of the hour is Christian Stewardship, and the most encouraging feature of modern church life is the new emphasis that is being placed upon the study and practice of Christian Stewardship. We are not our own. Our life, our time, our talents, our houses, our money, all belong to God. This means that we poor mortals are only tenants or stewards of His, entrusted for the time being with a certain sort of management of His affairs. Are we working with Him as stewards, or are we ignoring Him and seeking to have our own will and way with that which has been entrusted to us for a time? Through our churches and all our places of public worship the hour has struck when we must face the solemn fact that God is owner of all things, and what we may be, as Paul has declared, "co-workers together with God." I wish heartily that the following brief message so well and briefly outlined by Roby F. Day, D. D., might be carried home to each of our hearts.

The Stewardship of Life. Our lives belong to God. "For we are bought with a price, therefore glorify God in your body and in your spirit, which are God's." The price was "the precious blood of Christ."—I Pet. 1:19.

The life that has been purchased by the Son of God was purchased for the Son of God, and should be "kept for the Master's use," lived in the Master's service, and for the Master's glory.

The Stewardship of Time. To the Christian all time should be looked upon as a trust; and they should never be justly charged with "wasting" or "killing time." But one-seventh of time has been divinely set apart as "holy" in that it is to be devoted to sacred purposes, such as rest from secular labor; worship, spiritual culture and spiritual service. Christian lives cannot be properly developed without recognition of the stewardship of the Christian Sabbath.

The Stewardship of Money. Money, and all material things that represent value and possessions, are entrusted to us, not given. For our use of them we are to give an account. We should so use and enjoy them as to bring honor and glory to the great Giver.

"The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof."—Psalm 24:1.

"The silver is mine and the gold is mine."—Hag. 2:8.

"Every beast of the forest is mine and the cattle upon a thousand hills."—Psalm 50:10.

Now if God is owner of all, He has a right to appoint His own rental. He has done this. He requires one-tenth of our income—the tithe. "All the tithe . . . is the Lord's."—Lev. 27:30.

The fact that God required the tithe of his ancient people no one doubts. There are some who seem to think that the law of tithe is not binding upon Christians. That the principle, without the direct command, was carried over into the New Testament is evident.

Jesus in talking to the Pharisees said: "Ye tithe mint and rue and cummin . . . This ye ought to have done"; thus placing the stamp of His approval and authority upon the law of the tithe. (See Matt. 23:23.)

The Christian, however, should live above law; but that does not mean that he should live contrary to the law. For the Christian the rule is not "the tithe"; but "as God has prospered you"; which for money Christians means "the tithe—plus."

Recognizing and practicing the principle of stewardship in all our possessions—our lives, our time, our money—will solve many difficult problems. It will honor God, magnify the Word, bring prosperity to the Church, and great joy to the individual Christian. For the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it; and human experience has confirmed it.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

NOTES FROM THE EASTERN VIRGINIA WOMAN'S WORK

In a former issue of THE SUN a list of places and dates of district meetings for the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference were given. We give a complete list of them again that our people may be reminded of these dates:

Southampton Co., Johnson's Grove, April 21—Mrs. J. A. Williams, Supt.

Nansemond Co., Berea, April 22—Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson, Supt.

Gates Co., Eures, April 24—Mrs. J. H. Seawell, Supt.

Wakefield District, Wakefield, April 26—Mrs. L. B. Faison, Supt.

Waverly District, Waverly, April 27—Mrs. Livesay, Supt.

Isle of Wight Co., Windsor, April 28—Mrs. J. M. Raby, Supt.

Norfolk District, Rosemont, April 29—Mrs. J. E. Cartwright, Supt.

We trust that many of our women will attend these Conferences. By doing so, they will be contributing to the success of the meeting and also will be helped themselves. If you have problems, carry them and let others out of their experience, help you to solve them. We believe that every meeting will be a source of help and inspiration, if each will help to make it so.

Just one other thing—it would be a great help to those entertaining if some one from each society or church would find out how many are likely to attend from that society or church and inform the society entertaining. Every one who can go will be heartily welcome. It is due them that we give them some idea about how many to prepare for. I am sure that we can do this.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

THE VALUE OF AN EDUCATION

By Edward N. Clopper, Ph. D., Assistant Secretary, National Child Labor Committee.

Some time ago, the United States Bureau of Education at Washington, printed a statement which showed the amount of money that had been earned by different groups of young people up to the time they were twenty-five years of age. Those who had remained in school until they were eighteen had earned nearly 50% more than those who had left school at fourteen and had been working four years longer.

Such a statement of facts will convince intelligent parents that they should keep their children in school and not yield to the temptation of permitting them to go to work because the family's expenses are high and children are paid better wages than formerly.

Men and women are always grateful for the sacrifices which their parents made in order to give them education. They know that in the struggle to make a living, the educated man or woman has a great advantage over the ignorant and can reach higher places and receive better pay. Today the competition among those who work, whether they work with hand or brain, or both, was never so keen, and the ones who are best equipped are the winners. An education is one of the chief items in the necessary equipment.

Your state law tells you that you must send your child to school until he is of a certain age and then he may leave and go to work—if you let him. And he may want to do so and beg you to let him take that job in the factory where his friend Joe works. But you are older and know better than he does what is for his best interest. You know that if you let him leave school as soon as the law allows, you are giving him no better chance in this world than all children get—for the law requires them all to go to school that long—and if you yield to his urging now you will have to bear his disappointment later when he finds out that it was a great mistake.

The education which the public school now gives is better adapted to the needs of children than the courses which were taught a generation ago. Today the child learns how to make himself useful and how to do this in an intelligent way.

Every child should begin his education in the kindergarten, for in it the seeds of good citizenship are sown. It is in the kindergarten that honesty, loyalty and consideration for the rights of others are instilled during the child's most impressionable years. Patriotic songs and stories of our great heroes implant deep love of country; marching and games develop self-control, team work and adaptability; hand work and modeling promote efficiency and appreciation for labor. Surely the foundations of the skilled artisan and the loyal citizen of the future can be laid in no better place than in a well-equipped kindergarten.

After starting in the right way, the longer the child stays in school, the more useful he will become and the better able to take upon himself the responsibilities of life. The school of today aims to make intelligent, efficient citizens, but it will not succeed if the child is taken out and put to work at the earliest possible moment. The people pay for the kindergarten, elementary, grammar and high schools so that their children may have the benefit of them. You are one of the people and you help to support these schools. They are your schools, built and kept up for the sake of your children as well as for all other children. Use them, then. Keep your child in school. Let him begin in the kindergarten and graduate from the high school.

Eighteen thousand persons are estimated to have attended the Moravian resurrection service held at the Moravian graveyard in Winston-Salem, N. C., on Easter morning. Practically every church in the State had representatives among the attendants.

Our Young People

"THE YOUTH OF OUR CHURCH AND MISSIONS"

May I repeat what has been so often said, both in THE SUN and in personal talks, that the one hope of our Church, to become a missionary Church is to reach the young people. This thought grows on me day by day as I see the great needs of the field, and the great number of our young people who may become interested.

I find the following from T. M. Gladden, which so thoroughly expresses my own feelings in the matter that I wish to pass it on to all readers of THE SUN.

"Archimedes said when he was in the midst of his scientific research: 'Give me a place to stand on, and with a lever I will move the world.' Christianity to do its work for the human race must take its stand on foreign missions. If we interest ourselves and our young people in saving the people on the other side of the world, we will find ourselves taking hold of things near home with both hands earnestly.

If we get our Church to give for foreign missions and pray for foreign missions it will be more willing to help every educational and extension enterprise. The actual support of some native worker attempted by a society or school will create and sustain a missionary spirit in every church.

While in college a score of years ago I united with a missionary society formed by a devoted group of students. A lay reader in Japan was supported by this society. Mission studies were pursued. This society furnished six missionaries to our foreign fields in ten years.

Free will offerings have decreased as the budget has been enlarged in recent years. We have given splendidly as a church and still the young people have not given nor been trained to give as they should. The way to secure a new Pentecost is to enlarge our gifts.

The only time Christ ever named a particular object of prayer was when he uttered the words, 'The harvest truly is plentiful, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He will send forth laborers into His harvest.' May there be among our young people a number of life-work recruits constantly being supplied for the ministry, for deaconess work and for the mission fields."

GIVE MORE THOUGHT TO CHILDREN

Children's Week, April 24-May 1

Already responses are beginning to come in from the letters sent out, together with the leaflet on "Arrangements" for Children's Week.

Your school has received its advance leaflet through the Superintendent. We wish that it might have gone also to the Elementary Superintendents, or teachers of children under twelve years of age, but unfortunately this office has no list of such workers. If you are a teacher of children under twelve, or if you know the names of such teachers in your school, will you not see that this office receives the information?

Remember that "Children's Week" is being observed by all the leading denominations; that the International Sunday School Association is helping everywhere it can; that the Child's Welfare Bureau is aiding, as, in fact, loaned us their slogan "Give more thought to children" for use in urging the observance of this Children's Week; some of the popular magazines are printing articles. Your school, and your community cannot afford to be behindhand.

Will your school and your community and your home, take this time to "Give more thought to Children", and lay better plans for rearing them to Christian manhood and womanhood?

PROGRAMS READY

The programs for the regular monthly meetings of our Woman's Missionary Societies, our Young People's Societies, and Willing Workers Societies, are now ready and will be sent to the President or Secretary of any Society requesting them.

As explained by Mrs. Rowland, these programs are for use in newly organized Societies, and Societies not yet ready to take up a mission study book, and they contain all the material necessary for twelve meetings—enough for a Society for twelve months. The same is true of Young People's and Willing Workers Societies. These are the programs arranged by the committees from the Eastern Virginia and North Carolina Woman's Boards. Send requests for the programs to the Mission Office, Burlington, N. C.

Respectfully,

OUR ORPHANAGE

EASTER AT THE ORPHANAGE

The children had a real nice Easter and all enjoyed is splendidly. On Saturday Mr. B. W. Johnston of Burlington came up and took dinner with us and brought along with him six gallons of ice cream and gave the children a treat.

Saturday evening the Willing Workers' Class of the Graham Christian church, Mrs. Walter Harden teacher, came and gave all the little fellows an Easter egg hunt. The Shallow Ford Christian church gave us twelve dozen eggs for Easter morning and brought them to us. On Easter Monday some of the young ladies at the College gave all the children an Easter egg hunt on the College campus.

The Singing Class was invited to give an Easter program at the Burlington Christian church on Sunday and the congregation was large and appreciative and the offering was splendid.

Mrs. A. O. Harmon of the Raleigh Christian church with a number of her Sunday school scholars paid us a visit Monday and selected the room in the new building they want to furnish and maintain and also brought along with them quite a good deal of things to furnish it. Mrs. Harmon tells us that the little children have taken a great deal of interest in furnishing this room and it will be up-to-date when they get through.

The Willing Workers' Class of the Graham Christian church brought us a quilt that the little girls had pieced and quilted. Mrs. Harden, their teacher, tells us that her little folks delight in doing this for the Orphanage and find it a joy and a pleasure.

The Easter Offerings came in very nicely this week and we hope every church will help us in this offering.

If it was not convenient to make this offering on Easter Sunday make it one Sunday in April and mail it to us. We hope to raise enough from this offering to finish the Children's Home and pay for it and we will be happy indeed. I wish all our folks could visit us and see the fine building. I feel sure that if they made no contribution toward building this pretty home for the little tots, they would not be able to resist the temptation to make at least a small investment.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find five cents for this month. I hope you and the little orphans are getting along just fine. You have been putting my name Watkins, but it is Matkins. I would like to visit you and the little orphans.—Mary Matkins.

I am sorry I made the mistake in your name. "Uncle Charley" is getting old and can't see good and he took the M for a W. Hope you had a real pleasant Easter—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: I have not written you this month si I will write now. Mama has gone to our school league tonight and little brother is in bed and can't bother me. He was one year old the second of this month, and my oldest brother was ten the sixth of this month. We are having nice weather now and we enjoy it so much as we play basket ball at school. Enclosed find ten cents.—Dorothy Moore.

Yes, we have had real nice weather and Easter Sunday was a lovely day. I hope you had many eggs to eat.—Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: We are late writing to you this month but thought we would wait and send our Easter offering. We lost one of our grandmothers the sixth of March. The other one stays with us. Enclosed find $2.00—our Easter offering. Wishing you and the cousins a bright and happy Easter.—Ossie, Dennis, Ida Lee and Carle Harris.

I know it almost broke your heart to lose grandma. I had a grandma when I was a little boy and she was a dear old lady too.—Uncle Charley."

Announcement has been made by President Harding that he will have an extensive investigation made of the manner in which the government is caring for disabled war veterans, and that he is shortly to appoint a special committee to conduct this investigation.

"Tell Me a Story"

TEN LITTLE BAGS

Emily looked with admiration at the beautiful gown growing under Mrs. Allen's deft fingers.

"I wonder," she began impetuously, then hesitated. "Well?" Mrs. Allen glanced at her with an expression of encouragement.

"When you were fourteen or so, were you ever careless and did you sometimes begin things without finishing what you had already started?" There was a tell-tale flush on the girl's cheek.

"Bless you, yes," replied Mrs. Allen as she laid down her work. The smile on her round face predicted a story of her girlhood. "Didn't I tell you about the ten little bags?" Emily shook her head and settled herself in anticipation.

"When I was your age I suppose I was about as useless as a girl could be."

"You?" interrupted her listener. "Why, you know how to do everything. I've heard people say you are the cleverest woman and the greatest worker in the village. You always know the best way to put up fruit or screens, to make over a dress and—"

"But that wasn't so when I was fourteen. I couldn't do anything; and it was mostly because I did not finish what I began. I don't remember what made me realize this. Maybe it was the handiness of my girl friends, or it may have been from something I read. Anyhow, one day I made up my mind to turn over a new leaf. I started with my room. Every box, drawer, and basket was overflowing with unfinished things. In one was a ruffled apron I had attempted to make on the sewing machine and grown tired of before I had more than started. In a box under the bed was a velvet cushion which I had begun to paint in the Kensington work so popular then. I can see that old stork yet and the cat-tails near him. There were five or six pieces of unfinished crocheted lace considerably the worse from having been tossed about for many months. There were stamped pillow shams for chain-stitching in the blue cotton and a 'splasher' for the washstand with a design of birds taking their morning bath. I had started to outline this in red cotton, intending it for mother's birthday six months previous. A red felt table cover lacked one end of crazy silk patchwork.

"I don't remember all the things I found, but my survey was enough to fill me with despair and mortification. I hadn't realized, you see, how careless and untidy I was, or how little I really accomplished.

"When I sorted out from the overflowing drawers and boxes all the embroidery silks for one piece of work, the paints and brushes for another, the silk scraps for another, ribbons and collars, mended garments, ends of lace, quilt pieces, and all the various articles partly finished, the floor was nearly covered. I was tempted to burn them all and begin anew; but some excellent ancestral traits in my character prevented.

"I made out a list of the uncompleted objects, as nearly as I could remember, in the order in which they occurred. You needn't smile, for I didn't say the disorder in which they occurred. I remember the first record was, 'Two yards pineapple lace for sister's apron.' The apron was worn out by that time, and the crochet pattern was no longer new. But I had one yard done and I decided to finish the other. There were thirty-two things in that list, the stork cushion cover being the last.

"After making 32 bundles, each marked with the name of the article, I found I still had a quantity of various things which seemed to have no special place. I was bound to do things thoroughly, since I had begun, so I thought out a plan for their orderly disposal. I made ten little bags to accommodate them. One was marked 'Laces', another 'Silks', another 'Cotton Cloths', and so on through the list. I use similar ones yet. They take little room in the closet and I can find anything I need without loss of time. The bags were of unbleached cotton lettered with a carpenter's pencil.

"I was putting in the draw-string to the last one when several friends rushed up the stairs and were in the room before I could hustle the things out of sight. You should have heard them laugh!

"To their cries of wonder at my unexpected neatness and industry I explained my plan. They only laughed the louder. I was bound then to show them what I could do, and rashly told them I was not going to a single place until everything I had begun was finished. I suppose I forgot how long my list was; but having said it, I stuck to it. It was hard at first, but there was a pleasure in crossing off the articles from the list as I completed them. The ten bags were an incentive, too. I found out how convenient it is to know where things are, and they looked so orderly when I opened my closet door that I often went there to admire them.

"For three long weeks my work was the steadiest and hardest I had ever done. I was nearing the end of my list when one of the girls invited me to a party. I believe yet that she gave it for the purpose of testing my resolution. I had two days in which to finish a fancy net tidy and the stork cushion. I did it, but I can't say the stork was a work of art. I shall never forget how surprised the girl looked when I went to the party.

"The story of the ten little bags was told to every one present. It was fortunate that I could bear teasing, for I heard enough about them afterward, I tell you. It did not trouble me, though, and I believe it served a good purpose in keeping me reminded of the benefits I received in those three weeks.

"The completion of that list of articles led me to write a resolution to finish one thing before beginning another. I have followed that to this day, and I think that is why I accomplish so much. I date my improvement and real happiness from the time I made the ten little bags."

Emily rose with an air of determination.

"I think we have some unbleached muslin in the house," she observed, "and I wonder if water colors won't do as well as the blue pencil."—Florence Martin Eastland, in The Epworth Herald.

CHURCH NEWS

JUST FROM GEORGIA

Easter was observed at the Rose Hill Christian church with appropriate exercises. The smaller children of the Sunday school rendered an impressive program. The children under the direction of a special committee, were well trained and each carried out his or her part well. The training was worth a great deal to the children. It is my opinion that more attention should be given our boys and girls. They should have constant and careful training along religious lines. The boys and girls of today will fix the manhood and womanhood of tomorrow. Civilization rises or falls as a result of early training.

Beginning with the first Sunday in April the writer will preach a series of sermons on "The Church with Bible-Centered Principles." Each of the fine principles of the Christian Church will be discussed in a sermon, giving the logical, basic and Biblical reasons for adhering to these principles. Too often our people are ignorant of what our Church stands for. Ask the heathen to give the story of his idol and he will charm and alarm you with the minutest details. Ask the members of the Christian Church to give the story of the principles of their Church and of Christ the only Head of the Church and nine out of ten will confess their inability to do so. And they are not wholly responsible either. It must be largely charged to the leaders. Too many of our ministers spend more time on "humanitarian uplift" than they spend on Bible and Church principles. This should not continue. It must not continue if we are to grow in keeping with our principles. People never rise higher than their leaders. Why has our Church not grown like other denominations? Some one is ready to say it is because we have not been a missionary people. That may be one reason. But it strikes me that we have been derelict in making known our principles. People do not subscribe to a thing that they do not understand. It seems to me that the issue has come to this: we must publish our principles or perish as a denomination. If we love our principles let us make them known! If we are ashamed of them let us forsake them!

CONVENTION OF SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS, RALEIGH, APRIL 12-13-14

Under the auspices of the North Carolina Sunday School Association a convention for all Sunday school workers of all denominations of North Carolina is being arranged for Raleigh, April 12-13-14. Information has been secured and that the church people of Raleigh are making preparations to entertain a large crowd. Besides a number of prominent Sunday school and Church workers of the State who are on the program, the following out-of-state speakers have been secured: Dr. Wm. A. Brown of Chicago, Ill., of the staff of the International Sunday School Association; Dr. Joseph Broughton, Atlanta, Superintendent of the Tabernacle Baptist Sunday school; Dr. Gilbert Glass, Superintendent Department of Sunday Schools, Presbyterian Committee of Publication: Prof. H. H. Harris, Professor of Religious Pedagogy, Candler School of Theology, Emory University; Mrs. Maud Junkin Baldwin, Chicago, Children's Division Superintendent of the International Sunday School Association.

The Sunday schools of the State are being requested by the program committee to send three delegates besides pastor and superintendents who are delegates by virtue of their office. No credentials are necessary. The Convention will be open to all. No registration fee is charged. Trains will be met by the Committee, and delegates so desiring, will be furnished lodging in the private homes of Raleigh, at the rate of $1.00 per night.

Mr. Gilbert T. Stephenson of Winston-Salem, is president of this organization, Mr. Joseph Brown, Vice-President; Mr. E. B. Crow, Treasurer, both of Raleigh. The office of the Association is 210 Law Building, Raleigh, with Mr. D. W. Sims as State Superintendent.

Complete program and full particulars about the Convention will be mailed free to anyone making such request to the office of the Association as given above.

FORWARD MOVEMENTS CONFERENCE WITH ONE ANOTHER

Representatives of practically all the forward movements of the various denominations met in conference on Saturday, March 19, in New York, at the invitation of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, to consider their common problems and to learn from one another's experience.

- The program of the conference centered around the following five topics:
1. A report from each movement as to its origin and results and lessons learned from its experience.
2. A discussion of the methods by which the larger giving of the people, stimulated by these movements, may be made permanent.
3. Consideration of the various problems which have arisen and which are now before the movements for solution.
4. The question of the future of these movements and their relationship to the other agencies of their denominations.

5. How these movements can be most helpful to one another through future conference or in other appropriate ways.

A committee on findings was appointed to present an analysis of the present situation in the forward movements disclosed by the discussions of the day and to consider the whole question as to the desirability of future relationships to one another. This committee on findings is to report at another conference to be held sometime within the next few months.

The following organizations were represented at the conference at the office of the Federal Council:

The Committee on Conservation and Advance of the Council of the Boards of Benevolence of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The Centenary Movement of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

The Congregational World Movement.

The New World Movement of the Northern Baptist Convention.

The New Era Movement of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.

The Nation-Wide Campaign of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

The New World Movement of the United Presbyterian Church.

The Forward Movement of the Reformed Church in the United States.

The Progressive Campaign of the Reformed Church of America.

The Forward Movement of the Friends.

The United Enlistment Movement of the Church of the United Brethren.

The Larger Life Movement of the Moravian Church.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE

Last Saturday morning a Dendron groceryman sent his car well filled with good things to eat to our door. Wife protested that there must be a mistake as we had ordered no groceries. The situation was soon clear. We were apprised of the fact that the good people of the Dendron Christian church had given us an old fashioned pounding and this groceryman was simply sending it up.

Besides many good things to eat we found a nice purse of money. We are profoundly grateful.

PEOPLE'S CHURCH

The two weeks pre-Easter evangelistic campaign conducted at the People's Christian church of Dover, Delaware, came to a glorious close on Easter Sunday when seventy-four persons connected themselves with the church. Twenty children, ranging from 10 to 18 years of age, from the Sunday school; 38 men and women on confession of faith, and 16 by letter were the rich harvest of souls. Whole families were received into the communion. Many prominent young men and women were in the class.

The evangelistic services will be continued on Wednesday and Sunday evenings for the next two months, at the request of the membership, as the interest seems unabated. Men and women of the community are thinking as never before and many have expressed a desire that the services should go on.

The pastor, Roy C. Helfenstein, has done all the preaching and has been untiring in his efforts, his sermons being especially strong pleas for the better living. He was assisted by Melvin W. Lawton, a gospel singer from Philadelphia.

The membership has been greatly revived during the series and the attendance has been large. On Easter Sunday the church was crowded to the doors and the enthusiasm was great.

The interest in the Sunday school has also been awakened and there is a marked increase in attendance. We are going ahead under the able leadership of Dr. Helfenstein and great things are hoped for under his direction.

WAVERLY, VA., MEETING

Rev. Victor Lightbourne, Convention Evangelist, writes under date of March 28: "Have just closed at Waverly, Va., one of the most gratifying meetings of my experience. The meeting was a success and a glorious revelation of what God can and will do when His people are willing and ready to meet the conditions upon which He grants a great revival of religion. At least 600 took my hand either in reconsecration or in acceptance of Christ. Four hundred and sixty-five women attended the cottage prayer meetings and of this number 460 took an active part. There were not fewer than 103 definite decisions and up to the present 100 of these have expressed their desire to join some church." We rejoice with Pastor Foster and his Waverly people over this great and good season of revival and refreshing.

SOLEMN VOWS

SANDERS-SCHWARZ

A wedding of much interest to Columbus and Camp Benning occurred Saturday evening, March 26 at 6:00 o'clock at the parsonage of the Rose Hill Christian church when Miss Clara Mabel Schwarz became the bride of Lieut. Robert C. Sanders. The writer officiated.

Miss Schwarz is an accomplished young lady with the exquisite charms of lovely womanhood. Her home is in Little Rock, Ark. Lieut. Sanders is a young man of great promise. His home is in Tobinport, Ind., but he is now in school at Camp Benning. He will probably be retained at Camp Benning when he is through with his special training.

The happy couple have the best wishes of a host of friends.

R. F. BROWN.

WALKER-FONVILLE

Married at the residence of Mr. W. J. Graham, March 29, 1921, Mr. Andrew Bruce Walker of Greensboro, N. C., and Miss Lucy Fonville of Burlington, N. C., R. F. D. No. 2.

The writer officiated using the impressive souvenir marriage ceremony. It was a beautiful home marriage witnessed by near relatives of the bride friends who wish for them a long, happy and prosperous life. Mrs. Sykes of Greensboro, N. C., presided at the piano.

The bridal party went by automobile to Greensboro where the bride and groom took a south bound pullman for Jacksonville, Florida, Key West, and other Southern cities.

Upon their return they will be at home on Gorrell Street, Greensboro, N. C.

FOOSHE-HOLLAND

A pretty wedding took place Wednesday afternoon, March 30, 1921, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Holland, when their daughter, Miss Irma Cecil Holland became the bride of Mr. Stafford Fooshe, son of Mr. J. Frank Fooshe. The bride is a member of the Bethlehem Christian church; the groom, a member of the Methodist church in Suffolk, Va. The rooms were beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the ring ceremony, performed by the writer, took place before an improvised altar of ferns, roses and cathedral candles. The wedding music was rendered by Mrs. E. T. Cotten, who, just before the ceremony, sang "At Dawning."

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a stylish traveling suit of deep blue tricotine and a hat to match. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of bride roses. Mrs. S. Wharton of Norfolk, Va., sister of the bride, was her matron of honor and only attendant. She wore an afternoon frock of changeable taffeta, and carried an arm bouquet of sweet peas. The bridegroom had as his best man Mr. Oscar D. King of Suffolk, Va. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Fooshe left for a northern wedding trip, and on their return will reside in Suffolk, where Mr. Fooshe has a position as the Assistant Manager of the Virginia-Carolina Co-operative Peanut Exchange.

CALLED HOMEOVERMAN

Mary Virginia Dare Overman, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Overman of Pleasant Hill Christian church was born March 26, 1920 and died March 27, 1921, aged one year and one day.

The funeral services were conducted from the church by the writer and the little one's body was laid to rest in the church cemetery.

A large audience attended the services and the many friends of Brother and Sister Overman deeply sympathize with them in the death of their baby.

I know of no better day in all the world to depart and be with God than an Easter day. A bright and happy little child has fallen asleep and awaits the resurrection. May the blessed Christ who arose from the dead comfort those who mourn.

RESOLUTIONS of RESPECT—HARRELL

Whereas it hath pleased our Heavenly Father to call our beloved Brother, Elkanah Harrell, from labor to reward, on Sunday, February 6, 1921; and whereas, Brother Harrell was a faithful and consistent member of Liberty Spring Christian church, therefore be it Resolved:

First. That in the death of Brother Harrell this church has sustained a great loss. He was so faithful, so sincere, so modest, so true in every relation which he sustained, that his departure leaves a place hard to fill. His deep piety, his great love for his church, his loyalty to every good work made him a worthy example for others to imitate.

Second. That we bow in humble submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, giving thanks for the high privilege of being associated with our brother in the cause of Christ during these years of delightful fellowship and service.

Third. That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and prayers that this sad experience may bring to the a new consciousness of the Divine Presence to comfort and help in every time of need.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be entered upon our church record, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

EDWARDS

Mrs. Laura Edwards was born June 24 1898, and departed this life March 16, 1921, aged 22 years, 8 months and 22 days.

She professed faith in Christ in 1911 at Big Oak Christian church and united with the church. In 1917 she moved her membership to High Point Christian church where she was faithful unto the end.

She was married to Mr. Robert Edwards July 6, 1919, this writer officiating. To this union was born one child ten months of age the day his mother was buried.

She leaves to lament, a husband, one child, father and mother, three brothers, three half-brothers, three sisters, one half-sister, a number of relatives and a host of friends.

Her maiden name was Albright. Mrs. Edwards was industrious in the home, an affectionate wife, loyal to the Sunday school and church and died trusting a loving Savior.

Her funeral was held in her church and interment of the body was made in Prospect Methodist cemetery, about two miles from High Point.

May God comfort the bereaved.

L. L. WYRICK.

MARION

Mrs. Margaret Marion died at her home in Lanett, Ala., February 26, 1921, aged fifty-five years and eight months. She was married to Mr. J. E. Marion January 13, 1876. To this union were born seven children, two of whom preceded her to the glory world.

She joined the Christian Church about thirty years ago and was a faithful member until her death. Truly her husband has lost a good and faithful wife, the children a sweet and devoted mother. She will be greatly missed in the church and community, as she had a host of friends.

Sister Marion lived to see her husband and all the children members of the church. May God bless the family and help them to be faithful unto the end. They have the sympathy of the writer and their many friends. May we all live so as to meet those gone to that better home where no more parting comes and no more goodbys are spoken.

Funeral and interment at Concord church conducted by Rev. G. D. Hunt, assisted by the writer.

H. M. GRAY.

BROWN

Philepeanic Brown departed this life on March 25, 1921. She was married to J. A. Brown during the year 1844 and to this union were born nine children, eight sons and one daughter. Four of these passed to their reward before their mother did, leaving five to mourn their loss; Eli, Augustus, Rankin, John, and Joseph. She had sixty-six grandchildren, one hundred and two great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren. The total descendants of this union are one hundred and sixty-two. Thus she lived to see her fourth generation "Aunt Penie," as we familiarly called her, was the last one of her generation. She was the daughter of Rosa and Jacob Klapp. Their ancestors came from Germany over two hundred years ago and the Christian name of their ancestors was then known as Klopp, and not as Klapp.

She was a member of the Christian Church from early womanhood; was a good and faithful mother and lived to see all her children members of the Church.

The funeral and burial took place at Apple's Chapel, March 27, 1921. Funeral and burial service by her nephew.

P. T. KLAPP.

INGLE

Sarah Malinda Ingle, widow of Rufus Washington Ingle, was born September 3, 1849, and died March 28, 1921. The deceased leaves four children, W. T., J. W., A. S. and E. C. Ingle.

In early life she united with the Christian church at Providence, and when Rev. J. W. Holt organized the Christian church at Burlington, she and her husband went there. After the death of her husband, she went to live with one of her sons and his family at the old homestead of her childhood, a mile or two from Burlington.

A large number of relatives and friends followed the remains of Mrs. Anthony, an older sister, to the cemetery at New Providence, near Graham, N. C., at 11:00 a. m., March 29. Mrs. Anthony died on March 28 about one hour before Mrs. Ingle did. At 3:00 p. m., March 29, the old homestead was crowded to listen to the funeral services of Mrs. Ingle. The tender prayer of Rev. J. W. Holt, and the sweet songs of the pastor of Friend's church at Graham, with his accomplished wife, appeared to be blessings of God to many hearts.

At the tomb, Rev. Donald McIver tenderly invoked the divine protection, guidance, and blessing for the children and grandchildren. Two noble Christian mothers in Israel have left us, for those shores where the angels gather. We will miss the sunshine of their smiles.

D. A. LONG,

BARRETT

On February 2, 1921, the death angel came into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mills Barrett and took from their embrace the thirteen months old son, Melvin Woodrow. He was a great grandson of Rev. Mills Barrett. Services were held in Burton's Grove Christian church, where the parents are members, then the body of the little one was laid away in the church cemetery.

W. D. HARWARD.

COX

Augustus B. Cox was born in Surry Co., Va., November 6, 1844, and died at his home, Dendron, Va., March 5, 1921, aged 76 years, 3 months and 29 days. He was a member of Union (Surry) Christian church where the funeral service was held Sunday afternoon, March 6, at the regular hour for preaching. There was a large gathering of people present. After the service, interment was in the church cemetery.

He leaves one sister, Mrs. J. W. Williams, of Dendron, Va., who is the only surviving member of the immediate family.

REMEMBER THAT

April is Self-Denial Month. Let us make some real sacrifices this month in order to pay our pledges to Men and Millions.

Not what excuse can I make to avoid paying my pledges to my Church, but what sacrifices can I make in order to meet such pledges?, is the question the Christian put to himself.

Hundreds of your brethren and sisters are making the sacrifice, denying self, during April in order to meet their pledges to Men and Millions. Will you let them bear this burden for your Church and your Lord and you have no part or parcel in it?

No cross, no crown; no sacrifice, no joy; no crucifixion, no resurrection. Are you making the sacrifice in April to meet your pledge to Men and Millions? Then the joy of victory will come. It is not the easy things that we do, but the difficult ones that build character and bring joy. If it were easy for us to pay our pledges to Men and Millions there would be little joy in it. But because it is difficult, because it requires self-denial, it will bring victory and help to strengthen in the things that make for righteousness.

Christ and the World

THE EDITOR

CHRIST loves the world but not the ways of the world. The spirit of the world is to fill life with ease, pleasure, and to appropriate for self. Christ's way is to suffer, if needs be, to save and to serve—to give and not to get.

Christ is trying to draw the world unto Himself, and the world is endeavoring to get possession of the good on earth that the Christ life has brought. It is possible for Christ to live without the world, but the world cannot endure without Christ. No nation has ever survived without being imbued with the life and teachings of Christ.

The progress of Christ's teachings depends upon those who profess His name. Christ longs for the world to accept Him and looks to His followers to lead the world to the Divine light.

Is Christ on trial in your heart? Are you for the world or for Christ? We are either for Him or against Him.

SPOILING LAYMEN

Conferences spoil a great many good laymen in attempting to make preachers of them. The thought is this: Very often men of middle life who are very loyal and active and devoted laymen decide that their place is in the pulpit, and so apply for license. The Conference grants such license, and in most cases the avenue of a more adequate preparation is closed. But the Conference has changed a layman into a preacher, and the public so regards it. The man is no longer looked upon as a layman, but as a preacher. His work and worth are no longer measured by the standard of a layman, but by the standard of a preacher. He has already achieved the distinction of being an active and foremost layman, but it is difficult for him to reach a place so as to become a foremost preacher.

There must be a reason for such instances and a reason why men in their anxiety and zealousness to do more for the Master apply for license to preach. Let us consider the case: There are certain things that man would like to do, but he knows that the restriction placed upon the laymen hinders him from such undertakings, and so he seeks to overcome this limitation by getting permission from his Conference. This is not exactly the way the average man reasons it out, but it is the way the situation results in the final analysis.

If this is the case, then the Church needs to put a greater premium upon the work and activity of our laymen and open up to them a larger avenue of service.

We, therefore, in view of these conditions offer the suggestion to the next session of our Convention that a definite program be passed upon that our laymen can execute. They are willing, loyal, and ready. But who can blame them for not doing more when so often they must force themselves into service?

A LAYMAN'S DAY

This is certainly a layman's day. Time has always been a layman's time, but laymen are just beginning to recognize the great opportunities which are theirs. "I enjoy the services of a good layman," remarked a modest Christian woman to us the other day, and she further expressed herself by saying that she regretted that there were no more active laymen to assist in general benevolent work.

This is a layman's day, because it is a day of action as well as education. The great tasks of the world can never be done without the help of the laymen.

This is a layman's day because it is a day of service. While the minister is a servant he is an educator, a comforter, a divine leader of his people. He serves in the avenue of divine guidance. The lay service touches humanity more in its every day life and in every walk of life.

This is a layman's day because it is a day of opportunity. Hundreds of calls on every hand give opportunity for real active Christian service. The layman's place is not always conspicuous, but his work may be the most important. His prayer for his pastor's success may mean the larger part of that success. The friendly touch at an opportune time may inspire the pastor to do more than he thinks he can do.

What minister is so short sighted as to be jealous of a layman's opportunity? What minister is so curbed in his thinking as to fear that some layman will surpass him in service? Each has a distinct place, and each place becomes more important as each performs his duty.

Occasionally there comes a voice of protest because some of our laymen are taking an active part. Away with such protests and uphold the hands of the willing, loyal, and consecrated laymen. Encourage them and use them. The Kingdom's work hath need of them.

A PLACE FOR EVERYONE

There is a place for all of us. Each has his work and happy is the man who finds his place.

There is a place in the Sunday school for each one in the community. There are teachers who should be pupils, and pupils who should be teachers. There are officers that cannot officiate, and committees that cannot commit. If your school lags and drags it may be because you have the belt on the wrong pulley, or the belt running cross-wise when it should be running otherwise. The lack of momentum and energy may be for the lack of assembling, to further our mechanical term, the machinery that you have. Diagnose your situation and you may find the trouble.

There is a place for every member of the church. There may be persons on the welcoming committee that could not extend an invitation without embarrassment. There may be persons on the visiting committee who have never visited their own next door neighbors. Find what a member can do, and desires to do, and give him that job. He may think a great deal of his job, and to someone he may leave the impression that he thinks a great deal of himself, but if that is the job that he can do, and wants to do and will do, let him do it.

Find your place in your community, in your Sunday school, in your church, and be used in that place.

PITITABLE CONDITIONS IN CHINA

Emigrants who fled the famine districts of North China at the beginning of the famine, having in most cases found the search for work and food futile, have returned to their homes and to more desperate conditions than they left behind them, according to advices received by the American Committee for China Famine Fund, from correspondents in the famine area.

A great part of the population of the villages and towns of northern China who have food have bought it with the proceeds from the sale of their clothing and house furnishings.

The proportion of families in the Ning Ching district, near Peking, destined to die unless immediate relief measures are taken, is eight in ten, according to estimates of a leading banker and business man of the place.

Two-thirds of the 390,000 people of Chi Chow Hsien district have now literally nothing to eat, it is further stated. One out of ten has migrated, most of them without money or food, destination or plan, and most of them destined to die.

The four hundred people comprising the present population of Hwang Lo, near Peking, are in the most acute stages of distress. The village is too poor for a majority of the people to eat even k'ong, or chaff, which costs one-tenth of a cent per pound.

Funds for the amelioration of these desperate conditions are being received by THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and forwarded through the channels of the Church to the proper place.

THE PROTESTANT INVASION OF EUROPE

Now that the bluster of war has quieted down in Europe, one can more clearly see some of the after-effects of the religious forces working below the surface of contending foes. The struggle apparently did not begin as a religious one, neither can it be said that it ended as such. America and England were both Protestant nations, and they helped to free France and Belgium, Catholic nations, from the oppression of Protestant Germany. The principles of liberty fought for were greater than the sectarian contentions of the two kinds of religion.

But the true Protestant could not fight in a Catholic country without having an influence. He himself gained from the contact and got a broader view of religious life, yet measuring in terms of the survey of the effects of the religious forces of the war in both instances made in a recent number of the Literary Digest, the Protestant seems to have gained over the Catholic, in spite of the defeat suffered by Germany. The Literary Digest contends that: "While as yet European Catholicism has suffered little actual loss from these movements, the cumulative effect, especially upon the rising generation, we are assured is not to be ignored. Protestant organizations headed by the Federal Council of Churches in America have had an influence upon Catholics of the warring countries that is much greater than most Catholics or Protestants have realized or expressed."

The greatest results of the Federal Council of Churches were expressed by such organizations as the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and Y. W. C. A. Together with these were numerous other organizations conformed to local needs of France, Belgium and Italy. Contrasted with the more quiescent and ceremonial seclusion of Catholicism, these Protestant organizations are still thriving in the Latin lands of Europe. They emit a wholesome social atmosphere to their surroundings which is attracting many of the adherents of the faith of Rome.

A PASTOR'S PROGRAM

Rev. J. Vincent Knight, Raleigh, N. C., issues a Bulletin carrying his "Pastor's Program for April". Among the many items of general and commendable interest this is found, "Self-Denial Month". "Did you make a pledge to the Men and Millions fund? If so, please remember that April has been designated as Self-Denial Month for this work and all who made pledges are urged to pay them to May 1, 1921, even at personal sacrifice." We trust all our pastors are likewise urging their members to meet these pledges.

Pastor Knight also carries these items in his program:

Evangelism

1. One hundred new members added to the local church during the year.
2. Decision day observed in the Sunday school.
3. Special evangelistic meetings for at least fifteen days.

Missions

1. Every member contributing to the various enterprises of the church.
2. Our apportioned benevolences paid in full.
3. A mission study class at work for at least eight weeks during the year.
4. One hundred dollars raised for missions and orphanage through the Sunday school.

Finance

1. Every member contributing regularly to church benevolences.
2. Every bill paid by the end of every month.
3. Institution of a church building fund.

It is encouraging, refreshing and hopeful to find a pastor with a real, live, progressive program.

Attention is called to the display call on the back page of this issue. Read and heed. Remember the call and the challenge.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

WHICH FIRST: TAX RELIEF OR TARIFF REVISION?

According to our traditional governmental practice, a change of party has usually meant a change in tariff. Thus it happens that at the present period in the rule of the new Administration, the question arises: Shall the representative power be subservient to a time-worn tariff promise in order to satisfy a number of voters, or shall it give relief to the tax situation first? There is apparently a feeling in all parts of the country, expressed by both Democratic and Republican as well as non-partisan newspapers, that the United States should lessen the amount of taxes before it does anything in way of revising the tariff higher.

The reasons for such recommendation seems to be guided by a general feeling that the people are being taxed too much, in view of present conditions, and that our once-prolific European traders are in such a depressed condition that they will be unable to do any trading if higher duties are imposed upon their goods. The war is undisputedly the cause of higher taxation; and also the cause of depressed business conditions all over the world. It causes all governments to tax their subjects heavily. In order to meet our own situation, the San Francisco Bulletin urges Congress to "spread our war burdens over a longer period."

It is not fair to say that the Bulletin's viewpoint of the taxation problem is representative of all the other newspapers; it expresses its ideas in concrete and decisive language:

"The Bulletin believes that it would be sound business not to pay more than the flat rate of interest on the war-debt for the next ten years. The present generation has been seriously handicapped by war expenditures and the diversion of industrial to military energy. It is entitled to easier conditions, and it would be good business to reduce the tax burdens of the next ten years to the irreducible minimum by freeing capital for industry."

On the other hand there are arguments in favor of paying the war burdens off immediately, or within as short a time as possible. But considering the fact that the demand for a great quantity of American products depends upon the European power for purchasing them, the Government must prepare for a gradual scheme of paying war taxes by which the people will be able to meet their payments of taxes according to the amount they realize from the sale of their products. By this method panic will be more easily avoided.

In that event the tariff will not have to be raised to too high a level, since the European, when he has to pay high duties, will not be in a very ready position to accept our exports. The President has expressed the opinion that such a raise in tariff will have to result from a very careful study of the home industries which are suffering most from foreign competition.

OUR NEW FOREIGN POLICY

The United States is in the act of formulating a new foreign policy which, in the estimation of the New York Times, is "over-shadowing all other subjects of public interest in Washington." In substance this policy literally scraps the League of Nations Covenant as far as the United States is concerned. It abandons all adherence to the rest of the Versailles Treaty and it refuses to ally the United States with any particular foreign Government.

The policy is for the most part expressed by the leading Republican Senators. It is intended to keep the nation from entering any association of nations by whatever name such an association may be designated. In view of this aloof standing, however, it has been expressed that the United States would be placed on record as willing to interpose its influence whenever the peace of the world is again threatened, but that it would assume this position independent of all other nations.

One interpretation is that our new foreign policy in the making will be equivalent to a "Monroe Doctrine for all the world." It constitutes almost a "right about face" to the policy pursued by the Wilson Administration in that it is directly antagonistic to foreign compacts and agreements; but it is broader than the policies of the administrations previous to the Great War. Instead of having a doctrine for the Western Hemisphere, it has one for the whole world, which means that the United States will see to it that no nation shall menace the peace of the world wherever that nation may be.

The newspapers of our country find it rather difficult to make just criticisms of this newly expressed plan before it takes on more definite results. It seems that there is a certain degree of safety in "keeping aloof" from foreign affairs and intrigues. But at the same time one naturally asks: Will such a policy of the nation induce a sufficient cooperation of the part of the other powers of the world to establish a lasting world peace? or, Can there be any such thing as real safety by keeping aloof?

GENERAL INFORMATION

Lumberton, N. C. has carried a bond issue of $50,000 to provide for the purchase of a site for a new high school and to pay for a "teachorage" already erected.

Notwithstanding an increase in farm work and activity in automobile plants, unemployment in the country showed an increase last month of 1.5 per cent.

Thomas E. Robertson, former president of the American Patent Law Association, has been appointed commissioner of patents in this country.

Mme. Adrienne Bolland, the famous Frenchwoman aviatrix flew across the Andes Mountains from Argentina to Chili, using a 1914 model biplane, and in doing so established the record of being the first woman to perform this feat.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

IT is time we were looking up and moving to the front in the work of our people. We have gone forward somewhat in recent years, but we are facing a backward step just now. The first year's collections on the Men and Millions pledges are now past due, or very nearly so, and many are holding back, not discharging that duty. Of course there may be some who simply cannot pay up because of some good reasons, but we are speaking to the individual who can, but does not pay up—that is the person who is holding back the progress of the cause. Now if you can do it, do not delay nor make excuses—just come forward and pay your part down.

* * *

What next? Well, it seems to me that about the most urgent thing now before us as a people is to get ourselves to become a praying and a Bible reading people. If we could keep ourselves imbued with the spirit of the prayer-life and our hearts and minds saturated with Bible teaching, then it would be an easy matter to go forward in the advancement of the kingdom of Christ. Even a train will not run when it has no power to make it go, and that is true of a Christian—when he or she has no power to move them, we are stayed in our going, and our labors come to nothing. Even our denominational enterprises come to nothing, or practically so, when we have not the spirit of prayer and are lacking in the study of the Bible. If our ministers and members will come together on these two points, viz.: Prayer and Bible Study, then we shall see our work move forward in a most encouraging way, and the Master's Kingdom will move forward proportionately.

Let us try to be sure of facts before we base our arguments on them. Catching at a fact and then having it shown to be not a fact, but a falsehood, is very humiliating indeed. I once knew a man who was very quick to catch up a new idea and proclaim it as truth. Again and again, I knew him to do such a thing, and then some one prove by high authority that he was mistaken—that what he regarded as truth turned out to be error. Better be sure of your facts before you proclaim them as truth. Especially is this true of public teachers and most surely of religious teachers. If you are going to teach a thing as truth, the first thing to do is to make sure that it is the truth, or if you cannot do that, then do not teach it at all. Not long ago I saw a case where a man of talent had spoken out, proclaiming it as truth. In a few weeks later we saw another article from him in which he taught practically the very opposite of what he had formerly taught and that on the same subject. Now he stands before the public as teaching near the same time and through the same medium opposite views on the same subject. It is a pity that even smart men cannot see more distinctly and teach more directly the truth of God as established by the highest authority. Some people think some of us are too determined to present the truth. But do you know that the most precious thing in all the universe, in God's sight, is His truth, as championed by His Son Jesus Christ? It is no wonder that thousands of men have been willing to die for the truth, for they have seen that truth in the light of God, and thus seen it is no flashing butterfly, but the very essence of God Himself. A man who will not die for the truth, rather than forsake it, cannot be a martyr. If the Christian Church needs anything in the way of men and women, it needs men who will, if need be, die for the truth. The truth is priceless and is the highest ornament that can grace any life, so far as I know. Brethren, you may handle your money carelessly (though I do doubt the wisdom of such a thing) but I do entreat my readers not to handle the truth of God, as set forth in the Bible, carelessly. I am not pleading with the ministers of the gospel merely, but with every truth-lover to the ends of the earth. A careless handling of the truth is, spiritually speaking, a crime against God and the high destiny of human souls. I plead for a stand for the truth—do not handle the Word of God carelessly.

A MESSAGE

To the Elementary Superintendents and Teachers of Eastern Virginia:

I suppose that most of you know I have accepted work as Editor of part of our Sunday school literature, and field Secretary of Sunday schools for the Christian Church. This work, has made it necessary for me to remove to our denominational headquarters at Dayton, O.

But my heart is still with you in the work, and I am very anxious to help you in any and every way I can. I have recently sent out leaflets on Children's Week to every Superintendent of Sunday schools, but as I do not have all your names, I cannot send them to you. If you will write me, I will be glad to send you copies of the leaflets on "Arrangements", and for ten cents to pay cost of postage, I can send you six leaflets which you will find suggestive and helpful in your work, not only for preparing your Children's Week program, but afterwards as well.

I am hoping that when our Convention comes, many of you will be able to report increased interest in Sunday school attendance, and an increased sense of responsibility for the religious education of children among the parents of your community caused by your observance of Children's Week.

If there is any way in which I can help you, please write me. I shall be only too glad to hear from you and to answer and aid in any way in my power.

MRS. FRED BULLOCK.

SUFFOLK LETTER

HE Ladies' Benevolent and Social Union of the Suffolk Christian church conceived through their president, Mrs. John M. Butler, and executed, through helpers wisely chosen, a church social for April 6, 1921. The idea was to give a welcome to new members and old members, too; and to give an opportunity for all to mingle together in a social evening in the church. The Sunday school department was decorated by a group of women headed by Mrs. John W. Eley, and it was a scene of beauty. Tables, surrounded by chairs and fragrant with flowers, suggested natural grouping of the people who settled down to real social conversation, while Chandler's orchestra filled the room with enchanting music. A reception committee of deacons and their wives, Rev. L. L. Lassiter, preachers Johnson and Cotten, and their wives, the pastor and daughter, with Mayor McCleary, welcomed the throng as they entered. An army of girls served cake and cream to all, pinning a tiny bow of ribbon upon each one who had been served, so as to avoid repetition. Age and childhood mingled together like a family. There was no public speaking, no public entertainment, except the music.

One of the difficulties in a large church is to overcome the lack of acquaintanceship, the opportunity for social intercourse, and the unification of different peoples. For the time, at least, these difficulties were overcome by social contact without restraint or formalities. Modern life is overloaded with forms and ceremonies that require dress, formal introductions, select groups, and artificial manners. A church social is removed from those embarrassments that deter people from social contact and lets nature have her way for the time with grace and prompt each one an initial step in a good time under good conditions. The atmosphere of the House of God is wholesome, refining, uplifting. That is one thing a church does in a community. It creates an atmosphere that is health to all who breathe it. The more spiritual the congregation, the more intelligent the work of the congregation, the more of a spiritual tonic the atmosphere of that church becomes to all who breathe it. It is to the community what home is to the family. The rudest man behaves himself better in the home; the boisterous boy is more quiet in the home; there is something in mother's presence that stimulates better thoughts, better conduct, and a better spirit. It is even so in the church. The presence of the Holy Spirit in the House of God creates an atmosphere that tempers human feelings, human ideas, and human purposes. The social impulse is better directed and better satisfied under religious associations than by any other human contact. It is contact that gratifies and satisfies the social in human nature; and this contact may be provided for in social Christianity.

In this social it was estimated that six hundred enjoyed the evening. The best thing about a church social is that it is the best social at the least cost.

ELON LETTER

WENTY-TWO years ago Rev. Frank Samuel Child of Fairfield, Conn., arrived at Elon College on his initial visit, having been sent by that prince of Elon supporters, Francis Asbury Palmer as his personal representative, not to spy out the land, but to bring with him a check for $10,000 for Elon's endowment fund, which he later increased to $30,000. Since that visit Dr. Child has made nine other journeys to Elon, the ninth being from Tuesday of last week through Sunday.

It is safe to say he never visited Elon under more favorable circumstances as to weather. He has always come in February or early March before. This season he came in April, when nature is at least three weeks in advance of ordinary normal days. He has carried with him warm and grateful recollection of the balmy hours spent under the pines and along the highways. Dr. Child is a highwayman, not in the sinister sense, but as a lover of nature. This came very clearly to view in one of his lectures on "The Great South-west," in which he pictured in words the wondrous scenes of that rich luxuriant land of beauty and balminess. He is master of the descriptive art and can make an audience see the things he has seen, a rare gift, a priceless gift, and he can do it because he loves nature and carries with him in his communion with her an artist's keen discernment of tone, color, and proportion. He loves nature because he loves God.

Two of his lectures received the joint title, "Voices of Freedom." The first treated of Savanarola, the first free voice of Italy. The second was in regard to Joan of Arc, the matchless Maid of Orleans, the liberator of France in a moment of national crisis. He pictured both these great leaders first as the ideals of popular approval and then as execrated and condemned to death. The third act was the lifting of the curtain of the impartial verdict of the ages since, according to which they have received their just and righteous appraisal. The irresistible impression was, that to die for right is not martyrdom, but apotheosis.

But his greatest utterances came on Sunday morning at the regular hour of worship. His theme was, "Why Will Ye Die?" The only death the sincere Christian needs to fear, taught the great preacher in his discourse, is the death that inevitably ensues when the Christian undertakes to appropriate the blessings of salvation for himself. It was a choice hour and one long to be remembered by faculty and students.

Dr. Child has returned to his home, where now after a life-time given in devoted service to the First Church of Christ in that Old New England town, he is the honored pastor emeritus, giving himself to community service and to literary pursuits, serene and happy amid loved ones and friends, who rejoice to minister to the every need of one who so long and so self-forgetfully ministered to them.

“SELF-DENIAL MONTH”

Every loyal son and daughter of God puts his or her obligations to the Kingdom first. We feel obliged to pay our honest debts to our fellow men, and quickly respond in paying the bills that come from “the grocer, the baker, and the candle stick maker.” We pay our bills to the store, first, because they are our bills, and secondly, we pay as a means of possessing the future good will of the merchants. If we would refuse to pay our bills at the store because of financial shortage or inconvenience, we know what the merchant’s reaction would be—“no more accommodations for him.”

God may not withhold His favors for us simply because we refuse to pay our debts to His Kingdom. And still He may. However, we cannot maintain a sense of self-respect before God if we refuse to deny self in order to pay Him. We should pay our pledges to God’s work because they are our pledges. And we should pay them as a means of securing God’s blessings for us in the future.

To refuse to practice “self-denial” in order to pay our pledges to the Forward Movement of which the Men and Millions Movement is a part, may mean that in the future we would experience His denial of both material and spiritual blessings to us. These are the Lord’s days of testing the men and the women who will keep their promises to Him, who will pay their pledges to His Kingdom even though such should demand sacrifice and self-denial, will receive manifold blessings in return.

“Self-denial” is only another way the Christian has of saying “God’s acknowledgement.” Our pledges to the Forward Movement constitute an expression of our acknowledgement of our obligation to God. Some refused perchance to make a pledge, but their obligation is just as binding as if they had. And those who made a pledge should welcome the opportunity of denying self in order to pay their pledges in acknowledgement of God as the author of life and of the privilege of living in His world.

THE VETERANS OF THE CROSS

Rev. A. D. Betts, D. D., a Methodist minister and one of my strong friends, but who passed away about a year ago, was a little older than I as a minister but not as old a man. He and myself were great friends. He was a retired minister but a hard worker.

Rev. J. D. Hufham, D. D., died the 27th day of March. He was a Baptist minister, and was another particular friend of mine. He was in his 88th year and had been preaching 62 years, but was retired from regular pastoral work. We three old friends had thought a great deal of each other, and Dr. Betts was arranging a date for us to meet at Elon for a day. We have all been active ministers in three denominations, but had retired from active pastorage. Dr. Hufham was popular and worked to the last, and his brothers use to pleasantly call him Bishop, but Dr. Betts died without fixing his date for our meeting. I was the oldest man of the three.

I am now in my 96th year, and have been preaching for 67 years. We have seen converted, and received thousands of members of the church, but some have gone ahead of me.

I have one more job of work that I hope to finish for the Master. It will be of great value to the Church. Then I will be the last one of the three to go up higher, and what a happy meeting it will be when we see the thousands that we have received into the church come home. Oh! Happy Day.

CHARACTER

(James Hastings, D. D., in “The Doctrine of Prayer.”)

If prayer is what we believe it to be, intercourse with God, it must have a marked effect upon the development of character. It is noteworthy that whilst education alone by no means invariably develops personality, sometimes rather restricting it, cutting off individual expression, and compressing it to a pale copy of conventional ideas, men of prayer however rugged and uneducated, are always personalities. Surely if prayer is spiritual energy, its vigorous and sustained use must react upon the character of the user. Would not more attention to prayer, not simply as a habit of piety, but as a life-force, result in such development of character as would better equip any man for life? If life is given from God, the art of living is living as God meant life to be lived. That can come only from communion with Him and intimacy with His will, such as prayer affords. There has been many a personality which has not fulfilled its promise. One feels bound to ask whether it has fallen short because it has grown out of touch with the life-scheme for which God created it. The prayerful, prayer-directed life can hardly fail to find the straightest path to its goal. Modern religious psychology is rebuking Christianity for not utilizing its natural resources. Neither in the depth nor in the height lies our help. It is nigh unto us, in the heart and the mouth that will pray, and pray with understanding.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK

ON the evening of March 17, I started for Fancy Gap, Carroll Co., Va., where, under the supervision of Miss Iola Hedgepeth, we are doing an educational and religious work among the peoples in the mountains. Getting an early train out of Greensboro on the morning of the eighteenth, I reached Mt. Airy at noon, and after a hurried lunch with my friends, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lindsey, we started up the mountain on a Ford (Mr. Lindsey, driver, and myself) reaching the school at three fifteen. Such a hearty welcome one does not often get in his or her daily visits. Miss Hedgepeth and the children met us half way down the path which leads from the road to the school house. Mr. Lindsey talked to the men and looked over the farm and school grounds while I talked to the school children, making a few pictures, etc. Leaving the school grounds about four-thirty, Miss Hedgepeth and I walked to her boarding house about half a mile away. That evening was spent talking about the school work and its prospect. On Saturday morning we mounted our horses for the trip of the day amid one of the dense fogs which only such mountain sections as this have. The impressions that were made upon my mind that day will never be forgotten. We rode over the trails when at times we could not see fifteen feet ahead. I could but think of the light and sunshine behind this heavy fog, yet we could not see it. The light and sunshine of His love for these dear people if they only had the opportunity to learn and see. If we would only get the meaning of our Master when he said, "Go ye into all the world and teach" and again when He said, "I came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." I found the spirit of Service in every home I visited on this day (eighteen in number). If only they could do something for us, to show us how glad "we air to see youse", "we aire glad youse come", "con't youse stay all night?", "stay a week, won't youse?"

We were met in the most cordial manner. From every home we visited they met us at the "draw bars", took our horses, and at one place I remember there were nine who came to meet us at the bars, and when we left there were thirteen who went to the bars. Some walked from half a mile to a mile on the way with us. One time the fog was so dense we lost our trail and I must tell of the man who came and found us. He went on foot for about two and a half hours, over ploughed ground, rocks, creek, hills, marsh, sometimes running, sometimes walking, keeping pace with our horses, pulling draw bars, and seeking to aid and pilot us. This man had been convicted in the courts twenty-seven times, and had served six sentences in prison. He could not read or write his name and had never been to Sunday school or church. We invited him to come to our services on Sunday afternoon. He came and said, "he shore did like it and was comin' agin." Such responsive people it has been my privilege to see. In one-room houses, twelve by fourteen feet, were from four to thirteen living. It would be impossible for me to explain how the kitchen, dining room, bed room, parlor, living room, guest chamber, laundry basket factory, and all other kinds of quarters you can imagine could be gotten into this twelve by fourteen room. Can you conceive how six, eight, ten, and even twelve of them can live in these windowless houses, cracks, inches wide in the floor, no rug or carpets of any kind, the occupants with very little clothing, shabby shoes, bare feet, no underclothes, sleeping with the same garments on they wear all day, without any change of any kind for weeks, you wonder if people in such conditions are capable of earning or learning? I say Yes—if given an opportunity. You will find some Blue Bloods if you will only trace the lineage of these people. They are illiterates and in this condition now not of their own choice. If you could see how eager they are for "larning" you would not stop to question but give those bright (and should be happy) children a chance. One little girl, six years old, who had been to Miss Hedgepeth's school only two days, counted twenty-five for me, knew the alphabet, and could write her name, and repeat several sentences learned on these two days. A more beautiful and innocent little face I have never seen. She wants to go to school more if she can get some clothes to wear. This, dear friends, is the trouble in nearly every home we visited. These people live some of them on rented farms, some without either horse, mule, or ox, but simply dependent upon the hoe, in this rocky soil to support a large family, growing corn and cabbage and getting $4.00 a load for cabbages. One man made just enough the whole year to buy each member of the family a pair of coarse shoes. Work! I should say they do. If you could see the children from three years old and up to old women of eighty, piling rocks, your heart would be moved with compassion. One woman, ninety years old, told me she made erop enough last year with the hoe to keep her, and two grandchildren. Three or four other women over seventy years of age told me a similar story. Several boys and girls who started to our school five months ago, and who had never been in a school house before are now doing third grade work. Think of it; did you ever have such results in any school you ever taught or witnessed? Some of these bright children are so anxious to know something and to do something worth while, for themselves and for their fellowman!

The hour for Sunday school was 2:00 p. m. At 12:00 o'clock children and grown people were there waiting, and some had come for miles over the mountains. At the hour for service every seat was taken, all standing room with many on the outside. I counted about seventy-five men, women, and children in this fourteen by fifteen room. I took the children twenty-seven in number, out on the yard and there under God's blue sky taught them the lesson and told them Bible stories. We learned in a few minutes the song all children love to sing, "Jesus Loves Me". Then as we went back into the school room and I tried as best I could to talk to these people, I don't think I ever felt the presence of the Spirit more than on that day. While not in the Sunday school we were visiting in the homes singing for them and trying to tell them of the love of Jesus, in ways suited to each one's peculiar needs, for I find the mountain folks are like all others—they have their own individuality.

Monday a. m. we started again on horseback to visit more homes in the range of our school, this day, visiting thirteen families. I shall never forget just at sunset as we visited a woman over eighty years old, who had been crippled with rheumatism and in bed for years. Her condition and her suffering are beyond description. There we sang and prayed with this dear old woman of eighty (and in all probability it was the first prayer she had ever heard). We tried to tell her of the great love of our Savior. I could not help but think of those words which came so often to me, "Carest Thou Not That We Perish?" The call comes long and loud to us from mountain top to mountain top. "Come over and help us". Are we going to heed the call?

Tuesday morning we spent visiting, until the Ford came for me, and in this time I had visited forty homes, come in contact with three hundred and eighty-five people (one hundred and twenty-five we could have in our school if we had the room and teachers.) Out of this number (385) when Miss Hedgepeth went there, not more than half dozen could read and write their own names. When we selected Miss Iola Hedgepeth to take up this work it was the right person in the right place, for she has won the love and respect of every family, not only of her territory but of the surrounding country, and all sing her praise. To date she has enrolled eighty-two in her school, and the house is altogether inadequate, a sorry shack in fact, weather worn and exceedingly dilapidated.

These people are just at the dawn of a new day for them, and I wish every member of the Christian Church north and south, could see the opportunity as I see it, of doing the Master's work here along educational and religious lines among our mountain people. As I see it, it is one of the greatest challenges that has ever come to us, along missionary lines. If you, dear friends, could have heard the stories of these people, men who had "stopped gambling", boys who had "quit the cigarettes", and many who had given up the immoral lives, which they had never heard was wrong before our dear Miss Hedgepeth told them, we would say "We cannot and we must not" be willing to stop where we are, but go forward with the work. As it is now, the only pledged support to this work from our Mission Board is through the Young People's organizations of the Southern Christian Convention and as Superintendent of our Young People's Work, I feel that our means are so very limited that we must put forth unusual effort and make unusual sacrifices in order to meet our great opportunity.

We need, dear co-workers, the three great missionary "P's" in this work, Presence, Purse and Prayer. Our Southern Board is calling upon our young people in our Sunday schools and in our Missionary Societies to rally to this work and meet the demands upon us. Shall we not do so, and gladly? I believe we will.

A MODERN MIRACLE WROUGHT BY TITHING

"West End has been for more than twenty years a small mission charge in the city of Houston, Tex. The church, with less than three hundred members, is made up largely of working people. No one in the congregation draws a salary above $250.00 per month. In October, 1918 a Stewardship and Tithing campaign was conducted in the church, and as a result of these special efforts the Church was placed on a partial tithing basis, which later developed into practically the entire church coming to the practice of tithing.

"This congregation at this period in 1918 stood face to face with financial failure for their year's efforts. They were behind with both their pastor's salary and Conference collections. The inspiration which they received by reason of the campaign and their immediate endeavor enabled them to pay all their obligations in full for that year. Starting in for 1919, they raised the pastor's salary from $1,000 to $1,500 paying this monthly. Their Conference collections were also advanced, these being paid in full. They went 'over the top' in the Centenary, subscribing an amount considerably over their quota, and in the face of it all launched a building campaign, and early in the spring of 1920 they moved into their new house which is valued conservatively at $15,000. All of this is the achievement in about eighteen months of a small but heroic congregation. The spiritual results are on the increase in all departments, and there is a more religious atmosphere and a determined spirit undaunted in all their undertakings."

IT IS OF THE LORD

We are commanded of the Lord, through His servant, John, to "believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God." One spirit has been tried both by individuals and by churches, and this writer has yet to find any other testimony concerning it by any who have tried it than the declaration "it is of the Lord". I refer to the spirit of Stewardship and tithing as taught in the Bible and approved of our Lord. I have never yet heard anybody argue against tithing except those who have never tried it. May I give here the statement of Rev. H. K. Morehead, pastor, as indicating the experience of hundreds of others:

"In the spring of 1918 Roberts Avenue Methodist church, of Beaumont, Tex., began tithing as a church. The results have been so wonderful that we can recommend a plan to any church that will try it out in a religious way. This church had always had trouble raising money. Like so many other churches, it is made up of poor people who thought they were not able to do the work that seemed necessary. At the close of each Conference year the salaries of preacher and presiding elder were always behind, and there was scarcely anything paid on the Conference collections. So about two weeks before Conference a big campaign would be inaugurated and by a tug of war the deficit would be raised, so the pastor could go to Conference and report: 'Everything in full'. Nothing was said, however, about how the money was raised. And in this method we were only duplicating the experience of hundreds of churches that have the same hard pull every year to wind up for Conference.

“After going through a very successful meeting last spring, we decided that as a church we would try the tithing plan taught in God’s Word and see if we would not get along better. We read where the Lord said: ‘Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.’ We reasoned: ‘This is God’s promise. We will try it and trust Him for the results.’

“We secured a tithe and offering box and placed it in the vestibule of the church. We eliminated the collections in all the departments of the church and asked the members to place their tithes and offerings in the boxes prepared for that purpose. We stopped the various schemes that had been used to get money for the church and determined that for once we would give the Lord’s plan a thorough test. We had felt all along that he expected his church to do its work without having to depend on begging and suppers to finance it.

“After four months’ trial of the tithing plan, we have found that it is certainly of the Lord. Our church is in the best of condition in its history. Every expense is paid up to date, the general collections all paid for the year, our full quota for the Texas Conference Superannuate Endowment Fund is taken care of an auto has been purchased for the use of the pastor, and there is something like six hundred dollars in the treasury. There is scarcely a service at which we do not have additions to the church, and the attendance has been better than ever before. We would not change to any other plan for any consideration.

“We feel that as a church we have never done anything that has meant so much to us as the adoption of this tithing plan, and we earnestly recommend it to all churches everywhere. It will make the membership more religious and will solve every financial problem in connection with any church.”

The sixty-seventh session of American Congress convened at noon on Monday, April 11, in accordance with the call of President Harding a few weeks ago. A solution of the railroad problem and tariff and tax questions are expected as a result of the extraordinary session. President Harding has continued his conferences with railroad labor heads, and while none of the results of these conferences are known, a generally improved feeling concerning the railroads has been created. Reports are that Representative Wright of Georgia will offer a bill providing that the railroads restore freight and passenger rates as before the Esch-Cummins act became effective, which would set aside the 25 to 30 percent increase made by the commission during last fall.

JESUS’ CREED AND YOURS

We all have creeds. They may not be very clearly defined in our thoughts, but we have them. One’s creed is what one believes firmly; and is also what controls and governs one.

Dr. Charles M. Sheldon is last week’s Christian Herald gives what he considers the ten points in the creed of Jesus. If we can accept this as the creed of Jesus then we must be missionary in spirit and in activity, for it was the binding chord in His creed, the base on which His creed rested and out of which it was built up.

The Creed of Jesus

1. He believed in God so naturally that He never tried to prove His existence but took it for granted like the air He breathed or the food He ate.
2. He believed in His own mission, which was to give men life abundantly.
3. He believed in the fact of sin and man’s redemption from it by repentance and faith.
4. He believed in heaven and hell and taught that men make their choice of either right or wrong.
5. He believed in the possibility of a Human Brotherhood based on the oneness of human need and dependence.
6. He believed in the capacity of mankind to learn and accept the greatness of the abundant life.
7. He believed in the fact of immortality and took it for granted, as He did the existence of God, never arguing about it.
8. He believed in the seriousness of life without being gloomy or ascetic. And He taught that life should be measured, not by pleasure, but by its joy in service.
9. He believed that prayer is a necessity for a full grown life and taught the need of it without arguing about its meaning.
10. He believed in His own teaching so much that He commanded it to be taught to every nation and laid upon the Church as a last and biding commission.

The annual convention of the North Carolina Baraca-Philathea union will be held in Henderson, N. C., on April 21-24, inclusive. Plans have been completed by the several committees, and the housing committee reports homes secured for at least five hundred visitors.. Numerous social features have been arranged for the delegates, and many of the state’s chief educational and religious workers are scheduled for addresses.

THE BULLETIN

Dr. Frank S. Child, Fairfield, Conn., gave his annual lectures at Elon College last week. THE SUN office enjoyed a visit by Dr. Child and we are glad to note that his health is better and that he looks vigorous and strong.

THE SUN's Editor is scheduled to speak at the following places: New Elam, April 17; Webb Avenue Methodist church, Burlington, May 1 (8:00 P. M.); Union (Alamance County), May 8; Hopedale, May 15; Apple's Chapel, May 22. Other engagements will be announced next week.

Rev. B. J. Earp, Milton, N. C., has accepted the work at Danville, Va., and is to enter upon the work there at once. Brother Earp will also, for the time being, preach once a month for the congregation at Damascus, Gates county, N. C., and give one Sunday to the work at Mt. Olivet in the Virginia Valley Conference.

As stated in THE SUN some weeks ago, Rev. W. C. Hook has resigned the Pleasant Grove-Ingram pastorate and accepted the Berea-Rosemont pastorate. He will enter upon his duties there June 1. Rev. J. E. McCauley succeeds Brother Hook in the Pleasant Grove-Ingram pastorate.

The annual Educational Day was held in Alamance county, Friday, April 8. The schools of the county gathered in Burlington and began the exercises of the day by a parade, which formed one of the longest lines of school children that we have ever witnessed. Honorable Josephus Daniels was the speaker of the occasion, and was introduced by President Harper, a member of the Board of Education of the county.

Some months ago the North Carolina Christian Advocate (Methodist), Greensboro, N. C., and the Biblical Recorder (Baptist), Raleigh, N. C., entered a subscription contest to be conducted during the month of March. The Recorder secured 3,885 new subscribers, with 3,314 renewals, making a total of 7,199. The Advocate enrolled 5,438 new subscribers, and received 4,601 renewals, making a total of 10,039. THE SUN congratulates both papers and decides that both are winners.

We have received the following announcement which will be of interest to a wide circle of THE CHRISTIAN SUN readers: "Mrs. and Mrs. Junius John Benton announce the marriage of their daughter, Minnie Pearle, to Rev. Walter Bennett Fuller, on Wednesday, April sixth, nineteen hundred and twenty-one at their home in Savage, North Carolina. At home after April the fifteenth, Ivor, Virginia." THE SUN extends best wishes and congratulations to Brother Fuller and his companion and wishes for them a long and happy life in Kingdom service.

Rev. J. C. Barrett of Harrisonburg, pastor of the Christian church, delivered an excellent sermon, appropriate to the Easter season, Sunday morning. A large congregation was present and special Easter music, which proved a feature of the occasion, was well rendered by the choir. Immediately after the services an invitation was extended to those who wished to unite with the church and twenty persons were received into its membership and received the rites of baptism.—Daily News Record, (Harrisonburg, Va.)

Friends have received the following invitation: "Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry Stephenson request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Maye, to Mr. Roy Orlander Caveness on Saturday, the sixteenth of April at high noon, First Christian church, Raleigh, North Carolina." Miss Stephenson is a member of the Raleigh church and a daughter of Brother C. H. Stephenson, enthusiastic Sunday school worker of the North Carolina Convention. Miss Maye is a talented young woman and we congratulate the young man who is to be her husband.

Our good friend, L. Gaston Andrews, of the Pleasant Hill church reports that conditions in his family are much improved. Now as a matter of explanation, to be brief and specific, the situation is this: About two months ago Brother Andrews discontinued his subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, feeling that hard times were sure to get him in spite of his handsome and prolific farm. He came to Burlington the other day reporting that there has been no peace in his family since discontinuing his paper, and in order to sufficiently repent of his unthoughted act in stopping his paper, and further that peace and harmony should continue in his household, he had decided to renew, and modestly revealed all this to us in the presence of his good wife, who, with her husband, loves her home, her family, and her church. Who will be next?

NEW PASTOR AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH

(Burlington News April 5, 1921)

Rev. G. O. Lankford, the new pastor of the Christian church, preached his first sermon at that church on last Sunday to a large congregation. Those who heard him were delighted with him. His subject was "Quest of the Kingdom," and his text was taken from that passage of scripture which reads, "Seek ye first the Kingdom of Heaven," etc. Mr. Lankford preached exactly 21 minutes and every word counted. He has a splendid voice and delivery; he is a logical thinker, a deep reasoner and holds his congregation with him from the time he announces his text to the minute he closes.

We feel that the members of the Christian church are very fortunate in securing this man as pastor, and we feel that he is fortunate in being the pastor of such a live progressive people.

Readers will note the Elon Letter by President Harper. This Letter is to appear weekly. We welcome it to THE SUN's columns.

"Tell Me a Story"

THE BLUE DAY

Freddie glanced up into his mother's face as she came down the stairs and he saw that her eyes were tired and that she looked hot and weary.

"Father is so ill, dear," she said, "and I have so much to do. Could you take this prescription down town for me? Oh, dear, it is such a blue day!"

"What is a blue day, mother?" asked Freddie.

"A blue day, dear, is one when everything goes wrong and it seems as if they would never be right again, and when you are tired and when—oh, when everything is topsy-turvy, as it is here just now!"

"But, mother dear, the sun is out and the birds are singing and the sky is so blue—not that kind of a blue at all—so why should you be blue?"

"Why, indeed!" said his mother as she looked down into his merry face where the dimples in his cheeks were playing hide and seek with each other.

After he had brought home the prescription Freddie went to school. He carried a rosy-cheeked apple in his pocket which he thought he would eat at recess, but when the time came he noticed that the teacher leaned her head wearily against her hand as if she were very tired, so he went up quietly and laid the apple on her desk with a beaming smile.

"Oh, thank you, dear," she said, and as she ate it her face brightened.

"Is it a very blue day?" Freddie asked.

Smiling back into his eyes she said: "It was—but it isn't now."

Skipping out into the yard he remembered the lolly-pop that his father had given him because he had helped pick up the apples, so he took it out and sucked it happily until he spied little lame Peter standing all by himself in a corner of the yard watching the other boys play marbles. Freddie ran over to him.

"Want a lick?" he said, holding out the lolly-pop.

Peter's eyes sparkled as he took several good licks and then handed it back to Freddie.

"Good, isn't it?" said Freddie; "it's peppermint."

"Thank you," said Peter. "I haven't tasted a lolly-pop in a long time."

"Haven't you?" asked Freddie. "Well, we'll take turns. You take a lick and then I will."

When they had finished and there was nothing but the stick left, he said:

"Does your leg hurt you very much today?"

"It did," said Peter, "but it doesn't seem to now."

When Freddie was on his way home from school one of the big boys passed him running.

"Better hurry, Fred—it's going to rain," he said.

Freddie laughed as he replied: "Why, that's funny, I thought the sun was shining!" and he hurried home to get there before the storm.

When he reached home he saw his mother sitting quietly on the porch sewing.

"Father is better," she said, "and the work is all done, and it's been such a nice day after all—so bright and sunshiny and pleasant."

"Why, mother," said Freddie, laughing, "don't you know that it is raining right now?"

"Why, so it is!" she replied, as she hugged Freddie up close; "but look! See that beautiful rainbow over there?"

"There is always a rainbow when there is sunshine in our hearts, Freddie," she added—The Christian Work.

The small son of a well-known electrical engineer one day picked up a hornet. When his father hurried out to discover the cause of the commotion, the little lad was ruefully sucking his thumb, while tears streamed down his face.

"Why, what's the trouble?" asked the father.

"It was that bug," explained the boy between sobs. "I think his wirin' is defective. I touched him, and he wasn't insulated at all."—Canadian Presbyterian.

Two friends returning home from a late evening gathering noticed through the window a Chinaman in the dimly lighted rear shop. "I wonder what that Chinaman is doing up so late?" said one. "Shirts, I suppose," came the answer.—Harper's Magazine.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

OUR WOMEN TO RALLY

The dates and places decided upon for our Woman's District Missionary Rallies are as follows:

Vance and Warren Counties District, at Liberty church, Vance Co., Saturday, April 30, Mrs. R. L. Wilkerson, Henderson, N. C., Superintendent.

Franklin County District at Oak Level, Sunday, May 1, Mrs. W. H. Hudson, Youngsville, and Mrs. Cary Whitaker, Kittrell, N. C., Superintendents.

Alamance District at Burlington church, Tuesday, May 3, Miss Bessie Holt, Burlington, N. C., Superintendent.

Guilford District at Greensboro First church, Wednesday, May 4, Mrs. M. F. Cook, Greensboro, N. C., Superintendent.

Lee County District at Sanford church, Thursday, May 5, Miss May Gunter, Jonesboro, N. C., Superintendent.

Chatham County District at New Elam church, Friday, May 6, Mrs. S. V. Holt, Monrore, N. C., Superintendent.

Randolph, Moore, Montgomery, Hoke District at Shiloh church, Sunday May 8, Mrs. G. R. Underwood, Bennett, N. C., Superintendent.

W. Star, Va. District at Pleasant Grove church, Sunday, May 15, Mrs. W. J. Pierce, News Ferry, Va., Superintendent.

Rockingham District at New Lebanon church, Tuesday, May 17, Miss Florence Sharpe, Wentworth, N. C., Superintendent.

Durham and Orange County District at Chapel Hill church, Thursday, May 19, Miss Lillian Long, Chapel Hill, N. C., Superintendent.

Wake, Johnson, Harnett District at Catawba Springs or Wake Chapel, Friday, May 20, Superintendent to be designated.

The Superintendents, save one, have been secured and are at work. We are exceedingly anxious to have every church in every district represented and to do this we will have to depend upon our pastors—especially in those churches that have no Woman's Societies. We are simply trying by these rallies to stimulate interest in Missionary Societies and to try to organize Woman's Missionary Societies in churches that do not now have them. Will our pastors please by public announcement and persuasion and in every way possible help us in securing delegation of women from all their churches.

And then will not at least two or three or four women from each of our churches begin planning now to attend the Rally in their district. We want to be of service to all; but we cannot help those who stay away. Come to your Missionary Rally, dear sister, and let us see if we cannot be of mutual profit and helpfulness in our great and good work for the Master. And then may it be said of us, as our Lord said of a faithful one long ago "She hath done what she could."

OUR ORPHANAGE

EASTER OFFERING COMING IN

Our Easter Offering has been coming in nicely this week. Nearly one thousand dollars received. The Lord is good to us and we are happy. When we commenced to build our Children's Home we started the work on faith. We had faith enough in our people to believe they would see that the work was finished and that the little children should have a home. In a few more weeks this great undertaking will be complete. We have been able to keep the work moving without borrowing any money. It is our hope and dream to finish the work and have every dollar paid when the work is finished. We have faith enough in our friends to believe this will be done. They have never failed us when they understood the need. I know they will not fail me now. Let us finish the building and pay for it the day it is complete.

I will thank all the Ladies' Aid Societies to let me know by the first day of May how many beds they want to furnish and if they want to furnish a room. Three matrons' rooms yet not taken. We are depending upon the good women in our Convention to furnish this building. I know they will for they have always been my loyal friends in this work.

Mrs. C. V. Dunn sent two dozen cans fruit and Mrs. W. B. Wyrick sent a nice quilt. Mr. W. B. Wyrick brought the quilt and also rodea his Ford with five bushels wheat and brought that along, too.

It is a joy to have such warm friends who are willing and anxious to help us in this work.

We are grateful indeed.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

Nearly three hundred people in North Carolina met their death last year by fire, the total being barely below the record for the previous year. In 1920 there were eighteen lives lost in conflagrations, while 279 died from other burns. The total was 297. For 1919 there were 24 lives lost in conflagrations, and 276 from other burns. The total was 501, just four more than for the last year.

A new low rate for deaths from tuberculosis in North Carolina was established in 1920 according to statistics just compiled by the State Board of Health. The total number of deaths from this cause for the past year was 2,865 as against a total of 3,005 for the previous year. The reduction in deaths from tuberculosis was one of the important items in enabling the state to achieve a remarkably low death rate as a whole, the rate for all diseases having been 12.9 per thousand.

CHURCH NEWS

HARRISONBURG AND WINCHESTER

On the evening of March 22, it was the writer's privilege to be with Rev. J. C. Barrett in a "Get-Together-Meeting" in Harrisonburg. Brother Barrett is pastor of five country churches around the town and had just completed an every member canvass at his churches and had called them together in this service to consider the proposition of a parsonage. A goodly number were present, representing the strongest churches of the pastorate. Rev. C. A. McDaniel of Winchester and the writer made short addresses and were followed by pointed and encouraging remarks by the following Harrisonburg ministers: Rev. Saylor Garrison, Reformed; Rev. Mr. Parsons, Baptist; Rev. Mr. Williams, Episcopal; Dr. Wilson, Presbyterian; Rev. Mr. Coffman, Brethren; and Rev. A. W. Andes. In addition to this, a letter was read from the pastor of the United Brethren church, expressing his regret at not being able to be present. The meeting was held in the Methodist church, which is one of the best in the city. The deep interest taken by the ministers of the city was an expression of their appreciation of Brother Barrett and his work. At the close of the meeting, those present passed a resolution endorsing the movement for a parsonage, without a dissenting vote. Unless all signs fail, the meeting will prove an epoch making one in the history and activity of the churches concerned.

Brother Barrett is well liked and is doing a great work in his field. It was a real pleasure to spend a few hours in his hospitable home.

On the evening of March 23, we had the pleasure of being with Bro. C. A. McDaniels in his prayer meeting service in the Winchester church. The attendance was good and much interest was manifested in the service. The meeting was a preparatory service for Easter when Brother McDaniel expected to receive a number into church fellowship. I heard good words on all sides for Brother McDaniel and his work. The church is cooperating with him splendidly.

W. T. WALTERS.

Richmond, Va.

RICHMOND, VA.

Sunday April 3 was a great day for the First Christian church here. It was our first anniversary. Dr. Atkinson, Mission Field Secretary, was with us and gave us two soul-stirring sermons. The congregations were above the average and our members were enthusiastic. We had set for our goal 100 members; 86 were on the roll, leaving us 14 more to secure; we had twelve of them at the close of the morning service, one more was secured in the evening making our total 99. About 10:30 that night, a brother called us on the phone and said he wanted to transfer his membership to our church. That completed the one hundred and we went to bed happy.

At a business meeting held Wednesday night, March 30, the following financial reports were made for the past year:

Church	$2,778.90
Sunday school	449.19
Ladies Aid Society	207.42
Christian Endeavor Society	40.27
Total	$3,475.78

Both of these items far exceeded our highest expectations when we entered upon the work March 1, 1920. The church was organized April 4, 1920, with 40 members. The advancement made has been due to the prayers, the interest and the activities of the faithful band, who believe in the principles of the Christian Church and who have had faith in the movement. The task of the pastor has not been easy, but it has been lightened by the loyal, consecrated members, who have toiled and sacrificed with him in the establishment of the church. We thank God for past results and with fresh courage we shall press on to the wider field and larger opportunity before us.

The Sunday school is building up under the leadership of Superintendent J. W. Price. The Ladies Aid Society is active and aggressive. Miss Mildred Atkinson is president.

We are anxious to get the names of all members of the Christian Church in the city. There is a fine opening in the city of Richmond for one or more strong Christian churches and with the Mission Board behind us and with the cooperation of the brotherhood, we believe the church can be firmly planted in the city within the next few years.

Do not forget to send us the names of all members of the Church from your community, who are in the city.

W. T. WALTERS.
2023 W. Grace St. Richmond, Va.

RICHMOND

The writer had the privilege of being with Rev. W. T. Walters, pastor, in his Sunday school and two church services in Richmond, Va., Sunday April 3. This closed the first year of organization as a church in that city. The results seem to be gratifying. With the eight additions last Sunday the membership now totals one hundred. That a hundred of our people have been found in Richmond and, have signified their loyalty and devotion to the Church by coming into a new organization to undertake a great task, is we think, a sufficient indication that the Lord is leading in this work.

The members thus brought together have contributed $3,475.00 for all purposes during the first year, and have purchased a beautiful lot on which they hope to build. Dr. W. T. Walters and his faithful wife are laboring day and night for the success of this work, and hundreds are praying for its progress and permanency.

There is a live and up-to-date Sunday school, Ladies' Aid, Christian Endeavor and other auxiliaries, and the infant church gives every promise of vigor and stability. At the morning service last Sunday, Prof. P. J. Kernodle read a comprehensive history, and one much enjoyed by all, of the beginning in Richmond and of the progress through the year. It was inspiring and valuable.

We met many acquaintances and good friends of other days from Mt. Auburn, Pleasant Grove, Durham, Franklin, Va., Suffolk and other churches from which they had gone to live in Richmond.

We must build in Richmond in order to save our own and do our duty to those whom the Lord has given us.

J. O. ATKINSON.

A GREAT MEETING AND A GOOD MEETING AT WAVERLY VIRGINIA CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Rev. A. Victor Lightbourne of Norfolk, Va., began an evangelistic meeting at Waverly Christian church, March 13 and continued through March 27. This was his third meeting held in Waverly—the first was begun first 46 days after Bro. Lightbourne's conversion.

The house was full at first service, and many times packed—a few over 500 seats—and standing room in vestibule—and then many were turned away. At a 3:00 p. m. Sunday service for "men only" the house was full, the largest number of men ever known in this section to attend a meeting. There were counted at this service 57 automobiles, some from 15 to 25 miles away.

Bro. Lightbourne caught the people from the very first service. He was in fine physical condition. Mentally, he was keen and powerful, gathering from all fields of truth and beautifully and forcefully applying in argument and illustration for the conviction of the sinner and the uplift of the saint. The growth of this young evangelists' knowledge in Biblical truth and religious experience is simply marvelous. He teaches the sinner—shows him the truth, and quickly leads to a decision for Christ. His sermons were deep, broad, practical, and very logical. His splendid personality and his clear delivery of the truth, and the beauty of his thought, make him a man of power.

The four denominations of the town heartily cooperated. The Episcopal and the Baptist through their members (their pastors not being in town). The Methodist through Rev. A. V. Lewis, pastor and his people, and the Christians with whom the meeting was held. Rev. Mr. Lewis publicly endorsed and expressed his deep appreciation of the meeting.

The writer has checked results as follows—there may be some discrepancies.

Professions, 122; number expressing preference 106—divided as follows: Episcopal 6; Baptist 17; M. E. Church, South, 35; Christians 48. At this meeting 31 have joined the Christian Church with 26 baptisms, and 21 have joined the Methodist Church.

The Baptist and Episcopal will receive later. Others will join the different churches.

The business men closed their stores for the 3:00 p. m. service. There were delegations from all departments of business interests. Many classes from all the Sunday schools attended in a body. The Masons and the Farmers' Union with large delegations. These delegations and classes gave a strong backing to the meeting.

It has been variously estimated at the number of reconsecrations from 500 to 1000 persons. If the church had had the capacity we could easily have had from 1000 to 1500 people present.

It seems to the writer that if those who are in charge of the evangelistic program would secure a large tent for the Lightbourne meetings, it would enable him to reach thousands more.

Too much cannot be said in praise and appreciation of Mr. Samuel Davis, the blind pianist. His gospel in music is wonderful. The people not only went to hear him play but went to see him play. His interpretation of the gospel in song is marvelous.

Mrs. Lightbourne spent a few days near the close of the meeting and delighted all who heard her in beautiful song. "Tell Mother I'll Be There", and "Oh Where is My Wandering Boy Tonight" were rendered to a "Men's Meeting" with great effect. Our people were delighted with this stay with us and shall welcome them again. May the Lord bless Bro. and Sister Lightbourne and Bro. Davis.

Community Development

THE EDITOR

COMMUNITY development is not material. It may appear to be material, but behind all development is thought and action. The material part is only the conditions organized through thought and action. Lands, bonds, gold, and physical gain do not develop; they are only good securities of development.

A well developed community must be a church community. A well developed community must be a school community. There can be no progressive church where there is no progressive school. There can be no forward-looking school where there is no forward-looking church. They go hand in hand, and it takes both—the thought and action of both to develop the community.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

It is said that the cost of one battleship would save the life of three and one-half million starving children, and yet a so-called Christian nation goes on building battleships while the little children are dying for the lack of bread. Isn't that a queer piece of procedure? When shall we learn to do things in right proportion?

* * *

The statistics tell us that there are 12,000,000 of the colored people in the United States. They constitute one-seventh of the working force of our country. They are making wonderful strides in the industrial world. In some parts of Virginia they are developing as farmers wonderfully and many of them already own their homes and farms, and they are moving forward in a surprising way.

* * *

After many years of decline in the birth rate in France, at last the birth rate in that country exceeds the death rate. That seems to indicate that France has learned a lesson—she cannot get along without some real increase in her population. In many parts of the world the birth rate is very low. In twenty years from now if the country should have an unexpected call for men, after years of a declining in birth rate, it would puzzle them to know how to meet the demand.

* * *

It is hard for many people, even some Christian people, to learn a much-needed lesson as to the use of tobacco. A great many people are using great quantities of tobacco, and in doing so they are consuming much besides tobacco. They are burning out their own lives and burning out the money which ought to be in their own pockets. Tobacco is hastening the day of a weakened nation, physically. The man who persistently uses tobacco must be a very strong man, or he will weaken under the force of its effects on his system. Few men seem to have any idea to what extent this curse is carrying them to a life of physical weakness, to say nothing of its effect on morals and Christian experience.

The wickedness of man is great. Who can know its depths? In Denver, English walnuts are selling for three dollars each, and on examination they were found to contain a small capsule of morphine and cocaine instead of nut meats. It is a marvel how some people do forget their origin, the great handiwork of God, and yet they seem to find delight in the depths of wickedness. When will man learn to regard himself as an exalted being, having been made in the likeness of God? Alas, for the love of darkness rather than light. Cocaine and morphine are rank poisons, it being unlawful to have these drugs about you as they are dangerous to life, and yet some people prefer to live in the grasp of dangers. Do let us learn to be sensible in handling dangerous things.

Remember "April is Self-Denial Month," and the month will soon be gone. If we are to deny ourselves of anything for the cause of Christ, we ought to be at it in earnest. By the way, how many of us really do deny ourselves in the interest of the cause of Christ? It seems to me that the day is here when the people of God must do more to help spread the gospel that the people in remotest lands may know of Christ and salvation which we are expecting to make the world new. If it is to help the people of this generation, it is high time we were trying to bring it to pass. The time is short. The day is far spent and the night comes on, when our work must cease so far as the winning of the world to Christ. Do your part and be quick about it, or you may lose the chance to do it at all.

Nebraska has some good laws on the marriage question. That is to say, Nebraska has some laws which make people more thoughtful as to getting married in a hurry and then weeping a long time because of a hasty marriage. Applications for marriage license must be made at least fifteen days before the time of the marriage, and parents and guardians must be notified by registered letter.

ELON LETTER

This is Elon's 31st year and by coincidence thirty-one seniors elected to speak essays or orations rather than write theses for graduation. The class numbers thirty-five in all. Wake Forest has forty-nine seniors this year. Considering the age of our College and the numerical strength of our constituency, we have good reason to feel proud of our class of 1921.

But we have reason too to be proud of them by reason of their essays and orations, delivered before three audiences, covering in all six hours of speaking. It is a pity there is not time at Commencement for all to speak. Only six out of thirty-one will appear. The faculty had a hard time to select the six, and on the first ballot sixteen were voted for. The six who were chosen will represent their class and the College well at Commencement and Governor Morrison will have to do well to surpass them.

The complete program rendered was as follows:

Be Something	Miss Lizzie Lewis
The Unconquerable Soul	Mr. L. B. Ezell
The Invisible Assets	Mr. J. W. Fix
The Paradox of Freedom	Mr. F. H. Hunter

SUFFOLK LETTER

There are two sorts of critics as there seem to be two sorts of almost everything. There are good critics and there are bad critics. The good critic is good in two respects; fully competent to examine and to correct faults. There are all sorts of this kind. The teacher who examines the work of pupils; the art critic; the mechanic who passes upon finished work; the editor who passes upon matter for publication; the voice-teacher and a thousand others in every field of endeavor. God Himself is a critic of perfect knowledge and perfect love. He discovers to human beings their sins and shows them the way of righteousness and helps them into the new life. He takes no delight in finding the faults of men—the sin of man broke His heart. It was the faults of men that pierced the divine heart. The "Lamb was slain from the foundation of the world." God never tells the faults of people to other people. He tells them to themselves. "Thou art the man" is the divine method. God has never told your faults to others; but He has revealed them unto you, that is the quality of the good critic.

True preaching is of that type. It reveals sin to the sinner, in the midst of the congregation, without disclosing it to those around him. This individual revelation and conviction is the work of the Holy Spirit who "takes the things of Christ and shows them unto us." The good mother uses this method in correcting her children. She talks to the child and not to others. Fault-finding is good, as the fault-finder, a mechanical device to find the faults in an electric current. The good critic is a contributor to the progress of mankind. He adds to the efficiency of the utilities of the world. Railroads, steamboats, agriculture, schools, medicine, house-keeping, factories, temperance, religion; yea, all improvements are made by finding the faults and correcting them. The detective is a fault finder, but the motive is correction.

The bad critic is just as active. He finds the faults, but corrects none. He tells them to others. He sees the faults in others without mending his own. The church critic knows the faults of the members and the pastor and circulates them. He really enjoys telling the faults of others. That is one difference between the good and the bad critic; it pains the good critic to find the fault; it does the bad critic good. Another difference is the good critic is optimistic; the bad critic is pessimistic. Angelo sees an angel in marble; God sees a saint in a sinner; but the devil sees a sinner in a saint. The Lord called Job "a perfect and an upright man"; Satan said, "Doth Job fear God for naught?" The member who goes about telling the faults of members never sees a hopeful outlook for the church. Criticism is really the output of self. The art-critic simply expresses the self-artistic gift or talent. The faultfinder with no capacity or motive to help is simply revealing a faulty life. The faultfinder is the moral vulture of society. Bees find flowers—vultures find carrion. One of the most common faults is tattling; telling the faults of others with delight. "Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh." Mature Christians are liable to fall into this unfortunate habit. Things they have quit look so bad in others, like people who prosper despise the condition of others less fortunate; they condemn behavior which was once their best, and think young people are going down because they do not think and do as they do. All criticism is bad that is not intelligent, helpful, and in love.

SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS

It will be a delight to our people to know that we have been able to secure the attendance of Mr. Marion Lawrance, General Secretary International Sunday School Association at our Seaside Chautauqua this summer. He will deliver two addresses at least. This will be our opportunity for many of our folks who have never seen or heard this man of world-wide renown. He is one of the great Christian leaders. He was converted and baptized in the Christian church at Yellow Springs, Ohio. All the boys and girls of our churches should have the chance to see this great man, who has given his life to the Christian cause. Do not miss Marion Lawrance at Virginia Beach. Plan now to attend throughout. It opens Monday night, July 18, and closes Sunday night July 24.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AND MISSIONS

"The Sunday school has an army of fifteen million scholars. If only one out of every thousand of these scholars would go as a missionary we would have fifteen thousand additional missionaries, enough we are told, with native helpers and present forces, to evangelize the entire non-Christian world." And if every member of the school were trained to give two cents a week—the price of a postage stamp—to missions, it would produce an income of fifteen million dollars annually, and the financial proposition would be solved. So reasons Sue Reynolds Staley in her "How to Interest Your Sunday School in Missions" a book which tells how it can be done, if only our Sunday school teachers and workers would read and adopt. The pivotal point of missionary interest and missionary power is the Sunday school. And the reason why our Christian Church today is as unconcerned about missions and as indifferent to missionary needs and opportunities as it is, is because we have not made, have not sought to make, our Sunday schools missionary in teaching, training and activity. We have so far largely neglected the most fruitful field of missionary possibility and activity that we have anywhere in reach. Before our Church comes to be a missionary power and force in the world it will have to beget in its Sunday schools missionary zeal, interest and enthusiasm. And this will come as a result of proper missionary instruction, which instruction is to be found in every Sunday school lesson of every Sunday of the year—if only the teacher would look for, find and apply it.

There are three among many reasons why one is safe in declaring that the Sunday school is the pivotal point of missionary interest and power.

1. The Sunday school is already an organization—the biggest organization of the Church—which has the confidence, cooperation and support of all classes, kinds, and ages of Christians. Reach the Sunday school for missions and you have touched every time and temperament and mood of life from the cradle to the grave. The Sunday school is the church teaching and learning, and there is nothing that strengthens the missionary cause and spirit like knowledge of needs and conditions in mission lands.

2. Among the scholars in the Sunday schools today are the missionaries of tomorrow. On this account, says, William A. Brown, "the evangelization of the world waits alone upon the willingness of the workers in the Sunday school."

How true this statement is will be the more apparent when it is called to mind that billions of wealth now being created, and to be created, will be possessed or controlled by those now in our Sunday schools. These youths, taught in the Sunday school the lessons of morality, thrift, economy and usefulness will be in very large measure the men and women who in a few years will be controlling industry, producing the bulk of wealth, and directing the affairs of the Church, state and nation. Reach the Sunday schools for missions and you have opened up channels through which ever increasing streams of living waters will flow to the enrichment of the Church at home and abroad.

I wish it were possible to bring home to the hearts of every Sunday school officer and pupil the flaming words of George H. Trull, who never spoke truer than when he declared, "In the hands of Sunday school superintendents and teachers lies the real solution of the missionary problem. They hold the key to the whole situation, and if they improve their opportunities, within a generation there will be a Church whose intelligence about missions and zeal for them have never been equaled in the world's history." How true these words are may be realized in recalling the indisputable fact that the Sunday school is both the teaching force and training center of the Church, and that the Church is the greatest institution on this earth for righteousness, and for salvation. "The Church is the greatest institution in the world; the Sunday school is the greatest organization of the Church; and the missionary enterprise is the greatest movement, as well as the chief business of the Church and Sunday school."

The third reason for declaring the Sunday school to be the pivotal point in missionary interest and power is because it has been proven in undeniable facts and demonstrated in actual experience.

Some fifty years ago a sister denomination caught the idea, and literally organized its Sunday schools, all of them, into missionary societies. As a result of that decision hundreds of its brightest and best pupils have gone out as missionaries, missionary gifts of the Sunday schools of this Church are larger than those of any other denomination, and this denomination today has missionaries in more parts of the earth than any other Church, and instead of hurting it has wonderfully helped the Sunday schools of the denomination.

In our Sunday schools is the future Church. The denomination that is able to see and willing to recognize that fact, and then act upon the sure foundation that the Church must be missionary if it is to grow and prosper in our earth, will find itself in the grip of a new power, and making progress at an ever increasing pace.

Some of our Sunday schools are taking missionary offerings, and are seeking to teach and study missions. As sure as the Bible is God's revealed Word, so sure will these schools go forward, make progress and come to real power in the world.

FROM MISS TOSHIO

An appreciative letter comes under recent date from our devoted and efficient missionary, Miss Toshio Sato who graduated from Elon last May and has returned to Japan to work among her own people to make known to them the Gospel of our Christ. "I am now teaching in our Christian Girls' School here in Utsunomiya. I am finding it hard to teach so many things I did not especially study while at Elon, but as the other teachers have their hands full I am trying to follow the fine example by doing my very best. Besides teaching I am doing the matron's work. The dormitory is now filled with eighteen girls and it is being run something like the Ladies' Hall at Elon. Mrs. Fry is working harder than ever now. I can appreciate her work far more than I used to. I hope it will not be long before she can return to the States to visit our people there and to enjoy a much needed vacation.

"The money you sent for me sometime ago was received the other day. It was more than I expected and I wish to thank all who had a part in it." (The money referred to was three months' pay at $30.00 a month and was furnished by Third church, Norfolk. She wanted to work for $15.00 per month, but it was thought that twice that amount would be used to advantage and it is as Miss Toshio is helping support her mother and educate a near relative—all out of $30.00 a month.—J. O. A.) "It is my desire to write, if possible, every once in a while, to every one of my Southern friends; but on account of my work which keeps me busy from morning until late in the night I am not able to do so. Therefore, when you can find a few spare moments during your visits to the various churches please remember me kindly and give them my love." Should any SUN reader wish to write to Miss Toshio her address is care Christian Girls' School, Utsunomiya, Japan. Mrs. Fry, the principal of the school, writes that Miss Toshio is a wonder as Christian worker and teacher and that she is doing the work of two women.

THE NUMBER GROWS

"You will find enclosed money order for $5.00 from Berea (Norfolk) Sunday school. We are going to give one Sunday in every month for missions. This was our March offering." Thank you Sister Hodge. It is good to find our Sunday schools gradually falling in line with the plan and decision of the Southern Christian Convention and also that of all our Sunday School Conventions. We hear that many other schools have voted to adopt this plan and will begin sending in their monthly offerings soon. We have got to carry the missionary idea, interest and message into the Sunday school before our Church becomes missionary.

OUT OF HER LIVING

"For all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in." So remarked our Savior of her who cast in "even all her living."

And to most who cast in now of their funds for the Lord's use this same message comes. The writer received this line from a good friend today: "Dear Friend: I know you think I am very indifferent about paying my pledge to missions but I am not. I am short of funds to do so. However, I am sending check to cover same with interest since it became due." This pledge had been due a few months and this friend felt that as he had not been able to pay till now some interest should be paid. Out of his want and real need he had cast this into the Lord's treasury. It is not easy now to pay our pledges. It is not out of our abundance, but out of our want we must cast in. But therein was the secret of the sacrifice that brought forth the Master's commendation.

LEFT WITHOUT EXCUSE

If any churches, women in the churches, or pastors, in our Southern Convention desire now to organize a Missionary Society of any kind, they are left without excuse for not doing so, so far as instructions how, and programs for, meetings are concerned. By joint cooperation and efforts of the Eastern Virginia and the North Carolina Woman's Conferences we now have for free distribution to any church pastor requesting it all the needed information about how to organize and carry on and also the entire program and literature for one year, both for Woman's, Young People's, and Willing Workers Missionary Societies. These programs are plain and simple and are arranged so as to stimulate interest in missions in those churches and societies where now there is little or no interest.

Why should some interested woman in every one of our churches now without a Missionary Society not send in a request for one of these programs with information, and seek to organize either the women, the young people, or the juniors into a Missionary Society? There is nothing that helps a church so much, in keeping alive and growing, as an active Missionary Society. Try it, dear friends, and see for yourself. Send your request to The Mission Office, Burlington, N. C., and get a program with a package of real missionary literature and all instructions about how to organize and stay organized.

Yours for more and better missionary societies,

BESSIE I. HOLT.

Secy. of Program Committee.

PAGEANTS AND MISSIONARY PLAYS

Does your Missionary Society need either of the following pageants?: The House of Brotherhood, 25c; Christ in America, 15c; The Striking of America's Hour, 15c; The Happiest Plan, 10c; The Rainbow Pageant, 10c; We Never Knew, 35c; Women for Whom Christ Died, 5c; Broken Chains, 25c; Kosiki or a Korean Village, 15c; Children of Many Lands, 25c; In-As-Much, 15c; America in the New Era, 3c; The Clinic of a Missionary Specialist, 10c; Lovest Thou Me?, 20c; A Living Dream, 3c; Illustrated Hymn—It Came Upon The Midnight Clear, 40c.

I will be pleased to furnish these, or any others desired, at prices named either for use in Women's, Young People's or Willing Workers Societies. There is no better way to impress a real missionary truth than to give one of these programs, for what we learn through the eye gate, is more impressive than through the ear gate. I recommend that every society give a play or pageant occasionally.

BESSIE I. HOLT, Supt. Y. P. W., S. C. C.
Burlington, N. C.

The fire loss in North Carolina for the month of March was nearly twice that for February. However, the fire loss for the first three months of 1921 shows an improvement over the record for the first three months of 1920. Fire loss for the first quarter of 1920 was $2,940,000 against $1,767,155 for the first quarter of 1921.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

OUR SENSE OF GOD

By Rev. Ernest D. Gilbert.

I

IT requires but little argument to show that God continues but a little more than a vague idea, when measured by the average concern and interest of the day. Account as we may for the present religious lethargy, we are forced at least to face the fact that though we refer to God as the "First Cause" and as a "Creative Genius", too few of us can talk in the language of deeper experience when we have found Him near. Jesus thought of the Infinite as "Father" may appeal to us strangely, and we may so state our faith in "Him", yet we may fail to sense this as reality in our careers. It was the custom of Jesus to counsel Him as many a quiet hill-side and many lonely nights would tell us if these had a language we could understand. It is said that Enoch walked with God. Then too have we found those lives that seem to tell us that "here is some one who has been in the sacred presence". It is this fellowship with God that is our need. Not that we may have something to parade. I believe that there is an innumerable host of hungering hearts in this world and in this our day that primarily need the touch of ordinary human evidence and confidence in the reality of God.

Our own heart listens to Faith Wells:

"I asked for just a crumb of bread
Within His banquet-hall He spread
A bounteous feast on every side
My hungry soul was satisfied.

I asked for just a ray of light
To guide me through the gloomy night,
And lo, there shone along my way
The noon-tide glory of the day.

I asked for just a little aid
As I stood trembling and afraid,
With strength I had not known before
He made me more than conqueror.

And God has done this for all of us. We haven't been deep enough to see it; or we have been too unappreciative to tell it. Man needs to get a new grip on God.

II

And it is needful that God get a new grip on man. This following the other consideration, is almost axiomatic. So, much so, that probably the less said on it the better. Yet one or two hurried surveys may assist in establishing it more clearly in our minds for later personal thought. We note the sway of present ungoverned human spirit. In the attitude of mass and class mind as it deals with and interprets issues under the impulse of selfish interest, there is sad want of a widely balanced idealism, and spiritual incentive. Our newly born collective forces are pursuing dreams released in smoke filled chambers, rather than visions that come where the air is free and man can look into far and blue clear sky. The tongue of the orator on the one side and the cheers of the crowd on the other side are so overwhelming that it is frequently next to impossible for the average man to be highly governed by his sense of superlative values.

It is not fitting that we be-moan these new expressions of group potentials. They are incident with developing democracy. Christianize them with the spiritualized humanities and they may become new psychic engines for the projection of good. Here is the modern challenge. The Christian may today help make the unique contribution of the grip of God on the soul of our present world life. It may take modern daring to cultivate the spiritual element of our group. To bring the influence of the great friendly compassionate Christ into the thinking of our fellows may not be an easy task, but it is certainly about the most tangible way of a solution to the modern problem. And from on high it may come in words likened unto this "Blessed is he who believes" and who can say "I can do all things through Christ who is my strength."

It is not a sacrilege to say that we need a twentieth century sense of God. The Scriptures represent as well as they contain a growing human estimate of the Almighty. Not infrequently did a new realization of the Infinite leap into our language and experience by one who had breathed deeply the fine air of the hills. Those who wrote had no paved walks or roads; they had no snug dwellings nor enclosed cars. Nor did they write about the fogs, the mists, the mud, nor winter's cold nor summer's heat, but they saw the hills of God, and the vision made them sing. My help cometh from Jehovah.

Would that such a fresh confidence would leap into our hearts this day.

Fall River, Mass.

TOO MUCH MONEY AND TOO MUCH WORLDLY PLEASURES

Just think of base ball, golf, and joy rides nearly every day, and "Sunday, too!" We are drifting away from our old fashioned homes. Fathers and mothers have grown too busy "making money" to give very much attention to their children. They appear, too often, to be trying to delegate their God-given responsibility to others. They do not know what kind of pictures their children see in the movies. They do not study the Sunday school lessons. They leave that to the Sunday school teachers. The great need of our people, North and South, is homes where Christ is honored, where God is loved, and where the Bible is studied, and obeyed, where mob law is execrated, father and mother honored, and every boy and girl learns to make an honest living, by honest, hard work. Where the boys and girls get up early, kindle the fires, feed the stock, and prepare the breakfast for father and mother. The simple lessons of home should be impressed upon the hearts of our children that should last forever.

D. A. LONG.

A PETITION TO ALL CHRISTIANS BY THE RELIGIOUS SOCIETY OF FRIENDS

To our fellow Christians in the United States:

The Philadelphia Yearly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends in session from Third Month 28th to Fourth Month 1st, 1921, makes a solemn appeal to all Christians of the United States to do their utmost at the present time to bring about disarmament. We urge as an act of loyalty to Christ that Christians individually and through their Churches and other corporate bodies, bring all possible influence to bear upon the President of the United States and his Cabinet to call without delay, an International Conference for the Limitation of Armaments, and also upon Senators and Congressmen to postpone consideration of military and naval appropriations, and to make disarmament and the establishment of world peace the most vital issue of the new Congress.

Since the Armistice our Government has spent largely for war costs, almost $1,000 for every family in the United States. More than four billion dollars have been appropriated for this year. Of this amount 69 per cent pays the expenses of past wars, 20 prepares for future wars, and 12 per cent for constructive work.

General Pershing said in New York Twelfth Month 29, 1920: "The world does not seem to learn from experience. It would appear that the lessons of the last six years should be enough to convince everybody of the danger of nations striding up and down the earth armed to the teeth."

Republican Floor Leader Mondell recently told the Committee on Naval affairs: "If an agreement is not reached for the limitation of armaments and warlike expenditures, in the near future the fault will be that of America, as in former days the fault was that of Germany."

Says Herbert Hoover: "There is no more inconceivable folly than this continued riot of expenditure on battleships at a time when great masses of humanity are dying of starvation."

The war is over. During that period of darkness men saw their duty in many different ways. But now the duty of all is clear. From the travail of the war there has come to millions, a loathing of the brutality, and the futility of the whole war system; yet we go on perpetuating it. Another war seems inevitable unless men of good will the world over, take steps to prevent it.

Has not the time fully come for Christians everywhere to unite on the platform that Peace is not a loose garment for them to put off or on as governmental policies and complications dictate, but that it is a vital, essential teaching of Christ to be lived out by His followers in all their human relations? To acquiesce in an international policy based on competitive armaments is to deny the Master whom we claim to be the way, the truth and the life.

The building up of huge armaments mean two things: That we regard other nations as potential enemies, and that we expect to train the youth of this and coming generations to destroy their fellowmen. These ends cannot be reconciled with the Spirit, the life or the teaching of Jesus. If we were blind to the international situations and tendencies that brought on the great war, our eyes should be wide open now for the present and the future. If we Christians do not walk by the light given us, the responsibility for the failure of Christian ideals rests upon us. On one hand lies the road to international suspicion, antagonism, warfare, and ruin; on the other to mutual interest, good-will and cooperation. The emergency is upon us. It must not be evaded. No more real and pressing enterprise challenges the loyalty of the Church of Christ.

In the love of Christ that "Is full of trust, full of hope, full of patient endurance," and that never fails those who really practice it, the Society of Friends would unite with their fellow Christians everywhere in accepting the challenge of the present world need, and in establishing without delay a national policy that recognizes God as our Father, and all men as our brothers.

By direction and on behalf of the Yearly Meeting,

DAVIS H. FORSYTHE,

ANNA RHODES LAMB.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF EDUCATION

Nearly everybody has a definition of education. The question arises, Has anybody ever been able to give a full and accurate definition of the philosophy of education? Not one. Why? Because a philosophy of education is founded on three sciences: The science of physiology, or the science of the body; the science of psychology, or the science of the soul; and ethics, or the science of the human duty, and these sciences are not yet out of swaddling bands. It would require the wisdom of God to tell us all about the soul and, if we were told, our finite minds could never grasp the subject in all its proportions. As man is a progressive being his education will improve as he follows the gleam, and learns at the feet of the world's greatest Teacher.

THE CHRISTIAN HOME

Our country has colleges and universities known throughout the civilized world. The educational journals of our land are filled with able articles about the higher education. And what is the highest education that can be had? It is found in the lofty lessons of self-control and self-sacrifice and sublime faith and splendid trust which Christian home life has such marvelous power to teach? The home is the foundation stone of Christian civilization and the God appointed educator of mankind. Your sons and daughters are fortunate if they can attend colleges and universities, but you, gentlemen, should never forget that there is no training to be had in Sunday school, high school, college, or university, or anywhere in the world, which can take the place of the discipline of home. The highest education to be obtained in the world is gotten in the university of hard knocks in the true Christian home.

THE HERALD'S ANSWER

In a recent issue of THE SUN, figures were given to show that the numerical loss in our denomination was in the bounds of the American Christian Convention, and not in the Southern Convention. THE SUN referred the matter to The Herald of Gospel Liberty, and The Herald gives its reply in its issue of April 14, advanced proof of which gives us opportunity to review the reply in this issue of THE SUN.

The Herald states that it called to its assistance Dr. J. F. Burnett, and Dr. Burnett reveals the fact that the statistics were "far from complete, and thus unreliable for comparative purposes." The Herald adds: "Many of the churches have not reported and even entire Conferences at times failed to report. The report for the Afro Christian Convention for 1920 was not received. So that all in all, the figures given were so incomplete that a small margin like 920 is of little significance, no matter whether it should appear as a loss or as a gain."

It is very unfortunate that even a local church should fail to report—and the idea of a whole Conference not reporting leads us to think that something in the organization must be wrong somewhere. The trouble may be with the Conference officers, or it may be elsewhere. A little investigation into why a Conference does not make report to the official department of the denomination is worthy of very serious consideration.

The Herald further says: "A second thing is one we need to study carefully because it involves our whole Church polity. Formerly there has been altogether too much of a tendency in the Christian Church to try to spread itself over more territory than it could properly man. The result has been a far-extended border of weak and widely-separated Conferences and churches

* * * * We should expand only as we have men and forces to conserve our gains and steadily build up Conferences that can meet the demands of these new days. What we need now is a united effort to revise and make permanent our weaker Conferences by a carefully planned home mission and church extension policy
* * * * Unless our Church will do this and will furnish the men and the money with which to do it, it is inevitable that we will suffer further losses in our outlying borders."

As further touching this point this paragraph is taken from The Herald: "The Southern Christian Convention illustrates the obverse truth. Its advantages over the Church North has been its compactness. It is confined to three or four States, and even to a small part of those States. As it reaches further away from the closely-built organizations of which Elon College has been the heart and driving force, it finds itself confronted with difficulties kindred to our own here in the North. This is shown by the fact that its Georgia and Alabama Conference suffered a loss of 190 members in the report for this year—which contributed to the total loss of the denomination just as did the decrease of any other Conference. In the North, we are stretched from coast to coast and from Maine to the far Southwest. It has been a mistaken policy that has cost us much money and many disappointed hopes."

This quotation also from The Herald bears directly upon the situation and is worthy of very serious consideration: "Another fact which needs continual renewal in our minds is that we have failed as a denomination to enter the cities in such a way as to take care of our church membership which is continually leaving the rural neighborhoods and moving to the centers of population. We have lost thousands of church members in this way. And here, too, our Church has suffered more in the North than it has in the South. For the South has not yet been so seriously affected by the migration of its people as has the North and East."

It is very true that we need to give attention to the weaker places in our Convention and to connect every local church with its Conference, and every Conference with its Convention, and the Convention officers with every activity of the denomination. Our Forward Movement, it seems to us, has opened the way to remedy some of these defects, and THE SUN is delighted to see that they are being remedied. The problem of one section of the Church is of interest to every other section, and hence a close cooperation.

Let us have a unified program for the whole denomination and work on that program with unceasing efforts until it has been put into operation, and then let us see that it operates.

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOL GROWTH

We have made fair progress in the growth of our Sunday school work in the Southern Convention during the last few years. The following results taken from The Christian Annual covering a period of ten years indicate the enrollment of our Sunday schools and our growth in Sunday schools.

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERSHIP

(From 1910 Christian Annual)

Virginia Valley Conference	1,275
Georgia and Alabama Conference	949
Alabama Conference	527
Eastern Virginia Conference	5,114
Eastern North Carolina Conference	2,184
Western North Carolina Conference	1,856
North Carolina and Virginia Conference	1,941
Total	13,846

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERSHIP

(From 1915 Christian Annual)

Virginia Valley Conference	1,520
Alabama Conference	1,143
Georgia and Alabama Conference	817
Eastern Virginia Conference	5,183
Eastern North Carolina Conference	3,070
Western North Carolina Conference	1,838
North Carolina and Virginia	3,150
Total	16,621

SUNDAY SCHOOL MEMBERSHIP

(From 1920 Christian Annual)

Virginia Valley Conference	1,813
Alabama Conference	964
Georgia and Alabama Conference	897
Eastern Virginia Conference	6,041
North Carolina Conference	8,640

Total	18,355

But is 4,509 members added in ten years a sufficient gain for our membership? We leave the question for our readers to decide.

A GOOD EXAMPLE

Pastor Lankford of the Burlington church sets a good example, we think, in the beginning of his new field of work, by breaking a precedent of the local church. It has been customary in the church that the pastor teach a class in the Sunday school, usually the Busy Men's Bible Class. Brother Lankford's position is that a pastor of a church is also pastor of the Sunday school, and with a large school of fifteen or twenty classes that the pastor should have opportunity to visit the various classes, give counsel, speak words of encouragement, and to know how every department of the Sunday school is being conducted, in order to enter into the life of the school and of the church. It is true that the pastor will teach occasionally, in the absence of a teacher, or by request, even when the teacher is present.

There is another reason, also, why the pastor should not teach a class, and that is it so often diverts the thought from the sermon that follows immediately after the close of the school. There may be times when the pastor feels that his duty is to be in his study during the whole of the Sunday school period. This he could not do and be responsible for a class.

We do not know just how extensive the practice of our pastors is of teaching a class in the Sunday school, but we consider Brother Lankford's position correct and commend the idea. Brother Lankford's church also commends him in his thought and commends him for breaking the rule.

CONGRATULATIONS

We congratulate our worthy and valuable exchange, The Methodist Protestant, Baltimore, Md., in its forward advance in paying for its printing plant. The Methodist Protestant launched a campaign some months ago to equip its own plant by asking for birthday offerings for the cause. The contributions to date are about $8,000. We congratulate that paper.

GET READY

Get ready. Get ready for what? Get ready to attend the Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention of the North Carolina Conference which meets in Reidsville, N. C., July 12, 13, 14, 1921. It would be a good thing if all our Sunday schools could send a representative to this Convention. It would add interest, be a medium of exchange of ideas, and enlarge the horizon of Sunday school work in our Conference. Let us have a good attendance.

THE FINAL CALL

When this issue of THE SUN reaches the public it will be nearing the time of the final call for payments to the Men and Millions pledges during the "Self-Denial" period. It may be that you have or have not denied yourself of something in order to pay that part of your pledge which may be due. If you have not you do not know the joy that is sure to come by such an act. In fact it is the great joy that comes from giving that really makes giving worth while. If those who received a gift were the only ones benefitted, giving would be far from being of help and interest. The reflex action upon the giver is always worth the price.

Do not let April pass without entering whole-heartedly into the effort put forth to make this month a pay-up period. Every enterprise of the Church is sorely in need of every dollar pledged.

JOHN BURROUGHS

In the passing of John Burroughs a few weeks ago the world lost one of its interesting and lovable characters. Burroughs was a naturalist and brought to the reading world a fine appreciation of the birds, flowers, trees, and waters. He saw great sermons in the life of the feathery tribe; he saw in flowers the very emblem of purity and holiness; the trees to him were the monuments of God's great creation, while the waters told him many things because he listened to the rippling waters of many streams and watched the countless waves on bay and ocean.

Who would envy the man who loves nature and has had long association with it? John Burroughs filled his place in life, and that place was to give to his fellow travelers a larger and better life by calling attention to the greatness of nature, God's handiwork.

JUDGE JETER C. PRITCHARD

On Sunday morning, April 10, Judge Jeter C. Pritchard passed away at his home in Asheville, N. C. "The lives of great men remind us", said the hymn writer; and the life of Judge Pritchard reminds us that others following in his foot steps can make their names sublime, if only Judge Pritchard's example is followed.

Judge Pritchard started without money, but not without ambition. He, like many others, started without much encouragement, but he had a determination that no opposition could break, and succeed he must. He was a member of the United States Senate for ten years and was later appointed Judge of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia. During Roosevelt's administration he was appointed District Judge of the Court of Appeals, and this position he held from 1903 to the time of his death. He filled every public office committed to his care with honor to his State.

Lives of such men should be an inspiration to the young men of this age by pointing them to the way of success, if only they will apply themselves as Judge Pritchard applied himself.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

ENGLAND AVERTING A GREAT COAL STRIKE

Nothing less than Anglo-Saxon arbitrary reasonableness and their sense of danger of wrecking the Government of England, has prevented the Triple Alliance of miners, railway men, and transport workers from tying up the whole economic system of the country in the greatest strike in history. After more than a million coal miners left their jobs on April 1, there have been many reports to the effect that the miners would be joined by the two other great branches of British industrial workers, the railway men and the transport workers. But latest reports confirm the country's confidence in the fidelity of the latter workers to remain at their posts.

It has seemed that a show-down between the Government on one hand and the trade unions on the other, must come soon. Probably the strike will not gain any greater proportions; but the question raised by most readers is: What is this strike about? Here is the gist of the situation given by the New York Evening Post: "The miners demand a national wage agreement to be guaranteed either by the Government or by a national pool of profits of the mining industry, instead of a regional wage agreement with varying rates proposed by mine owners."

Evidently the movement has something more than the significance of an ordinary strike. It has national complications with it. Says the Literary Digest. "Whatever the event of the outcome, the strike has served to reveal in a startling fashion, certain fundamental issues which must be settled not by Great Britain only, but by America and the other industrial nations, as our own press remark, before there can be permanent peace in industry."

The miners have begun a movement which is tending to run the English Government by means of trade unions, tearing down the existing class order. Their ultimate aim may not be comparable to that of the Bolshevik Government, yet it has some things in common. Probably the plea that there must "be a national pool of profits" means that the workers have tendencies for a more equitable state of socialism rather than communism, as practiced by the Russian government.

There is no doubt of the fact that it is a culmination of the friction between the various capitalistic and labor classes in the country. England is not easily torn to pieces; so it is believed that this spirit of antagonism will gradually be adjusted between the warring factions, but not without its far reaching effects. Just what these effects will be it is difficult to tell. Probably the industrial nations of the world will devote themselves more strenuously towards new laws for the protection of the working man against the capitalist before industry has a chance to settle down in the position that it occupied before the Great War. The big trouble at present, however, is not with the pooling profits in a common treasury, as with keeping industry going. The fact is that there are not very many profits to pool.

THE LEAGUE OF CHURCHES

Where the League of Nations remains untried, and where the diplomacy has failed, a league of churches will reap. Instead of depending solely upon the political developments of nations, it is the opinion of two of Britain's greatest men, Field Marshal Earl Haig and Prof. William A. Curtis of Edinburgh University, that the world must be saved by a league of churches.

"The Gospel of Christ is the world's only social hope and the sole promise of world peace," says the famous British soldier before a Scottish audience in behalf of the Federation of Churches in the British Empire and "visualized as the beginning of a federation of churches" which would include all the nations of the world.

The Literary Digest quotes Prof. Curtis: "I believe the Church requires and is called to create some effective counterpart to the diplomatic services of the state. In addition to its Home Mission and its Foreign Mission it has an international mission to prosecute, and nowhere more urgently than in Europe the seat of historic Christianity. Already the way is opening. The war has shattered many prejudices, racial and religious. University life is largely emancipated from ecclesiastical restraint. Even in Central Europe and the Balkans the clash of creeds is assuming a new aspect, the rival churches are confronted by novel conditions and common dangers, the adherents of different systems are learning suppress or forgotten facts regarding one another."

"A new opportunity plainly offers itself to the Christian conscience and imagination, and a very solemn calling is sounding. Men look to alliances of Nations, to the League of Nations, to labor federations, to Socialist combinations to bring in the political millennium of international peace. Have they not a right to look also to the Christian Churches, to the Church, incomparably the completest organization in the world, with the highest potentialities and the deepest obligations for the service of reconciliation?"

Speaking before the new Congress on April 12, President Harding definitely and finally proclaimed his rejection of the League of Nations, saying that acceptance of the League now would be no less than betrayal of the mandate of the November elections. The President did, however, ask Congress to declare peace and asked for ratification of such sections of the Versailles Treaty as protected American rights and interests in the war settlement.

The conference of the mine owners, the mine workers and government officials held in London, April 12, resulted in a failure to reach any definite settlement. The only government proposal which the miners would give the least consideration to was the one in which the government offered to give assistance towards helping to mitigate the wage reduction after a wage settlement.

OUR ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

The plastering has been completed in the "Children's Home". The carpenters are now laying the floors. The work will soon be done. The painter's brush will put on the finishing touch and the building will be complete. We hope this will all be done in the next few weeks. The ladies are writing to me asking about the cost of the beds and furnishings for the rooms. We hope that enough of the Ladies Aid Societies and individuals in the Southern Christian Convention will become interested enough to furnish this building. It will cost $100.00 to furnish a matron's room. There are four of these rooms. One has already been taken. A bed in the dormitory rooms will cost $25.00 for bedsteads, springs and mattress. The bed linen will cost whatever you choose. If your Society cannot furnish a room, furnish one bed or two beds in the dormitory. Let us know by the first of May how many you can furnish.

It has been our dream and hope since this building was first advocated that we might build it, furnish it, and pay for it when it was finished. We have done our best. Time, energy, and thought has been put into this work trying to make that dream and hope come true; but right at this time it looks as though we will not be able to accomplish it. We have some lumber bills to meet and the carpenters are to pay and our money is running low. But I still have faith enough in our church folks to believe it will yet be accomplished. Many of the churches have sent in their Easter offering. Some have not. What an opportunity to invest in a home mission work that will take time and eternity to tell what the income will be. It is your opportunity; it is your privilege, to hold up our hands at this time of need in our work. If you love us show your love by your works. Faith without works is dead. It takes work to back up faith.

You may love us, but your love will not help us much unless it is backed up with loving deeds.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find ten cents for March and April. I wrote a letter last month and forgot to put my five cents in with the letter. With every good wish and love to all—Mary Matkins.

I noticed the five cents was absent from your letter, but I thought I lost it. I am real glad to have your letter this week, as it keeps the Corner alive. I wish many of the little folks would write letters for the Corner.—"Uncle Charley."

"Tell Me a Story"

WHEN THE CAP FITTED

Duke looked up from the bone he was gnawing and glared at his little mistress and her visitor. His bushy tail did not even hint at wagging; there was a fierce light in his eyes, and a low growl rumbled down in his throat.

Ruth caught Marian by the arm. "Oh, let's run!" she cried. "He's going to bite us."

"No, he won't, if we don't touch his bone."

Marian felt ashamed of her dog, and vainly tried to think of some excuse for his conduct. "I don't know what makes him act so," she said as the two girls walked on.

"Is he always as cross as he has been since I came?" asked Ruth.

"He didn't used to be," returned Marian sorrowfully. "But now he's getting crosser and crosser all the time."

They had reached the front porch by this time, and behind the woodbine stood Marian's brother, Paul. His face was red with anger and his fists were clinched. "I am going straight to mamma, miss!" he exclaimed as he saw Marian. "We'll see if she lets you talk that way!"

"What way?" asked Marian in astonishment, and Ruth thought of her own brother, and felt very glad he was not as ill-tempered and unreasonable as Paul.

Paul paid no attention to his sister's question, but went into the house, and slammed the door very hard. A few moments later mamma's sweet voice called: "Marian, dear, I want to see you."

Marian obeyed quickly. Mamma was waiting for her in the sewing-room, and her face looked puzzled and sad. Paul sat by the window, and it was plain that he had been crying. Marian looked from one to the other in astonishment.

"How is this, my daughter?" mamma began. "Paul tells me he heard you saying to Ruth that he is growing crosser all the time."

Marian stared, then broke into a merry laugh.

"Why, mamma, we weren't talking about Paul at all. Duke growled at us, and Ruth asked me if he always acted so cross; and then I said he is getting crosser and crosser all the time."

"Oh!" said mamma, and then she, too, laughed. "Run back to your play, dear," she said cheerily. "It was only a mistake, it seems."

When Marian had left the room mamma looked over at Paul. His cheeks were redder than before, but now it was shame that colored them instead of anger. "I just heard them talking about being cross, and I s'posed that meant me," he explained.

"It was rather a queer mistake, wasn't it?" mamma asked. And Paul made no answer.

"If your father had overheard that conversation," mamma continued, after waiting a moment for Paul to speak, "would he have thought the girls were talking about him?"

"Of course not!" said Paul indignantly.

"But why not?" persisted mamma.

"Because he isn't ever cross, and they couldn't have meant him." Paul spoke earnestly, though he could not help smiling as he met his mother's meaning look.

"Exactly," said mamma, nodding her head. "And it was easy for you to make the blunder, because you have been cross and ill-natured through almost all of Ruth's visit. The cap fitted you, and you put it on without waiting to see if it was meant for you or not. Uneasy conscience, my boy, makes people very sensitive about what they happen to hear.

"A boy who tries his best to do right doesn't need to worry over what people say about him. And that sort of boy will not be likely to think that all the unpleasant things he overhears are meant for him."—Weekly Welcome.

LEE'S KINDNESS

A humble countryman was driving a loaded wagon over a muddy road in Virginia. His team was light and progress was slow and difficult. At last his wagon sank in a deep rut and the struggling horses stopped. He had "stalled", hard and fast. Nothing he could do—yelling at his horses, whipping them, prying at his wagon wheels—would extricate him.

Meantime there were passers by train in plenty. But it was war time and most of them had on hand difficulties of their own. Underlying officers pushed ahead of the lickless wagoner, cavalrymen rode by without apparent concern; and even privates on foot were too much engrossed to lend a hand.

But just then up rode an elderly man of soldierly bearing and kindly face. At once he saw the difficulty, and at once he dismounted, gave some suggestions, put his shoulder to the muddy wheel and helped the driver out to solid earth and sent him on his way.

Not until later did the grateful beneficiary learn that he had been aided by no less a personage than the Commander-in-Chief of the Confederate Army.—Kind Words

A WISE LITTLE BROWN BEE

Once a little brown bee was invited to tea
By a little pond lily he knew,
So he hastened away that very same day
To partake of her fresh honey dew.

Now, this little brown bee, so delighted was he,
That he really forgot to go home,
And lingered and sipped till the yellow sun dipped
Far down and the twilight had come.

Oh! this poor little bee, how embarrassed was he!
For his hostess then went straight to sleep,
Her green shutters closed tight, all safe for the night,
With little bee fast in their keep.
Since then little bee, when he goes out to tea,
To save his feelings a shock,
By failing to know when home he should go,
Just carries a red "four o'clock".

—Annie K. Chunn, in Ex.

IGNORANT MR. TURTLE

Said Mr. Turtle, "It is queer—
The things I often see and hear;
Some things are hard to quite believe,
And must be told just to deceive."

"Strange things do happen, I'll admit,
I've not a single doubt of it,
They tell me boats 'turn turtle', though,
But they can't make me think it's so."

On April 6, the North Carolina Corporation Commission sent a delegation composed of representatives of the various cities of the State, before Henry W. Miller, vice-president and general manager of the Southern Railway Company, to urge the establishment of train service from Goldsboro to Cincinnati, by the Asheville route.

THE BULLETIN

PERSONAL

Bro. J. H. McAden, Semora, N. C., passed to his reward on April 10. He was Semora's pioneer merchant, a loyal friend to THE SUN, his church and his fellowmen.

Pastor Knight of the Raleigh church began a revival meeting last Sunday which is to continue until May 1. We note that the publicity committee is giving the meeting good advertising in the city of Raleigh.

Brother R. S. Petty, Greensboro, N. C., called to see us the other day. Brother Petty is deeply interested in all departments of the denomination and believes in putting emphasis on the principles of the Church.

Dr. F. G. Coffin, President of the American Christian Convention, preached for the Burlington congregation last Sunday night. It was a great deliverance and much enjoyed by all who had the privilege of hearing him.

Revs. W. J. Hall, F. G. Coffin, O. S. Thomas, W. P. Minton, J. O. Atkinson, and Mrs. A. M. Howsare, constitute a deputation who are just completing a tour of all our colleges and schools in the interest of the life-recruit work over the Forward Movement of the Christian Church. They were at Elon College during the past week.

We are requested to call attention to the Rally meeting of the women in the North Carolina Conference to be held in the Burlington Christian church, May 3. The women and the young people are urged to attend, and we are hoping that the occasion may be a great one. Not only do we urge a good attendance at this meeting, but we desire to impress upon the people in all communities and all Conferences where these rallies are to be held and the importance of attending them.

The Editor was privileged on last Sunday to be with New Elam church, Chatham County, N. C. The inclement weather prevented the usual good attendance but nevertheless the day was enjoyed and acquaintance with many of THE SUN's friends was made. Rev. B. J. Howard is preacher, and the possibilities of the church are many. New Elam, like so many of our churches, needs a pastor much more than it needs a preacher. It is difficult for a church to do its best with its leader preaching only once a month, instead of pastoring half or all of the time. We believe that New Elam is one of our large country congregations that will in the very near future support a pastor for all his time.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

DO YOU TAKE THE HERALD

Do you take The Herald of Gospel Liberty? Especially do we ask this question of the ministers in the Southern Convention. The Herald is the general organ of the Christian Church in the United States and it is worthy of a place in any home. You need THE SUN and also The Herald of Gospel Liberty.

MEMORIALS

This is that season of the year, a season of flowers, when memory wings its way to the last resting place of some loved one. Many churches are planning memorial services and we commend the thought and spirit. It is fitting and appropriate that memorials be held in memory of our loved ones, and we trust that all our churches will find a suitable time for these worthy occasions.

A TOUR TO EUROPE

Leaders of the Old Hickory—Thirtieth Division—are planning a trip to Europe some time during the approaching summer. The party will leave New York on the "Alabania" a Cumard Line boat, July 12, and will return arriving in New York, August 21, thus covering a period of forty days. The cost of the trip will be about $565, and will include all necessary expenses. Those interested in the trip should address Mr. Albert F. Pierce, Jr., Travel Department, American Express Building, 65 Broadway, New York City.

THE STATE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Registration at the State Sunday School Convention held in Raleigh, April 12-13-14, indicated that 857 registered delegates attended the sessions of the Convention besides hundreds of visitors. According to the report of the Convention received the delegates were from 43 counties of the State. The four counties having the largest number of delegates besides Wake were Guilford County with 44, Durham with 27, Alamance with 25 and Vance with 23.

The addresses delivered at the Convention by several people of national reputation besides a large number of in-state people were said to be of a very high order. The Convention was considered very inspiring and helpful to all who attended.

The address by the President, Mr. Gilbert T. Stephenson of Winston-Salem on the subject, "Keeping Our Balance in Education" was considered one of the greatest addresses of the Convention, and resulted in the Convention appointing a Committee composed of Mr. J. M. Broughton as chairman, Mr. Herbert Gunter and Mrs. Chas. Van Noppen to confer with the President of the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly with a view of his naming a committee of public school teachers to constitute a joint committee to consider a system of high school credits for Bible study in Sunday schools.

The reports submitted at the Convention indicated that in the nine months since Mr. D. W. Sims has been employed as State Superintendent seven additional counties have been organized and there are now sixteen counties with a County Sunday School Association. The reports also showed that the office of the Association has been established in Raleigh and a free circulating library is being opened for the Sunday school workers of the State. The old debt of $4,800.00 has been paid in full and when the pledges on hand are paid the Association will be free from debt.

Resolutions were adopted by the Convention concerning the death of Mr. Geo. W. Watts of Durham who for many years was a member of the State Executive Committee of the Association, and also Judge Jeter C. Pritchard who was one time President of the organization.

Resolutions were also passed by the Convention thanking the press of the State for so generously printing news about the Sunday School cause.

The last session of the Convention, Thursday night, was preceded by a parade in which it is stated about 1000 Sunday school men participated.

By unanimous vote the invitation of the Charlotte Sunday school workers was accepted and the 1922 State Convention goes to Charlotte, April 11-12-13, 1922.

The officers of the Association were elected as follows: Gilbert T. Stephenson, Winston-Salem, President; Jor. G. Brown, Raleigh, Vice-President; E. B. Crow, Raleigh, Treasurer. Executive Committee: J. M. Broughton, Raleigh, Chairman; M. A. Briggs, Durham; J. A. Brown, Chadburn; L. W. Clark, Spray; W. B. Cooper, Wilmington; Kader R. Curtis, Kinston; D. H. Dixon, Goldsboro; T. S. Franklin, Charlotte; W. A. Harper, Elon College; J. B. Ivey, Charlotte, F. C. Niblock, Concord; Hugh Parks, Franklinville; J. L. Separk, Gastonia; Geo. W. Stanton, Wilson; C. S. Starbuck, Winston-Salem; A. E. Tate, High Point; Walker Taylor, Wilmington; C. M. Van Poole, Salisbury; R. G. Vaughan, Greensboro; E. E. Wheeler, Asheville; W. A. Withers, Raleigh.

BURLINGTON MAKES EFFORT FOR M. P. COLLEGE

Burlington made a heroic effort last week in her attempt to secure the proposed Methodist Protestant College that is to be built in North Carolina. Greensboro and High Point are the two towns contesting with Burlington for the location of the new college. Burlington's offer include a considerable tract of land, several hundred thousand dollars in cash, and other considerations that are very important. We understand that the committee on location will meet May 20 to decide definitely where the college will be placed.

The new building is a gift to the Society from the estate of Mr. James Talcott.

CHURCH NEWS

REMEMBERED BY WHAT THEY HAVE DONE

Four years and two weeks ago I entered upon my work as pastor at Rosemont and Berea. At that time I was a stranger in a strange land. It did not, however, take me long to discover that I was among a most cordial, hospitable people. And as the weeks lengthened into months and the months into years, wro was at first cordiality and hospitality grew into friendship and fellowship of the highest type.

Today we separate as of the first order. I go only at the call of duty. And as is always the case when real friends come to the place where the road divides, there is an indescribable feeling of reluctance. Yet it is a joy to go when such blessed memories can be carried in the heart as we, my family and I, have in our hearts today. We remember the people of these two churches for what they have done during the four years of our service together. Their attitude throughout has been one of sympathetic co-operation and enthusiastic endeavor as related to the work we have tried to do. And to us personally, we could not ask for a more generous consideration at all times. They have manifested the unforgetful spirit and, on many occasions have surprised us with evidences of their good will and esteem for us.

We remember them for what they have been and for what they have done. As we turn our faces to another field and give ourselves to another task, we cannot forget friends like these. God bless them and prosper the work of their hands at all times.

EVANGELISTIC MEETING GREENSBORO, N. C.

Rev. Russell Clem, D. D., of Springfield, Ohio, will begin a series of evangelistic meetings with the Greensboro Christian church Sunday, April 24, and continue ten days. Dr. Clem has been a very successful church builder and evangelist in his home city at Springfield, Ohio, where he has built one central church, The Summerbell Memorial, and two additional churches as his work has grown from the church and extended in the city.

For several years he has served as President of his Conference, and rendered great service to the entire field covered by the Conference, but at his own request was not reelected last session. It would be delightful to have him return to the Southern Christian Convention in whose territory he was reared. He will find a hearty welcome, if we can induce him as a result of this visit to remain with us.

He shall have a most hearty welcome while with us at Greensboro, and ministers and laymen in reach of the city are invited to attend our meeting while he is with us. We anticipate a most delightful visit, expect a great meeting, and a gracious revival which may mean a new day for our progressive church in this important center.

SOLEMN VOWS

FULLER-BENTON

Miss Minnie Pearl Benton, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Junius John Benton, and Rev. Walter Bennett Fuller were quietly married on April 6, 1921 at the bride's home, near Sunbury, N. C. Only a few of the near relatives witnessed the ceremony. Miss Ellen Speight was maid of honor, and Mr. Clyde Benton was best man. Miss Josie Hobbs rendered the wedding march.

The parlor was beautifully decorated with flowers.

After an extended bridal trip, they will be at home to their friends in Ivor, Va.

Rev. Mr. Fuller is pastor of a group of churches near Ivor, Va., and is a successful preacher and pastor. They are both popular and have a host of friends, who wish for them a long and happy wedded life.

J. M. ROBERTS.

McABEE-ROBERTS

The marriage of Miss Lucille McLane Roberts, attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Roberts of Windsor, Va., and Mr. Fulmer Avis McAbee, a prosperous young man of Norfolk, Va., took place Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, April 7, 1921, on the mezzanine floor of the Southland Hotel, Norfolk. The impressive ring ceremony, which was read by the writer, was witnessed by only a few relatives and friends. The bride, who was unattended, wore a stylish traveling suit of brown tricotine with accessories to match. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of brides roses and orchids. The bride is one of the leading singers of the choir of the Windsor Christian church of which she is a member. After a wedding trip North Mr. and Mrs. McAbee will reside in Norfolk, Va.

CALLED HOME

GREEN

Mrs. Emily Virginia Green was born July 27, 1842, and died March 18, 1921, aged 78 years, 7 months, and 21 days. Death occurred at Linville at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Barrix with whom she had made her home for several years. Surviving are two daughters, four sons, thirteen grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren. Her husband died September 5, 1907. Sister Green was a member of the Antioch Christian church, and was a highly respected Christian woman. Funeral services were conducted at Linville, March 20, 1921 by the writer.

A. W. ANDES.

RINEHART

Garland, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Rinehart of Stanley, Va., R. F. D., died Wednesday, March 30, 1921, aged four months and three days.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, on Thursday, March, 31. Bro. and Sister Rinehart are members of New Port Christian church.

May our Heavenly Father, who giveth and hath taken away, comfort and sustain the grief-stricken parents.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

KECK

Mary Catherine Keck, wife of Henry Keck departed this life at the home of her son near Altamahaw, N. C., April 4, 1921 at the age of 83 years. Two daughters and one son survive. Three daughters and her husband preceded her to the spirit world. Twenty-eight grandchildren and twenty-five great grandchildren survive her. She had been a worthy member of Bethlehem church for many years. Her grandsons and granddaughters acted as pall-bearers and flower-bearers at her burial. Two of her granddaughters sang a sweet duet at the funeral service which was conducted by her pastor at Bethlehem church. Interment in Bethlehem Cemetery.

J. W. HOLT.

MOSS

Edward Lee Moss departed this life March 19, 1921, aged twenty-four years, one month and one day. He was the son of Mrs. T. R. Moss of Kents, Va., and leaves a wife and two children, together with three brothers and one sister to mourn his death.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. E. R. Nelson and the body laid to rest in Mt. Auburn Christian cemetery.

He was a good man and loved by many friends, as was shown by the many beautiful flowers that were placed upon his grave as a last tribute of their love. He will be greatly missed in his home and community. The bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of their many friends. May God comfort them.

FULTON

Joel Wyatt Fulton died at his home near Salem Chapel church, Forsythe Co., N. C., April 10, 1921 in the seventy-fourth year of his life. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at Salem Chapel and the body laid to rest in the church cemetery. He leaves a widow, four sons, four daughters, other relatives and a large circle of friends. His whole life had been spent in this community and he had been a member of Salem Chapel since boyhood. His neighbors bear testimony to his Christian character and expressed their appreciation of his life by the unusually large attendance at the funeral.

We extend our Christian sympathy to his family and friends and pray that his memory may ever be to them a precious heritage becoming richer and sweeter until all are reunited in "the far away home of the soul."

N. G. NEWMAN.

BYRD

Jesse E. Byrd was born in Holy Neck District, Nansemond Co., Va., July 29, 1853 and died March 1, 1921, aged 67 years, 7 months, and 2 days. Death was very sudden and came while Mr. Byrd was working in the field. His son had just turned away from him, and as he walked farther away he turned and looked toward his father and saw him lying on the ground where he had fallen. When he got to his side he was breathing his last.

He was a member of the Holy Neck church and in point of membership was one of the oldest members.

A large circle of friends attended the funeral services held at the home. Interment was made in the family cemetery near the house.

He leaves to survive him two brothers J. R. Byrd, Franklin, Va., W. H. Byrd, Suffolk, Va., and four sisters. Mrs. J. E. Byrd, Suffolk, Va., Mrs. J. T. Britton, Mrs. G. E. Worrell and Mrs. J. H. Bennett of near Holland, Va. His children are Mrs. J. H. Britt, Holland, Va., Miss Adair Byrd, Ocean View, Va., L. H. Byrd at home, Jesse Rawles Byrd, Hendersonville, N. C., and one grandchild, Anna Virginia Britt, Holland, Va.

His wife had preceded him to the great beyond about five months previous.

W. M. JAY.

HOWELL

Mrs. Neverson Howell, formerly Mrs. Sarah A. Davidson, died at her home near Holy Neck church, March 16, 1921, aged 67 years. Mrs. Howell was stricken with complete paralysis and never regained consciousness. She lived only two days after being stricken. She was for many years a member of Holy Neck church and was laid to rest in the family cemetery near the church. Four sons and one daughter survive her. Crowder Davidson, Franklin, Va., J. O. Jethro, and Peter at home, Thomas Davidson near Holy Neck and Mrs. Emmett Saunders, South Quay, Va.

W. M. JAY.

BROOKS

Mrs. Josephine Brooks, wife of William Brooks, deceased, was born January 1, 1847 and died March 31, 1921 in Franklin, Va., aged 74 years and 3 months.

She had been a patient sufferer for several months, the frailties of old age and finally paralysis being the cause of death.

Mrs. Brooks joined the Holy Neck Christian church in 1866 and loved her church dearly. If she had but a dollar to her name she would give a part of it to the church.

Her husband died soon after their marriage and she never remarried.

Two sisters and three brothers survive. Mrs. Helen Daughtrey, Franklin, Va., Mrs. B. F. Bell, Petersburg, Va., D. P. Rawles, Portsmouth, Va., R. E. Rawles, Franklin, Va., and B. B. Rawles, Clearwater, Fla.

She was buried in the Holy Neck cemetery.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—HARRELL

The sun was shedding its rays of light, the birds were warbling forth their merry songs near, and around the home of brother and sister Burgess Harrell when hush! the touch of an angel came and took from this once happy home, the jewel of the home, the devoted wife, and mother, Zuzie Pierce Harrell. God saw and knew that such a life was too pure for earth, and so He plucked as it were, the rare flower, and transplanted in the celestial city there to await the resurrection morn. None knew her, but to love her.

Whereas, we humbly bow to God's divine will and leave to His tender care, the two sweet little motherless girls, Zuzie was a girl of rare character putting her full trust in Jesus the redeemer of the world: Therefore be it resolved:

First, while deploring seemingly this untimely going of our friend and co-worker in every good work, we commend her life to those she left behind especially to her dear young husband, father, mother, and her entire devoted family and pray she may be waiting for each and every one without a single exception at Heaven's pearly gates.

Second, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy spread on the minutes of Liberty Spring Christian church records.

A TWO HUNDRED DOLLAR PRIZE

A two hundred dollar scholarship has been offered to rural school teachers by Kenyon L. Butterfield, president of the American Country Life Association, Amherst, Massachusetts.

The prize goes to the rural school teacher whose essay best describes an effective elementary school taught by a country school teacher. Effective means adapted to the needs of American country life, in curriculum, in community enterprise, or in community relationships, in any one or in all these particulars.

The essay must be based on actual personal experience of the writer, and it may include practical plans for future country school development. The contest is limited to country school teachers actually working in the country, and the scholarship means two hundred dollars to the winner for further preparation in rural school work in any normal school or college.

The time limit for this essay is August 15, 1921. For detailed information write to Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, Amherst, Massachusetts.

TODAY

THE EDITOR

TODAY is that opportune time when we may do a golden deed to some one in need. Today we may give some one a cup of water in His name, say a cheering word, do a good deed, lend a helping hand, or point some one from a way of wandering to the path of right and light. Today we sow the seed that will bring forth the harvest of tomorrow; today we lay the foundation that must stand the storms of tomorrow. Today is ours—tomorrow is a “far off event” that may not reach our shore. Today the golden threads of life are placed in our hands—tomorrow they may be gone. Seize them today, seize them now. Today is salvation’s day; tomorrow is but a hope half promised to us. Today is the day and the time to be up and doing.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

THE many friends of Rev. M. W. Butler in the South will be glad to know that he is doing a good work at Muncie, Ind. At this time he is in a revival campaign, assisted by Rev. Geo. D. Eastes and his party. The meeting is expected to run from April 10 to May 1. In a private note he says he is now under the (heaviest) job of his life, but that there are some encouraging indications. He is looking and praying for great results in the present effort. Let his many friends in the South remember him in prayer—prayer for the blessings of God to rest upon his labors and upon his assistants, too. Let us see if we cannot make him feel the power of the prayers of his brethren in the South.

Some of our brethren continue to feel the force of the figures Dr. Harper and Bro. Riddle gave out in these columns some weeks ago. They seem to find it hard to believe that the decrease in our work is north of the Mason-Dixon Line, but the facts seem to show the truth of that claim. While our brethren here do not rest easy under the claim of these figures, our brethren in the North seem perfectly indifferent to the situation as it relates to them—so far as we have seen they paid no attention to the claims of these figures at all. That sort of silence, or refusing to admit the facts, may suit them, but that kind of silence will get them nowhere on the way to reinvigorating the body of our brethren in the North. To refuse to recognize the facts as they are only means an utter failure to admit that there is need of reinvigorating the whole body of our people, and that is a fact, although the greatest portion of our people are in the North, and that is where our heavy losses have come upon the Christian Church. Let us get up like men and face the situation, and then do something to amend. Let us never be afraid to face the truth. If we do, we may expect that some day the facts will face us and then the exposure will come and we shall see what we have been trying to be, but what we are not. Better get up like men and tell the whole truth and let the truth become the mighty fulcrum to move our people to great activity, both in organization and in actual and definite work for the promotion of the cause of Christ.

Note—The Herald of Gospel Liberty, through the pens of Editor Kerr and Secretary Burnett gives answer in its issue of April 14, 1921. Dr. Barrett's article was written before that issue of The Herald appeared—Editor THE SUN.)

We have often heard of men making fine resolutions and then failing to live up to said resolutions, and of course nothing came of them. A mere resolution does not mean anything, but a resolution which is supported by real resolution, may mean very much. We recently read of one minister who made a resolution and then supported it out and out by a real purpose to do the thing which he felt was so much needed. He saw many things calling for attention from him as pastor of the church. He looked the situation full in the face, and then made the most determined effort to get hold of the situation at the right end. He said:

"I will find time to commune with God and get from Him a real and vital message, or I will leave the work."

If we all could buckle down to a life of prayer as this minister seems to have done, and if we would stick to it as he did, we should not have need of people to fill our pews. Let us resolve to sacrifice anything in order to wait upon God for a message, a vital message, we should much the sooner get what we want and what we must have, if something is not too easily given up. Like Paul, let us resolve to do one thing and let that one thing be a life of prayer.

ELON LETTER

THE forward movement of the American Christian Convention conceived the idea of sending a team of specialists to all our colleges to present to our student bodies in an intensive fashion the matter of the choice of a life-work. The team reached Elon Friday and left on Tuesday, but the influence of their visit still abides and will abide for many a day.

The method of approach was three fold—gathering of selected groups, platform addresses for everybody, and personal interviews. The Conference for ministerial students alone, held by Dr. Coffin, evidently deeply impressed the young men who are here in preparation for ministerial service. They saw their life-work in relation to their college days in a new and exalted sense. Out of other selected groups, too, real assistance was given to many.

The platform addresses were of a high order—both in concept and in execution. All visiting members of the team took part in them, Dr. Coffin speaking three times, and Mrs. M. T. Morrill and Rev. Willoe J. Hall twice each. Dr. J. O. Atkinson assisted for this time only in the group conferences and the interviews. Later he will give a series of chapel talks in the way of following up the team campaign. In all these platform deliverances there was no attempt at juggling with the crowd, but an earnest insistence that the call of God to all-time service be given due consideration and proper evaluation.

It was in the personal interviews, however that the real work was done. Those who came volunteered to do so and many were helped to face life's opportunity and obligation fully and conscientiously. No attempt was made to overpersuade anyone, but so to present the service of the Kingdom as to have it squarely met in the choice of a life-work. Other professions than the ministry were considered and other problems than the selection of a life-work. Many expressed themselves as profitably and inspirationally served. Here again was demonstrated the proverb that hand-picked fruit is best.

Some may object to such presentation of the call to Christian service, alleging that God will call those whom He desires. The fallacy in this view is that it forgets that God more frequently calls to His service through a fellow man than by any other method. This line of argument would also prevent our speaking personally to a sinner and endeavoring to lead him to Christ. It is not only our right, it is our duty and obligation to lead our fellows to Christ and into the giving of the life in service to His Kingdom. We shall not secure the 301 ministers needed now to supply our pulpits unless we accept our responsibility in this direction, and we will need twice that number if we are to discharge our obligation to the unsaved of the nation, to say nothing of our duty to the non-Christian peoples. We must have recruits for Kingdom service, and this method promises much in securing them.

Elon appreciates the visit of the Life-Recruit Team, bids them God-speed in the splendid work, and will welcome them again with open arms and sympathetic hearts.

W. A. HARPER.

SHALL WE LOOK TO EUROPE FOR OUR SPIRITUAL STRENGTH?

By Rev. Charles S. Macfarland

HALL we look to Europe for our moral ideals and for our spiritual resources? I have begun to think that this is not an unreasonable consideration.

At a recent public gathering in honor of the new Ambassador from Italy, for some reason which I do not understand, the customary prayer of gratitude to God on such occasions was eliminated. I suspected the omission was on the assumption that any religious touch to the occasion might possibly be offensive to a foreign Ambassador. If so, it must have been with some surprise that his address was listened to, replete as it was, not only with a deep religious spirit and reverent tone, but with discerning quotations from the Holy Scripture and touching reference to the religious life.

The newspaper dispatches nearly every morning contain, in connection with our foreign correspondence, references to impending dangers threatening "American rights", and "American interests." The various trade journals constantly bemoan our economic and business conditions. The Wall Street Journal pleads with pathos for the reduction of wage scales to save us from impending poverty.

Meanwhile, strangely enough, the most buoyant notes of faith and hope come from the devastated regions of France, from turbulent Italy. Their messengers never utter a note of complaint, they do not come to beg, they are reserved and dignified and, despite all their vicarious suffering, they have no mien of pharisaism. They often make no appeal except that which is inherent in the moral tone and the spiritual force of their message.

There are three of these messengers whose public utterances I have heard and with whom I have had the privilege of some personal conference. Rene Viviani spent a little time the other day with the Federal Council's Commission on Relation with France and Belgium. M. Viviani is not distinctively a churchman; indeed there are those who have counted him among the unfaithful because of his attitude many years ago on the relation between the Church and State. But the burden of his utterances was that of gratitude for the moral and spiritual help of our churches, without which, according to Viviani, our material help would have availed little.

Speaking of the attitude of his country toward religion, he said:

"Before the war there were those who thought that we were a narrow-hearted, skeptical, superficial nation, without spiritual force, without moral inspiration. The true nature of our people came out in the war and the world realized that France had twenty centuries in which she has stood for the rights and liberties of mankind.

"Our nation is a country of tolerance, but also of profound faith. To us has been given the privilege of suffering for mankind. It was one of our great statesmen, who was also an illustrious poet, Lamartine, who characterized France as 'The Christ of humanity.' His word is true in a deep and reverent sense. France has suffered for the sake of the world. It is still her mission to suffer, and from you above all things, she seeks moral and spiritual help in prayerfully and reverently fulfilling her mission.

"She means not only to protect; but to respect religious faith. She believes in Christianity."

Again, perhaps one would not look to a lawyer and diplomat coming from Italy, for spiritual ideals, but the recent address of Vittorio Rolandi Rieci was a most unusual diplomatic utterance. It was somewhat different from what we are used to hearing from foreign ambassadors, and while it was being spoken in the music of the Italian tongue, I felt rather glad, on the whole, that the destinies of the world are not altogether, as some of us are fond of acclaiming, confined to "the English speaking" people. Both the spirit and the words of the utterance were at one and the same time simple and lofty. Our messenger from Italy repudiated in vigorous language both the epicurean and stoic views of life. He refused to accept a materialistic view of social development. "We can still make our own the consoling words of St. Paul, 'We are saved by hope.'" He made an earnest plea for unselfish cooperation in industry and set forth among his highest tributes to his people the fact that, "On signing the armistice, before the grass had grown on the graves of their dead, while their crippled soldiers were still limping through their streets, they rushed with a mother's pity to help the little children of Austria—their conquered enemy. And today they are relieving that misery with brotherly charity." When did history ever record a nobler act of human fellowship—of Christian love?

In his splendid note of hope, he refused to exclude Russia—expressed deep faith in her remarkable people and closed one of his most effective passages with these apostolic words, "If God be for us, who can be against us."

He stood for that element in his nation which believed that, "Not by the subjection of one class to another, but by the reciprocal cooperation of all classes, is order obtained and the authority of the State made the moderating sovereign over all."

I have never felt more deeply and reverently impressed than when this messenger of moral ideals and spiritual hope from Italy closed his address with Whittier's prayer:

"And grant, O Father, that the time
Of earth's deliverance may be near,
When every land and tongue and clime
The message of Thy love shall hear."

Another of these messengers of light from Europe comes from little Serbia—the Bishop of his Church. Like the Ambassador from Italy he presents no appeal nor claim of rights, holds forth no hand inviting alms. He simply revealed the depths of his heart and has shown to those of us who have had the privilege of listening to him how great souls in Europe, tried as by fire, have emerged with deep spiritual power.

Messengers from across the sea by the mails which lie before me, from such men as Hymans, President of the League of Nations, are devoid of all complaint. They all breathe a splendid idealism; they never fail to sound the note of hope. They appeal, not to our "interests," but to our faith.

That there are, in Europe, intrigues, moral lapses, ungodly diplomacies and many other evils, we are well aware, but no one can touch the deeper life of our brethren across the sea, amid their patient suffering, without deep respect, a new confidence in God and man and, above all, without profound humility.

Three years ago America became the moral stay of Europe, but I now find myself again and again asking the question, is Europe now going to save us? Shall we not look for our moral ideals as a nation and for the awakening of our spiritual impulses to our suffering brethren across the sea? May not they, in the last analysis, rather than ourselves, receive the Master's reward, in that it is more blessed to give than to receive?

SUFFOLK LETTER

 THE first Nansmond County district Woman's Missionary Rally was held with Berea church on April 22, 1921, with Superintendent, Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson, in the chair. Devotional exercises were conducted by the pastor, Dr. I. W. Johnson, and Miss Atkinson stated the object of the meeting in a brief and appropriate address and requested Mrs. B. D. Croeker of Suffolk to act as Secretary. The quartet from Suffolk, Mrs. Telza Miller, Miss Julia A. Brinkley, W. W. Ballard and R. J. Brinkley, with Mrs. I. W. Johnson at the organ, rendered "We Are But Strangers Here."

The ten churches of the county were then called and eight of them responded in reports from Woman's Societies, Young People's Societies, Willing Workers and Cradle Rolls; and 86 representatives stood up and reported their work and present condition. The details of this part of the program will, no doubt, be given by Mrs. Croeker, the Secretary of the meeting.

Mrs. R. B. Wood of Oakland read a paper on "Young People, Sunday School and Missions", which provoked Dr. Atkinson to suggest that Societies would do well to provide circulating libraries of good books for members. The suggestion seemed to find a response in the mind of the audience.

Mrs. Bradford Kilby the director of the Suffolk choir, then sang "Something for Thee" accompanied by Mrs. W. R. Wallace, Suffolk's organist.

Miss Bessie Holt, Burlington, N. C., Superintendent of Young People's work for the Southern Christian Convention made an address on "Carest Thou Not That They Perish?", brim full of facts about the mountain work in charge of Miss Iola Hedgepeth, with tear-producing touches of pathos and spiritual fervor that made the audience feel more like helping the neglected in the mountains. It was, as she said it would be, a "heart to heart" talk, with descriptions of conditions found during her recent visit to Miss Hedgepeth and forty mountain families. Her word-pictures were vivid, soul-gripping, as tender as real consecration can feel and speak. An offering was taken of $55.70 for the mountain work. At the request of Miss Holt, Rev. W. W. Staley offered prayers for Miss Hedgepeth and her work. This work is in Carroll County, Va., near Hillsville, and the post-office is Fancy Gap, Va.

Chandler's Orchestra from Suffolk arrived and rendered fine selections. Mrs. I. W. Johnson, Pianist, R. O. Chandler, Miss Nina Oliver, S. A. Berry, W. A. Pharis, and Charlie Gant.

The recess was passed in nearby hall where a Berea menu was served by willing hands and enjoyed by nearly two hundred who said: "It was fine." Oysters, chicken salad, rolls, butter, cheese, crackers, tea, coffee, and three kinds of cake. The hospitality of Berea is proverbial, and here the culinary art seems to have reached the artistic stage. The day was so beautiful and the spring was lavish of her green and her colors that age and youth mingled like all colors in the flowers.

The afternoon session did not nod. The audience was alert to the close. There was no break in the program.

Rev. W. M. Jay conducted devotional service. The Orchestra filled the air with sweet sounds. Mrs. Jack Hargroves read well, "The Woman Who Gave Herself". More orchestra music.

Then Dr. J. O. Atkinson delivered one of his inspirational addresses on the "cup" and the "cross", emphasizing the awful responsibility which Jesus felt in the task which crucifixion implied. This was followed by the adoption of the following resolutions:

RESOLVED: 1. That this good day and this first Woman's Missionary Rally with good Berea inspire grateful thanks to the "Giver of every good and perfect gift."

2. That a rising vote of thanks are due and gratefully given to the good women of Berea for the sumptuous and delicious luncheon served gratuitously to all present.

3. That the solo, quartet, orchestra, and splendid addresses by Mrs. Wood, Miss Holt and Dr. Atkinson furnish additional reason for an expression of appreciation.

4. That we include in this vote our grateful thanks to God for the missionary spirit which this meeting has inspired in our hearts.

The round table discussion was conducted very cleverly by Mrs. B. D. Jones of Holy Neck. This brought out interesting facts as to the history of the organization of missions in the church and the growth of the work.

The meeting voted to make the district rally permanent in Nansmond county.

The quartet sang, "Savior, Source of Every Blessing," and Dr. Atkinson dismissed the audience with a prayer, and the audience retired with the feeling that it was good to be there.

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

STUDENT TO FACE CHARGE OF HAZING

The Wake county Grand Jury on April 13, returned a true bill against an A. & E. student for hazing. Some time ago a hazing episode took place at the A. & E. institution and the affair was thoroughly investigated by the faculty. After the matter was gone into the evidence was turned over to the solicitor by the college authorities. The college felt that it would be unable to discover the guilty party and took advantage of the law passed in 1913 for the purpose of protecting boys from their own folly.

It is time that hazing in colleges be stopped. It is a barbarous affair and always executed in the absence of common sense. We commend the faculty of the A. & E. college for its stand in the findings, and the decision of the court will have a great deal to do with future hazing in our institutions. The public will certainly watch the outcome of the affair.

TRANSIENT MEMBERSHIP

One of the big problems of the Church today is the transient membership. This is especially true of the city church where thousands flock to the cities each year from the rural churches and fail to carry their membership with them. Not only do they fail to bring their church letter with them, but they also often care little or nothing about attending the church of their own denomination. As a matter of fact they feel somewhat a freedom and go to the nearest church, or to the church that gives the first invitation.

If you move to the city or to the country, take your church letter with you, and when the day and the hour of worship comes attend the church of your own denomination.

CIRCULATION OF DENOMINATIONAL PAPERS

It has been stated again and again that the denominational press has possibly the smallest circulation of any class of publications in the country. This indictment is both true and strong. It is a pity that it is true and very much regretted that it is as strong as it is. We know of many instances where there are many more papers of a general religious nature taken than the Church paper. We have in mind while we write, two papers connected with no denomination in any way and each enjoys a circulation of nearly 200,000 each week. These papers can afford a large editorial staff and command a very high rate for advertising.

It is true that any paper not circumscribed by the membership of some organization has a greater opportunity to increase its circulation than the paper that is curbed. However, it has always seemed to us that it is both a great opportunity as well as a duty for every member of a denomination to read the denominational paper.

WHERE OUR MONEY GOES

We very often hear the figures given as to where our money goes, and while the following is not new in any sense, it is supposed to represent the 1919 facts covering the items named below.

Chewing Gum	50 million
Pianos, organs and phonographs	250 million
Furs	300 million
Soft drinks	350 million
Toilet soaps	400 million
Perfumes and cosmetics	750 million
Candy	1,000 million
Automobiles	2,000 million
Tobacco	2,110 million

It is said that the Churches in the United States gave only 29 million for foreign missions during 1919. This is a poor comparison with what we spent for chewing gum, candy, tobacco, etc. Here is a good problem for some one to solve. At this rate how long will it take to Christianize America?

DO NOT READ THIS

Say, Mr. Mrs. or Miss Subscriber, possibly you have overlooked sending your renewal. THE SUN is in need of funds and a little sacrificing upon the part of subscribers now will be very much appreciated.

CONFERENCE RALLIES

We call attention again to the Conference rallies now being held in the various Conferences in the interest of mission work. These rallies have been announced several times in THE SUN, and here is hoping that the readers may have much encouragement.

A man is measured by what he does for his fellowmen and not by the silver, gold, and bonds he may be able to accumulate.

A citizen is a man who is willing and does share the responsibility of his community. A citizen is not a sponge.

CARDINAL PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

WHEREIN WE REJOICE

All of us are elated, none so much so as the writer, over the wonderful things taking place at our Peoples' church, Dover Delaware, under the pastorate of Dr. Roy Helfenstein. For months this church was without a pastor and the coming of Dr. Helfenstein has thus far proven a blessing indeed. From his printed "Order of Service" for Sunday, April 3, this thrilling information is gathered:

"Last Sunday we had evidence of God's promise to answer prayer. Seventy-four persons were received into the communion of this church. What a glorious victory God has given us—he has more than answered our prayers—our cup is full and running over. Fifty was our goal for Easter Sunday. Seventy-four was our harvest. The field is still white. Some that you were praying for have not come into the fold. Do not stop praying. God has promised—and He never fails. Men and women are thinking as never before. Let us still go after them. We should be receiving new members each Sunday and we will receive them if we continue our supplications to God. Do not destroy your prayer list. Keep praying for every person on it and do not stop until you have prayed them into the Kingdom.

"The evangelistic services will be continued each Wednesday and Sunday evenings for the next two months. This is done at the request of many of our members. They will be a success if you will attend—especially the Wednesday evening service. This service will be made attractive with song and prayer. Come and bring a friend with you. Surely you can spare one night from the cares of business to come to the house of God to pray for yourself and your friends. 'THE FIGHT IS ON.' Every man, woman and child in Dover for Christ, should be our slogan."

There is a great field for usefulness and service in Dover and it is a joy indeed to realize that "the man for the place" is there.

GLAD NEWS FROM SUNDAY SCHOOLS

From Bro. Cary Daniels, Secretary Damascus Sunday school, Orange County, N. C.: "You will find enclosed a check for $1.00 for missions. Our school is to contribute one Sunday's offering each month for missions and we hope to increase our offering." This cheers us for we know that in a few years or months there will grow up in Damascus Sunday school a missionary sentiment and interest that will not only help others, but will help the school and community. Who knows but out of this beginning there will one day go from Damascus a missionary who will carry the gospel to the uttermost parts. To this end is the Mission Secretary laboring and praying, not only that Damascus, but scores of others of our schools will in a few years have representatives on the firing line for Christ.

And of like character, with beautiful spirit this comes from the high hills of good old Virginia: "It is with great pleasure that I tell you that you can number Leaksville Sunday school with your number who are giving one Sunday's offering to the Orphanage and one to missions each month. We had been giving to the Or-

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

THE BOOK OF BOOKS

Did you know that what we use as a text book in Sunday school, church, and home, the Bible, bears the grandest of all titles? It is known the world over as the "Book of Books." It is among the oldest in all literature, and is the freshest from the press. In price the poorest man may have a copy as a gift, or he may help to pass it on to others. It has been known as the "Family Bible" and who ever heard of the "Family Shakespeare," yet all honor the bard of Avon. His the grandest of classics, Lincoln knew no other, the richest in prose, the rarest of poetry and the purest in its teachings. No romance can equal in interest its biographies, and no fiction point to the fancy what are here found as eternal verities. It sustains us by its doctrines and promises, comforts the mourner, pillows the head of the dying and lights departing pilgrims to the other country. It outlives all its enemies and outsells all other books on the market. Where do you not find the Bible, property has no rights, liberty no law, virtue no respect, society no safeguard, home no sanctity, and human life no value. It is made like other books; yet it is held in greatest reverence, enshrined in the affections, consulted in private, read and expounded in public, more commentaries written upon it than upon all other books combined. With their hands upon its pages, clergymen are ordained to their sacred office. Kings and queens are crowned upon it and Presidents inaugurated for the chair of state. It lays the foundation for all jurisprudence. It is invoked in the sacred rites of baptism and matrimony. It is one of the first books to be placed in the knapsack of the soldier, is the earliest book commended to the child and the last book to touch the hand of the aged. The practical parts can be understood by the youth, and the philosopher can will all his days in its study. Life has been risked or lost to bring it out in hundreds of languages and dialects, banishment and exile have been endured without murmur for its sake. They have suffered the loneliness and darkness of the dungeon and phanage for a long time. The first Sunday in March our pastor, Bro. Crumpler, requested the school to give one offering each month to missions. So I put his request before the school and it was adopted without a single vote against it. I believe in missions and want to do all I can for missions. Pray for our school that we may be a great power for good in our community, and in others, for Christ and for missions (which means the spread of His gospel). Also pray for me that I may be guided and directed in trying to serve as Superintendent. Yours fraternally, V. G. Eppard." With such a spirit at its head Leaksville Sunday school is bound to be a power for good. For as the school contributes to missions they will enquire and will learn more and more about missions—and the spread of the good news of salvation to all the world.

sung the sweet Psalms until the flames of the stake have brought their crown, and angels witnessed joyfully their coronation.

Is it not true? "The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God abideth forever."—Dr. A. W. Hayes in the Leonia Methodist.

FORGIVENESS OF INJURIES

Well, daddy, what injuries do you find it to be the hardest to forgive? Go, my boy, and read Matthew 5:44-45; Proverbs 27, and I feel quite sure you will find it to be the hardest to forgive, not the affronts put upon us by strangers, but the wounds we get in the house of our supposed good friends; the thing that bites like a snap turtle and stings like a wasp, is the disloyalty of those on whose loyalty we counted as we count on our own souls. They are the failures to meet our needs, and to understand our sorrows, on the part of those to whom we thought we had the right to look for a cheering word, in the gloom of sorrow's darkest hour. They are the disillusion, the bitter disappointments.

How thankful we should be that beyond all human love is divine love. Nothing but love can save us. Nothing but hatred can destroy us. The door of hope can always be opened, and the door of life's bitterest sorrow can be closed, when we come, on bended knees, and from lips and heart say: I forgive, and love you. John 15:12, we read: "This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you." D. A. LONG.

JUST AS JESUS SAID

When the disciples did as Jesus told them they found everything prepared just as He had said. When the Lord sent them to get the colt He was to ride into Jerusalem, they found the colt just as He had said. When he sent them to prepare for that last Passover supper, they found the man with the pitcher, and the upper room just as their Master had said. Everything which He told His disciples when He sent them forth upon any mission, they found just as He had said unto them. Those who went forth at the Master's word, taking nothing with them save the promise of every need being met, found their Lord had told them the truth.

Promises almost innumerable of great and good things await the faithful and obedient followers of Jesus. But faithfulness and obedience are the requirements for the fulfilling of those promises. Follow the directions which your Lord has given, obey His voice, and find what He has promised is ready for you. Oh, it is a grand, glorious thought for the Christian. A never-failing Friend, whose resources are unlimited. A Friend that sticketh closer than a brother. A friend who has said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," and "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end."

But for the careless and indifferent, for the faithless and unbelieving, there are great, solemn warnings of judgment and punishment to come. These are just as sure of fulfilling to the wicked as His promised blessings are sure of fulfilling to the righteous. The same voice which gave the great and glorious promises to the faithful and obedient, pronounced the "woes" for the disobedient and unbelieving.

There are only two roads by which we can make the journey through this life. One is the broad, the other is the narrow way. The choice must be made. Which shall it be? The broad way looks attractive with its gay throngs and innumerable pleasures along the way. But those pleasures do not satisfy. The faces of those upon this road bear witness to that. Jesus said this road leads to destruction. That is final for He knows. Those who travel the broad road to the end will find it leads just as the Master said—to destruction.

The other road does not look so attractive to most people. There are comparatively few traveling this road for it is narrow and it is steep. There are many rough places in it and there are many thorns along the way. Those who travel this road are oft-times thorn-pierced, foot-sore and weary, but their faces show they are being kept in perfect peace. At every hard place there is a "fear not" or a "be of good courage" spoken by the One who ever walks beside those who travel this road. The One to whom all power has been given. The One who has won the victory over everything, even the last enemy.

At the hard places the "everlasting arms" are always there to lift us up and bear us over the places we cannot pass through alone. They bear us on and on, up and up, until at last they bear us safely up to the mansion Jesus said He was going to prepare for all who faithfully travel this narrow way to the end. If we faithfully travel this road to the end we will find all the Master promised. The pearly gates will swing open, the mansion Jesus promised will be ready, and we shall dwell with Jesus forever and forever in that happy land.

A UNIQUE PLAN

Pastor J. V. Knight of the Raleigh church used a very unique plan to invite the people to revival services now going on in his church. He had 2000 3x6 tags printed announcing the meeting, containing the pastor's picture, and a personal invitation to attend the services. A small string was attached to these tags and hung on the door knob of nearly 2000 homes.

Rev. H. Russell Clem, Springfield, Ohio, began a revival meeting in the First Christian church, Greensboro, N. C., on last Sunday.

We sympathize with Rev. R. P. Crumpler in the loss of his mother some days ago.

Pastor Lankford of the Burlington church will be formally installed Tuesday night, May 3.

Several items received too late to be included in this issue. They will appear next week.

EDITORIAL

IDEALS OF A RELIGIOUS JOURNAL

E recently came across an article written about twenty-five years ago on "The Ideals of a Religious Journal." The author of the article had been in the editorial harness for a number of years and remained in such a position for a number of years after writing the article.

The ten points set down by this great editor were as follows:

1. Mechanically, it would be as nearly perfect as the art of printing could make it—fresh type in sufficient styles, clear print, and good substantial paper. This would make it a delight to the eye and would almost compel a reading by those not interested.

2. Its matter would be classified in suitable departments, with an eye to order and to variety. Like a well-ordered house, there would be a place for everything, and everything in place. This of course would require ideal contributors who would send in matter early enough to be properly classified, or patient enough to wait until the next issue for its publication.

3. It would be conducted, not for the benefit of its publishers or editors, nor to please any one class of its readers, but in the interest of the kingdom of God, and with constant and conscientious reference to that high end. Like every other interest, it should, of course, be conducted on business principles, but these would be the means, not the end, in an ideal religious newspaper.

4. In tone and spirit it would be as broad and charitable as the New Testament, blending loyalty to truth with fraternity and Christian courtesy to all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. It would plead for Christian unity, not by harping continually on a few pet doctrines, but by the exaltation of Christ above all party lines and names, and faith above opinions and traditions of men.

5. While not neglecting doctrinal truths, it would give the greater emphasis to practical or applied Christianity, in personal purity, in social, political, and industrial reforms, and in the fulfillment of our obligations to evangelize the nations: in a word, to the bringing in of the Kingdom of God to such degree that His will shall be done on earth as it is done in heaven. It would insist that Christianity is the divine remedy for the world's ills.

6. A fraternal and courteous comparison of views by brethren on current questions, would not only be permitted but invited; but no bitter personal controversies would be permitted to soil its pages. Those who cannot rise above personalities in a religious discussion, would be compelled to find another medium for their articles.

7. It would present from week to week a sort of bird's eye view of the movements in the religious world, and of leading events in the great departments of human interest, usually designated as "secular," but often having far more significance as indicating the real progress of Christ's kingdom, than many events classed as religious. The ideal paper will consider nothing foreign to its mission which affects the interests of men.

8. It will have in its employ one or more persons who know how to use a blue pencil intelligently, but remorselessly, and who will cut down all long reports to the essential facts, and thus make room for brief reports from the whole field, instead of occupying all the space allowed to that department with reports from only a few churches.

9. It would of course, be a progressive paper, for even an ideal paper would not be perfect, but only approaching perfection by the realization in a reasonable degree, of present ideals. While defending the Bible from the attacks of its enemies, it would be equally faithful in guarding it from the mistakes of its friends. While holding fast to truth already gained, it would foster the spirit of hospitality to new truths or to wider and clearer views of old truths. The ideal paper would necessarily be an advocate of religious reforms, instead of the existing order of things, because the ideal church is not yet realized.

10. In a word—and this sums it all up—the ideal religious paper would be —must be—a Christian paper—not in name merely, but in spirit, in aim, and in method. Its editors and contributors must be Christ-filled men and women, who are large enough, true enough and brave enough to speak the truth in love, and utter the words for the hour that need to be uttered regardless of all consequences to themselves. They will seek to be true to Christ and to the demands of His kingdom, no matter what may befall them. The one adequate remedy for the imperfections of religious journals, as of churches, society, government and civilization, is to more fully Christianize them.

We believe that THE CHRISTIAN SUN comes very near meeting all these ten requirements. Mechanically, THE SUN is equaled (not excelled) by only one Church paper that comes to this office. As to classification, we feel that we could not do better than we are doing. It means a saving of time to have different matter classified for ready reference. THE SUN is certainly not conducted for the benefit of its publisher or editor, neither is it conducted to please any one class of its readers. We endeavor to edit THE SUN with a consciousness that with many minds and tastes, it is necessary to make a varied selection in editorials, reprint, and contributed matter. No man is prepared to fill an editorial chair who asks himself if certain persons are to like each article that is selected for publication. We further endeavor to be liberal and just, though no editor has ever lived who has not been accused of being otherwise. We are simply no exception to the rule and do not desire to be. Yes, the blue pencil is often used, and sometimes in cutting an article we also cut the heart of the contributor, but it is always done with a good will, remembering that the public good is of greater importance than the desire of an individual.

We shall be glad for our readers to look over these ten points so ably put, it seems to us, and see if THE CHRISTIAN SUN measures up to them. If it does not we shall, as said on other occasions, welcome helpful criticism and will appreciate it.

SOME CONSOLATION

There are errors in all papers, and so far as we know, in all books. THE CHRISTIAN SUN is no exception to the rule. We find errors in THE SUN after it comes from the press—errors which we wish could have been seen before going to press, but we always have our consolation in our exchanges, many of which have an editor-in-chief, managing editor, business manager, proof reader, and in short a whole staff, while one man endeavors to fill all these positions with THE SUN.

But here is our consolation: The other day we read where some minister had united a couple in the bonds of matrimony, and by the transposition of the i and t in united, they were untied instead of united. Now THE SUN has its errors, but it has never untied any couple who have tied themselves up to march together on the matrimonial road.

And here is another case of genuine consolation: There is a religious sect in the United States known as the Dunkards. A very able exchange before us, in speaking of the Dunkards, inserted an r after the D. Now THE SUN makes its errors, but it has never made out the members of any religious body as all being drunkards.

But how about this: Another exchange whose pages we have before us as a proof of the very gracious (?) thing that we are about to say, reports a "swell" wedding, and in another column is also supposed to be an article about an auction sale. In some way the type in the two articles became "pied", and so among the beautiful presents presented on the wedding day were the following: One manure spreader, one cotton planter, one two-horse wagon, twenty-one bushels corn, seven yearlings, and four stacks hay. We dare not quote further lest we shock the modesty of some of our readers and create a fear for all future marriage write-ups.

Now, brethren, be sweet if we make an error and remember that nearly all editors have bald heads from worrying over trying to read poor hand-writings. Of course, every man who has never edited a paper knows beyond a shadow of doubt that he can get out an issue without an error, and the only way that you can prove to him that he cannot, is to let him try his hand.

OUR CARDINAL PRINCIPLES

It is to be doubted if we make as much as we should in these days of our Five Cardinal Principles. Are we really teaching our congregations, and our young people in particular, what we as a denomination stand for in the world? If this is answered in the negative we are wondering if an idea recently advanced by Rev. J. V. Knight of our Raleigh church is not worth considering and carrying out in all our congregations. Brother Knight has drawn up the Principles in the form of a responsive reading. These he is to have printed and posted in the hymn books, read by his congregations, and then on occasions use the same as a responsive reading. They are certainly good reading, and they are from the Bible. Read them.

RESPONSIVE READING

(Five Cardinal Principles of the Christian Church)

PASTOR: "We believe the Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church." Colossians 1:18; Ephesians 1:22-23.

PEOPLE: "And He is the head of the body, the Church; and was given to be the head over all things to the Church, which is His body, the fullness of Him that filleth all in all."

PASTOR: "The name Christian is a sufficient name for the followers of Jesus Christ, and His Church." Isaiah 62:2; Acts 11:26.

PEOPLE: "And the Gentiles shall see thy righteousness, and all kings thy glory: and thou shall be called by a new name, which the mouth of the Lord shall name. . . . And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves with the Church and taught much people, and the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch."

PASTOR: "The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice." II Timothy 3:16-17; Psalms 19, 7, 8, 11.

PEOPLE: "All Scripture is given by the inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, reproof, correction, and instruction in righteousness: that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works. . . . For the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple, and the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. . . . for by them thy servant is warned, and in keeping of them there is great reward."

PASTOR: "Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of Church membership." Matthew 7:21; John 3:16; John 1:12.

PEOPLE: "Not everyone that sayeth unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. . . . For whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life, and to as many as received Him, to them he gave power to become the sons of God."

PASTOR: "The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all." Romans 14:4; Matthew 15:9; Galatians 5:13.

PEOPLE: "Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? To his own master he standeth or falleth; yea, he shall be holden up, for God is able to make him stand—For in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men, but brethren, ye have been called unto liberty; only use not liberty for an occasion to the flesh, but by love serve one another."

A PRACTICAL UNDERTAKING

The undertaking now in operation by the Woman's Boards of the Conferences to carry the practical mission message to all the churches is a very worthy undertaking. As announced in recent issues of THE SUN the Conference is divided into districts so that representatives from all the churches can get to these district rallies. It is well enough to read, to think, and to pray, about mission work, but when our leaders can get the people together for such practical purposes as organization, the solving of problems, and discussing the mission work, it is far better than any other plan. The result will be telling in many ways and the churches should reap a rich reward in service by sending delegates to these meetings.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

SOVIET RUSSIA IN BUSINESS

Until Lloyd George opened up trade negotiations between England and Russia, it seemed that the Bolshevik Government would almost completely fail in respect of recognition by the leading business nations of the world. But now that the English experiment is being carried out, other countries, including the United States, are observing the developments of the trade relation with keen interest, in some respects closely akin to jealousy. France is especially obsessed with such an attitude, believing that the honor of the present Russian Government is to be for a long time stained because of its disregard of debts to France incurred during the old regime when the country was marshalled to the forces of the Czar. France needs all the trade she can get, but she agrees with the United States that the present Government in Russia is an irresponsible one, upon which little can be depended.

Premier Lloyd George gives an official British definition of the trade agreement which he and his cooperatives have made with Russia, laying emphasis upon the fact that it is purely a "trade agreement", and nothing else. He recognizes that "the Soviet Government has as complete control over that vast territory as any other government can possibly have under present conditions." In his explanation he says that the agreement is not a treaty of peace, but a "desire of his Government to clear up all outstanding differences throughout the whole of Europe and that part of Asia which is still under control of the Soviet Government." He says that it is not an attempt to make settlement for "national injuries" done by the Soviets, but that he has rather safeguarded such questions, promising that England will press all such claims of debts which Russia owes the other countries. The Premier is ready and willing to join other countries with a view of establishing peace between Russia and Western Europe.

Russia wants to get into business with the rest of the world and it seems that she is succeeding in doing so at present more than during any other time of the reign of the Soviets. The business world is needing her as a customer; yet most governments like France and the United States, fear the possible influence that such trade agreements may bear upon radical minded elements of their peoples. There is a feeling that open trade routes will bring propaganda and cause dissention in favor of the power which has until lately been unrecognized and marked as misrepresentative of the best principles of government.

THE COMING OF HIGHER PRICES

The economic signs are that prices are shortly to stabilize and then move gradually upward. According to the opinion of The New York Herald, this however, is to be understood as applying merely to prices in general. There are prices that are yet to fall, and fall appreciably.

As to some other commodities, speculative groups are apparently already organizing to accelerate advance in prices. The Federal Reserve system of banking may act as a deterrent by its control of credit and interest rates, still the markets at present are little responsive to credit influences, and there is little in the present tendencies that is explained by currency or banking conditions. "There is no lack of money or credit with which to buy in the United States, but solely the lack of disposition to buy." The Tribune continues: "This indisposition to buy seems to be the principal reason for whatever falling off in the volume of the credit currency. A considerable revival in purchasing can take place with the existing volume of circulating medium and without an increase appeal to the credit facilities of the banking system.

"But now demands for credit will set in with any considerable revival of trade or advance in prices. This expansion of credit, if it is granted will promptly react to accelerate the advance in prices. Every semi-speculative process tends to work cumulatively, and it is perhaps too much to hope that the Reserve banks will early apply the brake to limit whatever forward movement in prices may set in."

It is a general belief, in the estimation of The Tribune that "the prices of those commodities that have especially suffered during the last few months are manifestly getting firmer—wheat, sugar, cotton, silk, leather, for example, and even copper and wool." What goes down to extremes must come up, is as true as what goes up must come down.

OLD CLOTHES FOR THE NEEDY

Thrifty housewives are getting many pointers on conservation from instructions sent out by the Red Cross to its chapters in the movement to make garments for thousands of needy children in Europe who can be reached by Red Cross workers over there, provided the clothes are furnished by Red Cross workers over here.

There is, for instance, the matter of old sweaters. Where these are collected by Red Cross chapters doing their share in making layettes for newborn babies and garments for boys and girls from 1 to 14 years of age, wonderful results are obtained.

The good part of such used clothing is cut out and cleaned and the pieces sewed into all sorts of warm necessities for Europe's shivering babies. From such old sweaters can be made not only warm, but attractive blankets. Some of them are cut down into children's sweaters, caps, mittens, scarves, leggings and helmets. Each seam is stitched two or three times to prevent raveling. There is, in fact, a multitude of uses for such discarded garments, where they are cleaned and taken in hand by skilled Red Cross workers.

The southern division has set itself to provide its quota of clothing for 250,000 newborn babies and 500,000 girls and boys that Red Cross workers overseas are in contact with in their work of providing medicines.

By the way, did you read what Brother Johnston ("Uncle Charley") said last week? Look it up.

OUR ORPHANAGE

A CHALLENGE TO OUR PEOPLE

I was talking to a friend of the Orphanage a few days ago and he asked me how much money would it take to finish the Children's Home and pay for it. I told him that if I could raise six thousand dollars I would be able to pay every dollar when the work was finished. He said to me, "If you will raise five thousand dollars I will give you one thousand to make it out." This same man has given the largest contribution that has been given to build this home, besides a number of other fine donations.

He is not a member of our Church, either. He is interested in the Orphanage and the little helpless children and desires to see this home completed and opened for the little tots. He is anxious to help us but wants to see our Church take the same interest he has. One man anxious to give one-sixth of the balance! It does seem to me that out of a membership of more than twenty-five thousand members we ought to meet this challenge. We ought to do it by the tenth day of May. If five thousand of our members would mail us just one dollar each, how easy it would be to meet this challenge! Ten thousand at fifty cents each would meet it. How easy it would be to just enclose one dollar and mail it to me, and if five thousand would do this we would be happy indeed! What a little sacrifice on your part but what a sum it would raise quickly!

One pastor told me today that his churches had decided to furnish six beds complete for the new building. That is splendid. How many more of our churches would like to do a great deed of kindness like this?

A Ladies Aid Society from another one of our churches selected another room in the building to furnish. Just two more small rooms to furnish. Will two Societies take them? Then will the others furnish beds in the dormitory rooms? The time is getting short. We want to get this furniture in by May 15, if possible. Our Board meets Wednesday, May 20, or about that date. We want to have everything in order by that time.

Write me a rush letter saying that your Society is going to furnish a room or furnish beds in the dormitory rooms. I am counting on the good women to do this.

CHILDREN'S LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: I am very busy getting ready for the closing of our school, and hope that we will have a good time, though I am sorry to think that the school is to close. Did you have any fruit left unhurt by the cold weather? We have a little if it will stay on the trees now, but I am afraid that we are not going to have many strawberries. I hope that all the cousins and the Orphanage family are well. We enclose our dues for April.—Virginia Pearl and W. T. Ayscue.

I am very sorry that you are not going to have many strawberries. They are so fine with sugar and cream —“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Uncle Charley: I am a little girl only two years old, but I want to join the band of cousins. I go to Sunday school at Parks' Cross Roads. Rev. A. T. Banks is our pastor. Mrs. Banks named me and gave me a nice present, too. You will find enclosed 10 cents for the little ones.—Jewel Banks Stout.

I am happy to give you a very cordial welcome to the band of cousins, and hope you will write often.—Uncle Charley.

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find 30 cents which are my dues for February, March and April. I did not intend to wait so long but was going to school and was very busy. Our school closed April 5. We had made preparations for an entertainment, but chicken-pox, small-pox, and the influenza were raging in our section and the county health doctor said we must not have the entertainment. This was a great disappointment to us. Hope that you and the little orphans are well and with best wishes for you all.—Ruth Sanford.

Well, Ruth, you seemed to have all the trouble at one time. The "flu" is enough at any one time. I am glad that you wrote this week, and you must not forget the Corner.—“Uncle Charley.”

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

TO THE WOMEN OF THE NORTH CAROLINA CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE

Arrangements for the District Missionary Rally Day Meetings of the North Carolina Conference are being completed, and we anticipate well attended meetings, full of interest and enthusiasm.

Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Miss Bessie Holt, and Mrs. W. A. Harper will be present at these meetings—each one full of the Spirit and Power of the Almighty God, and carrying a message of greater service to the women of the Conference. Again, we would urge our women to attend these meetings; we desire the presence of the pastors of the various churches also, that we may all work together for the glory of God and the up-building of His kingdom on earth.

We are hereby giving a correct and complete list of churches, superintendents, places and dates for the District meetings. Write the leader of your particular District that you will attend.

“Tell Me a Story”

HOW A TOWN WAS SAVED BY A CLOCK

In the old days, when every city had to be well guarded, the ancient town of Basel, in Switzerland, was surrounded by a high wall. There was only one gate. Beside it stood a tower with a clock in it, and at the foot of the tower lived the old man who was the keeper of the gate.

The old man did his duty so well that for years no harm came to the city, but inside of it were traitors who had long planned to turn it over to its enemies. The old guardian suspected that evil was hanging over the city, but there were no soldiers to help him; so he could do nothing but watch and listen.

One night, when all the lights of the town had been put out, the old man's keen eyes caught sight of shadows skulking near the tower. He knew it was the traitors and that they were there for no good purpose.

It was nearly midnight, and his sharp ears caught the whisper, “When the clock strikes twelve.” That meant, of course, that the stroke of twelve had been agreed upon as the signal for the traitors to fling open the gate and deliver the town into the hands of its enemies.

The old man, listening in his little room, wondered what he should do. He had little strength himself, and there was no time to get help.

At last, when it lacked only five minutes of midnight, he thought of a plan. Climbing the stairs of the tower as fast as he could, he groped his way to the clock and opened its case with trembling hands.

A little later one long, clear note struck from the top of the tower. Only one, then silence. The old man, leaning from the window, heard excited whispers below.

“Why doesn't it go on striking?”

“Could we have slept while we waited?”

The sharpness of that one stroke on the silent air frightened the traitors. They crept away, sulky and fearful, in the darkness. Outside the gate the waiting enemy also heard the stroke, and after a time they went away, bewildered.

The next morning the mayor sent to the gatekeeper to ask why the clock was an hour fast. When he heard what had happened, he ordered a great celebration in honor of the old man who had saved the town.

As for the clock itself, it never was set back. From that time on it remained an hour fast in memory of the time when its single stroke saved the town.—Olive A. Smith, in Youth's Companion.

A NEW BOOK ON MISSIONS

We have on our desk a new book on missions—“The Home With the Open Door”, by Mary S. Platt, author of “The Child in the Midst.” The book contains 62 pages and is divided into four chapters. The author is the daughter, granddaughter, sister, wife, friend, and teacher of missionaries and she has written out of a volume of experience. The book is condensed and in practical form. The chapters are as follows: A Revelation in Home Making; Preparation; Making the Home; Using the Home.

The secretary of one of the largest mission Boards in America says of the book: “This book will be one of the greatest educative influences in our mission field. I wish that every one of the Boards would order enough for every missionary. Then every young candidate, even before he has a wife, should read this book, and consider carefully before he proposes.”

This book retails at 75 cents delivered and we have copies on hand ready to be shipped to anyone desiring this practical treatment of the mission study problem.

WHEN YOU BUY BOOKS

When you buy books remember that the Publishing Agent can supply you at the same price that you can secure any book direct from the publishers. We are confident that hundreds of books are bought and read by our people that are not handled through the office of the Publishing Agent. Every book or Bible bought through the office of the Publishing Agent means a profit for the Church. Not one penny of the profit goes to the Publishing Agent, but is a fund that is the property of the Church. It may be a small profit that would be made on your order, but do not hesitate sending it on that account. Remember that it is the aggregate of business done that counts. Remember the Publishing Agent's office when you go to buy a book, Bible or any church necessity.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION SETS

Do you have individual communion sets for your church? If you do not write to the Publishing Agent, C. B. Riddle, Burlington, N. C., for an illustrated catalogue that will interest you. The catalogue is free and will be sent immediately upon application. If once you get your church interested in using an individual communion set all discussion as to the advisability of it will be over.

CARDINAL PRINCIPALS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE BULLETIN

PERSONAL MENTION

Dr. D. A. Long will preach in the Suffolk, Virginia, Christian church next Sunday.

Rev. B. F. Black, Franklinton, N. C., called to see us one day last week. Bro. Black is still suffering with throat trouble, which is hindering him in his work.

Bro. Elisha Bradshaw, who has been at Elon College since January furthering his studies, left Monday of this week for Chicago to enter the Moody Bible School.

Rev. W. J. Hall, Dayton, Ohio, was among our callers during the past week. Bro. Hall is one of THE SUN's faithful subscribers and keeps in touch with what the Southern Convention is doing.

All day memorial services will be held at the following places on dates mentioned: Pleasant Hill, Alamance, Sunday, May 1; Union, Alamance, Sunday, May 8. THE SUN's Editor is scheduled to be at both of these services and will take part in the program.

President Harper spoke at the First Presbyterian church, Graham, N. C., last Sunday morning, and delivered diplomas at a graduating exercise of the Burlington-Graham Junior Christian Endeavorers, given in the same church that night.

Some time last year we gave a sketch of the condition of the graves of Rev. Daniel W. Kerr and wife, who are buried at Union church, Alamance County, and stated that some work was needed on the grave of these two pioneer workers of our Church. Some days ago we visited the graves again, and now we would like to obtain this information: Who can send us a picture of the birthplace of Kerr? He was born in Cumberland County, Virginia, July 10, 1776. We shall be glad to have an old picture or a recent picture, of the birthplace of this great man, who was THE SUN's founder, January 1844.

AN ANNOUNCEMENT

The following announcement has been received and will be read with interest by many readers of THE SUN:

*Mrs. Hugh T. Moffitt announces the marriage of her daughter Mabel Clare to
Mr. Basil Sebastian Cox on Tuesday, April the nineteenth nineteen hundred and twenty-one
Greensboro, North Carolina*

Mr. Cox is a son of the late lamented Rev. L. I. Cox. THE SUN extends congratulations and best wishes to the young couple.

AN APPRECIATED LETTER

Dear Brother Riddle:

The letter enclosed came to me some time ago, containing a check for ten dollars. It is a very great pleasure to be thus remembered by a friend of boyhood days. When friends express words of good cheer, and grateful appreciation, we value them more highly than silver or gold. I am glad to know, and happy in the thought that along life's pathway I have found some true friends like Brother W. H. Turrentine.

W. S. LONG

(Enclosure)

Burlington, N. C.
March 19, 1921

Rev. W. S. Long,
Chapel Hill, N. C.

Dear Dr. Long:

In recalling our boyhood days and the many happy hours spent together at the old Graham Institute, as well as the many happy hours spent together since manhood and remembering that you were always a welcome visitor in my home, having baptised all my children and administered unto our spiritual welfare. Now, as we are both growing old, I felt that I wanted to write and tell you how much I appreciate the memories of long ago, and regret that we cannot be together more now as the days are passing by.

In remembrance of your never tiring friendship to me and my loved ones, permit me to enclose a check for a small amount which I hope may be of service to you.

With continued fidelity and best wishes, I am

Your friend,

W. H. TURRENTINE.

SOLEMN VOWS

CAVENESS-STEPHENSON

Mr. Roy Orlando Caveness and Miss Maye Stephenson were united in marriage at high noon, Saturday, April 16, 1921, at the First Christian church in Raleigh, N. C. The church was artistically decorated with palms, ferns and potted plants. The wedding music was rendered by Professor Proctor and Mr. Thomas of Raleigh.

The bride's attendants were Mrs. J. Karl McCarthy and Miss Bessie Dunn, the dame of honor being Mrs. J. B. Weatherspoon of Winston-Salem, N. C. The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father, C. H. Stephenson. The groom was attended by his best man, Harry Flynn of New York. The ushers were W. H. Stephenson of Dallas, Texas, Dr. Z. M. Caveness, Prof. Hubert Jones, and Rupert Caveness.

Immediately following the marriage Mr. and Mrs. Caveness left for a northern tour of several days. Mrs. Caveness is a most popular and attractive young woman and has scores of friends, as was shown by the magnificent display of costly and valuable wedding presents. She is the daughter of Deacon C. H. Stephenson of our Raleigh church, and has rendered valuable assistance in all lines of church work. One of the very expensive and beautiful wedding gifts was that by members of the Raleigh church and Sunday school.

Mr. Caveness is a very successful merchant and business man of the city.

The souvenir ring ceremony of the Christian Church was used by the writer in making them husband and wife.

J. O. ATKINSON.

CALLED HOME

WATKINS

Mrs. Virginia C. Watkins, widow of the late Col. Meredith H. Watkins, departed this life April 9, 1921, at the home of her son M. M. Watkins, St. James Avenue, Suffolk, Va., aged eighty-nine years.

She had been a member of the Antioch Christian church for many years and was true and faithful until the end. She will be missed in her home, church, and community by many who knew and loved her. She was first married to Mr. Graves Neblett, who died in the Civil War, and was later married to Col. M. H. Watkins. The deceased leaves five sons, W. E. Neblett of Laurenburg, N. C., W. G. Neblett of Boykius, Va., J. R. Neblett of Edenton, N. C., S. T. Neblett of Wakefield, Va., M. M. Watkins of Suffolk, Va., together with many grand children and a host of friends.

Her funeral services were conducted by her pastor, assisted by Dr. W. W. Staley, at the home of her son, M. M. Watkins, and her remains were laid to rest in the Cedar Hill cemetery. The Lord bless and comfort the dear bereaved ones.

H. H. BUTLER.

SAUNDERS

Charlie Edward Saunders departed this life April 16, 1921, while in a local hospital in Suffolk, at the age of fifty-five years, two months and sixteen days. He is survived by a wife and six children, C. F. Saunders, Norfolk, Va., C. E. Saunders, C. R. Saunders, John Lois, Lovie Olivia, and Whittie Lois Saunders; also three brothers, J. A. Saunders, Windsor, Va., W. E. Saunders, Zuni, Va., and John E. Saunders, Norfolk, Va.; one sister, Mrs. James H. Blanchard, Norfolk, Va., and a host of friends, all of whom will mourn his death.

He was a member of the Antioch Christian church. His funeral services were conducted by his pastor and the remains laid to rest in the church cemetery. The bereaved ones have the deepest sympathy of their many friends. May God bless and comfort them.

H. H. BUTLER.

ENGLISH

Deacon Joseph H. English died April 9, 1921 at the age of 69 years, 7 months, and 28 days. His health failed about five years ago, and he was a great sufferer. He was one of the most faithful members of Mt. Carmel church until his health failed him. He was a member of the Board of Deacons, was Superintendent of the Sunday school for a number of years, and taught a class in the Sunday school for more than thirty years.

He leaves to mourn their loss four sons and four daughters. In the absence of the pastor, Rev. E. T. Cotten, the funeral services were conducted at his church by the writer, and the interment was in the church burying ground. The great company of people at the funeral told of his popularity. Heaven's blessings be upon the bereaved ones.

C. H. ROWLAND.

BEALE

At the home of her sister, Mrs. K. Blythe, near Franklin, Mrs. Bettie Beale, widow of the late Jerry Beale, died April 14, 1921 aged 82 years. She had been a consistent member of Union Christian church many years. The funeral was conducted by the writer in the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. B. Fuller. The interment was in the old family burying ground. Her husband and two children preceded her to the grave. She leaves two brothers and two sisters. A long and useful life has finished. Peace to her ashes.

C. H. ROWLAND.

CURRENT NEWS

The North Carolina Corporation Commission issued an order on April 21, to become effective at once, reducing gas rates in that State from $2.30 to $1.95 net per thousand cubic feet. In small cities this rate is to apply on a similar basis.

In accordance with plans and preparations at this time, The North Carolina Orthopaedic Hospital for crippled and deformed children of sound mind, will be opened about June 15, in Gastonia, N. C.

The Chinese minister to the United States, Alfred S. Sze, is now on a speaking tour of the principal cities of the middle Eastern and Western states. The primary object of this tour is to lay before the American people the exact causes and conditions of the present famine in China.

On April 19 the Senate ordered an investigation of the railroad situation in this country, the resolution of Chairman Cummins to this effect being accepted without debate or revision.

Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, voted a two million dollar bond issue on April 19, to be used for the building of hard surfaced roads in that county.

On April 20, many people in certain sections of Georgia were greatly frightened when a meteor, or a series of meteors passed over the state, showering hot metal as heavy as iron, and with an attending noise as though machine guns were being fired. A trail of black smoke followed the metal, but otherwise the sky was clear.

Reports from Europe indicate that France is preparing to revise the Versailles treaty to suit her interests and rights very much in the same way that American has. The position taken is that as the country has never accepted the treaty it has not surrendered its rights.

SUNDAY SCHOOL COOPERATION BECOMES A FACT

Christian workers and those outside the Church will rejoice in the latest evidence of the determination of representatives of Christian agencies to join their forces and energies at every possible opportunity. There are two great interdenominational Sunday school organizations in the United States and Canada, the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations, which includes in its membership 32 different denominational Sunday School Boards and Agencies and the International Sunday school Association with lines running out to every State, Province, County and Community in the land. For a number of years these two great organizations have planned and worked independent of each other. But now the impossible has occurred. They are uniting their efforts to put over a program of religious education that will more adequately reach, teach and save for Christ and Christian citizenship the 26,000,000 children in the United States not now receiving any religious instruction. The significance of this is apparent when it is considered that religiously trained, they insure a Christian democracy tomorrow, and that untrained they are the potential criminals and anarchists and unsafe citizens of the future.

HELPING THE DESTITUTE

The women of America bound up the red wounds of the world war with millions of surgical dressings made under the direction of the Red Cross in workrooms throughout the country.

Now the same hands that sewed these dressings have been called upon to take up needle and thread once more in another humanitarian cause—clothes for babies!

Red Cross representatives abroad report that 250,000 newborn babies and 500,000 girls and boys from 1 to 14 years of age are in rags in Central Europe, hosts of them without shoes, armies of them with only newspapers in which to wrap their nakedness.

And the Red Cross has shouldered the task of clothing them. To carry out the job, say officials of national headquarters, the Red Cross is depending on the hearts and fingers of the same women who busied themselves day in and day out in Red Cross workrooms during the war.

Chapters in the southern division have been called upon to produce 135,000 garments for boys and girls and 17,000 layettes for little babies. To fill this quota, every chapter must have one out of every three members make a garment and one out of every 25 members make a layette. Many chapters already reopened their old workrooms and are turning out baby clothes with the same neatness and dispatch with which they made surgical dressings during the war. Other chapters are expected to follow suit until baby clothes are being made in thousands of cities and towns from the Potomac to the Gulf.

CONSCIENCE

There's a queer little,
 Dear little telephone,
 That no one ever has seen,
 With a tiny bell
 That sends a thrill
 All through you when you're mean.

When you are good,
 And act as you should,
 It's always very still;
 Do something or other
 That you can't tell mother,
 You feel its tingly thrill.

Each little boy
 And girl has one;
 And no matter what you do,
 Though you hide from sight,
 If it isn't right,
 God's telephone calls to you.

Your conscience is God's little telephone,
 'Tis a little wireless too.
 You must listen well
 For the tingly bell;
 No one can hear it but you.

A GOOD RULE

The clock wil go slow,
 If you watch it, you know.
 You must work right along and forget it.
 So, study your best
 Till it's time for a rest;
 The clock will go fast if you let it.

Tomorrow

THE EDITOR

TOMORROW is procrastination's day. A today is worth two tomorrows. Today is salvation's day—tomorrow is where the thief of time steals away with the sinner-man. "Cash today and credit tomorrow" is an old saying in the business world—and it means only credit never. Tomorrow never really comes—and that is why tomorrow is not a good day on which to do things.

Tomorrow is rainbow's end that is never found. Finding the end of the rainbow and waiting till tomorrow are both illusions that lure us on to a never discovered land.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

SINCE my last letter to THE SUN, I made a short visit to Columbus, Ga., where I had the honor of laboring last year. When I arrived in Columbus Bro. J. L. Elder met me and took me to his home, where I spent the night. When I first visited Columbus, now almost two years ago, Bro. and Sister Elder's home was my home for three weeks, and of course it was pleasant to meet them again. Like most parents, they have had the experience to see all their children set in their own homes, except Miss Susie, who is yet in school and of course, at home. It was a real pleasure to meet them again. Sunday morning we were up bright and early and off to attend Sunday school and church with the Rose Hill Christian church. On the way over and not a great way from the church, an automobile came near the sidewalk and stopped—it was Bro. Thomas F. Potts, the ever faithful Sunday school worker and deacon, and his daughter, Miss Virginia, the pianist of the church, offering us a seat, which was gladly accepted. We were soon at the church, where we found the Sunday school assembling under the superintendency of Bro. Walter Denson. Rev. R. F. Brown is now their pastor and we found him in place and busy. He has a strong hold on the people and seems to be doing a fine work. It fell to my lot to preach for him that day, both morning and evening, and it was a pleasure to do so. We took dinner with Bro. and Sister Brown in the parsonage. Then we called on Bro. and Sister W. D. Akers—old neighbors of other days—but found them away from home, but Mrs. Akers' father and mother were there, and with them we spent a few minutes of pleasant association. Then Bro. and Sister Walter Denson took us to see Dr. H. S. Munroe, who was our family physician while we lived in Columbus. He is a Presbyterian, but he was as kind and considerate toward us in many respects as if we had been his own pastor. Then we stopped in to see Bro. John. E. Brim and family. They came to the work of the church while we were there, and they have been a great help to the work. Then Bro. Brim took us to see Bro. and Sister J. T. Terrell, who served the church as treasurer, during our term of service, and we believe he so serves the church yet. Then we took supper with Mrs. A. A. Terrell and her family. She is one of the most devoted friends of the little Rose Hill Sunday school and church. She and her family have faithfully stood by the little church there in the days of trial, as have done many others. Then we went back to the church for the evening service, and because Bro. Brown so insisted, we again preached, after which we went with Bro. and Sister Walter Denson to their home and spent the night very pleasantly. In the early morning, I bade them good bye and turned my face Northward.

During my pastorate in Columbus, for a short while I lived next to a family in which there was a daughter, just coming into beautiful womanhood. Just a few days before my arrival on this trip, she was driving in her automobile down Hamilton Avenue, when the wheels of her machine fell into the grooves of the street car tracks. It was near a curve on the track, and before she could get out, the street car struck her machine and killed her. The sad accident cast a gloom over her large circle of friends. At the church I met Deacon J. F. Houghton who is well known in the church as one of its most regular attendants and faithful members. I also met at church Bro. J. A. Hood, the Captain of the Men and Millions Momevent. Then, too, I met there Judge R. H. Reynolds, who has long been a pillar in the church. He is now beyond the eightieth mile stone in life's journey, and though he has but recently abandoned his office and court, he is still standing by the little Rose Hill church.

On my way home, I stopped off at Darlington, S. C., to visit for a few days Mrs. Barrett and our daughter Ethel (Mrs. Bunn Hearn). John Barrett Hearn is a newcomer in that home and of course is a great attraction for the grandparents. Now they have two fine boys to engage their time and attention, Bunn Hearn, Jr. (now five years old) and the one just named above. It was a real pleasure to spend two days with them.

At Hamlet on my return to Virginia, I met President W. A. Harper, who has been out for a day or two giving an address for the closing of some school. We had only a few minutes to talk, and we did that so rapidly that we could scarcely finish one subject before another was ready. But I must close.

SUFFOLK LETTER

HARD times'' is the most convenient excuse for non-payment of obligations, and the non-performance of plain duty. When prices were high the complaint was universal against the cost of living; now the complaint is against doing. In both cases the feeling is the common spirit of dissatisfaction. There is no human condition that makes prosperity for all at the same time; but changed conditions open the way for some to make gain and prosper. Long experience reveals to man that all human conditions change like the sands on the seashore by a great force beyond the control of individuals. The only permanent and stable relation is the relation of men to God. "Thou will keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee; because he trusteth in thee."

The complaint of "hard times" reveals a material selfishness that commercializes public thought and relations. While the world war was in progress and work was plentiful and prices for wages and products high, "hard times" was not in our vocabulary; but during that time, nearly a hundred thousand of the young men of America gave their lives and a great number maimed or diseased for life. No loss of money could compare with that loss. Added to that calamity was the epidemic of influenza; but this year is a year of health. We do not set a proper value upon the real values of life; we think too much of money and business. These are important, but many other things outweigh them in the real life of men. Moreover, inflated values inflate ideas, conduct, outlook, and thus exaggerate all conditions and prospects. "Hard times" sobers up public sentiment and individual behavior, and brings men back to themselves, to others, and to God. The prodigal never came to himself, to his home, and to his father, until "he began to be in want". A sense of need is the turning-point of many in this world. "All the fitness He requires is to feel your need of Him."

It is impossible to say what class of citizens has been hit the hardest by the present "hardest times"; but it will strike all before normal conditions are reached. The farmer no doubt feels the depression most keenly, as his plans always involve a full year of time; but 1921 will raise more at less cost than any year in a long time. The question of labor is often a question of willingness to work. Men will plow this year who would not plow if cotton were 40 cents, tobacco were $1.00, and corn $2.00; but honest work makes honest men. Jesus said, "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." Work is at the bottom of all satisfaction and all peace. No church member is at his best until he works in the church. "Son, go work today in my vineyard". Work, you see, is a command of Jesus, and it is the happiest state. Next year will be a good year, because this year is a year of hard work. Prices will be good, harvests will be good, men will be good. Seedtime and harvest will not fail. God's seasons and His rivers run on; but His blessings are greatest for those who hold sacred their obligations to Him and to others. "Owe no man anything, but to love one another." That debt of love can never be fully discharged; it draws upon the entire life; the more you pay the debt of love, the larger the debt becomes.

Banish the thought of "hard times" from the mind, harness all your energies for the new task in the new day, and thank God for His help.

ELON LETTER

 HIS is the commencement season for high schools. The Elon faculty is busy exceedingly, closing up the year's work at home and "killing schools" in other places. These visits abroad are excellent opportunities to do indirect advertising for the College. It would be poor taste for an Elon professor to undertake to persuade members of the graduating class, who have invited them as their guest, to enroll themselves as students at Elon in September. But he can persuade them even more effectively by delivering a good speech, one that breathes the spirit of Christ and whets the appetite for advancement through education. That Elon professors acquit themselves well on these occasions is evidenced by the presence in the Freshman class the succeeding fall of students from many places visited by the commencement orator of the faculty in the April or May preceding.

These high school commencements are the product of a few years only in an educational and community life. I can recall when the high school commencement consisted of "exercises" by the students with a prayer by some minister. Now there must also be a baccalaureate sermon and a literary address to say nothing of the athletic contests. In many places a high school commencement is as "extensive" in point of time as a College commencement and the tendency is to make it intensive too.

In a typical rural section at the high school commencement time the farmers will lay aside their labors, their wives will prepare a picnic dinner, friends from town and other sections will come in, and a social event of rare possibilities results. The minister who has opportunity to preach to such an assembly and who improves it may achieve more for the Kingdom in one brief hour than by a half year's faithful ministry to his particular congregation. Because at the commencement season people who never attend church will be present and the narrow sectarian too will be there, the doctrinaire who thinks no one can preach the gospel except a minister of his particular denominational bias. The commencement sermon in a high school is thus a great socializing force, making for Christian brotherhood and the elimination of divisive lines in the community's life.

The literary address too has splendid possibilities in it. Of course they may be thrown away or not appreciated. Usually a College professor or a successful professional man is chosen for this message. It is a time for high idealism and the implanting of impulses to noble endeavor. I never accept such an invitation without feeling how inadequate I am to measure up to the splendid opportunity the occasion offers. The graduating class and their friends must in such an hour be brought to see that the best their community can afford in the way of life-equipment is but a rung in the ladder of full preparation, and what is more, inspired to long for that larger equipment and nerved to undertake its achievement.

Much is said in our time about the decadence of the country-side. I confess I cannot subscribe to it. It is true the quilting parties, the log-rollings, the corn-shuckings, and the candy-pullings are gone. But in their place have come the rural free delivery, the telephone, the good roads plus the automobile, the woman's missionary society typical of many other benevolent and Christian organizations, the parent-teacher association, and the high school commencement. In the olden days the church was practically the only community rallying point. Now there are many such points with multiplied conveniences for reaching them. And the beauty of it is that the minister may by his presence and message hallow every gathering of the country side and make it the occasion of spiritual refreshment. It is not the same country life, but it is a wholesome life still. Let us make it more so.

Jesus, The Master Preacher

H. Lee Scott

THE severest test of a preacher is to convince an audience of unpleasant truths. Demonsthenes, spoke to his own people against the invasion of a foreign foe. Cicero, championed the interests of the best classes of Rome. Webster and Lincoln, voiced the popular sentiments of victorious political parties. Patrick Henry shouted, "Give me liberty, or give me death" at a time when the citizens of a new born republic were conscious of having an outrage committed against them in the form of "Taxation without Representation". But Jesus, the Master Preacher, began to preach at a moment when Jewish life and civilization were founded upon the law, and from first to last, his untiring effort was to destroy—not the law, but what was worse, the Jewish conception of the law. And yet the multitudes heard him gladly. And more than this, even his enemies acknowledged his power. For when the high priest, Caiaphas, sent his officers to arrest Jesus, they returned empty-handed and their only excuse was, "Never man spake as this man."

When Jesus began to preach the world was at its lowest ebb in education, in government and in religion. The boys of Jerusalem in Jesus' day went to school from the ages of seven to ten. Printing was unknown, methods of efficient teaching, unlearned, and the teachers knew but little more than the boys themselves. We look at the world of this day from a political viewpoint. We find the rulers allowing men to collect taxes on a commission basis. When a man incurred a debt which he could not pay, the law under the administration of these corrupt leaders, allowed the creditor to extract a pound of flesh, any where he pleased, from the body of the indebted man. At another time, we find people when accused of certain crimes, compelled to run with bare feet, through a bed of red hot coals. If they could do this without being burned, it was merely a sign of innocence. And now we come to the religion which the world possessed prior to the coming of the Master Preacher. It was a religion of fear. The people who claimed to love God carried hatred in their hearts for one another. The way they acted toward each other proves this statement. We find their cities walled in, to prevent their neighbors from entering, who were liable to swoop down overnight, as an eagle from his nest and wipe them out of existence. The people within those walls were citizens of the city just so long as they were an asset to the rulers of that city. But when they became a victim of disease their citizenship expired. There were no hospitals where they might go to have their bodies healed. There were no retreats where the aged might linger, while the candle of life gleamed forth its last rays. No asylums, where the insane might go, and many of them have their reasoning power restored. The poor leper, sat outside the gates of Jerusalem and begged for bread, while the dogs licked his sore-eaten body. And for him, no sunshine was there. There were no physicians, skilled in the science of medicine to dress his wounds. And there was no comforter to speak of peace to soothe his aching heart. Jesus had not yet come.

Such was the condition of the world when Jesus came. Strangely, he did not attack their educational system, weak as it was. Nor did he enter the political arena, though their system of government was as vile as corruption could make it. The nearest he ever came to it was when he said, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's." Jesus gave to the world a new doctrine. A doctrine of love. In connection with it he said, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." When referring to the people of that day whose very souls were sick with sin, he said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have more abundantly." I quote again from his doctrine, "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friend." Not only did Jesus lay down his life for his friends, but after he had been crucified, as he hung upon the cross he said in behalf of his enemies, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Jesus came into the world at a time when truth was lost. Greece had sought for it, but the brilliancy of her orators, her poets, and her philosophers, had succeeded only in producing a civilization upon whose altars was written, "To the Unknown God." Rome, made her search for the lost truth, but the republic of Cicero, of Cato and of Brutus was becoming the plaything of a Nero. Israel had raised her temple to the God of truth, but the highest inspiration from her sacred mount was a series of, "Thou shalt not's". At such a time as this came the Master Preacher. He went below the sophistry of the Greek; the legalism of the Roman; the hypocrisy of the Pharisee and he revealed deep in human nature the eternal truth. And we live today surrounded by church and school-house; by railroad and factory; by hospital, asylum and social settlement, not because Cicero inveighed against Catiline; not because Demonsthenes thundered against Philip, but because a Galilean peasant delivered a sermon on the mount. No voice has imparted so much living truth to the world as that of Jesus of Nazareth. Judge him by the impression made upon his hearers; his ability to convince of unpleasant truths; the testimony of his enemies; judge him by the highest ideals of life and far above that of any other man is the greatness of him who made truth live.

Eighteen years at the carpenter's bench, where he learned self-mastery and built character; and when at last he came forth, "He taught them as one having authority", because he first had obtained authority over himself. When he said, "Let him that is without sin, first cast a stone," it was the character of the man, the pure life behind the statement that gave it authority. It is the character we build today that thirty years hence will plead at the bar of justice. It is character that will rise from the pulpit with tongue of fire. Character, such as Jesus possessed is not the inspiration of a moment, nor the training of a day. It is not the application of sanitary laws, nor the result of a course in physical culture. It is the flash of an eye that has looked deep into the problems of life. It is the thrill of a voice made merry by laughter and softened by grief. It is the sympathy of a heart that has felt the agony of the battle of right with wrong. It is the outpouring of a human soul that has been up on Sinai and seen the lightnings flash and heard the thunders roll. It is the result of a lifetime in the desert with the meal of locust flesh and the cloak of camel's hair. It is the agony of Gethsemane crystallized into words. Such was the character that made the Master Preacher of the Nazarene peasant.

Countless are the voices that have enriched our air of earth, but they have grown faint with the centuries. Circumstances change and the truths that many of these voices uttered have lost their deep significance for mankind. Languages die, and they are heard no more. But now above the tumult of the ages, safe from the wrecks of time, far from the decay of language, comes to us the teachings of the Master Preacher. They have lived because through them shone a divine character, and because behind them was the resistless power of a purpose.

A CORRECTION

Dear Editor:

Please allow me to correct through your columns an error in an article you printed from Elon College. We congratulate Elon for such a large senior class and for the program they expect to give upon graduation, but we deny a statement made in the same article that Wake Forest College had but forty-nine in the senior class. I am happy to say that our class of '21 has 106 members, the largest class in the history of the college.

We are sure that Elon was misinformed about the matter and did not make such a mistake intentionally.

Yours very truly,

R. Glenn Grose.

Wake Forest, N. C.

Editorial Note: We are glad to admit this letter of correction to the columns of THE SUN. Mr. Grose has reference to a statement by President W. A. Harper in his "Elon Letter" printed in THE SUN of April 20, page two. We refer the matter to President Harper for correction. Also we ask Mr. Grose to tell us if the 106 graduates include all departments, or if that number represents the academic students only. Elon graduates thirty-one this year, exclusive of graduates in special departments.—C. B. R.

STRIKE IN THE PRINTING INDUSTRY

Today (Monday) a general strike in the printing industry is on in most all sections of the United States. The date of the strike was set about one year ago by the Union and repeated notices have been given employing printers. At this writing we are unable to tell what per cent of men have quit work. The general demands are for a reduction of hours from 48 to 44 per week. Some increase in pay is also asked in some classes of work.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN is printed in an open shop (non-Union) and is not affected by the walk-out. Union men do work on THE SUN, but have taken no stock in what they consider an un-called for hold-up of the public. This gives us opportunity to express our appreciation of the unstinted service rendered THE SUN by the men entrusted to its mechanical development. The plant in which THE SUN is printed is not owned by the paper, but no better, no more careful attention would be given the paper's every demand if it owned its own plant. Gentlemanly conduct is ever present, every man a Christian in heart and possessing the highest ethical ideals.

The strike is without justification. Strike the printers may, but the result will be that shops will close and stay closed until somebody strikes the bread line. Mark our prophecy!

Governor Cameron Morrison on April 27 appointed W. C. Wilkinson of Charlotte, to succeed Word H. Wood, resigned, as a member of the State Highway Commission.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

MARTIN LUTHER ON "THE LORD'S PRAYER"

If you turn to Merle D. Aubigüe's History of the Reformation you may read a few things Martin Luther said about this prayer " * * When thou prayest, let thy words be few, but thy thoughts and feelings many and deep. The less thou speakest, the better thy prayers."

"The prayer that is external and of the body is that mumbling of the lips, that outward babble, gone through without attention, and heard and seen of men; but prayer in the spirit and in truth is the inward desire, the motions and sighs that proceed from the depths of the heart. The former is the prayer of hypocrites and those who trust in themselves. The latter is the prayer of God's children who walk in his fear.

"Our Father'. Of all names there is not one which more inclines us toward God than the name of Father. We should feel less love, and desire consolation, from addressing Him as Lord, or God, or Judge. By that word, Father, His compassion is moved, for there is no sound sweeter and prevailing with a father than the voice of his child.

"Whosoever professes that he has a Father in heaven, acknowledges himself to be a stranger on earth; hence there is in his heart an ardent longing like that of a child that is living among strangers in want and grief, afar from its fatherland. It is as if he said, Alas! my Father, thou art in heaven, and I, thy suffering child, am on earth, far from Thee, encompassed with dangers, wants and mournings.

"Hallowed by thy name'. He who is passionate, abusive, envious and slanderous dishonors the name of God in which he has been baptized. Profaning to impious uses a vessel that God has consecrated to Himself, he is like a priest who should take the holy cup to give drink to the swine.

"Thy Kingdom come'. Those who amass property and build magnificent mansions, who strive after what the world can give, and utter this prayer with their lips, resemble those huge organ pipes which incessantly sing out with all their power in the churches, without speech, feeling, or reason.

"It is an awful thing to hear us offer this petition: 'Thy will be done'. Where in the church do we see this will of God? One bishop arises against another bishop, one church against another church. Priests, monks, and nuns quarrel, and thwart, and wage war with each other, and everywhere discord prevails. And yet each party declares that there is good will and upright intention; and so, to the honor and glory of God, they altogether do the Devil's work."

It would take too much space to quote Luther in full. They are good words to read and ponder at this time. The world is discordant and belligerent. The aftermaths of the world war are not less terrible than the war itself. Ministers of the gospel have, in places, become so commercialized that they have left their flocks to the wolves, whole denominations professing to teach Christian union are full of would be leaders, who are men of war. Over two years after the armistice, untold thousands are perishing and anarchy now threatens human society. The only remedy for the waves of crime, the vice, selfishness, and ignorance of this world must be found in Christian education, and the leavens of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

A MAN AND HIS MOTHER

By Victor Murdock, in Association Men

There are three possible and highly probable situations between a man and his mother which touch the highest human drama.

The first is when a man presents his wife-to-be to his mother.

The second is when a man is registering achievement. The third is when a man is in desperate trouble.

Whether he confesses it or not, every man chooses his mate with some consideration of the judgment of his mother. If at the test she approves, his cup is overflowing. If she disapprove, it is one of the deep tragedies of his life.

In the hour of victorious achievement, a man turns from the acclamation of all the rest to the gratification of her who bore him. If he is wise, he doubts acclamation. But he cannot doubt a mother's gratification, for here, if ever, he feels that the triumph is hers, not his, and therefore is untarnished and unselfish.

But most dramatic of all situations between man and his mother is when trouble has him by the throat. When all have deserted, she remains. When all doubt, she believes. When all despair, she hopes. When all surrender, she fights on.

There are fine and different qualities in all love—in that between a man and his father—his brother—his sister—between a man and his wife—his children.

The quality of love between a man and his mother is most like the love between a man and his God.

PUT SOMETHING IN THE RACK

An old farmer who was attending a Church convention chuckled to himself as he read over the subjects of the program. "Se here, parson," he said to his pastor, "there's one thing always amuses me about the way you Church people go at the business. You've had papers and discussions all day on how to get people to attend your meetings. I've never heard a single address at a farmer's convention on how to get cattle to come up to the rack. We put all our time on the best kinds of feed. I sort of have a notion that if you put more time on discussing what to put in the rack you wouldn't have to spend all that time discussing how to get your folks to attend."—Exchange.

THREE MOTHERS

Three mothers by your cradle stand:
One Mother who has given birth,
And one of them is Motherland,
And one of them is Mother Earth:
Three mothers must you have in all,
And two are great and one, is small.

Your Motherland is strong and dread;
Her shield your sure protection makes;
She spreads her law above your head,
But even while she gives she takes.
Her arm is strong, her word is true,
But she may ask your life of you.

From Mother Earth by toil you wring
Or feast or crust at her caprice,
The shelter for your journeying,
Though at best will be the least.
And at the end she gives you bed
But cares not where your soul has sped.

The Mother who has borne your flesh
Through good or ill will hold you fast,
Will guide you through the world's dark mesh,
And so will save your soul at last.
Three mothers shall you have in all,
And one is great and two are small.

WOMANHOOD IN THE BALANCE

Is the standard of American womanhood going up or down? The almost century-old struggle for suffrage has at last won its victory, and women are everywhere taking their rightful places on an equality with men. But does this mean that woman is to come down to the level of man's weakness and bad habits, or does it mean that she is to acquire his political powers and still maintain her traditional high morality?

It is generally admitted that the use of tobacco is at best an unclean habit, and observation proves that it coarsens the finer spiritual nature. Yet more and more what are known as cultured ladies are taking to smoking. And increasingly the so-called higher classes of educated, refined women are turning to rough slang and "polite swearing" to emphasize their sentences. Again, sex subjects of the greatest delicacy are being bandied about in the most indelicate and flippant manner by the girls of this generation, and this in the presence of men. There is a way to escape being a rude and yet not become lewd; but many of the women of our day do not seem to find it as they hurry to adjust themselves to their new and larger status.

Is this what it is going to mean for women to be equal with men? All that is highest and best in us forbids. Many a falling or fallen man tied his hopes to a noble woman and has risen again. The pure, tender hearts and self-effacing life of mother or sister or wife are the salt of the earth. Let it not lose its savor. If the purity of womanhood must give way to the vote, better relinquish the vote.—The Watchman.

THE BULLETIN

PERSONAL

We regret to learn that Rev. J. W. Pimmix, Kernersville, N. C., is not very well and is confined to his bed a great deal of the time.

There will be a memorial service, all day program, at Bethlehem church (Alamance County) on the third Sunday in May. The public is cordially invited to be present.

Rev. J. G. Truitt changes his address from Princeton, N. J., where he has been in school the past year, to News Ferry, Va., where he expects to be located this summer.

Rev. H. Russell Clem, Springfield, Ohio, who has been holding a meeting in our Greensboro church for the past two weeks, was a pleasant caller at THE SUN office Monday.

We have received a copy of the program of the Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Virginia Valley Christian Conference to be held with the Leaksville church May 11, 12 and 13. The program is forward looking in its make up of subjects and speakers.

The Editor was privileged on last Sunday to engage in a memorial service at Pleasant Hill church with Pastor Fleming. The usual large crowd gathered. A memorial address was given in the morning by the Editor and Dr. Fleming preached a Mother's Day sermon in the afternoon. Rev. L. W. Fogleman was also present and took part in the services. The attention was good, music splendid, and the day well spent.

EDITORIAL

A CONNECTING LINK

SOME weeks ago the male members of the Burlington High School faculty conceived the idea of forming something of a connecting link between the boys of the school and the various colleges of the State. We call the idea a connecting link, for that is what it appeared to us to be. A representative student from each college of the State was invited to be present at an informal meeting of all boys of the Burlington school who were over 13 years of age. The following institutions sent representatives: Davidson, Elon, Trinity, Guilford, and the State University.

The primary object of the meeting was to interest the boys of the Burlington school in becoming more interested in a college education. The representatives present made no attempt to speak of their own institutions, not even making reference to college life in their particular college, but spoke of college life in general.

Hodgin represented Guilford and presented figures to show that a college education pays—pays in money, environment, social standing, and a larger appreciation of life. He spoke with earnestness and showed by his own training that a college education pays.

Davidson was represented by McCaskell, who very ably stated that a college training taught a person how to save, how to organize for the best economical development, of both material and life products. He compared college life to a great machine shop turning out highly constructed machines, developed to the highest point of efficiency in serving mankind and the commonwealth. His presentation was clear, pointed, and convincing.

Clem, of Elon College, introduced his talk by quoting Whittier's "School Days". "Building a Foundation" was really his text, and he showed accurately the necessary foundation—development through the lower schools and through college, making it very clear that the achievement in college rests largely upon the foundation laid before going to college. The speaker also made it plain to the boys that matured thought was due to a process of right thinking, right training, and proper development—and that a college education served best all of these things. He well represented our College and himself.

Trinity had as its representative a son of the parsonage. Draper, Trinity's man, emphasized culture, ideas, good citizenship, etc., as the products of a college. He stated there were three questions that a college education will help an individual to answer: (a) Who are you?; (b) What are you doing?; (c) Where are you going? He logically pointed out that a college training would help an individual to discover the answer to these three questions.

Phillips, from the State University, began his message by saying that the best was always ahead and sometimes it could be found better by securing a college education. His presentation of college life was that it prepared one to live rather than to making a living. "The state, the nation, and the world will advance", he said, "as the minds of men advance, and the minds of men advance by the proper training in college." His plea was for the full rounded life.

Space forbids an elaboration of what these young men so well presented. The thing that impressed us was that each speaker emphasized Christian ideals, Christian character, and right living toward our fellowmen, as some of the highest ideals that could be taught in college life. They were noble representatives of noble institutions.

The short addresses were not all of the evening's gathering. The college men entered into plays and games with the high school boys and they were one together. We watched carefully the faces of the high school boys and saw that they were pleased with their visitors and were thinking seriously of being able to enter college some day themselves.

The plan was new to us. Nevertheless, it was impressive and a good thing as we see it. Many young men form an idea that the college student is formal, "up-pish", and indifferent. The representatives from the colleges were the opposite. They were informal in their approach, humble in their manner, and friendly in spirit. They won the boys—won them to thinking more of college life. We would like to see the idea carried out in more of our high schools.

NOT SUFFICIENT

SYRACUSE University, Syracuse, N. Y., has just experienced an awful tragedy that proves that mere testimonials are not sufficient in judging a man's fitness for a position.

Here is the story in brief as a background of our thought: The Business College of the University desired a man for the position of Banking and Finance. One Homes Beckwith, Ph. D., LL. D., applied for the position. The application was placed in the hands of Dean John H. Wharton, and following "a universal practice, Dean Wharton submitted the application with the best of credentials, as a bank examiner from the State of California, and professorship from the University of Colorado and North Western University. The applicant was the son of a Congregational minister and also a grandson of a minister of the same Church", writes Chancellor James R. Day. Chancellor Day further says: "To a college president from New England, like myself, there could be no higher moral recommendation. The Syracuse University carefully inquires into a man's religious life and moral character and we want to know if a man has a country. We will not accept a Socialist or a man who is careless in such matters." Beckwith was given the position and began his work last September amid hopeful surroundings and with a bright outlook. Soon he began to lose grip on his classes, but Dean Wharton thought that the new professor would soon overcome the difficulties, but he did not. His case became hopeless, and Dean Wharton decided that the new professor was a misfit, and thought that it would be better for him to go elsewhere. Beckwith became angry with the Dean, entered his room, and fired five shots into the Dean's body with a heavy army-model revolver. Beckwith then emptied his pistol, reloaded it and deliberately placed himself in a position so as to make sure of death at a single shot, sent a bullet through his brain, and died instantly.

This is in brief the tragic story without its parallel in the educational world. It was premeditated, for Dr. Day writing of the tragedy says: "The murderer was armed not only with a heavy Colt revolver, but with the wickedest dagger I ever saw, having a long blade as sharpe as a razor. He intended to make sure of his victim."

It developed after the tragedy that Beckwith had cherished murder on several occasions. At one time he wanted to kill a trustee in Columbia University; President Mann of Grinnell College came very near being Beckwith's victim on one occasion, a prominent lawyer of Chicago was once in Beckwith's murderous path, while on one occasion he declared that an instructor in Dartmouth College should be put to death.

In addition to this it was learned that Beckwith studied the employment question in Germany and applied those Teutonic principles to his life work, throwing away the faith of his father and becoming a Soviet Socialist. And yet he was able to secure a prominent position in a great institution of learning.

How did he get the position with the Syracuse University? Here is how he got it: He handed in only his favorable recommendations, bolstered by being a minister's son, and the grandson of a minister. Recommendations are very easily secured and being a minister's son is no guarantee of a man having a right heart.

We have a two-fold reason for re-telling this tragedy and commenting thereon. In the first place, it serves to show that recommendations are not sufficient, and in the second place, it shows that it is possible for a man to get into a teaching profession who is not worthy of a decent place in the penitentiary. And there are thousands teaching today who may never become murderers, but they may be poisoning the minds of those who, themselves or their offspring, may do Cain-like.

Then, too, church membership is not sufficient. Being a member of the church does not immune a person from the scars of sin, nor wash clean the impurities of a heart of hatred. Men of position and responsibility cannot be too careful in accepting written recommendations from persons to fill important places. When you come to think of it, a recommendation is one of the most easily secured things, and no one knows how true this is save those who are called upon to furnish recommendations.

MOTHER'S DAY

ONCE there was a time when there was no Mother's Day. True it is that every day is mother's, but we mean a day named for her and kept in her honor and memory. Next Sunday is Mother's Day. The sweet roses will be in display, but behind them there is a greater emblem, and that emblem is a real remembrance of some kind. She may, or she may not, see the rose that you may wear in her memory. After you have worn the rose during the day, fold it and kiss it, and send it with a letter to that mother if she is living. That is the real remembrance that will please her. She would like for you to tell her that you love her; that though the days have been many since childhood, that you remember the un-numbered duties performed in your behalf, and that as you went your way toward the land of the unknown her presence and her spirit guard and guide.

Behind every man's life who has done something worth while is the life of a great and noble mother. Many a man has received honors, congratulations, and glory that should be placed at his mother's feet. There are men who have written their names high up in the sky of success, but they have placed their names there because of their mothers' devotion and their mothers' prayers.

Little by little the influence of mother came into your life, and soon like a mighty web had you in its motherly embrace. Back to the days of

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray thee, Lord, my soul to take."

until now her influence has been felt, and wherever you go and whatever you do the mother's love and influence is there.

No money could pay for the un-named tasks performed in your behalf by the hands of mother. Sleepless nights were endured for you by her. The days were long and though her body was tired she kept going for you. She watched you until you had retired at night, and her first thoughts of the morning were of you.

Write that mother a letter, send her a present. It will cheer her heart, gladden her soul, and bring joy to your own life.

"If you have a gray-haired mother
In the old home far away,
Sit down and write the letter
You put off from day to day.
Don't wait until her weary steps
Reach heaven's pearly gate,
But show her that you think of her
Before it is too late."

We did not receive your renewal last week. Don't forget it this week. We need it.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

UNDERPAID COLLEGE PROFESSORS

A far-reaching neglect in the average American college today is to be seen in the comparatively low salaries of its teachers. Investigations made by the New York Tribune show that there is a considerable exodus taking place among college faculties which, if not remedied soon, will amount to grave proportions.

The meagre salaries which teachers are receiving compared with the still comparatively high cost of living have increasingly caused them to depend upon other kinds of work for their living. In extreme cases the "morality" in college faculties is as high as 85 per cent. Were it not for the emergency endowments given some colleges such loss as would necessitate an abandonment of all educational attempts. The average "mortality", however, is not near so bad, yet it represents a serious breach which cannot be neglected longer.

"There is a grievous lack of funds to pay adequate salaries with among the institutions of higher learning which are supported by endowment," writes Trevor Arnett of the General Educational Board. In order to meet the lack of funds, he shows that such institutions are resorting to one or more of three recourses: an increase in tuition and general fees, the solicitation of gifts for an emergency or sustaining fund, and finally, the "familiar drives or campaigns for larger endowments."

The menace to college education resulting from underpaid professors seems to be two-fold in view of the foregoing considerations: first, a weakening of the standards of education through the absence of some of the best trained men who can demand higher salaries in other professions, and secondly, as a result of the lower standards, poorly trained product. The student goes to college expecting to obtain as high a grade of instruction as possible and unless the college he attends is able to give him such, he becomes the loser.

"It is of highest importance," wrote Mr. John D. Rockefeller, when presenting $50,000,000 to the General Education Board to provide more adequate salaries for teachers, "that those intrusted with the education of youth and the increase of knowledge should not be led to abandon their calling by reason of financial pressure or to cling to it amid discouragements due to financial limitations."

A CRITICAL MOMENT

What will be done next? The last day set for the settlement of reparations, May 1, is almost here, yet Germany is still unable to meet the Allied demands. That Germany shall be made to pay reparations, there is no doubt, provided her Government maintains its integrity and continues to exist in any form. But as to whether she will be held strictly to the payment of the former assessment of $55,000,000,000 there is some doubt. At any rate she will be made to come still closer to the Allied demands and phrase her promise in more definite words.

The next move seems to be left to the Allies, and this is where great caution must be observed, lest the unity of aims of the great powers, France, England and the United States should be menaced and tend toward decay rather than peace. France presents the view that she has expended her patience and will wait upon Germany no longer. In a rather impatient and revengeful mood, the French Government has unanimously decided to take over additional German territory—this to be done to "bring Germany to her knees." This territory will include the great Ruhr Basin coal fields which are well-nigh indispensable to the economic life of Germany, and will add greatly to the already-plentiful supply which France has received through the war.

But England is reluctant to let France take over such an important economic prize, in spite of the fact that Germany must be made to pay the certified amount of reparations. In such an event France could compete very advantageously with England, in many instances to the demolition of certain lines of British industry, since the occupation of the mines would probably be for some length of time.

The United States, trying to steer as straight a course as possible and trying to see that Germany gets a square deal at the hands of the more avengeful-minded Allies, is inclined to oppose France's proposed measure for the occupation of the Ruhr Basin. Though a number of American newspapers are in favor of backing up the other Allied nations and making Germany pay to the limit, very few agree that the extreme measure should be taken so soon.

There is a confident feeling that some satisfactory agreement will be reached. Germany must pay, but she must not of necessity be an object of economic aggrandisement and caused to suffer unduly at the hands of the Allies. With justice there must also be good will. Who knows but that her Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Simons has tried his best to bring Germany and the Allies to satisfactory terms? Many things tend to show his good faith and the sincerity in which he discharges his duty.

Though it is not probable that Germany can be driven into Bolshevism, it is possible. Certainly the Allies will not profit by the use of any undue force at this critical period. Common sense and foresight may not only save the unity of the Allies; these qualities may also be the savor of the Germany so that she maintain herself fit to pay.

President Harding left Washington on the Mayflower for Hampton Roads on April 27, where he went to review the Atlantic division of the American fleet on April 28.

As we go to press this (Tuesday) morning with the last "run" of THE SUN the papers report a general strike in the printing industry in many sections. Raleigh, N. C., is affected by a walk-out of 200 men.

OUR ORPHANAGE

SUPERINTENDENT'S LETTER

We are putting forth every effort possible to get our new building complete before commencement and hope to do it. The carpenters will finish up this week and the painters are on the job—so it looks now that we might get it finished.

The ladies of the different churches are taking much interest in furnishing the building, and several Ladies Aid Societies have already sent in checks to buy beds for the dormitories. I knew that the good women would do their part in this building as they have always come to my rescue when we were in need.

Little Ruth Teague Riddle sent us another bank full of money this week as her Easter Offering. This makes the second bank she has sent to us, and I understand she has another bank open and is making deposits for the little orphan children and will send it in as soon as she gets it full. Ruth Teague is a wonderful little worker for the orphans and is very happy over the sacrifice. If all the little boys and girls would save the money thrown away for candy and such little things through the year and sent it to the Orphanage, what a pile of money we would have! I trust that her example will be contagious and many other little girls will follow suit.

It is a busy time on the farm now and all the boys who are not in school are busy. Planting corn has been occupying the attention of the farmer and his helpers and the tractor has been humming all the week getting other ground broken for corn.

The rest of us have been making watermelon hills and planting them and working out the garden.

"A job for every one and all busy" is our motto.

LETTERS FROM THE CHILDREN

Dear Uncle Charley: It has been a long time since we have written, but nevertheless we have not forgot you. Hope that all are well. We wish that the little boys and girls could come to see us sometime. We have a big rubber ball that we bounee and play with and have a big time. We have some little chickens but the old mother hen will get us if we bother her biddies. We are glad to know that you are progressing so nicely with the baby home and hope that it will soon be completed. Our grandfather lives in the country and we go there often, and we have a fine time. We can get all the milk we want to drink then. We are enclosing 25 cents as our dues.—J. P. and Mack Brannon.

If you like to play, you should come to the Orphanage as we have some expert ball players here. We have some little biddies, too, and we like to watch the old mother hen and the biddies eat.—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: As I have just finished studying my lessons and practicing my music, I am going to write to you as I haven't written this month. I am going to school now, and at recess we play basket ball. I like to play. How are all the little cousins. I hope that they will all keep well. I enclose 10 cents for this month—Dorothy Moore.

I know you enjoy your music lessons as most little girls like music. You must study hard and get so that you can play well and come to see and play some for us.—"Uncle Charley".

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

MISSIONARY RALLY

Johnson's Grove Church

The first of the District Rallies of the Eastern Virginia Conference was held with the church at Johnson's Grove, Southampton Co., on April 21, Mrs. J. H. Williams, Supt., Franklin, Va., presiding. There were some representatives from each of the five churches in the county; Barrett's, Ivor, Union, Franklin, and Johnson's Grove—the larger number being from Franklin and Johnson's Grove. In the morning, reports from the Societies were given. Franklin reported a Woman's Society, Young People's, Willing Workers and a Cradle Roll. Johnson's Grove reported a Woman's Society and a Young People's. Ivor a Woman's Society, Union has a Woman's Society, Barrett's as yet is unorganized.

Emma Hancock recited, "Missions and Lace". Mrs. Rowland spoke of the efforts that are being put forth to organize in every church; Mrs. Williams spoke of the goals for the year and the amounts asked for from each church. Then Miss Bessie Holt spoke of the importance of organizing our young people and of the work that Miss Hedgepeth is doing in the mountains, supported by the young people of the Church. She was followed by Dr. Rowland, who spoke for a few minutes in appreciation of the work the women are doing. A bountiful luncheon was then enjoyed by all present. At the beginning of the afternoon session we were favored by music on cornet and violin from some of the young people of the Franklin church, and a solo by Joel Holland of the same church. The women of the Franklin church then presented a pageant—"A Living Dream"—which was impressive and appreciated. Dr. Atkinson gave an inspiring address followed by prayer by Miss Holt. Quartet by Johnson's Grove choir. An offering was made for the expense of the meeting, amounting to $6.86. There was a general discussion as to whether these meetings should be made permanent, which it was decided to do and Franklin asked for the Societies to meet with them next year. All those present expressed themselves as having spent a pleasant and profitable day.

MISSIONARY RALLY

Berea (Nansemond) Church

The Missionary Rally of the Womens' Societies of Nansemond County Christian churches met at Berea. Driver, April 22, 1921. The meeting was called to order by the Superintendent, Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson, and the following program rendered:

Devotional service—Dr. I. W. Johnson; Object of the meeting—Miss Jennie Willis Atkinson; Music—Chandler's Orchestra; Roll call of churches and reports from Societies.

The following churches reported as having Woman's Missionary Societies, Young People's Societies and Cradle Rolls, either one, or all: Bethlehem, Holland, Holy Neck, Liberty Spring, Oakland, Suffolk, Berea, Cypress Chapel. Music; Address—"Young People, Sunday School and Missions"—Mrs. R. B. Wood; Solo—"Something For Thee"—Mrs. Bradford Kilby; Address—Miss Bessie Holt; Adjourn for lunch.

Afternoon Session: Devotional service—Rev. W. M. Jay; Reading—"The Woman Who Gave Herself"—Mrs. A. S. Hargroves; Music—Chandler's Orchestra; Address—Dr. J. O. Atkinson; Quartette—"Savior Source of Every Blessing"—Mr. W. W. Ballard, Mrs. Telza Miller, Miss Julia Brinkley, Mr. R. J. Brinkley; Round table discussion led by Mrs. B. D. Jones.

An offering was taken for our mountain work amounting to $55.70.

Nearly 250 delegates from these churches were present and the program such an interesting one, and the day as a whole such a success that a motion was made and unanimously carried to make these Rally Days a permanent institution.

The addresses were of the highest order and Dr. Atkinson's address on missions was soul-stirring.

Dr. Staley read resolutions as follows:

RESOLVED:

First. That this good day and this first Woman's Missionary Rally with good Berea inspire grateful thanks to the Giver of every good and perfect gift.

Second. That a rising vote of thanks are due and gratefully given to the good women of Berea for the sumptuous and delicious luncheon gratuitously served to all present.

Third. That the solo, quartet and orchestra from Suffolk, the addresses by Mrs. Wood, Miss Holt and Dr. Atkinson, furnish another reason for expression of appreciation.

Fourth. That we include in this vote our grateful thanks to God for the missionary Spirit which this meeting has inspired in our hearts.

Resolutions were adopted and a rising vote of thanks given by all. Benediction by Dr. Atkinson.

MRS. B. D. CROCKER, Recording Secretary

OFFICIAL NOTICE

The Central Executive Committee of the North Carolina Woman's Board met in Burlington, Monday, April 25 and authorized the following statement with reference to what may count on the apportionment of the Societies for 1921:

1. We can apply the monthly dues.
2. We can secure life memberships from individual members at the rate of $10.00 each.
3. We can secure honorary life memberships from men of the church at the rate of $10.00 each.
4. We can make some officer or the pastor's wife a life member at the rate of $10.00.
5. We can secure donations from individuals.
6. The members of a society can assess themselves.
7. We can apply the Hardecastle annual payment.
8. We can use any other method we desire.

In other words, we can count everything except the three special offerings known as Thanksgiving, Self-Denial and the Rally Day offerings. These offerings go to raise the fifteen hundred dollars of our six thousand dollar goal not apportioned to the societies.

MRS. W. A. HARPER, Secretary.

AN INVITATION

We acknowledge receipt of the following invitation: "The faculty and senior class of Elon College request the honor of your presence at the thirty-first annual commencement, May twenty-second to twenty-fourth, Elon College, N. C." The Baccalaureate Sermon is to be preached by Mr. Hermon Eldredge, Erie, Pa., and the Baccalaureate Address by President W. A. Harper. Governor Cameron Morrison delivers the Literary Address, while Prof. G. C. Davidson, Henderson, N. C., delivers the Alumni Address.

REBINDING BIBLES

It may be of interest to some readers of THE SUN to know that we are in position to have Bibles rebound. The publishers who furnish us Bibles can take an old Bible and put a new binding on it—a binding that is good as new. We have recently had several old Bibles rebound, including retrimming of the edges and retouching, in either red or gold, and each job proved to be beyond expectation. The price depends upon the size and quality of the binding. If there are those who have Bibles that they desire rebound and will send the same, we will have the work done, guarantee satisfaction, and the charges will be actual cost plus fifty cents for handling.

"Tell Me a Story"

THE LOOM OF SPRING

The valley weaves her kirtle
 With strands of April green,
 Fern fronds on deeper myrtle
 And willow buds between;
 While tiny rills laugh love-songs low
 Beneath their sedgy screen.

With silks her needle threading,
 Filched from the rainbow's skein,
 Her robe she broiders, wedding
 Gold sunshine, silver rain,
 About her breast slow, golden bees
 Hum amorous refrain.

She hangs her veil fringes
 Of mauves and violets;
 With blue her girdle tinges;
 Her cloak with crimson frets.
 Kissing her cheek May's wandering wind
 Inconstancy forgets.

Wreathed by young June with roses,
 Blushing she dreams apart,
 Waiting, while twilight closes,
 Her spousals with my heart.
 O lark, that nests within her breast,
 Song of her soul thou art.

WHEN TOMMY HAWK MADE A MISTAKE

Many of the birds in the big wood were kindly people, who felt an interest in their neighbors and gave them sympathy when they were in trouble. Mrs. Catbird, for example, felt very sorry when John Robin fell from his nest and hurt his head; and she added her cries to those of Mrs. Robin, both of them hopping about on the ground together, and hovering about John Robin to see in what way they could help him. But there was one bird who took no interest in his neighbors, except to injure them. His name was Tommy Hawk.

Whenever Tommy Hawk appeared in the neighborhood of the other birds, they either ran or flew as fast as they could to get to a place of safety. For Tommy Hawk, big and strong, had a bad reputation for being an eater of small birds. To prove this, there was the day when he had pounced upon poor Red Bird and had carried him away to the top of the great elm tree, where he had feasted upon the smaller bird; and then, too, all the birds in the wood had heard the disturbance caused by his seizure of Will Thrush.

"He is just too mean for anything," exclaimed Mrs. Catbird, when she heard of the death of Will Thrush. Mrs. Thrush was a very good friend of Mrs. Catbird, for Mrs. Catbird had watched for intruders when Mrs.

Thrush was teaching her babies to fly, and had sounded her warning notes when Tommy Hawk had been seen in the distance.

But there came a day when Tommy Hawk was punished for his bad acts. That was the day in October when, sitting in the big elm tree, he heard a whistle in the wood.

"Hark! Hark!" he thought, in his harsh way of thinking. "I hear fat, juicy Mrs. Quail calling her children. Here's where I make a good haul, for maybe I can catch two or three of them." And he flew out swiftly in the direction of the whistle.

Mrs. Quail was calling her children, who had scattered over the wood in search of bugs and flies. Her children came very quickly to her call and gathered around her.

"I don't want you to get very far away," she warned them, "for I seem to feel that Tommy Hawk is in the neighborhood."

Just as she finished, she heard a whistle a short distance away. She thought it came from Bob White, her husband, so she answered it. Then, looking up, she saw Tommy Hawk, with his beady little eyes scanning the underbrush, and very quietly she slipped with her children under a great pile of brush where she knew she would be safe. She worried about Bob White, but she thought she ought to take care of the children first; and she knew Bob would want her to do that.

The whistle came again, and Tommy Hawk hurried past the pile of brush in the direction of the whistle. Mrs. Quail, hearing the whistle, was very anxious, fearing that Tommy would catch Bob; but just then she heard a terrible noise, and she peeped out from under the brush pile to see what it was all about.

About fifty steps away she saw a man with a gun bending over something; and the something looked like a large bird. The man picked it up; and, sure enough, it was Tommy Hawk. The man dropped Tommy Hawk on the ground and walked away.

Then all the birds, attracted by the noise, came to see what was the matter. And there they saw poor Tommy Hawk their enemy, lying on his back, not moving at all.

"It's really too bad," said Bob White, who had by this time come in from the cornfield and had seen Tommy Hawk, "but if he had been a good bird, and not a killer, maybe the man wouldn't have killed him."

"Bob," said Mrs. Quail, "I'm so glad you're come back. The children and I have been so worried about you. Why did you whistle?"

"I didn't whistle," said Bob. "I heard a man whistling over in the cornfield, and he came this way. So it must have been he."—J. Arthur Dunn, in Congregationalist.

CHURCH NEWS

FROM HAITI

One month of duty in Haiti has gone and we are well on the way of another. The entire month has been spent at my desk, taking over the details of the Morale Activities of the American Occupation in Haiti. These are in part as follows: Athletics, Enlisted Men's Clubs, entertainment, all recreation, and the distribution of all material and equipment available for these departments. In addition to this, every Sunday morning, regular church services are held at the following places: Radio and Aviation Station, Marine Barracks, Field Hospital and Bizotons the water Aviation and Sub-Chaser Division. Every Sunday evening at 6:30, band concert; 7:30, Sacred song service followed by a popular address on such subjects as may be chosen by the Chaplain; followed by motion pictures. From fifty to one hundred attend the church services, and about three hundred attend the evening services. Such subjects as "The Unforgiving Minute", "Is Hell Eternal", "The Soul of a Man who didn't know", etc, are typical subjects used at these evening services. The atmosphere of these gatherings is free and everyone is in a jolly good spirit. The Chaplain is at liberty to indulge in any appropriate pleasantries. The subjects are broad enough to admit of great latitude, and definite enough to be to the point. Altogether we enjoy these meetings very much.

There is another Chaplain in the Brigade, with the 2nd Regiment at Cape Haitien. He is a Methodist from Virginia. We have had two conferences and it almost approached a preachers' meeting. As pastors cherish their gatherings, so Chaplains cherish the meeting of another, especially when their work is one and the same and they meet on grounds of common interest.

The Brigade Chaplain has not yet had an opportunity to go to the outposts in the interior of Haiti. A trip is planned for an early date, after which, he may have something to these columns of interest to the friends at home.

When one looks out of the window across the sea with home in imaginary view, the days and weeks seem long and the time afar off when he shall return to his home-land and his dear ones again. On the other hand when turning to duty and one is awake to the opportunities before him, the days are never long enough and the work seems never to get done. To be a servant is to be busy and real service is great. It is the source of all good, happiness and true wealth.

Pastor Leaksville church

On Wednesday night, April 20, 1921, one of the greatest revivals ever held in Leaksville Christian church came to a close. This revival started on Monday night, April 11, with an "old-time" prayer meeting conducted by Deacon J. K. Eppard, the writer being at Goldsboro, N. C., attending the funeral of his mother at the time. Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Va., came over and began preaching Tuesday night. He did all of the preaching and conducted the singing and the prayer services, besides the fine solos he sang for us. Bro. Poythress preached ten very able and effective sermons while he was with us, and his singing was grand. He is also a great personal worker; and during our revival, he worked energetically and with telling effect. As a result of these efforts, and in answer to the prayers of Bro. Poythress and the Church, our Heavenly Father was merciful unto us, and gave us a gracious out-pouring of the Holy Spirit. At least twenty-five were happily converted, and twenty-three of these united with our church. Furthermore, the entire church was greatly revived. Some say that they never before saw the members interested in a meeting and in salvation as they were this time. The pastor and his wife were also very much renewed and strengthened spiritually. They never felt more full of the Holy Spirit or more like praising God, to whom we ascribe all honor and praise for this glorious revival. We are deeply indebted to Bro. Poythress for coming to our assistance; and we are very grateful to Our Heavenly Father for sending him to us, for using him so effectively and for pouring out His Holy Spirit upon us so bountifully.

We held our meetings with the other five churches in the pastorate at the following times, and with the following results: Beginning the fifth Sunday in October 1920 we held an eight days' meeting at Bethel, receiving four into the church. During the latter part of November and the first part of December, we held our meeting with the New Port church, receiving six new members as a result of this meeting. Beginning the second Sunday in Feb. 1921 we held a week's meeting at Mt. Lebanon, realizing no visible results. We held our meeting at East Liberty following the first Sunday in March. There were three additions to the church as a result of this meeting. We began an eight-day meeting in St. Peters church on Wednesday, January 26. Four united with our church during this meeting.

The pastor did all of the preaching during all five of these meetings—he having been specially requested to do so by the churches concerned. God was with us in these meetings, and awakened renewed interest and zeal among the members as well as saved souls.

The first Sunday in April, we received three new members into the church on profession of faith in Christ—one at Leaksville and two at New Port. All three of these were grown men—two of them being heads of families.

All of the Sunday schools of the pastorate, except the one at Leaksville, went into winter quarters last Christmas. All of these five churches, except East Liberty, have recently started up the work of their Sunday schools again. These schools are in a flourishing condition at present.

The brethren at New Port have recently put a new roof on the building, new carpet on the floor, and made other much needed repairs. Brethren pray for us.

GOFF EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS

Third Christian Church, Norfolk, Va.

On March 20, the Third Christian church opened an Evangelistic Campaign, with the Goff Evangelistic party of Philadelphia leading. The meeting lasted for three weeks, closing April 10. The party consisted of S. B. Goff, Jr. Evangelist, Oliver Arnold, Soloist, and Musical Director and Mrs. Oliver Arnold, Women's Worker.

Mr. Goff has a most pleasing personality, is a good preacher and very consecrated and spirit-filled man. His sermons are attractive, forceful and they bring results. A most splendid man to work with—he wears a smile that doesn't fade. Mr. Arnold is splendid with the choir and congregational singing. A talented and experienced musician. The work of Mrs. Arnold was very fruitful among the ladies. These workers and the series of meetings proved a blessing to the church and community.

I hardly know how to tabulate the results of the meetings—my best efforts would fail. Practically the entire active membership of the church reconsecrated itself and pledged more faithful service to the cause of Christ. There were eight reclamations and more than a hundred conversions. Seventy-four were received into the fellowship of the church by the time the meeting closed, two received since and there are some ten or fifteen to join yet.

In looking over the record I find that there were 236 members when I came, January 15, 1917. Since my coming I have received 352. We have lost 36 by death, withdrawals, etc., leaving the present membership 552. We hope to make it six hundred by the end of the Conference year.

Our next great need is the NEW CHURCH. Our field is great! Our opportunity is great! Our responsibility is greater still. We stand upon His promises.

L. E. SMITH, Pastor

IN PLEASANT PLACES

Twice during the month of April I was permitted to preach to a people who said they were without a pastor. Their church was erected by a woman preacher over ninety years ago. It is a handsome stone structure with two splendid auditoriums, several Sunday school rooms—and those rooms are not empty on Sundays—and a church membership of 271 persons. I found a choir of 25 members, a good pipe organ and a people ready to sing. I found a host of young people whose parents were with them at Sunday school and church. I told them I was "mighty glad" to see them. "Yes", they said, "so says Dr. L. F. Johnson. You must be from the South, as all you Southern preachers are 'mighty glad'." I took it as a compliment to my Southern colleagues and thanked them accordingly. Was I right?

Just before the preaching service they requested me to receive after the sermon and prior to the Lord's Supper five young people into the church. All in all both the morning and evening services were most delightful. Dr. Warren H. Denison was with them the Sunday following. He spoke three times to the church and young people during the day and to the whole town at night. They declared his messages to be among the best they had ever had. At night he presented the problem of the Chinese famine. During the day he had presented the detailed program of the Forward Movement, which they have adopted in full and are now carrying out.

I was with them again on the Sunday following at which time eleven more young people were received into the church. This is the pastorless church at Milford, New Jersey, the church of which Rev. C. A. McDaniel was the efficient pastor, in the beautiful valley of the great Delaware river. Flower-laden mountains reach up into the blue from the church house door—the scenery at the time of the setting sun is surpassingly beautiful. With a dear old deacon I stood on the summit of one of those great hills and we looked up the river, made by the glow of the setting sun a river of gold, in the center of the panoramic view the Christian church steeple pointed to God—and I could only exclaim, "O, Master, it is beautiful!"

J. G. TRUITT.

MEBANE

This church held its second quarterly meeting Saturday afternoon, April 23, 1921. The business was transacted in harmony and order, with two thirds of the members present. All committees made favorable reports.

The pastor's salary was paid up to date. The apportionments for Men and Millions paid up to date, with two paid in full for the five years. I doubt if there is a church in the Conference that has made as good financial record since last Conference. They have sent to Orphanage more than fifty dollars; on Men and Millions nearly two hundred dollars; and over sixty dollars on salary, and a membership of only fourteen.

Our church at Mebane has a fine Sunday school with Brother J. O. Fowler, Superintendent. The Sunday school numbers between 20 and 40. Our congregations are getting so large that we can scarcely accommodate the people. Splendid prayer meetings are held every Wednesday evening, and we are praying for a real Pentecostal revival. We have secured a tent for the meeting, the Sunday school room being too small. I trust that the Lord will open the heart of some great and good servant of His to help us to enlarge our building. I truly hope our Mission Board will consider our needs.

CALLED HOME

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—SPARKMAN

Whereas God in His almighty wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst one of our beloved members, Sister Mary J. Sparkman on March 4, 1921, aged 80 years. Sister Sparkman was one of the charter members and was a committee appointed by Eure's Christian church, Gates County, North Carolina, offer the following resolutions.

First. That the church bow in humble submission to God's will, knowing that He doeth all things well, and that our loss in the church and community is her eternal gain.

Second. That we shall by God's help endeavor to follow her beautiful example of humility and consecration to her Master's cause.

Third. That we extend to her two sons and relatives our heartfelt sympathy in the loss of a mother whose devotion to her family was untiring.

Fourth. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved sons, a copy to The Christian Sun, and a copy placed on our church minutes.

McADAN

John Henry McAdan, son of James M. and Caroline McAdan, was born July 9, 1867 and died April 10, 1921, aged 53 years nine months and one day. When a young man Bro. McAdan united with Lebanon Christian church and for twelve years prior to his death had served as one of the deacon board. August 15, 1905 he married Miss Ella Yarboro who survives him together with five children. The children are John, James, Mary, Caroline, and Hugh. He is also survived by three sisters—Mrs. J. H. Yarboro and Mrs. Ollie Wells of Semora, N. C., and Mrs. Kate McKane of Newport News, Va.

The deceased was born at Semora and spent his entire life there, honored and loved by all for his integrity in business affairs, purity in moral life and consistency in Christian profession. For several years he has been one of the most faithful and competent leaders in his church. Not only was he interested in Lebanon, but in all the enterprises of the church. He was a successful merchant and farmer and honored the Lord by giving liberally of his means. My individual estimate of Bro. McAdan is that there are but few men his equal. To know him was to love him and the better acquainted one became with him the stronger the ties. His life here was rounded true and well. His reward in Heaven is abundant.

The home has lost a true husband and devoted father. But they are rich in the memory and example of his life.

WHAT MOTHERS DO

Playing with the little people
Sweet old games forever new;
Coaxing, cuddling, cooing, kissing,
Baby's every grief dismissing,
Laughing, sighing, soothing, singing,
While the happy days are winging—
This is what the mothers do.

Planning for the little people
That they may grow brave and true;
Active brain and busy fingers
While the precious seed time lingers
Guiding, guarding, hoping, fearing,
Waiting for the harvest nearing—
This is what the mothers do.

Praying for the little people,
(Closed are eyes of brown or blue)
By the quiet bedside kneeling,
With a trustful, sure appealing,
All the Spirit's guidance needing,
Seeking it with earnest pleading—
This is what the mothers do.

Parting from the little people,
(Heart of mine, how fast they grow!)
Fashioning the wedding dresses,
Treasuring the last caresses;
Waiting then as years fly faster
For the summons of the Master—
This is what the mothers do.

Commencements

THE EDITOR

COMMENCEMENT is a term that is sometimes confusing, and the average mind thinks it contrary to graduation or "finishing". It is not. The high school pupil does not "finish" or graduate in the larger meaning. He commences to enter life's real school. His diploma is a sign-board for another school, let that be the school of experience or college. There is no progress in anything that is finished. Life is never finished—it is an unfolding process and gives itself to development until death. There may be stagnation in a life career, but not a finished place. It is a great mistake for young persons to assume that they have finished. They have only begun, and commencement day is to give them a vision of what is before rather than to lend itself to praise of what has been done.

OUR CHURCH HOSPITALS

Dr. F. C. English, Executive Secretary
Protestant Hospital Association

OUR Church Hospitals should be given the right of way in our most intelligent and sympathetic consideration. Their ministry is as deep as human needs, and wide as suffering humanity. Most people know something about hospitals, but few realize just what they are doing even in their own community. Even the person who endows a bed hardly considers that between thirty and forty persons will be benefitted annually by hospital care while occupying that bed. What a blessing to humanity such a gift becomes. Their opportunity for service amply justifies the words of Jesus, "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." Again He said, "Go tell John the things ye see and hear, the blind see, the lame walk, the deaf hear, the lepers are cleansed, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached unto them." The writer of this article has witnessed again and again the realization of all these assertions.

Of the 7,000 hospitals in the U. S., only 400 having 35,000 bed capacity are under the management of the Protestant Churches. Yet our Church Hospitals care for 1,500,000 patients annually, and there is demand that they should treat at least 1,000,000 others. That the hospital field is not thoroughly occupied will be seen when we glance at a single statement. The American Public Health Association states that there are in the U. S., 3,000,000 people sick in bed daily. Our research workers find that at least 28 per cent of these should have hospital care. This would require 840,000 hospital beds, whereas we only have 455,000 beds for general hospital use. These figures make it clear that many sick and crippled are necessarily neglected. But what can the Church do to measure up to her responsibility?

The Roman Catholics have 582 hospitals, with over 65,000 bed capacity. Their Church stands firmly behind their hospitals in giving efficient service to all their people. Can the Protestants afford to do less? The recent organization of the Protestant Hospital Association is the first attempt to unite Protestants in the ministry of healing. Probably this is the only place we can unite, but it is worthy. This P. H. A. has called a meeting of representatives of all our Church Hospitals at West Baden, Indiana, for September 12, to seriously consider their problems. One principal of the Association is to provide medical care for all our sick, and all others who are sadly neglected, regardless of creed, color or race; and strictly to avoid all semblance of proselyting.

National Hospital Day comes most fittingly on the birth-day of Florence Nightingale, May 12. Her ministry was the renaissance of modern nursing. Many hospitals have nurses' graduation exercises that day. It is requested that all our constituency give their own Church Hospital their special interest that week; and that the pastors make special mention of the ministry of healing in these houses of mercy on Sunday, May 15. Never was there such an awakening among hospitals as now. They need the prayers, patronage and financial support of our people. The observance of National Hospital Day and Week will increase an interest, and awaken the people to the needs of their own Church Hospital. Better knowledge of the work being done, and better financial support are imperative.

SUFFOLK LETTER

THE Isle of Wight missionary rally was held in Windsor Christian church April 28, 1921. There are four churches in that district. Three were represented with 30 representatives present, and a number of visitors. The attendance was very good from the local church. Mrs. E. T. Cotten presided in the absence of Mrs. C. H. Rowland. Mrs. Mamie Watkins acted as secretary. Pastor E. T. Cotten conducted devotional services.

The object of the rally was explained by Rev. Dr. J. O. Atkinson; the roll of churches was called and delegates from the Societies made reports that indicated interest and progress. Several women volunteered to revive societies and to organize new ones in the churches, and the spirit of the rally was that of willingness to work and to put Isle of Wight District on the 100 per cent map.

Rev. and Mrs. E. T. Cotten sang a duet; a reading by Mrs. W. K. Saunders; and a great address by Dr. Atkinson.

Luncheon was served on a table in the church yard of ham and olive sandwiches, deviled eggs, pickles, and cakes. This was fine and enjoyed by all present.

At the afternoon session Mrs. J. W. Roberts conducted devotional exercises, Miss Lillie Roberts gave a reading, and Rev. and Mrs. Cotten sang, "Christ Never Fails".

Miss Bessie Holt made an address which informed, inspired, and pleased all present. Her message is appealing and finds a response of heart that makes those who listen resolve that they will do more for missions and the mountain work. An offering of $8.63 was taken and the meeting elected Mrs. E. T. Cotten, President, decided to continue the annual rallies, and selected Antioch church as the place of meeting for 1922.

Suffolk has enjoyed a feast in a visit by Rev. Dr. D. A. Long and wife. He came by invitation of the 20th Century Baraca Class, which invited all the Men's Classes of Suffolk to be their guests on May 1. They came and Dr. Long delivered a wonderful address to 500 men. It was a great sight to see that many men in one Sunday school group listening to an address replete with history, poetry, Scripture, and flights of oratory.

Dr. Long preached for us at 11 o'clock on "The Sun of Righteousness", and at night on "The Cross of Christ". Both of the sermons were brilliant in conception, clear in exposition, and eloquent in delivery. The fire of youthful enthusiasm has not waned and the poetic flights have not lost their wings.

On Monday night Dr. Long delivered a taking address at the close of the Myrtle school in Nansom County, where he charmed both old and young. His knowledge of history, literature, poetry, and law, makes him encyclopedic in his fund of information, and his insight into human nature makes him at home on all subjects and with all audiences.

Dr. Long spoke again Wednesday night at our prayer meeting with the same fervor, eloquence, and power. It has been a real feast to us to have him with us and to hear his great messages. The gift of speech is a marvelous talent, and the exercise of it is a great power. Great speakers are as rare as great singers; but both are God's gifts to men. Such talents have no value to the individual unless passed on to others; and that is true of all talents. The inventor is useless except in his inventions; the same is true of discoverers; and it is no less true of money or any other possession.

ELON LETTER

FOR several years there has been a growing sentiment in all denominations that their denominational schools should maintain summer schools for ministers and lay-workers. The purpose of these schools is to train in the most approved methods of Church work and to give also subject matter qualifying professionally in the various departments of Church life. Also in the conduct of the summer schools the different departments of the Church work lend their aid in bringing in attendants and in supplying teaching force, the College in each case supplying the course of study and looking after the school on the physical and professional side. There are many such schools in all parts of the country.

Two years ago Elon announced such a school for the Southern Christian Convention to begin in May, 1920. The Convention last May suggested its postponement for a year, because the Men and Millions Forward Movement was engrossing the mind and thought of the brotherhood at that time. Accordingly in January of this year we began a systematic campaign to reach our ministers and laity for such a school to be held at Elon, May 26 to June 11, 1921. Literature and letters have been broadcasted all over the Church. The response has not been what we had hoped. As the brethren have expressed themselves during the intervening months three reasons have been given for this.

1. The unusually busy season in rural sections at the time of the school, our churches for the most part being rural.
2. The financial stringency, making it seem preferable to economize wherever possible.
3. Many of those who would and want to come have been in the habit of attending the Seaside Chautauqua, and we feel they ought not to break that habit.

For these reasons the Elon faculty met on Saturday, April 30, and voted to postpone the summer school for this year. If the Seaside Chautauqua guarantors at their July meeting decide to go on with their work, the feeling is that for the present at least the whole Church should concentrate on that enterprise to make it an instrument of great service in the brotherhood.

There was never any thought of conflict between the proposed summer school of Religious Education and our very excellent Seaside Chautauqua, so far as the initiators of the summer school were concerned. The Chautauqua it was conceived would continue to be largely inspirational in its aim, while the summer school would concentrate on class-room work of intensive character. The conflict comes not in the aim of the two institutions nor in their methods of work, but in the fact that the same people are appealed to and expected to attend both under present conditions.

The Elon faculty members therefore, conceive it to be their duty to vacate the field and to urge all who were planning to come to the summer school to go to the Seaside Chautauqua instead. I have never missed a session of Chautauqua and hope to meet many there who had been planning to be at Elon. Let us make this session of the Chautauqua the best yet.

COOKING ON SATURDAY FOR SUNDAY

Many housekeepers have the idea that getting all or part of the Sunday dinner ready on Saturday means everything cold for dinner next day or else a dreary dinner of warmed overs, but there really is a wide range of dishes needing long long cooking that are fresh and good for the first day of the week, and many of the so-called warmed-overs are as fresh and good as if served as soon as cooked. Take rolls, for example. Nobody knows they are warmed over when reheated in the oven on Sunday night, and really twice-baked bread, or at least bread twenty-four hours old, is better than bread fresh from the oven.

Starting with baked beans, that staple Sunday dish for at least nine months in the year, it is possible to start the cooking on Saturday and finish with a low fire on Sunday and have them in perfection. Beans with sausage, beans with tomato sauce and fresh fat pork, beans with smoked bacon or ham, beans baked with spare ribs—the variations that can be worked with this humble dish are many, and all are good. Taken from the bean pot or crock on Sunday noon or Sunday night and served with white and brown bread, they are delicious. Many cooks press small peeled potatoes into the hot beans an hour before dinner and have beans, meat and potatoes for a whole meal without much trouble.

Soup served in winter can be made the day before and improves in reheating. Vegetable, bean, noodle, macaroni, tomato, potato and other kinds can be reheated in five minutes and will make a good beginning for an elaborate or plain dinner. A good clean broth with crackers or toasted bread makes an ideal Sunday evening hot dish.

Ham boiled on Saturday can not be improved on Sunday by heating it up, but there are various dishes made of scraps of cold ham that are delicious for Sunday night or even for dinner. A cup of cold boiled ham run through the grinder will make delicious sandwiches or added to hot cream sauce and poured over toast will be welcomed by young and old. There is not a better all-around Sunday evening dish than toast covered with creamed ham, though it is practically unknown in many households. It is not heavy, yet it satisfies the craving for something hot in the evening. Dried beef, creamed, is also delicious, and it takes only a few minutes to prepare. By slicing the beef on Saturday and mixing the cold ingredients for the cream sauce it can be prepared in ten minutes on Sunday. Sausage parboiled and set aside in a granite pan can be cooked in ten minutes, and just as good brown gravy can be made as if the sausage had been fried (with all the grease and smoke) on Sunday.

Sweet potatoes peeled and boiled can be glazed in ten minutes on Sunday, and onions cooked in the casserole or a deep baking dish can be warmed over, without the disagreeable odor, in a short time. Tomatoes can be prepared and partly cooked the day before, and string beans need only the addition of cream sauce to finish them, if parboiled well on Saturday. Mashed potatoes never take kindly to reheating, but potatoes boiled in their skins can be cooked in ten minutes on Sunday. Hashed brown, sliced thin and fried or creamed in the oven, cold boiled potatoes are the stand-by of women in emergencies always.

In desserts the range is wider, since all kinds of cakes are possible to the Saturday cook. Fruit cake is perhaps the best for cold weather, as it contains rasins and other ingredients both tasty and nourishing, but in hot weather a lighter sweet is appreciated. Cake and berries, cake and canned fruit, cake and jello, cake and ice cream, cake and cold custard, all are welcome desserts in country homes, and they all can be prepared the day before.

Of course, all kinds of soft, beautiful fruit gelatine and jello puddings can be served if made on Saturday, and by the addition of whipped cream will answer for company or the family for very special occasions. Hot biscuits with rich preserves are good for emergency desserts. The biscuits are mixed and cut on Saturday and placed in a cool place to be baked Sunday noon, or else are baked and reheated. Miniature shortcakes are thus made with jam or preserves in a few minutes and can be served plain or with cream.

In salads the variety is not so great, but by chopping the ingredients and putting them in a cold place and making the dressing it is possible to get up a delicious one in a few minutes. Hard-boiled eggs, celery washed and wrapped in damp paper, olives, tomatoes washed and set in a cool place, cold asparagus, boiled string beans, cooked peas, cold white chicken, cold boiled potatoes, cold ham, apples, onions, cabbage and many other easily prepared foods furnish the basis of good salads; and a little of either, laid on crisp lettuce or endive and dressed with a simple dressing, will prove a wholesome addition to the Sunday meal.

These are only a few suggestions; good cooks will be able to add to the list indefinitely. To the woman who is determined to keep Sunday for a day of rest the possibilities of Saturday preparation are limitless, and there need be no trace of staleness or carelessness in the good dinner or supper made ready in short order on the first day of the week.—Hilda Richmond, in The Continent.

GOOD NEIGHBORS

An elderly man whose opinion is considered worth something to the community was asked the other day what he thought were proper attributes of "the people next door".

And he said: "I've been living here for nearly forty years. Folks on each side of us have come and gone. The people I like best for neighbors are those who do these things: They keep the place neat and clean, favor repainting once in a while; hang out a washing every Monday morning; Tuesday is ironing day. They'll lend their lawn mower if you'll bring it back. They'll do the same with a pinch of salt or an egg or a cup of flour. They will go out of their way to do a favor. They keep the garbage can covered and keep the chickens in their yard and not in ours. They are not too curious about who comes and goes at our house. They mind their own business, an excellent trait. What the grocer brings in or the laundryman carries out doesn't interest them. They are not snoopy. If, once in a while, there's a good deal of noise at our house, they don't telephone that they are about to call the police. They are appreciative, kindly, companionable, neighborly. They live as nearly by the Golden Rule as is humanly possible, I guess. And that being so, we do the same. It is a good plan; don't stone your neighbor's dog; it reduces the likelihood that he will stone yours."

Seems as if the wise old gentleman preached a pretty good-sized sermon and in not so many words, either.—Taunton Gazette.

It is an impossibility for a paper to admit all the syndicated matter that it receives to its columns. In fact there is so much of it that an editor as usually to the habit of dumping all of it into the waste basket. Every organization is seeking publicity, and what is bad upon the papers, there is never any check accompanying this "free advertising".

CARDINAL PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

FORWARD IN OUR MOUNTAIN WORK

The Mission Board sent Miss Iola Hedgepeth to Carroll County, Va., early last fall to open up there a Christian training school. We knew something of the needs, and the opportunity there before she went for us. We realized that there were thousands living in our mountain districts who because of geographical and climatic conditions, were living in a state of arrested development. They were and they are without schools and without churches. They need teachers and they need preachers, for as they are without learning too are they without Christ and His gospel.

But since Miss Hedgepeth went for us we have become better acquainted with conditions as they actually are, and of the real opportunity here presented to us for Christian service.

Her first school term now draws to a close and she has had a very successful session. She has enrolled 80 and could have enrolled 100 or more if she had had the help and the room.

So the Board faced the necessity of either going forward and doing more, or withdrawing from the work. The latter was not to be thought of seriously. We had to go forward, for no finer opportunity in the home land had been presented for Christian work.

Accordingly in Executive Committee meeting at Suffolk, Va., Saturday, April 23, it was decided to go forward. First, a parcel of land is to be secured by donation or purchase on which to build. Second, as early as possible a school house of three or four rooms is to be erected. Third, a house must be purchased or built in which our teachers then are to live. All of this seems imperative by the opening of the school term in the early fall of this year. Just what the outlay will be is not known at this time, but it is hoped that not over $2,000.00 will be required. All land purchase, and all plans and contracts for buildings are to be secured by the Secretary of the Board and are to be submitted to and approved by member of the Board, J. M. Darden, Suffolk, Va., on behalf of the Board, before the same becomes valid and final. Bro. Darden is to visit the proposed site with the Secretary at an early date, and a location and plan of buildings, are to be secured as early thereafter as practicable.

Miss Hedgepeth is also to have such assistance, say two or three additional teachers for the summer, if suitable places for building such summer school can be secured.

The Board is asking the young people of the Southern Convention to take the lead and assume the responsibility in raising funds with which to carry forward this work.

In this connection the Board expresses the hope that all funds raised for or donated to the mountain work will come through the regular channels; if in and through Young People's Societies, of Eastern Va., then to Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Treas., 41 Poplar Ave., Berkley, Va.; if in Young People's Societies in N. C., then to Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Treas., Burlington, N. C. These Treasurers, giving due credit will forward to the proper authority for distribution on official orders. This will show how much is being contributed and what the funds are being spent for. The Board is paying Miss Hedgepeth's expenses and salary and has been doing so since she left home for the work early last fall. And the Board is undertaking to supply all her needs for the work as they are presented and become imperative. On this account all valid appeals for help in the work will come directly through the Board, or from Miss Hedgepeth through the Board. The needs are frequent and many, and if we can know and present to our people intelligently these needs we feel that they will be properly and promptly met.

At an early date the Secretary hopes to give through THE SUN a full report of what has been done the past year, and of the real needs for the coming year.

Our leader there, Miss Hedgepeth, has proven a real pioneer in a great task, and has blazed the way, and laid the foundation for a great work by our dear Christian Church. We want the prayers of our people that wisdom may guide in all these undertakings for the advancement of His kingdom in these destitute places.

Three Marks of a Winning Church

By the Contributing Editor of The Christian Evangelist

HE Church must win. There is never a justification for a church failure. Individuals may fail. Other institutions may fail. Business may fail. There may be excuse for such failures but there is no excuse for the failure of a Christian Church. In everyday life men may fail successfully. Many men have. Hawthorne failed in business, but it was a highly successful failure as out of it there came The Scarlet Letter and The Marble Faun. Dickens failed as a solicitor, but it was a successful failure as out of it came the immortal David Copperfield and Martyn Chuzzlewit.

But what is success? When does a church win? Does it win when it has erected a stately and beautiful house of worship? If a church can get together a whole lot of money and house itself in splendor is that a mark of success? Maybe. Maybe not. If that money is raised and that church house erected for God's glory and for man's good, yes. If merely in pride and to make a show, no.

Does it win when not only it has erected a spacious temple but when it has collected a crowd to fill that temple? Again, yes and no. A crowd in itself in a church building has in itself no more spiritual significance than a crowd on a football field. It all depends on how the crowd has been gathered and with what is done with it after it has been got together.

Yet this is no cheap fling at crowds. For myself I like a crowd. I would rather preach to a hundred than to a dozen, to a thousand than to a hundred, and coming at once to the count of the positives—that is a winning church which by a genuinely religious message and programme challenges the attention of a community and secures its presence and its auditory. If nobody knows anything about the church; if nobody talks about the church; if nobody enters its open doors then that church is a failure. It's good to sing, and it's good to preach, and it's good to pray, but if that singing and praying and preaching makes not a ripple on the community life; more, if it does not affect that community life to its deepest depths, it fails. The Gospel is—in the literal rendering of scriptures—God's dynamite, and when faithfully preached in any district that district is due to feel the shock.

What then are the marks of this winning church? For one thing the winning church is a happy church. Sun is power. The poorest place for a church to be is "in the dumps". The church is a communicating body and there's nothing so contagious as cheer. The Gospel is glad tidings, and if folk go about with lugubrious faces it is quite evident that they haven't received the tidings.

A church that isn't happy is a church that will never bestir itself. Heavy hearts get little done. Eyes filled with tears can never see how either to thread the needle or to send the shuttles flying in the "roaring loom" of life. Music that sends the feet a marching is glad music. The church that moves to the dirge moves only to the grave. To be long faced is to be short handed. When an institution makes of itself a "wailing place" it might as well close its doors. Ecclesiastical morgues will never be popular. We don't want any Jeremiahs in the pulpit ever dissolving in tears and we don't want any Jeremiahs in the pew.

If we wear only sackcloth and the garments of heaviness then folk will reason this way: "If religion does that for a man we don't want it. If you've got to tog yourself out in such penitential and mortuary millinery do it at home. If you must have ashes on your heads heap them on in your own soul privacies but when you go out stick a ribbon or feather in your hair." Hanging harps on willows and weeping over a lost Jerusalem never got the wheat harvested nor the corn in the crib. A "morning face" is worth more than a mourning face. Even to the weeping a smile is of more value than a tear and golden laughter will do more than even a League of Nations to keep the world's sad heart from breaking.

The winning church is a homey church. In the early days of the church it was literally so—the church most often met in the homes of its members. But wherever it meets the atmosphere of that meeting place should be the atmosphere of home. The "family" of the Lord Jesus Christ—where that family gathers, there is home. But home means naturalness. The only place where a man is off guard and most truly reveals himself is home. You never knew what a man is till you live with him. Now naturalness ought to be the note of all church services. A lot of people are vastly concerned about the "proprieties," the "dignities" of the service. For myself I give these things scant attention. If people have good breeding you can depend upon them to instinctively observe the "proprieties" and as for the "dignities" I question if the thing isn't overworked. A man in his home isn't primarily concerned about "dignities".

A winning church is a faith-filled church. It must believe something. It must have definite convictions. It must be the champion of the great fundamental truths of our religion. These elemental verities must be voiced in no uncertain terms. The preacher must never say "I doubt"; he must always say "We know". If he has no positive word he should have no word at all.

Men everywhere are sick of the language of uncertainties. They have had enough and more than enough of denial, of criticism, of unfaith. They are seeking a church that builds on rock certainties, that comes not with a criticism but with a revelation. When a church ceases to believe, it ought to go out of business, indeed it has already gone out of business and those who enter its doors go in only to view the remains! Faith then, believes then, but more than this. The church must have faith in its faith, must believe in its beliefs. We hold a certain body of truths. Very well, but we must also believe in these truths—believe that they are workable, practical, salvational, what the world needs most of all. We have got to believe in God and we've got to believe in the men to whom we declare God's word. If not, then we are as a fisherman who says, "my bait is ready, I'll cast a line but I am sure the fish will not bite"; as a physician who declares, "the patient is ill, my medicine would save his life but I have small hope that he will follow my prescription"; as a recruiting officer who affirms, "I'll open my office, I'll spread the posters and have the bugles blow but I am not expecting anybody to enlist"; as a shepherd who says, "there is a lost sheep in the mountains. I'll go after it but I do not believe that I shall find it, or if I find it that I can bring it back safe to the fold"! Have heart of faith. Have heart of faith and you will have joy of victory. Faith overcometh the world.

THE BULLETIN

We failed to receive "The Observatory" page in time for this issue.

Dr. Atkinson gives some information in this issue that points to progress. Read his message on page 5.

Remember that Elon's thirty-first commencement begins Sunday, May 22 and closes on Tuesday night, following.

Spring Hill church, near Waverly, Virginia, is planning for a home coming and memorial service on Wednesday, May 25.

An awful tragedy occurred in Greensboro, N. C., on May 4 when officers attempted to arrest three men with an automobile of whiskey.

At the time of this writing (Monday morning, May 9) the printers' strike is practically unchanged. Raleigh, N. C., seems to be the hardest hit of any town in North Carolina, about 200 men being on strike in that city.

ing, open shop will be declared by the employing printers. (Open shop means that non-Union as well as Union men are allowed to work and that the Union shall not dictate the working conditions of the plant).

Union (Alamance) church was the scene of an unusually large crowd last Sunday. The occasion was the annual memorial-home-coming event, held on the second Sunday in May. The building did not begin to accommodate the people by packing the aisles and entrance room with chairs.

PASTOR LANKFORD INSTALLED

Rev. George Otis Lankford was formally installed as pastor of the First Christian church, Burlington, N. C., on Tuesday night, May 3. Previous preparation had been made upon the part of the church for some time for a formal service.

Brother Lankford is progressing nicely with the work in his new field and the people are pleased with the splendid start that he has made, and predict many good things under his leadership.

We desire to thank friends for many renewals received during the past week. We will appreciate a prompt remittance upon the part of many others. THE SUN needs the money, and you need THE SUN.

EDITORIAL

COMMON KNOWLEDGE

NOT many months since we talked with two young ladies on some common-place topics—topics that the average ten-year-old child should know—and found that they had but a slight knowledge of the subjects. They could not, for instance, name three men in the President's Cabinet (That was during Mr. Wilson's administration. War conditions necessitated continuous publication of names of Cabinet members, too) These young ladies were high school graduates. Not only could they not name three Cabinet members, but they could not give the name of an important officer in their own State who had served the public almost as long as these young ladies had lived.

Sometime ago we asked a young lady, a seventh grade pupil, to name the Governor of North Carolina. She could not tell us, but replied that Bickett was once Governor; and since our question also carried with it as to what party was in power, she said the Bickett was a Republican. (He is a Democrat).

We have a reason for reciting these instances. Common knowledge is going at a premium. It is generally understood that the country has the best school system it ever had. True, this may be, but common knowledge is being slighted, as we see it. There are some things essential to citizenship that cannot be found in text books. We believe that every school should often review the public offices and name the officials from county sheriff to president—and these things are not usually found in text books.

But this is State craft. How about Church craft? Listen to this: A young person, slightly on the short side of twenty, asked us the other day about one of our missionaries. We were embarrassed to tell her that the young man about whom she was speaking was not a missionary. THE CHRISTIAN SUN goes to her home every week, but this young person evidently does not read it. We could cite many instances to show that our young people are not being taught some of the general things of the Church. Then no wonder that we know so little of the Government and Principles of the Church!

It is true that if we depend upon the people to read for these things that they will never know, for interest must precede reading. How then shall we create an interest? Teach the people by word.

Would it be amiss for pastors to post in their churches a list of denominational officers, missionaries, educational institutions, etc., that such may be kept before the people? Then, too, this information could be given from the pulpit, printed in the church bulletin, and otherwise distributed.

“AN OPPORTUNE TIME” versus “DO IT NOW”

The other night we sat in conference with two business men. They were reared in the same community and are brothers-in-law by marriage. One man said that his policy had always been to wait for the “opportune time” and readily agreed that the slogan of his brother-in-law was “do it now”. The speaker freely admitted that though his brother-in-law was younger in years, he had excelled him in business, and that he (the speaker) contributed the difference in their successes to the “do it now” spirit, rather than to waiting for the “opportune time”.

This reminds us about some of our Church institutions. Elon College could not have been built had we waited to get the money before building; and the general constituency of the Church would never have decided the time to be opportune. But a few lovers of education, pioneers as it were in the realm of Christian education, had the “do it now” spirit about them and the College was built. They made the opportune time and the whole Church has honored them for it and stood by them.

The Christian Orphanage is one of the greatest and noblest institutions of our Church, but it was started before the time was opportune, according to the minds of many. Suppose we had waited until enough money had been raised to build the original outlay. The probability is that there would have been no Orphanage. There were those who had the interest of the orphan child at heart and said “do it now”, and it was done. The people have put their sacrifices into that institution and it has grown from year to year, stretching out long arms to bring more orphan boys and girls into its fold.

There was a time when the Christian Church should have started missionary work, but it waited, and waited, and waited for the “opportune time”. The “opportune time” never did come until someone with a “do it now” spirit said that it must be done and went forward to do it. And every year since then the money has not been available in advance for the support of our missionaries, but they have been supported. Suppose that we had waited until the “opportune time”?

What is said about these enterprises of our Church can be said of all the other enterprises. It seems to us that we have waited for the “opportune time” instead of going ahead and making the “opportune time”, until many of our great opportunities have been lost or at least retarded, and are not as far along as they could be, or should be.

There is some enlarging to be done within the bounds of our Convention. A school is to be built in Georgia or Alabama and forward steps to be made in many directions. There will be two groups of minds. One group will say it is not the “opportune time”, and the other will say “do it now”.

Put us down with the “do it now” group, for we believe that this should be the policy of the Church. There is no use in praying “Thy Kingdom come” and then do something to keep it from coming. There is no use in asking that righteousness fill the earth and then impede the progress of righteousness.

Our observations and experiences are that a good work honestly and sincerely undertaken will be rallied to by the people. Not only this but people will invest their money in an institution after it is started quicker than they will while it is only a theory.

"Forward march!" is our King's command to His Church.

"THE LOST CAUSE"

Once we heard much about "the lost cause"—the South's unsuccessful fight in behalf of slavery. It was a lost cause and both sides freely admit it now.

But there is another "lost cause", we believe, though we trust with all our heart that we are mistaken. In the light of the perfect day we write this. The band plays while a hero's body of the world war is carried to the home cemetery. The great mass of people in attendance attest the peoples' heart for what they thought of the cause for which this soldier died.

But did he and his comrades die in vain? And again we hope that they did not, though it takes all our optimism to otherwise think. They died "to make the world safe for democracy". But is it safe? It may be, but the signs do not point that way. We have less confidence in other nations than we had before, if we are to take official action as the voice of the people.

Tramp, tramp, tramp, sound the feet of our dead hero's comrades who survive. They know better than we that their dead companion is a hero. They know of the hardships, the indescribable battles, and struggles that were his on European soil. They, too, know better than we the meaning of what we taught our boys who went for freedom's cause. In God's name we waged the war and in His name they went—went to die for the emancipation of mankind. They did the thing they went to do—the thing we sent them to do—and they did more. "They shall not pass" has its sublime meaning only to those who saw to it that they did not pass.

Halt! Heads are bowed, and our hero is interred to continue his long sleep. But ah! if by a miracle he could come back and find his cause—the cause for which he gave his life—trailing in the dust, what would he say?

It takes bigness of mind, largeness of heart and ultra optimism to see behind the cloud the world's happiness just now. No one hopes more than we that behind this cloud there is a silver lining—a new day as it were into which we shall soon enter—but on the surface of things it begins to point to a lost cause.

Shall the cause for which our noble sires fought be lost? If the cause be lost, the loss of life is in vain and the blood of someone is upon our hands. Can we with contented minds sit with folded hands with such an obligation resting upon us? Present day conditions demand the keenest of thought, most fervent and earnest prayers that the world may be blest, and the Kingdom's cause advanced, through the world's greatest carnage and holocaust. But will it?

EDITORIAL BRIEFS

Read Brother Johnston's report this week for the Orphanage. Are we going to see him reach the goal or miss it? The question is squarely up to the Church. All together NOW, and let us help him.

Brother W. Luther Cates, Burlington, N. C., sends out a challenge, and it is this: He will be one of twenty-five, or one of fifty, to secure a list of that many who will send the Orphanage $1.00 to help finish paying for the Baby Home. This is a good challenge. How many will accept it?

"WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM"

This department of THE SUN this week is longer than usual, and it deserves to be. Announcements recently made and repeated in these columns concerning certain planned missionary rallies are at the time of this writing being carried out. We have admitted these reports to our pages just as they came in, and as many as we could accommodate until the last hour before closing the forms. They duplicate in many instances, mainly because a like program was on in each district, but each correspondent writes in different style and presents thought that no other writer does. The work is new and we are anxious to have our readers see it from every angle that its true worth may be realized.

MR. GROSE ANSWERED

In last week's issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN Mr. Glenn Grose, whom we take to be a member of the Senior class of Wake Forest College, made the statement that Wake Forest was misrepresented in a recent article from Elon College under President Harper's pen, to the effect that Wake Forest had only forty-nine students in this year's Senior class. President Harper furnishes us a page from the catalogue of Wake Forest College. On pages 17 and 18 of the Wake Forest catalogue are given the names of those who are to graduate in the 1921 class, and the number is 49, which verifies President Harper's statement.

With this issue of THE SUN the present Editor completes his fifth year at the editorial helm. They have been years of many and momentous problems; years of changes and unprecedented conditions. To us they have been years of labor and love, ever endeavoring to fill our mission regardless of conditions. No one has been sensible of our short-coming more than we, but our aim has been, and is, to give value received and to put personality and variety into every issue. With the writing of this note our desk is cleared for the next issue, with our face turned toward hope as we press into the sixth year.

"Tell Me a Story"

HOW TULIPS GOT THEIR FRILLS

One bright spring morning little Fairy Gap sat up in bed and blinked at the sunlight that streamed through a crack under the door. The snow was gone, and the wind was no longer rocking her willow tree house, where all winter long she had slept, cozy and warm. So she tossed back her quilt of milkweed down and opened her door.

The air was soft, and the grass was green. "I must shake out my summer clothes!" cried Fairy Gay.

Now Fairy Gay loved pretty clothes. She was especially fond of scalloped silk petticoats, which she wore under a robe of cobweb lace. Some of her petticoats were of pale pink, some of white, and some of yellow; but the greater number were bright red, with splashes of green. They were all very lovely, and Fairy Gay smiled as she brought them out in armfuls and hung them on a cobweb line.

But she had scarcely turned her back when West Wind played an unkind joke. Puffing out his cheeks, he blew until the clothesline snapped and the bright petticoats, flapping and fluttering, came tumbling down and rolled away over the green bank and out of sight.

"O dear, O dear!" wailed the poor little fairy.

But though she ran and ran, she could not overtake her petticoats, and the chase made her so tired that she went back to her willow tree home and slept a whole month longer.

The next time she wandered out she wore only a plain white petticoat under her cobweb gown. She was looking for honey, but the bees had drained most of the flower cups. Suddenly she saw a green bank covered with beautiful flowers, all red and yellow and pink and white, with gracefully scalloped edges; and they had a wonderfully familiar look.

As she stood gazing at them Mother Nature came along with a basket of seeds on her arm.

"O, O!" called Fairy Gay. "Some one has stolen my petticoats!"

The old woman put down her basket and looked first at the fairy and then at the flowers. "My little fairy", she said, "I took them. But how was I to know they were your petticoats? I found them blowing over the hill, and the minute I set eyes on them I said to myself: 'Just the thing for spring-time flowers' frills!'"

Fairy Gay looked hard at the blossoms.

"You may have them back, of course," said Mother Nature. "But they do so brighten up the hillside! If you want my honest opinion, child, the costume you are wearing becomes you much better than those gay skirts."

Now Fairy Gay was loath to part with her petticoats, but she had a generous heart. Besides, she knew that Mother Nature had excellent taste and that doubtless those colors were indeed too gaudy for a well-bred little fairy. So she said: "Keep them, please."

And that is the way, so they always tell it in fairyland, the tulips got their frills.—Gertrude I. Folts, in the Youth's Companion.

WORKING TOOLS OF INSECTS

I wonder if you know that the smallest insects you see about you have tools given them to do their work with. There is a little fly called a saw-fly, because it has a saw to work with. It is really a very much nicer saw than you could make if you were ever so old.

The fly uses it to make places where the eggs will be safe. What is more strange, it has a sort of homemade glue which fastens them where they are laid.

Some insects have cutting instruments that work just as your scissors do. The poppy bee is one of them, and its work is wonderful. This bee has a boring tool too. Its nests are usually made in old wood. This borer cleans out the nest. When all is ready, the insect cuts out pieces of leaves to line the nest and to make the cells. These things are cut in the shape of the cells. You would be surprised to see the care taken to have every piece of just the right size, so that it will fit. When they are fitted, the pieces are nicely fastened together and put into the nest.—Watchman-Examiner.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

BIGNESS NOT EVERYTHING

(From an Editorial in Philadelphia, Public Ledger)

The proposal that Princeton University shall limit the student body in the future to about two thousand should not be viewed as in any sense an abandonment of its proper field of service or a deliberate intention to restrict its natural growth. Princeton and all the collegiate institutions of the country are facing a problem that calls for wisdom and common sense in its solution and not mere doctrinaire ideas. As President Hibben has well said, certain institutions which are not in the position to handle large and increasing bodies of men must meet the issue and endeavor in every way to make their institutions "great" universities and colleges rather than merely big ones. The present demand for a higher education is forcing the issue of bigness on the colleges when they are unprepared to meet it. And yet if the refusal to take in students be viewed as tantamount to an admission of failure a great injustice will be done to American colleges. Only recently Professor Arthur Gordon Webster, of Clark University, in arguing for a more intensive, a more resultful and a better educational system in this country, said:

"In my opinion it will be necessary to relegate the colleges to the rank of schools and to actually limit the number of people who go to them. The insane desire to increase and increase the size of our colleges must be replaced by a desire to increase the quality even at the expense of numbers. What place in civilization can be attributed to a State that does not realize that the education of its citizens is of supreme importance to the State and allows education to be supported by drives to squeeze from the unwilling pockets of graduates of private institutions a sum sufficient to enable their professors to maintain their self-respect?"

Other educators have pointed out the dangers that lie in the tremendous growth of institutions, some of them showing recent percentages of increase amounting to more than 300 per cent. Consequently it is being realized more and more that while certain universities that already have passed the 10,000-student level and are destined for a future in which larger numbers must figure in their scheme of things, there must be other universities, which, for various reasons, physical, social and educational, cannot expand beyond reason, and must be allowed to cut their cloth to suit themselves. That the highly organized institution which will only take the number of students which it can properly train has a place in American education today goes without saying. One does not have to accept the extreme view of those who would make up for mediocrity by a too highly specialized system of universities on the one hand, nor the other extreme of those who in the name of democracy see something admirably patriotic in a mere welter of tens of thousands getting a smattering of learning at institutions whose size is the only evidence of their place and position in the educational world.

The best interests of higher education in the United States are not to be promoted by insisting that some one kind of institution shall be the rigid model the country over. If Princeton believes it can continue to give service and even improve on what it has been able to do in the past by keeping its student body within reasonable limits its refusal to be "big" as the expense of efficiency ought to be viewed as a virtue and not as a shortcoming.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

MISSIONARY RALLY

Waverly Christian Church

The Missionary Rally of Waverly District, Eastern Virginia Conference, met in Waverly Christian church March 27, 1921.

Mrs. B. E. Livesay, Superintendent, presided over the meeting, and the following program was carried out:

Afternoon Session

Hymn—Tell Me the Story of Jesus; Devotional—Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D.; Reports from Societies; Song—Over the Top for Jesus, by Willing Workers; Address—Miss Bessie I. Holt; Hymn—I Love to Tell the Story.

Evening Session

Hymn—Sound, Sound the Truth Abroad; Devotional—Miss Bessie I. Holt; Pageant—A Living Dream—Young People's Society; Hymn—From Greenland's Icy Mountain; Address—Rev. J. O. Atkinson, D. D.; Benediction—Rev. J. L. Foster.

Splendid reports from Societies were read, from which we mention the following: The Woman's Missionary Society, of which Mrs. E. L. Gray is president, has a small but willing band of thirteen members who call themselves the "Lucky Thirteen".

The report of the Willing Workers Society, Waverly church, was read by Mrs. B. E. White. The report was encouraging and showed interest on the part of each member.

The Young People's Society of Waverly church reported through its Secretary, Miss Mabel Osborne, a live and growing Society. This Society has paid one half its quota for the year, and has a neat sum in the bank.

Mr. Garnie Clark, Secretary of the Young People's Society of Spring Hill church reported a membership of sixteen. This Society has done much to beautify the local church, in addition to regular contributions to missions. They report a balance in the treasury.

The Willing Workers Society of Spring Hill church, Miss Annie Atkinson, Superintendent, reported splendid work being done by the members.

Twenty-five members were reported on the Cradle Roll at Waverly. Miss Helen Porter is Superintendent. They expect to have their mite box opening in June.

An offering for mountain work amounting to $15.00 was received at this meeting.

MABEL OSBORNE, Secretary

MISSIONARY RALLYWindsor Christian church

The first Isle of Wight District Woman's Missionary Rally was held with Windsor church on April 28, 1921, with Mrs. E. T. Cotten, presiding. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. E. T. Cotten. Dr. Atkinson stated the object of the meeting; Mrs. M. C. Watkins was asked to act as secretary. Roll call of Societies and three responded.

Antioch reported, Woman's Society with forty-five members, meetings held monthly, also a Willing Workers, but no Young People's. Mt. Carmel reported Woman's Society with forty-four members, no Young People's or Willing Workers. Isle of Wight had no representative or report. Windsor reported Woman's Society with twenty members, Young People's with twenty-three members, and Willing Workers with thirty-five members.

After these reports, organizing new societies was discussed. Mrs. F. H. Johnson volunteered to organize a Young People's at Mt. Carmel; Mrs. Garrison and Mrs. Bradshaw a Young People's at Antioch; Mrs. Johnson a Young People's at Isle of Wight; Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Bradshaw a Willing Workers at Isle of Wight, also reorganize Willing Workers at Antioch.

Next we had a duet by Rev. and Mrs. E. T. Cotten, after which came a reading by Mrs. W. K. Saunders. We then listened to a most inspiring address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, N. C., who held the audience spellbound, closing with prayer. Adjourned for luncheon on lawn in front of church.

Afternoon Session

Meeting called to order by Mrs. E. T. Cotten. Song by congregation; Devotional exercises by Mrs. J. W. Roberts; Reading by Miss Lillie Roberts; Duet by Rev. and Mrs. E. T. Cotten, after which Miss Bessie Holt, of Burlington, N. C., Superintendent of Young People's Work for the Southern Christian Convention, spoke to us concerning our Young People's work and told of her visit to Carroll County, Va., (the district which our Young People are supporting) in a most touching and interesting manner; prayer by Dr. Staley. An offering was received for this work and $13.63 was paid to Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

On motion officers as follows were elected for another year, (having decided to continue the district rally): Mrs. E. T. Cotten, President; Mrs. W. H. Saunders, Secretary; Miss Doris Joyner, Treasurer.

Antioch invited the Rally to meet with them next year. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Windsor for the entertainment of this meeting. Dr. Atkinson moved that a copy of these minutes be sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and a copy kept by the Windsor Woman's Society. Adjourned to meet at Antioch on date to be set later.

MRS. M. C. WATKINS, Secretary

FRANKLIN COUNTY RALLY

The first Franklin County District Woman's Missionary Rally was held with Oak Level church, on May 1, 1921, with Superintendent Mrs. Carl Whitaker, of Kittrell, N. C., and Mrs. W. H. Hudson, Youngsville, N. C., Assistant.

Devotional services were conducted by the Pastor, Rev. B. F. Black. Mrs. Whitaker stated the object of the meeting in a brief and appropriate address and requested Miss Eleanor Winston to act as Secretary.

The eight churches of the county were then called, six of them responding with eighty-one representatives. Oak Level's Woman's Society, reported twelve members, amount raised during the year, $35.47. Oak Level pledged to organize a Young People's Society and Willing Workers; Pope's Chapel pledged to organize a Woman's Society; Mt. Carmel pledged to organize a Woman's Society and Cradle Roll; New Hope pledged to organize a Woman's Society and Cradle Roll; Mt. Gilead pledged to organize a Young People's Society; Mrs. Carl Whitaker read an excellent paper written by Mrs. W. A. Harper, after which followed the round table discussion led by Miss Bessie Holt; the Communion Service administered by visiting ministers and deacons closed the morning exercises.

After a sumptuous dinner and an intermission of an hour, as many as could be comfortably seated were held spell-bound by Miss Holt's description of her mountain trip and the wonderful work which Miss Hedgepeth is doing there. An offering was taken of $14.07 for the mountain work.

The meeting voted to make the district rally permanent in Franklin County, meeting next year at Pope's Chapel.

ELEANOR WINSTON, Secretary

MINUTES OF THE GUILFORD DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLY

The Guilford District Missionary rally opened at eleven o'clock Wednesday morning, May 4, at the First Christian church, Greensboro, N. C., with Mrs. M. F. Cook, Chairman of the district, presiding.

After some selections of music, Dr. H. R. Clem, Springfield, Ohio, led in the devotional exercises. A few words of greeting and welcome, also a statement of the purpose of meeting were said by the Chairman.

The roll call of the churches in the district was as follows: Hines', Apple's, Monticello, High Point, Smithwood, Palm Street, Belew's Creek, Salem Chapel, First church Greensboro, with the following representatives: Mesdames, Taylor, Hinshaw, Taylor, Ballard, Cook, Caviness, Clymer, Petty, Patton, Jones, McMichael, McFarland, Duke, Gerringer, Howerton, Wecker, Hardin, Phillips, Caviness, Cox, Holland, and Thompson, and Miss Farmer and Thompson. Dr. Clem of Ohio, Rev. C. Gerringer of Hines', Rev. G. C. Crutchfield of Palm Street and Dr. J. O. Atkinson, Elon College, Miss Bessie I. Holt and Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Burlington.

LETTERS

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find 20 cents—our dues for April. We go to Sunday school at Berea Christian church, Norfolk. Our pastor, Rev. G. O. Lankford decided to leave us. We were sorry to see him leave. With love to you and the cousins.—Ossie and Dennis Harris, Hickory, Va.

We were sorry for you to lose Mr. Lankford, but your loss was our gain. We are very glad indeed to have him in our community.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find two dollars which we are sending to you for the Orphanage. You may use this for whatever purpose you desire. We hope to send some more later on. With every good wish for not pass this way again.—"Someone" in Southampton County, Va.

I certainly am grateful for your $2.00. "Uncle Charley" is needing money very badly just at this time. We ought to have five thousand men, women and children who could invest $1.00 each in this splendid building.—"Uncle Charley."

Dear Uncle Charley: I am an orphan—three score and ten plus five years (seventy-five years of age). My nearest living relatives are two nieces and seven nephews. I have been married three times, present wife is living. I was once homeless and penniless, but not friendless. My father died when I was about five years of age. My mother being in limited circumstances, made it very

READ! READ!! ACT! ACT!!

Can we meet the challenge I told you about in my last letter? I suggested that if we had five thousand members in the Southern Convention who would donate one dollar that we could meet the challenge. Now, if we could reach that five thousand we feel sure that it could be done. How can we reach them?

When you read this letter, will you volunteer to just do me a little kindness that will make you feel happy the balance of your life? Make up your mind that you will mail me a dollar yourself and get a friend to mail one. Then think up a good appeal you want to make to your church people the next Sunday and ask them to mail me one dollar each. It will be a small sacrifice for each one. Who is too poor to give one dollar to a worthy cause like this? The Board of Trustees will meet Wednesday May 25. It is our hope, our prayer, our earnest wish to have enough money on hand that day to pay every bill.

Let each one mail me one dollar so it will reach me by May 24. I want to have so many letters come that day that it will tax the strength of our Ford to bring them to the office. DO NOT FORGET TO MAIL THEM SO THEY WILL REACH ME BY MAY 24. LET EVERYBODY HAVE A PART IN THIS GREAT UNDERTAKING AND HAVE YOUR NAME ENROLLED WITH THE FAITHFUL.

LET MAY 24, be a day to be long remembered at the Christian Orphanage.

A number of letters have already arrived. We pray that many more are on the way. One brother sent us $25.00.

We met a man the other day and he said to us that he was passing Elon on the train some time ago and noticed our pretty building and wanted to make a donation of $100. to help us reach the six thousand. He is not a member of our Church either, but is interested because he saw we were trying to do something for helpless humanity.

Now is your opportunity. It is your privilege.

Will you make use of the opportunity for helpless humanity?

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

hard to rear four children. So you see by nature I know how to sympathize with the little orphans and wish that my purse was heavy enough to sympathize with them in a way so they could feel the warmth of my love and affection toward them. Enclosed you will find $1.00 for the Children's Home. You may please add this letter, if you care to, to the Children's Corner, for I may not pass this way again.—“Somewhere” in Southampton Co., Va.

If a man of this age can give one dollar, have we not five thousand younger ones who can?—“Uncle Charley.”

Dear Brother Johnston: I am not a member of your Church, but after reading your appeal in this week's SUN wherein you state if 5000 members of your Church would give $1.00 for the Orphanage you would have easy sailing in paying for the Children's Home. As above stated, I am not a member of your Church, but I enclose $1.00.—J. T. Lambeth, Moffitt, N. C.

Where are the 4,999?—Superintendent.

Dear Brother Johnston: I am enclosing one dollar as one of the five thousand you ask to give one dollar to help complete the Children's Home.—J. A. Dunlap, Biscoe, N. C.

MINUTES OF THE GUILFORD DISTRICT MISSIONARY RALLY

Committees were appointed as follows: Mrs. J. W. Patton, publicity; Mrs. A. H. Hinshaw, Mrs. A. B. McFarland, Mrs. L. P. Wicker with Mrs. Carroll, president of North Carolina Conference Woman's Board, nominating committee, to name permanent leaders for this district.

Mrs. Carroll read a paper on “Discussion of the Goals”, prepared by Mrs. Harper, which was very helpful and was discussed for the benefit of the Societies. Six thousand dollars is the goal set for this year. Also twenty new organizations for this year, one at every church. To reorganize at sixteen churches. Get fifty new life members, and get new subscribers for our church paper.

Special offerings were discussed, among these were the self-denial, rally-day, and thank offering. These do not count on the goals. Some of the suggestions as how to raise money for the goals were as follows: Life membership at the rate of ten dollars each membership, donations, assessments of members, also to get church men as honorary members. It was suggested to begin at once to secure goals. Dr. Atkinson suggested a missionary pageant as one of the best ways to help get the goals.

Reports were made from Palm Street and First church, Greensboro, other reports postponed until afternoon.

Suggestions were made for organizing Societies where there are none. Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Clymer volunteered to go to Apple's Chapel and organize. Mrs. Patton and Mrs. McFarland will go to Pleasant Ridge and Mrs. Cook to Salem Chapel, Miss Bessie Holt to Hines' Chapel to organize young people.

Mrs. Patton discussed organizing boys' societies. “Do not forget the boys. Get a good leader and do something for the boys. Boys correspond to Willing Workers as Missionary Scouts. They have one Sunday in the month for missionary work, and use that Sunday's collection for missionary money.” said Mrs. Patton. She volunteered to go to Pleasant Ridge to organize a boys' society.

A wonderful address was delivered by Dr. Atkinson. After the doxology, Rev. C. E. Geringer pronounced the benediction. We then adjourned for lunch, which was served by the ladies of First Christian church.

The afternoon session opened at two o'clock with a devotional service led by Rev. G. C. Crutchfield.

Next was a round table discussion on missions. Three points were taken up, Porto Rico, Japan, and mountain work.

Porto Rico was compared with Japan. Roman Catholic is the church we have to combat. Dr. Clem spoke on the work in Porto Rico. He said that native workers are very necessary for the work, as it is impossible for others to live there all the time. Mrs. Carroll made an interesting talk on the work in Porto Rico, of Miss Williams with the children.

Missionaries of Porto Rico and Japan were named. There are several native missionaries. The work of Miss Hedgepeth in the mountains was discussed, as to how we may help her.

Dr. Atkinson came before the session with an interesting statement about entering new fields of China. Before this is done, we have to do two things. To build a mission home in Japan, at the cost of nine thousand dollars. Eight thousand having been already received. To build a kindergarten and night school at a cost of twelve thousand dollars. He said that before October he felt sure that the twenty-one thousand dollars would be in hand.

Other representatives and reports were called for, with the Willing Workers of First Christian church, Greensboro, responding with an interesting report. By motion of Dr. Atkinson this report is to be sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for publication. Two musical selections were rendered by members of Willing Workers.

Announcements and heart to heart talks by Miss Bessie I. Holt was very interesting. Scripture Lesson—Mark 4:38. Topic “Carest Thou Not That They Perish?”. Following her address Dr. Atkinson led in prayer. An offering was taken for the mountain work.

Mrs. Patton gave a good reading, “The Woman Who Gave Herself”. The nominating committee nominated as officers, Mrs. M. F. Cook, Chairman; Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Secretary; Mrs. A. H. Hinshaw, Treasurer. After motion to meet in annual rally the session adjourned.

MRS. J. A. THOMPSON, Secretary
Greensboro, N. C., Box 549.

CHURCH NEWS

RALEIGH REVIVAL CLOSSES

The series of evangelistic meetings that have been in session since April 17 in the First Christian church of Raleigh came to a successful close Sunday night, May 1 with forty-two professions and thirty-four additions to the local church. About ten more are expected at a later date.

Taking everything into consideration, this has been the finest meeting this church has ever held. Crowds packed the house to overflow, and numbers were turned away from the Sunday services. On the last night of the meeting, the largest crowd in the history of the church gathered for the services, and stayed for an hour and a half sandwiched in the house everywhere a seat could be found.

The writer did all the preaching for the meeting, but had the best help of his ministry in this meeting. The help was made up exclusively of church people. A chorus choir of thirty-five voices, a junior choir of thirty-nine voices, two pianos, the Sunday school and Johnson Orchestras, under the leadership of Brother Chas. H. Stephenson, gave a program of Gospel songs each evening that could not be surpassed in the city. The folks liked it, and came to enjoy the services. Aside from this, Prof. L. A. Vaughan, has the Sunday school worked to the highest pitch, and the decision day in the school on April 24, proved a great success.

One of the finest things about this meeting is the fact that the church folks are doubly interested in the work and are going after things in the right spirit, and to my way of thinking the revival in the church has just started. During the meeting the writer and his wife conducted "upper room prayer meetings," each evening, and these meetings are to be kept up every Sunday evening just preceding the services. These meetings were very helpful to the work. We go to the second quarterly conference with good reports, having received forty-four new members since we came on the field November 7, 1920.

Pray for our work here in the Capitol City, there is a great future for this work, and we need your prayers.

J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

APPRECIATES THE SUN

I have just finished reading the issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for March 30 and desire to express my appreciation of the paper. THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been in my father's home as long as I can remember, he being a life-time subscriber. I did not realize how much help the paper was to me until I left home. For some time I went from place to place, and when I located at this place I could not be satisfied without it. In October of last year I subscribed for THE SUN and have not missed a copy since that time. I find it to be of much help and encouragement, and would be glad to see it in every home of the Christian Church.

Many people complain of the Church paper being too high, but I think it is because they have never had it in their homes. If they could get a vision of Dr. Harper's article on "The Four-Square Laymen", there would be no trouble in getting the paper in every home of the Christian Church, and we would have more of this type of laymen which Dr. Harper refers to.

CALLED HOME

BALL

Samuel Ball departed this life March 16, 1921, at the age of seventy-five years. He had suffered ill health for some years.

Brother Ball was a faithful member of Mt. Carmel Christian church. He died as he lived—in the faith of the Christ. He leaves to mourn their loss his aged and beloved wife and a host of friends.

The services were conducted by his pastor, the writer, and burial was in the family plot at the cemetery at Mt. Carmel Christian church. Many friends placed beautiful flowers upon the mound, as a token of respect and friendship of an honest man, an humble Christian, a good citizen.

Dear wife, look up, there is a bright day ahead—gladness and joy shall come; sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

B. F. BLACK.

KEARNEY

Sister Alecta Bell Kearney aged 61 years, departed this life March 21, 1921. She had been confined to her room for some years, though patient and long-suffering.

She leaves to mourn their loss, five sons and one daughter and many friends. She was a faithful member of Bank's Chapel M. E. church from childhood to her death. The services were conducted at Pope's Chapel by her pastor and the writer. She was laid to rest by her husband, who preceded her to the world beyond, there to await the great day when the sea and the earth shall give up their dead. The children have lost a good mother, a friend indeed. May they be faithful to her God.

B. F. BLACK.

GREEN

Our friend and brother, Nathan N. Green, was born August 18, 1883, and died April 1, 1921.

On January 22, 1908 Brother Green married Charlotte Myrtle Wells, who died November 20, 1917. One child, a son, blessed this union. He was again married December 18, 1918, his second wife being Mary Hunter Fuller, who survives him. He leaves besides his beloved and devoted wife, his son, Lawrence Freeland; a mother and father, who are Mr. and Mrs. Irvin M. Green; five sisters, Mrs. C. G. Daniel, Mrs. C. E. Fuller, Mrs. W. D. Fuller, Mrs. D. L. Kearney and Mrs. J. E. Barnes, and a host of friends.

Brother Green was converted and united with Liberty (V) Christian church at the age of fourteen. He was faithful to his church to the end. He was laid to rest in the family plot at Liberty church, funeral services being conducted by the pastor, assisted by Rev. John Mitchiner, pastor of New Bethel Baptist church. The Red Men and Masons, of which he was a member took part in the services.

The tragic death of Brother Green was a great shock to his wife and son who witnessed the scene which occurred when he and a tenant were using a power wood saw. This was revolving at a high rate of speed when a bolt gave way, causing the saw to leap from the frame and striking Brother Green, and mangling his body, causing instant death.

At least 2,500 people filled the grove about the grave, and this, together with the many beautiful flowers were but a token of the respect and friendship of relatives and friends.

Dear ones, you have a hope which in time will dispel every cloud. "He is risen"—the Christ, our hope, our all. In these words you will find the crucial test of the world's redemption. This world tragedy gives us a rich heritage—your beloved, too, shall rise on that great day.

B. F. BLACK.

HOBBS

Margaret Geneva Hobbs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hobbs, died April 30, 1921, aged fourteen months and nine days. Besides the father and mother, four sisters and two brothers survive.

Funeral services were conducted at the home of the parents, Sunday afternoon, May 1, by the writer, assisted by Rev. P. T. Klapp and J. M. Morgan, and the remains placed in Green Hill cemetery, Greensboro.

May our Heavenly Father comfort the sad hearts of the loved ones and draw them closer to Him.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD

SHEPHERD

Elizabeth Matilda Shepherd, wife of H. R. Shepherd, deceased, departed this life May 3, 1921, at Altamahaw, N. C., at the age of 83 years and 8 months. She leaves to mourn their loss five sons and two daughters, 29 grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren and many relatives and friends. She had been a life-long member of Friedens Lutheran church. Funeral services and interment at Bethlehem Christian church conducted by the writer. A good woman has gone home to the spirit world.

J. W. HOLT.

JONES

Brother W. J. Jones departed this life May 3, 1921, at the age of fifty-seven years. He was the son of the late W. D. and Lucinda Jones, of Franklin, Co., North Carolina.

He leaves to mourn their loss, one brother, W. R. Jones, and four sisters, Mrs. C. F. Holmes, Mrs. W. S. Ray, Mrs. A. M. House and Miss Emma Jones; a number of near relatives and a host of friends.

He had been confined to his room since December 1920, with heart trouble. The burial services were conducted at Pope's Chapel Christian church by the writer and the remains laid to rest in the family plot.

The many flowers placed on the grave attest the friendship of the many who came to pay a last tribute of respect.

May the Lord comfort the hearts of those who mourn.

B. F. BLACK.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of thanking most sincerely the good people of the surrounding neighborhoods of Zuni and Isle of Wight, Virginia, for their sympathy expressed, and their services rendered during the recent illness and death of our brother, N. B. H. Munford.

A World Example

THE EDITOR

SAUL acted wisely when he was rebuked for his persecution of the Christians. He was lying in the dust on the Damascus road, and instead of being offended at his rebuke, he immediately began to find out what was really wanted of him. ("What shall I do, Lord?"—Acts 22:10) Saul not only acted wisely but he set the world an example. Rebuke or correction should always mean not so much the stopping of a certain thing but the diverting of energy in the right direction. The willing heart will desire to know what to do instead of becoming offended because of a rebuke of what is being done. Saul was anxious about the right commission, and when he got that commission, he immediately began to pursue the right course. His name was not only changed from Saul to Paul but he helped to change the course of the world. The switching off from the wrong track to the right track will not only give a new name to an individual but will add to society's value and the world's good.

ELON LETTER

SENIOR examinations close this week for the largest class in Elon's thirty-one years of history. Thirty-seven are scheduled to receive their degrees. In addition to these, there will be twenty-three to receive certificates or diplomas in the special departments, or sixty in all. The year after the war broke out we were due to have graduated fifty—that is, in 1918. One of these days we shall reach that goal.

Next week the seniors will enjoy that oasis of the college course—senior week, while the other students swelter with examinations and the professors groan under the weight of added duties. And then commencement.

Every commencement is like every other, and yet so different. There is the same stately dignity and order of exercises, just as there is in the seasonal procession of the year. And yet every commencement, like every year, is different. It is the change in personalities that accounts for the difference.

We invite our friends and the friends of the graduating class to be present with us and to help us make it a grand occasion—one of the real uplifts for our College, and the events will justify your coming.

For the first time in our history a preacher who calls himself a layman, will give the baccalaureate sermon. Mr. Hermon Eldredge is the man and he is the peer of any platform orator in our brotherhood. He is one of America's big men. It will be a rare treat to hear him.

Governor Morrison will give the literary address on Tuesday morning, following the essays and orations by the seniors. The governor needs no introduction. He always speaks for himself. Prof. G. C. Davidson on Tuesday evening delivers the Alumni Oration. He is a deep thinker and a proud product of Alma Mater, loyal too to her every good.

Monday evening the Department of Music will present its oratorio under the directorship of Professor Betts. That means a great opportunity for persons of culture and refinement, who can appreciate aesthetic art.

Monday morning the class day exercises will occur and that afternoon the Society Representatives will speak. On both Monday afternoon and Tuesday afternoon the Art Department will present its exhibit in the annex of the West Dormitory, second floor, adjoining the Art Studio.

The only stereotyped number on the program is the baccalaureate address Sunday evening, given by the writer in his official capacity.

Every one who reads is hereby personally invited to come and help us make it a gala time. We shall look for you.

PRINCIPLES OF THE CHURCH

SUNDAY, May 1, I preached the last of a series of five sermons on the "Five Cardinal Principles of the Christian Church". Each sermon is written and contains from four to five thousand words. I have been urged by a number of people to have those sermons compiled in book form and have decided to do so. I have tried to state in these sermons just what the Christian Church stands for, and following each sermon I have heard people who have been members of my church for many years say: "I have never heard that principle explained before. I did not know that the Christian Church stands for that." And I suspect that many people in our churches can be found who are in the same condition. Wherever I go I expect to let the people know what our Church stands for. I think this is a part of the minister's duty. The average church member has not or does not take time to dig down into the fundamentals of our Church principles, and a mere reading of the Five Cardinal Principles will help the average member but very little. So far as I know I am the first pastor in our Church to preach a series of five sermons on the Five Cardinal Principles of our Church. I find it a very satisfactory and profitable undertaking.

SUFFOLK LETTER

CAPITAL and labor are familiar words in these days and, in the thought of many writers, they are antagonistic to each other. I have been reading all my lifetime, in magazines about the conflict that must come between them. Such a day would be a misfortune to the nation, because their interests are mutual. Any course that prevents the operation of the Golden Rule between them would be disastrous to both of them. The relation between capital and labor is a relation created by the Christian era and to break that relation is to violate the benefits of the gospel and reverse the wheels of progress and Christian civilization.

Before the Christian era capital and labor were both in one—the slave. Four-fifths of the human race were slaves. The other one-fifth owned the slaves who constituted the capital and labor of the owner. The pyramids of Egypt were built by slaves. The great roads and temples in Babylon, Athens and Rome were built by slaves. The slave was both capital and labor, and both were human. By a slow process of Christian teaching and war, slavery finally vanished from civil society, and capital and labor were separated. Capital was thus transferred from human beings to material substance, and the ownership from a few to many. Capitalists are now those who can own the largest shares in the great corporations without which civilization would revert, rapidly, to a worse than primitive barbarism. There is no condition as bad as a fall from a higher condition. The angels that fall are in a worse condition than fallen men. Christianity set labor free and capital, too. Were it not for Christianity labor would still be a slave. Christianity rendered a double blessing in freeing woman and those who did the work of the world without choice or pay. No two classes of human society should be more grateful to God than those two emancipated from the bonds of a Christless world.

The real owners in the present stage of civilization is the public or society. This is proven by the fact that the State commands the use of both millions of men and billions of money were demanded and yielded to the demand of the world war. Both capital and labor are amenable to the public and their rights vanish when they violate the rights of society. Selfishness on the part of capital or labor is moral rebellion against human society, including themselves. The only honest and sane course is a mutual study of the needs and conditions of society and then to adjust wages, hours, and especially feelings on the basis of the public welfare. There is a common good and a common evil that may be enjoyed or suffered by all. Capitalists and laborers are both few compared with population, and any consideration of relations between them that does not consider the public in a wrong that force cannot cure. "The truth shall make you free." Commissions and Boards can never heal the breach unless the Golden Rule is applied. The Christian religion set men free and they will drift back into slavery unless they follow Christ. Money and force try to rule the world, but love is the greatest power for good. They must go to prayer meeting together; they must praise God together in song; they must relieve the suffering together; they must build up confidence in each other; they must recognize their obligation to society and their accountability to God not only for themselves, but for their mutual relation in the world progress, not only today, but tomorrow.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

WHEN will we learn our lesson? What lesson? Oh, the lesson Jesus gave us when He taught us in John 15:5, that we can do nothing without Him. Once Jesus stopped the whole Church from their ordinary activities in order that they might learn to do things in His power, and not in their own strength. See Luke 24:49. If the Church could be induced to discontinue its ordinary activities till it could get power from above for the work they seek to do, then they would find it an easy task to do the Lord's work in the Lord's way and for his glory, and great things would come to pass. The only reason, so far as I know, that we accomplish so little in the labors of the Church is because we make the effort to accomplish these things (things needed in the Church) in our own strength, and then we fail, not because it was a bad cause, nor yet because we did not sincerely seek to do the good work, but because we did not stop our work and go to the "Upper Room" and stay there till we were endued with power from on high.

This is the lesson, and without learning it, we shall never be efficient in the Lord's vineyard. Let us lay aside other things and get down to real business for God by learning how to do the things He gives in His way and by His (not our) power.

"Better Worldliness". Indeed, and what can better worldliness do for the saving of the world? This is the first time we ever heard of "better worldliness" helping to save the world. Ah, you may count on it, that it is a plea born in this new time, and it is most likely the outcome of what is known as the New Theology. The man who puts forth this plea is the author of several books in some of which I have read many a sentence of rank poison, and yet there are some among us who put forth the claim that this man's books will have much to do with the future of men and women, now living, in the way of shaping their moral and spiritual ideals. Alas, for the man who can and does write such books, but what of the man who holds them up as high truth and worthy of the careful reading of the same by the people? Alas! Alas! Well did the poet sing: "Oh for a closer walk with God", as well he might, for if there be anything we need in this day of "better worldliness" that we need more than a closer (a great deal closer) walk with God, I do not just now call to mind just what it is. The whole Church is in need of this blessed experience. We sometimes feel that a good many leaders are greatly in love with a religion which is only skin deep—that which has as its foundation a mere form of "better worldliness". But that is not the particular brand of religion which the people of this day need. Let us seek to get in touch with a better and a deeper brand of this article—or we may at last be found "fooling" away our time and our opportunities with a religion which rests on a mere form of better worldliness, and that will not be sufficient in the day when we shall be called to face the Judgment Bar of God. No man-made religion will suffice for the needs of man in the day when he shall be tried as by fire. Oh, beloved, let us not be satisfied with anything less than the saving grace of God through our Lord Jesus Christ.

The churches have recently been celebrating "Mother's Day", and it was a good thing to do. There is nothing in this world that can take the place of mother. What a noble task is her's! Her business is high and holy. You see day by day she has in her hands the directing of the footsteps of the little children with a view of bringing them into a likeness to and after the image of God. Mother, you will never appreciate the great honor God has put upon you unless you live much upon your knees and before the Lord. Keep yourself filled with the Spirit of the Lord and then you can do great things in the teaching and training of your children for the highest and holiest calling in the world. God help our mothers to be true Christian mothers, for then only can they fill their high and holy calling after the manner God asks it of them. Whenever we pray, let us remember mother, for if she is a true mother, she richly deserves it. Pray for her!

LEADING THE WORLD IN DIVORCES

America leads the world in divorces is the report recently issued by the International Reform Bureau. This country has been accorded the moral leadership of the world since the war, but such revelations as these tend very seriously to undermine the respect of other nations toward us. We even eclipse pagan Japan in the number of divorces.

Statistics show that thirty-five American States—ranging from Vermont with its 153 divorces to every 100,000 population to Nevada, with 652—have a divorce rate higher than Japan. "So widespread indeed, has become the evil that sociologists and religious leaders look upon it as a national calamity, and the report would seem to bear out the view that the churches must set themselves seriously to the task of combatting the evil if they would preserve the social fabric." According to the report the rate in Japan was 229 in 1886, but the Federal law brought it down in 1899 to 151 per 100,000. The rate of all States in this country in 1916 was 136 divorces for each 100,000 net population (not including Roman Catholics who do not permit divorces except in rare cases of papal dispensation) and 112 divorces for 100,000 total population (including Roman Catholics).

The Christian Observer (Presbyterian) declares: "There is a real need now to emphasize in home, in church, and in school the alarming menace to our country's welfare revealed in these statistics. God's word should be studied and taught with greater zeal that this national shame may be removed."

GOLD WITHOUT ITS BENEFITS

The idea that an increase in a nation's gold always means an increase in a nation's prosperity is a mistaken one. As it is at the present time, when credited, poverty-stricken Europe is sending us many million dollars of her gold reserves (few as they are) to back up the four billion dollar debt which the countries of this unfortunate part of the world owes us, it is thought that a further increase in our gold reserves will only make Europe less able to pay us the debt, and also add further to our domestic complications which are already sufficiently great.

Three and one-half billion, or one-third of the entire gold supply of the world for exchange purposes is in the United States. The country has all the gold it needs for backing up currency and a large reserve besides. In addition to this, the meagre reserves of Europe have been flowing in at an almost unprecedented rate of $350,000,000 during the past six months. Figuring the estimate from almost any standpoint, business or humanitarian, and the result of a further increase of gold indicates "bad business". The reason is this:

In order to pay us Europe needs to produce, and we must concede her every possible opportunity to enable her to get her industries under way to do so. At the same time the United States needs a market for her goods and Europe has been and will be the principle market, depending upon her ability to purchase these goods or give us products that we need in exchange. In order to produce, Europe must have sufficient liquidation of her domestic exchange so that her manufacturers can borrow money to build up and equip manufacturing and industrial enterprises, and the little gold that she has is needed to perform this function. Thus it is reasonable in the opinion of the New York Times Annalist, and a number of other financial papers which have made a thorough investigation of the conditions here and abroad, that the United States should stop the influx of gold and let the two continents, Europe and America settle down to business which will result in a sure means of prosperity and good will.

In light of this interpretation the solution is dependent on foreign trade—a mutual exchange of products which both lands cannot do without. Half the cotton and corn crop of this country, to say nothing of one-third of last year's wheat crop and the billion pounds of copper remained in the hands of the producers as late as April last, and it will no doubt remain still longer until Europe reaches the point when she can produce and find exchange for products. To take gold away from Europe at the expense of Europe is therefore taking it away at our expense too. The financial problem of the world is certainly a big one—the biggest on perhaps for it leads us more and more to believe that "what is the world's is our's and what is our's is the world's".

It has been announced by the first assistant postmaster general that it is not the aim of the post office department to disturb the unexpired term of the postmasters of the first, second and third class postoffices, so long as there is no cause. This means that all postmasters whose commissions are not out will continue to hold office, though they be Democrats.

General John J. Pershing, will, on July 1, become chief of general staff and actual head of the army, and will relieve Major General Peyton C. March, the present chief of staff. General Pershing will remain head of the general headquarters of the army, in addition to the training of the National Guard and organized reserves.

As the result of the recent appropriation by the American Red Cross of a second $500,000 for the famine relief in China still more highways are to be constructed in the famine area. It is by providing employment in this road building that the Red Cross is enabling tens of thousands of Chinese to obtain food for themselves while the roads will also have permanent value in reducing the inadequacy of transportation means that plays a large part in bringing about famine conditions in China.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

HOME AND SUNDAY SCHOOLS FOR MISSIONS

Mrs. R. B. Wood

LOOKING over a world today, involved in strife, on every hand the force of might trying to prevail, nations of the earth crying out in despair, we can but feel that the very foundation of civilization must be undermined. Will the attitude of the Church toward the heathen world bring their superstition and unrest to our shores? How will civilization be saved from chaos if we neglect to train the boys and girls along lines of justice and brotherhood, trying to give them a vision and a devoted heart to Jesus Christ?

Youth is the most plastic period of human life. God has given to the parent the molding of this precious lump so that it shall be made fit for His use. The great need of our country today is mothers who deserve the name. The years are passing, the places that know us now will soon be filled by others. Who are these others? The boys and girls of today. Are they going to be prepared to carry the standard, and hold on to the stretch of the road already won, or are they going to let it slip back into old channels. It should be our duty as parents to begin training in the home at an early age. The home is supposed to be the main human channel from which flows that stream of life out of which, will go, either good or evil influence. If we are to have a part in the making of this a true shepherd nation as well as a professing one, we must be more concerned about the earliest impressions of our children. We have known and do know that there are other forces that influence the life, but home influence counts most. Then it behooves us not to be satisfied until our boys and girls are taught that service to mankind is a vital factor in building a Christian character. As parents we talk with our children, read with them the current social and material topics of the day, and fail to acquaint them of the more serious problems.

If the missionary books and magazines, so easily reached today, had been put in the hands of the children two generations ago, telling the world's needs and condition, you and I might have had a larger vision and higher ideals.

The attitude of boys and girls toward missions will be determined largely by the older persons with whom they are most thrown, and whom they honor. "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, with all thy heart and thy neighbor as thyself" is a command for us today, as much as in days gone by. Whether we will it or not we are stewards of the gospel and our brother's keeper, and if we allow them to go untaught our children will pay the penalty. Happy is that boy or girl who having been taught the things of God from early childhood holds fast to the teachings of his or her Christian home.

The greatest organization in the world for the children is the Sunday school. It has been a powerful agency in the development of this great nation. A large percent of the church members are furnished by the Sunday school, and had missions been taught in our Sunday school days more would have been accomplished in our own land. "Go ye therefore and teach all nations" is Christ's command to the Sunday school. Where are we to look for our future missionaries and supporters of missions except in the Sunday schools of today. Almost every man and woman filled with strong missionary principles can point back to some home and Sunday school influence in their childhood, when the seed was planted. President Harding has a message for the Sunday school. He says: "It is time that we give our attention to the religious instruction of the children, to extend religious teaching to all in such form that conscience is developed and duty to one's neighbor and God is understood and fulfilled." The Sunday school must prepare the children to carry the torch, and it is said, "the light that shines farthest shines brightest nearest home." Then make of our Sunday school, missionary societies, out of which there will go boys and girls knowing the needs of the heathen and what the gospel means to them. Lloyd George says: "All the best training I ever had was in the Sunday school, it better fitted me for my work." Teaching the children of God and His cause, leads them to catch the vision of the claim our neighbors have on us, and surely God will reckon with you and me for neglect of Christian duty.

The basal need in our Sunday school work today, is trained teachers. This will solve many problems and bring in a new day for religious education. Ex-President Wilson said: "Religion is the only force in the world that I ever heard of that does actually transform the life, and the proof of the transformation is to be found all over the world and is multiplied and repeated as Christianity gains fresh territory in the heathen world."

There is an imperative duty resting on Sunday school teachers emphasizing constantly the need of the knowledge of the love of God to the uttermost parts of the earth. The future of the coming generation is in the hands of our young women, the responsibility of saving the world for Christ lies in Christian Education, to begin in the home, then in the Sunday school, secular school and college.

We must not give up, but rally our forces to win the five hundred millions who are perishing without the Gospel. Does God know? Does He care? He knows the American people spent more than four billion dollars for non-essentials last year, and a tithe of that would carry the Gospel to the uttermost parts of the earth. Reading from The Missionary Review, we learn that one of the great men of China passing through America on his way to Paris said: "You have taken away from us our idols and temples and destroyed our faith in Buddhism. Now we are depending on you for a positive substitute in order to avoid chaos." Russia is calling for books and farm machinery, not bayonets and machine guns. Look at Mexico, four out of five people cannot read the Bible, one-fifth of the population do not even know the name of God. Dr. Inman says: "With the money used by the U. S. Government for a six months patrol of the Mexican border would have built and maintained for ten years a fully equipped college, hospital, social settlement and a church in every town of over four thousand people in the republic of Mexico. These are startling truths to us, truly the harvest is great but the laborers are few.

What if we fail?

"Christ has no hands but our hands to do His work today
He has no feet but our feet to lead men in His way.
He has no tongue but our tongue to tell men how He died;
He has no help but our help to bring them to His side.

What if our hands are busy with other work than His?
What if our feet are walking where sins allurements is?
What if our tongues are speaking of things His lips would spurn?
How can we hope to help Him and hasten His return?"

ELM STREET CHRISTIAN CHURCH, PORTSMOUTH

This is a new Christian church recently organized and already gives promise of permanency and growth. In December of last year a delegation from Prentis Place, Portsmouth, visited Rev. H. W. Dowding and our Portsmouth First church with a view to forming and organizing a Christian church out in Prentis Park which is a residential section of Portsmouth near the navy yard. Bro. Dowding advised the Mission Board that such a congregation desired to be organized as a Christian church and about December 21, Chairman J. E. West, Rev. G. O. Lankford and the Mission Secretary, met representatives of the proposed congregation and also looked over a proposed site for a prospective church building. Soon thereafter a proposition was made to the Board by the congregation that if the Board would buy the lot the congregation would erect a Christian church. This proposition was accepted by the Board and a lot ample for church and parsonage was purchased for $5,000.00. Immediately the congregation began work and have erected a suitable building costing some over $5,000.00. On Sunday night, April 24, the Mission Secretary held the formal opening service of the new church and greatly enjoyed forming the acquaintance of many members of this new Christian congregation. None of the members, so far as we know, were members of our First church of Portsmouth, or of any other Christian church. Many of them by parentage and earlier associations knew of the Christian church and our principles. Eight thousand people live in Prentis Place and there were only two churches, a Methodist and a Baptist, whose combined seating capacity is only 800, in that part of the city. Other churches were a necessity and, as stated, some were anxious for our Christian church. At the opening service of the new church building there were a hundred intelligent, orderly, earnest men and women present, all of whom seemed happy to have such a church as we have built.

Rev. O. D. Poythress, pastor of our South Norfolk church was to begin a series of meetings one week from the time of the opening of the new building, and the people were anxious to have him. A church of more than twenty members and a Sunday school of more than forty had been organized, and a good house of worship built and formally opened—all without any pastor to lead. On the evening of the opening a unanimous call was extended to Rev. E. H. Rainey, now in Yale University, to become pastor beginning June 1. Bro. Rainey has accepted and he certainly has a wonderful opportunity for solid and constructive work this summer.

The writer hopes that Editor C. B. Riddle will soon visit this new congregation of very zealous Christians and introduce to them THE CHRISTIAN SUN and secure, as we are sure he can, a wholesale list of worthy subscribers to the best Church paper in the Southern States.

This congregation will be ready to apply for admission to the Eastern Virginia Conference when it meets in annual session next October; and here is hoping and believing, if God wills, that a very healthy, proper and promising child it will be when the day of presentation and of christening comes.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS

Only a few days in which we are privileged to help on the Baby Home at the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, N. C., if we are going to help before May 24. Let us finish paying for the new building so that it can be dedicated on May 24, as announced in this week's SUN.

Several letters have been received in this office during the past few weeks intended for "Uncle Charley"—Mr. Chas. D. Johnston, Elon College, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage. These letters, of course, were addressed to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. All letters from the children (and grown-ups, too) intended for the Orphanage department should be sent to the Superintendent of the Orphanage and not to the Editor of THE SUN. Letters and money sent this office for the Orphanage have to be forwarded to Bro. Johnston.

We have received, through the kindness of Mr. R. Glenn Grose, president of the senior class of Wake Forest College, the following invitation: "The faculty and graduating class of Wake Forest College request the honor of your presence at the Eighty-sixth Annual Commencement May twenty-fifth to twenty-seventh nineteen hundred and twenty-one, Wake Forest, North Carolina."

THE PRINTERS' STRIKE

The strike in the printing industry is practically unchanged so far as the workmen are concerned, but rapidly changing with employing printers. In many cities the "Open Shop" has been declared and a new force of men being assembled. This is particularly true in Raleigh, N. C., our nearest neighboring city that was affected by the walk-out. Only one shop granted the 44-hour week demand. All other shops gave their men a certain date to return or that they would declare for "open shop". The men did not return and so the owners of the plants granted permission to non-Union as well as Union men to work.

THE HOUR OF WORSHIP

FOR NATIONAL RECONSECRATION

President Harding is a Christian, and he is not ashamed to have the whole world know it. Weeks before his inauguration and shortly after election, he stated his religious belief at a meeting of laymen in Marion in these words:

"I want you to believe that there is an individual who believes in the reconsecration of a religious republic. I have for my inheritance a Christian belief, and I have in my veins the blood of Christian parentage. I have been preaching to my countrymen the gospel of reverence. I do not believe that we can have the highest type of civilization without its religious strain. We need its influence, and its discipline.

"Sometimes I think that the world is adrift from its moorings of religion, and I know it will help if there come a great renewal of faith. I have no higher concept in the world than a just government, and I do not see how a government can exist in the world without coming in contact with God. I could not hope for a happy relationship among nations if there is not the same current of recognition of the Supreme Being. I do not think that any association of nations could be successful in which God is not recognized."

In his inaugural, when he spoke to an audience of 30,000 and beyond and above them to this whole nation, he made this avowal:

"Here are a hundred millions, with common concern and shared responsibility, answerable to God and country. The Republic summons them to their duty and I invite co-operation. I accept my part with single-mindedness of purpose and humility of spirit, and implore the favor and guidance of God in His heaven. . . . I have taken the solemn oath of office on that passage of Holy Writ wherein it is asked: 'What doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly and to love mercy and walk humbly with thy God.' This I plight to God and country."

In these days when decadence in religion is becoming so marked in many places, it is reassuring for the Christian people of America to have this plain statement of faith from the new Executive. Many readers of the Christian Herald will recall the famous challenge which was issued by Ingersoll in which he made the assertion that infidelity, or at least indifference, toward the Christian faith had become increasingly a characteristic of the American people, and that even those in the highest official stations had become indifferent. It was a challenge to the nation. The Christian Herald took up the challenge and asked for an expression of faith from those in high places. Response came from the President, the Supreme Court, the Cabinet, a large proportion of both Houses of Congress and leading college Presidents and educators, with the result that the vaunt of Ingersoll received a conclusive negative.

We believe that a similar test, tried today, would upset the representations of the secular press as to growing indifference to religion as effectually as was done in the time of McKinley. And we have confidence to believe that the aspirations of President Harding for a national religious reconsecration are generally shared by a very large majority of those foremost in the councils of our people now.—The Christian Herald.

PARAGRAPH SERMONS

By W. G. Loucks

The peril of the church, of society and of the nation is due to the people's ignorance of the Bible more than to any other cause.

The only thing God can do when a church refuses to go with his message to the lost of all the earth, is to get out of that church.

The work of the Lord will never prosper as it should so long as so many of us put just enough time into our preparation to get by.

The greatest and most perpetual need of the world is a practical knowledge of the truth taught in God's word concerning Life and Duty.

The power of the church can never be wielded as it ought until men come to know that their business should be as sacred as their prayers.

When Christ is not the supreme light and life of the church her people seek for other christs and at last are led into many a delusion and superstition.

At the Lord's table the humblest soul may join in worship with the apostles and martyrs; and with the devoutest souls of the living, working church of the past and the present.

Economizing in the interest of the local church at the expense of the great world interests is the most fatal blow that can be struck against the progress of the church.

No church or individual can ever decline to help in sending the gospel to all the world, or even excuse themselves for not helping, until they eliminate God out of their lives.

The greatest enterprise in this world is that of the improvement of the lives of men. To cultivate knowledge, piety, virtue, and to adore that divine name is the chief ambition of all noble souls.—The Christian Evangelist.

No one can live well in this world unless he fixes his affections on things above this world and beyond. If the ploughman would plough straight, he must not look at his feet in the furrow, but at the other side of the field. If the surveyor would avoid all confusion, he must refer all lines to the North Star.—Amos R. Wells.

Dr. P. P. Claxton, who has been Commissioner of Education since July 1, 1911, has resigned this position, and will take a much needed rest for awhile. The name of Dr. John James Tigert, now of the University of Kentucky, has been sent to the Senate but has not been confirmed.

REFLECTIONS OF A DAY'S STUDY

Disraeli said on one occasion that it is possible for a book to be as great as a battle—and his words are true. People take time to study battles but do not take time to study books—that is, the final effects of books. A book is thought. A book is the summary of much thinking upon the part of one or more individuals. The Bible is the summary of God's thought, plus revelation, plus human mind and action controlled by God's will. Books have great influence, so does the daily, weekly and monthly paper. The freedom of the press, we fear, has given too much freedom in some instances.

But books! A wise man once said there is no end to the making of books—and he, too, was right. Presses are busy day and night turning out the mind's product. The people are reading, too. Competition in journalism is keen and the difficulty of many publications thickens. The Church press can stem the tide only as the Church constituency grows in favor and appreciation of the Church journal. The average member is contented with the acts and activities of his local church and has no special desire to know what his denomination is doing as a unit.

It is impossible to make a Church paper and have its contents all made up of local church affairs. An editor cannot publish what he does not get; and one of the most difficult things to get is church news. A five years' careful study in the field of Church journalism has led us to say that the tendency of pastors to report the activities of their churches is growing less, and the emphasis being put on constructive articles rather than giving local happenings. This same tendency is in our own denomination. There is a reason for this. There are few readers who are particularly interested in a note discussing some local problem—and those who are interested usually know in detail what took place without waiting to see it in the Church paper.

But we made the statement that the average member is not vitally concerned about his Church paper because he is not vitally interested in the doings of his denomination outside of his local church. We wonder if there is not a reason for this. If there is a reason we feel that it is due largely to the fact that the average congregation receives so little instruction on denominational affairs.

It is interesting to note that the study of the theme by a group of persons enlists the study of a similar group on the other side of the question. We have gathered from reading for the past few years that there are those who are endeavoring to place the work of the evangelist on a plane of professionalism. Likewise, there are those who are seriously questioning the propriety and economy of the general evangelist and his work. It is a poor theme that does not afford thought on both sides, and so far as THE SUN is concerned it rejoices to see all such questions being looked into by real conservative thinkers. In passing, let us leave the thought that all too many times the talk about the evangelist is more than the talk about the Christ-man whom he represents. Sometimes it appears that the evangelist is substituted for the Christ and the seeker of salvation cannot see Jesus for the evangelist. One writer asks this question: "Why does an evangelistic campaign have to bring about a lot of moth-eaten emotionalism and give to a host of people not worth their salt in the churches to which they belong a new spiritual intoxication?"

* * *

It is not difficult to find some real amusement in articles written by many who live in the North and who think of conditions in the South as they once were. If we had taken note of the many instances where men of the North have visited the South and written at length of their surprises we could name dozens of cases. One before us now makes confession of the great accomplishments of the South. The correspondent to whom we refer is one of the well known men of the country, but he has done more reading than he has traveling and has read too many sentimental books concerning the "poor folks of the South".

* * *

Speaking of conditions like these reminds us of hearing a very pitiful story told of the people in a certain mountain section of North Carolina. The speaker had read in a book based on conditions fifty or one hundred years ago and stopped his investigation there. It is true that some portions of the mountainous section of North Carolina are yet undeveloped, but while this is true, a majority of the highland dwellers have made more progress in proportion to their opportunity than some of those in the Piedmont and Tidewater sections. Here is why we are making this comment: To say that it is unfair to forever think of a people as history records them. Recorded history is fixed when the writing is done, but human progress is an onward march that no pen nor printing press can stop.

There was a time when we found our greatest joy in opening mail, pounding a typewriter, dictating to a stenographer, looking into every detail of the ledger and seeing that the desk was cleared before the office closing hour. It is difficult to carry along a business in a business way and at the same time do work that requires research, comparison and diligent study. For five years we have been amid the daily routine of the office, in taking care of the public as one meets it in the average office. These five years, added to work before and while in college, make a total of twelve years spent in an office. In recent months we have endeavored to absent ourselves from the grind of the office and apply the same time to work in the study. Most Church papers have an editor and a publisher, and we ask the indulgence of our readers if THE SUN should fail to compare with other Church papers, for it is always difficult for a man to do his best in the thought world and be encumbered with the general details found in the daily routine of an office.

* * *

These are days of crusades. There are crusades of practically every form of vice. We want one more crusade to come during our day and we want that crusade to be on "cussing". It is too mild to call it profanity and so we desire to call it in the language of the people—"cussing". Cursing, if you prefer to hold us strictly to grammar. There is the least common sense in outright swearing than anything we know about. It is getting to be too common. Not only among men but we hear it among women. (We are thankful that we do not know any of that class). We believe that the time has come when the pulpit must speak out in no uncertain tones about the general use of profanity. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain" is a text sufficient for the occasion, and we are making notes on a sermon when the public gets ready for it. Hasten the day of its coming! Stop this foul mouth, buzzard language, that is being vomited out to the general public.

* * *

Mark Twain once said that he was so anxious for peace that he was willing to fight for it. It was somewhat out of this philosophy that many entered the world war. It was said at times that it was a war to end war, but indications do not point that way now. We find the following figures that speak for themselves:

IS THIS A CHRISTIAN DIVISION OF OUR NATIONAL INCOME?

United States Appropriations, 1920

I. Past Wars	$3,855,482,586	68%
II. Future Wars	1,424,138,677	25%
III. Civil Departments	181,087,225	3%
IV. Public Work	168,203,557	3%
V. Education and Science	57,093,661	1%

Total $5,686,005,706 100%
 (Analysis by Dr. Edward B. Rosa, of the United States Bureau of Standards)

General John J. Pershing recently said: "It is a gloomy commentary upon world conditions that expenditures several times greater than ever before in peace time should be considered necessary, especially when the most rigid economy in governmental administration is essential if we would avoid national bankruptcy.

"But we are only one of the many nations that contemplate taking upon themselves such an enormous burden, in addition to their tremendous war debts."

"If a young man is going to amount to anything in this world or in the world to come, he must first of all recognize the fact that he has a soul and then he must plan and adjust his affairs that he may give that soul a chance."

WHICH POLICY SHOULD RULE?

YOU may search the world over, but with one exception you will not find a great organization dependent for its life upon a system of propagandism that does not magnify the printing press. You will find also that many of these organizations magnify the printing press to the extent of circulating free of charge among the people the product of the printing press. The idea of commercial gain is absent. The policy pursued is a missionary policy. The word "missionary", remember, belongs to no special vocabulary of human effort and experience.

In our opening statement we used the phrase, "with one exception." You wonder what that exception is. It is the Protestant Church. This great conglomerate body has never placed a premium on publicity. It has used the printing press more as a sentiment than as a power which turns the currents of thought, feeling, and action into a mighty current sweeping humanity toward God and high eternal destiny. We measure the value of the Christian printing press more by the dollars which it makes or sentiment which it can satisfy than by the number of granite blocks which it can place in the structure of Christian manhood and womanhood. The thought of publishing Christian newspapers as we publish tracts, prosecute our Sunday school work, and build up our missionary enterprises—as a purely missionary policy, as recognized by many of the organizations formed of the "children of the world"—strikes many a Christian leader as something altogether fantastic. Yet why not, "O children of light," materialize that thought into something positive and perpetual? Roman Catholicism is doing that very thing.

Only a short time ago the Roman Catholic editors of this country in annual convention (Protestantism has no annual convention or any other kind of convention of editors) voted to raise an endowment of one million dollars to found a Roman Catholic publicity service. They have been using one for some time. We berate the Roman Catholics. We criticize them justly, sometimes, and sometimes unjustly, but in either event we could improve our consistency and save our faces by first casting out of our own eyes that great big beam which is in the form of an amazing indifference to the matter of that publicity which Roman Catholicism has made one of the foundation stones of its amazing growth.—Selected.

VARIETY IN LITERARY SOCIETY PROGRAMS.

By Pearl Hatcher, Teacher of French in Summerfield High School.

It may well be said that "variety is the spice of life," and it is peculiarly true of the life of a high-school literary society. It has been my experience for the past two years to be connected with a somewhat small high school. The school had a literary society, which met every two weeks and carried out some sort of program. But, regretful to say, the same sort of program was repeated time after time, until it became so monotonous and matter-of-fact that the students apparently lost all interest in the society and did not seem to appreciate its literary value in the least. Some made excuses to be absent from the meeting, while others preferred to pay a fine rather than perform their assigned parts on the program. It was evident that there was a general spirit of disinterestedness. The question of lack of interest came up from time to time, but no solution seemed to be at hand.

This year we found ourselves drifting into the same rut. But one day the program committee determined to change the routine of things. Then, taking time by the forelock, they began to carry out their scheme. First, the society was divided into groups, each consisting of ten students. Each group was to have charge of a program in society in rotation. In this way no one was overworked, while every one had an equal chance to show his literary capabilities.

The next step was to provide a variety in the programs themselves. This was most carefully and earnestly worked out. Instead of planning for one meeting ahead, as formerly, the committee now planned for weeks ahead. Programs were outlined and submitted to the groups which were to work out the details. In the place of the old routine of recitation, debate, reading, current events, local news, jokes, etc., dramatics, debates, discussion of various problems relating to the high school and to life in the community, literary study of American writers, etc., were substituted.

For instance, as Thanksgiving was near at hand, the special program for that day was of a dramatic nature. One of the pupils in the group which was to give the program, possessing a wonderful gift of originality, dramatized the First Thanksgiving. This was presented by the group so well that all who witnessed it got a new vision of the spirit and meaning of Thanksgiving. Likewise, other programs have been as effectively carried out, while we are hoping for still greater things in the future.

As a further solution of the problem, it was suggested that a debating club should be organized among the English classes, which should meet each Friday morning, instead of the usual English classes. This club was organized for the purpose of training the boys and girls, not only in formal argument and to acquaint them with the principles of debating, but to enable them to cope with situations in the right way and to meet them with open-mindedness.

In conclusion, it is hardly necessary to add that the whole society has taken on new life. A spirit of co-operation has been developed, through which all of the students seem to be pulling together for their common good. Needless to say, the treasurer is no longer concerned over the collection of fines for failure to perform duty. Truly, "where there's a will, there's a way."

6. The thinking of the continent as a unit, with its related countries, physical features, and cities.

The writer has had hundreds of students in normal school and in the elementary school carry out exercises similar to the one here indicated. The work has been accomplished with the interest of a popular game. Essays of real geographic merit have been produced. The old, mechanical, memoriter drudgery of place geography disappeared with the introduction of the journey essay. It is hoped that this experience may be suggestive to others.

TESTS OF GEOGRAPHIC TEACHING.

By C. E. Marston, Principal of Allen School, Kansas City, Mo., and Instructor in Geography, George Peabody College Summer School, 1919.

The effort to standardize geography and test the efficiency of its teaching can only succeed in a limited way. Geography answers the questions, What? Where? and Why? In the popular mind, where (location) is geography. The exactness with which place questions can be answered and graded explains their large use in teachers' examinations. Tests demand the ability to name the States on a blank map and locate about thirty cities in a very limited time. The pupil should be able to do this, but he must be able to do much more. He must know the location of physical areas, climatic areas, trade routes, density of population, and be able to explain the cause and influence of each. Through detailed knowledge of the what of geography he must be able to give rich descriptions of such regions and, more essential still, by knowing the why, he must explain the relations such areas bear to man's needs.

Geography is more than simple drill on maps. Its more important phases are rational. It is probably true we need a better knowledge of place geography, but it should be studied as related to man's needs if the pupil is to retain it. Just here is the danger of the standardized test being made the end of geographic teaching. Too much time is consumed on a low ideal of accomplishment. The big aim of geography is to comprehend the relation of man to his environment. The knowledge of greatest worth is made up of generalizations which explain the basis of occupations, reasons for growth of cities, nature of climate, etc. Such problems as: Why is Belgium densely populated? Why does New England engage in manufacturing? Why is the sugar beet grown extensively in Europe? Why is California the greatest fruit State? Why can the United States compete with China in rice, but not in tea? The rapid growth of any city is such a geographic problem.

The author is not opposed to educational tests, but their use in geography is very limited. Better judge the efficiency of the teacher by her training, for this will readily manifest itself in her own interest and in that of her class.

CARDINAL PRINCIPALS OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE BULLETIN

Any church or churches interested in the services of Rev. Neil Rowland of Texas, may get in touch with him by addressing Mr. K. B. Johnson, Cardenas, N. C.

The New Providence Memorial Association will hold its annual meeting in New Providence church, Graham, N. C., Sunday, June 5, 1921. Mr. Junius Parker of New York will deliver the annual address.

Dr. W. P. Lawrence, of Elon College, filled the pulpit at the First Baptist church., Burlington, N. C., last Sunday morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. M. W. Buck, who was in Nashville, Tenn., attending the Southern Baptist Convention.

Brother W. G. Clements, writing under recent date, says: "I earnestly request the prayers of the Brotherhood in behalf of my wife that she may be restored to health." We are sure that Brother and Sister Clements will be remembered in their days of infirmity.

The First church, Greensboro, has been fortunate in securing the services of Rev. H. Russell Clem, Springfield, Ohio, who is to take charge of the work about September 1. We congratulate both Brother Clem and the church, and welcome our good brother back to Southern territory, of which he is a product.

Brother C. A. Henton, Keezletown, Va., in writing of THE SUN says: "The articles by Dr. J. P. Barrett and Dr. D. A. Long; also memories of that great and good man, Dr. W. B. Wellons, in a recent "Virginia

Letter", call up recollections of by-gone days. I have been a subscriber, with the exception of a few short intervals, since Dr. Wellons took charge of the paper at the close of the Civil War."

Rev. W. C. Hook, who receives his diploma at Elon College next week, goes on June 1, to take the churches, Rosemont and Berea (Norfolk) recently left without a pastor by the resignation of Rev. G. O. Lankford. The Pleasant Grove, (Virginia) church recently under the pastorate of Brother Hook, is now being served by Rev. J. E. McCauley. This church, on the resignation of Brother Hook, extended him, in writing, resolutions of appreciation of the work that he has done for the church and community.

THE SUN'S Editor had the pleasure last Sunday of filling two engagements. In the morning we were privileged to be at our new church at Hopedale, five miles north of Burlington. The congregation has a neat and well built edifice in which to worship, and has an enrollment of eighty-one in the Sunday school. Preaching is held once a month by their pastor, Rev. J. F. Apple. The outlook seems good and the workers deserve the congratulation of the Brotherhood. The evening hour (7:30) we were privileged to speak at our Hay River church and to make the message mainly to young people. When we reached the church at 7:00 o'clock we found one of the largest and most enthusiastic Christian Endeavor Societies in session that we have seen in some time. The Sunday school is enjoying the largest enrollment and the life of the church is possibly the best that it has been in years. Pastor Fleming is well pleased with the work, and the workers are well pleased with him.

A press note sent out from Elon College, and dated May 14, says: "Yesterday afternoon the Daily Vacation Bible School which has been conducted in the graded school building here since the closing of the school on April 29, came to its end. The weather was quite inclement, but this did not interfere with the commencement exercises of this unique school. The children were there with their lunches, spending the afternoon after they had finished the regular class work. Two very satisfactory experiments have been performed in the college community this year, of which this daily vacation school was the second. The first was a week day religious instruction school, which gave religious instruction on Thursday afternoon of each week to the children of the village. Both these experiments have been under the direction and supervision of the Department of Religious Education of the College. This department has supplied the teaching force and the supervision for both of these experiments in religious education, and the results have been quite satisfactory both from the standpoint of the community and of the professional equipment of the members of these classes. Provision has been made for supervised play for the children of the village during the summer months, and next year the week day religious school will be resumed."

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

MISSIONARY RALLY

New Elam church

The missionary rally of the Women's Societies of O'neatham County met at New Elam Christian church, May 6, 1921. The meeting was called to order by the Superintendent, Mrs. S. V. Holt.

Devotional services conducted by Mrs. W. A. Drake. A special prayer was offered for Rev. B. J. Howard's wife and children, who are sick. This prayer was led by Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Miss Bessie Holt and Dr. J. O. Atkinson made a few remarks about the young people's work after which Miss Holt organized a Young People's Society with a membership of five. Discussion of goals for the year was read by Miss Vara Drake. Address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson. Adjourned for lunch.

Afternoon Session

Devotional service conducted by Miss Bessie Holt; Round table discussion led by Miss Bessie Holt; Music; Address—Our Young People—Miss Bessie Holt. This address was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. An offering was received for the mountain work. It was decided that these meetings should be held annually. Those present at the missionary rally expressed themselves as having spent a pleasant and profitable day.

MRS. S. V. HOLT, Supt.

NORFOLK DISTRICT RALLY

The Norfolk District Rally Day was held at Rosemont church, April 29, 1921, with forenoon and afternoon sessions. Eight of our nine churches were represented. Mrs. Cartwright, as acting superintendent, presided. The weather was threatening. However, a large crowd was present. We were served a delightful luncheon, chicken and potato salad, Smithfield ham, sandwiches, bread, crackers, pickles, and coffee. Ice cream and cake.

Devotional services were conducted by Mrs. Houghmont of the Third church. Reports from all missionary Societies, Willing Workers, Young People's and Cradle Roll, were read. Finances for present year are in good shape. We feel confident that the goal set for each Society will be met by October or the meeting of our Annual Woman's Conference. The plans for the year were presented by Mrs. Cartwright. After placing before our women the financial budget; and the purposes for which the money is to be used, she emphasized the fact that our problem is not men nor money but "heart service". To love a work we must know much about it, therefore, read more of our missionary literature, subscribe to and read The Christian Missionary, become great Bible readers, it gives us first hand knowledge of God's plans and is missionary from beginning to end and back of this there must be prayer and consecration.

Each number on the program was an inspiration in itself. Mrs. Stagg of Memorial Temple read a fine paper on "Why We Should Be Interested in Missions". Dr. J. O. Atkinson gave us one of his very finest addresses. Subject matter from Matthew 26. He brought home to us, vividly, the fact, that we have a part in a big undertaking, and that to accomplish great things, sacrifices must be made. Our women seemed to catch a new vision of the spirit of the sacrifice our Lord made for us and that He is expecting His plans to be carried out with our co-operation, and if we do not our part, we hinder the work.

The Rosemont ladies gave a pageant—"A Living Dream". It was appropriate and taught a wonderful lesson to the indifferent ones.

Miss Bessie Holt won the audience in the delightful manner in which she handled her subject and by her personality. Her text—"Carest Thou Not That They Perish"—was a home run plea for mountain work. We soon found out that her whole heart was in the work and what a delight it is to find our young women giving so willingly—service—as the needs of the mountain people are carried back to individual societies. I am sure our young people will more than raise the $1,800—one-half of which goes to this work. As one result of her appeal, five women became responsible for the organizing of Willing Workers in their respective churches. It was voted and carried that the rally day be made an annual affair.

Officers were elected for ensuing year, viz: Mrs. J. Cartwright, Chairman; Mrs. M. L. Bryant, Secretary; Mrs. John Lewis, Treasurer. We were invited to hold our next rally with Prentiss Place (Portsmouth) people. An offering was taken which netted $32.25. We adjourned with prayer by Rev. J. F. Morgan.

MRS. J. CARTWRIGHT.

LEE COUNTY DISTRICT

The Missionary Rally of the Woman's Societies of the Christian churches of Lee County met with the Sanford church, May 5, 1921. Dr. J. O. Atkinson opened the meeting with prayer and Miss May Gunter, the District Superintendent, read Matthew 5:13-16, 28:18-20.

The weather was very unfavorable and all the churches were not represented. Shallow Well reported a Woman's Society, Turner's Chapel a Woman's Society, Sanford a Woman's Society and a Young People's Society, Grace's Chapel wants to organize a Woman's Society. We secured volunteers to see the people of Poplar Branch, and Zion churches about organizing. We then listened to a splendid address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson; were led in prayer by Rev. J. D. Wicker and adjourned for lunch.

Afternoon Session—Mrs. W. L. Thomas read Acts 16:6-15, we were led in prayer by Mr. J. R. Rives. A paper by Mrs. W. A. Harper, naming our goals for this year, was read by Miss May Gunter and Rev. J. D. Wicker made a good talk on the progress we are making along missionary lines.

A Round Table discussion was conducted by Miss May Gunter. "The Woman who Gave Herself", was read by Miss Emma Hart. We then heard Miss Bessie Holt on our mountain work, this address was intensely interesting.

Every one voted the rally a great success and wished to make it permanent, so the following officers were elected: Miss May Gunter, Superintendent; Miss Elsie Kelly, Secretary; Miss Pearl Way, Treasurer. An offering was taken for our mountain work, which amounted to $12.50. Benediction by Dr. J. O. Atkinson.

MISS EMMA HART, Secretary

OUR ORPHANAGE

NEW "BABY HOME" TO BE DEDICATED MAY 24

The new building, The Children's Home, at the Christian Orphanage will be dedicated Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, May 24. Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., will deliver the address. Everybody is cordially invited to be present and take a part in this service.

While we still lack several thousand dollars to finish paying for the building, we have faith enough in the entire Church to believe we will raise enough to finish paying for it by that date.

Come and enjoy the service and see the splendid building that you have helped to build.

A LETTER

Dear Uncle Charley: Enclosed you will find twenty cents—my dues for May and June. Hope you and the little orphans are well. I trust that you have many strawberries and much fruit. We have very little fruit. With best wishes for you and the orphans.—Ruth Sanford, Stem, N. C.

The strawberries got killed by the frost and we have very little fruit. We will soon have cabbage and Irish potatoes and then we will have plenty to eat.—"Uncle Charley".

"Tell Me a Story"

THE LEGEND OF THE TULIP

Long, long ago the pixies, having no cradles for their children, put them at night into the blown tulips, to be cradled by the winds. A woman happened into her garden with her lantern. She was so delighted when she saw the tiny babes asleep in the flowers that she planted more tulips at once. Soon there were cradles enough for all the fairy folk about, and the woman would steal out into the moonlight to watch the wee creatures folded away in the satin cups and swinging in the perfumed breeze.

The fairies watched her, and seeing that she wished them well, rewarded her goodness by causing the tulips to take on bright colors and smell sweet like the rose. And they blessed the woman and her cottage so that she had happiness and luck as long as she lived.

When this good woman died, a hard money-making man bought the cottage. One of the first things that he did was to destroy the garden as of no use, and plant parsley where the flowers had bloomed. This roused the ire of the little people, and every night when it fell dark they would troop out of the wood and dance on the vegetables and tear and hack at their roots and throw dust into their blossoms, so that nothing thrived on the land for years, and the parsley leaves grew fringed and ragged as you see them now.

But the grave where the woman was buried they kept green and fair. At the head nodded a cluster of beautiful tulips, gorgeous in color and sweet of smell. These blossoms lasted long after all other flowers had faded.

In time other men without eyes for beauty came into the region. The woods disappeared, the grave was beaten flat by passing feet, the flowers were rudely broken, and the fairies withdrew to the hills. From that time the tulips lost size and color, though they are still very beautiful. Indeed the sight of a great tulip garden is worth going far to see. When the snows are gone and earth and sky soften with the rains, we wait impatiently for the bright tulip for, behold, spring has come—Adapted from C. M. Skinner.

CHURCH NEWS

SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS

The Seaside Chautauqua and School of Methods will meet this year July 18-24.

The opening session will be held on Monday night, closing on the following Sunday night.

The program which is being arranged by Dr. W. H. Denison is about completed and will be announced soon in full.

Last year's session was postponed on account of prevailing conditions at that time. With business picking up in every line and with prospects good for big crops there is no reason why this year's session should not be the best. Dr. Denison has been particularly fortunate in securing some of the best speakers and lecturers in the country. In fact, it is doubtful if we have ever had a stronger program than we have this year. Every effort will be made to secure the largest possible attendance of our ministers, for these are the men who most need the rest which a week at the seashore affords. The Executive Committee feels that special effort should be made also to secure the attendance of Sunday school superintendents particularly those of country Sunday schools. The rates for board this year will be $15.00 and in some cases less, depending upon location and number occupying room.

Sunday schools and churches should begin right away to plan for a good representation. Every pastor, especially in Eastern Virginia should attend at the expense of the church or churches he serves. Dr. I. W. Johnson of Suffolk is a special committee to secure the attendance of ministers.

A GREAT DAY AT ANTIOCH

May 8, was a great day at Antioch, Chatham. It was the day of the regular memorial service, and a great many of the members from a distance returned. The gathering was one of the largest that the church has ever known. The building was packed to overflowing and not more than a third were inside. The congregation numbered about eight hundred.

The dinner which was served on the church ground was a bountiful one. There was enough to feed the vast gathering and almost as many more.

The work at Antioch is growing rapidly. Since the organization of a workers' council and the inauguration of a plan to give everyone a part in the work, the Sunday school has doubled.

The latter part of the Sunday school period is being used for fifteen minute programs given by the various classes. The plan is working admirably, and the interest is steadily growing.

HOLY NECK CHURCH

The work at Holy Neck moves on with the usual ease and progress. That does not mean that the work is easy, but pleasant, nor that the progress is all that is desired; there is always something beyond.

The year has been thus far a very successful one. The financial stringency which fell heavily upon our church membership has not yet loosened its grip, but still not one item has been stricken from the budget of the year nor curtailed. All obligations are not met to date, but the finance committee is laying its plans broad and deep to cover the entire budget by the end of the year.

The slump struck our membership just when it had entered upon its enlarged program of full time preaching with double what the church had been paying for preaching before; and in addition to this, the purchase of the half interest of the parsonage owned by the Holland church.

However it is felt there is no room for discouragement, but with a little watchful waiting and the occasional gentle reminder, we hope to present a clean slate by the end of the church year.

The returns from the Men and Millions pledges are not what they should be at this time; yet payments are constantly being made. It is not that the people do not wish to pay this money but the very stress of the times demand a little more time.

The time should never come in a Christian's life when he would cease to have regard for his word or pledge.

Congressman E. E. Holland, Suffolk, Va., delivered the memorial address for us Tuesday, May 10. Holy Neck is justly proud of this son of former days and gladly welcomes him back to his old home church, with his usual inspiring message.

The Sunday school is conducting a contest, the trip to Palestine on steamers: The men are competing with the women on the points of offering, attendance, and being on time. Some have said it is the first contest ever held in the school and at first it moved rather slowly, but each Sunday shows increased interest in the offerings and attendance. Last Sunday the attendance was reported 158 and the offering $10.11. Remember, officers and teachers that the help and the good you will get out of a contest will altogether depend upon how much you put into the contest yourself.

SOLEMN VOWS

TOLLEN-BRINKLEY

Mr. Henry F. Tollen and Miss Annie Mary Brinkley were quietly married at the parsonage of the First Christian church, Richmond, Va., in the presence of a few relatives and invited friends, on May 2, 1921. The service was conducted by the writer, the ring ceremony being used. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Tollen, Norfolk, Va., and the bride is the attractive and accomplished daughter of Mrs. Lizzie Carr Brinkley, Richmond, Va. Both young people are members of the Richmond Christian church. Immediately after the ceremony, they left for Washington and other points. Upon their return, they will make their home in Richmond. We join with their host of friends in wishing them a happy married life.

CALLED HOME

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT—MARTIN

At Lakeview Hospital, Suffolk, Va., Saturday, March 19, 1921, Lottie Martiu's soul took its flight to regions beyond.

Lottie is gone from this world forever, mother, but God knew best and doeth all things well. Trust in Him and He will give you grace sufficient to bear it all.

Therefore be it resolved:

First. That we thank our Heavenly Father for the life of Lottie, although for a short while, and Second. That while we shall miss her at church and Sunday school, mother misses her more at home, we will cherish fond memories of Lottie.

Third. That Antioch church, Sunday school, Missionary Society and her class have lost a willing worker, for she was always ready to work whenever called upon.

Fourth. That we extend our sympathy to her family in their bereavement and commend them to God whose sustaining grace is sufficient to heal all wounds.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. W. K. SAUNDERS,
R. H. BARRETT,

Committee

BUMGARDNER

Frauces Bumgardner was born October 15, 1850, and died April 9, 1921, aged 70 years, 5 months, and 24 days. She was the daughter of the late John and Catherine Louderback, and wife of Francis Bumgardner who departed this life thirty years ago. She is survived by three brothers, one son, four daughters, twenty-four grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, and many friends who mourn her departure. She joined the Newport Christian church at the age of 17, being one of the charter members of the church. She was a loyal member through all these 53 years, attending all religious and business sessions of the church as long as she was able.

Funeral services were conducted at Newport, April 11, 1921. In the absence of her pastor, Rev. R. P. Crumpler, the writer conducted the services.

A. W. ANDES.

DERROW

Emmanuel Derrow was born April 21, 1856, and died April 19, 1921, making his age, therefore, 64 years, 11 months, and 28 days. His widow and eight children survive. For several years prior to his death Bro. Derrow was a great sufferer. On August 5, 1919 it was my happy privilege while paying him a brief visit to receive him into the church, placing his name at Bethlehem. On all subsequent visits to his home I always found him abiding in the faith and trusting in the Lord.

Funeral services were held at Lacey Spring, April 20, 1921.

A. W. ANDES.

KERNODLE

Blanche Ophelia Kernodle, daughter of C. R. and Estelle Kernodle, died May 5, 1921 at the age of 12 years, one month and four days. This bright young life has closed and brought sadness to many friends whose hearty sympathy goes out to her parents and four younger sisters in this time of deep sorrow. Funeral and interment at Bethlehem Christian church conducted by the writer.

EDITORIAL

Readers will note that this page is a new feature of THE SUN and we hope that results will justify its continuance.

The purpose of "The Book Shelf" is to keep before our readers a listing of books in which we feel that they will be interested. And while the featuring of books will be the main issue, church supplies will also be listed and quoted.

In definite terms this is to be the business forum of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, maintained in the interest of the Publishing Agent's office.

We invite attention to this page as it shall appear from time to time. Correspondence is solicited concerning any item offered. All letters answered same day received.

Notes

If you need pledge cards for your church, we can supply you at 30 cents the hundred, either weekly, monthly, or quarterly.

Pastors will find it pleasing to use "Merrill's Marriage Ceremony" as a gift to the bride and groom. The price is $1.00.

"How to Run a Little Sunday School" is our little book for the country Sunday school superintendent. Price 75 cents, postpaid.

Fifty cents sent for a copy of "Christian Americanization" will bring you ten dollars worth of good reading on the subject of missions. Try it and apply it—the book.

A pastor ordered a $45.00 Thomas Communion service outfit the other day direct from the manufacturers. Had he ordered it through the Publishing Agent's office the cost would have been the same, except this office would have paid one-half the express, and the Church would have made $9.00 profit. Send your orders to us.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

If it is a vest pocket Testament you want, send for No. 2113 and remit 75 cents. You will be pleased.

The supply of Government and Principles of the Church has exhausted and we cannot fill orders for same. We have no definite announcement as to the revised edition.

If you desire to read one of the most fascinating little books on the subject of money, send fifty cents for a copy of "Money Mad". It is worth ten dollars—yea, one hundred.

Many inquiries have been received concerning "Iola Facing the Truth" by Dr. J. P. Barrett. The author hopes to issue a new edition soon, or at least the many calls for the book has caused Dr. Barrett to consider it.

Song Books

We have an accumulation of song books—mostly all books of the Sunday school variety. We desire to clear our shelves of these and will take five cents each for them and pay the postage. Let us know how many you want.

Bible Rebinding

The Publishing Agent has made arrangements with one of the largest Bible publishers in the country to have Bibles and Testaments rebound for customers. During the past few months we have received a number of Bibles and Testaments to be rebound and in each case the work has been of a very high grade and each customer pleased. We can also have the owner's name put on it in gold letters. The price of binding and lettering depends upon the size of the Bible or Testament, and the kind of binding wanted, etc. We charge the customer net cost to us, plus fifty cents for handling, if a Bible, or twenty-five cents for handling if it is a Testament.

The Most Vital Need

THE EDITOR

BUREAUS, agents, agencies, institutions, and in fact every mission is today telling the world of the most vital need. Reformation has always been a theme that will ever remain unsettled, for changes are always in order in a moving society. The world would soon be in chaos if some of the suggested plans were carried out. But out of many minds counsel of the right kind will come. And out of the multitude today the voice is being heard that the world needs a baptism of justice, honesty, right living, right thinking, right teaching, a spirit of brotherhood that takes no advantage; one that is open, free, frank, sincere, and trustworthy. Something new is not the world's greatest need, but a reconstruction to truth, love, mercy, and Christian religion. These are the things most needed.

PORT-AU-PRINCE CORRESPONDENCE

UPON reporting at Port-au-Prince, Haiti with the United States Marine Corps, your chaplain was assigned with the Eighth Regiment with additional duty as Brigade Morale Officer. The duties of a Chaplain are much like that of a pastor and almost as hard to define. We do not have so many religious organizations nor so much religious endeavor but the opportunity for personal endeavor is quite the same and sometimes I think very much greater.

The duties of the Morale Officer involves the direction of all recreation such as athletics, libraries and literature, clubs and whatever else might seem advisable for the welfare, contentment and happiness of the personnel. It involves the judicious expenditure of the Navy Department's appropriation for this division of the work, and in a way which provides consistently and adequately entertainment for all. It is intended to supply the men with the needed equipment to keep them contented and happy and so far as possible out of mischief. It involves also the foresight of the needs of another year and in it one must plan requisition for the proper appropriation. This takes so much of one's time that there is but little left for the prosecution of the Chaplain's duties. Although endeavoring to neglect nothing, and though preaching five times each Sunday to about three hundred men, these duties are approached without due preparation and often without any.

The commanding officers have seen the hardship wrought upon one in the combination of Chaplaincy and Morale and at this station have changed this regime. The Chaplain has been relieved of Morale duties and is now allowed to devote his time mainly to the functions of a chaplain. He still retains the duty of Regimental Morale Officer, but the relief of the Brigade work removes a great burden of responsibility and enables him to breathe a sigh of relief in the anticipation of concentrating more on spiritual things. For this we are very thankful and pray that such sowing may in due time bring forth a harvest of Christian thought and character among the men. God will give the increase.

We find a great many of the enlisted men like the little girl's ash man. The story is as follows: A little girl said, "Mama, the ash man must be a mighty good Christian." "Why, daughter?" replied the mother "Because", she said, "Yesterday when he went to Mrs. Smith's for the ashes, as he was lifting the barrel up to pour them into the cart, the bottom fell out and the ashes spilled all over him, and he sat down on the curbing and told God all about it." Many of the men have this way of being very religious. And they engage in such language without the slightest provocation. But we give God thanks for the gift to talk to men in a way not to offend. On the contrary it appears that the atmosphere is clearing and men are influenced to see the folly of profanity and vulgarity and are giving signs of cleaner and more wholesome thought. One by one through personal persuasions and proper appeal men are curtailing their ill habits and some are dropping them absolutely. It is very gratifying to note that to an appreciable extent some are endeavoring to live righteously. Such represent "hand-picked" service and is the true pulse of the man.

The Chaplain's duties will take him to the field for a part of his time. This will be in the camps with the men who are doing guard and patrol duty in the hills of Haiti. The only service that is practicable there is personal; but gratifying service is anticipated. We ask the prayers of the churches in behalf of our work that God may keep him in health, in spirit and in Him, and able to at all times to do the Master's will.

H. E. ROUNTREE.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

WE are living in one of the most wonderful periods of time. The unrest of the present decade most likely surpasses anything known to the human family. Looking in any direction you may, you are most likely to discover a storm cloud rising, or else it is showing its fury upon human society and working destruction as it moves in its might. What is to be the outcome of it all? Only our Father in Heaven knows. There is no prophet among men today who can divulge to the world what is to be the outcome of it all. As Christians we must be patient, and while we are patient, do our best to improve conditions, and then wait the Father's good pleasure in bringing the world to its normal condition, but if its normal condition means it must again be what it was before the war, I doubt that we shall see that again in this life. At this time the world finds it hard to settle down to what it was seven or eight years ago. I have seen the sea raging under a furious storm. It did not look as if it were possible for the sea to come to its rest again, and yet it did—when the storms of passion have gone it may be that we shall gain, under the blessings of God, see a great calm in human society and the world come again to its normal condition. The best we can do now is to follow the Lord's teachings, and praying for the restoration of world peace, await the time of its coming. In awaiting such an end, let us trust in God, and do the right, as best we may know the right.

During the horrors of the late war, we all felt that surely we should have no other war, and for the reason that it looked as if the world itself could not sustain it, and yet now so soon after peace was declared, there is almost constant talk of more war. It is said that a great war storm is brewing between Japan and the United States; and another between Russia and the world, or more correctly speaking, between Bolshevism and all other human governments. Again the papers are talking as if France is about to become the menace of the peace of all Europe. They did say that the recent world war had bled France white, leaving her prostrate under the crushing blows which Germany had piled upon her. While that is all true, the recuperating power of France has been so wonderful that within less than five years after the armistice was signed, France is again on her feet, and defying the world, having, it is said, the finest army in the world at her command. It is even hinted now that Lloyd George is watching France most closely to see that she does not become a menace to England, and so we go. Then again there is the possibility of another world war, differing in many particulars from the last world war. This is not likely to be a war between military and naval powers, but a war in the industrial affairs of the world, a mad battle between capital and labor. This war has been brewing for many years, but now when the world is quite full of unrest, the contending forces seem to be marshalling on the fields of struggle, and who can say what is ahead of us? Let us not forget that God lives and that in due time He will give the kingdoms of this world to Christ. The facts of present day history may be like the rising of a dark cloud, portending great danger to the world, but the fact that God has His hand on the situation and in due time will turn the nations of the earth into a great world kingdom and give it to Christ as the crowning glory of His wonderful life is even now the silver lining on the edge of the dark clouds of human passion and ill will.

And so the world is getting better! God grant that such a day may speedily dawn! If such a day was ever needed, it must be now, for as we see it, the world is not getting better at this time, but worse. We cheerfully grant that there is marvelous improvement in the industrial world, in the educational world, in the financial world, but in the moral and spiritual worlds, as yet, we are unable to see that the world is getting better. If it be so, then will some one tell us what the language used in II Tim. 3:1-7, can possibly mean? We have heard of a crime wave sweeping our country, and that was terrible. Now they tell us of a self-destruction wave which is also sweeping the country by the use of narcotics—poisons. The Norfolk Virginian-Polit only recently told the public that there are 5,000 men and women in the city of Norfolk who are slaves to the use of these poisons, and what is worse, they say that the same is true in all our great cities. Alas! Is the world getting better?

“You can never raise your own reputation by assisting in lowering that of others.”

ELON LETTER

TWO studies have recently been made to ascertain from students themselves why they selected their particular College. The results are very interesting.

The first study was made in 1917 by Secretary B. Warren Brown, of the Council of Church Boards of Education. It covered the entire State of Illinois with its twenty-two colleges and universities. The second study was made in 1920 by President Frederick W. Lewis of the College of Emporia, and covered a group of seventeen Presbyterian Colleges. The results achieved are certainly illuminating, the Presbyterian study is more suggestive, as being elaborate. The studies agreed in six of the questions employed, and the percentages are interesting on these points.

1. The nearness of the College: Illinois study, 23 per cent; Presbyterian study, 20 per cent.
2. Influence of other students: Illinois study 11 per cent; Presbyterian study, 11.7 per cent.
3. Religious life of the Institution: Illinois study, 6.8 per cent; Presbyterian study, 9.3 per cent.
4. Social and athletic life: Illinois study, 5.1 per cent; Presbyterian study, 6 per cent.
5. Influence of a canvasser: Illinois study, 2.5 per cent; Presbyterian study, 2.4 per cent.
6. Opportunities for self-help: Illinois study, 7.3 per cent; Presbyterian study, 6.4 per cent.

These two studies reveal a striking agreement on these points, covering as they do groups of Colleges so dissimilar. They may in the main be taken as indicating the reasons why students select their particular College.

One very important question the Illinois study omitted—the influence of parents. This the Presbyterian study included and it was shown that 15.3 per cent go to the College their parents elect for them. This is a very significant fact. It could be much larger than it is if parents would understand that they ought to exercise more influence than many now attempt in aiding their sons and daughters to select their College. The time has not arrived yet for the abdication of the responsibilities of parenthood. We who are experienced in life owe the lessons of our experience to youth, and how much more so is this obligatory on parents. Oftentimes I meet young people in great perplexity. They have many catalogues of Colleges in their possession. Other influences too serve to divide their judgment. “My parents have left it to me to select my College”, they say. How pathetic! How very pathetic, since this decision is likely to determine the most vital issues of life!

The Presbyterian study reveals also some other very interesting facts. For example, 2.8 per cent of the students of the Presbyterian Colleges are sent there through the influence of pastors; advertisements in newspapers bring in .7 per cent, the co-educational feature attracts 3.5 per cent; the fact that it is a College rather than a university draws 6.7 per cent; certain special courses

Disciples and Their Nearest of Kin

“The Disciples of Christ,” “The Churches of Christ,” and “The Christian Church.”

By George W. Brown in The Christian Evangelist

THE religious census for the year 1916—the latest taken, contains many matters of interest. Especially are we interested in three bodies there enumerated which have had, and still have, intimate connection. These are called, Disciples of Christ, Churches of Christ, Christian Church (American Christian Convention).

In regard to the last named, we are told that the Rev. James O'Kelly, a Methodist minister in Virginia, was opposed very earnestly to the development of the superintendency into an episcopacy. He presented his cause to the general conference and elsewhere, but failed to bring about the changes he desired, and in 1792, with a number of others, withdrew from the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1794 they decided to be known as “Christians” only, taking the Bible as their guide and discipline, and accepting no test of church fellowship other than Christian character.

A little later a similar movement arose among the Baptists of New England. Dr. Abner Jones, of Vermont, became convinced that “sectarian names and human creeds should be abandoned, and that true piety alone, and not the externals of it, should be made the test of Christian fellowship and communion.” On this basis he organized a church in 1800.

Then, in 1803, charges were preferred against two ministers by the Presbyterian Church in Kentucky, for lack of attention to the doctrines of the Church, during the great revival which had begun in that section in 1800. Five ministers, among whom was Barton W. Stone, withdrew and organized the Springfield Presbytery, but afterwards dissolved this body and adopted practically the same position as that held by O'Kelly and Jones. General meetings of this body began to be held in New England as early as 1809, and the first general conference was held in 1819. With some vicissitudes, conventions have been held with regularity since.

In 1809, Thomas Campbell, after two years residence in America, issued his Declaration and Address. The address stood in the way of his being accepted, with his associates, into the Presbyterian Church, so, in the following year they organized “The First Church of the Christian Association of Washington, meeting at Cross Roads and Brush Run.” For a few years the new association was affiliated with the Baptists, but eventually a separate body was formed.

The teaching of this new body spread rapidly to Kentucky, and “in 1832, Barton W. Stone, one of the most prominent of the original leaders of the Christians in that section, united with them, on the condition that the Bible alone should be the basis of union. A large number of the Christians in Kentucky and Ohio followed Mr. Stone in this action, but even in these states the greater part remained with the original body, while the eastern and southern churches were not affected. Out of this movement, however, some confusion of names has arisen, since many of the churches of the Disciples are still known as Christian Churches.”

We are told:

When the question arose as to the name to be adopted (when Stone and his friends united with Campbell and his friends) Mr. Stone favored “Christians”, as being the name given in the beginning by divine authority. Mr. Campbell and his friends preferred the name “Disciples” as less offensive to good people, and quite as scriptural. The result was that no definite action was taken, and both names were used.

But all was not smooth sailing for the new body. In the article on the “Churches of Christ”, we read:

As the churches increased in membership and wealth, there arose what seemed to some to be a desire for popularity and for such “human inventions” as had been deplored in the beginning of the movement. Chief among these “inventions” were, a general organization of the churches into a missionary society with a “money basis” of membership, and the use of instrumental music in the church worship.

After some delay and discussion the missionary society was finally organized in 1849. Some looked on this step as “the beginning of apostasy for New Testament Christianity”. The question of instrumental music in the services became an issue as early as 1859, when a melodeon was placed in the church at Midway, Ky. Other matters in regard to which there was controversy were the introduction of the “modern pastor”, and the adoption of “unscriptural means of raising money”. Opposing parties were formed, known variously as “Conservatives” and “Progressives,” or “Antis” and “Digressives.” In 1906, for the first time, the “Churches of Christ” and the “Disciples of Christ” were reported separately.

In regard to doctrines, no general organization of the “Christian Church” has ventured to set forth a creed or statement of doctrine other than the Bible itself. They do not bar any followers of Christ from membership because of difference in theological belief. The same liberty extends to the ordinances of the church. Baptism is not made a requisite to membership, though it is often urged upon believers as a duty. Immersion is generally practiced, but not insisted on. The churches practice open communion, and labor to promote the spirit of unity among Christians.

The doctrines of the “Disciples of Christ” seem to be more specific. That is, that while the great mass of their beliefs are in general accord with those of other Protestant churches, they hold certain positions which they regard as distinctive. Among such are “to restore the Christianity of Christ and his apostles as found on the pages of the New Testament.” They reject all creeds and confessions, do not deny that others are Christians, or that other churches are Churches of Christ, baptize by immersion, celebrate the Lord's Supper weekly, and regard seats as unscriptural and unapostolic.

The doctrines of the “Churches of Christ” are generally identical with those of the Disciples of Christ. The ministerial office is not emphasized, the term “elder” being preferred, and there are no ministerial associations. In general, the doctrine of nonresistance is advocated. It is said that the opposition to missionary societies does not imply any lack of interest in missionary work, which has been fully developed since the division. They are rapidly establishing new churches in different parts of the United States, and are carrying on missionary work in Japan, India and Africa.

Perhaps a few figures may be of interest in connection with these bodies. The "Christian Church" reports 1,265 churches with 118,737 members, with an increase of membership of 7.8 per cent in the decade preceding. The "Churches of Christ" report 5,570 churches, 317,937 members, and an increase of 99 per cent. Attention is called to the fact, however, that the actual increase has been less than this, as many members of this body were enumerated as "Disciples of Christ" at the last religious census. The "Disciples of Christ" report 8,408 churches 1,226,028 members and an increase of 24.8 per cent in the decade. Allowing for those enumerated as "Disciples" in 1906 but who preferred to be listed with the "Churches of Christ", the gain would be larger.

In the matter of missionary activities, the "Christian Church" reports contributions of $20,000 during the year 1916 for domestic missions and $24,000 for foreign missions. There are five foreign mission stations, 12 missionaries, 1,423 members. Among the "Churches of Christ", no report was made of contributions for missions and benevolences. Apparently it was not very large. The "Disciples of Christ" reported $1,077,000 for domestic missions and benevolences, and $569,000 for foreign missions. This work is carried on in 13 countries, with 278 American missionaries, working in 72 mission stations, having 239 organized churches with 21,285 members.

In the educational field, the "Christian Church" has under its control or affiliated with it, seven institutes and colleges, with a property value of $901,000, and endowment of $714,600, and about 1500 students. The "Churches of Christ" have six Bible or Christian colleges, valued at $200,500, and 1,213 students. They also conduct a normal and business college, a classical institute, an orphan school with property valued at $100,000, and three orphanages. The "Disciples of Christ" have 44 colleges and schools of higher grade, with 8,545 students. The value of the property of these institutions is given at $5,337,000, and the endowment at $4,050,000.

If space permitted, a number of interesting deductions might be made from the above facts and figures. Apparently, the "Christian Church" gave the initial evangelistic impulse to the other two bodies, but seems to have lost the impulse itself. Again, it looks as if this body has not had a sufficiently definite program to present to the religious world to win a great number of adherents. On the other hand, the membership of this body in the New England States is about equal to that of the "Disciples of Christ." By the test of religious activity, it is clear that the more liberal body of "Disciples of Christ" is attempting far more than the more conservative "Churches of Christ". The most intense feeling which a student of the above details has, however, is that the three bodies ought to be one, laboring for the conversion of the world and for the reunion of the church of Jesus Christ. What can be done to bring about such a happy result?

like Domestic Science or Business attract 4.6 per cent; low tuition rates bring 5.4 per cent; fraternities attract 1.4 per cent and their absence draws 1 per cent.

A most important revelation is that of the 2894 students in these seventeen Colleges 443 decided one month before going to school what school they would attend; 242 two months before; 219 three months before; 133 six months before; 211 one year before; 75 two years before; 57 five years before; and 75 more than five years before. The significance of this for us of the Christian Church, South, is that between now and September first, two-thirds of our next year's students will decide for Elon. The three months of the summer are months "white unto the harvest" for us. Elon is the Southern Christian Convention engaged in the work of Christian education. The Christian Church is a spiritual democracy. In a democracy every citizen epitomizes in himself the powers, the hopes, the successes of the cause. The only possibility of democracy's growth and development is the willing devotion and loyalty of each individual citizen.

RED CROSS WORK

(Syndicated press)

Americans held prisoner in Moscow by the Soviet Government are being fed through the efforts of the American Red Cross. The food is being sent in through the various courier services that have been inaugurated between Baltic ports and Moscow by Latvian and Estonian agencies.

Col. Edward W. Ryan, of Scranton, Pa., American Red Cross Commissioner to the Baltic States, has notified National Headquarters here that food has been forwarded to the American captives in Moscow for several months and that it is believed the greater part of it reaches the men and women to whom it is consigned. In certain instances receipts for this food have been received by Col. Ryan apparently bearing the signature of Capt. Emmett Kilpatrick, former American Red Cross relief worker, who is said to be serving a twenty-year prison sentence imposed by the Soviet authorities. From other sources it is learned that Red Cross parcels seem to be reaching the addressees. In addition to food, clothing and other necessities have been forwarded to Moscow by the Red Cross.

SUFFOLK LETTER

THE Church is composed of all regenerate believers who try to follow Jesus Christ in sincerity. There are many branches of this true vine; but they derive their life from the same source. "In Him we live, and move, and have our being." The relation which the believer sustains to the Head of the Church is a spiritual relation, but its outward manifestation is visible to men; for by their fruits ye shall know them." The world reads the life of Christians more than they read the Bible; "ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men" The world is to be won to Christ by personal religion. What we call the Church, say, the "Christian Church" as one branch of the Church universal, is the sum total of the spiritual life of its membership. That sum total of the spiritual life expressed in the sum total of personal conduct determines the world's estimate of the Church. All the members are responsible for their individual life in the Church as units in the sum total of the Church standing among men; "for none of us liveth to himself."

There is, therefore, a double responsibility and a double influence of every Christian; his individual and personal responsibility to the world, and his Church responsibility and influence. To maintain a good report among men for himself he must be circumspect in his language, relations and conduct. His word must have value; his life must be generous; his sympathies must be impartial. His conduct must have the approbation of the good and the respect of evil men. Loose personal lives mar personal reputation and men would not "take knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." Personal religion is a great asset in winning sinners to Jesus Christ. But individual Christianity of itself is powerless in winning the world to Christ. There is an organized influence, a Church force, that is necessary to win public recognition for the gospel. There were individual temperate men long before prohibition got into the Constitution of the United States; but temperate individuals had to combine their views, their habits, their purposes into an organized force to convince the relation of the rightness and value of the law. The fight is still on in the nation. Liquor interests spent millions of money, employ great talent, propagate fallacious arguments, and agitate the public mind, through a depraved appetite hoping to restore a public sentiment that will legalize, in some way their plans to make money. But the temperate forces are just as active, just as alert, and keeping alive this organized temperance force. One strong point in favor of prohibition as a permanent law is that no amendment to the Constitution of the United States has ever been voted out, when it was voted in. It would be as reasonable to suppose that human slavery would come back as that the legalized saloon would come back. It is gone and gone forever.

The Church is the organized religious force that needs the support of every member. It needs every member of the church connected with the Sunday school, in the school, or in the Cradle Roll or Home Department. It needs a systematic contribution from every member. If every member would tithe, and make a weekly contribution to the church, every unfortunate member could receive help when in need, and missions, education, orphanage, hospitals and publications would never suffer for lack of funds. It is as important for members to be faithful, as members, as it is to be faithful as themselves.

C. B. RIDDLE - - - - - Editor

THE BULLETIN

Dr. J. P. Barrett, Holland, Virginia, announces on page 14 his resignation as pastor of the Holland church, effective August 31, 1921.

Delivering our final "copy" to the printers this (Monday) morning at 9:30, we are unable, for the lack of time and space, to give the "commencement news" in this issue. This will be given next week.

Mr. Hermon Eldredge, who delivered the baccalaureate sermon at Elon Sunday, spoke in the Burlington church on Sunday night to a large and attentive audience.

President Harper's theme for his baccalaureate deliverance last Sunday night was "Christ, Our Sufficiency," based on II Corinthians 2:16. The address will appear in next week's issue of THE SUN.

The Board of Education of the North Carolina Methodist Protestant Conference decided in favor of High Point as the site of the proposed college. There were three towns in the race—Greensboro, Burlington, and High Point.

THE SUN extends congratulations to Miss Lucy Eldredge, Erie, Pa., and Miss Marcia Foust, Snow Camp, N. C. Miss Eldredge is valedictorian of the '21 graduating class at Elon and Miss Foust is salutatorian.

Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, who graduated this week, takes up, on June 1, her duties as Field Secretary to the Board of Religious Education of the Convention. Her office will be in Burlington, to which place all mail for her should be sent.

Rev. G. O. Lankford delivered the literary address of the Friendship High School on Saturday, May 21. The school closed a successful year under the direction of Mr. D. H. Dofflemyer. Bro. Dofflemyer is a member of one of our churches in the Virginia Valley Conference a graduate of Elon, and is making good.

Dr. L. E. Smith, pastor third church, Norfolk, Va., announced on May 11 to his congregation a series of sermons on "Five Ways that Lead Home". The schedule is as follows: 1. The Way of Love, May 15, 8 p. m.; 2. The Way of Mercy, May 22, 8 p. m.; 3. The Way of Grace, June 5, 8 p. m.; The Way of Repentence, June 12, 8 p. m.; 5. The Way of Salvation, June 19, 8 p. m.

Dr. Daniel Albright Long celebrated his seventy-seventh birthday, Sunday, May 22, by enjoying the pleasure of making a memorial address at Belmont Methodist Protestant church, Alamance County, North Carolina, and also being the recipient of many congratulations, remembrances, etc. THE SUN adds its congratulations and best wishes to our good brother.

The Children's Day programs are now ready for delivery. If your church or Sunday school is interested in these programs and desire a supply, free of charge, address Miss Bessie Holt, Superintendent Young People's Work, Burlington, N. C., or Miss Lucy M. Eldredge, Field Secretary Board of Religious Education, Burlington, N. C., and prompt attention will be given.

THE EDITOR'S RAMBLINGS

By common consent editors tell of their ramblings among the brethren—and it is good to ramble among the brethren. It is a change from the daily grind of the office and study. True it is that to be a preacher and editor give chance for a seven days' work week instead of six and little time for home life. But if there is joy in work (and there is) more work will bring more joy.

Our rambling last Sunday took us back to Elon College—a place near and dear to us—where we heard for the ninth consecutive time the baccalaureate sermon of the College. This time it was by that prince of good fellows, our friend, Hermon Eldredge, Erie, Pa. Of course he made a great deliverance. "The greatest day in a man's life is when he makes a life's decision", was the speaker's opening sentence, and the whole of the address was on the same reasonable and high plane. He could not otherwise do on the occasion with his daughter, Miss Lucy, a member of the finishing class. And too, she was crowned with the valedictory of her fellow students. But more about the address later.

From the College chapel we took our flight via our Crow-Elkhart route, a never failing line, over the hills of Alamance into Guilford County to that great and capable church, Apple's Chapel. Brother James Franklin Apple, pastor and product of the church, and Rev. A. F. Isley, former pastor, had preceded us in the morning in delivering addresses on the annual memorial occasion. Dinner—and plenty of it—was ready when we arrived. We met old friends, new friends, saw faces that had been seen before, and all of them we hope to see again. Dinner, fellowship, friendship, all fine. We spoke to a large and appreciative audience. It was good to be there.

Back by spreading acres of grain, promising gardens, and flower capped hills, we returned in time for an hour's rest and then to hear Brother Eldredge deliver a great message to the Burlington congregation.

And now this is Monday and we are back behind the desk delving in that real past-time of answering mail writing, and enjoying the calls of the brethren who pass this way during commencement days. We cannot name them all. They come and they are always welcome.

The "printers devil" calls "final copy", the big press surges, the make-up man "tat tooes" on the form with the plane, twists the quoin (pronounced coin) key and here we stop until next week when we shall tell, if nothing prevents, about another rambling.

MEMORIAL DAY PROCLAMATION

Whereas this nation has been conceived in prayer and devotion by men and women who were moved under God to found a nation where principles of right should form the lasting corner-stone; and whereas these principles purchased at the price of great sacrifice have been fostered by a worthy posterity; and whereas the great war has lately laid its costly demands upon our lands, now, therefore, I, Warren G. Harding, President of the United States, do hereby proclaim Monday, the thirtieth day of May, a day already freighted with sacred and stimulated memories, a day of public memorial. I invite my fellow citizens fittingly to pay homage on this day to a noble dead who sleep in home land, beneath the sea, or on foreign fields, so that we who survive might enjoy the blessings of peace and happiness, and to the end that liberty and justice, without which no nation can exist, shall live forever.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done in the District of Columbia this third day of May, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-one, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-fifth.

WARREN G. HARDING.

"If a beautiful vase full of roses were to be in danger of falling, hands would rush to save it almost instinctively. Why should not this inherent desire to preserve the beautiful, the costly, the precious be applicable to the saving of a human soul?"

THE MEANEST MAN ON EARTH

Northwestern Christian Advocate

THE meanest man on earth is one who refuses to acknowledge his own child, whether born in wedlock or out of it. The perfidy of such an act has not been fully registered in the mind of the present-day man. Many of them do not realize that a man cannot sign away the relation of fatherhood regardless of how that fatherhood was accomplished. A child is a man's child, a daughter is a man's daughter, a son is a man's son regardless of whether the law has placed its stamp of legality upon the fact or not, for, whether he recognizes it or not, the child born of his flesh, conceived of his blood, and produced by the functioning of his own physical life, is his child, and though the law may somehow permit him to invalidate that relationship, nature and God holds it as fundamental and indestructible. The most pathetic thing on earth is for such a child to grow to manhood and in later years face his father to say: "You refused to acknowledge me as your son. You are meaner than the beasts of the field, more heartless than the fowls of the air."

The law is beginning to recognize the shame of such an act and fathers who desert their children are being followed as common criminals among their fellow men and treated without mercy before the bar of justice. This should be so and every man who sinks to the level of a deserter should not only be ruthlessly condemned but made to pay by personal loss and pain for the despicable character of his offense. Recently a treaty was made with Great Britain by the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations providing for the extradition from Canada to the United States of men who have deserted their wives and children. The importance of such an undertaking may not be appreciated by the average man but the charitable agencies of the country report that this will succeed in helping to unravel one of the most difficult knots in dealing with our problem of family desertion. Ugly, depraved, vicious, degenerate men, unworthy to be called fathers or even human beings are constantly abandoning their own offspring and taking sanctuary across the border in Canada, where they know they cannot be apprehended and returned to face the responsibility they have so ignominiously sought to repudiate. Let such men be pinioned by the keenest shaft of public condemnation. Let them be pilloried in stocks and chains in the presence of the people until they cry out for mercy for the meanest man, the most despicable man, the most depraved man, the most heartless man, the most godless man, the most debased man, is the one who refuses to acknowledge his own children.

A SMILE—ASSET AND LUBRICANT

The Forum

WHEN it is not a palpable insincerity, a theatrical artificiality, turned on to create a fleeting impression of a geniality that is not there, a smile is an asset of business, a lubricant in social life, the outward index of a welcome mood and a happy mind. It clears the air, relieves a tension, proclaims a cheerful and serene philosophy. Those in business who smile most work best.

The man whose brow is cloud-hung, whose mind is fogbound, whose pessimism sees no rainbows and lives beyond the pale of hope and buoyant expectation, is a poor fellow-workman and unpopular employer. In the strife for higher wages let it be seen and known that men work for more than material rewards. They toil faster and harder for one they like; and the employer who wins devotion and holds his men, can see a joke and is a lover of clean fun, and wears in his face the sign of high good humor.

The man who keeps on smiling—not with the insane and constant grin that never wears off, but with the habitual expression of good nature within—has won victories. He has had his share of trials and temptations. Life has not laid a lighter hand on him than on his neighbor. He enjoyed no special privilege, and fate did not accord him preferential treatment. But

THE INTRODUCTION

Preachers exchange pulpits; physicians consult each other about their patients; the farmer "swaps" work; housewives exchange cooking recipes and culinary experiences. Why not the field of journalism adopt these cooperative methods occasionally? I answer in the affirmative by demonstration this week. This breaks a custom of years standing by not inserting the usual editorial pages. But what is custom but a thing to be broken for the advancement of civilization? That is all. And so I break a custom with such a hope.

I can, therefore, invite a careful reading of this page; and if the plan is acceptable to readers of THE SUN, it may appear again sometime.

C. B. RIDDLE.

the expression of his face shows that he has come through tribulation and not yielded to bitterness. A light that shines there is the reflection of the refiner's fire. If that smile were the sign of a mirthful irreflectiveness, it would not mean so much. The meaning of it is that he who wears the look has toiled and suffered, known the anxieties, been foiled and frustrated, drunk the cup and eaten the bread of sorrow—and still holds his head on high, and the enthusiasm is unquenchable. This attitude of cheerfulness resolutely maintained bespeaks in him who keeps it an essential greatness. The man who smiles has not lost hope, and he still keeps faith with his ideal. You cannot take from him the fortune that he carries in that brave, bright aspect which invigorates as soon as it is seen.

THE BIBLE IN FRAGMENTS
The Continent

A PUBLIC speaker in Chicago recently said that when he came out of his boyhood Sunday school training he was in possession of about 150 excellent Golden Texts for which he would always be grateful, and such a general knowledge of Bible stories that he recognized them at the first hint. But he could not claim any thorough and comprehensive view of the Bible as a whole, nor of its chain of events, nor of its progress of truth. What little he had of such knowledge had come out of parental training at home. Of course, this illustration will more please than displease Sunday school leaders, for they protest universally against the substitution of the school for the family. At the same time, they must realize the lack of order and progress in much Sunday school teaching. Two-thirds of American Sunday schools have thus far refused to adopt any sort of graded lessons, showing that they really do not think of their work as instruction; it is merely inspiration.

This disjointed knowledge of Scripture results in many wild vagaries. Many truths are different in their proper connections than when considered abstractly. When sections of teaching are torn apart and the fragments matched against fragments from another source, many weird results ensue. Readers have occasion to be weary of books and articles sprinkled with multitudes of "references" from all parts of the Scripture, because the references are so commonly to clauses or phrases or hints which are not at all relevant when taken with their context. Excursions through the Bible in search for some pet idea will always be rewarded, because in virtually any field it is easy to glean opposite phrases from so rich a book. The far more serious task is also far more difficult—the continuous and connected study of the great meaning of Bible books and unit passages.

Charles E. McKinley says, "Every method or agency used in Christian work must give an account to God not only for the souls it wins and saves, but also for those whom it alienates and destroys."

"HE CALLED FOR A LIGHT"

Zion's Herald

MAN from infancy to old age is constantly in need of illumination. The eye of the little child in its cradle is caught by the glimmer of the lamp in the room, and all through life it is the light over there that attracts us. There is a certain symbolic lesson in the incident narrated in the Book of Acts, when Paul and Silas were cast into the dungeon at Philippi. At midnight while they sang an earthquake rent the foundations of the prison. Then the keeper of the jail, realizing that under the Roman law his own life was at stake if he permitted prisoners to escape, would have killed himself, had not the calming voice of Paul dissuaded him with the appeal, which ever since has served to express man's duty to himself—"Do thyself no harm!"

Man is always calling for a light. It is not enough that there is a big illuminary in the heavens—a sun to rule by day—for one must have, again and again, in all sorts of situations and difficulties, a handy dip, a hooded lantern, or a pocket searchlight, to throw a little light just where it is temporarily needed.

Men all around us are calling for a light, and many more are unconsciously failing to be all that they should be because no one is guiding them. Around a wide sweep of human experience, scientists, statesmen, politicians of the better sort, educators, and business leaders are calling for the lesser lights. There may be plenty of sun in the heavens, but there is constant call for the shining of the little arc lights of earth that will parcel out illumination in bits to suit pedestrians or night workers. Are our lives radiant with this spiritual phosphorescence? Is our example a little light in a great darkness? Can we find our own way to heaven, and meanwhile throw upon some less favored life the gleam that will guide to God?

MIRACLES

MIRACLES are difficult to many people, but, for myself, I accept them as symbols of things to come.

BECAUSE Christ healed the sick and restored the wounded ear, therefore, we build hospitals and subscribe to the Red Cross.

BECAUSE He fed the multitude, therefore do we organize the supply of food, and in time of special need, submit cheerfully to rations.

THE miracle of tongues gives us the clue to that wonderful development of telegraph and mails and printing which draws together the whole human race. * * *

STATESMEN will realize some day how much of peace and co-operation they owe even in secular matters to the international tie of a common reverence for the noblest things in literature.

GOD AND NATURE

(The Methodist Protestant)

We are so accustomed to speak against the world in which we live that many of us are blind to its beauty and deaf to its music. These are days when nature is awakening from her winter sleep. How beautiful it is. Cities are man-made and their stone and brick and concrete pall upon us. We need to get out in the open spaces, and see what marvels God can work with the violets and the dogwood and the cherry blossoms and the green grass and the green leaves.

OUR ORPHANAGE

HAVE YOU———?

We are wondering today whether or not, when you read this letter, the five thousand will have sent in their dollar each.

It would be so easy to meet the challenge if each subscriber to THE CHRISTIAN SUN would mail us one dollar each and get one other person to do the same.

The earth is made up of little grains of sand. The mighty ocean is made of little drops of water. But all together make something large and worth while.

A dollar is a small amount of money and by itself would not go far toward meeting this challenge, but five thousand of them would be a big pile of dollars and would enable us to meet the challenge.

And then too, if we could get the sympathy of the five thousand with the dollars, what a great blessing would come to us!

My friends, I am in real earnest about this matter. I have asked you to do a very small part in this great undertaking. I have not asked you to give yourself the least worry about the handling of the work. I have not asked you to spend sleepless nights trying to solve the problem of financing the proposition and meet the bills when presented, and it has been quite an undertaking, and we commenced the work on faith, believing the kind Master would answer our prayers in behalf of the little helpless children and that He would open the hearts of our people and show them the way and that they would contribute enough money to complete this work and give the little tots a home. Have you given your dollar to invest in this undertaking? If not, will you not make that investment as soon as you read this letter? You are able. Are you willing?

I often get appeals from a man in the West who is doing a great orphanage work; and when he writes to me asking for a contribution, and knowing his trials and problems as I do, I cannot refuse. I sometimes send him the last dollar I have in my pocket, believing that God will bless the dollar and my heart's sympathy goes with the dollar for I know something of his problems and something of the great work he is doing.

I would be the happiest man in all the Convention if I should receive five thousand letters containing one dollar each. The sympathy of five thousand hearts would mean so much to us in this work.

LETTERS FROM THE CHILDREN

Dear Uncle Charley: I visited one of my cousins last week and had a good time. Enclosed you will find five cents for this month.—Mary Matkins, Altamahaw, N. C.

I know you had a good time visiting your cousin. I guess you got fried chicken.—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: I am six years old but have not gone to school yet. I was sick for four months and was in the hospital seven weeks of the time. I am well now, so I can help the orphans by sending ten cents. I am going to watch the store for grandfather and help grandmother and make my 10 cents that way, instead of spending it for candy. Love and best wishes.—Virginia Johnson, Portsmouth, Va.

I am very glad indeed to have you join the band of cousins. I am glad because your name is Johnson. Yes, I am glad you have got well and out of the hospital.—"Uncle Charley".

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

VANCE-WARREN DISTRICT RALLY

The district missionary rally for the churches of Vance and Warren Counties was held with Liberty church, April 30, 1921, with Mrs. R. L. Williamson, district leader, presiding. Miss Pattie Coghill was elected secretary. Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. B. F. Black.

The following churches were represented: Fuller Chapel, with 19 present; Liberty, 25; Mt. Auburn, 6; Henderson, 4.

Reports from the various societies follow: Fuller's Chapel Young People's Society—Membership 33; due sent in, $10.00; Chinese Relief, $7.40; From pageant $10.00. Report was submitted by Miss Pattie Coghill, President. Mrs. W. O. Cunningham reported for Woman's Society of Henderson—Membership, 29; amount sent in last year, $67.70. Mrs. E. T. Vickers, Superintendent of Cradle Roll reported a membership of 27. Liberty reported the following Societies: Woman's with Miss Zola Winn, President, 25 members; Young People's with Mr. W. J. Bowen, President, 45 members; money sent in $42.00; Willing Workers did not make a detailed report. They support an orphan child; Cradle Roll department has 39 members. For Mt. Auburn, Mrs. J. A. Kimball reported a Woman's Society with 25 members; Mission Study Class 12; 12 subscriptions to Christian Missionary; has raised $46.00 this year. Willing Workers has a membership of 25; has raised this year $13.30. Number on Cradle Roll, 10.

Dr. Atkinson stated that the objects of the missionary rallies are first, that the Societies may receive inspiration, and second, to plan to create interest in missions where there are no Societies. Mrs. S. F. Coghill agreed to try to organize a Woman's Society and a Willing Workers Society at Fuller's Chapel. Mr. W. J. Bowen, and others, were asked to visit with Miss Bessie Holt, Mt. Auburn and Henderson churches to present the matter of organizing other Societies. They are to go to Mt. Auburn the fourth Sunday morning, and to Henderson in the evening.

Dr. Atkinson gave an address brimming with inspiration and incentive to missionary effort.

The afternoon session opened with scripture lesson and prayer by Rev. R. L. Williamson. A paper on "The Goals of our Missionary Societies for This Year", prepared by Mrs. W. A. Harper, was read by Mrs. Williamson.

In a most interesting and tender message using as her subject: "Carest Thou Not That They Perish?", Miss Bessie Holt described the work being done in the mountain mission by Miss Iola Hedgepeth, showing the responsiveness of the people to the gospel message, which very few had ever heard before Miss Hedgepeth came into their midst.

Officers for the year were elected as follows: President, Mrs. R. L. Williamson; Secretary, Miss Pattie Coghill; Treasurer, Mrs. W. H. Ayseue.

This report would be far from complete without mentioning the unstinted hospitality and kindness, including a most abundant and well-prepared dinner, shown by the Liberty people. In fact, so well pleased were all present with the "treatment" received that a unanimous vote favored the acceptance of the invitation extended in behalf of the church by Brother E. M. Newman, to hold next year's session with it again.

MISS PATTIE COGHILL, Secretary

ALAMANCE DISTRICT RALLY

Record of Alamance District Christian Missionary Rally held at Burlington church May 3, 1921—Miss Bessie Holt, presiding. The Rally opened 10 a. m. with song—"From Greenland's Icy Mountain". Devotional service in charge of Mrs. J. O. Atkinson—Scripture lesson, part of the first chapter of Acts. Prayer by Dr. L. E. Smith. Appropriate words of greeting were spoken by the pastor, Rev. G. O. Lankford and by Mrs. W. H. Carroll.

Roll of churches comprising the district was called and showed an attendance of 90 per cent. The various churches reported the number of Societies they had.

Under "Plan for Organization" Dr. J. O. Atkinson stated that the main purpose of these rallies is to inspire and stimulate present organizations and to create an interest which will lead to the affecting of new organizations. Dr. Atkinson's presentation of this matter and its discussion resulted—volunteers to go out and try to organize—Berea—Misses Susie and Marie Riddick and Mrs. Perkins. Bethel—Mrs. C. B. Riddle and others. Bethlehem—Mrs. J. D. Kernodle and others. Concord—Mrs. C. B. Riddle. Haw River and Hopedale—Miss Bessie Holt. Long's Chapel—Mrs. C. B. Riddle and Mrs. S. A. Horne. Shallow Ford—Mesdames N. G. Newman, W. P. Lawrence, and J. J. Lincoln. Pleasant Hill—Mrs. Marvin McPherson. Union—Mrs. Graham Miss Susie Riddick and Misses Mamie and Sadie Forville.

At the completion of this item Dr. J. O. Atkinson gave a soul-stirring address based on two pictures drawn, one from the Gethsemane scene of agony and darkness when our Savior prayed—"O, my Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from me, yet not my will but thine be done"; the other from the mountain-top scene of victory and triumph and joy when He proclaimed—"All power is given unto me in heaven and earth. Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

Afternoon Session

The Rally was called to order at 2:00 o'clock by Miss Bessie Holt and opened with song—"Ye Christian Herald's". Scripture lesson by Mrs. Walter Harden. Prayer by Mrs. J. D. Kernodle. Address—"Our Young People" by Miss Holt, followed by an offering which amounted to $15.81. Miss Holt gave a graphic description of Kingdom possibilities wrapped up in our mountain fastnesses.

An interesting Round Table discussion was led by Mrs. N. G. Newman, also a model Willing Workers meeting was held by the Burlington Willing Workers Society.

Mrs. Harper's "Discussion of Goals" held the attention of all present. Her paper contained practical suggestions and some timely information.

Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Treasurer of the Southern Christian Convention Woman's Board made a statement urging promptness on the part of each Society in keeping its financial quota well up to date. It was moved and carried unanimously that these Rallies be made annual affairs. For the coming year, Miss Bessie Holt was elected leader, Miss Susie Riddick, secretary, and Mrs. W. H. Holt, treasurer.

The body assembled extended rising vote of thanks to the musicians—Mrs. Coble and Miss Malone, particularly the former, for the special music interspersed throughout the day's program. Visiting members voted unanimous thanks and gratitude to the Burlington Society for its choice reception and splendid entertainment. Burlington Society expressed appreciation of the splendid attendance and the co-operation of all who came, in making the day a good success.

The Graham church invited the Rally to meet with it next year, which invitation was accepted. "Last words" participated in by quite a number reflected a good day well spent, giving promise of large returns to the Kingdom's growth and power in our midst. A chain of prayers concluded the program after which motion to adjourn to the next time and place of meeting was carried.

MRS. J. J. LINCOLN, Secretary

MISSIONARY RALLY—HALIFAX DISTRICT

The Missionary Rally of the Woman's Societies of Halifax District Christian churches met at Pleasant Grove, News Ferry, Va., May 15, 1921. The meeting was called to order by Mrs. W. H. Carroll, Chairman of Woman's Board of North Carolina Conference and the following program rendered:

Song—"Stand up, Stand up for Jesus"; Devotional Service—Mrs. R. D. Thompson of Pleasant Grove; Prayer—Dr. J. O. Atkinson; Roll call of churches and reports from Societies. There were delegates from the following churches: Ingram, Hebron, and Liberty. Danville, Lebanon and Union were not represented. The three churches represented reported a Woman's Missionary Society. Mrs. Clark of Hebron, Miss Bray of Liberty and Miss Mary Kent of Ingram volunteered to try to organize a Young People's Society in their respective churches. Pleasant Grove church made the following report: A Woman's Missionary Society of twenty-five members, a Young People's Society and a Cradle Roll. The Missionary Society has collected $55.45 on their apportionment for Home and Foreign Missions, $10.00 for the Harcastle Fund, and sent one box of clothing to the mountain field.

After the reports there was a duet "Go Home and Tell" by Misses Lizzie Boyd and Mabel Farmer; Address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson; Dismissed by Mrs. N. J. Pierce.

There was a bountiful luncheon, which was enjoyed by all present.

Afternoon Session—Devotional Service—Mrs. Chas. Dunn, of Ingram; Song—"I Love to Tell the Story"; Prayer—Dr. Kent of Ingram; Round Table discussion led by Miss Nannie Baker Farmer of Greensboro, N. C.; Mrs. W. A. Harper's paper on "Discussion of Goals" was read by Mrs. W. H. Carroll; Solo—"If Jesus Goes With Me" by Miss Mabel Farmer; Address—"Carest Thou Not That They Perish?" by Miss Bessie Holt.

An offering of $15.70 was taken for our mountain work.

The Rally Day was such a success that a motion was made and unanimously carried to make it a permanent institution. Mrs. N. J. Pierce of Pleasant Grove was elected Superintendent and Mrs. Clark of Hebron, Secretary of the Halifax District. All those present expressed themselves as having spent a pleasant and profitable day.

Dear Uncle Charley: Will you let another little girl join your happy band? I hope you are all well. I have some little chickens, but they are not thoroughbred. I also have a basket ball. We have many strawberries this year. I wish the boys and girls were here to help me enjoy them. My school has closed and I am glad to have a long vacation, yet I dread leaving my schoolmates. I was promoted to the seventh grade. I am twelve years old. Enclosed find ten cents for this month.—Ethel B. Smith.

Now, Ethel, it seems you have all the good things—strawberries and chickens. You are living like a king. I think Uncle Charley will have to visit you.—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: We are sending you 25 cents for the little orphans. Mamma has told us about the orphans. She was left an orphan when she was small. She can sympathize with them. We are going to try to send our dues every month. Love to you and the cousins.—Caswell and Leroy Dozier, Hickory, Va.

We are certainly glad to have you write. Let us hear from you each month.—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: As I am a seventy-six-year-old orphan, but not a member of your Church, I want to be one of the 5,000 to give one dollar so I enclose that amount. I wish I could do much more. I have reared two boys and a girl. With best wishes.—L. H.

What ought us young folks think of ourselves if one 76 years old can spare one dollar and we don't?—"Uncle Charley".

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

TWO DIVERGENT VIEWPOINTS

The final day—May 12—did not come in accordance with the expectations of many of the people of France, for Germany agreed to make reparations to the set amount of 32 billion dollars during the next forty-two years. Unified efforts on the part of the Allies together with the late note of our Secretary of State, Charles E. Hughes, were no doubt the main means of bringing Germany to terms of agreement, and of disconcerting the expected occupation of the Ruhr Basin by the French.

For the last few days, however, another problem has set in, which apparently marks a still wider divergence of attitude and opinion between the French and the rest of the Allies in the settlement of the terms of the Treaty of Versailles. It seems that the Briand Government was not at all pleased over the majority vote of the Upper Silesian plebiscite going in favor of Germany. The French Premier and his followers strenuously object to having this little parcel of land between Poland and Germany remain with the latter country, in spite of the fact that the Allies agreed to let the people decide to which country they desired to belong.

On the other hand, Lloyd George as spokesman of the English Government has declined to narrow his opinions to that of an overbearing victor; he rather declares that his course shall be in accordance with the Treaty; that if the people of Upper Silesia voted to remain with Germany nothing will obstruct their wishes even though their allegiance is with the conquered country. He appeals for "fair play".

But an additional complication has begun—the invasion of Upper Silesia by the insurgent leader, Adalbert Korfanty, who desires to extend the Polish border regardless of law set by the Allies and Polish Governments. He is nothing more than another D'Annunzio, and he would carry out his purpose regardless of consequence. France agreed with the Allies over the Fiume question, but she is inclined to sympathize with Korfanty in his invasion of Upper Silesia, and has gone so far as to partly justify his claim.

Against this position taken by the present Government of France, Lloyd George speaks in decided terms. He says that he is dogmatically opposed to France's sympathy with the leader of the insurrection, and that he is determined to oppose it to the end in order to give Germany justice.

Of course, one can hardly expect a severe break between the two countries. Neither can afford to resort to arms under present conditions so long as confidence exists. Some predict that the present French Cabinet headed by Briand will fall. Certainly it has showed a spirit of revenge and chauvenism quite unlike that of the Anglo-Saxon elements of the Allied nations. The Germans are human after all and if the world is to be advanced by the war they must have moral and material support to carry them over the crisis. They would lose 40 per cent of their total coal resources if they failed to get Upper Silesia, which would add a considerable draw-back to the payment of the indemnity.

MOTION PICTURE CENSORSHIP

There is a nation-wide movement for motion-picture censorship, according to a compilation of current opinion. In more than three-fourths of the State capitals of the country, advocates for such a censorship as well as advocates against censorship gather to express their opinions and have weight upon legislative bodies. Strong arguments are placed on both sides. The motion picture producers (quite naturally) are opposed to censorship, and their sympathizers say that it would be "ineffective," "un-American," "undemocratic", and a step in the direction of the rigid "blue laws". They say that such censorship will be "fatal to the artistic development of motion pictures", and "unnecessary" at the present time in view of the pledge of the producers that they will purify the screen themselves.

Advocates for censorship, on the other hand discredit the producer's argument "with all due respect to their intentions" emphasizing that "previous pledges of reform have accomplished very little".

The case for censorship is stated briefly and clearly by Mr. Clinton Rogers Woodruff in the National Municipal Review:

"Censorship of moving pictures is based on the fundamental duty of the community to protect the moral well-being of every one within its jurisdiction. The motion-picture has a breadth, directiveness, and effectiveness of human appeal that puts it in a class by itself. Its power for good and evil is greater than the printed page—hence the necessity for a control over it more rigorous than is needed in case of the book.

"To subject the general community (and every man and his family to go to the movies) to the suggestiveness and indelicacies of the average motion-picture is equivalent to subjecting them to the infection of a plague. . . . We have a State Board of Health to protect our community from physical pestilence. Let us have State boards of moving picture censors to protect us from the moral pestilence which lurks in the attractive, seductive motion-pictures."

FRANKLIN K. LANE DEAD

Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of President Wilson, died suddenly in Rochester, Minn., May 18, 1921, following an attack of heart disease. Secretary Lane was born in Canada but in childhood moved to California and was educated in the University of California. He engaged in newspaper work early in life and was reporter and later New York correspondent for western newspapers. Honorary degrees were conferred upon him by many institutions, and he was considered a man of distinguished ability.

CHURCH NEWS

HOLLAND, VIRGINIA

The work of the Holland Christian church is moving along encouragingly, and yet it has made no great strides since I came here October 1, 1920. The Sunday school under the superintendence of Bro. I. A. Luke, has been moving to the front in a most encouraging way and the outlook is certainly hopeful. The beginners class was not doing so well a few months ago, but it was due to the lack of a regular teacher. At length Mrs. I. A. Luke consented to undertake the work of teaching it. Since then the progress of the class has been marked indeed. She put in a blackboard and a sand table and other equipment, and the growth of the class has been marked and the outlook is gratifying. The other classes generally are at least holding their own very well. Bro. E. J. Norfleet is the Secretary of the school, and one of the best of our acquaintances. His records and the business of the school are kept in fine condition.

The Willing Workers (the children's missionary society) under the superintendence of Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Mrs. B. W. Council and Mrs. J. P. Dalton are doing a good work. Not only are they teaching them missionary truth, but teaching them how to do Christian work. Miss Sarah Norfleet Daughtrey is their president and she does her work well—she presides with the dignity and ease of an adult.

Our Ladies Aid Society is to have a general rally Sunday night, May 22, when Dr. L. E. Smith of Norfolk, Va. will address them on The Value of the Ladies Aid Society to the Church. We are expecting a large attendance and good fruits from the address and the labors of our ladies.

Our Christian Endeavor Society is doing fine work for the Church and the young people. Quite a while ago the society ceased to function, but last fall it was reorganized, with Bro. J. P. Dalton as President and since then it has been doing some fine work. Now and then the interest runs so high that we forget to close right on time, but so far, I have heard no complaints as holding too late. I can truthfully say, so far as I am capable of judging, it is the best Endeavor society I have ever had under my pastoral care. One item in its work is very pleasing to us all—that is the fact that Bro. and Sister Jay who were our predecessors here and living in the town as they do are often with us (when their work does not require their absence) and they take an active part with us, always adding to the interest of the meeting.

The church has recently elected four new deacons to serve it. They are: Bros. J. P. Dalton, Julius Rawles, H. E. Hedgepeth and A. T. Duke. We are expecting to have an ordination service, for the setting apart these brethren to their work, on the third Sunday in June, when we hope to have with us some visiting ministers from nearby places to assist us in the ordination.

Notwithstanding all of these good things in the work here, I must announce one thing not so desirable, and that is the resignation of the pastor of the Holland church. It is due directly to the fact the church has not been able to provide a home for the pastor. The resignation goes into effect August 31, 1921. Our contract with the church included a home for the pastor and his family, but there was not a house suitable for that purpose in town for rent, and there was nothing to do but to board. When the church engaged me it was believed that a house could be secured, but this proved to be a mistake. They had planned anyway to build a parsonage early in this spring, but the financial depression came on and when the spring came they felt they could not undertake it. That of course destroyed my last hope of a home to live in while here, for up to the day of my resignation not a place in the town could be secured for me, and I felt that the health of both myself and wife made it necessary to keep house. It is because of these things that I have felt constrained to tender my resignation and seek some place where I may have a home in which to live.

The Holland church has been the most prompt in the payment of my salary of any church I have ever served. Bro J. P. Dalton is the very efficient treasurer and keeps the collections well up and in hand, not merely for the pastor's salary, but for all the incidental expenses of the church.

I wish for this church the good fortune to get a pastor to succeed me who can do for the church much more than I have been able to do. The field is one of large usefulness for the man who can cope with the situation.

J. PRESSLEY BARRETT.

REIDSVILLE, N. C.

Evangelistic services began with the Reidsville Christian church on Sunday, April 24, and came to a victorious close on Sunday, May 8. The services were conducted by evangelist Victor Lightbourne and Sam Davis, the blind pianist. The interest in the meeting and the attendance grew from night to night. The congregations were large at every service. On the last night of the meeting, the church would not begin to accommodate the crowd. Our church will seat 500 easily, with the use of chairs it will seat 800 or 1000 people. The congregation on the last night of the services was estimated to be 1000 or 1200. All the standing room was taken and there were possibly three or four hundred people turned away. The Methodist and Baptist churches called off their services on Sunday nights to attend our services, and we had a great time together. Lightbourne and Davis were the talk of the town, and a good many people of other churches have expressed their desire of having these brethren to come back to Reidsville this fall and hold a union meeting. One man of another church said to me, that the people of Reidsville did not begin to realize what they had here until the time came for these men to leave. To say the least Lightbourne and Davis are great. If any church or group of churches will give them a chance, the results I am sure will be most gratifying.

It is rather hard to determine the exact number of decisions and reconsecrations in our meeting, but I am sure I would be safe in saying there were thirty professions, seventeen additions to the Christian church, nine gave their names to join the Baptist church, five to unite with the M. E. church and one to the Presbyterian church. There were possibly one hundred and fifty reconsecrations.

The offering amounted to about $380.00. The expense of the meeting was a little more than one hundred dollars. Brother Lightbourne was given a check for $272.00.

I would suggest that some arrangements be made to secure Bro. Lightbourne a large tent, a singer, and organization, a man to go ahead to set out the work for successful revival campaigns. I believe that if he had these additions that he could have wonderful results.

SOLEMN VOWS

WILKINS-SOMERS

Mr. James Edwin Wilkins and Miss Purnie Beatrice Somers were married at the residence of the writer, Church Street, Burlington, N. C., May 18, 1921. The writer officiated. A few friends witnessed the rite.

That much happiness may attend their wedded pathway is the sincere wish of their many friends.

P. H. FLEMING.

ROSE-BARRETT

A pretty marriage took place Monday afternoon, May 9, 1921, at the home of the officiating minister, Suffolk, Va., when Miss Alta Virginia Barrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenny Barrett of Windsor, Va., became the bride of Mr. Frank L. Rose, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Rose, of Windsor. Just before the ceremony the solo "At Dawning" was sung by Mrs. E. T. Cotten, who also played very softly "L'Angelus" during the reading of the ceremony by the writer, in the presence of several relatives and friends.

The bride, who was unattended wore a suit of dark blue tricotine and picture hat. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of American Beauties. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Rose left on the N. & W. for an extended bridal trip. They will reside in Norfolk, Va., where the groom is employed in the U. S. Navy.

CALLED HOME

LEAVISTER

George Davis Leavister was born November 10, 1844 and departed this life May 6, 1921. He leaves to mourn their loss, one brother, L. D. Leavister, and one sister, Mrs. C. Ida Pearry, and a host of friends.

Brother Leavister was a good man—true to his church, to his pastor and his Church paper. Pope's Chapel church will miss him. He was ready to depart and prayed to die, that he might be freed from his suffering.

Funeral services were held at the home of his sister, being conducted by his pastor, and the remains were laid to rest in the old family cemetery near Pope's Chapel. Many flowers were placed upon the grave, thus showing the high esteem in which he was held.

B. F. BLACK.

JOYNER

Mrs. Martha J. Joyner, a precious, good Christian mother, widow of the late William P. Joyner departed this life, for the better life, beyond the clouds, at her home near Zuni, Va., on April 26, 1921, aged 73 years, 7 months and 4 days. She was a true and faithful member of Antioch Christian church and will be missed in her home, community and church. She leaves three sons and one daughter, Mr. Charlie E. Joyner, or Ivor, Va.; Mr. F. L. and Mr. G. W. Joyner of Zuni, Va., and Mrs. W. R. Turner of Zuni, Va., 12 grandchildren, one sister, Mrs. Josiah Joyner of Suffolk, Va., one half brother, Mr. H. T. Taylor of Suffolk, Va., and many friends. Her funeral services were conducted by her pastor at her church and her remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery beside those of her husband.

The Lord bless and comfort the dear bereaved ones with hope of meeting mother by and by in Heaven.

H. H. BUTLER.

SMITH

Miss Mary Alice Smith died at her home, Elon College, N. C., May 8, 1921, aged 22 years. The funeral services were conducted by the writer at the home and the remains buried in the cemetery at Hebron M. E. Church, South, in Caswell County. Miss Smith was the oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, and beside them she leaves four brothers and four sisters. She had been a member of the church mentioned above since childhood and was a faithful and consistent Christian. She suffered long and severely, but bore it all with calm and patient resignation. We extend our sincerest sympathy to the parents and other loved ones. May our kind Heavenly Father be their strength and comfort.

NO PROFITEERING IN BIBLES

Making Bibles costs two and one-half times as much as it did before the war. Books that cost $155,000 to print in 1915 cost $468,000 in 1920, according to the report of the Board of Managers of the American Bible Society, presented at the annual meeting on May 12. But in order to keep the Bible within the reach of even the poorest person the prices of Bibles were not increased to cover the advance in cost. A loss of over $35,000 was voluntarily sustained by the Society, which is a non-commercial organization whose sole purpose is the circulation of the Scriptures without note or comment.

In 1920 the Society issued nearly 4,000,000 copies of the Scriptures. Yet some of its agencies had empty shelves much of the time because sufficient books could not be furnished them. The demand for Bibles is greater than ever before, in spite of the increase in cost.

The annual report of the Board of Managers shows that the total issues of Scriptures by the American Bible Society since its organization has been 140 million—enough to furnish one to every man in a procession that would take sixteen years to pass a given point at a rate of one a second, marching eight hours a day and six days a week.

A Knowledge of God

THE EDITOR

DO wonder there are so many who doubt there is a God. They cannot interpret God because they have not opened their minds, their hearts—the whole of their life, to receive, to feel, to see and to enjoy the greatness and the goodness of God's handiwork. A stream to them is nothing but water. They do not see in it the perpetuity of life, the power to refresh and its part for the growth of grain to feed a hungry world. They see in the rose only that which is material, and not its beauty, its symbol of character, its delicate formation, its unfolding, fading by the touch of sunshine and water, and dying that next year another rose may live. They do not see a great oak in an acorn, that oak spreading its branches for the pleasure of mankind, and the joy of beasts and birds. It is surface thinking that rules out God. "The heavens declare the glory of God: and the firmament showeth its handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge."

CHRIST, OUR SUFFICIENCY

II Cor. 2:16—Who is sufficient for these things?

NOTHING is truer than that action is always followed by reaction. This axiom was long ago taught by the Nazarene in His Sermon on the Mount, when He said, "With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again." Isaac Newton centuries later saw the same law operating in the physical world. He stated it differently, but the meaning is the same. "Action is equal to reaction" is physics for Christ's religious principle. We must not be surprised then and we must not lose heart if now find a decided reaction from the high idealism of the years 1917-1918. In those fateful days we were ready to lay all we had on the altar of humanity. Altruism and sacrifice through service were the engrossing impulses of the individual and the natural life. There had to be reaction from those high conceptions, come so suddenly to men, and in the trough of the slump we find ourselves struggling today. How shall we emerge?

But first let us look at the problems that this reaction has brought us. Internationally we are in a very awkward situation. We helped defeat the ambitions of the Kaiser and dictated the terms of the peace, yet we are not party to the compact and are technically at war with the German Republic. We have been gloriously inconsistent in our professions of friendship and desire for cooperation with other nations and in our practice in refusing to ratify the treaty of Versailles. From lofty sentiments of international brotherhood and good-will we have descended to a conception of "America for Americans" that would do justice to a nation that considered itself the chosen people of God. From willingness to help the world in its heart-hunger for cooperation we have asserted our purpose to be to make the most of our natural advantages and resources of culture and spirit, without allying ourselves with other nations in the common effort to improve the universal interests of all men. Other nations, with the exception of Mexico, Turkey, Germany, and ourselves, regard the League of Nations as a very feasible means of ending war. We fear our sovereignty will be curtailed to enter the League of Nations and so become the disturber of the peace of the world, we the nation that has loved peace and for the most part consistently pursued it throughout all our history. We want our Monroe Doctrine for the Western continents, but object to the same doctrine for the world as a whole. The impartial historian of the future will pause long and bewildered at the situation of America internationally at this critical time in world history.

Industrially too, America's plight is most unenviable. Many captains of industry have their whole thought fastened on profits. They regard labor as hostile essentially and inevitably to capital. The principle of the closed shop they strenuously oppose on the ground that it violates a fundamental right of the constitution, the freedom of contract, forgetting there can be no freedom of contract where the contracting parties are unequal. Many industrial barons will not even confer with the representatives of labor on any issue. Laboring men on the other hand are determined to organize, to force the closed shop, and to raise their wages to the highest point possible. Both sides realize the tension of the times and both sides, except in some outshining instances, are prepared for the trial that shall test their relative strength. Selfishness reigns in both camps, and confidence to win is professed. It is a grim, uncanny situation.

The race question too, is far from settled. The best men of both races are tolerant and appreciative of each other, but the rank and file are suspicious and distrustful. At any moment some radical may appear who will inflame the passion of the masses and a deadly conflict be precipitated. The black feels that his service in the war justifies his claim to equal opportunity as a man to achieve a career. The white man is determined to hold the darker race in due bounds. We have not seen the end of lynching and race riots yet, we fear.

Education, too is in a sorry plight. Ever since the days of Horace Mann we have been seriously engaged in constructing our public school system for universal education. Yet the number of illiterates is greater in America today than ever before. The selective draft revealed us to ourselves not only in the realm of social sin, but educationally too. We must pay our teachers better and make it possible for even the poorest child to have educational opportunities. Merely passing a compulsory attendance law will not be ample. Illiteracy and universal suffrage will destroy democracy. An intelligent electorate is fundamental to the perpetuity of civil and political liberty.

And then there is the allied problem of religious education. Lincoln said this nation could not endure, one part free and another enslaved. We are beginning to realize that it cannot continue free, one part Christian and another pagan. Spiritual illiteracy it has been said is the forerunner of moral bankruptcy and national decay. It is useless to enlighten men's minds, while their hearts and consciences remain benighted. We know now that every claim that has been made for Christian education has been justified and vindicated too sadly in the catastrophic breakdown of the German national character. The disaster of democratic government from a loss of moral stamina will be even more certain than in an autocratic country such as Germany was. We must construct a system of religious education paralleling the public school system in order to save our nation from spiritual and moral decay. There is no problem more pressing today than this and none with more ominous consequences to the woe or welfare of the nation.

The spirit of sectarianism during the war period for the most part subsided. Only here and there did bigotry obtrude itself in those direful days, but it was smouldering underneath the surface of things, ready on the first occasion to burst forth into flame. We have now a situation in our country the most unique in Christian history—a longing desire for a broader and fuller fellowship with determination to strengthen the denominational lines at the same time. The stupendous sums of money that were raised and are being raised in the various "forward movement" drives of the respective denominations have brought a new sense of power and a new sense likewise of denominational self-consciousness. Great wisdom and unbounded love will be needful if these very denominational achievements are not to prove a backset to the growing sentiment for Christian union. Is the collapse of the Inter-Church World Movement to be partly attributed to denominational aloofness and jealousy? There is no doubt here is found a problem whose solution calls for the wisest statesmanship.

The evident decline in vital interest in religion is likewise cause for alarm. The theological seminaries are sadly depleted in attendance. The year 1919 witnessed a net loss in Protestant Church members of more than one hundred thousand. While the gain during 1920 was more than six hundred thousand, there was still a loss in number of Churches and in ministers, and attendance on worship is at a low ebb. Sad is the spiritual plight of any people when Church membership increases and Church attendance declines. We must find the way to make the Church the chief concern of men. Note I say we must find it, for no nation has yet been able to survive the permanent loss of vital concern for religion.

Many other foreboding signs threaten to mar the horizon of our day. There is not time to catalogue them now. Let us mention one other—the crisis in the missionary work of the Church. We must immediately find more than three thousand new workers and within five years ten thousand will be needed. The peoples of the non-Christian lands are becoming imbued with our Western civilization but they will need the ideals of the Christian life to sustain them in making it a force for good rather than of destruction of the character they have already achieved. In order to win them to the Christian faith we shall need to examine carefully influence of denominationalism in mission fields and revise in many instances our whole method of approach to their evangelization. The world is not won to Jesus yet. The task, rather the opportunity, is gigantic but far from hopeless. It challenges us now as never before to find the essential heart of the Christian program and to present it so that its acceptance will be ready and inevitable. It is especially imperative immediately to win Japan and China, for as these nations go, eventually the world will go.

How shall we emerge from a situation such as this?

We must have leaders, clear-visioned, perceptive, sympathetic, brave to undertake the measures needful for redeeming the times. Eyes to see, ears to hear, hearts to understand, wills to go forward—these are the equipment of the leaders who shall bring us safely through the baffling emergency that now threatens to engulf civilization. Foursquare and unafraid must they be.

The times, we said, call for men of vision, men of insight and discernment, who will be able to penetrate with unerring accuracy the darkness and confusion of the problems that challenge us on every hand. And what will they see? Will they see the world about to return to sordid nationalism? Industry armed for civil war? Races unable to be reconciled except with each other's blood? Education on that universal scale unconditionally necessary to democracy a fatuous dream as yet? The religious nurture of the people a haunting mirage? The spirit of sectarianism triumphing over the spirit of brotherhood and love? The evangelization of the world an ill-conceived and impossible crusade of impractical fanatics? Not so. These leaders of vision, these men of insight, of discernment will examine dispassionately these tumultuous issues and will look through the surging turmoil they have occasioned to the underlying cause. Their keen eyes will penetrate the veil that surrounds these problems and focus their discernment upon the central reason for what we see on the surface. And then they will look back to the origin of these things, and they will understand that two antiphonal systems are in deadly conflict now, the one the system that maintains that privileged classes should lord it over the unprivileged, the other the system that exalts every man into sovereign relation to his own spirit. Seeing the origin, perceiving the issues at stake, these leaders can shape the plan of campaign that will bring victory to the right.

But they will need ears too, these men will. There are voices today never heard before crying in the night, crying for recognition, demanding to be heard. These leaders will hear them. There are the voices of fatherless babes in Belgium and France and Germany, crying without comfort and with no voice but a cry, the import of whose pitiless wailing is to make forever impossible of recurrence that horrible, dastardly thing which bereft them of parental guidance and care. Reinforcing that cry is the pleading heart of mankind crying out for the end of war in the interest of human brotherhood. There is Russia, restrained and oppressed through long centuries, suddenly liberated, crying for help, knowing not how to use her freedom, never having known it before. Certainly she has committed blunders, certainly she has made false steps. Every babe in learning to walk falls to the floor many times. The Russian government is in its days of infancy now. It is no sign of superior wisdom to point out its weaknesses. It is proof of great-heartedness to lend assistance till it can care for itself. Industry in all lands, not simply in America, is resonant with voices calling for readjustment of working conditions and for the application of that democracy to which men have committed themselves in political life to the problems of the working world, no rise of the proletariat this, but the struggling upward of the spirit of man for expression of personality. There are voices of prophets in the world today, prophets of race, of education, of religion, prophets that plead for measures and principles that promise opportunity for this expression of personality. The leaders competent for a day like this will hear these voices not like a second Babel, but as harmonizing in their primal impulse, an impulse expressive of the deepest longings of the heart. The unrest everywhere in life, the unrest that is our universal characteristic, these leaders will perceive to be the outcry of a free spirit imprisoned and struggling for relief. The voices arise from many sources, but the attentive ear is able to perceive the unison of their plaintive tones and to harmonize their raucous discord.

These leaders too, must have sympathetic hearts. There is to be no condescension, no Phariseism in their attitude, no maudlin sentimentality. The conditions that they see, the voices they hear, they are to recognize as existing for very personal reasons and as deserving sympathetic approach. Sympathy is the greatest power we can exert with reference to another, sympathy which is the ability to identify ourselves with our brothers and interpret their hearts' longings as if they were our very own, nay, to make them our very own. Leaders must love in order to sympathize. No other type of leadership can avail in the crisis that now confronts us. Seeing the conditions of men and hearing their voices will only embitter their souls, unless leaders shall appear who also can in themselves incarnate the hopes and aspirations that have produced these conditions and caused these voices to be uttered. The sympathetic leader will understand the soul quality underlying the problems of the times and will seek the balm of its satisfaction in terms of spiritual ministry.

But there is also a fourth quality for leadership which the times require, a quality that will articulate the others with themselves and fit them for solving the otherwise appalling issues we face. It is the will to undertake no matter what the cost may be to men or institutions, the will to undertake and the determination never to relax effort till the program has been accomplished. It is well to see conditions as they are, it is well to hear the pleading voices of the arising aspirations of men, it is well to sympathize with their soul passion for freedom for expression, for personality; it is absolutely essential to map out a program based on this vision, this perception, this sympathetic understanding and then to undertake a campaign that will make it real in the organization of the social order and fruitful in the lives of men. Not every one that sees, that hears, that loves and sympathizes can lead us out of the chaos and confusion of the day, but they who in addition to seeing, understanding and sympathizing in love shall undertake the carrying out of the program that promises relief.

But what is that program? It is the religion of Jesus Christ—it is the gospel He lived and taught—it is the ideals of life He exemplified. There is no cure for the nationalism that produces war but the application to international relations of that spirit of brotherhood and that willingness to sacrifice one for another which is the heart of the Christian system. Of course the sovereignty which nations have in these latter centuries arrogated to themselves must be abridged. We have tried it and find it subversive of the peace of the world. Nationalism is selfish. Nations have persuaded themselves that they should get all they can for their own citizens. This is a false philosophy. Prosperity for the nation is not to be secured through getting all possible from other nations, but in rendering all the service possible to them. The world is a brotherhood, a social unity, says the gospel of Jesus, and whatever helps one member, helps all the others, and when one member suffers all the others suffer with it through that wonderful circulatory system of the spirit whose life blood is propelled by the beating heart of mankind. Peace will never come till the prince of Peace reigns in the council chambers of the rulers of the world. We all know this. We await the appearance of the leaders who will initiate His rule. Then wars shall cease and men give themselves joyously to the pursuit of the things that minister to the common good.

And the same is true of industrial strife and of racial hatred. We know that selfish interest will never solve these problems. So long as capitalists fasten their eyes on profits and laboring men on increased wages, so long as one race looks upon another as inferior and the object of exploitation, these problems will remain perplexing menaces to life and happiness. But suppose the capitalist should look upon the laboring man as a brother and member of his own family and the laboring man in turn should regard the capitalist as his friend and co-worker in the common effort to supply a legitimate need of mankind; suppose too, that the white man should regard his colored neighbor as a brother and determine to help him to larger life, the colored man in turn regarding his white neighbor as a friend and sympathetic counsellor, what would be the result? All the differences that now divide employers and employees into hostile camps and all the jealousies and misunderstandings that inflame race passion and threaten race war, would disappear, would disappear as naturally and as unobtrusively as the mist disappears before the rising sun. But what can bring us this change of attitude? The acceptance of the gospel of Jesus Christ as the hypothesis and norm of life, wherein mutual trust and brotherhood are the foundation principles of conduct—that and nothing else.

We shall apply our principle to but one other issue—the religious condition of men, denominationalism in our own land and the conflict of native faiths with our own in foreign countries. How will the denominations come to see the waste of division and the profit of union? How will they be ready to sink petty differences and come together on the great fundamentals? How will they learn not merely toleration of, but love and appreciation for the brother that honestly differs from his brethren? And how will they acquire the ability to make practical the things they shall learn? The unescapable answer is the gospel of Jesus Christ. Who taught us to love one another as He loved His disciples and Who prayed for the oneness of His people that the world might believe His Father had sent Him to redeem mankind. Nothing but the gospel, the gospel in love and sacrifice, the gospel in action, will ever heal this gaping sore of Christendom, upon the healing of which the evangelization of the world depends. Look upon the fields, He urged His disciples. They were white unto the harvest then and they are white now. But a divided Church is impotent to apply the sickle of its truth, because forsooth it does not agree as to what is the truth. And the consequence? The consequence is that millions in the Christian lands look on in dismay, unable to comprehend the suicidal method the churches employ and so doubting the genuineness of the cause they profess to desire to advance, and our brothers in the non-Christian lands (How the heart aches to say it!), our brothers in non-Christian lands are denied an equal advantage with ourselves to know God and His righteousness and so fight an uneven battle in the effort to realize His will for them. The gospel can best be presented to adherents of other religions in the thought of fulfillment of what they already have and as offering them a better spiritual weapon. Let us pray for leaders who will apply successfully the program of the Christ to the religious situation at home and in the foreign field; it is the only hope humanity has.

And now arises a very personal and practical question. What is my duty in this splendid crusade? Am I to sit idly by while my brothers perish? Shall I not see these things that stir the world for myself? Shall I not listen to and endeavor to understand the voices that arise from so many quarters and directions? Shall I not in loving sympathy undertake to find the remedy for the solution of the problems that challenge me with all others in this hour? Shall I not devote myself to the application of that remedy that these ills may be cured and a new day dawn for men? How can I do this? There is but one way—for myself to accept Christ as the inspiration of my life and of all its undertakings and then to become under His direction a crusader completely dedicated to His cause, ready to sacrifice all that my brothers everywhere may accept Him too and that the institutions that minister to their lives may also become imbued with His spirit. Conscious of my own weakness and of the inability of men in their own wisdom and strength to work the transformation of life and society so needful for the times, I will myself accept His program, willing to lead or to be led in its realization in the world, looking to Him as the Power able to bring it through men to pass, in our weakness, acknowledging His strength, for He is our hope, our sufficiency alone for the tasks that challenge us as we look out upon the world today. The Christ of the gospel—He is our sufficiency.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

T IS strange how so many of us are in the habit of trying about everything, except the right thing, that we may accomplish some great end, and this is as true of church work as of anything else. There are some fine people (they are fine if we may judge them from the world's standard) who are continually taking the wrong road, and the result is they never turn up at the right place. They undertake to do things, but they undertake them in the wrong way, and they are disgusted because they do not get good results. Alas! how we fall down in our folly when we presume to do things in our own way, regardless of what the Master has said as to the way He wishes things to be done. Recently we read an interesting story relating to this very tendency. Maybe our readers would like to have it. It is worth reading before the next church meeting you have, and the bigger the crowd the better for the cause. It follows:

On one occasion Horace Greely is said to have received a letter from a woman, asking for help in a certain matter. She stated that her church was in financial distress. She said she had tried every device they could think of, such as fairs, festivals, oyster suppers, donkey parties, turkey banquets, Japanese weddings, poverty socials, mock marriages, grab bags, box socials, neektie parties, etc., and yet the church was dying for the lack of financial support, and she desired Mr. Greely to suggest some new thing or device to keep the church going. Then Mr. Greely replied: TRY RELIGION! And that answer was worth its weight in gold, and then some more. How I do wish some of our churches could get it on their hearts to try religion in their church work and see if it would not make a wonderful difference. We have often been humiliated because of the many unreasonable things the churches resort to in order to get enough money to carry on their work. Alas! Let us try Mr. Greely's suggestion. Quit the devil's tricks and try the power of God—it will mean a new experience to many of our churches which have been frequently resorting to the devil's plans in order to get along, whereas if they had only tried the Lord's plans they might have been gloriously successful. Brethren, let us come back to the Cross and make a new start by trying to do everything for the Lord's cause in the Lord's way. It displeases some of our ministers if we tell them they are afraid to take a stand against these unauthorized ways of financing the church, but dear men of God, why do you keep your mouth shut before your church but in private say you do not like these ways of raising money for the Lord's work? I once personally knew a minister who was opposed to these things as a means of supporting the Lord's cause. But on one occasion, when his people were putting on a great stunt of this kind, he secured a brother minister to preach for him and went away and stayed till the week of these doings was ended. He intimated to the minister who supplied his pulpit that he was going away because he did not wish to be there in all that mess. Now, why did he not come out openly and say as much to his congregation. To have done so might have put them to thinking and finally have turned them away from any such miserable business for the support of the Lord's work. Telling the visiting minister of the fact did no good toward stopping the evil, neither did it help his congregation to see the error into which they had fallen. Brother ministers, let us fear not the face of man in discharging our duties as the pastors of the people. We shall have to meet God in judgment and there we shall, I believe, be called to account for our unfaithfulness to the flock and to the cause of Christ. God's way is the only way to finance the church. That will succeed and nothing else will in the long run.

J. PRESSLEY BARRETT.

Holland Virginia.

Editorial Note: Dr. Barrett tells us what not to do about financing the churches. Let him now tell us what to do. We offer this suggestion as a subject for some future "Virginia Letter"—C. B. R.

BELIEF ON THE LORD JESUS CHRIST*

Belief, it seems to me, is the first and one of the greatest essentials of a Christian life. The unconverted must be taught to believe before they can be saved, for without belief they cannot have faith in the promises which God gives to all those who confess their sins to Him and offer their lives to His cause. It is impossible to serve God unless we believe on Him. We may live a perfectly moral life; we may be honest, generous, kind-hearted and considerate of others; we may love our enemies, and our neighbor as we love ourselves, and we may devote a greater part of our time, money and energies for the uplift of humanity, but we are serving humanity only unless we do all these things in the name of God and for his glory.

It is astonishing to read statistics and see how many people there are in our civilized nations today, yes, even in our own "Christian America" who have heard the Word of God preached, and have seen the result of the teaching of His Word, and yet do not believe there is a God. How can they look about them, at the beauties of nature—the trees, the birds, the flowers, the hills—God's handiwork, and say there is no God?

Children should be taught to believe in God as soon as they become old enough to understand, and the mother who fails to teach her child to believe in God, while she is teaching it to believe in Santa Claus and fairies, and fails to continue to teach it to believe in God, after Santa Claus and fairies have been outgrown, fails in her duty to that child. And the boy or girl who, after they have grown to manhood and womanhood, casts aside the teaching of their mother is not worthy of the love which she will always have for them. Governor Morrison, in his tribute to the mothers of the country, before the Vanguard Bible Class of the First Presbyterian church of Raleigh, N. C., on Mother's Day of this year, said this in regard to belief in God through mother's love: "This morning we want to think about mother. I don't want to invite the consideration of mother as she is disclosed in literature, sacred or profane; I do not want to study her as she is disclosed in sacred scripture; I do not want to study her as involved in the subject of religion, although if the revealed Word of God was lost I am satisfied that mother and her love and the inspiration her love gives to her children would be the most difficult problem that the fool who says there is no immortality of the soul and no God would have to contend with. No intelligent human being who ever sees with his soul's eyes the love of mother and what it inspires can believe that the souls of men and women die."

Belief is first, last and always the outstanding feature of the Christian life. It is the foundation upon which the young and unconverted must build; it is the source of our Christian faith during our years of service for God, and it is the last hope of the dying. Unless we believe we are lost.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN HEAVEN?

(The Methodist Protestant)

Do you believe in Heaven? I am not asking if you believe in streets of gold, and gates of pearl, and armies of cherubim and seraphim clothed in robes of shining light. To the eastern mind with its blasting heat and burning thirst, its love of pageantry and martial glory, heaven must be a garden where summer zephyrs fan the brow, and crystal streams slake the thirst, and where glory in every seductive guise is found. But heaven where "the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest"; where there are no tears and none is sick; where the insatiate mind shall drink forever from the fountains of truth; where the perfect fellowship is found; where God is, and home is; where the pure spirit shall forever roam over the infinite spaces, driven by the tides of an everlasting life, to find new truth and new fellowships, and new inspiration; where the soul shall find its perfect peace in perfect righteousness and perfect love"—do you believe in that heaven? The life is dreary and waste that has not this dream laid away in the heart. In quick, and the hot foot of pain is trampling through the veins, and life is weariness, give me this dream, and I shall wait for the breath of the eternal morning to welcome me to fadeless realms of love and light. I know, I know, beyond this fleeting life, there is another life

"unmeasured by the flight of years
And all that life is love."

WHERE IS YOUR DAUGHTER?

Where is your daughter when she is not with you? That is a pointed and serious question. Listen to this from a press article: "At the World Conference on Christian Fundamentals in Philadelphia, 1919, Dr. J. C. Massee told of two girls who were injured in an automobile accident about two o'clock one morning in a western city. Late editions of morning newspapers had accounts of the accident without giving names, and 186 mothers telephoned to the hospital to which the injured girls had been carried to ascertain whether or not these girls were their girls."

Think of it—186 homes in one city that could not give an account of their daughters! That was in 1919; and we regret that such conditions are worse today than a few years previous. There is a story in human life that the press has never sensed; a story that is common knowledge to many and yet not discussed—a story that will one day undermine home life and bring a wreck to American civilization.

Where is your daughter when she is not in your sight? A question worth asking, worth looking into.

THE EDITOR GOES RAMBLING AGAIN

This time it was in another pasture—a Presbyterian territory, Cross Roads Presbyterian church, five miles north of Mebane, N. C. Last Sunday was the day. The weather was fine, large crowds from the surrounding country, and towns of Greensboro, Durham, Burlington, Mebane, Haw River, Graham, Gibsonville, and other places. Large numbers from Bethel, Graham Mebane, Burlington, Union Ridge, Bethlehem, Mt. Zion, and other churches of our denomination were there. In fact it was difficult to tell what denomination was in control, judging by the faces of those we knew.

Cross Roads Presbyterian church was organized about 1760, and at one time had a membership of nearly three hundred. The membership is less now, due to other churches being organized and the exit of many from the home church to nearby cities and towns. The building is a stately brick structure with an unusual large seating capacity—and it was filled on this occasion. We had been given a special and urgent invitation to speak at both the morning and afternoon services, in the absence of a regular pastor. It was the regular communion observance—home-coming—annual occasion. Being reared near a Presbyterian church, being the first cousin of a Presbyterian minister, having a good Presbyterian neighbor, who conveyed us on this occasion, and working each week with an active Presbyterian layman who makes up THE SUN forms, it was not altogether strange to us to preach two sermons in a Presbyterian church. The audience was intellectual, the attention good, and all seemed to enter reverently into the services.

At the close of the morning service the Lord's Supper was observed, after which the worshippers retired to the magnificent grove where a sumptuous dinner was served. Groaning tables piled high with chief dishes of the culinary art greeted the happy faces that had come to worship, to mingle with friends of other days, and to enjoy Christian fellowship. Members of more than a dozen churches, representing several denominations, broke bread together and said that it was good to be there. The afternoon service was attended by a larger crowd and every indication pointed to joy in the hearts of all who entered into it.

The newly elected pastor, Rev. T. J. Shaw, Pomeroy, Iowa, takes charge June 12. The church has a beautiful manse for the pastor and his family to live in, while the opportunity for a great work appears to be at hand. A community of good citizens, a fine young people; a community with an open mind, ready to follow, eager to assist and willing to aid in every good work. What a fruitful field for Christian service!

We find the following in The Bulletin of the Richmond, Virginia, church:

The financial report for the first year is very encouraging to both pastor and members: Church, $2778.90; Sunday School, $449.19; Ladies' Aid Society, $207.42; Christian Endeavor, $40.27. Total, $3,475.78.

We have passed the experimental stage in the movement, and laid the foundation for a permanent work. With 100 members, many of them established in Richmond by the ownership of their homes and by business associations, with a church lot already purchased and with the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention backing us, we feel that the future of the First Christian church of Richmond is assured.

What can we do this year? Can we add another 100 to our membership? Can we clear our lot and get our church building started? Can we enlist the sympathy and co-operation of all the members and former members of the Christian Church in the city of Richmond in our work?

Dr. W. W. Staley said, in one of our services, "That wherever we found a person who had been a member of the Christian Church, even though they had joined another denomination, we find one kindly disposed toward our work and interested in the Christian Church."

The pastor has the names of 46 members of the Christian Church living in the city of Richmond, who have not joined us; the names of 33 other, former members of the Christian Church, who have united with other churches; and the names of 39 others who are interested directly or indirectly in the Christian Church.

We are carrying several contributions this week that we feel should be carried. We have, therefore, been compelled to take part editorial space for items that could not be conveniently carried over.

ELON'S THIRTY-FIRST COMMENCEMENT

A SUMMARY

BY CLAUDE M. CANNON

THE Elon College commencement began Sunday morning at 11:30 with the Baccalaureate Sermon by Mr. Hermon Eldredge, Erie, Pa. Mr. Eldredge is not a minister, but he is a great preacher nevertheless, being engaged in Church Federation work and having served with great distinction as Camp General secretary for the "Y" during the whole period of the war. He brought a great, uplifting message, all the more impressive as being the only Baccalaureate Sermon ever given here by a layman, and further significant in the fact that his daughter was a member of the graduating class, of which she was valedictorian.

Mr. Eldredge took as his text Matt. 9:9—"And as Jesus passed by from thence, he saw a man, called Matthew, sitting at the place of toll; and he saith unto him, follow me. And he arose and followed him." Upon this text he based a masterful address on "The Triple View of Life," which he declared consisted of the common task, the common man, and the common goal.

"The greatest single day of a man's life is the day on which he makes a life's decision," said Mr. Eldredge, "and such momentous decision is often reached not in some uncommon spectacular setting, but just as an incident of the common day, as in Matthew's case. It isn't scenes or things that make life. It is men. It is not the things you meet, but the man who meets them that makes them live forever or die in a day. He who does his common task well promises larger achievement in more exalted situations."

"Do not forget what Jesus saw in this hated tax gatherer," he urged. "Jesus saw a man. That is what he was looking for. He came seeking men, and so He found a man even in a publican. You too will see men if you look for them.

"But it is the common goal to which I would direct your attention most earnestly this morning," he continued, addressing himself particularly to the Senior Class, "I have called it the common goal, this call of Christ for men to follow him, because it is the common goal of all. It contains that for which in their uttermost hearts all men seek and desire.

"Brotherhood is the crying heart hunger of our tired and broken world, and brotherhood can only come through the acceptance of the common goal by all men. It is our duty and privilege to lead them to accept it and consistently to pursue it. To this common goal I summon you this morning to lead your brothers and sisters everywhere."

Baccalaureate Address

According to the time-honored custom President W. A. Harper gave his final word to the Class of '21 on Sunday evening. His subject was, "Christ, Our Sufficiency." (See the address in full in this issue of THE SUN—Editor).

Class Day Exercises

The second day of the commencement began with the Class Day Exercises in the morning, and the following program was rendered:

Welcome address	C. M. Miller
Class History	J. B. Newman
Class Poem	Lizzie Lewis
Class Prophecy	Marcia Foust
Last Will and Testament	Pauline Nicholson
Deliver of Trophies	Janice Fulgham
Delivery of Mantle	Pearle Reynolds

Society Representatives

At the afternoon session, as is the custom each year, two representatives from each of the three college literary societies, one for young women, and two for young men, delivered orations and essays, the young men orations and the young women essays. The Psiphelian Literary Society representatives were Miss Mary Miller, whose subject was "Ways", and Miss Maude Kendrick, who spoke on "The Golden Thread of Life." The Clio Society representatives were R. S. Rainey, whose theme was "Honor to Whom Honor", and Mr. W. M. Clem, who spoke on "Reconstruction and the Future". "Lions in the Way", was the subject of I. O. Hauser, representing the Philologian Society, and "Tint Your Own Sky", by H. G. Self, also of the Philologian Society.

To the best speakers each of the Clio and Philologian Society representatives a medal is awarded. These medals were won by Mr. R. S. Rainey, and Mr. H. G. Self.

Oratorio

The most pleasing event of the day came in the evening when the oratorio, "The Holy City," by A. R. Gaul, was rendered by the Elon Choral Society, under the direction of Prof. E. M. Betts. The Choral Society entertainment each commencement, under the auspices of the music department of the college, has always been looked forward to by the music lovers of the community as a rare treat. The entertainment this year proved to be no exception to the high standard of entertainment given in former years, and in the estimation of many it proved superior.

Graduation Exercises

The feature of the graduating exercises on Tuesday morning was the literary address made by Governor Cameron Morrison.

D. R. Fonville of Burlington, N. C., Secretary of the Executive Board of Trustees, introduced Governor Morrison. He spoke of the Governor as representing the free and liberal spirit of the people of North Carolina, and as the friend of Christian education.

Governor Morrison began his speech by welcoming the members of the graduating class into the ranks of those who are striving to make the State progressive. He paid tribute to the work of the colleges throughout the State, and to the type of men and women they were sending out into the services of the state and nation. He challenged the class as to what would be their attitude in the affairs of the State, and urged them to fix first their religious principles. Then after studying their religious duty to their country, they could enter into the life of the State as a Christian and a patriot.

He urged the audience as citizens and as fellow countrymen of his to lend every effort to carry forward the great program of progressive construction which had been undertaken by the State.

Just preceding the speech of Governor Morrison the representatives of the Senior Class were heard in their orations and essays as follows:

- Louise Alcorn Education for Citizenship
- Essie Mae Truitt The Ministry of Music
- C. M. Miller Lost Opportunities
- Luey Eldredge The Challenge of Ideals
- C. M. Cannon A Casualty of the War
- Jessie Sharpe Americanism

At the conclusion of the Governor's speech, Bibles were presented from the college to each member of the Senior Class by Rev. G. O. Lankford, Burlington, N. C.

President Harper then announced the action of the Board of Trustees to confer upon Rev. G. O. Lankford the degree of D. D.

Medals and scholarships were then announced as follows: The Stanford Orator's Medal won by C. M. Cannon, High Point, N. C.; The Moffitt Essay medal by Miss Essie Mae Truitt, Summerfield, N. C.; The Wellon's Scholarship medal by Miss Luey Eldredge, Erie, Pa.; The Morrow Thesis Medal by Miss Fleta Cox, Elon College, N. C.; and the J. J. Summerbell Scholarship by Miss Luey E. Austin, Taylorsville, N. C.

Degrees were then conferred upon the members of the Senior Class. Thirty-six young men and women were graduated this year, which is the largest Senior Class in a number of years. The members of the class are as follows: Rosa Lee Brannock, Marie Burgess, C. M. Cannon, Luey Eldredge, L. B. Ezell, Marcia Foust, Janice Fulgham, F. H. Hunter, B. B. Johnson, H. W. Johnson, W. F. Jordan, W. D. Lambeth, Lizzie Lewis, K. R.

MacCalman, Vada Eva McMurray, Clement M. Miller, Vera Parker, Bertha Paschall, J. F. Raper, Nelson F. Richards, Jessie Sharpe, Mande Sharpe, W. V. Simpson, M. C. Terrell, Nettie Tuck, L. M. Cannon, Louise Alcorn, Fleta Cox, J. W. Fix, W. C. Hook, C. R. Hutcheson, J. E. McCauley, J. B. Newman, Pauline Nicholson, Pearle Reynolds, and Essie Mae Truitt.

For the first time in the history of the college the names of the students who had attained the maximum of 100 points in the honor system were announced. Those attaining the maximum of 100 points were C. M. Cannon, L. M. Cannon, F. H. Hunter, David Miller, H. G. Self, H. E. White, and M. J. W. White.

The valedictory address by Miss Luey Eldredge concluded the program of the graduating exercises.

Exhibits and Reunions

The afternoon of the third day of the commencement exercises was given over to the Art and Domestic Science exhibits, and to the literary society reunions.

Alumni Oration

The closing items of the commencement were the Alumni Oration by Prof. G. C. Davidson, of the Class of 1904, and the Alumni Social at the conclusion of the address.

"Possibly our Alma Mater," Professor Davidson began, "is not yet old enough to have clinging about her a garment of legends and time-flavored conceptions known as traditions, but in the strength and beauty of fully matured womanhood she stands adorned in the immaculate robe of pure and lofty ideals, of unflinching devotion to truth, and of Christ-like spirit proven in her service to humanity.

The speaker gave a brief sketch of the life of the college, mentioning the principal men who bore the burden of her early years. He pointed out some of the menaces to our present day industrial and educational life.

Professor Davidson closed his address by challenging the Alumni of Elon College and every other Christian institution to "stand four-square for religious education in our state and nation, lest the high type of Christian character which we have idealized as our pattern should be marred and stained by the harmful elements of secularism."

AMERICA, THE BEAUTIFUL

O beautiful for spacious skies, for amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties, above the fruited plain;
America! America! God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood, from sea to shining sea.

O beautiful for pilgrim feet, whose stern, impassioned stress
A thoroughfare for freedom beat across the wilderness;
America! America! God mend thine every flaw,
Confirm thy soul in self-control, thy liberty in law.

O beautiful for glory-tale of liberating strife,
When valiantly, for man's avail, men lavished precious life;
America! America! may God thy gold refine,
Till all success be nobleness, and every gain divine.

O beautiful for patriot dream that sees beyond the years,
Thine alabaster cities gleam, undimmed by human tears;
America! America! God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood, from sea to shining sea.

OUR ORPHANAGE

NEARLY OVER THE TOP

Our one dollar proposition for the "Baby Home" worked just splendid. To date four hundred and thirteen have answered the call and have contributed $564.00. We feel that we have the sympathy and the prayers of that four hundred and thirteen hearts which is a great asset to us. We wish we had space to print all the letters we received. They were so full of kind expressions and tender prayers that our heart often overflowed with joy and our eyes filled with tears. It is great to do work of this kind, though humble, when we know we have a praying Church backing us in the work. Loving friends from Florida to New Jersey and from the extreme East to the extreme West have joined in answering this call. It would do our folks good to read the letters if we had space to publish them, but there are too many.

Our Mebane church sent us one dollar for each of its members. What a grand service they rendered! They attended our service here last Tuesday 100% strong.

We look for a large church and a large membership at Mebane in a few years. Such loyal and earnest workers will bring things to pass, for the Lord will bless their efforts.

We just laek at this writing seven hundred dollars meeting the challenge of one man for $1,000, and another man for $500.00. Will seven loving friends mail us a check for $100 each to help us meet this challenge and get the $1,500 that is now waiting for us if we will meet the conditions?

We have a few days to meet it.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

LETTERS FROM THE CHILDREN

Dear Uncle Charley: We are three little children who wish to help the baby orphans. Since we (Mildred and Joe) lost our mother four years ago we know what it means to have no mother, yet we have a good home and a nice stepmother to help papa take care of us. I (David Carlton) will be ten months old, the twenty-fourth of this month. I hope this letter will reach you by that day, with the three dollars we are sending. Lovingly.—Mildred, Joe and David Carlton Stewart, Summerfield, N. C.

I received your letter and the three dollars all right. It is a very great loss to a little child to lose its mother and I think they feel so lonely without mother. I am glad you have a loving stepmother and I know she will do her best to be a mother to you.—"Uncle Charley".

Dear Uncle Charley: I want to join the corner if you will let me. Enclosed you will find fifty cents for May, June, July, August and September dues; also $5.00 for the Children's Home from mama, papa, Mrs. Genes, Mr. Frank Curling and myself. With much love to you and all the cousins. Lovingly.—Claudie Weginley, South Norfolk, Va.

We are real glad to have you join the band of cousins and want to have a letter from you each month.—"Uncle Charley".

THE BULLETIN

Bro. W. B. Fuller, Ivor, Va., writes that his work is going fine and that no pastor has a better people to serve.

"The Observatory" reached us too late for this issue, and the "Suffolk Letter" has not reached us as we close our forms.

Dr. W. W. Staley, Suffolk, Va., preached the Baccalaureate Sermon of the Sanford, (N. C.) High School last Sunday and preached in the Christian church at that place Sunday night, according to press reports.

The revival meeting of the Palm Street church, Greensboro, will begin next Sunday, June 5, and Rev. J. G. Truitt will do the preaching.

A Woman's Missionary Society was organized at Shallow Ford church, Alamance Co., N. C., on May 8, with fourteen members. Mrs. Jane Huffines is president and Mrs. A. P. Truitt, secretary. There is much good material in this community and a fine opportunity for the woman's missionary work. Mrs. N. G. Newman and Mrs. N. F. Brannock and Mrs. J. J. Lincoln assisted in getting the work started.

Edward D. White, Chief Justice of the United States, died at his home in Washington, D. C., May 19, 1921. He was made Chief Justice in 1910 by President Taft, and it was he who administered the oath of office to Presidents Wilson and Harding. He was one of the greatest men called to this office and in his death the nation has lost a man big of stature, big of mind and big of heart.

One of the acts of Board of Trustees of Elon College at the recent commencement was to eliminate entirely the preparatory department of the college. We consider this a forward step and congratulate the Board. Space at this time does not permit us to state our reasons for being pleased—in fact so far as we know it is not necessary that we should. Ten years' close observation make up for us our opinion.

Rev. G. O. Lankford, pastor Burlington church, was honored at Elon's recent commencement by receiving the Doctor of Divinity degree. Not only was Brother Lankford honored in the act, but so was the College, for Bro. Lankford is one of our foremost and enterprising pastors, making splendid progress with his work as pastor, preacher and student. THE SUN extends its felicitation.

A MONUMENT TO JESUS

George Clarke Peck

Quite seriously, I suppose, a French physician has suggested a monument to Jesus as the greatest teacher and most proficient brother of man. A monument to Jesus? I wonder how this Frenchman thinks of churches and hospitals and Christ-like institutions, thousands upon thousands of them, scattered over the world. I wonder what he makes of crucifixes and wayside shrines and splendid altars. All these are monuments, and the number of them is legion. But when all is said and done, Jesus does not need monuments so much as He needs witnesses. Monuments are for the dead heroes; witnesses are for a living friend and leader. The best monument to Jesus Christ is not really a monument at all; it is some man or woman who goes about doing good in the name of Jesus; who makes men think of Jesus; who leads others to the heart of Jesus. Not monuments but heralds.

THE LATEST MISSIONGRAMS

BY WILSON P. MINTON

OURING the past few weeks so many and such rapid changes have been taking place in our Foreign Mission work that we have been making no effort to give them publicity for fear that what we said might have to be contradicted later. But we are now in a position to give you some of the most interesting and encouraging facts of progress that we have been able to give for a long time.

A few weeks ago we had a letter from the Porto Rico Mission stating that the rented house in which Rev. Sandoval, our Salinas pastor, lived was about to be sold and that unless we bought it, he would have to leave the field, as no other house was available. The selling price was twelve hundred dollars. A year ago the Irvington, N. J. church, Rev. W. H. Hainer, pastor, raised one thousand dollars to be used for a similar purpose at Arus, but at the last moment the deal fell through. As soon as we heard of the opportunity at Salinas, we got in touch with Brother Hainer and received immediate reply that the church would be glad to have us apply the thousand dollars on the Salinas purchase, and a little later they sent the additional two hundred dollars to complete the same. We sent the money post haste to Porto Rico and have word that the property is ours. So brother Sandoval is going ahead with his splendid work without fear of being forced to vacate. The house needs several hundred dollars worth of repairs and we are hoping some church will get busy and take care of this real soon. About four hundred dollars are needed.

The malaria season is on in Porto Rico and Miss Williams and Brother Martin have both been victims, but both are at their work again. A letter just received from Miss Williams states she has just moved to Salinas and has already started the industrial work along the lines she has been following in Ponce. The needs for such work in Salinas are even greater than those in Ponce, and she is elated with the fine start she has had.

Brother Martin writes that it is imperative that we let the contract for the Santa Isabel Chapel soon. It will cost us ten thousand dollars and we have only four thousand in hand. What shall we do? You can send us the answer. The mission is urging the secretary to visit the island in the very near future. If we do have to go, we should like to be able to carry the news in very tangible form that the Christian Church in America wants them to put up that chapel, so sorely needed, at once. The young people have done a fine piece of work in raising practically all the money we have on hand for the chapel, and they will continue to help, but we ought to encourage them by giving additional funds.

Brother and Sister Barrett and the four younger children are back in Ponce after a pleasant furlough in the States, and he writes that the work is moving along nicely.

Opportunities for land buying are more numerous in Japan at the present time than for several years and we have already taken advantage of them by securing a fine location on a main street for the proposed kindergarten and night school. And since then, through the fine cooperation of the Mission Board of the Southern Christian Convention we have been able to place eight thousand dollars additional in the hands of the Mission toward the completion of the project of buying the two lots, (one having recently been bought) and the building of the night school and the mission home. We do not know just yet which procedure we shall follow—whether to begin at once the erection of the night school building or secure the lot for the mission home first. Some thirteen thousand dollars are still needed to complete the entire fund for both these projects and the money really ought to be in hand before building is started. We hope to have the funds completed by October. Buying and building projects move slowly and uncertainly in a foreign land and we are apt to be held up by some unforeseen circumstances, but we are hoping to acquire the other lot and to have the plans for building under way within a reasonable time. Our workers on the field need our prayers that they may be given divine guidance in their tasks.

At Narugo, where our youngest pastor, Rev. Sumita has been doing such effective work, we had an opportunity recently to buy a little piece of land suitable for a chapel. It was the only spot available in that popular health resort, full of opportunities for Christian work. We felt we could not let this slip by, so we bought it. Did we make a mistake? We hope not, for ours is the only Christian work being done in this place and at present the meetings are being held in a little up-stairs room which we can enter only by paying for the privilege of passing through the room below. And we do not know just when we shall have to vacate that. We ought to build the chapel at once. The total cost would be about $2,500. Here is a great opportunity for some church to do a fine piece of effective work now.

For some weeks, Mrs. Fry with the adopted Japanese boy, Maki, has been trying to arrange for a short furlough trip to America (her first in eighteen years), and we are happy to say that she reached San Francisco April thirteenth, and after spending a few days with Mr. Fry's brother at San Jose, will come east to join her husband who is now in New York.

A week or two ago we received the good news from Mrs. Garman, that the doctors had pronounced Phillips entirely recovered and had stated that he could go anywhere to live. This means that it will be possible for the Garman family to return together to their beloved work in Japan following their regular furlough which will begin with Brother Garman in July. He has been working at top speed these days and will certainly be ready for the well earned rest. Let us give thanks to God for this favorable turn of affairs.

On the same boat with Mrs. Fry, Rev. K. Abe, pastor of our church at Ichinoseki, came for a year's study in America. He will likely spend part of the summer at Defiance and then will take a course in Religious Education and Sunday school work in some college not yet determined. He is one of our brightest and most capable men and we hope many of our people will have the privilege of meeting him.

The annual conference of the Japan Christian Church was held recently at Sendai and all our missionaries spent several delightful days in the Sendai mission home with Dr. and Mrs. Woodworth. Reports from this conference are among the most inspiring we have had since we came to this office. A new spirit of earnestness and endeavor seems to have developed in the Japanese church and we believe we shall see increased results in the work there.

According to word from their fellow missionaries, Miss Stacy is about to step forth as a full-fledged missionary and the McKnights are hard on her trail in that respect. They have been making fine progress with their language study and are capable of carrying on quite an extensive work already, which they are doing most earnestly. Let us pray much that the things they are all attempting as our representatives may be carried through to completion and that the difficulties being faced may be surmounted.

"Tell Me a Story"

WHEN I WAS A CALF

This not a treatise on evolution, but a sad little cow story that was recalled to my mind lately and that happened when I was quite a little girl going to school.

At that time we lived in a small northern town. The family living next to us owned a black and white cow. The sides of the street were overgrown with grass and the cow was "staked out", as it is called, that she might graze. Then and now the cow is the only animal that has inspired me with any fear. They have not always been quite friendly to me because I am so rarely anywhere without dogs being with me. Cows are treated badly by dogs, though the dogs are nearly always acting under human orders and therefore not really to blame. While none of my dogs ever chased cows or teased them, the cows, always seeming to think that the dogs might do something of the kind, put themselves on the defensive.

This cow of my neighbor's was not unlike the others, when I first knew her. So I always made a wide detour in passing her on my way to and from school. One morning I was surprised to find that the cow was not alone, but by her side was a very young and wobbly-legged calf, an exact copy of his mother. From a safe distance I watched the two very closely.

There could be no question that the cow loved her baby just as intensely as any human mother could love hers. She was always touching it. Her eyes were always upon it. She even played little games with it. I began to think of her just as a mother, and as such I did not fear her. I even went near enough to touch her. She pushed me a little with her horns, but not in an unfriendly manner. I often brought her something to eat. She did not even object when I patted the calf.

One night I heard her making a queer moaning sound. I sat up in bed and listened. I scarcely slept all night, her crying was so pitiful. In the morning she was staked out as usual, but she was alone. The people who owned her had sold the calf. They were vegetarians, not (as I now realize) from principle, but from an adherence to some peculiar religion. This distinction may sound over-critical, but I think facts will bear me out.

The cow ran to meet me. She pushed off my hat and licked my hair. She pressed against my body. She was trembling all over, and her eyes were wide and wild, but something helped me to be unafraid and inspired me to return her broken-hearted caresses.

From that day on I was her calf. She watched for me and lived for my going and coming. I knew that she loved me, just as I had known that she loved her real calf. She forgot even her aversion to the dogs and acted just the same if several of them were with me. I remember that they watched the whole proceedings with astonishment. She walked with me to the end of her rope, straining and tugging at its confinement, and met me. Her people had never given her a name. I called her "Mommie". I thought it would please her, and no doubt it did.

On Saturdays I was permitted to take Mommie for a walk. She trotted along by my side, and enjoyed it all very much. I remember this particularly, for our last time of being together was on a Saturday.

My father was away from home, or I believe that he would have saved her. My mother was crying when I came in. I had gone on an errand, and when I came back, the rope and stake were there, but no Mommie tugging to reach me.

I must know where she was, and my mother could not bring herself to tell me, but some else did. They had sold her to a butcher. I knew the place. It was a grim and illsmelling speeter that haunted the woods below the town. I tried to get there, running all the way, but my strength failed, and I was taken back home. I haven't forgotten her.

So many times I see others like her, or poor wild young creatures shipped here (in Kansas City, Kan.) come running down the long chute that takes them to the killing pens. . . . I see the sordid, hardened men who do the work. . . . I hear them even jest about how this one dies or that one falls. . . . Then the old words come to me, "The cattle on a thousand hills are His", and I wonder if they really are His. I question where can He be, that no word comes for their relief; that His people are so merciless for these creatures that He has claimed.—
H. H. Jacobs, in Our Dumb Animals.

THE BUTTERFLY

(From The Christian Advocate)

Once upon a time a beautiful butterfly laid her eggs upon the leaf of a cabbage. She was sick, and she knew that she had not long to live. She called out to a caterpillar which was strolling by: "I must ask you to care for my babies when I am gone. Give them dew and honey to eat and be careful that they do not fly too far at first. I have not time to hunt for another nurse." And with these words the butterfly died.

"A pretty nurse I'll make!" exclaimed the caterpillar. But she had a kind heart, and she resolved to do her best. "But whom shall I ask to help me?" she questioned. "Surely not the dog or Tom, the cat? Perhaps, however, the lark will be my helper." And she sent word to the lark to come and talk to her. When he appeared the caterpillar told him all her difficulties and begged him to try to learn how baby butterflies should be cared for.

Next day the lark returned. "Splendid news!" he sang; "but I fear you will not believe anything I tell you!"

"First", said the lark, "I have heard that the leaves of the cabbage where they lay are the best food."

"But their mother begged me to give them dew and honey," cried the caterpillar.

"She knew nothing about it," was the answer. "And what think you those eggs will turn out to be?"

"Butterflies, to be sure!"

"Caterpillars!" sang the lark, "You shall be a butterfly yourself some day."

"That can never be," answered the caterpillar "Look at my long green body and these legs, and do not talk to me about wings and a painted coat! I believe everything I am told, if it is only reasonable enough."

"But it is not impossible," said the lark. "I see so many wonderful things as I fly and fly that I know no reason why there should not be more wonders yet. Receive what comes to you with trust, as I do. That is faith."

At that moment the caterpillar looked around and saw eight or ten little green caterpillars already making a show of a hole in the cabbage leaf. They had broken out from the butterfly's eggs.

Wonder and surprise filled her heart. Surely the rest of what the lark had told her might be true also. "Teach me your lesson of faith!" she cried. And the lark sang to her again and again his song of trust and faith.

Then the caterpillar talked all the rest of her life of the time when she should be a butterfly. But none of her relations believed her. When she was going into her si rysisalis she said: "I shall be a butterfly some day."

When she was a butterfly and was going to die, she said: "I have known many wonders—I have faith—I can trust even now for what shall come next."—From Mrs. Gatty's Parables.

CARDINAL PRINCIPLES OF THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Holy Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship, and of church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE EDUCATIONAL FIELD

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

Roger W. Babson

The need of the hour is not more factories or materials, not more railroads or steamships, not more armies or navies, but rather more education based on the plain teachings of Jesus. The prosperity of our country depends on the motives and purposes of the people. These motives are directed in the right course only through religion. Legislation, bounties or force are of not avail in determining man's attitude toward life. Harmony at home and peace with the world will only be determined in the same way.

Religion, like everything else of value, must be taught. It is possible to get more religion in industry and business only through the development of Christian education and leadership. With the forces of evil backed by men and money, systematically organized to destroy, we must back with men and money all campaigns for Christian education.

We are willing to give our property and even our lives when our country calls in time of war. Yet the call of Christian education is today of even greater importance than was ever the call of the army or the navy. I say this because we shall probably never live to see America attacked from without, but we may at any time see our best institutions attacked from within.

I am not offering Christian education as a protection of property, because nearly all the great and progressive movements of history have been born in the hearts of Christian educators. I do, however, insist that the safety of our sons and daughters as they go out on the streets this very night is due to the influence of the preachers rather than to the influence of the policemen and law-makers. Yes, the safety of our nation, including all groups, depends on Christian education. Furthermore, at no time in our history has it been more greatly needed.

We insure our houses and factories, our automobiles and our businesses through mutual and stock insurance companies; but the same amount of money, invested in Christian education, would give far greater results. Besides, Christian education can insure what no corporation can insure; namely, prosperity. As the great life insurance companies are spending huge sums on doctors, scientific investigations and district nurses to help improve the health of the nation, so we business men should spend huge sums to develop those fundamental religious qualities of integrity, industry, faith and service, which make for prosperity.

I repeat, the need of the hour is not more factories or materials, not more railroads or steamships, not more armies or navies, but rather more Christian education. This is not the time to reduce investments in schools and colleges at home, or in Y. M. C. A. and similar work in China, Japan, Russia or South America. This is the time of all times to increase such subscriptions.

CHURCH NEWS

REVIVAL SERVICES AT LAGRANGE, GEORGIA

We have just closed a wonderful revival at La Grange. As a result of this meeting seventy members have been added to the churches—sixty of these being received into the Christian church, eight into the Methodist Episcopal church and two into the Baptist church. The church was crowded at each service, many being turned away for lack of room. Brother T. C. Casady, President of the M. P. Conference, Birmingham, Alabama, did the preaching. We hope to have him again soon. The offering was $102.00.

Ninety-four members have been received into this church since Conference.

We will begin our meeting at LaGrange church (No. 2) Sunday night, May 22. We hope to have a great meeting at this place.

Do you know what these letters stand for? They might stand for NO-CAUSE-SHOULD-SEVER-AND-CAN-CE-LE-AR-NE-ST-C-ON-V-IC-TIONS. Well how about your convictions regarding the SUNDAY SCHOOL AND CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR CONVENTION of the North Carolina Conference? Do you think we ought to have a Convention? A real good Convention? Do you think your school should be represented? Honestly, do you think you can be loyal to the cause of Christ, your church and Sunday school, and not do your bit toward making the Convention a success?

I believe that your convictions are that your school should be represented and that if possible you should be there. The Convention meets this year with the good people of Reidsville, N. C., July 12-14, and they are getting ready to entertain you. Will you disappoint them? Please do not, but rather begin right now talking, walking, and boosting the Convention and keep it up until we make our reports, back to our own individual schools and Societies.. The program for the Convention promises to be a good one; every reply to invitations to speakers, talkers, and singers, so far received have been optimistic, and encouraging. Please keep in mind the date, July 12-14, the place, Reidsville, N. C., and elect your delegates early, and see to it, that the school or Society pays their traveling expenses. Don't forget the slogan—"MEET ME AND MINE AT REIDSVILLE" July 12-14, 1921. Thanks.

VIRGINIA BEACH—SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA

If ever there was a time when our pastors, young people, and church workers should attend some summer conference for Christian work it is now. The matter of religious education should have a far greater consideration than it has had. Our Seaside Chautauqua has been planned this year with our needs in mind.

Rev. W. Percy Fletcher of Toronto, Canada, is a specialist in rural church and Sunday school work. For years he has been among the best of our rural pastors. His success there was so marked that the Ontario Religious Education Council secured him as Superintendent of their rural religious education work where his work has been highly successful. He will instruct us on such subjects as these: "Development of Rural Community Ideals", "The Rural Need of Religious Education", "Rural Church and Play Life", "Adequate Rural Programs for Boys and Girls", "Training Rural Workers". It is highly important that all our rural churches have some of their workers there. They will get great help from one of the most practical workers who knows our own church's need. We shall look for you at Virginia Beach, July 18-24.

Criticism of the Bible

THE EDITOR

WE have never been alarmed over the amount of criticism given the Bible. Every piece of writing, however classed, is subject to criticism and usually gets it. Criticism is a refining process that either finds the dross or the gold. The more the critics rage about the Bible the more prominent it becomes, the more printing presses it takes to print the multiplied millions of copies demanded by the reading world. The critics are not buying them all and we know it.

Each attack upon Holy Writ is to arouse many minds to search again the Book of books—and so each attack becomes a living testimony for the Word.

The Bible is here to stay, to grow in popularity in usefulness, and ever defy the jabs of the critics. The Bible can stand the world's criticism and become more glorious with it. By criticism it has suffered, to be sure, but its gain thereby is greater than its loss. And that is the side of the optimist.

THREE COMMONS*

And as Jesus passed by from thence, he saw a man, called Matthew, sitting at a place of toll; and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him.—Matthew 9:9.

THE greatest single day of a man's life is the day on which he makes a life's decision. This is the account of such a day in the life of Matthew recorded by himself. It was the day of days to him and to this day all things led and from this day all things followed.

The text suggests three things which move forward in orderly fashion to a goal greatly to be desired. The first is

I The Common Task

"As Jesus passed by from thence" It was a part of the day's work. It was no uncommon spectacular setting, but just an incident of the common day.

It had been a busy day to be sure, as were all the days of Jesus and of those who follow in His train. But the incident of itself and its setting was of the commonest sort. The home town, the well-known street, the coming and going of the crowd, the place of toll, or seat of custom, which was all too common to the people of that land, the sitting, waiting officer watching his opportunity to gather in the toll, and all connected with the scene could have been duplicated a thousand times in that land in that day. Why should such a common scene as this be preserved for two thousand years and read again and again on the Sabbath morning in an American college in the midst of modern civilization?

But it isn't scenes or things which make life. It is men. It is not the things you meet, but the man who meets them that makes them live forever or die in a day. The story of that common incident is preserved to us today because of what Jesus and a man did with it.

In this quiet college town, this morning we are far from the world of work. This is the day and place of preparation for that greater world that you are to enter. Its distance gives color and hope of great things, but my word to you this morning is that most of the great things of life will be in the every day's work and "as you pass by from thence"—as you go from place to place or from common task to common task your great opportunities will come. As you get closer to the "dull gray load and the dull gray road" it will lose its inviting color except as you carry color to its drab surroundings and strength and cheer and hope to its tasks. But I must pass to the second thought and the heart of the record:

II The Common Man

"He saw a man called Matthew." Others saw a publican, a tax collector, a hated emissary of the foreign government which held them in subjection and a man classed with the "sinners". But He (Jesus) saw a Man and beyond the office and beneath the garb He saw that spark of light and life "that lighteth every man that cometh into the world" and He called forth into its rightful place of power.

Jesus saw a man and that was what He was always looking for and bringing to light. Others saw houses and streets and customs and dress and profit and position, but Jesus saw farther and saw MAN without which houses and lands and silver and gold and things lose all their worth.

He is like the master builder in the forest. You and I see trees. He sees here a ship's beam, a pillar for a temple, a thing of use and beauty where we see only things. We see the soft or hard lines of the actual. He sees that which may be and helps to make it so.

The biggest thing on the landscape of this world is man. Nothing on earth is worth anything except in its relation to man. And if you have not learned that lesson your education is incomplete. Do you think of mathematics as figures and equations and parrellograms? Think of them again as agencies of justice and fairness between men. Do you think of English as a more or less beautiful flow of words? Think of it again as a wonderful tool with which to make the best of life known to the best and worst of men.

And your success in life will be just in proportion as you can see men with the Jesus insight. Do you see clothes? They are important. Do you see culture? That is more important. Do you see and have eyes only for men in your class or above as the world may define class? Then God help you for you are a failure now. But can you look beyond the accident of dress and the privilege of culture and the power of position and the prestige of wealth and see real men and women and children and defy all the camouflage and conventionalities to hide from you that thing which was created in the likeness of God and will return to him for judgment? If you can you have the Jesus outlook and insight you will win. You have the God Almighty thought who so loved the world and all the men and women and children in it that he gave his best to save them.

Jesus saw a man. He came looking for men. Seeking for them. Everywhere He went, his eyes and his life went out into the crowd to see and too bring out the man in need. And you will see what you are looking for. What you seek after. If you seek for gold, the glamor of that yellow peril will so fill your vision that other things will be dimmed. If you seek for position or power, the deadening hand of selfish ambition will hide from your sight the glory of service to men and women and the appealing cry of the little children of the world who need you.

Look for men out of which the Kingdom of God is to be built and all these lesser things will be added unto you.

*Baccalaureate Sermon preached to the graduating class of Elon College, Sunday, May 22, 1921, by Mr. Hermon Eldredge, Erie, Pa.

III The Common Goal

"And he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him." The day's work has crossed the path of a man and manhood is recognized in him and now called forth. The call to be a Christ-man. A citizen of the Kingdom of God on earth and in heaven.

I have called it the common goal because it is the common goal of all the men and women and children of the world. It contains that for which in their uttermost hearts they seek and desire. They may not recognize it. They may not be willing to pay the price for it, but above all else they desire it.

For what does the world desire? Is it gold or that which gold is supposed to bring: Happiness? Is it position or that for which position is supposed to stand: Satisfaction? The power of accomplishment.

The poor woman at the well thought that she wanted the things of earth but Jesus said unto her: "If thou knowest the gift of God and who it is that speaketh unto thee thou wouldst have asked of Him." That is the word: "If you only knew". If you only knew my brother what Christ can mean to a life for happiness, for satisfaction, for peace, for power, for all that we seek for in life—we would ask him and at his word follow him to the end of time.

And that poor woman when she did find out—when she did know—"left her waterpot" and with it all her preconceived notions and in her joy ran like a child to neighbors with whom before she would not have passed a word and cried: "Come see a man" that has put hope and joy and blessing into my life and can do the same for you.

Someone has said that a rejected Christ is "a misunderstood Christ or a misinterpreted Christ" and I am inclined to think that it is as much the latter as the former.

"The Lord Christ dwelleth not afar
The King of some remoter star
But here among the poor and blind
The weak and helpless of mankind
In things we do, in words we say
Life of our life, He lives today."

You are going out into a world that needs Him and that needs you in just such proportion as you have Him to bring to them. You are going out into a tired old world that has tried everything but Christ and has failed in it; into a world tired of war and seeking peace. Into a world tired of class and élan and seeking for Brotherhood. Into a world of oppression and seeking for liberty. Into a world sick of the results of diplomacy and intrigue and seeking for an honest and open way out.

And may I quote to you that the world is awakening to its need. Business speaking through its greatest statistician, Roger Babson, says: "The greatest asset of business is not money or things but integrity and good will and these are not the product of business or the law or the courts, but they are the product of religion." Diplomacy speaks through the American minister to the Near East and says: "The solution of the problems of the world is found only in the teachings of Jesus Christ applied to life." Statesmanship speaks through Lloyd George and the premiers of six allied countries and says: "In whatever direction we go, we are marching into the fog. The problems before us are not political but spiritual."

You are to go forth into a dull, gray world and in the humdrum of the day's work you may forget or lose the "vision splendid" which you saw from afar. You may become like Bunyan's man with a muckrake who could look no way but down at the sordid things of life while an angel stood over him with a waiting crown.

But the thing to remember is that no matter how dull the day or how common the task there is a way out and that way is through the common man under the leadership of Christ. Somehow through the daily grind with folks of common clay we must get the vision and under the leadership of the Master of men, go forward to its accomplishment.

And the day is at hand. It is your day. The next twenty-five years will be the greatest years of history. We are so close to the mountain that we cannot see its size or distinguish its outlines—but it is there. Women have come within only a few months to stand by the side of men in this common task. The greatest moral reform the world ever saw was placed on our statute books January 16, 1920—only sixteen months ago. You are going out into a new America and a new world. The next ten years, says John R. Mott, will mean more to the world than any one hundred years of history. O, how you need the vision that the common task may not appal you. How you need to work with men and God to bring things to pass.

God grant you the vision. God grant that no sordid or common thing will make you forget or be disobedient unto that heavenly vision.

A GREAT AIRPLANE ACCIDENT

During a terrific wind and electrical storm on May 28, 1921, a Curtis-Eagle airplane crashed to earth near Indian Head, forty miles southeast of Washington, D. C. The ship struck the ground nose first and the force of the impact was so great that it threw the big Liberty motor back on top of the pilot and passengers, killing all. There were seven men in the plane, two civilians and five of the army. The plane was returning from a trip to Langley Field near Newport News, Va., and had just crossed the Potomac River when it ran into the storm. The exact cause of the accident probably never will be known as all were dead before the wrecked plane was reached. Captain De Lavergne, air attache of the French embassy, who made the trip to Washington declared the plane to be unbalanced and refused to return in it. Officials at Langley Field say that the plane was apparently in perfect running condition when it left there and the pilot bears one of the best reputations. There are few cases when every person is killed as in this incident. Army officials of the air service say the accident is the worst in the history of aviation in the United States, either military or civil.

THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE---ITS HISTORY AND PROGRESS*

THE young children ask bread, and no man breaketh it unto them. We are orphans and fatherless and our mothers are widows." Such is the lamentation of Jeremiah nearly six hundred years before Jesus came; but George Muller, in 1836, without money, but not without faith, founded an orphan home in England, and that grew into a home with two thousand children in 1875.

The first care of Christianity is that of the helpless, and none are more helpless than orphans. Childhood is not only the ward of the church, but the hope of the nation. The armies of the future are in the cradles of the present; and the rulers of the world are now in the lap of motherhood. But when father and mother forsake, the Lord will take them up. Orphans become a charge upon the Church; they must lie upon her lap, feed at her table, and sleep upon her bed. "Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones." Necessity is the strongest appeal to man and to God. There is no greater appeal than helplessness. It was the lost condition of man that brought help by the way of the cross. The Christian Orphanage is the Lifeline cast out by the Church to parentless children. Rescue work is the heart of Christianity; prevention is its hand and its hand at work.

I want to trace the growth of an idea into an institution, and to show the faith that becomes reality. Samuel was God's answer to Hannah's prayer; and this institution is God's answer to the prayer of the Church. The Children's Corner in THE CHRISTIAN SUN; Uncle Edwin, Aunt Minnie, Uncle Tangle, Uncle Jim; a prayer, a suggestion, and the Corner became the Orphanage. A little child shall lead them; but men and women will do more than follow; they will sacrifice and give, and pray again, until the hill is crowned with buildings, and their halls are filled with happy children.

The first suggestion of this institution was made by the President of the Southern Christian Convention at the Elon College Convention in 1892. At that Convention Mrs. J. L. Foster reported that she had received from Mrs. J. P. Barrett, former Secretary of Children's Mission, 65 cents, and had collected herself $4.50, making $5.15 which was the cash in sight; but the idea was planted in the heart of the Convention.

At the Norfolk Convention in 1894, Mrs. Foster reported that she had paid to A. Moring, Treasurer, $17.11.

At Burlington in 1896, D. J. Mood reported that he had received from Mrs. J. L. Foster $14.75, and had collected $52.21, making a total of $66.96. At this meeting D. J. Mood resigned as "Uncle Tangle", and J. L. Foster was chosen his successor in 1897. The president appointed, at this session, W. S. Long, J. A. Mills, and E. L. Moffitt as an Orphanage Committee.

At Raleigh in 1898, Foster reported $472.18 in treasury; the Committee reported that they were helpless until funds were provided; but recommended that J. L. Foster continue to raise funds through the Children's Corner, as "Uncle Jim"; that the children had set a good example which all might follow; and that a committee be appointed to receive bids for the location of an Orphanage. P. H. Fleming, J. W. Holt, J. A. Mills, W. S. Long, and G. S. Watson were appointed.

At Franklin, Va., in 1900, J. L. Foster reported $1,893.80 in hand, and the committee recommended that he continue the work of raising funds, and that seven trustees be chosen with power, with the Executive Committee to locate an Orphanage, if any offer justified such action.

At Asheboro, N. C., 1902, the committee recommended that a site be secured, that charter and By-Laws be prepared, and that the Orphanage be set in operation; that $3,000.00 was in the treasury.

At Driver, Va., 1904, report showed $4,500.00 to the credit of the fund, and W. S. Long, J. L. Foster, and W. J. Lee were elected to go forward with the work.

At Burlington, N. C., 1906, the committee reported that the charter had been secured, 112 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres of land had been purchased at a cost of \$2,210.14, and Elon College had been selected as the location. The following trustees were elected: W. H. Carroll, L. M. Clymer, G. S. Watson, Elijah Moffitt, J. O. Atkinson, C. D. West, and I. W. Johnson. The idea gained steadily and faith took on hope and determination.

At Greensboro, 1908, reports showed that the work had gone forward with good success. Building had been erected and the doors opened January 1, 1907, and the following had been expended:

Land	$ 2,210.14
Account of Buildings	8,557.46
Current Expenses 18 months.....	5,453.49
Total	$16,221.09
Indebtedness	$ 3,000.00
Net Value	$13,221.09
Donations for Furnishings	$ 1,000.00
Real Net Value	$14,221.09

The Christian Orphanage was now in operation with Rev. J. L. Foster, Superintendent; Miss Dora Edwards of Raleigh, house-keeper; and Miss Annie H. Kissell, assistant in general work; with 24 children in the building.

Suffolk, Va., 1910, report showed 35 children in care of the institution, total collections in two years $15,422.82; total expenditures $10,074.07 which, added to previous expenditures of $16,221.09, made $26,295.16, with four sources of revenue: 1. Children; 2. Sunday Schools; 3. Thanksgiving Offerings; 4. Personal Donations.

Raleigh, N. C., 1920, W. K. Holt, Chairman of the Board, reported receipts for the biennium \$44,675.30; the purchase of 62 acres of land at a cost of \$6,250.00, making 174 $\frac{1}{4}$ acres of land; building with heat, light, and water, and farm greatly improved; caring for 60 children. The idea with \$5.15 in 1892 had grown into an institution with real assets worth \$100,000.00 in 28 years, and the Church has showed her faith by her works in a home for the homeless, a school for the ignorant, and an altar for the churchless.

This history is written deep in the life of the brotherhood; the manger hears the angels sing again; and the children increase in wisdom and stature, and in favor with God and man. The Orphanage is the cradle of liberty, the altar of sacrifice, the promise of a new joy for those who hold up the hands of Chas. D. Johnston and his co-helpers. Who is the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven? A little child; for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

Now, this new Baby Building crowns this sacred hill, and little ones are to find here a home in the lap of Christian Charity. It is the expression of a benevolent conception, material liberality, architectural design, spiritual faith, and Christian purpose. Within its walls will be housed the babes of misfortune, and they will be nourished and trained in the home of hospitality, and led to Jesus Christ who made such a spirit and such an institution embody His love and care for children. His loving arms were not more tender when entwined about the necks of the little ones, than His Spirit enshrined in this home founded in His name and kept upon for His glory.

DEDICATION OF THE BABY BUILDING

We dedicate this building to Almighty God, "The Giver of every good and perfect gift"; we dedicate it to Jesus Christ, "the author and finisher of faith"; we dedicate it to the Holy Spirit who "takes the things of Christ and shows them unto us."

We dedicate it to Christian freedom, Christian benevolence, paternal service, the care of orphans, the family altar, and religious hope.

We dedicate it to helpless and hopeless humanity, to human generosity, and to sacrificial service for unfortunate babyhood. We dedicate it to broken homes, as the expression of the love of the Church for the friend of children, and for the love and care little children deserve as wards of the Kingdom.

We dedicate it to departed parenthood whose place it tries to fill in the name of Jesus who honored children by taking them up in His arms, and laying His hand upon them.

We dedicate it to HOME, SWEET HOME, now and forever; to family worship; and to the honor of that House with many mansions.

We dedicate it to the great work of feeding, clothing, and training neglected children for citizenship, home-lovers, and workers in the vineyard, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

—Amen.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

SINCE my last letter was written I have attended the commencement at Elon College and was very glad to see that work making progress on the part of the faculty and students of that institution. It was surely one of the best commencements which it has been my privilege to attend there, or anywhere else.

Bro. Hermon Eldredge, Erie, Pa., though a layman, preached the Baccalaureate Sermon on Sunday, May 22, 1921. It was not my privilege to hear this sermon, as I did not arrive in time, but I heard through others that it was a great sermon. The thought was said to be far from any "shilly shallying."

On the evening of the same day, President Harper gave the Baccalaureate Address on Christ, Our Sufficiency. I missed that, too, but I do not doubt it was given in his usual vigorous style. It is a wonder at times to see the amount of work one man can turn off, and do it so well. Dr. Harper does not ordinarily seem to tire under heavy burdens. However little he may seem to tire, that fact is no evidence that he is not carrying burdens too heavy for any one man to carry in safety for so many years. Some day he will tire and then—he must rest more, or break down completely. He should take the rest.

Monday the class day exercises were given. The Art Department also gave an exhibition of its work, as did also the Domestic Science Department. At night came the presentation of the Oratorio by the college Music Department—it was The Holy City, by A. R. Gaul, and was a great credit to the institution. The sentiment of the Oratorio was the best suited to the institution, I have ever heard given there.

Tuesday came the graduating exercises of the senior class. It was a day of rejoicing on the part of the class and their many friends. I believe I have never witnessed an occasion of that sort when so nearly every speaker was at his or her best. If I am not mistaken there were more than forty graduates. The Alumni oration was given Tuesday night by Prof. G. C. Davidson. It was a great day for the college and the attendance was large.

On Tuesday morning at 8:00 o'clock the Board of Trustees met and they had a busy day, for the whole work of the Trustees must be done that day, as well as attend the graduating exercises of the day. Governor Morrison of North Carolina gave the literary address and did it quite well. Then in the afternoon at four o'clock the "Baby Building" of the Christian Orphanage was dedicated. Dr. W. W. Staley gave the address of dedication, and now our Orphanage is prepared to receive another large group of orphans, and we have no doubt that in six months or a year, we shall need yet more room. The new building is called the "Baby Building", not because it is so small, but because it is to give shelter to the smaller children, as I presume. The building itself is a very imposing structure and is a credit to our people.

Tuesday night, just as the Trustees were finishing their day's work, I left by the Southern Railway for Richmond, Va., and from there I went directly to Waverly, Va., where I found Rev. J. L. Foster waiting to take me to Spring Hill church in Sussex county, where I was on the program to speak, giving the Memorial Day address. Though the roads were in bad condition, yet Bro. Foster's faithful "Henry" took us in good time. When we arrived not a great crowd had assembled, due no doubt to the inclement weather, but it was not long till the people began to come in larger numbers. Meanwhile the friends were decorating the graves of loved ones who had been called home.

Spring Hill church was one of my early pastorates, now more than forty years ago, and there I had some of the best friends of my early ministry. This fact alone made the occasion one of special interest to me. At length we heard the call of the pastor to come in as the exercises of the day were about to begin. It was not only Memorial Day, but it was also a Home Coming Day, and many of the friends of this grand old church came to pay their respects not only to the dead, but also to visit the sacred spot of their early Christian training, which had been such a power in shaping their lives in their earlier days, and of necessity the day was one of unusual interest.

The day's exercises opened with a short song service, led by Bro. J. A. Faison. Of course, those who know Bro. Faison will not need to be told that he did his work well, as did also his singers. Rev. J. L. Foster, the pastor, opened the service by leading in prayer. Deacon J. T. White gave the address of welcome, and he did it well, although he declared it was the first time he had ever tried to make a public address. Dr. T. Edwin Baird, Norfolk, Va., responded in a good speech to the address of welcome. Then Deacon C. C. Richardson read a short history of the church. Although it was short, it was most interesting and gave a fine setting for the day, showing as it did, some of the great historical facts in the life of the church. Bro. Richardson has the distinction of being the only surviving member of the church who was active in its work just following the days after the Civil War, and if I am not mistaken, his wife is the only surviving lady member who was active in the same period. The infirmities of life are laying upon these two servants of the Lord the burdens which come with the weakness of age. Bro. Richardson's historical sketch formed a background for the fine address which was to follow, on "What This Church Has Accomplished", by Senator J. E. West, who also is a product of old Spring Hill church. The address was well conceived and well delivered. He got his start in life under the moulding influence of this church. It was one of the best addresses I ever heard from him, and that is saying much because I have heard him again and again. I wish I could give THE SUN's readers a brief of the address. It melted the hearts of many in the audience, as he recounted the battles the old church has had in its history and the victories it had gained. This address was followed by a communion service. As two of the ex-pastors were present, namely, Revs. J. T. Whitley and J. Pressley Barrett, they were invited to conduct the communion service. The season was one of remarkable tenderness, moving the people with a deep emotion. Among the most interesting incidents following the communion was the meeting in front of the altar of three brothers, who had probably not met in the old church but few times, if any, since they were there, more than thirty years ago, to see their father and mother laid to rest. It was not strange that they fell upon one another, embracing each the other and weeping together, for their hearts were deeply stirred by the memories of their childhood days, when father and mother kept watch over their young lives, ever seeking to guide them to the ways of truth and righteousness. Those were precious moments and they will not be forgotten by many so long as life lasts.

Dinner was then served, and, in keeping with Spring Hill's well established reputation, the dinner was abundant and all that any one could reasonably ask.

During the remainder of the recess hour many groups of children were seen to gather about the sacred spot where their parents are sleeping the long sleep, till the resurrection morning shall come. Many hearts were moved with an emotion they have not often experienced. The first address after the dinner hour was by Bro. B. E. White, the Mayor of Waverly. He spoke on "Why We Should Love, Honor and Preserve This Church." I had known him in boyhood and young manhood, but I did not expect to hear such a fine address, couched in such beautiful language, as he gave us. Then Dr. Whitley spoke for a few minutes, recalling many stirring incidents of the days when he was pastor here, away back in the "seventies". He still remembered the tragic incident of the breaking in of a bridge near by, just as he was about to administer baptism to a number of candidates. He described it graphically and called the names of a number of persons he helped out of the water, in which they had been plunged to the depth of seven feet, and yet no one suffered serious injury. He was himself deeply moved as he spoke of those days and the dear people with whom he labored. After this came the closing address of the day on "Our Precious Dead". The speaker could scarcely talk as he referred to many who were his devoted friends in the days of his early ministry, who are now sleeping their last long sleep in the cemetery, just outside of the church. Then the choir led, joined by the congregation, in the great old hymn which we sang so often in those days of the long ago: "We Shall Gather at the River". It was a moment of tenderness and joy because of the thought the hymn expressed. I have rarely, if ever, witnessed such an occasion, so deep and tender.

My letter is already too long, but I must speak of two other things. One is the good work which our Bro. Foster and the Spring Hill church has accomplished during his pastorate there, and that is especially the beautiful memorial windows which have been put into the building since I was there a few years ago. They are of the art glass kind and very neat and beautiful in their simplicity, besides the church has been otherwise improved, till now it is one of the nicest country churches of my acquaintance.

And the last item I must mention is the old spring. It is still there in its overflowing abundance. It has been substantially inclosed in cement and it pours forth a great volume of water, its outflow being about six inches wide and about two inches deep—it is very cold and clear. It issues from a hill which we must descend to the extent of about fifty feet below the level of the upper land to reach its limpid waters. It is a great old spring, and how true it is to that, of which it is a beautiful symbol—the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon them who are thirsting for the water of life. I shall long remember this visit to this dear old church, and may the blessings of God be upon it now and to the end of its earthly service for Christ in the saving of the people.

ELON LETTER

THE Elon Preparatory Department is no more. For thirty-one years it has served the Church and State well, but changed conditions and ideals made its demise advisable. Many students of former days will lament its passing, but in recent years students and Alumni have insistently demanded its discontinuance. A year ago the Board of Trustees voted one-half of it out and this year the remaining half was eliminated. When Elon opens in September for the first time in her history she will be a College only.

What consequences will follow?

There will necessarily be a falling off in attendance. Last year the dropping of one-half the preparatory department caused a net loss in enrollment of twenty-nine. There were seventy-three preparatory students this past year. We cannot hope to gain this large number in College classes and so our enrollment will again go down. The friends of the College can materially help us to make the loss relatively small by putting forth special effort to send us new students. Many of them have already agreed to do this. I invite all to do so.

But this loss in numbers will be more than offset by the gain in public estimation. When Elon began thirty-one years ago, all Colleges in these parts found it necessary to maintain preparatory departments, because of the inadequate high school facilities. Today there are good high schools in every section and the standard Colleges have accordingly discontinued these departments. The logical and inevitable thing has therefore been done in eliminating this department. The Board of Trustees has acted wisely.

But those of us who were "preps" here, including such dignitaries as the editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, DR. J. E. Rawles, Prof. N. F. Brannoek, and the writer of this letter, to say nothing of the more distinguished "preps" of other days, will never regret that Mother Elon nurtured us not only during our College days, but that she also extended us the welcome hand when we were plodding the highway of learning in the uncertain days of high school life. We will indite the epitaph of the Elon Preparatory Department on our own hearts in grateful memory and we will lay a wreath of undying green on her last resting place. We shall not forget while life lingers, the happy, helpful experiences of our "Prep" days.

And at the same time our rejoicing over the fact that Alma Mater has at least emerged a full-fledged College will not be surpassed by that of any others, nor will our efforts to fill her full in September of College students only be eclipsed by any. We "preps" of the good old days challenge those not so fortunate as we to vie with us in the effort to bring new students to Elon in September.

SUFFOLK LETTER

CHURCH loyalty includes loyalty to church institutions; and church institutions are such as are founded and supported by the Church. Such loyalty is not sectarian, because sectarianism is intolerant. Saul, before his conversion, was a sectarian of the rankest type. He was very religious, but he was very intolerant of the Christians. He says himself, "after the most straitest sect of our religion I lived a Pharisee." But he says again, "I verily thought with myself, that I ought to do many things contrary to the name of Jesus of Nazareth, which thing I also did in Jerusalem; and many of the saints did I shut up in prison, having received authority from the chief priests; and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them." Saul was a fine type of religious education without a change of heart. There is a false notion in our day that Christian education can save society; but the danger is that it will trust overmuch to the intellectual processes, and leave out the essential experience of regeneration. Saul had everything except this new birth; and yet, he was an intolerant sectarian. A real Christian experience changed his heart, his thought, and his life. After his vision of Jesus his name was changed to Paul, and he says: "I am made all things to all men, that I might by all means save some." His sectarian spirit died, but he was ever loyal to his relation to the Church. He even died for the cause to which his regenerate life gave its loyal support.

Church loyalty is not sectarianism. It is fidelity to institutions of the denomination to which one has given his name and his implied support. What are these institutions? First, the local church, without which all other institutions would die. Loyalty to the local church embraces financial support, regular attendance, fellowship and cooperation in the activities of the organization. To neglect the essential maintenance of the local church is to close the fountain of Christian service, and to kill the life of the Church at its head. Loyalty here prepares for loyalty to all the institutions which the denomination fosters at home and abroad. The Church paper is the mouthpiece of the organization, without which the

RECEIVING MEMBERS INTO THE CHURCH

The general public has been saying for some years that too little importance is being attached to receiving members into the Church. Generally it is announced that so and so desires to join the Church, and if there are no objections, the person will be received.

Dr. W. G. Sargent, Providence, R. I., has been kind enough to permit us to use a form which he is using this year in receiving Juniors into church fellowship. The form is only tentative and will probably be revised. Dr. Sargent offers it to the Brotherhood for criticism and will welcome any comment for, against, or he shall be glad to receive suggestions in any way. His address is 138 Lenox Ave., Providence, R. I.

Instructions for Church Membership

1. GOD.

Who is God?

God is my Father in heaven, and the Father of all men, women and children everywhere.

What is the Nature of God?

God is Spirit, perfect in wisdom, love and power.

What is God seeking to do?

To make all men, women and children like Himself, perfect, according to their ability, in wisdom, love and power.

What does God want me to do?

With His help to build a character that is strong and true.

How may I know His will for me?

In four ways: by hearing Him speak to me in my conscience, by making Christ my friend, by studying the Bible and by learning from others who are striving to do His will.

2. CHRIST.

Who is Jesus?

God's Son and Savior of all who follow Him.

What does He do?

1—Reveals God.

“Neither doth any know the Father save the Son and he to whomsoever the Son willeth to reveal Him.”—Matthew 11:27.

2—Brings us into loving fellowship with our Heavenly Father.

“No one cometh unto the Father but by me.”—John 14:6.

3—Shows us how to live.

“Jesus saith unto him, I am the way and the truth and life.”—John 14:6.

4—Lives with us as our friend to give strength to be good.

“I am the vine, ye are the branches; he that abideth in me and I in him, the same beareth much fruit; for apart from me ye can do nothing.”

—John 15:5.

What is Jesus' invitation to all men?

“Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn from me; for I am meek and lowly of heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden light.”—Matthew 11:28.

3. THE CHRISTIAN.

What is a Christian?

One who loves Christ and tries to do God's will as Christ reveals it.

Do I become like Christ at once when I accept Him as my Savior?

No, I must grow to be like Him.

What are the means of growth?

1—Companionship with Christ (including prayer.)

2—Attendance at church and religious services.

3—Christian companionship.

4—The study of the Bible.

5—Doing God's will as I know it.

4. THE CHURCH.

What is the Church?

It is the voluntary association of those who love God and who seek to bring in His Kingdom on the earth.

Why should I join the Church?

A—Because it will be easier for me to live a Christian life if I associate myself with those who are Christians.

B—Because through the church I can best help God bring in His Kingdom.

What must I do as a Church Member?

A—Be loyal to the church by attending its services, always speaking kindly of it and helping, to the full degree of my ability, in the work it is seeking to do.

B—Support it financially by laying aside a proportion of my income for its use.

5. THE SACREMENTS.

What are the Sacraments of the Church?

Baptism and the Lord's Supper.

What is Baptism?

A sign of cleansing from sin through Christ.

What is the Lord's Supper?

A sign of Christ's love and death for us.

6. THE BIBLE.

What is the Bible?

It is many books bound into one, containing the record, especially in the life of Jesus, of God's endeavor to make Himself known to His children.

7. SIN.

What is Sin?

Sin is disobedience to God's will.

What must I do when I have sinned?

Three things: Ask God to forgive me, seek to make it right with the one I have wronged, and resolve not to do it again.

8. HEAVEN.

What and where is Heaven?

Heaven is where any one of God's children does the will of God here on the earth, and will be where we are able to do His will more perfectly, when we have laid aside the body, through death, and dwell with Him in the Spirit.

"IT MUST NOT BE AGAIN!"

These are the words spoken by President Harding while standing among the flag-draped coffins of 5,111 dead soldiers from France on the steamship pier at Hoboken, N. J., on May 23.

"It must not be again". The words will go down the ages, but will have a deeper meaning to the fathers and mothers of those 5,111 dead soldiers, and all the other dead of the war, than to any other class of people.

But words are not sufficient. The country wants action—immediate action—that conditions during the past few years shall not happen again. Let the day hasten when armaments shall be reduced, a world peace program settled upon and the assurance that "it must not be again."

WORLD HAPPENINGS

TULSA RACE RIOT

A special grand jury has been called by District Judge Valjean Biddeson to investigate the race riot that broke out in Tulsa, Okla., June 1, in which at this time thirty men are known to have been killed, nine whites and twenty-one negroes. The governor has asked that the conduct of the police department and sheriff's office be investigated. Representative citizens have met and condemned the city and county law enforcement. General C. F. Barrett, in command of the state troops called to Tulsa to maintain martial law, declares all the trouble to have been incited by "an impudent negro, a hysterical girl, and a yellow journal reporter."

CUT IN RAILWAY WAGES

On June 1, 1921, the United States Labor Board has handed down a railway wage bill cutting the wages of the railway men on an average of twelve per cent. This bill is to become effective on July 1. In some classes of labor this bill completely wipes out the increase granted by the $600,000,000 wage award of July 20, 1920. The order affects members of thirty-one labor organizations employed in 104 railways. The carriers claim that wages in similar kinds of labor have decreased, that food and clothing have decreased from eighteen to fifty per cent. and that on account of so many unemployed in the United States the purchasing power has weakened. This reacted upon the railways. The board accepted the conditions as presented and granted the wage cut.

CHINESE ON THE PHONOGRAPH

How to pronounce Chinese is a difficult enough problem for Americans. But the Chinese themselves are having trouble in finding enough qualified Chinese teachers who can enunciate the symbols of the new Phonetic Script, now being taught by order of the Ministry of Education. So an enterprising book company has begun the manufacture of a set of phonographic records containing six double sided discs for twelve lessons. "We are greatly interested in the spread of the Phonetic Script in China," said Dr. W. I. Haven, General Secretary of the American Bible Society, "because it means an unprecedented demand for Bibles in that great country. Already the calls are more than we can respond to. The Phonetic Script will provide several millions of new readers for Bibles and other literature during the next five years."

THE COLORADO FLOOD

On June 4, 1921, flood waters from the Arkansas which had been swollen by cloudbursts, swept through Pueblo, Col., and caused deaths that may total six hundred, and property damage in excess of $10,000,000. The railroad yards were left filled with mud-covered debris, two trains overturned with their passengers, business houses inside and out were filled with the same slimy mud, brick buildings were undermined and wrecked, frame buildings were swept away and in many cases the inhabitants were carried away with them. A party of business men who assembled for a dinner at the Minnequa Club, had to remain there until rescued. Damage was increased by fires started by lightning and could not be quenched because there was no power to combat them. All lights were put out of order and the place was in darkness, the water supply was put out of commission by the flood and this left the city without drinking water, the roads to the outside were so torn up that it was almost impossible to get over them. A relief train carrying water, milk, food and tents was sent from Denver.

At 2:30 o'clock the following day, just when Pueblo was beginning to recover from the terrible disaster of the first waters, the Skagway reservoir, between Florence and Victor, suddenly gave way and again, within one hour, the city was flooded with the waters of the Arkansas. This new flood did not develop so seriously however, and at 6 p. m., the river was receding slowly. The highest point reached by the water was between six and eight feet. Much credit is due to the rescue work of the Colorado rangers, the police and troop C of the Colorado National Guard. They went to their work with the zeal of real heroes and scores of persons today owe their lives to the bravery of these men. The aid of the federal government was offered by President Harding in a telegram to Governor Shoup of Colorado.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

PROSPECTS OF PEACE IN IRELAND

Is it true that Ireland will finally come to terms of settlement with Great Britain and content herself as a member of that constituent body? Will she forget that Celts and Englishmen disagree, that the two islands constituting the United Kingdom are at present dependent upon each other (certainly they are) to the extent that peace will be of greatest importance to them by remaining united? Or will war and devastation continue unrelentingly and apparently to accomplish no purpose?

A victory seems to have been gained for the Unionists in the recent elections in Ulster. According to the New York World, the Unionists win 40 of the 52 seats to the Northern Parliament, with greatest gains made in Belfast. This shows that in Ulster Ireland, or what is sometimes termed as "Protestant Ireland" that further union with England is becoming stronger.

But street fighting has been in progress in both Southern and Northern sections of the country. At Dublin, following the carefully planned Sinn Fein raid, the fine old Custom House is in a mass of ruins; and the dead, chiefly spectators of the fight number at least ten, probably more, over 100 are held prisoners, and except for the military in the streets there would be no semblance of order or government. All of this is being done in defiance to the appeal of the Pope for peace and conciliation.

A prospect for peace is overshadowed by prospects of war, and vice versa; until it is well nigh impossible for one to discern the outcome. There is scarcely anyone, be he Irish or Anglo Saxon, that does not feel that Ireland has received unjust treatment in the past—in history. England as well as Ireland is aware of this, and it is to no purpose to dwell further on the past, but rather the future.

Peace is bred by forbearance and understanding sometimes as well as by force and lawlessness. Force and lawlessness breed only more force and lawlessness without end. Would not the Irish accomplish "freedom" better by yielding to the friendly council of the Pope, who, like other people, sees the futility of the continued demonstrations of the Sinn Feiners. If separation must come, would it not be infinitely better for Ireland to follow a policy similar to that of South Africa since the Boer War—that she will first live in peace and prove her ability and integrity to claim government for herself since she cannot obtain it at present in her divided state?

WHAT ARE WE READING?

Of the 5,101 new books published in the United States during the year 1920, one book out of every five is fiction, one out every eleven is a book of sociology and economics, one out of twelve history, and about one out of thirteen is classified in the field of religion and theology. The other books following in order of importance of numbers are: Books of poetry and drama, technology, science, and juvenile books.

The bare numbers of books, however, do not mean so much to the average reader as the gains and losses in books of various fields of knowledge. Only in consideration of these with the whole can one make anything like a trustworthy estimate of current thoughts, current problems, and the trend of the country's literary activity.

Fiction is credited with the biggest gain—250 in a total of 1,154. Other notable gains were made in geography and travel, books for juvenile readers, poetry and drama, biography and memoirs.

Is it not natural that there should be more of these books at this particular time or period of our national history? Books of fiction have no doubt been increased through the period of stress upon the popular imagination augmented by the Great War. Fiction always precedes fact it seems, and thus we may judge that this does not necessarily mean that people are deserting truth, but that truth has failed to find correct emphasis and expression in strictly historical books, for the present (there being a loss of 101 books of history compared with the year 1919).

Books on geography and travel, too, follow the wider knowledge and acquaintance of the people of the United States with the rest of the world, primarily on account of the war. And another possible reason for such an increase would be that the daily newspapers and magazines have acquainted the public more with foreign problems and interests so that (the war being over) people desire more of the exotic and far-fetched, or want to travel and "see for themselves".

The increase in books for juvenile readers reflects an increase in interest on the part of the country's youth growing into manhood and womanhood, for better education and a wider range of knowledge; much of this no doubt being inspired by the incoming heroes and their response to the national challenge for education on the part of the vast (but none too vast) army of teachers.

A STEP TOWARD DISARMAMENT

The adoption by the Senate, without a dissenting vote of the Borah amendment to the Naval Appropriation Bill marks a long step forward in the campaign against competitive armament, says the New York World.

The amendment stands:

"The President is authorized and requested to invite the Governments of Great Britain and Japan to send representatives to a conference which shall be charged with the duty of promptly entering into an understanding or agreement by which the naval expenditures and building programs of each of said governments—to wit, the United States, Great Britain and Japan—shall be substantially reduced annually during the next five years to such an extent and upon such terms as may be agreed upon, which understanding or agreement is to be reported to the respective Governments for approval."

THE BULLETIN

Dr. W. A. Harper spoke twice at the new Christian church at Franklinton, N. C., on Sunday, May 29. On last Friday he gave the literary address at the Fremont High School commencement.

As we go to press word reaches us that the Central Executive Committee, of the Seaside Chautauqua and School of Methods, has changed the meeting place of the Chautauqua from Virginia Beach to Ocean View, Va. Full particulars next week.

A recent note on this page stated that Pleasant Grove (Va.) church recorded resolutions of appreciation in behalf of Rev. W. C. Hook, retiring pastor. The church was Ingram of the Pleasant Grove-Ingram pastorate. We cheerfully correct the error.

On June 3, Dr. D. A. Long delivered an address in Concord, N. C., on the "Life and Labors of Jefferson Davis", at a special dinner given by Mr. D. R. Coltrane and Col. Harris in honor of the Confederate Veterans of Cabarrus County.

The General Education Board of New York City, after an investigation of Elon College on April 30 by its Field Secretary, Dr. E. C. Sage, has awarded that college a grant of $5,000.00 a year for the next two years as assistance in meeting the increase in professors' salaries.

Mr. L. Roy Johnston for four years a member of the faculty of Oak Ridge Institute has accepted a position with the High Point City Schools. He will leave the latter part of June for Nashville, Tenn., to attend the summer session at Peabody College for Teachers where he intends to pursue graduate study leading to an M. A. degree in the field of education.

The New Providence Memorial Association held its annual meeting last Sunday, June 5, at Providence Christian church, Graham, N. C. The annual address was delivered by Attorney Junius Parker of New York City. The attendance was large and the program well rendered.

An organization of a club called the Y. C. C. has been effected at Elon College. This club is for the benefit of the young men and is to emphasize social recreation and religious purposes. The club is to have a class in the regular citizen's Sunday school and has elected Dr. W. A. Harper for its teacher.

Pastor B. F. Black, Franklinton, N. C., sends this message: "Sunday, May 29, was great with the Franklinton church. President Harper was with us and at his best. Our new church opened for services. Full house. $10 000 property and paid for—16 members Preaching first and third Sundays, with prayer meeting every Thursday night."

Readers of THE SUN will note that the usual letter written by the Orphanage Superintendent is absent this week. Bro. Johnston has been very sick for several days and unable to attend to his office duties. He is better at this writing, and the Brotherhood will remember him at a throne of grace for his good health so necessary in the great and noble work which he is doing.

This personal letter is received from Mr. Hermon Eldredge, Erie, Pa., which we admit to print:

"Dear Brother Riddle: I must express to you my appreciation of your kindness and cordiality in my reception to Elon and to Burlington. I was greatly pleased with your plans and performance in relation to the work and surely wish you every success. Our stay at Elon was a delightful one and will long linger in our memory. Aside from the pleasure of our daughter's graduation and honors, the people were very kind and it was a great privilege to speak both at Elon and at Burlington. If I can be of service at any time I will be glad to respond to the limit of my time and ability."

Church is dumb. Every family in the Church should subscribe for the Church organ. In the case of the Southern Christian Convention it is THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is what the Church says and does. It is the expression of her faith, her activities and her purposes. Subscribe for THE SUN today.

Missions, both home and foreign, include all operations among the unchristianized and untaught: neglected areas in the homeland, and benighted lands far away. Such enterprises enlarge the vision, enoble the life, and obey the Master, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations;" but in teaching others, we learn ourselves. Real teachers are the greatest learners. It is as binding on members to support the missionary enterprises as it is to support the local church. To say "I do not believe in missions" is equivalent to saying, "I do not believe in the Church."

Educational institutions furnish the trained workers for Kingdom service. The nations have their military and naval schools to train soldiers and seamen for service. Denominational colleges are essential to denominational existence. Students trained in other institutions lose their love for and loyalty to their Church. There is no surer method of building a great denominational life than for members of the Church to send their children to their own college. In the case of our own constituency this means Elon College. It is the shrine of a constituency, the embodiment of a sacred purpose to enlighten, train, and equip the young for loyal and useful service. Now is the time to decide to send your sons and daughters to Elon.

The Christian Orphanage is the concrete expression of a worthy charity that grows in the life of the Church. The dedication of the new and beautiful Baby Building, as a cradle for the least ones of the orphan family, needs and desires a contribution from the whole Church. That building says for God: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you."

IF I WERE A PREACHER

I was greatly interested in reading the articles published in THE SUN some time ago under the titles of "If I Were a Preacher," and "If I were a Layman." Perhaps the time has passed for saying anything further along that line, but recently there have some things happened which has caused the writer to do some very serious thinking.

If I were a preacher I would not cater to the worldly element in the church, but try by the help of the Lord to win them to the life which is Christ. The Lord's work cannot be carried forward to success by worldly, dancing, card-playing, theatre-going church members. The prayer and co-operation of two or three, or, even one consecrated, God-fearing, Spirit-led Christian are worth more, do more to build up the church and publish abroad the Kingdom of God, than a host of church members who are walking after the flesh instead of the Spirit.

Then if I were a preacher the church which I served should not go in ignorance concerning what the Bible teaches about Church order and Church discipline. Not long ago there was a man elected to the office of deacon in one of our churches, who would not have been elected by that church had the pastor instructed the people before nominations were made. He is the wealthiest man in the church, and he is perfectly willing to direct all the affairs of the church, (if the other members will finance them.) He takes the name of the Lord in vain, transacts business dishonestly, shamelessly uses vulgar language and circulates malicious lies. The Bible tells plainly what the qualifications of a deacon should be. Church members ought to read the Bible for themselves, but only comparatively few search the Scriptures. It is pitiful to see people trying to do the Lord's work, not knowing what He requires or will accept. If I were a preacher I would teach my people to observe all things the Lord has commanded, even in the Pauline epistles. I would rather face the wrath of scores of worldly church members than face the wrath of God and hear His "depart from me ye workers of iniquity."

Five North Carolinians graduated at the University of Virginia the past term. At Elon there were four graduates from Virginia, one from New York, one from Pennsylvania, one from Porto Rico and twenty-nine of the Old North State.

According to reports published June 5, 1921, there is a slight increase in unemployed since April 1, 1921. This increase is supposed to be about one-half of one per cent during May, according to a statement made public by the Department of Labor and based upon reports from 1, 428 firms employing each 501 or more persons in 65 principal centers of the country. Unsatisfactory transportation conditions are blamed partly for decrease in work.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

RALLY DAY AT CHAPEL HILL

Rally Day exercises were held at the Chapel Hill Christian church, on Thursday, May 19. The meeting was presided over by Miss Mamie Pickard, while Miss Lillian Long acted as Secretary.

The meeting was opened by the singing of "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name." Devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. S. C. Harrell, of the Durham Christian church, followed by the singing of "Holy! Holy! Lord God Almighty."

Roll call of the churches in the district was as follows: Chapel Hill—Mrs. E. W. Neville, Miss Lillian Long. Damascus—Not represented.

Durham—Mrs. J. P. Avent, Mrs. Maynor, Mrs. Boone Mrs. Howard and Rev. S. C. Harrell.

Goshen's Chapel—Not represented.

Mebane—Not represented.

Mt. Zion—Not represented.

O'Kelly's Chapel—Not represented.

Mrs. J. P. Avent made report of the work of the Durham Society. She reported twenty-seven members enrolled. Meetings well attended and one-half of their apportionment for the year already pledged. Cradle Roll, twenty members.

Mrs. E. W. Neville made report of the work of the Chapel Hill Society. She reported sixteen active members, and one honorary. One-third of the apportionment already paid. Mrs. J. W. McCauley reported nineteen members on Cradle Roll.

Miss Bessie Holt reported that she had for free distribution, programs for the W. M. S., Y. P. S., and W. W. S.

After discussion as to why the churches not represented did not send delegates, and whether or not they had W. M. S.'s in their churches, Dr. Atkinson made an urgent appeal for volunteers to go to some of these churches, nearby, and organize societies. Misses Lillian Long, Mamie Pickard and Mrs. Franklin Partin volunteered to go to Damascus and try to organize, while Mrs. J. P. Avent, Mrs. Maynor and Rev. S. C. Harrell volunteered to go to O'Kelly's Chapel for the same purpose. Miss Holt was listed for Mt. Zion and Mebane.

Hymn—"Toiling On", followed by a stirring address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson, text taken from Matthew 26:36, 28:18-19. Prayer.

Adjournment for lunch.

Hymn—"Praise Him! Praise Him!"

Devotional exercises by Rev. B. J. Howard. Scripture read from John 10th chapter.

In the absence of Mrs. W. A. Harper, Mrs. W. H. Carroll read her paper on "Discussion of Goals for the Year". Round table discussion was also conducted by Mrs. Carroll.

Dr. Atkinson spoke briefly on the new field which is to be opened in China. Rev. H. S. Harcastle is to go to this field when he is prepared.

Mrs. E. C. Baskin, wife of the pastor of the Baptist church gave a short talk on the organized work of the Baptist church as to the different societies.

Miss Bessie Holt gave a most interesting, and touching address on "Our Young People". The vivid description of the condition of the people at Fancy Gap, both as to their religious and physical life, brought tears to the eyes of her listeners. Prayer by Dr. Atkinson.

Mrs. J. P. Avent was elected President of this district for the coming year, with Miss Lillian Long as Secretary. Collection amounted to $12.05.

There being no further business for the day the meeting was adjourned.

CHURCH NEWS

DURHAM, N. C.

The Durham church has just closed a very successful series of evangelistic Meetings. These meetings began on May 8, and closed on the 22. Rev. Geo. D. Eastes conducted the meetings and Mr. Alfred Shumate of Lima, O. led the music. Mr. Eastes preached excellent sermons throughout the series. His methods are devoid of all objectionable sensationalism, and his messages preach a high standard of Christian living and service as well as a strong appeal to the unconverted to accept Christ.

Our people were delighted with the work of Mr. Shumate. His ability as a soloist is very marked. And his genial personality soon impresses the people and leads them to sing with him. Mr. Shumate knows how to infuse a deep spiritual note into the singing which contributed very materially to the success of the meetings.

As a result of the meetings twenty-two united with the local church, five gave their names to unite with other denominations, and there are several others who will join later. The church members were also greatly helped by the services. The work in Durham is growing steadily in interest and power, and we look forward with large hopes to the future.

SEASIDE CHAUTAUQUA

Virginia Beach—July 18-24

Our people will receive some strong meat at this year's Chautauqua. It will not only be entertaining but it will be profitable to every one who attends.

Dr. L. E. Smith will conduct the morning Bible hour. All who know Dr. Smith will recognize that it will be a treat to sit at his feet and catch a message, not only for the day but for life. His theme will be "Sonship". His subjects are: The Bestowal of Sonship.—The Test of Sonship.—The Blessing of Sonship.—The Satisfaction of Sonship.—The Mission of Sonship. Such will be the opening of each day's program.

Dr. R. C. Helfenstein will conduct the closing period each forenoon of the Chautauqua. Dr. Helfenstein, like Dr. Smith, is one of our strongest men. He is pastor of the great church at Dover, Delaware. He will give a series of Sermons through the week. The theme of the series is "Paths to Happiness", and his five sermons in order are: Happiness via the Pathway of Poverty.—Happiness via the Pathway of Sorrow.—Happiness via the Pathway of Purity.—Happiness via the Pathway of Loyalty.—Happiness via the Pathway of Service.

It will be worth your while to attend the Chautauqua, to hear these two strong men of our own brotherhood bring to us there at the opening and closing of each day's splendid program such messages as these.

WE ARE EXPECTING TO MEET YOU AT VIRGINIA BEACH.

S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION AT LEAKSVILLE

The Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Convention of the Virginia Valley Conference which met at Leaksville, Page County, from May 11 to 13 inclusive, was a great success.

The Wednesday night session was opened with devotional services by Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., of Richmond. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. R. P. Crumpler, the wife of the pastor of the Leaksville church. The response to this splendid address of welcome was made by R. A. Larrick, of Winchester, president of the Convention.

Other features of the Wednesday night meeting, were short talks, which were made by Revs. W. T. Walters, A. W. Andes and C. A. McDaniel.

The Thursday session was opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. A. W. Andes, of Rockingham county. Announcement was made that J. O. Atkinson, of Elon College, Mission Secretary of the Southern Christian Convention was sick and unable to be present. A special prayer for his speedy recovery was led by Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D.

The annual address was delivered by Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D., pastor of the First Christian church of Washington, D. C., who used as his subject, "The Church of the Future. What Shall it Be?"

The report on Cradle Roll was made by Mrs. A. W. Andes, showing thirteen cradle rolls in the Convention with an enrollment of one hundred and fifty-four.

Rev. R. P. Crumpler made an address on "The Sunday Schools versus Modern Infidelity", calling attention to the modern forms of infidelity and recommending the Sunday school as a great force in teaching the principles of true religion.

The report on Home Department was read by the Department Secretary, Mrs. N. M. Hasler. She reported ten Home Departments with an enrollment of 133.

Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., made a splendid address on "Methods of Improvement for the Sunday School Worker." The strong feature of Thursday night's session was an address on "Power of Prayer" by Rev. C. A. McDaniel of Winchester. The Rev. Mr. McDaniel also sang a solo of his own composition.

The Friday morning session was opened by devotional services conducted by Rev. J. C. Barrett, of Harrisonburg. The report of Teacher Training was read by the Department Secretary, Miss Pearl Huffman. An address on the "Needs of Our Young People" was given by Rev. A. W. Andes.

Rev. W. T. Walters, D. D., spoke concerning the work of the Board of Religious Education, saying that Miss Lucy Eldredge had been employed to give full time to the work in the Southern Christian Convention and will begin her work on July 8.

Rev. J. C. Barrett, of Harrisonburg, made a splendid address, taking as his subject, "A Challenge to the Sunday School."

Rev. A. B. Kendall, D. D. opened the afternoon session Friday with devotional exercises. W. C. Wampler made the report on Christian Endeavor. The report on Organized Classes was made by Mrs. R. A. Larrick.

A chalk talk, subject, "Hiving Bees" was given by the Rev. Dr. Kendall.

The following officers were elected: R. A. Larrick, president; R. Roy Hosaflook, vice president; A. P. Liskey, secretary, Department Secretaries: Christian Endeavor, W. C. Wampler; Organized Classes, Mrs. R. A. Larrick; Teacher Training, J. E. Foster; Home Department, Mrs. N. M. Hasler; Cradle Roll, Mrs. A. W. Andes.

Reports showed that the Sunday school paid for missions during the year, $126.57, as against $8.03 four years ago, and that they paid to the orphans during the year, $325.36 as against $93.28 four years ago.

The Convention will meet next year at Mt. Olivet near McGaheysville.—News and Courier, Luray, Va.

CALLED HOME

APPLE

John L. R. Apple was born June 19, 1870 and departed this life May 23, 1921, aged 50 years, 11 months and 6 days. He was a member of Freeden's Lutheran church. His words of consolation were that he was ready to go but regretted to leave his family. He leaves to mourn their loss a wife and five children besides two brothers two sisters and a host of relatives and friends.

The funeral was conducted at his church by the writer.

J. F. APPLE.

WALLS

On May 21, 1921 the death angel came to the home of Bro G. W. Walls and took the spirit of Floria Walls back to the one who gave it. Florina was the oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Walls, and was 31 years of age. She had been a member of Hank's Chapel for about 20 years, and was a good girl, although she suffered a great deal all of her life but for all of this she never complained. On the following Sunday she was buried in the cemetery at Hanks Chapel to await the resurrection morn. May the Lord bless the bereaved ones. Funeral conducted by her pastor.

J. S. CARDEN.

JONES

Mrs. Dorothy Ann Jones, wife of Mosley Jones, was born January 22, 1832 and died May, 10, 1921, aged eighty-nine years, three months and eighteen days. She is survived by two children—J. T. Jones, of Virginia, and Mrs. B. P. Moore of North Carolina; nineteen grandchildren, forty-five great grandchildren, and one great, great grandchild.

Sister Jones never made a public profession of faith in Christ, but was a great Bible reader and expressed a saving hope in her last hours. She was a great lover of children, and those who knew her loved her.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer at New Lebanon Christian church in the presence of a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends. Interment was in the church cemetery. May God comfort those who mourn.

W. L. WELLS.

SHOMO

Samuel Jackson Shomo of Shenandoah, Va., died May 16, 1921, aged 53 years, 10 months and 13 days. His death was caused by acute indigestion. He is survived by his widow, ten children (four sons and six daughters), one brother, three sisters, and several grandchildren.

Bro. Shomo had been a member of New Port Christian church for thirty years. During this time, he had lived a consistent Christian life and always bore his part in the financial support of his church. Although he moved to Shenandoah four years ago, to be nearer his work, he was deeply interested in the welfare of his church until the day he died. During his last illness and only a few hours before his death, he inquired of the writer concerning the progress of the work being done toward repairing New Port church.

The funeral services were conducted and the body laid to rest at New Port, Thursday, May 19. A very large crowd of friends and relatives were in attendance at these services. The sorrowing loved ones have our sympathy and our prayers. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, Bro. Shomo's pastor.

R. P. CRUMPLER.

MUNFORD

N. B. H. Munford died at his home near Zuni, Isle of Wight County, Virginia, April 16, 1921, at the age of seventy-one years and thirteen days. He was a member and deacon of the Antioch Christian church. For many years he was Superintendent of the Sunday school and was greatly beloved by all who knew him. In 1872 Rev. J. P. Barrett, D. D., Rev. J. T. Kitchen and the writer entered the Suffolk Collegiate Institute to fit ourselves for the ministry and through the association became as brothers. Brothers Kitchen and Munford have completed their work and have gone home to Heaven. Barrett and myself are yet in the good fight and will be until the battle is over and the victory is won. Brother Munford was the founder of the Christian church at Isle of Wight C. H. and out of it came the church organized by Rev. M. B. Barrett and Rev. J. T. Kitchen. Bro. Munford's life was not a failure. He did many good things which will long be remembered. I hope to meet him in the better home. Bro. Munford leaves one brother, Mr. Chas. T. Munford, one sister, Miss Mollie Munford, of Greensboro and a host of relatives and friends. His funeral was conducted by his pastor at the grave and his remains were laid to rest in the family burying ground. May the Lord bless and comfort the dear bereaved ones.

MAKING RELIGIOUS EDUCATION POPULAR

The International Sunday School Association is a great Interdenominational Sunday School organization which, with its constituent bodies, constitutes the largest organization for the promotion of Christian work that exists outside the denominations themselves.

The Association accomplishes its work through a system of auxiliary Sunday School Associations consisting of 65 State and Provincial Associations, over 3000 City and County Associations and approximately 10,000 District and Township Associations.

A volunteer army of nearly 300,000 men and women serve as officers of these several thousand organizations. This vast machine serves more than 175,000 Sunday schools in the country by bringing to them the most improved plans and methods of work, and thus seeks to bring all Sunday schools up to the highest possible level of efficiency. Thus through the thousands of conventions, institutes, training conferences, special campaigns and the personal contact with local schools through the County and District Association officers and leaders, every Sunday school in the land is benefitted by this vast system of organization that links up the local school with the District, the District with the County, the County with State and the State with the International Association which is the great driving force back of the whole machine.

Practically every type of work that is found in the average Sunday school has been put to continent-wide usage through the efficiency of this organization.

The International Sunday School Association is a Discovering and Producing organization whose function it is to pass on to the Sunday schools of the country the very best, and approved methods of Sunday school work. To do this effectively it maintains its great system of State, County, City and District Associations. There is a minimum of delay and inefficiency in the functioning of this great machine. Within an amazingly short time after the release of new plans from the International headquarters, the message has worked its way down the line until it reaches practically every Sunday school in the country, from the largest city school to the remotest little Sunday school in the coal towns of Pennsylvania or the back hills of the Ozarks in Missouri.

Take for example the plans for the National Mother and Daughter celebration, which was observed in all parts of the country. A suggested program for this celebration was sent to the State Associations which in turn sent out printed programs by the thousands to the County Associations. The County machine brought their district units into play, schools were visited in the interest of the event, plans were presented and explained in hundreds of conventions and institutes. Special Committees were named to head the celebration, with the result that thousands of Sunday schools throughout the land observed what has proved to be one of the most profitable of the special days of the Sunday school. Mothers are brought into the Sunday school, older girls are brought back again, after having drifted away and untold good will come from this effort that had its origin in the International Association.

It is to increase the effectiveness of this type of work that the International Sunday School Association and the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations are uniting their forces to make possible a National Program of Religious Education. The campaign for $150,000 is to help inaugurate this new movement.

NEAR EAST RELIEF Clothing Campaign

Last year America sent 750 tons of clothing to the Near East, but this supply is exhausted and the clothing worn out. A tremendous need for clothing now exists, as is shown by such recent cablegrams as the following:

Erivan—"Urgent need for food and clothing." Constantinople: "Refugees arriving from Caucasus, escaping persecution, naked, destitute." Beirut: "Aintab still ravaged by battle, cold and lack of supplies. Aleppo refugee problem growing worse. Cargo old clothing welcome for refugees.

New tragedies along Turkish frontier. Probable American relief only hope for thousands."

During a three-inch snow fall in Kars on October 30, 1920, fifty thousand Armenian men were stripped of everything by the invading army, to be driven into the plain unclad. Edward Fox, District Manager of Near East Relief had no clothing to give the men. He did have in his warehouse twenty thousand empty flour sacks. These he distributed as far as they would go and the men were driven off to the wintry plain with only these for covering. Americans have but to think of those heroes whose marching feet left bloodstains in the snow at Valley Forge, to realize the even more heroic endurance of the patient hosts of little children, girls, mothers and grown men in the Caucasus who are now so much more destitute, and will next winter be so much more in need of protection from the snow and biting cold.

The clothing cast aside as worthless by our people here in America would provide comfortable covering for every unclad one in the Near East, and would be an untold blessing to thousands who have been stripped of all their possessions.

It is such a little thing to dig those sack-off garments out of the clothes box and send them down to the Bundle Station, but to at least one, and perhaps several human beings in that far-off land, it may mean the difference between life, hope, strength and almost certain death.

May 18 for Northern, and May 25 for Southern California. Near East Relief Bundle Stations will be opened, for one day only, in all the larger cities. Please leave your bundle at the station, or send by parcel post to Near East Relief warehouse, 549 West 39th St., New York City, N. Y.

NEW SOUTHERN TRAINS FOR SUMMER TOURISTS

Additional trains on three lines leading to Asheville, giving overnight service between the Western North Carolina metropolis and the principal points of the South for the accommodation of summer tourist travel to the "Land of the Sky", will be inaugurated by the Southern Railway System on Sunday, June 26. Eleven new sleeping car lines will be established on the same date:

The new trains and sleeping car lines will be as follows:

Between Columbia and Asheville, handling through sleeping cars between Charleston, Wilmington, Savannah, Augusta and Asheville.

Between Atlanta and Asheville, handling through sleeping cars between Macon, Atlanta and Asheville.

Between Chattanooga and Asheville, handling through sleeping cars between New Orleans, Chattanooga and Asheville.

New sleeping car lines, to be handled on trains already in service, will be established as follows:

Between Memphis and Asheville on the "Memphis Special"; between Nashville and Asheville via the NC-&STL Ry. to Chattanooga and thence on the "Memphis Special"; between New Orleans and Asheville via Mobile and Montgomery to Atlanta and beyond on trains 35 and 36; between Norfolk and Asheville on trains 3 and 4 to Danville and beyond on trains 11 and 12.

A contributor to Life quotes the first stanza from an old number and adds the second:

"I used to think I knew I knew
But now, I must confess,
The more I know I know I know
I know I know the less."

You know, at first I thought you thought

You thought you thought you thought,

But now I think the more I think

The more I think you ought.—Life.

THE VANTAGE GROUND OF ALUMNI*

IT gives me great pleasure on this occasion to look into the faces of my former class-mates and college-mates, and to share with you the reminiscient joys we all feel at this time. I am also pleased to see so many of the older graduates who entered upon their larger tasks of life before it was my privilege to be a student in Elon. Although time has changed both the color and the amount of our hair (the amount may be more or less, according to circumstances), and though the cares of life have brought looks of responsibility to our faces, yet our hearts are still young and our spirits buoyant, and we shall doubtless find much real joy here tonight in reviving the memories and the experiences of our college days at this institution.

Possibly our Alma Mater is not yet old enough to have clinging about her a garment of legends and time-flavored conceptions known as traditions, but in the strength and beauty of fully matured womanhood she stands adorned in the immaculate robe of pure and lofty ideals, of unfaltering devotion to truth, of Christ-like spirit proven in her service to humanity. This is the Mother Elon enshrined in the hearts of her alumni—this the guardian spirit to whom we now pay our vows, and renew our declarations of loyalty to the principles and the spirit she has instilled into our lives.

Dr. Frank Crane has said that generally it is not so much his purpose to say something new as it is to get people to think of the things they already know. I am not responsible for the task laid upon me tonight, yet I hope that I may arouse and possibly suggest a few ideas about which we should think clearly, appreciatively, and hopefully.

For a moment let us take a retrospect of this institution. Only a few years ago she was very small in material equipment and her enrollment of students reached few more than one hundred. Those were days of hard struggle and often of keen anxiety, yet there were in this undertaking men of great courage and unshaken faith—Dr. William S. Long, Dr. W. W. Staley, Dr. J. U. Newman, Dr. E. L. Moffitt, Dr. W. T. Herndon, Prof. S. A. Hollenan, our beloved "Uncle" Wellons, and others of great souls—men who saw a vision and whose vision has become a mighty reality in Elon College. What matters it if the material resources at first appear small, so long as they are wrought upon by great spirits? The Master touched and blessed a few loaves and fishes, and lo, great multitudes were fed and satisfied. In the service of Jehovah the oil in the cruse failed not, nor was the meal diminished in the barrel. In just such faith as this hope was nurtured until the ideals and the spirit of our Alma Mater took hold upon her sons and daughters with that power which has multiplied many times both her material resources and her spiritual reserve. She is no longer small in equipment or in patronage, nor indeed can any institution be considered small which has accomplished great things well and added immeasurably to the world's store of good. It is to our part, our heritage, in the life work of this institution that I would direct grateful appreciation at this time.

And what shall we say of the men who have labored and some of whom are still laboring here? There are before me many Elon alumni whose conception and ideals of life and service have been definitely inspired and directed by the precepts and examples of faithful, consecrated instructors within these walls. Some have passed on to other realms and their rewards, others are still active here after many years of benign influence and undying service, and still others have taken up the great work in praiseworthy devotion to an endless benefaction. These choice spirits and consecrated souls constitute a galaxy of bright stars in the firmament of our experience, and their helpful light is constantly guiding us toward true nobility of character and unselfish service.

Just at this time, shall we graduates ask ourselves any questions of loyalty to the ideals we formed here in other years, or of faithfulness to the principles instilled by our instructors? Have we as the accredited representatives of this institution and its achievements sought faithfully and consciously to spread her influence and to establish among our associates in life the ideals for which our Alma Mater stands? Have we let slip many opportunities of showing the Elon spirit to the outside world? This is an individual responsibility, and the total weight of our influence as alumni will be no greater than the sum of the individual units. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The House of Hohenzollern is known by its product—Kaiser Wilhelm II, a super-Nero. The House of David is known by its peerless Prince and King of kings—Jesus the Christ. Several years ago the Rev. John E. White, of Atlanta, delivering the commencement sermon from this rostrum, made the statement that it was his sacred duty to complete his father. To each one of us comes anew tonight the challenge to carry on and to complete the work begun in our lives by Mother Elon for nobler manhood and womanhood, and to produce the fruits of righteous leadership.

We have heard much heretofore about leaders and leadership—leaders of the flashing, meteoric type, loving notoriety; others of the demagogue class directing the mind and actions of an unthinking, servile following; and still another group whose prestige has depended upon their social and financial standing. In contrast with these is there not an imperative need at the present time for a saner, deeper, more purposeful individuality back of the thinking and acting of every true citizen? It is suggested, then, that the standards of citizenship are largely determined by our self-expression and the power of cultured personality.

Inscribed above the entrance to the temple of Apollo at Delphi were these words: "Man, know thyself." It is indeed a grand thing for one to know himself, but a much grander accomplishment through that knowledge to be able to control himself, and to exert a restraining influence over harmful practices and conditions that exist in his community life. Thus it is that thought and effort combine to advance knowledge, purify the nature of man, develop his best powers, and enable him to keep true to high aims. The real strength of a man is measured by the power of the feelings and impulses he subdues, and not by the powers that subdue him. The work of true education has been to make men know how to conduct themselves for the highest good, and to develop in them self-possessed, courageous personality. Christian education is a foe to demagogues and to every scheme that limits the development of the individual. It increases every man's chances at proper self-direction. It raises the level of life to independent thinking and above the slough of blind subservence to the dictates of radicals and misguided reformers. Here is where a vitally personal leadership is most needed at this time. It is, therefore, incumbent upon each one of us, sons and daughters of Elon, to work out the ideals of this institution into concrete life-relationships. Both by precept and by example it is ours to prove that noble character is the real test of great souls and of great institutions, and to see to it that our Alma Mater's teachings are built into the citizenship of our great State.

It is said that "the world goes only where it is led." We seem to be living in a liquid world where the streams of human lava are flowing unguided throughout our industrial areas. If these human streams can be guided by wise minds into proper channels, then civilization will go forward with a leap; but if they are controlled by irresponsible agitators or by vicious propaganda disseminated by the press or otherwise, and if our leadership proves inefficient, then the hands of true progress will be bound and she will become a helpless prisoner.

The whole destiny of any people depends upon the quality of its leadership. Prussia went war-mad because she was led by militaristic apostles of ruthless force. Behold Prussia today, and the once boasted German empire! Russia went Bolshevik because her leadership was ignorant and fanatical. Today the whole world looks upon the spectacle of Russia with mingled pity and alarm. Extreme socialists in America have revealed to us their ideals of leadership by electing to public office convicted criminals from among their number. It is possible that America may yet go wrong, for already our schools have been invaded by Prussian advocates, and even now the mutterings of radicalism sound ominous. Class consciousness, that breeding place of strikes, industrial wars and revolution, is created and fostered by irresponsible minds filled with biased social ideas. Unless we shall have leaders who swear allegiance to Christian principles, we may yet end in confusion. Our educational systems are now on trial.

American Protestantism is now faced by a strong challenge. One-fourth of the people in the United States are members of the Protestant Church, two-thirds of the students in all colleges and universities are Protestant Church members, and thus the Protestant Churches are furnishing to America her leadership through the colleges and universities. Educated men are the world's leaders. Seventy-three per cent of all the people who become distinguished enough to get their names recorded in "Who's Who" are college trained. Only one per cent of the American population goes to college, yet from this one per cent comes seventy-three per cent of our leaders. The nine famous colleges first founded in New England were Church colleges, and of the first one hundred and nineteen established east of the Mississippi River, one hundred and four were Christian institutions. Out of Harvard came Samuel Adams; out of William and Mary came Thomas Jefferson; out of Princeton, James Madison; out of Dartmouth, Daniel Webster; and out of Yale, John C. Calhoun. Of the twenty-seven men who have been Presidents of the United States, seventeen have been college bred men, and sixteen of the seventeen have been educated in denominational schools. Our system of government, it thus appears, was framed by men who were trained in denominational colleges and whose leadership was developed under Christian instruction; and such men have always been the profoundest exponents and the ablest defenders of our republic.

A trained mind with a Christian conscience never yet led either a community or a nation astray. The world itself would never go wrong if there were a sufficiency of such minds. America has become the world's greatest democracy because her early leaders were Christian statesmen trained in Church colleges, and doubtless she will make further progress only in so far as that kind of leadership predominates. The Christian college is the only institution which even claims to produce leaders with both trained minds and Christian hearts. It is, therefore, fundamental in American life. Its influence can give stability to the turbulent world. Its teachings will banish Bolshevik ideas from American thought. Its graduates will direct distracted human activities into channels of peace. Christian education means law and order, constitutional government and civil liberty. How rich the heritage we of this institution have received, and how binding the obligation to use it worthily!

Never before has the call been so urgent for well-educated young men and young women both to do the intellectual work of our nation and to counter-act the evil influences that are leading many of our people into dangerous pathways. And I make bold to say that the kind of education needed is not secular but religious—such as is received in our denominational colleges. To stem the treacherous currents of unsettled economic, social, and moral conditions following the World War, demand the best conservatism of older heads and the wisest training of our young people. They must stand for law, for order, and for government unsullied and untainted by ignorant prejudices and criminal indifference to the vital issues before us at this great hour.

One of the supreme needs of human society today is a fearless spirit of individuality. In politics, in business, and in religion we see evidences of disgusting patronage and cowardice that make men servants to unprincipled schemes and selfish undertakings. Today the call is to patriotic duty no less than it was five years ago when the clarion of war sounded in our ears. The courageous performance of duty leads to true nobility; and this quality is not only one of the highest in human character, but is absolutely indispensable to true leadership. Such leadership as this requires nobility of feeling and of purpose. Action and character must be harmonious and cannot long be in conflict. There may be some good actions performed spasmodically or impulsively by those whose souls are not noble, but a steady, sustained life of constructive service, thinking nobly and acting courageously, is possible only when connected with those emotions and conditions which naturally produce noble deeds.

What then are our present duties? What is the prospect for tomorrow? Broader fields and greater achievements are ahead of us. Let us not forget that these are most probably individual fields and personal achievements for most of us, but that perfect units make a perfect whole. New heights are challenging us to higher endeavor. From our present vantage ground let us go forward with renewed zeal and a holier inspiration to meet the new day, and to perform its work as a sacred trust. Our forebodings shall be illumined by the light of our religious institutions, and our duties shall stand out clearly in strong relief. The work of our Alma Mater has been justified and glorified heretofore in the activities of her sons and daughters. Her spirit still lives in us, and because she has lived and does live, we shall not falter at life's high task—the educational task of getting the principles, the purposes, the ideals, the motives we need into all life and into its institutions. To accomplish this end we must follow a process which shall begin with our homes, and which shall continue through the Sunday schools, the churches, the public schools, and the colleges, yea, and through our professional and business life. Sound thinking inevitably leads us to the conclusion that if we desire a better and a different kind of world to live in, we can get it only by definitely training the leadership that will make it different. Such leadership must apply Christian spirit, motives, principles, and ideals to the manifold relationships in life.

The retrospect of our institution has been pleasant the contemplation of her present is inspiring, the prospect of her future is glorious. For us the gates of life swing just a little wider than ever before, our hopes are higher, our desires purer and deeper. It behooves the alumni of this and of every other Christian institution to stand four-square for religious education in our State and nation, lest the high type of Christian character we have idealized as our pattern should be marred and stained by the harmful elements of secularism. True leadership is not blatant nor is it pompous; it is a well controlled, powerful, and pervasive force of character, uplifting, purifying, and directing the thought-life of a community on higher and more serviceable planes. This is the type of leadership that should be most coveted by graduates of our Alma Mater.

To you, fellow alumni, I put the entreaty; yea, for you I even dare to make the pledge, that in our thought, in our aspirations, and in our service exemplifying the principles of leadership and the ideals of Christian character which Mother Elon has instilled in our hearts, we shall never be so far away from her or from one another that we shall not be thinking of our heritage and hoping for her larger success; nor shall the standards of our Alma Mater be forgotten in our work until life's last sunset shall have turned the blue stars of our service into the golden stars of just reward.

OUR VIRGINIA LETTER

HE Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN asks me to tell how a church can raise money, now that I have told how it ought not to be done. Very well, but I thought I did tell, in the same letter, when I related the Greely incident. You may recall that a lady applied to him to tell her what else she could do to keep her church agoing financially, saying she had tried strawberry suppers, grab-bag games, oyster suppers, donkey parties and other such like things, but the church was steadily going down, and she wanted him to tell her what else she could try in her efforts to keep the church on its financial feet. Horace Greely told her to try religion. I meant that suggestion as indicating that religion indulged in plentifully, will bring a church to stand on its financial feet, but as that did not seem to be sufficient, I will now give a brief prescription for enabling a church to finance itself all right. Listen now and then try my prescription:

1. Through much prayer and Bible study on the part of its members bring their souls into right relations with God.
2. Then be active in doing the Lord's work, seeking to know and to do His will in ministering to the sick and the poor, and the discouraged.
3. Be as regular as you can in attending church services, the Sunday school, the prayer meeting, having family worship every day.
4. Then have no more money-making parties. Let the donkey party, the oyster supper, the ice cream festival, and such like affairs, go to come no more. Have nothing to do with the unfruitful works of darkness.
5. Get every member of your church to tithe his income, whether it be from the store, the shop, or the farm—give God what He claims, viz: One tenth of all you make, and by the time that is done truly you will have sufficient money in the treasury of your church for all needful purposes. Then, as a thank offering unto God, apart from giving the tithe, or a tenth, forgive every one who has wronged and then cultivate true brotherly love one toward another; and according to my best judgment, you will see your church prosper in both its temporal and spiritual affairs.

Many of THE SUN's readers will recall the work in the Memorial Temple at Norfolk, Va., several years ago when it was at the zenith of its greatest prosperity, when they took the lead in raising missionary money with all the churches in the denomination, North and South and East and West. Well, that healthy state of the church, when it raised its pastor's salary and gave as much for the preaching of the gospel in foreign lands as it did for the same purpose at home, followed the adoption of the course recommended above. It was not a rich church, but when it got down to real business in trying to do the Lord's work according to the way the Lord had marked out in His Word that it should be done, then came the greatest prosperity the church has ever known and it continued for many years, so in giving directions as to how to raise money for the Lord's work, I am not giving a mere theory, but what I tried myself before I recommended it to others. It has been done, and it can be done again. Before the Temple gave up all these indirect methods and ways of raising money, it was receiving help from one or two mission boards and was having almost a struggle to live itself, but after it gave up those things and tried to do the Lord's work in the Lord's way, it reached speedily its greatest degree of prosperity, and I fully believe the same results will be gained when the same methods and ways of doing the Lord's work are adopted.

I am fully satisfied that no church has ever been helped into a greater Christlikeness or into a greater (permanent) prosperity by the use of these various ways of doing the Lord's work. You may think that you are having great success by using all sorts of suppers, "theatricals" and such like things, but in the long run, I fully believe you will find that you were greatly mistaken. If you wish your church to be a real church of Jesus Christ, then bring your membership to doing their work in the Lord's way, and only for His glory, and you will likely see what will happen for the good of your church

SUFFOLK LETTER

THE Central Executive Committee has decided to transfer the Seaside Chautauqua and School of Methods from Virginia Beach to Ocean View for the session of July 18-24. A good tent will be used for the assembly meetings and smaller tents may be used for class work. Several considerations led to this change and, among them, was the accessibility of Ocean View. Virginia Beach is more difficult to reach from Norfolk. There is a concrete road from Norfolk to Ocean View over which autos can reach the View in a very short time; and electric cars run till late at night, so that people can attend lectures, concerts, and whatever is rendered at night and get back to Norfolk at small cost. In every way the conveniences will be increased, the cost decreased, the attendance multiplied, and the efficiency improved. Bathing is better, fishing is good, the Naval Base is near, and the tent will be placed on the Government Reservation by consent.

The Committee has requested the pastors of the seven churches of Norfolk, to get two women from each church to meet with the pastors at the View on Thursday, June 16, at 10 o'clock to view the new place, to make a canvass to sell tickets to the residents and guests in Ocean View, and to find out the places and charges for rooms and board during the Chautauqua. Rev. J. F. Morgan was requested to act as Chairman of this working committee cooperating with the General Secretary, Prof. S. M. Smith in completing arrangements.

The change of place will not change the program in any particular, but it is hoped will make it more effective.

To those who live at a distance from the sea, the recess hours will give them opportunity to engage in fishing, if they are inclined to the apostolic exercise; and fishing at Ocean View is among the best on the coast.

A plan is on foot, in the Eastern Virginia Conference, to have each Sunday school send one person to the Chautauqua, at the expense of the Sunday school; and each church or group of churches having a pastor, to send their pastor at the expense of the church or churches. It would be a small matter for the church or churches to pay the pastor's expenses for one week, and it would repay them for such a contribution. The pastor can be greatly benefitted by association with the pastors in a school of methods. All we know we learn from others; either from books, lectures, sermons, papers, or associations. The pastor who remains at home all the time cannot grow on a large scale. He may be very good at home; but he is enlarged by contact with the up-to-date activities of new views, new methods, and new purposes.

What has been said in this letter with reference to Eastern Virginia pastors and representatives from Sunday schools is equally applicable to any other conference. Every superintendent would be benefitted by attendance. A few days together in song, prayer, conference, in the study of present-day Christian work, under special leaders, will improve any pulpit, any church, and any Sunday school. Do not forget the time and place; July 18-24 at Ocean View, Va.

W. W. STALEY.

ELON LETTER

IN February the Board of Education of the Southern Christian Convention issued a very remarkable poster, entitled "The Church's System of Education." This poster was printed in two colors and was sent to every Sunday school secretary with the request that it be placed in the assembly room of the school. Many secretaries did this. It is a pity all of them did not. I hope even yet they will do it.

This poster shows that the Sunday schools of our Church are vitally related to our College. Let me quote from it: "We must understand that Elon College is our own Sunday school engaged in preparing boys and girls when they are through high school for service in life and in the Church of Christ. Every boy and girl should look forward with great satisfaction to the time when they can go to our College. ELON IS OUR COLLEGE. It puts CHRISTIAN CHARACTER FIRST and this is the great essential of life. We look to Elon for our preachers, our Church workers and our Christian doctors, lawyers, farmers, business men and mothers, and Elon will not fail us. "We will not fail her."

I submit that this is the utterance of Christian statesmen, nay more, the proclamation of Christian prophets. The men who signed this document and sent it forth have seen deep into the jostling, conflicting issues of our day and have discovered the unique place in our educational system of the Christian College. And having seen its place, they have clearly put it up to the Brotherhood to meet their full responsibility.

We will never be one hundred per cent. efficient educationally till our Sunday school officers and teachers and our pastors recognize that they are not engaged simply in a local work, but that they are also part of a comprehensive system of religious and Christian education, which begins in the Sunday school Cradle Roll and heads up in Elon College. And no Sunday school can properly be said to be one hundred per cent. loyal to the cause of our Church unless every young man and woman in it who goes away to College goes to our Elon. That is the issue. Let us face it fairly, zealously, sympathetically, determinedly, and all will be well.

In line with this policy of cooperation and unity between our Sunday schools and our College, it has been decided that a quota of students should be assigned each Sunday school on the basis of enrollment, one student for each hundred enrolled or fraction thereof. For example a Sunday school of 37 pupils would be expected to have one student in Elon this fall, while a Sunday school of 207 would naturally send three, and so on. Every Sunday school secretary and every pastor has been notified of this plan and each one is urged to do his best to place every Sunday school on the banner list.

In September we will print in THE CHRISTIAN SUN a list of such banner schools and besides we will send to each banner school a book for the Sunday school library in appreciation of cooperation and assistance.

How happy those officers, teachers, and pastors will be in September, whose Sunday schools shall be found in the banner list, in this great educational undertaking in our Church.

WOMEN AND THE KINGDOM

MISSIONARY RALLY—WAKE-HARNETT DISTRICT

The District Missionary Rally of the Christian churches of Wake, Harnett, and Johnston counties was held at Wake Chapel church, May 29, 1921.

The meeting was called to order by Miss Bessie Holt, who presided. Devotional exercises were conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. Lee Johnson. Song, "I Shall be Ready". Miss Bessie Holt stated the object of the meeting. An enrollment of the delegates was made. Twenty churches were included in the district, ten of which were represented as follows: Bethel 4, Beulah 1, Catawba Springs 4, Christian Light 2, North Clayton 1, Piney Plains 4, Pleasant Union 1, Plymouth 7, Raleigh 2, Wake Chapel 31. The only active organized societies were Wake Chapel, Woman's; Raleigh, Woman's Young Peoples, and Cradle Roll. They made a splendid report. Duet by Mr. and Mrs. J. Beale Johnson, "The Spirit Filled Life." Address by Dr. J. O. Atkinson. This address was inspirational and appealing, especially for the missionary work which lies at the hands of the women in the churches. The meeting adjourned with prayer.

The devotional exercises for the afternoon session were conducted by Rev. J. E. Franks. Dr. Atkinson explained the methods and programs for the Woman's, Young People's, and Cradle Roll Societies. Mrs. L. L. Vaughan was appointed to organize a Woman's Missionary Society at Anburn. Mrs. Mann and delegates from Bethel, aided by the pastor, Rev. J. E. Franks, to organize at Bethel; Miss Bessie Holt, with assistance of Rev. J. D. Wicker, pastor, to organize at Beulah; Mrs. J. E. Franks to reorganize at Catawba Springs; Mrs. L. L. Vaughan and Rev. J. E. Franks to organize at Hay's Chapel. The delegates from Piney Plains volunteered to organize there. Mrs. K. B. Johnson, Mrs. J. Lee Johnson, and Mrs. A. F. Smith to organize Willing Workers at Wake Chapel. A report on the goals for the year was made by Miss Holt. A Round Table discussion was conducted by Mrs. L. L. Vaughan. Song, "The Victory May Depend on You." Address by Miss Bessie Holt, on the pressing needs in the field, especially describing the conditions of the mountain section, which Miss Iola Hedgepeth has undertaken.

By vote it was decided that the Rally should be made an annual affair. Mrs. L. L. Vaughan was elected district leader and Miss Ruth Johnson, Secretary-Treasurer. A rising vote of thanks was extended by the visitors for the hospitality of the church and excellent entertainment. Collection $8.52. A chain of prayers concluded the program. RUTH JOHNSON, Secretary

On June 6, 1921, two firemen were killed and a score of others hurt as a result of a no-accident week demonstration at New Orleans. Police claim that private autos were the cause of the smash-up of the fire truck.

SOME VIEWS IN OUR MOUNTAIN WORK CAUGHT BY MISS HOLT'S KODAK

- (1) Sunday school overflow—"A house full and yard full"; children on the fence.
- (2) School house with teacher and a few pupils.
(The one great need now—a better building and additional teachers)
- (3) A bright girl "nine years old in chestnut picking up time".
- (4) Hardly an average dwelling, better than many others.
- (5) A family group "with whom we dined".

OUR MOUNTAIN WORK

It was decided at the annual meeting of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention in September 1919 to begin a Christian training school in the mountains of Virginia as early as practicable.

The desire was to locate at the most needy and promising place, for in the remote mountain sections of North Carolina and Virginia there are several hundred thousand people, old and young, wholly illiterate and without church or school privileges. It is no fault of these people that they are destitute and without Christian privileges. It is their remoteness from the marts of trade and commerce, and the geographical barriers that keep them largely isolated. Amongst them one will find some of the very brightest minds and most willing hands.

It was in October 1920 more than a year after the Board's decision to engage in this rescue work, that a location was decided upon for a beginning, and Miss Iola Hedgepeth of Barrett's church, Sedley, Va., was sent out to begin the work for us. Results have shown that the right location was secured and the right person sent to pioneer the work.

In Carroll County, Virginia, eighteen miles from Mt. Airy, N. C., (the nearest railway station) and seven miles from Hillsville the county seat, near a rural post office, Fancy Gap, Va., an abandoned store house was found, in a district where there was neither day school, Sunday school, nor church, and in this one-room building Miss

THE CHAUTAUQUA AND SCHOOL OF METHODS

THE announcement appears in this issue that the Chautauqua and School of methods of the Christian Church will be held at Ocean View, instead of Virginia Beach, Virginia. The reasons given by Bro. S. M. Smith for the removal of the meeting place are good. We have not been to Ocean View in several years, but feel that the place is ideal and better suited than Virginia Beach.

BUT while the location is important, that is secondary to the institution. The Chautauqua is a fixed part of the life and operations of the Church. At Conferences the brethren get together to transact business and to plan for future work. The Chautauqua is where kingdom workers get together for recreation, study, and for the development of the devotional life.

SEND a representative from your church—send your pastor. AND PAY HIS WAY—not the transportation alone, but the whole of his expenses. It will be a good investment for any congregation.

MORE about the Chautauqua next week—in the meantime draw a circle on your calendar around July 18-24.

THE PASSING OF AN INSTITUTION

ANNOUNCEMENT of the passing of Elon's preparatory department has already appeared in THE SUN's columns. Where human minds operate things change—and thus a change has been wrought in our educational work because of the operation of many minds.

THERE have been too many instances where the public has rated our college by the educational qualification of the "prep" students. A man in college is considered a college man by the average citizen regardless of how the college rates the man. No reflection upon the preparatory students, but the expectation of a college and a college student is great by the public. And a college is rated by its present and former students. That is the only true way to rate an institution.

It is also a case of being free, frank, and plain when we state that the presence of a preparatory department in a college of necessity brings to the institution a number of instructors who are soon called and classed by the students as "professors", and as the students class them, either through courtesy or custom, the public takes the classification as sincere. A professor is the head of a department, as we have always understood it, and a professorship becomes meaningless to the public when otherwise considered.

IN almost every community, or at least within the reach of every boy and girl, is a good high school that prepares for college. Colleges should not try to rob the high schools of their work; universities should not rob the colleges of their work.

THIS editorial will be followed next week by a discussion of Elon's enrollment in the future.

THE GROWTH OF BUDDHISM IN THE UNITED STATES

IN 1916 there were twelve Japanese Buddhist temples in the United States, numbering in members 5,639, and had buildings valued at nearly $75,000. The amount reported for current expenses, repairs and benevolences was about $25,000. There were at that time thirty-four priests, thirteen of whom indicated an average salary of $831.00. The number of members under 13 years of age was 223.

THERE is said to be in Fresno, Sacramento, San Jose, Stockton, Los Angeles, Bakersfield, Santa Barbara, Salt Lake, Denver, Portland, Tacoma and Seattle twenty-two Buddhist temples, or meeting places. Los Angeles has nine Buddhist meeting places alone. The growth of the worship of Buddha continues within our borders, even in places where we are thought to be overchurched by Protestant places of worship. The homeland also calls as well as the foreign field, for means and men to check the tide of heathen worship.

DR. BARRETT'S ANSWER

WE are willing to accept Dr. Barrett's answer or solution to the financial problem of the church as he so outlines in his letter found in this issue. His former suggestion seemed to be based solely on religion, quoting Horace Greely's suggestion to a woman to try religion in her church as a solution to its financial problems.

WE contend that it is possible for a man to have religion, be an earnest and consecrated man, and at the same time lack vision sufficient to cause him to give liberally. We grant that religion is necessary to giving, but instances on every hand show that there are those who are very religious and at the same time able to pay large sums to the church but who do not.

WE have seen men converted in old age and continue their giving in about the same way as they did before they were converted. Their custom was to put in a small piece of money (usually the smallest) in the offering plate, and then continue the same way of doing after they were converted. Such a process is the product of their education in giving. Religion will change a man's heart and will have a tendency to change his customs, but is no guarantee.

THE time to begin the training of a child to give is when it first begins to attend church. The habit of giving the habit of liberal and loyal giving by the liberal and loyal giving habit of ever member is the church's safest financial anchor.

PRESERVATION OF INSTITUTIONS.

"PHYSICAL force alone is inadequate to preserve our institutions. Its use is unnecessary and usually harmful. Once men believed that Christian faith could only be preserved in the last resort by violence. The dungeon, rack and stake were used to protect the faith and preserve the church. Today in America the church still survives and flourishes without reliance on force. There probably was never an age when Christian belief was so wide-spread and vital. Likewise the family has survived, held together by affection, although we no longer force unwilling women into the marriage bond, and the rod is little used on the child. When will the state be wise enough to disarm its most dangerous foes by treating them with justice and love, without the threat of armaments?"

The above paragraph is taken from a message sent out by the Friends' Peace Committee, Philadelphia, and certainly strikes at the heart of the subject of war. With nearly everybody talking peace, pulpits uttering peace and every person advocating peace, it certainly does look like that the time has come when the world must of necessity, backed by the strongest of sentiment, turn toward a peace basis.

THE WRONG WAY TO WEALTH

The other day the papers carried an account about a young man who had robbed the United States mails to obtain money. He had been robbing the mails for some time, and of course did not expect to be caught. He was however, and so brought humiliation upon self, wife and child. The young man represented one of the State's best families. There must be a reason for his acts, and we believe that Judge James E. Boyd gave the reason, or reasons in his comment when the young man was sentenced to fifteen months in the Federal Prison. This is quoted of the case from the Greensboro Daily News.

"JUDGE Boyd was quite sympathetic of the condition of the young man and of the relatives, but was, nevertheless, aware of his duty to administer justice. He was heartily sorry for the family. 'Our finite minds,' said he 'are unable to understand the mysterious ways of Providence.' He could not understand why a chastisement like this should come upon so good a family. Some of the most devout men, however, are chastised, and he believed that it was for a good purpose.

"ASIDE from that side of the question, though, Judge Boyd declared the court is a worldly tribunal to deal with conditions as it finds them. He said that if he had his way he would say 'go thy way and sin no more,' but to do so would be unfaithful to his duty and would be an invitation to others to follow in the steps of the defendant.

"HE could not understand such behavior except it be a symptom of the degradation in the world following the war. War, said he, brings great wealth, great wealth brings idleness, and idleness degradation. Those without wealth, seeing others enjoying it conclude they ought to enjoy it too and proceed to take it. 'It's really a painful situation to see the class of men that give way to this sort of temptation,' declared Judge Boyd, 'but the public must be protected.'"

SPENDING YOUR VACATION

THIS season of the year affords the opportunity to many to take a vacation—a season of rest. And it should be a season of rest and not a time of dissipation. The time, the place, the object, and the expense are the four big items for consideration in taking a vacation. If the time cannot be taken without injury to other causes,

"SOME preachers think they must preach always with the thought of the doubt of their audiences in their minds. Our Lord Christ always preached as though He felt the minds of His hearers were filled with faith."

serious consideration should be given to the conflict. If the place is not of that type where morals are better and environment more uplifting, one had better remain where he or she is. The object of the vacation should be to get a new hold upon physical and spiritual life. The expense should always be in keeping with propriety and good judgment.

If you can, take a vacation. Get away from the hum-drum of life and get a vision of something beyond your own circle.

FEDERATION OF SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK

PLANS are under consideration looking toward the federation of all the religious education and denominational Sunday school work in Australia under one organization or Central Committee. This will be brought about after full conference between representatives of the denominations interested. In several of the divisions of Australia denominational Sunday school specialists are giving their entire time to the Sunday school, which is growing in attendance and in lesson improvement.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HISTORY

Dr. A. B. Kendall, 806 Taylor St., N. W. Washington, D. C., is seeking to prepare a brief history of the Christian Endeavor work of the Christian Church, the same to go to National Christian Endeavor Headquarters. We feel that many readers of THE SUN can be of assistance to Dr. Kendall by sending him information. He desires the following:

Name of Conference. Name of Church. Has there ever been a Young People's or Senior Society of Christian Endeavor in your church? Date of organization. Has there ever been an Intermediate Society of Christian Endeavor in your church? Date of organization. Has there ever been a Junior C. E. Society in your church? Date of organization. Have you an Alumni Association? Date of organization. Have any of the members of your Society ever entered full time service for Christ? Number of members so entering. Field of service: Ministry, Home mission, Foreign mission, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A. If other field of service give line of work. Number of Christian Endeavor Experts. Number of Life Recruits. Give any other facts connected with your society or the members of your society which you think would be of interest in a History of Christian Endeavor in the Christian Church.

PROBATION IN CHILDREN'S COURTS

The probation method of dealing with delinquents costs in New York State approximately one-eighteenth as much as institutional care. Such information as is available clearly shows that probation, properly administered is successful in a large majority of children's cases, according to a report on Probation in Children's Courts just issued by the U. S. Department of Labor through the Children's Bureau. This is one of a series of reports whose purpose is to aid in the development of higher standards in juvenile court work.

THE OBSERVATORY

J. E. MASSEY

IMPORTANCE OF THE DENOMINATIONAL COLLEGE

Higher education in the United States is fearfully lacking in idealism, says Dr. Richard D. Harlan, representative of the Presbyterian Board of Education and prominent minister of New York City. Dr. Harlan fully believes that the greater part of the existent idealism in the country, which is so indispensable to its welfare, comes from the all-too-few number of denominational colleges. He maintains that with the increase in higher education there should be an equal increase in the ranks of universities for the preparation of men and women for spiritual leadership, which at present remains almost solely on the shoulders of the denominational college.

From 80 to 90 per cent of the country's ministers come from small denominational colleges, according to Dr. Harlan; and at present there is a great need to recuperate the ranks of these colleges. Taking his own denomination as example of this need, he points out the fact that of the fifty-four colleges of the country operating under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church, thirty-eight revealed a combined endowment of $3,700,000,—too small by far for their general needs, and the important position in education which falls to their lot. He points out that of the total number of colleges of the Church, "only those are helped which help themselves."

Although Dr. Harlan does not contend that the higher institutions of the country have completely lost their idealism, he believes that there is great "room for improvement", and that until they realize fully their responsibility to cultivate the spiritual and religious sides of human nature, their duty is not fully performed.

The denominational colleges of the country, on the other hand, in spite of the needs of improvement among their ranks, are almost the sole source of its ministers—"the most valuable assets in keeping aglow community idealism". These colleges must not be neglected, but aided and cultivated "all the more" to encourage a return to the ideal on the part of the universities.

FLYING WITHOUT A MOTOR

"If I only had wings!" time and again we hear people say. That craving to soar in the air like a bird with natural wings has not vanished from the eyes of man, in spite of the fact that "we are living in a fast age". Probably man will get his wishes granted.

The first "successful experiment" with what has developed into the modern airplane did not use motors, according to a recent investigation of the Literary Digest. And oddly enough some of the latest experiments in aviation have returned to the primitive gliding flight, or the "sailing flight" in which the force of the wind is the propelling factor. The Popular Science Monthly joins in the new attempts with the belief that such flying with motors can be made successful though not as yet very practical.

Germany, more than any other country, is paying attention to the development of natural flight. The country has several organizations actively engaged in experiments, and competitive flying of this kind will take place this year. More and more, the economist will become the "king of inventors" in the present era. Experts believe that the utilization of natural energy—wind—if such can be made practicable, would revolutionize the art of flying.

BANISHING THE CAULDRON OF DISCONTENT

Directness and openness in dealings with our fellow-men are the worst enemies of trouble and discontent. Waiting for the "golden moment" or the "opportune moment" in which to banish a future enemy or propound a question in settlement of an issue, private or public, is frequently misleading, and oftentimes develops complications from "better to worse".

If Great Britain and Ireland could become more open and frank in the so-called "issues" between the two, if Lloyd George and Briand would face each other and have a frank discussion of their differences over Upper Silesia, two of the most disrupting forces among European nations would be better under way for settlement than by letting the "cauldron of discontent boil."

Still better, such a rule for settling trouble is applicable at home as well as abroad. If the United States could be more open in its program for dealing with international questions, or if it would be more direct in its discussions on the question of disarmament with other countries, there would be better prospects for a general working basis upon which the nations can "get to work" forget their troubles and maintain future peace.

GENERAL MENTION

Based on forecasts of production announced by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., June 8, 1921, the country's combined winter and spring wheat crop promises to be 43,000,000 bushels larger than last year's.

F. W. Gailbraith, Jr., National Commander of the American Legion, was killed in an automobile accident June 9, 1921, near Indianapolis, Ind. Col. Gailbraith was elected National Commander of the American Legion in September, 1920. He was respected both as a soldier and as a civilian.

E. L. Daughtridge, former Lieutenant-Governor of North Carolina, died at Rocky Mount, N. C., June 12, 1921, at the age of fifty-nine years. He had been active in public life for many years and was a business man of unusual ability and lofty character.

Contributions for the relief and rehabilitation of flood victims at Pueblo, Colorado, may be sent through Red Cross chapters in the south or may be mailed directly to southern division headquarters of the Red Cross at Atlanta.

Rev. E. H. Rainey changes his address from New Haven, Conn., to 1516 Elm Avenue, Portsmouth, Va., where he takes up the work during his vacation with the Elm Street church of Portsmouth.

Rev. J. V. Knight, pastor of the Raleigh Christian church, makes this inquiry: "Is there anyone in the Christian Church, or out, who knows the exact month and day during 1882 that the Raleigh church was organized?" If any reader of THE SUN can give Brother Knight this information please address him at 320 N. Morgan Street, Raleigh, N. C.

On May 26 Rev. Geo. D. Eastes and his singer, Mr. Alfred Shumate, Lima, Ohio, began a meeting at the Rose Hill Christian church, Columbus, Ga. The meeting will continue through June 16, so writes Rev. R. F. Brown, the pastor. Following this meeting, Evangelist Eastes, with his assistant, will go to Graham, N. C., and begin a meeting at New Providence church, where Rev. F. C. Lester is pastor.

The Burlington church has extended an invitation to the American Christian Convention to meet with it in the quadrennial session in October, 1922. It has been twenty years since the A. C. C. met in the Southern Christian Convention and it is earnestly hoped that the invitation will be accepted. The Burlington church is anxious for the Convention and feels that it can provide in every way in meeting the requirements as laid down by Secretary Burnett in The Herald of Gospel Liberty a few weeks ago.

We have not said anything recently about subscribers sending their renewals. We realize that money is scarce at this season of the year most any time, but especially this year, when things have been on the downward trend for the past several months. However, we especially call the attention of those whose subscriptions have expired to their accounts. THE SUN needs the money, and since a year's subscription is not a large outlay of cash, we rather insist that those whose subscriptions are out renew at an early date. We desire to be patient in every way, but will certainly appreciate it if subscribers will kindly examine their labels and renew when the label indicates that the subscription is out.

WEDDING BELLS

The following announcements have been issued:

Dr. and Mrs. Walton Crump Wicker of Elon College, N. C., announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Annie Laurie, to Lemuel Roy Johnston, on June 28, 1921.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Shupert announce the marriage of their daughter, Martha Marion, to Mr. William Lee Kinney, on Saturday, June 11, 1921, Ardmore, Pa. At home after the fifteenth of September, Winston Salem, N. C.

Hedgepeth has kept day school in the week and Sunday school on Sundays. Eighty-two pupils were enrolled, most of whom had never been to school before and so could neither read nor write and practically this number attend Sunday school, a privilege none of them had ever enjoyed before. Miss Hedgepeth has won the respect, esteem and admiration of the entire community—old and young and they count it a wonderful benefit to have her as their helper and teacher.

In March of 1921 Miss Bessie Holt, Superintendent of Young People's Work of the Southern Christian Convention, made a three days' visit to Miss Hedgepeth and the homes of her patrons and pupils. It was found that in an area of six miles there were four hundred people of whom 125 were children of school age, who should be reached and saved by our work there, there being no other day school within reach.

April 23, Miss Holt went before the Executive Committee of the Board in Suffolk and after telling of the work and the need, the Board decided to purchase land and erect a school building, ample also for Sunday school and religious services, and as soon as possible a home for the teachers also, at an estimated expenditure of about $2,000.00. This amount was assumed for the young people, and Miss Holt, Mr. J. M. Darden of the Board and the Mission Secretary were instructed to go to Carroll County May 25 and secure a site and make plans for the building. Owing to illness in his family at the time, Mr. Darden could not go on this errand and he asked Dr. W. W. Staley to go in his stead. On May 25 the committee designated, acting with Miss Hedgepeth and Mr. W. E. Lindsey of Mt. Airy, purchased 18 acres of land and one acre was given, adjoining the site where school has been kept the past year. Plans are now in execution for the school building, which it is hoped will be ready for the opening in September.

During the summer we are conducting in the outlying districts two neighborhood schools, and trying with two additional volunteer workers to reach the people for intelligence and Christian activity.

Any Sunday school or person donating money for this work should send the same to Miss Bessie I. Holt, Superintendent, Burlington, N. C., and proper acknowledgment and entry will be made.

MISSIONARY

REV. J. O. ATKINSON, D. D., Field Secretary

ELM STREET CHURCH, PORTSMOUTH

Rev. O. D. Poythress, South Norfolk, Va., recently conducted a series of meetings in our new Elm Street church, Portsmouth, Va. Of this meeting Bro. J. M. Felton writes: "We have just closed one of the best meetings that I was ever in. There were about fifty professions with about thirty additions to our church. Our Sunday school has decided to give one Sunday's offering a month to missions, and one Sunday's offering a month to the Orphanage. On this decision our offering jumped to about four times the amount we had been giving." This church and Sunday school have made fine beginnings and set a most worthy example to some of our older churches and schools.

GIVING MONEY AND SERVICE

The real headquarters for the campaigns that furnish the millions of dollars needed for the missionary enterprise are at mother's knee. A man who has given hundreds of thousand dollars for missions replied when he was asked how it happened that he made such large gifts:

"It didn't happen at all. When I was a little boy my mother taught me to set aside for the Lord's treasury a certain part of all the money I had. I simply have more money now than I did then."

It is not "frenzied finance," but the careful home training in stewardship that will fill missionary treasuries.

In the home of one of our great missionary leaders there is a strong box known as the Lord's treasury. Into that box father, mother and the children put at least one-tenth of the money that comes into their hands. From there the church envelopes are filled on Sunday mornings with amounts agreed upon in council for the gift of each member of the family. Special offerings also go into this box. Frequently the family agree together that they will do without something they had expected to have in order to make a gift for some special object. The family all discuss together the purposes for which the "Lord's money" shall be used, and there is a deep and abiding interest in the work in which they have part. In this home the giving is regular and systematic. It is sacrificial, for the members of the family individually and collectively deny themselves many things in order to make larger gifts, with a spirit that is as fine and as contagious as was the spirit of "Meatless days."

Of equal importance is training for giving of time and service. The things we do are not only the result of our training but a most important part of that training. The book "Things to Make" gives many suggestions for things that may be made by children at home for gifts to children in hospitals, homes, or mission stations. The various holiday seasons may easily be made opportunities for service to others.

A CHURCH STUDYING MISSIONS

June is mission study month for the First Christian church, Raleigh, N. C. The pastor of this church has an outlined program for the church year and mission study is a part of that program.

On Wednesday night June 1, the Ladies' Missionary Society started the work going, and Wednesday nights, June 8, 15, and 22, the three missionary journeys of Paul will be the topic led by three men, leaving June 29 open for a summary of the work. These prayer meetings are different from the usual mid-week services of a church. They are led by the people and not the pastor. As many as thirty-eight have taken part in the discussions of a single evening. The mid-week services are in the hands of Mr. C. E. Barrow, Chairman of the Board of Deacons, who arranges topics and leaders a month ahead, and some of the best services of the church are these meetings. The topic for June are all on missions, and will be in study form.

In addition to the wednesday meetings the missionary auxiliaries will have meetings of special interest, and the pastor will give a series of Sunday morning sermons on the "Successful Church", under the following topics:

June 5: "Mobilization of Its Forces."

June 12: "Training Its Constituency."

June 19: "Christianizing America."

June 26: "Americanizing The World."

Conditions in this church are exceedingly hopeful. The congregation and Sunday school have both doubled; a Jr. C. E. Society with 50 members has been organized; it has a Senior Society with about 60 active members; a young ladies and Woman's Missionary Society—all of which are doing fine work in the church. Supplement this with a fine corps of workers as you will find anywhere, and it spells success. The church has had fifty additions since we came to the work, and three others waiting for letters.

MRS. J. VINCENT KNIGHT.

OVER ALL, PRAYER

John G. Paton, the hero of the New Hebrides, said that even as an old man he recalled the earnest fervor of the prayers he heard his father and mother make for those who had never heard the message of a Savior's love and for the young people who might go as messengers.

It was said of the mother of Jacob Chamberlain that through her prayers and personal influence thirteen members of her family went to mission fields. Dr. and Mrs. John Scudder in their home in India prayed for their children "Not Christians only, dear Lord, but missionaries everyone if it be Thy will," and all of their children save one who died while he was in college went back to the mission field.

The history of missions is the history of family altars. Back of St. Augustine, was Monica, his mother, praying God to call her son. Ere Bartholomew Ziegenbalg, the first Protestant foreign missionary, set sail for India, his mother on her deathbed kept the habit of her life when she placed in his hands a Bible with the prayer that it might guide his steps.

Christian Frederick Schwartz, another princely missionary of India, gave testimony that his mother's and father's prayers had led him from the ways of recklessness and sin into ways of Christian service.

From the homes in which prayer is wont to be made there are going out missionaries and missionary supporters who are giving their lives to answering their own prayers and the prayers of their fathers and mothers.—Missionary Review.

AN IDEAL PLAN IN PRACTICAL OPERATION IN A LIVE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Mrs. John R. Mott describes the following plan for interesting the Sunday school in missions, which has been used for the last five years in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Montclair, New Jersey. "From May to October a five minutes talk is given before the whole school every Sabbath on the subject for which the collection is taken. For this six months all special subjects but one are for local work. From November to April ten minutes is given each Sabbath for the presentation of a contribution to foreign missions. The best available speakers are secured, whether they be found in the Sunday school, the church, the town, or outside. The committee in very many cases not only tells where the material for the topic is to be found but furnishes the book and suggestions as to how the subject should be treated. They do not read missionary letters or allow speakers to read from manuscript, believing that a crude talk is better than a more finished production which has to be read. For supplementary work they use the blackboard, curios, maps, charts, and pictures. They devote a number of months to separate counties, having given twenty-two Sundays to Africa, and as many to Japan and to India."—Ex.

The next few weeks will be busy days for the farmer boys of the Orphanage. Harvest is just beginning to come in and to get all the wheat and oats cut and the land sowed in beans will keep everybody busy for several weeks.
